I am pleased to learn that the missions in the Islands and Australia are to have help. If the same Spirit go with them that went with me and my sleeping companion, Elder Wandell, they have nothing to fear. In the Island of Tahiti, Bro. Smith will find warm hearted friends among the natives. Ten years ago last Christmas day we raised anchor in the Bay of Pepeeete, Island of Tahiti, and sailed for Sidney, Australia. A day long to be remembered; we had baptized 51 members, ordained 14 Elders; organized the conference, placed as president a most excellent man a native whose name I forgot; but one intelligent, well educated, and a man I judged of sterling integrity. Their determination was then to spread out to the adjoining Islands and preach the word. This they have done and with success. So Bro. Smith will find amidst the waters of the great deep, a Church with a broad foundation to build upon, and in my opinion a portion of the promised seed. I believe the natives of New Zealand and of the Society, and Sandwich Islands, are all one race, and are of the house of Israel. The Lord led away from time to time and they have scattered upon the Isles of the sea. See Book of Mormon 1st Nephi, 7 chap. Why should they not be taught and gathered into the Church with the people of God. The only reason at present can but be that the force of Elders is limited in our lands. Let not the Saints doubt, but in faith uphold all those who are sent. Ever remembering the harvest is ripe, even if the laborers are few, and others will be raised up to complete the work. Such as the Master will, whether at home or in far off lands.

I rejoice dear brother with you and the saints, in the hope through the gospel of Christ. The realities of the great future to my mind get clearer every day, until I am led to believe that eternity is very near, and the veil very thin, between us and the Spirit land; and although veiled in flesh, we can not see the holy ones, yet they can see us and know all our movements, and when we approach the throne in humility with clean hands and pure hearts, they are ready to carry our petitions to the courts of mercy, justice and truth. "Ask and ye shall receive" would never have been uttered if there were to be no chance to be heard. Prayer is sadly neglected by many, and a spirit of ingratitude seems to be growing rapidly in the world; and even among some of our people. Never was there a time since the foundation of the earth, when the people of God needed more strength than now. The time of the end drawing near; the struggle will be great for the dominion of the earth. May the good Lord help us, that we may not yield at this late hour. The Herald and Bishop's report have just been received, which can not fail to give the greatest satisfaction to the Saints, and doubtless increase their faith and confidence that at head quarters all is right. My letter has grown larger than I intended; but in it you will learn that I am still one with you and the church, contending for the right.

With kind regards,

G. RODGER.

BROWN CITY, Sanilac Co., Mich.,
June 17th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—Through the loving kindness of the heavenly Father, and the aid of his Saints, I am able to be out in the field again, and in the enjoyment of a fair degree of health, though not so rugged as formerly; and the prospects for the advancement of the good work are encouraging, in the part of the moral vineyard comprising this North Central Mission. After the removal of the little family from Lawrence to Galien, the Saints of the Galien branch, finding it difficult to rent a house for us, after considering the subject, concluded to build a house, suitable to the use of an Elder's family, who might be sojourning there, and laboring in the cause of Christ. They went to work with the will to accomplish, and in due time a house was built, worth as it stands about $500, and on a lot donated by Bro. Blakeslee. Our brethren of mechanical profession did the work of building, being assisted some at times, by those not at present of the faith, and all the Saints donating to the work according to their several abilities. The sisters' social society aided extensively, with Sister Blakeslee also serving as one of the building committee. The Saints kindly invited us to share their hospitality, by occupying the house, and we thankfully accepted the invitation. The work incidental to twice moving and arranging to dwell, and aiding also to get the house in readiness to occupy, and the arranging of the affairs of home, preliminary to entering the field, occupied a portion of the spring months, except Sundays, which I devoted to the work as faithfully as I could consistent with health.

The saints of Galien, along with their brethren elsewhere, have been very kind to us, and we are trying to appreciate, especially since those who have so kindly tendered us a share of their house and hospitalities as a home, for the last five and one-half years, have lately gone from our midst, to join the company of the saints who reside nearer the borders of the land of Zion. I pray the Lord to remember and bless Father and Mother Bass with all their family, for their unwavering and unreserved kindness to us; and favor them in their new home at Lamoni. May they be made to feel as much at home among their new neighbors, as they ever strove to make us feel while we were sojourning with them. More especially may they be enabled to keep their covenant with God, and be partakers of the glory to be revealed hereafter.

On the second of June I left home and came to Mecosta, Mecosta Co., Michigan, at the request of Bro. Kelley, and the oft repeated call of Bro. Wm. Bracy, who resides there, and desired the gospel preached to his friends of the colored race. After preaching six discourses with fair liberty and attendance, we gave the invitation to which six responded, and requested baptism. On Sunday the 8th, the six persons referred to, were baptized in the presence of a large concourse of people, and to whom I took occasion to pre-empt on the ordinance of baptism, and the Lord blessed us with liberty, good attention, and a "great calm," as compared with other baptismal occasions, as remarked by many.

Bro. A. Munn, late of California, and who had joined us the day prior, officiated, and was blessed in his effort, it being his first experience, all things being done decently and in order. Two of these, sister Guy and daughter, were disciples, knowing only the baptism of one Palmer, of Utah notoriety, for they had not yet been "to Utah to receive their teaching," such as polygamy, Adam Worship, or Idolatry, Blood Atonement, oppression, etc., falsely called tithing, secrets of the endowment house, etc. Sister Guy's husband and parents who had been misled by the blind guides, and who would not make any answer to the honest inquirer of those they were duping; were present at some of the services, including the baptism, and I think will be with us bye and bye. I informed these disciples of the differences between the faith of the Saints, as found in the revelations of God, and these heathenish, barbarous "teachings" of the Utah people—polygamists—and told them these men from Utah, called elders, who pass through the country so stealthily, would not meet our elders in public controversy, on the points of difference, and that to prove our statements true, to just notify us of their presence at their next advent, and ask them to meet us in public on these subjects. We trust the Lord will bless and seal in Christ those new members at Mecosta, in accordance with gospel promise, with "the Spirit of adoption," "the earnest of their inheritance." Concluding our services at Mecosta on the evening of the 8th, for the present, we left them on the 10th for this place, in company with Bro. Munn. I would, in this connection, suggest that if we have a brother of the colored race, qualified for the ministry, that could labor in this mission, including Canada West, for a year or two, a start could be given to the work among this people, that perhaps could not be given it in a long time otherwise. And I believe a statement found in the Herald for June 7th, 1884, will go far to substantiate this view.

Coming via Reese and Vassar, staying one night and visiting with the Saints at each place, and holding one meeting at the latter, we arrived at Brown City to attend the conference, on the evening of the 13th, and found a goodly number of the Saints who had arrived, and with Bro. Blakeslee, engaged in holding a prayer meeting, preparatory to entering unitedly, on the duties of the morrow. Brethren M. H. Forscutt and D. Campbell had neither of them arrived nor have we heard of them yet. The conference convening at the time appointed, Bro. Blakeslee was chosen to preside, as was right, with Brn. W. J. Smith and J. Baily as secretary and clerk. The brethren did me the favor not to elect me to any office during the conference, except to assist in the singing department, a favor which I appreciated very much, as my strength will not endure an extended taxation at a time. The business of the conference was transacted with great unity and amity of feeling. It was more largely attended than any I have been to in the Michigan District in a long time. The preaching was pointed, spiritual in the main. Bro. Cornish held forth on Saturday evening, on "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments," setting before us God's love and goodness, as incentives to man, to serve him, and the blessings bestowed on the obedient ones. Hall crowded. The writer was favored with the opportunity of presenting some of the positive statements of the Bible, to the fact of Latter Day revelation, in connection with the gathering of Israel, beginning with the lifting up of the hand of the Lord, as predicted by Isaiah, in 11: 11.

The large schoolhouse was filled to overflowing both sessions of Sunday, and Bro. Blakeslee set forth the duties of the saints, in great plainness and liberty, in the afternoon, touching the temporal gospel. Bro. W. J. Smith's effort in the evening was rather in advance of the ordinary on the "first principles," using as a basis the unchangeability of the Father and the Son, the perfection of the law, etc.; and showing that Christ commanded the ordinance of laying on of hands, especially in the case of Paul, from Acts 9: 17. Bro. Andrew Barr was chosen president John Baily Bishop's agent, and W. J. Smith secretary of the Northern Michigan District.

A large number of those not of the faith were in attendance. Much of the spirit was enjoyed, and a good impression left on the minds of many regarding the truth, and the outlook concerning the work from many directions, is good. Brethren J. J. Cornish and J. A. Carpenter expect to be ready shortly, to be in the field continually. The conference of the Southern Michigan District will convene at Galien, the time for its next session to be indicated by the president, and that of the Northern at Vassar, Tuscola Co., the third Saturday in November. The saints at Brown City expect soon to erect a chapel, and we think there are indications of the success of the enterprise. With appointment out for this evening, and an open field before me, wishing success to the cause, and the prayers of the Saints,

I remain your brother,

C. SCOTT.

GOOD INTENT, Atchison Co., Kansas,
June 22d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—In this little branch of the church we are striving to press forward to the prize of our high calling by striving to perform the labor that involves itself upon us, holding our meetings every Sabbath, feeling it is good to meet together often, to renew our spiritual strength; and indeed we can rejoice that the ways of the Lord are ways of pleasantness, and paths of peace to us when we strive to walk in the ways of the Lord. We have been blessed this last week by the presence of Brn. Heman C. Smith and Davis H. Bays. Bro. Heman has improved so much, and what a plain speaker he is now. The people around here said he was the best and plainest speaker they ever heard; and Bro. Bays gave good satisfaction. The people said if we could have such preachers as those for a while, we would soon have a good congregation. We are blessed to-day with the presence of Bro. Clarence StClair, so we are well blessed now.

I remain yours as ever in bonds,

DANIEL MUNNS.

RIVER SIOUX, Iowa,
June 18th, 1884.

Joseph.—The conference at Mason's Grove having passed off with agreeable interest for the spreading of the word preached, my next place for preaching was at the conference of the Little Sioux District, held at Magnolia. This just closed on Sunday, the 17th, at the Saints' Chapel. The assembly of the Saints was large, mingled with outsiders, lookers on. There could not have been less than from three to five hundred people. From the good order that prevailed, the interest that the people seemed to take in the meetings and the preaching of the word, it can not be otherwise expected than that some who had not before heard the whole story by one who knows, went away from the meeting as in other places, with strange thoughts on the work of this new dispensation. The conference and meeting were addressed at intervals by Elders J. Rounds, W. W. Whiting, Charles Derry, and Wm. B. Smith at 11 o'clock on Sunday, Bro. Derry in the evening tying up all the ends of this latter day work in a most convincing and masterly manner, by a close application of Scripture prophecy, making strong points and plain to be understood. Bro. Derry is a master workman in the gospel, and one of whom the Church he represents has reasons to be proud. There is a God in every good gift, and a God in every good Spirit that rightly divides the words of eternal life to the people, and he to whom this treasure is given is the minister of life among men to whom he is called to minister.

The Saints in this district are solicitous that I should remain here until after the two days' meeting, which comes off at Sioux River on the 28th and 29th of this month, an appointment made by the conference just closed, Elder J. C. Crabb presiding. At the close of this meeting shall try to visit Lamoni.

An oft repeated question is, "Did Joseph Smith at any time prior to his death talk of a removal of the church to the Valley of the Mountains?" My answer is he did not; never to my knowledge had Joseph Smith ever contemplated such a removal, or entertained such a thought. He must have singularly forgotten himself at the Spring Conference held in Nauvoo in 1844; for his instructions then and there were to the Church and the Twelve Apostles, that as soon as the temple then in progress was completed, that the business of the Twelve would be to divide the United States into districts, appointing presiding officers in each district, and thus to put the work into a general movement throughout the whole United States. There were many remarks made by your father on the plan of districting at this Spring Conference that I speak of that I remember as well to-day as I do any occurrence of yesterday; and there are other living witnesses of these facts, who were present at the time, who heard your father's talk on this subject. These facts go to show conclusively, that at the time of this conference in the spring of 1844, there could not have been any premeditative plan on the part of your father for the removal of the Church into any remote region of the country. A plan had for some months previous to your father's death been on foot, for a missionary post to be established among the Indians, for the purpose of educating them in a knowledge of the gospel; and to this end some persons in the Church had been selected to take charge of this mission. If I mistake not Lyman

Wight was selected as the man to take the charge of this mission, and to locate the place for this mission work among the Indians. It was also thought that a conference with the governmental authorities would be necessary in order to get a permit to locate such a post in or adjacent to some of the Indian reservations, where, under the protection of the Government, missionary work could be prosecuted. Nothing in all this plan talked of for the preaching of the gospel to the Indians was suggested or thought of by Joseph Smith, about a removal of the Church from its then locality, Nauvoo, Illinois, as the main drift and purpose of the Church after the completion of the temple as before stated, was as contemplated, a universal spread of the gospel throughout the whole United States. As per order in building churches they were to be the same as practiced under rule of this present Reorganized Church of Christ.

Bro. Joseph.—Our meetings at this place continue large and interesting. Yesterday we baptized two young married ladies, worthy members of society, and we trust they will make happy, useful members of the Church of Christ. Notwithstanding some hinderances hitherto in this place, the interests of the church are steadily gaining. It is probable there will be other additions at no distant day. I go to Willow Creek by the 21st instant.

PERSIA, Iowa, June 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Do you remember that while at Dr. McCallum's in Stewartsville we had some conversation in regard to whether your father was responsible for the sealing doctrine, and I remarked that I was willing to believe him guilty if it could be proven? Bro. J. W. Briggs said that by enquiry in regard to the robes used in the endowments by Lyman Wight, in Texas, he had determined that they were identical in pattern with those used in Utah, and as Lyman Wight and Brigham Young had no fellowship after Joseph Smith's death, there could be but one answer to the question, "From whence came this agreement?" I thought then it was a strong point against Joseph; but as I have fallen into the habit of investigating before forming conclusions, I thought I would sift the matter a little. I considered the subject and concluded the better way would be to ask those who had been through both endowments. Accordingly, on May 31st, 1884, I asked Bro. John Hawley, of Dow City, Iowa, if the robes used in Utah and those used in Texas were alike, and he made the following statement, which I wrote down and read to him afterwards, and he said it was correctly written: "The robes and garments used by Lyman Wight and those used in Utah were entirely different, having no semblance to each other. The only thing they had in common was they were both composed of pure white linen. The garments used by Lyman Wight were made in imitation of the robe the angel Moroni wore when seen by Joseph. There were no secrets about Lyman's endowments, and no oaths required."

On the same day I read John Hawley's statement to George Hawley and wife, and they endorsed it as being true, and added further, "There were no signs nor grips in the Texas endowment ceremony; and the robes used there did not have the peculiar marks which were on those in Utah, and the garments were never worn in Texas after leaving the house." These three persons have all seen and worn these garments in both places, and ought to know. None who know them will doubt their veracity.

Bro. Joseph.—Bro. I. N. Roberts and I are now holding meeting ten miles north of this place. Two were baptized last Sunday, near Glen Elder. I will return to Glen Elder on the 21st, where appointments are waiting. Bro. Roberts will remain here if interest demands. Booked for Linn, Washington county, for 26th, where I will remain as long as interest continues. If you can spare me some more tracts please send them to Linn; they go off like hot cakes. A good interest in Glen Elder.

Yours in the field,

LANSING, Mich., June 20th, 1884.

Dear Brother.—There is living about eight miles from this city a gentleman for whom I entertain special feelings of sympathy, strong sentiments of regard, and a very high esteem as an honest man, an upright citizen, a patriotic soldier, and above all a good, humble, unassuming Christian. He was all through the Mexican war, all through our late war; was a good officer, at one time paroled from Libby prison, and while paroled upon the Indian Massacre up in Minnesota, he was sent in command of the troops in that state, wintered near the Apostles' Islands, settled up the Indian troubles, and returned to his division south—continued to the end of the war, and was honorably discharged as a good soldier and a good officer. His name is Harvey Fairchild. At one time he lived in Nauvoo, was baptized by Parley Pratt, (if I mistake not), was ordained an Elder the year before Joseph Smith was martyred, belonged to the Seventy of which Joseph Young stood at the head, was present when Joseph Smith gave himself up, heard and remembers distinctly the last words he said. He asked his brethren, if they were willing to die for him. The response was, "Yes." He then said, "I will die for you." These are the last words he ever heard him say. He has told this to me several different times, and every time I have noticed his smiling countenance lighten up all in a glow, his eyes sparkle with untold, living vivacity, speaking stronger than pen or words can tell. He is a mason by trade, worked on the temple at Nauvoo. Is an excellent mechanic. He worked for me during the summer of 1882; did me a grand, good job. He finished it up about the time of the conference held the 21st of October, 1882, at Coldwater, Michigan. I had a number of men at work for me that summer. I had been, by my business restricted to home duties for over a year. So that upon hearing of that meeting, through the Evening News, I was very anxious to go. My men were all of them very good and kind to me. They all seemed to try their very best to please me. They saw I was anxious to go, so they urged me to go. I had not been from home for over a year. My men promised that they would look after my interests which they did just as well as though I had stayed at home. I formed a very strong attachment to all my men, especially Bro. Fairchilds. Poor soul, he has been sick all winter, not expected to live. I was out to see him last week. I had a splendid visit with him. I read God's word to him, sang and prayed with him. I heard from him day before yesterday, and heard that he had been better ever since I was there. He asked me to remember him to you, and to see if some of the Elders would not visit him and administer to him. If some of them or any one of them could come here, I would with pleasure take them there and bring them back to Lansing again. Let it not be said, "I was sick and ye visited me not."

Yours in the bonds of gospel truth,
HIRAM RATHBUN.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.,

Bro. Joseph:—We have a good site here for a canning factory. Will you please be so good as to direct us to some brother who thoroughly understands canning fruit and vegetables. The above is a matter of great importance to us, as we want employment for our folks. Our branch is doing well; we have a good set of officers, and have had the pleasure of hearing Bro. W. H. Kelley, and other good preachers which is quite a treat to us.

Yours as ever,
S. G. MAYO.

INLAND, Iowa,
June 16th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—How lonely it is to be separated from ones of like faith, and not have the privilege of meeting those who worship God. Then you are all the preaching we hear, and you are a welcome visitor at our home. There are others that can sympathize with us in our isolated condition; it is almost five years since we attended conference, (with the exception of the one at Lamoni two years next September), sickness preventing attending many of the meetings, consequently we concluded to attend at Clinton, June 7th and 8th. On the morning of the seventh we left home about four o'clock for Loudon. Had a pleasant ride of eleven miles. Arrived in time for the morning train, and enjoyed a lovely ride over a smooth farming country. Arrived in Clinton a little after nine a. m. Made our way to the hall where the saints held their meetings, was met at the foot of the stairs by Brn. Maudsley and J. Bradley, the former kindly showing us the way to Bro. Warren Turner's, where we were made welcome by agreeable sister Turner; also found some other saints who had arrived earlier. A more generous hearted band of Saints would be hard to find. Although strange to each other, we did not remain so long; and many thanks to their hospitality. We met several we had not seen before for years, among them sisters Ruby and Page, and wife of Jerome Ruby.

We attended church in the evening, and listened to Brn. Maudsley and Reynolds. Sunday had the pleasure of listening to a sermon by Bro. Bronson; also one in the evening, which could not be bettered. Monday some left in the morning. Before noon it began raining, which detained some, ourselves among the rest. We didn't feel very sad over it, and concluded to storm was without, we were seated in the cozy rooms of good Sr. Chapman and her daughter, Sr. Raymond, having a pleasant, social chat, helping the sisters, who are widows, sew carpet rags. We selected Sr. Ruby for reporter. She declined the honor on account of deafness. The younger members spent the afternoon with Emma and Inez Turner. In the evening by previous appointment, held a prayer meeting at Bro. Turner's, a goodly number being present.

Tuesday was a lovely day, and our two daughters Mabel and Vinnie, were baptized, Bro. Bronson officiating. May they ever be found faithful. Although young, may the good Father keep them in the narrow way. In the afternoon, we gave the parting hand with reluctance, hoping to meet again, Sister Turner and two daughters accompanying us to the depot, where we said farewell, and started for Loudon; arrived all safe; found our son Henry waiting to convey us home, where we arrived in the evening. This ended one of the most pleasant conferences we ever attended; yet it was with reluctance we consented to go, all being strangers. We will remember our visit to Clinton with pleasure, and all are kindly remembered by us. May the good Spirit ever be with you is my prayer.

Your sister,
SARAH A. RUSSELL.

DETROIT CITY, Becker Co., Minn.,
June 20th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The work is prospering here, and the outlook is good. I have baptized seven since I came up here, and prospects for more. The people are very attentive listeners. I will open up in the town of Detroit next week, the Lord willing. I expect to speak in the Baptist Church. I desire an interest in the prayers of the brethren at Lamoni.

I remain your brother in the bonds of the everlasting gospel,

THOMAS NUTT.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

June 20th.—Twenty-one persons who have arrived at Suakin from Khartoum say that when they left the latter place, May 25th, it was safe and fully supplied with provisions. The Mahdi has again written to the Mudir of Dongola summoning him to espouse the Mahdi's cause. If he acquiesces he will be made Governor of the province and allowed to keep all the taxes; if he refuses the Lieutenant of the Mahdi will kill the Mudir and all belonging to him. The Mudir of Dongola has been ordered to ascertain the truth of the reported fall of Berber.

The German authorities are much agitated over the energy and success of American Mormon emissaries in procuring proselytes and emigrants to Utah in Thuringia and in other portions of Prussian Saxony. These Mormon missionaries, it is said, depict the agricultural and other advantages of Utah in glowing terms, but make no straightforward mention of the polygamous practices of this sect. In this way they allure many young women, whose fate after their arrival in Utah is horrible to contemplate, and many young men who are possessed of some capital, none others being accepted. The priests and the military authorities of Saxony have started a crusade against the Mormons, which will probably result in their expulsion from the province, and possibly from the entire Empire.

Several arrests were made yesterday in Germany in connection with an alleged incendiary and revolutionary conspiracy, which is said to have branches in America. It is believed that if a connection with America is established Bismarck will open a diplomatic correspondence with the United States Government immediately.

Three Italian workmen have been arrested at Pola, Austria, for stealing dynamite from the arsenal.

James Stephens, the ex-Fenian Head Center, has forwarded to an active member of the broteerhood at Chicago, Ill., a manuscript circular summoning an early meeting at Chicago, of the prominent Irish-Americans willing to join in a new movement in favor of military organization on the lines proposed by the late John O'Mahoney. Stephens declares that the services of several distinguished European officers have already been placed at his disposal, and he is sanguine that he can secure others. No definite plan of action will be proposed until the convention of the Irish patriots, which it is proposed soon to hold in Paris. To this convention the Chicago conference is invited to elect delegates. After the convention an address will be issued to the Irish at home and abroad, expounding the aims of the new movement. Among the plans of operations mooted is a scheme to dispatch balloons manned with desperadoes over England to drop explosives upon towns and cities below. Capt. McCafferty has been commissioned to examine plans and apparatus. Several Fenians in Paris have volunteered for aerial expeditions. A quantity of revolvers, rifles, and ammunition was found buried near the Cork military barracks. The arms had been recently removed from a house in Cork and buried for safety. The clew which led to the discovery was furnished by an informer.

Extensive frauds are reported to have been discovered in the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy Department.

S. C. Pomeroy has been nominated for President of the United States by the American (Anti-Secret Society) party.

June 22d.—The report that France has established herself in complete control of Cambodia, in Southern Asia, has been confirmed. Frenchmen will administer all affairs except the levying of taxes.

The prince of Orange, the last male heir to the Dutch throne, is dead. In anticipation of his death it is said that Bismarck has been intriguing to make the Duke of Nassau King of Holland on the death of the present monarch.

Lord Granville has sent a note to the European Powers summoning a conference in London June 28th, for the purpose, as set forth in the circular, of considering what changes are necessary in the law of liquidation to restore financial order in Egypt. Before sending the circular Lord Granville was assured of its acceptance by France, Italy, Germany, and Austria. It is thought that the fact that the conference is going to be held will have an important influence favorable to the Gladstone Government during the debate on the motion of censure to be proposed in the British Commons next Thursday by the Tories.

A bill has passed the German Reichstag which provides that mechanics who are not members of their respective trade-unions or guilds shall not be permitted to have apprentices.

A mormon missionary has been expelled from Bavaria. He had made many converts, whom he proposed to send to Utah. They will not be permitted to leave.

Caceres, the insurgent General, continues to pillage and burn the towns of Peru.

The plague of locusts is so bad on the south coast of Vera Cruz that the rancheros refuse to risk the loss of their seed corn by planting it.

June 23d.—An Italian man-of-war visited a seaport in the straits of Babel Madeb and by threats extracted money from the Governor. The action of the Italians caused great excitement. Peace was restored by the arrival of an English gunboat.

Twenty deaths from cholera occurred at Toulon in the South of France Sunday. The plague broke out among the soldiers and dock laborers. Quarantine has been already established. The report of the outbreak has caused a profound sensation in Paris.

A member of the medical fraternity of New York has received the final report of the German Cholera Commission, in which Dr. Koch announces another discovery as to the sources and causes of this dread contagion. It will be remembered that Dr. Koch was the first to announce the existence of bacilli in cholera patients. At that time he was not prepared to say whether bacteria were the cause or result of cholera infection. The French physician, Dr. Straus, doubted the discovery. In November last however, Dr. Koch and others went to Calcutta, where he had the most favorable opportunities for observing cholera in all its stages. A complete series of microscopical examinations confirmed the existence of bacilli. The bacilli were cultivated in pure media, and distinguished beyond any further question from all other species of bacilli. It was found impossible to convey the disease to lower animals, so that it may be called an exclusive property of man. The bacilli multiply with extraordinary rapidity in water or when kept damp, but, unlike other bacilli, if dried three hours they are destroyed. They were also destroyed in a healthy stomach containing acid, showing a mode of prevention of the contagion. The final question then arose, Whence came the bacilli? Investigation resulted in their discovery in a water-tank. The water had been polluted and became the medium of transmission of the choiera-poison, or germ, from person to person. These discoveries seem to point to special organic contagion. If polluted water is prolific of this bacillus under one condition, it follows, a posteriori, that it may under other conditions be prolific in germs conducive of other contagious diseases.

Another English regiment is going to Keneh, half-way between Assiout and Assouan. The British Sussex Regiment leaves Assiout for Assouan Tuesday.

Jew-baiting in Southern Russia continues with all its vigor. The riots at Adzesso have been followed by other riots at Simpherepool, and now Nishni Novogorod has followed their example. The people, infuriated by some alleged misdeeds of the Jews, attacked their houses, threw their furniture into the streets, abused the women, and chased the terrified men through the thoroughfares. The Jews made for the headquarters of the military and the police. They were followed and intercepted, and all their appeals for mercy were unavailing. When caught they were beaten with sticks and struck with stones. In some cases they were hanged to lamp-posts. In others they were kicked into the gutters and left there to die. The people were frantic. The police could not control them, and are charged with not having seriously attempted to do so. The cause of the outbreak is not yet fully known, but it is supposed to be owing to the alleged habits of usury followed by the Jews and general prejudice. There were in all eleven Hebrews killed and forty wounded. The people are still laboring under great excitement.

In Congress yesterday at Madrid, Spain, the West Indian members advocated the suppression of export duties, a reduction of import duties, a reduction of expenses from $34,000,000 to $24,000,000, and the early conclusion of a treaty of commerce with America as the only means of extricating Cuba from the economical depression now existing. The Government declared it was impossible for Spain to assume the Cuban debt and annual deficit, and it was impossible to satisfy Cuban aspirations for better commercial relations with America, which would damage peninsula trade with the colonies. A slight reform was promised to facilitate trade between Spain and Cuba. The depression, it was declared, had been aggravated by the too rapid abolition of slavery. The reply of the Government caused much discontentment among the members.

The small-pox epidemic continues to spread rapidly through the metropolitan districts of London, Eng. There are already about 1,700 cases in the London public hospitals, and new cases are being daily reported at the rate of about seventy-five per week.

June 24.—Eighteen deaths from cholera occurred at Toulon, France, Monday. It is reported that the first death from the disease occurred June 4 but was not reported.

The cholera for 1884 has started on its march from a change of base. In 1882 it ravaged the Philippines and the Chinese and Japanese coasts and moved westward into India. In 1883 it took its way still further westward and halted in Egypt, where 50,000 victims fell under its scourge. In 1884 it appears in France in the same month that it appeared in Egypt last year, and with a mortality in its first stages equally as great.

Bismarck in the Reichstag announced that Germany had a colonial policy, but it was not modeled on that of France; it was chiefly directed to the protection of German commerce. He expected to make arrangements with Portugal relative to the Congo country.

There seems to be no doubt now about the anti-Jewish riot at Nizhuel-Novgorod. A rumor was circulated that the Hebrews had seized a Christian child. The Christian mob, so called, attacked the synagogue. Several Hebrews were injured. The so-called Christian rioters to the number of 150 were arrested. Some persons, principally Hebrews, were fatally injured.

Herisson, Minister of Commerce, at Paris, France, has convoked the National Board of Health to adopt measures for the suppression of the cholera at Toulon and to prevent the spread of the disease. A Cabinet council has been called to adopt measures to prevent the entry of cholera into Spain.

In consequence of the cholera at Toulon, Count Von Taafe has summoned the Sanitary Council of Vienna, Aus., and invited the leading physicians to attend.

In the Chamber of Deputies at Rome, the Prime Minister said that as a precaution against cholera, the Government has forbidden French ships free pratique at Italian ports and had instructed the quarantine. At the request of Surgeon-General Hamilton, the Secretary of State to-day sent a cable dispatch to the United States Consul at Toulon, France, with a view to ascertaining the facts in relation to the reported outbreak of cholera at that port. If the answer should indicate a serious epidemic the local quarantine stations throughout the United States will be advised to adopt precautions against the introduction of the disease into this country.

Advices by the San Pablo say that the cholera has broken out in the neighborhood of Peking, China. Those attacked die in a few hours.

A panic has seized the City of Toulon, which stands next in importance to Marseilles among the Mediterranean seaports of France. Since Saturday fifty deaths from cholera have taken place, and the frightful disease is spreading rapidly. The filthiness of the older portion of the town, owing to its defective drainage and the habits of lower orders of Toulonais, is the primary cause of the epidemic. Since summer has set in many stray cases of death from cholera have been reported from among the ancient alleyways where decaying piles of fruit, vegetables, and animal refuse make the air poisonous. During the last week the increase in the number of deaths—cases of sickness are generally concealed through ignorance—has attracted the attention of the authorities, but nothing effective was done. The mortality of the last few days has terrified the whole population through the fear of a veritable plague. All day Sunday and to-day the wealthy people of the city have been leaving by the thousands. It is feared that many of these carry the germs of the disease with them, and their arrival at other cities is causing alarm. This morning a descent was made upon the pest-breeding centers of the Old Town by the police, aided by the military, and those who were not suffering from the disease were made to take such articles with them as they could carry. They were then driven outside the town and sentries posted to prevent their return. Mean-time means were taken to feed this great encampment of miserables, and an effort will at once be made to disinfect in some measure the quarters they have vacated. The Ministry of Commerce has issued a notice that the cholera at Toulon is sporadic and not Asiatic, that it is due to local infection, and therefore, is confined to the place of its origin. Eight thousand persons left Toulon to-day. Camps are being formed for the occupation of navy crews. The public schools were dismissed. At Marseilles there is a cholera scare. Orders have been issued to bury immediately the corpses of cholera victims in deep trenches, which will be covered with chloride of lime. No bodies will be allowed to be taken to the churches.

Field-Marshal Baron von Manteuffel, Governor of Alsace-Lorraine, a province of Germany, has begun a vigorous and relentless warfare against Socialism in that province. He has dissolved a number of workmen's associations, evening schools, and benefit societies, charging that they were vehicles for the propagation of Socialistic doctrines, and were, in fact, nurseries and hotbeds of sedition. Among the benefit organizations thus suppressed is the Germania Benevolent Society, and, as its members are almost all Germans, much surprise and indignation are expressed at its suppression. The measures for the repression of Socialism have also extended to the expulsion from the province of two workmen named Diebel and Troedler. The specific charge against these men is that they have been endeavoring to secure the election to the German Reichstag of Herr August Bebel, the famous Socialist leader, who is now a member of the Saxony Diet. The severity of these measures form a marked contrast to the liberality which has hitherto characterized the rule of Baron von Manteuffel, and it is said that he has received a hint from Prince Bismarck to the effect that he must stamp out Socialism, or a new Governor would be appointed for Alsace-Lorraine.

The prevalence of the dynamite fright in England, is again demonstrated by the extraordinary precautions which have been ordered to secure the safety of Queen Victoria and Princess Beatrice in their approaching journey from Balmoral to Windsor Castle. The special train in which her Majesty is to travel will be preceded throughout the journey by a pilot-engine to see that the track is free from obstructions and to remove any that may be placed upon it. During the progress of the journey the public will be rigidly excluded from all the stations along the line, and no assemblages will be permitted at any of the railway-crossings, especially in the cities. All trains going in the direction opposite to that of the Queen's will come to a full stop on the approach of the royal train, and will remain stationary until that train has passed.

It is reported that the Canadian Government has arranged a reciprocity treaty with the United States, which will shortly be made public. The new treaty will follow the lines of the former reciprocity treaty, admitting natural products and some articles in the earlier stages of manufacture. The defeat of the Morrison Tariff bill in the United States House of Representatives is alleged to be largely due to the renewal of negotiations.

June 25th.—Austria is establishing quarantine against ships from the Western Mediterranean ports. The cholera scare is general throughout the south of Europe.

Ten new cases of cholera were taken to the hospitals yesterday at Toulon. The alarm is abating. The government Physician confirms the sporadic character of the malady. Two civilians died of cholera yesterday, and twenty-three were taken to the Marine Hospital.

The Egyptian authorities will quarantine French vessels.

The province of Yemen, in Southwestern Arabia, has revolted against Turkey. Turkish troops have gone to suppress the uprising. Another Mahdi has appeared at Kankuhan. He is at the head of the revolt in Yemen.

The Governor of Dongola reiterated his demand for arms, ammunition and troops. The Minister of Egypt replied, ordering the Governor to retreat to the northward with the civil and military population. The French subjects and other Christians of Kassale have petitioned France for succor.

The steamer Faraday has laid the short end of the Bennett-Mackey cable at Waterville, Ireland.

De Lesseps declares that the rumors of the failure of the Panama excavation works are false. The latest advices he has from the works are to the effect that there were less obstacles to overcome than was expected. The enterprise is making rapid progress, and the canal will be finished at the latest in 1888, when he hopes he and his children will be present. In regard to the Nicaragua Canal, De Lesseps said he favored the project, which in no wise interfered with the Panama Canal, but would be a fresh-water feeder to Panama, with regard to which he had no possible rivalry to fear.

June 26.—Six deaths from cholera occurred at Toulon, France.

A Dynamite machine was placed on a street-car track at Bradford, England. It did no harm.

At the sitting of the French Chambers yesterday a vote of confidence in the Ferry ministry was passed. A Member objected to the Anglo-French alliance, but he found no supporters. M. Ferry explained his position in reference to Egyptian affairs satisfactorily.

France seems determined to further humiliate China. Premier Ferry announced yesterday in the French Chambers that some articles of an international treaty between France and the Celestial Empire had been violated, and that he had ordered Admiral Courbett to Peking to seek redress and apology.

Mr. Gladstone's Franchise bill was passed in the British Commons unanimously. Mr. Gladstone in moving the third reading significantly referred to the threats of members of the House of Lords to reject the measure, and said that if the Peers forced a conflict he had no doubt of the issue. This expression was cheered to the echo. Sir Stafford Northcote, the Tory leader, made feeble objection to the Premier's reference to the House of Lords. The passage of the bill was vigorously applauded by the Liberals.

Secretary Frelinghuysen received tonight the following telegram from Frank H. Mason, United States Consul at Marseilles with regard to the recent outbreak of cholera at Toulon; State Department Washington: The cholera at Toulon was kept a secret until yesterday. The 14th there was one death, the 19th one, the 20th two, the 21st three, the 22d thirteen, the 23d five, and yesterday twelve. The cases are of a mild character. There has been only one death at the navy hospital. The deaths are equally divided between civilians and the military, and are chiefly among the aged or young. The question whether it is Asiatic or sporadic is still undecided, but the former is probable. There are hopes of checking the epidemic by sanitary precautions. The condition of Marseilles is excellent, and the death-rate is below the average.

The trial of the Anarchists at Grätz, Austria terminated in the acquittal of the prisoners of treason and attempting the Emperor's life. They were sentenced to prison, however, for a short time on the charge of conspiring to disturb the peace.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

June 22.—Half the town of Pisagua, India, including the business portion, has been burned.

Two large oil tanks at Bradford City, Pa., and one at Oil City, Pa., were fired by lightning. Two buildings were fired by lightning in Chicago, Ill.; loss $11,000. Loss by fire at Belleville, Ill., $5,000. Beaver Falls, Pa., $20,000. Montreal, Quebec, $90,000; one life lost. Cincinnati, O., paper warehouse, $40,000. It is rumored that 250 soldiers have been drowned in the recent floods in Austrian Poland. Railway traffic and business generally are almost entirely interrupted.

Destructive storms have been frequent recently in various parts of the Republic of Mexico. At Lascasa, State of Chiapas, in a destructive hail storm, stones of extraordinary size fell. The standing crops were ruined, and at Tepinapa, State of Oaxaca, a cyclone, or rather water-spout, was followed by a terrific fall of hail. The result was a complete destruction of all vegetation.

A heavy thunder-storm prevailed near Hillsburg, Ont., last night. Considerable damage was done by washouts. Traffic on the Credit Valley Railroad will be interrupted for some time.

Two men were fatally injured by an explosion of dynamite in the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tunnel near Washington, Pa.

June 23.—Forest fires are raging in the vicinity of Calais, Me. A large number of men are trying to restrict the fire area.

A disastrous fire occurred to-day in the large wholesale bakery establishment of A. D. Hase-man, in Williamsburg, N. Y. A wall of the burning structure fell into the alley-way where the firemen stood, and three were buried in the ruins. Two were killed. The building was entirely destroyed, entailing $100,000 loss. A stable in the rear of the bakery was also burned with eight horses. Loss by fire at Shenandoah, Pa., twenty-five houses, $10,000. Three hundred people rendered homeless. Franklin, Pa., oil refinery, $15,000. Cleveland, O., $30,000. Atwell, Ind., $8,000.

At Visalia, California, a cloudburst on Saturday night, June 14, which broke with such violence as to sweep away the dwelling of Peter Stewart, his wife, mother, two little children, and R. Weisner, a sheep-herder. All but Weisner perished. He was found about a mile below the scene of the disaster. He is injured beyond the hope of recovery. The bodies of Stewart, his mother and one child, were recovered. Active search was being made for the bodies of his wife and the other child. The house was dashed to atoms.

A severe hail storm, accompanied by lightning, visited Central City, Col., yesterday afternoon. A game of base-ball was in progress on Academy Hill. The lightning struck and killed Nicholas Newmayer, and probably fatally injured James Lick. Frank Osborn, a miner at Mountain City, was also struck, but will recover. The engine house of the Prize Mine, near Central City, was demolished. Five miners at work were badly stunned, though they will recover.

June 24.—A violent storm at Fort Madison, Iowa, this evening did great damage to property. Telegraph and telephone communication between Keokuk, Iowa, and that city has in consequence been interrupted, and particulars have been obtained from passengers who arrived on the late train passing through that place. The First Baptist Church was unroofed and otherwise injured. The post office was unroofed and the walls damaged. Numerous residences were treated in like manner, while signs and trees suffered severely. Many costly plate-glass fronts were demolished by the flying debris. In the confusion it is impossible to make an estimate of losses to property; but it will be large. The rain came down in torrents. No injury to persons has been reported.

Floods destroyed the new bridge across the Vistula, at Warsaw, Poland, which was erected at a cost of £2,000,000. Crowds were standing on the bridge watching the torrent when the bridge began to give away. Twenty persons were drowned.

About six o'clock last evening a most furious wind and rain storm swooped down on Zanesville, O., and before those on the streets could find shelter the rain fell in torrents, while the wind drove it about in sheets, and the sharp flashes of lightning and heavy peals of thunder were continuous. A flash of lightning conducted into the dwelling of the engineer at the pumping-house by a telephone wire prostrated his daughter, who remained unconscious for several hours. One of our oldest citizens, Loudon Purcell, who has been a bedridden invalid for two years, became so excited at the severity of the storm as to leave his bed and attempt to walk across the floor, but fell. He was placed on the bed and in twenty minutes was dead, without being able to utter a word. In the Seventh Ward considerable hail fell, and after the storm passed the ground was found to be covered with small toads.

About seven o'clock last evening a cyclone about 600 feet wide from the south-west struck the town of Amboy, Ill., unroofing two dwelling-houses and one store and tearing up trees. It did much damage to the crops in its course.

A terrific rain, thunder, and wind storm, accompanied by vivid lightning, visited Saratoga, N. Y., this afternoon. Considerable damage was done. Many telephones were destroyed and telegraph-wires affected.

A furious wind and rain storm swept Duluth, Minn., and vicinity this morning, unroofing houses and barns, damaging crops, etc.

June 25.—Armstrong's omnibus factory at Belfast, Ireland, has been destroyed by fire. Thirty nine horses perished.

Loss by fire near Washington, Pa., a large saw mill, $17,000. Near Shelbyville, Ill., $2,600. At Sacred Heart, Minn., grain elevator and 3,000 bushels of grain. Cleburn, Tex., $19,000. Trenton, N. J., bridge over the Delaware, $40,000. Philadelphia, Pa., woolen mills damaged $25,000.

As the steamer Pavonia, from Boston, was entering her dock to-day at Liverpool, Eng., her cylinder burst. The engineer and many others were injured.

About 8 o'clock this morning the boiler of J. C. Smith's planing mill at Wausau, Wis., exploded with terrific force, demolishing the mill-office and badly wrecking several of the adjoining dwellings. Five men were killed, and four others wounded. Loss $4,000. The scene was most horrifying. The force of the explosion was so great as to break all the windows in the neighborhood, and rocked buildings a half mile away like an earthquake. A piece of the boiler weighing 1,500 pounds was blown fully 300 feet and lodged in a house. The room contained eight persons, but all escaped with slight bruises. Pieces of the boiler were found forty rods distant. The cause was low water in the boiler.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

During the week ending June 20 there were 182 business failures in the United States and twenty-three in Canada.

New and rich deposits of gold ore have been discovered in the San Felipe Mountains, near Tapachula, State of Chiapas, Mexico.

All the operatives at the American Iron Foundry, established at the famous Mercado Iron Mountain, near Durango, Mexico, are on a strike.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the grain trade, says: "Broadly speaking, the weather favored the strongest and most forward wheats and prejudiced other growing crops. It is impossible as yet to estimate the results of the wheat harvest. The present indications tend in the direction of making the best better and the indifferent worse. Business in foreign wheats has lapsed into a state of coma. In cargoes off coast little is doing. There were eight arrivals and three sales, and seven cargoes remained, among which was one of California wheat. About forty cargoes are due the present week. The quotations of cargoes forward are nominal, with no inquiry. Sales of English wheat during the week 47,597 quarters at 37s, against 48,904 quarters at 42s 5d for the corresponding week last year.

Advices from the City of Mexico state that many mercantile houses have failed there. The Government has ordered all the Treasury Agents to refuse the Montepiedad bank-notes, and the situation daily grows worse. That institution, under its new management, refuses to lend over $10 on any one article, which works much distress among the poor. The Treasury reports $2,500,000 of nickels in its vaults, leaving over $1,500,000 of these coins in the hands of the people, to whom they are valueless, not being in circulation or received as money.

The imports for the fiscal year ending June 30 will include over 2,000,000,000 pounds of sugar, about 5,000,000,000 pounds of coffee, and over 150,000,000 eggs. The sugar manufactured here amounted to about 250,000,000 pounds.

Matthew Morgan & Sons, of New York, failed June 24. The firm is an old one and has been considered reliable. The failure, or suspension as it has been called, is attributed to shrinkage in value in railroad bonds especially.

Chicago elevators contained June 1 5,350,238 bushels of wheat, 2,274,391 bushels of corn, 303,843 bushels of oats, 135,630 bushels of rye, and 47,329 bushels of barley. Total, 8,111,431 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 10,426,887 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock decreased 1,107,924 bushels, including a decrease of 667,127 bushels of wheat and 373,309 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canadas as 16,453,091 bushels of wheat, 7,262,848 bushels of corn, 2,981,318 bushels of oats, 499,519 bushels of rye, and 309,427 bushels of barley. These figures are less than those of a week ago by 1,159,590 in wheat and 94,209 in corn.

Twenty-seven thousand bushels of No. 2 corn in the Commercial Warehousing Company's stores at New York have been condemned as "musty and stinky."

Several houses at Mazatlan, Mexico, have closed on account of the stamp tax.

Thomas J. Watson, of Pittsburg, Pa., the heaviest dealer in oil of that place, has failed for $11,000.

The financial outlook at Montreal, Que., is gloomy in the extreme, and indications are that there will be a heavy smash if matters do not mend. Bank stocks are going down in all directions, especially Federal and Montreal.

The area of corn in Illinois is not as large as last season. Corn is not up to an average in condition in one-third of the counties in the State. The condition gives encouragement for an average yield of corn per acre in twenty-six counties; 10 per cent more than an average in four counties, and 15 per cent more than an average yield per acre in one county. The condition of corn the 1st of June in the Northern counties is some better than at the corresponding dates in 1881, 1882, and 1883. In the central division of the State corn looks much better than on the 1st of June, 1882 and 1883. The most discouraging prospects for corn are reported from the southern counties.

The outlook for crops of all kinds throughout the state of Iowa is reported as very encouraging.

Corn in Missouri is good. Wheat only fair. Pastures are good.

Reports show that from April 30th to June 5th rains in Texas were exceedingly heavy and extended over nearly the whole area of the State, causing creeks and rivers to rise, and in many instances overflowing their banks and flooding river-bottoms and low lands. At that time crop prospects were very unfavorable, and it was estimated that untold damage had been done. The damage was greatly exaggerated. The waters have subsided and nearly all over flowed districts where crops were destroyed have been replanted. While there will be some loss of crops in low lands, the rains have materially increased the yield in the uplands, which will more than compensate for lowland losses. Cotton has been well cultivated and has improved wonderfully within the last three weeks. Reports indicate that the grain crop will be the largest ever made in the State, and the prospect of the cotton crop is very flattering. With light rains during the early part of July and immunity from cotton worm the cotton yield this year will not be less than 1,500,000 bales.

In southern Kansas the wheat harvest has begun. There are prospects for a good yield. Corn is also looking well.

An excess of rain is causing anxiety about the wheat crop near Beloit, Wis.

Near Elkhart, Ind., wheat will be about three fourths of a crop. Corn, potatoes, oats and other small grain were never better.

Crop reports from the Minneapolis belt continue very encouraging. G. S. Barnes, President of the Northern Pacific Elevator Company, who is regarded as authority on the northern half of the belt, came in to Minneapolis Wednesday. He reports that everything indicates a crop which will average two to three bushels per acre larger than last year. The rain-storms, which have been of almost daily occurrences at Minneapolis for weeks, were, he says, local, not extending over a wide area. There have been frequent storms throughout Northern Minnesota and Dakotah, but they have, he says, followed regular courses, leaving dry strips on either side, so dry that complaints of injury to the growing grain are heard, while in the wet strips the weeds have got the start of the wheat. This, however, is not regarded as a serious misfortune, as wheat will head out well even under weeds. The chief complaint is that recent hot weather has forced the heads too fast. In the James River Valley, Dakota, where drouth hurt the crop greatly last year, prospects are now better than in the Red River Valley.

In Nebraska all crops are doing well.

WILL ALL MEN BE SAVED?

THE above question has often been asked and often answered; but inasmuch as there have been two answers given, the one affirmative and the other negative, it seems the question is yet open for discussion. In attempting to write upon this subject, we do not desire to be wise above what is written; but shall endeavor to show from what has been written, why we do not believe that all men will be saved. We will quote from the Book of Mormon:—

"For it behooveth the great Creator, that he suffereth himself to become subject unto man in the flesh, and die for all men, that all men might become subject unto him. For as death has passed upon all men, to fulfill the merciful plan of the great Creator, there must needs be a power of resurrection, and the resurrection must needs come unto man by reason of the fall; and the fall came by reason of transgression; and because man became fallen, they were cut off from the presence of the Lord; wherefore, it must needs be an infinite atonement; save it should be an infinite atonement, this corruption could not put on incorruption. Wherefore, the first judgment which came upon man, must needs have remained to an endless duration. And if so, this flesh must have laid down to rot and crumble to its mother earth, to rise no more."

"O the wisdom of God! His mercy and grace! For behold, if the flesh should rise no more, our spirits must become subject to that angel who fell from before the presence of the eternal God, and became the devil, to rise no more. And our spirits must have become like unto him, and we become devils, angels to a devil, to be shut out from the presence of our God, and to remain with the father of lies, in misery, like unto himself."—Second Nephi 6: 2, 3.

From the foregoing we learn, that without an atonement the duration of the penalty inflicted on man because of transgression would have been endless, and that his body would never again be restored to him, and his spirit be shut out from the presence of God, and become like unto the devil. Evidently then without an atonement man would have been eternally lost. And if we can find any proof from the books that any portion of mankind will ever undergo—in the future—a penalty or judgment of a similar nature, then we will have proved that a portion of mankind will eventually be lost, or not saved.

In Book of Mormon, Alma 9: 4, 5, we find that through transgression "all mankind became a lost and fallen people," which fall brought about "death." But that through the plan of redemption there will be brought to "pass the resurrection of the dead." It having been "appointed unto man that he must die" because of transgression in Eden, God then "made known unto man the plan of redemption, and gave unto them commandments, that they should not do evil, the penalty thereof being a second death, which was an everlasting death as to things pertaining unto righteousness; for on such the plan of redemption could have no power, for the works of justice could not be destroyed, according to the supreme goodness of God. But God did call on men, in the name of his Son, saying, "If ye will repent, and harden not your hearts, then will I have mercy upon you, through mine only begotten Son; therefore, whosoever repenteth, and hardeneth not his heart, he shall have claim on mercy through mine only begotten Son, unto a remission of his sins; and these shall enter into my rest. And whosoever will harden his heart, and will do iniquity, behold, I swear in my wrath he shall not enter into my rest. And now my brethren, behold I say unto you, that if ye will harden your hearts, ye shall not enter into the rest of the Lord; therefore your iniquity provoketh him, that he sendeth down his wrath upon you as in the first provocation, yea, according to his word in the last provocation, as well as the first, to the everlasting destruction of your souls; therefore, according to his word, unto the last death, as well as the first."

From this we learn that there is a possibility of man putting himself in a position where he will have to undergo a "second death," that through transgression of the laws given after the fall, man may call down upon himself the wrath of God a second time, even as Adam did in the "first provocation." If then this "second death" is similar to the first—and we hold that it being brought about by a similar cause; viz., a transgression of law, that the effect must be the same—therefore those who undergo this "second death" will be placed in the same condition that man would have been in after the first death had there been no atonement made to redeem him from the power of the death passed upon him in the "first provocation;" and the quotation we made from Nephi tells us the condition man would have been in, and also the duration of that condition, without an atonement. And now, unless we can find the promise of a second atonement, we have no reason or ground to expect a redemption from the "second death."

In chapter 5, paragraph 6, Book of Helaman, we have strong evidence that the "second death" is of a similar nature to the first one; and therefore we hold, that the condition of those who undergo it, and the duration of that condition has been shown in the quotation we made from the writings of Nephi.

We will now quote from Book of Covenants, section 85, paragraphs 4 to 8:

"Now verily I say unto you, that through the redemption which is made for you, is brought to pass the resurrection from the dead. And the spirit and the body is the soul of man. And the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul; and the redemption of the soul is through him who quickeneth all things, in whose bosom it is decreed, that the poor and meek of the earth shall inherit it. Therefore, it must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for the celestial glory; for after it hath filled the measure of its creation, it shall be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God the Father; that bodies who are of the celestial kingdom may possess it forever and ever; for this intent was it made and created; and for this intent are they sanctified. And they who are not sanctified through the law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ, must inherit another kingdom, even that of a terrestrial kingdom, or that of a telestial kingdom. For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, can not abide a celestial glory; and he who can not abide the law of a terrestrial kingdom, can not abide a terrestrial glory; he who can not abide the law of a telestial kingdom, can not abide a telestial glory; therefore, he is not meet for a kingdom of glory. Therefore, he must abide a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory."

And again, verily I say unto you, the earth abideth the law of a celestial kingdom, for it filleth the measure of its creation, and transgresseth not the law. Wherefore, it shall be sanctified; yea, notwithstanding it shall die, it shall be quickened again, and shall abide the power by which it is quickened, and the righteous shall inherit it: for, notwithstanding they die, they also shall rise again a spiritual body: they who are of a celestial spirit shall receive the same body, which was a natural body; even ye shall receive your bodies, and your glory shall be that glory by which your bodies are quickened. Ye who are quickened by a portion of the celestial glory, shall then receive of the same, even a fulness; and they who are quickened by a portion of the terrestrial glory, shall then receive of the same, even a fulness: and also they who are quickened by a portion of the telestial glory, shall then receive of the same, even a fulness; and they who remain shall also be quickened; nevertheless, they shall return again to their own place, to enjoy that which they are willing to receive, because they were not willing to enjoy that which they might have received. For what doth it profit a man if a gift is bestowed upon him, and he receiveth not the gift? Behold, he rejoiceth not in that which is given unto him, neither rejoices in him who is the giver of the gift."

"And again, verily I say unto you, that which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willeth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, can not be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, nor judgment; therefore they must remain filthy still."

From these quotations we learn the nature of the redemption which has been made; viz., a resurrection from the dead. And that the earth is to be celestialized and become the abode of celestial beings, who have become "sanctified through the law of Christ;" while those who do not abide the celestial law, must inherit another kingdom, either a terrestrial or a telestial kingdom; and those who will not abide the law by which they might obtain one of the lesser glories, must "abide a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory." Through the quickening power of Christ all men will be resurrected, some to enjoy a celestial, some a terrestrial, and some a telestial glory; and some to "return again (through the 'second death' the writer believes), to their own place, to enjoy that which they are willing to receive, because they were not willing to enjoy that which they might have received." But having refused to obey the law of either of the three kingdoms of glory, and having by choice and willingly abode in sin, they "can not be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice nor judgment; therefore they must remain filthy still," and "abide a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory." And as we have not been able to learn from what is written, that God has more than three kingdoms, or rather three grand divisions in his kingdom, the celestial, terrestrial, and telestial, we then conclude that the "kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory," must be the kingdom of the devil, in which he and his angels will reign in eternity.

In section 76, paragraph 4, Book of Covenants, which the reader will please examine, we learn what class of persons will have to suffer the "second death," and become "vessels of wrath, doomed to suffer the wrath of God, with the devil and his angels in eternity;" and that all except those "sons of perdition," will be redeemed and saved in "the due time of the Lord after the suffering of his wrath." But the "sons of perdition" being subject to the "second death," "they shall go away into everlasting punishment, which is endless punishment, which is eternal punishment, to reign with the devil and his angels in eternity."

Surely we have no ground for hoping for salvation for the "sons of perdition" from what is written in the passage just referred to. From what is written in Revelations 22: 11, we believe the time will come when he that is unjust will remain unjust still, and he that is filthy will remain filthy still, while he that is righteous or holy will remain so still. All mankind having made their choice of good or evil, and the judgment being passed and all men assigned to that place or kingdom which their choice has fitted them for, will, we believe, so remain eternally.

Second Book of Nephi, chapter 6, paragraph 6, teaches that the devil and his angels are they who are to remain "filthy still," after the judgment has been passed; and paragraph 3, same chapter says, that without a resurrection from the dead, man's spirit would have become a devil, or an angel to the devil; consequently if the "second death" places man in a similar condition to that the first death did, those who undergo that penalty will then become devils, or angels to the devil, and go away with the devil to reign with him in eternity in his kingdom; and will remain "filthy still,"—unholy, unsanctified, and consequently unsaved, or lost to all eternity so far as we can learn from what has been written. Man's agency to choose good or evil is a God-given right which God will not take from him; and if man chooses evil God can not compel him to relinquish his choice; and when every means has been used consistent with man's agency, to induce him to obey the laws of God, if he still refuses God will have no alternative but to let him remain "filthy still," and go with the devil to reign with him in eternity, inasmuch as that is his choice.

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."—1 Cor. 3: 16, 17.

"What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"—1 Cor. 6: 19.

"The elements are eternal, and spirit and element, inseparably connected, receiveth a fulness of joy; and when separated, man can not receive a fulness of joy. The elements are the tabernacle of God; yea, man is the tabernacle of God, even temples; and whatsoever temple is defiled, God shall destroy that temple."—Doctrine and Covenants section 90: 5.

In these quotations we are informed that man's body is the temple of God, or of the Spirit of God; and that God will destroy that temple or body that is defiled, and thus place man in a condition where he can not receive a fulness of joy; for it is only when spirit and element (body) are inseparably connected—made immortal and incorruptible—that man can receive a fulness of joy; and when separated (by death) man can not receive a fulness of joy.

The question may arise, when will those defiled temples (bodies) be destroyed because of their defilement. Evidently not at the first death which man dies, for that death comes upon all mankind because of Adam's transgression, the righteous as well as the unrighteous. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."—1 Cor. 15: 22. All have to die in Adam, but all will again be made alive in Christ through the resurrection. Then and then only can a man's body be destroyed as the penalty of his own individual sins, whereby he has defiled his body, which was designed for the Spirit of God to dwell in, but which he will destroy if defiled; and that destruction we believe will be the "second death," thus placing those who undergo that penalty in a similar condition to what man would have been in had there been no redemption from the penalty of Adam's transgression, which from the scriptures quoted above, would have consigned man's body to an eternal sleep in death, and his spirit to an eternal absence from the presence of God; and he would have become like unto the devil; and having no body he could not attain unto a kingdom of glory, but must abide a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory, and reign with the devil in his kingdom in eternity.

The fact that man's agency gives him power to choose good or evil, places man in a position where if he so wills he can refuse to obey any and all laws by which God desires to save him, and consequently may choose to rebel against God and all of his authority to all eternity; and God will not and can not save man from the penalty of a violated law, unless he ceases to violate or rebel against that law.

That God holds man's agency sacred, and will not destroy it or take it from him is clearly taught in Genesis 3: 1-4, Inspired Translation. When Satan, who was the first preacher or advocate of universalism, proposed to "redeem all mankind, that not one soul should be lost," God rejected his proposition, inasmuch as Satan "sought to destroy the agency of man which God had given him." For to save a man against his will, would be to compel him to accept of a condition he did not choose, and thus destroy his agency; and if his agency is destroyed, he is no longer accountable for what he does, and would become a mere machine, and act only as he was acted upon by a superior power.

We believe the foregoing reasons are sufficient to decide in the negative the very important question found at the head of this communication.

Yours in hope of eternal life through the gospel;

JOSEPH FLORY.

THE NEW DISPENSATION.

BY CHARLE A. PARKIN.

"Take heed therefore unto yourselves and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you not sparing the flock."—Acts 20: 28, 29.

Remarkable prophecy! And how literally fulfilled. Well did Paul know whereof he spoke. Filled with that Spirit which raised up Jesus from the dead, he could well predict what was in the future for the then infant church. "After my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you." Did grievous wolves enter in? Alas, they did, and they did the work of wolves; for they did not only enter in, but they went to biting and tearing asunder the lambs, and scattering the sheep, until no more sheep could be found; for they did not possess the qualities of sheep. "By their fruits ye shall know them," says Jesus.

Paul gives us a very fine illustration of the sheep assembled, and how they came together, recorded in 1 Cor. 14: 26:

"How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation."

This was the way the sheep came together, and the Spirit which actuated them. What Spirit was that? The Holy Ghost which the world can not receive. John 14: 19. Jesus said:

"If I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment."—John 16: 7-8.

Mark the difference here, in the operation of the Spirit on those who had become the sheep, and on the world, or those outside the sheepfold. He was to reprove the world of sin; but to the sheep he came as a Comforter; for Jesus said "Howbeit, when he the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth; * * * and he will show you things to come." Right here a great many theological teachers make a great mistake, showing that they are not the true sheep, and proving what Paul said, "that grievous wolves would enter," and that a terrible apostasy would occur.

The office-work of the Spirit to the sheep, we see exemplified on the day of Pentecost. It came to them in tongues and prophecy. A very fine exemplification of the fruits of the Spirit is found recorded in 1 Cor. 12. By examining the Scriptures we find the Church of Christ was founded upon a rock. Christ used the term to show how solid, and upon what a sure foundation his sheep were founded.

He said to the women at the well, "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water I will give him, shall never thirst again. It shall be in him as a well of water springing up unto everlasting life," or in other words, Christ would baptize his sheep with that Spirit which would lead and guide them into all truth. The rock he built his church upon is the "possession of that Spirit. Read Matt. 16: 13-18. But what says the divine of today? Revelation indeed! Done away with centuries ago; signs were only given to establish Christianity. But what are the facts in the matter? What is the truth? What we may say or think, or try to persuade ourselves, does not altar the truth. Twice two are four, once and forever. If Christ established his church on the rock of revelation, all our saying and teaching to the contrary will not alter the facts. The gospel is the same in all ages. If it took four elements to constitute the gospel when Paul was preaching it, (as he said it did in 1 Thess. 1: 5), it will require just the same now, or else it is some other gospel; and Paul said cursed be the man or angel who should preach any other gospel.

Paul said in his day it took the word, power, (or authority), Holy Ghost and much assurance. But says the modern teacher, we have no need of authority. It is a very strange thing that we have no need to have the right to act legally in the name (which means by the authority) of Jesus Christ, when he was so particular to give his servants the right to act before sending them to teach. He also told them to wait at Jerusalem until they were endowed with power (authority) from on high." Why did Jesus do this if there is no need of authority. He certainly did not trifle with men; he certainly did not teach fables.

Paul says the gospel in his day did not come in word only. I ask what has Christianity of to-day more than the word? They sneer at authority, deride the very idea of revelation, and deny the fruits of the Holy Ghost. They claim to have the Holy Ghost, but as the one they have does not compare with the one that fell on the ancient saints, we are apt to think they have made the same mistake they do in regard to authority; and the same mistake those few men made mentioned in the nineteenth of Acts. Paul asked them if they had "received the Holy Ghost since they believed." No, they had "not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." Now these men had supposed they were baptized of John's baptism; but Paul knew they had met with an impostor, for his first question assured him of this fact. In Acts eighth we find that Philip went and preached Christ to them, and the Spirit accompanied that preaching in the manner that Christ said it should, to-wit, "reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment. Mark you, there was great joy in that city, because they were convinced of sin, and had turned to righteousness by obeying the gospel in being baptized; hence their hearts were filled with joy; but they had not received the Holy Ghost, "for as yet he was fallen on none of them." There is a marked difference between receiving the Spirit unto repentance, or of convincing of sin unto righteousness, and of receiving the Spirit in the manner the saints did on the day of Pentecost; also in the manner Jesus received it when he came up out of the water. In the first instance it comes to reprove and convince; and in the second to set the seal of our acceptance with God upon us. It takes the things of the Father, and reveals them unto us, and puts us in that condition that we should be in, to enable us to say that Jesus is the Lord, and makes us know God, whom to know is life eternal. Paul said that "no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."

If present Christians do not believe in these things, how can they say they are teachers of Christ? The language of our text is applicable. "Grievous wolves have entered, and they have taught strange doctrines, to draw away disciples after them." It is very clear that an apostasy has taken place, from the fact that the teachings of Christ and his apostles, and the teachings of the present day are very different.

As I have already shown, Christ established his church on the principle of revelation; for so he declared to Peter, Matt. 16. In 1 Cor. 12:28, we read:

"And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles."

Where are the prophets now? No longer needed, answers the modern theological teacher. In Eph. 4:11, we read the same thing concerning prophets and teachers; and in the next verse he tells us what they were for, namely, the "perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry." From this we must infer, that until we are all perfected, and as long as there is work of the ministry to be done, they can not be dispensed with; and if God put them in and man says they are no longer needed, do we not see that he is going contrary to God, instead of teaching his expressed will. Remember what the great apostle says about those who teach any other gospel. It pleased God to set these members in the church. When did it displease him, and where is the proof? No other power can change a law than that which made it; therefore man can not change any of God's laws; and if he attempts to do so, he becomes a transgressor. Read what is said about those who transgress and abide not in the doctrine of Christ, recorded in John 3:9. A man having authority from God to act legally in his name, can only act within the scope of that authority. When he goes outside of his authority, his acts become illegal. When Peter and John went to Samaria to lay hands on those who were baptized to confer on them the Holy Ghost, suppose that instead of laying on hands they had simply said, You are all right, you shall have the Holy Ghost; no need to lay on hands, their acts would have been illegal. Or if Peter had said to those Jews who cried, "Men and brethren, what shall we do," You have experienced religion, we give you the right hand of fellowship, his acts would have been illegal, because he had no commission to promise any salvation on any such terms. I mention these things to show that salvation is predicated on strict obedience to God's law, and no deviation is admissible.

But as I said in the beginning, a great change took place; and now let us see if this change was predicted by others than Paul.

"Behold, the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. And it shall be, as with the people so with the priest; as with the servant so with his master; as with the buyer so with the seller; as with the lender so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury so with the giver of usury unto him, the land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled; for the Lord hath spoken this word. The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away, the haughty people of the earth do languish. The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant. Therefore hath a curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate. Therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left."—Isa. 24:1-6.

From the foregoing we learn some important facts, firstly, at some subsequent time there would be such a terrible apostasy that no living soul would be excluded. All parties are named as being under transgression, living under a broken covenant. Mark you, the Priest is just as guilty as the people; the prophet uses unmistakable language. Says one, this refers to the apostasy before Christ. Impossible; for the earth was to be "burned, and few men left." Besides, the covenant referred to was not made till Christ came, when he covenanted as follows:

"Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations; baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world."

Here is the covenant referred to. Besides, it was called the everlasting covenant, a term applied to the gospel covenant which I have just referred to.

"And I saw another angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth." &c.—Rev. 14:6.

Secondly, because they had changed the ordinance. The ordinances of the gospel were named by Paul in Heb. 6:1, 2, as baptism and laying on of hands. Six principles, but only two ordinances to be performed. Jesus said in John 10:1, that he who entered the sheepfold in any other way than through the door, was a thief and a robber. We often hear men say, they thank God that the gospel has been divested of ordinances. By whom I ask. By men who transgressed by usurping authority, and daring to say that men can enter the kingdom to suit themselves; and saying that baptism is of no efficacy in saving man in God's holy kingdom, which is against the expression of Jesus Christ, John 3:5, that no man could be saved unless he was born again. Jesus explains in the next verse, that, "that which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." That men have taught doctrines contrary to the gospel, does not make these doctrines true. Error may become venerable with age, and respectable from the number of its votaries; but remember, O remember that neither age nor popularity can ever make it truth.

A check issued by a counterfeiter no more resembling the true emission of a bank than the present theology or Christian teachings do the true church organized by Christ, would not be likely to do any harm. It would be at once detected. But this departure from the truth came in fulfillment of the prediction of scripture. We are told that that day (the second coming of Christ) should not come except there come a falling away first. 2d Thes. 2:1-3; so that if it has not already come, it will come before Christ, or Paul did not tell the truth. Says the same authority, writing to Timothy, 2 Tim. 3:1-5:

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come; for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."

If Paul had lived in the flesh till this day, he could not have better told the true condition of things. Mark you, he was not speaking of the world, but of an apostate Christianity; for they were to have a "form" of worship, but they were of that sort which says, "No need of authority or power to speak in the name of Jesus Christ. The Bible gives a man all the authority he can get, and all he needs. No more revelation. God can not speak now to men on earth." Alas for their ignorance of the things of God! "Howbeit, in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."—Mark 7:7. The same writer says, 2 Tim:

"The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

They would not have the God-appointed teachers; but they want those who teach what the people want to hear. The people hire them, and of course they must teach what the people want to hear, or be discharged. Jesus says, "Ye can not serve two masters." They can not work to please God and the people at the same time. That Jesus taught as one having authority, the Jews noticed. He came to tell the truth, please or displease. He did not seek to please the people, but to do his Father's will.

We find that some confess the apostasy, and lament it. St. Anthony's Vision shows how he saw by the light of the Spirit the destiny of the church. He lived in A. D. 251.

"O my children, the wrath of God will fall upon the church. We will be delivered over to men like unclean beasts. For I have seen the Holy Table surrounded by mules and asses, which overthrew the altars of Christ by rude kicks, and defiled the sacred body of the Savior; and I heard a voice cry out, Thus my altar shall be profaned by abominable ministers, who shall call themselves the successors of the apostles."

If this man lived to-day, could he tell the events that have transpired any better than he told them in A. D. 251, 1633 years ago? Thus we see the same Spirit predicting the same results. Paul says grievous wolves shall enter, and St. Anthony says that mules and asses would enter, and kick over the table and altar of the Lord. Mr. O. Scott, (Wesleyan Methodist), says:

"The church is as deeply infected with a desire for worldly gain as the world. The churches are making a God of this world; most of the denominations of the present day might be called churches of the world with more propriety than churches of Christ. * * * The churches are so far gone from primitive Christianity, that they need a fresh regeneration, a new kind of religion."

Yes, they need a new dispensation, a restoration of power and authority to act legally in the name of Jesus Christ; among all the confusion they need a Thus saith the Lord to set them on the sure foundation, which was lost because of wickedness. By reading carefully Matt. 20, you will find that five dispensations are spoken of: 1st, the one given to Adam to teach his children what had been lost and point them to the promised Savior; 2d, the one given to Noah, who labored diligently to warn the people of the impending danger of not serving God. But they called him an old fool, and soon found out to their sorrow who were the foolish. Take warning, for "as it was in the days of Noah, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be." 3d, the dispensation given to Moses, when he was sent of the Lord to liberate the Israelites from Egyptian bondage. God commissioned him and sent him invested with the right to act, and backed up all his actions when acting in agreement with authority. Mark the power displayed in dividing the waters of the Red Sea. 4th, the dispensation opened by our blessed Redeemer, 1884 years ago, when he took upon himself man's nature, paid the debt incurred by Adam, and set all men free from that debt, and left him answerable for nothing but his own actions, or in other words, to stand on his own works. 5th, the fifth and last dispensation was opened by Joseph Smith, in 1830, by authority of God, called, chosen, and ordained to open the last dispensation, when God will gather all things, and unite the five dispensations into one grand whole.

PRAYER.

"Pray without ceasing."—1 Thes. 5:16.

THIS is a divine command, enjoined substantially throughout God's word. In the economy of God there are no redundancies; hence all commands are but the imperative expression of what must be—not because of arbitrary will-power, but by reason of a perfect knowledge of what is right, and necessary for the good of those to whom the command is given.

Benjamin Franklin in early life was rather sceptical relative to revealed religion; in fact he became a confirmed Deist. But subsequent developments served to destroy his confidence in that theory. In his own language, "I began to suspect that this doctrine, (Deism), though it might be true, was not very useful." After useful experience and maturer reflection, he reached this conclusion: That if the commands and interdicts of revelation were not right, simply because commanded, they probably might be commanded because they were right. In my judgment this is a true position. Might does not make right, either in the economy of men or angels.

Adaptation is the necessary relation existing between means provided and the end to be reached. It is an indispensable link; and to eliminate this and insert another, only works disorder and entails disappointment.

Prayer is essential to human happiness, because it is a suitable means provided for the accomplishment of a desirable end in life. It is desirable because it brings us, so to speak, into the very presence of God. It is pleasant because fraught with the rich fruits of reciprocal love and acknowledgment. Golden link uniting creature and Creator. It is philosophical, because it expresses an actual demand. It is spiritual because it serves as an acknowledgment of the source whence all blessings flow. It is profitable because it incurs little or no expense, and secures quick returns. It is not to be understood by this that every oral petition is either acceptable to God, or profitable to the devotee. Prayer truly is "the sincere desire of the heart, uttered or unexpressed." God is an infinitely pure being. How pure then must be the effusion of that heart whose owner comes to him. Earnest, sincere, Christ-like devotion, is pleasing to the "Father of our spirits." As well bow down to gods of wood and stone, as to come to Him with intended evil in our hearts; but the meek, humble, and contrite spirit may commune with God and live.

A VISION.

ON the morn'g of December 19th, 1881, while on a ministerial tour in the western part of Kansas, I saw a sight that filled me with pleasure. I had awakened from a restful slumber, and the golden sunlight was peeping through the window, while I was contemplating the wonderful excellencies of God's promises to Israel, and the nations of the earth, when I became wrapped in vision, and penciled it while yet the Spirit was upon me.

Methought I was standing upon a land in a far off eastern country, whose sloping sides rose pleasantly toward the west; while the eastern decline dipped into a beautiful sea, whose waters were clear and placid. To the westward from whence I stood, I saw what appeared to be a wall of ancient structure, bearing the evidences of a careful, skillful workmanship. Near at hand I saw a beautiful tree, apparently growing in a rent of the wall. Its ample spreading branches were covered with luxuriant foliage of living verdure, and seemed to be inviting all of God's creation to rest beneath its shadow. It bore blossoms of richest perfume, and fruit dripping with sweetness. The scene was beautifully symmetrical, fragrant and life inspiring; and a light emanated therefrom of indescribable splendor. At first the sons of men shunned it; and when its fruits were offered them, they reviled and scoffed at those who made the offering! As I but held men began to approach the tree, and were filled with wonder because of its excellence and beauty; some plucked and ate the fruit, and were filled with joy unspeakable. Others contented themselves with beholding its beauty.

As I lingered, I saw the tree severed from its root by men in dark habiliments, who removed the trunk with its branches whithersoever they would, as we would remove a Christmas tree; and they honored it by many rites and ceremonies, clothing themselves with robes, titles, crowns and dignities, while the poor of earth bowed at the thresholds of temples erected in honor of the tree. As I pondered, I perceived the leaves had begun to droop and look sear; the bloom to fade and drop to the ground, and the fruit, no longer dripping with luscious sweetness, began to look shriveled and insipid, the luminous brightness had begun to disappear, and a cloud, dark and chill, began to obscure the people and the tree. I beheld trained men counseling together, then lopping off some of the exalted branches, until the tree scarcely showed a shadow of its former stateliness. The more they pruned the denser grew the cloud of darkness. With a sad heart I turned away, and sought the spot where the tree had grown, thinking to see the stump in process of decay. As I approached the rent in the wall, the earth seemed over-spread with a beautiful twilight, and a solemn stillness reigned everywhere, while the atmosphere was so clearly transparent, that I found no obstruction to the sight of my eyes as I scanned the landscape toward the western horizon. I found the stump, and its roots had grown on the opposite side of the wall, (westward), while the branches of the tree filled the breach in the wall, and extended beyond. The stump was in a remarkable state of preservation and freshness, seemingly ready to burst forth with its perfecting buds of life and promise. Looking toward the western horizon, I beheld the landscape spread out like an open scroll before me, with its evident marks of ancient industry, skill and human habitation. A solemn silence reigned everywhere, like a siesta of perfect rest. I said in my heart, How sweet is thy rest, O beautiful land! Amen.

Now, dear reader, what is the interpretation, and what the lesson? J. D. B.

WHAT CLOVES ARE.

CLOVES are the unopened flower of a small evergreen tree that resembles in appearance the laurel of the bay. It is a native of the Molucca, or Spice Islands, but has been carried to all the warmer parts of the world, and it is now cultivated in the tropical regions of America. The flowers are small in size, and grow in large numbers, in clusters, to the very end of the branches. The cloves we use are the flowers gathered before they are opened, and whilst they are still green. After being gathered, they are smoked by a wood fire, and then dried in the sun. Each clove consists of two parts of a round head, which are the four petals or leaves of the flower rolled up, enclosing a number of small stalks or filament; the other part of the cloves is terminated with four points, and is in fact the flower cap of the unripe seed vessel. All these parts may be distinctly seen if a few cloves are soaked for a short time in hot water, when the leaves of the flower soften and readily unroll. Both the taste and smell of cloves depend on the quantity of oil they contain. Sometimes the oil is separated from the cloves before they are sold, and odor and taste in consequence much weakened by such unfair means.

Selected Poetry.

THE STATUE OF CLAY.

—o—
 "Make me a statue," said the King,
 "Of marble white as snow;
 It must be pure enough to stand
 Before my throne at my right hand;
 The niche is waiting! Go!"

The sculptor heard the King's command,
 And went upon his way;
 He had no marble; but he went,
 With willing mind and high intent,
 To mold his thoughts in clay.

Day after day he wrought the clay,
 But knew not what he wrought;
 He sought the help of heart and brain,
 But could not make the riddle plain—
 It lay beyond his thought.

To-day the statue seemed to grow;
 To-morrow it stood still;
 The third day it went well again;
 Thus, year by year, in joy and pain,
 He served his master's will.

At last his life long task was done;
 It was a fateful day.
 He took his statue to the King,
 And trembled like a guilty thing,
 Because it was but clay.

"Where is my statue?" asked the king.
 "Here, Lord," the sculptor said.
 "But I commanded marble." "True;
 I had not that,—what could I do
 But mold in clay instead?"

"Thou shalt not unrewarded go,
 Since thou hast done thy best;
 Thy statue shall acceptance win;
 It shall be as it should have been,
 For I will do the rest."

He touched the statue, and it changed;
 The clay falls off, and lo!
 A marble shape before him stands,
 The perfect work of heavenly hands,
 An angel, pure as snow.

After reading the above I got to thinking, and I thought how it is a good deal the way with us poor mortals in this life. We are commanded to be pure and perfect, or to live by every word of God. We have not the marble of perfection, but have the clay, or power in part. If we do the best we can, when we come to judgment, the Master will do the rest, or make us more perfect than we can become now with his aid.

INFERIOR.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL.—To be beautiful we must cherish every kind impulse and generous disposition; making love the ruling affection of the heart, and the ordering principle and inspiring motive of life. The more kindness, the more beauty; the more love, the more loveliness. And this is the beauty that lasts. Mere physical good looks fade with the years, bleach out with sickness, yield to the slow decay and wasting breath of mortality. But the beauty that has its seat and source in kind dispositions and noble purposes, and great thoughts, outlasts youth and maturity, increases with age, and like the luscious peach, covered with the delicate plush of purple and gold, which comes with autumn ripeness, is never so beautiful as when waiting to be plucked by the gatherer's hand.

PROVISIONS OF THE UTAH BILL

THE Utah bill as passed the Senate provides that a lawful husband or wife may be compelled to testify in a prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation. In such prosecutions an attachment for the witness may be issued without previous subpoena, when it shall appear to the Judge that the witness would unlawfully fail to obey the subpoena. Bail may be accepted for the appearance of such witness, and in any case he or she shall not be held longer than ten days. Prosecutions may be commenced within five years after the commission of the offense. Every marriage ceremony in any Territory of the United States shall be certified in writing, which writing shall state the full names of all persons taking part in the ceremony and shall be signed by them, and shall by the officer or priest solemnizing the marriage be filed with and recorded in the Probate Court. Such certificate shall be prima facie evidence of the facts stated in it. Any violation of this provision is punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment not more than two years, or by both. Every such certificate and record shall be at all reasonable times open to the inspection of officers of justice of the United States, under like penalty for refusal to exhibit for inspection.

Women shall not be entitled to vote in Utah. All the measures of the Territorial Legislature providing for the numbering or identifying of the votes of electors are disapproved and annulled, but this provision is not to preclude the lawful registration of votes or any other provisions for securing a fair election that do not involve the disclosure of the person for whom the elector voted. The Probate Court is deprived of all jurisdiction except as to the estates of deceased persons and the guardianship of the person and property of infants and lunatics. All laws of the Territory of Utah conferring the rights of inheritance on illegitimate children are annulled. The Territorial laws providing that prosecution for adultery can only be commenced on complaint of the husband or wife are annulled, and all such prosecutions may hereafter be instituted in the same way that prosecutions for other crimes are.

The Territorial laws incorporating, continuing, or providing for the corporation known as "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" and the ordinance of the so-called General Assembly of the State of Deseret incorporating such church are annulled so far as they may preclude the appointment of Trustees by the United States.

The President of the United States, with the advice of the Senate, shall appoint fourteen Trustees for said corporation, who shall have the powers of Trustees and Assistant Trustees provided for in the act creating that corporation; shall hold office two years, and shall each give bond in an amount to be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior.

The General Assembly of Utah shall not have power to change the laws respecting corporations without the approval of Congress. In all proceedings for the enforcement against corporations or associations holding property in any Territory in excess of the amount limited by law the courts shall have power to compel summarily the production of all books and accounts belonging to any Trustee or manager of property in which such corporation may have any right, title, or interest. All the laws of Utah relating to a perpetual emigrating fund company are annulled, and it is rendered unlawful for the Legislature of the Territory to create or recognize any corporation or association having for its object the bringing of persons into the Territory for any purpose whatever. The Attorney-General is directed to institute in the Supreme Court of the Territory proceedings to dissolve the company named and dispose of its property and assets according to law. Such property and assets in excess of the debts and lawful claims established by the court shall escheat to the United States and shall be used by the secretary of the Interior, under direction of the President, for the benefit of the common schools of the Territory.

All existing election districts in the Territory are abolished; and it is made the duty of the Governor, the Territorial Secretary, and the United States Judges of the Territory to re-district the Territory so as to secure equal representation of the people. No persons but properly-qualified citizens of the United States are entitled to vote in the Territory. The bill declares vacant the office of Territorial Superintendent of district schools and vests the power of appointment of such official in the Supreme Court. It provides the penalty for the crime of adultery to be imprisonment in the penitentiary for not exceeding three years. The right of dower of widows is secured by provisions similar to the Dower law of the State of New York. The bill now goes to the House.

Miscellaneous.

WARNING.

I deem it my duty to publish the doings of Joseph A. Crawford at Lucas, Iowa, as related by the officers and members of the branch, who feel that both they and the cause have been wronged by him. He came here last Fall, and by representing himself as an Elder in the Church, and also without obtaining the consent of the brethren to use their names, he so did at the places where he sought trust, and by both these ways obtained credit at various places, through the good name that our people have here. But all the share that he assumed through that good name, he basely forfeited by suddenly leaving the place about the first of March, swindling not only dealers here, but several of the brethren out of various amounts. He was soon after followed by his wife with such household goods as she could get away with. While here he was intoxicated more than once as testified by the Saints and known to others.

He also made various statements and promises which time proved were entirely false, but his smooth tongue deceived them for the time being. In these and other ways he proved himself to be not only unreliable but totally unprincipled. Hence, lest he defraud others we think it justice that, so far as we can, we should give notice of his ways. And if he is still a member of the Church, and the branch where he is now recorded desires to take action against him, (as we think they ought to do) the information can be given them by the authorities of this branch.

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES,

605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

BRO. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents, (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. We also furnish a Picture Outfit, consisting of a fine Water Color Portrait, (without frame), also small picture from which it was taken, and envelopes and cards, all by mail prepaid for only 98 cents.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, July 12th, 1884.

THE Latter Day Saints of the Reorganized Church are of all complexions of politics. The greater number of them accept the commandment that requires that good men be sought, elected and sustained in office; and the rulers and magistrates of the country be prayed for that they may have wisdom to rightly direct the affairs entrusted to them by the public; while there is a respectable minority who take no active part in the politics of the country in any way; and who believe that there is no good thing in politics; that magistrates and rulers are corrupt, necessarily; and that it is unbecoming in men of God to have any thing to do with politics, or politicians.

Politics as a trade, or profession, offers a wide field for corrupt practices beyond a question. It is a constant strife between those in power and those out; the one to get in, the other to keep in. To say that there are no good men, as goodness goes among men, in office and power; or that there are no good men striving to obtain office in the governmental affairs of the land, would be to speak unadvisedly and wide of the truth; for there are good men in both ranks. But all are not good men. Nor are all office holders and office seekers wise men. Politicians, and political aspirants are many, statesmen worthy of the name are few. And for the good of the people who propose to govern themselves these few should be sought after and be placed where their qualities of statesmanship would be available.

Latter Day Saints can not be indifferent, that is, they ought not to be indifferent as to who the men are in personal quality that hold office and rule in the land; for the all important reason that the "Saints are to be prevailed against;" that is, are not to be in control of the government, though a part of it and subject to it, until the reign of the King of Salem is ushered in. The very fact that in time Saints are to have no king ought to satisfy the mind of him who thinks that some sort of republican form of government would continue in this land of America until the righteous reign of King Emanuel. The wisest policy may not be always pursued, nor the wisest party be always in power, nor yet the wisest and purest men in the dominant party be always chosen to be trusted in the legislative, judicial and executive departments of the government; but the general principles upon which the government was based when instituted will be preserved; though sometimes be dimmed by the folly, and sometimes brightened by the wisdom of the party in rule.

The policies of the different parties have adherents and advocates among the Saints. They like others of the citizens of this great commonwealth, have read, examined, and considered, more or less thoroughly, the politics of the country; and, as they have decided, each for himself, so have they chosen to advocate and vote. Nor have they all chosen one way. Some have decided for one system, others for another. Whatever differences have existed in the matter, however, there have been but few instances in which ill feelings have resulted between individual members of the church, and these few instances should have never occurred. Few as they have been they should have been fewer still.

The present contest between the parties for the choice of a man to occupy the highest representative office in the Government, is likely to be a very close, vigorous and bitter one. The Saints are already taking up the threads of difference between the several policies and parties, and arraying themselves in rank with those, who to their several thinking, best represent their own views.

We deem it to be prudent and timely to caution the Saints that they be especially on their guard, that while seeking for "good men," and advocating good measures of governmental policy, they do not forget that contention and strife, one with another, are improper even in sinners, and eminently unbecoming to Saints—men of God.

We, also, individually hold views respecting the "policies and powers of government." But, whatever they may be, we are not at gospel liberty to urge those views improperly upon our fellow churchmen. Especially so, as to us there is not to be such a blending of church and state as to give the one predominant control.

"But, as long as there is not a unity of political belief among the Saints, will there not be also a disunity of religious belief? And if we are not of one mind in politics, can we be one in spiritual things?"

This question occurs to many, more particularly to the timid and conservative. It is a question of judgment, of correctness of decision, involving conditions and circumstances of which no one may have an absolutely just conception except the One who knoweth all things. Hence, as He has been content to give few rules concerning the conduct of Saints towards earthly governments, and those of a general character only, it may be competent for us to conclude that it may not only be possible but probable and mandatory, that there should be a spiritual oneness among Saints, though there may be differences of political opinions between them.

We should hold no man's person in detestation or admiration, but regard all in friendliness. And whatever may occur in the political world, whether elevating or depressing to that policy that we deem the best, let us with equal calmness look upon defeat or triumph, content with having done the best we knew at the time, and giving every other credit for having done the same.

We confess that as much as we should like, personally, all Saints to be "not almost but altogether as we are" politically; we believe that it may be a part of the wisdom of God that as a people we should not all be disciples of one political creed. Do not quarrel about politics. If you must quarrel, let it be about anything else in the world, rather than politics.

THE Blue Valley Blade for June 19th, 1884, contains the following very kind notice of the Latter Day Saints at Fall River, Massachusetts:

"The Church of the Latter Day Saints, commonly known as Mormons, of Fall River, Mass., is an active organization, and is busily pushing its missionary operations. Its membership at present is 125, one-third of whom are native born, the rest mainly of English origin. Elder John Gilbert, who resides in Fall River, is the general missionary agent of Rhode Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts."

Bro. W. W. Blair wrote from Willow Creek, Montana, June 26th:

"I lectured on Temperance here on the 24th instant to a quite large audience. I also lectured at Reese Creek lately on the same subject. I go from here July 2d for Stuart, Montana, all goes well."

Bro. G. E. Deuel baptized two at Clear Lake, Indiana, June 27th.

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas,
June 28th, 1884.

Editor Herald:—On our way south, we stopped at Independence, Mo., where we found the committee on comparison appointed at last Conference; and by invitation of Bro. W. H. Kelley, chairman of committee, who was going to Richmond on business, I accompanied him. We arrived at Richmond about 11 o'clock a. m., the 19th inst., and proceeded immediately to the residence of Father Whitmer. We were met by an old lady, whom we supposed to be Mrs. Whitmer, and shown into the sitting room. Presently Father Whitmer entered the room, and I had a privilege I had long desired, of seeing and conversing with one who had seen the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated, as they were exhibited by an angel from heaven. He talked quite freely in regard to his experience in the church, and we were favorably impressed with his manner, and his evident love of truth. His frank, open countenance not only shows him to be one of nature's noblemen, but impresses one that he is not of the type of men who could be coaxed, or bribed into a system of intrigue or deception.

He informed us that at one time he was told by five hundred armed men that if he did not renounce his testimony he should die; but in the face of death he affirmed the truth of his former testimony. He was with Oliver Cowdery in his last illness, and was by him admonished to never falter in his testimony of the Book of Mormon; for it was true. We saw and examined the original manuscript, and noticed particularly the capitals and punctuation marks, which so far as we examined are correctly inserted.

Leaving Father Whitmer, we called on General Donaphan, who received us kindly, and expressed himself as being glad to meet us. He said the Mormons lived neighbors to him while they were in Clay county, and they were a moral people. Not an indictment was found against one of them in Clay county. The General is a large, fine looking man; and though his physical powers are weakened by age, his mental powers, which by nature would rank among the great men of the age, are unimpaired. After meeting and talking with him, I am not surprised that he played such a noble part in the Missouri troubles. Just the kind of a man to whom we would look for noble deeds. The General informed us that he had examined the original manuscript, and being acquainted with Oliver Cowdery's handwriting, was positive it was principally written by him.

We had another interview in the afternoon with Father Whitmer and his son, and found them quite willing to do right and fair. Bro. Kelley had no trouble in arranging his business with them. We examined the manuscript and were satisfied that it is the identical one which passed through the printer's hands; for it contains the printer's marks. For one I am glad that the records have been in Father Whitmer's hands. It could not have been better ordered, and judging from my short acquaintance, I think no fear should be entertained for their safe keeping if they should fall into the hands of the son, who has implicit confidence in them, and is, I believe, a gentleman, and an honest man. As I looked upon the face of David Whitmer, whose name has been a household word since I can remember, I asked myself the question, Is it possible that this man solemnly lied in his youth, adhered to it in the face of death, and now while tottering on the brink of the grave, will reaffirm that lie? While these questions passed through my mind, that same spirit which has so often been with me while defending that book, rested upon me again, and I felt as sure of its truth as could Bro. Whitmer himself. We took our leave of them glad we came, and received the parting charge from the venerable patriarch, "Be true to your God and country." So may it be.

HEMAN C. SMITH.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri,
April 30th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Some seem to think that God can change his own law at his pleasure. While I do not wish to limit his power to do so, I can not see how he can do so consistently with the declaration that he is one eternal round, and that he never goes either to the right hand or to the left; and again, if it was ever his mind and will to change, has not the time passed for him to make that change? Is it not safe to say, that the time to change his purposes towards us was at the time when man first fell from his high estate, with all the terrible consequences that were to follow even unto the end of the world. Nation after nation, and generation after generation, and people after people, yet unborn, were to be the sufferers if this law was not changed; or did not God know this fact then. If God could have changed his law, or if his law had not been suitable, would it not have been a proper time and place at the creation of man in the garden of Eden, or just after his, man's, transgression, when there were but two persons upon earth? And by so doing he would have saved the innumerable nations and people from the consequent evil that must inevitably follow the course of man to the end of time here upon earth, or until the great day of the Lord shall come. But no, the course of sin was to follow as the consequence of a broken law, and it must fall upon man, and upon the earth for man's sake; and the blight and mildew of sin must follow everywhere and hang upon creation like a fell disease, that knows no release but continues to gnaw at the vitals of life until it is consumed. I might say like a pall of death, because God's unchangeable law that had been transgressed could not be changed, nor could it be abolished.

Every fading flower and every falling leaf, since man left the presence of God or the Garden of Eden, has proclaimed the broken law; and this has been the result of sin, and plainly shows the unchangeability of God's law. How far the Christian world has disregarded this I need not say; but we find in the year 1829 a very strange thing. I say strange because it was strange to the then Christian world. A young man and most likely the same that Ezekiel saw, in the person of one Joseph Smith, who came and declared that God was still the same God that he was when man first fell from his high estate; and that the violation of those immutable laws, would continue to be punished or followed up with the same consequences, if man did not repent and believe a messenger sent in the person of his own Son, even Jesus Christ, the ambassador of the Kingdom of God; and by so doing man might escape the consequences of the broken law without the law being changed. As that could not be done, it in itself being immutable; but the consequent evil might be avoided. Herein he gives his own dear Son as an all-prevailing panacea to heal the most terrible wound, that of sin, and by so doing has preserved his own unchangeability and power to save from the effect of the deadly poison of sin.

For my part, I don't want a God to change; for if he should change once, he might see it convenient to make the second change, just after we as a people had learned to live in accordance with his wishes; and we would not be prepared to receive the change that he might be pleased to make; and in this case it would be necessary for us to live our life over again, in order to keep posted in this changeable God. In Deut. 19:14, we find these words; "Thou shalt not remove thy neighbor's landmarks, which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the Lord thy God giveth thee to possess it."—27:17. "Cursed be he that removeth his neighbor's landmark, and all people shall say amen."—Prov. 22:28. "Remove not the ancient landmarks, which thy fathers have set." Ibid. 23:10. Job. 24:2. If this government and its laws as given by Moses, were given to him by inspiration of God, or from God, as a similitude of his own fore-ordination that these landmarks or fixed laws were not to be changed, would it be consistent that he himself, even God, should violate a fixed or immutable law, foreordained by himself? We believe that God can not change any law or principle of law; for by his very nature being immutable and unchangeable, he can not violate law of his own creating, unless he himself suffers loss. He may stay his execution or enforcement of the law for a season, as in the case of Joshua, when he commanded the sun to stand still, he did not break the law, but simply stayed its execution for the time, that he might extend to the hosts of Israel the required light of day to complete a certain movement necessary to exhibit the power and glory of God; and this was not then in violation of his law or laws, as all of his laws are made for the express purpose of magnifying his glory; so then we can hardly say that he even stayed the law, or even hindered it in the least. It might have been his purpose, and this act of stopping the onward course of the sun was a part of his divine law, or his divine economy in the execution of it; and we feel thankful that in the divine wisdom of our God, he has seen fit to stay the consequence of the broken law. O, how would we, or how could we stand the terrible separation from God that should last forever. Stop for a moment and think of the divine goodness of God in making his laws unchangeable, and yet providing a way for our escape from the effects of the broken law. Think for a moment how we feel when our friends so far forget themselves as to violate their covenants with us, or break a law that we have made, by which they and we should be governed. How much more then does God feel and grieve for us, when we violate or break our covenants, or his laws. If some brother will write to the Herald upon this subject,

I for one shall feel repaid for the very poor effort I have made in answering a question put to me by some faithful Saints that have not had an opportunity to know what reason we as Saints have to give for a continuance of a broken law, if God has power over all things.

June 12th.—Please do not think I am scolding. I know that the shoe pinches, but let us wear it if it fits us. I want to say a few words to many who are morally idle hearers of the word.

Elders, are you sitting with folded hands looking idly on, and in effect saying. What is that to me. Ah, it is much to you. It may seem as nothing to-day, but on the morrow that tide, rising higher and higher, may cross the threshold of your home, and the dearest idol of your heart swept beyond your controlling influence, be wrecked, body and soul. Why then sit ye there idle? Up and be doing. There is a great work for you to do. Why will you not commence at once? Oh, that some voice coming from a heart warmed and filled with true charity and pity for the tempted and fallen, could waken you from this lethargy, could rouse you to a true sense of your responsibility, and make you realize that an all-wise Judge will call you to an account, and ask what you did to save your tempted, fallen, fellow-beings from the terrible curse of sin. This is to every one whom God has called to minister in word, in doctrine, and in ordinance. Have you the effrontery to risk so terrible a responsibility and its awful consequences? I have not.

If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away full of fragrant perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours, and open them while I need them. I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower; a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial as Mary did the Master.

Brethren what are you waiting for. Nothing that God has created waits but man, and why? There is plenty of work for idle hands to do. Do you not see letter after letter in the Herald, asking for Elders to come and preach to the people in the neighborhood of some of the Saints. I can testify that the latter day work is true; and I can say, "I thank thee O God for a Prophet in these latter days." I desire to return my heartfelt thanks to the Saints with whom I have been sojourning while I have been out preaching, as they all have treated me very kindly, and better than I have deserved. Still in service of Christ our Savior,
CLARENCE STCLAIR.

BOONSBOROUGH, IOWA,

June 25th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Roth gave us a visit on the 24th of May, and stayed until the 31st. On the 29th five were baptized. On the 19th of June he made us another visit, and on the 21st Bro. Etzenhouser also came. On the 22d six were baptized, and on the 29th ten more were baptized, of whom nearly all were heads of families. Many heartfelt prayers have been offered to God by the Saints of this church, asking him to let the light shine upon all who would investigate his truth, and our prayers have been answered. God's power has been revealed unto us in these last days, and I thank him for his infinite mercy which he has bestowed upon us. Brn. Roth and Etzenhouser's sermons were well attended while here, and they spoke with great power, and it seemed as if the clouds broke from over their heads, and they spoke with such force that men's hearts began to fail them for fear of the second coming of the Son of God. They made many friends and also enemies during their stay here, and we will welcome them back heartily at all times. There seems to be the greatest interest manifested here now that has been yet since the church was started here, as there were about five hundred witnessed the order of baptism yesterday, and I believe that if the meeting was to continue another week, that many more would obey the truth; for many are investigating. May the good work roll on till all the honest in heart are saved in the kingdom. My desire is to do all I can in this work, and live faithful to the end. As ever your brother in Christ,

FULTON A. BROWN.

Dear Herald:—After a separation from co-laborers at our late Conference at Stewartsville, I reached home on the 17th of April, and commenced a series of meetings in Edenville. I continued meetings a few days and baptized two; also Sr. Helen Newlin, of Vioia. Have visited a number of places in the district, finding the work in very good condition. We had an excellent time at conference held at Des Moines on the 6th, 7th, and 8th inst. Thirty-six had been baptized during the last quarter. Brn. Nirk, Roth and Shimel assisted me in a two days' grove meeting held in Tama county, on the 14th 15th, inst. We had a good time with the brethren, and sent the sound of the gospel for fifteen miles around. One was baptized. We have another grove meeting appointed for Jones' Grove in Poweshiek county, for July 12th and 13th. Edenville has needed my attention for the last two weeks, as it has been something like a theological battle field.

We have represented here the M. P. and M. E. Methodists, Universalists, Christians (Campbellites), and the Latter Day Saints. We have been accused of aggression against the Methodists, through the Register and Marshall County Times, by those writing "up" items for Edenville. These writers have variously signed their names, "H. M. S." and "N. S.," and I am officially informed that neither one of these writers lives nearer to Edenville than twenty miles; yet they "know all about it." We have not been aggressive against any people more than to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified, as we see it from a scriptural standpoint; and just because we see Jesus and him crucified through faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the Holy Ghost, we are considered aggressors! I wonder what Philip, Paul and others would have been accused of had they been in Edenville and preached Christ as they did anciently. Philip baptized them when they believed, and the apostles laid their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost. Acts 19:1-6. Paul received the Holy Ghost by the imposition of Ananias' hands, by a direct command from Christ. "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee * * * hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost." (Acts 9:17).

Ananias was sent, that Paul might receive both sight and the Holy Ghost. Timothy, one of Paul's converts, was admonished to stir up the gift of God which he obtained through the imposition of Paul's hands. (2 Tim 1:6). Paul's instructions to Timothy were, "These things command and teach," and right in connection with this instruction was the laying on of hands taught. Paul further said: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in so doing this, thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." 1 Tim. 4:11-16. "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed," is one of Paul's rejoinders which makes the foregoing evidence to me as a Bible student, that Paul wished to forestall every so-called faith that did not recognize Christ and him crucified in every doctrinal point which had been preached by these ancient worthies. If "faith alone" had been preached by all of these "many witnesses," and baptism and the laying on of hands for the Holy Spirit never had been spoken of nor practiced, then there might be some truth in crying, "another gospel." "And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." 2 Tim. 2:2. I would to God that some of these men that make such a fuss about "faith alone," and the "blood of Jesus Christ," would all of them read this eye opener: "By a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; and having such an high priest over the house [church] of God; let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts [not heads] sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Heb. 10:20-22.

I returned to Edenville again. The Methodist people announced from their pulpit that Rev. John Bowman of Cedar Falls, would be in Edenville on the 21st and 22d, to preach on "Mormonism." Bro. McDowell at once wrote to the Rev. J. H. Scull, M. P. minister in charge at this place, that if Rev. Bowman was expected to inform the public on the question of so-called Mormonism, he would respectfully remind them of the submitted questions that have been so long (21 months) between him (McDowell) and Elder Smay of the M. P. Church, which defined the issues between us; and he asked the coming man to meet the issue of Mormonism, upon its own merits in public discussion. If there was a failure on their part to so meet, that we be allowed an opportunity to reply. Rev. Bowman came as announced, and in three sermons told the people what he termed was "delusion." It was mainly a rehash of what we have often heard. He pretended not to know that there was any difference between us and the Utah folks! He thought there was great danger of having their homes blown up by dynamite, and blood shed brought to their door steps by these people here! We thought fools may be all dead, but the wilfully ignorant are not. Bro. McDowell presented our claims to Rev. Bowman as found in our Epitome, and expressed his willingness to meet him on anything written therein. But no! he failed to have the manhood about him to even deny what he termed Mormonism. The ministers of our place were largely to blame for undue controversy, and Bro. D. C. and I felt in duty bound to force them to meet some of the points of difference between us in a public discussion, and thus settle in the minds of the people, "Who is right." I waited upon Rev. Scull, and presented our claims and the following results have been obtained:

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

EDENVILLE, Ia., June 23d, 1884.

We the undersigned ministers of the Churches hereinafter named, do hereby mutually agree to discuss publicly, in the M. P. Church, in the town of Edenville, Marshall county, Iowa, in the month of October, 1884, commencing on Tuesday the 7th of said month, the following propositions, to wit:

"Resolved, That baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, was the true mode and object of the same, in the primitive Christian Church.

2d.—Resolved, That the canon of Scripture is not full, but that God by his Spirit will continue to reveal his word to man until the end of time.

I. N. White of the L. D. S. affirms both propositions. J. H. Scull of M. P. Church denies both propositions. The discussion is to continue seven days; two on the first and five on the second proposition.

(Note). The second proposition having been mooted between Elder J. F. McDowell and Rev. Bowman, we mutually agree not to entertain as an issue between us, provided during the interim they make arrangements to discuss it. All necessary rules are now signed.

We will spend our Fourth at home, when Brn. McDowell, Nirk and I will go to our respective fields of labor. Bro. McDowell ably answered the Rev. Bowman's futile effort against us on Sunday the 29th inst.

In bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I arrived here last week, and am at the house of Joseph Deremers. He is not a member of the church, but is a believer, and makes the elders welcome at his home. His wife is a member, and as she has been blessed with the light of gospel truth, she is very anxious that others should obtain like blessings. Elder Cheeseman of the Christian Church very kindly gave me liberty to preach in his meeting house, and I occupied the stand in the forenoon and again at night on Sabbath day. There were not very many present in the forenoon, but at night we had a very good audience; and I had liberty in presenting the word to an attentive congregation. Elder Cheeseman was present at night and opened the meeting. The choir did the singing; the Elder gave out an appointment for me to preach again next Sabbath forenoon, he having to be absent to fill one of his appointments in another place at the time.

I thank Bro. Kelley for the kind words of encouragement that I received by letter from him before leaving Illinois, expressing freedom of action and liberty to labor for the Master in the field and territory under his jurisdiction. It is quite apparent that several elders could find plenty of openings for spreading gospel light in this eastern land.

I was with the good Saints at Coldwater, Michigan, over one Sabbath; and preached once at the Ball School-house. Had a pleasant time while with them. Bro. Gordon Deuel arrived there on his mission before I left. I also stopped over night at Bro. Blakeslee's before getting to Coldwater. I was kindly entertained by him and Sr. Blakeslee and family. He sent a horse and buggy to take me to the station the next morning. I also called on some of my relatives who live in the edge of Pennsylvania and some in Chautauqua county, New York, where I stopped over one Sabbath.

My address will be for the present, Greenwood, Steuben county, New York. As ever yours in the bonds of peace,

C. G. LANPHEAR.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.,

June 23d, 1884.

President Joseph Smith:—By a kind invitation of brother Perry, I went to Georgiaville, where he is laboring; and the Lord has blessed him and his labors. He is respected by the people of that place, and the Saints are enjoying the Spirit of God. I spoke with freedom, and the people gave attention. One lady rose and said that she would be baptized the first Sunday in July, if nothing prevented. I have an invitation to go to another village, where they will let us have the school-house. I thank God that his Spirit is working with the people. My prayer is that God will bless all my brethren that are laboring for the cause of truth, and the gospel of God.

T. H. MOORE.

BOONSBOROUGH, Ia.,

June 30th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—After being hindered much longer than we desired, took our leave of the home circle on the 18th, to work again in the vineyard of the Lord. On the last Sunday at Independence comforting words were spoken to us concerning our ministry, and at this early day some of these have been verified to us. The saints here are feeling well. Since September, 1883, their numbers have been swelled from twenty-seven to sixty; then hardly meeting together, and having a fragmentary record, and now all in order.

To the quorum we were placed in charge of we will say, that we desire correspondence from all to get acquainted, and by mutual understanding be enabled to promote the interests of the is more complete and concentrated work. Let work. As we understand, the object of Quorums all apply to Bro. Robinson for Quorum licences, and work with a will that at the close of the year a report of efficient stewardship may be had, and this repeated each year; that when the vineyard shall be pruned for the last time, we shall be accounted as those who have been faithful to the trust and work enjoined upon us. There is no room for drones in quorums, or those whose life will reflect against the interest of God's work. In times past various ones have been called upon to exchange official standing for membership, not having occupied diligently; and it is possible and very probable, that it will be repeated many times. Bro. Robinson has been hindered in furnishing the licences for a time, as in transit to us, by forwarding and otherwise, they were delayed. Let those who grew impatient, enhance their stock of that crowning grace.

My address till the first of April, 1885, will be Rhodes, Marshall Co., Ia., care of D. C. White.

That God's peace and guidance may be with all who desire to accomplish his righteous behests, is my earnest prayer.

R. ETZENHOUSER.

DETROIT CITY, Becker Co., Minn.,

June 26th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I was baptized and confirmed into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, on the 15th of June, by Bro. Thomas Nutt and was promised the gifts of the gospel. While his hands were on my head he said, "The veil shall be rent, and thou shalt see the glory of God, and the destruction of the wicked; for thou shalt see the coming of the Lord."

I will relate an open vision which I received two days after, being at the school house where Bro. Nutt was speaking of the time when the inhabitants of the earth should be purified by fire, I was wrapped in the Spirit of the Lord, and the veil was rent, and I saw the inhabitants of the earth standing before me, and a fire sweeping through them. I did not see how many were able to stand the test, as the vision was short, but very plain; and it seemed that none but those who owned Christ and his authority could stand. Pray for me, that I may stand.

Your brother in the one faith,

HENRY L. FARRAR.

BRAIDWOOD, Ill., June 26th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I feel sad to see how some people like to misrepresent the latter day work and its founders. The more they misrepresent the work, the brighter it grows, and will until the perfect day; and those of us who have obeyed this gospel that was restored to Joseph the martyr, with an honest heart and pure motives, testify that God is at the helm and will pilot his people through this world of turmoil and sorrow. We can truly say, that it is the same as our Savior taught his disciples, and we know it is the power of God unto salvation to those who will accept it. We know we are the children of the light, if we adhere to the teachings we get from God. It is my prayer that our heavenly Father will inspire the hearts and minds of the elders of Israel with his Holy Spirit, that they may always gain the victory over those who oppose them, or try to trample our religion under foot. Righteousness and truth are always victorious. My desire is that I may so live as to have enough oil in my lamp and have it burning, to guide my wayward feet in the narrow path.

Sister MAGGIE KELSO.

CLINTON, Iowa,

June 29th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—Our branch is in a prosperous condition at present. There are those who are investigating the work, and I think before long they will accept it. The sisters of the branch have organized themselves into a society called "The Willing Workers," for the purpose of raising money to build a new church, which we would like to have ready for use by fall. We are sure of success for our dear brother, Warren Turner, has promised that for every ten dollars that we have on hand when we are ready to build, he will raise fifty dollars to put with it. Any of the Saints wishing to help us will be gratefully remembered, and can send their contributions to me, as I am the secretary of the society. The saints of this place had a season of rejoicing at our last conference, and we are enjoying a goodly portion of the Spirit still. We hope that we may continue to grow in grace and knowledge, and that the Spirit of God may guide us in the way of truth.

Last Sunday one of our beautiful young sisters, Julia Suprise, was united by marriage to Mr. George Shokwell. The ceremony was performed by Bro. Turner. May they live in joy and peace all the days of their life, and the blessing of God rest upon them. Sister Julia was well beloved by all, and the best of wishes attend her in her new life.

Dear Saints, pray for us in Clinton, that we may go on in the good work, and that we may more abundantly enjoy the blessings of the gospel. I must close now. Always praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your sister in the bond of the covenant,

CARRIE E. BRIGGS.

SANDWICH, Ill.,

July 1st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I am still trying to do a little for the good cause. My health has been quite poor at times since the death of my companion; yet I have been embracing every opportunity to spread the truth, and have felt blessed in the efforts made. I have just returned home from a two weeks' trip; have spent the last two Sundays with the Saints at Mission,—found them in the faith, and still trying in their quiet way to do the Master's will. Bro. T. Hougas led one to the water on the 22d; others are near the water. I shall continue my efforts as health and circumstances permit. Yours for the truth,

JOHN S. PATTERSON.

LEWISTOWN, Ill.,

June 30th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I baptized two here yesterday. I am on my way to the conference at St. Louis next Saturday and Sunday, and labor for a while in that section, according to previous arrangements made with Bro. John Beaird, President of the St. Louis District. Yours for the truth,

H. C. BRONSON.

TUSTIN CITY, California,

June 24th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I am at last fairly at work for the Master. Have been laboring some three weeks. Find the Saints as a rule somewhat cold and indifferent, although many seem anxious to do what they can. There seems to be a sleep upon them, an evidence that the end is near. It is a trying time for all. Many are turning cold, "because iniquity abounds." It should be a time of gladness, and cheer to all; for never in the history of the church has prophecy been fulfilled so rapidly as now. The nations by their works say that the end is near; and the elements unite their voices with men's in proclaiming the coming of the Lord.

In company with Joseph F. Burton, I visited the Asuza, held ten meetings, baptized one; left an excellent feeling, many believing. Will visit them soon in company with D. S. Mills who is now preparing for the field. We regret very much to part with Bro. Burton. He has endeared himself to us all, and it is with sad hearts we part. Our working force is greatly strengthened by the presence of Bro. Gibson, lately from Salt Lake, who is now laboring with us in the ministry.

They doubtless miss him at the lake, but we appreciate him here. We commence meetings this evening in a new place, where there has been some inquiry after the truth. I pray that the Master will bless us all in the discharge of our duties.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

June 27th.—A Spanish war vessel seized a British steamer off Gibraltar yesterday and took its passengers prisoners. The British Governor of Gibraltar has ordered an inquiry.

Gen. Grenfell has arrived at Cairo and goes immediately to Assouan. The rebels are massing near Abou Hamed. There was increased firing at Suakin last evening. The conduct of the Egyptian troops was good.

Seven deaths from cholera have occurred at Toulon since last night.

The Surgeon-General of the Marine Hospital service at Washington, D. C., received the following telegram today through the State Department from the United States Consul at Marseilles: "The situation at Toulon is rather worse. There were nine deaths Wednesday and ten deaths Thursday. Sixty-two cases are now at the naval hospital. The disease thus far is epidemic."

Hanoi advices of the 26th inst. state that the fighting near Langson between the Chinese garrison and the French forces continued for two days. Ten Frenchmen were killed and thirty-three wounded. Two steamers have gone to seek the wounded. Gen. Negrier has joined the French columns near Bak-le, is awaiting further orders. The Chinese Gens. Vuon Gly and No Ny have 10,000 regulars between Bak-le and Langson. A dispatch from Gen. Milot from Hanoi today states that the detachment ordered to proceed to Langson is in safety at Bak-le. The French troops are displaying great courage. It is reported that Admiral Courbet has been instructed to demand a public apology of China, as well as indemnity, for the violation of the treaty by the Chinese at Langson, and in case China refuses to grant this the French fleet will bombard Chinese cities.

Street fights are numerous in the city of Mexico, and the most unheard-of acts of brutality are committed. Robberies are frequent, and the thieves are very bold. One man standing in his door was attacked by a highwayman and his gold watch taken. Another near the Zaragoza was assailed by a friend with whom he was taking a walk and who tried to rob him, and who, meeting with resistance, badly cut him and fled. The police appear to spend their time looking after the purchases of the poor people to see that the articles have been properly stamped by the storekeepers instead of trying to keep order in the town. As an example of their way of business, last night, on one of the most central streets a man was wounded in a fight with others. A policeman found him, and, telephoning for a stretcher, without removing the man from the roadway, lounged off. The result was in a moment a hack came along and ran over him, mutilating him horribly, causing the hackman to fall from his seat and get badly hurt. A thousand people a month die—small-pox, typhus-fever, lung and bowel complaints being the principal diseases. The Government to maintain order in the coming elections has concentrated 3,000 troops at Pueblo.

June 28.—An organization of dynamiters is said by the German police to exist at Frankfort-on-the-Main. The chief conspirators cannot be traced.

In consequence of the prevalence of cholera at Toulon, France, there is a general suspension of trade there. The merchants have petitioned the Government for relief.

Secretary Frelinghuysen received a telegram from United-States-Consul Mason at Marseilles, yesterday, saying that the Asiatic cholera had reached that city, and that there have been six deaths from the disease there already.

The conference of European powers on the Egyptian question met at London, England, exchanged civilities and adjourned.

During the year 1883, 53,000,000 gallons of beer were drunk in Germany.

There were twenty-five deaths from yellow-fever in Havana last week.

June 29.—Lord Salisbury, it is said, has made up his mind to advise his brother Peers to reject the Gladstone Franchise bill, and the Peers will probably act on that advice. In that event Mr. Gladstone will soon adjourn Parliament, call an autumn session, and reintroduce the bill, pass it quickly through the Commons, send it to the Lords again, and defy them to reject it. Should they persist in doing so a new issue will be raised in England—the abolition of the House of Lords.

At the meeting yesterday of the conference on the Egyptian question, Granville briefly stated the financial proposals to be considered. The conference then adjourned to allow finance experts to examine the proposals. The date of the next meeting has not been fixed.

There were two deaths from cholera in the twenty-four hours ending at six o'clock this evening, at Marseilles, France. There are no cases of cholera in the hospitals here. The general health of the inhabitants is in average condition. The Board of Health refuses to issue to vessels clean bills of health. At noon to-day four deaths from cholera had occurred during the preceding eighteen hours at Toulon.

The authorities at Madrid, Spain, will quarantine against English shipping unless England adopts precautions against the spread of cholera.

All overland passengers from France to Rome are subjected to five days' quarantine.

June 30.—At the next session of the German Reichstag, Prince Bismarck will introduce a bill to largely increase the navy.

In a row between Orangemen and Nationalists at Warrenpoint, near Newry, Ireland, one of the Nationalists was stabbed almost to death. Two Orangemen have been arrested.

Five deaths from cholera occurred last night at Marseilles, France. Between six o'clock last night and noon to-day there were six deaths from cholera. Capt. Bellot, of the navy, when his wife was seized with the cholera, committed suicide. M. Rochard, Chief of the Naval Health Department, declares that the cholera was not brought into France by any transport with troops from the East.

The Peninsular & Oriental Steamship Company will discontinue running vessels to London and Bombay for the present, owing to the outbreak of cholera.

Drs. Boardel and Proust, Government physicians, who have been studying the cholera at Toulon, report that they incline to the belief that the disease is a mild form of Asiatic cholera. The appearance of cases at Marseilles had great weight in leading them to this conclusion.

A workman at Daluzzo from Lyons was seized with cholera and soon died. Hygienic precautions are redoubled. The militia manoeuvres appointed for July are postponed until September.

The authorities at Algiers, Africa, will quarantine vessels from Spanish ports as a reprisal for the action of the Spanish officials in subjecting vessels arriving at Spanish ports from Algiers to quarantine. The Spanish Consul at Algiers has requested the Spaniards to remain indoors.

There are two cases of cholera at Saluzzo, North Italy.

At seven this evening one death from cholera had occurred at Toulon since eleven a. m. Special reports in regard to the cholera in France give a greater number of deaths than the official returns, and the truthfulness of the latter is distrusted. Rochard, Chief of the Naval Health Department, reports the number of victims at Toulon as eight to ten daily; that the aggregate deaths are fourteen in the navy and thirty-one in the town, and that there are sixty-two patients in the naval hospitals.

Rumors are current that the commander of the Sarthe committed suicide. The act was the result of remorse for having introduced cholera into France.

A mosquito plague at Marseilles increases the gloomy aspect. One thousand bonfires are kindled in various parts of the city to disperse the pests. Gibraltar now refuses entrance to French ships.

There is a panic among the Jews in the towns of Western Russia. The New Times, of St. Petersburg, opposes sympathy with the Jews, and declares that equal rights for Christians and Jews would be a greater misfortune for Russia than the former Mongolian yoke.

There were serious anti-Semitic riots in Algiers yesterday and much bloodshed. The Jews' quarters were pillaged. The riots continue. A committee of Spanish residents threaten all Spaniards who took part in the expulsion of the Jews. Troops occupy various parts of the city.

Mr. Clifford Eloyd, recently Under Secretary of the Interior for Egypt, in a letter to the Times gives a graphic description of the horrors of the Egyptian prisons, the corruption of the Medirs, and the anti-English intrigues of the officials at Cairo.

The elections in the Island of Madeira, for members of the Chamber of Deputies resulted in a victory for the Government candidates. Rioting occurred during the voting, and seven persons were killed.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad is now completed to the summit of the Rocky Mountains, nearly 900 miles west of Winnipeg. Rapid progress is being made through the mountains, though much tunneling had to be done.

The Chief of the Cherokee Nation proposes to confiscate the wire fences put up by the stockmen on the lands of his people in Indian Territory. The stockmen are badly frightened.

July 1st.—Castillo, the Spanish Premier, declared in the Cortes that Spain had absolutely no intention of selling Cuba.

A motion to censure the government's Egyptian policy, is pending in each house of the British Parliament.

Lord Granville, the British Foreign Secretary, announces that he received a dispatch from "Chinese" Gordon Saturday, stating, that the latter was safe and well at Khartoum.

France evidently is not to have clear sailing in her designs upon Morocco, nor obtain "the rectification," as she terms it, of the Algerian-Moorish frontier, without encountering some serious obstacles. The Madrid correspondent of the London Times telegraphs that Spain will take steps to protect herself against all contingencies, and says: "If France imagines she has disarmed suspicion and conciliated Europe by attempting to take the Egyptian chestnuts out of the fire for others as well as herself, judging from what is passing here, she is entirely mistaken, as the nature of the thanks which she will receive may show before long." The Italian papers are also urging upon the Government to send a squadron to Tripoli and take a portion of the African coast in order to preserve the equilibrium of Mediterranean interests.

An attempt is being made at Constantinople to prove that the United States has been in the wrong in asserting that Consuls, without the aid of Turkish tribunals, shall try offenses committed in Turkey by American citizens. The following arguments are adduced in support of this view: A retrospective consideration of American intercourse with the Ottoman Government shows that the judicial power claimed by American Consuls in Turkey is based upon a false interpretation of the Turkish text of Admiral Porter's treaty of 1830. The Porte objected to this interpretation from the beginning, and a diplomatic correspondence ensued, which was continued during several years. Aristarchi Bey, the Ottoman Minister at Washington, finally succeeded in convincing Secretary Evarts that the United States was in the wrong in making its claim, and a protocol was drawn up by Aristarchi Bey and Secretary Evarts together. Aristarchi Bey sent the protocol to Constantinople to be ratified, but Turkey being then in the midst of her struggle with Russia, the matter escaped attention at the time. The contents of the protocol were that the United States acknowledged Turkey's view of the treaty for the future and as regards the past, while it declared its inability to punish the former Consul, who had exceeded his powers in the case of Patrick Kelly, the murderer of Tahill Effendi, admitted that the Consul had been wrong and offered to pay $500 damages to the family of Tahill. The true interpretation of the treaty of 1830 is that it accords to the United States the treatment of the most favored nation, and it is claimed by a direct communication with other countries they all appear to support the Turkish view of the question.

There were three deaths from cholera at Marseilles, France, last night, and four at Toulon. The railway stations in both cities are filled with refugees. Italy has sent a transport to take the Italians home from the plague-stricken cities. The news from Marseilles is again alarming. Arrangements have been made to fumigate travelers at Paris railway stations. At Toulon the steamer Mistral, from Marseilles, with a case of cholera, has been ordered quarantined.

There were six deaths from cholera at Toulon, France, between six last night and noon to-day.

Allan Pinkerton, the celebrated detective, died in Chicago, Ill., in his 65th year. He was a native of Glasgow, Scotland.

July 2.—France, it is reported, will demand an indemnity of 500,000,000 francs from China for the violation of the recent Franco-Chinese treaty at Langson.

The German Government has given an English shipbuilding firm an order for the construction of a torpedo-boat of enormous proportions—the largest ever built.

Five deaths from cholera were reported at Toulon yesterday and two at Marseilles. There are now 115 cholera patients in the hospitals at the former city. There are signs of improvement at Marseilles.

It is reported from Toulon that five persons afflicted with cholera have been cured by inhaling pure oxygen. The effect, it is said, is that immediate warmth is restored to the system and the pulse becomes normal. The cure is the subject of general comment and investigation by physicians and surgeons.

Step by step the dreaded cholera is advancing in Europe from the original scene of the outbreak at Toulon, besides establishing new bases of progress at points remote from Southern France. It originally appeared in Toulon as early as June 4th, though its presence was not made public until two weeks later, and since that date it has broken out in the villages around Toulon and invaded the great business centres of Marseilles and Lyons, the latter city being nearly equidistant from Toulon and Paris. Almost simultaneously with its outbreak in Southern France it appears at Saluzzo, in Piedmont, a few miles across the French frontier, and in Odessa, on the Black Sea, where it is raging with great fatality.

The panic is traveling faster than the cholera. It has reached Paris, Rome, Madrid, Hamburg, Antwerp, Stockholm, and London, and everywhere the authorities are up and doing what they can to bar out the unwelcome stranger by strict quarantine, sanitary cordons, and all the resources of modern science.

The Egyptian Conference will meet again next week. The financial assistants of the foreign delegates are actively engaged in examining the English financial proposals and the Embassadors are conferring together.

It is reported that negotiations are on foot between England and France in regard to the Dutch succession. Lord Granville favors Holland and Belgium being united under rule of King Leopold's successor, each country, however, having a separate Parliament and a separate Administration, and allowing Germany to annex the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg. France is not disposed to sanction this scheme.

A society known as the Black Band, whose professional business was blackmailing, has lately been broken up at St. Petersburg, Russia. Many of its members moved in the highest circles, and society was greatly disturbed upon the discovery and identification of the band.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

June 27.—Mr. Gaynon, an evangelist preacher, was killed by lightning while in bed at Winnipeg, Manitoba, recently.

Loss by fire at New Orleans, La., twelve large buildings, $500,000. Chicago, Ill., $1,500.

Throughout Western Maryland and in the Cumberland Valley the storm last night was one of the most terrific on record. For several hours the rain poured as though hundreds of cloudbursts had let their torrents out upon the earth.

The mountain streams from the Blue Ridge soon swelled to rivers and swept everything before them. Along the line of the Western Maryland Railroad great washouts occurred, and on one section over a mile of track was torn up. Many small bridges were washed away. Several farm houses along the Monocacy River were carried off. So far as learned the inmates escaped, though it is feared there has been some loss of life in that section. At the Town of Double-Pipe Creek houses were submerged to the second story, and the occupants had to fly to the highlands in their night clothes. Cattle, hogs, and sheep were swept down the streams and drowned. A herd of cows belonging to Jesse and Lloyd Ruster, near Union Bridge, Carroll county, were carried down Double-Pipe Creek half a mile and landed on an island. The damage to crops is immense. Twenty thousand feet of lumber were washed out of Lloyd Ruster's lumberyard at Union Bridge. The losses in the vicinity of Union Bridge alone are estimated at over $100,000. Albert Dorsey, a colored boy, was drowned and his body carried away by the flood. The farmers in the low lands are out in boats and rafts trying to save their farming implements and live stock. On the Baltimore and Cumberland Valley Railroad bridges were washed away and much damage done. At Hagerstown, Md., the several mountain streams which flow near the city were greatly swollen. The water ran in rivulets through the streets. In the first story of many of the houses it was three feet deep. Many hundreds of acres of wheat and rye have been destroyed. Between Port Deposit, Cecil county, and Rowlandsville, east of the Susquehanna River, great damage was done. Many houses were unroofed by the wind and then flooded with water. At Rowlandsville the damage will exceed $150,000. McDowell & Co.'s leather establishment was swept away. Christie and Logan's canning factory, with 500 boxes of cans, were demolished and carried off by the flood. Lewis H. Cooper's residence was carried away, and he and his family barely had time to escape with their lives.

Rain began falling at Patterson, N. J., about nine o'clock June 25th, and about eleven o'clock poured down in perfect torrents. About midnight a heavy storm arose and swept in a southwestern direction, uprooting and prostrating large trees, fences, and doing much damage to the grain and fruit-trees. At some points fields of wheat were leveled to the ground and the fields were one river of water. The damage is very heavy, as the wheat is ready to harvest. The storm continued until the morning of the 26th, accompanied by heavy showers which swelled the rivers to overflowing. At Birdsboro the Schuylkill Canal overflowed and caused the embankment to give way. This caused a heavy rush of water into the adjoining fields, doing much damage. The loss to the canal company will amount to several thousand dollars. A number of houses in the lower portion of the city were flooded. Washouts were quite numerous on the railroads. Considerable delay to trains was caused by a washout at Chadd's Ford and at several points on the Wilmington and Northern Road. At Laurel Station the water rose to such a height as to extinguish the fire in the rolling-mill. The storm was the severest for years. In York County the storm was very severe. Dams were broken, and bridges carried away. All bridges spanning Codorus Creek were swept out, carrying with them about 200 dwelling-houses. It is reported that several persons have been drowned, as they are missing. This cannot be confirmed, as telegraph communication is considerably interfered with. A special from Lancaster says the storm was the worst known throughout the country for years. The damage to the tobacco crop alone will reach $50,000. At Columbia the railroad tracks were washed out for several miles, and railway travel is seriously interrupted.

A storm of considerable energy and force swept over Atchison Kan., June 25th. The rain fell in sheets and covered the earth to a depth of several inches. The full fury was felt further west, where it did considerable damage. At Corning the wind was terrific, lasting twenty minutes, having every appearance of a cyclone. The frame of the Presbyterian Church, being erected was entirely demolished and ruined. The barn of J. Stein was destroyed, with fences and smaller houses. At Waterville the growing crops suffered severely, corn and wheat being badly broken down and in some instances a total loss. At Barnes Station the store occupied by Henry Ober was unroofed and out buildings and cribs destroyed. At Frankfort fifteen houses were torn down and destroyed, while six others were unroofed. In that place the funnel-shaped cloud came from the northeast and struck the town three times, and at each descent left ruin in its wake. The stone mill of A. S. Newell, on the river west of town, was completely destroyed. The roof of W. Souder's store was blown off, and the rain damaged his $40,000 stock of goods. Two of the houses blown down were destroyed by fire from stoves igniting the lumber. So far as heard from no lives were lost, but quite a number are reported bruised and injured.

At Stryker, O., the boiler in Von Behren & Shaffer's flour-mill exploded at four o'clock to day, severely, and it is supposed fatally, injuring eleven men.

June 28.—Heavy rains are destroying the crops in North and South Carolina.

The break in the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal near Harper's ferry, where several culverts and the bank for three hundred feet were washed away, will probably be the most serious single loss from the recent storm, as navigation will be suspended and transportation of coal stopped until repairs can be made, probably requiring several weeks. In Washington, Frederick, and Carroll counties, besides individual losses in the destruction of crops, and the loss of cattle and fences, many public bridges were carried away and other damage done. In Cecil county the damage was very great. The Village of Rolandsville was almost entirely swept away, and with it the McCullough Iron Company's works, the principal industry of the place, involving a loss estimated at $100,000. The loss in county bridges is $50,000. In Harford county the damage on Broad and Deer Creeks, in the northern and eastern sections of the county, is very great, the flood carrying away fences, live stock, bridges and crops, and deluging young corn. On Broad Creek, Ramsay & Whiteford's flint-mill, with machinery and 1,500 tons of ground flint ready for shipment, were swept away, entailing a loss of $25,000. On the Susquehanna River, on the Harford county side, all the canal bridges, from Wiley's to Peach Bottom, including the iron bridge at the latter place, were carried away.

June 29th.—An extraordinary accident occurred on the Virginia Midland Railway near Lynchburgh this morning. As the train approached a bridge over the James River the conductor whistled for the air-brakes, but his order could not be obeyed; neither could the ordinary brakes be applied. The train rushed on the bridge, an old structure, with tremendous force. The girders gave way and the two Pullman cars were thrown into the river. The passenger-coach projected partly over the break. The sleeping-coaches broke from the trucks and floated on the water, giving time for the rescue of the occupants. All the passengers escaped without hurt, as if by a miracle. The conductor, who displayed great courage and presence of mind, was considerably hurt. A brakeman also received some injuries.

Loss by fire at St. Louis, Mo., $57,000. Terre Haute Ind., $100,000. Bloomington Ill., $10,600. Ludlow, Ky., $12,000. Saratoga, N. Y., $30,000.

June 30th.—The Theatre Royal at Edinburg, Scotland, was destroyed by fire. Several buildings adjacent were burned down.

The residence of Mrs. Patrick Murphy at Brier Hill, near Youngstown, O., was destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning. Three of her children, aged five, seven and nine years, perished in the flames. Mrs. Murphy herself escaped, and she succeeded in rescuing her fourth child.

A freight train on the Delaware & Hudson Road was wrecked near West Rutland, N. Y., Sunday night. Some fiends placed a number of railroad ties across the track. Only one man was hurt.

July 1st.—There is a heavy forest fire in the woods at Brownville, Me., along the line of the Katahdin Iron Works Railroad. It is spreading rapidly. Fires are also reported at Forestville, on the European and North American Division of the Maine Central Railroad.

Fire is raging on Draylock Mountain, near Adams, Mass. Many acres of valuable woodland have been destroyed, and the fire threatens the houses near the mountain's base.

There are heavy bush fires in the Taguanay district of Ontario. Fourteen houses were burned at Baie St. Paul.

A tank containing 20,000 barrels of benzine at the Crystal Oil Works of the Standard Company, at Pittsburg, Pa., caught fire at nine this evening and is still burning. Several large tanks of oil surround it, and it is feared the flames will spread. The loss is estimated at $20,000. A fire at Driftwood, Cameron county, Pa., destroyed the principal buildings in the place. The total loss is placed at $75,000. Loss by fire at Sherman, Tex., $13,000. Dayton, Ohio, $6,000. Oshkosh, Wis., $6,200. Vandalia, Ill., $5,000. On the Lower Coquille River, Oregon, large saw mill, $70,000.

An explosion in the Wellington Colliery at Nanaimo, British Columbia, killed twenty-four miners and injured a number of others.

July 3.—Great forest fires are raging in the vicinity of Kingston, Ont. The damage done already is very great. Loss by fire at Westfield, N. Y., $30,000. Cincinnati, O., $35,000.

A destructive wind and rain storm Tuesday night raged in the district between Washington, D. C., and York, Pa. Houses were wrecked, bridges swept away, and grain and corn fields almost ruined. The damage is very great.

Original Poetry.

THE LIFE TO COME.

TUNE.—"Beulah Land."

How sweet the peace that all have felt,
Who at His feet have humbly knelt;
Who cast on Him their every care,
And call on God in faith and prayer.

Chorus.

Oh blessed hope, of life to come!
When earth redeemed shall be our home;
Where all the pure and faithful meet
Rejoicing in communion sweet;
And for this hope our hearts to cheer,
We'll praise Him as we journey here.

Our pathway lies through changing scenes;
Sometimes the sunlight brightly gleams;
Again we walk by faith, not sight,
And near His side we walk aright.

Sometimes when on the heights we stand,
We view by faith afar the land.—
The goodly land,—home of the blest,
Where long and sweet shall be our rest.

How sweet the foretaste here below,
Joys which the righteous only know;
And far more sweet the fulness there,
Prepared for those who serve Him here.

'Tis like an anchor to the soul,
Reaching to that within the goal,
This hope our souls to purify,
So let us pure and holy be.

BRADEN-KELLEY DISCUSSION.

ELDER KELLEY'S NINTH SPEECH.

Gentlemen Moderators, Ladies and Gentlemen:—In the concluding speech of my opponent on last evening he undertook to show you that he had been fair in reading from his papers as I have been in my argument. I claim that he ought to present in full his important statements and affidavits, especially so, since they ought to be in the argument if published, as they are not accessible to but few people; and that if the statements in full are presented I claim they bear the stamp of condemnation upon their face. To permit him to read a small portion here, and then run the entire thing in the book would not be fair either, as that would give him an undue advantage in space, (and time consequently), in the discussion. Besides, it would not be his matter in fact and I would have no opportunity of reviewing it here, and a statement or affidavit which he relies upon and wishes his hearers to, in making his affirmative statements good, I claim he ought to introduce in full.

He turns around and says: "Kelley has done that all the time. Hasn't he read a bit here and another bit there from the Bible?" Now if I did that, without reading or introducing sometime the full connection, I did not do right. But I deny that I have scrapped in this manner. When I have read to you from the Bible I have read to you the full connection. But this is different from his affidavits or statements in more ways than one. All persons have the Bible at hand so that when a passage is cited they can turn and read for themselves. Again there is no contest on the Bible here. We have agreed that it is the standard of investigation, and I abide by it as heartily as he. Not so with his purported statements and affidavits.

They are not admitted, but absolutely denied, and to come then and stand the test as evidence they must appear in full, with time, place, circumstances, and reasons for making, etc. At best, they are such a doubtful class of proofs that the rules of evidence regard them with grave suspicion from any standpoint, and courts pay very little if any regard to them. They are not in their character to be considered in the nature of reliable evidence. Then we ought to have in this discussion a full, fair look at them. Last evening in my introduction of evidence I read several full statements. There were one or two statements of witnesses that I merely referred to, but not those upon any very important matter. I wish to state another thing before entering upon the argument. I have objected throughout this discussion to his manner of misrepresenting my views to the audience under the cloak of pretending to tell what I believe. Some of you may have thought that I was particular about this and that it was simply because I claimed the right to represent my own belief and views and those of the Latter Day Saints that I have so strenuously objected. But this is not the fact. The real reason is, because I see my opponent is laboring under a mania. It is an old habit I find of Mr. Braden of misstating or at least of misunderstanding the views of others. He evidently misjudges others from reading their views. I have before me A. Wilford Hall's Microcosm, one of the ablest journals that is published in the United States; and the editor, A. Wilford Hall, Ph. B., in reviewing an article of Mr. Braden in the January number, 1884, says:—

"We simply state for President Braden's information, that we never taught or thought of teaching any such doctrine as he has attributed to us. We never once intimated or even thought that matter was made out of spirit. We never thought of teaching that God took a portion of his spirit and condensed it into a material world. We never dreamt of teaching that there are but two substances in the universe, much less one, and that these two substances are spirit and matter. We hold, on the contrary, and distinctly teach that there are many essentially different substances in the universe under the general classification of material and immaterial entities, and that spirit essence belongs among the immaterial substances of nature. How President Braden could deliberately assert and repeat it in different forms of expression about twenty times that we teach but one substance,—spirit,—and that matter came into existence by the condensation of spirit, is a mystery we leave the reader to solve."

Now, I read this to show you that sometimes he misapprehends and misstates other men's meaning, and I want him to be more careful when he undertakes to give my views to the audience, or be patient till I give them myself. If he does not, I shall bring some very serious things against him here, too.

When my time was called upon last evening, I had just finished reading the statement of Mrs. Solomon Spaulding, her daughter Mrs. McKinstry, Mr. Howe, and a second account of Mrs. McKinstry, the only persons of whom we have any account who ever had knowledge sufficient to testify as to the character of the manuscript Mr. Spaulding wrote except Hulburt;—reading from the statements of the witnesses to show what kind of a manuscript, if any, Spaulding ever wrote. What do these witnesses' statements show as thus read, giving them full credit,—and they are all bitterly partizan and prejudiced against the Saints?

1. That the manuscript they claim Solomon Spaulding wrote was about one-third as large as the Book of Mormon.
2. That this manuscript contained many singular names from the classics and ancient history, not one of which is common to the Book of Mormon, or in any way similar.
3. That the Spaulding manuscript treated of an idolatrous and not a religious people.
4. That it was a speculation as to the "ten tribes" having come to this country.
5. That neither of the persons who actually saw the Spaulding manuscript could identify a single word in it as being like the Book of Mormon.
6. That the manuscript, whatever it contained, they gave to Mr. Hulburt who gave it to Howe, these being the two who were trying to get up a work against the Mormons.
7. That afterwards Hulburt and Howe wrote back word that they did not use it because it did not read as they expected.

Now I will introduce Hulburt's statement as published by another enemy of the book, Mr. Patterson of Pittsburg. Hulburt writes:

"GIBSONBURG, Ohio, Aug 19, 1879.
"I visited Mrs. Matida (Spaulding) Davidson at Monson, Mass., in 1834, and never saw her afterwards. I then received from her a manuscript of her husband's which I did not read but brought home with me and immediately gave it to Mr. E. D. Howe, of Painesville, Ohio, who was then engaged in preparing his book, 'Mormonism Unveiled.' I do not know whether or not the document I received from Mrs. Davidson was Spaulding's 'Manuscript Found,' as I never read it; but whatever it was Mr. Howe received it under the condition on which I took it from Mrs. Davidson, to compare it with the Book of Mormon and then return it to her. I never received any other manuscript of Spaulding's from Mrs. Davidson or any one else. Of that manuscript I made no other use than to give it, with all my other documents connected with Mormonism, to Mr. Howe. I did not destroy the manuscript nor dispose of it to Joe Smith nor to any other person. No promise was made by me to Mrs. Davidson that she should receive any portion of profits arising from the publication of the manuscript if it should be published. All the affidavits procured by me for Mr. Howe's book, including all those from Palmyra, N. Y., were certainly genuine. D. P. HULBURT.

With this I refer you to the statement of Mr. Howe, Hulburt's partner in the business of publishing the story, as made by himself; see Mormonism Unveiled, page 288, as follows:

"The trunk referred to by the widow was subsequently examined, and found to contain only a single manuscript book in Spaulding's handwriting, containing about one quire of paper. This is a romance purporting to have been translated from the Latin, found on 24 rolls of parchment in a cave on the banks of Conneaut Creek, but written in modern style, and giving a fabulous account of a ship's being driven upon the American coast while proceeding from Rome to Britain, a short time previous to the Christian era, this country then being inhabited by the Indians. This old manuscript has been shown to several of the foregoing witnesses who recognize it as Spaulding's, he having told them that he altered his first plan of writing, by going farther back with dates, and writing in the old scripture style, in order that it might appear more ancient. They say that it bears no resemblance to the 'Manuscript Found.'"

It was never taken back to Mrs. Spaulding, the widow, or to Mrs. McKinstry, the daughter, from whom it was obtained, and the only persons in existence competent of identifying the 'Manuscript Found,' but carried up to a few of the 'old neighbors,' who were at war with the Saints, and who said they heard the 'Manuscript Found,' read twenty-three years before, for identification.

They say, says Howe, it bears no resemblance to the manuscript. But it is evident that they lied, if they said so, for Howe who read it says:

"This is a Romance, purporting to have been translated from the Latin, found on 24 rolls of parchment in a cave on the banks of Conneaut Creek, but written in modern style, and giving a fabulous account of a ship's crew being driven upon the American coast while proceeding from Rome to Britain a short time previous to the Christian era, this country then being inhabited by the Indians."

"Found in a cave." This is the very manuscript remember, that they have claimed all the time that Spaulding wrote, traced right into Mr. Howe's hands—the one that was "found in a cave," so said. It proves itself to be the Manuscript Found, the very one they got, and the very one they made way with, as I will show you, lest it should spoil their little game.

The truth of the matter is very clear; Hulburt and Howe in their madness had before this, skulked down to Conneaut, and over into Pennsylvania with statements for a few of these ready witnesses who were embittered against the Saints, (for a large number of people had accepted the faith about Conneaut, Mantua and other places, and thus made the sects rage), got the parties to sign their stuff which they had garbled from the Book of Mormon, and afterwards when they got the Spaulding manuscript they went back to see what the trouble was,—it did not read right. As might have been supposed the witnesses were caught; they could not deny that it was Spaulding's manuscript, too clear a case for that; Hulburt had been and got it right from the Mrs. Solomon (Spaulding) Davidson herself: What do they do? Invent another lie to get out of the first, by saying: "Spaulding told them that he had altered his first plan of writing by going farther back with dates, and writing in the old scripture style in order that it might appear more ancient." Did you ever!! Right out of the book that Braden fats on!!! Spaulding is made to go to each one of these witnesses, or they come to him, that he may tell them he altered his first plan of writing and he a stranger to them as it were, for all the time he was in that part of the country was but two years. Well, had they known his first style? If so, why did they not state something about it before they were caught? And how came it that they never struck upon this modern style while they read the Spaulding manuscript so much, which they try to foist upon the world? A man that will take up and believe this contradictory and abominable stuff gotten up by a set of conspiring fanatics and tools more than three years after the publication and sale of a work they are trying by this very means to break down, and with that work right in their hands to draw their names from as admitted in their statements, see Wright's, Miller's, Lake's etc., is doomed to hopelessly fall in with the class of people the apostle speaks of, as living in the last times when such a message of truth as the Book of Mormon contains should be presented to the people, who would oppose the work, the truth:—

"With all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness."—2 Thess. 2: 10, 11, 12.

Men must examine a message from the true standpoint, God's standard: "He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son." Don't break God's law by speaking mean and slanderous things against those who differ from you in religion; there is neither sense nor argument in it. "Speak evil of no one." "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them;" and know assuredly, that, "whosoever transgresseth [this law] and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, he hath not God." So says the Apostle John, and so say I. The Book of Mormon is presented to the world and claims to be the truth; it is presented to the people as such and demands a fair investigation. As in every age of the world when God has sent a message, Satan can't stand to see the word, the truth, take root in the heart; so he begins on stories, and character, manufacturing and multiplying scheme after scheme, falsehood after falsehood, until in this instance the Spaulding "Romance," came along, not even claiming to be a thing of truth, but a speculative lie,—theory; and the people who are too self-righteous and fanatical to believe the truth, at once drink in the theory of the "Romance."

The evidences from their own witnesses are complete in showing one thing, that is, that Spaulding never wrote an article of any kind that would in size, character, style, sense, taste, sentiment, or in any manner compare with the Book of Mormon. But how about "old come to pass," says one. Like the pretended remembrance of the names Lehi and Nephi, the false story of it was put into these witnesses' mouths and they thought it a smart thing to say; that is evident to a man who will think. Why should they so persistently call Spaulding "old come to pass?" Turn to the Bible in almost every part it abounds with the expression. In some parts of St. Luke's gospel it is as frequent as in the Book of Mormon. How could it receive the title of, "old come to pass," from singularity, when the expression was already a familiar one? Such a statement is only equaled by the brazenly one put into the mouth of Henry Lake of the Laban account. "I pointed out to him what I considered an inconsistency, which he promised to correct; but by referring to the Book of Mormon, I find to my surprise that it stands there just as read to me then." Did you ever hear the like, my friends? Where is the inconsistency this wise man pointed out, who although he had not seen or heard anything in the Spaulding Romance in twenty years, pretended in twenty minutes reading to detect it by the same passages which Mr. Spaulding had read to him; only think, just read to him, more than twenty-three years before. Take another of Braden's witnesses, John N. Miller, the fellow who worked for Lake, another of their holy crowd. Twenty-two years passed away with no word from the manuscript, and then he remembers the names Nephi, Lehi, Moroni, Zarahemla, (the entire book they have here; the first part, middle and last part where the name Moroni is found) and he has the history so well that Braden says, "the average Mormon preacher," and I suppose he refers to me by this, "could not to day give it better." No sir! But this smart John Miller can give it from having read it in the old manuscript twenty years before. And Braden drinks it down! What a wonderful Miller this was! Can't you give us a further clue to his life and services to his country? But stop, my friends! He further testifies. Let me read:—"He (Spaulding) said that he designed it as a historical novel, and that in after years it would be believed by many people as much as the history of England." There! Can you beat that? And yet there is to be no more prophets! This is Braden's prophet. I might thus take up and show the duplicity, cheek, falsehood and spuriousness of every one of these, said to be statements, but I shall not so dispose of my time. They are all effectually, fully and completely set out and accounted for beyond a doubt by any man who wants the truth, in another manner, and which I shall soon present you. I am asked to answer the question, How will you dispose of them? "Attack their character?" What! Don't he yet know me well enough to know, that I will not make of myself a bird of carrion to pass over all proper and respectable ways of testing a matter, to gather from the sepulchre of the dead and rotten? I too highly respect the Bible and Christian religion, as well as myself, for this. If character is to be the test and that proven by one's enemies, our Bible is not worth a straw; the entire list of writers will go down in the mire. And should we test the issue of Bible writers on character by the admissions of friends, one half of our inspired men of the Bible would go down. No sir; I have from the first taken such grounds, that I could maintain my faith clear through, in the Bible as well as the Book of Mormon. Consistency is a jewel to be admired. Who is so blind as to not see that if character is to be the test, that is to try the faith of the Saints, and that character proven by their enemies, the same rule must be followed in trying others also. The position is more desperate than was entertained by ancient heathens. "The good that men do" says Mark Anthony over the dead body of Cæsar, "lives after them, the evil is oft interred with their bones; so let it be with Cæsar."

But Braden says, let us find some evil and perpetuate that. Character! What would he accept as good under his rule! Nobody ever lived of prominence in God's work who has not been slandered and berated. Doubtless many things, too, were true against the early Christians; they were true in part; so admitted in the Bible. But I am not a teacher of the doctrine of infallibility in mankind. I believe with Jesus that none are good, (except God), "no, not one." Now his long abuse and misrepresentation of the characters of Mr. Smith, Rigdon and others last evening is entirely foreign to the question under discussion. Suppose they did do wrong and many absurd and foolish things! what weight can that have in determining whether the part God is said to have done is wrong? Try this matter upon its merits. I do not, nor does the church of which Mr. Smith was under divine Providence the founder, claim for these men perfection. Many of the things that he stated about these men and what they did may be true; but as to the majority I am satisfied they are as false as hell itself. And the list which he calls "Mormon Chronology," is dotted about occasionally with a fact, that he may thereby hide the deformity of a hydra-head, which he hopes to force upon the people. But his chronology as a whole is a brazen piece of deception and of false statements, drawn from such works as Howe, Tucker, &c. Suppose I take up Mitchell's history of the United States and read the infamous story recorded against the character of John Wesley in Georgia, charging a crime against that religious teacher more heinous than any ever made against Smith, how would it affect the Methodist religion? Suppose I take John Calvin, who permitted one of his own adherents to be burned at the stake because he differed with him on religion. Suppose I take the case of the great reformer Luther, and the noble Melancthon, and show that they consented to one of their members entering into polygamy, the great Luther actually performing the marriage ceremony! Shall I thrust it in the face of the Lutheran Church upon a trial of their faith? I know this was done by certain parties this last Fall upon the return of the 400th anniversary of the "Pious monk," but how despicably mean and spiteful it seemed to thinking men and women! The rule is wrong. We must get upon a higher plane. Who wants to take the office of "the accuser of the brethren?"—Gathering and sowing the evils spoken against men. Enter the mission of Satan in the world! No, sir; not I. Don't need to ask me, if I will try to hunt up your witnesses' character, unless I had those same witnesses where they could face the ones they are accusing, and they in turn could face their accusers. This is demanded in decency. Why! do you suppose if I was debating with an infidel I would rake up the past life of Col. Ingersoll? Is that what you call impeaching character? To go and rake up all you can find about a man and peddle it—send it forth—publish it. That is the way they slander men, but not the way they impeach them. Suppose an infidel should attack the character of the writers in the Bible in the same way, and they often do, would I then resort to such a course? No, sir. Such a contest would be decided upon the ground of who could get hold of and tell the biggest falsehood, and I would engage in no such littleness. But I have already devoted more time to this than it deserved. It has been because I did not know but possibly some one present might think there was a little argument in such a tirade as we heard from the negative last night, and for that reason only, I have noticed it. As for myself I could listen for weeks at such abuse and vilification if necessary with simply a sense of pity and shame for the one who spins it. But I shall now finish my review of the "Spaulding Romance," and every one of his witnesses' testimony, and then each evening I shall have new matters of evidence on the question under discussion, and many that have never been presented to any audience. Here I might ask the question, Do you still want proof that Spaulding never wrote a manuscript like the Book of Mormon, in any sense or feature? The total basis for all of their huge stories and false statements about "Spaulding's manuscript," was this one thing:—Spaulding, who came to New Salem, now Conneaut, Ohio, and remained for about two years, first representing himself as a preacher, then a dealer in real estate, and thirdly undertook to erect a "forge," (in all of which he failed, and suddenly left, leaving his debts unpaid, so stated by their own witnesses), at one time during his stay at New Salem, told some parties that he had found an old manuscript in a cave on Conneaut Creek, which gave an account of a long lost shipwrecked crew on the American coast, and it would be greatly interesting when published, and he would be able to make a raise of enough money to pay all his debts and be independent. He wanted a little more money out of them so he could go to Pittsburg and have it published. He roped in a few and left, but instead of getting up the startling publication, he stayed but a short time in Pittsburg and went to Washington county, Pennsylvania, where he died in 1816. He never, however, reported to his creditors and they were left in the lurch, waiting for a check from the broken-down clergyman. Twenty-one years pass away, and no tidings. In the meantime the Book of Mormon is published and is making a great excitement in the world, and these duped creditors of Spaulding's begin to think of the startling shipwreck tale, of which Spaulding had told them he would make his fortune; and they got hold of a copy of the Book of Mormon, and the base Hulburt, who had been cut off from the Church of Latter Day Saints; got out their statements and sent Hulburt after the Spaulding manuscript. This they found carefully laid away in the trunk of Spaulding's widow, and it is brought back by them and put into the hands of Editor Howe, of Painesville, Ohio, who reads it and finds no resemblance whatever to the Book of Mormon. Howe says, page 288 of his book entitled "Mormonism Unveiled:" "This is a romance, purporting to have been translated from the Latin, found on twenty-four rolls of parchment, in a cave, on the banks of Conneaut Creek, but written in modern style, and giving a fabulous account of a ship being driven upon the American coast while proceeding from Rome to Britain, a short time previous to the Christian era, this country then being inhabited by the Indians."

Here is the Spaulding tale in a nutshell! The whole thing entirely different from the Book of Mormon; the style, dates, names, people, and all. The whole thing as foreign to the Book of Mormon as heaven and hades, but it is the little nit from which the enemies of Mr. Smith hatched this terrible "Spaulding Story."

This is his alibi. How I ask you, does his evidence stand upon the first point? Did Solomon Spaulding ever write a manuscript like the manuscript of the Book of Mormon in any sense? I say the evidence from his own witnesses is against him and ask him to now meet the issue he has made.

But he does not only have to show this, but to show also:

2d. That Rigdon and Smith in some way stole it and that Smith used it.

3d. That Rigdon knew of Smith and the Book of Mormon before the book was published in 1830, and was connected with the two in some way.

4th. That Parley P. Pratt did not bring a copy of this book and present it to Rigdon while Rigdon was a Disciple Preacher, and then and there, in 1830, Rigdon first knew the contents of said book.

In beginning upon the second proposition, I am reminded of the story that is told of the absent juror. He had been subpoenaed to attend a session of court; but when the day arrived and court was called, he was not there; and the judge abruptly demanded to know the reason. The juror's friend arose and said there were several reasons. And proceeded to give them. The first is, he said, that the man is dead. There! that is enough, said the judge, you need not give any more.

Now it seems to me that if I have shown you clearly that Spaulding never wrote such a manuscript as the Book of Mormon, or one that had any resemblance to it, from their own witnesses, that ought to be enough on this; but lest some one may yet have a doubt I will produce some further evidence. First a letter from Sidney Rigdon to the editors of the Boston Journal.

“COMMERCE, May 27th, 1839.

MESSRS. BARTLET & SULLIVAN:—

There was no man by the name of Patterson, during my residence in Pittsburg, who had a printing office: what might have been before I lived there I know not. Mr. Robert Patterson, I was told, had owned a printing office before I lived in that city, but had been unfortunate in business and failed before my residence there. This Mr. Patterson, who was a Presbyterian Preacher, I had a very slight acquaintance with during my residence in Pittsburg; he was then acting under an agency in the book and stationery business and was the owner of no property of any kind, printing office or anything else, during the time I resided in the city. If I were to say that I ever heard of the Rev. Solomon Spaulding and his wife, until Dr. P. Hulburt wrote his lie about me, I should be a liar like unto themselves.”

Rigdon is emphatic, when he talks, you know, because many of you used to hear him talk.

“Why was not the testimony of Mr. Patterson obtained to give force to the shameful tale of lies? The only reason is, that he was not a fit tool for them to work with; he would not lie for them; for if he were called on, he would testify to what I have said. This Hulburt once belonged to the Methodist Church, but was excluded for immoralities. He afterwards imposed himself upon the church of Latter Day Saints, and was excluded for using obscene language to a young lady, a member of said church, who resented his insult with indignation, which became both her character and profession. After his exclusion he swore—for he was vilely profane—that he would have revenge, and commenced his work. He soon found assistance; a pious old deacon of the Campbellite Church, by the name of Onis Clapp, and his two sons, Thomas W. Clapp, and Matthew S. Clapp, both Campbellite preachers, abetted and assisted by another Campbellite preacher, by the name of Adamson Bently. Hulburt went to work catering lies for the company. Before he got through, his conduct became so scandalous that the company utterly refused to let his name go out with the lies he had collected, and he and his associates had made, and they substituted the name of E. D. Howe. The change, however, was not much better.”

Then he refers in terms to Mrs. Matilda Davidson, but it is not material and I have not it copied in here. I will read it if necessary.

Respectfully, S. RIGDON.

From the strong language of this letter it is easy to see that Mr. Rigdon had been maligned by the Campbellites, the people with whom he had formerly been connected—to such an extent that it was almost impossible to bear it any longer; and the reason of this was simply because he saw fit in the honesty of his heart, to step out and embrace what he believed to be a better and higher religion than was to be had by remaining with his Campbellite brethren. Hence it is, that when he speaks, it is with that sternness and force, that was a terror to his maligners.

Heretofore they have generally told about Rigdon working for Patterson, but Braden has seen this go to the wall once, as he did also his “woman preacher story,” at Wilber, Nebraska, so he has deftly yclept it this time; that is better than no fairness; when you are driven clear to the wall drop it; and if he was not so eager to grab at something else he would improve in the world much better.

This letter of Rigdon's effectually shows that he never worked in a printing office in Pittsburg; that Patterson had no such office when he was there to his knowledge, and was not engaged in the business of printing; and, referring to Mr. Patterson, who was at the time a Presbyterian preacher, as a man who would corroborate this statement. Afterwards Patterson does corroborate it. Rigdon says, the first he ever knew of the Book of Mormon was in the year 1830, when a copy was handed him by a minister of the Latter Day Saints by the name of P. P. Pratt.

HOW DO WE PRAY?

It sometimes seems as though God is very far away from us; that he does not hear our prayers however earnestly we plead. He hideth his face from us and we are distressed, and imagine that God has cast us off forever.

There never has been a child of God who has not had this experience of darkness and desolation when God withdraws from him. Even he who in all things was afflicted as we are, cried, “My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?” David said, “Thou didst hide thy face and I was troubled.” And Job: “Why hidest thou thy face from me?” Ah! how often the tried ones of to-day ask the same. Why are not our prayers oftener heard in behalf of the sick, when in faith we have anointed them in the name of the Lord? And oftentimes in deep distress we come away from the throne of mercy, feeling that God has not heard us. There must be a reason for this, and thereon I fell into a train of solemn meditations.

If, through Christ we have access by one spirit unto the Father, it must be that when he answers us not it is because we have approached his presence without the Mediator. When the two sons of Aaron died for offering incense to the Lord in a manner contrary to that commanded, “Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that the Lord spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me.” And Aaron was charged that he was not to enter the “presence” at any time without preparation. Certain things were commanded him to do previous to entering within the vail, and by obedience he saved himself from death. The law was done away in Christ, and when on the cross he uttered that agonizing cry, “Why hast thou forsaken me?” There was no mediator between himself and God. By the sacrifice of himself he made a way of escape for us. Himself “the way,” he assures us, “Whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name he will give it you.” “And this is the confidence we have in him that if we ask anything according to his will he heareth us.”

Having all this assurance, why do we fail? May it not be that the boldness and confidence with which we seek access to the Father is not so much through faith in Christ as in ourselves. Assuming the name of Christ it is essayed to do the work of Christ in human strength, forgetting that Christ must work in us to will and to do. God will be sanctified in them that come near him. It is not strange if the unclean spirits should insolently answer, “Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye?” Again, in the prayer over the sick, perhaps the Father is too familiarly addressed, and sometimes as though there was no Mediator between God and man, ignoring the great high priest who has passed into the heavens to present our offerings to God. The priests ordained from among men to minister for men in things pertaining to God, offer them themselves, and without the vail, instead of presenting them to him who is authorized to receive them. It was said of Christ, “Though he were a son yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered.” May not we?

It is a very easy matter to quote a passage of scripture. But a quite difficult thing to make a correct application. This passage is one of the many that are read more for the reading than for the lesson it inculcates. And as a rule persons mostly professing to be believers in the teachings of Christ and his apostles, are those who give it a meaning far wide of the mark. Or if they pay any regard to it at all, it is to pay out the change that has rung in their ears from early childhood, the religion they always knew, taught them by their parents, and those parents by their parents, and so on back several generations. And so inbred is the system of faith they enjoy, that in their estimation it would be a sacrilege on the part of any one to attempt to turn the tide. And so it is; we can accomplish more good with those who never made any profession if they are honest and willing to prove the truth by the truth, without fear of what any one will say about their good name or standing in society. Nine out of every ten of so-called Christians, are not willing even to talk about the Christian Religion, only as they have imbibed what they call religion or religious ideas. And when you wish to call their attention to facts as related in the scriptures, they flatly assert the contrary of what is written. I question whether an Elder lives, who has not received flat contradictions when presenting the written word to those of some other faith, more than once or twice or a dozen times in his ministry.

The undersigned has experienced it many times. A passage of scripture found in Romans 14th, is very often brought forth as strong evidence in favor of people pleasing themselves as to what their faith shall consist in: “Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.”

As though the Apostle took upon himself to dispense life and salvation aside from and at variance with his Master; and was allowed to set aside the instruction he had received. Seven out of ten of so-called Christians, take upon themselves to dictate to the Savior and his apostles what they will embrace as means of salvation; and will be baptized, sprinkled or poured as their views of the above passage shall be construed by them or their preachers. They never stop to think even for one moment, that Paul was addressing his letter to Saints, those already in the same faith as himself. That it was not what system of faith they should embrace, but concerning eating and the observance of New Moons and Sabbaths and holy days. For the apostle knew it would be a detriment to the faith of the church to allow men and women a choice as to which of all the faiths even then they might embrace. This would be going entirely contrary to the commands of Christ.

To prove all things, means in the judgment of many, to prove only one thing and that is what is it, that comes nearest my inclination? What is most popular? Popularity has as much to do with forming the religious opinion of a great many professors, as any other thing. Where two churches exist in one place, and both are popular, there is nearly always during a time of revival, strife and contention as to which the seekers shall belong to, unless these be children whose parents belong to one of the two churches. Their parental influence is sure to carry the child in the direction the parent wishes. If the parents are Presbyterians, of course the children will be such, and same on the other hand. We have seen the same this season. A union meeting was carried on in our city. One hundred converts were made, (yes, made); at the close a division of the spoils was had, and three of the churches received their quota. But the poor Christians (Campbellites) got but three out of the one hundred. The poor Mormons and Universalists got none.

I fearlessly assert that ninety of the one hundred never dreamed of proving anything but their own inclination to do what they thought was right, according to what they were taught. How accommodating and nice to have an evangelist come along and work for two or three different faiths, telling them it was all right no matter what church they united with, so they united with one or the other. Had Paul or Peter been so accommodating, it might have saved a deal of persecution and finally a martyr's death. How nice it would have been had they only known it, to labor for the Pharisees, Sadducees, Essenes, and all other sects; and after creating a furor, to have divided the sheep amongst all these different societies. Yet people are so foolish as to think it is perfectly legitimate and right. Swallow anything but God's blessed word and way of saving men and women. And instead of proving the truth of the gospel as they should, they only prove that which pleases them best, and suits their fancy.

T. F. STAFFORD.

THE NEW DISPENSATION.

BY CHARLES A. PARKIN.

In the chapter just quoted and explained as referring to the five dispensations, I desire to say in further explanation, that the dispensation represented by "early in the morning," is the one that Adam filled, and the one represented by the "third hour," was filled by Noah, the one represented by "sixth hour" was filled by Moses; the one represented by the "ninth hour" was filled by Jesus, and the one represented by the eleventh hour was filled or is being filled now, by Joseph Smith. By turning to the 24th of Matt., you will discover that the apostles ask Jesus a triple question, namely, "When shall these things be? What shall be the sign of them coming, and the end of the world?" He goes on and explains in regard to "these things," meaning the destruction of the temple, and so forth; and then answers the latter part, or in regard to his second coming and the end of the world. He says:

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness, to all nations, and then shall the end come."

"This gospel of the kingdom." What did Jesus mean by that? He meant just what he said, that the same identical gospel as he and his servants were then preaching, should be preached just prior to his coming a second time, and the end of the world. As we have just shown, a complete apostasy took place, and that power was taken from among men; hence the necessity of its being restored, and the opening of this latter dispensation, to prepare a people to build a temple, to receive the Lord as declared by Malachi, when he said: "And the Lord whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple."

Now, firstly, these people are to be seeking the Lord; and secondly, he (Jesus) is to suddenly come to his temple, (one he acknowledges); hence people living according to his laws, and a temple dedicated to him, and he accepts it by coming to it.

O, says one, that refers to the time before Christ, or at his first coming. If we refer still farther to Malachi, we learn that "He will be like fuller's soap and like refiner's fire." Does this represent Him as a "babe in Bethlehem"—"as a lamb dumb before his shearers, so he opened not his mouth." Does this represent him as spit upon, with a crown of thorns on his head, bound to the cross hand and foot, and mocking soldiers saying, "now prophesy who smote thee;" "and others he saved himself he can not save;" "if thou be the Son of God come down now from the cross." "Again, who shall abide the day of his coming, and who shall stand when he appeareth." Any one can see at once that he did not fill this bill in his first advent. I ask, Who did not stand before him then? As I have shown above, the opposite was the case; therefore it does not apply to his coming then, but applies as I have shown, to his second coming, at the time of the end; and hence is proof most positive of a restoration of the same gospel he brought and taught as the only way man could be saved in his kingdom. He said to the Jews, "Behold, the kingdom of God is within [among] you," (or in your midst), we are told that Christ meant that the kingdom was within men's hearts. What "fables!" truly "they are turned away from the truth unto fables." How could a kingdom be in a man's heart? Remember what it takes to constitute a kingdom. Firstly a king, secondly subjects, thirdly laws, and fourthly territory.

He meant in their midst as a nation. And so we can understand what he meant when he said, "This gospel of the kingdom." He meant all that constituted it then, should constitute it when it was to be "preached in all the world as a witness." Now before a man can be a witness he must know whereof he testifies. No hearsay evidence will be taken in court. You must tell what you know and that only. A man could not be a witness for Christ in this sense and believe in the present view of Christianity, because it renounces revelation as I have already shown. How did Peter know that Jesus was the Christ? Turn to Matt. 16: 17-19, and there you will learn, "that flesh and blood hath not revealed it to thee, but my Father who is in heaven." Then, as the gospel is to be preached as a witness, it will have to be the same that made Peter a witness; hence the necessity of a new dispensation being opened, and God's revealing himself again to man. And whenever he does it, it will be done in accordance with his past dealings with man; for he is unchangeable. James says of him, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."—James 1: 17. When God called Moses to send him into Egypt, he revealed himself to him and told him what he should do and what he should say. Showed him his power, and put him in the same position that Paul, Peter, and the rest of the apostles were in, when Paul said, "Now are we ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you through us, we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." So they have to be endowed with power and authority, which is denied by the present theologians, and laughed at as something ridiculous in the extreme; but "they who laugh last laugh best." So we find in the opening of every dispensation, God has opened it by communicating his will to man, through the instrumentality of angels; for they are the active servants of God, between heaven and earth. "And they are ministering spirits to those who are heirs of salvation." So we find in every case, as in that of Noah, Moses, Adam, and even Jesus. Joel says, "Surely the Lord God doeth nothing but he revealeth his secrets to his servants the prophets." Then, of necessity he will reveal this much needed secret to his prophet in the latter or eleventh hour dispensation, just as he has formerly done, by angels coming to earth with a thus saith God, to settle once and forever the muddle among men on the question of religion, and is the only way the question can be fully settled. By turning to Rev. 14: 6, you will read:

"And I saw another angel flying in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth; and to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

This was the revelation which Jesus Christ gave to his servant John, to "show him things which would shortly come to pass,"—showing it to be in the unborn future, in a day subsequent to his. And mark the language, "Having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, kindred, tongue and people." Now every nation, kindred, tongue and people must have been without it, or there would be no need of his coming with it, and it could not have been the dispensation John was living in, or that brought by Jesus; for it was for defending that faith that he was banished where he was visited by the angel. It was not that, it was in the future. It was the time (as I have already quoted) that Isaiah in his twenty-fourth chapter speaks of, when all had departed from the true faith; and now God restores it by sending his angel, to unite all the dispensations into one grand whole, over which King Jesus will reign, King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

"The chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage [ring bells and blow whistles] in the streets, and they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they seem like forches, they shall run like the lightning. He shall recount his worthies; they shall stumble in their walk."—Nahum 2: 3-4.

Notice firstly: These chariots are to be with "flaming torches, in the day of his [God's] preparation. If "in the day of his preparation," he must have been at that time making ready to do something. The prophet here points in an unmistakable manner to some time in the future, when some great event is to take place, and this that he has described, whenever it may happen is to set the time for his preparation for the great coming event.

We do not have to reflect a moment to tell what the prophet meant, the description is so plain. No person now living could better describe a railway train in motion at night, without calling it by name. So, then, whenever railway trains first began to run, it denoted that that was the "day of God's preparation." If we can find that out, we have fixed the time.

"The first railway built in the United States, was three miles in length, that connected the granite quarries at Quincy, Mass., with the Newport River. It was completed in 1827. The first use of a locomotive in this country was in 1820. It was put upon a railway connecting the coal mines of Delaware and Hudson Coal Company, with Honesdale." The first passenger train in this country was on the Baltimore and Ohio, which was opened to a distance of twenty-three miles in the year 1833."—Continental History of U. S., pages 768 and 779. This fixes the time beyond all reasonable doubt, and by historians who have recorded these facts, not dreaming of what weight and value they were. We notice in the above quotation, that it was to be in the day of His preparation, not when the work was fully accomplished. Now the angel made his first message known to Joseph Smith in the year 1827. And Joseph was told that a great work was about to come forth; and that if he was faithful, he should be the instrument in the hands of God of committing it to his fellowman. That none were worshipping God acceptably; that none had authority, that all had departed from the truth; but that the eleventh hour dispensation was about to burst forth upon the world. And thus it was that on the sixth day of April, in the year 1830, the church was organized according to divine revelation and pattern, in strict accordance with the instructions from him who is to come and reign as King and Lord of all the earth. Five or ten thousand earnest men and women have obeyed, have united with the church, and all say it is true. The rest of the world say it is false. How does the rest of the world know. I answer they do not know, it is only hear-say evidence, which amounts to nothing in court. One man says, I saw the assassin kill the dead man; ten thousand men say, We did not, who will a jury believe? We testify before God and men that we tell the truth. Remember the question, "Who shall stand when he appeareth":

"It was brought forth by Joseph,
The prophet and the seer, (Whose blood hath sealed his witness, Praise to his memory dear.)
His eldest son has ta'en his place
To lead God's people through,
And we bear our testimony,
That he's a prophet too."

May God enable us to judge between truth and error, and that we may have oil in our lamps when the midnight cry goes out, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." is the prayer of your humble servant and well wisher.

Selections.

WHAT IS A GENTLEMAN?—CARDINAL NEWMAN ANSWERS.

It is almost a definition of a gentleman to say he is one who never inflicts pain. This definition is both refined, and, as far as it goes, accurate. He is mainly occupied in merely removing the obstacles which hinder the free and unembarrassed action of those about him; and he concurs with their movements rather than takes the initiative himself. His benefits may be considered as parallel to what are called the comforts and conveniences in arrangements of a personal nature; like an easy chair or a good fire, which do their part in dispelling cold and fatigue, though Nature provides means of rest and animal heat without them. The true gentleman in like manner carefully avoids whatever may cause a jar or jolt in the minds of those with whom he is cast; all clashing of opinion, or collision of feeling, all restraint, or suspicion, or gloom, or resentment—his great concern being to make every one at their ease and at home. He has eyes on all his company, he is tender toward the bashful, gentle toward the distant, and merciful toward the absurd; he guards against unseasonable allusions or topics which may irritate; he is seldom prominent in conversation, and never wearisome.

He makes light of favors while he does them, and seems to be receiving when he is conferring. He never speaks of himself except when compelled, never defends himself by a mere retort; he has no ears for slander or gossip, is scrupulous in imputing motives to those who interfere with him, and interprets everything for the best. He is never mean or little in his disputes, never takes unfair advantages, never mistakes personalities or sharp sayings for arguments, or insinuates evil which he dare not say out. From a long-sighted prudence he observes the maxim of the ancient sage, that we should conduct ourselves toward our enemy as if he were one day to be our friend. He has too much good sense to be affronted at insults, and too well employed to remember injuries. He is patient, forbearing, and resigned, on philosophical principles; he submits to pain because it is inevitable; to bereavement, because it is irreparable; to death, because it is his destiny.

WORK AND PRAY.

ASA and Ira were two brothers, whose farms lay side by side in a fertile vale. When the young corn, the oats and the barley were springing up, the weeds took advantage of the rich soil, and came up with them.

"Do you see," said Asa, "what a hold the weeds are taking? There is danger of their choking out the crops entirely."

"Well, well, we must be resigned," said Ira. "Weeds as well as grain were a part of the Creator's plan." And he lay down for a part of his afternoon doze.

"I can only be resigned to what I can not help," said Asa. So he went to work, and plowed and hoed until the fields were clear of weeds.

"The army worm is in the neighborhood," said Asa to Ira one day. "It has eaten its way through the neighboring meadows, and is fast moving toward us."

"Ah!" exclaimed Ira, "it will surely destroy what the weeds have not choked out. I will immediately retire to pray that its course may be stopped or turned aside."

But Asa replied, "I pray betimes every morning for strength to do the work of the day." And he hastened to dig a trench around his land which the army worm could not pass, while Ira returned from his prayers only in season to save a portion of his crops from its ravages.

"Do you see, Ira," said Asa another morning, "the river is rising, and there is but a small chance of preventing our farms from being overflowed."

"Alas! it is a judgment upon us for our sins; and what can we do?" said Ira, throwing himself upon the ground in despair.

"There are no judgments so severe as those which our own sloth brings upon us," said Asa. And he went quickly, and hired workmen, with whose help he raised an embankment that withstood the flood; while Ira witnessed with blank looks the destruction of all his wealth.

"There is one consolation," said he, "my children are left me." But while Asa's sons grew up strong and vigorous men, among Ira's there was a drunkard, a gambler and a suicide.

"The ways of the Lord are not equal," said Ira to his brother. "Why have you always prospered, while I am afflicted, and my old age is disgraced?"

"I only know this," replied Asa, "that heaven always helps me to meet my children's faults as I met the weeds, the caterpillars and the flood; and that I never presumed to send a petition upward without making toil my right hand servant, the messenger of my prayer."

G. H. Hilliard then talked to the conference upon the question of finance, tithing and free-will offerings Saturday evening preaching by Bro. Green.

In the reports of all the Elders there seem to be a better feeling existing among the people towards us and a greater inquiry for the truth. Although there have been no accessions scarcely during the last quarter, we can get a hearing now where not long since we were not allowed to talk at all scarcely. The field is widening, and the laborers are few.

Sunday forenoon Bro. Hilliard spoke. Preaching Sunday afternoon by Bro. Henry Walker.

Adjourned until Saturday before the first Sunday in September, at Tunnel Hill, Illinois, 10:30 a. m.

BORN.

SHORT.—At Millersburg, Illinois, June 22d, 1884, to Bro. M. T. and Sr. Viola V. Short, a son, weighing ten pounds.

DIED.

SMITH.—At Ton yr Ystrad, Wales, May 18th, 1884, Elder Thomas Smith, late President of the Rhondda Branch, aged 67 years. His funeral was a very large one. Religious services by Elder T. E. Jenkins.

HARRIS.—At Lucas, Lucas county, Iowa, at midnight of June 6th, 1884, brother Robert Harris. He had been sick for some fifteen months, and wasted away gradually. He was born at Swansea, South Wales; was about 52 years of age. He leaves a wife to mourn his loss. He was a nephew to David and Ann Bona, of California. He had traveled much, having been a sailor the early part of his life; a gold digger during the prime of life up till 1873, when he landed at San Francisco, after having been shipwrecked and cast upon an island upon his way from Australia, for he had lived over twenty years in New Zealand and Australia; he had also been in China, India and other countries. He had a remarkably good memory of incidents and dates. He had a big heart, was very liberal and would bestow his goods upon others regardless of their nationality. He would not give up that he was going to die, until about two weeks before his death, when he sent for the writer and said, "I am going to die, I must give up. I am not afraid to die." Six nights before he died he bled at the mouth nearly a pint of blood, having a sore which ate into an artery. He said, "I will soon go now, and I can tell you its good to be a Saint. Now is the time to sing its good to be a saint, its now it will pay." His funeral discourse was preached agreeably with his request by Evan B. Morgan, June 22d, 1884.

Should his relations in California or Nevada wish more information in regard to him, please address Isabella Harris, or Evan B. Morgan, Cleveland, Iowa. E. B. M.

THE Jewish people collected the money before they expended it. They did not offer to God a house built with money that belonged to other people. The temple was not mortgaged to some wealthy insurance company in Tyre or Sidon. Nor did they interrupt the daily sacrifice, or neglect the other calls on them, in order to give the money to the temple. The Jews were content to worship in a tent, very humbly, until they had the money to build a magnificent house. Their conduct in these respects is one which churches, expecting to build, would do well to study.

IOWA AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The preparations for the World's Fair which opens in New Orleans, December 1st, next, is attracting the attention of the entire country. The indications are that it will be of even greater magnitude than any Exposition ever held, not excepting the great Centennial at Philadelphia. Congress has appropriated $1,000,000 as a loan, and it will soon give a half a million of dollars more to pay the expenses of a government exhibit. Owing to the late appointment by President Arthur of Mr. Herbert S. Fairall, of Iowa City, as Commissioner for Iowa, the matter of an appropriation by the Iowa Legislature was not presented in time and no funds were secured from this source. However, the World's Fair management have placed at the disposal of Commissioner Fairall, and his assistant John S. Ely, President of the Cedar Rapids Board of Trade, the sum of $5,000 as a nucleus with which to prepare for a proper exhibit for Iowa. We learn that superintendents of the several departments into which the exhibit is to be divided, will soon be appointed, and that an assistant commissioner will be designated for each county. We are glad to learn that the project is booming in Iowa. We hope our people will bestir themselves to see that the resources and products of the State are presented at New Orleans in good shape.

WELCOME HOME.—In the mountains of Tyrol it is the custom of the women and children to come out when it is bed-time, sing their national songs until they hear their husbands, fathers and brothers answer them from the hills on their return home. On the shores of the Adriatic such a custom prevails. There the wives of the fishermen come down about sunset, and, singing the first stanza, they will listen awhile for answering melody from off the water, and continue to sing and listen till the well-known voice comes borne on the waters telling that the loved one is almost home. How sweet to the weary fisherman, as the shadows gather around him, must be the loved ones at home, that sing to cheer him; and how they strengthen and tighten the links that bind those humble dwellers by the sea.

CHRISTIANITY is a cleansing religion. It purifies the mind and heart. It makes inward health in the region of the motives and affections. There is much said about the cleansing power of the Gospel. And it is true. It thoroughly cleanses, within and without. No man or woman who is a sloven in apparel, who neglects ablutions of the body, whose feet are unwashed when retiring to bed, whose teeth are seldom if ever brushed, whose skin is odorous with the sweat of last week's toil—no such sloven need talk about the inward cleansing. No matter how menial the day's toil, if in the fields or mines or sooty shops, still, before the toiler sleeps there should be the cleansing of water and soap. The body must be sanctified as well as the soul, and Christianity cleanses both soul and body. Wash and be clean.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

Geo. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents, (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, July 19th, 1884.

IN reply to the question, "Why do not the saints use the translation of the Bible made by Joseph Smith instead of the King James' revision, now commonly accepted?" Mr. Charles W. Penrose, Editor of the Deseret News, said:

"The reply to this summarized, that the latter-day prophet died before he had completed the revision, and there was not time in his life for a full revision of the work of King James' council, and the world would not accept Joseph Smith's work in its incomplete condition. It was accepted by the Josephites, however."

Does not the learned Editor know that the history of Joseph Smith states: "I completed the translation and receiving of the New Testament on the 2d of February, 1833, and sealed it up no more to be opened till it arrived in Zion."—Mill. Star, vol. 14, p. 361.

"We this day, July 2d, 1833, finished the translating of the Scriptures, for which we returned gratitude to our Heavenly Father."—Mill. Star, vol. 14, p. 451.

It will not do for Mr. Penrose to try to escape the conclusion that the fair minded reader is sure to arrive at, when he sees the statement he has made, and the opposite one made in the History,—that he either did know and had misstated; or that he was unpardonably ignorant on the subject.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By a late letter from Bro. H. A. Stebbins to Bro. Asa Cochran of this office, we learn that he has preached nineteen times at Lucas and Cleveland, Iowa. The Congregational Church was opened to him at Cleveland, it being the first time it has been opened to our people. On Sunday, July 6th, he baptized two at Cleveland, and another gave his name for baptism the following Sunday. Another says he will obey in due time. He also reports the baptism of four at Osceola, Iowa, July 6th, by Bro. Spencer.

The resolution in Kewanee District conference minutes, published on page 438 of present volume of HERALD, reading, "That no person within the district shall be permitted," etc., was rescinded at their last session, and not adopted as the published minutes show. We correct by order of J. L. Terry, district clerk.

In Bro. Etzenhouser's letter, on page 444 of present volume of HERALD, the fifth and sixth lines of second paragraph should be transposed in order to read correctly.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. R. Coburn writes from Blenheim, Ontario, June 29th:

"We had a very good time at our late conference. The Baptist choir furnished the music for the services Sunday. Truly if the Saints do what is right, they will gain favor in the eyes of the people."

THE following friendly notice is from the Premont (Neb.) Tribune, sent us by Edward Rannie, Jr.:

"The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, (anti-polygamy) held service in their new church, June 28th and 29th, east of Frank Stauffer's residence. Elders Rumel, Mintun, Nelson and Kemp were present, and some very eloquent sermons were delivered, showing that the preachers were men of ability and also Bible students. They brought forth strong arguments, and proved them from the Bible to show that their church was like the one Christ established. The church itself is a handsome building for its size, and shows good taste and judgment, and is an ornament to the town. The members may congratulate themselves on having such a church to worship in. Good interest was manifested and the house crowded."

THE following prospectus of the "Vindicator of Truth," an eight page pamphlet to be published in the interest of the English Mission, will be of deep interest to the Saints. May it have a long and prosperous life, and become an instrument of power for the spread and establishment of truth in that far off land.

PROSPECTUS.

FOR some years there has been a strong desire on the part of some of the Saints that we should issue a Periodical in the interest of the English Mission. Without in any way casting reflection upon the promoters of past schemes, we think we are justified in saying that the effort of last Mission Conference is the only one having a practical form.

It will be remembered by many that by resolution of the Annual Conference of the English Mission, held at Stafford, 1883, the publishing of a Periodical was entrusted in the hands of the President and Secretary of the Mission, empowering them to issue as soon as they thought practicable.

To secure them and the Church against any loss, a guarantee fund was opened, and some £8 promised.

Some, no doubt, have wondered why the Periodical has not been forthcoming ere this. In answer to such we beg to say the only reason we can assign is our having no desire to rush into print in a manner which would compel us to call upon the guarantee fund, and even now we come to the front with diffidence as to the success of the enterprise.

Although little has been done that can be seen, we assure our readers that the subject has occupied our minds considerably.

Perhaps there is no one who knows the value a Periodical would be to the Mission better than we, but at the same time we can not shut our eyes to the responsibility of the undertaking.

It appears to us that to carry the undertaking to a successful issue, three things are absolutely necessary.

First—Cheapness.

Second—Simplicity.

Third—Interest.

The first depends upon the quantity subscribed for, the second upon the contributors of matter for the columns, and the third upon the kind of matter published. We think the third is the key of all.

It seems to us that to make a Periodical of interest in and out of the Church ranks, it should be got up so as to answer the purpose of a Tract, on the principles of the Gospel of Christ, as well as mutual intercourse between the members of the Church. And we are of the opinion that if controversy between brethren on doubtful points be conspicuous by its absence, and some good pithy, sound first principle articles, together with letters of interest and exhortation be had, that enough interest will be created to secure a cheap and profitable paper.

We have been at considerable trouble in obtaining estimates from printers, and have now one which enables us to venture publishing.

We find that an eight page, double column, same size as the "Herald" used to be, can be issued monthly at half-penny each, provided one thousand per issue be sold; while a 16 page, same size, can be sold for a penny each if a thousand be sold; but in either case it will be necessary that the thousand copies be sold, or else it can not possibly pay its way.

We submit that if the branches collectively, and the brethren and sisters individually, will put forth interest enough to use a periodical for free distribution as a tract, that either the eight or sixteen pages can be had.

The success of the enterprise does not rest in the hands of Editors, but rather in those of the members at large, and we ask, "Shall it be a success, brethren?" and await your reply, promising to do all we can to help to that end.

One word more and we are through. We hope that no one will slacken their efforts on behalf of the "Herald" on account of the "Vindicator." If our effort should cause but one, who now takes the Church organ, the "Herald," to cease their subscription to that paper, we shall be very sorry we made an effort to publish a paper in the interests of the English Mission. Therefore we hope the brethren will continue their support in that direction as well as to our new enterprise.

We are, brethren and sisters,

DAVIS CITY, Iowa,
July 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I was very much interested in reading Bro. Heman C. Smith's letter in the Herald, of the 12th instant, in the which he speaks of his visit with David Whitmer, on which occasion Bro. David Whitmer affirmed his testimony of the truth of the Book of Mormon, and also stated that, "He was with Oliver Cowdery in his last illness, and was by him admonished to never falter in his testimony of the Book of Mormon, for it was true."

In connection with these testimonies I wish to give a short extract from the history of Joseph Smith, (your father), as published in the Millennial Star, page 790, vol. 18.

"Sunday, November 28th, 1841. I spent the day in company with the Twelve Apostles at the house of President Young, conversing with them upon a variety of subjects. * * I told the brethren that the Book of Mormon was the most correct of any book on earth, and the keystone of our religion, and a man would get nearer to God by abiding by its precepts, than by any other book."

Thus we have the testimony of Joseph, David and Oliver, all of whom saw and examined the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated, as presented before them by the holy angel of God.

It is said a threefold cord can not easily be broken; but I wish to add my testimony, that I also know, by the manifestations of the Spirit of God, that the Book of Mormon is true, and that it contains the fulness of the everlasting gospel of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ; and blessed will be all those who obey and live and walk by its holy precepts, and endure in faith to the end.

Dear Herald:—Having been on the move for several months past, my correspondence has become deranged and broken. Using your columns as a medium, I will endeavor to make known my whereabouts at the present, and probably for the future. Immediately after the district conference held in Pittsburg, the beginning of March, in company with Bro. G. T. Griffiths and wife, I left for the west, they to visit his mother and other members of their family residing at Bevier, Mo., and I to reach Stewartsville to attend the special meeting appointed by the Quorum to be held prior to the meeting of the General Conference. After a journey of twenty-four hours on the cars, we stopped off at Sandwich, Ill., for a rest, and partook of the hospitality of Bro. Israel L. Rogers and family, as hundreds have done before us. I enjoyed the visit much. Bro. G. T. Griffiths and I both preached while there. When we reached Bevier, quite a number of the Saints met us at the depot, and gave Bro. Griffiths and his wife a hearty welcome, and myself a kindly greeting. During a brief stay we held several meetings, and spent several pleasant hours visiting at the homes of the saints, rejoicing together in hope of the glory to be revealed. The council meeting of the Quorum and the conference were profitable to myself. Instead of the Quorum hastening and hurrying to get through with their business in order to keep pace with the conference, time was afforded for deliberation and thought upon the subjects which came before them, and I believe all felt that it was one of the best meetings as a body we had ever held. While at conference I was the guest of Bro. J. M. Terry. The kindness of himself and wife I gratefully remember. May the peace of God be their portion forever.

From Stewartsville with Bro. E. C. Briggs as a traveling companion. From St. Joseph I visited Independence for the first time. Not only was I desirous to see the place, but also to take a glance at the element gathering there; concluded it was as good as the average branches of the church. But with us all a new leaf will have to be turned before we can apply to ourselves the language used by John, 4:17: "As he is, so are we in this world." Not until then can the Saints build the city of our God, and the Temple of his holiness. Returning to St. Joseph, I again started westward to Little Sioux, Iowa, to visit my late wife's sister, Sophia Lanyon and her family. Had not seen them but once in twenty-five years. Visited among the Saints. With Bro. Gamet had several chats, but found him in quite feeble health. Bro. Condit and Rowland Cobb had joined the hosts who have gone before. I forgot to mention that at St. Joseph I was the guest of Bro. Senterlow Butler, with whom and his family I became acquainted at Waltham, Mass., while on the eastern mission, years gone by. I also visited Council Bluffs. Was very kindly and hospitably entertained by Bro. Beebe and his household. Grace be unto them; The city has wonderfully improved since I last saw it. I should have said while at Independence Bro. John C. Foss was mine host.

Concerning the Temple lot, I can readily believe it was pointed out by the finger of the Lord, for a more beautiful site for such a purpose I can not conceive. Returning from the west, I diverged from the main line of travel, to fill a promise formerly made, and again repeated, a request to visit the Saints at Coldwater, Michigan. What shall I say of them? To me the earnest, faithful Saints are so much alike, I can not discern any difference. They are one in Christ Jesus wherever they be. Hospitable, tender hearted, honest in their attachments, give proof of the Spirit that actuates them in that respect, showing they are not of the world. Such is my estimate of the Saints of the Coldwater Branch. Here for some time resided the brethren W. H. and E. L. Kelley and families. To-day their names are like ointment poured out, fragrant for good. While there I was called upon to visit Clear Lake, Indiana, to conduct the funeral services over the remains of Bro. Peter Bally, an aged Saint; who true to his trust, his end was peace. Respected by all, his funeral cortege was large. Held a few meetings with the Saints while there. They have quite a good sized chapel, and a large Sabbath School, which is carried on winter and summer. That is as it should always be when possible under all the circumstances of the case. It is creditable to teachers and scholars, because it requires an interest in both parties, to continue in heat and cold. It will surely bring fruits, and obtain the penny appointed at the harvest of wheat. May their faith and zeal increase and abound. I should have noticed that what is called the northern division of the Coldwater Branch started a Sabbath School the first day I preached there. Its opening was large and promising.

At the request of Bro. Kelley, I am here as doorkeeper in the House of the Lord, attending in that capacity until one of them returns. Have had several lengthy conversations with parties—one a Presbyterian Minister from Manti, Utah. I sold him a copy of the Inspired Version of the Scriptures. A person with him I understood afterwards, was a convert from Utah. He said little or nothing. My address for the present is here; afterwards Pittsburg, Pa., where letters to me will reach me, even if I may not be there.

BOONE, Iowa, July 8th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—My heart is filled with love and gratitude to the dear Father who has said in his word, Whosoever doeth his will shall know of his doctrine. That he is not a respecter of persons we all find to our joy, when we have obeyed his commandments. As I was reading in the Herald my mind came to this place. On your journey of love to the dear followers of Christ far and near, take with you a greeting and tell them that the Spirit that gives them joy and peace, the same is also with me, so I can feel its hallowed influence; and I have the promise that if I strive after it I shall have it as a constant guide and companion, however weak I am. I hope to hold on and not give up, until I reach the high point of view which is before me. I am ever thankful to God that he has opened my understanding to this heavenly light. I have no greater joy and pleasure than when I am in meeting with the Saints, listening to the testimonies and hymns. I ask you brothers and sisters when you read this, that you will pray the Father in my behalf, that I may overcome the weakness which holds me to my seat in testimony meetings, and binds my tongue in the presence of the Saints. Yours sister in Christ,

ANNIE LANE.

WEBB CITY, Jasper Co., Mo.,

Beloved Saints:—I feel it a great privilege we have of conversing with the pen; for how oft we read words of cheer from those unseen, through the instrumentality of writing; and how often we are filled with the same Spirit that has prompted the writer when we peruse the lines. If they are written by the inspiration of the Spirit, what a joy fills our souls; and we renew our determinations to be in possession of that comfort that passeth all else in this life. I often think of the words of the apostles, that they said when they were journeying with our Savior and did not know him, how their hearts were filled with love for him; and so it is with all his yet. There is a love that surpasseth all else. We have anxiously waited for an Elder to visit us, but have not been blessed with that privilege yet since last September. Our house is always open to receive any of the Elders, and we are willing to do all we can for the advancement of the cause. There are some here who have investigated, but have not had opportunity to hear preaching. We have always been able to secure a house when we earnestly desired one. Hoping that the Lord may open up the way, and send some one that the word may be preached in this place. With love to all Saints, asking an interest in your prayers, that I may ever be found ready to give an answer for the hope I have received, and be worthy of the name of Christ is the desire of your sister,

R. M. BRADLEY.

MOUNT HECLA, Texas,
June 23d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—From the 15th of March to the 19th of April, I labored in Bastrop county, (part of the time cutting brush), holding some meetings with the Live Oak Branch, and some in and near McDade. When I went to the latter place to fill my second appointment, it was rumored over town that I would not be allowed to preach in the church, the principal objectors being of the Braden stripe. Bro. Heman knows Mr. Jones. Others being more liberal minded, said we should preach if we wanted to, and putting their faith into practice, it was not long until they had their crowd and they armed with Winchester rifles and revolvers, to defend what they said were their rights. Meeting time came and I preached and was not molested. As evidence that the people of that community will shoot, there were five men killed on Christmas last. It was with difficulty that I kept our friends quiet; but when I got them to understand that it was my meeting, and I wanted to do the talking, they behaved well enough.

From Bastrop we went to Bureson county, and spent a few days, but did no preaching—can't get a crowd in that country to preach to. From Bureson we went to Temple, in Bell county. When I got there I learned that the Saints and friends in Young county had sent a post office order to me to pay our way up there, but had misdirected the letter, and I did not know where it had been sent to, so we had to wait about two weeks to make more enquiries and get a new order, as we did not know where the first was. All things being ready we took the train at three in the afternoon for Weatherford, having preached only twice while in Bell county. Rain and hard work for farmers, hindering. We arrived at Weatherford at two o'clock at night, and found Bro. Bennett waiting for us. Next day, 26th, we embarked in Bro. Bennett's wagon at noon, and started for Young county; and after turning twenty miles behind us, we camped for the night. Next day we traveled about seventeen miles by noon, and stopped at one Mr. Green's, where Bro. Bennett had agreed that we would preach for them. It was noised around that afternoon, that a Mormon was in the country, and would preach at the school-house at night. Night came, and with it a good crowd to the school-house, and I spoke to them on the plan of salvation with good liberty, and was invited to come again. Lodged with Mr. Green that night, and next day we traveled seventeen miles and arrived at Bro. Bennett's, making in all about fifty-five miles we traveled in a wagon. Since we got here we have been holding meetings as circumstances would permit. It is harvest time, and people are too busy for many evening meetings. Some seem to be interested. Calls come from every direction for us to come and preach for them; and as I am in no great hurry, I will fill all the calls I can, and tell them enough to save or condemn them. There is no time that I feel better than I do when presenting the gospel to those that have never heard it. With the world we are gaining favor, so much so that we do not have near the opposition that we had a few years ago. Asking the prayers of all the Saints, I subscribe myself a brother in the church,

A. J. CATO.

STUART, Montana,
July 7th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Last Saturday baptized Sr. Eliza Dingle, and her son, a young man, aged seventeen. She united with the Utah Mormon Church in Liverpool, England, twelve or more years ago; moved to Salt Lake City, saw and detested polygamy and kindred evils, moved to Montana, and by reason of her disappointment in Utah, kept her own counsel relative to her former connection with the Utah Mormons till of late. By reading some of the church publications faith grew into desire to be united with the Church, and we trust both herself and son will find rest and full salvation in the fold of Christ. Held two services yesterday, one at Stuart, and one near Willow Glen, with fair attendance and fair interest. I now think to go to Deer Lodge and vicinity for a week, and then go on to Soda Springs and Malad City, Idaho, and thence to Salt Lake City by August first.

Yours,
W. W. BLAIR.

Dear Herald:—I have just returned home from hearing a funeral discourse delivered by a preacher of one of the so-called orthodox churches here. We withdrew our appointment because of the funeral occasion. Several of the Saints going caused the preacher to say he concluded to change his usual routine on such an occasion. For a base he took the 19th and 20th verses of the 11th chapter of Ezekiel, "God will take away their heart of stone, and give them a heart of flesh, &c." He then took special pains to show that baptism was not needed, and that the Pentecost blessing was given to convince the murderous Jews. Acts 8th. The apostles had to impose hands for the bestowal of the Holy Ghost on the Samaritans. Acts 10. The household of Cornelius was brought in a different way from the former, showing the three nations had to be brought to the one way of having their "stony hearts" taken away, and a heart of flesh given, that love might be shed abroad. So much gained he felt strong, and taking up the Bible he turned to the children and grandchildren of the deceased, and assured them on the authority of that book, that their mother is with God in the highest courts of heaven, in the bridal chamber, in the salubrious clime with a harp in her hand. In the midst of nods, amens, and thank God, and tears, he waxed strong, and could afford to give any an opportunity to make remarks who might so desire. As none were offered he closed. After I came home, I summed the whole matter in this wise: he varnished a portion, whitewashed the most vital part, and painted the remnant; but to all thinking minds present, the truth, as Bro. Joseph once wrote, "showed its smiling face;" and the non-thinking do not know the difference between truth and error.

We are having a thriving Sabbath School in this place, ably superintended by Elder James Moler, who formerly lived in Mason Co., West Virginia. With the aid of his son Bro. H. E. Moler as secretary, and the zealous working of the teachers and scholars, we have an interesting as well as instructive school, causing no little notice among the people. The brethren converted an old saloon into a house of prayer until our new church is completed, which will be in a few weeks. It is small but neat. It was commenced about the middle of May.

Four years ago last winter there were but two Saints in this place, Bro. T. J. Beatty and wife. Almost the entire community was against us. A paper was circulated and received the names of twenty-nine of the citizens, which was handed to my husband with a written request to make this his last visit, &c. They sought to obtain law in the county seat against us; also wrote to the Governor of the State to know what course to pursue to rid the community of us and our false doctrine. Through the faithfulness of Bro. Beatty and wife, there is now in all sixteen members surrounding the village, some obeying, and others moving in. Among the number, three of Bro. Beatty's daughters, who in the midst of many young people seldom fail to discharge duty publicly, thereby setting a noble example. The branch numbers forty members. It owns a church some six miles from here, where every other Sabbath there are services held, while here there is preaching every Sabbath directly after Sabbath School. We moved from Meigs Co., Ohio, to this place in April. There are four Elders here, who for some time seem to be led alike in presenting the proofs of the Book of Mormon to this people, and the great foundation of the latter day work. The whole branch seems to be working both spiritually and temporally like bees, which is pleasant to behold, having the good will of the people, who say we are a good, honest people; but can't believe our doctrine.

Praying that the church may prosper in every godly move, I am as ever a "helper" in the cause of Christ,
ELLA R. DEVORE.

GREEN RIVER CITY, Wyoming,
July 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—My desire is to gather with the church, and be where I can partake of the blessings of God. Here no meetings are held of any kind. I think if the brethren were here, they might start a branch of our church. Your sister in the hope of Christ,

ARTD E. STEPHENS.

NEW ALBANY, Ind.,
July 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We have just returned home from conference at Hall's Ridge, where we met the Saints and had a good time, and enjoyed quite a measure of the Spirit of our Master; also had the pleasure of seeing some things adjusted that will tend to advance the work in this district. We found the Saints at Union in a lively condition, and striving for the Spirit and its blessed gifts, also found them ready to build a meeting house, they having raised sufficient funds, and intend to have it ready to be dedicated next conference.

We went into Ripley county with Bro. James G. Scott, and found him to be an agreeable companion and spiritually minded. We held several meetings, and of course as is usual, the enemy was on the alert to try and frustrate the objects of this latter day work. In our endeavors to preach Christ we were accosted in our meetings on Sunday at eleven o'clock by a preacher of the Campbellite persuasion, in which he did everything he could. And after the second reply to him by Bro. Scott, he asked to be permitted to withdraw his objections as he did not desire to contend with the word of the Lord. The result was that three presented themselves for baptism, and we have reason to believe there are others who will be ready as soon as they are visited. We found the foot-prints of the teaching of some brethren by example in the use of tobacco; but after some exhortation, we soon saw good fruit, and the Lord blessed them in their endeavor in righteousness. My desires and my hope are in the ultimate triumph of this latter day work.

In sincerity, yours,

WILL KELLEY.

CLEVELAND, Lucas Co., Iowa,

July 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Elder Henry A. Stebbins returned about the 26th ult., and he has delivered a few discourses in the Saints' Church here, and in the Methodist Church, laying before the people the primitive precepts of Christ in a way so charitably as to extract words of commendation from some that we thought to be strongly prejudiced against the work of God.

T. R. ALLEN.

NORTH HENDERSON, Ill.,

July 8th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—Our hearts were made to rejoice by seeing two baptized by Bro. C. A. Hall, yesterday. They were from Galesburg, a young man and a young woman. At the confirmation the Spirit was made manifest. This makes ten in number that Bro. Hall has baptized in a short time; he has had charge of our branch, and more seem to be near the kingdom. We have reason to rejoice that our little branch is reorganized again. We meet in our little church which is newly painted, at eleven and three o'clock each Sunday. We think there is a great work to be done here. We esteem Bro. Hall highly for the work's sake.

Yours in gospel bonds,

ISABELLA GLASS.

PETER'S STATION,

San Joaquin Co., Cal.,

June 30th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Since I wrote you from Sacramento City last April, I have been almost constantly traveling and preaching. During the last two months I have visited and preached in the principal towns in Sonoma, Mendocino, Lake and Napa counties, delivering in all, over forty public discourses, and distributing over a thousand tracts, and doing an immense amount of private preaching, praying, &c. But with all this labor not one soul has been added to the church as the result of this effort. And were it not for the perfect assurance in my own heart that I have labored diligently and at the utmost of my ability with an earnest desire for the salvation of souls, I should feel discouraged and ashamed of my labors. I have, however, had an excellent hearing in most places, large audiences, good attention and much liberty in speaking. Could I have confined my labors to any one region, it is highly probable that I might have accomplished a much greater apparent good; that is, I might have brought some, perhaps many, into the church. My efforts however have not been directed so much with a view to the conversion of individuals, as for the removal of prejudice from the minds of the masses, and the placing of our cause in its true light before the people. And in this matter I feel confident that God's blessings have attended me.

Last week I delivered five lectures in the city of Stockton to fair sized, attentive audiences. On Sunday night our little church could not accommodate near all who came to hear.

The press was quite liberal. The three daily papers, the "Independent," "Herald" and "Evangelist," gave a free advertisement of all my lectures, and also called special attention to them in the local columns. The "Independent's" reporter was present at our Sunday night lecture, and gave the public quite a liberal synopsis of the same, withholding some of the more important items. The "Mail" reporter flattered me with a rather lengthy interview, out of which he formulated quite a lengthy but garbled report. I am now down at Bro. John Nightingale's, Peter's Station, fifteen miles from Stockton. I have been here five days, and have already delivered seven lectures, five at Peter's schoolhouse, and two in "Linden Hall" in the town of Linden, two miles from this place. I preach at Linden to-night again, and shall continue my effort there for a few days, and then go up to Sacramento in order to be present at the dedication of the Saints' Church on Sunday the 6th of July.

In my labors in this place, Linden and Stockton, I have been greatly assisted by Bro. Nightingale. Bro. John is an "old timer," and was the fourth one baptized in Bolton, England, when the Elders first visited that place, in 1839. He has some of the old fire still burning in his bosom, and greatly desires the prosperity of the Master's cause.

With prayers and best wishes for yourself and all Israel, your brother in Christ,

J. B. PRICE.

GREEN RIVER CITY, Wyo.,

July 2d, 1884.

Dear Brother:—I live at this place, and think that some elder would do well to come through here and preach. There are four families here that have left Utah, and they seem to want to hear the Josephites preach. They have been reading my Heralds, and I have been talking to them, and they say that they want to know the will of God and do it.

M. STEPHENS.

REESE, Mich., July 7th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—At present the work of the Master is gaining in Reese. For some time past we have not had very many to hear us; still we have done the best we could in keeping up our meetings. Outsiders are manifesting an interest now to come out and hear for themselves. We are encouraged, and feel that if they will continue to come, they will be made to feel that we are in the faith, have risen just a little higher than tradition.

June the 28th I left home for Tamas, a distance of eighty miles. Got there that evening. Was met at the boat by W. J. Smith. The next day in company with Bro. Smith, went seven miles out in the country, and at two o'clock, related my experience to the Saints, and exhorted them to prove faithful. In the evening I spoke again in the same place concerning the mission of our Lord; and while speaking upon the subject, showing from the New and Old Testament Scriptures, the equality, love and justice of God, I received strength, and I know that this latter day work is a reality. The next evening I spoke again in the Glenden School-house. The house was not crowded. The few Saints living near there came out; also a few outsiders. I felt much blessed in presenting the word of life. I was there three evenings. Preached three times, and then left for home.

Elder Willard Smith has been actively engaged in the ministry. In one new place he has baptized I think fourteen, nearly all heads of families. They have the secret of the Lord with them. Since my last writing to you, I have labored in Vassar and Bay City, preaching one Sunday in Vassar and the other in Bay City. Baptized one in Bay City and four in Vassar. The interest in both places is very good. I shall continue the work in the above places as long as one soul interested comes out. Our conference at Brown City was a good one. Our business meetings as well as our preaching, met the approval of God. We were sorry and much disappointed that our district president was absent. However, all things were done decently and in order.

Bro. Columbus Scott preached a very pleasant and interesting discourse on the revelations of God's word. He showed clearly that God had set up the ensign the second time, to recover the remnant of his people. Our Bishop talked to us about the law of tithing, and gave good advice. Made some excellent points. On our way home, the Saints said Bro. Blakeslee made that matter clearer than ever before.

Your brother in Christ,

E. DELONG.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

July 3d.—The Steamship Faraday has laid 200 miles of the Bennet-Mackey cable from the eastern shore end, and has put into Queenstown for coal.

Some of the leading patriots in China are rousing the people to repudiate the recent Franco-Chinese treaty. France threatens that in case China does not carry out the agreement fixed upon, she will demand a large indemnity. Rather than pay this the Celestial Jingoos propose to go to war.

Some of the sensational journals of Paris report three deaths from Asiatic cholera in that city. The Voltaire, however, says that the disease is simply cholera morbus.

Three deaths from cholera have been reported at Marseilles since last night. At least 6,000 of the inhabitants have fled. Four hundred poor workmen from Toulon were sent back to that city. The panic is unquestionably on the increase. In the face of this, however, the physicians and chemists of the city held a meeting and declared the alarm senseless. The rate of mortality at present, they aver, does not exceed that which is usual at periods of great heat. They express the belief that many deaths attributed to cholera are really due to other causes. Between morning and one o'clock this afternoon two deaths from cholera were reported at Marseilles. At Toulon at ten o'clock this morning three deaths were reported since last night. The sanitary condition of the city is improved. The Italian refugees have been interned at Ventimiglia. The Italian Consul is recovering from the cholera.

Seven persons have been attacked with cholera since eight this morning at Toulon. Five deaths have occurred since that hour.

The Secretary of State of the U. S., today received a cable message from Consul Mason at Marseilles as follows: "The situation is worse at Toulon. The deaths average ten daily. There were thirteen yesterday. It is conceded that it is the Asiatic cholera. The epidemic is stationary at Marseilles. There were six deaths Friday, eight Saturday, four Sunday, and five Monday. Tuesday and Wednesday there were some cases of apparently Asiatic cholera. The remainder were infantum or sporadic. There are twelve cases at the hospital. Many thousands have left for the interior. The steamer Burgundy sailed for New York Sunday without passengers. No emigrants to the States are reported."

To prevent the possibility of importing cholera from France into this country through the mails, the British Government will be requested to thoroughly disinfect all French mails passing through England to this country.

El Hazar, the greatest Mohammedan University, after a secret conclave, has pronounced in favor of the Mahdi's religious claims. El Hazar had hitherto denied the Mahdi's pretensions. This decision, it is believed, will have an important influence on the Senussi and other tribes.

Suakin dispatches state that friendly natives made a sortie and killed two rebels and captured several prisoners.

A dispatch from Cairo says letters from Khartoum state that Khartoum was captured during the latter part of May without difficulty. There was no massacre. Most of the Europeans turned Mohammedan. Among those who did not was Gen. Gordon, who is quite safe and allowed the freedom of the Mahdi's camp. The Mahdi himself is at Khartoum. The Europeans are well treated.

The reported capture of Debbah by the rebels is officially denied. It is rumored that El Mahdi, who had started for Khartoum, was obliged to retrace his steps on account of the movements of rival Mahdis. In Darfour the Hamah tribe stopped El Mahdi on his return journey.

Yellow fever is raging in Guaymas, Arizona. There are five cases in the railroad offices. It made its appearance a month earlier than last year. The continuance of dry weather will prove disastrous. Many citizens are leaving for the North.

The Superior Court of Panama has impeached Dr. Cervera, President of the State of Panama, for bribery, and named Gen. Ruiz, Second Vice-President, president. Dr. Cervera refuses to leave the Presidential residence. He is surrounded by about one hundred friends, armed, and has fifty police armed with Remington rifles. President Ruiz demands the building through Gen. Ibanez, commandant of the Panama garrison. Ibanez has 700 well-armed men. An English man-of-war is expected on the station within forty-eight hours. French and American interests are wholly unprotected. Some fear a repetition of the revolution of 1879, which would be very disastrous for the canal company.

The emigration to America of the Jews in Southern Russia is increasing very rapidly.

July 4.—There were no deaths from cholera at Marseilles last night. There were five at Toulon. Dr. Borel, the Naval Physician, died to-day from cholera, at Toulon.

The budgets of Cuba and Porto Rico have been reduced $2,000,000. In the Chamber of Deputies of Spain to-day Armijo attacked the Government's foreign policy. He deprecated the isolation of Spain from the rest of Europe, and asked whether the Government intended to occupy the port of Ifni, on the Moorish coast. The Foreign Minister declared the Morocco question a very delicate one.

Williams Consul-General at Havana; Congressman Kasson, of Iowa, for Minister to Germany; John M. France, of New York, Minister to Austria.

July 5.—The thermometer in Toulon to-day registered 95° in the shade, and the city presents a mournful appearance. Almost all the inhabitants whose circumstances enable them to live elsewhere have left the city, and the number of those who have thus fled from the pestilence is estimated at three-fourths of the entire population. The people who remain are of the poorer classes, who have no means to go elsewhere, and their condition is pitiable. There is no employment for mechanics, and no trade for shopkeepers. With the exception of the dealings in actual necessities of life, trade is at a stand-still, and many tradesmen have been ruined. Five of them committed suicide during the present week. Many public officials have deserted their posts, and the people demand their dismissal on the ground that their desertion tends still further to disorganize the community and invite anarchy and pillage.

The authorities of Paris to-day decided not to postpone the celebration of the national fete commemorating the fall of the Bastille the 14th inst., and the citizens' committees are making extensive preparations for the celebration. Special trains are to be run on all the railways leading to Paris, and cheap fares are offered to excursionists from all parts of France. Medical experts predict that an outbreak of cholera in Paris is certain to result, and that the disease may be widely disseminated by returning excursionists. It is stated that Dr. Koch, the chief of the German Cholera Commission, who has come from Berlin to investigate the present epidemic, complains that the French physicians and officials manifest a jealous disposition and purposely obstruct his researches.

Seven deaths from cholera have occurred at Toulon since last night. The oxygen cure is unsatisfactory. Evening.—There have been four deaths from cholera since ten o'clock this morning on the transport Shamrock. There are 130 cases in the hospital, of which sixteen are in a dangerous condition. There was one death from cholera last night at Marseilles. There were twelve deaths from cholera during twenty-four hours ended at eight this evening. Nine of these occurred to-day. The heat is excessive.

There was a dramatic and notable scene at the Foreign Office in Paris to-day. The new Chinese Minister to France, Li Fong Pao, obtained an interview with Premier Ferry, and stated that he had come to confer regarding the charges that the affair at Lang-Son was a violation of international obligation. M. Ferry received the communication of Li Fong Pao with chilling impassiveness, but when the Chinese Minister began to argue that the Lang-Son battle did not show a breach of the treaty, M. Ferry abruptly closed the audience by rising from his seat. The Premier was pale with anger, but he said in cold and measured tones: "Capt. Fournier will arrive at Marseilles tomorrow with the original treaty which he signed with Li Hung Chang. We must await his arrival and a formal view of that treaty. In the meantime, we believe that the treaty has been grossly and treacherously violated in accordance with a prearranged plan. We are, therefore, prepared to act vigorously to avenge the outraged honor of France."

A new political and financial movement has been started at Berlin. Many influential bankers and traders of that city have united in forming a committee to promote the election to the next Reichstag of Deputies favoring the protection of German commercial interests at home and abroad. Every candidate who wishes the support of this committee, and of the voters whom it represents, is required to sign a pledge committing him to vote on all colonial questions in favor of the extension of German commerce, irrespective of party affiliations. There is no lack of the "sinews of war" for this novel political campaign, and 200,000 marks have already been subscribed as a nucleus for an election fund.

The Austrian naval authorities are taking a hint from the long-established policy of England and are preparing a scheme for subsidizing all merchant steamers which are so constructed as to be convertible into armed cruisers in time of war.

There is a virulent epidemic near Kerbela, Asiatic Turkey. The Russian Government is adopting precautions against the spread of the disease.

Congress adjourned at two o'clock. During the morning all differences between the House and Senate on the Appropriation bills, with the exception of the Navy bill, were settled by mutual concessions. The House refused to recede from its position on the Navy bill, and the Senate refused to yield. The measure did not pass. The last hours of the session were tame comparatively speaking.

July 8.—There have been fourteen deaths from cholera since last evening at Marseilles. The panic is increasing. All who can are leaving the city. General uneasiness prevails. Two deaths from cholera occurred to-day. There have been ten deaths of cholera since last evening, at Toulon. One a Sister of Charity.

It is feared that the exodus from Marseilles and Toulon will result in spreading cholera. The migration from Paris to the seaside is unexampled. The Gaulois states that there is a case of cholera at Nice.

The authorities of London, Eng., have been asked to send a vessel to intercept a steamer from Marseilles for Cardiff, on which there are two cases of cholera. Foreign passengers arriving in London are now examined, and any infectious cases will be taken to the Gravesend Hospital.

Gen. Grenafell will fortify Wady-Halfa and erect defenses near Korosko, Egypt. A squadron of cavalry and two gunboats have been ordered from Assouan to Wady-Halfa.

Pueblo, Mexico, has long been infested by audacious bands of brigands. At dawn, July 6th, two mounted guardsmen patrolling two miles from the city of Mexico, were attacked by twelve bandits, and in spite of a desperate resistance, one was killed and the other wounded and left for dead. The authorities are actively pursuing the assassins. The political situation daily grows darker. The old Conservative party, dead since the days of the Empire, is reorganizing. The Government evidently feels unsafe, and has secretly sent Gens. Piva, Palacios, and Rivera to the Fortress of San Juano Ulo. Business is stagnant, and many dry-goods merchants have discharged their employees and closed their stores. The City Government is drained of money, and the police are seen barefooted in the streets. Among the poor there is untold suffering.

A five-year charter has been given to Louis Hull, an American, to collect minerals from the islands in the Gulf of Cortes.

Robert S. Ayers, agent of the Southern Kansas Railroad Company at Garnett, Kas., also agent for the Wells-Fargo Express Company at that place, has been prosecuted several times for delivering packages containing liquor to parties in Garnett and vicinity. The packages were sent from Kansas City and the agent was not presumed to know what they contained. He has been fined $50 in each case. In consequence of the prosecutions several express companies have withdrawn their agencies from Garnett and other Kansas towns.

July 9.—At Ath, a Belgian town, a Liberal mob attacked a procession of Catholics and wrecked the Catholic club-house.

Coast end of the Bennett-Mackay cable, 250 miles out, and has laid 200 miles additional.

It is rumored that France and Portugal have concluded a secret treaty against China, by which France will be allowed to make Macao the base of a land attack upon Canton. Action will be taken to compel China to recognize Macao as Portuguese territory, which has hitherto been refused. War between France and China is considered inevitable.

Nine deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night, and fourteen between noon and midnight to-day. The number of persons who have left there on account of the cholera has reached 15,000. Even the magistrates are becoming panic-stricken and deserting their posts. The use of pork in the army is forbidden and the school children are bidden to drink only weak coffee or heavily diluted rum when thirsty. During last night there were six deaths at Toulon from cholera, and five between 9 a. m. and 6 p. m. to-day. Although the epidemic does not appear to be abating in intensity in Toulon and Marseilles the cholera scare is fast dying out in Paris and all parts of France which are not in the vicinity of the Mediterranean coast. In fact all the indications seem now to show that there is little fear of the disease spreading over France as far as Paris and the Atlantic ports.

A battalion of French marines from Tonquin has landed in Madagascar.

Ex-Minister Sargent, the hero of the Lasker incident and of the pork controversy with Herr Bismarck, arrived in New York the 6th, and almost at the very time of his arrival the President appointed and the Senate confirmed the Hon. John A. Kasson as his successor at Berlin. In his interview with New York papers Mr. Sargent confirms what has been frequently stated during his controversy with the German Chancellor—namely: that in the Lasker affair and in the matter of the exclusion of American pork Bismarck took a stand which is not approved by the majority of the German people, and that in both events he forced his policy upon them by the exercise of his personal power, indorsed by the Emperor and the Government. He further confirms what has been openly stated by prominent Germans, among them Dr. Virchow himself, that the exclusion of American pork was not based upon its unhealthiness, but was in the interests of the pork-raisers of Germany, and that the outbreaks of trichiniasis in Germany were not occasioned by American but by German pork. This, however, is but a single incident. As to the relations of Bismarck and the German people, Mr. Sargent says that two-thirds of them are liberal in their sentiments, and that the great middle class, including the educated people, favor a progressive national policy and the development of the friendly relations between the two countries as well as of the trade between the two.

A meeting of the Mexican Government Commission and committee of merchants determined that the Government shall receive stated sums from the individual merchants instead of the

Mr. Gladstone, as was anticipated, intends to give battle to the House of Lords on the Franchise bill. He announces that the present session of Parliament will be brought to a speedy close, and an extra session be called in October, when the measure will be again introduced and passed through the Commons. He says, significantly, that the Lords will not again reject it. He also announced that the next regular session would be devoted to the question of redistribution. Mr. Goschen and other timid Whigs are taking alarm from the firm attitude of Mr. Gladstone, and they are beseeching him to moderate. The Pall Mall Gazette urges agitation in favor of the Franchise bill, and Mr. John Bright announces his purpose to make speeches during the canvass urging the curtailment of the privileges of the House of Lords.

The cholera epidemic, far from abating in violence, is on the increase, and there is no cessation in the exodus from the city of Marseilles, of all the inhabitants who are able to do so. Twenty-five deaths occurred last night, and a number of new cases were reported at the hospital to-day. That institution is now crowded with patients, making the reception of any more impossible. There were twenty-six deaths from cholera there today.

Secretary Frelinghuysen has received from the Consul at Marseilles, the following telegram:—"The situation at Toulon is unchanged. There are fourteen to seventeen deaths daily from cholera. Affairs at Marseilles are worse. The deaths since Friday, inclusive, were seven, eleven, fifteen, twenty-five, twenty-three, twenty-three. Last night there were twenty-two in twelve hours. No emigration to the States is reported."

The Bundesrath at Berlin, Prussia, has adjourned, but will soon be reconvened to consider cholera measures. Meantime the Minister of Railways has instructed the various railway companies to take all possible precautions against the introduction of cholera into Germany. He also calls for a conference of European railway authorities to consider precautionary measures.

The panic at Toulon owing to the cholera, is increasing in intensity, and many people are leaving the city in terror. Ten deaths occurred last night, including that of a Lady Superior. FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

July 3.—The Revere Rubber Company's works at Revere, near Boston, were destroyed by fire. Spontaneous combustion was the cause of the fire. The loss is placed at $500,000. Loss by fire at Pemberton, O., $35,000. Leechburg, Pa., $25,000. Salem, O., $100,000. Venice, O., $20,000.

At Cairo, Egypt, the minaret of a mosque collapsed to-day, killing a dozen persons.

July 4.—A fire which broke out in a saddlery-shop at Port Barry, Ont., destroyed the whole business portion of that town. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

A cyclonish storm swept through the southern part of Sioux City, Ia., about six o'clock this evening. It came from a little north of west, and passed to the south-east. The Catholic bell tower was blown down, and walls of the church so badly ruptured as to be unsafe. The plate-glass fronts in the walls of an auction house, Lyons' gun-store, and Kearney's grocery were blown in. Many trees went down, and the streets were filled with branches wrenched from others. The Sioux City House stable was partly unroofed and the fronts of Slatter's livery and Shenkberg & Co's., wholesale grocery were partly demolished. There was no damage whatever north of Sixth street. In Davis' addition two small unfinished buildings were blown over and the new Episcopal Mission School, on the West Side, was wrecked. The most damage was done in the south-eastern suburbs. The plow-factory, a large brick building, was entirely destroyed, being rased to the ground. The loss to the company is about $115,000. The packing-house of James E. Booge & Co. suffered a loss of about $2,000 by the blowing down of the smokestacks, wrecking of ventilators, corn-cribs, etc. Parties who saw the storm west of the city say there was a regular funnel-shaped cloud which moved with great rapidity, giving out a roaring sound, directly upon the city, but the bluffs seem to have broken it up so that it scattered or jumped over the business part of the city, but gathering part of its lost force as it struck the Eastern suburbs. That the storm was a twister was shown in its blowing over one of the immense iron tanks of the oil works, while a huge pile of empty barrels in front of the tanks was undisturbed. So far as known no one was seriously hurt. The day was showery and blustery, but after the storm it is calm, with the weather almost cool enough for overcoats.

July 5.—The Newark (O.) Machine Company works were destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is estimated at $500,000; the insurance at $200,000.

A terrible storm of wind, rain, and hail struck Columbus, Ky., yesterday afternoon at five o'clock, demolishing the Methodist Church, unroofing the principal hotel, and blowing down several small dwellings, from which all the occupants escaped. A woman and two children are reported killed, and several others injured. Trees were twisted and uprooted, while fences and out-houses were blown before the blast like straws. The tornado was 600 feet wide, and traced its way through the timber as straight as though done by human hands.

At Hickman, twenty miles below, several houses were unroofed and many trees blown, but no lives were lost.

The steamer Schenck, for Cincinnati, found a landing just below Columbus, and in spite of seven huge hawsers was blown loose and narrowly escaped destruction, a sudden cessation of the storm enabling her to reach a landing lower down. The air was literally alive with flying pieces of timber from rails and everything portable, which with the hoarse roar of the wind and hail added to the consternation among the passengers, and only through the exertions of cool heads were many ladies prevented from leaping over-board. The experience of the steamer Buckeye State near Hickman was almost identical, but both boats weathered the gale in safety.

A destructive hurricane, accompanied by wind and rain, passed over Whitewood Valley, fifteen miles north of Deadwood, Dak., at four this afternoon. The track of the storm is about one mile wide, and destroyed everything in its course. The house of Mrs. Boomer was blown down, burying her in the ruins. The extent of the damage is not yet known, but it is feared to be great.

Reports have been received of a terrific tornado which visited the northern edge of this (Shelby) and the southern portion of Moultrie County, Ill., just before daybreak yesterday morning. The roofs of several farm houses were blown off, numerous barns were demolished, and miles of fences were destroyed. The trees in a strip of forest in the tornado's track, a quarter of a mile wide and several miles long, were torn up by the roots. There was no loss of human life as far as can be ascertained.

July 7.—Ten barns and empty buildings have been destroyed by fire in Geneseo, Illinois, since last January, and in each case it has been the work of incendiaries. Two more were destroyed last night. The city officials are unable to discover the perpetrators. Insurance agents are becoming alarmed, and will refuse to take risks on such property unless the city soon succeeds in breaking up the gang of fire-bugs who have been at work there for the last six months. Loss by fire at St. Johns, N. B., $47,000.

A destructive wind and rainstorm swept over a region extending through Berks, Lebanon, and Montgomery counties, Pennsylvania, Sunday morning. Roads and fields were flooded, bridges swept away, houses unroofed, and great damage done to grain crops.

The United States revenue cutter Fessender struck a rock near the entrance to Lake Superior Tuesday night and sank.

The interior of the Royal Armory at Madrid, Spain, was burned this morning, but the contents were saved.

By an explosion of gas and oil at South Olive, Ohio, three men lost their lives.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Official reports indicate that the French wine crop will be better this season than it has been for seventeen years.

During the week ending June 26th there were 171 failures in the United States and twenty-eight in Canada.

The Belvidere Iron Company, of Easton, Pa., has suspended. About 120 men are thrown out of employment in consequence.

About forty Hungarians leave the Connellsville (Pa.) coal region every day for their former homes in the old country on account of slackness of work in the coal-mining business; also probably, on account of the fierce opposition to them on the part of Irish and Welsh miners.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the grain trade says: The weather continued most favorable for improving strong and helping weak crops. The wheat markets were generally weaker, although the scarcity of English wheat causes an occasional local advance. The sales of English wheat the last week were 39,395 quarters at 37 shillings threepence, against 41,425 quarters at 42 shillings and threepence the corresponding week last year. Foreign wheat is greatly depressed, the heavy receipts causing unusually low rates. In the off-coast trade a large portion of the over due supply has been received. Twenty-three cargoes arrived, ten were sold, eight withdrawn, and eight remained. Twenty-nine cargoes are now due. Flour is exceedingly dull. Maize is weaker and barley firmer.

During the month of June the decrease of the public debt amounted to $9,000,000. The decrease during the fiscal year ending June 30th, aggregated $101,000,000. The reduction during the previous fiscal year was $137,000,000.

During the month of June the coinage at the Philadelphia Mint aggregated $1,771,435. This included 1,140,000 silver dollars and 250,200 dimes.

The Marsh Binder Manufacturing Company at Sycamore, Ill., suspended work yesterday. The stockholders have made an assignment to A. D. Starke, the Secretary of the company.

The monthly oil report contains some remarkable features. Not only does it show a decline of 1,054 barrels of production when compared with last month's, but a falling off of over 50 per cent in amount of new operations under way. The last day of June there were 151 wells drilling in the entire oil region, and but sixty-nine new rigs. This great falling off is undoubtedly due to low prices prevailing during the last thirty days, and efforts made by the associated producers to secure a general shut-down. The Hays well, near Warren, Pa., was opened June 30th, and proves to be one of the largest wells ever opened. In the first half-hour it put sixty-seven barrels of oil in the tank, and according to latest reports, was doing ninety barrels an hour. It opens up a good deal of new territory.

R. M. Cherrie & Co., pig iron manufacturers, having an office at 90 and 92 Dearborn street Chicago Ill., failed July 2d. The liabilities are placed at $350,000.

The following is a statement of the average of estimates made this week by the agents of the

McCormick Harvesting Machine Company of the condition of growing crops in the States which grow the great bulk of the exportable surplus raised east of the Rocky Mountains:

	Winter Wheat.	Corn.	Oats.
Michigan.....	75	84	94
Ohio.....	77	89	89
Indiana.....	79	91	98
Illinois.....	70	93	96
Missouri.....	86	95	96
Kansas.....	97	95	93
Kentucky.....	91	91	98
	Spring Wheat.
Iowa.....	97	98	98
Nebraska.....	93	96	93
Wisconsin.....	95	94	96
Minnesota.....	97	96	96
Dakota.....	97

According to the United States Agricultural Department the winter wheat States named raised in 1882 about 250,000,000 bushels of winter wheat; last year they gathered about 160,000,000; and from these reports we estimate that the crop will not be far from 200,000,000 this year, which is considerably short of a full crop. The spring wheat territory covered by these reports yielded last year about 122,000,000—almost the entire spring wheat crop of this country—and we have rarely known the outlook to be more promising for a large crop than it is now. The States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska comprise the great surplus-producing "corn-belt," and also produce the great bulk of the oats crop, and, as you will note, these estimates indicate a very high average condition and promising outlook for a large yield. Other small grains in all of these States are reported as promising well, and the grass crop, in many respects the most important of all, is generally mentioned as in high average condition and promising another large yield this year. On the whole, we regard the present agricultural outlook of the West as in a high degree encouraging, and trust it may be fully realized in the harvest.

CYRUS H. ADAMS & Co.

Chicago elevators contained June 28th, 4,541,597 bushels of wheat, 2,058,678 bushels of corn, 530,558 bushels of oats, 95,824 bushels of rye, and 34,636 bushels of barley. Total 7,261,293 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 10,069,091 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock increased 850,138 bushels, including a decrease of 808,641 bushels of wheat and 215,713 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 15,437,830 bushels of wheat, 6,505,335 bushels of corn, 3,453,021 bushels of oats, 441,346 bushels of rye, and 297,112 bushels of barley. Five cotton-duck mills belonging to William Hooper & Sons, at Woodberry, Md., have been shut down until September. About 1,200 employes have been thrown out of employment.

A few weeks ago bankers and other business men were looking toward Wall street as the point of greatest danger and saying that if we could have a period of liquidation there no obstacle to a recovery in trade would remain and we might anticipate a return of good times. We have had the liquidation they desired. Loans on stocks in Wall street have been reduced $50,000,000, to $75,000,000 and prices have had an enormous shrinkage; and yet the situation is in some respects more strained than it was before the banks began to throw their collateral on the market. The greatest danger is past, but the precautions against danger have been increased. Before the panic time money loaned at three to six per cent; now the rates are six to nine per cent. And the tendency in the last two weeks has been rather in the direction of higher rates. The fact that large sums of money have been withdrawn from deposit in the banks partially explains this state of things; but, though some of these funds are now going back to the vaults, there is no disposition to reduce the rates of interest.

Mr. Davies, Assignee of the defunct Grant & Ward firm, has made a statement showing the actual assets to be $67,174, while the actual liabilities aggregate $16,792,647! The nominal assets are placed at $27,139,098!

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the grain trade, says: The hot weather increased in severity during the week, but the drouth is now apparently broken, rain-storms being reported from all parts of the country. The wheat crop is thick, but weak, owing to want of rain. It is considered to be of average quality. Sales of English wheat during week 28,294 quarters at thirty-seven shillings and one pence. The foreign trade is restricted, the demand being for consumption only, at barely previous rates. In off-coast cargoes there has been a trifling inquiry, and prices slightly lower. Continental buyers who supported the market the last fortnight, now hesitate to buy. Eighteen cargoes arrived; seven were sold, three were withdrawn, and twelve remained. Thirty cargoes are now due. Flour is dull and unchanged. Maize is three and six pence dearer. Barley is firm.

The Chicago elevators contained July 5th, 4,248,786 bushels of wheat, 2,077,042 bushels of corn, 701,789 of oats, 60,482 bushels of rye, and 33,981 bushels of barley. Total 7,122,080 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 9,391,782 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock decreased 139,213 bushels, including a decrease of 292,811 bushels of wheat and an increase of 18,364 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 14,418,922 bushels of wheat, 6,197,728 bushels of corn, 3,107,056 bushels of oats, 471,949 bushels of rye, and 295,184 bushels of barley. These figures are less than those of a week ago by 1,019,908 in wheat and 307,607 in corn.

A railroad has been opened from San Jose de Guatemala to the City of Guatemala, a distance of seventy-five miles. It is controlled by Mr. C. P. Huntington's Central Pacific.

The Swift Creek and Blandford cotton factories of Virginia have stopped work. The other cotton factories there are working half time; also some of the tobacco factories. The dull season and over production are the cause.

The strike of molders a Newcastle, Pa. ended July 5th. Baldwin & Co. withdrawing the notice of a reduction. The same action has been taken by Bradley & Co., and work was resumed Thursday July 10th.

Drouth and locusts are ruining both farmers and stock-raisers in Chipas, Oaxia, and Morella, Mexico.

Selected Poetry.

SCANDAL.

A woman to the holy father went—
Confession of sin was her intent;
And so her misdemeanors, great and small,
She faithfully rehearsed them all;
And, chiefest in her catalogue of sin,
She owned that she a tale-bearer had been,
And borne a bit of scandal up and down
To all the long-tongued gossips in the town.

The holy father, for her other sin,
Granted the absolution asked of him;
But while for all the rest he pardon gave,
He told her this offense was very grave,
And that to do fit penance she must go
Out by the wayside where the thistles grow,
And gather the largest, ripest one;
Scatter its seeds, and that when this was done,
She must come back again another day,
To tell him his commands she did obey.

The woman, thinking this a penance light,
Hastened to do his will that very night,
Feeling right glad she had escaped so well.
Next day but one she went the priest to tell.

The priest sat still and heard her story through,
Then said, "There's something still for you to do;
Those little thistle seeds which you have sown,
I bid you go re-gather—every one."

The woman said, "But, father, 'twould be in vain
To try to gather up those seeds again;
The winds have scattered them both far and wide,
Over the meadowed vale and mountain side."

The father answered, "Now, I hope from this,
The lesson I have taught you will not miss;
You can not gather back the scattered seeds,
Which far and wide will grow to noxious weeds;
Nor can the mischief once by scandal sown,
By any penance be again undone."

THE KINGDOM.

THE Savior in speaking of the kingdom uses the term church interchangeably, as in Matt. 16: 19, 20. He uses the term kingdom in speaking to the Jews very often, but he only uses the term church twice, Matt. 16: 19; 18: 19. Stephen in speaking of the kingdom uses the term church, Acts 7: 38; but prior to the days spoken of by Stephen, we have no succinct account of the form of church government in the Bible, until the days of Moses. In his day we have a very clear and explicit account of the organization of what we call the kingdom; and having those facts before us, we enquire into the order of government as it existed in Israel. It would be vain for us to look for the spiritual power of the kingdom of God any where but in the kingdom itself, which to be the kingdom must be organized according to the pattern; and that the order established by Moses was of divine appointment, will not be doubted by those acquainted with the Bible. The question is, what was the order of the kingdom organized by divine appointment through Moses? One thing is certain, that the first step in the organization was to choose Moses to set the house of God in order. The second step was to set Aaron apart to be with and assist Moses. The third step was to place Hurr with Moses and Aaron, and thus the head of the organization was completed. To fully understand the union between Moses and Aaron, see Exodus 4: 10 to close of chapter, and for the union of Hurr with Moses and Aaron, see 17th of Exodus, where all the circumstances are related, with the benefits which followed this organization. And had not this quorum of three been organized, Israel would have been destroyed; and so closely did the Lord adhere to the pattern he had given Moses, that every iota had to be observed, in order for Israel to have the power of God with them. But when this quorum of three was organized, the power of God was pledged for the deliverance of Israel; and this quorum of three God called up on a high mountain, to act before him in a relation to each other and to the camp of Israel, different from all other men on earth; and that too on one of the most extraordinary occasions ever recorded in any history. See Exodus 17: 10-12. There the trio stood, Moses in the center, with uplifted hands, pleading with heaven, being braced upon either side by Aaron and Hurr, while Joshua, leading the hosts of Israel, struggling in the valley beneath for their liberty and their existence. We now have this part of the pattern completed.

We are favored with another department of the organization of the kingdom (Numbers 11: 16). This part of the organization consisted of seventy persons, whom Moses knew to be Elders. The Lord said unto Moses, "Gather unto me seventy men of the Elders of Israel; and Moses chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens, and they judged the people at all seasons. The difficult cases they brought unto Moses, but the small ones they judged themselves. That this quorum was properly appointed, and practically essential; and that the affairs of Israel could not be conducted without it; See Numbers 11: 14, 15. Moses says, "I am not able to bear this people alone; for it is too heavy for me; and if thou deal thus with me, kill me out of hand, if I have found favor in thy sight let me not see my wretchedness." We have now this much of the organization of Israel: first three, then seventy. The next account of the farther completion of this organization is in Numbers 13th, we here find Moses by commandment of the Lord composing twelve men, one out of each tribe, for a special work and duty: now here we have Israel organized, and the order of the government is a quorum of three, a quorum of seventy, and a quorum of twelve, it is not necessary to follow the organization any farther, whatever other authority there was they were subject to those three grand quorums; the existence of which was indispensable in managing the affairs of Israel and to do away with either quorum would destroy the whole organization. Moses in thus organizing Israel, was commanded to do it according to the pattern which had been given him; and Paul speaking of this pattern calls it the pattern of heavenly things. This is the only order of things that was ever acknowledged by the power of heaven; and while this order was maintained, the people who belonged to it were protected by divine power; but no sooner was the order broken than all former blessings ceased.

There are in the Scriptures hallowed, or special numbers. Three, seven, twelve and seventy, are some of them. They are special because the Lord has been pleased in the organization of his church or kingdom on earth in the various ages of the world, to call and set apart individuals into classes, quorums or councils of ministers, three, seven, twelve, seventy, &c., in order to carry on the operation of his government among men. In the days of Moses; in the days of Peter and the apostles, and in our own day, we must find in the Church of Christ those peculiar numbers, each one in its own place, all working and operating together under Jesus, the King. Otherwise it is not that kingdom which can not be moved. The kingdom of heaven can not exist on earth, without three men at its head called of God by the voice of revelation, to stand as a first presidency, holding the keys of heaven. There must be twelve men set apart after the same manner, as especial witnesses, or apostles, to act under the direction of the three; and there must be the quorum of seventies to assist to bear the burden of the kingdom, so that the gospel of the kingdom may be published in all the world. In the days when God led Israel from Egypt to Canaan, he called Moses, Aaron and Hurr, to stand before him as a first presidency; and in the days of Christ he called Peter, James and John, and delivered to them the keys of the kingdom of heaven, to be the first presidency. The Savior, about the time he began his official career chose twelve men, and from this number he separated three, Peter, James and John. As in the days of Moses, he began to again establish that order of government, that the ordinances which at this time were unavailing might be made of importance to mankind; and to fully prepare the three for their important calling, Jesus permitted them a special privilege, which none others were permitted to enjoy, thus preparing the three to stand at the head of his government on earth, through which all the blessings of God were to flow to mankind, and to stand as representatives of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. In Matt. 17: 1-9, we have a graphic description of the transfiguration on the mount. Here is related one of those notable instances where the Savior separated Peter, James and John, and manifested himself to them as he did to no others, and they were even forbidden to tell of the vision to any others, apostles or not apostles, until the Son of Man be risen. Again, in Matt. 26: 36, 37, another instance is recorded, where Peter and the two sons of Zebedee were selected to go with Jesus, while he prayed. The sons of Zebedee here spoken of are James and John. From these quotations we learn some very important facts. First, that Peter, James and John, were the only ones that were permitted to accompany the Savior at two of the most important events of his life, the one being the grand manifestation of his glory on the mount, and the other at the time of his deepest suffering. The three here had advantages over all men on earth; and in this respect were far in advance of the other apostles.

We now have the question settled, that the Savior, in order to restore the kingdom of God, prepared three men to stand at its head; and for further proof see Galatians 2: 9:

"And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship, that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision."

These three sat in judgment on Paul's case, and this quorum sits in judgment on man's pretensions to be called of God. In the seventh verse it is said, that the gospel of the circumcision was committed unto Peter. This would of necessity give Peter the head; and in the grand conference held at Jerusalem, James presided. See Acts 15: 19.—"Wherefore my sentence is," etc. This proves that James held a place in the church in advance of the other apostles; and as to John we have the fullest assurance of his position in the church, until the last account we have of him in exile on the Isle of Patmos; and from the account there given, (see Rev. 2), the churches were sending angels, or messengers to him for instruction. Thus we find Peter, James, and John, standing as presiding officers over the authorities in the church; and also they held distinctive authority over the twelve, and and over the whole Church of God, while they lived. Thus we find that Christ, in order to bestow upon mankind the power of God, separated three; and thus far we find the church under Christ to correspond with the church spoken of by Stephen. (Acts 7: 38). The church in the wilderness had a quorum of three, Moses, Aaron, Hurr. The church at Jerusalem had a quorum of three, Peter, James, and John. The Son of God next proceeded to organize the quorum of twelve; and in order to plainly show this, we shall quote such scripture as will settle the question understandingly. This is necessary because there is an idea among the learned religionists of the day that Peter, James and John, were an inseparable part of the twelve; and to set the subject forth in a convincing light, we will notice the history from the crucifixion until the matter is made plain. After the crucifixion, we find the number of apostles to be eleven, (see Mark 16: 14).

"Afterwards he appeared unto the eleven," &c. From the first chapter of Acts, we learn that Matthias was chosen to fill Judas' place, thus making the number twelve, including Peter, James and John. In the days of Paul, we find him speaking of the apostles thus, in 1 Cor. 15: 5: "And that he (Christ) was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve." Here Paul uses the phrase, "then of the twelve," in distinction from Peter. At this time then there was a twelve, separate from Peter. We ask, Were there twelve besides Peter, James and John? In reading Acts 14:14, we find the following: "And when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul." Again, 1 Cor. 9:5, 6, "Have we not power to lead about a sister, a wife, as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord? or I only and Barnabas." Here Barnabas is called an apostle as well as Paul. Peter, James and John, gave the right hand of fellowship unto Barnabas, as well as Paul. In Gal. 1:19, Paul says: "Other of the apostles saw I none, save James, the Lord's brother." Here we learn for the first time that James the Lord's brother was an apostle at the time Paul went to Jerusalem. That he was not one of the first twelve, see Acts 1:13. James, the son of Zebedee, and James the son of Alphaeus, were; but not James the Lord's brother. We now find, that when the organization was completed, there were twelve apostles, besides Peter, James and John, who occupied a position peculiar to themselves. We found the church under Moses, with its quorum of three, Moses, Aaron and Hurr, and with its quorum of twelve—Shammua, Shaphat, Caleb, Igal, Ashea, Palti, Gaddiel, Gaddi, Ammiel, Sethur, Nabbi, Geuel, (see Numbers, 13), and we find the Church under Peter, with its quorum of three, Peter, James and John; and its quorum of twelve: Andrew, (Peter's brother), Philip, Bartholomew, Thomas, Matthew, James, (the son of Alphaeus), and Lebious (whose sir name was Thadius), and Simeon, (the Canaanite), Matthus, Paul, Barnabas, and James, (the Lord's brother).

The next step was the appointment of Seventy, see Luke 10:1: "After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face, into every city and place whither he himself would come." After this quorum was organized, the power of God was with them, see 18th verse, "And the Seventy returned with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name." Another part of their organization is found in the 6th chapter of Acts, from 1st to close of 6th verse. We shall however at this time, more particularly notice those most important quorums, and the effects of the organization of those quorums. At the same time, remember the condition of the world before this organization. John had baptized many, but no spiritual blessings followed. Jesus and his disciples had baptized more than John, but still no account of spiritual blessings. John baptized multitudes on the profession of their repentance, and not only on the profession of their repentance, but by their also bringing forth fruits meet for repentance. There they stood, and only prepared thereby to have the order of government established among them. But when they rejected that order, they only enhanced their condemnation the more. But no sooner did the apostles appear under the organization as the Lord had directed them, than the effects instantly followed, and the "Lord worked with them, confirming the word with signs following. Not only was baptism administered for the remission of sins, but the Holy Ghost followed, and wherever the apostles went after the organization, and administered, whether to John's disciples or others, spiritual blessings followed. What caused this difference? Only one answer can be given, and that is, that the apostles acted under an order of government according to the will of God, and John had no such an organization, nor did he ever attain to one. The conclusion is inevitable, that ordinances are only efficacious when administered by those who are a part of an organization, established by heaven; and we have many visible proofs around us. Why is it that those of our own day that practice the proper mode of baptism, (and some do, for baptism is performed every way), do not receive the promised gifts? It is not for want of administering that ordinance. This they do, but no Holy Spirit follows. The true reason is, they have not the first, and can not have the afterwards; for says the apostle Paul, 1 Cor. 12:28, God set in the church first apostles, secondarily prophets, after that [not before] miracles, gifts of the spirit, &c.

In their organization, if they have any, they have not apostles and prophets; and it is impossible for them to have that which follows after apostles and prophets. The whole sectarian world is a mass of evidence. They all say the order of God is out of the world; and so are the gifts of the Spirit. This being admitted, what follows, but that as soon as the true order of government returns, the gifts of the spirit return. Where it departs, the gifts depart. If we search through all the denominations of the Protestant world, shall we find any or either of them with their ministry organized into quorums of three, seven, twelve and seventy? If it were necessary in olden times, to have this peculiar organization of ministry for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ, can they have "the faith once delivered to the Saints," and not have that order of ministry, through which the Lord always administers the gospel to the world? Nay, nay. Here we see the reason religious orders are multiplying, or breaking to pieces, and getting farther and farther apart. It is because the government of heaven has been rejected, and man, poor, weak man, has sought out inventions to govern what he is pleased to call the Church of God; and the Lord has left them to themselves, because they desired it. They are running to and fro, and denominations are increasing among them, forms of church government are as abundant as sects, all differing from each other, and each claiming to be best, and to have been drawn up by the most profound wisdom of men. It would spoil their religions in a moment, if they were to admit that God had revealed to them one item of their creeds. The Catholics declare that the Pope is the head of their organization; that he holds the keys of St. Peter; yet he has not two counselors as Moses and Peter had. Here we see a falling away from three to one. In their order of ministry they differ more widely from the pattern given of the Lord. The head of the Greek Church is the patriarch of Constantinople, one man, not three. The government of the Church of England is Episcopal—the King is the Head, one man not three. The Methodist Church is governed by Bishops, and their number is governed by the demand for their labors. Their general conference increases them at pleasure. Here, we will stop following the sects who claim to be Christians; for the farther we go down, the darker the picture grows relative to church government. It matters not which is best or which is worst, we can not find that order among them which the Lord gave to his church.

LATTER DAY ISRAEL.—No. II.

In a former article I pointed out some of the causes of the scattering of latter day Israel, with some of the effects of such scattering; also some of the duties of scattered Israel in order to bring about a redemption of what was lost by disobedience to former commands. I now propose to show some other very important parts of the work that must be accomplished before Zion can be fully redeemed, and that rest gained that we sing, talk, pray and preach about, the great goal we are all striving to attain to. Our Lord says in Matt. 24:14, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." Also Rev. 14:6: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth; and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people."

Here are two predictions that never have been entirely fulfilled, as all that are conversant with the latter day work will readily admit. That the first Joseph only had power given him to lay the foundation of the great structure, simply a preparatory work, a type of the great work that yet remains to be done by the people, or remnant, that shall redeem and inherit Zion, will also be admitted. If the Reorganized Church is that people or remnant spoken of by Joel, (and that we profess to be), our works should correspond with our professions and our testimonies. I have heard many of the elders, and also the laity, stand up and testify that they knew that the gospel had been restored, and that they knew it was true. The Lord will have just such a people as this, who know that the gospel is true, and that it has been revealed to them by the power of his spirit. You may say what for. To go and preach the gospel for a witness, that the end may come; for without this knowledge no man could be made a witness, neither could he preach as a witness, nor become a witness before the judgment seat of Christ. But let him have a care that his works correspond with his testimony, lest he is made to witness against himself, and is found a false witness, for his testimony becomes a "savor of life unto life, or of death unto death;" like a two edged sword cutting both ways, and woe to him whose mouth has witnessed to the truths above stated, and whose works have made his mouth to bear a false witness. For "ye shall know them by their fruits;" not every one that says, "Lord, Lord;" we have been witnesses of the gospel, we have testified to knowing the truth, open to us, will be admitted. O the weeping, the wailing that will ascend when the answer comes, "Depart, ye never knew me." It was only your mouths that bore witness, your works show where your hearts were. If your hearts had been on heaven and heavenly things, your treasures would have been laid up in heaven, and not on the earth in houses, lands, gold, silver, precious things, and in riotous living, following the fashion's ways and spots of the world, until the Lord could hardly find faith on the earth, and it was a hard matter to distinguish between the witnesses and those witnessed against. Their mouths alone told the difference, and that against themselves. I sent the gospel by an angel to be preached to all nations, kindreds, tongues, peoples, and commanded you to "hearken unto my voice; yea, verily, verily, I say unto you, that the field is white already to harvest; wherefore, thrust in your sickles and reap with all your might, mind and strength. Open your mouths, and they shall be filled." You will say this is the Elders' duty. Admit it. But what is every one's duty that has been warned? It is to warn his neighbor is it not? Yes, the command is to all. All are equally responsible to go to with all their might, mind and strength, to send the gospel as above commanded. But methinks I hear many, both lay members and officers say, How are we as responsible as the Elders? We can not preach; we are not gifted. "Are you not of the body?" Yes, we belong to the body of Christ, the church. Are not the lower extremities just as responsible as the upper in their places? Yes, for without the lower the upper must be stationary, or move but slowly, by other means than the natural ones. If the lower extremities of the body lack strength to support the body from any legal cause, then they are not responsible. But on the other hand, if they receive strength enough to support the body, and some to spare if used lawfully, they become doubly responsible. First if they have strength that will just barely support themselves, their duty to the body demands a sacrifice of a part of that little; for where one part of the body suffers, all the other parts suffer with it. On the other hand, where one part of the body is strengthened, all other parts are strengthened with it, and move with it. Second, for any surplus strength that they have received lawfully while in the body and of the body, they are responsible to Christ, the living head of the body, the church; for a day of reckoning will come, when we shall all have to give an account of our stewardship over that which is given us; for we are bought with a price, and if bought with a price, do we not belong to the one who purchased us with his blood, with all we have and are. Then if we waste that in riotous living which belongs to another, that which the Lamb of God purchased with his blood, that which we made a covenant at the waters of baptism to give to him. We there agreed to love and serve him (Christ) with all our might, mind and strength, and love our neighbor as ourselves, and to do unto others as we would have them do unto us. These with other Christian works we agreed to do; and we have the privilege of renewing our covenant which we do in eating and drinking that which bought us. We eat and drink the price, the body and blood of the precious Lamb of God. If worthily, life eternal, if unworthily we are guilty of the body and blood of the Lamb of God. "But let a man examine himself," and see to it that he discerns the body and blood of the Lamb. The apostle says, "for this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged; but when we are judged we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world."

For what cause, Paul. Had these Corinthians not obeyed the gospel? Did they not have a name and a standing in the church? Yes, but they failed to comply with their covenant, not discerning the body and blood of the Lamb that bought them; not judging themselves that they had agreed to serve and love the Lamb of God with all their might, mind and strength, but spending their love, their minds, their strength, and their substance on themselves, and in the ways of the world. If we love the Lamb of God that bought us, with all our might, minds and strength, as we have agreed to do, how much time have we to serve ourselves or the ways of the world. Do you not see that as often as we eat and drink of the body and blood of the Lamb, and arise to serve ourselves, or the world, or anything but our Master that owns us, we are guilty of his body and blood, the testament or blood of the covenant between us; or in other words, we have broken the covenant, and have need to renew our covenant again in the blood of the Lamb, that cleanseth from sins. And were it not for this blessed privilege of renewing our covenant, our struggles would be in vain, O blessed hope that we have through the gospel of Christ which taketh away the sin of the world. Blessed privilege that we have of being our own judges, that we be not condemned with the world. Blessed privilege that we have the Lamb of God as our advocate, who knows all our weaknesses, and will plead with his own blood and body, that can not be turned away; for he has bought us with a price; and shall any thing separate us from the love of the Lamb of God. Blessed privilege of being chastened as sons and daughters by a loving and kind Father; that we be not condemned with the world. Blessed privilege of being the sons and daughters of such a Father, and having such an advocate as Jesus Christ. Should we not be honest with ourselves, and accept the blessed privilege of judging ourselves? For if we are condemned with the world, we will have to be judged with the world; for where there is condemnation there is judgment; and if judgment, then a day of judgment; so we will have to wait until the day of judgment, which is after the first resurrection; for the Saints shall judge the world. Then of necessity they must have part in the first resurrection, or they could not sit with Christ and all the holy prophets and apostles in judgment of the world. Then how truly we can say, Blessed privilege that we have of judging ourselves, that we be not condemned with the world. But you will say, how shall we judge ourselves that we be not condemned with the world? Answer, "I am come a light unto the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness. And if any man hear my words and believe not, I judge him not; for I came not to judge the world but to save the world. He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the words that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day."—John 12:46-48. Read text and context. Here is the key that unlocks the mystery of judging self. "The words that I have spoken, the same shall judge you in the last day." (Inspired Transalation). "Wherefore, seek not the things of this world, but seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:38.

This brings me back to my texts, Matt. 24:14, and Rev. 14:6. Here a dispensation of the gospel was ushered in, the dispensation of the fulness of times, when the gospel, the new and everlasting covenant, must be preached for a witness to all nations, that the end may come. Methinks I hear many say, What has all this to do with the preaching of the gospel in this dispensation. Much every way. First, the gospel of the kingdom is the everlasting covenant between God and man. It is the means whereby we are reconciled, an agreement between the two parties. God is the party aggrieved, and he does by us just what he requires us to do by others, go to them and be reconciled. He comes to us in Christ with the word of reconciliation not imputing our sins unto us, the same as we should go to a brother or sister or the world, not imputing their sins to them, but to the weakness of the flesh; just as God has come to us in Christ, with the same love, the same humility, the same self-sacrificing Spirit, willing to suffer all things for the gospel's sake, that it might be preached unto others. Then there is an example of love toward us that he requires us to show towards our neighbor. He loved the world while they were in their sins, and gave his only begotten son as the sacrifice. Did that son lay up treasures on the earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal?

We profess to be the sons and daughters of God, and joint heirs with him, and we expect to enjoy everything that our elder brother enjoys, and be equal with him, and yet lay up treasures for ourselves on the earth.

But says a good brother or sister, I have paid my tithing, and have given to the poor, made free-will offerings, and given to the Elders to help to preach the gospel. Yes, that was all good and right, but have you done any more than was your duty. Have you not received your reward. Did not some one do the same thing for you, and more, that you might have the gospel. Is there any sacrifice in just doing your duty? How many treasures will you lay up in heaven by just doing your duty? Have you not been bought with a price? Does not your duty to your Master that bought you, demand all that you have done? Did you not covenant when you accepted the word of reconciliation, to do all of those things and more. We read that sacrifice bringeth the blessing, and that this is a day of sacrifice. Was there any sacrifice in paying your tithing? The Lord has promised a blessing to all that would pay their tithing. "And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground."—Mal. 3: 11. Here is your reward for paying tithing. "The devourer shall not destroy the fruits of your ground." Brother, sister, how much charity, or the love of God is there in paying tithing, freewill offering, feeding the poor, and doing all other bounden duties? Is there any? No, for charity begins where duty leaves off. Charity takes the sinner in his sins, and puts the means within his reach to help himself. The gospel says, "Come drink of the waters of life freely. Freely ye have received, freely give." "Come unto me all ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Charity makes sacrifices of self for others. Charity never lays up treasures on earth, nor spends its love, strength, mind nor substance in the vain things of this world. Charity or the love of God, when it is warned will warn its neighbors with all its might, mind and strength, as it loves its neighbor as itself, and wishes to do to them as it would have them do to it. It not only does its duty, but makes sacrifices that others may have the gospel that brought this love, and that laid up a crown of righteousness for Paul.

The gospel commences with sacrifice and ends in this life with sacrifices. Look back to all dispensations of the gospel; sacrifice, sacrifice is written on every page of its history; nor did you, my brethren and sisters, receive the gospel without sacrifice. Look at the blood, the treasures, the trials, the afflictions and all the sufferings of this dispensation, that we might have the gospel. I appeal to you all, who have kindred interests with me, and who are looking forward to the enjoyment of that rest in the Kingdom of God prepared for the righteous; Do you, or can you expect to enjoy that rest with all the honor, power and glory in the company of Christ, and all the holy men of old without making the same sacrifices that they made for the gospel's sake? The very idea will bring a blush upon every honest cheek. Could you, even if you were so lucky as to get into that rest, look back on your neighbors, friends and relatives in the pit or prison, and enjoy that rest, realizing that you had not made any sacrifices to save them? Methinks I hear a sigh from the inmost recesses of your hearts, while tears come unbidden, and trace down your cheeks, while you answer, no. The very idea is preposterous, I could not enjoy myself. Can you enjoy yourselves here while those you love are in misery? Can the mother enjoy herself while her little one is in pain? Would she not sacrifice her own life, and all the ways of the world, to relieve its pains? Would you be at home among those holy men, even were you permitted to stay? Where would be your claims to equality? They sacrificed all, even their lives, that the gospel might be preached to others. Do you not begin to see that a dispensation of the gospel means something more than doing just our duty, and having a name and a standing in the church, and bearing our testimony of its truths. All these things are our bounden duties, and have their rewards with them. But we that are looking forward to the greater blessings, must earn them by sacrifice in order to enjoy them. No honest man will ever lay claims to place or emoluments without earning them.

I want you to sacrifice anything that will tend to your good, morally, mentally or physically. Not one of your rights, but those things which are a bar between you and that rest that you are seeking for, and which are barring others out of that rest. If you would sacrifice those things that I have pointed out, and give the proceeds to the Bishop, do you not see that thousands of Elders and Priests could be put into the field; and those neighbors, friends and relatives that you are are commanded to love as yourself, that we were looking at in the pit and prison with such sorrow could have the gospel preached to them. Do you not see that the habits, ways and passions of the world are not only shutting us out if followed; but also shutting thousands of others out that would come up and call us blessed, if we would only make a sacrifice of those things that are injuring us. While on the other hand many will come up and say to us. You testified with your mouths that you knew that the gospel was true, and that it had been sent by an angel; but your works did not correspond with your mouths. If they had, we would have believed you. Why was you not a separate people as the Lord commanded? Why did you not sacrifice the world with its ways? Ye can not serve God and mammon. If you had loved us as you professed, you would have provided the means to warn us instead of wasting it to gratify your pride or your pernicious habits. Let our blood be upon your heads. Then I ask, who will be worthy of the most stripes, and leave you to answer, each one for himself at the judgment seat of the Lamb of God.

Then, as we see the great responsibility that a dispensation of the gospel sent by an angel to be preached as a witness that the end may come puts upon us, let every one that has been warned, arise in the strength of the Lamb of God and shake off the ways of the world, with all her spots, and make our calling and election sure through sacrifices for the gospel's sake, with all other bounden duties, that we may have an abundant entrance unto that rest, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the ancient worthies in the Kingdom of our God and his Christ: and that this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come. That we may all be prepared for that, and have our garments rid of the blood of this generation, is the prayer of your brother. A. HAWS.

THE SHUT-IN SOCIETY.

FOR more than a year I've had the pleasure of being a member of the above named society. Think it is a heaven directed work; for it confers happiness upon those who are shut in from the pleasures of life. All that it requires to entitle one to membership is to be an invalid, and send one's name and address to Mrs. Kate Sumner Burr, Walworth, N. Y.

It is a little more than six years since the idea of this society originated in the minds of two sick girls and a worthy lady. Now it numbers about nine hundred. The history of it can be obtained by sending six cents to Mrs. Kate S. Burr, the Editress of the Shut-in Visitor. The latter is a little monthly of much worth. It can be obtained for fifty cents a year. Will give you the member's card:

SHUT-IN SOCIETY. MEMBER'S CARD.

Name, A. M. Snow, October, 1881.

"To relieve the weariness of the sick room by sending letters and other tokens of remembrance. To testify of the love of Christ in the hours of suffering and privation. To pray for one another at set times; daily at twilight hour, and weekly on Tuesday at ten o'clock. To stimulate faith, hope, patience and fortitude in fellow sufferers, by the study and presentation of Bible truths."

More than two hundred worthy people have connected themselves with this band of sufferers as "Associates," as assistants in carrying on the work. Wish to have this published in the Herald that the Saints may take hold. It gives us an opportunity of distributing our periodicals; and thereby we may reach many who could not be otherwise reached.

ALMIRA M. SNOW.

MONDAY MORNING.

STILL in the field battling for truth, but the children of this world are loth to accept it. Christ said, "But few there be that find it." One of a household and two of a city. The warning voice must be given, the witness must be borne, that the way of Christ may be prepared by turning the hearts of the children to the fathers, and the fathers to the children, by obedience to the same covenant by which all become children of the same great household of faith, which household is connected by uniting links from one dispensation to another.

The words of Father Ells, while staying at my house during General Conference, come forcibly to my mind, and are applicable: "God never had but one plan to save the children of men." As I go forth testifying to this "one plan" restored again in the latter days, I receive the testimony of God's Spirit, which gives me boldness and assurance.

After enjoying the hospitable roof of Bro. Henry Thompson, we were soon speeding our way onward across the country toward the "land of Goshen." Stopped at Bro. Arthur Smith's. Partook of a hearty supper prepared by the artistic hand of "Louie." We were accompanied on this, to me, very interesting trip, by my traveling companion, Bro. I. N. Roberts, Father and Mother Landers, aged near ninety, Bro. B. Case and daughter, Brn. Decker and M. Smith. A sufficient number assembled on Friday night in prayer meeting to claim the promise. Myself and fellow rested our weary bones under the roof-tree of Bro. H. R. Harder, the pleasure of which was increased by the springs of Johns and Ordway. Conference convened on the following day with a good attendance. Bro. A. Kent, president of the district, in the chair, and H. R. Harder as scribe. The brethren entered into business with considerable zest; and after a day and half a night's efforts, the end was reached. It was quite evident the brethren could not see eye to eye on all things, but in the midst of it all they kept the one thing necessary; their "temper." Sunday morning met for prayer and testimony, Sunday School and preaching, each of which passed off smoothly. I admired the Sabbath School, its order, &c. Bro. Harder is superintendent. The word was preached by Bro. I. N. Roberts to a full house with fair effect. The sacrament meeting in the afternoon was a spirited one. Father Landers bore a strong testimony to the work. After many years spent in defending its principles, he was still firm, and "ready when the Lord of the harvest calls." At night the writer occupied the stand, but with poor liberty.

I will give the experience of Bro. Saml. Pane as related in the meeting, fortunately at the close. Desiring to be religious, he began to make inquiry which church was right. On inquiring of his Baptist brethren, he was told that that church was right, because it was founded on John the Baptist. He was baptized, and as he thought all Christians should do, began to read the Bible. He read that the Holy Ghost was promised to Christians, and so went to the preachers and inquired when he would receive the Holy Ghost. After a little consultation they (there were a number of them together), told him that he would receive it in about eight days. After waiting the eight days, and receiving nothing, he again went to the minister, but received no satisfaction. Soon tiring of this, he quit the church. He afterwards came in contact with the Latter Day Saints, and when they told him of the Holy Ghost, he said "he had been fooled once on the Holy Ghost," and did not care to try it again. Being assured of a promised knowledge, he obeyed the gospel, and found things just as represented; hence had no desire to back out.

While here we formed acquaintance with Brn. Geo. Beebe of Clifton, J. A. Davidson and wife of Terra Cotta, S. C. Andes of Elmira, B. D. Warren of Glen Elder, George Oglevie and Sr. Fisk of Guide Rock, Neb., E. Sandy of Greenleaf, Bro. A. Seers of Elmira, E. M. Reynolds of Cuba; also met Bro. A. H. Parsons and wife, whom I had met before. Among the resident brethren with whom I formed an acquaintance, and who extended to us every hospitality that "good Saints" can bestow, I mention Brn. A. Kent, H. R. Harder, A. Smith, R. Hoyer, president of the branch, Brn. Cochran, J. O. McNight and some others whose names I can not recall.

Conference over, the brethren started for home. Bro. Davidson by team one hundred miles south-west; Bro. Oglevie about one hundred miles north-west, &c., we did not start for home, however. By invitation remained and held meetings during the week with fair attendance. On Saturday, bidding adieu to the Saints, we sped our way onward, westward bound, to carry the glad tidings to new fields. "How beautiful are the feet of them that bring glad tidings," &c. J. M. T.

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

THE gospel is a theme that is both ever old and ever new. It has engaged the attention of the simplest, the intermediate and the wisest of the world. Angels, prophets and kings have only comprehended the segments thereof; but for all that we can not dispense with its beacon fires. Take the gospel out of the divine economy, and chaos would hold high carnival amid the constellations, and anarchy would entomb the footstool of God. All living would expire and systems would fall into speedy decay and irretrievable ruin. It is as old or eternal as its adorable Author; for "It is the power of God." That Being whom we worship is from everlasting, and his cycles fail never. The immortals would not continue steadfast and sure, were it not that a kind Providence "hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." This exalted sphere of existence is cotemporary with the duration of the endless Deity; for he who changeth not, "hath immortality" or the light and power of the gospel without measure. Through its sway "The first man Adam" became "the son of God; as well as all that accepted Christ in more modern times.

Faith is an inseparable element of the pure gospel; hence Abel, the first martyred prophet, was the happy recipient of the same; "For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith, as it is written, 'The just shall live by faith.'" In the days of Seth and Enos, men began "to call upon the name of the Lord;" and an inspired apostle hath wisely observed, while representing the attributes, perfection and mind of an impartial Creator, "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved." The order, as further portrayed in the tenth of Romans and elsewhere, is, that the preacher must be called, qualified and sent, and the people must hear, believe and obey that "form of doctrine" delivered to them.

While judgments have ever hung over sinful nations, and pestilential wrath, fire and sword have abridged the career of the wicked, the righteous are his delight. When we walk with God we please him, and, like unto Enoch of old, he will show us the joys of immortality.

Noah was not only a true proclaimer of righteousness, but a faithful steward over the heritage of God. As such he was enabled to divide the word of truth aright; as also to outlive and override an expiring world. "Melchisedec, King of Salem, brought forth bread and wine; and he was the priest of the Most High God."

These emblems of the body and blood of Christ could, and doubtless did have the requisite efficacy, because they were received, accepted, blest and consecrated by a priest and king, even a "king of peace." "In me ye shall have peace," said the "author and finisher of the faith;" "For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the Saints." Please notice that peace is obtainable only in Christ; hence this righteous monarch, that blessed Abraham, evidently was "baptized into" and "put on" "the Judge of quick and dead."

How can we controvert the ground that the worthies, of remotest antiquity, knew the true science of life and the means of adoption, as well as growth, grace and salvation. That faith which worketh by love, and moveth to obedience, got a firm hold on Abraham, and he became the "friend of God," an exemplar of righteousness, and the typical father of the faithful. He was acquainted with the gospel as shown forth in Galatians. To be blessed with him is the very acme of our profession. He commanded his house, kept the faith, and died in the harness. Isaac was a child of promise, and a recipient of the "everlasting covenant." His descendants were plants of renown and likewise receivers of the gospel. Jacob's status is obvious, for he was blessed with visions and angels. These preternatural illuminations exonerate from turpitude and make plain the will of the Sovereign Lord.

Angels exercise their benign influence and exert their energy in behalf of the "heirs of salvation." The Jehovah of Israel moves a mysterious hand over the dial of this earth. Joseph's cruel brethren thought to get rid of his influence and power, but the overruling hand sent him to Egypt to save life.

During the Hebrew bondage, in the land of Ham, the fruits of the gospel were, mainly, blasted by a great apostasy. Under the administration of Moses the law was honored and magnified, to a very considerable extent. He turned from the ease and glory of a regal court, "Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of

This great Jewish lawgiver made a wise use of his agency, in spurning affluence and power. By overcoming this temptation he was enabled to bow to a ministration of suffering, and scorn the reproach and despise the shame. The Spirit was his instructor, as it "testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glory to follow." "For had you believed Moses, you would have believed me, for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe on my words?"

The song of deliverance from the menacing hosts of Pharaoh, recorded in the thirty-second chapter of Deuteronomy, is a dim type, or a faint prelude, of the one chanted by the victorious assembly. When they stand upon the redeemed and glorified earth, "they sing the song of Moses the servant of God and the song of the Lamb." When this imperfect, yet meek prophet passed behind the veil, the "sun of righteousness" sank beneath the horizon, so to speak, and the cold, pale moon passed over the zenith of a long weary night, or the law of carnal commandments was added because of transgression. In the time of the "handwriting of ordinances that was against us," or from Horeb to Calvary, the masses walked by a feeble light, and died with longing expectations. Many lived above the law, and became wiser than "their schoolmaster." Those highly favored with the foreknowledge of God acted as guideboards along the devious and thorny way. "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." The ordinances, forms, rites, ceremonies, authorities, duties, obligations, gifts, graces, blessings, privileges, peace and ultimatum of the gospel are the same in all ages. It is no more perfect now than it was "when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." That system of faith and works that sanctified Abel, translated Enoch, protected Noah, warned Abraham, and inspired the author of the Pentateuch, wrought effectually with Peter and Paul, Joseph and Hyrum, Henry Ward Beecher and his Christian evolution to the contrary notwithstanding. These progressive divines of sectarian Babylon are "ever learning, but never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." They hold that orthodox churches should fashion their creeds to discoveries of science and the development of brain power. Science is ever shifting his basis, and the march of intellect is in its infancy; hence orthodoxy must keep pace and travel on.

Paul never sat at the feet of America's leading pulpit orators, and adopted the sickly vagaries of evangelical philosophers. In treating upon the truth he delighted to promulgate, in spirit and power, he judiciously observed as follows:

"For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by revelation of Jesus Christ."

Again:

"But though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

While the professing world is piling creed upon creed and dogma upon dogma, the "revealer of secrets" is giving "line upon line, precept upon precept," to those who live by every word of God. This public exhibition of schisms, sects and parties, is the gazing stock of all rational men and good angels. It is the harvest field of Satan and the irreparable loss of man. These godless forms "of godliness," like Capernium of old, are exalted to heaven but hell is their doom. These divisions and sub-divisions in the realms of Christendom, with all their affected piety, with all their claims for age, numbers, wealth, and moral prestige, are almost impenetrable barriers against the progress of the gospel of love. "One fold and one shepherd," with "one faith and one baptism," will eventually gain the field, and vanquish the enemies, and reign supreme.

Matthew terms "the perfect law of liberty," "the gospel of the kingdom," and Mark adds the phrase, "of God." Paul styles the great scheme of human redemption, "the gospel of the grace of God," "the gospel of Christ," "the gospel," "our gospel," "my gospel," "the glorious gospel of the blessed God," &c.; and John speaks of it as "the everlasting gospel." The Saints of God should be "established according to the gospel;" for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." As "fellow citizens" we must "run the race," "strive lawfully," "keep the faith," and "walk in, be led of, and live in the Spirit;" and then we can truthfully say, "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Sin is not only a reproach but the highway and harbinger of death. Jesus is the friend of sinners when they forsake their evils, pass under the rod of correction, embrace the covenant and honor the terms of the same, with a godly walk and pious zeal. A man might philosophize eloquently, moralize ably, and quote a multiplicity of scriptures fluently, and still never preach a particle of gospel. Unless a person is clothed with proper authority and power, all attempts are worse than fruitless; and all the simple deluded devotees, are nearing a yawning gulf, or a great ditch. "How shall they preach except they be sent." It is foreign to our design to multiply scriptural proofs in regard to a legitimate call, and an authoritative ordination to the priesthood or ministry. Suffice it to say, that all who occupy that high and holy position ought to proclaim "in demonstration of the Spirit, and of power." When the standard bearers teach with the Holy Ghost, God's name is magnified, the wayward are warned, the honest seeker finds rest, the children of grace rejoice, angels are glad, demons are mad, and darkness vanishes before the penetration of celestial effulgence.

In Galatians the works of the flesh, and the fruits of the Spirit, are placed in juxtaposition, in order to aid us to ascertain whether we are "in the faith." These Lord! Lord! folks have been as thick alongside the Christian's highway, as the serpents were around the cradle of Hercules. Offenses, less or more, have ever been within the pales of the church; but these do not excuse any from entering therein, and living in harmony with the doctrine thereof. Our faith must undergo a fiery ordeal to test our worth. Wood hay and stubble all consume; but silver, gold and precious stones are fireproof. "For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be manifest among you." At a certain time, "all Asia" turned away from St. Paul, but he "kept the faith." Noah was in the minority when it began to rain. The Latter Day apostasy clogged the onward flow and outward sweep of the gospel for a brief period; but wicked men and infernal spirits can not stay the tide of truth, the salvation of man and the glory of Israel.

Poverty is generally an unwelcome blessing, and even pain purifies the obdurate heart, quickens the sympathies, and teaches us submission to the infinite. Out of seeming evil and wild commotion, the Lord has evolved the best good and proclaimed his will, as instanced in the whirl-wind. When any one becomes so very prodigal that neither rebuke nor chastening can reach him, he forfeit divine favor and love. The story of the cross is an idle tale to all such, and they become a law unto themselves. On the other hand, all who "walk humbly, deal justly and love mercy," are on the sure road to bliss. "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are called according to his purpose." This design is none other than the "eternal purpose" as promulgated by his servants.

Let us state that miracles, signs, and wonders; tongues, visions and angels; dreams, healing and prophecy; inspirational faith, spiritual gifts and supernatural power; as shown forth "at sundry times and in divers manners;" with all the manifestations of the Holy Ghost, are the pearls of inestimable price that belong to the children of the kingdom of Christ.

It is easier to fight than pray, and more convenient "to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints," than to be a "living epistle." The meek and lowly followers of the Lamb go from faith to faith, from grace to grace, and from strength to strength; until they inherit all things, and comprehend the deep things of the All-wise, or "know as they are known." They will dwell under their own vine throughout the great millennium, enter into the final rest, and ever be with the Lord.

This "general assembly" will be comprised of all who have received the fundamental laws of the realm; with the accompanying education, drill and discipline that will qualify them to stand. Could we enjoy the ineffable society of the angel band, and be strangers to the heavenly gift and the powers of the world to come? Could we endure the presence of the God of glory when we have lived in rebellion to his holy laws, and spurned the gift of his dear Son? Let us strive on, sacrifice on, and pray on. May mercy spring forth with all possible speed; and may truth and salvation sweep outward and onward to earth's remotest bounds. God bless and save the people I devoutly pray.

JOHNS & ORDWAY,
Manufacturers of
HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES,
605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

Geo. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, July 26th, 1884.

WE met General A. W. Doniphan, at his hotel in Richmond, whither we went to see, and shake the hand of the man, who had the courage and manhood under strange and trying circumstances, where death from unauthorized violence threatened Joseph and Hyrum Smith, Alexander McRae and others of the Elders, to face the consequences of stemming the torrent of bigotted prejudice and murderous clamor, and say: "I will have nothing to do with such business; my men are soldiers, not murderers. I shall march from camp with my men to-morrow morning at day light." It is undoubtedly owing to the outspoken stand taken by General Doniphan on that occasion, that those men were not shot upon the public square the next morning, as had been decided on by Generals Clark and Lucas, and others of the council of war.

The General is well advanced in years, but is still tall and erect, speaks clearly and distinctly. His mind seems to be still vigorous; and we were told by one who studied law and is practicing with him, that there is no apparent diminution of his powers in his profession, except the failure, common to age, to recall events recently transpiring. He is modest and avoids saying anything of the part taken by him in the scene referred to above. And when we told him that we came, with Bro. Alexander, as sons of one of the men whose lives were spared by reason of his action that day, as we believed, to thank him in person, he deprecated our thanks, saying: "I deserve no thanks for doing what was my duty. I had a long time to live and could not afford to burden my conscience and life with the blood of my fellow men."

We referred to the prejudice existing against our father and his comrades, and the terrible excitement of the time, and the risk he ran in incurring the displeasure of the popular will, as expressed in the order to kill those men the next morning. To this he replied that what he did at the time he did without thinking of the consequences, as men frequently act in cases of extreme emergency. Our interview was pleasant. He has been a man of action and careful observation. Has not sought political honors, but has served the people when their desire for his services has been properly expressed.

He visited Salt Lake City some years ago, met Alexander McRae, whom he remembered; and was well treated by the authorities there. He is a democrat, and talked freely of the present political aspect of the country, but without any partisan feeling. One remark was very striking. "It is a difficult thing to grow old and prevent becoming querulous, covetous and weak, or suspicious and misanthropic. I recognize this difficulty and strive to avoid either extreme." He is quite a friend to Elder Whitmer; knew Oliver Cowdery well, as well as many others of the Saints in Ray, Caldwell, Jackson and Davis counties; remembers Lyman Wight, whom he regarded as an especially brave and fearless man. He affirms that there was nothing like polygamy taught, or known among the Mormons during their stay in Missouri. He further states that so far as his knowledge went they were good citizens.

Oliver Cowdery died at Richmond, about 1850, and his body lies in the "old graveyard," just north of the town; as we were informed by both David Whitmer and family and by General Doniphan.

SOME four or five years ago the Saints of the Independence, Missouri, Branch, started to build a house of worship. The effort was well seconded by the few then gathered there; but whether it was owing to the building being too large, or too costly, or to divided counsels; progress was slow. However, the number of Saints there kept increasing, and the effort to complete the house was renewed from time to time, by the branch and district; until a committee of one was appointed by a conference, to collect the amount required to pay off the then indebtedness. After this a committee was appointed by the branch, consisting of Joseph Luff, Frederick G. Pitt, and Adam Jessamine, to finish it preparatory to dedication. This committee proceeded with the work, aided and seconded by the Sisters' Mite, or Aid Society; until Sunday, July 6th, was set for the services of dedication.

An invitation to be present was extended to the Editor, in compliance with which he left home July 4th, stopping at Ridgeway, Harrison county, Missouri, to attend and speak at a celebration there; and reaching Independence on the morning of the 6th, in plenty of time for the appointed service. At a little before the hour of eleven in the forenoon the house was crowded full of people, for the greater part members of the church. Elders D. S. Crawley, president of the district, and Frederick G. Pitt, Presiding Elder of the branch, after conferring together, placed the Editor in charge of the services.

Miss Kate Field, journalist and writer, was present. She has for some months been in Utah, seeing and hearing what might be heard and seen of Mormonism there; and was on the occasion of her visit to Independence seeking information from our people, hunting up as many of those formerly associated with the work as are living and accessible, as well as interviewing men of the Reorganization. She has visited Father David Whitmer and General A. W. Doniphan, at Richmond. She was called forward and given a chair near the stand.

Services opened by an anthem by the choir, under the direction of Brn. Pitt and Barbee, the preacher read the fifty-first chapter of Isaiah, prayer was offered by Bro. W. H. Kelley, a hymn was sung, and the sermon was pronounced by the Editor. Elder M. H. Forscutt, who was present, offered the prayer following the sermon; a song and the benediction closed the exercises.

It was an important occasion. Difficulties of a serious character had been met and overcome in the erecting the building. Many, perhaps all, had done what they could to further it. Success had crowned their efforts; and now the people of God desired to present their work to Him whom they served, for his acceptance. Past differences were merged in the triumph of the present. Strife, if there had been any, had given way to kindly thoughts. Bickerings, if they had occurred, were traced to anxiety and care, induced by the troubles natural to the situation; these were as the clouds of yesterday; and the halo of better determinations was obscuring their remembrance. Old time memories, of joy in the word, of restful comfort in Christ, of sorrows and pains endured, of dangers passed through in the days of persecution, all rose in quick and vivid succession, while the profound peace of the time, the propitious hour, the renewed joy and peace in the Holy One of Israel, brought to the heart such a benison of blessing that we sat in heavenly places in very deed.

The building is of brick, 30 x 45, and about 16 feet in height of ceiling, making a room in which from 350 to 400 persons may be comfortably seated. The outside is severely plain. There are two doors in the south end, one either side, and as the building stands a few feet back from the street, there is room for a vestibule, which the brethren contemplate adding by and by. The windows are slightly rounded at the top, of good size and sufficient in number to give light and ventilation, the sash being hung on cords, to be raised or lowered as required. The inside is tastefully wainscotted from the floor to the windows; the walls papered with paper of neat design; behind the reading desk a panel skillfully designed and executed by Bro. Newton Evans of Holden, Missouri, gives a pleasing aspect to the platform, which is wide enough to permit the preacher plenty of room; the desk is small and quite neat; the ceiling of the room is plain white. Somebody, we suppose the Sisters' Aid Society, has furnished the platform and aisles with carpet, of good texture and pattern; and hung a neat four lamp chandelier in front of the pulpit, and will probably put in another, nearer the front in time. A hair-cloth sofa, and two upholstered chairs are provided for the stand. The seats are chairs, of good style of frame, with perforated wood seats, costing six dollars and a half per dozen; these are arranged to form two aisles, one from either door to the stand. The whole interior arrangement presents a comfortable appearance to the worshiper; and if those who gather there will now give diligent heed to the word of the Lord to them, all will go well.

The branch numbers about three hundred and fifty, and already the building is too small, the rapid increase of their number having outstripped the anticipations of those who planned it. Elder M. H. Forscutt spoke in the evening to a house full of listeners.

FATHER DAVID WHITMER received the commission sent to examine the manuscript of the Book of Mormon, Tuesday afternoon, July 8th, and after arranging preliminaries, the Committee began work the same afternoon. The coming of the Committee got into one of the local papers, as coming from Utah, a distinction which the committee are not willing to accept, of course. The notice of it was sent to a Saint Louis paper, and now it will get into all the journals in the same way. As Puck once said, so say we, "Lord, what fools these mortals be."

A VISIT to Richmond, Missouri, by any of those having an interest in the latter day work is to him who visits an episode in life, which he will not forget; but which he will remember when skies grow dim to his eyes of faith.

The Committee appointed last spring to examine the Palmyra, and subsequent editions of the Book of Mormon, with the manuscript copy in the possession of Elder David Whitmer, resident at Richmond, reached that historic town on the morning of July 8th, and as soon as proper arrangements were made, began the work assigned them.

For reasons which Elder Whitmer regarded as good, he declined to permit the examination of the manuscript, unless the Editor of the HERALD was present. The committee notified the Editor of this, and so he made one of the number that journeyed from Independence to Richmond. Bro. Alfred Munns, of California, also accompanied them, to pay a tribute of respect to the remaining witness to the book, and to gratify a laudable curiosity.

The work of the committee is progressing satisfactorily, the particulars of which will be found in their report when it shall be made.

COMMITTEE WORK.

THE work of the Committee to examine the Book of Mormon manuscript is one that has been necessary for some time. Some years ago the matter was talked over by Bro. W. W. Blair and self, as many as ten years ago, and an agreement reached that when circumstances favored it, such examination ought to be made. The statement alleged to have been made by Rev. Clark Braden, in advertising the Debate between himself and Bro. E. L. Kelley, that he had "forced" the Reorganized Church into the examination is in no sense true. The resolution adopted by the Conference at Stewartville last April, was presented, argued and passed without reference to Rev. Clark Braden, or his effort to destroy "Mormonism." It was undertaken more to answer questions in the church than to meet outside attack.

We are not at liberty to anticipate the Report of the Committee, but we may with propriety say to the Saints, that the faith of those who have accepted the Book of Mormon and its teachings, may rest undisturbed.

MISS KATE FIELD who was in attendance at the services held at Independence, Missouri, on July 6th, interviewed the Editor of the HERALD, Elders W. H. Kelley, A. H. Smith, T. W. Smith, M. H. Forscutt and Stephen Malony; getting such information upon the latter day work as these men could give in the time. Miss Field is an intelligent, sharp woman, and is apparently very much in earnest in her design to get at the facts concerning the Saints. Her visit to Independence fell in a fortunate time, so far as seeing some of the Reorganization is concerned. She was well treated by us, and we shall look with interest to see what sort of a showing she will give us in her letters and book.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made with the Post Office Department in Washington, so that Post Office Orders sent to us, may hereafter be drawn on Lamoni, Iowa, instead of Chicago, Illinois, except those coming from foreign countries and Canada.

July 11th, Bro. E. C. Brand was on his way to Albion, Idaho.

The fourteen year old boy of T. Z. Stark, of Lamoni, had his arm broken by being thrown from a horse July 14th. It was set by Dr. John H. Hansen, and at present writing is doing well.

Bro. David Chambers started from near Persia, Iowa, on his mission to Utah, July 15th.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. I. N. White writes from Rhodes, Iowa:

We are having some sore trials here; but most of the Saints are patient. White Brothers seem to be the center of spite. One of our prominent enemies has circulated a petition, well preambled with "ifs" and "ands," considering us the "bell sheep." In this petition the signers bind themselves not to "buy nor sell" with us. Quite a number have already signed it. We have not much fears of it doing us much damage, as we are well known. Bro. Etzenhouser and I start tomorrow forty or forty-five miles east to hold grove meetings. Bro. McDowell and Nirk will hold one at same time in Polk county. The work is marching along in the district, and the devil is mad.

ELDER JAMES CAFFALL has a good article in the Coal Creek (Colorado) Enterprise, from which we make the following extract:

As evidence of religious and political freedom is everywhere heard or seen, especially in the broad land of America, with this, to every lover of human rights, every individual and society claims the right of having his, or its say. And since all men, as well as creeds and societies must stand by their merits, or fall by their demerits, there certainly ought to be no objection urged, nor will there be, save by the ignorant and intolerant, to any and all using this freedom. Though it is pleasing to note the effects produced by the lightning speed with which the wave of freedom is cleansing the shores of civilization from the accumulated filth of ages, caused by priestly domination, it is clear to even a casual observer, that the spirit of intolerance is not squelched out, though thank goodness, there is generally sufficient of the liberal element to prevent this monster from gratifying itself or going beyond prescribed limits save spitting out its spleen in vile epithets or vile vituperation, base insinuations and innuendoes.

Mr. Editor, the writer is a representative of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, and having reasons to believe that constant and persistent efforts, by those who ought to be better informed, are made to impress all with the thought that the above church and the Utah Mormons are identical, and resort to this method to disabuse the minds of all who may, perchance, read these effusions. The original doctrine and church organization inaugurated by Joseph Smith, in 1830, known as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was, and remains plain in its renderings, and most emphatically denounces polygamy, its kindred evils, absolute rulings of the priesthood, disloyalty to municipal, county, state or national rules and regulations, condemns the practice of mingling religious and political influence, declaring acts culminating in fostering one religious society and proscribing another, an outrage in any government, but especially in a republican form; that church and state consolidated has, and will whenever done, jeopardize the rights of the masses, creating special legislation producing a centralization of power, hence the evil. Original Latter Day Saintism, means therefore, the primitive gospel in its entirety, with a church organization such as the New Testament reflects; it means the monogamic order of marriage is the only one authorized by God and recognized by all civilized earthly governments, and that it should be regulated by law. The writer believes that the declaration in Genesis, viz: "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave to his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh," was given to prevent polygamy and divorce, and that it would better comport with the dignity of a republican form of government to enact more stringent measures to prevent divorces than to grant them, as it sometimes seems for but trivial reasons. The above church had a well defined discipline, and none from Luther down have more strongly condemned polygamy, enforcing virtue and sobriety than it. It was not until 1852 that polygamy was publicly proclaimed, and claimed by Brigham Young to be a tenet of the church, which, with other reasons, involved a necessity for a reorganization, and for the last quarter of a century have the Reorganized church steadily and persistently labored to prevent and expose the soul destroying practice of polygamy, and have, at a proper time and in a legitimate manner, petitioned congress to interpose for its prevention.

Correspondence.

CLEAR WATER, Nebraska,

July 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Our conference passed off quietly, a portion of the good Spirit being present throughout the session; perhaps it was as profitable and pleasant a gathering as was ever held in the district. The outlook for the future of this district is very encouraging. A feeling of interest and a determination to press on is gaining in all the branches. Since the 30th of March eleven by baptism and fourteen by letter have been added to this the Clear Water Branch. We now number sixty-six, with good prospects for more additions ere long. We have the gifts frequently given to encourage and cheer us; and the Saints are as a rule trying to live as becometh Saints of God.

Crops are looking well; many think that they are the best ever known in this locality. We feel that God is caring for us, and earnestly desire to be worthy of his kind and watchful care. I am a son, not a grandson of Lyman Wight. Praying for the triumph of the cause, I am yours in bonds,
R. H. WIGHT.

DECKERVILLE, Mich., July 14th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have spent five weeks in the ministry, just to fill some urgent calls. The interest is good every where. I have been blessed, and somehow I have felt more like talking to them than ever. It seems that in presenting the word, passages are brought to mind to be presented in such a manner that the people can not help seeing it if they will. I baptized ten in that time. I will now arrange things so as to get out as soon as possible, and labor constantly for the Master.

Very truly,

J. J. CORNISH.

FARM CREEK, July 10th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Since the conference held at Stewartville, I have labored as best I could for the benefit of the work in the field assigned me. Most of the Saints, especially the Elders, are alive to the interests of the cause. I have preached all that I thought was necessary under the circumstances, in all the places that I have visited. It has been a busy time, and will be for two weeks more amongst the farming community at least; so it has not been very good for holding meetings week nights. When it has not been convenient to hold meetings, I have visited the people, and talked to them at their houses. The result has been good. Our two days' meeting held in the Mill Creek Branch, was a success. Bro. S. S. Wilcox kindly assisted in carrying on these meetings. Three were baptized, and some who never heard the gospel as presented by us are believing. We think the prospect is good for others to obey in the near future. Bro. L. Donaldson labored with a zeal worthy of notice for the success of the work, in taking visiting Saints and friends from and to the railroad depot at Riverton.

At our conference held at the Keystone Branch every thing went off harmoniously; not a single jar in our business transactions. The joy and peace produced by God's Holy Spirit filled every heart with gladness; and notwithstanding the busy time, we had a splendid representation from all parts of the district. All returned to their homes filled with gratitude to God.

Friday, June 27th, found us at the Keystone again. We preached at the school house on Saturday night, Sunday morning and night. Had fair sized congregations, and good attention. The following Wednesday afternoon baptized two. Held confirmation meeting in the evening. We all felt the presence and power of the Spirit bearing testimony of the acceptance of the two precious souls. May God bless them, and help them to stand firm to the truth they have obeyed. There are others here who have for a long time been convinced of the truth of the work.

Last Sunday met with the Saints of this place. Had good liberty in speaking both morning and night. This is an old branch, and old time Saints live here. I love to meet with such, who have passed through the fiery trials of afflictions for the gospel's sake. I expect to go from here to Wheeler's Grove; from there back to Keystone. The crops look splendid. May God preserve the same for the good of his Saints in this district is my prayer, and especially for those who lost all last year through the hail storm.

Yours in gospel bonds,

HENRY KEMP.

LUCAS, Iowa, July 14th, 1884.

Pres. Joseph Smith:—I baptized another yesterday, a young man, making six by me while here. During twenty-seven days spent here and at Cleveland in June and July, I have preached twenty-five times. Besides the six baptized, (four of them young men), there are several others whose obedience is sure, when they shall have taken full time to digest and consider the whole matter, as is their wish.

I go to-morrow to Burlington at the wish of Bro. Lambert. The work at Osceola and Zero I defer till a better season, longer evenings and cooler weather. The Saints seem strengthened and confirmed in the faith more and more by the work done during the past month. I also feel glad to have accomplished something through divine aid, and to have been so acceptable to the branch throughout.

Yours, H. A. STEBBINS.

CHASE, Rice Co., Kansas,

July 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We are living one mile from here, and we can not be far from the location of some branch. There are many pleasant faces that we meet, that are striving to gain that happy home above. They all give us a hearty welcome. We are now ready to care for any of the Saints that may see fit to come and see us. The Lord is blessing Kansas this year with bountiful crops of all kinds that are planted; and as long as the Lord blesses us with health and strength, we are ready to do all we can to help roll on the work already begun. I have felt many times like crying out in the agony of my soul, "How long, O Lord, how long, will the people walk in darkness on account of this unbelief;" and we can not complain of others, unless we set better examples for them to follow. I have had a life of trials, and it has been a blessing to me; for it has made me see and know in whom to put my trust. My testimony is sure as long as I am faithful. I have no need to fear; for God has made the promise by his Spirit oft to cheer those who put their trust in him. It is now twenty two or three years since I joined the Church, and I have no reason to murmur at the hand that has guarded me. When in need, we have always been healed. We ask to be remembered by all the Saints when at the altar of prayer, that our faith fail not; and that we may ever be ready to give a reason for our hope of eternal life.

H. J. LUSH.

RIVERTON, Iowa, July 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The two days' meeting at this place was a good one. Eddie Mortimore, Lizzie and Lorenzo D. Donaldson, were baptized by H. Kemp. We have good meeting, and think of organizing a Sabbath School next Sunday. Our conference was very interesting.

Yours in the gospel,

H. DONALDSON.

BUCHANAN, Mich.,

July 3d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The work is looking upward. Bro. Richardson, my wife and a few others, hold prayer meeting every Sabbath afternoon at three o'clock, through the help of Bro. Scott; and we have unstopped the ears of some, and been the instrument of removing the blindness of some, so that they call for more gospel preaching. Ever praying for the advancement of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and this great latter day work.

Your brother in Christ,

JOHN SHOOK.

CURRENSVILLE, Clackamas Co., Oregon,

July 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I would like to let my many friends and readers of the Herald know where myself and family are located since we left our native State, Iowa. We are at the Foot Hills, west of Cascade Mountains, Oregon, sixty miles from the coast, and twenty-eight south-east of City of Portland. I would like to make a call through the Herald for one or more Elders, not a thousand dollar call, but I would vouch for them a good living, and plenty of good people to preach to. The good people of this place organized a Sabbath School after I came here, with myself as superintendent; so you see that gives me a chance to magnify my calling in part as a Teacher, "to warn, expound, exhort, teach, and invite all to come to Christ." What bothers me is, there is no one to baptize them after I get them converted. There are no Saints here except my family.

This is a good grain and fruit country. Land is cheap, and some homestead land here yet, and can't be beaten for healthfulness, for which I come here. I have been well paid for the change in climate, but it is pretty dry feed to go to hear other denominations preach Sunday after Sunday, after being raised and associated with Saints all my life. I would go forty miles with team to meet any Elder at a railroad station to have him preach in this western coast. I brought two dollars worth of tracts with me, and will soon want more. Latter Day Saints are a rarity out here. Myself and family are trying to live worthy of the name of Saints, and beg an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that we may be kept faithful.

Your brother,

E. C. DOBSON.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, July 8th, 1884.

Dear Bro. Joseph.—Our session of conference came off June 13th, and we enjoyed ourselves very much. Your uncle, W. B. Smith, was with us, and preached to a large audience of saints and outsiders, on the restoration of the gospel through an angel to your father, the Prophet Joseph; and the firm testimony that he bore to the truth of the plates, the record of the Book of Mormon, and of the persecution at the rise of the Church of Jesus Christ, brought feelings of love to my soul for him, and I pray that God may bless his efforts in spreading the truth. I also feel pleased with the Hope as a weekly, and hope it will help strengthen the little lambs of the fold of Christ.

In bonds,

RICHARD FARMER.

BUCHANAN, Henry Co., Tenn.,
July 6th, 1884.

Dear Herald.—I met with the Saints to-day, and spoke to them with good liberty. I have opened up the work in a new place, and am solicited to go to other places. I think if I could get some help a good work could be done in this part. I see in Herald that Brn. Montague, Cato and Scarcliff are assigned to this mission. We would like some of them to give us a call; think likely there would be some additions to our branch. If Bro. Montague has not started south before this reaches him, will he come by the way of Cairo, Illinois, and take boat to Paris Landing, Henry county, Tennessee. Inquire for W. H. Griffin, one mile from that place.

I subscribe myself in love,

W. H. GRIFFIN.

CHELLENHAM, Missouri,

July 14th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I left my home on the evening of the Fourth of July for St. Louis. Met in conference the fifth. Had a good time; much of the Spirit present. I spoke on Sunday morning with a good blessing of the Spirit. In the afternoon Bro. E. L. Kelley spoke on temporal law. The Saints were made better acquainted with their duty by the well timed remarks made by our able brother. The Saints enjoyed themselves for one hour in a testimony meeting before Bro. Kelley spoke; the Lord remembered us with the gifts. At night Bro. H. C. Bronson gave us a most excellent sermon. All returned to their homes feeling better. Bro. B. V. Springer met with us, feeling well in the cause. On Wednesday evening met for prayer and testimony meeting. Had a most excellent time. About all in the house took part, and the Good Father remembered us again with the gifts of the gospel. All were made happy in the Lord. On Thursday evening I spoke in the Saints' Chapel in Cheltenham. Friday evening Bro. Bronson spoke. Saturday evening a festival was gotten up for the benefit of the Sabbath School.

Sunday, thirteenth, Bro. Bronson spoke in the morning. Afternoon I baptized four. The Saints have a nice chapel in this place. Bro. John Beaird, the president of this district, is laboring very hard to push on the great latter day work; and I learn by the talk from Saints that they appreciate the labor of our worthy brother. Bro. R. D. Cottam, the Bishop's Agent, thinks he can do better in his calling as he now better understands his duty since hearing from the Bishop's Counselor, E. L. Kelley. I find the Saints trying to learn their duty. I find Bro. Bronson one of the best of Elders to labor with, and a man that understands the doctrine of the church.

I have just returned from the water; one more baptized. The work is on the increase in this place. Thank the Father. Bro. Bronson will preach on the morrow evening, myself on Thursday; Bro. Bronson at Alma on Thursday night.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

MANCHESTER, Red River Co., Texas,

July 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—The members seem to be in better hopes than previously. We have preaching every Sunday at 11 o'clock, at Saints' Church. Good Sunday School also. The enemies do not seem to be as bad as they have been.

We have a good deal of sickness in our vicinity. Saints, pray for me, that the cause may do better here than before.

Your brother in Christ,

J. D. ERWIN.

CLINTONVILLE, Missouri,

June 30th, 1884.

Dear Readers of the Herald.—I greatly appreciate the letters of the brethren and sisters in general; also all the instructive communications contained therein from the least to the greatest; and feel that the fault will be at my own door if I am not edified thereby, and so with all, I believe. I feel satisfied with the Herald, Advocate, and Hope of Zion in its weekly form, and would say to the faithful ones that got them up, Go on in faith the cause is good. The young and old are edified by your labors. You are as the tendrils of the vines that lay hold on the supporters, to stay us in the great current of evil that surrounds us, in the way of reading matter. I feel that these periodicals are worthy of support from every Saint that can raise the funds to pay for them and wishes to take care of them. They are a store of knowledge that can be drawn from in after years, at our leisure, through the winter season, when the new ones are not enough to supply our wants. Therefore, I would admonish you, brethren and sisters, young and old, to take heed to their kind instructive and warning voice. God will call us to account for the use we make of it, as being instrumental in his hand for our good. Whatever there is that is not good we can lay it aside; or any thing that we can not at present understand, let us wait in patience till we can. I love to learn of the prosperity of the work everywhere.

We have been visited here by Brn. A. White and C. St. Clair, of Independence, Mo., who did faithful labor in building up the branch and scattering the good seed both verbally and with printed matter, which we trust and pray will yet grow to the honor and glory of God in the future. This is a new field. I hope we shall have many such visits, and that God will bless the labors of our hands, that we may have wherewith to help the work we love, is the prayer of your sister in gospel bonds,

E. LLOYD.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

July 11th.—United States Consul Mason, at Marseilles, suggests to Secretary Frelinghuysen that surveillance be observed at the French ocean ports to prevent the importation of cholera into this country.

Two cases of cholera are reported from Transylvania. A ship from Marseilles arrived today at Port Mahon, Island of Minorca, in the Mediterranean, with three cases of cholera on board. One patient has since died. A refugee from Marseilles today died at Nimes, France, of cholera. Several French doctors reject Dr. Koch's views in regard to the cholera. They insist that the inoculation of a number of animals with Asiatic microbes failed to give them the cholera.

Admiral Courbet telegraphs that he has occupied a town on the Chinese coast. The French Cabinet has decided to limit the immediate operations against China to a great naval demonstration. There will be no military movement until the close of the hot season. Transports are collecting at Brest to take on board material for the French forces in China.

A special from Assouan says: The treachery of the Mudir of Dongola is confirmed. The Christians were imprisoned and compelled to turn Mohammedan. El Mahdi has made the Mudir his Emir.

July 12th.—It is probable that 120,000 people have left Marseilles since the outbreak, and the distress consequent upon such an abnormal exodus from that city and Toulon, particularly in the outlying districts, which depended almost solely for existence on their urban trade, is pitiful. It is now feared that a similar panic in Paris is imminent, many of the wealthier families having already made arrangements to depart at the first sign of the disease.

Many prominent newspapers in Germany are urging the Government to recall Dr. Koch, so that he may be at hand to advise his own people in the hour of peril. Dr. Koch remains firm in his already-expressed opinion that the cholera scourge must spread throughout Europe. It has taken so firm a hold in such large centres of communication as Marseilles and Toulon that he believes it must run its course during the summer throughout Continental Europe. He says that America, if great vigilance is exercised in quarantine precautions, will probably escape, but holds out no hope for countries insulated simply by technical frontier lines.

In England great uneasiness is beginning to manifest itself in the large cities because of the negligence of the authorities in taking necessary precautionary measures against the introduction of the plague. It is urged by prominent physicians and other scientists that the confidence resulting from England's insular position is misplaced, and that without the most perfect sanitary inspection some incoming vessels from a Mediterranean port will ship in and bring cholera with all its attendant horrors.

There were thirty deaths from cholera at Marseilles last night, and eight between 9 o'clock and noon today. The panic is extreme. The railway stations were crowded early this morning with fugitives, who fought for tickets, which the agents could not issue fast enough. There were seventeen deaths from cholera at Toulon last night.

Gladstone is attempting to effect a compromise with the House of Lords, to the great disgust of the more radical liberals. An incident in the franchise debate in the Lords, commented upon by everybody as showing a remarkable change in the spirit of the times, is the support of the bill by twelve out of thirteen Bishops, and the strongly democratic flavor of the speech of the Archbishop of Canterbury. In 1831 the Reform bill was opposed by twenty-one Bishops.

China maintains her bluster in her dispute with France over the alleged violation of the Tiser-Tain treaty at Langson. France is firm and determined. Next week the matter will be decided, and the question of war or peace between the two nations will be resolved. The French newspapers openly declare that there is good ground to suspect that England is secretly inciting China to fight, in the hope of distracting the French people from English designs in Egypt. Sir Robert Hart, the Chinese Customs Inspector, is trying to negotiate with M. Patenotre, the French Minister. The Foreign Council seem blind to the dangers of war and rebellion. Prince Chun trusts to boasting fanatics and to officials who conceal the defenseless condition of the coast. Ignorance, confusion, and treachery render the situation critical. The British officials have left the Chinese fleet.

There is a revolution in the State of Guerrero, Mexico. Hostilities have not yet commenced. Gen. Neri, with some troops, has advanced to suppress the rebels. The Government issued today regulations calling for extra precautions against the invasion of cholera both on the Pacific and Gulf coasts.

The commission of five sent to Havana from Madrid have prepared their report regarding the condition of Cuba and the question of selling it. The report is signed by only three of the Commissioners; the other two will make a minority report, and all five will leave for Spain next week. The following is understood to be a synopsis of the report: The majority of the commission are of opinion that the interests of Spain demand that she should be relieved of Cuba before an insurrection shall succeed or bankruptcy in the island should produce results like those of 1821-'25, when the Spanish-American colonies were wrenched from the other country. The report refers to the official declaration recently made at Madrid that the Government would never sell Cuba, and suggests a plan which has been elaborated by one of the Commissioners and the Spanish Minister at Washington. It is, in short, a plan to put Cuba temporarily into the hands of a foreign power, which would keep the island in trust. The report of the three Commissioners proposes, it is said, to sound the German Government, an intimate ally of Spain, and one desirous at present of having colonies, to discover whether she would consent to take Cuba for a period of twenty-five years. The island would, under this arrangement, be nominally Spanish, but her garrisons and administrations would be German. Spain, which cannot borrow in Europe, and which needs money and men to maintain her rights in the Mediterranean, should thus receive annually 100,000,000 marks, and would not be drained for the maintenance in Cuba of an army and an administration which and so costly. At the end of twenty-five years the Spanish people will care nothing for Cuba, and, instead of receiving possession of it again, the Government at Madrid would be able, without danger to its own existence, to cede it to the United States for a good round sum, especially as it would then have been benefited by the twenty-five years of German government.

July 13th.—At Whitehaven, England, Irish Nationalists made an attack on an Orange procession Saturday. Shots were exchanged, and several persons seriously injured. A telegraph boy was killed.

The Gladstone party refuses to accept the compromise offered by the Tory Peers through Lord Wemyss on the Franchise bill. This probably ends the negotiations for the present.

Another attempt to kill the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria was made today. The rails over which his train was to pass near Pola were removed. This was discovered in time to prevent a serious and perhaps fatal accident.

During the twenty-four hours ended at nine to night there were fifty-seven deaths from cholera at Marseilles and thirty-six at Toulon. Two Sisters of Charity were among the deaths at Toulon. The municipality of Marseilles is providing free kitchens for the relief of sufferers from the plague. Dr. Koch, the German expert arrived at Lyons today. He thinks cholera will reach there, but will appear in a milder form, owing to the excellent drainage of the city. The sanitary state of Paris is good. There are some choleric cases in the city, but none of an epidemic nature. The Minister of Commerce has written a letter to the Academy of Medicine, which will hold a meeting Tuesday, asking the academy to give an authoritative opinion in regard to the treatment of cholera cases, and the best measures to prevent the extension of the disease.

Patenotre, French Minister to China, has granted the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs a delay of two days, but if it then fails to give assent to the terms submitted by France Admiral Courbet's squadron will bombard the forts at Shanghai, and Admiral Lespes will disembark his forces at Foo-Choo and seize the arsenal there. Two ironclads have left Brest to reinforce Admiral Courbet.

Presidential electors meet today throughout Mexico to ballot for President. Diaz is certain to be elected. The term begins Dec. 1st. A great explosion of dynamite has occurred at Tamos, State of Tamaulias, Mexico, several houses and considerable railroad property destroyed, but no loss of life. The explosion is believed to have been accidental. Work on the extension of the International Railway commences next week.

Grover Cleveland of New York was chosen as candidate for president; and Thomas A. Hendricks of Ind., as candidate for vice-president, by the Democratic Convention, which met in Chicago, Ill., July 8th.

July 14th.—Some of the Orange rioters arrested at Belfast Saturday have been sentenced to nine months imprisonment.

There were thirty-two deaths at Marseilles last night and four today. Eleven deaths occured last night at Toulon. The heat is intense and the streets are deserted. All the cholera cases have been removed from the hospitals to the suburbs. The Mayor has been attacked by the cholera. The illumination in honor of the national fete has been prohibited. No deaths have occurred since ten o'clock this morning.

Three cases of sporadic cholera occurred at Alexandria, Egypt, today, one fatal.

Secretary Frelinghuysen today instructed by cable consular officers at London, Liverpool, Marseilles, Havre, Bordeaux, Bremen, and Hamburg, to at once appoint competent physicians to inspect all vessels and passengers departing for the United States from the ports mentioned. The consular officers referred to are instructed to refuse clean bills of health in all cases except upon the recommendation of a sanitary inspector that such bills be given. Consuls are instructed to report by cable any case of infectious or contagious disease known to exist on board a vessel at the time of her departure for the United States. This course is adopted in order that health officers in our ports may have timely warning of approaching danger and be prepared to take such measures as shall prevent the scourge from gaining a foothold in this country. It is probable that, under the authority conferred by the contagious disease clause of the Legislative bill, medical examiners will be appointed as attaches to American Consulates at French ports infected with cholera, whose duty it will be to report periodically upon the progress of the disease.

A manifestation took place at 10 o'clock this morning in front of the Continental Hotel at Paris, France, by the Alsatian societies, who tore down the German flags, threw stones smashed windows, and did other damage. A band of excited students, having visited the Strasburg monument, attacked the hotel and destroyed the German flag. Gamins assisted the students, who threatened to assault the proprietor of the hotel. The students returned tonight and did more damage, but were dispersed by the police, who are now guarding the hotel.

Fighting is imminent between the Hovas and France in Madagascar.

The yellow-fever is quite bad at Guyamas, Mexico, and several cases have appeared at Mazatlan. People are fleeing from the latter place, and the people of Hermosillo have put a quarantine on the Sonora Railroad line and examine every train, and oblige the cars to be fumigated before allowing them to pass. The fever this year appears to be confined to the Pacific coast, and as yet none has appeared at any of the gulf ports.

Thousands of Cattle are perishing in the State of Queretaro, Mexico, for want of water. They never had a worse drouth.

Advices from Chiautia, Mexico, state that the Huehuetal Revolutionists, who were some 200 strong, have been met and completely dispersed by a force of State cavalry. Advices from Guadalejara report that section in a terrible condition. Crime is rampant, and the Toleninto Government is only bent on self-aggrandizement. Advices from Japala state that an attempt to raise a revolution there and sack the stores, has been nipped in the bud. Five of the ring-leaders have been sent to San Juan Deuloa.

The Court of Errors in the case of Receiver Hobart, of the First National Bank of Newark, N. J., against Treasurer Dunnell holds that Dunnell is liable for the bank's losses incurred with his knowledge and assistance, though by direction and for the profit of the Cashier.

July 15.—The American Consuls at European ports have served notice on the ocean lines that no vessel which is not furnished with a clean bill of health at the port of departure will be permitted to enter any American harbor.

The cholera epidemic is spreading alarmingly at Marseilles and Toulon, and is extending into the adjacent country. Monday night there were thirty-five deaths in the former city and thirteen deaths in the latter, and seven deaths between ten and one o'clock yesterday. The Austrian, Italian and Spanish Governments are enforcing the quarantine against French vessels.

A Frenchman was shot to-day by the guards in the Spanish Pyrenees while trying to evade quarantine.

There have been two cases of cholera at Poltava, Russia, one of which resulted fatally. The Siberian plague is raging at Pskov. There have been twenty deaths already. Precautionary measures seem inadequate to prevent the spread of the disease.

The Pall Mall Gazette continues to threaten the British Lords, and says: "If the compromise on the Franchise bill is rejected the Liberals will not sheathe the sword until they exterminate the power which is incompatible with the government of modern England."

The citizens of Dongola have telegraphed the Khedive to send troops to their assistance. They offer to pay the expenses. A British officer, accompanied by an aid-de-camp of the Khedive; has been sent to Dongola to learn the true attitude of the Governor.

Of two hundred Turkish soldiers ordered from one of the Egyptian garrison towns to Assouan, in the Soudan, 130 deserted when the order was given. The other seventy deserted on arriving at Assouan. The Egyptian army appears to be utterly demoralized, if not wholly in sympathy with the Mahdi.

Granville, British Foreign Secretary of State, refused the request of Spain for a revision of the protocol of a commercial treaty between England and Spain. Negotiations, therefore, cease.

The Vatican has issued an appendix to the Freemasonry encyclical suspending for one year the obligation of Bishop to denounce secret societies.

The Senatorial election at Nevelles, Belgium, resulted in the choice of the Liberals.

A man giving the name of James Walker has been arrested at Glasgow, Scotland, on suspicion of being a dynamiter. He stoutly resisted arrest, attempting to shoot and stab his captors. Papers of a suspicious character, a revolver, and a cartridge-belt were found on him.

Gen. Diaz was formally notified of his unanimous election to the Presidency of the Mexican Republic. Patriotic and congratulatory speeches followed.

July 16th.—It is reported that 30,000 of the Mahdi's followers are marching on Dongola.

The deaths from cholera last night were twenty-two at Toulon, including the wife of Admiral Fisquel. Municipal-Councilor Alizard was attacked by the disease last night and died this morning. Rosseau, Minister of the Interior, and Herisson, Minister of Commerce, have arrived there. They visited St. Mandrier Hospital this morning. There were eleven deaths from cholera there since last night, including the Commissary of Police and the Chief Prison Warden.

There were twenty deaths from cholera at Marseilles last night and eight deaths from nine this morning to noon. The deaths there from cholera the last twenty-four hours were fifty-three. Total since the appearance of the plague, 578.

Gen. Merritt, the American Consul-General, has appointed a physician to examine vessels leaving London for the United States, for the purpose of ascertaining their sanitary condition.

The French Minister at Tien Tsin demanded the withdrawal of the Chinese troops from the frontiers of Tonquin and the payment of the indemnity asked by France. This demand was delivered to Tsung Li Yamen, who rejected it. The time allowed China by France for compliance with the terms she offered expires July 19th. War apparently is inevitable.

The Anarchists in prison at Vienna, Austria, make complete confession, admitting they were implicated in many murders and robberies the last few months. They say they were first induced to commit crime by reading in 1883 a sheet called the Rebel, in which the secret Anarchist committee appealed for funds.

Orders have been issued by the Austrian Government for the arrest of Mormon missionaries from Utah now in that country. A warrant has been issued for the apprehension of one Paul Hammer, of Nevada.

Private advices via Jamaica from the headquarters of the Cuban insurgents state: The insurgents under the immediate command of Agüero undertook an expedition against the plantations of certain persons known to be in favor of the Government. Although opposed by a strong detachment of regular troops, the insurgents, after a skirmish of two hours, drove back the forces and burst all the buildings and machinery on the Santa Maria and La Mercedes plantations. At the same time the band of insurgents in the Sagua district was attacked by a strong force of Government troops known as the San Domingo rascon. The insurgents, being entrenched in an almost impregnable position, repulsed the troops with the loss of three killed and several wounded. The casualties of the insurgents included one slightly wounded. The Captain-General of Cuba called a meeting of officers to concert a plan for successfully encountering the enemy in the field. Large numbers of troops are lost or demoralized by guerrilla warfare. The insurgents divide into small bands, scatter over a territory, and demoralize the regulars by false alarms and forced marches through swamps to find no enemy.

A woman who keeps a saloon at Marshalltown, Iowa, continued to sell liquor contrary to the prohibitory law. She was arrested Saturday and gave bonds, but still defied the law. The Sheriff attempted to arrest her yesterday. She resisted, drawing two revolvers on him. After he had secured assistance he managed to take her to the jail, but the people threatening to tear it down she was released. The woman's resistance is said to be instigated by a local brewery.

A Justice of the Peace named Barbooski has been arrested at St. Petersburg on the charge of plotting against the Czar's life. It is charged that he and his fellow-conspirators intended to blow up the palace at Warsaw with dynamite.

The excitement caused by the riot at the Continental Hall, in Paris, is intensified by the report that, thanks to the imprudence of a few so-called patriots, the French Government has been obliged to submit to a painful humiliation. Although several papers affect to disbelieve the fact, yet Prime-Minister Ferry yesterday morning did spontaneously call at the German Embassy, where he made a full and frank apology to Prince Hohenlohe. It was hoped this would end the matter, but the Ambassador, who received the Premier, was somewhat cold in his courtesy. He had received no instructions from Berlin, and could only promise to forward the apology to his Government. During the interview Ferry informed Prince Hohenlohe that M. Gallien, the Commissaire of Police, who tore down one of the German flags, would be dismissed.

Although it may suit Germany to pocket the affront to her flag in Paris there is some apprehension at Paris lest Prince Bismarck should retaliate quietly by encouraging China in her resistance to France. The sudden courage of Tsung Li Yamen is believed by many to be due to the hope of European support. It is rumored to-night that permission is granted the Chinese men-of-war now anchored in German harbors to leave for China under the German flag, commanded by Capt. Setelin and Meller.

Yellow-fever being at Mazatlan, Mexico, the Governors of the States of Colima, Senora, Jolisco, Sinolva, Gakaco, Gaireras, Chiopos, and Lower California, have been ordered to strictly quarantine that city.

Secretary of the United States Navy has received the following:—The Thetis, Bear, and Lock Gary arrived at St. John's to-day from West Greenland, all well. They were separated from the Alert 150 miles north during a gale, at nine p. m. June 22, five miles off from Cape Sabine, in Smith's Sound. The Thetis and Bear rescued alive Lieut. A. W. Greely, Sergeant Brannard, Sergeant Fredericks, Sergeant Long, Hospital Steward Beiderback, Private Connell, and Sergeant Ellison, the only survivors of the Lady Franklin Bay Expedition. Sergeant Ellison had lost both hands and feet by frost-bite, and died July 6, at Godhaven three days after amputation, which had become imperative. Seventeen of the twenty-five persons composing the expedition perished by starvation at the point where found. One was drowned while sealing to procure food. Twelve bodies of the dead were rescued, and are now on board the Thetis and Bear. One, the Eskimo Turvevik, was buried at Disco, in accordance with the desire of the Inspector of Western Greenland. Five bodies, buried in the ice near the camp, were swept away to sea by the winds and currents before my arrival, and could not be recovered.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

July 11.—A fire broke out in a bakery at Bradford, Pa., this morning. Mrs. Reibley and her two children and a Swedish servant girl perished in the flames. A gentleman named Clark, of Denver, Colorado, made a heroic attempt to rescue Mrs. Reibley. Two women were badly injured in leaping from the burning building.

At Como, Italy, an explosion in a powder factory killed six persons. A number were injured.

July 12.—Loss by fire at Winchester, Ont., $200,000. Richmond, Ky., $50,000.

A terrific boiler explosion occurred at Wolf's portable saw-mill, six miles from Millfield, O., yesterday, by which one man was instantly killed and several others seriously and perhaps fatally injured. The explosion occurred while all the men were near the mill, and the building was entirely demolished.

July 13.—A fire caused by lightning damaged the furniture factory of Martin Warren & Co., at Williamsburg, N. Y., to the extent of $300,000. A fire which broke out at Chattanooga, Tenn., early to-day resulted in the destruction of several stores. The total loss is estimated at $75,000.

Jerry Partrande, aged 60, and his son Frank, aged 19, were instantly killed, and Joseph Mascote fatally injured at Catlin's stonequarry, Burlington, Iowa, by a powder explosion. The men were tamping a charge consisting of a keg of powder for a blast, when it exploded. The Partrandes were blown sixty feet in the air. Mascotte was thrown fifty feet and buried under masses of stone.

July 14.—The small mission town of San Jose, California, was almost totally destroyed by fire last night. The loss is $50,000. The concentration mills of Estey & Hill, near Leadville, Col., were destroyed last night by fire. The loss is $22,000.

An avalanche at Mount Blanc, Switzerland, a few days ago overwhelmed a party of travelers. One person was killed.

By the fall of a brick wall on Lawrence street, at Lawrence, Mass., to-day Mary McDonough and Catherine Flaherty, children, were killed. Katie Horgan was injured. This morning, while a gang of railroad laborers were at work on an excavation near Parker, Pa., on Clarion River, the embankment caved in killing two instantly, and, it is thought, fatally injuring two more.

July 15.—A storm in Moravia, Austria, caused immense damage to the crops.

By the explosion of a boiler in Carter's sawmill at Harrodsburg, near Bloomington, Ind., Monday night, three men were instantly killed. Several others were seriously injured; one, it is feared, fatally.

July 16.—A large fire occurred in the grain stores at Geneva, Switzerland, Wednesday night, destroying an immense quantity of corn and flour.

The French Navigation Company's depot at Tonache was burned Wednesday night. Loss, 1,000,000 francs.

An express-train on the Manchester & Sheffield Railway was wrecked to-day. Twenty-five persons were killed and forty seriously injured. It seems an axle of the engine of the express-train near Penniston, broke, and the train jumped the track and fell through a bridge. The scenes under the bridge after the train had fallen were terrible to witness. The carriages were reduced almost to splinters. The groans of men and the shrieks of the women and children were heart-rending in the extreme. Some delay was experienced before the victims could be extricated.

By the capsizing of a rowboat on the Illinois River at Henry yesterday afternoon the Rev. L. O. Thompson, the Presbyterian clergyman at that place; his son, a boy of fourteen and a son of Dr. Bishop, of Medina, N. Y., who was on a visit to them, were drowned.

July 17th.—A fire at Alliston, Ont., yesterday morning destroyed eight stores and a foundry. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

During the week ending July 10, there were 184 business failures in the United States and seventeen in Canada.

Reports from Southern Minnesota as to the state of the crops are very satisfactory.

The New York dry-goods house of Halstead, Hames & Co. made an assignment July 11, for the benefit of its creditors. The liabilities aggregate about $2,000,000.

The Vera Cruz coffee market is dull. The Sierra Verde bean coffee is quoted at $1.50 to $1.75 per quintal and Cordova at $12. The customs receipts last month were 35 per cent less than in June last year.

A new oil well was struck July 12, twelve miles north of Pittsburg, Pa., on the Perryville road, by Elliott, McCallin & Co., who were boring for gas. It is believed to be an extension of the Baldrige belt.

Some 250 Italians brought into the Hocking Valley to take the place of striking miners have to be guarded by the police.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the grain trade, says: Thunder-storms prevalent during the week generally favored the crops. There is no fresh feature in the market. Values are slightly weaker. Sales of English wheat for the week, 26,607 quarters, at 36s 9d. Trade in foreign wheat is very dull and the market decidedly weaker, especially for American. The supply is becoming oppressive. The off-coast trade is largely supplied. A fair business was done at lower rates. There were forty-six arrivals and nineteen sales. Twelve cargoes were withdrawn, sixteen remained, and twenty cargoes are due. Flour is dull. Maize is quiet and unchanged. Barley is easier.

The crops in Prussia are unusually good.

Grasshoppers are destroying the sugar cane in the State of Vera Cruz, Mexico, in the vicinity of Cordova particularly. In several places of the State of Vera Cruz the locusts have destroyed every vestige of the standing corn, and the people fear starvation. In the State of Yucatan, so poor have they rendered the people that in many places they have been obliged to give up lighting the streets, the towns not being able to pay for the oil.

In the last year the freight account of the Vera Cruz Railroad has fallen off a third.

July 13, the plow-works of B. D. Buford & Co. at Rock Island, Ill., shut down, and about 600 men were thrown out of employment. The firm made an assignment to James M. Buford, Cashier of the Rock Island National Bank. The liabilities are placed at $400,000, but the assets, it is believed, will exceed that amount if time is given to realize on them. The failure is said to be due to dull times, the floods of the Mississippi River for the last two years, and the stringency of the money market. Some money is due to the workingmen, but that it is hoped will be promptly paid. The officers of the company expect that after a full statement has been made to the creditors work will be resumed.

Chicago elevators contained, July 12th, 3,625,981 bushels of wheat, 1,836,399 bushels of corn, 290,477 bushels of oats, 31,200 bushels of rye, and 32,465 bushels of barley. Total, 5,817,022 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 8,637,528 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock decreased 1,305,058 bushels, including a decrease of 622,805 bushels of wheat and 240,143 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 12,709,725 bushels of wheat, 5,253,157 bushels of corn, 2,669,958 bushels of oats, 268,762 bushels of rye, and 272,587 bushels of barley. These figures are less than those of a week ago by 1,709,197 in wheat and 944,571 in corn.

The total value of the produce exports from the United States last week was $7,073,000.

Brabender, the President of the defunct Erie Savings Bank, who was released on $100,000 bail some time ago, was arrested again July 15th on a warrant charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses.

According to reports from the various counties of California the loss caused by the June rains will aggregate 135,000 tons of wheat, amounting to 7½ per cent of the entire crop, and 600,000 tons of barley, or about twelve per cent of the crop. A large portion of the grain is lodged and the harvesting will therefore be expensive.

The singularly cold and unseasonable weather which has extended itself even as far as mid-summerday has had a disastrous influence on the crops in many parts of Italy, where the promise was exceptionally good. The wheat and the vines have suffered severely, the latter being in many places riddled by the hail, as if with grape-shot, and the former beaten down and washed about. The olives still give hopes of an abundant crop, but the entire harvest will be so much worse than was expected that American cheap corn, that bugbear to the European farmers generally, will probably be welcome in Italy this year.

Edward Yard Jr. & Co., lace merchants, of New York, failed July 16. The liabilities are estimated at $1,000,000. The value of the assets is not fully known.

At a mass-meeting of striking operatives held at Burnley, England, yesterday morning, it was decided to annul their agreement to accept an advance of five per cent in wages.

A letter from Santiago de Cuba describes the situation there as being no better than at Havana. Failures, extra-judicial arrangements, and the liquidation of commercial houses follow each

The Berlin Post says Bismarck has ordered engineers to prepare plans for a canal from the Baltic to the North Sea; also, that the necessary credits for the construction of the canal will be asked of the Reichstag at its coming session. other in rapid succession, and the branch office of the Spanish Bank there refuses to discount notes or advance money on sugars. Accounts from Trinidad, Cienfuegos, and other places on the southern and northern coast show an equally desperate condition of affairs.

An important telegraphic combination was consummated July 17. The Postal, Baltimore & Ohio, and Bankers' & Merchants' Companies agreed to pool their earnings and expenses for a period of twenty-five years. Hereafter the lines of the three companies will be under one management. The consolidated company will have control of 16,000 miles of pole-lines and 120,000 miles of wire, which will be operated in connection with the Bennett-Mackey cable.

The street-car drivers of Rochester, N. Y., to the number of 120, comprising every man employed, struck July 17, in consequence of the refusal of the company to discharge a "spotter" or detective who made alleged false reports and charges against some of their number. The Rochester cars are "bobtailed," and the driver performs the double duty of driver and conductor. When the cars are crowded they could not always collect every fare, and the "spotter" reported their failure to do so. This the drivers claim to be an injustice. The car company officials admit this, but refuse to discharge the "spotter" at the demands of the men. An effort to supply the place of the strikers proved unavailing.

A fine deposit of copper has been found under a spring in the San Diego Hacienda, State of Michsacan, Mexico.

Our labor should be regular and constant all through life, to enable us to enjoy the blessings of good digestion and sweet, sound sleep, whereby the fullest development of our mental, moral and physical growth can be obtained.

Farmers have an endless variety and ways of doing this more perhaps than any other class of people. The fertility of our soil, improvements in seeds, or plants and stock, buildings and general arrangement of our lands to economise labor, and produce the most, and among other things the planting of trees will insure warmest praise of those that follow us.

Goeth said that "no man with spectacles on nose would enter into a familiar conversation with a lady if he knew that women lose all inclination to speak confidentially with a man when they have to encounter a pair of glass lenses instead of a living eye." The glass seems to break and diffuse the current of sympathy that exists between two people in conversation.

Consider that you will never in this life be free from annoyances, and that you may as well bear them patiently as fret about them.

It is certainly the duty of every person to leave the world in better condition than he finds it.

RELIGION AND DOCTRINE.

He stood before the Sanhedrim:
The scowling Rabbis gazed at him,
He recked not of their praise or blame;
There was no fear, there was no shame,
For one upon whose dazzled eyes
The whole world poured its vast surprise.
The open heaven was far too near,
His first day's light too sweet and clear,
To let him waste his new-gained ken,
On the hate-clouded face of men.

But still they questioned, Who art thou?
What hast thou been? What art thou now?
Thou art not he who yesterday
Sat here and begged beside the way;
For he was blind.

—And I am he;
For I was blind, but now I see.

He told the story o'er and o'er;
It was his full heart's only store;
A prophet on the Sabbath day
Had touched his sightless eyes with clay,
And made him see who had been blind.
Then words passed by him like the wind
Which raves and howls, but can not shock
The hundred-fathom-rooted rock.

Their threats and fury all went wide;
They could not touch his Hebrew pride.
Their sneers at Jesus and his band,
Nameless and homeless in the land,
Their boasts of Moses, and his Lord,
All could not change him by one word.

I know not what this man may be,
Sinner or Saint; but as for me,
One thing I know, that I am he
Who once was blind, but now I see.

*They all were doctors of renown,
The great men of a famous town,
With deep brows,—wrinkled, broad and wise,
Beneath their wide phylacteries;
The wisdom of the East was theirs,
And honor crowned their silver hairs.
The man they jeered and laughed to scorn
Was unlearned, poor, and humbly born;
But he knew better far than they
That came to him that Sabbath day;
And what the Christ had done for him
He knew, and not the Sanhedrim.

SHALL THE JEWS BE GATHERED BACK TO JERUSALEM.

The following is from one who traveled in the Holy Land:

TECUMSEH, Neb., May 8th, 1884.
MRS. DANIEL JONES, Dear Madam:—

It gives me pleasure to answer such questions. 1st. The Jews are certainly gathering in there, that too under the most unfavorable circumstances. The country is not advancing so far as fruitfulness is concerned. That time is not yet come. According to Scripture, the curse must first be removed. Christ's return to this earth brings about the changes so much needed in that sin-cursed land. There are now about 25,000 Jews in Jerusalem alone.

Perhaps 100,000 in Palestine. My views of the return of the Jews to Palestine, I believe are based on the Bible. The resurrection and return of Christ is everything, and Israel's only hope. When he comes then he will gather his people, and rule over them; for he is King of the Jews, and will certainly not bring them all there before he is on earth to look after them in person.

Yours, very truly,

P. H. WINTERSTEEN.

Adventists claim they were gathered back in Cyrus' time. The following prophecy of Mrs. E. G. White, prophetess and leader of the Seventh Day Adventists, is found in a book called the Early Writings of Mrs. White, on page 63, which I have copied word for word.

"THE GATHERING TIME.

September 23d, the Lord showed me that he had stretched out his hand the second time to recover the remnant of his people, and that efforts must be redoubled in the gathering time. In the scattering, Israel was smitten and torn; but now in the gathering time God will heal and bind up his people. In the scattering, efforts made to spread the truth had but little effect, accomplished but little or nothing; but in the gathering, when God has set his hand to gather his people, efforts to spread the truth will have their designed effect. All should be united and zealous in the work. I saw that it was wrong for any to refer to the scattering for examples to govern us now in the gathering; for if God should do no more for us now than he did then, Israel would never be gathered. I have seen that the 1843 chart was directed by the hand of the Lord, and that it should not be altered; that the figures were as he wanted them; that his hand was over and hid a mistake in some of the figures; so that none could see it until his hand was removed.—Then I saw in relation to the 'daily,' Dan. 8: 12, that the word 'sacrifice' was supplied by man's wisdom, and does not belong to the text; and that the Lord gave the correct view of it to those who gave the judgment-hour cry. When union existed, before 1844, nearly all were united on the correct view of the 'daily,' but in the confusion since 1844, other views have been embraced, and darkness and confusion have followed. Time has not been a test since 1844, and it will never again be a test. The Lord has shown me that the message of the third angel must go, and be proclaimed to the scattered children of the Lord, but it must not be hung on time. I saw that some were getting a false excitement, arising from preaching time; but the third angel's message is stronger than time can be. I saw this message can stand on its own foundation, and needs not time to strengthen it; and that it will go in mighty power; and do its work, and will be cut short in righteousness. Then I was pointed to some who are in the great error of believing that it is their duty to go to old Jerusalem, and think they have a work to do there before the Lord comes. Such a view is calculated to take the mind and interest from the present work of the Lord, under the message of the third angel; for those who think that they are yet to go to Jerusalem, will have their minds there, and their means will be withheld from the cause of present truth, to get themselves and others there. I saw that such a mission would accomplish no real good, that it would take a long while to make a very few of the Jews believe even in the first advent of Christ, much more to believe in his second advent. I saw that Satan had greatly deceived some in this thing, and that souls all around them in this land could be helped by them, and led to keep the commandments of God; but they were leaving them to perish. I also saw that Old Jerusalem never would be built up; and that Satan was doing his utmost to lead the minds of the children of the Lord into those things now, in the gathering time, to keep them from throwing their whole interest into the present work of the Lord, and to cause them to neglect the necessary preparation for the day of the Lord."

In 2 Thes. 5:21, we read the following, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good," which seems to mean that we are to try the spirits by the rules God has given us in his word. At the present time spiritual deception abounds to an alarming extent, and doubtless this text has a special application here; for we are to "prove all things." Again, we read in Isa. 8:20, "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them." Hence we see that false prophets are to be known by their revelations, and the only standard by which to determine whether their revelations are good or bad, is the law of God. So we are brought to the law and to the testimony. True prophets will speak according to this word. This revelation of Mrs. White, leader of the Seventh Day Adventists, we will endeavor to test by the law and testimony; and if it will stand the test, it is a true revelation; if not it is a false one, and must be cast aside. In Luke 21:20-24, we read our Savior's prophecy concerning the destruction of Jerusalem; and that it should be "trodden down of the Gentiles until the time of the Gentiles be fulfilled." The destruction of Jerusalem occurred about the year seventy, and the Jews that were left after the siege, were dispersed abroad into all the nations of the earth, and they have been a hiss and a by-word for many years. In their long captivity the Jews have never lost sight of the promises of their return. They have made several attempts to return, but have never succeeded, because the times of the Gentiles have not been fulfilled.

To prove that the Jews are to be gathered, we will turn to Isa. 11:11, 16:

"And it shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people which shall be left from Cush and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the Islands of the Sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nation, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. * * * And the Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea, and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and smite it in the seven streams, and make men go over dry shod."

Here we can plainly see that an ensign is to be reared for the nations; for the dispersed of Judah, and the outcasts of Israel. The Jews are scattered among the nations, and are called dispersed. The ten tribes are called outcasts, because they are cast out from the knowledge of the nations in a land by themselves. We find in Worcester's History, page 342, the following:

"The history of the ten tribes subsequent to their captivity by Shalmanezar is buried in utter obscurity. The Jews, or subjects of the kingdom of Judah, after their seventy years Babylonish captivity, returned, 536 B. C., by permission of Cyrus, under Zerubbabel their governor, and rebuilt Jerusalem and the temple."

Again we read in Scholar's Hand Book, page 51:

"Shalmanezar took Samaria after three years' siege, and carried the nation into captivity, from which it never returned; hence they are called the Ten Lost Tribes."

This prophecy can have no relation to the Jews returning to Jerusalem after their Babylonish captivity, for the reason that the ten tribes have not dwelt in the land of Canaan since they were led captive by Shalmanezar, King of Assyria, who took them captive about B. C. 724, and Cyrus released the Jews from their "Babylonish captivity" about B. C. 536. So we can see that the ten tribes were led away nearly two hundred years before Cyrus gathered the Jews to Jerusalem and rebuilt the city; and as a consequence they could not have been there. Again, it reads of the dividing of the seven streams of some river, and men walking over dry shod. This can not be spiritualized, for in the following verse it says, "There shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left from Assyria, like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of Egypt." We all know that when Moses and his host crossed the Red Sea, they crossed it literally not spiritually, and if he crossed it literally, so also must the Jews cross those seven streams literally. They surely did not cross those seven streams when they returned from their Babylonish captivity to Jerusalem. If they did, the Bible and all history is silent as the grave on the subject. Jer. 16:14, 16, says:

"Therefore behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers. Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks."

It appears that when Israel uses the expression, "the Lord liveth which hath brought up our fathers out of the land of Egypt," they wish to express the greatness of God and his power on that memorable occasion. It seems that something greater was yet to transpire, something more glorious and wonderful than their deliverance out of Egypt; and this was to be their leaving the north country, and the lands where they had been driven, and returning to Canaan, the land God gave their fathers. That we may know when the time is fulfilled he is to send fishers and hunters to fish and hunt them up. If you will read Ezek. 36 and 39 chapters, you will find that God promised that Israel is to return from all nations whither they have been scattered, and be brought back to the land of their fathers. Jerusalem is to be filled with men, and the desolate cities of Judah are to be rebuilt, fenced and inhabited. The land is to be tilled until they will say, "This land that was desolate, is become like the garden of Eden." I would like to ask here if Cyrus ever rebuilt the desolate cities of Judea, and made the land look like the garden of Eden. There is no proof that he did. Again, we read in Ezek. 37:22:

"I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel: and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all."

It is a well known fact that the ten tribes and Judah have never been one nation upon the mountains of Israel since the day they were first divided, and that one king has not ruled them; so we can plainly see that this is still in the future. In the 25th verse we read:

"And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children forever; and my servant David shall be their prince forever."

Here again we see plainly, that the Jews are to gather back to Jerusalem at some future time; for David shall be their prince; and he has never been their prince since the Jews were divided. The Lord says: "And the heathen shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them forevermore!" When this gathering takes place, the heathen are to know it, and be convinced of the true God. Have the heathen been convinced of a true God? All will say no. So again we see this gathering must be in the future, notwithstanding Mrs. White's revelation to the contrary. It reads in Zech. 2:4:

"Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls, for the multitude of men and cattle therein."

We here see that Jerusalem is to be inhabited as a city without walls. Will some of our Advent friends inform us when Jerusalem was inhabited as a city without walls. Certainly not in Cyrus' time. We find in the Union Bible Dictionary, and also in Hand Writing of God, written by a Rev. Randall, that Jerusalem has always been a walled city. After the Jews are gathered back to Jerusalem, we read in Ezek. 38 and 39 chapters, that many nations are to come to Jerusalem to take away their gold and silver. While these nations which are called Gog and Magog are about to destroy the Jews, the Lord will rain down great hailstones and fire and brimstone upon them, and destroy them. The weapons of their enemies shall last the cities of Israel seven years for fuel; and it will take the Jews about seven months to bury their enemies. If the Jews are not to gather back to Jerusalem, when did this event transpire? In Ezekiel 39:21-29, he says:

"And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them, so the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day forward. And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity, because they trespassed against me; therefore I hid my face from them, and gave them into the hands of their enemies, so fell they all by the sword, according to their uncleanness, and according to all their transgressions have I done unto them, and hid my face from them; therefore thus saith the Lord God, now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name; after that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses, whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid. When I have brought them again from the people and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them, in the eyes of many nations; then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, who caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen; but I have gathered them into their own land, and left none of them any more there; neither will I hide my face any more from them, for I have poured my Spirit upon the house of Israel; saith the Lord God."

This prophecy has never been fulfilled, for we see that the heathen are to know that the house of Israel went to captivity for their iniquity, and are gathered again by God after being punished, and the house of Israel will know it was their God that defended them, and that he will hide his face no more from them; but instead will pour his Spirit upon them. Again, in Zec. 10: 10, we find this:

"I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of the land of Assyria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and places shall not be found for them."

We notice in this prophecy that it was given about B. C. 487, and Cyrus gathered the Jews to Jerusalem about B. C. 536; so this prophecy was given forty-nine years after the Jews returned to Jerusalem, so it can have no reference to that; again we read, "and places shall not be found for them." This certainly refers to the future, for the day never has been that there was not room for the Jews in the land of their fathers. In the 12th, 13th and 14th chapters of Zechariah, we read that the Jews are to be brought down very humble, because of great calamities and troubles which will come upon them immediately before the coming of the Messiah; for all nations are to come against them to battle, and will take half their city, their houses will be rifled, their women ravished; but in the midst of these overwhelming calamities the Jews will become very humble, and call upon God to deliver them, and will say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Then the Jews will behold their Messiah standing; his feet standing upon the Mount of Olives to fight against those nations and deliver the Jews. He will destroy those nations, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in twain, and form a great valley, where the Jews will flee for protection. After their deliverance they will look at their deliverer and behold his wounded hands and sides, and will say, "What are these wounds in thine hands?" His answer will be, "Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." Then they will look upon him whom they pierced, and shall be in bitterness for him. "In that day there will be great mourning in Jerusalem. The house of David apart, and their wives apart, the house of Nathan apart, and their wives apart, the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart, the house of Shimei apart, and their wives apart, every family apart, and their wives apart." But there will be an end to their mourning, for he will forgive them for all their iniquities, and Jerusalem shall be a holy city from that time; and "Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited." We can here plainly see that this prophecy has never been fulfilled for these reasons:—That the Jews have never acknowledged that Jesus was the Messiah, that the Jews have never mourned with their families because they crucified Christ, that Jesus never has stood upon the Mount of Olives and never taken part in any battle for them. If our Advent friends claim this prophecy has been fulfilled, will they please tell me when the Jews looked at the wounds in Christ's hands, and side, and mourned and acknowledged him as the Messiah? This can not mean their return to Jerusalem after their Babylonish captivity; for Christ was not then born. We read in Zech. 14: 12:

"And this shall be the plague wherewith the Lord will smite all the people that have fought against Jerusalem: Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongues shall consume away in their mouth."

This did not transpire in Cyrus' days; and never has, but remains to be accomplished in the future. In A. D. 66, the Revelation of John was given, and in the fourth chapter, first verse, we read, "Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter." We notice here that these revelations were to come to pass hereafter. Now in the eleventh chapter of Revelations we still find more concerning the Jews and Jerusalem:

"And there was given me a reed like unto a rod; and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein. But the court which is without the temple leave out, for it is given unto the Gentiles; and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months."

This must mean Jerusalem, for we read in the eighth verse, "which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified." We find in this chapter that the city and temple will be rebuilt by the Jews, that the Gentiles will tread it under foot forty and two months. The Jews most certainly must be there, for it reads that the court is given to the Gentiles. During this time two prophets shall work mighty miracles, and hinder the Gentiles from utterly destroying the city; but after a time these prophets shall be destroyed, and their dead bodies will lie in the streets of Jerusalem three days and a half; then the Spirit of life will enter them, and they will stand upon their feet, and a voice from heaven will say, "Come up hither," and they will ascend up to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies will see them and tremble. Then will come the shaking that Ezekiel speaks of in his prophecy, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in twain. John says, "The same hour there was a great earthquake, and a tenth of the city fell." Jeremiah says concerning the city after it is rebuilt by the Jews:

"It shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more forever, and in that day there shall be one Lord, and his name one, and he shall be king over all the earth."

The next scene that is spoken of in Rev. 11: 14, 15, is:

"The second woe is past, and behold the third woe cometh quickly. And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever."

We can plainly see that these old prophecies must be literal, not spiritual in their fulfillment; and there is no difficulty in understanding them, for we can see that the Jews are to be gathered home and rebuild Jerusalem. Then other nations will come against them to battle, and their armies will surround the city and have great power for three years and a half, these two prophets by miracles will keep the city from being entirely destroyed. But in time they will be killed, and for three days and a half their enemies will rob and pillage the city; then the two prophets will rise from the dead, and ascend up to heaven. Then Christ will come, and the earth will become the scene of a great earthquake. Christ will overthrow the armies of the Gentiles, deliver the Jews, cleanse Jerusalem, cut off all wickedness from the earth.

In relation to Mrs. White's revelation, we have tried it by "the law and testimony," and it fails to agree with them. Isa. 8: 20.

"To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

Also 2 Cor. 13: 1:

"In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established."

We have taken Mrs. White's revelation, and by the mouth of Ezekiel, Jeremiah, Zechariah and John, condemned it and stamped it as false; for it does not agree with them. Now it is our duty to cast it aside as not coming from God; for Christ says, "Beware of false prophets. Ye shall know them by their fruits."—Matt. 7: 15, 16.

Before we close this article we will refer our Advent friends to what the press and travelers say in regard to the Jews gathering back to Jerusalem, and inhabiting their promised land. Louis VanBuren, a traveler in that country writes:

"The Jews have been returning to the Holy Land for some time, and are increasing, going to their beloved Canaan from many parts of Europe, Asia and Africa. They are making preparation to rebuild cities and build railroads. * * * I have seen much good country in Europe and America, but none to compare with Palestine; its fruitfulness is uncommon."

The London Saturday Review says:

"The Jews in Palestine. The land of their promised inheritance, is becoming their own in fee." Baron Rothschild holds a mortgage on Palestine as security for two hundred million francs loaned the Sultan of Turkey." If we compare the present time with eighty-three years ago, when the Sublime Porte permitted only three hundred to live within the walls of the Holy City, the change is remarkable." "The Jews after the restrictions were removed, bought all the land which could be obtained within the gates, and have built entire streets of houses without gates. Two journals have been started. The Venetian Jews have given sixty thousand francs to found a school of agriculture, and in evidence of a progress that shows divine care and intervention, the number of Jews has doubled in about ten years."

A correspondent of the London Times, who was lately there, says:

"Every where, from Dan to Beersheba, I saw evidence of Jewish return and the renewed energy and activity of the Jewish race. As a people the Jews are flocking back to the land of their forefathers in great numbers, and from all parts of Europe. In Jerusalem and its neighborhood, particularly, every plot of ground for sale is eagerly bought by them."

By our News Summary it will be seen that the Jews are immensely rich. Ezekiel, chapter thirty-eight, shows that there will be great wealth in Palestine when they return, so as to be the envy of "Gog and many people with thee." Mr. Conway, the author and traveler, sees in the present emigration of Jews, "the probable foundation of a new nation." The London Examiner says, "that there has been no such organization and gathering of Jewish opinion since the dispersion of their nationality." Those eminent Jews, Rothschild and Montefiore, "have a number of schools, a hospital, and other institutions at Jerusalem, and have added a printing press, from which a work, treating on the Holy Land, has been issued, the first book ever published in Palestine." A German Jewish paper says, "figs, lemons, &c., grow wild, the country would produce the finest fruits, and be a land flowing with milk and honey, with modern methods of agriculture."

"An important society has been formed in Europe, called the International Society of the Orient, to prevent the grave complication arising out of the Eastern Question, and to regenerate the East, by infusing therein the spirit of Western civilization. To accomplish this great result, the society, which enrolls among its members, such men as Rothschilds, and Montefiore, proposes to favor the development of agriculture, industry, commerce, and public works in the East, especially in Palestine; to obtain from the Turkish Government certain privileges and monopolies, chief of which is the gradual concession and advancement of the lands of Palestine; to distribute at cash prices such of those lands as the company receives, and to effect the colonization of the most fertile villages of the Holy Land. The Society, after having established its commercial bureau at Constantinople and other cities of the Turkish empire, will construct a port at Joppa, and a good road, or railroad from that city to Jerusalem. Upon the north of this road, the Society expects land to be ceded by Turkey, which they will sell to Israelitish families. These in turn, will create new colonies, aided by their Oriental co-religionists, and it is expected special committees will send thither Jews of Morocco, Poland, Moldavia, Wallachia, from the East and from Africa. The Society claim that the plan will reconstruct the holy places of Jerusalem in a Christian manner, put an end to the constant conflict between the great powers with reference to them, transform the ancient Jerusalem into a new and great city: create European colonies, which will become, in time, the centers, whence Occidental civilization will spread in Turkey and penetrate to the remote Orient. The Society is being rapidly formed, with the strongest influences, financial and political at its back. The Rothschilds, Mores, Montefiore, and other great capitalists among the Jews, are actively in sympathy with the undertaking. The plan has also the favor of more than one crowned head in Europe."

Kind readers, we think we have produced evidence enough from the Bible, press and travelers, to show that there seems to be in the minds of the people the thought that the time of the gathering of the Jews has commenced, and that they will be gathered back to Jerusalem to inhabit it. In conclusion we again say, Mrs. White's revelation is false.

WORKERS AND DRONES.

THE Church of Christ is like a beehive. It is composed of two classes, workers and drones. The drones were baptized, and received the laying on of hands; but since then have taken no part or lot in the spiritual labor and enterprise of the church; in fact such members are a constant source of anxiety to the officers of the church, and the dormant condition of the branches, in many instances, is occasioned by this class. Indeed they hinder the church in its legitimate work of bringing souls to the knowledge of God. Hence they stand in the way of its rapid progress. Somebody must sustain by constant, punctual attendance, the services of the Lord's day, and the stated meetings for prayer and testimony. Workers love to be present at such meetings, because they realize that in so doing, they are following the example, of God's people of gone by ages, of whom it is said, "They met often, and spake one to another." It is evident that here they obtain strength "to walk and not faint, to run and not be weary," in the great spiritual race that is before them.

Drones on the other hand, are full of excuses. Sunday morning comes, "It is a little too hot," or a "little too cold;" a "little too cloudy," or "they are a little too tired;" and their pews are consequently vacant. But somebody must stand "the heat," "the cold," or "the storm;" the Elder in charge, and the workers, must not feel "too tired," or else the church must be closed for the day, and that would be a disgrace that even a drone would feel. The drones on prayer meeting nights find many reasons why they should not be present. It is only a prayer meeting. "Only a few will be in attendance," "I am tired of the same voices," "I can serve God just as well at home." Not only are the religious services to be sustained by somebody's presence, but by somebody's prayers and testimonies. These meetings have been appointed for that purpose. If there is no one to pray or to speak, then there can be no prayer or testimony meetings. Drones have been known to find fault with meetings, which they have attended. "The prayers were too long," "the remarks too commonplace," "the meeting on the whole was dull." They did not enjoy it. It never occurred to them that they were not any less responsible for the carrying on of the meeting, than those who did speak or pray.

Somebody must sustain the Sabbath School; and in it, thank God, there is place for active work. Now who should sustain it? Is it not for old and young alike? Does it not present a field broad enough for all classes of minds? If you are apt to teach you can find place in it as a teacher. If you feel that first you would know more of God's word, you can take your place in it as a pupil. The Sabbath School is a part of the church, and ought to be supported by the church. Remember that all men are to be rewarded hereafter according to their works, and you can find plenty of work to do in the Sabbath School, which will redound to your glory in the life to come. It should be your constant aim in life to instruct the young in the things of God. Somebody must help furnish money for the support of the church, and for the furtherance of Christ's kingdom in the world. It takes money to build up Zion. Virtually the burden rests on a very few shoulders. Many are obliged to give beyond their means, in order to keep the gospel ball rolling. Why should this be left to a few? Are you not all interested in the souls of men? If so, why not join heart and hand with those who work for the salvation of men. Remember, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver;" and unto such it will be said, "Come ye blessed of my Father, enter into the joy of thy Lord." But unto the drones it will be said, "Depart ye cursed;" they knew the Lord's will, but did it not. Hence they shall be beaten with many stripes.

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

FALSE CHRISTS.

HISTORICAL CLIPPINGS, BY WILL KELLEY.

WE read in Matthew 24:22, 23, that after the tribulation that was to come upon Jerusalem, many false Christs should arise; "and if any man shall say, Lo here, or lo there, go not after them, or believe him not." In the days of the apostles, we find that the false Christs began to make their appearance; and the Jews were deluded upon every hand by those impostors, who professed to be the Christ. We read of Judas and Theudus in Acts 5:36, 37, and of the fate of all those who followed them; and of the Egyptian that led four thousand into the wilderness, and they all perished. Of Dosethus and Simon Magus, &c. Under the government of Felix the pretending Christs were so numerous that one was apprehended every day; and during the reign of Adrian, in the year 130, Barcochab, a bandit, raised an army of 200,000 men. He called himself the Christ, and he killed all that came under his power who did not acknowledge him to be the Messiah; and to such a length did he go, that Adrian led an army against him. The Romans took as many as fifty strong castles from him, and destroyed as many as 950 towns. The city of Bither was besieged three years before it was reduced. Between 500,000 and 600,000 Jews perished in this delusion. In the year 432, Moses of Crete, set himself up as the Christ, and he promised to lead all that would follow him safe through the sea to Canaan. Vast numbers threw themselves into the sea, and all were drowned. In the sixth century a man named Julian appeared in Canaan, and called himself the Christ. He and his followers did very much mischief; and in the end about 20,000 of them were slain, and as many were taken prisoners and sold for slaves. In 724 another false Christ appeared in Spain, his name was Serenus. He was followed by vast multitudes. In 831, in the east, a man pretended to be Moses risen from the dead, and he was followed by great multitudes. Between the years 1138 and 1200, there appeared nine or ten of those impostors: two in France, two in North West Africa, and one David of Moravia, and one near the Euphrates, Eldavid, and two others in Persia. Most of those occasioned a great deal of mischief to those of their nations in the places where they lived; and in Mesopotamia, Califf Nassar was so provoked with the people running after false Christs, that he scarcely left a Jew alive in his dominion; in the year 1258. Zechariah of Spain made great pretensions to be the Christ. He was followed in the year 1290 by another impostor named Moses; and from 1520 to 1660, there were three of those impostors in Europe. Two of them were burned by Charles the Fifth and the third was imprisoned for life. In the year 1651, a great number of Jews assembled in the plains of Ageda, in Hungary, thirty miles from the City of Buda. The object of this gathering was to discuss the question of the promised Messiah; and they examined the question, "Has the Messiah come; and if so, is Jesus of Nazareth he?" It is said that they were in a fair way of coming at the truth for awhile; but the Popish doctors, (Catholic Priests), present, so disgusted them with their worship of the Virgin Mary and other Saints, that they desisted from any farther inquiry. Probably the most noted of all the false Christs that appeared was Sabathai Levi. He was born 1625; and in 1766 he made a great noise among the Jews; and so great was the excitement produced in many cities of Europe, that the course of business was interrupted, and the Jews sent deputies to know the truth of his messiahship; and they returned with the cry, "'Tis he, 'tis he, and no other;" and multitudes of Jews followed him wherever he went. Prayers were offered up in the synagogue in his name, and he was publicly acknowledged as the Christ. Yet in a little while he turned Mahomedan to save his life. He afterwards died of a fit of colic. A man named Frank afterwards organized a sect out of the remains of the follower of Sabathi Levi. This sect was known by the name of Zoharites. This man lived in Vienna, in Burne, and in Offenbach. The style of his living was grand, and the pomp and extravagance of his processions astonished all Germany. No one knew, nor is it yet known, by what means he supported so much extravagance. His funeral was as grand as the mode of his living had been; but his family was reduced to want immediately after his death. He however embraced Christianity before his death. Mordeci appeared next. He made great pretensions to be the Christ. He would have suffered punishment if he had not fled into Poland.

Thus we can feel and see the force of the admonition of Jesus, Matt. 24:24, to his disciples: "Many false Christs shall arise, and say, lo here, or lo there." Believe them not, or go not after them. Let us be ever on the watch, and heed the words of Mary, the mother of Jesus, while at the feast in Cana: " whatsoever he [Jesus] saith unto you to do, do it."

ABOUT EARTHQUAKES.

SOME OF ENGLAND'S FORMER EXPERIENCE—POPULAR SUPERSTITIONS—ISOLATED SHOCKS—EARTHQUAKE YEARS.

ENGLAND has been visited by earthquakes several times, of which the following have been recorded: One was felt throughout England in 1089; another was felt throughout the country in 1274, by which Glastonbury was destroyed; the greatest known in that country up to that time occurred November 14th, 1318; a slight shock was felt in London, February 8th, 1749, and a severer one on March 8th; and the latest recorded, a very slight one in the north-western part of England, on November 9th, 1852. England, as will be seen from the above instances, has had little practical experience of earthquakes, and they loom, therefore, large with all the terrors of the unknown, added to those of the truly terrible. The mere word of a madman that an earthquake was to be expected on a given day was sufficient to send thousands of persons of wealth and fashion to spend the night of April 6th, 1750, in Hyde Park in tents and carriages. April 7th passed, however, and the trembling bivouackers returned home disappointed of their earthquake. In a country where such disturbances are frequent, few people would think it worth while to be robbed of a night's rest for such a trifle. Fondness for earthquakes is an acquired taste. Natives of land where the ground is seldom still, come to be quite proud of their volcanoes and mud spirts, as in New Zealand, and like to point out their phenomena to visitors, who, for their part, are perpetually on the qui vive lest the ground should suddenly get up behind their backs and swallow them. The natives of Catania were once excessively indignant because Sir John Herschel reduced the height of Ætna, the pride and boast of the locality, which it had twice destroyed, by some three thousand feet, with his scientific measurements.

Anaxagoras, starting from a purely scientific basis, argued four hundred years before Christ, that earthquakes and volcanoes were simply the results of underground lightning, and after an earthquake had been felt in London in 1749, men of science again began to conceive the "new opinion" that earthquakes were due to subterranean electricity. Anaxagoras, if they had lived a thousand years earlier, would have told them as much. But between these two dates the errors that prevailed upon the subject were frightful enough to produce the effect attributed to the earthquake at Meacum, which "caused the hair to stare for fear in all beholders." The "learned Arabicks"—Geber, Avicenna, and Almanzor—were accused by Sir Thomas Browne of believing the doctrine of the Koran, that earthquakes arise from the motion of a great bull, upon whose horns the earth is poised. Unfortunately, however, it happens that the Koran teaches nothing of the sort. But one ridiculous item of doctrine more or less in that volume makes little difference among so many, as queer opinions about earthquakes were common enough without dragging the "learned Arabicks" into the middle. Sir Thomas Browne himself appears to have suspected much of the true nature of earthquakes as it is understood at present, and left in his "Popular Errors" precise directions for their manufacture, so that in the next century Lemery, a famous French experimentalist, enjoyed the pleasure of seeing an earthquake—composed of sulphur, water, and iron filings, wrapped in a rag and burned underground—in full activity in his own back garden.

Last year will take its place in the grim category of those years in which the world has suffered from an abnormal visitation of earthquakes. There have been many such years in the history of the world, but probably few in which the results have been so disastrous. For example, there was the year 1703, when five thousand persons perished at Aquila, in Italy, and twenty thousand were overwhelmed in the ruins of the capital of Japan. Then there was an extraordinary manifestation of subterranean force, which well nigh shook the whole world, in the year 1755. This manifestation commenced at Quito, in the month of April. Having destroyed that city, it passed to the north of Persia, and there, on June 7th, slew forty thousand persons. After taking a somewhat circuitous route along northern Europe it suddenly made a descent upon western and southern Europe, concentrating its destructive force at Lisbon. In this final outburst not only was the town of Lisbon destroyed, but the whole of Spain was seriously affected, while the shock was felt in a greater or less degree over no less an area than five thousand miles. Another great earthquake year was 1819, a rapid series of shocks causing a fearful fatality in India, Genoa, Palermo, Rome, Aleppo, and Chili. 1851 again brought a series of earthquakes, the effects of which were felt almost simultaneously at Rhodes, in south Italy, and at Valparaiso. The Japanese capital was again destroyed in 1855, along with several villages in central Europe and one of the islands of the Moluccas. The last year in which any distinct connection could be traced between various shocks of earthquake was in 1867, when the disaster occasioned was appalling.

The science of earthquakes has not yet gone so far as to determine the exact nature of the connection between apparently isolated shocks occurring within a brief interval of time. Obviously the rate of progress which these subterranean disturbances make must be exceedingly great, and the energy they possess must increase as they proceed, if we accept the supposition that the disaster in Java, for example, has any relation with the one which has desolated one of the fairest islands of Italy. If one takes a map of the world and draws a line, commencing on the western shore of Great Britain, and proceeds thence by almost any route that may please the fancy through Ischia to Java and then on to Japan, it will be seen how very arbitrary a course the earthquake energy must take, assuming a connection between the various shocks. Moreover, any theory which may be based upon this supposition encounters a difficulty from the various degrees in which the energy declares itself at different places.

Strange to say, the frightful catastrophe which took place at Java was predicted three years ago by a scientist of the name of Delaunay, in a memoir presented by him to the French Academie des Sciences in 1881. M. Delaunay indicated August 2d, 1883, as the probable date of the cataclysm, and thus made a mistake of two days. In the same memoir he states that another and much more terrific convulsion of nature will take place in the same spot in 1886. A number of seismic observatories already exist in Italy, their purpose being to detect the presence of an abnormal electric energy in the earth, or the occurrence of subterranean movements, however slight. It has been said that if some such observatory had existed in the island of Ischia, sufficient warning would have been given to enable the inhabitants to leave their houses before the final catastrophe came. Upon this question of warning there is a good deal to be said which probably will discourage us from hoping for any great results. People generally rush to the two extremes of panic or indifference. Examples of both may easily be given. They abound in the literature of earthquakes and of other disasters.

In Yeddo, in the year 1783, a frightful catastrophe occurred, of which the worst effects might have been averted had the inhabitants taken heed of the abundant warning they received. The accounts state that at eight o'clock on the morning of July 27th, "a great wind arose, accompanied by subterranean muttering, which continued augmenting from day to day. The people, instead of realizing the possibility of an earthquake being near at hand, went about their ordinary vocations and lived in their houses altogether indifferent to what any one would have supposed was their obvious danger. On August 1st, five days after the first warning, an earthquake with loud thunders shook all the houses to their foundations, the intensity of the shocks each moment increasing, until the summit of the mountain was rent open and fire and flame appeared, followed by such an avalanche of sand and stones tossed into the air and carried to incredible distances that the darkness of night came on, the only light being the lurid glare of the burning lava and devastating flames. Vast chasms opened before the affrighted inhabitants in their flight, into which thousands in the darkness and panic, urged on by the streams of fire and showers of stones and ashes, are said to have been precipitated. The shocks did not entirely cease till the twelfth day, and were felt over a space of thirty leagues. Twenty-seven towns and villages were destroyed. The rivers, boiling and overflowing, inundated the whole country to complete the work of destruction."—New York Herald.

Elder C. H. Caton, the district president, gave in a financial report, which showed money received £5 rs. 6d., expended £4 7s. 1d., balance in hand 14s. 5d. By vote of the conference a committee to audit the financial report was then appointed, as follows: Brn. W. Potts, W. Price, J. W. Beale, which reported finding the financial report correct. The report was accepted by vote, and ordered to be spread on the minutes.

Public services were held on Sunday, 13th, in the Masonic Hall, which afforded excellent accommodation. The afternoon being devoted to testimony, and the evening to preaching, by G. S. Greenwood of Stafford, and C. H. Caton of Birmingham. The congregations were good, respectable, and attentive, and we have every reason to believe, through the testimonies of the Saints and the preaching of the word, that better understanding will be had of the Saints in Burton, and a better feeling manifested towards them. The conference was a good one in every sense of the word, and the arrangements for the same reflect great credit upon our brethren and sisters in Burton.

The authorities of the Church in America, the authorities of the English Mission, and the authorities of the Birmingham District, were sustained by vote.

Adjournment was had to Stafford Branch, August 2d and 3d, 1884.

Miscellaneous.

NEW BOOK FOR SALE.

Both sides; or, I.—The Claims of the Book of Mormon to a Divine Origin publicly canvassed and maintained. II.—The full Pretensions of the Disciple (Campbellite) Church Examined and Refuted. III.—The Divine Acceptance of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the stand-point of the New Testament.

The late Public Discussion held at Kirtland, Ohio, between E. L. Kelley of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and Clark Braden, the self-styled, "well known Author, Lecturer and Debater," and the champion of the Disciple (Campbellite) Church. Mr. Kelley furnishes his speeches for the work, and Messrs. Braden & Co. publish the work under the name and style of the Braden-Kelley Debate. Let the wise read both sides and be satisfied.

The attention of the public is especially invited to the published report of the celebrated religious discussion which took place between the above named parties, beginning February 12th, 1884, and closing March the 7th, following, occupying the time of eighteen sessions of two hours each. The work on the part of both disputants was carefully prepared, and particularly that of Mr. Braden for the Disciple Church, who claims to have been at great labor and expense, in order to do the most possible against the claims of the Book of Mormon, and what he termed "Mormonism." The public may therefore feel gratified, that in the possession of this work they will have the strongest arguments to be brought against the faith and hope of the Saints, whatever may be said in their favor.

The following are the questions discussed:— I.—Is the Book of Mormon of Divine Origin, and its Teachings Entitled to the Respect and Belief of all Christian People? II.—Is the Church of which I, Clark Braden, am a member, (the Campbellite Church), the Church of Christ, and Identical in Faith, Teaching, Organization, Ordinances, Worship and Practice, with the Church of Christ, as it was left Perfected by the Apostles? III.—Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Fact the Church of God, and Accepted with him?

The discussion of the first proposition occupied ten sessions. The time of four sessions each was devoted to the second and third questions. No person who desires to be posted upon the questions discussed can afford to be without this work. In the consideration of the proposition relating to the Book of Mormon, the proofs brought in its support are simply overwhelming, as against the enumerated tales and commonly published newspaper stories and neighborhood gossip brought and relied upon to oppose it.

1.—It was shown to be a popular and delusive error, that God never revealed his will to any people but the Jews; and that, although he created man to dwell upon the face of the whole earth, he left all without any communication of his will, or divine precept to guide and direct their moral and religious natures, except in the little country of Palestine.

2.—That the idea that all inspiration, spiritual power, and the quickening influence of the Holy Spirit were confined to the Eastern Continent, and the people of the first century was truly, in the full sense of the word, Atheistic and anti-Christian.

3.—That the Book of Mormon is a work that is in every particular so far as doctrinal principles and moral precepts are concerned in harmony with the teaching and instruction of the New Testament Scriptures.

4.—That the object of the book being to convince persons who know not God, that Jesus Christ was indeed the Christ, the Son of God, manifesting himself in the flesh, that no persons claiming to be Christians should be found fighting against the work.

5.—The many prophecies of the Bible pointing to the nation of which the Book of Mormon is a History, and the character and object of the work itself are marshaled, and may be studied at will by the critical reader.

6.—The most full and complete line of evidences ever published in this country in a single work of the discoveries in science and archaeological research were brought to corroborate the statements of the book, and will be easily attained by the reader.

7.—The Spaulding Romance, which has for so many years been on the lips of the enemies of the book, and which was set up as a defense to the claims of the Book of Mormon by Mr. Braden in the nature of an alibi, was shown to be utterly without foundation in fact, and newspapers, periodicals, gazetteers, encyclopedias and histories, which have so long contained voluminous statements of the "Spaulding Story" must absolutely read and stand corrected, or be found sitting in the darkness when this evidence fairly adduced, is turned upon them.

Few men will ever read candidly the discussion of the Second Proposition and remain in full faith and confidence in the Campbellite Church thereafter. The discussion should be in every household possible to place it. The people already have all the stories Mr. Braden has been able to collect and spin out against the Saints. Give them the other side, and let the work go into the hands of every Latter Day Saint.

N. B.—Mr. Braden, after agreeing in writing that each should have an equal and fair showing in the publication and circulation of the said discussion, has seen fit, without even a consultation with me, to issue a Circular Notice, announcing the publication of a "Supplementary Volume to the Debate," to be issued at the same time.

This I take to be a confession on his part that he has not met my arguments in the discussion, and that he hopes to counteract the force in another way. But such an infringement I shall not permit to pass unnoticed, and therefore, announce the issuance of a Companion Volume to his "Supplementary," which will be ready for distribution in about sixty days after the Braden publication. This will contain:

1.—A full and complete review of the Braden "Supplementary Volume."

2.—The full and complete history of the scheme to destroy the validity of the claim made by the Book of Mormon, under the title of the Spaulding Story.

3.—An article showing the claims of the Book of Mormon to a place in the Christian Religion, and its necessity in the publication of the Gospel of Peace.

5.—The attitude of the religion, and Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to the Government, and the noble and active part many of the leading members of the Church took in the preservation of the Government during the late Civil War.

6.—A full account of the work done by the Church against Polygamy before the Congress of the United States: In the years 1866, in the year 1872, and in the year 1881 and 1882.

7.—An account of the work of the Reorganized Church in reclaiming persons from Polygamy in Utah, and breaking the power of that Institution, as held over its churches in many places in Europe, since the year 1860.

8.—A publication of such Revelations as are contained in the Book of Commandments as have been charged to differ in any respect with those in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

The book will be eminently one to be distributed to the people, to set out properly the claims and positions of the Saints, and that ought to be placed in the hands of your neighbors to read. It will contain many things not possible to outline in this announcement, and of a character to interest our friends and enemies, as well as ourselves.

The Braden-Kelley debate can be had as follows: Cloth $2.00. Stout Paper Covers $1.25. The work is large, containing about 400 pages of solid reading. The Companion Volume same prices, but a discount of twenty-five per cent on this to all persons buying both volumes from Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa. Liberal terms to Agents. Send moneys and applications for books direct to Joseph Smith, Lamoni, Iowa.

E. L. KELLEY, Kirtland, Ohio.

AID FOR THE FLOOD SUFFERERS.

Lydia Jones $2, Ann Davis $5, L. R. Devore $1, Sarah Askin $1, Ella Devore $1, Calvin Hughes $1, a sister of Pecatonica, Ill., 50c. Wm. Schade and the Saints of Burlington, Iowa, $4. Total $15.50.

To brethren and sisters from whom we have received the above aid in our need, we return our thanks for sympathy and love. It has been a hard trial on us as a branch, after building our church, being left in debt on it; losing our work by the flooding of our mines; losing all of our tools, until the water is pumped out, and that will be some time to come. Hence some of the brethren that did go from home to work had to buy tools to work with. The pushing debt on us now (or the church) is only fifty dollars. If we had this paid we could get along with the balance, for we have some time to pay it. That all will work together for good to all them that love this great latter day work, is the prayer of your brother,

THOMAS MATTHEWS.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
Geo. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings. Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY; Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds,
WM. ARD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSES. JOHNS & ORDWAY; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
W. P. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds,
E. W. CATO, SEN.

BRO. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, August 2d, 1884.

THE Braden-Kelley debate will contain such ample refutation of Mr. Braden's onslaught, and so much in defense of the primitive faith as held by the Reorganization; and such unanswerable arguments against the claims for divine origin and sanction of the church to which Mr. Braden belongs, that every elder, and active Saint should have a copy. The contrast in style and argument of the two disputants will be so strikingly in favor of Bro. Kelley's side, that the friends of Mr. Braden, and the Disciple, or Christian Church can not afford to permit its free circulation among them, notwithstanding Mr. Braden's loud praises in his own behalf. There is altogether too much egotism and self-assertion in Mr. Braden's half of the book and such will be the inevitable verdict of those who read it, with few exceptions.

The work will be on sale at the Herald Office from and after its publication. See advertisement in HERALD for July 26th.

Agents wanting to handle the book among the Saints will confer with Bro. E. L. Kelley, as his address may be given.

REV. CLARK BRADEN is out in a challenge to the Reorganized Church, the pith of which we give below:

Let the managements of the Missouri Republican of the Globe-Democrat and of the Chicago Times each select an expert compositor, and let them constitute a committee of experts. Let the Mormon committee meet Maj. J. H. Gilbert, of Palmyra, N. Y., before this committee. Let Major Gilbert examine the manuscript now in David Whitmer's hands. Let the committee examine it without hindrance, and then let the committee publish a report on these issues:

1. Is the manuscript now in possession of David Whitmer the manuscript that was handed to Maj. J. H. Gilbert by Joe Smith and the manuscript that was used by Gilbert in setting the type for the first edition of the Book of Mormon?
2. Is it entirely in the handwriting of Oliver Cowdery, or in the handwriting of several persons?
3. Is it now punctuated, and to what extent? Do sentences now begin with capitals, and to what extent? Do proper names begin with capitals, and to what extent? To what extent are words misspelled?

4. Has the manuscript been changed since it was originally written, and to what extent; and has it been done since Gilbert returned it to Smith?

5. Are the blunders and atrocities that are in the Book of Mormon (the first edition) in the manuscript?

The writer will bear all the expenses of Maj. Gilbert and of the committee of experts; let the Mormons bear their own expenses.

Now, here is a fair, satisfactory test of the issues between the parties making these charges against the Book of Mormon and its defenders. Dare the Mormons face such a test?

CLARK BRADEN.

This appeared in the St Louis Republican, and some other papers about at the same time. To it Bro. E. L. Kelley made an excellent answer in the Republican.

We give it notice for this reason, we wish Elder Clark Braden to comprehend, if he can, that when he states that Bro. E. L. Kelley was selected by "the officials of the Josephite Mormons to represent them" in the late debate between Bro. Kelley and Clark Braden, at Kirtland, Ohio, he has stated what is false. The officials of the Reorganized (Josephite) Church had nothing to do with originating the debate between Elder Kelley and Braden, either at Wilber, or Kirtland. The first was arranged between Levi Anthony, R. M. Elvin and others of the brethren at Wilber, Nebraska, on the part of the Wilber Branch, and L. L. Luse and others on the part of the opposition, Methodists and Disciples at Wilber, as we suppose.

The discussion at Kirtland was an afterthought between the men themselves, for reasons satisfactory to them, we suppose, and the authorities of the Josephite Church had nothing to do with its origination, agreement, or arrangement; they were not even consulted by either Mr. Braden, or Elder Kelley whether they would consent to let Elder Kelley debate.

Mr. Braden insultingly demanded of Bro. Kelley after he had agreed to debate at Kirtland that he should appear as the representative man, and "the best and the last that Mormonism could do." We directed Bro. Kelley to assure Mr. Braden that if in his "war to the knife" attack on us, he should succeed in slaughtering Bro. Kelley, in the discussion, his blood if it did not spring up dragon's teeth, as in the fable, it would spring up able Elders; and he would have the entire phalanx to meet and overcome. We also requested Bro. Kelley to demand that if he was to be considered as the representative champion of the "Mormon Church," that Mr. Braden must be endorsed as the representative champion of the Disciple or Christian Church of which he was a member. Whether Mr. Braden continued to insist that Bro. Kelley must be considered the "forlorn hope" by us "poor deluded Josephites," we do not know. We were not called upon to furnish credentials. Nor were we given to understand that the Christians endorsed Braden. We stood by Bro. Kelley as we should, and as we would have done any other Elder who should have withstood Mr. Braden. We prayed for and exercised care for him, for the sake of the cause he was presenting and defending, and felt an assuring confidence that the Master would take care of his cause and his servant in the conflict.

Mr. Braden did not score a victory as he expected. The ghost of Mormonism would not "down at his bidding." The sound facts and arguments of the truth could not be brushed aside by his tissue of slurs and badinage. The faith and its principles presented an array against which his virulent attack upon the dead heroes of its early defense in Ohio could make no headway. His Christianity was not equal to a clear comparison of principle and church foundation and policy.

Before the authorities of the Josephite Church can be drawn into a recognition of Clark Braden's right to such notice as he seeks in the challenge quoted above, he must show that he is a recognized and acknowledged servitor in the ranks of the church of which he professes to be a member. When he does this it will be time enough to get on our running toggery so as to get away from theological slaughter.

Another reason. Mr. Braden should know that the Josephite Church does not control the manuscript of the Book of Mormon. It is in the possession of Elder David Whitmer, in what he deems a sacred trust, and only those whom Elder Whitmer would permit could have access to them. He very kindly permitted an examination by the committee appointed by the Reorganized Church, under conditions which he dictated as he was led to make; and to which the committee cheerfully agreed. It is doubtful if a party such as Mr. Braden proposes would be permitted access to the manuscripts, though we are not authorized to speak for Elder Whitmer and his family. They are not members of the Reorganized Church, and take care and control of their own affairs, which is right and proper. They are believers in the Book of Mormon, however, and are anxious that the truths of the gospel as sent by the angel to Joseph Smith should be taught and triumph in the world, as by it they believe man will be saved with an everlasting salvation. They have no love or regard for enemies to the truth, and do not care to deal with them touching the faith.

Another reason; the manuscripts have been seen and examined by dozens of visitors within the last few years. Elder Whitmer has constantly averred his belief in the book, and verified, over and over again, what he testified to in the testimony found in the Palmyra Edition, and subsequent issues of the book. The manuscript was placed in his charge by Oliver Cowdery's widow for safe keeping. He has reason to know that it is the only manuscript in being, and the one from which the book was set. Any errors of grammar, spelling, or gross misuse of words, found in the Palmyra edition, (with the exception of typographical errors), must appear in the manuscript; therefore any objection which is worthy to be urged against the book itself must include the manuscript. Nothing would be lost to the friends, or gained by the foes to the book by the examination proposed by Mr. Braden.

It is to be presumed that the committee, appointed as they were, will do their duty fairly. That however much any one of them might be disposed to cover up what he could not explain, the safeguards proposed by Elder Whitmer, acquiesced in by the committee and carried into effect by all engaged in the examination would preclude any such attempt being made.

Mr. Braden has shown a tendency to falsify both in regard to the appointment of Bro. E. L. Kelley to discuss with him, and the object of the appointment of the committee by last April session of Conference, and hence not to be trusted by those whom he has assailed in his "war to the knife" against "Mormonism."

OUR visit to Richmond, aside from the work of the committee, was a very pleasant one. We visited the locality of the grave of Oliver Cowdery, but, as the cyclone that visited Richmond and vicinity some years ago took the grave yard in its track and swept everything over, and utter neglect to keep the grounds in order since has permitted a dense thicket of locust, briars and weeds to grow up, it was out of the question to find the grave, we did not pay other tribute to the memory of the quiet sleeper than to try to find the spot where he lay. It is a half mile north of the town on a bit of ground which slopes gently to the south lying adjacent to the main road running out of Richmond to the north. He died in 1849, or 50, maintaining his testimony to the Book of Mormon to his latest moment.

General A. W. Doniphan, whom we met, at his hotel, the Hudgins House, told us that he knew Oliver Cowdery well, and knew him till his death; he spoke in good terms of him as a man and as a citizen.

We called upon the General the evening before we left Richmond, and had an hour's very interesting chat, in which the General related several incidents which occurred during the days that the Saints were citizens of Clay, Caldwell, Ray and Davies counties. He conducted the defence of O. P. Rockwell, at the time of his arrest for the attempt to assassinate Gov. L. W. Boggs, and for which charge Rockwell was acquitted. There was no evidence connecting Rockwell with the offense, and the General believed him to have been innocent. This was assuring, for so much has been said by those who have assailed the Saints about Rockwell as the agent of Joseph Smith in the outrageous attempt to assassinate the governor of the state of Missouri, that the statement of a man intimately acquainted with the affair at the time of its occurrence, tends to remove the fear that guilt might attach to them against whom it has been charged.

The General was also present and attending to the examination of Sidney Rigdon at Liberty, Missouri, when on a writ of habeas corpus he was before Judge King. Elder Rigdon had few if any friends there, about one hundred were gathered, the most of them "Mormon cat-drs," as they were called, and terribly excited against those under arrest and in custody. After the counsel had argued the legal conditions of the case, Elder Rigdon desired General Doniphan to inquire of the Judge if he might speak in his own behalf. The Judge said "certainly." Elder Rigdon rose and began; and, says the General, "Such a burst of eloquence it was never my fortune to listen to. At its close there was not a dry eye in that room, all were moved to tears." At its close the Judge said: "The prisoner is discharged the custody of the Court, Mr. Rigdon is free to go his way."

The effect of Elder Rigdon's words was such that one of the leading men of the crowd picked up his hat, and turning to the bystanders, said, "We came here determined to do injury to this man. He is innocent of crime, as has been made to appear. And now, gentlemen, out with your money and help the man to return to his destitute family." He circulated the hat and the money was showered into it till he placed a hundred dollars in Elder Rigdon's hands, with the remark, "Now old gentleman, make the quickest possible time to your family, who need you and your help."

It must have been a remarkable scene, for as General Doniphan related it, the remembrance of it lit up his aged face with a glow of animation pleasant to witness.

In answer to the question whether the anti-slavery sentiment which prevailed among the Saints was in any wise at the bottom of the opposition and persecution to which they were subjected, he stated that there could be little doubt that in Jackson county and probably some others, the real reason of the hostility to the church was pro-slavery dislike to the anti-slavery sentiment of the Mormons. Religious bigots opposed to the doctrines of the Saints made the position of the Saints on the slavery question the pretext of their hate.

In answer to the question, Were the leading men among the Saints such bad men as it was urged that they were, the General stated that they were not. He was intimately acquainted with many, had some of them for neighbors, and a "nicer lot of men I never knew; kind, neighborly and upright."

Can there be need of better defense for men maligned and persecuted by lawlessness than to have such tribute paid to the memory of business and neighborly relationship with them by one who was in circumstances to know them.

On Monday evening the 14th, Bro. W. H. Kelley and the Editor were carried by Bro. E. B. Mullin to the school-house two miles from Richmond, where Bro. Alexander and T. W. Smith spoke on the Sunday before, and where the Olima Branch, presided over by Bro. David Frampton, meet for services. The night was warm, the hour late, owing to farm work in the season of harvest, yet the house was fairly filled, some however preferring to stop outside but within hearing distance, on account of the heat. Before services Bro. Kelley and self were called to administer in laying on of hands to Mrs. Clyde and Carter, lying at a neighbor's house close by the meeting place,—both were benefitted, and attended meeting the next evening. We here saw a number of the brethren, among them J. B. Belcher, Carter, Short, Hawkins and others. We spoke with unusual liberty that evening, feeling that the Master's Spirit was taking cognizance of the effort. Bro. W. H. Kelley led in prayer, and we had an excellent time together. Bro. Kelley spoke the next Tuesday evening, and was also blessed in his effort. The people seemed to enjoy the visit made to the place.

WE met the Saints of Independence, Missouri, Branch, July 13th, 1884, at their chapel lately dedicated, and enjoyed the morning and afternoon service with them there. In the evening, according to appointment made by Elder F. G. Pitt presiding, we spoke in Wilson's Opera House to a very large congregation, who listened attentively. This visit was made by request of the brethren; and we run down from Richmond, Saturday evening, returning to Richmond on Monday morning.

An excellent spirit is manifest at Independence. A degree of spiritual quiet and excellence obtains, and a better effort is being made to improve in all legitimate directions. There is a band of singers earnestly striving to become proficient in making melody; a sister, daughter of Bro. F. C. Warnky, plays the organ for them, and together they are certainly doing excellently well.

A number of the Saints are engaged in business, and are succeeding well; a degree of prosperity is granted to them and they are striving to be worthy of it. Bro. White and Barbee, from Edenville, Iowa, and Bro. James, formerly at Pittsfield, Illinois, are in the grocery and provision trade, and have a share of patronage. They have purchased dwelling places and are improving them, Bro. James having one of the neatest cottages on South Liberty street, that we have seen lately, built by Bro. Jessamine, carpenter and builder. Bro. J. H. Lee, from Myrtle Creek, Oregon, Bro. S. Maloney from Galesburg, Missouri, Bro. Thorby from London, Ontario, Bro. J. C. Hardman from Harlan, Iowa, Bro. Ordway from Peoria, Illinois, Bro. T. W. Smith from Stewartsville, Missouri, have lately moved in and are making, or have purchased homes. We saw Bro. Wm. Gaylord and wife from Plum Hollow, Iowa, who were looking out for a farm near the city. We also met Bro. A. Munns from California, taking notes for a settlement in the regions about. We heard it rumored that Bro. Thomas W. Chatburn has bought the mill at the depot on Liberty street crossing of the M. & P. Railway, and proposes to run it. Bro. R. May has a cooper shop close by, and is expecting to make 30,000 barrels this Fall.

BRO. E. ROWLAND, of Bevier sends us a Macon, Missouri, Democrat of July 11th in which occurs the following items from Bevier, where Bro. Rowland lives.

The W. C. T. U. has downed the town board. In the fight for license, the saloon lost Tuesday. When S-atan of drink was defeated two Christians hurried to the res-cue. A prominent Congregationalist, and a Mormon helped them out.

The Mormon referred to is Bro. Ephraim Rowland.

We sincerely hope that in every locality where Latter Day Saints dwell, the sale of intoxicating drink as a beverage, may be prevented so far as the Saints can by voice, vote and aiding to enforce the law conduce to such prohibition. Saints know that drunkards nor drunkard makers can enter heaven, and don't belong among the pure in heart, the Zion of God.

MISS KATE FIELD makes report concerning the means sent to the apostate Mormons in Colorado in the following terse fashion:

Editors Tribune:—The kind men and women who sent subscriptions to the Colorado Apostate Fund, will be glad to learn that I have just received vouchers for every dollar sent to Manassa. I have also received a letter from Prof. Marcus E. Jones, who has recently visited the Colorado Mormon settlements, stating that every word written by W. L. Ball, F. B. Moyers and other apostates, is true.

Yours faithfully,
KATE FIELD.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Joseph Lakeman writes from Grand Manan, N. B., late date:

I am just home from Boston, spent the last Sabbath with the Highland Saints; met with Bro. Bond for the first time, and am well pleased with him. I was disappointed in not meeting you at the Jonesport conference. I am well and full of hope for the success of the latter day work.

Bro. Frederick Sheen who emigrated from Lamoni, to Dakota, last spring writes from Highmore, that Territory, July 18th:—

We have meetings most every Sunday, from house to house; father preaches. He tried to get the use of the little chapel in Highmore, but one of the trustees told father that he thought they did not want to hear any Mormon doctrine there. We will probably get a school-house built in this district this fall, and then I think we will get the use of it. We organized a Union Sunday School last Sunday. One Mr. Summers, superintendent; father as assistant; myself secretary and treasurer. The school will be held from house to house. Quite a number of strangers come to the preaching.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

UNCLE WILLIAM B. SMITH arrived at Lamoni, July 3d and was made the guest of his nephew the Editor of the HERALD. He has visited some of the Saints, some of whom are old acquaintances. He spoke for the Saints at the Old Chapel and also at the new near town. His health is fair, considering his age. He has been speaking in different points in the state, having been from home since May 1st.

Sr. Rhuamah Vincent writes from Waterbury, Connecticut, July 16th, and desires that the Saints will pray for her that she may succeed in her gospel warfare.

In minutes of Kent and Elgin District, published on page 471 of present volume of HERALD, read, "he report the amounts received by him," instead of, "they report," etc.

Correspondence.

UTICA, Neb., July, 1884.

Editor Herald.—I lived in Kirtland in 1837 and 1838. Was there when the Kirtland money was first circulated. Was in the Temple when Father Smith was preaching, and Warren Parish undertook to put him out. It was a scene I shall never forget. It is over fifty years since I was baptized. I never united with the Reorganization, and never heard one preach. All the spiritual food I get is from the Herald. I enjoy reading it very much.

CAROLINE WILDER.

LANSING, Michigan,

July 17th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—On yesterday I went to see Bro. Harvey Fairchild over in Eaton county, this state. He is still confined to his bed-room, and will be until he departs this life; unless Jesus cures him and raises him up again. I read to him the article in the Herald of the 5th of July that I wrote you. He says he was baptized, not by Parley P. Pratt, but by Wm. B. Smith. He further states that his work as a mason at Nauvoo, was not so much on the Temple as at the stone quarry. The Grand Army of the Republic furnishes him a physician from Grand Lodge; but he stated and so did his wife, that my religious visit did him more good than all his medicine. Yet he appreciates the kindness of his physician. He is very anxious to see one of the Elders before he dies. He cannot speak about it without shedding tears. His wife believes in him, and would, if she had the opportunity join in practically with him. I am not sure but what good could be accomplished in that neighborhood.

Allow me to introduce another matter which has been on my mind for some time. I know that the Lord hath said, Prov. 26: 17, "He that passeth by and meddleth with strife belonging not to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears." But it is also said, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." And again, "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Matt. 5: 9; Micah 6: 8. So then when it is for the promotion of peace, and for the triumph of justice and mercy, to speak; I am not aware that one would be at liberty before God not to speak, though all the dogs were to go mad, and both bark and bite.

I remember very distinctly when my father, Robert Rathbun, and uncle George Miller, both lived in Mantua, Ohio, in the years of 1828, 1829 and 1830. My father had been a minister in the Close Communion Baptist persuasion. But he, with Uncle George Miller, had more recently been carried away with the reformation which had swept through the Western Reserve in Ohio. It was a kind of a reform Baptist movement. One Sidney Rigdon was regarded at the time as the one towering above all others in ability, and consequently a leader in the reformation. During the year of 1830, one Parley P. Pratt, and one Oliver Cowdery, came along. Father opened his doors and received them kindly; and they preached in father's house. Mr. Pratt gave father a Book of Mormon, and requested him to read it. He also gave Sidney Rigdon one, making the same request of him that he did of father. My father was much more of a preacher than he was a debater. Uncle George Miller was not much of a preacher but an indomitable biblical debater; and a sharp, shrewd critic. They agreed to read the book through on this wise: 1st. They covenanted together to pray each day at ten o'clock in secret while reading the book through, for divine wisdom, and for the direction of the Holy Spirit, that they might know of a truth and be directed of God for or against the Book of Mormon. 2d. Father was to read, and Uncle George Miller was to criticise. 3d. They were to lay aside all prejudice, all partiality; and with all Christian candor and righteous fairness, endeavor to reach their conclusions. The result was that they both embraced the new faith, and through all the checkered scenes of life maintained it, and finally died in the triumph of that faith.

Sidney Rigdon at once rejected the Book of Mormon given him as an imposition, and boldly withstood Parley P. Pratt, and Oliver Cowdery. But Uncle George Miller set right in upon Sidney Rigdon with all his indomitable and unconquerable perseverance, as though it was a life and death struggle; and never gave up the contest until Mr. Rigdon became convicted, and finally converted to the new faith also. This was not a public, but a private controversy. They called it then, "the faith once delivered to the Saints." This was Sidney Rigdon's first acquaintance with the Book of Mormon. And it was a very trying time with these reformed Baptists to see their standard bearers with a good many others go over to what was then called "The Church of Christ," and "The faith once delivered to the Saints."

In regard to D. P. Hulburt, sometimes called Dr. P. Hulburt, I have this to say: That it so turns out in the wonderful providence of God, that I have had quite an acquaintance with this very peculiar sort of a man. The facts in his case are these: 1. He was excommunicated from the Methodist Episcopal Church for improprieties with the opposite sex, and lying. 2. He was excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, for improprieties with the opposite sex, and lying. 3. Upon this event he swore vengeance upon the Latter Day Saints, and undertook to destroy them. 4. He then went into the more western and newer part of the state of Ohio, where he was not known, and wormed himself into the "Church of the United Brethren in Christ," and was ordained an Elder among them. Here, both in the conference and in the church, there was a constantly growing uneasiness about his improprieties; until in the fall of 1851, when he was held before the Sandusky Annual Conference of said church, for a trial on charges of gross improprieties toward the opposite sex, lying and intemperance. Each charge; to wit, First, improprieties toward the opposite sex; Second, lying; Third, intemperance, was clearly and fully sustained; and he was suspended from the ministry one year; and as that year he grew from bad to worse, he was entirely excommunicated at the next session of the conference which was held in the fall of 1852.

How do I know all these things? I will tell. In regard to the first item, my mother's people were all Methodists, so that I was blessed with seven Methodist preachers as near relatives. Hence, the excommunication of said Hulburt from the Methodist Church was familiar household talk whenever any of them met together. In regard to the second and third items first above enumerated, my father had something more to do with than the former. I remember of hearing him tell about said Hulburt imposing upon the church; what a bold, impudent, lying man he was, and when excommunicated from the Latter Day Saints, how he swore he would have vengeance upon the Mormons. I remember of hearing all these things talked over, and over again. But in after life, I heard him tell what a time he had with the Methodists, what a time he had with the Mormons, he boasted how he swore vengeance upon them. He said that Spaulding manuscript was a little insignificant thing of only about twenty pages, and had no more relation to the Book of Mormon, than he had to the inhabitants of the moon; "but," said he, "I made it tell upon them to their eternal damnation." And here he seemed to glut himself in what he had done, what a great thing he had done out of nothing. The obscene language I heard him use to an old minister in abusing him when all alone, and as he supposed no one hearing him, was so disgraceful and black that I would not tell it under any consideration except under oath, confirmed me in all the charges brought against him.

In regard to the fourth item, I only have to say that at that time I was an Elder with Mr. D. P. Hulburt of the aforesaid Sandusky Annual Conference of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, and personally knew of those grievances. I was one of that honorable, august, body of Elders, who for over two days before Bishop Edwards, patiently heard his trial, and thoroughly and faithfully investigated all the testimony in his case. And we all came to the same conclusion, that he was a very bad man, and guilty of each charge made against him. We all voted, yes. I, Hiram Rathbun, voted on the case to suspend him from the ministry for one year, and by so doing give him a chance to redeem himself; but he went on from bad to worse, and at the next Annual Conference of 1852, by vote we excommunicated him from the church, for improprieties with the opposite sex, for lying, and for intemperance.

It is a keen sense of duty, under God, that I owe to an innocent people that I see trying and struggling manfully and in a Christian spirit to right themselves before the world and before God, that has inspired me to make known this statement of facts. I could tell many more things, but this must do for the present. Hoping that we may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth,

I am yours in Christ,
HIRAM RATHBUN.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
July 14th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Enclosed I hand you an editorial clipping from the Salt Lake Evening Chronicle of July 11th, 1884, edited by Major J. F. Bradley, a member of the Congregational Church, and a most worthy citizen.

Respectfully,
R. WARNOCK.

A DISTINCTION WITH A DIFFERENCE

The Josephite Church, with the sons of the original Joseph Smith himself as leaders therein, have sent a delegation to confer with David Whitmer, the only surviving witness, it is claimed, of the three who saw the angels give the graven plates to the founder of Mormonism. The Josephite Church accepts the Book of Mormon as a divine revelation, but does not accept the beastly and murderous attachments of polygamy and blood-atonement, which the Brighamite Mormons, whose head-quarters are in Salt Lake City, make the corner stone of their lustful faith and lecherous practices. The organ of the last named faction is the Deseret News. This paper makes haste to inform the public that the Josephite Church has no connection whatever with the Salt Lake faction. In the matter of theoretic faith, both agree in accepting Joseph Smith as a prophet, but in the substantial matter of showing faith by practice, the Josephite Church follows strictly the cleanly and righteous precepts of the Book of Mormon, with regard to monogamic marriage and to the gross evil of concubinage. The Josephites are good and loyal citizens, opposed to the union of church and state, and most positive in their denunciations of polygamy and blood-atonement. There is a distinction with a difference between them and the Brighamites. Numbers are on the side of the last, the sacred text books of Joseph Smith's gospel are clearly and authoritatively with the Josephites. There should be, as the News says, no connection between the two, for they differ as widely as heaven from hell in their practice.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 18th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I returned home from Burlington, Iowa, last Saturday. Was compelled to leave the field a month earlier than I designed, on account of ill health. I find the cares and responsibilities of my new charge all that I am able to bear. Since writing you last, I have done some labor at Burlington, Montrose and Keokuk. The long-standing difficulty at Burlington, I trust, will soon be a thing of the past, and the decision of the missionary in charge will at least, give general satisfaction to the branch.

All those who wish to communicate with me, may, as before, address me at this place; but I am sorry to say, I shall not be able to take the field till there is decided improvement in my health. I hope to hear from the missionary force in my field as often as necessary, and trust all will understand that in the absence of special directions, they are fully authorized to move out and occupy in their respective fields, as in their judgment shall best serve the interests of the work.

Yours in hope,
JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal.,
July 13th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I joined the Reorganized Church in 1865, and my faith to day is stronger than when I first enlisted. I have a large family, of which four are members of the church. I seldom go to church, not because I have no desire to go, but because my health will not permit. But with the help of my Heavenly Father, I intend to strive to bear my afflictions with patience until the end comes, knowing "He doeth all things well." My Herald comes weekly, and with joy I greet it, there is so much good reading in it. Dear brothers and sisters, pray for me, that I may ever rejoice in the gospel of Christ.

ANN E. AMES.

LAKE CITY, Barbour Co., Kansas,
July 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I am on my return from Meade county. I have not looked this country over extensively. I drove through Barbour, Comanche, Clark and about half way through Meade county. I saw plenty of good lands. At the present a man could get almost any kind of soil he might desire, but the locations that are near towns that are already started, are taken; but there is plenty of room for other towns yet, in Comanche, Clark, and Meade counties. There are some Government lands yet in Barbour county, but the best farm lands are taken. There is what they call timber in Barbour, Comanche, and Clark counties. One man told me he could get cedar posts delivered for eight cents apiece; but they usually cost 20 cents. Comanche county is nearly all fenced into pasture for cattle. Thousands of acres in a field, and the best lands with water privileges are generally held by the cattle men, and there is no chance for a poor man till the counties are organized and get a herd law; and with the present immigration those counties will all be settled this Fall. If one is not ready to start now from the far east, he need not expect much choice. The Lord let me see a map of those counties in vision before I started on this trip, which I accepted as permit; which I have looked for on all momentous questions, for years in the past, but I got no permit to locate a claim as yet; and as the Saints have been so thoroughly warned of the judgments that must come on the earth, I dare not take a claim, except the Lord directs me so to do.

Supplies can be got in Clark and Meade counties, cheaper than in Comanche, because the railroad is nearer, and there are old trails running through them into the nation and Texas, and train wagons, with ten mules, ten ponies, ten oxen, &c. Teams are carrying a great amount of freight to the Nation and Texas, water is good generally, and sometimes quite easily gotten, but generally the wells are quite deep, and some of them can not be used except for physic. The rain has been plentiful for two years past. This would indicate short allowance when the proper quantity is sent to the east; if so, the present immigration will return or a part at least.

July 11.—There are many schemers, in this new country; and after a settlement is made, much land is often held in reserve for friends, or to make the stranger pay money to find it. So you see it is not the promised land, with a people who delight to do the stranger good.

O Saints, let us purify our hearts, and ask the Lord to speak to us and guide us, so we may be strong to do the stranger good; and to cultivate the soil and receive the Lord's bountiful increase. Then will not Zion's children gather, and rejoice in building again Zion? Address in care of Johns and Ordway, Peoria, Illinois.

M. N. COLE.

AUDUBON, Minnesota,

July 15th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We have just been holding some meetings among the world. Sunday the 12th we applied for the Congregational Church; but after we had the promise of it, the righteous followers in sheep's clothing made a descent on the trustees, and they had to retract, and the doors were closed against us. This was in the village of Audubon. But while talking, two places were opened for the preaching of the word, one by one of the leading men of the town; so we held two meetings, Sunday. Tuesday we went fourteen miles south, where we held a meeting with the best of attention and good liberty. The friends where we stopped for the night said, "You explain the Scriptures so plainly, and so differently from what we ever heard before." While talking about the Book of Mormon, when the lady of the house heard what it was, she said, "I will have it, and when I hear folks talking about it, I will defend it." We had just read the word of the Lord against polygamy. We left two appointments for the 27th, one twenty-five miles from Bro. Ways. The work is onward, and being assailed by the opposing power gives it strength, which moves it faster. We ask the prayers of all who love the work.

With love to all,

THOMAS NUTT,
HENRY WAY.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

July 18th.—The steamer Saint Dustan, from Marseilles, arrived in the River Mersey, Eng., today. Two deaths from cholera occurred during the voyage. The steamer was ordered placed in an isolated position. All communication with shore was forbidden. The Municipal Council of Dover is preparing anti-cholera measures. Vessels will be examined before entering the harbor. Hospitals for cholera patients have been formed at Chiasso, Switzerland, and Luino, Italy. The health officers in London are organizing the hospital service in the event of the cholera making its appearance. Italy and Switzerland will cooperate to prevent the introduction of cholera into their territories. Switzerland is willing to guard the French frontier and examine all persons and goods crossing it.

Twenty-three deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night. The disease has appeared at Arles, a city of 25,000 population, forty-four miles from Paris. Three deaths have occurred there. There have been six deaths between nine o'clock this morning and noon. There were four-teen deaths at Toulon last night. The Mayor is improving. The Deputy Mayor is also ill. The panic continues, and the exodus is increasing.

The Department of Agriculture has issued instructions to the quarantine stations of the Dominion of Canada, and also the Customs Collectors, who are ex-officio quarantine officers, calling attention to the necessity of extra vigilance and the careful inspection of all vessels from Marseilles and Toulon. At Miramichi, N. B., medical inspection will be made of all vessels from the Mediterranean.

It is officially announced that China has given France the first measure of satisfaction. The Chinese Imperial Gazette of the 16th inst. published the decree, in accordance with the terms of the convention of May 11th. In this decree the Emperor orders the Chinese troops to evacuate Lao Ki, Lang Sou, and Cao Bang, and withdraw to this side of the passes leading to Yun Nau, Kwang Ton, and Kwang Si. The evacuation will be completed within a month. The situation at Peking is critical, owing to stormy disputes between Li Hung Chang and Tso Tsung Chang in regard to what action should be taken on France's attitude. Admiral Courbet, with the French fleet, is threatening Foo-Chow.

There are a dozen cases of yellow fever at Panama, South America.

Gen. Walker, United States Consul at Paris, says that city is unusually healthy. There has been no cholera there as yet. He promises to use every precaution to prevent the introduction of the contagion into the United States.

Capt. Ash, ice-pilot of the Greely relief steamship Bear, gives the following particulars of the rescue of the survivors of the Greely Arctic colony: "She sailed from St. Johns, May 4th, and had a pleasant passage to Disco, arriving there the 15th. We left Disco in company with two whalers and arrived at Upernavik the 29th. The Thetis and Lock Gerry arrived the same day, and in the evening the whole squadron started for the north. So far, no formidable impediment interrupted the progress of the expedition. We now had seven whalers accompanying us, all striving for the glory of finding Greely and stimulated by the reward offered by the United States Government. June 11th, the steamships Arctic, Aurora, Wolf, Polynia, Nova Zembla, Cornwallis, and Irvine were all plowing their way toward the dangerous waters of Melville Bay. We all arrived at Cape York the 18th, and the 19th Lieut. Colwell and four men went on shore to endeavor to ascertain the fate of the Greely party. The Carri Islands were reached June 22d. We landed there, examined the caches left by Nares and Beebe, and then started for Cape Parry. We could not reach it, the ice being closely packed, and we started for Littleton Island. We reached there at noon, and found the Thetis there, but no intelligence whatever of the Greely party. At 3 p. m. we started for Cape Sabine, which stood out clear under a bright atmosphere. At 7 p. m. we made fast to a heavy foe at the entrance to Payer Harbor. Several of our officers and crew left the ships to scour the shore in every direction. An officer of the Thetis found a record on one point of land intimating Greely and party were all well, and had left Fort Conger August 9th, and, after an auspicious journey, arrived at Barred Inlet, September 29th. The record also indicated the exact point on Cape Sabine where the victorious exploring party were encamped. The steam launch of the Bear was immediately dispatched to the indicated locality, which was distant about three miles. In the meantime the Thetis sounded her whistle, which was heard by Greely in his camp. The unwonted sound awoke the slumbering and fast-sinking explorers. When the launch reached the ice in the vicinity of the camp a solitary man was seen descending to the strand with uncertain steps. He had heard the whistle and saw the approaching boat. The crew of the launch regarded this as an evil omen. As soon as the ice foot was touched I jumped on shore, and accosted the lone stranger:

"How are you all?"

"He answered faintly: 'There are seven of us left yet.'"

"We were all struck with dismay. Gathering up hastily a little food and stimulants we hastened to the Greely encampment, and there beheld a heart-shattering scene. A gale of wind was blowing. The tent had been shattered and had fallen on the wearied and dying men. We entered and saw a scene of unspeakable misery and desolation. Haggard faces, staring eyes gazed at us. One of the six sufferers was pointed to as dying. We at once began to feed them with light food and dispatched the launch to the Thetis for assistance. Capt. Emroy and Dr. Ames came on shore, a fire was kindled, hot milk-punch was prepared, restoratives were applied, and in less than an hour the woebegone sufferers were able to stand staggeringly on their feet. Ten bodies were unearthed and two disinterred from the ice foot and brought down to the steam-launch to be transferred to the ships. Two of the living party were strong enough to be led along on their feet. The other five were borne down on stretchers with the greatest care. In the midst of a tempestuous sea and a terrible gale of wind the living and dead of the Greely Arctic colony were placed on board the Bear and Thetis and conveyed to St. Johns."

James G. Blaine's letter of acceptance contains the following points:—Tariff revisions have been necessarily made, and may be again; but a sufficient tariff must be retained for the protection of home industries. "Our foreign relations favor our domestic development. We are at peace with the world—at peace upon a sound basis, with no unsettled questions of sufficient magnitude to embarrass or distract us. Happily removed by our geographical position from participation or interest in those questions of dynasty or boundary which so frequently disturb the peace of Europe, we are left to cultivate friendly relations with all, and are free from possible entanglements in the quarrels of any. The United States has no cause and no desire to engage in conflict with any Power on earth, and we may rest in assured confidence that no Power desires to attack the United States. With the nations of the Western Hemisphere we should cultivate closer relations, and for our common prosperity and advancement we should invite them all to join with us in an agreement that, for the future, all international troubles in North or South America shall be adjusted by impartial arbitration and not by arms. The south needs capital and occupation, not controversy."

Of civil service he says: "Impartiality in the mode of appointment to be based on qualification, and security of tenure to be based on faithful discharge of duty, are the two ends to be accomplished."

He devotes the following paragraph to the Mormon question:—Religious liberty is the right of every citizen of the Republic. Congress is forbidden by the Constitution to make any law 'respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.' For a century, under this guarantee, Protestant and Catholic, Jew and Gentile, have worshiped God according to the dictates of conscience. But religious liberty must not be perverted to the justification of offenses against the law. A religious sect, strongly entrenched in one of the Territories of the Union, and spreading rapidly into four other Territories, claims the right to destroy the great safeguard and muniment of social order, to practice as a religious privilege that which is a crime punished with severe penalty in every State of the Union. The sacredness and unity of the family must be preserved as the foundation of all civil government, as the source of orderly administration, as the surest guarantee of moral purity. The claim of the Mormons that they are divinely authorized to practice polygamy should no more be admitted than the claim of certain heathen tribes, if they should come among us, to continue the rite of human sacrifice. The law does not interfere with what a man believes; it takes cognizance only of what he does. As citizens, the Mormons are entitled to the same civil rights as others, and to these they must be confined. Polygamy can never receive National sanction or toleration by admitting the community that upholds it as a State in the Union. Like others, the Mormons must learn that the liberty of the individual ceases where the rights of society begin."

An international monetary standard should be adopted, fixing the relative value of gold and silver. Our laws should look to the judicious encouragement of settlers on the public domain, which should be held as a sacred trust for those seeking homes. All efforts to revive our shipping interests should receive encouragement. The safety of the government rests upon the security of suffrage to the citizen.

The fumigation of the railway stations at Toulon, Marseilles, and Paris has been discontinued, proving useless. There were thirty deaths at Marseilles and seventeen at Toulon last night. The officials at Marseilles are panic-stricken because of their failure to check the spread of the cholera, and are fleeing the city. Six deaths from cholera occurred at Arles yesterday. Shop-keepers at Toulon are closing their establishments. The flight of residents is universal. The men stationed at the arsenal are leaving. There were twenty-one deaths from cholera reported since ten this morning at Toulon. The disease is spreading. There has been one death at Nîmes. There have been fourteen deaths from cholera in Marseilles since eleven this morning.

The following proclamation has been issued by the President of the United States:—While quarantine regulations are committed to the several States, the general Government has reposed certain powers in the President, to be used at his discretion in preventing a threatened epidemic. Feeling it my duty, I hereby call upon all persons who, under existing systems in the several States, are intrusted with the execution of quarantine regulations, to be diligent and on the alert, in order to prevent the introduction of the pestilence, which, we all regret to learn, has made its appearance in some of the countries of Europe, between which and the ports of the United States intercourse is direct and frequent. I further advise that the cities and towns of the United States, whether on the coast or on the lines of intercommunication, by sound sanitary regulations and the promotion of cleanliness, be prepared to resist the power of the disease and to mitigate its severity; and I further direct the Consuls of the United States in the parts where the pestilence has made or may make its appearance, to exercise vigilance in the carrying out of the instructions heretofore given, and in communicating to the Government of the United States any information of value relating to the progress or treatment of the disease.

The yellow fever epidemic at Guaymas, Texas, is diminishing. Business is beginning again. The fever is confined wholly to the City of Guaymas. No sanitary cordon was established.

The Greely exploration party penetrated the Northern regions to within 6° 36', or about 458 miles, from the pole; the deficit being about half the distance from Chicago to New York. In addition to achieving the distinction of having gone farther northward than any other explorers, so far as known, the survivors have brought back with them a considerable addition to our previous knowledge of the geography of the Arctic regions.

The returning party brings with it one important item of news, which opens up an old question and makes it one of greatest interest now. Within 650 miles of the pole they found a cliff containing fossils, among which were the roots and part of the trunk of a tree. That tree could not possibly have grown there under climatic conditions at present existing. That fossil tells us of a time when it was as warm within 10° of the pole, near the meridian of New York, as it is now in North-western Europe.

July 21.—There was a great demonstration of the English trade unionists and agricultural laborers in London, to condemn the action of the House of Lords in rejecting the Franchise bill. The various divisions carried flags bearing mottoes expressing approval of Mr. Gladstone's course and menacing the Peers. The streets through which the procession marched on its way to Hyde Park were densely thronged. The agricultural laborers were loudly cheered. At Hyde Park the great crowd was addressed by several noted Radicals, among them Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Joseph Arch, Thorold Rogers, and Mr. Caine. Resolutions were adopted denouncing the House of Lords as an irresponsible, unrepresentative body, and expressing warm approval of Mr. Gladstone's political course. The meeting was orderly and good humored. Lord Salisbury's house was guarded by the police.

The deaths at Toulon from cholera last night were twenty-eight. Famine is threatening the city. Provisions are scarce and dear, and there is much distress. The hotels are closing their kitchens, and the provision warehouses are expected to close, owing to lack of supplies. The cholera at Arles is becoming serious. There were twenty-six deaths at Marseilles last night, and nine between nine and noon to-day. A crowd of Socialists assembled before the Mayor's office yesterday and demanded work, and endeavored to force entry into the building, but were prevented by the police. Seven were arrested. The cholera in Paris is increasing. Eight cases were reported to-day, two fatal. At Toulon the epidemic is assuming a most virulent character, nearly all the victims dying suddenly. There were sixty-one deaths from cholera at Marseilles during the twenty-four hours ending at nine to-night. The total number of deaths in that city since the epidemic appeared is 874.

The police of Warsaw, Poland, seized 500,000 rubles and numerous proclamations, printed in the Russian and Polish languages, intended for circulation throughout the Empire in the event of the design against the Czar, on the occasion of his recent visit to Warsaw, having been successful. Five Terrorists were arrested in Moscow, in whose possession were found large sums of money, dynamite, bombs, and documents.

The latter showed that, since the coronation of the Czar, Moscow has been the seat of the Executive Committee of the Nihilists. A state of siege will be proclaimed at Warsaw. The Governor-General and Chief of Police will be removed. The newspapers say Russia and Germany will propose the adoption of an International Convention for procuring measures for the suppression of Dynamiters.

July 22.—Thirty deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night and twenty-eight at Toulon. A panic was created at Toulon last night by the arrival of one hundred coffins ordered from Marseilles. In order to allay the excitement it was found necessary to send the coffins back. At a meeting of the Municipal Council of Paris the Director of Public Aid declared that no case of genuine Asiatic or sporadic cholera had been reported at the Paris hospitals. He said the deaths attributed to cholera were really due to other causes. Between nine o'clock and noon to-day eight deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles.

Osman Digma, the leader of the rebels near Suakin, has been asked to send reinforcements to Berber. The rebels there stand in much fear of General Gordon's movement.

Messengers from the oasis of Wah el Kharjeh report that Col. Colville, Maj. Wortley, with a Bedouin force, had arrived at Beris, in that oasis, after ten days' march from Assiout, 200 miles distant. Their horses were in good condition, notwithstanding the great heat. Col. Colville hoped to proceed southward to Selimah, Egypt, July 16, nine days' journey from Kharjeh. The route lies through the very heart of the desert and there is no water fit for drinking. Colville's intention was to take 125 men mounted on camels and also a camel train of a hundred carrying water sufficient for ten days and food enough for two weeks. He expected to direct his line of march across the desert by a compass, and hoped to strike the Nile at Ammara, some distance south Wady Halfa. The sheik of Kharjeh thought a collision with the rebels probable at Ammara, but Colville did not consider that this would prove of sufficient importance to make it necessary to change his plans. Messengers stated that the inhabitants of the oasis are now friendly to the English. A month ago, however, when Maj. Wortley's advance guard appeared, 500 natives offered a feeble resistance, but quickly dispersed at the sight of forty rifles of the guard. The Sheik of Kharjeh informed the English officers that messengers from El Madhi had passed through Karjeh on their way to Tripoli. Colville expects to reach Selimah July 26 and Wady Halfa by the beginning of August. The number of gun-boats between Assouan and Wady Halfa has been largely increased. A merchant reports that he left Kordofan two months ago and Dongola seventeen days ago. While at Kordofan he was frequently in the presence of Mahdi. The merchant ultimately escaped from there, together with an Egyptian Lieutenant of Hicks' Pasha's army. Many of Hicks' men were in the hills. The Catholics in the Mahdi's power were safe. The rebels had surrounded Khartoum, but Gen. Gordon dispersed them and killed their leaders. The Mahdi's influence was declining. Almost daily letters were exchanged between Gen. Gordon and the Mahdi. The merchant adds that the Mudir and inhabitants of Dongola are loyal to the Khedive and hostile to the Mahdi. He says the artist Vizittela, captured at Kordofan by the Mahdi, is safe.

Waddington, French Ambassador; Musurus Pasha, Turkish Ambassador; Baron de Staal, Prussian Ambassador; Count von Muenstock, German Ambassador; Count Karoly, Austro-Hungarian Ambassador; and Chevalier Nigra, Italian Ambassador. The financial advisers of the several Ambassadors were also in attendance. The conference continued in session only one hour, when it adjourned sine die. It is considered doubtful whether it will meet again for a long time.

At a Cabinet council to-day M. Ferry announced that negotiations with China were making favorable progress. Tsung Li Yamen, he said, had instructed the Viceroy at Nankin to settle the pending question, especially the indemnity, with M. Patenot, the French Minister to China. A speedy solution of the matter is expected. The French squadron will remain at Foochow until the indemnity is settled.

There are still some cases of yellow-fever reported at Mazatlan and Guaymas, Mexico. These places are being strictly quarantined. The Governors of the Gulf States have been ordered to quarantine all vessels from European ports so that no cases of cholera may be introduced into Mexico. In the City of Mexico the poverty of the people is appalling. The papers report that Sunday a decent-looking man fell in a faint on the street, and told the medical man who came to his aid that neither he nor his family had eaten anything for two days. The plague of locusts and the drouth which prevails in various sections but adds to the gloominess of the outlook, and in many sections the people will suffer this year for the absolute necessities of life. The drouth in the interior still continues, but fine rains have broken that on the south coast of Vera Cruz.

According to the official report of the Analyst of the Municipal Laboratory, almost every article of drink and diet in Paris is adulterated. Even the natural mineral waters, so-called, are "doctored." This is interesting for those in America who are willing to pay high prices for these imported waters and for French wines generally.

In the twenty-four hours ending nine p.m., there have been forty-four deaths from cholera. At Viduban there was one death from cholera to-day. Also one death at Signes and Brignoles. All the public schools at Toulon and Marseilles will be closed to-morrow. The French Academy of Medicine proposes an international congress to discuss the prevention and cure of cholera. Dr.

Koch has asked that the congress meet in Berlin. A medical cholera commission has established a lazaret in the Moabite Quarter with 500 beds. It has also organized a sick transport service, and issued a series of rules for public guidance in guarding against cholera.

Advices from Corunna, Spain, report a collision at sea between the Spanish steamer Gijon, from Corunna for Ceiba, and the British steamer Laxham. Both vessels sank. Forty-five of the Gijon's passengers and eleven of the Laxham's crew were landed at Corunna. It is believed the rest of the passengers and crews were saved. There was a mutual misunderstanding of the signals displayed, and the vessels came together at a high rate of speed. The crash was terrific, and both steamers went down almost immediately.

There was a very preceptible shock of earthquake to-day in the Island of Ischia, in the Mediterranean. The inhabitants are greatly agitated.

Two persons died recently at Arietta, Hamilton County, N. Y., and many other persons were taken sick, from eating ham obtained from a local butcher who says it came from Thorn & Co. of Chicago. An analysis of the ham shows that it contained trichinae. It appears that the persons who died used the meat in a partly-cooked state.

The Prohibition Convention was opened at Pittsburg; a large number of delegates was present. Curiously enough, Iowa had no representatives, while Kansas had but seventeen delegates, and Wisconsin fifty-five; there were only three delegates from Maine, while Texas was represented by ten, and California by 23. Mr. Stewart of Ohio called the convention to order. William Daniel of Maryland was made temporary chairman; Mrs. Woodbridge of Ohio, and Charles S. Carter of Washington, D. C., were elected secretaries. Mr. Daniel made a speech which was much applauded. Prof. Samuel Dickey of Michigan was elected permanent chairman. A large number of resolutions and addresses were submitted.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

July 18.—Cedar Springs, Mich., was again swept by fire. Four lives were lost. Loss by fire at Newburg, Ind., $5,900.

The losses by fire in the United States during the half-year were nearly $54,000,000, or 20 per cent over the total for the first half of 1883, and $9,000,000 more than the highest return for any previous corresponding half-year.

A fire at Dukla, Austria, which started in a naphtha factory, burned half the town. The population of Dukla is about 3,000.

Loss by fire near Big Rapids, Mich., $60,000. Near Columbus, O., twelve ice houses and a scow, $12,500. Two lives were lost. Belknap, Mont., nearly the entire town, $100,000. Off Starne Island, O., the tug Relief, $1,000. Momenne, Ill., elevator, $12,000.

One man was killed and two wounded, near Ottawa, Ont., by a collision between an express train and hand car.

A point on the Connotton Valley Railroad, two miles east of Canton, O., to night, was the scene of a terrible wreck, in which a thousand excursionists from Canton miraculously escaped. So far as known half a dozen or more persons are under the wreck. The employees of Aultman & Co.'s machine works had an annual picnic at Cuyahoga Falls to day, and over two thousand went on the excursion, made up of two trains, fifteen cars in each. The first section arrived at Canton at 7:20 p.m., and while hundreds of fathers, brothers and sisters, were at the station waiting for friends and relatives on the second section a hatless messenger came running down the track crying that the train had been wrecked, and many killed and injured. The scene which followed was of the wildest description, and when the wreck was reached, men, women and children, ran around wringing their hands and looking for their loved ones. Nine cars were off the track, and in the water four feet deep. The cries of the injured were heartrending. Hundreds of willing hands immediately set to work and soon found that not more than twenty-five were injured, but it was impossible to say how many or who were killed. About a dozen or more are missing, and may be under the cars, and nothing definite can be known until the wrecking train arrives, which is now on its way to the scene. A telegraph office has been opened at the scene, and everything is being done to alleviate the suffering of the injured.

July 20.—The transfer warehouse of the Michigan Central at Kensington, Ill., with the contents, was destroyed by fire. A number of cars standing on the track near by were burned. The total loss is about $20,000. A coal breaker was burned near Hazelton, Pa., throwing five hundred men out of employment; loss $100,000. McIvor Station, Mich., was nearly all destroyed by fire. East Tawas is hemmed in by fire. Loss by fire at Morris, Ill., $7,000. Saginaw, Mich., saw mill, $15,000.

Two tramps were killed at Mount Vernon, O., by the explosion of a boiler used in sinking a gas well near which they were sleeping.

July 21.—The damage by fire on the Crane wharf at Wapping, England, Saturday was £100,000. Oil, pepper, coffee, and wool were stored on the wharf. The fire was subdued by fourteen steam-engines.

Six dwellings at Duboistown, Pa., and 1,000,000 feet of lumber in the yard of Corcoran, Richards & Co. at that place were destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

The brush-fires in the vicinity of East Tawas continue to spread. Eleven buildings have been destroyed at McIvor Station. At Alger Station the section car-house and the section-house have been burnt. Bristol and East Tawas are threatened by the flames.

At ten this morning a fire started in a wheat-field near Modesto, Cal. The alarm was instantly telegraphed and telephoned to all available points. Two thousand men from different sections rushed to the rescue and the old-fashioned prairie way of fighting fire with fire was resorted to. At 3:30 p.m., after a desperate struggle, the fire was controlled. The streets at Modesto and at Oakdale were filled with men with scorched faces and singed heads of hair. Six thousand acres of grain and several large dwellings were destroyed. The total losses are estimated at $150,000. Loss by fire at Duboistown, Pa., $30,000. Detroit, Mich., $5,000. Monroe, Mich., $5,000.

A hurricane of unusual severity passed over Sioux Falls, this afternoon. Much damage was done in the city. The Masonic Temple, the Phillips House, and many smaller buildings were unroofed, and a large number of buildings more or less injured. The greatest damage was that done to the shade-trees. Telegraph lines are down in all directions, and reports concerning outside damage are meagre. Passengers on an incoming train report severe work of the storm at Dell Rapids, twenty miles north of Sioux Falls. The walls of Crossman & Bros.' store collapsed and the building was totally wrecked. The Odd-fellows' Hall was in the second story of the building. Two large warehouses were demolished and the debris so scattered that the train was delayed until the track could be cleared. Many other buildings were damaged, but no fatalities are reported. Reports from Valley Springs, Dak., are very serious. Many buildings were destroyed and cars blown from the track. Two miles from Valley Springs a farmer's house was totally destroyed, two children killed, and others blown out upon the prairie and not since found.

The severest hail-storm ever known in that section passed over Cornish, N. H., Saturday afternoon. Large and small trees were taken down and corn and grain crops ruined. On the side of Kenyon's Hill, Cornish, the hail-stones were piled up five feet high against a stone wall. In the windrows of Chester Pike's cornfield there were hail-stones as large as hen's eggs to the depth of two feet.

July 22.—The loss by fire at the Wapping Docks, London, Monday, July 21, was $2,500,000. About 1,000 tons of pepper, nearly one-third of the entire stock in London, was destroyed.

Several large storehouses and factories were destroyed at Gloucester, Mass., yesterday. The losses are estimated at half a million dollars.

Vigal's store at San Pedro, Mexico, near Papantla, has been destroyed by fire. The loss is $10,000 besides a large quantity of vanilla.

Loss by fire near Big Rapids, Mich., lumber ignited by the forest fires, $10,000. The forest fires are still raging near East Tawas, Mich. At Careys, Lake Co., about 500,000 feet of lumber were burned. Loss by fire at Gloucester, Mass., $60,000. Six million feet of lumber were burned at Otia, Mich., and a saw-mill worth $20,000. Forest fires are raging near Warren and Mt. Gilead, O., and much damage is being done to fences and timber. Richmond, Ind., $4,000.

Sundale Station, O., flouring mill and contents. Detroit, Mich., steamer Daisy, $3,600. Peoria, Ill., cooper shop, $5,000.

By the explosion of a gas-main at Wheeling, W. Va., yesterday Superintendent Dillon of the gas-works and Samuel Darrah were badly burned. Four others received slight injuries.

A terrible gas explosion occurred this afternoon at Atlanta, Ga., resulting in the killing of two people and the wounding of seven others.

July 23.—Loss by fire at Dayton O., $90,000. Effingham, Ill., $10,000. Dixon, Ill., $10,000. Near Carthage, Ill., poorhouse, $9,000. The Michigan forest fires are dying out. Petersburg, Va., $30,000. Eagle Bay, Minn., $40,000. Valparaiso, Ind., $8,000. Beaver Falls, Pa., saw manufactory, $30,000. Fayetteville, Tenn., $15,000.

Barnum's circus tents were blown down at Syracuse, N. Y., and forty people injured.

At Jefferson, Wisconsin, several buildings were unroofed by a storm. The town was damaged $10,000. At Whitewater the storm was severe, and did considerable damage.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

During the week ending July 18, there were 192 failures in the United States and twenty-three in Canada. The total in both countries the previous week was 198.

The private banking-house of A. & J. C. S. Harrison at Indianapolis Ind., suspended July 18, and by order of the local court was placed in the hands of the Sheriff. The liabilities are estimated at $500,000, and the depositors number from 300 to 400. The Indianapolis City Treasurer banked with the firm, but it is believed he is fully secured. One of the members of the firm is the Receiver for the defunct Indiana Banking Company, and it is intimated that the affairs of that concern are inextricably mixed up with the business of the establishment which suspended.

L. A. Englehardt, a London merchant, has failed. Liabilities $270,000.

The financial commission appointed by the Egyptian Conference voted unanimously, with the exception of England, to reject the plan for a reduction of the Egyptian land tax and the interest on Egyptian debts.

The British Government's proposed advance for the extension of the India railway system will exceed £30,000,000 an amount equal to the sum which is expected to be expended under private enterprise. Besides the extinction of famine, this extension movement is also directed towards stimulating the export of India grain to England to supplant supplies received from America.

Reports from twenty-six of the leading clearing-houses of the United States place the aggregate clearings for the week ending Saturday July 19, at $690,735,112, being a decrease compared with the aggregate clearings for the corresponding week of 1883 of 32.6 per cent. The decrease outside of New York was 14.4 per cent.

During the week ending July 19, 215,488 standard silver dollars were issued from the United States mints, against 324,000 during the corresponding period of last year.

July 18.—The suspension and attachment of the large store of Lurch Bro., at Portland, Ore., were announced. The firm was engaged in the business of general merchandising at Cottage Grove Ore. The liabilities reach nearly $70,000.

There is to-day over 170,000 tons of sugar in the bonded warehouses in Brooklyn, N. Y. Such a large amount in store has never before been known in the history of bonded warehouses. There are on hand 118,829 hogsheads of sugar, against 185,591 at the same time last year, and 1,293,782 mats and bags, against 633,359 last year. This at a rough average, will give 170,000 tons of sugar wasting its sweetness between the walls of these warehouses. Woodruff's, Robinson's Merchants', the Union, the Empire, the Atlantic, the Dock, the Erie Basin stores in Brooklyn are all nearly full of sugar. In fact, with the exception of the marine stores, there is an unbroken line of sugar from the Empire stores above Fulton Ferry down to the Erie Basin.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: The weather the last week was showery and the temperature lower, though there was much sunshine. Early wheat was considerably storm-beaten. Late wheat, though a thin crop, was benefitted by the rain. The crop appears to be equal to the average. Sales of English wheat the last week, 31,029 quarters at 37 shillings 1 pence, against 29,024 quarters at 42 shillings 2 pence the corresponding week last year. The foreign trade was decidedly weaker. The off-coast trade was inanimate. There was a fair business. Values remain unchanged. There were nineteen arrivals and fourteen sales. Nine cargoes were withdrawn and thirteen remained. Twelve cargoes are now due. Flour is quiet, maize steadier, barley firm, and oats dull.

The prospects for the indigo crop in Bengal and the tea crop in Assam are unfavorable.

Returns to the Department of Agriculture are to the effect that the tobacco crop in the State of North Carolina is nearly double that of last year, the quality of the plant fine, and the prospect all that could be wished. A very large proportion is fine tobacco. The bulk of the wheat crop is thrashed. Reports show it to be the largest crop ever harvested in the State. The loss by long-continued rains, which it was feared would greatly reduce the crop, did not exceed five per cent in any county. The corn crop will be a good one.

California, has, in addition to a greater bulk of barley, fruit, and vegetables than ever before, an elephant on its hands in the shape of a big wheat crop. Rains in June made sad havoc with hay-making. It is the only poor crop of the season. While the injury to early-sown wheat and barley was also enormous, being estimated at ten per cent in the middle counties, twenty per cent in the northern, and twenty-five per cent in the southern counties. On the other hand, late-sown grain was greatly benefitted, both in quality and quantity. A careful estimate of the crop as a whole indicates a loss on down grain of ten per cent on the assumed average of twenty bushels to the acre, which was the average production of the bonanza crop in 1880. Although the estimated yield in several counties is placed as high as twenty-five or thirty bushels to the acre, eighteen bushels is probably a full allowance, taking all the circumstances into consideration. The average of the last three seasons was about twelve bushels to the acre. Taking now 3,350,000 acres as the estimated wheat area in 1883, a fair approximation of the wheat fields not drowned out and not cut for hay this season there appears in round numbers a gross product of 60,000,000 bushels as compared with 54,000,000 bushels in 1880. Deducting from this 10,000,000 bushels for seed and home consumption, we have a net surplus of 50,000,000 bushels, or 30,000,000 centals, against 28,000,000 centals in 1880. Although the barley crop this year is relatively smaller than that of wheat, having suffered from the June rains, it is still the largest ever produced in the State. Of fruits the reports indicate a bonanza crop, peaches being one of the notable exceptions, while of some the product will be the largest on record. On the whole it is a season of great crops in California.

There are prospects for an unprecedented crop of wheat in the British Province of Manitoba.

At Madrid, Spain, negotiations for a treaty of commerce with the United States are opened.

The Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph Company has announced a reduction of rates to all important Southern and Western points. The tariff adopted is twenty-five cents for ten words—about half the present Western Union charge.

Several large houses failed July 21, at Monterey, Mex. Fifteen failures have been reported this month, aggregating about £5,000,000. Four of the largest firms in the city are tottering and expected to fall at any time. The bottom has dropped out.

The situation daily grows worse in Mexico. Constant failures, a thing unknown in the past commercial history, are reported from all points of the Republic. The Government is strictly enforcing the stamp tax, last month fining thirty-six merchants in the City of Mexico, for breaking it, and is forcing out the rights of the people by granting monopolies on everything. So far has this thing gone that the National Bank has asked for and is likely to have a law passed making it the only bank of emission in the Republic. Forth-eight kilometres of the Central Railroad from San Blas to Pepee are graded. The road has 600 men at work.

De Lesseps announces that the International Technical Commission which has been studying the question has decided to recommend the widening of the present Suez Canal rather than the construction of a new one.

The striking coal-miners of the Belleville (Ill.) district have resumed work at the old prices. They could not hold out longer owing to the destitute condition of their families.

Reports from about 100 points in the State of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, from a few places in Ohio, and from Dakota Territory, indicate that the corn crop is generally in a very healthy condition, and the prospects for a large yield are promising. There is hardly any exception to the generally favorable tone in the reports from Iowa. Except in one or two localities in Illinois, the prospects are quite encouraging. In Northern Indiana the cold weather of last week set back the crop somewhat, but the warm, fine weather of the last two days must have been reassuring to the farmers. Generally speaking the indications point to a very abundant crop of excellent quality.

We should by our industry and economy produce a fit legacy to benefit future generations, and secure from them veneration and gratitude. These may be of various kinds, each of us can, in our chosen professions for life's great work, select one or more objects that will accomplish this grand result.

MONDAY MORNING.

AFTER bidding farewell to the brethren of the "land of Goshen," we were soon aboard the cars, westward bound. "They shall stumble in their walk," is verily fulfilled in this road, as it is very rough. We soon fell into conversation with a gentleman, and upon his learning what body we represented, he said "There are just two denominations I claim no relationship with,—the Catholics and Mormons." Upon inquiry I found he belonged to the reformed Presbyterians. I perhaps should have—though I did not—asked him how he could disown his mother. A young lawyer, with a characteristic peculiar to his profession, "put in his talk;" and began to relate history, (he was a great historian), how Joseph Smith and Brigham Young got up the Book of Mormon. I was amused, and told him that was a new theory to me on the Book of Mormon. Our conversation was protracted, in which I insisted that the character of men was not a proper standard by which to judge an organization, but to the "law and the testimony," by which we were willing to be tested.

Gliding along through a beautiful country until toward evening, when the overshadowing clouds gave evidence of an approaching storm. Soon vast clouds of dust could be seen whirling in the west, looking like a besom of destruction. All was bustle and excitement for a time, but not long; for soon the angry element burst upon us; but as the steamer plows the ocean wave, so "Nahum's" engine plowed through and carried safely all on board. Arrived at Glen Elder, Mitchell county, about half-past ten at night, and found Bro. Warren and Mr. Williams waiting for us. After Sunday-School the following day, I had the privilege of speaking to a good sized house. I presented God as being perfect in all his attributes, love, justice, power, &c; and in consequence of these perfections his dealings with the children of men would be perfect. As he is unchangeable, the plan of salvation must remain eternally the same.

Bro. Warner has plowed up quite a quantity of fragments of ancient pottery. Sufficient was found to nearly form a vessel, which was about the size of a gallon milk crock, having a flaring mouth, the main body being of a round shape. The inside was smooth, while the outside has the appearance of rough bark, marks of an edged tool appear on the edge. I procured a few specimens as objects of curiosity. No visible remains of buildings are found. Whose hands formed the clay into these vessels is to me a mystery; but by the aid of that good book, the Book of Mormon, we can approximate.

On night of 10th, I spoke with 'good liberty on the ordinance of "laying on of hands," showing it to be one of the principles of the doctrine of Christ." Practiced by Peter and John, also by Paul, Ananias and the Savior himself.—See Acts 8: 14-17; 19: 6; 9: 17; Matt. 19.

Bro. I. N. Roberts spoke on the following evening with fair liberty, also on night of 14th. After meeting, Elder Knox of the Advent Church said, If we had additional truth to what he had, he wanted it, as he wanted to get into the kingdom. "If I can get any additional light by being baptized again, I am willing to do it." On following evening, after attending a funeral, I visited the house of the elder, where I was gladly received, and had a pleasant visit. On night of 14th, the work was opened up in Glen Elder, with a good attendance; and on the night of 13th Bro. Roberts followed with a large audience and excellent liberty. In the Sabbath School a controversy arose on the foreknowledge of God.—the teacher taking the position that if God foreknew that Adam would fall, it would make him unjust to create a devil, that he might draw men away. It was God's purpose to people the earth with an holy people, which would have been done had Adam not fallen. At the meeting after Sunday School, two young people desired baptism, which was attended to in the afternoon by Bro. I. N. Roberts,—Had good feeling in the confirmation. I spoke at night with good liberty on "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." I endeavored to show from the word something of the reward of the Saints, the thousand years reign, &c. This brings me to the date at heading of this article. Yours.

THE SACRAMENT.

WHILE meditating, my mind is carried back to the days of Jesus and his apostles, when they were ministering to the wants of the people. And not only to the apostles, but all whom he had authorized, went about doing good, and administering to the people wherever they were received, teaching them all things Jesus had taught them. After his death we find them teaching the same things, the same doctrine. In reading the scriptures, including the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, I find they all agree on some points of doctrine and commandments.

In searching the Bible and Book of Mormon, I find that there were types and shadows of the death and suffering of Christ. That the believing Jews were very zealous concerning those types and shadows. That the passover was instituted with the children of Israel while in their Egyptian Bondage. Just before their deliverance they were commanded to take every man a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for a house. "Your lamb shall be without blemish; a male of the first year. Ye shall take it from the sheep or from the goats. And the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening." I find this practiced among them afterwards. It was the foreshadowing of the sacrifice that was to be made by the death and suffering of the Lord Jesus, as the lamb without blemish was a shadow of the Lamb of God that should be offered up as a sacrifice to redeem man from sin and bondage. Therefore this offering of the children of Israel was a foreshadowing of the offering of the Lamb of God. They were about to be delivered from Egyptian bondage. This commandment must have been obeyed, or they could not have been delivered. The blood of the lamb offered was to be "sprinkled on the two side posts, and on the upper door posts of the houses wherein they shall eat it." By obeying this command, the promise was deliverance from bondage, foreshadowing the blood of Christ. His blood "cleanseth us from sin," provided we obey his commandments, and follow him. Time rolled on, and we find the Lamb of God on earth. The sacrifice that was foreshadowed to the Jews while in Egyptian bondage, John the forerunner proclaimed to the people, saying: "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world."

We follow the Lamb of God until the time of the offering had come, or that he should be killed, for the Passover was instituted to this end, and now the time is at hand; so he sent two of his apostles, saying to them, "Go and prepare the Passover that we may eat." And they went and found a large upper chamber furnished. There they should make ready; and when the hour was come, he sat down with them. The apostles he desired to eat the Passover before he supped. He says he will not any more eat thereof, "until it be fulfilled which is written in the prophets concerning me; and he took the cup and gave thanks and said, Take this and divide among yourselves. And he took bread and gave thanks, and brake and gave to them, saying, "This is my body which is given for you. Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, this cup is the New Testament in my blood which is shed for you; and surely the Son of Man goeth as it was determined." After supper the Lord administered bread and wine to his disciples, telling them the bread was his body which is given for them, and the wine was his blood which is shed for them. In reading Matthew 26:22, we learn that the supper and sacrament were at the same time. I will quote. "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and brake it and blessed it, and gave to his disciples and said, Take eat this in remembrance of my body which I give a ransom for you." Also the 23d verse reads, "And he took the cup and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it." And again I quote Mark 14:20-24:

"And as they did eat, Jesus took bread and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them, and said, Take it, and eat. Behold, this is for you to do in remembrance of my body; for as oft as ye do this ye will remember this hour that I was with you. And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them; and they all drank of it. And he said unto them, This is in remembrance of my blood which is shed for many, and the new testament which I give unto you; for of me, ye shall bear record unto all the world. And as oft as ye do this ordinance, ye will remember me in this hour that I was with you, and drank with you of this cup, even the last time in my ministry."

I find that it is very necessary that the Saints should partake of the sacrament, showing forth his death till he comes. The same or in like figure as did the children of Israel in keeping the Passover until he came; and he himself should be offered. There is an item here I wish to notice, and that is the part of the day in which the sacrament was anciently administered to the Saints. I believe that it was anciently administered in the after part of the day; and I believe there is scripture to bear me out in this belief. I ask a candid investigation of the scriptures; for I know there are some who differ from me on this point.

I will furnish two or three witnesses; and in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established. I will commence with Matthew 26: 21-28, as first witness.

"And when they had sung a hymn they went into the Mount of Olives. Then said Jesus unto them, all ye shall be offended because of me this night."

And again verse 31:

Jesus saith unto him, verily I say unto thee, that this night before the cock crow thou shalt deny me thrice."

We will pass to Mark 14: 15-16.

And in the evening he cometh with the Twelve; and as they did eat, &c."

Here we have two good witnesses, favoring evening as the proper time to administer bread and wine. Christ did not do it for convenience sake as some say. No, he came to do the will of the Father; and if he did more or less than that which he did do, he would not have pleased him who sent him. I desire to stick to the law and the testimony.

Luke is also a good witness in the matter. See 22: 66.

"As soon as it was day."

The Lord was apprehended late in the evening, as after dark; and through the night he was going through mock trials; and finally the day began to dawn; or as soon as it was day, they led him away to their council, &c. I have another witness. John 18: 3.

"Judas then having received a band of men and officers from the Chief Priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons."

Thus I have produced four witnesses in favor of my position, and there are many more. I shall now leave the Bible, and call on the Book of Mormon. I will introduce Book of Nephi 9: 1, which reads:

"And now it came to pass, that when Jesus had ascended into heaven, the multitude did disperse, and every man did take his wife and his children, and did return to his own home; and it was noised abroad among the people immediately before it was yet dark," &c.

The chapter before this one treats on the sacrament. The Lord administered it to them, and showed them how after he had administered bread and wine to his disciples here on this continent. He gave them a commandment, "that ye shall do these things; and if ye shall always do these things, blessed are ye, for ye are built upon my rock." While here, we will notice the mode of blessing and breaking the bread. Did he break the bread before he blessed it? The history of the matter is here, and the language is plain and pointed, that he broke the bread and blessed it. The weight of evidence in the Bible on this point is, that he blessed the bread and broke it. This was before his passion, before his body had been torn. But after his sufferings we find him administering bread and wine; and now he breaks the bread first, and then blesses it. Book of Mormon 8:6, reads:

"And when the multitude had eaten and were filled, he said unto his disciples, behold there shall be one ordained among you, and to him will I give power that he shall break bread and bless it, [just as the Lord had done], and give it unto the people of my church, unto all those that shall believe and be baptized in my name; and this shall ye always observe to do, even as I have done; even as I have broken bread and blessed it and given it unto you; and this shall ye do in remembrance of my body which I have shown unto you."

I advise you, dear reader, to read the whole chapter, and other scriptures bearing on this subject.

A worker for Christ,

VALUE OF AMERICAN ANTIQUITY.

It is difficult to know what further interest the learned of the age find in the remains of the once great nation on this continent, than the satisfaction of curiosity, as it seems to be the only reward of their research, save the pecuniary return in exchange for their information. That these revealed secrets of the dead should be a richer treasure seems consistent and desirable, and such is claimed; for the benefit of such as cherish such truth, we will give an instance. In the publication of Josiah Priest's "American Antiquities," published in 1833, on page 198 he says:

"The tumuli, or mounds, found in all parts of the earth, belong solely to the age immediately succeeding Noah's flood; which greatly favors our opinion that this country was settled as early as the other parts of the earth."

On page 199:

"The authors of the works found in the west, seem to have retained the first ideas received from their fathers, at the era of the building of Babel, equally, if not superior, to many nations of Europe, as they were in the eighth century, A. D. This is contended for by the great historian Humboldt. The propriety of believing that a colony very soon after the confusion of the language, found their way to what is now called America is apparent. The traditions of the Aztec nation, who inhabited the vale of Mexico, at the time of the conquest of South America, establish the fact of an early settlement on this continent after the flood."

The above was published to the world in 1833, and the Book of Mormon published in 1830; on pages 501 and 502, he makes no conjecture, but a plain statement, that at the confounding of the language a colony came to this country. Is not this strong presumptive evidence that it is what it purports to be?

And furthermore, there is no discovery of an extinct nation on this continent, but what the Book of Mormon has the precedence in its publication to the world, so that whosoever will open the windows of their souls, and permit the sunshine of truth to enter in, and dispel those misty, sinister clouds of prejudice, will know what truth is.

MEDITATIONS.

I SAW an article signed by a man named Cobb in the Tribune of Salt Lake City, charging Joseph Smith the seer with being an associate of gamblers and sporting men, with particular reference to one Joseph H. Jackson. It is true that Joseph and Jackson were frequently seen riding out together, which caused some remarks when it was known that Jackson was a sporting man, claiming near kin to Pres. A. Jackson; a southerner of good manners and of chivalric turn.

Times and Seasons, 5th vol., ps. 541-2, contains sufficient history of him to satisfy any reasonable mind in regard to his character. It seems to me that such vituperation by one that is an Elder in the church, has traveled and preached and testified of the great work performed by him in introducing the fulness of the gospel, in translating the Book of Mormon, and presenting it to the world; organizing and setting in order the church, and priesthood of Aaron and Melchisedec in fulfillment of the prediction of the prophets both in the Bible and Book of Mormon concerning the coming forth of this very work, I say to me it looks like lunacy, too much so to be noticed by thinking, intelligent men. That same charge was made against Jesus when on the earth, traveling about to do good, that he condescended to eat and drink with publicans and sinners. Joseph was free and open in his demeanor with strangers; easy of access; and it was one of the rules of his life to consider all men good until proved bad. By not being sufficiently guarded, the enemy would get him in their power; but God was faithful to deliver him from them all, until he fell a victim in the last conspiracy, which ended his life.

Often in the last days of his career on earth he exclaimed, that if he should tell what God had revealed to him about those associated with him in the priesthood, they would seek to destroy him. He said God had shown him the hearts of those associated with him, and he could tell their history and what they would do when he was out of their way. Alas, he felt the burden of the consequences of what would follow. He said when he contemplated the oppression that would be heaped upon the Saints by his successors, his eyes were a fountain of tears. God had shown him what would be with the people, and it gave him pain to contemplate it. "But," said he, "I leave you in the hands of God. Hold fast to the gospel as you have received it from me, and do not get so far away as not to know the voice of the good shepherd. Be faithful, and you will not lose your reward."

While contemplating the events of the last forty years, since the death of the prophet, and patriarch, we can see the burden of his mind. It has all had its fulfillment, and while we compare the conspiracy of Jackson, the Laws, Fosters and Higbees, before his death, their crimes pass into insignificance compared with those of the men that have instituted a system of anti-Christianity, of falsehood, of idolatry; bringing in damnable heresies, even to denying the Lord that bought them, and bringing upon themselves swift destruction. We see it approaching, while the people are wrapping themselves up in the delusion, trusting in men that never told them the truth, and they have every reason to know it. But it seems that they have lost all relish for the truth, and have no idea what it is. Like the Scribes in Jesus' day, will ask the question, "What is truth," having lost all love for the truth, and let the matter end there. They will cry, Let us alone, we have all the religion we want unless you come into covenant with us. We are all there are of God's work. We have all the priesthood that there is and we got it from Joseph the Seer, and we have been faithful. We have not sinned, we are blessed above our fellows, possessing all the keys and powers that were ever held by mortals on the earth. What have we to do with you Josephites. This is the assumption, and they do not want to be disturbed. It is so long since they fell asleep as the Bridegroom tarried, that this has been a life-long dream; and since the Scriptures have been dealt them by the living oracles, this song has been their lullaby, and it seems that it is impossible to awaken them to a sense of their condition, to awake and prepare to meet the Bridegroom, for behold he cometh.

JOSEPH SMITH AT NAUVOO.

FROM FIGURES OF THE PAST. FROM THE LEAVES OF OLD JOURNALS.

BY JOSIAH QUINCY, CLASS OF HARVARD COLLEGE, 1821.

Published at Boston, Mass., by Messrs. Roberts
Brothers, 1883.

It is by no means improbable that some future text book, for the use of generations yet unborn, will contain a question something like this: What historical American of the nineteenth Century has exerted the most powerful influence upon the destinies of his countrymen! And it is by no means impossible that the answer to that interrogatory may be thus written: Joseph Smith the Mormon Prophet. And the reply, absurd as it will doubtless seem to most men now living, may be an obvious commonplace to their descendants. History deals in surprises and paradoxes quite as startling as this. The man who established a religion in this age of free debate, and who was and is to-day, accepted by hundreds of thousands as a direct emissary from the Most High, such a rare human being is not to be disposed of by pelting his memory with unsavory epithets. Fanatic, impostor, Charlatan, he may have been; but these hard names furnish no solution to the problem he presents to us. Fanatics and impostors are living and dying every day, and their memory is buried with them. But the wonderful influence which this founder of religion exerted and still exerts, throws him into relief before us, not as a rogue to be criminated, but as a phenomenon to be explained.

The most vital questions Americans are asking each other to-day, have to do with this man and what he has left us. Is there any remedy heroic enough to meet the case, yet in accordance with our national doctrines of liberty and toleration, which can be applied to the demoralizing doctrines now advanced by the sect which he created? The possibilities of the Mormon System are unfathomable. Polygamy may be followed by still darker "revelations." Here is a society resting upon foundations which may at any moment be made subversive of every day duty, which we claim from the citizen. Must it be reached by that last argument which quenched the evil fanaticisms of Malhausen and Munster? A generation other than mine, must deal with these questions. Burning questions they are, which must give a prominent place in the history of the country to that sturdy self asserter whom I visited at Nauvoo.

Joseph Smith claiming to be an inspired teacher, faced adversity such as few men have been called to meet, enjoyed a brief season of prosperity such as few men ever attained, and finally, forty-three days after I visited and saw him, went cheerfully to a Martyr's death. When he surrendered his person to Governor Ford, in order to prevent the shedding of blood, the prophet had a presentment of what was before him. "I am going like a lamb to the slaughter," he is reported to have said; "but I am as calm as a Summer's morning. I have a conscience void of offense, and shall die innocent."

I have no theory to advance respecting this extraordinary man. I shall simply give the facts of my intercourse with him. At some future time they may be found to have some bearing upon the theories of others, who are more competent to make them.

Ten closely written pages of my Journal describe my impressions of Nauvoo, and of its prophet, mayor, general, and judge; but details necessarily omitted in the diary, went into letters addressed to friends at home, and I shall use both of these sources to make my narrative as complete as possible. I happened to visit Joseph Smith in company with a distinguished gentleman who, if rumor may be trusted, has been as conscientious a journal writer as was his father. It is not impossible that my record may one day be supplemented by that of my fellow traveler, the Hon. Charles Francis Adams. It was on the 25th of April, 1844, that Wm. Adams and myself left Boston for the journey to the West, which we had had for some time in contemplation. I omit all account of our adventures—and a very full account is before me—until the 14th of May, when we were ascending the clear, sparkling waters of the Upper Mississippi in the little steam-boat Amaranth. With one exception, we found our fellow passengers uninteresting. The exception is Dr. Goforth. A chivalric, yet simple personage is this same doctor, who has served under General Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, and is now going to Nauvoo to promote the election of the just nominated Henry Clay. It is to this gentleman we owe our sight to the city of the Saints, which strangely enough, we had not intended to visit. Though far from being a Mormon himself, Dr. Goforth told us much that was good and interesting about this strange people. He urged us to see for ourselves the result of the singular political system which had been fastened upon Christianity, and to make the acquaintance of his friend, General Smith, the religious and civil autocrat of the community. "We agreed to stop at Nauvoo," says my journal, "provided some conveyance should be found at the landing which would take us up to General Smith's tavern; and prepared our baggage for this contingency. Owing to various delays, we did not reach the landing till nearly midnight, when our friend, who had jumped on shore the moment the boat stopped, returned with the intelligence that no carriage was to be had, and so we bid him adieu, to go on our way. But as we still lingered upon the hurricane deck, he shouted that there was a house on the landing where we could get a good bed. This changed our destiny, and just at the last moment we hurried on shore. Here we found that the good bed our friend had promised us, was in an old mill, which had been converted into an Irish shanty. However, we made the best of it, and, having dispossessed a cat and a small army of cockroaches of their quarters on the coverlet, we lay down in our dressing gowns and were soon asleep." We left our lowly bed in the gray light of the morning, to find the rain descending in torrents and the roads knee deep in mud. Intelligence of our arrival had in some mysterious way or manner reached General Smith, and the prophet's own chariot, a comfortable carry-all, drawn by two horses, soon made its appearance. It is probable that we owed the alacrity with which we were served, to an odd blunder which had combined our names and personalities, and set forth that no less a man than ex-president John Quincy Adams, had arrived to visit Mr. Joseph Smith. Happily, however, Dr. Goforth, who had gotten upon the road before us divided our persons, and reduced them to their proper proportions, so that no trace of disappointment was visible in the group of rough looking Mormons who awaited our descent at the door of the tavern. It was a three story frame house, set back from the street, and surrounded by a white fence, that we had reached after about two miles of the mud-diast driving. Pre-eminent among the stragglers by the door, stood a man of very commanding appearance, clad in the costume of a journeyman carpenter, when about his work. He was a hearty, athletic fellow, with blue eyes standing prominently out upon his light complexion, a long nose and a retreating forehead. He wore striped pantaloons, a linen jacket, which had not lately seen the wash tub, and a beard of some three days growth. This was the founder of the religion which had been preached in every quarter of the earth.

As Dr. Goforth introduced us to the prophet, he mentioned the parentage of my companion. "God bless you, to begin with," said Joseph Smith, raising his hands in the air, and letting them descend upon the shoulders of Mr. Adams. The benediction, though evidently sincere, had an odd savor of what may be called official familiarity, such as a crowned head might adopt on receiving the heir presumptive of a friendly court. The greeting to me was cordial—with that sort of cordiality with which the president of a college might welcome a deserving janitor and a blessing formed no part of it. "And now come both of you, into the house," said our host, as suiting the action to the word he ushered us across the threshold of his tavern. A fine looking man, is what the passer-by would instinctively have murmured upon meeting the remarkable individual who had fashioned the mold upon which was to be shaped the feelings of so many thousands of his fellow mortals. But Smith was more than this, and one could not resist the impression that capacity and resource were natural to his stalwart person. I have already mentioned the resemblance he bore to Elisha R. Potter, of Rhode Island, whom I met in Washington in 1826. The likeness was not such as would be recognized in a picture, but rather one that would be felt in a grave emergency. Of all men I have met, these two seemed best endowed with that kingly faculty which directs, as by intrinsic right, the feeble or confused souls who are looking for guidance. This it is just to say with emphasis; for the reader will find so much that is purile and even shocking in my report of the prophet's conversation, that he might never suspect the impression of rugged power that was given by the man.

On the right hand, as we entered the house, was a small and very comfortable, or comfortless looking bar room, all the more comfortless, perchance, for its being a dry bar-room, as no spirituous liquors of any kind were permitted at Nauvoo. In apparent search for more private (information) quarters, the prophet opened the door of a room on the left. He instantly shut it again, but not before I perceived that the obstacle to our entrance was its prior occupancy by a woman in bed. He then ran up stairs, calling us to follow him, and throwing open a door in the second story disclosed three Mormons in three beds. This was not satisfactory; neither was the next chamber, which was found upon inspection to contain two sleeping disciples. Our last, the third attempt was somewhat more fortunate, for we had found a room which held but a single bed, and a single sleeper. Into this compartment we were invited to enter. Our host immediately proceeded to the bed, and drew the clothes well over the head of its occupant. He then called a man to make a fire, and begged us to sit down. Smith then began to talk about himself and his people, as of course we encouraged him to do. He addressed his words to Mr. Adams oftener than to me, evidently thinking that this gentlemen had, or was likely to have, political influence, which it was desirable to conciliate. Whether by subtle tact or happy accident, he introduced us to Mormonism as a secular institution, before stating its monstrous claims as a religious system. Polygamy, it must be remembered, formed no part of the alleged revelations upon which the social life at Nauvoo was based. Indeed, the recorded precepts of its prophet were utterly opposed to such a practice, and it is at least doubtful, whether this barbarism was in any way sanctioned by Smith. Let a man who has so much to answer for be allowed to have the full benefit of the doubt; and Mormonism, minus the spiritual wife system, had, as it has to-day, much that was interesting in its secular aspects. Its founder told us what he had accomplished, and the terrible persecutions through which he had brought his people. He spoke with bitterness of outrages to which they had been subjected in Missouri, and implied that the wanton barbarities of his lawless enemies, must one day be atoned for. He spoke of the industrial results of his autocracy in the holy city we were visiting, and of the extraordinary powers of its charter obtained through his friend, Governor Ford. The past had shown him that a military organization was necessary. He was now at the head of three thousand men, equipped by the State of Illinois, and belonging to its militia; and the Saints were prepared to fight as well as to work. "I decided," said Smith, "that the commander of my troops ought to be a Lieutenant General, and I was of course, chosen to that position. I sent my certificate of election to Governor Ford, and received in return a commission of Lieutenant General, of the Nauvoo Legion, and of the Militia of the State of Illinois. Now on examination of the Constitution of the United States, I find that an officer must be tried by a Court Martial composed of his equals in rank; and as I am the only Lieutenant General in the country, I think they will find it pretty hard to try me. At this point breakfast was announced, and a good substantial meal was served in a long kitchen. We sat down with about thirty persons, some of them being in their shirt sleeves, as if just come from work. There was no going out as the rain still fell in torrents; and so when we had finished breakfast, the prophet, (who had changed his working dress to a broad cloth suit while we lingered at the table), proposed to return to the chamber we had quitted, where he would give his views on theology. The bed had been made during our absence, and the fire plentifully replenished. Our party was now increased by the presence of the patriarch, Hiram Smith, Dr. Richards of Philadelphia, who seemed to be a very modest and respectable Mormon, Dr. Goforth, and a Methodist minister, whose name I have not preserved. No sooner were we seated, than there entered some half dozen leaders of the sect, among whom I think were Rigdon and Young; but of their presence I can not be positive. These men constituted a sort of silent chorus during the expositions of their chief. They fixed a searching, yet furtive gaze upon Mr. Adams and myself, as if eager to discover how we were impressed by what we heard. Of the wild talk we heard and listened to, I have preserved but a few fragments. Smith was well versed in the letter of the Scriptures, though he had little comprehension of their spirit. He began by denying the doctrine of the trinity, and supported his views by the glib recitation of a number of texts. From this he passed to his own claims to special inspiration, quoting with great emphasis the 11th and 12th verses of the 4th chapter of Ephesians, which in his eyes adumbrated the whole Mormon hierarchy. The degrees and orders of ecclesiastical dignitaries, he set forth with great precision, being careful to mention the interesting revelation which placed Joseph Smith supreme above them all. This information was plentifully besprinkled with cant phrases, or homely proverbs: "There, I have proved that point as straight as a loon's leg." "The curses of my enemies run off from me, like water from a duck's back." Such are the specimens which my journal happens to preserve. But the exposition was constantly garnished with forcible vulgarisms of a similar sort.* The prophet referred to his miraculous gift of understanding all languages, and took down a Bible in various tongues, for the purpose of exhibiting his accomplishments in this particular. Our position as guests prevented our testing his powers by a rigid examination, and the rendering of a few familiar texts seemed to be accepted by his followers as a triumphant demonstration of his abilities. It may have been an accident, but I observed that the bulk of his translations were from the Hebrew, which presumably, his visitors did not understand, rather than from the classical languages, in which they might more easily have caught him napping or tripping.

"And now come with me," said the prophet, "and I will show you the curiosities." So saying, he led the way to a lower room, where sat a venerable and respectable looking lady. "This is my mother, gentlemen. The curiosities we shall see belong to her. They were purchased with her own money, at a cost of six thousand dollars," and then with deep feeling he added the words, "And that woman was turned out upon the prairies in the dead of the night by a mob." There were some pine presses fixed against the wall of the room. These receptacles Smith opened, and disclosed four human bodies, shrunken and black with age. "These are mummies," said the exhibitor. "I want you to look at that little runt of a fellow over there. He was a great man in his day. Why that was Pharaoh Necho, King of Egypt." Some parchments inscribed with hieroglyphics were then offered us. They were preserved under glass, and handled with great respect. "That is the hand writing of Abraham, the Father of the Faithful," said the prophet. "This is the autograph of Moses, and these lines were written by his brother Aaron. Here we have the earliest account of the creation, from which Moses composed the first Book of Genesis." The parchment last referred to, showed a rude drawing of a man and woman, and a serpent walking upon a pair of legs. I ventured to doubt the propriety of the reptile in question with this unusual means of locomotion. "Why that's as plain as a pikestaff," was the rejoinder. "Before the fall, snakes always went about on legs just like chickens. They were deprived of them, in punishment for their agency in the ruin of man." We were further assured, that the prophet was the only mortal who could translate these mysterious writings, and that his power was given by direct inspiration.

It is well known that Joseph Smith was accustomed to make his revelations point to those sturdy business habits, which lead to prosperity in this present life. He had little enough of that unmingled spiritual power, which flashed out from the spare neurasthenic body of Andrew Jackson. The prophet's hold upon you, seemed to come from the balance and harmony of temperament which reposes upon a large physical basis. No association with the sacred phrases of scripture could keep the inspirations of this man from getting down upon the hard pan of practical affairs. "Verily I say unto you, let my servant, Sidney Gilbert, plant himself in this place and establish a store." So had run one of his revelations, in which no holier spirit than that of commerce is discernible. The exhibition of these august relics concluded with a similar descent into the hard modern world of fact. Monarchs, patriarchs, and parchments, were very well in their way; but this was clearly the nineteenth century, when prophets must get a living, and provide for their relations.

"Gentlemen," said this courageous Mohammed, as he closed the cabinets, "those who see these curiosities, generally pay my mother a quarter of a dollar."

End of chapter first.

BRIGHAMITE REVOLT.

THE following is an extract from an open letter published in the Salt Lake Tribune, and speaks for itself.

"Church officials here are not selected and sustained because of moral worth, but according to the amount of confidence they have in the priesthood, or the powers that be, and their willingness to carry out their behests. Obedience to the priesthood, a willingness to pay tithing, secures a standing in the church, or religious hierarchy, regardless of moral conduct; and were they a thousand miles from Gentile influence, as the Utah Mormons used to be, Manassa would soon become an inquisition as cruel and bloody as those of Spain or Rome, or so I believe, and I send this forth as a note of warning. With many others I have been deceived from my home by the false and lying statements of Utah Mormon elders, to witness suffering and inconvenience before unknown, and to see less morality in Manassa among Utah Mormons than any other place, in proportion to numbers, I ever saw or heard of. These lying elders used to almost anathematize those, when back in the South, who denied them the use of public places to preach in; but they not only close their doors against the Josephites, but their teachers are busy in visiting their members and assiduously laboring with them to prevent them attending Josephite meetings. They berate and call the Josephites false teachers, renegades, etc., but fail in a fair, straight forward way and on the public rostrum to prove by argument and logic that which in a secret way they lay to their charge.

Let all to whom these lines may come, situated in comfortable homes, beware of these religious scoundrels and know that their piety (but assumed) with their professed faith in the Scriptures and love for the first principles of the Gospel is but a trap to allure and decoy, and bring you to where they can exercise dominion over your bodies and souls to enable them to obtain prestige, power and profit. I would do nothing to hinder liberty and religious toleration, but think that representatives of all societies ought to tell a thousand miles from home what are the doings at headquarters. And if the Utah Mormon elders were to exhibit this much honesty, and tell abroad of the workings of the higher laws, viz.: polygamy, tithing, blood-atonement, the Adam God theory, the absolute ruling of the priesthood, etc., their converts would be few indeed. Whatever may be said about the Josephites, there has been quite a shaking up among the inhabitants of Zion since Elder W. W. Blair first adjusted the Josephite cannon. The reports therefrom have been terrible to the otherwise unterrified Utah Mormons. Many have left already for more congenial climes; others are preparing to turn their backs on Zion, and very many more would flee if they could. A company of over forty souls who left here on the 3d of April, arrived safe at Garden Plains, Kansas, on the 8th of May, well satisfied with their change, and glad to breathe the air untainted with priestly domination. The Manassa revolt has dealt Utah Mormonism a deadly blow, thanks to God, Southern manly dignity, and the Josephites.

Darling Genie, thou art gone,
We lay thy body in the tomb;
Thy spirit fair has gone to God,
To rest there in that blest abode,
Until the angel's trump shall sound,
When thy body raised from the ground,
Shall with thy spirit reunite
And dwell on this earth so fair and bright.
The earth then cleansed from sin made free,
Thy dwelling place again shall be;
And if faithful we remain
We'll have our darling babe again;
For God in wisdom does reveal
In these last days his righteous will,
Concerning those who've gone before;
Then rest, sweet babe, thy pains are o'er.

CHURCH LIBRARY.

We thank Bro. George Derry of Lamon, Iowa, for a copy of "Johnson's History of Nebraska," donated to the Church Library.

JOHN SCOTT, Librarian.

NEW BOOK FOR SALE.

Both sides; or, I.—The Claims of the Book of Mormon to a Divine Origin publicly canvassed and maintained. II.—The full Pretensions of the Disciple (Campbellite) Church Examined and Refuted. III.—The Divine Acceptance of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the stand-point of the New Testament.

The late Public Discussion held at Kirtland, Ohio, between E. L. Kelley of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and Clark Braden, the self-styled, "well known Author, Lecturer and Debater;" and the champion of the Disciple (Campbellite) Church. Mr. Kelley furnishes his speeches for the work, and Messrs. Braden & Co. publish the work under the name and style of the Braden-Kelley Debate. Let the wise read both sides and be satisfied.

The attention of the public is especially invited to the published report of the celebrated religious discussion which took place between the above named parties, beginning February 12th, 1884, and closing March the 7th, following, occupying the time of eighteen sessions of two hours each. The work on the part of both disputants was carefully prepared, and particularly that of Mr. Braden for the Disciple Church, who claims to have been at great labor and expense, in order to do the most possible against the claims of the Book of Mormon, and what he termed "Mormonism." The public may therefore feel gratified, that in the possession of this work they will have the strongest arguments to be brought against the faith and hope of the Saints, whatever may be said in their favor.

The following are the questions discussed:— I.—Is the Book of Mormon of Divine Origin, and its Teachings Entitled to the Respect and Belief of all Christian People? II.—Is the Church of which I, Clark Braden, am a member, (the Campbellite Church), the Church of Christ, and Identical in Faith, Teaching, Organization, Ordinances, Worship and Practice, with the Church of Christ, as it was left Perfected by the Apostles? III.—Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Fact the Church of God, and Accepted with him?

The discussion of the first proposition occupied ten sessions. The time of four sessions each was devoted to the second and third questions. No person who desires to be posted upon the questions discussed can afford to be without this work. In the consideration of the proposition relating to the Book of Mormon, the proofs brought in its support are simply overwhelming, as against the enumerated tales and commonly published newspaper stories and neighborhood gossip brought and relied upon to oppose it.

1.—It was shown to be a popular and delusive error, that God never revealed his will to any people but the Jews; and that, although he created man to dwell upon the face of the whole earth, he left all without any communication of his will, or divine precept to guide and direct their moral and religious natures, except in the little country of Palestine.

2.—That the idea that all inspiration, spiritual power, and the quickening influence of the Holy Spirit were confined to the Eastern Continent, and the people of the first century was truly, in the full sense of the word, Atheistic and anti-Christian.

3.—That the Book of Mormon is a work that is in every particular so far as doctrinal principles and moral precepts are concerned in harmony with the teaching and instruction of the New Testament Scriptures.

4.—That the object of the book being to convince persons who know not God, that Jesus Christ was indeed the Christ, the Son of God, manifesting himself in the flesh, that no persons claiming to be Christians should be found fighting against the work.

5.—The many prophecies of the Bible pointing to the nation of which the Book of Mormon is a History, and the character and object of the work itself are marshaled, and may be studied at will by the critical reader.

6.—The most full and complete line of evidences ever published in this country in a single work of the discoveries in science and archaeological research were brought to corroborate the statements of the book, and will be easily attained by the reader.

7.—The Spaulding Romance, which has for so many years been on the lips of the enemies of the book, and which was set up as a defense to the claims of the Book of Mormon by Mr. Braden in the nature of an alibi, was shown to be utterly without foundation in fact, and newspapers, periodicals, gazetteers, encyclopedias and histories, which have so long contained voluminous statements of the "Spaulding Story" must absolutely read and stand corrected, or be found sitting in the darkness when this evidence fairly adduced, is turned upon them.

8.—Under the Second Proposition the faith of the followers of Mr. Campbell is fully canvassed and shown to be wanting when compared with the doctrine and faith of Jesus and the Apostles.

Few men will ever read candidly the discussion of the Second Proposition and remain in full faith and confidence in the Campbellite Church thereafter. The discussion should be in every household possible to place it. The people already have all the stories Mr. Braden has been able to collect and spin out against the Saints. Give them the other side, and let the work go into the hands of every Latter Day Saint.

N. B.—Mr. Braden, after agreeing in writing that each should have an equal and fair showing in the publication and circulation of the said discussion, has seen fit, without even a consultation with me, to issue a Circular Notice, announcing the publication of a "Supplementary Volume to the Debate," to be issued at the same time.

This I take to be a confession on his part that he has not met my arguments in the discussion, and that he hopes to counteract the force in another way. But such an infringement I shall not permit to pass unnoticed, and therefore, announce the issuance of a Companion Volume to his "Supplementary," which will be ready for distribution in about sixty days after the Braden publication. This will contain:

1.—A full and complete review of the Braden "Supplementary Volume."

2.—The full and complete history of the scheme to destroy the validity of the claim made by the Book of Mormon, under the title of the Spaulding Story.

3.—An article showing the claims of the Book of Mormon to a place in the Christian Religion, and its necessity in the publication of the Gospel of Peace.

5.—The attitude of the religion, and Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to the Government, and the noble and active part many of the leading members of the Church took in the preservation of the Government during the late Civil War.

6.—A full account of the work done by the Church against Polygamy before the Congress of the United States: In the years 1866, in the year 1872, and in the year 1881 and 1882.

7.—An account of the work of the Reorganized Church in reclaiming persons from Polygamy in Utah, and breaking the power of that Institution, as held over its churches in many places in Europe, since the year 1860.

8.—A publication of such Revelations as are contained in the Book of Commandments as have been charged to differ in any respect with those in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

The book will be eminently one to be distributed to the people, to set out properly the claims and positions of the Saints, and that ought to be placed in the hands of your neighbors to read. It will contain many things not possible to outline in this announcement, and of a character to interest our friends and enemies, as well as ourselves.

The Braden-Kelley debate can be had as follows: Cloth $2.00. Stout Paper Covers $1.25. The work is large, containing about 400 pages of solid reading. The Companion Volume same prices, but a discount of twenty-five per cent on this to all persons buying both volumes from Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa. Liberal terms to Agents. Send moneys and applications for books direct to Joseph Smith, Lamoni, Iowa.

A SECRET.

EVERYBODY likes to have a secret; it seems a great treasure to some people, and yet such are not able to keep it; they give it away like the Irishman because he wanted somebody else to share it. "A secret is too little for one, enough for two, and too much for three"—says Howell. Shakspeare says, "Two may keep counsel, putting one away." I call it downright mean for one to betray another on such confidence. The way the cat gets out of the bag is a constant surprise—but that she skips around when she is let out is no surprise at all. Many a thing that seems like a secret is none—and some go retailing it in whispers just for the pleasure they have of being the first edition of bad gossip. Such circulation does not pay, and our advice to these tattle-mongers is to let secrets alone, and mind their own common business. How much work would be done, which is now neglected, if every body would only attend to their own business, and let their neighbors alone. This we all know is no secret, and yet many look on it as a profound mystery.

We are free agents; then we should use our privilege to enjoy life.

We can have a philosophy of our own according to our privilege, as free moral agents.

None but God is perfect.

If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

GEO. MONTAGUE.

ERNO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds,

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds,

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ANOTHER fire occurred at Stewartville, Missouri, July 29th, at 2 a. m. Two buildings were burned, one the calaboose or town "lock-up," the other a building occupied as a meat market. Sr. Worden owned a half interest in the last, which is a total loss to her. Bro. J. H. Merriam's office and gallery, and the printing office of Bro. Reidel's, barely escaped.

The barn of Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, Galien, Michigan, was struck by lightning, during a thunder shower, July 24th, fired by the electric flame, and with its contents and adjacent outbuildings burned. About fifty tons of hay, 400 bushels of shelled corn, 450 bushels of wheat, and a lot of tools and farming implements were also burned. Bro. Blakeslee's loss must reach nearly three thousand dollars.

Sultry weather and frequent rains have seriously retarded harvesting and haymaking in Decatur county. Some damage has been done to oats and grass that have been cut; but corn and other growing crops are greatly benefitted by the showers.

Elder William Smith left Lamoni, for Lucas, July 30th, where he expected to stay for a few days.

The fire was lighted in the brick kiln at Lamoni, July 24th, and at present writing, July 31st, the brick are being rapidly prepared by fire for the walls of a house erected to the Master's service. Tried "so as by fire."

By letter from Bro. E. L. Kelley, dated at No. 1445, Madison street, St. Louis, Missouri, July 21st, we learn that Brn. Price and Potts, two young men, have arrived there from England. Good work has been done in the city by Brn. H. C. Bronson and J. C. Foss, and five have been lately added by baptism there.

Bro. C. G. Lanphear, wrote from Greenwood, Steuben county, New York, July 21st. He had preached at two points two and a half and five miles away in school houses to only fair congregations, but with reasonable liberty.

Bro. Thomas W. Smith, is in readiness to start upon the mission assigned him at last April session of conference, Australia and the Society Islands. He expects to go to the latter direct from San Francisco. Bro. Joseph F. Burton proceeding to Australia, which arrangement seems to be the best under the circumstances. We learn that some doubt about the propriety of the mission being undertaken by Bro. Smith, owing to the terms of the revelation of the fall of 1882. There need be none; for the revelation affirms only that not "many foreign missions" can be taken, and does not convey the idea that none can be taken. It is clear that the taking of the mission is not in antagonism with that revelation. It is also clear that both Tahiti and Australia ought to be visited, and that soon, by a competent ministry. The work demands it and the times are propitious for it. Both elders are worthy and competent, and the mission should be promptly and freely sustained.

The Cheese Factory at Lamoni, made 2,200 lbs. of cheese during the week ending July 26th, and sold at the factory five hundred dollars.

The meat Market and business at Lamoni, changed hands July 30th. Mr. Eberhardt Junior selling out to a Mr. Tyrrell from Michigan.

Lamoni is again left without a minister (shoe maker) to the soles of its inhabitants. Mr. Jagge, who came from Omaha, a year ago has gone. Another, who could stand it to build up a trade would be welcome. Repairing is the main thing, and there is need of that in these days of "shoddy" leather uppers and paper soles.

David Blair, son of Bro. W. W. Blair in the employ of Osborne & Co., of Salt Lake City, accidentally fell while descending a stairway of the building in which he was at work, and striking against a hook in his fall was badly lacerated about the abdomen. For a while the hot weather made the case critical, but last accounts state that he will soon be able to go to work.

Bro. Thomas W. Smith writes a card from Independence, Missouri, July 21st, that he expects to be in Stewartville, Sunday, July 27th, and in Lamoni about August 12th.

We call attention to Bro. Stephen Maloney's advertisement of lots in Independence, Missouri. We have seen the locality and it is certainly a pleasant looking locality. We have found Bro. Maloney to be a pleasant man to deal with and think the Saints will so find him.

In notice of Sr. Wetherbee's death, on page 487 of present volume of HERALD, read Mary Ann, instead of Margaret A.; and 53 years 4 months and six days, instead of 54 years 4 months and four days. These corrections are made at the request of Bro. E. M. Shupe, brother of Sr. Wetherbee.

It was expected that the book, Braden-Kelley debate would be out this week or next. As soon as an installment arrives at the Herald Office we shall give notice, so that the elders can get it.

Brethren are ordering the Braden and Kelley debate, but to date, August 1st, none have been received at the Herald Office. As soon as the books are received, we will fill all orders received in the order of their date, as far as we may be supplied.

Bro. Clarence St. Clair was on July 29th at Holden, Missouri, making an effort to spread the work as the way may open. He states that he is day by day receiving testimony of the divine origin of the Book of Mormon.

Eleven thousand pounds of cheese were made at the Lamoni cheese factory for the month of July.

Bro. George Montague wrote from Bellair, Illinois, July 29th. He was on his way to Kentucky, and Tennessee. He has a niece living at Bellair, who was anxious that some one would come that way and preach. He called on his way south, spoke three times on Sunday, with good liberty, and had good attention. He thinks that there is a good prospect for good to be done if some one could follow his labors there. Bellair is in Crawford county. The elder in charge of the district might make it in his way to furnish a laborer there. He writes that any one going in there may call on O. S. Goodin, twelve miles south of Casey, on the Vandalia line of Railway.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Peter Adamson wrote from Coal Creek, Colorado, reciting the visit and preaching of Bro. Caffall, more particularly given in Bro. Caffall's letter elsewhere. Three were baptized. Bro. Adamson says:

The Saints felt sorry to part with Bro. Caffall, for the more we heard him preach, the more we loved him. May God bless him in his mission, that he may be able to bring many souls into the kingdom is my prayer.

Bro. J. C. Clapp writes from Moscow, I. T., July 23d, as follows:

"All speak the same thing;" ought to be an admonition to Mr. C. W. Penrose, editor of the Deseret News. He says, "the Prophet died before he completed the revision of the Bible." But in their favorite text book; entitled "A Compendium of the faith and doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," by Franklin D. Richards, one of the Twelve Apostles of their church; on page 223, we read, "February 2, J. Smith, Jun., completed the translation of the New Testament." On the same page, "J. Smith, Jun., (July 2d, 1833) completed the translation of the Bible." Would it not be well for the learned editor to make himself better acquainted with his books before he ventures to answer another question like the one referred to in the Saints' Herald of July 19th.

IN returning from Richmond, the Editor passed a half day and a night at St. Joseph, Missouri, the guest of Bro. John Burlington, and in company with Bro. Senterlow Butler. He spent a very agreeable half day in this wise. After dinner, Brn. Burlington, Butler and the Editor started off together, but pausing in front of the cracker and confectionery works; Bro. Burlington went on to his office and work, but the Editor under guidance of Bro. Butler proposed to visit the candy manufacturing department.

This was found up a broad flight of of stairs and in a large room in the south end of the building. Bro. A. C. Dempsey was in charge with a force of three young men, a boy, and a young woman. We learned afterward that a part of the force was absent. We had never seen candy made, except the taffy made at the fairs, and on the streets by traveling candy makers. In two shallow kettles, either copper or brass, over two furnaces near one corner of the room about one hundred and twenty pounds of sugar and syrup were boiling, preparatory to making a batch of candy. Taking a dipper of cold water, Bro. Dempsey dipped his fingers into the water, and then into the boiling sugar, taking out some on his three fingers. This he dipped into the water testing it if ready. Calling to his employees they lifted the kettles off the fire and poured the liquid on two tables the tops of which were of stone, one being hollowed out leaving an inch deep rim all round the edges; the other flat, but having long, slender, square iron, or steel bars laid around the edges to keep the melted sugar from running off. When partially cooled the two masses were divided into several parts, one of the boys using a large flat knife, the other a small scoop shovel, such as are used on a farm for shoveling corn, or other grain.

One of these parts was left on the slab in its natural color; another was laid by itself and from a small keg standing just under the end of one of the tables Bro. Dempsey took with a wooden paddle some dark coloring matter, which we were told was cochineal, and placed in the center of the mass; a few dextrous turns and the whole was of a bright reddish appearance. Two sorts of candy were to be made, one the ordinary spirally striped stick, the other was to contain the name of the firm so pulled into the stick that however small the section broken off the word "Riley" would be seen in the end of it. Two masses of the batch had been skillfully pulled over two great hooks fastened each into one of the posts that supported the roof, until it showed the whitish waxy look seen in the stick. For the striped stick portions of the white and dark about a foot long and as large as one's arm were placed one over the other until the whole roll was as large as a water pail, or nail keg. It was then placed on a long table in front of a small sheet iron furnace to keep it soft enough to work. Two of the boys took hold of this mass of striped sugar and pulled it out; one of them more rapidly than the other, until one began to pull it out smaller and smaller, rolling it under his hand until it grew into long slender striped rolls to be cut into shorter lengths by and by. His comrade who stood on the opposite side of the table would catch the slender and pliant rods of sugar, and roll them and straighten them, ranging them against a thin upright board raised on his side of the table. Every long rod that he added to the number near him, he would roll the entire lot so that they might harden round and not flatten on one side. It took only a few minutes to change the huge lump of sugar with stripes like the American flag red and white, into long slender sticks of spirally striped candy, ready for the goody boy and his nickel. Of the other masses Bro. Dempsey took strips of the cochineal colored lump, cutting them into lengths with a pair of large shears, and rolls of the white, and fashioned an oblong square mass with the word RILEY in large letters in the ends. Around this he wrapped the uncolored lump, and proceeded to press it and pull it out in front of one of the furnaces on the table. Soon he had the table covered with long slender bars about half an inch thick and three quarters wide, and six, seven or eight feet long. These strips had the letters of the word Riley through their entire length but reduced from the large two and a half inch letters made in the lump to the small though plainly seen letters in the little stick.

There were stars, and moons, and jaw-breakers, and chocolates, and gums, and every other style of sweetmeat one could think of, in barrels and boxes and in piles and pails, and we don't know what all. It was one of the most curious and instructive hours the editor ever spent in a manufacturing establishment, the one he spent with Bro. Butler in the wholesale candy factory of Mr. Riley, St. Joseph, Missouri. Of course the editor brought away some specimens of the work. Bro. Dempsey seemed to understand the trade of making sweets.

From the factory we wandered down to Bro. Burlington's office. A few years ago Bro. Burlington and his son-in-law, St. Robert Winning, organized the "St. Joseph Transfer Company," for the purpose of transferring goods, wares, merchandise from depot to store, store and factory to depot and all other sorts of such carrying, Bro. Burlington taking active charge. The beginning was small, the project new; the result was that the first year the business was conducted at considerable loss, the next year barely held its own; the next a small profit. Since then it has grown every year, until now, the St. Joseph Transfer Company is an institution occupying an office in the business part of the city, runs ten double wagons, and hands to keep them in motion, is connected by telephone with all the principal business places of the city; carries and delivers goods all over the city, often paying freight bills on goods delivered from the various railway depots to the amount of hundreds of dollars per day; keeps a messenger boy, and is one of the useful institutions of a large and flourishing city,—all the result of energy, push and being "always on hand," which is one of the business mottoes of the firm. Long may the firm flag float with John Burlington, sen., or son at its head.

It was but a step over to the factory of Brn. Butler and Clay, stocking weavers. And what a variety of hose, stockings and socks, and women's knit jackets we saw there. And what a sight to see the curious process of stocking weaving going on.

Brn. Butler and Clay are deserving of credit the way they have worked into a trade; and it must be that they can by and by add to their stocks and room. Saints will do well to buy their stockings of Brn. Butler and Clay, manufacturers and dealers in cotton and woolen goods, St. Joseph, Missouri.

THE conflict between monarchism and government by the people is still raging over in the old world. The Devonshire Club, in London, England, gave a banquet to Chamberlain, President of the Board of Trade. This Mr. Chamberlain in a speech denounced the English House of Lords. He regretted that the Marquis of Salisbury had precipitated a contest between the two houses of Parliament, the House of Lords and the House of Commons; yet believed that it must needs take place sooner or later. It would settle now "once for all the supremacy of popular rights over personal privileges. The pretensions of the House of Lords were arrogant and monstrous. If they should be accepted the Commons would be degraded to a subordinate position."

It is but right that this conflict should proceed. It began in England before the days of King John, and the foundations for the final triumph of the people's rights were laid by the riotous life of the Conqueror, and William the Red; revolt from which was wisely avoided by Henry who in marriage with Edith, of Scotland, blended with royal blood a stream of life that has surged against the walls of kingly title: until little is left of the English Throne but the trappings and empty name of Royalty. The Courts of Equity and Justice, the access of the people to them, established by Edward II in the Banquet Hall of Rufus have done the people noble service, the fitting conclusion of which must be the dissolving of the crown, the breaking in twain the mace, the selling of the Regal purple in the open mart, and the housing of the Throne in the Museum of the Relics of the Realm.

England's people are not in temper to see the days of Warwick and Richard repeated in struggles for the crown; and it is possible that the reign of the good Queen Victoria may end the struggle and give the people supremacy.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it right for those not of the church to put on oil that has been consecrated, or for members of the church to use it for hair oil, or on chapped hands, &c.

Ans.—All believers, whether baptized or not, may, under proper circumstances use consecrated oil. It may be used for all medicinal purposes, but should be for none others.

Q.—Is it right for any but the Elders and those holding the higher offices in the church, to lay on hands, whether in the name of the Lord or otherwise?

A.—Not as a rule. It may be done as the exception, should circumstances demand it.

Q.—Should the administering to the sick, confirming members, blessing children, be done in a public meeting, also consecrating oil?

A.—Not necessarily.

Q.—Whence came the practice of consecrating of oil and where is the command for it?

A.—The practice of consecrating oil to be used in cases of sickness, so far as the Church of Christ is concerned, dates with its organization in 1830, and runs with its history. It must have been practiced at a very early period, but at what time commanded, or whether commanded, or not, we can not now say. It seems to be one of those things pointed out by the propriety of the case. Men may eat bread and drink wine, but to constitute the sacrament the emblems must be blessed, and this is commanded.

Correspondence.

LAMONI, Iowa,

July 25th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I notice in the Deseret News of Salt Lake City, Utah, for July 22d, six columns of closely printed matter, of what is called Utah Mormon gospel sermon, reported as preached in the Tabernacle, June 29th, 1884, by three of the official members of that church; George Q. Cannon, Wilford Woodruff and President John Taylor. The object of these sermons, as it would seem from the very special points in question, was to let their brethren and all the world know that the speakers were firm believers in the gospel taught by Joseph Smith, and confirmed by the teachings of Christ and his apostles.

We do not condemn the principles of the gospel that these Utah Mormon Elders profess to teach; but did it ever occur to these missionaries, that while they are preaching these first principles of the gospel abroad, that when their new made converts arrive in Salt Lake City, they have another gospel preached to them there? Do these Mormon Elders while preaching abroad, tell the people of these two gospels which they preach? The one they preach abroad for a snare, and the one in Utah for a cut throat system of taking endowment oaths and covenants, and promising to obey a skeleton of a priesthood, that have no more conscience than a hungry wolf. Do they tell them of this new gospel, that they dare not preach—anywhere—only in and under the shades of the mountains? These are not first-principles of-the-gospel-gentlemen, who tell of gods many; and of making gods out of finite man; and that an iron clad priesthood becomes a god to the people. No, gentlemen of this new Mormon faith; it is well that you define some points of your religious faith so very specifically on first principles among strangers. This will do as a snare; but where you are known at home, your treacherous system of another gospel, would not do to preach among strangers.

"What spiders' webs some men weave,
When first they practice to deceive."

Such is the character of Utah Mormonism. At home it is a viper, abroad a Saint.

WM. B. SMITH.

COLDWATER, Michigan,

July 17th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Gordon Deuell is with us. There were two Elders from Salt Lake in the neighborhood last week. Preached in our school-house last Sunday evening. Subject, restoration of the gospel, gathering to the mountains, commandment on building temples, &c., and baptism for the dead. Bro. Deuell asked permission to ask a few questions. It was not granted; so after they dismissed, Bro. Deuell called the house to order, and if ever you heard a man get right down to business he did. Not roughly, but told the facts in the case, rejection of the church, and answered all they had said. Did more good than a year's preaching. The house was crowded and all were pleased with few exceptions.

B. CORLESS.

HUTCHINSON, Colorado,

July 24th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I risk nothing by saying that the time for nations, or even a nation to be born in a day, has not yet come. So far from this, that labor and patience, resulting in gathering the ones of a city and twos of a family, are very necessary.

I left Manassa in the early part of June. Effects of labor thereat are too well known to need further detail. As per request, I touched and stayed long enough in Starkville to deliver three gospel sermons. A lack of interest precluded a longer stay. Bro. Kent and family are lonesome, feeling the non-enjoyment of Saints' fellowship a great deprivation. So it is, some Saints sigh because of this deprivation; others could and ought to enjoy it, but will not. One poor man, 'tis said, whose limbs were tired from sawing wood, looked in the distance, and seeing a marble fronted building, sighed for the man's wealth, who, he supposed, was inside rolling in luxuries. From one of the windows of this marble fronted building the wood sawyer was seen by a man propped up with pillows, etc., and suffering pain, craving and sighing for the poor man's health. Neither satisfied, both thinking they should have had something they had not, and something they had they should not have had. So goes the world. To be contented in the station placed, with a view by every legitimate effort to improve, may be a difficult lesson; but Latter Day Saints ought to learn and practice it.

To comply with a request, I stopped long enough at Coal Creek to deliver thirty-five gospel discourses. Some meetings were better attended than I expected; three were baptized, and a branch organized with eight members. Some two or three others will unite as soon as letters from the branches left are obtained. Bro. P. Adamson elected president, Sr. John secretary and treasurer. They thereby may enjoy fellowship for a time; but much of Colorado's population is floating. And sometimes Saints float too, and amid the splendor, noise and din of a modern babylon, float, and keep a long way off that moral rectitude the gospel makes obligatory. As in other places, there are in Coal Creek those who believe the doctrine, or so declare; but lack the stamina necessary to show their faith by their works. 'Tis claimed that Coal Creek has a population of 2,000, though I think this is an exaggeration, but there are extensive coal diggings; and be this as it may, there are eight whisky and beer saloons in full blast, and rivers of lager beer being consumed. Some of the fair sex 'tis said being foremost in the demoralizing practice. There are eight secret societies. Quite a respectable hall has been erected under the auspices of the order of Odd Fellows, which is occupied every night save Sunday night by one or the other society.

Being at one time in company with a member of a very prominent secret society, he vauntingly said, it took one and a half hours to make a member, and added, "the oath they take is terrible." What monkey shines they go through in such secret conclaves, is hard to tell. And why a beneficiary society (if that is its only object) should want to be bound up in secret oaths and covenants, with grips and passwords, is puzzling. I have heard that some such places are very sacred, made so by the presence of the Lord, which is still more puzzling—when I remember that the Book of Mormon declares, that the Lord worketh not in secret combinations. "I spake openly to the world," said Christ. "I ever taught in your synagogues and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort, and in secret have I said nothing."—John 18:20. So that Moroni and Christ, two competent witnesses, condemn secrecy. "The truth shall make you free;" but how are men free when bound by oaths and covenants? I was surprised one day to see a peculiar sign on several conspicuous places and on inquiry was informed that it was a call for a public meeting of a certain secret society. It now seems that secrecy is the order of societies. Employers seem afraid of their employees, and vice versa. Secrecy appears to be the protection sought, or through it is thought a remedy may be reached. And so secret societies are spreading over the land. People of this great common wealth, whose interests are identical, or should be, are divided into political parties, each party at a big outlay of time and money, is striving to prove the other too debased to rule the country; and if elevated to positions of trust, will bring disgrace and ruin. One sees a glorious future of peace and prosperity for the country; another sees her on the ragged edge of a yawning precipice. Surely all things are in commotion. What shall the end, or "harvest be?"

I know it is claimed that because of help to widows and orphans, the sick, &c., that beneficiary societies are very necessary; and the good thus obtained, takes away the harshness of secrecy, etc. But does not the law of God contemplate that such benefits shall accrue to the needy in the church? It certainly does. But how is this to be done? If at all, it must be by the creation of a fund by the members to be put into the hands of the Bishop. But if members place their surplus money in these secret societies outside of the church, how shall this be done? If the gospel is what it purports to be it is worth our best and continued efforts. And why divide time and money or invest in other societies? If it is not what it purports to be, why parley? If by an exclusive plan, the gospel, our spiritual interest is to be enhanced, while we are at liberty to go where we please for popularity, prestige, and temporal aid, then the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants are the most singular and unreliable books ever known.

The Santa Fe Railroad company have extensive coal mines adjacent to Coal Creek. Gave notice to their men of a reduction after the 1st of July, which the men are trying to arbitrate, in which they may be unsuccessful; in which event a strike may be declared. The war between capital and labor is growing fierce. The former, heretofore has been king.

I have called at Hutchinson for a short visit. Intend reaching Nebraska as soon as possible. May possibly touch Cheyenne. Doubtless the need of laborers is great every where. Bro. Frank Mintun had labored very acceptably in Nebraska, laying a good foundation for future usefulness. Farewell Bro. Frank, thrust in your sickle and reap, and may you bear many sheaves.

I was glad to leave one so worthy as Bro. F. B. Moyers, to represent and defend the faith in Manassa. All these are now acquainted with our position in contradistinction to Utah Mormonism. And if they wish to unite, Bro. Moyer is authorized to act, he having been ordained to the office of an Elder by Bro. W. W. Blair. I look upon such people as Bro. and Sr. Moyer and others who united with us in that locality, most of whom have emigrated, leaving but four members, but quite a number of others believing, as a great acquisition to the church.

J. CAFFALL.

FITCHBURG, Mass.,

July 24th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—How my heart burns with renewed zeal, when I read the good letters in the Saints' Herald. It is indeed a welcome visitor to us every Saturday. I love to read of what our brothers and sisters are doing to help the cause along, and to unfurl the banner of light, that it may shine more brightly and clearly, amidst the darkness that has shrouded the people so long. I do not wonder that the honest in heart so often almost lose their way, and can not even feel the clasp of their Savior's hand.

The other day I was talking with a good M. E. sister who said, "How can I help having only darkness and mystery; there are only a few in our church who seem to have any light, and they are clear beyond me, or any of us who have such daily trials and temptations; I have tried and tried, but it's no use. I am almost discouraged, but only hope all will be well, when I get on the other side." I talked with the dear sister, and by the help of the Spirit, I was able to show her something of the pure light and truth of the gospel. She was pleased, and directly asked when our people were coming to preach here—she would be one of the first to come and hear. She was tired of the pride shown in the churches, &c. I find these honest hearted ones every day, as I go from house to house in my canvassing business. Are they not the stray lambs upon the mountains, that the Master wants us to find, and draw into the fold? Shall we not take of the bread that has been so freely given to us, and feed these hungry ones, whom we also find sometimes in the valley. I can not rest idly in my home, while the Master says, "Arise and work." I am trying with his help to do what I can, though it is but little; pray for me that my labors may not be in vain. We daily remember you with all the dear saints, at the throne of grace. "Let us pray for one another," &c.

From your sister in gospel bonds,

A. V. HOXIE.

OLIVET, Mahaska Co., Iowa,

July 22d, 1884.

Friend Herald Readers:—On the 8th of May last, in company with our estimable young brother, "Lettie" Brackenbury, went to the house of Bro. David Whitmer, and upon being ushered into the parlor, the noted and far-famed veteran was apprised of our presence and came into the parlor, when we had the inestimable pleasure of forming an acquaintance that shall ever be dearly remembered by us. I told him I was very much pleased on having the pleasure of forming his acquaintance, as it was something I had long time desired. "Well," said he, "when you see me, you but see an old man whose days are almost numbered." "Yes," I replied, "but sometimes certain incidents occur in the history of men's lives, that render their acquaintance and presence more pleasurable than that of others; and such we deem has been the case with yourself." We were then invited into the sitting room, where the aged friend reclined on a lounge, feeling somewhat indisposed. Then we talked about the invaluable plates, the angel's appearance, etc. He said: "I saw the angel as plainly as I see you; he was surrounded by the glory of God, which overshadowed us, and we heard his voice, and we saw the records of the Book of Mormon," etc. "My testimony is the same as at the beginning, and is true."

I asked him of Oliver Cowdery, and he said, "Oliver's testimony was ever the same till death. His remains lie over there, [pointing toward the cemetery], that's where he was buried." I understood the Utah folks had offered him a large sum of money if he would dispense to them the manuscript, but he declined their offer. Then they asked him to set his price, and he replied there was "not money enough in the world to buy it of him." When he would speak of the record, and angel, his countenance would beam with light, his eyes brighten and sparkle; his voice become firm and unflinching. He would relate the scene with a freshness and earnestness of expression, as though it were of recent occurrence, and not of fifty-five years ago. Friends, do you suppose this man would have hesitated five minutes about surrendering that manuscript into others' hands for hundreds of thousands of dollars, had it been of Spaulding origin?

Had there not been back of it, the voice of God and of an holy angel, and the unspeakable glory, would not the "golden calf" have been a sparkling temptation and an irresistible inducement to let it go! But no! Here we have in this man an integrity rarely equalled. A man who has withstood all the calumny, vituperation and mocking of a blinded world. A man, who in the presence of prosperity and adversity, midst sunshine and cloud, calm and storm, disease and death, when the church was in her glory, and in her gloom, when she prospered, and when she became blighted by the damning breath of persecution and apostasy; through it all, for fifty-five years has his testimony of the heavenly scene, and of the divinity of the Book of Mormon, been the same unwavering, unswerving testimony! And now, while gray hairs adorn his temples, and the frost of nearly eighty winters has done its chilling work, and his voice soon to falter in death, shall that testimony, and a faithful life sanctify his resting place and hallow the hour of his departure, when the angel whom he saw shall speak to him in a happier world, and clasp hands with the two "witnesses" who await his coming.

He permitted us to view the manuscript, which we did, and read extracts in it, finding what we read identical with the printed book. Headings of chapters were properly written. Names of places and men commencing with capital letters. I saw the three different handwritings. The paper is remarkably well preserved, being of foolscap size, and numbers of the sheets sewed together with yarn "Grandmother Whitmer spun;" and it is well preserved too. We also saw the transcription of characters as done by Joseph Smith's hand, which Martin Harris took to the Professor.

Men may talk of these witnesses renouncing Mormonism and going back on their testimony, as Rev. Bowman did at Edenville, a time ago; but I know better, their statement is founded in falsehood, and wilful ignorance.

While at Richmond, Bro. Whitmer received a letter from some brother in Michigan concerning his testimony, and Bro. Whitmer requested me to say to all Herald readers, that his testimony was the same as found in Book of Mormon, and he had never asked that it be taken out, or that he had changed his mind relative to it; and never to believe anything you may hear to the contrary; that he was not able to answer so many uncalled for questions. He reads the Herald, and I write this request according to my promise to him.

Yours cheerfully,

J. FRANK McDOWELL.

EAST DES MOINES, Iowa,

Dear Saints:—I often feel comforted when reading the Herald. I very much need instruction concerning this great work. We hear some say they know it is the work of the Lord, and yet do so little to roll that work on. We need to pray often for wisdom and strive to live an every day religion, that our actions may prove our profession, and do good to our fellow creatures. I notice we are very ready to blame Satan for many troubles we bring on ourselves through not being wise. We must be willing to even give him his just due. We had a very pleasant visit from Bro. Joseph last Sabbath, July 19th. He spoke three times to large congregations. His visit did both Saints and sinners good. Come again soon brother. We know that every good gift cometh from above. I pray God to give each one wisdom while life shall last, and save us in his kingdom. Your sister,

E. RAY.

INGLENOOK, California,
July 14th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have moved to a new field, where "Christ had not been mentioned," and where there is much good government land for the Saints who want it. I have preached every Sabbath (six Sabbaths) since I have been here, with congregations, and interest increasing. I need some one to help me very much, as this is a large field. My headquarters are Inglenook, Mendocino county, California.

J. R. COOK.

PEORIA, Illinois,
No. 222, West Elizabeth St.,
July 25th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—While perusing your pages I was led to ask myself the question, What is my duty. After meditating on the subject, and considering the circumstances under which I am placed, I answer, I do not know. We live in a city where pride, vanity, and wickedness reign. Our children are mostly grown. We have no society here. We could have plenty if we would leave out our peculiar views, or say nothing about them. We have no association of Saints, no meetings; only Sunday School consisting of our own family. Occasionally a brother or sister drops in; we can spend an hour very profitably; but O how we miss meeting with the Saints.

When I read the letters where the Saints have such glorious times enjoying the Spirit of promise, it makes me wish I could be with them. I am glad to be counted worthy of a name and a place in the Kingdom of Christ, established in these latter days by divine appointment. What a glorious privilege we have, of knowing for ourselves of the truth of the work in which we are engaged. I am glad that I have the assurance, that if I prove faithful to the end, the reward is sure. I rejoice when I read the testimonies of the aged ones in regard to the truth of the work. We may be deprived of the association of Saints; but our Heavenly Father will not forsake us if we put our trust in him.

Brethren and sisters, pray for us in our isolated condition, that we may learn what our duty is, and do it in the fear of God.

Yours in the covenant of peace,
JANE A. ROBINSON.

NEW STRAUTSVILLE, O.,

Editor Herald:—Elders when passing around in this section, can find a welcome at my house. I have a father and mother who are lovers of truth, and several brothers who believe in the gospel as preached by Latter Day Saints. I also have a brother a member of your church, residing at Clarksburg, W. Va., he is the only one of us who has joined your church.

Yours,
ISAAC VERNON.

SANTA ANA, Cal.,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Out on a trip with Bro. Mills. Spirit is with us, all goes well. We need more laborers. Work is looking up, some are coming and others will soon follow. Weather fine, flood is over, and crops will be fair, generally. Hope to see you and the Bishop out here this fall without fail. Love to all.

Yours in bonds,
HIRAM HOLT.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

July 24th.—Ten deaths occurred in Marseilles last night and twenty at Toulon. There have been thirty-one deaths at Arles in two days. The majority of the inhabitants of that town have fled. At Marseilles up to noon six deaths from cholera had occurred since 9 o'clock. At the Pharaoh Hospital five died and five were discharged cured since last night. Eighty patients remain in the hospital. At Marseilles there were sixteen deaths from cholera today between 11 a. m. and 6 p. m. There were seven deaths today at Arles and three at Lavalette. Four deaths occurred at Toulon between 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. The condition of Toulon is greatly improved. Eighteen fresh cases were admitted into the hospitals there today. The Saint Mandrier Hospital of that city contains 122 cases, and only a few of them are serious. There were forty-eight deaths from cholera at Marseilles for the twenty-four hours ended at 9 o'clock tonight.

The aspect at Marseilles is becoming sombre. The steamer which arrives weekly from Algeria is suppressed. The line to Syria is stopped. The South American packets have ceased to call there. The customs offices and quays are deserted. There are many funerals during the night, the burials being performed by the aid of lanterns. The Mayor has interdicted the annual fair, and forbids the processions of August 15th.

Intelligence from Corunna, Spain, where the two steamers collided Tuesday evening, is to the effect that the 104 persons who abandoned the sinking vessels Gijon and Laxham and took to the boats are feared to have been lost.

Inquiry into the conspiracy to blow up the palace during the Czar's visit to Warsaw shows that elaborate and far-reaching plans were adopted. The conspirators, after murdering the Czar, intended to provoke a rebellion in Poland and Western Russia, to plunder the Jews and rich tradesmen in Warsaw, and to seize the arms in the arsenal.

A tidal wave was observed yesterday in the Menominee and Milwaukee Rivers. The waters receded about three feet and in fifteen minutes returned, raising the waters above the dams and swelling the rivers three miles above their mouths.

Louis Spencer, a colored man, died Wednesday night in the poorhouse at Lockport, N. Y., in his 115th year.

July 25.—France has granted China until the 31st inst. to reply to the demand for indemnity for the Lang-Sou attack.

The condition of affairs at Arles is deplorable. The water-supply is cut off, owing to an accident in the hydraulic apparatus. Numerous funerals of cholera-victims have been conducted by men who, generally, were drunk. The funerals have been greatly retarded by the fact that the carpenters refuse to make coffins for those who die of cholera. Nearly all the bakers and butchers have left the city, and food is consequently scarce and difficult to obtain. The panic throughout the city is simply indescribable. The epidemic appears to be extending. One death occurred at Saintes Maries de la Mer. The inhabitants of that town want to expel all refugees from Arles. In six different villages of the Department of Bouches du Rhone from one to two deaths have occurred. At Vintimiglia, Italy, there have been ten deaths. Fifteen deaths occurred at Toulon last night—five in the hospital, three in town, and seven in the suburbs. It is feared the stormy weather will increase the violence of the epidemic. Six hundred people have left Toulon within two days for the Pyrenees. The deaths in Marseilles last night numbered sixteen. Between nine o'clock and noon only one death from cholera occurred at Marseilles. There is a large falling-off in the number of cases. The reports from Marseilles and Toulon up to half-past five this afternoon show the condition of affairs to be steadily improving. The Counselors of Arles who fled at the approach of the cholera will be prosecuted. A steamer with cholera arrived off Huelva, Spain, to-day. The inhabitants became panic-stricken and fled across the frontier into Portugal. Isolated cases of cholera continue to be reported in various parts of France, some widely distant from the infected district. The large number of those who recover from the cholera shows that the disease is not of the same deadly character which some previous outbreaks displayed.

Nearly all the houses in Massowah, Egypt, were destroyed by an earthquake, and the ships in the harbor were violently rocked. The inhabitants are panic-stricken, and have fled to the interior.

The Kabbabish tribe has declared against the Mahdi. The rebels maintained a heavy fire upon Suakin last night. Two Egyptian soldiers were wounded.

In the State of Queretaro, Mexico, a disastrous drouth still continues in many portions, and the city is suffering with an epidemic of typhus fever, small-pox, and measles.

John G. Brady of Alaska, George E. Ihrie of Pennsylvania, and Chester Seeber of California have been appointed United States Commissioners for the newly-organized District of Alaska.

A child died at Port Anderson, Miss., from what is reported to be cholera.

July 26.—The severe check encountered by the French forces in their invasion of Madagascar, although regarded by Englishmen generally with much interest, has occasioned among them but little surprise. That large quantities of arms and war material have been smuggled into Madagascar from different European ports has been long known to Londoners. Lately two full cargoes of arms and ammunition were shipped to the Hovas from England. Both are still afloat, but are believed to be in charge of persons who will succeed in eluding the French blockade. Several American officers have for months past been drilling the soldiers of the Hovas and superintending the construction of earth-works and lines of defense. The pass leading from the coast to Antanarivo, the Capital, is still maintained by the Hovas. During May and June last a Hovas emissary passed through England and Germany purchasing the most improved military rifles for immediate shipment to Madagascar. He is known to have expended over $100,000.

An officer in Minneapolis, Minn., was fatally shot about four o'clock this morning, by one of a party of three roughs, whom he was trying to quiet on the street. Great excitement prevailed throughout the day, this being the second policeman shot within a week. An unsuccessful attempt was made about midnight to take from jail and hang the three roughs who had been arrested.

July 27.—China has agreed to pay France an indemnity of 20,000,000 francs for the Lang Sou affair.

There were thirty-six deaths at Marseilles from cholera the last twenty-four hours. Only five of the twenty-seven members of the Municipal Council remain in the city.

There were eleven deaths from cholera at Toulon the last twenty-four hours. There were twelve deaths from cholera at Arles to-day and six at Aix. There is a panic in the latter place. There is an outbreak of typhus-fever in the Vosges. Of forty persons attacked ten died.

The Siberian pest has appeared at Gatschina. A committee has been formed, with Prince Schapoffsky at its head, to enforce vigorous sanitary measures to check the spread of the disease.

The Czar of Russia has appointed a commission to revise the laws relating to Finland, in the direction of the complete suppression of its local government. The Diet of Finland will be limited to a consulting role. The initiative of all laws will be delegated to a Governor-General. The reasons for this project are that Nihilists are making Finland the basis of plots against the Czar and his Government, and that the plots are connived at by the Finnish authorities and people.

A passenger steamer on the Volga River, Russia, capsized and twenty persons were drowned.

In the Harbor of Port Antonio, Jamaica, the brig Etta and schooner Bertha Watt were engaged raising the steamer Calvert, when the spars suddenly gave way and the brig rolled over and sunk. In going down the spars of the brig caught the masts of the schooner and that vessel was dragged down also.

July 28.—At a great miners' demonstration in Barnsley, England, attended by thousands the abolition of the House of Lords was demanded, and a resolution in favor of additional mine inspectors was adopted.

The European Conference on Egyptian affairs was in session three hours and a half, and then adjourned until to-morrow. Mr. Gladstone stated in the Commons that the adjournment was for the purpose of giving the delegates an opportunity to communicate with their respective Governments.

Further details of the collision of the steamer Laxham with the Spanish ship Gijon last week show that 130 persons died. The Laxham was struck amidships, and went down in twenty minutes after. The passengers and crew made their way the best they could to the Gijon, which began to sink soon after. The ship's boats were not able to hold one-half those on board, and those who were fortunate enough to get in first fought off with knives those who afterwards tried to get in. The scenes were sickening in the extreme.

There were thirteen deaths from cholera at Marseilles last night, fourteen at Toulon, and one at La Vallette, a village near Toulon. A strong wind from the north-west is prevailing, and the weather is cooler. The mortality is decreasing in the cities, but increasing in the country among the peasants. At Marseilles between nine a. m. and noon there were five deaths. At Marseilles up to seven p. m. there were five deaths from cholera since noon.

An Athens dispatch says: The steamer Tiger, from Marseilles, arrived off the Pirraeus yesterday with two cases of cholera. Admittance to the port was refused, and the steamer departed for Smyrna. It is stated that the running of through coaches on the railways between Germany and France will be stopped for fear of cholera. Fugitives are now prevented from returning to Toulon. One who returned died yesterday. The Government has organized posts of sanitary supervision on the Lyons Railway and other lines. A Glasgow dispatch says: The steamer Clan MacLean, from Marseilles, has arrived. The Medical Examiner found no infection. The crew are perfectly healthy. A mild case of cholera is in one of the hospitals of Paris. There were three deaths from that disease at Toulon to-day.

In Toulon there are thirty-one cases at the Recoutre Hospital and 115 in the St. Mandrier Hospital. Three of the latter are serious. Two Toulon emigrants have died at Laseyne of cholera. Secretary Frelinghuysen has just received the following telegram from Consul Mason, at Marseilles, France. "There is a marked improvement in the condition of affairs at Marseilles and Toulon. The cholera deaths there from a daily average of sixty fell to forty-three Wednesday, forty-eight Thursday, thirty-eight Friday, fifty-eight Saturday, and thirty-six Sunday. Last night there were thirteen in twelve hours. The rate of mortality in all cases is also declining. At Toulon the average fell from forty to fifteen. Isolated cases are reported from various parts of the district. The epidemic is declared severe at Arles and Aix."

The regular troops quartered at Puerto Principe, Cuba, not having been paid for a long time and credit being refused them, went to the stores and forcibly supplied themselves with provisions. That having been telegraphed to the Captain-General, he sent for the Director-General of the Treasury, who declared that the only disposable money of the Government on the island was $30,000 at Villa Clara, which was at once ordered by telegraph to Havana and thence remitted to Puerto Principe. The Spanish war steamer Concepcion received from Madrid sailing orders, but there being no funds to pay the crew she could not leave. Meanwhile the crew are dying of yellow-fever. Up to today sixteen men have fallen victims, among them two midshipmen, one the nephew of Gen. Beaumont, of Segundo Capo.

While digging recently at the old Santa Maria Convent in Guadalajara, Mexico, now used as a barracks, a system of subterranean galleries, so extensive as to have not yet been completely explored, was discovered.

A riot occurred at Klirnoff, Russia, yesterday. Some workmen attacked the shops of the Old Believers, whom they denounced as worse than Jews. The contents of their shops were carried off. One person was killed and two were wounded.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided that all taxes on distilled spirits must be paid the day they become due, otherwise the property will be distrained.

Robert Laughlin, the officer shot by the Minneapolis roughs Saturday morning, died today. It is feared that there will be another effort to get hold of the murderers for the purpose of lynching them when they are brought into court during the week.

July 29.—The French Divorce act became law yesterday. Three thousand suits have already been commenced under it. Many of the suitors belong to aristocratic families.

Up to the present time there have been 1,145 deaths from cholera at Marseilles. Of the victims 798 were French, 322 Italians, and 13 Spanish. There was one American.

A merchant who arrived recently in Cairo from Kassala says that he saw a letter from Gen. Gordon, dated June 21. Gordon, in his letter, says he is safe and has abundant provisions and ammunition, but is short of funds. Khar-toum is surrounded on all sides by the Mahdi's forces, but Gordon hopes to make his way out when the Nile rises, and is equipping steamers with that object in view.

In Toulon seven deaths from cholera took place last night, and three occurred there this morning. At points outside the city to which the refugees fled twelve other deaths occurred. The malady seems, in fact, to be somewhat lighter in Toulon than last week, though the proportion of deaths in the hospital is greater than it has previously been. At Marseilles the improvement which set in late last week continues, and it plainly follows, as a consequence in part, the enforcement by the authorities of the needed health regulations in the slums of the worst quarters. The cholera is still raging at Arles. For its speedy decline there are no grounds of hope, fear being so great and vigorous work on the part of the authorities so rare.

At Aix les Baines the disease still finds easy victims among the cowardly and unreasoning people, who have gone into as great and foolish a panic as the people of Arles. Nearly twenty-five places in the South of France—chiefly in the Department of the Bouches du Rhone—are now afflicted with the pestilence, and report from one to three deaths each day. In these villages, crowded as some of them have been with refugees, so that strangers would find it difficult to get lodgings there for a night, the germs of disease brought from Toulon and Marseilles are beginning to develop, and, by means of the water, to spread themselves among the natives.

The Egyptian Conference met today at the Foreign Office. The delegates, however, had not received replies from their home Governments to the question which they telegraphed yesterday in relation to an important point that arose in their discussion. As the delegates were unprepared to take action before having heard from their respective Governments, the conference adjourned till Thursday. At the meeting yesterday of the Egyptian Conference, Count von Munster, the German Ambassador to England, proposed that the conference discuss the question of the reform of the Egyptian sanitary system, but Earl Granville, the British Foreign Secretary, declines the proposition, the other representatives concurring with him that it was a question outside the sphere of the conference. The other members of the conference, however, would have supported Count von Munster had the question been discussed. The latter asked the other delegates to note the fact that Earl Granville refused to discuss the subject.

July 30.—A mild form of cholera has made its appearance at St. Petersburg and Clarkoff, Russia.

Twelve deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night and ten at Toulon. The force of the epidemic in these two cities continues to decline. Three hundred fugitives have returned home during the last two days. At Marseilles only one death occurred between nine a. m. and noon. There have been eight deaths from cholera at Marseilles since noon. The outlook continues favorable. Fourteen cases to-day were admitted into the Pharo Hospital at that city, seven were discharged cured, and sixty remain in the hospital. There were twenty-four deaths from cholera at Marseilles and eight at Arles during the twenty-four hours ended at nine p. m. to-day. Record of cholera cases in the hospitals at Toulon to-day: Admissions, 7; discharges, 11; deaths, 4; under treatment, 137. The visit of a deputation of the Extreme Left in the Chamber of Deputies excited languid interest at Toulon. Two fatal cases of cholera are reported in the Department of the Var.

The Mudir of Dongola telegraphs that a report has reached that city that Gen. Gordon has captured Berber. The Mudir, on receipt of the news, sent an official to Debbah to ascertain the truth of the report.

A dispatch from Foo Choo, China, states that there is great excitement in that city among the foreigners and Chinese. The French men-of-war off the port are under steam and cleared for action. A high authority in Foo Choo, however, declares that peace will certainly be maintained.

The French Chamber has voted 1,200,000 francs to defray the expenses of the occupation of Upper Senegal.

At a conference of English Liberal members of Parliament held in London to-day, a resolution was adopted on the motion of Mr. John Morley characterizing "the habitual disregard shown by the House of Lords for the will of the people" as "factious and unpatriotic." A resolution demanding the reform of the Lords was also adopted.

Daly, Egan, and McDonnell, alleged dynamiters, were placed on trial at Warwick, England, yesterday, on the charge of having explosives in their possession. McDonnell pleaded guilty to the charge of treason-felony. Daly and Egan pleaded not guilty. Daly will defend himself.

A priest, presumably of the Greek Church, headed a mob which attacked the Jews at Wittepsk, Russia. The military dispersed the mob and made some arrests; the priest escaped.

The great Powers have declined, in an identical note, to agree to the abolition of the foreign post offices in Turkey, and the International Postal Bureau also declines to interfere in the question.

It is reported that the German Reichstag will dissolve at the end of October. Dissensions exist among the National Liberals and United Liberals. Bismarck is concerting a modus vivendi between the National Liberals and Conservatives against the Radicals.

July 31.—The port of Puelva, in Spain, is declared infected with cholera. The ports between Cadiz and Ayamonte, both inclusive, are also suspected of being infected.

Six thousand persons are detained in various lazarettos on the frontier of Italy, and along the coast.

Three cholera deaths occurred in Marseilles and three at Toulon last night. Between nine

a. m. and noon three deaths occurred at Marseilles.

The lower classes in the vicinity of Marseilles dislike and oppose the physicians because they have got the notion that the physicians are helping the cholera along, in order to get rid of the surplus population. A paper read by a medical man in Berlin, lauding the cholera as sweeping off beings unfitted for the struggle of existence, has been widely reproduced in France, and has helped to prejudice the people against the doctors and to confirm them in the belief that the Government has adopted views similar to those of the Berlin essayist. An instance of the popular hostility towards the physicians occurred in Toulon yesterday. A doctor was going into the slums to attend a patient, when he was confronted by a party of the sick man's neighbors with knives, who chased him away and prevented his ministering to the sufferer.

The trial of the suspected dynamiters, Daly and Egan, was continued to-day at Warwick, Eng. The same precautions were taken to guard the court as yesterday. Col. Majendie, the Inspector of explosives, testified that Daly had in his possession when arrested six bottles of sulphuric acid and four dynamite bombs. The bombs only required the insertion of sulphuric acid to produce an explosion. He knew no purpose, scientific or practical, for such bombs, except to take life.

"The Mudir, with two battalions of Bashi-Bazouks, a detachment of mounted infantry, some guns, and 4,000 armed volunteers, attacked and defeated a rebel Shiek named Ahmet el Hoda, who was intrenched in the Amukol District among the ruins in the mountains. The rebels were driven completely out of the province, and Dongola is now safe and tranquil. A messenger from Gordon has arrived with a letter for the Mudir, and is awaiting a reply."

The Egyptian Conference met in the Foreign Office to-day. There was no hitch in the discussion to-day, and it is thought probable an arrangement will soon be agreed upon. The conference adjourned to Saturday.

The German Colonization Society invites the public to assist in founding farming and commercial colonies in Central Africa.

At the meeting of the Chicago Board of Education, the study of Greek in the high schools was abolished by a vote of 13 to 1.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

July 24.—Overholt & Co.'s distillery at Connelville, Pa., caught fire late Wednesday night and was burned to the ground. The bonded warehouse attached, containing 7,000 barrels of whisky, was also destroyed. The loss on the buildings was $115,000, and on the whisky $550,000.

A fire at Two Harbors, a small place near Duluth, Minn., destroyed seven buildings and contents, all occupied as saloons. The total loss was $7,000.

Central Iowa, and parts of Wisconsin, Maryland, Connecticut, Kansas and Indiana were swept by severe wind and rain storms, doing much damage to growing grain, fruit trees, etc.

A passenger train ran into a street-car at Waterford, near Troy, N. Y. A woman who was in the street-car, was killed, and a boy fatally injured. Three other persons in the street-car and the driver were badly hurt.

July 25.—Charles F. Sauer & Co.'s tannery at Louisville, Ky., was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The total loss is about $60,000, partially covered by insurance. During the progress of the fire a fireman fell from the burning building and was fatally injured. Loss by fire at Stillwater, Minn., foundry, $4,000. Charles City, Iowa, wagon factory, $25,000. Near Waco, Tex., $8,000.

Heavy winds and rains did much damage in various parts of Wisconsin, Illinois, and Kentucky. One man was struck by lightning and killed, near Danville, Ill.

The boiler of an engine on the Lehigh Valley Railroad burst near Whitehaven, Pa., J. W. Harsel, the engineer, his son, who acted as brakeman, John Armbruster, the fireman, and a telegraph operator named Smith were instantly killed. An engine was thrown from a temporary bridge, near Shreveport, La., and two men killed.

July 26.—A wonderfully destructive hail-storm occurred in the Towns of Pleasant Valley and Clear Creek, Wis., which visited those sections between two and four o'clock yesterday afternoon. The storm was a continuation of the one which struck Eau Claire at about the same hour, and traveled in a south-westerly direction. Reaching the north-west section of the town of Pleasant Valley, it assumed the nature of a tornado, and for a distance of six miles in length and one mile in width it swept the ground like a vast mower. Hailstones fell in showers and covered the ground to the depth of three and four inches. Many of these were picked up after the severest of the storm was over, and were found upon actual measurement to be eight and ten inches in circumference and weighed as many ounces. Most of them were as solid as a rock and the outer surface was as smooth as a cobblestone; others were rough and jagged. Crops were completely destroyed, trees stripped of their verdure, stock killed and injured, and shingles and boards torn from buildings. G. A. Buffington, W. D. Hatch, W. W. Jackson, and J. G. Clager, all farmers, and living in the track of the storm, are prepared to make affidavit that the hail actually fell the size mentioned, and can procure affidavits of many others who will corroborate their statements. Several persons working in fields were overtaken by the storm, and before they could reach shelter their heads and hands were fearfully lacerated by the falling hail, and in one instance it is thought a laborer has been fatally injured. Two hours after the storm, which was followed by a scorching sun, hailstones were picked from the holes in the ground made where they first fell as large as hens' eggs. Estimates as to the damage caused by the storm can not now be completed, yet it will exceed any loss ever occasioned in a similar way. "Dakota," said a recent comer from that State upon learning of the storm, "can boast of its storms as being great, but this instance holds over her severest."

A stack of wheat near Havana, Ill., under which two men were sheltering themselves from the storm, was struck by lightning, consumed, and the two men fatally burned.

Reports are coming in from the country near Rockford, showing that the storm last night did great damage. A prominent farmer says that he has lived there for forty years and never before in all his life has seen such a terrific and devastating storm as visited his section yesterday afternoon. The corn is all down, and a large quantity broken off and doubled up so that it will never stand up. A large quantity of the corn that is down is covered with mud and ruined. The oats in his section are badly lodged and considerably ruined. The strong wind twisted the heads of the oats off in several places.

A severe windstorm unroofed several warehouses at Cairo, Ill. Wharf-boat No. 1 was sunk.

A half-formed cyclone passed over Terre Haute, Ind., damaging trees and small buildings.

Six persons were killed by lightning in Central and Southern Ohio.

A terrible wind storm passed over Vandalia, Ill., unroofing buildings, uprooting trees, etc.

July 28.—There was a disastrous fire to-day at Marash, Asia Minor. A thousand shops, two hundred houses, four hotels, three mosques, and the municipal palace were destroyed.

At Matanza, Cuba, Saturday night a fire totally destroyed the lumber-yard of Senor Zabola. Loss estimated at $100,000; uninsured. The fire continued to burn fifteen hours.

Forty-one buildings, including banks, hotels, stores, saloons, and the public offices were destroyed at Devil's Lake, Dak., yesterday. The flames swept everything before them.

During the recent heavy rainfall in Poland and Galicia whole districts were completely flooded, hundreds of families losing their homes. At one small trading town the value of the hay washed away was $60,000, at another $30,000, and in a third $10,000. No fewer than 100 villages have been ruined. Old inhabitants say nothing equal to the devastation has occurred since 1813.

Later news from the cyclone of Saturday at Edekon, Chowan county, N. C., is that, besides destroying several stores and unroofing others, it totally wrecked the colored Episcopal church, the market house, the academy, and one newspaper office. The street was blocked with debris. The cyclone was a hundred yards wide. A colored child aged twelve years, was instantly killed and three women injured. The damage is estimated at $15,000.

A recent collision on the Central Railroad near Queretaro, Mexico, killed two engineers, a fireman, and five brakemen.

A cyclone struck Reidsville, N. C., last evening. Mr. Paschall's house was blown away and the roof was taken off the Eagle warehouse. The store of E. M. Redd & Co., was destroyed. Two negroes were badly bruised, one having been blown one hundred yards and the other fifty. The damage to crops is extensive.

The mail steamer Plover, from the Straits of Belle Isle, and recent dispatches report a furious northeaster on the coast of Labrador, beginning July 9th and lasting ten days. Several fishing craft were sunk and lost. Only two persons are known to have been drowned.

Freight train No. 58 on the Lake Shore Road, Indiana, ran into another directly in advance of it about five miles west at an early hour this morning. The caboose was smashed in pieces, and Thomas Stack of La Porte, a passenger, was killed. The engineer, fireman, and brakemen were considerably injured by jumping. The cause of accident was fog, it being so thick the engineer could not see the train ahead.

On Lake Superior, the propeller, J. M. Osborn, was run down and sunk by the steamer Alberta. Eight lives were lost.

July 30.—The villages of Rybatzkoze and Smolenskoge, near St. Petersburg, have been destroyed by fire.

The village of Luning Nev., except the railroad depot, was destroyed by fire Tuesday night.

Advices from up the George's Creek Valley, Md., confirm the reports of yesterday's disasters. The valley is a scene of wreckage from end to end. At least fifty houses are gone. Two unknown bodies were found near Barton to-day. These but make it more certain that when the floods subside many more will be found. A house occupied by a miner named Thomas Isenberg and his family of six persons is gone and no trace left of either people or house. It is now known that fifteen persons are dead. How many more cannot be guessed. The loss to property swells every hour, and it is now placed at $250,000. The loss to mines will cause a delay that will prove serious to the workingmen, to producers, and to consumers. The Franklin Phoenix, and Potomac coal-mines all lose heavily. The Potomac is rising rapidly to-night, and it is still raining in the mountains. Damage is also reported along Cheat River. The railroad is damaged more than was at first supposed. Business is prostrated the whole length of the valley. It is feared that many people will suffer for food and clothing. Citizens of Piedmont will take measures to assist deserving parties. Mrs. McCormick and her daughter Mary were drowned in the flood; also, two children of Richard Moody, all of Barton. At Lonaconing the houses and places of business of Henry Williams, Benjamin Coburn, John M. Boyd, William E. Hartman, John Ferrans, August Eichorn, and George M. Cochrane were washed away or greatly damaged. The bodies of the drowned have been recovered. No further loss of life is reported except at Bartor. The work of repairing the break on the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal is retarded by storm.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The Coatsville Iron Company of Westchester, Pa., has failed. The liabilities are about $250,000 and the assets are estimated at $30,000. The failure is said to be due to the suspension of the agents, Carmichael & Emmens, of New York.

The annual report of the Northern Spinners' Association of England, states that the cotton trade has not been prosperous during the last year. It draws attention to the competition offered by the growing and spinning industry in India, and declares that this competition is becoming serious. The trade also suffers heavily from damp and sand in bales. Moreover, there has lately been a serious mixture of inferior cotton in bales purporting to be of the higher quality. The report urges the importance of a strict examination of the bales when opened.

Frederick Deutsch, a Chicago wholesale cigar and tobacco dealer, failed July 24th. The liabilities are placed at $35,000.

An organization under the name of the Miners' Amalgamated Association is being perfected in the bituminous and anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania and Ohio. It is estimated that a membership of 100,000 has been already obtained. The organization will be extended to the West. The leaders claim that it will be protective in its character, and that strikes will be discouraged as far as is consistent with the interests of the members.

The grain crop prospects are very bad through the entire country of Mexico, on account of drouth and the ravages of grasshoppers and locusts. Much suffering has already occurred among the poor because of the high prices of the necessaries of life.

The report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30th shows that the aggregate receipts of his department were $121,890,039, a decrease of nearly $23,000,000 compared with the previous year. The State of Illinois contributed the largest amount—$23,520,484.

Members of the Amalgamated Miners' Association in Ohio and Pennsylvania are forming a combination against the company store, better known, perhaps, as the truck system.

Returns from 159 letter-carrier post-offices for the quarter ending June 30th show a falling off in revenue as compared with the corresponding quarter of the previous year of $350,316. On this basis the receipts for the year will be $2,000,000 less than for the previous year. The diminution is due to the reduction of letter-postage from three to two cents. The post-office authorities look upon the showing as satisfactory.

A valuable gold-mine has been discovered in the District of Sabinas, State of Nuevo Leon, Mexico. A company is being formed to work it.

The new winter wheat is arriving in Chicago rather freely as compared with other Western points, and meets with a very good demand by shippers, while the stocks of old spring wheat are reduced to a much lower point than the average volume of several years past at this date. The trade has hitherto been inclined to believe that farmers will not market their wheat to any considerable extent at present prices. There is now some difference of opinion on this point, as low quotations for wheat are justified by the general depression which has put other staples to minimum figures. It does appear probable, however, that the recent rains have done much to retard the movement from first hands by hindering work with the thrasher. The new spring wheat will not be ready to market for some weeks yet. Foreign buyers have been good customers for our wheat hitherto, but now seem more disposed to wait awhile till they see a little more in regard to the volume of deliveries by American farmers and the effect on prices here.

J. H. Kerrick & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., failed July 26, for $60,000. The Detroit Michigan Wire Works have been attached for over $10,000.

Four of the principal colonization companies of Canada have memorialized the Dominion Government in favor of more liberal subsidies of public lands to railway companies in the Northwest Territories.

According to Mr. Baynes, statistical agent of Dakota, the spring-wheat crop of that Territory will yield 26,000,000 bushels. The grain is of good quality. The Minnesota crop is estimated at 44,000,000 bushels. The winter-wheat yield in Nebraska will be from thirty to forty bushels per acre, and the spring-wheat yield from twenty to twenty-five bushels. Rye, oats, corn, and barley promise well in Nebraska and Minnesota.

Reports of the condition of the crops in Iowa and Illinois continue favorable. This is especially so as to corn. Wheat will be up to the average. The smaller grains are fair to good. The potato crop has suffered in some localities on account of drouth.

Reports from twenty-six of the leading clearing-houses of the United States, outside of New York, show that the aggregate of the clearances for last week was 11.4 per cent less than the aggregate for the corresponding week of last year. The New York Clearing-House report shows a decrease of 23 per cent.

The total cost of the Greeley relief expedition approximates $700,000. The estimated cost was $500,000.

In Kentucky, Ohio, and Indiana the wheat crop is reported excellent; corn has suffered somewhat from the drouth, but is now improving; the oat crop is promising; tobacco has suffered in some localities, but generally speaking is a healthy crop.

The balance of trade against this country for the first twenty-nine weeks of 1884 amounts to $74,144.47.

The manufacturers of steel rails in England, France, Belgium and Germany, have been successful in forming an international "ring." The agreement which has been made, fixes prices, and allots a certain amount of work to be done by each member.

The Commercial Bank of Brazil, Ind., has suspended. It was the only institution of the kind in the place, and was largely patronized by the farmers, merchants, and miners residing there and in the vicinity. The liabilities are placed at $140,000.

Steel rails have been selling recently in the west at $28 per ton, but it is reported now that the mill-owners can obtain all the orders they can fill at $30 per ton. They are waiting for an advance in prices. They have no fear of English competition, as the lowest price at which English rails can be delivered here is $40 per ton, which includes a tariff of $17.

According to the report of the Secretary of the Iowa State Agricultural Society the condition of the corn crop in the Hawkeye State is 117 per cent, being 35 per cent better than a year ago. Winter wheat is 95 per cent; spring wheat, 99 per cent; winter barley, 98 per cent; spring barley, 104 per cent; winter rye, 98 per cent; spring rye 93 per cent; oats, 99 per cent; flax, 98 per cent; timothy, 90 per cent; clover, 98 per cent; Irish potatoes, 101½ per cent; apples, 89 per cent.

Three large building firms of New York have acceded to the demands of the striking bricklayers for nine hours' work per day.

The Canadian lumber export for South America amounts for the season to 7,000,000 feet—2,000,000 in excess of the export for the same date last year.

A New York firm, Zimmerman & Forshay, shipped 60,000 trade dollars and 100,000 Mexican dollars to China July 31.

Joseph Hodgson & Son, of Philadelphia, have failed. Liabilities, $39,000; assets not determined.

P. M. Hargrave, a banker of Lampasas, Texas, failed July 31; liabilities, $40,000. Mr. Hargrave claims the assets will cover the debts.

The McGuigan natural gas well in Washington county, Pennsylvania, has been sold to the Westinghouse gas syndicate for $200,000.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the corn trade says: The weather last week, owing to heavy thunder-storms and cold nights, was detrimental to the wheat crop generally. Nevertheless there are some splendid fields of wheat which show the finest appearances still in favor of an average yield.

EN VOYAGE.

Whichever way the wind doth blow,
Some heart is glad to have it so:
Then blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

My little craft sails not alone;
A thousand fleets from every zone
Are out upon a thousand seas;
What blows for one a favoring breeze
Might dash another with the shock
Of doom, upon some hidden rock.
And so I do not dare to pray
For winds to waft me on my way,
But leave it to a Higher Will
To stay or speed me, trusting still
That all is well, and sure that He
Who launched my bark will sail with me
Through storm and calm and will not fail,
Whatever breezes may prevail,
'Tis land me, every peril past,
Within his sheltering heaven at last.

Then, whatsoever wind doth blow,
My heart is glad to have it so;
And blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

ORATION, BY ELDER H. A. STEBBINS, AT LUCAS, IOWA, JULY 4TH, 1884.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

As citizens of the United States we are assembled in this grove to-day, as in thousands of other places throughout our broad land other multitudes are assembled, to celebrate another anniversary of our country's liberty, the one hundred and eighth birth-day of our national life. For as the natal days of great men are celebrated, the American honoring the day of Washington, the Scotchman the day of Burns, and other nations the birth-days of renowned leaders, wise statesmen and noble benefactors, so do we, as the people of America, no matter what was the land of our nativity, celebrate the birth-day of the great republic, under whose wings we are sheltered, and by whose laws, when justly administered, we are protected in all lawful use of life and liberty, and in the pursuit of happiness.

We look back to that eventful period in history, to the day whose anniversary we now celebrate, and how small was the beginning, how insignificant and apparently futile in the sight of the kingdoms and monarchies of the Old World, was the struggle for an independent national life, more especially a struggle for freedom from Kingly rule in the scarcely known New World. To all of gazing, wondering Europe, the odds seemed heavily against it, but they knew not that God and the right were upon the side of the youngest of the nations. She was born of them all, but in her blood was a new element, the innate demand for a newer and broader life, for a larger and better existence than their fathers knew as subjects and vassals of the monarchies where they lived and died. And to answer this demand for a better and greater life in a wider field, God had himself prepared the land and was ready to open the door unto its accomplishment, thereby not only fulfilling their desire but also his will and long-time intention to make this New World, as we call it, the place where Liberty could raise her ensign. For here indeed he destined her to proclaim unto all the inhabitants of the earth that the boon of freedom was intended of God as the birthright of man everywhere, of the universal race wherever found, and to establish that grand truth, which was so aptly expressed to the world by the immortal Lincoln, namely that "the government of the people, by the people, and for the people," is the best form of government that can rule upon the earth. Especially is this true if equity and justice shall be in the hearts of lawmakers and rulers, and if corruption and bribery, oppression and monopoly shall be kept from doing their evil work.

The birthday of the nation was as that of a child, a day of weakness, a day in which it began to feel its way out into the unknown, into the untried, in blindness and uncertainty, but directed, we now know, by the great omnipotent hand, inspired, led, called out by the mighty voice of God. And how soon, through the stress of circumstances, and by this leading, was the new born nation forced to feel the pulsations of strength, and the coursing of vital blood through its veins, until in the same hour, as it were, it took the weapon placed within its hands, and with God given strength, struck for the altars and the fires of liberty. It was as the awakening in one day from the sleep of infancy to the strong sinews of young manhood. For, indeed, the nation knew not its strength, its power, its capacity or its possibilities even, till it put forth the effort and found that the love of liberty, which under God is the birthright of all people, had nerved its arm with more than human strength to strike off the shackles of slavery, the rulership of a tyrant, the servile livery of dependent colonies and to put on the garb of a nation, to become an independent government among the peoples of the earth. With these new elements of life the nation stood forth as a young David to do battle with all the opposing and oppressing Goliaths of the monarchial world, at the same time calling from bondage and darkness the children of those lands who might wish freedom of speech and of worship.

The nation was to the world a new form of creation, whose infancy they thought was to be its end, whose life could not be prolonged beyond childhood, and the possibility of whose success was for long years denied by the nations of the earth.

But God had designed better things for us than the nation's death in infancy or childhood. For I am one of those who believe that an overruling Providence, even a wise and personal God does indeed preside over the destinies of nations.

After man had perverted the right way, after the stake and the inquisition, then God moved upon the hearts of valiant men, the Dark Ages were slowly emerged from, and, through Wickliff, John Huss, Jerome of Prague, Savonarola, Luther, Melancthon, Zuinglius, the Whitefields, the Wesleys and others, he caused religious liberty to come in, and the love of it to grow in the hearts of the people unto the lessing of bigotry, intolerance and superstition. There is enough of these still in the world, but, through the degree of religious liberty that was reached, it became possible to bring in civil liberty for all men, such as could not have been attained without first freeing man from religious bigotry and superstition. Hence America was prepared and here was to be witnessed an effort for that condition of freedom which is right and good in the sight of God and of all just men, so that in and by both civil and religious liberty all men might be and may be free and equal, if they and their rulers will that it be so.

As a Latter Day Saint I believe that the Bible tells of this land as a land of freedom and deliverance. Among the prophecies concerning its character and destiny is that of Ezekiel 17th chapter, 22d and 23d verses, which read as follows:

"Thus saith the Lord God, I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, * * I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one and will plant it upon a high mountain and eminent, * * and it shall bring forth boughs and bear fruit and be a goodly cedar, and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing, in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell."

Have not the fowl of every wing, the people of every land, found shelter under this broad tree of liberty? Has it not grown from the tender plant of small beginning unto one of great renown in the eminence where God "set it?" It has indeed been the resting place for people of every clime, a shelter and refuge for them all.

But even America blundered in carrying out the great design, and, after fleeing from oppression themselves, they became the oppressors of others, till the inconsistency and the unrighteousness of this became so apparent that the nation arose and struck off the manacles from the millions that were held in bondage. Hence it was not for long years, not until within the memory of most of us, that the great lesson was fully learned. For, whatever may be the differences between the races, or the labor troubles that may arise, the greed for gold is the cause of the chief troubles of the day, not the color of man's skin nor the place of his birth.

I, in common with many of you here to-day, went upon the Southern battle field to maintain the supremacy of the nation, to assert the idea of the fathers of the country, that the States are and of right ought to be united not divided, that in union there is strength, that in disunion there is weakness, nay, more, there is defeat and ruin of the national life, of the national existence that was founded by those fathers of the republic.

With that idea the thirteen colonies joined in one common bond of union and became one people, imbued with one hope, and that hope—Freedom; inspired with one impulse, and that was Liberty, liberty for themselves, liberty for their children, liberty for all who should come after them upon this land, even unto all generations, if they will carry out the principles of freedom. Our fathers were no longer colonists, with different interests as citizens of different colonies, but one people. Patrick Henry declared that British oppression had destroyed the boundaries between Virginians, New Yorkers and New Englanders, and said of himself, "I am no longer a Virginian but an American." And, in thinking of those days and of that people, allow me to quote from one of the books believed in and held to by the Reorganized Church of Christ, so that we, as Latter Day Saints, may stand before the people in our true light, and as we always have been, namely, lovers of our land and our nation, sustainers of our government and of its laws, many of us having also marched and fought for the perpetuity of our common country. In the book alluded to, the Doctrine and Covenants given of God to the church, it is written as follows:

"It is not right that any man should be in bondage to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land by the hands of wise men whom I raised up for this purpose."

Again:

"And that law of the land which is constitutional, supporting the principle of freedom, is justifiable before me, therefore I justify you in befriending that which is the constitutional law of the land."

Again:

"He that keepeth the law of God hath no need to break the law of the land."

From another book, called the Book of Mormon, I quote the words spoken to the ancient inhabitants of this land, to whom the promise was given that this should be a land of liberty. I read there as follows:

"And this land shall be a land of liberty, and there shall be no kings upon this land. And I will fortify this land against all other nations, and he that raiseth up a king against me shall perish, saith God."

How wonderfully true did this prophecy prove in the case of Napoleon the Third, wherein he sought to establish Maximilian on a throne in Mexico. Both of these did perish in the attempt to establish a monarchy in North America, because the hand of the Almighty was against it.

Yes, we believe that this government is, in theory and principle, the best one upon the face of the earth, and that the best men should be sought for as rulers, in order that the liberties of the whole nation may be best assured. And, in this rulership of the people for the benefit of the people, our nation can continue to be the greatest and best one upon the earth if we can keep down and out official bribery, political corruption, the growing greed for sudden wealth by speculative gambling, the tendency to undue monopoly, whereby the laboring man may become a dependent factor only, if all these and the curse of strong drink, which so largely tends to take away the remaining liberties and to impoverish the laboring classes, as well as to ruin all society by its inroads, if these evils can be kept down, and public and private virtue be stimulated and increased, then honor, dignity, peace and prosperity would crown the land, and the love of our fellow men and of God would make our country the place of safety and refuge, the haven of rest for all who would come unto us.

In this spirit and with such a purpose was the war of the revolution fought through, and, after long and weary years of sacrifice and devotion, of prayerful waiting and anxious toiling, both at home and in the patriot army, the soldiers clad in rags and with insufficient food, enduring the snows of Valley Forge, hoping almost against hope, after such years, unknown in our day, they achieved the great victory of right over might, and thereby gave to us blessing and prosperity under freedom's banner to this day. Their sentiment that "all men were created equal, and endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights," is honored still; and these words yet live in the hearts of all loyal and patriotic citizens of the United States, no matter in what lands they may sojourn for a season, or where they may dwell.

And, that this grand idea, this inspired breathing of the patriot fathers, might be maintained, might be perpetuated as the very spirit of liberty and freedom in this land, with this idea and motive went forth in our late war the hundreds of thousands who were the very strength and sinew of the nation, to battle for the national life, declaring that the Union is one and inseparable, now and forever. Shall we not then give to them, both to the living and to the memory of the dead, the honor that is due to every true patriot.

By the laws of Congress pensions have been allowed and claimed by many, perhaps by some unjustly, but the majority needed all they obtained, the sick, the wounded, as also the widows and orphans, and the aged fathers and mothers whose loved ones returned no more to them. Though I was but a boy, yet in vivid memory stands before me the hot and toilsome march over miles and miles through stifling dust, the dropping out by the way through sheer weakness or fatal sickness, the deaths on either hand day by day from disease or the leaden ball; the cold and rainy battle field with no tents and only rail pens of shelter that did not shelter. My comrades here to-day can remember all these things, and many more, that make us feel that money can not compensate for this nor for the weary years of lost health and shorn power through which some of us have suffered even until now, while many we have laid to rest as the years went by. Though there be unworthy men as men, yet give honor to the soldiers as a class, for by their work of twenty years ago does the Union still live to-day. And the generation now growing can not realize what deprivation, what suffering, what misery many thousands passed through, with a pure and true love of their country in their hearts, without a sordid or a selfish motive for mere gain or mere honor. Let us, therefore, in the language of Abraham Lincoln resolve "that the dead shall not have died in vain, and that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom."

And to my comrades I would say, Live so as to show forth by your personal self-government, and by your private and public acts, that you were indeed and still are to-day and will be for all time, lovers of justice and of just government, lovers of truth, purity, righteousness, honesty and honor, so that none may call you unworthy; live so that you may ever be the guardians of truth and virtue in yourselves and for all others, and so that men may trust your word and your honor with the highest confidence, such as time and experience shall not dim but only brighten. Breathing a prayer for the perpetuity of our nation, and with a wish for an exhibition of a greater degree of political, public and private virtue and honor in our land, I bid you adieu.

SOMETHING ABOUT A CREED MUCH CONDEMNED BUT LITTLE UNDERSTOOD.

[St. Louis Republican, July 16th.]

INTEREST has been revived in questions relating to the origin of the Church of Latter Day Saints and the authenticity of the manuscript from which the Book of Mormon was printed, and which is now being compared with the various editions of that book by a commission now sitting at Richmond, Missouri. Dispatches to the Republican a week or two since gave an account of the proceedings of the commission, but other dispatches, stating that the commission was composed of a delegation from Utah, and representing that the work of comparison is being done from parchment and from the original plates, with other glaring mistakes, is almost too absurd for refutation. It has been known for many years that the original manuscript, as dictated by Joseph Smith, and from which the first, or Palmyra (N. Y.) edition of 1830 was printed, has been in possession of David Whitmer of Richmond, who was one of the original, and only surviving witness of the revelator's work. It is known to many that the church authorities of Salt Lake have made overtures to Mr. Whitmer to get possession of the manuscript, but without avail, he holding the document as a sacred deposit.

A VISIT TO RICHMOND.

To carry out a purpose contemplated for some time, a Republican representative took the train at St. Louis, and arriving in Richmond next morning, he was driven through a portion of that beautiful town, now fully recovered from the devastation caused by the cyclone of 1878, and set down at the Wasson House. Nearly the first man struck happened to be Mr. David J. Whitmer, the son of David Whitmer, to whom the purpose of the visit was made known. Mr. Whitmer stated that owing to the advanced age and feeble condition of his father's health, the family had objected to visitors out of a feeling of curiosity calling on the old gentleman and interrogating him on these matters. He objected to these visits, and though his memory was unimpaired relating to bygone events, it was rather unpleasant and did no good. The commissioners were in session at his house, and it was for them to say whether they desired to be interviewed, but as for seeing the old man it would be better to get Mr. Farris, Gen. Doniphan or Col. Childs, old friends of his, to be introduced. The Hon. John T. Farris, the well-known and able representative from Ray county in the Legislature, was readily found at his law office, and with him a call was made at the residence of Mr. Whitmer. He occupies a tasty looking frame dwelling, which was nearly destroyed by the great cyclone and has since been rebuilt. The old gentleman was at work in his garden when the cyclone swept over the town, and was wounded on the head by a flying missile. He is well fixed, with pleasant surroundings, having been engaged in the livery business, from which he has retired with a competency. The walls of the lower parlor are ornamented with a few pictures, among which is a portrait taken of Mr. David Whitmer when he was thirty-five years of age, betokening a more robust health, florid face, and determined energy. The portrait of his wife hangs by the side, a pleasant beauty, who is still alive and going down the hill-side of life the cheerful companion of her husband.

Word was brought down that Mr. Whitmer was engaged with the commission, and the invitation was extended to call on him there, as he felt too feeble to walk down stairs. Mr. Whitmer was found in the chamber above, lying on his bed in a room adjoining the commission, and communicating with it by an open door.

THE WITNESS OF THE REVELATION.

The old gentleman rose from the bed and received his callers very cordially. In person he is above medium height, very lean and feeble, and, with stooping shoulders, bears the marks of advancing age, being now in his eightieth year. The lips are drawn in, from the absence of the teeth, and he converses in a tremulous voice. So great is the change that he would hardly be identified from his picture taken in early manhood, during the glowing vigor of health. He said that he was ready to respond to inquiries of his past history, but intimated that it had all been published, and, as for that portion connected with his sojourn in Missouri, there was so much of it that he did not wish to go over it again. He preferred that such information as was desired should be obtained from the gentlemen composing the commission, and thereupon the callers, accompanied by Mr. Whitmer, entered their room.

THE REVISERS.

At one end was a table around which the ministerial conclave was seated, each holding a book, except one of the members, who was reading from a manuscript. It was a convocation of men whose labors would doubtless be handed down in the church as a memorable event, that of verifying the various editions of the Book of Mormon from the original manuscript, in the presence of the only surviving witness of this great revelation to man. As Mr. Farris and the Republican representative entered the room these holy men suspended their work, and rising to their feet, the former were introduced to President Smith and by him were introduced to the other members of the board. The reception was extremely cordial, and while Father Whitmer, in his feeble state, extended himself on a bed near the table, the commissioners participated in a running conversation for half an hour. The following are the members of the commission: Rev. Joseph Smith of Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, president of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ commonly called Latter Day Saints, and editor-in-chief of the Saints' Herald. He is the eldest son of Joseph Smith the prophet and inspired translator of the Book of Mormon from the golden plates.

William H. Kelley of Kirtland, Ohio, missionary in charge of Michigan, Northern Ohio, Western New York and Western Ohio mission.

Alexander H. Smith of Independence, Mo., missionary in charge of Pacific Slope Mission, comprised of California, Oregon and Nevada. He is the second son of the prophet, Joseph Smith.

Thomas W. Smith of Independence, Mo., missionary in charge of Australian Mission, including Australia and Society Islands and other Polynesian isles.

The three last named are a committee appointed by the General Conference of the Reorganized Church, held at Stewartsville, Missouri, April 6th to 15th, 1884, to compare the Palmyra and the current editions of the Book of Mormon with the original manuscript now in the hands of David Whitmer of Richmond, Ray county, Mo. The object of the examination is to discover whether there are differences as alleged by some between the printed edition and the manuscript. They have been engaged in the work for five days up to Monday night, and expect to spend some three days more, closing Wednesday night.

HOW THEY DO IT.

The Manuscript of the Book of Mormon.—The manuscript held by "Father Whitmer," as he is designated by the commission, is handed out in sections, the leaves being firmly held together. It is the original from which the Palmyra or first edition was printed in 1830, and bears very plainly the printer's marks. The manuscript, which was examined by the reporter, is common, rather coarse foolscap in use fifty years ago, and the penmanship is in a medium hand, plain and perfectly legible. It appears that some five different persons were engaged in writing the document as Joseph Smith dictated the subject matter. Father Whitmer, who was present very frequently during the writing of this manuscript affirms that Joseph Smith had no book or manuscript, before him from which he could have read as is asserted by some that he did, he (Whitmer) having every opportunity to know whether Smith had Solomon Spaulding's or any other persons' romance to read from. The commission have before them various editions of the Book of Mormon; first and most important the original Palmyra edition of 1830. Then there are the Kirtland edition of 1835, the Nauvoo edition of 1843, the Plano (Ill) edition, and various editions published by the polygamists of Salt Lake City. There are also five European editions published in England, Denmark and Sweden, Germany and France. One of the commission said it must be stated in behalf of the Salt Lake edition that they have made no changes from the original manuscript, except what may be said of other editions, and these consist merely of changes in verbs and tenses. Whenever an alteration is detected which consists, for instance, of the substitution of the relatives, who, which and that, and the tenses of the verbs, the person holding the edition in which such change is detected erases the word and substitutes the original word as it exists in the manuscript, interlining the correct word in the printed book with a pencil. The intention is probably to print an edition, thus corrected from the manuscript, which will be recognized as genuine at least by the Reorganized Branch of the Saints.

HE WILL NOT GIVE IT UP.

It is well known that some years ago Orson Pratt and Joseph F. Smith, the son of Hyrum Smith of the Salt Lake Branch, came to Richmond, and calling on Father Whitmer offered him any sum he would name (the amount being stated at $100,000) if he would surrender to them the original manuscript. They said they wanted the manuscript solely for the purpose of placing it in the archives of the church at Utah for preservation. Mr. Whitmer informed them that he would not part with it for any amount of money. He was its custodian, and it should be preserved as a sacred deposit by himself and heirs.

The latest edition of the Book of Mormon has been verified the same as was done with the Bible, for convenience to the reader. The manuscript was written from the dictation of Joseph Smith by the following amanuenses: Oliver Cowdery, Emma Smith, wife of Joseph Smith; Christian Whitmer and Martin Harris, and it is supposed that Alva Hale was also employed as one of the scribes, but Hale only wrote a small portion.

HOW WHITMER GOT IT.

Oliver Cowdery, the principal witness and scribe of Joseph Smith, became the possessor of the manuscripts which he retained and brought with him to Missouri. Oliver Cowdery was the brother-in-law of Jacob Whitmer, and he died at Richmond in 1850, in the house adjoining Whitmer's, and the latter naturally came in possession of the document. Oliver Cowdery is buried in the old cemetery, near Richmond, and his wife and daughter are still living in this state.

For the brief time that the commissioners were disengaged there was a good time for interviewing, but there were too many of them at once, and, like the fowler distracted by the flocks of pigeons on the trees, in the wheat stubble, with others flying overhead, shots were rather scattering.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

President Joseph Smith is a gentleman of rather imposing appearance, well built, piercing eyes and dark beard mingled with gray, flowing down below the chin in patriarchal length. In physical appearance he is quite as striking as the late President Garfield, whom it is said he resembles, and possesses much of the same magnetism. He is good looking, and Gen. Doniphan informed the reporter that he takes after his mother, a fine looking lady, whom he knew well. He is withal a stout looking man, weighing 210 pounds and his height is five feet eight. He stated that he was born in Kirtland, O., and is about fifty-one years of age. He remembers his father who was kind and indulgent to his family. He studied law in Canton, Ill., with Judge Kellogg, but becoming averse to the practice of law he studied for the ministry, and is now the head of a church numbering some 20,000 members, and known as the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints. That branch has no affiliation with the Salt Lake Mormons or Brighamites.

"They are the only class," said Mr. Smith, "of ministers who won't meet us in discussion. You can't get one of their churches in Salt Lake to let one of our men in, but they will let in a Methodist and the preachers of other denominations. In 1869 Brigham Young refused my brother here, Alex. H. Smith, the use of the Tabernacle because, as they said, we were trying to undo the work they had done—that is, tear it down. They don't deny Joseph Smith, my father, but they claim that he originated polygamy in the church. We challenge the proofs."

The attention of Mr. Smith being called to the widespread belief that his father pirated the Book of Mormon, which was none other than a romance written by

Rev. Solomon Spaulding, he scouted the idea as utterly ridiculous and absurd. Addressing himself to Mr. Farris, as a lawyer, gave him a very detailed history of the case, showing by dates and other undeniable facts of history the utter-absurdity of the charge. He was willing to submit these facts to any judge or jury in the country and they would come to the same conclusion. He showed Sidney Rigdon, who is alleged to have got possession of Spaulding's manuscript in a printing office at Pittsburg, Pa., was but ten years of age at the time, and it is not likely that a boy would understand the nature of such an acquisition.

WHITMER'S TESTIMONY.

While president Smith was wrestling with the charges of fraud and delusion urged against his father, the Republican representative turned to Mr. Whitmer, who was lying on the bed and listening with much apparent interest to the colloquy, occasionally interposing a word in confirmation of Mr. Smith's statements and made some interrogatories.

"Yes," said Mr. Whitmer, "I have no objections to giving the particulars of my early life. I was born near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, at a small trading post, in 1805. My father moved to York State when I was four years old. We settled in Fayette township, Seneca county, between Seneca and Cayuga lakes, four miles from Seneca Falls, two miles from Waterloo, seven miles from Seneca. I lived there till I was twenty-six years old. The first time I saw Joseph Smith was in Harmony, Pennsylvania. I joined him before the Book of Mormon was printed at Palmyra, N. Y. I was there during the time the book was printed. The translation was done in my father's house; at least two months of the time, were taken up with it there. Oliver Cowdery was the principal amanuensis. Cowdery died in 1850, near my house, in Richmond. I saw the stone which formed the box or receptacle in which the metallic plates were found, on the hillside, Cumorah. Joseph Smith claimed that an angel informed him of the place where the plates were hidden. I saw the plates; they were bound together with leaves, and held together by rings, two at each corner of the bundle and one in the centre.

"Joseph Smith dictated every word in the book. The understanding we have about it was that when the book was discovered an angel was present and pointed the place out. In translating from the plates, Joseph Smith looked through the Urim and Thummim, consisting of two transparent pebbles set in the rim of a bow, fastened to a breastplate. He dictated by looking through them to his scribes." At this stage of the explanation, Mr. Whitmer showed those present a specimen of the characters copied from the plates. It is on a piece of strong paper about four by eight inches, and covered with one hundred or more hieroglyphics and figures.

THE HIEROGLYPHICS.

It is the identical specimen which was sent to Prof. Anthon, of New York, and shown by him to Prof. Mitchell, of which the New York papers made mention at the time. The specimen was sent to Prof. Anthon by Martin Harris and returned to him. Profs. Anthon and Mitchell both admitted they were ancient characters, resembling the reformed Egyptian and Hebrew characters. Mr. Whitmer holds these characters, as well as the manuscript of the Book of Mormon and the records of the church, in great reverence, and would not part with them for any money or allow them to go out of his house. He says he is utterly opposed to polygamy and remarked that when he was connected with the church in York State, 'we wouldn't,' he said, 'have fellowship even with any person who was divorced, and Joseph Smith was opposed to it.' Mr. Whitmer here desired his grandson, Mr. George Schweich, to copy for the Republican the following extract from the Book of Mormon as an expression of his views and that of the founders of the church:

EXTRACT FROM THE BOOK OF MORMON.

Book of Jacob, chapter II.—"Behold David and Solomon, truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord; wherefore, thus saith the Lord, I have led this people out of the land of Jerusalem by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph. Wherefore I the Lord God will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore my brethren hear me and hearken to the word of the Lord, for there shall not any man among you have, save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none, for I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women.

Mr. Whitmer on being asked if he saw the angel, as stated in some accounts, opened the book and pointing to a section said, "There is my testimony. Read it; that tells all that is necessary for me to say about it. That contains the solemn testimony of myself and the other persons named." Mr. Whitmer's response was regarded as closing out any further interrogatory under that head, and an estoppel was put on such inquiries.

THE WITNESSES.

"Be it known unto all nations, kindreds, tongues and people unto whom this work shall come, that we, through the grace of God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ, have seen the plates which contain this record, which is a record of the people of Nephi, and also of the Lamanites their brethren, and also of the people of Jared, who came from the tower of which hath been spoken; and we also know that they have been translated by the gift and power of God, for his voice hath declared it unto us; wherefore we know of a surety, that the work is true; and we also testify that we have seen the engravings which are upon the plates and they have been shown unto us by the power of God and not of man. And we declare with words of soberness that an angel of God came down from heaven and he brought and laid before our eyes, that we beheld and saw the plates and the engravings thereon, and we know that it is by the grace of God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ that we beheld and bear record that these things are true, and it is marvellous in our eyes. Nevertheless the voice of the Lord commanded us that we should bear record of it; wherefore to be obedient unto the commandments of God, we bear testimony of these things, and we know that if we are faithful in Christ we shall rid our garments of the blood of all men and be found spotless before the judgment seat of Christ and dwell with Him eternally in the heavens, and the honor be to the Father and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, which is one God. Amen.

[Signed].

OLIVER COWDERY,
DAVID WHITMER,
MARTIN HARRIS.

The above is from the Book of Mormon. Now who among the Gentiles and sceptics of a later generation is to gainsay what is here written.

AN ORIGINAL REVELATION.

Revelation to Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer and Martin Harris, June, 1829, given previous to their viewing the plates containing the Book of Mormon.

"Behold I say unto you, that you must rely upon my word, which if you do, with purpose of heart, you shall have a view of the plates, and also the breastplates, the sword of Laban, the Urim and Thummim, which were given to the brother of Jared upon the mount, when he talked with the Lord face to face, and the miraculous directors which were given to Lehi while in the wilderness, on the borders of the Red sea; and it is by your faith that you shall obtain a view of them, even by that faith which was had by the prophets of old.

2. And after that you have obtained faith, and have seen them with your own eyes, you shall testify of them by the power of God; and this you shall do that my servant, Joseph Smith, Jr., may not be destroyed, that I may bring about my righteous purposes unto the children of men in this work. And ye shall testify that you have seen them even as my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., has seen them, and it is because he had faith; and he has translated the book, even that part which I have commanded him, and as your Lord and your God liveth, it is true.

3. Wherefore you have received the same power, and the same faith, and the same gift like unto him; and if you do these last commandments of mine which I have given you the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; for my grace is sufficient for you, and you shall be lifted up at the last day. And Jesus Christ, your Lord and your God, have spoken it unto you that I might bring about my righteous purposes unto the children of men. Amen.

It may be stated here that Mr. Whitmer has in his possession the history written by the appointed historian of the church, John Whitmer (the brother of David). The history is still in manuscript and has never been published. John died, leaving the history in David's hands, and for aught known, it has been seen but by a very few persons.

It is further known that revelations became so frequent among the Saints from 1829 to 1835 that Joseph Smith received a revelation shutting down on this superabundance of heavenly oracles. The supply was greater than the demand. Mr. Whitmer, on being asked about these revelations, said most any one could get a revelation if he desired. He denounced the Book of Covenants that Smith, Sidney Rigdon and his associates claimed to have received, and which were published at Kirtland, O., in 1835. Smith, he said, was generally opposed to these revelations, but being frequently importuned by individuals to reveal to them their duty, he was compelled to yield, and in this way the original purity of the faith was darkened by novel ideas. He maintains that the Book of Mormon is much more antagonistic to polygamy and concubinage than is the Bible, "and Joseph Smith," said he, "never to my knowledge advocated it, though I have heard that he virtually sanctioned it at Nauvoo. However, I cut loose from him in 1837 and can't speak intelligently."

ALEX. H. SMITH.

This gentleman, the second son of Joseph the prophet, is stoutly built, florid complexion, with the evidence of sound health, is said to resemble his father more strikingly than any other of the boys. Gen. Doniphan, who knew Joseph Smith, confirmed the statement that Aleck bears a striking resemblance to his father. Alexander informed the reporter that he visited Salt Lake in 1876, staying there three weeks. "I was refused permission to speak in the Tabernacle. They said they got the sanction of polygamy from my father, who died in 1844, and the fact is it was not till August, 1852, when it was first presented in a special conference held at the tabernacle in Salt Lake City by Brigham Young. Orson Pratt made the first speech in defense of polygamy ever uttered in a Mormon church. Illinois killed father as a reformer, the same as she did Lovejoy. Father was not an educated man, but after we moved to Ohio they had good schools there, and he improved himself so that he became, in a measure, quite learned. We younger men know only about these things by what we learn from our elders. Father Whitmer was there, and we accept his statement."

THOMAS W. SMITH.

This gentleman is a cousin of Joseph and Alexander, and in charge of the Australian mission. He is a gentleman of learning and extensive research in the literature of theology. He gave a running sketch of the Book of Mormon and what it taught. Mormon was the last of the race. The history told by him covers six hundred years before Christ and extends four hundred years subsequent to the beginning of the Christian era. After the departure from Jerusalem the Nephites and the Lamanites became divided and the Nephites in consequence of the turbulence and fierce wars were finally destroyed, except a portion who united with the deserters and were identified and absorbed by the Lamanites. This colony came to this continent before Christ, landing as is supposed in Peru, South America. The description of the country in the Book of Mormon answers to the accounts given by modern explorers, and shows conclusively that they passed across the Isthmus of Panama. They afterwards scattered all over the country, leaving mounds, temples, tablets, statuary, inscriptions and other memorials of their occupation. It is a curious and noted fact that all the explorations made by Squires, Priest, Stephens and Catherwood and others of these remains of an ancient people were made subsequent to the publication of the Book of Mormon, which is the only book that gives the key to these prehistoric migrations. The descendants of the colony which came out from Jerusalem discovered a colony that preceded them and which came out from the tower of Babel. Mr. Smith is about leaving very soon for the Australasian archipelago, and will revisit New Zealand. He desired very much to see Mr. Griffin, the American consul to New Zealand, who, he saw from the Republican, was stopping at the Southern Hotel; but as the commission will not complete its work until Wednesday evening of this week, he could not expect to find Mr. Griffin in St. Louis after that time. Mr. Smith, when asked by the reporter, if in New Zealand he would not be afraid to encounter the Maoris or missionary eaters, answered in the negative, and said the worst enemies that he expected to meet would be the Brighamites or polygamists from Salt Lake who had a large following in those islands, and whom they pitched into wherever met as hostile to the pure teachings of Joseph.

WM. H. KELLEY.

Mr. Kelley is a missionary in charge of the central states with headquarters at Kirtland, Ohio, where he ministers in the original temple first erected by the saints in this country. The temple was built after a design by Joseph Smith in 1834. The walls are of unhewn stone, three stories in height, sixty-nine feet in length. The outside and inside is plastered with cement and the appearance is as fresh as when first built. A peculiarity of the interior is that there are two pulpits, one at the east and the other at the west end. There are three pulpits or platforms in each of the main pulpits rising one above the other. Mr. Kelley avers that the church will stand forever as it is approved by the Almighty like the Pentecost. It has withstood the tribulation of the saints from the mob and from riots, Joseph and Sidney Rigdon having both been tarred and feathered by the people called the Campbellites. The late President Garfield resided about three miles from Kirtland. He was more liberal in his views and while officiating as a Campbellite preacher he performed the marriage ceremony of the late Judge Whitmer of Richmond, who was a nephew of David Whitmer. The church at Kirtland comprises only six members, though the services are crowded by outsiders, mostly free-thinkers, and those who do not belong to any church. The pulpit of the temple is free to all denominations, and even Bob Ingersoll would be admitted, as they believe in freedom of conscience to its fullest extent. In February last the great Braden-Kelley debate took place in the temple, the former being a Campbellite.

THE SALT LAKE DELEGATES.

Hon. Jacob T. Childs said: "About six years ago Orson Pratt and Joseph F. Smith, the son of Hyrum Smith, and nephew of Joseph the Prophet, came to Richmond, from Salt Lake for the purpose of verifying the Book of Mormon as published with the manuscript in the hands of David Whitmer. After examining it they pronounced it to be the original manuscript of the Book of Mormon. Mr. Smith said he recognized his aunt's (the wife of the prophet) handwriting as a part of it; also Oliver Cowdery's handwriting. Orson Pratt stated that the manuscript was very valuable to them and he hoped that Father Whitmer would keep it in a safe place, as the archives of the church would be incomplete without it, and they would pay anything within reason for it. The family of Mr. Whitmer feels that a curse would fall on them if they allowed it to go out of their hands, that the Almighty intended that they should keep it, and fearing that if the Salt Lake people got it they would interpolate it for their own purposes. The Whitmers hold it as a sacred document not to be parted with on any consideration. It is remarkable with what pertinacity the man's family believe in it. Every branch of the Whitmer family is firm in the faith. Mr. Whitmer, after describing to me the golden plates, I asked him what he considered their value.

"That was exactly," he replied, with animation, "what first struck Joseph Smith, and the angel hurled him down the hill, Cumorah, and it was six months before Joseph obtained possession of the stone box that held the plates, and he also reiterates to me his having seen the angel and having heard the voice distinctly. What he had seen was to be relied on, and that his testimony in the Book of Mormon is correct in every particular. The way that Smith got into the belief of his supernatural power was first by putting on the glasses, he saw his entire past history revealed to him."

Mr. Whitmer left the Mormons on account of their devious transactions, and on account of his refusal to handle or have anything to do with the Kirtland money, for which he denounced them, and, leaving Far West, came to Richmond. The Mormon priesthood held a council at Far West and John Whitmer, brother of David, was the secretary of it. David was aware that he was being tried as an apostate, and had an understanding with his brother that, if the council decided favorably, he was to come outside and raise his hat, but if they decided against him, then he was to wipe his face with a handkerchief. John finally came forth, and, wiping his face with his handkerchief, David knew that was a signal for him to leave, and, mounting his horse, he made his escape. After that what is known as the Mormon war took place. The Mormon flagstaff was shivered to splinters by a stroke of lightning, and this was considered a bad omen and frightened many of the Mormon followers. Father Whitmer during the war drove a wagon containing provisions for the supply of the Doniphan forces, and when he got to Far West the women came out and said Whitmer had done right in the course he pursued. The split there occurred, and Whitmer never went to Nauvoo, but remained here with the better class of Mormons. The Whitmers, the Pages and others regard the Book of Mormon as a continuation of the New Testament.

FIRM BELIEVERS.

This subject may be closed with the observation that, whatever the Gentiles may believe in regard to the Mormons, the sons of Joseph Smith and David Whitmer and his sons believe in it with a firm conviction and undoubted faith. The honesty and excellent character of the Whitmer family are substantiated by the people of Richmond without exception. That David Whitmer, who holds many of the revelations of the early founders of that church with no higher esteem than outsiders, and the fact that he had a falling-out with Joe Smith, and in a measure separated himself from the saints who went to Nauvoo, and still holds to the genuineness of the Book of Mormon with an unalterable faith in its truth is certainly a remarkable fact. Whitmer holds the Book of Mormon in the same estimation that he holds the Bible, believing that the one is a supplement of the other, and that whoever disbelieves in either does it at the hazard of his eternal salvation. That the supposition that the Rev. Solomon Spaulding wrote the Book of Mormon is absurd and "a weak invention of the enemy." A man who would put forth a book, however meritorious in other respects, as a novel without plot, character or any of the essentials of a work of fiction, is censurable for his stupidity.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883. I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY; Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, WM. ARD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

Bro. Johns & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CARO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents, (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. We also furnish a Picture Outfit, consisting of a fine Water Color Portrait, (without frame), also small picture from which it was taken, and envelopes and cards, all by mail prepaid for only 98 cents.

REUNION MEETING.

THE Saints will please remember the Reunion Meeting that will be held this Fall. It will be held on the premises of Bro. Henry Garner, not far from Mondamin, a station on the Council Bluffs and Sioux City Railway. We are informed that the grounds where the meeting will be held are very commodious and convenient for such an assembly. The committee appointed last Fall are energetic and faithful men, and will do all that men can do to give complete success to the occasion. We trust that the committee whose duty it is will give us an early and ample notice of the time, place, and other items connected with it, as we wish to keep it before the Saints.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. T. W. Smith and wife reached Lamoni, August 5th, from Stewartville and St. Joseph, Missouri. Bro. Smith spoke at the latter place Sunday, August 3d, morning and evening. He is on his way to his field of labor, and will call at Lucas, Council Bluffs, Ogden, Salt Lake, Sacramento, San Francisco, Oakland and probably Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Santa Ana and adjacent places before his final leave for Tahiti.

Bro. Hiram C. Bronson of Kewanee, Illinois, is authorized to act as agent for the Braden-Kelley debate, by arrangement recently made with Bro. E. L. Kelley.

Bro. George Hicklin writes from Locust Hill, Knox county, Missouri. He has been in the field quite constantly, has spoken at Glasstown, White Oak, Round Grove, Bunce School-house, Hannibal, Salt River, Bevier and Locust Hill. A very fair interest seems to be manifest to hear the word. He reports that in one of the branches of his district some two or three elders are favorable to the licensing of dram shops, and signed a petition to the authorities asking that license be issued to an aspirant to the honor of making tipplers. Of course, an elder is entitled to his opinion as to the policy best to be pursued in regard to the traffic in liquors as a beverage; but we think decidedly, it is a bad policy for teachers of righteousness to encourage dram selling.

Bro. John Eames had an open air service Sunday evening, July 27th, at Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory.

Bro. Wm. H. Kelley, was at Malvern, Iowa, at last advices.

The Progress, of Independence, Missouri, gives the HERALD quite a notice in its issue for August 2d.

A letter was received at the Herald Office August 2d, from Oxford, Sumner county, Kansas, containing thirty cents in two cent stamps, and a one dollar note; without date, or signature. Should this item be seen by the writer of that letter, he will please send us his name that the articles ordered may be sent him.

Errata. For the word "dollars" in second paragraph, second column, first page of HERALD for August 9th read "pounds." For "Edward II" in third column, second paragraph from bottom, page 506 same issue, read "Henry II."

Bro. and Sr. J. Layton write that they are looking for Bro. Sheehy to visit them. They have not heard from the Nova Scotia Saints since conference in March.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Wm. Rumel, writes from Omaha, Nebraska:

A new era has dawned upon the branch here, peace and good feeling exist, such as have not been for a number of years. The Spirit meets with us in our assemblies to the comfort and cheer of our souls. The brethren are holding meetings in the south part of town, some are interested, so we are encouraged."

Bro. J. M. Tousley of Chester, Illinois, writes July 31st:

We still hold our meetings regularly and rejoice in them very much. I am sometimes surprised at myself to see how the scripture will come to my mind when I am speaking to the Saints and others, although frequently when I arise my mind will almost be a blank, but suffering myself to be led as the Spirit gives me utterance, I find that I can do better than speaking as I might choose. I have been known as a "Mormon" for years in this locality, and while I kept quiet it was all right, but since we were reorganized and have taken our stand, we are not worth noticing. "Such is life."

In a letter from Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Cheetham, England, and dated July 16th, 1884, he says:

The work is making headway in this district. I baptized three more at Leeds, Yorkshire, on 6th July; left others ready. Bro. John Austin, president of the Sheffield Branch, wrote me that he had baptized three at that place on the 3d. President Taylor wrote me a few days ago, and in his letter stated that there were four or five ready for baptism in the Birmingham Branch; thus the good work goes on.

"BRO. BRADEN debated with a Josephite, and not with a regular Mormon. The extinction of the latter is what would contribute more to the satisfaction of people in this country. If I am not mistaken Mormons, and not Josephites, are the polygamous herds that expend most treasures to lead captive silly women and open new and wider channels for the gratification of the evil inclinations of degenerate men."

The foregoing is from the Texas Christian, of July 23d. Quite a difference between the Christian and Rev. Braden. The latter classes all who believe in the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith together, and dislikes to admit that there is a difference; the former is willing to give an honest people their due, however much they may be thought to be in error.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

A BROTHER sends us the following questions, stating at the close of them: "I desire these questions be answered from the Scriptures, Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants." Of course there is nothing singular about this, only that being an elder and having the books named, he is surely as competent to look up the various passages in them bearing upon the questions asked as any one, and certainly he has as much time to devote to such search as we:

First.—According to the Scriptures was the sacrament administered in the forenoon, or in the afternoon?

Ans.—"Now when the even was come, he sat down with the Twelve." "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and blessed it and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat, this is my body. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it."—Matt. 26: 20, 26, 27.

Second.—Was the Lord's Supper and the sacrament administered at the same time?"

A.—"And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave it to them, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them, and they all drank of it. And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many."—Mark 14: 22, 23, 24. Book of Mormon, Book of Moroni, chapters four and five.

"It is expedient that the church meet together often to partake of bread and wine in remembrance of the Lord Jesus."—Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 17, par. 22.

"For behold, I say unto you, that it mattereth not what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, when ye partake of the sacrament, if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory."—Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 24, par. 1.

"And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; * * * but remember that on this, the Lord's day thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren and before the Lord."—Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 59, par. 2.

Third.—Was the Lord Jesus doing his own will, or the will of him that sent him? Or did he do it at the time he did for convenience sake?

A.—"For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."—John 6:38.

"And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer." "And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this and divide it among yourselves." "And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you."—John 22:15, 17, 19, 20.

Fourth.—If his disciples are commanded to follow him, and they make choice of some after part of the day contrary to which the Lord did, for convenience sake, would they be following him? Or if the Lord Jesus administered bread and wine in the evening, and his disciples should administer it in the morning, would they be strict followers of him?

A.—"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"And whoso believeth in me, and is baptized the same shall be saved."—Book of Nephi 5:8

Fifth.—Is there any command referring to the fore, or after part of the day in which the ordinance should be administered?

A.—We know of none.

Sixth.—If not, why?

A.—We don't know, and can not answer from scripture, either Bible, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants. We presume, however, that it was because it was not essential that the sacrament should be administered at any stated hour of the day. "The things which are revealed belong to man; those things which are not revealed belong to God."

Seventh.—Should the bread be broken before it is blessed, or should it be blessed before it is broken? Which is right?

A.—"And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it."—Luke 22:19.

"Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it."—Mark 14:22.

"Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it."—Matt. 26:26.

"And when the disciples had come with bread and wine, he took of the bread, and brake and blessed it." "And this shall ye always observe to do, even as I have done, even as I have broken bread, and blessed it."—Book of Mormon, Book of Nephi 8:6.

"And it came to pass that he brake bread again, and blessed it."—Book of Mormon, Book of Nephi, chapter 9:7.

There is nothing in the Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants, to fix the time of day when the sacrament, partaking of bread and wine, should be observed. Because it was instituted at the supper of the Passover, it has been presumed that it should be in the evening. This presumption is carried by some so far that they hold that it should be about, or after sundown, the usual hour of taking supper.

The occurrence of the rite in the Book of Nephi, might be construed as being in the afternoon; but it is not stated. In the command to the church in Doctrine and Covenants no hour is set, only the day; leaving the time to the people.

Christ said that he came to do his Father's will, and by some this would be taken as applying to the sacrament as to time and fact, but John 6:39, 40, qualify 6, 38, showing to what this expression applied. "And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day;" And, "that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life."

Jesus further states in regard to the Supper on that occasion "with desire have I desired to eat this with you." So while the breaking of bread and drinking of wine in remembrance of Christ may be in direct harmony with the will of the Father, it may be that it is such for the reason that it was pleasing to Christ to so institute it and was his will and therefore became the Father's will, although no command had been given Jesus in regard to it.

As to the breaking of bread before blessing it, or blessing before breaking, sticklers for either method can take their choice for Jesus did both. On one occasion as stated by Matthew, Mark and Luke blessing and then breaking; and on two occasions, as stated by Nephi and Mormon, breaking and then blessing, and commanding the disciples to so observe the ordinance.

In regard to using any part of the day and thus being strict followers of Jesus, we see no reason why such particularity need to be observed, if no particular stress is laid on the material used, as is clearly shown in the command in Doctrine and Covenants. As for us, if we were to go to the house of worship, and should feel disgruntled because the bread was offered in the forenoon, or the afternoon, that it was broken and blessed afterward; or blessed and then broken, we doubt if it would do us the hearty good it would if we act thankfully, reverently remembering Christ with an eye single to the glory of God.

Correspondence.

MALVERN, IOWA,
July 13th, 1884.

Editor of the Herald:—After the discussion with Rev. W. R. Coovert, at Pittsburg, Pa., which I see is duly noticed in Bro. E. L. Kelley's letter to the Herald, I continued in that city a few days—until over Sunday the 18th, and attended services in the Saints' Hall, morning, afternoon and evening. There was a good interest manifest in all of the meetings. The brethren, in the main, are doing well, and are sanguine of the final triumph of the cause. Those who were in attendance at the discussion expressed themselves as having been confirmed in the faith. Notwithstanding the tales, stories, hard speeches and vicious accusations indulged in by our opponent, they observed that he failed to answer our arguments, never moved a single position taken by the affirmative. Stories, vulgar and slanderous attacks, lose their charm before intelligent people after about the first recital. Our opponents seem to think, however, some of them, that the whole merit of a question under discussion consists in the ability of one disputant to rake up and tell a more outlandish yarn or falsehood on his opponent, than he may be able to invent against him, or those he represents. If this is to be taken as the method by which problems are to be solved, mysteries unraveled and truth revealed, he will be most fortunate who chances to have the last speech.

Reverends Coovert and Braden seem to have trained in the same school. Both had been in long preparation, but after a few skirmishes on the main questions, they took to scandal and gossip as naturally as geese take to water. The way, however, though long and winding, is comparatively easy—follow them through their list of falsehoods, lying and hypocritical authors to the jumping off place. What is stranger still, these Reverends part their hair in the middle. Is there a band of them? and is this their badge? Does it indicate blood and destruction, "war to the knife and knife to the hilt?" or unbalanced? Which? Some of the Pittsburg ladies thought it an indication.

There is a useful element developing in Pittsburg among the Saints, and it is believed a better time is coming for the work there. I had the pleasure of meeting a number of the brethren at their homes, and found them earnest and devoted members of the household of faith. They have made many sacrifices and put forth a persistent and untiring effort for years, to hold up the standard of liberty and truth in that city; and are still willing to toil on, believing that in due time they shall reap. I was pleased to learn that Father Eills' labors were appreciated and he held in high esteem among the Saints. We are especially indebted to Sr. Smith and her excellent family for good care while in the city. Thanks.

On May 21st, by request of Bro. G. T. Griffiths, I went to Wheeling, West Virginia, and remained until over the 25th, holding meetings evenings and on Sunday in the meantime, in conjunction with Bro. Griffiths. There is a branch organization there, and they have built a neat little church in which to worship. The Saints are earnest, devoted and worthy. Pretty much all of this has been accomplished within a year's time. The work done is very complimentary to the Saints there, Bro. Griffiths with the rest; for the presumption is fairly drawn that had there been no Bro. Griffiths there had been no church of organized Saints, in Wheeling now. I was gratified to learn that Bro. and Sr. Griffiths have the confidence and esteem of the Saints, and the good will of many of the outsiders. May they be able to retain it and their usefulness continue long. They are in the right place to serve the cause. Another active laborer is needed there.

Monday the 26th, I returned to Kirtland. On June 9th started for Richmond, Mo., arriving in Independence the 12th, and put up with Bro. A. H. Smith. Here I learned that we would not be able to enter at once upon the committee work, as the Whitmer brethren were not quite prepared, and Father Whitmer requested that President J. Smith be present at the time when the comparison of books should take place. Accordingly we tried to accept the situation, though with no very good grace, and wait. Yes, wait; and all the time a feeling of hurry and discontent about us, because we had to wait for the wheel to turn, before business could be done, which would disarrange all other calculations. Sunday following (the 15th) I preached in the Saints' Chapel, morning and evening. The morning service was complimented as having been "a good Methodist effort." That of the evening was not quite so tame—suited better. They like strong meat in Independence. There was a large number in attendance at the services, but I learned that there were no more than the usual number present. It is easily seen that the Saints are increasing in number in Independence. Mostly by persons moving in, to make homes in, and about the center place. In the last two years the town has improved with a better class of buildings and an increased number. Property has gone up amazingly. General contentment seems to prevail among the brethren, and to the casual beholder naught but growth and prosperity await the sojourners. Others might be reminded of the saying, "While men slept an enemy came and sowed tares."

Thursday, the 19th, in company with Bro. Heman C. Smith, I went to Richmond, and made arrangements with the brethren Whitmers to commence the work of comparing of the books with the manuscript, July 7th or 8th, as the earliest time convenient for them. Returning to Independence, on Friday, the 20th, the committee held a consultation and agreed to compare the Palmyra Edition of the Book of Mormon with the present, or Plano Edition, as a means of facilitating the other work. This took upwards of ten days. Proved to be a good thing as the main differences are to be found between the Palmyra and present current edition. The changes are innocent enough, and seem to have been an attempt at correcting the grammatical errors in the Palmyra Edition; but in many instances without improving the language of the original writers. I am satisfied that the Book of Mormon was given to the world with all of the imperfections of style and grammatical inaccuracies found in the language of the original writers. If their style was good and their grammar correct, as compared with ours; if they were learned in their own language, these excellencies appeared in their writings; otherwise they did not. Lehi was among the best writers, if not the best; yet he wrote but little. This is accounted for from the fact that he was learned in the language of the Jews, and the learning of the Egyptians. Nephi was young when he left Jerusalem, and spent his life in the wilderness with a few families and had not the opportunities of culture that were given his father. It is but reasonable that this want of school discipline and letter culture would appear, more or less, in his writing. As the nation grew and became skilled in the arts and sciences and literature, they improved their language and style. Moroni and Mormon rank among the best writers. The productions of great leaders, learned judges, in their carefully prepared documents are written more accurately than their simple narrative of history, also the direct communications from the Lord or angels. Book of Ether in style in some respects is unlike the other books. It is as separate and distinct in style, as it is in history; and among the most correctly written books in the Book of Mormon. This would seem to indicate that the Jaredites possessed a more perfect system of writing than did the Nephites. This we can readily conclude, as their language had not been confounded, and they were an enlightened and cultured people. The more carefully we read the Book of Mormon, the more certain we are that no two or three men wrote it. A number of writers had to do with it, with no attempt at diversifying the style for a purpose, but all followed a general style that marks the book all through; and the individualities are seen in some peculiar wording, phrase or turn of a sentence that was peculiar to the author. The common phrase, "And it came to pass," is not so objectionable as one at first would be inclined to think. That simple phrase covers varied periods of time—days—weeks and years of time. What better phrase could have been used? What should have taken its place? It grates a little on the (said to be) cultivated ear, that is all. It does not confuse the author's meaning. This phrase is peculiarly Bible; and when it is borne in mind that the Bible formed the basis of the Nephite literature and learning, it should not be thought strange if they made a frequent use of this phrase, which had grown to be national in its use, employed by prophets, historians and kings. God's ways are still equal. His messages are not delivered in the excellency of speech of man's wisdom, yet all can readily understand them.

I had the pleasure of meeting with many new acquaintances, as well as old, while at Independence—too many to make mention. Past the 4th pleasantly, and on the 8th, in company with the other committeemen, Brn. A. H. and T. W. Smith, and Pres. Joseph Smith, went to Richmond, and we entered upon the task of comparing the manuscript and books. It took place in the chamber of Father Whitmer, with open doors. Editors, lawyers and newspaper men came and watched the modus operandi, examined and went at pleasure. Nothing astounding was met with. The particulars will appear in our report. All changes are of an innocent character—some typographical; and so far as the real import of the Book of Mormon is concerned, it matters little which Edition is followed in the future publication of the book. One thing is apparent from the manuscript, the spelling was left to the scribe; except words which he was in doubt about, or the translator could not pronounce, or proper names and words entirely new to both translator and scribe. These were doubtless spelled out in the translation, are uniform, and evidently correctly spelled.

Sunday 13th, Brn. T. W. and A. H. Smith held services with the Saints near Richmond. "Ye Editor" followed on Monday evening, and the writer, in company with Bro. T. W. Smith on Sunday evening. We enjoyed our visit. There are others near the kingdom there. The work at Richmond done, the committee returned to Independence on the 17th, and made out our report. Saturday the 19th, I left Independence for Iowa. Took sick on the way to Kansas City—had felt it creeping on for several days—and have not been fit "for service" since. This will apologize for any seeming neglect of duty on our part. If sufficiently recruited, I hope to reach Michigan next week.

W. H. KELLEY.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, July 28th, 1884.

To the Saints' Herald:—While it is pleasing to read of the success of our brethren, I thought it would be as well to vary the monotony, and tell of some failures. Like children, when we have discovered some new thing, we want to "rush into print" with it. Perhaps we fear that others may have been equally lucky; and lest they should be first in claiming the honor, we want our names plainly written on the scroll of fame. Or when we have accomplished something that seems to us of importance, or that we think will secure us a name among the successful ones, we hasten to the Press, and send the good news far and wide. And by this means I sometimes think we are made to appear bigger in print than our natural stature. I remember once, a friend of my acquaintance being introduced to Bro. David Dancer. As David looked down from his lofty height to the diminutive stature of his new acquaintance, he said, in a tone of surprise, "Is this Bro. —? Why, I have read your letters in the Herald, and I thought you were a great big man!" Thus we find the Herald serves as a magnifying glass, through which very diminutive beings are often, unintentionally, magnified, and appear as "mighty men of renown." Is it not mortifying to be conscious of the fact, that we are not nearly as great as we appear? It is a greater misfortune when we are blind to our own littleness. "Man know thyself," is a very useful, but neglected maxim.

On the 29th of May, through the exertions of Bro. James Emerson, a hall was hired in Missouri Valley Junction, from the Campbellites for me to preach in. As there had only been one sermon preached by any of our elders in that place, it was desirable to obtain a foothold there for the truth, Missouri Valley being quite a center. I preached on the necessity of inspiration from God. The Christian minister was present, and about fifty others. I tried to tell the truth as plainly as I could, and sought for the inspiration I was preaching of. The minister seemed uneasy, and at the close did not rush to shake hands with the preacher, but got out of that as soon as he well could. I did not hear any hearty God bless you, fall from any of their lips, but I was conscious I had done my duty, and that was approval enough. The next day the good minister told some he was glad he was present, for, said he, "I can knock those arguments in the head;" but although I preached there two more evenings that week, he was only noticeable for his absence. But I learned that on the next Sabbath evening he tried his strength at the arguments he had heard on the Thursday evening, but from those present I heard that he was sadly muddled; in fact, various ones of his audience declared they had never seen him so hampered, or make so signal a failure. He is said to be an able man, and certainly is a man of fine appearance. I continued preaching there until the end of the week, my audience visibly lessening in numbers every night, not a flattering compliment upon the speaker's ability; nor did it evince a burning desire to hear the truth. Mr. Henry Fry aided Bro. Emerson in paying the rent of the hall. His wife is a sister in the church, and he is believing. The matter of continuing meetings in that place was presented to the Magnolia Conference on the 14th of June, when means were subscribed by the Saints to hire a hall in Missouri Valley, and I was requested to hold meetings there. Accordingly, on the 22d of June, assisted by Bro. P. Cadwell, I preached twice in the Town Hall. My audiences very, very small; but in the afternoon Bro. Cadwell, Bro. Emerson and myself attended a meeting in the same place, and after listening to a sermon by a Mr. Crawford of no church, preached to an audience of eight, (the minister keeping his seat while preaching), I was invited to address the vast audience, and remembering the injunction "to be instant in season and out of season," I improved the time, and told them what God was doing in the last days. At the close one of the audience proved to be a Congregational minister, and he and another gentleman doubled teams, and we had a running debate for about two hours on various topics pertaining to the gospel; most of the audience listened throughout. I was surprised when I was tauntingly and persistently told, that as a people we placed Joseph Smith between us and God. Nor had the gentleman the manliness to accept my frequent correction, but he insultingly still urged the falsehood. The Congregational minister was more gentlemanly, but could not accept us as the Church of God, yet he declared that all the churches were wrong, he did not even except his own; but he felt very bad when, in a far milder form, I had uttered the same truth, proving that men do not like others to confess their sins for them, I invited the friends to be present in that place that evening to hear more of the "strange doctrine," but in vain. The light was too strong.

On the 29th of June I preached there again twice, audiences still small. Bro. Emerson thought we could do better in the "Christian Hall," accordingly he arranged for that for the next Sunday. Bro. Emerson, Davison and myself attended the Christian Sunday School on the morning of July 6th. During their business transactions at the close of the school, they talked of our meetings, but as soon as the time came for our meeting to commence, every man and woman except three, who I suppose were not members, left the house, thereby showing the utmost contempt for what they term Mormonism. About a dozen people came in, most of whom belonged to our church. I preached the truth as though there had been thousands. In the evening we had about a dozen strangers. On the 20th of July I preached there again twice, and as the old instructions to the elders used to be "to preach themselves into a church or out of a congregation," I thought I had very nearly fulfilled the latter part of that instruction, and I would give Missouri Valley Junction a rest until the evenings were longer, and the Nicodemuses might have the privilege of stealing in under the shadows of night, as they dare not be seen listening to us by daylight. I must state here that a gentleman and lady by the name of Frick, a merchant in the town, attended our meetings very regularly, paid strict attention, made earnest and intelligent inquiries respecting the truth, invited me to visit and instruct them, which I did to the best of my ability. They belong to the Dunkard Church, but are desirous to know the whole truth, and are praying for light. May God help them to see it and embrace it.

Bro. James Emerson and wife are live members, and are doing what they can for the opening of the work in that place. Sister Jackson is another, equally desirous to see the banner of the gospel waving gloriously. I have in the meantime, labored in other places, but my success is not visible; but I shall hammer away, realizing that this is a day of warning, and being called to that duty I must perform it, "whether men will hear, or whether they will forbear." It is always pleasant to labor when you see the fruits, but he shall be rewarded who sees not the reward of his toil in this life, inasmuch as he labors wisely and well.

Dear Herald:—I am still battling for the truth. Since taking the field last November, I have been busily engaged in the Master's cause, and have been greatly blessed at times, in trying to present the gospel of Christ among men. I have great reasons to rejoice for embracing this great latter day work; for at all times of trouble and trials, I find the Spirit of the Master to be with me, restoring peace and comfort, and everlasting consolation to my soul; and "although I have had much persecution, yet I have endeavored to hold up the banner of King Immanuel; and by so doing, have been privileged to baptize fifteen souls. There have been two or three ministers (also some others) in this part, who have endeavored to put down our principles of faith, alleging that the "founders of latter day saintism were terrible people," etc.; but all in an underhanded way, shrinking from fair and honest investigation, and watching their opportunity for slinging dirt behind our back, making lies thier refuge, etc. Notwithstanding, the Lord has blessed and been with us, and honest hearted people are compelled to admit, that the grounds we occupy are scriptural; hence amid all the anathemas and vituperations of Reverend Divines, the good ship of Zion sails right along; and all the combined efforts of the would-be great men, will never retard its progress. God has indeed set his hand the second time to recover his people Israel, and the honest in heart are fast gathering into the fold, preparing to meet their God.

The thirteenth of this month, I organized a branch here with twenty-one members, to be known as the "Iosco" Branch. Brother George Cook was ordained to the office of a Priest, and chosen to preside over the branch; and as the spirit of love and unity, now characterizes the branch, I hope and pray that they may never deviate from the same, nor allow contention to arise among them. Times have been very dull and backward here during the summer, and fire is now raging, doing its work of destruction. Several parties have been burned out, and lost all they had. Last Sunday while we were holding our meeting, the cry of fire was heard, and we had to break up our meeting and go and fight for our homes; luckily no one in the neighborhood was burned out, although several families moved their goods from their houses, and started for the bay. I intend to start for Canada next week, to labor there for a while. I hope to be enabled to do good, that when the Master comes, I may enter into that haven of rest he has gone to prepare for the children of God.

Yours in bonds,

WILLARD J. SMITH.

LITTLE ROCK, Minn.,

July 23d, 1884.

Dear Herald Readers:—Since last writing, I have been much blessed. Although a time of year when the people are busy, I was privileged to occupy most of the time. I left Jamestown, Neb., on June 5th, stopping at Fremont where I assisted in settling some difficulty existing there, which we hope will be accepted as a warning to all acquainted with the nature of the wrong, to avoid it in the future. Visited with the Saints at Platte Valley, Omaha and Pleasant Grove branches, feeding them with food necessary to the spiritual growth; and during the time assisted in the erection of the church building in Fremont until the 27th of June, when the conference of the Northern Nebraska District convened in the new church. Much good was done at conference; a good spirit prevailed. On the 2d of July, left the Nebraska mission with fond remembrance of the kindness I had received from the many hands, who so willingly and abundantly ministered to my wants. To those who are thus mentioned I will say, that as I have not that with which to repay you, yet God has, and to him I have remembered you. Trust him for his grace, he knoweth all.

On my way to my new field of labor, Minnesota, I stopped a few days at home, finding my mother-in-law just recovering from sickness, and tried to minister words of comfort to them in their life of loneliness and privation, which is somewhat difficult work, as those who are placed under similar circumstances alone can comprehend. Left my home on the 11th inst., attending a two days' meeting in the Union Center Branch of the Little Sioux District. The meeting was presided over by Bro. Phineas Cadwell, and was one to be remembered only for good. Stopped on my way here at Little Sioux and River Sioux, at both of which places I held meetings. I make mention of the Sabbath School at Little Sioux as an interesting one, and one to be the means of fulfilling the instruction of the Father to his people. I look upon the Sabbath School as the principal means by which the children are to be brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; and I fear that if the parents throughout the church do not seek to promote everything that will tend to the instruction of their children in the ways of the Lord, they will come under the condemnation of the slothful; for upon them the injunction is laid to "bring up your children," etc. Arrived here last night, commence open firing next Sunday.

To the saints of Minnesota I wish to say, that ye are the salt of this work of God here, and if the salt bath lost its savor, what can be expected but that nothing can be saved, and all become corrupt together. Look to it, and see that oil is in your vessels ready to be lighted to aid the wanderers in darkness surrounding you; and if you have not applied the match, zeal, that the oil may burn to the giving of light to them who sit in darkness, apply it soon; as the night soon cometh when the work is done, and others having been the means of doing it, no reward can be received by you who work not. May the blessing of God attend all of Zion's children, that they may see the necessity of working while the day lasts. My address for the present is Little Rock, Nobles Co., Minnesota, care of P. W. Premo. Would like to hear from the branches of the church in this mission, especially in southern Minnesota through some official of the branch, also from any scattered members of the church residing in the State. My permanent post office address is box 4, Magnolia, Harrison Co., Iowa.

Dear Brother Joseph:—Bro. John H. Lake attended the Kent and Elgin District Conference, at Zone; and they enjoyed a very pleasant time. He says he does not remember of a more peaceful and truly spiritual time ever being enjoyed in that district. He baptized six afterwards. From there Bro. John came to the London District Conference, which was held in the Egermont Branch, Grey county, Ontario. I had preceded Bro. John H. by being called on to bury our beloved brother, John A. Kennedy, who departed this life firm in the faith, on June 6th, 1884. I was notified of his death in due time; so left home on the 7th, and on the 8th (Sunday) we, in company with the bereaved ones, escorted the remains to Mt. Forest Cemetery, where we deposited his earthly part in the bosom of his mother earth, and consigned his eternal spirit to his Father, having the assurance that we shall meet our brother again in the resurrection of the just, reserving the funeral sermon to be preached on the next Sunday, June 15th, at which time conference was in session, having convened on the 14th. Bro. John H. Lake was assigned the honor of setting forth the future glorious hope by resurrection from the dead. He acquitted himself after his usual lucid and forcible style, there being a large gathering on the occasion, as Bro. Kennedy was long and intimately known to a great many in these parts.

Our conference was well and ably presided over by Bro. Lake; and during the entire sessions of Saturday and Sunday, peace and good will reigned. The official reports were gratifying, showing a desire on the part of the ministry to roll on Zion's cause; also in additions the results were pleasing; which, though not many, yet steadily on the gain. Still more gratifying were the testimonies and expressions to greater efforts for the future. Altogether, this was one of the best, if not the best conference held in this district.

Immediately after conference Bro. J. H. Lake went into the next township, where he had a pleasant time, and preached to attentive listeners, in a region where Brn. C. Scott, S. Brown, T. A. Phillips and myself had sown seed, and expressed hopes of yet being able to reap some in the near future. I went into the next county, Dufferin, and preached in a place called Riverview, where I made an opening last winter, and at that time baptized three, and left a good feeling, which now on my return was heightened; and after preaching a few more times, I had the pleasure of baptizing six more. This occupied my time from June 16th to the 24th, at which date I was joined by Bro. Lake, who brought the good news that he had also baptized two a few days after conference.

From Riverview Bro. Lake and I proceeded by stage to Alliston, in Simcoe county, where we labored with the Saints of the Alliston Branch, and where our labors were needed and seem to be appreciated some. After doing what the nature of the work required of us there, we next went to a place called Price's Corners, where we began meetings. This brings us to the 8th of July. I had formed the acquaintance of a Mr. J. B. Price, who was doing business at Alliston, who had heard all kinds of stories of Latter Day Saints, and he made inquiry as to time and place of their meeting at Alliston. The result of hearing for himself convinced him that we had the truth, and made us friends. As he was going home to Price's Corners, he invited us to come and preach in a hall adjoining his house. We did so, arriving July 8th, where we continued till the 15th. By our joint preaching we made friends, and had the opportunity of meeting an old Seventh Day Adventist, P. H. How, who challenged us to a debate on Sabbath question, which we endeavored to accommodate him with on the evening of July 14th. Bro. John H. was chosen chairman, and myself as speaker. Proposition, "The seventh day Sabbath of the decalogue is now binding on Christians." J. A. McIntosh denies. We endeavored to handle the question as best we could; and although no expression was called for, yet all present from their demonstrations gave evidence of being satisfied with our defense; as when Mr. How was in his first half hour speech, he asked three times when his half hour would be up; and finally he offered to give me the last ten minutes, which I told him I did not need. So he continued and filled up till within three minutes and offered me them. I would not accept, so he diverged and repeated. The truth lost nothing, and we gained several friends, and left a splendid feeling. After taking a hasty parting on the morning of July 15th, we sped back to Orillia. There waited for a train to take us to Victoria Co., Mariposa Township, the place of Bro. John H. Lake's early boyhood, where many of his friends yet live. Though some have passed away, others have filled up the vacant ranks. We found a hearty welcome at the home of his eldest sister and her husband, Mr. Weldon. After spending some time in chatting over scenes of early boyhood and riper years, occasionally interspersed with a dissertation on gospel principles, which was listened to with interest, we were made to feel at home during our stay, which was rendered all the pleasanter by the instrumental music of Mr. Weldon's grand daughter, grand niece to Bro. John H. Lake.

We anticipate holding forth here next Sunday, in a grove nicely seated, belonging to Mr. Weldon. From here we intend going to Oakwood, few miles distant, where some more of Bro. John's friends live, and where he and brother

Joseph Snively preached some years ago; and where we are informed a hall is in readiness for our coming. At Oakwood Bro. John and I expect to part, I to continue the journey eastward to Napinel, about a hundred and forty miles, where some Saints are, and where I expect from reports to gather a few sheaves. There seems even in this back part of creation, to be an understanding as to the fact that there is a difference between Latter Day Saints and Brighamites; but the difference is not clearly understood until explained, as both have a Smith in them. Bro. J. H. Lake is feeling well in health for him, and is all alive to the Master's cause; and I never felt better physically, and am ready for a "tilt at tourney," or any other lawful engagement connected with the good cause to further its spread. Desire an interest in the prayers of my brethren and fellow-laborers in the vineyard. I think we can fully sympathize with each other in the trials we are called on to endure; and need each other's prayers. May God bless his people, prepare the way before his servants, give them liberty in word and souls for their hire, is the prayer of your brethren in gospel bonds,

JOHN H. LAKE,
J. A. MCINTOSH.

OSHKOSH, Wis., July 27th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—About nine years ago my brother Matthias and myself sent a petition to conference at Plano, to get Book of Mormon and some tracts printed in German, which was then read before conference, but nothing much was done towards its accomplishment. About three years ago I put a piece in the Herald that I would (if my family should receive from the Church $200 a year) go to preach, and that was all the good it did, and a few letters I wrote were not printed. Now as time is worth money, I have no time to write letters for the waste basket. I have always been opposed, ever since I joined the Church, to a preacher receiving an amount according to his family, or the Bishop's idea, as long as some in the Church have many things in splendor and fashion, while others can walk in rags and live on pudding and potatoes, and very little besides, one year after another, and live as best they can, or die in poverty and grief. For that reason the poor ought to be looked after better, and if worthy, receive help; if not, be cut off, if repentance after sufficient time given is rejected, and the Elders ought to receive a certain sum for their families according to their needs; and they themselves ought to have books and tracts of different kinds along with them, to let the truth seeker have the latter free, and the former for pay, or if too poor, for nothing.

Bad luck, too much trusting, a few blunders, etc., have kept me bound hands and feet, so I have so far been unable to take the field; and in consequence thereof, I have been slighted many times too numerous and very unwise to mention. I am ready to give reasons at any time why I have not preached much since I was ordained an Elder. They are many and true. As I belong to the Fifth Quorum of Elders, and regard order one of the first principles, I wrote to Bro. R. Etzenhouser, that if I had as good luck for the next two months as I have had lately, I would be ready to start an Elder in the field with giving him yearly at eight different times just what I have asked for, (being $200) through the Bishop, and I will make it better; I will give him yearly $50 worth of books and tracts at wholesale rates, the kind he wants. He must be a good Elder, that can talk according to grammar German and English, and got to preach in the North Eastern Wisconsin District. I will pay his fare here and back, but would want him to stay one or more years at a time. If any of my brethren or sisters know of a brother of the kind mentioned, that can go to preach if his family and he receive what I name, please let me or Bro. R. Etzenhouser know at once.

There were and are yet many drones, tobacco chewers, cheats, and men that will get trusted and then either pay nothing, or a certain amount on a dollar, and call it square, and therefore being worse than common thieves; that is the majority of that class, men and women that have no regard to the word of wisdom, training of children, etc., in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. An elder that has those failings, and is not willing to repent, or any other failings such as those mentioned, that are as disgusting to the honest people, and is bound to continue in the same, need not write to us. I would consider a letter from such an elder to be sent to preach, an insult.

The church is progressing. There are many noble elders and sisters in it, thank God. The papers and books are noble and very interesting. We as a church are moving, and must move. We can not afford to be idle. We must set a noble example, and pull along the sleeping. How can we afford, dear brethren and sisters, to let the church go down, after millions of the lowest insults have been heaped upon us, and blood spilt, etc. Can we do it? Can we afford it? Is it paying business? Is it consistent? I say no. It pays to go ahead after we know that we have obeyed the same gospel that Christ preached, and therefore I beg of you that have of this world's goods, do loosen the hands of those elders that are noble, and would gladly go to preach if they had the means to do with. Selfish, stingy, covetous people have no room in heaven; so let us open our hearts. But yet more our purses, and let us help with money where money is needed. Good elders should be sent to preach, their families supported where they can't support themselves, the poor looked after, many kinds of books and tracts in many languages printed and distributed where wanted. The elders must have decent clothes and a little money for different things once in a while. The Saints in order to flourish must have meeting houses, etc. Therefore let us pull with a united pull, and be firm. I ask all the honest, humble saints to pray for their brother in bonds,

JOSEPH LAMPERT.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

August 1st.—Daly and Egan, the alleged Irish dynamitards, were convicted at Warwick, England, on the charge of treason-felony. Daly was sentenced to penal servitude for life, and Egan to twenty years' penal servitude. McDonnell, who pleaded guilty, was permitted to escape without punishment. Daly made a speech in his own defense. He said he moved about under an assumed name; so did Queen Victoria. He had the same right. He asked not for mercy, but justice, and intimated that he did not expect either at the hands of a British jury.

It is asserted in telegrams from Foo Chow, China, published in the London Times, that China refuses to pay the indemnity demanded by France for the Lang-Sou affair.

The British steamer Britannia, from New York for London, was wrecked off Portland, England. The members of the crew were saved. The cargo, consisting of 88,000 bushels of oats, 17,000 bushels of wheat, and 670 pounds of oil-cake, was a total loss.

It is reported from Cardiff, Wales, that a man died from cholera on the French steamer Graville, from Marseilles, at anchor in Penarth Roads. The body was thrown overboard. Another man aboard the ship is very ill.

Eleven deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night, and two at Toulon. The fugitives are returning in increased numbers. Marseilles is becoming more animated, and shops are reopening. At Marseilles, between nine o'clock and noon to-day, there were five deaths from cholera. At Toulon there were only two deaths from cholera to-day. Thirty-three cases are now treated in the Bona Rencontre Hospital and ninety-three in the Saint Mandrier Hospital. Another death from cholera has occurred at Montafort. At Marseilles there were six deaths from cholera to-day between noon and seven.

There are seventy-eight cholera patients under treatment at the Pharo Hospital. Of ten admitted into the hospital to-day three died and two are cured.

Advices from Motul, Temax, Acarcel, and other points in Yucatan, state that immense swarms of locusts have appeared in those sections and are again destroying the crops. The execution of the provisions of the recent treaty between Germany and Russia, whereby the former Power agreed to expatriate the Nihilist refugees and other subjects who have fled to Germany from Russia, has been begun in earnest and is working great hardships on scores who have settled down in Germany and made therein new homes for themselves. The majority of the immediate victims of this treaty are newcomers, all of whom have been officially ordered to leave the country within a fortnight. Those whose affairs have been so fixed by long residence as to require more time to settle up have been given permits with a six months' extension of residence, but only on the security of good bondsmen that they will, at the termination of the specified time, peaceably quit the Empire. As might be supposed, the ordinance has been the cause of great hardship and suffering to many who have long resided in Germany and become socially associated with the districts in which they have dwelt. Many of this class, to avoid expulsion, have applied for letters of naturalization from the German Government, but although able to comply with all the conditions of the law, have been invariably refused the privilege. This conduct on the part of the German Government has provoked an outburst of indignation on the part of the Liberal press.

A British man of war has gone to Madagascar to protect British property.

An establishment for the manufacture of explosive bombs has been discovered in the Rue

The men employed in the construction of a railroad bridge at Needles, Cal., were attacked yesterday by an unexplained disease. They became dizzy and fell in fainting fits. August 2d.—Stanley, the African explorer, has stated since his return to England that Gen. Gordon is perfectly safe at Khartoum, and that he can leave there at any time without fear of being captured.

Mr. Gladstone announced in the British Commons that the conference of the European Powers on the Egyptian question had failed to agree. He refused to make any statement as to the cause of disagreement. The Premier's announcement was received with a storm of howls by the Tories and was scarcely relished by the Radicals. Before Mr. Gladstone made his statement there was a meeting of the Cabinet, at which Lord Hartington urged him to make some definite declaration as to the future policy in regard to Egypt. This he declined to do. During the conference France's representative, M. Waddington, evinced considerable hostility to English interests.

The French Yellow Book, published to-day, gives the following information respecting the recent negotiations between France and China: France first demands of China an indemnity of 250,000,000 francs for the affair at Langson, but after China had ordered her troops withdrawn from Tonquin France only asked that China should compensate the families of the soldiers killed at Langson and pay the extra expenses which the Chinese attack made necessary for France to incur. China objected to the indemnity, but July 19th consented to appoint the Viceroy of Nankin to enter into negotiations with M. Patenotre, the French Minister. China then announced that she had submitted the indemnity question to the powers. Between the 27th and the 29th of July Patenotre telegraphed the home Government that it was impossible to arrive at an understanding with the delegates from China, who refused to pay the indemnity, and asked that the time granted China to accept the French ultimatum be extended. Minister Ferry thereupon telegraphed to Patenotre, July 30th, to extend the respite if necessary. Patenotre replied that China offered to pay an indemnity of 1,000,000 francs and he refused it. July 13th France informed Admiral Courbet of her intention to occupy Foo-Chow and Kelung in case China refused the French ultimatum. Admiral Courbet was ordered to use force only if attacked. A dispatch of this date from Foo-Chow says: "I have inspected the river forts from the heights above and find no changes made."

The British Government has resolved upon a large reduction of the forces in Ireland.

On appeal from the Jews of Jerusalem, the Sultan has annulled the sale of the part of the Mount of Olives which contains the graves of the prophets Haggai, Zachariab, and Malachi. The purchasers were the Russian priesthood.

At Panama during July four prominent people died of yellow-fever. The hospitals there and at Colon are crowded. The heat is intense. Dysentery of an intractable form has appeared.

The Jews rise high in France. It appears from an Annuaire published by the community in Paris that two Jews sit in the Senate, three in the Chamber, four in the Council of State, and two in the Supreme Council of Education. One Cabinet Minister, M. David Raynal is a Jew, and so are no less than ten Chiefs of Ministerial Departments, who are probably more powerful than Ministers. Three Prefects are Jews, seven sub-Prefects, and four Inspectors General of Education. The same community furnishes two Generals of Division, three Generals of Brigade, four Colonels, and nine Lieutenant-Colonels, one Judge of the Court of Cassation (the President) and ten provincial Judges.

August 3.—In the twenty-four hours ending at nine o'clock this evening, fifteen deaths from cholera occurred in Marseilles. There were no deaths from cholera at Toulon. Thirty cases were taken to the hospital. Several cases of cholera were reported to-day in various parts of Italy. There have been many disorders at Bargo, San Dalmazzo, the inhabitants believing the doctors and chemists poisoned the girl who died there from cholera. Stringent orders were issued by the Government that all linens arriving from France be disinfected or burned.

The Pope has directed Cardinals and Bishops vacating Rome to return to their dioceses to prepare for a visitation of cholera. The Pope presided at several conferences of the clergy called to decide what relations the clergy should maintain with the civil authorities in case of an epidemic.

A man was seized with what is reported to be cholera, in New York City.

The prisoners confined in the county jail at Baker City, Oreg., effected their escape Friday night by cutting through the windows. Four of those who got away are notorious stock thieves.

Hog cholera has created great havoc in the country around Vandalia, Ill. Many farmers have lost their entire stock of swine.

August 4.—The British bark Belle Star, from Queenstown for New York, came into collision with the Richard Owen of Cardiff, Wales, bound for St. John's, N. F. The latter was sunk and four of the crew were drowned. The survivors were landed at Queenstown.

Two hundred thousand people attended a meeting at Birmingham, England, to protest against the action of the House of Lords on the Franchise bill. John Bright and Joseph Chamberlain, the President of the Board of Trade, were present and addressed the great gathering.

The particulars of the collision and sinking of the steamer Dione in the Thames, Saturday night, state that there were a great many pleasure passengers on board the vessel. It was a clear, moonlight night. The collision occurred about midnight with the large iron-steamer Camden, just off Gravesend. The Dione's port side was stove in, and the vessel keeled over and sunk in two minutes. Seventeen persons were drowned. Those saved rushed on deck, jumped overboard half-dressed, and were rescued by tugs. The scene was heartrending. Ladies implored men to save their children. Many women were carrying infants. One woman placed her infant on a floating crate. The crate drifted away, but was found later off Thames Haven with the infant alive. The Captain of the Dione was saved, but was badly hurt.

There were four deaths from cholera at Toulon last night. The physicians fear that the return of the people to unhealthy lodgings will cause a fresh outbreak of cholera, and possibly an outbreak of small-pox and typhoid fever. Between nine and two o'clock to-day three deaths occurred at Marseilles from cholera. At Toulon up to 6:30 p. m. there had been no deaths from cholera to-day. The total number of cases now under treatment is 109. There was one death to-day at Laseyne and two at Montfort-sur-Argens. At Marseilles up to seven p. m. there had been seven deaths from cholera since this morning. Only three cases were admitted into the Pharo Hospital to-day. Sixty cases are being treated there now. Ten were discharged to-day.

According to the latest advices the Mahdi is now fighting the negro tribes around Geb el Gardir, who refused to join him. It is asserted that he has dispatched a force to Khartoum under orders to take Gen. Gordon alive or dead. He has ordered the wells between the Kososko and Beyber to be filled up. The Sultan of Zanzibar sent a message to Gordon inviting him to Zanzibar.

There were severe earthquake shocks yesterday at Foco, in Bosnia.

The Texas cattle fever has broken out in Ellis county, Kansas.

Aug. 5.—Great opposition is manifested in Brussels and other cities to the Education bill about to be adopted by the recently-elected Parliament of Belgium. It partakes largely of a denominational character.

The British Commons appropriated $1,000,000 for the expedition to relieve Gordon by a vote of 174 to 14.

China refuses to accede to the terms of France. The Celestial authorities will pay $700,000 indemnity, but no more. The French Admiral, Courbet, is preparing to begin operation against Foo-Chow. Reinforcements are being sent to him from Brest.

It is reported that John Daly, convicted at Warwick, England, last week of dynamitardism, has submitted to an interview in jail, in which he said he was one of four conspirators whose movements were directed from America. The bombs found in his possession were delivered to him at Liverpool by a fellow conspirator. He was to deliver them to a third conspirator for use not in Liverpool, but in London. Daly thinks that the plot was revealed by one of the trusted conspirators. The agents of the Irish secret societies are watching this person, and, as Daly says, will "interview him."

At a meeting of 20,000 men in Birmingham, England, Monday night, Mr. John Bright, the great Radical leader, made a very radical speech in reference to the attitude of the House of Lords on the Franchise Bill. He asked: "Who are the Peers?" and answered; "They are the spawn of Flanders, the wars, and the corruptions of the dark ages of our history. They entered the temple of honor, not through the temple of merit, but through the sepulchres of their ancestors." Some were better than their fathers, some worse. Their privileges had produced ignorance and induced arrogance. Mr. Bright said a reform of the House of Lords was imperative and inevitable. The veto power of the Peers should be limited. The people should curb the nobles as their fathers did the privileges of the Kings. Mr. Bright said that the peers should be deprived of all power of vetoing a bill a second time. Mr. Chamberlain followed Mr. Bright. He said the divine-right-of-Kings theory had been exploded; the divine right of Peers was a figment which but needed exposure to die. Englishmen would never submit to the insolent pretensions of an hereditary class. These denunciations by an ex-Cabinet Minister and a Cabinet Minister are signs of the times in England.

The total number of persons drowned by the sinking of the steamer Dione on the Thames Saturday night was twenty-three.

The Texas cattle fever is spreading in southern Kansas. Governor Crosby of Montana has issued a quarantine against Texas cattle.

In the elections for county officers in Utah Monday the Mormons were successful everywhere.

August 6.—The French in Madagascar, are displaying the greatest activity in drawing mules by requisition. Gen. Willoughby is at Tarafatte with 10,000 Hovas, who are mainly relying on the fortifications and torpedo-pits. Measures have been taken to retire, if necessary, to Ambosi, fifty miles inland. One-half the French troops that have reached Madagascar from Tonquin have been sent to Majunga, and will form a second army, to march from Majunga to the Capital. The native Premier is peaceably disposed, but fears that he will lose his head. The French are suffering much from dysentery and fever.

There were three deaths at Marseilles and three at Toulon last night. Seven returned fugitives have so far died. Up to noon two deaths from cholera have occurred since nine o'clock this morning at Marseilles. At Toulon there has been one cholera death to-day and one at Lasagne. The reports of the hospitals are as follows: Bon Recontre admitted, none; cured, 1; deaths, 2; under treatment, 23. St. Mandrier admitted 4; cured, 10; death, 1; under treatment 70. At Marseilles there were two deaths from cholera between the hours of noon and 6:40 this evening. The record of the Pharo Hospital is as follows: Admitted, 3; cured, 5; deaths, 2; under treatment, 59. The town has assumed a more animated appearance.

An outbreak of English cholera has occurred at Northampton, Eng., owing to the scarcity of water. An entire family have been stricken. No deaths have occurred.

The Journal de St. Petersburg says that there is no cholera or other epidemic in Russia.

It is officially declared that the sanitary condition of Italy is improved. No fresh case of cholera has appeared at Pancalieri. One case is reported at Montenotte of a person from France.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the corn trade says: The change of the weather brought brilliant summer days, which have been literally tropical in heat. The harvest is in far better condition than a week ago. The work of the harvest is rapidly proceeding. In foreign trade nothing is doing. Off-coast trade is growing weaker. There were no sales of English wheat during the week. Monday next being the regular bank holiday no markets will be open in London or Liverpool.

Accurate statistics of the wheat crop of Colorado now being thrashed show an increase of five per cent over any previous year, making the yield 2,100,000 bushels. Colorado will consume 1,500,000. The Great American Desert will ship 600,000. In view of this fact the pooled roads have made a twenty-five cent rate on flour to the Missouri River.

Severe frosts on the nights of the 15th, 16th and 18th of July, were general throughout Beaver, Iron, Garfield, Piute and perhaps other counties in Utah. In one district in Garfield Co., nearly the whole wheat crop was destroyed, and it is being cut for hay. One third of the grain crop at Adamsville, Beaver County, has been utterly destroyed by the recent frosts, and the entire potato crop has been killed in both Adamsville and Greenville.

Theodore H. Growney an engineer, has just returned after two years' stay on the Panama Isthmus, where he was employed in excavating between Colon and Rio Grande. He has been over every foot of the proposed canal route, and, according to his detailed statement, the Panama Canal under its present management is not likely to be completed, as the expense will exceed the estimate at least eight times. Growney says the money expended wrongfully, stupidly, fraudulently and wasted in patronage, is something appalling. Contractors have fared badly. Of the eleven original foreign contractors not one remains, and of the four American contractors two have failed. Costly mistakes have been made, routes being changed as often as obstacles were found, and the only semblance so far to a canal is a ditch two miles long at Colon. Recently a party of German engineers went over the route of the proposed canal. Their opinion was that the canal would never be finished. Rear-Admiral Shufeldt corroborates the account given by Growney.

The mineral riches of the Silesian Mountains have long been known, but imperfectly worked. Enterprise is now stimulated by the discovery in these mountains of a rich vein of amethyst embedded in a layer of porphyry. The financiers of Berlin, Germany, propose to form a company with large capital to work the mines, and extravagant anticipations are entertained of the success of the enterprise.

In consequence of the terrible shipwrecks which have occurred at Skagerrack the proposal has long been ventilated of piercing the Danish promontory by a canal, and so avoiding this dread navigation. The proposal has now taken definite shape and surveys have been completed for a canal from the German Ocean to the Baltic Sea.

It is estimated that the wheat yield of Minnesota for this year will exceed that of last year by 4,110,000 bushels, an increase of 10 per cent; the corn crop will yield from 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels; the barley crop will produce 7,000,000 bushels, the largest ever known in the State; and the oat crop will be about 35,600,000 bushels, 10 per cent more than the crop of 1883.

Millions of grasshoppers have suddenly appeared near Hudson, Mich., and are devastating the oat crop in some townships hereabouts, and the farmers are hurrying their harvesting as fast as possible in order to save what they can. Their coming in such large numbers is something new in this part of the State. Wheat is yielding good, and the quality was never finer. Twenty to twenty-nine bushels per acre is what is reported. Corn has come on splendidly since the last rains and bids fair for a No. 1 crop. Oats not up to average, yet a fair crop. Nearly all the crops are in shock and stack. Wheat sells at $5 to 90 cents per bushel.

Although the cotton crop in most of the Southern States is about two weeks late the indications point to a large yield. In Southwestern Texas some damage has been done by recent rains.

The public debt statement for July presents no specially significant features. The reduction of the debt less cash in the Treasury is a little short of $4,000,000. Of the $6,000,000 withdrawn from deposit to secure the circulation of National banks only $4,500,000 has been replaced, which indicates a withdrawal to nearly that extent of this class of currency. There has been a very perceptible drain upon the gold held in the Treasury as a reserve against Government notes. It amounts to $14,000,000 and more for the month, and about $23,000,000 since the first of June. Gold and Silver certificates together amount now to about $186,000,000, and these doubtless fill the place of bank notes that are withdrawn.

Since Jan. 1st the imports of merchandise to the United States have exceeded the exports in value $75,739,902. In the same time the exports of specie exceeded the imports $36,124,187.

Returns from twenty-seven clearing houses of the United States show for last week an aggregate decrease of 6.1 per cent compared with corresponding week of last year. Outside of New York the decrease amounted to 19.2 per cent.

At a meeting of the leading coal-producers of Kentucky, Tennessee, and Alabama, held Aug. 4th at Chattanooga, Tenn., at which forty companies were represented, it was resolved to form a Southern Coal association.

A mine opened on the Temperance River, seventy-five miles from Duluth, Minn., recently, is turning out rich rock silver which yields about $200 per ton. The vein is five or six feet wide. The mine is said to be a bonanza.

Miller & Son, flax-spianers of Belfast, Ireland, have failed. It is estimated that their liabilities will reach £10,000, two-thirds of which is secured.

Hatfield & Co., ship insurance brokers of Liverpool, England, a firm which Mr. Chamberlain, President of the British Board of Trade, severely criticised some months ago for insuring unseaworthy ships, have failed. The liabilities have not been ascertained.

The official agricultural statistics of Russia, promise on the whole a satisfactory harvest in European Russia. With the exception of Archangel, Olonetz, and Viatka, a satisfactory yield of wheat and grass is anticipated in the northern provinces. Most abundant crops are expected in the northwestern and southwestern provinces and Poland, and in the Baltic region, the autumn wheat is in excellent condition, but the spring wheat is suffering from drouth. In the provinces bordering on the Volga the Astracan-wheat crop is flourishing; but in the southern provinces, excluding Tchernikoff and Kieff, it is only partially successful. The state of the wheat in the eastern provinces is satisfactory; while in the central governments, owing to insects and hail-storms, it is unsatisfactory, excepting in Voronej and Tamboff. In the St. Petersburg and Moscow districts the wheat crop is only moderately promising.

The Secretary of the Board of Vinicultural Commissioners of California, has made a report on the condition of the grape crop. The Zinfandel is bearing heavily. More Zinfandel will be made than ever before. Rieslings are furnishing small crops. The vintage is less than was expected, and the quality will depend upon ripening weather next month. Table grapes, such as are preferred by Eastern shippers and embracing the Emperor, Muscat, Flame, Tokay, and Black Terrara, bring from $50 to $80 per ton, and are in great demand. The Muscat has failed in the southern part of the State. The price for wine grapes promises to be lower than heretofore. The better varieties of grapes in districts where there is no lack of wine-cellars are being engaged at $30 per ton, mixed vintages at $25, and inferior, though not sought, at $18 to $20. The Old Mission and Malvoire grapes are gradually being supplanted by better varieties.

LINES GIVEN BY THE SPIRIT.

TO SR. S. V. BAILEY.

Awake, ye Saints, and labor,
Be not slothful any more;
For the time is surely coming,
When your labors will be o'er.
Then, arise, be up and doing,
Labor while 'tis called to-day;
Gather out the honest-hearted,
Bring them in the narrow way.

CHORUS.—Hail, O hail, that glorious morning,
When with Prophets, Priests and Kings;
Jesus, our blest Mediator,
Shall his glorious reign begin.

Labor earnestly, ye Heralds,
Whom the Lord your God hath sent;
Go to every land and nation,
Saying unto all repent.
Gentle peace is nearly ended,
Sudden vengeance waits their door,
When the cry of peace and safety,
Will be heard from them no more.

Swiftly push this latter glory,
Do not let it cease its roll;
Tell to all the pleasing story,
Let it sound from pole to pole.
Then arise, be up and doing,
Labor while 'tis called to-day;
Gather out the honest-hearted,
Bring them in the narrow way.

LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

Saints' Herald.—As the news comes to us through your columns of the effort being made in England to establish a paper, designed if successful to be a herald of the plan of salvation there, and the sending forth of chosen ambassadors of the gospel to the Isles of the Sea, inhabited by that people, allow me to draw the attention of those interested, to a great and important doctrine concerning the English people.

Throughout the Christian era, and for centuries before, an island having but a rugged, poor soil, and a disagreeable climate, has been building up in population, power and greatness, by the immigration at first of a tribe of people surpassing their neighbors in intelligence, who had come as stated by history, from the banks of one of the great rivers of Southern Asia. The location of this island in the north seas, stretching as it does northward from a corresponding latitude away to the north of the most northern boundary of the United States, lying opposite to the bleak and uninhabited shores of Labrador makes it indeed the "north country" of the civilized nations of the globe. Its pioneers also coming from the same direction as that to which the kingdom of Israel was driven seven centuries previous to the Christian era by one of the conquering monarchs of southern Asia; and its subsequent growth and extending its dominion over nearly all the "Isles of the Sea," until it might be said, that those isles were its seat of empire, are all significant of the part it must take in fulfillment of the prophecies of old, the burden of which was that they, the children of Israel, should be gathered to their own land from the "north country," and from the "Isles of the Sea."

God had a purpose in keeping distinct and separate from all others his chosen people; and for centuries at his command for this purpose, they practiced circumcision as an artificial barrier against intermixing with other nations; and thus we can see the wisdom and purpose in their dispersion to those islands where their ocean boundaries would be a natural barrier affecting the same purpose. Recent scientific as well as divine revelation, points with equal plainness however, to the conclusion, that all the millions of King Hosea's subjects could not, unless they diminished very fast in numbers after their captivity, have found territory sufficient behind the ice barriers of the north to accommodate so numerous a people, as well as that some of them, probably the tribe of Levi, did find their way to that unknown and inaccessible region.

Hall, the great arctic explorer, by use of dogs and sledges, reached and stopped at a point 83° 30' north latitude. This would be within five hundred miles of the north pole, allowing the earth to be the size and shape it is supposed to be. But here, although he was traveling north at the rate of thirty miles per day, his instruments would show by reckoning, no progress made during the day; the ground seemed coming back, he stated, as fast as he journeyed on, and he would not be any further north at night than when he started in the morning. This goes to prove the theory that beyond that latitude there is a great basin or depression, the verge of which he had reached. It is reasonable from this to conjecture, that the tribe of Levi, unaccustomed to the employments of the other tribes, separated sooner than the others, and found an asylum in that narrow territory, where they await the day, when at the command of their prophets, God shall cause a highway to flow down before them, and present them before their brethren, the children of Ephraim, for their crowning blessing. It is but reasonable to suppose that that tribe conservators as they had been of all the spiritual blessings of their nation, should have taken a different course from the other tribes whose employment had prepared them to become the progenitors of the greatest of the civilized nations of the earth.

Hon. E. P. Ingersoll, a graduate of Yale College, superannuated by reason of his age from the ministry, has been spending several years in historical research concerning this subject, and is now delivering a lecture on the identification of the "ten lost tribes" with the English nation. In this lecture he follows the course these tribes took separately when they left their Assyrian homes until they reached their destination. The tribe of Dan he asserted made a temporary settlement on the banks of the river Don, in Russia, which was named after that tribe, Don meaning Dan in northern dialect. Thence the Danites wandered westward, making another temporary halt on the Danube, that river also being named after them. From the Danube they went into Spain, but not finding there a permanent abiding place, they turned north again, and crossed into Wales, where their descendants still remain. Mr. Ingersoll positively asserted that to this tribe was assigned the preservation of the original ark of the covenant, which with its contents, safely reached Wales; and that among its contents was a certain stone, by and through which God anciently covenanted with his people that Palestine should eventually be restored to and re-inhabited by its possessors. This stone is virtually a deed from the Almighty to its possessors, of the promised land, and was placed many centuries ago, during the reign of a certain sovereign whom the lecturer named, in the coronation chair of the sovereigns of England for safe keeping, and remains there to this day. I give this as the result of historical research by a gentleman of the most profound learning, who was a graduate of a great Theological Seminary, and who has acted for years as Fiscal Agent for Yale College.

The Kingdom of God once found thousands of faithful, true friends, and devoted adherents among the people of this populous north island, where by the precious signs which followed, wonderfully established its divine origin. And this theory which we have now advanced, may show the hope there is in every effort put forth to place before that particular people the "faith once delivered to the saints," because with what readiness have they ever received it with gladness. The Reorganized Church in America is composed largely of this people; and thank God it is becoming more and more worthy year by year of the confidence of all nations; and of one thing the writer has more faith and hope than of any uninspired theory, and that is that the little fountain of truth already opened up by English people for English people in that mightiest of all islands of the earth, will eventually become, whatever obstacles and accidents it may yet encounter, a mighty tide of salvation, the fruits of which will constitute the most substantial elements of the Church and Kingdom of God in the last days.

I close with the words of the Prophet Ezekiel, uttered one hundred and thirty-eight years after the tribes of Israel were compelled by that superior Assyrian force to abandon the Holy Land, their promised heritage, and to which they never yet have returned.

"And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land. And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all."

WHO IS ELIAS?

DEAR HERALD:—In your first number for this year, Bro. Gunsolly kindly attempted to show me and your readers that Elijah was Elias, and these mean one in Scripture. He admits my quotation of John 1:28, that Christ was Elias. We will stick a pin in here and that shall be my stake. The brother quotes Matthew 11:15, where Christ calls John the Baptist Elias. This makes a little additon to Elijah being or meaning Elias; for we have got Jesus and John. Does Elijah mean Jesus and John also? The brother quotes Mal. 4:6 with Luke 1:17, and says: "You will see that the office-work of John and Elijah are the same;" and adds, "shall we therefore say that these two are one and the same person?" No; for one was John and the other was Elijah. John came as the restorer, to turn the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, to make ready a people for the Lord. Luke 1:17. I ask, Did Elijah do such a work for the Lord? No; but John did, and he had the Spirit of Elias. Matt. 11:15. We can not as a church admit that the Spirit of Elijah was in John, which would be spiritualism. That I can not admit. But by the by, the vision of April, 1836, states that the time for Elijah had only then come, 1836 years after Christ and John, and yet without this Elijah, we had the original Elias, (Christ) and John, who had the Spirit of Elias, (Christ). Now as Christ was Elias and John had his Spirit and was Elias, how could Elijah be Elias in any other way than John was. In Luke 4:25-27, we read, "There were many widows in the day of Elias;" 27 verse, "And many lepers in Israel in the days of Eliseus, and none were cleansed but Naaman. See also 2 Kings 5.

To make all things harmonize, and to shut out spiritualism, and accept the statement of John the Baptist in John 1:28, as Christ (the very original). No wonder John's timidity when the Pharisees asked him if he was Elias, or that Prophet. John knew who was the Elias. If John was right, how does Elijah come in as Elias? If we are ready to admit as John has said, that Christ is the very Elias, then we can understand how all the Holy Prophets before and after his coming could do the mighty works they did, but not in the Spirit of Elijah, but Elias, Christ. John, who came at the first coming of the Lord, according to Isaiah, came again in May, 1829, according to Malachi, who had the Spirit of Elias to commit the priesthood to earth again; but Elijah did not come for seven years after. In whose spirit did he come in? In the Spirit of Elias, Christ, to commence the work as described in Mal. 4:6. It appears to me, that there never was a man by the name of Elias except Christ; and those who had his Spirit. O that I may ever have his Spirit, and do some mighty works in his name; then I shall be an Elias, but not Elijah the Tishbite; and all who receive of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, called to be Saints; and if they prove themselves such, the Spirit of the Elias, Christ, will be their portion.

Since writing the above, in the Herald that came to me the other day, I see a sister Thomas has been trying to enlighten my mind on this subject but has failed. I am very much pleased with the sister's effort; and the information she gives about the Welsh Bible, and also the Welsh Book of Mormon and the Pearl of Great Price. But I do not believe the Welsh Bible, Book of Mormon and Pearl of Great Price, for the reason that Joseph called him in Book of Mormon Elijah, and Nephi called him Elijah plain, and no Elias in the matter. I suppose the translators of the Welsh Bible had the same notions as Bro. Gunsolly and sister Thomas; but to me there is too much tautology or repetition with Elias the Tishbite, Elias the Tishbite, &c. In reference to the Welsh Book of Mormon and the Pearl of Great Price having Elias instead of Elijah. This is because all the Welsh people have been traditionated in regard to Elias the Tishbite; and therefore as it was not translated by the Spirit of inspiration, that accounts for Elias the Tishbite. If therefore the Welsh Bible, Book of Mormon and Pearl of Great Price be right, then I must say that all the ancient and modern prophets have deceived us. But my faith is not yet shaken in the prophets, either Nephi or Joseph; for as I read the Pearl of Great Price at this moment, on page 41, my spirit tells me they were true men and came to tell the truth, as all true men of God always do.

There are others that do not believe about the Elias, the Tishbite. For now we can read the revision of the New Testament, 1881, in John 1:21-29, they have made Elias to be Elijah. Luke 9:54 they have eliminated Elias and not added Elijah, even in Luke 4:25; "And I say unto you there were many widows in the days of Elijah when the heavens were shut up; and 26 verse, "And unto none of them was Elijah sent, but to Zarepath," 27 verse, "And there were many lepers in Israel in the time of Elisha the prophet." Matt. 27:47. "This man calleth Elijah," v. 49. Let us see whether Elijah cometh to him. See Mark 15:35, 36. Matt. 17:3-5 says it was Moses and Elijah. They seem to have struck out Elias as a man altogether; so you see I have given you good Authority; viz., twenty-four of the greatest scholars of the day. They do not give us one word about Elias the Tishbite. Now as John said in John 1:28 that Christ was the Elias; and in Matthew 11:15 John was the restorer; and if he will receive it, verily he was the Elias. John knew he had come in the name of his Master, and you see his wary answers to the Priests that were sent from the Pharisees, knowing that his Master was the Elias, and was preferred before him, but was sent to do the work as in Luke 1:17. So you see they did not believe in the Welsh Elias the Tishbite.

I think the translators of the Welsh Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Pearl of Great Price, as Dupin says, they did it by conjecture. John came in the Spirit of Elias, (Christ), and Joseph came in the Spirit of Elias, (Christ); and when the Moses man leads the people out of captivity, he will do it in the power and Spirit of Elias, (Christ). This Elias to me is the best Elias. Now if Christ is not the Elias, the very original, somebody else give us your strong reasons, and a few quotations from the scriptures.

WHY DID ADAM RULE?

CRIME necessitates the pre-existence of law. Law, based on justice, must receive the approbation of its subjects, before it can in any manner be binding upon them. Based on any other principle, obligation would be reversed. God would be obligated to man for having created or organized him. Every animate form, emanating from the creative power, bears the impress of that law by which it was created and is controlled. With this proof of acceptation, nature is justified in inflicting the penalties of a broken law, as she is the handiwork of God, and an agent, executing his laws or commands. Hence every intelligence in its pre-existent state, became by choice subservient to the laws of God. Satan, in his scheme to thwart the plans of heaven, chose the serpent as his first emmissary in the work of destruction, because it "was more subtle than any beast of the field." And in this guise approached and conversed with Eve, gaining thus her assistance to complete his design. The result of this willing servitude was, "because thou hast done this thou shalt be cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed. He shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."—Inspired Translation. "Because thou hast done this,"—listened to the voice of Satan,—shows why the locomotion and diet of the serpent were changed; as that which is meaningless can not emanate from God, and its former food is herein described: "To every beast of the earth, and every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the face of the earth wherein I grant life, shall be given every clean herb for meat." "I will put enmity between thee and the woman," intimates that a peaceful relation had previously existed between them, by reason of which, Satan, in the guise of a friend, was enabled to deceive the woman. To crawl upon its belly, feed upon the dust, and be subjected to the grinding heel of man, was the serpent's reward of infidelity. For listening to her supposed friend Eve was told, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children, and thy desires shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee."

That which is multiplied must exist before multiplication is possible; hence sorrow was an element in her character before transgression, but subsequently developed. Man made in the "image" of God, possesses the same feelings, powers and attributes in a corresponding degree; otherwise there is no affinity; without affinity there is no harmony; and without harmony, man could not have dwelt in the presence of God, as he primarily did. We find that sorrow is an attribute of the Deity; for we read of a "godly sorrow," and that "God" and "the whole heavens" wept over fallen humanity. How true, then, was the multiplication of her sorrow, when she beheld millions of her own progeny writhing in torment, through her disobedience, instead of enjoying eternal peace. Unless she possessed conceptive powers, the command to "be fruitful and replenish," could not be binding upon her; neither could she have been the "mother of all living." "In sorrow," mark the change in the manner of reproduction; for sorrow was not an original but a subsequent attendant of pro-creation, introduced by transgression. A perfect being works by perfect laws, with an absolute system of harmony and order, congruent in all its bearings. Imperfection is not the work of a perfect being; and procreative laws being now imperfect proves that they have changed since emanating from the Divine hand. Language as the medium of thought, must be adapted to the understanding of those addressed, or it is not beneficial to them. Imagine then, the learned professor discoursing to a group of Hottentots on the science of algebra or astronomy, occasionally interspersing with a treatise on ethics. What a sublime spectacle he would present; how beautifully would his imbecility compare with that of his surroundings. Yet it is claimed that God conversed with Adam and Eve, on a subject as foreign or new to them as science is to the Hottentot. Are we then, to transpose and say, that the wisdom of God is foolishness in the sight of man? "Thy desires shall be to thy husband and he shall rule over thee;" are commands or instructions,—like all other god-given laws,—based upon justice; and as they were not given before the fall, they must have been called into existence by it. As effect can not independently exist, we must look for the cause of these obligations. That her "desires" should be to her husband, as is here predicted, demands a reason why he should be permitted to receive them; for God can not in the least sanction injustice. Therefore Adam must have been worthy of his wife's affection. It was not because his name was Adam, nor because he wore mustache, neither could his graceful figure, bounding step or piercing glance, claim this reward of merit. As God is no respecter of persons, and "judgeth according to every man's works," he could not have received this gift of affection, and right to rule, in any other manner. Moreover, this work must have been beyond her power to accomplish; or he would not have been entitled to such a consideration. When Eve was presented to Adam, he seemed to realize that a great responsibility rested upon him, for this heavenly gift, bestowed in his lonely condition. He also understood that a part of this obligation was the perpetuity of the human race. He said, "This I know now is bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man.

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh." "Therefore"—for this reason—infers that he knew what he was talking about and that he thoroughly comprehended its worth, as he willingly complied with the above instructions. His sense of duty must have been great, for "Adam was not deceived" to voluntarily quit the presence of his father, where he might have dwelt in happiness throughout eternity, bring a curse upon the fair face of his mother (earth); labor and sweat for a living, instead of receiving it from the gratuitous hand of nature; willingly eat in sorrow in preference to pleasure; become subject to the ills of the flesh, rather than remain in freedom; suffer the pangs of death in order to stay with, comfort, cheer, and protect his fallen companion. After such an exhibition of love and devotion, was he not worthy of all the affection that she could bestow upon him? Or had she any reason to fear that such a ruler would be harsh or unjust in his demeanor? Where is the woman of to-day, that would not adore such a husband. O, ye boasted, self-appointed lords of the universe, search your hearts—if that organ still palpitates in your bosoms—and see if the germinal founts of such emotions as moved the philanthropic breast of Father Adam, are in existence there. When you find them, cleanse them, purge them from all contaminating influences, bid them grow, until like him you are worthy of that exalted sphere you claim. Where do you find a single syllable that gives you any such authority, or any reward that your works do not entitle you to. Follow the instructions of the Savior when he said, "He that would be the greatest, let him become the least, and servant of all;" and listen to Paul, the supposed woman hater, "There is neither male nor female, ye are all one in Christ." That Adam did what is here claimed for him, read: "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice, and hast eaten of the fruit of the tree, of which I commanded thee saying, thou shalt not eat of it; cursed shall be the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; by the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, until thou shalt return unto the ground; for thou shalt surely die; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou wast, and unto dust shalt thou return." This language proves even more than what has been claimed for Adam in this article and is also the instructions given in explanation of the rules, or laws that governed the future home of his earthly existence; that he had chosen to accomplish the redemption of his isolated companion. Coupled with the command to refrain from eating that particular fruit, was the privilege to choose for himself; "But remember that I forbid it," was warningly added. When this command was given to Adam, he was the only flesh upon the earth. In the absence of testimony that God instructed Eve in relation to this, and in view of the fact that he did command her to stay with Adam, together with the knowledge she possessed of the instructions he had received, indicates that she received her information from him. By contrast of language, his ability to teach her is very apparent. Eve said, "Were it not for our transgression we never should have had seed." This inferentially points to an undeveloped mind. She evidently argued like many to-day, that transgression was a necessity; based on the supposition that because she learned by disobedience, it was the only method of progression. God pronounced all his works, "good and very good," and no creation was without a purpose. The fruit of the tree of knowledge, of good and evil, was calculated in its nature to teach man the fulness of all principles when he was prepared to receive it. The conclusion of Eve, that without transgression they should not have known good and evil, shows imperfection, as the tree, faithful to its mission, imparted knowledge; though that knowledge was detrimental to its recipients in their undeveloped condition, as it is not beneficial unless wielded in wisdom. Wisdom is a promoter of knowledge; hence can not be a hindrance to its reception. Had the recipients been sufficiently wise, the eating of the fruit would not have been detrimental to them. But learning, without wisdom is never beneficial to its possessor. "We never should have known the joy of our redemption," was correct; as departure must precede returning or redemption; nor is inspiration necessary for its utterance; but like the closing sentence, "Nor the eternal life that God giveth to all the obedient," shows human intelligence rather than inspired revelation. As transgression is the negative of obedience, it can not be necessary to its existence, but on the contrary proves that obedience always precedes it.

This analysis of language is not in any sense disparaging to Eve; but is essential to a proper understanding of its import; as many suppose that she spoke by inspiration. The language of Adam when the woman was presented to him—"Therefore, shall a man leave his father, and his mother," proves beyond successful contradiction, that he understood the laws of reproduction; as father and mother, signify parentage, or the consummation of generative laws; supplemented with, "Adam fell that man might be," which shows premeditation, understanding and design, and is also in harmony, with the statement, that "Adam was not deceived." This triple evidence conclusively affirms that Adam, knowingly, and with a purpose in view, partook of the forbidden fruit. This superior intelligence, was the result of an extensive experience, prior to Eve's formation, and can not in any manner, reflect on her intellectual ability; for their history does not warrant the inference that she was naturally inferior to her companion; but, that her capacity was limited, by reason of circumstances. Adam was the first intelligent organization, preceding even the vegetable kingdom. After the formation of this class, including all kinds of herbs and trees, he was placed in the garden den to keep and dress it; also forbidden, to eat of the tree of knowledge. Then the creation of the lower animals took place, and Adam gave names to all cattle and to every fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; an achievement, beyond the ability of the present age; one, from which the brightest intellect, with all the assistance that modern science and culture could give, would shrink in despair. To properly classify or become conversant with even the names, of all that Adam named, is an intellectual elevation, that has never been attained by any of his progeny, save a few that talked with God face to face. Adam at that period in life, was far superior to the brightest intellect of the most intellectual age, with the above exception. Is it logical then to say that transgression revealed anything to him, save the principle of evil—with which we are at present conversant; in other words, is there any experience through which the mathematician must yet pass, to teach him that two and five are seven. "Because of my transgression my eyes are opened," marks the upward flight of knowledge or open the means to expand or widen; and in connection, with "they have become as gods, knowing good and evil," debars the idea, that ignorance took the place of Adam's former learning; and proves that "his eyes were opened," to a view far superior to the comprehension of the present generation. Bear in mind that, though all this had transpired, "there was not found a helpmeet for him;" and, that disobedience did not teach him any principle, that we now understand is beneficial to the children of men. Was it not just then, when the Lord told Eve to stay with Adam; or was he not competent to teach her. It was as natural for Eve to love Adam as it is for a child to love its parents; and as reasonable that he should control her, as for the teacher to govern the pupil; because he could and did do for her, what she could not do for herself. Nevertheless, by an application of the same principles, under similar circumstances, she could have become as proficient as Adam; in a corresponding period of time; as feminine intellect is not inferior to masculine; but in the social and religious elements, it predominates; consequently is of the greatest worth to the world. With proper development of humanity, the prohibition placed on the fruit of knowledge, like the Mosaic economy, would have had its fulfillment, and passed away; for laws or restrictions are, so far as they relate to man, limited in their application. Unless the command not to eat of the forbidden, was limited in its character, the tree of knowledge, and the tree of life, would have been created in vain. In further support of this position, we quote; "For as I, the Lord God, liveth, even so my words can not return void; for as they go forth out of my mouth, they must be fulfilled." "And every tree in the which shall be the fruit of a tree, yielding seed, to you it shall be for meat." This last quotation, in connection with the command to "be faithful," were both given in the spirit world. And would have been equally retained by them.

The language of Adam, when the woman was presented to him, shows that he still remembered the instructions given in the spirit world. Poor memory then did not cause the prohibitory amendment; but the inference is fair, that he still remembered the unlimited permission given in the pre-existent state, before the rebellion of Satan. With the fall of Lucifer, came the necessity for this restriction, as Adam was not sufficiently developed to receive so great a knowledge; and it would have placed him at the mercy of the evil one. Herein we find the wisdom of God, and the reason that fruit was forbidden. Remember, that at this period in history, Adam was the only organization of the animal kingdom. And being, "a little lower than the angels;" Satan could not deceive him. The creation seems to have been delayed, to give Adam a chance to develop sufficiently to protect his companion. This is warranted by the words, "it is not good for man to be alone;" and argues inferentially, that prior to this, it was good for man to be alone.

The circumstances connected with the deception of Eve, corroborates the thought. That God does all things for the best, further supports this view. Strength is again found in the fact, that Satan began business with an intellect "more subtle than any beast of the field." That Adam was isolated, to prepare him for a future of usefulness to mankind, by thwarting the plans of Satan, which entitled him to be called the arch-angel, or "Ancient of Days," seems to have been the plan of heaven. Transgression was the result of man's agency, without wisdom on the part of the woman, or an understanding of what the result would be. On the part of the man, this agency was used with a thorough knowledge of what the result would be; and entered upon after mature deliberation. The former was not beneficial to mankind, but the latter was of vital importance to their welfare; as he was able to teach them the plan of redemption. "Inasmuch as thy children are conceived in sin, even so, when they begin to grow up, sin conceiveth in their hearts, and they taste the bitter, that they may know how to prize the good. And it is given unto them to know good from evil; wherefore, they are agents unto themselves."

Here is the solution of the problem, why must man taste the bitter, that he may know the sweet. Because he is conceived in sin, answers the question after the manner of the Lord. This argues that children conceived in a sinless condition would be relieved of this necessity, and receive a knowledge of evil without participating in sin, on the same principle that Peter knew that Jesus was the Christ. To me, the Scriptures are conclusive on this point, and I believe that it is pleasing to the Father, that we should learn of him through obedience, and not through disobedience. "Learn of me, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light;" does not mean that you must learn by the things you suffer. "His servants ye are to whom ye list to obey," and "the wages of sin is death;" with many similar passages intimate the consequence of our agency.

Christ said, "If a man keep my sayings, he shall never see death;" and "He that believeth on me, the works that I do he shall do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father." Christ overcame the world without yielding to sin, by a strict obedience to the will of his Father. So may we overcome. If we keep the laws of God as strictly as he did, we do a greater work than he did; for we are conceived in sin, while he was not; thus requiring a greater effort on our part to overcome; requiring greater strength than we possess without the Holy Ghost, which came because he went to the Father. One feature of Christ's mission was to show the character of a child born in a sinless manner; thus portraying what might have been, and is to be the sequence of perfect procreation. I do not believe transgression to have been a necessity, as I find no base for such a hypothesis; and believing a sure foundation necessary to the permanency of any structure, I am content to await the wind, the floods and the rain, to test the foundation on which I stand; trusting a divine hand for protection. As Adam made a greater sacrifice for his companion than any man can make to-day, I am at a loss to know how any man can now hope to be placed on a level with him, much less to possess the power of saving a dozen or two, just as the magnanimity of his heart may incline. How condescending some men are in this progressive age. With their little bark canoes they are willing and undertake the passage of a crew many times larger than Father Adam could conduct in his full rigged sailing vessel.

Man can not bestow a blessing upon woman but what she can return with scripture measure. Her fidelity is superior, appreciation greater, hope stronger, sympathy deeper, benevolence higher, with patience, veneration, sublimity and love soaring far above these qualities in man. Man gives to posterity the diamond in the rough, woman the polished jewel. The fact that to woman is entrusted the care of the child, from incipency to maturity, the period in life when its character is formed, proves hers is the greatest mission. Why then should men assume to control save by kindness, common consent.

Come now, ye husbands of God's broad domain, let us search our hearts, and see if we are worthy to rule; remembering that we are all one in Christ. And say, as Adam was worthy of his wife's affections, I want to be worthy of my wife's; as he blessed mankind, in a proportionate degree, I desire to bless. His fidelity to God and man I wish to imitate, and be permitted to dwell with him in the supernal realms of peace and love, in the eternal world to come.

R. H. WIGHT.

CLEAR WATER, Neb.

If we would have powerful minds, we must think; if we would have faithful hearts, we must love; if we would have strong muscles, we must labor. These include all that is valuable in life. It is a great deal better to live holy than to talk about it.—Moody.

If all those who obtain not their desire should die of disappointment, who would be living upon the earth?

Selections.

THE following clipping sent us by some brother in England, to whom we return thanks, is curious and interesting. Evidence of the central and essential fact, that a record of an inspirational people was written, which has reached us in the size and form of the Bible, will no doubt accumulate, as the unyielding logic of events continues its conclusive work. Whether this shall prove to be one of these evidences, we shall await further developments to determine.

ANCIENT TEXT OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Standard says:—"I paid a visit to-day to Dr. Harkavy, of the Imperial Library, whose recent discovery of a supposed ancient text of the old Testament is exciting much interest in scientific and even general circles. The learned professor informed me that the manuscripts in question had been in his possession for some months, but that he had refrained from bringing them to public notice on account of the recent exposure of the Shapira frauds, and the scepticism with which a new announcement in the same field of discovery would necessarily be received. His scruples were overcome, however, by the persuasions of his friend, Mr. Neubauer, the assistant librarian at the Bodleian Library at Oxford, and he has prepared a short statement for publication pending the production of memoir upon which he will set to work after Easter. Assuming that the manuscripts are genuine (and as to this the doctor has no doubt,) he has already deciphered enough to prove that they are of very considerable interest and antiquity, but he is unable to fix even an approximate date for them as yet, nor has he met with any important variations from the textus receptus. The manuscripts are the property of persons whom the professor is not at liberty to name, the MSS. having been entrusted to him merely to decipher. Their present owner bought them at one of the Black Sea ports from a Greek sailor sailing from the Island of Rhodes. They consist of some thirty rolls of vellum, which were probably once bound together. Some, however, are much better preserved than others. The 'Lamentations' of Jeremiah, for instance, are comparatively fresh and easily read, whilst some of the parchment is so crinkled and discoloured that nothing can be made out, though the professor hopes, by means of re-agents, to render the writing legible. The 'Book of Lamentations' is followed by an original poem on the same subject, 'The Fall of Jerusalem,' signed 'Jacob, son of Isaac.' The other books which Professor Harkavy has made out so far are the prophecies of Hosea, Joel, Obadiah, Jonah, Haggai, and Zachariah, and the books of Ruth, Esther, Daniel, and Zephaniah. The most puzzling feature is that the characters employed differ materially from all hitherto known, so much so that those who read with facility the square writing of the other Hebrew texts are at a loss to understand it. Dr. Harkavy pointed out instances in which the letter Lamed is nearly the same as the Yemen character; whilst the letter Ain is quite original, being like the Greek Epsilon written backwards. Judging from what he has made out up to the present time the professor thinks the manuscript must have originated with a colony of Jews long isolated from their fellow-countrymen, probably in some island or out-of-the-way spot on the coast of Arabia."

A correspondent of the Standard, writing from St. Petersburg, on Friday night, says:—Dr. Harkavy has commenced the laborious task of collating his precious Hebrew Manuscripts of portions of the Old Testament with the received text, and has already lighted upon variations interesting in themselves, and significant of what may be expected when the comparison has extended to as many books as it at present covers verses. It will be seen from the following examples that where the texts differ the new reading is unquestionably superior to the old; and there is good reason to hope that the result of Dr. Harkavy's discovery may be very extensive emendations of portions of the Old Testament.

The parchments number fifty-one, and a close inspection shows that some are much older than others, for not only are the skins themselves in various states (which might be accounted for by accident or exposure), but the characters employed vary considerably, showing a gradual approach to the square writing of ordinary Hebrew, to which, however they are evidently anterior. The characters used in the most recent of them originated not later than the second century after Christ; and this is confirmed by the fact that some letters are almost identical with those known to have been used in Jerusalem in the first century before Christ. Others, again, are unlike any known form; while the sha approaches the Alt-Indisch, though the resemblance may be accidental.

The date of the manuscripts is another question altogether, and one which cannot yet be determined. It seems hardly possible that a colony of Jews still exists employing a writing which points to their isolation from the rest of their race for some two thousand years; but Dr. Harkavy is convinced that there was such a colony once; and, indeed, the phenomena presented by these Manuscripts cannot be otherwise explained.

As to the variations, they may be due, as the Professor remarks, either to later corrections or to the antiquity and purity of the text; but in any case they promise to be both interesting and valuable. Thus, in Lamentations 2; 3, ke, meaning "like," is left out before esh, meaning "flaming fire." In the fourth verse of the same chapter the omission of the same word alters the meaning of the first sentence from "He [the Lord] bent his bow like an enemy," to "The enemy hath bent his bow;" whilst the next sentence, owing to a similar omission, and the word nitzal being replaced by hitzib, reads, "The adversary stretched forth his right hand," instead of, as in the Authorised Version, "He [the Lord] stood with his right hand as an adversary." In the sixth verse, instead of vaiynass "despised," we have vaiyrass, "crushed," or, as the same word is translated in Judges, "oppressed." The passage in Lamentations 2; 6 of the Authorised Version reads, "The Lord . . . hath despised in the indignation of his anger the king and the priest;" for which the newly-discovered MS. would read, "The Lord hath crushed," &c. The seventh verse reads in the Authorised Version "The Lord hath cast off his altar, he hath abhorred his sanctuary." In these MSS., nier, "abhorred" is replaced by miggen, a word translated in Genesis 24; 20, "delivered," where the passage reads, "The most high God hath delivered," where the passage reads, "The most high God hath delivered thine enemies into thine hand." Finally, in Lamentation 4; 18, instead of ssady, we have ssaru; that is, instead of "They hunt our steps, that we cannot go in our streets"—"Our steps are restrained," &c.

The work of photographing the manuscripts and publishing Dr. Harkavy's Memoir will be undertaken by the Academy of Sciences.

The manuscripts were brought to the Black Sea in a ship called the Ekaterina Koupa, by a sailor named Oria Bashan. They were found by his father, Alexander Bashan, thirty years ago, in the Island of Rhodes, after a great fire; but whether in a private house or in a synagogue is not known. Oria regarded them as an amulet, and parted with them unwillingly.

APPOINTMENT OF MISSIONARIES.

In the minutes of the last conference, held at Stewartsville, Mo., may be found the following resolution: "That if it appears that any have been overlooked, that they may report to the missionary in charge where they reside; then if an agreement can be had with the applicant by the one in charge and the Bishop, that they are authorized to appoint said applicant."

In pursuance of the above resolution, Bro. J. M. Terry of Stewartsville, Mo., has been assigned to labor in Kansas, or elsewhere as may be agreed upon between him and the one in charge; Bro. H. A. Stebbins of Lamon, Iowa, to labor in the Decatur District, or elsewhere, as may be agreed upon between him and the missionary in charge. Perhaps it is hardly needful to say, that these brethren, with all others receiving similar appointments, are entitled to the same respect and confidence, in their missionary work, as though they had been appointed directly by the conference. The financial support of their families has been provided for, and their individual expenses are to be supplied in harmony with the rules governing the traveling ministry. (See Herald for October 15th, 1882, p. 319). Brethren Clarence St. Clair and F. C. Warnky, of Independence, Mo., are authorized to labor in J. R. Lambert's field, as their circumstances will permit. These brethren making no demand on the finances of the church, have been appointed without the consent of the Bishop.

Your co-worker,

LAMONI, Ia., Aug. 1st, 1884.

FREMONT DISTRICT.

HENRY KEMP, Dist. Pres.

GOVERNMENT LAND.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish to know if there is any government land in Scott county, Kansas, that is good for farming purposes, and if the land there has to be irrigated. Any one replying will confer a favor by addressing David Batten, What Cheer, Keokuk county, Iowa.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

All Elders belonging to the above quorum, who have not sent for their licenses, will please send for them, and send the following dates also; when born, when baptized, when ordained, where ordained and by whom ordained; and also send recommendations of the branch, district, or missionary in charge of the place in which they are located.

J. A. ROBINSON, Secretary.

No. 222, North Elizabeth St.,
PEORIA, Illinois.

BORN.

STUBBART.—At Tabor, Iowa, May 31st, 1884, to Bro. J. M. and Sr. M. A. Stubbart, a daughter; named Perley May. Blessed by H. Kemp.

LUFF.—At Independence, Missouri, July 25th, 1884, to Bro. Joseph and Sr. Janet Luff, a daughter.

DIED.

WHITEHOUSE.—At Lucas, Iowa, July 15th, 1884, of inflammation of the bowels, Patience, daughter of Benjamin and Alice Whitehouse, aged 1 year and 8 months. Funeral services by Elder John R. Evans.

It was so hard to give her up,
So sweet, so young, so fair;
But God knows best, so let her rest,
Till we can meet her there.

WHITEHOUSE.—At Lucas, Iowa, July 9th, 1884, of cholera infantum, May A., child of Benjamin and Alice Whitehouse, aged 4 months and 1 day. Funeral sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins.

OLNEY.—Near Moscow, Nez Perces county, Idaho, July 6th, 1884, Bro. Benjamin Olney, in the 58th year of his age. Bro. Olney was born in the town of Shipton, Shurbed county, Lower Canada. Prior to his uniting with the Saints he was a zealous member of the Baptist Church; but when the greater light came to him he meekly submitted. He received the ordinance of God at the hands of the writer in Linn county, Oregon, on the 13th day of February, 1877; and from that time to the day of his death, he was a worthy and consistent Saint. By his humility and letting his light shine, he was the means of bringing others into the fold. He had been suffering for some days with pneumonia, but was thought to be improving, till on the third of July one of his grand-children, a bright little girl of ten months, got drowned in the Spring only a few yards from the door. This brought a rapid decline, and the good man passed away in peace. He told his family and friends that he was not afraid, that he knew that it would be well with him. So pass away the good of earth to rest in the better land.

J. C. CLAPP.

CALIFF.—At Locust Hill, Knox county, Missouri, May 9th, 1884, after three days illness, Bro. Stephen Califf, age 85 years, 8 months and 3 days. He was baptized by G. T. Griffiths about five years ago at Locust Hill, Knox county, Missouri. Funeral sermon by Elder George Hicklin, in the Mount Turob Church, on the 8th day of June, 1884. He leaves an aged wife, a grown family, and many friends to mourn his loss. He died with a sure hope of coming forth in the morning of the first resurrection. He lived and died a Saint, and now rests in peace.

ROE.—At her home near Paige, Bartrop county, Texas, July 23d, 1884, Sr. Martha E. Roe. Born in Calhoun county, Alabama, May 22d, 1844. She suffered much but bore it with patience. In a conversation with the writer a few hours before her death on the future, she said she did not think she was going to die at that time; but if it was the Lord's will, she was willing. Spoke in glowing terms of the first resurrection. She was a good wife, a loving mother, and a kind neighbor. A firm believer in the gospel of Christ, as taught by the elders of the Reorganization. We miss her, but our loss is her gain.

W. G. ALLEN.

TOTTY.—At Independence, Missouri, July 29th, 1884, Bro. Jonathan Harrison Totty. He was born in Hickman county, Tennessee, April 27th, 1824; baptized by Elder Joseph Argyle into the Utah Church, March 21st, 1878; went to Manassas, Conejos county, Colorado, and settled with others of that church, in the spring of 1880. Heard of the Reorganization through Bro. W. W. Blair, and was by him baptized, January 9th, 1884. Came with a portion of his family to Independence, Missouri, May 27th, and united with the branch there. He several times testified to his family of grown up sons and daughters, that he was now among the people of God and felt rejoiced in spirit. On the evening of July 29th, 1884, he ate his supper as heartily as ever he had done, went to the yard and began chopping wood for the morning. About two or three minutes afterwards he was found dead by members of his family with nothing to explain his departure except a slight abrasion of the skin on the side of the left temple. Physicians pronounced it a case of internal hemorrhage of the brain, caused by a blow from a small stick of wood. He leaves a widow (his wife for forty-one years), five sons and three daughters to mourn his sudden departure. At the time of this writing we learn that six of the family (sons and wives) have just united with the church by baptism. Funeral sermon at the church by Joseph Luff, July 30th, 1884.

LAMPKINS.—At her residence, four miles east of Independence, Missouri, July 31st, 1884, of consumption, Sr. Elizabeth Lampkins. Born January 6th, 1854, in Perry county, Indiana; baptized by Elder B. V. Springer, October 13th, 1879. Has been confined to bed since March 1st, 1884. Strong in the faith to the end. Leaves a husband and six children as chief mourners. Funeral service at the house by Joseph Luff, assisted by A. H. Smith. The Master was present in the service.

If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY; Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds,
WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
Yours,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds,
E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. Cole of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, August 23d, 1884.

IT IS often said that history repeats itself. In secular affairs this has occurred many times. And now and then there has been an instance of similar import in church affairs. Away back in the early days of the church, in the "upper chamber of Father Whitmer's house," a certain work connected with the work of the last days and the Book of Mormon, was being done by Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery and others; which work was of a preparatory nature, the results of which should be felt while the church continued to exist. What that work was history has recorded, and the Saints received it. From a solemn conclave held in that "upper room," there went forth an edict which was to affect the church wonderfully. They were commanded to go to the Ohio, and there a law should be given them that was to be applicable to them in their then "condition and in the New Jerusalem." That law is the revelation of 1831 specifically establishing the one wife rule in the church. Subsequent to the giving of that law the statement was made that the church was under condemnation, and would remain so until the people remembered the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which had been given the church, to do according to that "which was written." Into what a state of forgetfulness concerning the Book of Mormon and the former commandments, especially the one of 1831, the church had fallen and would fall, the history of the apostasy under Brigham Young fully shows.

On the 8th of July, 1884, a group of men were assembled by appointment and agreement, in an upper room of Father Whitmer's house, in Richmond, Missouri, within the borders of the land of Zion, the persons of which group and the object for which they had met made it remarkable, and almost a repetition in history. The central figure in this group was David Whitmer, now the only surviving witness of the three, who were made special witnesses to the visit of the angel with the plates to show them to those chosen for that purpose. Almost fourscore years old, hair white as wool, eyes bright and faculties still good, the patriarch sat among them, a link in destiny's chain formed by the hand of God.

Next in historic importance in this group was Joseph Smith, oldest son of Joseph Smith, the Martyr, the man by whom the Book of Mormon was translated and given to the world. He was there at the request and selection of Father Whitmer, directed by the Spirit; associated with him, also by selection of Elder Whitmer, was P. Alma Page, son of Hiram Page, one of the eight witnesses, a firm believer in the Book to which his father bore testimony.

Alexander H. Smith, third son of Joseph Smith; William H. Kelley, son of one of the elders who labored and toiled in the field in the days of Joseph and Hyrum, and Thomas W. Smith, one who had received the work under the Reorganized Church, were present as duly appointed representatives of the Latter Day Saints, members of the Church in its primitive organization and its reorganized form—to fulfill the behest of the people of God, who have "remembered the Book of Mormon," with the purpose of "doing according to what is written therein."

The object of the assembling of these men in this "upper room" was to examine together, the written word of the Book of Mormon and the printed page of that work. And though it may appear that accident may have chosen the men who composed this group of six, it must be evident to those who believe in the watchfulness of the Spirit over the affairs of the Lord's Christ upon the earth, that the choice of these men for this duty was not that of accident but design, the design of Providence. The committee represented the strength and youth of the Reorganization, as found in the sons of the first elders of the church, and the new element won to the faith through the preaching of the word. They also represented that portion of the church found in the remnant left from the apostasy, who refused to strike hands with usurpation and false doctrines, and stood for the truth as it was at the first.

In the other portion of the group were represented the first and subsequent phases of the work, Elder Whitmer representing a class who believe firmly in the Book of Mormon and the gospel of Christ; but who, for reason, known to themselves and God, stand without affiliation with either the apostasy, or the Reorganized Church, yet wishing good will and success to every worker for the truth. Of the same class is Philandi A. Page, son of Hiram Page, one of the eight before named. It was fitting that Joseph Smith, oldest son and representative heir of the one who translated the Book of Mormon should be associated with this committee of examination, for in him all classes represented in the group have placed their confidence, as one striving to "turn the hearts of the children to the fathers and the hearts of the fathers to the children," that all may finally be found of Christ in one.

To complete the remarkable character of this assembling in that "upper room in Father Whitmer's house," there met with them, from time to time, during the eight days in which they were engaged in their work, John C. Whitmer son of Jacob Whitmer, also one of the eight witnesses; David J. Whitmer, son of David Whitmer, sen., and George Schweich, grandson of David Whitmer, forming a family all firm believers in the Book of Mormon, and all anxious that the work should be fairly and well done, and that it should redound to the glory of God and the good of the cause. The sittings were opened by prayer; he who offered the supplication on each occasion asking for each and all engaged in the work divine guidance and support. At the close, divine blessing was asked upon the complete work of the committee.

The suggestive character of the men engaged in the examination ordered by the General Conference last spring, and the importance attaching to such examination as a fact, with the results likely to follow may be understood, if thought is had upon the following facts. The Book of Mormon was first published in 1830, at Palmyra, New York, by E. B. Grandin, Printer, for Joseph Smith. It was copyrighted in the United States district for northern New York. Since then an edition was published at Kirtland by P. P. Pratt and E. S. Goodin, known as the Kirtland edition. Another at Cincinnati, Ohio, under the supervision of Ebenezer Robinson; known as the Cincinnati edition; another at Nauvoo, Illinois, called the Nauvoo edition; all during the lifetime of Joseph Smith, first president of the Church, and presumably all with his knowledge. In addition to those above named, there was issued what are known as the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth European Editions, published at Liverpool, England, under Brigham Young's administration; but supervised by Orson Pratt for the earlier, and Franklin D. Richards for the later editions, if we are correctly informed. There is also a later issue of the work, with references, edited by Orson Pratt, and published at Liverpool, England, by John Henry Smith, in 1883. Another edition still was printed in New York, for Russell Huntley and Zadoc Brooks, in the interest of what is known as the Brooks faction of the church, and issued about 1856. There are editions in the German, Danish, French, and we believe Italian languages; and may be others.

It has been stated by some who are believers in the Book of Mormon that there are differences between these editions; especially that in the Danish tongue there have been changes quite unjustifiable, and which antagonize the English rendition. Changes in phraseology, if not in sentiment, have long been known between the Palmyra and subsequent editions. The reorganization in pursuance of its office work of reorganizing and restoring, set about the comparison accomplished by the committee, and have had the hearty sanction of Elder David Whitmer, and the active countenance and assistance of his entire family.

There is reason to believe that there was a manuscript copy of the Book of Mormon placed in the south-east corner stone of the Nauvoo House, at Nauvoo. Bro. E. Robinson thinks that he witnessed the deposit of such copy in that stone. Two years since Major Lewis C. Bidamon, who married Emma Smith, in 1847, and is in possession of the Nauvoo House, took up the corner stone referred to, in repairing and remodeling the dwelling into which he made a part of the premises. He found that the contents of the stone had been imperfectly preserved, water having penetrated the cavity. The manuscripts were water soaked and spoiled, a small section only being decipherable, the rest was mostly reduced to pulp, and on those portions not so reduced, the writing was faded out and illegible. A copy of the Doctrine and Covenants was with the manuscript, and the whole mass when dry crumbled to pieces at a touch. He forwarded, such part as could be handled, to us at Lamoni, where after a little exposure and handling it became entirely worthless even as a relic. If this copy thus accounted for was one of the two which it is alleged were made at the beginning, either the original, or the copy, the one which Elder David Whitmer has is the only one in writing in existence; and must be the basis from which any errors, if any have been made must be corrected.

The following is from the Angus (Iowa) Tenderfoot, of August 7th.

Revs. Mr. White and Mr. Etzenhouser, ministers of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, were callers at our sanctum Monday. The senior editor of this paper has been slightly acquainted with these gentlemen four or five years. They have no connection with the polygamous Utah Church, but are among its bitterest opposers, and are well respected where they are known.

The Editor, "Father Calvin Brockett," lives in the vicinity of Des Moines Valley Branch, and often entertains Brn. R. Etzenhouser and I. N. White.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THERE were 235,213 cars of grain inspected at Chicago on the railroads centering there for the twelve months ending October 31st, 1883, of these the C. B. & Q. railway hauled 75,616, or 31.25 per cent of the whole number. This road hauls every day, over its several lines, 200 passenger trains and 500 freight trains. It has 5,000 miles of steel rail track. Its lines traverse Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado. It runs trains without change between Chicago and Denver, Chicago and Omaha, and Chicago and Kansas City; and connects with lines running East to New York, Boston and Philadelphia; south to St. Louis and New Orleans, and west to Cheyenne, Salt Lake, San Francisco and the City of Mexico.

Brn. I. N. White and R. Etzenhouser, being denied the use of churches, are holding outdoor meetings, near Angus, Iowa, they think with good effect.

Under date of August 4th, Bro. A. J. Cato writes, that seven were baptized in Jack county, Texas, the week previous, and prospects still brightening.

Bro. N. Stamm reports the holding of two meetings by himself and Bro. C. F. Merrill, twelve miles north of Des Moines, Iowa, August 10th, and the baptism of one at that place. Another is waiting to be baptized upon their return.

Don't send for any more thirty-five cent Voice of Warning. We are out of them and may not print the same style again soon.

The American Bible Society was instituted in the year 1816. Its issues in its 68th year: Bibles, Testaments, and Portions, 1,808,215, of which 510,546 were circulated in foreign lands. Total issues—43,892,031 from institution.

LAST December there was a case of healing in the family of Sr. Jennie Krahl, at David City, Nebraska, one of her children being healed through an administration. This caused some talk and stir, and resulted in an open letter from George L. Brown, Editor and Proprietor of the Shining Way, a paper published in David City, to Sr. Jennie Krahl, in which her faith and conduct in accepting the doctrines as taught by the Saints are reviewed. To this letter Sr. Krahl replied in the Butler county Press, defensive of her faith. The Editor of the Shining Way wrote again, and Sr. Krahl answered in the David City Tribune. To the last one of Sr. Krahl's the gentleman offers three quotations; one each from Paul to Galatians, Timothy and Thessalonians; and here the matter rested May 29th.

A good deal of talk was had, Brn. Hyde and Wight went into the city, but secured no place to speak. Negotiations are pending for further efforts of Brn. Hyde and Wight there.

Bro. H. J. Hudson, of Columbus sent us the papers containing these articles, and informs us of the further attempts to be made. He also sends us a copy of the United States Gazette, in which D. C. Perkins learnedly writes about Utah and Mormonism. It is astonishing how little these learned men know about Mormonism. They, as a class, are prejudiced against the institution, root and branch, and having had an opportunity to come into contact with the Utah phase of Mormonism, and learning a smattering of what is seen and accessible to all, they rush into print, writing lucidly and learnedly, upon the smallest possible stock of real information it is practicable to conceive of; making assertions and deductions, and drawing conclusions with the air of a solon and the facility of oracles.

The following from the Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, is a specimen of this intolerant dudeism in morals, intellect and religion, so prevalent just now in the United States and the world:

ANOTHER REVISION.

THE Mormon Bible is undergoing the process of revision. An old man by the name of Whitmer, a resident of Richmond, Missouri, professes to have in his possession the original manuscript of the Book of Mormon, and several members of that branch of the Mormon Church which does not uphold polygamy have recently called upon him for the purpose of comparing late editions of the book with the so-called original text.

It is well known, as the New York Times states, that "the Book of Mormon was written by the Rev. Solomon Spalding, a graduate of Dartmouth College, who amused himself by composing historical and speculative romances relating to the origin of the races that formerly inhabited this continent. The manuscript of one of these tales was stolen by Sidney Rigdon, and Smith afterward declared that it was a translation of some hieroglyphics incised upon metal plates whose hiding-place in the soil of Ontario county had been revealed to him by an angel of the Lord."

The old man Whitmer believes the story of Joe Smith, but he is also clear that polygamy was not allowed in the original Book of Mormon, and was specially forbidden at the time of the supposed revelation.

Presbyterianism is rather too close to the purgatory, inquisitorial fires and superstitions of some parts of Catholicism to be the Censor of religious thought, beliefs and methods.

Correspondence.

BROCKTON, Mass., Aug. 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—On the 26th and 27th of July, we held two days' meeting at Plainville, which was a decided success. A good, spiritual time was had, and all present seemed to take new courage to press on in the Christian life. There were present and preached, the writer, M. H. Bond and F. A. Potter. Bro. C. A. Coombs presided. On Wednesday last I visited Little Compton, and preached there. I found there as elsewhere, whenever a good work is being done, the evil one neither slumbers nor is asleep; but is on the alert to sow the seeds of discord. I think however that the work there has got a secure hold upon the people, and will stand the test. The good will remain. Bro. M. H. Bond and myself occupied the stand here yesterday. One of us speaks again this evening. I was much pleased with the progress made by the little band of Saints that I found here when first I visited this place, both in numbers and in the conducting of meetings. The singing yesterday was excellent, which is a most important feature in the service.

"The song of the righteous is as a prayer unto him," (God). We expect to leave here to-morrow and visit Boston; thence to Cohasset and Plymouth. My address is 387, Pleasant St., Fall River, Mass., from where all communications will be forwarded me.

As ever, in gospel bonds,

JOHN GILBERT.

OSBORNE CITY, Osborne Co., Kan.,

July 21st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Since the General Conference I have been laboring in this state. Find plenty to do in the Master's cause. Since I have been in this mission, have labored harmoniously with brethren J. M. Terry and A. H. Parsons, both of whom are agreeable companions. Hope the Lord will send more like them into the field. The calls are many, but few to answer to them. It is a busy time with the farmers taking care of their crops; still we have good congregations to speak to. There is but little being done here by the local ministry. Some of the branches are in a bad condition, not holding meetings of any kind. I pray God that he may waken all to a sense of duty, that will enable them to rejoice ever more. I will preach the funeral of brother John Jemison, Sunday, July 27th, who died on the 28th of June, 1882. We have labored in Marshall, Clay, Jewell, Mitchell and Osborne counties, with good results. Have baptized six since conference. Many more are near coming in. Think some will obey here before we leave. We will go from here to Smith county. Have opened some new places with good results so far. Ever praying for the progress of truth, I am yours in bonds,

I. N. ROBERTS.

GLENALPINE, Antelope Co., Neb.,

July 30th, 1884.

Friend Herald:—Amid the toil and din and hum of busy life, we now and then pause, collect our scattered thoughts and formulate them, hoping to benefit others and encourage them to press onward in the race for the greatest of all prizes—eternal life. Settled among the sloping hills and lovely plains of this western land, are the members of Glenalpine Branch. With one exception they find shelter and protection in houses of sod. Brother Hike with his large family, more favored in this regard than the rest, has one built of stone. Seventeen Saints in all, with Elder G. W. Payton President, Wilson Hike Priest, W. N. Williams Teacher, W. H. Payne Deacon, and sister Mattie Williams Secretary. Considering the advantages they have had for gaining knowledge of the work and the degree of their experience, the branch is doing very well. Time is required, and by the Architect is granted, to fashion the crude material into a house that will stand the storms of adversity and winds of opposition. Elders Gamet, Wight, Kester, Richey and Williams, have made frequent visits here with excellent results following. Last Sunday the writer was permitted to meet with the Saints at the house of Bro. Payton, and talked with splendid liberty of the Spirit. On Sunday next Bro. Gamet will favor us with another call. I wish to say that the Saints of Clear Water and Glenalpine Branch, are favored of the Lord, and enjoy the gifts of the Spirit according to the promise of Jesus in the commission in Mark 16. Also Burnett and Columbus Branches, though much room remains for improvement, are made of good material, and receive a measure of the Spirit. Cedar Creek has lain dormant for a time; but the members seem desirous that its organization shall stand; and I hope to see it revive like the fig tree when the winter is o'er.

Providence has sent sufficient rain this season, so prospects bid us cheerfully to hope for the necessities and some of the comforts of life. I feel well in the good work—never better. Saints, let us watch with vigilant eye the beaming star of empire, and hail with joy the onward march of civilization, intellectual achievement and spiritual attainment. I am confident that there is much for us to learn, and many blessings awaiting us, of which we now can not conceive. The devil was cast out of heaven, "And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death. Therefore rejoice ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time."—Rev. 12: 11, 12. It remains for those who are permitted to live in the world, to learn their privileges as children of God, and authoritatively to "resist the devil," that he may flee. There is too much homage and reverence paid to that debased creature who was once an "angel of light." Husband and father, let me exhort you to preside in your own dwelling according to the dignity of your calling. By your thoughts you may know when Satan is near. Bid him in the name of Jesus to depart, and he will be compelled to respect your authority. Not with railing accusation, but with firm dignity and true Christian fortitude.

TABOR, Iowa, Aug. 3d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Since last writing I have visited Wheeler's Grove, and had a very good time with the Saints and friends of that place. The Saints all feel well in the work. We had some very good meetings, notwithstanding the busy time with the farmers. They turned out well. Some have been baptized since we last visited that place, and others are investigating our claims. The brethren and sisters there are a faithful band of workers, energetic in the good cause, always ready and willing to do. Bro. Lot Smith presides, and we think wisely. He seems to be firm and resolute in the right. Sister Green's daughters granddaughters of brother E. Gaylord, now deceased, are a most excellent help to the singing. They certainly are among the sweet singers of Israel.

I shall stay in this western part of the district next week. I have three appointments for to-morrow. I intend to visit the south part of the district after a little, before our next conference at least. Praying for Zion's weal, I am still in the faith,

HENRY KEMP.

GALIEN, Michigan, July 28th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We had the great pleasure yesterday of baptizing three, two of them the father and mother of Bro. G. F. Weston. Their conversion was mainly due to the efforts of Bro. George. They had been members of the Regular Baptist Church for nearly thirty-six years; but in their declining years chose to embrace the additional light of the gospel restored in its fulness.

The other, a Bro. Richardson, of Buchanan, who had been aided in his researches for the truth by Bro. John Shook. Bro. Richardson has been formerly a Methodist class leader, but being quite a Bible student, sought to get nearer to the truth as anciently revealed, desired to walk in its light.

A number of persons from a distance were in attendance at the services here yesterday, among them some who are very favorable to the cause. Our social service in the afternoon was excellent. Pray for our success.

Your brother in hope,

C. SCOTT.

FONTANELLE, Adair Co., Iowa,

July 24th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—You may think I am still, and quiet; and why should I be otherwise, since thunder, lightning, wind nor cyclone has as yet made any great havoc among us. A wind on the last day of June about sundown, from the north-east, scared some women and children, and some others ran for their cellars and dugouts for protection. But no harm was done save a few limbs of fruit and shade trees were rent from them; but no rain till July 2d. Then lightning struck the chimney of the brick house, producing some very unpleasant sensations with its inmates. Last night the heaviest storm of rain we have had this year here. This produces in us gratitude and thanksgiving to the Great Governor of the Universe. Yet I can see, that there are but few that seem to care, or realize the danger we are exposed to. How few there are that can see or feel the force of what the prophets have said should come to pass in the last days. Is it because they can't understand them? Let me put a few of the precious sayings of the prophet Esdras before them. I wish every official and every other member in the Church that can understand these teachings would read what they say; for these sayings are now fulfilling. "And the more they occupy their merchandise with robbery [charging more profit than they ought to, or deserve], the more they deck their cities, their houses, their possessions and their own persons, the more will I [the Lord] be angry with them for their sins, saith the Lord."

To my mind every thing that is used to make us appear better than we are or deserve, in the sight of God is sin; consequently, Saints ought never to follow the examples of those that hate righteousness. Can any man or woman be righteous who rejects the Book of Mormon, or the law or laws given to restore or reorganize the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. If it was sin to reject Christ and his Apostles, is it not sin to reject Christ and the law he has given in this age for the salvation of the Gentiles and the Jews. My answer is to all, whoever rejects the Book of Mormon and the doctrines contained therein, rejects Christ; and now question, Are they justly entitled to eternal life? Now I want to make this appear more plain, so I will write two verses more: "Like as a whore envieth the sight of an honest and virtuous woman; [Does this mean the Saints]; so shall righteousness hate iniquity when she decketh herself, and shall accuse her to her face [in her presence] when he cometh that shall defend him, when he cometh that diligently searcheth out every sin upon earth."

Has Babylon the mother of harlots got up to her full height. Not yet; but is seeking for that glory. The hour of her judgment is not quite come, is drawing near. Rev. 17. And therefore be ye not like thereunto, nor to the work thereof. For yet a little and iniquity shall be taken away out of the earth, and righteousness shall reign among you; glorious day, let it come; but before that day, hear what the Lord says: "Hear now these things, and understand them, ye servants of the Lord." This is good sense and it will make sound doctrine to all who heed it. I am pleased to see you have some among you that possess good sense and doctrine too. My prayer is that it may, yes will continue to the end, till Zion is redeemed. Behold the word of the Lord, receive it. Believe not the gods of whom the Lord spoke. "Behold the plagues draw nigh, and are not slack. * * * Even so shall not the plagues be slack to come upon the earth. The world shall mourn, and sorrows shall come upon her on every side." Now hear this all ye Saints in every clime, my people, hear my word; make you ready for the battle; and in these roads be ye as pilgrims upon the earth. Is this not now going on in Egypt? And are we not to look for a worse scene to come to pass? Is not America fitting herself for like scenes? Before Zion is redeemed, O ye Elders and Saints, examine these matters with me. See Esdras 4 and 15. Is it just or wise in the sight of God, or wise men to uphold and sustain principles in our American Government, that tends to divide the minds of our fellow citizens; that will hasten the advent of war to our land; save it be by preaching the gospel of Christ, and showing what the prophets have declared shall come to pass.

As ever, a lover of good sense and such as write it,
B. ALDEN.

CLIFTON, Kan., Aug. 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—God still answers prayer. Six years ago last May I was baptized; left a wife and one sister in tears, as they would not follow to the water. God first gave me my wife, next a sister, and last father and mother. Bro. A. Kent baptized them the twentieth of July. The Saints who knew them have all prayed for them, and now let them join with me and thank the Lord. I have one sister yet, the one left in tears, for whom I want the Saints to pray, and for her husband, F. T. Baker. Bro. A. Kent opened the work here, preaches every third Sunday in each month. I have been discouraged, but he feels hopeful. We have been carrying tracts from house to house, and when opportunity presented, talked as led by the Spirit. When we first came here the people looked and acted like some one very mean was in the camp; but now they are not quite so shy. Would to God they knew how we loved their souls, and what anxiety the Saints have for the world. It is a kin to that of Christ.

Yours in bonds,

G. W. BEEBE.

St. Louis, Missouri, August 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Since I last wrote you, I have preached in Alma, Gravois, and St. Louis, with a good enjoyment of the Spirit. On Tuesday evening, last, in company with Bro. John Beaird, reorganized the Gravois Branch, Bro. Joseph Slinger president. Ordained Bro. Daniel Donovan Priest; he is also clerk of branch. Wm. H. Hazzledine treasurer. The work seems to be reviving in this district, but not so much as it might if all would take hold and do a little. Bro.

E. L. Kelley is here, waiting for the Braden and Kelley debate to be printed and bound, which will be ready on Thursday. I take fifty to start with. It is a book that every Latter Day Saint should have. I preached at Gravois Thursday and Saturday evenings, last, and on Sunday afternoon I baptized seven. Bro. Kelley spoke at Gravois Sunday morning and evening, myself in the city.

Yours truly,
J. C. FOSS.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb.,

August 4th, 1884.

Dear Herald.—Our quarterly conference closed this afternoon. The representation was good, and the preaching was well attended; last evening many having to be turned away, as there was not even standing room in the church. The business was done without a jar or ruffle. The outlook in the district, and the prospect for the accomplishing of good was never better.

In gospel bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

CAMERON, Victoria Co., Ont.,

August 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—We write to say that after having left my house on July 8th, 1884, we went into the northern part of Simcoe county; preached several times to interested audiences, and from there came into this county, where we have been preaching, etc., for the past three weeks, resulting so far in leading seven into the waters of baptism, the ordinance being attended to by Bro. John. Some more have given in their names.

We will part here, I to go further east to open new fields; Bro. John to return west to organize a new branch, and such other work as is needed. In the meantime, we desire to be remembered by you in prayer, and subscribe ourselves your co-laborers in the faith,

J. A. McINTOSH,

JOHN H. LAKE.

LAGUNA, Cal., July 14th, 1884.

Editor Herald.—The good Saints of Laguna Branch, wishing to have a good time for the 4th of July, sent invitations to the Saints of Newport, Los Angeles, and San Bernardino, to meet with them at Laguna beach, and celebrate the nation's birth, and participate in a two days' meeting. On the 3d, delegations began to arrive; and on the morning of the 4th, Saints and friends to the number of about one hundred met in a grove of sycamores on the bank of Laguna Lake. Swinging, sailing, singing, feasting, speech-making and general jollity, were the order. In vain we looked for Bro. D. S. Mills, to give us one of his talks. But Bro. J. F. Burton gave an entertaining address on Governments, then, now and hereafter. In the evening the Saints met in the parlors of the Laguna Hotel, kept by Bro. H. E. Goff, and listened to a well timed discourse from Bro. Hiram Holt, on the signs of the times. Saturday afternoon an excellent testimony meeting was had, and the Spirit was felt; prophecy, tongues and interpretation were had, and some in vision. Preaching in the evening by Bro. Mills on continued revelation. Sunday morning prayer and testimony meeting and preaching by Bro. Mills on the second coming of Christ; and in the afternoon seven were admitted into the kingdom, Bro. Burton officiating. Sacrament administered in the evening, and many testimonies given; the Saints much strengthened. Monday morning a young lady took upon her the name of Christ. All appeared to enjoy their Fourth; some indeed will ever remember it. Sorrow was expressed by many in the thoughts of soon parting with Bro. and Sr. Burton, they expecting to leave for Australia in August.

We are anxiously awaiting the arrival among us of Bro. Smith, and also the Bishop. Altogether the work here is showing a newness of life. May the good work continue.

Yours in Christ,

E. J. F.

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas,

July 14th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—Through the loving kindness of the heavenly Father, and the aid of his Saints, I am just able to write. Brethren H. C. Smith and D. H. Bays stopped with me June 25th, and stayed until July 8th. They then went west to open another new place. While they were here, they preached several sermons to fair sized congregations, and were well cared for by the people. Several of my neighbors are investigating. I have to answer several questions. I think if the same brethren would come back and stay a month or two, they would have the pleasure of baptizing some. It was a busy time when the brethren were here. The people seem to be more interested now.

I desire an interest in your prayers and of all the Saints, that I may bear up under my afflictions and trials. I hope that I may make my peace, calling and election sure with God.

Your brother in Christ,

SPENCER C. SMITH.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri,

August, 1884.

Editor Herald.—The world moves, and we are trying to keep apace, while we continue our peaceful habitation in the chosen land. Our hearts are cheered, as we behold the church here enlarging her borders, and growing strong. It is improving in its tone, and bids fair at no distant day to be the banner branch of the church. Indeed, our numbers are increasing from immigration from different parts of our wide country; and although heterogeneous, as it is, there seems to be a harmonious blending, scarcely to be expected; and, under a benign providence, peace and good-will generally reign.

In times past it was our misfortune to have numerous bickerings and contentions; and in some instances there were some serious errors in the conduct of some who professed to stand as living representatives of the Great Master. Time has demonstrated that that which a man sows, even that shall he reap; and in the history of our local work, we have but noticed a sad letting down in the estimation in which some have been held, in consequence of the want of that moral rectitude and honorable bearing, so necessary in the servants of Christ. Those who teach virtue must be virtuous; those who teach honesty must themselves be honest. In a word, men must be consistent. The mere fact that a man is in the church is not necessarily a guarantee of personal honor and purity. The experience of those here but attests the fact that men of avarice sometimes have no conscience, and sometimes resort to knavery in order to get wealth, although making great professions to godliness.

As yet no particular manufacturing is done here; but an excellent opening is here to be found. It needs but a little enterprise to make many a success. This is a good farming country, and the market is one of the best in the country. It would not be wise to invite a large influx of laborers and mechanics at the present time, for should they now come they would experience want consequent upon the absence of manufacturing interests. Bro. A. Munns, recently of California, has located here, and is throwing in his means to build up the place. We expect others to follow. But people who expect to get rich at once, may be disappointed and so may report ill of this place. The visit of "ye Editor" was opportune and salutary in its effect upon all concerned. The Saints were cheered and strengthened for battle for the right, and to "hold the fort."

With hopes of ultimate victory, I am in bonds,
S. G. MAYO.

GLEN ELDER, Kansas,

Bro. Joseph:—I am a stranger in your columns, but I have joined the army of the Lord; and although a new armor bearer, I feel like holding up the banner of King Immanuel. I joined your ranks on the 29th of January, 1884; and I am thankful that I started; and my prayer to God is, that I may ever prove faithful. Our brethren, I. N. Roberts and A. H. Parsons have been here. Friday night we took them to the Blue Hills, sixteen miles south. Bro. Roberts preached for us at two o'clock. Had a very good discourse on charity.

Your sister in Christian bonds,
MARY E. WILLIAMS.

LAGUNA, Cal., July 31st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—We have had some good meetings here, and eight were baptized. Bro. Burton has been among us, and we think by the good Spirit that was with him and attended his preaching, that it must be a great blessing to be a missionary. May God continue to bless him and all that love truth well enough to leave home and its comforts, to tell dying humanity the way to Eternal Life. Brethren Mills and Holt are also preaching the word through the country, with the help of Bro. Gibson.

We live near the coast, and hundreds come here for their health; that gives us a chance in summer to scatter the word from here all over this country Sunday. I spoke to as many as our schoolhouse would hold, assisted by Bro. Hemingway, who was filled with the Spirit in bearing testimony. In the evening I had a chance to speak in camp, assisted by Bro. Amon Goff, to from five hundred to seven hundred people. I was much blessed in speaking. We tried to get ourselves before the people correctly. One man said, "You don't know the prejudice you removed; for ninety per cent of that audience knew no difference between you and the Salt Lake Mormons." I will try and speak to them every Sunday while they stay, that is generally three months. There are all classes of people here from all over America; doctors, lawyers, ministers, spiritualists, and of all denominations; rich and poor—a grand audience. And when I realize how God blessed me with the power of his Spirit so I could move on the minds of so many people, and put the whole camp in a stir, some for and some against, it was marvelous. There are always meetings, or preaching in camp by different ministers, and they never pay any attention after meeting. But what I said stirred the whole camp, and I held right to the teachings of Christ and his apostles. May God bless the ministry with wisdom to preach his word in purity, and the Saints to live as they should live to be Saints, is the prayer of your humble servant,

A. W. THOMPSON.

KEIGHLEY, Kansas,

July 20th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I write to answer inquiries in regard to this country. We have a good climate and good wheat, oats, and a good prospect for corn. There are some good farms for sale cheap compared with the prices there. Some good upland prairie for ten dollars per acre, and some claims yet to be taken at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre; but all of the best of it is taken that I know any thing about. There is plenty of building rock, stock water supplied by streams and springs; but you generally have to blast, or drill, if you get a well. There is some timber on the streams. Wood is worth one dollar per load.

I baptized Frank Devore and wife yesterday, they were formerly from Davis City, Iowa. I have in company with Bro. Madden, Moses Turpen and S. J. Hinkle, held meeting nearly every Sunday, and the Lord has blessed us in our labor of love, and we have made some friends to the cause, while others treat us with scorn. Love to all the brethren.

Yours for Christ,
M. M. TURPEN.

BROWN CITY, Michigan,

July 22d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—We are still trying to help roll on the work. Never has the time looked more prosperous than it does now for a glorious work to be done in this part. Prejudice is disappearing, and many are believing in the gospel. I think our last conference did a great deal towards advancing the cause; for there was such a union of spirit manifested through the entire session, that all present could feel and see that the hand of God was in it, and with us; and besides, the noble discourses we had from Brn. Scott, Blakeslee, J. Cornish and Smith, were enough to convince any one of the truth of the work. Bro. C. Scott remained here some three weeks after conference, and we held meetings in different places. He had great liberty in preaching, notwithstanding his ill health at times. We have had some inconveniences here, not having a place to hold our meetings; but we have rented a hall now for a year, and we hope to have a church by that time. We have been talking of building, and I do not think there is anything to hinder us if we put forth the effort. The outsiders with the Saints seem to be willing to help us, and we have made up our minds to strike while the iron is hot, although we have some opposition. There are four ministers of other denominations who live here in this little town; one Baptist, one Menonite, and two Methodists; but I believe we are the preference, aside from their own members, of the whole town; and I hope that we Saints here may live in that way that our light may shine with the seed which has been sown here, that many may be brought into the fold. We have been looking for Bro. Deuell and D.

Campbell. Hope they will soon put in an appearance. There are calls for preaching all around here, more than myself and Bro. Bailey can fill. I am looking, hoping and praying for the time to come when the Saints may see the need of helping spread the gospel with their means, for the field truly is white, all ready to harvest, and the laborers are few, for lack of enough in the treasury to send them forth; for many are willing to go, if they could have help.

Hoping to be faithful unto the end, I remain your brother in Christ,

J. A. CARPENTER.

SHENANDOAH, Ia.,

August 8th, 1884.

Dear Brother:—The Saints were favored with a series of discourses by Bro. M. H. Forscutt, commencing July 20th, at eleven o'clock. He preached the funeral of two of Bro. Haven C. Hall's little children, who died at this place since Bro. Hall's death, whose funeral he preached April 13th, 1884, leaving to Sr. Hall, his wife, only one child, a little daughter, out of a family of four children. This was a severe trial for Sr. Hall. She has the sympathy of all Saints and many of the citizens here. He closed his meetings on July 25th, with which the Saints and others were very much pleased. He baptized seven while here, two adults, five children.

Yours in Christ,
S. S. WILCOX.

RENICK, Randolph Co., Mo.,
August 1st, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I came to this place on Wednesday, July 30th, from Knox county, Missouri, where I have preached a number of times, I think with good effect, which will be seen by their acts when I go there again if they do as they say. Some of them told me that they were sure the doctrine I was teaching was true. We have no members in that county that I know of, but old Sr. Califf, and she is over eighty-one years of age. But she is a good sister and a good preacher both in words and works. David Robinson brought me about eleven or twelve miles in his wagon to La Plata, and many of the people requested me to return there again as soon as I could. On Wednesday evening we went and heard a lecture on the Bible by one L. L. Norton, of Hallsville, Boone county, Missouri, and he brought up the Book of Mormon, and said that was the ground work or basis of polygamy; and that was too hard for me to stand and say nothing; so after he was through, I asked him if he meant to say that the Book of Mormon taught polygamy, and he answered that he could prove that Joseph Smith had more than one wife; and I took him up on his own words. I went and met him the next morning; but he would not stand over night to what he said about the Book of Mormon. Then I sold him my Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants. He had a great deal to say about the Book of Mormon and Mormonism, as he called it. A question was gotten up for debate, which I took up to him. I affirmed it, and we are to have four nights discussion on it in this place. I should be much pleased if brother Joseph R. Lambert could be present at the time, as the Saints would like to see him. The question is, Resolved, That the doctrines and principles taught by the Latter Day Saints' Church, are in accordance with King James' Translation of the Bible, and that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God, as its founder. Debate to begin Wednesday evening, August 20th, 1884. Pray for me.

I remain your brother,

GEORGE HICKLIN.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

August 7th.—Prime Minister Ferry, of France has addressed a formal note to Lord Lyons, British Minister to France, in which he declares that England continues to be bound by the protocol signed at the Constantinople conference, and that she must consult the Powers in the event of any change in the financial arrangements of Egypt.

Strong protests have been made by the Belgian populace against the recent denominational policy of the Belgian Chambers. Soldiers have been called out by the Ministry to protect the public buildings, but this only served to inflame popular feeling. The military guard was withdrawn today on account of the protests of the Legislature.

At Marseilles there were eleven deaths from cholera during the twenty four hours ending at seven this morning. Two deaths occurred during the forenoon. At Toulon four deaths occurred last night, one being that of a person who returned yesterday. There has been a slight increase in the cases owing to the great number of returning fugitives. A fresh case of cholera is reported at Pancalieu. One death has occurred at Marignano. An analysis of the water in common use at Marseilles, Aix, and Arles shows that it is full of numberless microbes. The authorities of Marseilles will commence the construction of public works to give occupation to the unemployed. The English cholera is spreading in Clayton, Lemoors, and Rishton, hamlets not far from Blackburn.

The Hovas of Madagascar are showing great spirit, and are determined to resist the French. The queen has proclaimed negotiations at an end, and has ordered her subjects to prepare for war.

The Sultan of Morocco has caused the massacre of a whole tribe of Augara Kabilas because they asked for French protection. The men were killed and the women and children made slaves. Two thousand men from different tribes have gathered to attack the Cheriff of Oudzan, and war with France is probable.

Four earthquake shocks occurred yesterday morning at Frascati, Albano, and Costelle Romani, a few miles southeast of Rome.

The steamer Amsterdam was wrecked off Sable Island, and three persons drowned.

An aerolite exploded near Pares, Ill., Wednesday morning and caused much consternation in that region. It was thought to be a steam-boiler. No one was injured.

August 8.—The International Peace Convention at Berne, Switzerland, expressed itself in favor of the neutralization of the interoceanic canals.

All the Dublin Castle officials indicted for abominable crimes were arraigned at the Assize Court in the Irish Capital to-day. They pleaded not guilty. The trial will commence the 19th inst. The charges are of a most terrible character, but there seems to be a great lack of zeal on the part of the Irish officials in pushing them.

A rag dealer at Weitzwiel, in the Canton of Berne, Switzerland, has died of cholera.

Two deaths occurred at Toulon from cholera last night, and one at Laseyne. The heat has somewhat increased the mortality among the cholera patients at Marseilles.

In Italy three fresh cases of cholera are reported at Cairo and Mentenette. Two deaths occurred to-day at Massa, one at Cariquano, and one at Ossasio. There are no fresh cases at Pancalieri, but two persons under treatment there died. Five cholera patients in the Lazaretto at Varignano are cured and three are in an improved condition.

The cholera is raging in the Department of Hérault, especially the Commune of Gigean, Marseilles, where there are 2,000 inhabitants. Seven persons have died there of cholera during the last twenty-four hours, and eighteen cases are now under treatment. A woman died of cholera at Montfavet, and her husband has been attacked with the disease. The population is flying from the place.

The American Minister will arrive at Shanghai to-day. The Chinese remain firm. Further concessions by the French will alone secure peace.

There is an epidemic of malignant and pernicious fever at San Carlos, thirty eight miles from Panama. There were nine deaths in from twenty-four to thirty-seven hours. The inhabitants are panic-stricken. It is believed the epidemic is due to intense malarial poisoning.

The Russian Government has issued a circular to the principals of schools in Russia holding them responsible for any revolutionary tendencies their scholars may have, and enjoining them to maintain strict supervision over their pupils in order to dissipate the slightest flavor of Nihilistic sentiment.

A herd of Texas cattle, unloaded at Lemars, Ia., recently, was infected with Texas fever. Five died. The disease was communicated to one herd of native cattle and fifteen died.

Texas fever and pleuro-pneumonia have appeared among the herds in the vicinity of Lancaster, Pa. The infected herds have been quarantined.

Aug. 9.—There is trouble between Spain and the Vatican. The Spanish Minister of Agriculture some time ago declared in favor of the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope. The Italian Government resented the Spanish Minister's speech and appealed to the Spanish Government, which made a sort of apology. This has given offense to the Vatican, which now threatens to withdraw the Nuncio from Madrid.

The Franco-Chinese complication is beginning at last to come to a head. The time of the French ultimatum, Aug. 4, having expired and there being no signs of the indemnity forthcoming, the French Admiral the following day bombarded and subsequently occupied the Town of Kelung, in the northern part of the large Island of Formosa, off the eastern coast of China. The French Minister has notified the Chinese Government that the period of occupation will depend upon the payment of the indemnity, which increases every time we hear from it, having now reached the respectable sum of $16,000,000.

Deaths, from cholera have occurred at Dronero, Bellini, Seborgo, and other Italian towns.

Dr. Koch, the well-known German scientist, declares that in the delta of the Ganges the cholera epidemic had its origin. An improved water-supply in the cities is the best preventive of the disease. The Mohammedan pilgrimages to the East, in his opinion, promote the spread of the contagion.

A form of cholera known as English cholera has broken out in several places in the Lancashire (England) district. Two hundred persons have been attacked, and there have been five deaths.

The pending session of the Congress in France, called to revise the Constitution, is a notable event in French politics, though at present the indications are that its elements are too factions and inharmonious ever to arrive at any agreement. The method of procedure differs from those of our constitutional conventions, as the people are not consulted in the matter at all. The French Congress is composed of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. As soon as they have completed their work the Constitution as revised will go into force on a day to be agreed upon, and the next election will be held under its provisions. The action of the Congress will not be submitted to popular ratification as with us.

The most important changes which are contemplated are, first, the election of Deputies by the scrutin de liste instead of the scrutin d'arrondissement method; and, second, abolition of the election of Senators for life, the Senate now having the right to fill one-fourth of its seats with life-Senators. In place of this it is proposed to elect the new Senators for nine years by a vote of the Senate acting with the Deputies. It is not easy to see wherein the Congress differs in its functions from the ordinary National Assembly, except that it meets as a single body. There is the same quarreling of factions and the same multiplicity of propositions of all kinds from factions of all kinds. The Congress is absolute in itself, and as the people have nothing to say in the premises, and the Congress is almost hopelessly divided, there is not much prospect that the Constitution will be revised to any purpose, much as it needs it before it can be available as a genuine Republican instrument. It will be remembered that Gambetta's Government went out of power on the proposition to revise it. There is no danger that a like fate awaits M. Ferry's Government, though the outlook for revision is not much more favorable now than it was in Gambetta's time.

Frank H. Mason, United States Consul at Marseilles, in a dispatch to the State Department relative to the cholera at that place and Toulon, says: "It appears that, notwithstanding all the progress in medical science and the very perfect arrangements for collecting and treating stricken victims of the scourge, more than two-thirds of those attacked have died, even during the first fortnight of the epidemic, when all the sanitary conditions were most favorable. The almost immediate transmission of the disease from Toulon to Marseilles, and the enormous death rate of 70 per cent in the earliest stage of the epidemic, seem to prove that sanitary science and medical skill have made but little substantial progress in dealing with Asiatic cholera. A second feature of the present epidemic is the rigor and deadliness of its attack as compared with that of the last great cholera summer, 1865. The rapidity and virulence of this development are attributed in some measure to the intense, damp, stifling heat which has prevailed during most days since the 30th of June. There are physicians of judgment and experience who maintain that desiccation is the only effectual destroyer of the cholera microbe on a large scale, and that dry, hot weather, while it may be unfavorable for those already attacked, is most effective in staying the spread of the contagion. Another noticeable feature of the present visitation has been the simultaneous and sudden appearance of the malady in all parts of the City of Marseilles. Fugitives from here have died at Aix, Grenoble, and other towns in Southern France, but the epidemic has thus far not been kindled there, nor have any persons been attacked except such as brought the contagion from the City of Toulon. In view of the enormous emigration which has occurred since the outbreak three weeks ago, estimated by good authority at 100,000 persons from Marseilles and 50,000 from Toulon, and the distribution of this vast contingent throughout France, Italy, Switzerland, and the Netherlands, it is noteworthy and encouraging that no authenticated case of cholera has occurred among this army of fugitives at any point north of Grenoble. Although great numbers of Italian working people left the two stricken cities for Northern Italy during the early days of the epidemic, the disease has not apparently been carried with them, or if it has, it has not yet developed. Nothing in all the dispute concerning the origin and cure of the disease has added any effectiveness to the means hitherto known for treating choleraic patients, and the proportion of deaths to cases appears to increase rather than diminish. A momentary gleam of hope was diffused by the announcement that patients had been rescued from the collapse stage of the malady at the hospital in Toulon by the inhalation of oxygen, but this encouragement has been clouded by the discovery that the effect of this powerful stimulant was but temporary, and the patients thus treated finally died in the same ratio as those treated by other methods."

Four deaths from cholera occurred at Toulon since last night and at 10 this morning. There have been no deaths since that hour. He was fired on as he ran, but it is not known if he was killed. After the killing of Berry the masked men started, and just as they got out of the house J. R. Hudson fired and killed Dave Henson, one of the masked men. One of the Henson party stood over the body and fired two loads of buckshot at Hudson, literally riddling him. The Mormons, in fear of another attack, did not make search until Monday, when they found the Mormon that ran away from Condon's house dead. The harvesting weather throughout Europe is very fine, and prospects of a large crop are reported good.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the corn trade says: "Intense dry tropical heat has prevailed since Aug. 1st. Harvest work has proceeded rapidly. Grain has matured in exceptionally good form. All the earliest wheat is now in perfect milling condition. Barley and oats vary. In some districts they are excellent, in others poor. Spring beans appear to be an absolute failure. The potato crop is unlikely to prove large, but will be freer from disease than for many years. Throughout the last week new wheats have made their appearance in various markets in a condition described as somewhat phenomenal. New wheats are quoted at 36 shillings to 40 shillings for reds and 40 shillings for whites per quarter. Sales of Eng. wheat during the week 29,758 quarters at 37 shillings 6 pence, against 35,131 quarters at 43 shillings 6 pence for the corresponding week last year. The trade in foreign wheat is choked by the sunshine, and present symptoms indicate a rapid subsidence of the values to a level hitherto unknown. The present position of the trade will strengthen the argument of those who claim that the production of wheat throughout the world in late years has been increasing in ratio exceeding the ratio of consumption. Wheat in London and Liverpool is irregularly cheaper; oats 6 pence lower; maize firmly held in London; barley remains unchanged. The trade in cargoes off coast is literally dried up under the blazing sunshine. There was only one sale. Eleven cargoes have arrived, eight were withdrawn, and five remain. Trade forward is virtually nothing.

Total, 3,481,438 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 7,973,857 bushels a year ago. During last week the stock decreased 33,748 bushels, including a decrease of 3,008 bushels of wheat and an increase of 115,729 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 15,754,359 bushels of wheat, 3,885,401 bushels of corn, 1,514,731 bushels of oats, 200,319 bushels of rye, and 213,240 bushels of barley. BOOK OF MORMON COMMITTEE REPORT.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE APPOINTED BY LAST GENERAL CONFERENCE TO COMPARE THE PALMYRA, OR FIRST EDITION, AND THE CURRENT EDITION OF THE BOOK OF MORMON, WITH THE MANUSCRIPT NOW IN THE HANDS OF DAVID WHITMER, SEN., OF RICHMOND, RAY COUNTY, MISSOURI.

TO THE CHURCH, GREETING:—In submitting our report to you, through the Herald, as per order of the Conference appointing us, we present a brief history of our work. The idea of comparing the printed books with the manuscript, has been in the minds of prominent elders of the church for years. Some ten years ago, the First Presidency had the matter under advisement, or about the time that the fact of the Manuscript being in existence, and in the hands of "Father Whitmer" (as he is familiarly called) became known to the church. After it became known that the Manuscript could be examined under the supervision of its custodian, and circumstances permitted, the committee was appointed to do the work of comparing the printed works with the Manuscript.

The discussion that was held last May in Pittsburg between the chairman of the committee, and Mr. Covert, and other duties requiring his attention first, prevented him from engaging in the work till the middle of June. Besides, it was learned by the committee that certain circumstances prevented the Whitmer family from being ready or prepared to accommodate us before July 7th. It was the express wish of Father Whitmer that Bro. Joseph should be present. So the committee sent for him, and he arrived in Independence, Missouri, July 6th, and left with the committee for Richmond on Tuesday, 8th inst. We reached there about noon of the 8th, and began our work at once, laboring from seven a. m. till twelve, noon, and from one till six p. m., daily, finishing our labors on Thursday morning, the 17th inst.

As we could not commence the work of comparing the books with the manuscript till the time named, we spent about ten days in comparing, and taking notes of the differences between the Palmyra edition, and the current, or Plano edition. And as the changes were marked in the books, as well as recorded by the secretary of the committee, their agreement or disagreement, if any, with the manuscript could be more readily observed. In the work of comparing at Richmond, Bro. Joseph generally held and read the Manuscript, which was handed to the committee in sections as they were needed. Bro. Alexander H. Smith read the Palmyra copy, and Bro. W. H. Kelley the Plano copy; carefully noting each and every change that was discovered in the printed copies, which was then recorded by the secretary.

The committee deemed it wise to have one or more of the party connected with the care of the Manuscript present during the entire examination, and so secured the services of Philand A. Page, son of Hiram Page, who was with the committee all the time, and who carefully read a copy of the Palmyra edition, while the Manuscript was being read; Father Whitmer was also present nearly all the time.

While engaged in the work, we were interviewed by the Editors of the Conservator, and the Democrat, published at Richmond; and also by reporters of the St. Louis Republican, and the Globe Democrat, and by a number of the prominent men of the place. From the Editors and reporters of the papers named we received very candid and fair reports of their interviews.

The changes in the Palmyra edition are reported in detail as you will please see. Those that occur in the Plano edition, which has followed the Nauvoo and Kirtland editions, the alterations are too numerous to publish in detail, but are fully recorded, and will be placed in the care of the President of the Church, subject to the order of the body. While the changes are many, they are such as do not affect the doctrine taught, or destroy the sense in any respect, but are of the following character: Where in the Manuscript "which are," "which had," "which was" and "they which" are found, they are changed to "who are," "who had," "who was," and those who. "Saith," which occurs in scores of places, is changed to "said" or "say," "hath," which is found hundreds of times, is changed to "has," or "had," or "have;" "doth" is changed to "do," "is" to "are," "was" to "were," "much" to "many," "should" to "would," "whomsoever" to "whosoever." When "that" follows the word "after" and precedes "I," "he," "they," etc., it is generally omitted in the Plano edition. "It came to pass that," is frequently omitted in that edition. In the Manuscript it often reads, "a going," "a journeying," etc. In the late editions the "a" is left off. The changes of the number and tense of verbs, and the other changes noted are very numerous. There are other changes, as per these examples: "to their" changed to "to our," "none were" to "no one was," "Alma he being" to "Alma being," "they had ought" to "they ought," &c. These changes, numbers of which were made in the Manuscript since the Palmyra Edition was published in 1830, and prior to the publishing of the Kirtland Edition in 1837, appear to have been made by whom we can not learn.

In regard to the Manuscript itself, we have to say, that it is beyond doubt the "original" or the one written by Oliver Cowdery, Martin Harris, Christian Whitmer and Emma Smith, and probably Alva Hale. The handwriting of Oliver Cowdery and Christian Whitmer being identified by the Whitmer family; Emma Smith's writing being recognized by Bro. Joseph and Bro. Alexander, her sons. Known specimens of Cowdery's writing were shown to the committee and sameness noted. It appears that they relieved each other, as the handwriting frequently changes. The Manuscript shows different writers also, in the spelling, as some, particularly Oliver Cowdery, spell more correctly. The writers evidently spelled as Joseph pronounced the words. There is no evidence that we could gather that the words were kept before the vision of Joseph till correctly spelled, as some imagine, but they were written as pronounced, and when read to Joseph would of course sound as he had pronounced them. Proper names, which Joseph could not always pronounce, and which the amanuensis did not know how to spell, were spelled out by Joseph; also any word that he could not pronounce. These are clearly properly spelled. A sample of some of the spelling we hereby give. Alliance is spelled allyance, accuseing for accusing, angry for angry, destroid for destroyed, debths for depths, haveing for having, conterary for contrary, allready for already, cours for course, permitted for permitted, robed for robbed, spie for spy, dearest for durst, concearned for concerned, persued for pursued, verry for very, vally for valley, troden for trodden, and nearly a hundred more of equally incorrect spellings. The punctuation is deficient in a large part of the Manuscript, yet there are pages where the punctuation is found and made at the time of writing without doubt. In other parts whole pages are punctuated with a pencil; and as the punctuation agrees with that in the Palmyra edition, it was evidently made before the publication of that edition.

With but one or two exceptions, proper names begin with capitals, and the capital I is always written for the pronoun I; and sentences are generally begun with capitals, when they do not begin with the character &.

The lines were closely and finely written, and from edge to edge of the sheets. The paper was evidently ruled by hand. The pages contained about thirty-eight lines each, and average fourteen words to a line, or over 246,000 words in the Manuscript. The writing was very legible, and the Manuscript was well preserved. It measures about one and one half inches thick, eight inches wide, and thirteen inches long; 464 pages, exclusive of preface and testimonials. The word "and" is nearly always represented by the character "&".

Father Whitmer states that very soon after the Palmyra Edition was published, Joseph Smith placed the Manuscript in Oliver Cowdery's care, with the Solemn injunction to preserve it carefully and sacredly, for that the Church might fall into transgression as did the Nephites of old, and that the Manuscript should be kept from falling into the hands of transgressors. He further states, that about the close of 1849, just before Oliver Cowdery's death, he (Cowdery) placed it in his hands. He declares that the Manuscript in his hands is the one used by the printer, and that he had every opportunity of knowing that this is the original.

Practical printers testified in our presence, that it had undoubtedly been in the printer's hands. Let it be understood in conclusion, that the only reason why we do not report the changes found in the Plano and other Editions published subsequent to the Palmyra one in full is that, in giving the reading in the Manuscript and the printed work, and the chapter, page, and line, as we have noted, it would take more space than the Editor of the Herald could be reasonably asked to devote.

Believing that many of the writers of the various books comprising the Book of Mormon were unlearned men, as evidently was the case with some of the writers of the books of the Bible, a faithful translation would present their ideas as they expressed them, ungrammatical as they may be. We believe that the changes that were made; and published in the Kirtland Edition, were designed to modernize the form of speech; those who made the changes, believing that the sense was not to any extent affected thereby. But be that as it may, we your Committee earnestly recommend that the future editions of the book be made to conform to the Manuscript as it now appears in the Palmyra Edition which is corrected by us, to fully agree with the Manuscript.

The work of the Committee was performed with open doors; and frequently citizens of the place came in, and sat and heard us read, and examined the Manuscript as freely as they desired.

We now submit the list of differences in full, that we found between the Palmyra Edition and the Manuscript, many of which we believe were typographical errors, and were overlooked by the proof-reader.

Respectfully submitted,

Committee, { WM. H. KELLEY,
ALEX. H. SMITH,
THOS. W. SMITH.

N. B.—The thanks of the Committee are hereby tendered Bro. M. B. Williams, of Excello, Ohio, for paper used by the Committee to make notes upon, &c.

The differences between the Palmyra Edition and the Manuscript of the Book of Mormon.

The Title Page of both agree.

In the Certificate of the Clerk of the Court, the word "who" in the eighth line is "which" in the Manuscript.

The statement of Moroni does not follow the Clerk's Certificate as in the Palmyra Edition; and the quotation from the State law is not in the Manuscript, as is in the Palmyra Edition. In the Preface of the book is found on line twenty-six the "which" is "who" in the Palmyra Edition.

The following differences occur in the body of the Book.

DUTY AND OBLIGATION.

THE problem of human life is one of absorbing interest and paramount importance, embracing all the facts and experiences of the past, the privileges and surroundings of the present, and all the possibilities of future existence and future happiness. Standing upon the narrow land of time, on either side we look beyond its shores across the watery expanse of eternity—eternity past and eternity to come. The vision of mind traverses the broad bosom of these waters in search of the other side, but returns wearied with the fruitless effort of its vain research. Nature's course is "one eternal round," which has not and can not have an end. Intelligence is not visible to the natural eye, yet constitutes the chiefest factor in the universe, and every tangible form is the result of its power and direction, while itself was not created, neither indeed can be. Matter also is eternal and independent is its sphere, so that all things whether visible or invisible, are co-existent and co-eternal with God.

The basis of obligation is mutual relation and dependence. We are indebted to God "the Father of our spirits" for what he has done for us, and from this relationship grows the just command, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart."

If God created the world and the spirits of men "out of nothing," then blood may be pressed from a turnip, intelligence emanate from the rock, and every vacuum be turned to solid material. The smallest mote tells the water's course, the drifting straw the way the wind blows; and volume does not pervert the action of principle illustrated in smaller things. Man, the noblest work of God, is made in His image, endowed with His powers, and possessing in a minor degree faculties in common with him; and their species must be identical, otherwise the most devoted are not and can not become "the sons of God."

It is logical to maintain, that if the greater can create much from the immaterial atoms of nothing, the lesser may also draw and formulate from the same source of nothingness. By what observation in life or rule of reasoning have men been led to suppose that omniscience and omnipotence possess the power of absolutely bringing into existence that which before had neither life, form nor entity. Blind credulity, perverted reverence, and undue caution are as detrimental to the world's progress as are the bold strides of infidelic reasoning. Christianity proper, should give birth to a better "Age of Reason" than that of Thomas Paine, if it is desired to eclipse him in mentality and spiritual significance. Errors innumerable, resulting in part from lack of love for the truth, have stood between the people and the knowledge designed to make them free. A misconception of the character of God is nearly, if not quite, as mischievous as the disbelief of his existence. The irreverence and unbelief of infidelity are the result in part of inconsistent theology, and gross misrepresentations of the attributes of God.

The time has come when the terms "gospel" and "religion" should be clothed with all the intellectual significance rightfully belonging to a system of such purported meaning and importance, and fraught with the issues of human happiness or misery. Those who truly represent the work of God among and for the people must and will be men of free thought and unbiased convictions. Superstition and false tradition are not altogether exiled from the mental and spiritual realm. In various and distinctive phases can their lines be traced in forms of theology that signally fail in teaching and import to respond to the finer senses and better desires of the human heart.

Why should the people of God fear any character or amount of argumentative opposition waged against them, or the system they represent. Is the religion of the meek and lowly but triumphant Nazarene so impotent that its devotees should screen it from the investigation of free thinkers? Or are the realms of truth so sacred that a few steps taken in advance of the old beaten paths, should be regarded as a mark of irreverence for the Creator, and an act of desecration of that which is good? If the truth will make men free, why should Saints or sinners be afraid of it.

Others may think as they please, but I don't believe we shall ever know God in all the majesty and excellence of his character, without a free and unbiased exercise of our reasoning faculties. Some may shudder and recoil at the expressed thought that ideas and convictions inculcated by inductive reasoning constitute a better and firmer basis of religious principle and hope than a passive belief in "the word of the Lord." Nor does this depreciate God's word, but rather heightens our conception of its character. Intelligence always creates that which appeals to intelligence. Purity puts forth her hand in search of its own kind. When congenial spirits meet they rejoice. Affinity is the mother of happiness. Satan knows no peace from the fact that while there is sufficient interest and purpose in common to cause his angels to work together with him, the same element that separated them from the righteousness of God, divides and subdivides them. Thieves may league together and steal, but quarrel over the spoil. Man may join his fellow man to shed innocent blood, but their own lives are in constant jeopardy from one another. Love actuates a pure desire for the mutual benefit of all parties concerned, self not excluded.

A bird shut fast in its cage has no knowledge of the joys and beauties of the far off realm; but turn the feathery songster free, and as he soars heavenward he sees, hears, realizes and enjoys what he never knew before, and never could have known in his condition of close imprisonment. Men and women who are afraid to think, contenting themselves with the perch and swing and miniature sky of their theological cages, only catch the din and hum of their immediate surroundings.

I understand the gospel in dimensions to be as high, as deep, as broad as the universe; shall its advocates fear to follow it in its comprehensiveness? Caution shakes his head in dismay, lifts his hand suspiciously, motions you backward and says, Beware. O yes, Caution, you are a good fellow, and useful in your place; but sir, love, that casts out fear, and wisdom that justifies her children, and knowledge, with his power, and perseverance with his success, are as needful in the walks of life as you are. - So we will all journey along together in our happy research for light and truth.

The requirement that we love God and our neighbor to the extent of our ability is a reasonable one. It is nowhere enjoined that we must love the devil, yet he once was "an angel of light." The real or supposed man who in time of peril prayed, first to God and then to Satan, upon the grounds that he did not know into the hands of which he might fall, displayed commendable sagacity, but his reasoning was at fault. As he recognized them as antagonistic powers, he should have known that if God was his friend the devil was his enemy. Freely I confess that I have faith in God, and offer my prayers to him for the reason that he is my friend if I do right; furthermore, I consider myself indebted to him for what he has done for me, while so far as I know, Satan never voluntarily did me any good, and I am under no obligation to him whatever. The Evil One is not capable of befriending any one; he has nothing of worth to bestow, no house in which mankind may safely dwell, no glory to impart. The blackness of darkness is his forever. Chains of everlasting sorrow and woe fetter his corrupted being. Degradation, misery and dark despair await him in the infliction of an awful doom. Who could wish to share with him in such a fate!

People are sometimes misguided in the bestowment of their affections for the reason that they fail to realize that the cause of humanity is one common cause. "God made of one blood all nations to dwell upon all the face of the earth." Is not mutual relationship expressed here? There is not a solitary individual born into the world that can truthfully say, "I am under no obligation to my fellow man." Nor can the hermit justly say, "Solitude gave me birth, hence my league with seclusion is just." In former days the Lord complained of people thus: "They hate their own flesh and blood." The legality of the complaint uttered against the rich who help not the poor, lies in this: They have taken what the world had to give them, but refuse to return the favor, thus rendering themselves unjust and recreant to the trust reposed in them by the lawful owner of worldly estate. Humanity are bound together by the common ties of kinship, and by reason of this no man has a right to be selfish and indifferent to the conditions and wants of his fellow man. Why is the tie of filial love stronger than those farther removed? Is it not because the obligation is greater? As that which governs in the least must also in the much, this is sufficient to illustrate the principle governing the character of our love to God and our neighbor.

If in the resurrection I am privileged to associate with the worthy and much talked of Paul, I shall say to him: Paul, I feel indebted to you for what you have done for the world in which I was permitted to live; but as we are both dependent upon the Lord for our privileges and the guarantee of happiness, him only will I worship as the highest expression of devotion of which I am capable; and you will I honor, love, and respect as a man who has truly learned the lessons of duty and obligation to his fellow man. That which is eternal, whether spirit or element, is independent in its sphere, and does not and can not depend upon something or somebody else for its existence and support, though it may and evidently does for organization. Furthermore, its rights of access to that which exists, are as legitimate as are the just claims of others great or small. The character of God has been variously represented, from that of a tyrant and fiend, to a nonentity, without body, parts, passions, or common sense. When a man is afraid to properly vindicate the character of the Holy and Just One, who is God, for fear of incurring the vengeance and eternal spleen of a monster who can not be God, there is room for improvement in his theological compass.

I maintain that our conceptions of purity and justice can rise but little or no higher than the standard we represent in the character of our lives. When the leaven of the "old man" is thoroughly purged, the name and character of God will be held in their true light, and religion will justly commend itself to the intelligence of every sane man. We are told that the "fearful and unbelieving" as well as hypocrites who love, make and represent a lie in the conflict of inward belief and outward action, shall have their part in the lake of sulphurous inhalation. To my mind if a man is wrong in his convictions the road to improvement lies in the direction of honest confession, which is good for the soul. A dishonest confession of what you don't believe is of no special worth to donor nor confidant.

I am satisfied that much of the religion in the world is the mere expression of hope and belief, without a tangible reason upon which they may be predicated. When professors of religion can arise with the evidences of regeneration stamped upon their every feature, portraying the excellency and worth of the divine economy, thus manifesting the virtues and powers of that Holy and Just One, we need not fear the consequences of free thought, free speech and free action. Have you children? If so, when one of them comes to you for knowledge or a favor of any kind, does he turn pale and tremble, and does he dodge and shrink from your presence as though you were a hydra-headed monster? Or do you sit in such stately dignity with a righteous frown upon your face, that the little ones dare not approach you? Or tell me, would it please you to have the little man of six summers address you thus: "Pa, you are a great big fellow, and could shake me into pieces if you wished. I am an awful naughty boy, and if you would punish me as I deserve, you would leave neither hide nor hair upon me; but on account of your extreme goodness you have not ground me to powder. I am not good for anything, never will be, but by reason of your tender mercy my good for nothing body is spared from day to day. I know I don't deserve anything, and it will be an act of injustice to give me any thing I ask for, but you are so compassionate and of such tender mercy, I will venture to ask for a very small piece of bread and butter, with which to feed my starving but unworthy soul."

I wonder if the Lord sometimes don't become wearied with inconsistent pleading and importunity. Why should we come to him with our minds befogged and biased because of his omniscience and omnipotence? Are we paying any real tribute of praise by telling him that if he had dealt with us according to our sins, he would long since have cut us off as cumberers of the ground? Every man gets what rightfully belongs to him in the economy of God. Otherwise He would be a partial being. If he bestows upon one individual what he is not worthy to receive, he is in duty bound to serve all alike; and the devil would come in for his share. If the human race were as good for nothing as sometimes represented, they would hardly be worth saving. If men are not saved upon and according to their individual merits, the gospel is a farce—a meaningless form, without basis upon which to act, or a standard by which men may be judged. When we enter into judgment we will take a seat of the same rank as our moral prestige, and this is all that an honest man wants.

The idea prevails that truth is wholly resident in and dependent upon God for existence. This is a mistake. Truth, so far as relates to principle, was not and can not be created. We may depend upon the word of the Lord because he loves the truth, but his word and sanction do not make it truth. The principle is as independent of origin as is space. When puny man, or even the tiniest child tells a truth, it is as sacred as though God himself had spoken it. The Father and Son are beings of glory because they are being of truth and good works.

Great advancement in the knowledge of God and the universe must necessarily be made, before the coming of Messiah to reign. The walls of partition separating mankind from God were by them built, and must by them be torn down. Disobedience entailed darkness and ignorance among men; hence the world is steeped in tradition, and is not fully aware of its condition. We rather instinctively follow one another, without a proper consideration as to the necessity or propriety of the act. Society drifts into set forms of social and religious customs, which chrysalize into "law and gospel." In many respects customs instead of common sense rule the world of mankind. Madam Alamode sways the scepter of prestige over the circles called fashionable with such magic power, that a bonnet worn last season which was "too sweet" and a "real beauty," now alas has become "just horrid." Religion is not subject to quite so many radical changes and periodical vicissitudes as fashion, but fluctuates upon the market; and venders are sometimes compelled to report dull sales and small returns.

Young America gives vent to his political bias with as much assurance as though his wisdom constituted the chiefest pillar in the constitution of state, and the main spoke in the wheel of human progress, and so the world moves on. We live, and this is a very good guarantee of continual existence. All have access to the unlimited fulness of the physical, mental and spiritual realms. God has revealed himself as a spiritual, corporeal entity, capable of loving and being loved, as one who labors patiently and with continued effort for the elevation of mankind to his sphere of knowledge, power and enjoyment; as one who knows what is right and purposes to maintain it in the vindication of his own character, and the final adjudication of human affairs; as one, though possessing all power, in the depths of his love and tenderness, will not break the bruised reed nor quench the smoking flax of human hopes and desires. Such a being I can worship. The tenderest affections of my heart go out in love and sympathy for the one who is willing to suffer long and patiently, that I with others, even as many as will, might come and drink of the fountain of light, life, love and eternal joy. I have stepped upon the ladder of ambition to do right, and with my Master and my brethren will I labor to publish and maintain the cause of the true and only religion that is able to save the souls of men.

All things considered pro and con, "the whole duty of man is to fear God and keep his commands; for every work shall be brought to judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or evil." Our works both public and private will stand as the evidence of our faith or unbelief, and will serve as the guarantee of our reward, little or much.

A EUROPEAN STEEL RING.

ONE of the easiest things to foresee about the future of the trade combinations which are becoming such a feature of industry is that they will infallibly develop until they graduate from local or even National rings into international ones. Already there are several labor unions which have an international membership. Railroad pools in our hemisphere do not stop at political boundaries. Commissioner Fink's great trunk-line pool thrusts its sovereignty in the face of the Union Jack as well as of the Stars and Stripes. And now comes the news that the negotiations which have been going on for a long time between the manufacturers of steel rails in England, France, Belgium, and Germany for the formation of a monster steel-rail pool have been successful.

The appearance of this combination, which the Pall Mall Gazette characterizes as "a gigantic steel ring," is an important step forward in the evolution of the business "pool." It has taken perfect shape slowly. It was first formed months ago, and it has gained strength with the lapse of time, contrary to the confident predictions that it would utterly break down in practice—a kind of prediction which seems to be repeated with more confidence by those political economists whose theories are in conflict with facts the more the evidence falsifies their prophecies. This steel-rail pool of four nations is organized on the basis with which the people of this country have been made so familiar by the countless pools that may be seen at work in almost every branch of industry.

Some interesting information is given about this international affair by the Age of Steel, which has made a specialty of gathering information about such trade combinations. The agreement which has been made fixes prices and allots a certain definite amount of work to be done by each member. The harmonizing of so many different interests and satisfying the varying demands of rival manufacturers in four great nations is, as the Age of Steel remarks, hardly less than miraculous. Of course, the capitalists who have thus come together claim that their object was not and is not to force up prices in an artificial manner, but simply to prevent an unwholesome and destructive competition for such orders as may be in the market from time to time. That is the proper tone to assume when the promoters of the combination are seeking to rivet its bolts and bars; when they have made of it a combination out of which the public can not escape, the odds are very heavy that they will put the prices just as high as "the traffic will bear."

A very good test was lately made of the cohesiveness of the combination by the efforts of the Government of India to break it. That department of the British Government, having determined to enter on a course of extensive railroad-building in India, made a preliminary offer to buy 70,000 tons of rails at lower than the association rates. But none of the members would violate their agreement with the association, and the attempt to make a breach in its paper walls was an undisguised failure. The leaders of the pool confess that they regard the market in the United States as lost to them permanently, and they are therefore all the more concerned to keep the market elsewhere in such shape that they can control it and can make out of it what they have lost in this country. That the prize to be won by the success of the pool is a very great one is evident enough from the single fact that the recommendation of the committee of the House of Commons for a loan of $140,000,000 to be spent in building railroads in India, means of itself a demand for millions of tons of steel rails.

The vast dimensions which trade combinations are assuming—and in a survey of these labor unions as much to be counted as the associations of capitalists—give a new depth to the problems of society that are rising above the horizon. Here we see business sovereignties which have a wider jurisdiction than the most imperial Governments of our time. The fellowship of man has a new meaning. It grows to be more important to every nation what are the facts and the ideals of its neighbors. The problems that are confronting us can not be solved by one nation alone if they have international footing. Nothing is plainer, for instance, than that no such combination as this of the steel-rail makers could stand for a moment if brought into the courts of Great Britain. But if the combination should be declared contrary to public policy in Great Britain and should be compelled to disband, there would be no real victory of the law, for the English members of the combination would simply cease to produce rails and would draw a handsome monthly pension from the funds of the association, the members of which in other countries would go on charging combination prices. The latter would thus supply the British market as well as their own, and the suspended British members of the combination would make about as much money as if they had continued at work.—Chicago Tribune.

Miscellaneous.

DIED.

JENKINS.—At Elkhorn, Oneida county, Idaho, July 10th, 1884, Sr. Elizabeth Ann Jenkins. She was the daughter of Bro. John and Sr. Elizabeth Lewis; born April 14th, 1853, at Llanelly, Carmarthenshire, South Wales; immigrated to Salt Lake City with her parents, in 1856; was baptized March 31st, 1867, at Malad City, Idaho, by Elder J. W. Gillen. Her remains were removed to Malad City, where the funeral services were conducted. A large concourse of relatives, Saints and friends attended the services, both at the house and grave. Elders John Vanderwood and David Williams officiated, with Bro. H. J. Evans in general charge. The church has suffered loss in the sudden death of this most worthy and exemplary sister, and the community in which she lived and served, will miss her greatly. Her parents and husband and kindred, would be quite inconsolable, except for the enduring hope and faithful promises of the gospel. These afford them good comfort, assuaging their grief, and filling their hearts with joy unspeakable in the thought that their loved one has entered upon the joys of the Paradise of God. Two pretty children—a girl and boy—are by this sad affliction bereft of a tender, loving mother's care.

"Beyond this vale of tears,
There is a life above;
Unmeasured by the flight of years,
And all that life is love."

CLEVELAND.—At Annex, Augusta county, Virginia, July 31st, 1884, at five minutes past seven o'clock a. m., Sr. Sarah Eliza Cleveland, aged 24 years, 1 month, and 21 days. Deceased had been a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints for about ten years past, in good standing and full fellowship. "Is not dead but sleepeth." Has only passed behind the veil to await the morning of the glorious first resurrection, in which she will, ere long, have part. The foregoing written by myself was read at the commencement of burial services, conducted by Reverends John Taylor, Baptist; Samuel Deiver, German Baptist; and Jacob R. Hildebrand, Menonite, at the mutual request of the parents and one brother of the deceased, none other of the living family being present, and no Elder of her church except her father being in this region. Subject or text spoken from, and hymns sung, selected by the family as follows: Subject, "She is not dead but sleepeth." Hymn, first, "Go to the grave, in all thy glorious prime." Hymn second, "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep." Hymn third, "Sister, thou wast mild and lovely." Her sickness lasted only a few hours over nine days, and though suffering much at times, she was very generally cheerful and pleasant during the whole time, never murmuring or complaining. Weakened too fast to talk much. On Tuesday evening before her death, requested prayer and anointing with consecrated oil, which was complied with. A few minutes before breathing her last, a bright, soft smile passed over her countenance, after which she crossed the Jordan of death without a struggle. Most truly she was a dutiful child, a loving sister, a devoted friend, having a kind word for all, and ill will toward none. O how we miss her, yet we feel not to mourn as those who have no hope, for we most confidently believe that our loss is her eternal gain. Therefore we humbly kiss the chastening rod, and say, Thy will be done, O Lord. Her sickness was typhoid fever.

O. E. CLEVELAND.

KEETON.—At Jeffersonville, Illinois, June 24th, 1884, Sr. Sarah, wife of Calvin Keeton. Was born October 1st, 1823, aged 61 years, 7 months, 7 days. She united with the Church of Christ in March, 1876. Funeral services by T. P. Green, assisted by H. Walker.

WILLIAMS.—At Cherry Creek, near Malad, Idaho, February 17th, 1884, Bro. Jenkin Williams. Born at Tydvil, Wales, April 20th, 1829. His death was caused by the accidental falling of a shed roof, which crushed out his life almost instantly. He was well respected by those who knew him. A wife and nine children were thus suddenly bereft of a kind and loving husband and father. His daughter Rachel Bradbury died of convulsions last October, the 18th.

ANDERSON.—At Shenandoah, Iowa, June 30th, 1884, of consumption, Sr. Amy L. Anderson, in the 40th year of her age. Joined the Church at this place in 1879. Funeral service by Elder S. S. Wilcox.

MEVIT.—At Shenandoah, Iowa, July 4th, 1884, of dropsy, Sr. Mary F. Mevit, a member of the Little River Branch, Decatur County, Iowa, in the 53d year of her age, having united with the church in 1860. Died in hope of eternal life. Funeral service by Elder S. S. Wilcox.

PREREQUISITES OF SUCCESS.

INTEGRITY of character and truth in the inner man are the prerequisites of success in any calling, and especially so in that of the merchant. These are attributes which never fail to command respect and win admiration. No one fails to appreciate them, and if they "do not pay," in the vulgar sense of the phrase, they bring an amount of satisfaction and peace to the owner that all the wealth of Cæsus could not yield.

There is no better stock in trade than these principles; no capital goes so far, or pays so well, or is so exempt from bankruptcy and loss. When known, they give credit and confidence, and in the hardest of times will honor your paper in bank. They give you an unlimited capital to do business upon, and everybody will endorse your paper, and the general faith of mankind will be your guaranty that you will not fail. Let every young man upon commencing business look well to these indispensable elements of success, and defend them as he would the apple of his eye. If inattentive and reckless here, he will imperil everything. Bankruptcy in character is seldom repaired in an ordinary lifetime. A man may suffer in reputation and recover; not so the man who suffers in character. Be just and truthful. Let these be the ruling and predominating principles of your life and the reward will be certain, either in the happiness they bring to your own bosom, or the success which will attend upon all your business operations in life, or both.

PROTECTION AGAINST RUSTING.

For farm implements of all kinds, having metal surfaces exposed, for knives and forks, and other household apparatus, indeed for all metals likely to be injured by oxidation or "rusting." Take any quantity of good lard, and to every half pound or so, add of common resin an amount about equal to half the size of an egg or less—a little more or less is of no consequence. Melt them slowly together, stirring as they cool. Apply this with a cloth or otherwise, just enough to give a thin coating to the metal surface to be protected. It can be wiped off nearly clean from surfaces where it will be undesirable, as in the case of knives and forks, etc. The resin prevents rancidity, and the mixture excludes the ready access of air and moisture. A fresh application may be needed when the coating is washed off by the friction of beating storms or otherwise. The single receipt will be worth many dollars to any one in the long run.

THE HUMAN PULSE.

The human pulse has in all ages been consulted as an index of health or disease. It is a kind of dial within us that gives us both the measure of time and of health. The pulse of a person in health beats about seventy strokes in a minute, and the ordinary term of life is about seventy years. In this seventy years, the pulse of a temperate person beats two billion, five hundred and seventy-four million, four hundred and forty thousand times. If no actual disorganization should happen, a drunken person might live until his pulse beats this number of times; but by the constant stimulus of ardent spirits, or by pulse-quickening food, the pulse becomes greatly accelerated, and the two billion, five hundred and forty thousand pulsations, are performed in a little more than half the ordinary term of human life, and life goes out in forty or forty-five years instead of seventy. This application of numbers is given to show that the acceleration of those forces diminishes the term of human life.

APOLOGIES.

Do NOT engage in the objectionable practice in the pulpit of making apologies. If you have nothing worth saying, the people will find it out soon enough without your telling them; if you have a really valuable thought, they will consider your apology a misstatement, or an act of unpardonable vanity. In either case it is better to speak out simply and plainly what you have to say. You need have no fears that the people will not know the value of your utterances. They know better than you know yourself, and after all your attempts to hide your defects under shallow apologies, will estimate your services for just about what you are worth.

To each of us there is a time set, and if by the end of that time our task is not fulfilled, it can never be fulfilled.

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, IOWA, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

Geo. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents. (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. We also furnish a Picture Outfit, consisting of a fine Water Color Portrait, (without frame), also small picture from which it was taken, and envelopes and cards, all by mail prepaid for only 98 cents.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE have received the first copies of The Vindicator of Truth, the periodical started by the Saints in England. The June number is an eight page, size of the Herald when first published, and contains the Prospectus, which we give elsewhere. We welcome the Vindicator of Truth most cordially, and wish it the completest success. Those of the Saints wishing to send communications, correspondence, or remittances for subscriptions, or in aid of the enterprise, will address No 16 Eleventh Road, Edgbaston, Birmingham, England.

Bro. George A. Blakeslee and his son Edwin, arrived at Lamoni, August 19th, to confer with Bro. Thomas W. Smith, in reference to the mission assigned to him, and arrange the necessary details of that affair. The Bishop has had a slight attack of the hay fever, but is partially free at present writing; looks reasonably well, and is actively engaged in his calling.

There was a partial insurance on the barn of Bro. Blakeslee, and its contents. It has not been adjusted as yet. The ground on which the barn and other buildings were was swept completely bare by the fire.

Sr. Sarah Hedrick writes from Hanley, Tulare county, California; that Brn. Lawn and Kingsbury had been with them for awhile, but the school-house was closed against them. Sr. Hedrick offers a room in her house for an elder to speak in if any will come. Her husband is not in the Church, but is kindly disposed.

Sr. Matilda Billinsky, of Webberville, Michigan, writes that the work stands well in that region. Labor would be acceptable there as well as elsewhere.

Bro. C. W. Prettyman, of Pleasanton, Iowa, handed us the other day, a lot of clippings from the Enterprise, a paper published somewhere in Southern Indiana, in which Bro. Joshua B. Prettyman, his brother, has been airing the Perfection, or Holiness theory. From what appears, he fairly showed the issue to be against the so-called Holiness People.

Bro. Thomas Wellington, living four miles east of Lamoni, is filling appointments every Sunday, within a radius of six miles from his home. He was at Lamoni, August 14th, and reported good hearings.

Bro. S. V. Bailey is still carrying appointments at Smith School House, ten miles south-west of Lamoni; and at New Buda, six miles south-east, alternate Sundays. He is assisted by Brn. Smith, Bell, Gurley, Cochran and others. Bro. Bailey is the managing elder of these two appointments, and pushes them persistently.

Bro. T. W. Smith remained at Lamoni during the week ending August 9th, and spoke to houses full of saints and friends, both at the Old Chapel in the morning, and the new in the evening. He is waiting the arrival of Bro. George Blakeslee, from Galien. Bro. T. W. expresses himself well pleased with the attendance and spirit manifested at the meetings.

We met Bro. Levi Atkinson in Lamoni on the 13th inst. He is just from the mines at Virginia City, Nevada, and looks hearty.

Bro. Henry Smith and wife returned to their home in Lamoni, August 13th. They have spent the summer in Oregon and California, for the purpose of recruiting Bro. Henry's health. He looks better than when he left home, and it is to be hoped has been permanently benefitted.

Bro. E. Banta and family returned from a six weeks' visit to Central New York, on the 13th. Bro. Banta reports crops light and weather very cold for August in the east; crops west of Galesburg, Illinois, better than east of that point, except grass, which is about alike.

Bro. Blair reports that the branch at Salt Lake has had six or more substantial additions, and more are to be received soon. Among these it is thought that an able Danish Elder has been provided for labor in Utah for a time. If so, brother Peter Anderson of Council Bluffs, who will likely go this fall with Bro. R. J. Anthony, will have a countryman as a co-laborer, and much good may be looked for.

An invoice of the Braden-Kelley Debate was received at the Herald Office, August 18th, and will be sent out to those who have ordered them. Our side of the debate is most excellent.

Bro. I. N. Roberts writes from Blue Rapids, Kansas, August 14th, that the work was increasing there; he had baptized eight since conference.

Bro. G. T. Chute, of Garland, Alabama, is to engage in a discussion with a Disciple, or Campbellite preacher, at Midway, Monroe county, Alabama, September 8th.

Bro. C. StClair baptized one at Eldorado Springs, Missouri, August 3d. The branch (Clintonville) held an excellent meeting at Bro. A. Lloyd's, and much good seemed to be enjoyed.

EDITOR C. W. Penrose closes an editorial in the Deseret News of August 15th, in the following strain:

"We believe that Josephites as well as all other sects should enjoy perfect immunity from persecution, and be permitted to go and come as they please, and preach what they please, where, when and to whom they please, provided they do not break the law, and he would not like to see any community in Utah disgrace itself by mobbing even such a human polecat as is the creature we are speaking of. But while according this wretch perfect personal liberty and safety we take this occasion to Brand him as one of the most disreputable men that ever had an existence upon this iniquity-burdened planet."

The editor takes this method to call attention to the travels and preaching of Bro. E. C. Brand; and it is almost certain that the reason of the notice is that some of the members are listening to Bro. Brand. Whether any violence will be offered Bro. Brand by ill advised men, it is hard to say; we hope none will be. It would be strangely inconsistent for Mr. Penrose to denounce the barbarism of the outrage in Tennessee, and create by inuendo in the same issue of his paper a persecution on a man in their own domain.

HERE is a splendid bit of assumption taken from a reply made by the Utah Journal, published at Logan, Utah, to an editorial of the Salt Lake Tribune:

"We still insist that Asiatic polygamy, as originally introduced, was the best family system ever known among mankind."

Asiatic polygamy, if it was anything, was a system of wives and concubines unlimited except by the caprice of the husband.

FIVE elders of the Utah Mormon Church who had been preaching in Tennessee, were lately assaulted while holding a meeting in the house of a man named Condor, and shot and killed. A dispatch from Chattanooga, to Elder John Morgan, had been sent to Salt Lake, announcing that Elders John H. Gibbs, and W. S. Berry, and two sons of Mr. Condor were killed. The wife of Mr. Condor was wounded and it was thought would die.

This outrage was committed in Lewis county, and is most unjustifiable. We are not friendly to Utah Mormonism, so far as the peculiar tenets of polygamy and its connections are concerned; but a resort to mob violence to overcome those who teach Mormonism, is most outrageous. If men violate law, or interfere with the rights of their fellows, an appeal to the law is and always should be available and resorted to. We can but deprecate any acts of this sort, for such methods are always disreputable and fall short of their intended effect. We hope that the authorities of the State will take such active measures as will secure the prompt arrest and punishment of the men who committed the outrage.

BRO. J. C. CLAPP gets an article in the Palouse Gazette, published at Colfax, Washington Territory, corrective of the idea that the Committee sent to Richmond, Missouri, were from Utah. He says:

They are prominent members of the Reorganized or Josephite Church, and I believe there are no four men in America that have done more for the suppression of polygamy and other false doctrines of Utah than they have. I am personally acquainted with all of them, and know them to be refined gentlemen, loyal to the government and to the Christiah religion. Very respectfully.

AUGUST 4th we were informed that Bro. Glaud Rodger, of the Seventy, and laboring in Ruby Valley, Nevada, was lying dead at Elko, Nevada; telegram by Bro. Wm. R. Stauts. By letter from Bro. E. Penrod, dated at Elko, August 6th, we learn that Bro. Rodger had lain sick, of mountain fever, at Fairplay, Ruby Valley, his last address, for two weeks, when he was carried by Bro. Hays to Elko, where he lay another week; word was sent Bro. Penrod, and himself and wife started home to Elko, at once; but were too late to find Bro. Rodger alive. Bro. Penrod at once took charge of the funeral arrangements, a casket and red wood enclosure were procured, notice given, and the remains buried from Bro. Penrod's house at two o'clock August 5th. Bro. Penrod writes thus:

"Alas, we were too late to see him alive. His home at Elko was at our house. My daughter Sarah looked after him as if he was her father. Bro. and Sr. Stauts were in constant attendance; all was done that could be, but he could not recover. He suffered a great deal from a pain in his right side; but never complained. He was in his right mind and cheerful to the last moment. In the last hour of his life he would say, "How bright the prospects are!"

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

In a post script, Bro. M. T. Short writes:

Our two days' meeting at the Prairie was well attended and did good, I believe. Bro. J. A. Robinson spoke at Joy the evening of the 10th and 11th instant. Bro. H. C. Bronson is holding forth here, but will operate in Joy to-morrow eve. We are going to try to get an opening and secure a hearing in Aledo, Mercer county, Illinois.

Bro. T. R. Allen of Cleveland, Lucas county, Iowa, writes August 11th, 1884.

The branch of the church at Lucas is increasing slowly. Another, the head of a family, was baptized on the 5th inst., by Bro. John T. Phillips. Uncle Wm. B. Smith arrived here about the 29th of last month, and preached four discourses in the Saints' Hall, at Lucas; his earnest and powerful statements concerning the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the establishing of the latter day dispensation, could not fail to remove prejudice, if any existed, from those that heard him. His way of setting forth the doctrine of Christ is so pointed that the lovers of truth can not fail to be convincably benefited. I was glad to see the Saints in this branch pay such regards to him; their treatment exceeded my expectation.

THE following are the places named in the August number of the Vindicator of Truth, where inquiry concerning the doctrines and faith of the Latter Day Saints may be made:

Correspondence.

OENAVILLE, Bell Co., Texas,
August 14th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The debate on the question, "The Book of Mormon is what it claims to be, and contains a revelation from God," began August 5th, and continued five days. The attendance was large, and a good feeling generally prevailed. Mr. Wilmeth, Bro. H. C. Smith's opponent, tried to be fair; and in fact exhibited as much fairness, if not a little more, than the majority of our opponents. Bro. Smith presented his affirmative arguments in a clear, consecutive and forcible manner. Especially were the internal evidences of the Book of Mormon, as supported from archaeological evidences, and scientific research, well presented. The arguments were so well and forcibly made upon this point, as to cause the discomfiture of Mr. Wilmeth to be painfully felt by his friends. His manner disclosed the fact that he was wholly unprepared for this line of argument, and his ignorance of scientific research in this direction was apparent to the casual observer. His principal answer consisted in pointing out something the Book of Mormon did not mention. For instance, "If the Book of Mormon had said there were McCormick reapers on this continent, and we had found some part of a reaper with McCormick's name on it, Bro. Smith would have made a point." Bro. Smith read from the Book of Mormon the statement that horses were on this continent among the ancient Americans, when it was wholly at variance with the facts then known to history, and proved the statement to be true, from recent discoveries, as mentioned by Baldwin, Short and others. To this Mr. Wilmeth replied: "You see the Book of Mormon is never specific; if it had only said something about asses being on this continent, Bro. Smith would have made a good point in favor of the Book of Mormon. But the Book of Mormon does not commit itself on such points." In his next speech Bro. Smith read the whole passage including the rather objectionable noun, which he had omitted in his first reading, through extreme modesty—for Bro. Heman is a very modest young man—and claimed the point, for asses are especially mentioned. This is about the style of argument employed all the way through on these points, by Mr. Wilmeth. Utterly failing to meet these arguments in a legitimate way, he adopted finally, the Clark Braden style, and attacked the character of Joseph Smith, introducing the usual quantity of slang and slander, quoting, or rather reading largely from proof-sheets of the Braden-Kelley debate, sent him for the occasion. I hardly know what he would have done without them, as they formed the basis of the larger portion of his argument. The Spaulding Story was finally reached and utilized as far as practicable. But here Mr. Wilmeth's witnesses got him into serious trouble. He first shows the existence of the Spaulding manuscript, asserting that the "Manuscript Found," was the real origin of the Book of Mormon. He now attempts to show that Sidney Rigdon stole this Spaulding Romance from the office of Patterson and Lambdin, in Pittsburg, some time in 1822 or 1823. Stick a pin here. He then introduced another witness, who says Joseph Smith stole the "Manuscript Found" out of an "old trunk" at Mr. Sabine's in New York, about the same time that Sidney Rigdon should have taken it from Mr. Lambdin's office in Pittsburg. Then to cap the climax, he introduces another venerable witness, James Jeffries, who says Joseph Smith got the "Manuscript Found" from Mr. Patterson's printing office in Ohio. How the "Manuscript Found" could have been stolen by Sidney Rigdon from an office in Pittsburg, and by Joseph Smith from the "old trunk" at Mr. Sabine's, in New York, while at the same time it was in a printing office in Ohio, remains a question to be solved by the sages and savants of popular theology. Upon this point Bro. Smith was perfectly at home. He proved by the testimony of Mr. Wilmeth's own witnesses, that Mrs. Matilda (Spaulding) Davison had the manuscript in question in her possession, and carefully preserved it from the time of their removal from Pittsburg in 1814, till she delivered it to Mr. P. Hurlbut in 1834. The "Manuscript Found" was traced by these witnesses into the hands of E. D. Howe, of Painsville, Ohio, and from his hands into the fire; as Mr. Howe says he "suspects" it was burned. It was then shown that Sidney Rigdon was living on his father's farm, an unconverted boy, at the time the manuscript was said to be at Mr. Patterson's, and could not, in the nature of things, have had an opportunity to purloin it had he been disposed to do so. So far as the Spaulding story is concerned, it was to Mr. Wilmeth and his friends a regular theological Bull Run, an utter rout, a total defeat. Towards the close, Bro. Smith introduced the Biblical evidences to form the climax. Instead of answering these arguments, Mr. Wilmeth resorted to the Braden dodge, namely: tried to fasten the scandal of polygamy upon Joseph the Martyr. This was done to prevent the introduction of Biblical evidences; but it failed. Bro. Heman answered this slang as briefly as possible, declaring it irrelevant, at the same time assuring Mr. Wilmeth he would discuss that question upon its merits, in a separate proposition as soon as the debate in hand was over. This was not agreed upon till after the debate had closed.

A question arose as to who should occupy the time in preaching after the debate, our opponent wanting to monopolize the whole time. We demurred to this proceeding, and proposed to divide the time. Those owning the land and arbor where the debate was held, were not willing that either party should occupy the arbor to the exclusion of the other. Mr. Wilmeth and his friends would not consent to this, and removed their meeting to the school-house near by, declaring they wanted all the time to themselves. They occupied Saturday night, and held three meetings on Sunday. At the earnest solicitation of friends both in and out of the church, we made an appointment for preaching at the arbor Sunday night. We had an excellent service, and everybody seemed well pleased. Both meetings were dismissed about the same time. We had not been seated at our temporary home more than twenty minutes, when some one cried, "The arbor is on fire;" and sure enough in less than five minutes the whole thing was wrapt in flame. In a few minutes twenty-five or thirty men were on the ground and succeeded in saving the most of the lumber composing the seats, kindly furnished by Bro. E. D. Thompson, for the purpose free of charge. This caused a great excitement. It is a matter of regret to all respectable people living in the vicinity, who denounce the whole thing as a mean, cowardly piece of work. Next morning Bro. H. L. and E. D. Thompson promptly offered a reward of one hundred dollars for the arrest and punishment of the desperadoes. The sheriff of Bell county was telephoned, who replied that his deputy would take it in hand, and so the matter still rests. You may draw your own conclusions as to what the general impression will be.

The proposition, "Joseph Smith, Jr., taught and practiced polygamy," was discussed on the 12th inst., before a rather small audience, many who had attended the former debate having gone home. The usual amount of mud was employed by our opponents; and the honorable and for this particular occasion the reverend, Brigham Young, was introduced as a witness to convict Joseph Smith of the crime of bigamy. Ann Eliza and others, including Braden-hand testimony of Wm. Clayton, and N. K. Whitney, were introduced. These witnesses were sharply criticized by Bro. Smith, showing that men who would subscribe to the so-called revelation of 1843, which allows the commission of any crime, save the shedding of innocent blood, and they to define what innocent blood is, are wholly incompetent to give evidence in any case to which they are made parties. The evidence is ex-parte, therefore incompetent, and should be rejected. The testimony of these witnesses was impeached by the witnesses themselves, as well as by the direct testimony of Emma Smith, Wm. B. Smith, Joseph and Hyrum who state that no such doctrine was ever taught or practiced by the church, and that no such revelation was ever received by Joseph Smith, or burnt by his wife Emma.

Bro. Smith's defense was able and manly, but he handled both the men and the subject without gloves. The truth was not manacled by the use of soft phrases, I assure you. The report came out here from Temple, that the opposition was defeated; and in order to recover the ground seemingly lost in the discussion of the preceding question, they asked for a vote to be taken on both questions. To this of course we objected; and without asking our consent to the arrangement, having had it all cut and dried previously, they proceeded to call the vote on the last proposition, after an electioneering speech from the moderator on the other side. The question was not parliamentarily put by the moderator, in fact the vote was a one-sided affair, we having nothing to say, only that church members should be excluded from voting. The churches represented in the debate were excluded, leaving Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians to vote. The vote stood, "for Mr. Wilmeth 62," "for Mr. Smith 4." Several are known to have voted against their better judgment. One man was asked why he did it. "Well," said he, "Mr. Wilmeth never made a point, but I have been in Idaho, and I know the Mormons there practice it, and I did it because I did not want to vote for the Mormons." And most "outsiders" refused to vote, which causes the vote to stand as above. So far as the debate is concerned, we are perfectly satisfied. The truth is vindicated, and the honest in heart may understand.

Prospects for the future of the work are brightening. We feel encouraged to labor for the welfare of Zion. Pray for us, and the prosperity of the work. Your co-laborer in bonds,

D. H. BAYS.

FULTON, Kentucky,
August 14th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—After writing you from Bell Air, I continued preaching until the 10th inst. On the 11th I had the pleasure of baptizing three more into the fold of Christ, making at present five members at Bell Air. I hope some one of the Elders will make them a visit. I am confident a good work can be done there; but as it was not in my field, did not feel at liberty to tarry with them longer. As to the prospects or condition of the work in this part, I can not speak at present, as I only arrived here to-day. I desire the prayers of the Saints, that I may have wisdom to perform the mission assigned me to the salvation of souls, and the glory of God. I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

GEO. MONTAGUE.

BURLINGTON, IOWA,
August 12th, 1884.

President Smith:—During the month that I labored at Lucas and Cleveland, I was deeply impressed with the kindness and benevolence which seem so almost universal with the Saints of those places. While I was there a brother died after a long illness, and the branch at once took upon them the thirty-five dollar debt for funeral expenses. Also for a sister crippled with rheumatism about twenty dollars was raised. Other instances might be mentioned, besides the fact that an Elder going there is always assisted more or less. I came here four weeks ago, immediately after Bro. Lambert left, and am pleased to state that the results have been to quite a degree satisfactory, for there has been a good increase in the attendance on preaching, both by the Saints and by those not of the Church; and, still better, the prayer meetings have been well attended and well sustained, nearly all who have been present each time having taken an active and lively part, and the Spirit blessing all with its peaceful influence. The trouble of so long standing is likely to be settled at the business meeting next week (at which I expect to be present), and I hope that it will thereafter be that each and all will, as far as possible, keep from saying thoughtless and unkind things, so that those who may like to repeat such, or to stir up strife, may have little chance to do so, and also so that the blessing of the Master may be with them individually and as a branch.

Personally I have never enjoyed myself with the Saints here more than I have this time, the spirit manifest in the meetings and at their homes having been alike excellent, as a rule. Their number is few, but they have aided me as they felt able. There is great need of an Elder being here in this city as a minister, devoting his time to the work, both for the good of the Saints and so that those who wish to investigate may know what to depend upon from Sabbath to Sabbath. This lack has been a great hindrance to the cause, and it seems that it would be good if the Church could assist in keeping a minister here. The brethren here are taking it in hand so far as they can, Brn. Owen, Sellon, and others, with hope of success, and wish to get some wise and fairly able speaker to continue here. Bro. Schade, as presiding Deacon, has done well and labored faithfully to keep up the work. Age and hard labor are telling severely upon Bro. Morton; and Bro. Dunham has failed a good deal lately. While at West Burlington one day Bro. Johnson kindly showed me through the C. B. & Q. Shops. The yards take in about thirty acres, and the nine large buildings cover an area of five acres. Many hundred men are employed in building and repairing cars and engines. The machine called "the carrier" lifts the largest locomotives with as much apparent ease as a man might lift a child, and carries them from one track to another, itself running on a track above that is supported by iron pillars and girders. This, and the polished and powerful engines, and the long shafts that convey underground the power into other buildings, causes thought upon the wonderful might of steam in our day and of the machinery it runs. Bro. Johnson has a superintendency in the painting department. Brn. Gaither, Olesen and Craig are also painters, and Brn. Alexander and Robert McFarland are boiler makers. Bro. Morton labors there also.

In company with Bro. Owen and daughter-in-law I visited Montrose and Nauvoo again, viewing the old buildings, what are left, and walking over the ground on which the Temple once stood. It is surrounded by buildings but is itself vacant, except being used as a yard and having a few trees upon it. A well near the rear, from which we drank, is said to be the one from which water was drawn in the basement of the Temple. No one seems to have the power to build up Nauvoo, all efforts to do so having been entire failures, in fact the more tried the faster it has gone down. We were in the Nauvoo House but did not find Major Bidamon at home. While looking about "The Old Home" and "The Mansion" we met a Methodist Minister who was in attendance at the camp-meeting at Montrose, he said. He also bore the name of "Smith," and made inquiry about the history of the buildings.

While answering him Bro. Revel came up and we went home with him and there had dinner. Bro. and Sr. Revel still keep young in spirit and heart, and we enjoyed the visit. Then back to Montrose and spent the remaining time with Bro. W. B. Patten and family, Sr. Eliza and Jennie Newberry, and Sr. Ruth Turner and husband, who is as kind and pleasant to all as though he was in the Church. Appointments are out for me at Zero for Thursday evening and twice on Sunday the seventeenth, so Bro. L. W. Powell writes, and that I will be expected to address the Sunday School Celebration. I may also stay there another week to preach more. The news of the death of Bro. Glaud Rodger is sad news to me. It is a loss to the Church and an irreparable loss to his family. But he was one of the noblest and best men that I ever knew, whose rest and reward will be glorious.

Yours in the faith,

HENRY A. STEBBINS.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri,

Bro. Joseph:—I have returned home. I think that I wrote you that I baptized one man, and as I believe a very good man. Causes that I had no way of counteracting prevented me from remaining longer at Eldorado Springs. I preached four times while there, once in the Campbellite Church at the Springs, with good liberty and a large audience, which was very attentive and orderly. I noticed one very strange feature about the congregation. I never witnessed so great a number of aged listeners as was present that night. Out of a congregation of one hundred and fifty, about seventy-five were men over fifty years old. They seemed to be highly edified and pleased. I spoke with good liberty upon the possibility of present revelation and the utter impossibility of ignoring the same; and that the gifts must follow them that believe in them, and requested a confutation of the doctrine by intelligent, critical investigators, and no one chose to make the attempt, although I gave them ample time to council together, and arrange any line of defense that would best serve their purposes, but for truth's sake. I will try and hold up the ensign to all whom I come in contact with.

Yours in the faith,

CLARENCE STCLAIR.

Bro. Joseph:—I parted company reluctantly with Bro. John H. Lake, as I found him a very agreeable companion, and deeply in earnest with the Master's cause; and as wise in counsel, and in administering ordinances, as he is in zeal to see them administered. In my last I think I mentioned that Bro. Lake had just baptized seven; and now I report that the following Sunday I baptized five more, and some seven or eight others have signified directly and indirectly that they will be baptized soon. We parted in order to extend the work, he going north and I east, to where a fragment of the Picton Branch is located. This is an old field of labor in the early days of the church. Your father was the first to open the work which resulted in organizing a good branch near here. His labors were followed up by others of the then Elders. Here Brigham Young and his brother, Joseph Young, the Mormon apostates, labored; and here some of B.

Young's relatives yet live. The old residents of this town say they heard your father, Joseph Smith, and Hyrum and others; but they say there was not a word about polygamy in those days. I can not give in this letter all the details, nor can I say as yet what the present outlook is, as I only arrived last night at eleven p. m. Bro. Lake will return in a few days to our recent field of labor, where I expect he will baptize several more. May God bless him. Remember us in prayer, that we may ever be wise in act and word. I often make mention of you in prayer, and I rejoice in the work. Although it has cost me many earthly sacrifices, yet I am willing to go on as I see "Zion's light again is dawning."

I remain your brother in faith,

J. A. MCINTOSH.

CAMERON, Missouri,

August 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—When I last wrote you, I was at Elkhart, Texas, in the mission assigned me by the last General Conference. Having rested for some time, I was in hopes that my throat and lungs that have bothered me so for about one year, had now gotten sufficiently strong to stand the labor to be performed; but I soon found that labor brought back soreness and pain again. I labored as I could stand it at Elkhart and vicinity for some two weeks, and then went east some fifty miles into Houston county, where I preached four times, which was all that I could stand at that time. I returned to Elkhart, where I spent some two weeks more, preaching five times, which entirely exhausted me. So I had to rest. After taking a few days' rest, I went west into Burleson county, and at Hearne met the Central Texas Branch, where I preached four times again, which entirely wore out my vocal organs. So I had to stop again. Here I baptized two men, heads of families. In company with Bro. Wm. Sherrill, I went to his place in Burleson county, where I rested about one week, and after this moved on north to Temple, Bell county. Here I had the pleasure of meeting Brn. Bays and H. C. Smith. From here we went out to Oenanville, and after a few days' resting, tried to preach to the Saints and friends, where I had preached four years ago and organized the Elmwood Branch. Here I met a number of kind and familiar faces. It was intended that I should speak at 11 a. m., and Bro. Bays at four; but Bro. Bays was taken sick, so was not able to go; and as I had had two weeks' rest, I thought that I could preach. At 11 a. m., I tried to tell the old story; but before I was done preaching I was suffering again; but at the close it was voted by the congregation that I must preach again at three; and as some had come some distance and at some expense, I thought to rest and try it again. I tried to rest and to eat, but did but little of either; but at three I went to the place of preaching. But by the time I got there, found that I could not stand to speak, so had to dismiss the congregation, and go home and try to rest. In the evening I went to where Bro. Bays was, and found that he had been very sick during the day. I stayed with him until Tuesday evening, in bed most of the time suffering from pain in head and throat. Tuesday evening I grew worse, and so restless that I could not be satisfied anywhere it seemed. I got up, stepped to the door just at dark and turned around, putting my head against the house, and that was the last that I knew; but when I came to found myself lying on the ground, and the Saints standing over me rubbing me with camphor. As soon as I could be moved, they took me into the house. O I was so sick then. This seemed to be the turning point, and I was entirely broken down. I recruited enough in company with Bro. Bays, who was still sick, to be moved to Temple, where we could procure ice; for it was so extremely hot and dry. After arriving here, I grew worse, and began to chill, and found that my throat and head were so badly affected, that I must give up trying to preach for the present. So I started for home, procuring my ticket for Kansas City. But before reaching there, found that I must stop; so arriving at Independence depot, I sent for Bro. Brackenbury, who conveyed me to his place, where I rested until the next morning; when feeling some stronger, I determined to go and did so, and arrived at home that night at dusk. I am improving now, and able to be up part of the time; but am able to talk but very little, as my throat is so very sore. It seems almost impossible some times to eat at all. My vocal organs are completely broken down for the present. Five minutes of the most careful talk exhausts me, so I have to rest. I hope the Saints will all remember me in their prayers, that I may soon be able to talk as before.

I found Brn. H. C. Smith and D. H. Bays, kind and sympathizing, and alive in the work. I regretted to leave them. The Saints throughout the mission treated me with the greatest kindness, and may God bless them all is the prayer of your weak brother. Hoping for Zion's triumph,

Yours, W. T. BOZARTH.

LINN, Washington Co., Kansas,

June 30th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—After holding meetings for eight nights at Glen Elder, and Washington school-house about five miles north, we by the kindness of Bro. Warren was conveyed in wagon to "Little Oak" school-house, about twelve miles northwest in Jewell county. Beautiful country greeted the eye the entire trip. Magnificent prairies, beautiful streams, but no timber, save what man's hand has planted. Arrived at destination, and was made welcome by a Mr. Wm. Mansel, who is not a member, but favorable. I had the privilege of speaking twice here to small audiences. I endeavored to show what it cost to purchase redemption, even the suffering and death of Jesus of Nazareth. Also gave the method by which the true church could be designated from all others. If a horse be lost, the searcher must be acquainted with the description of the animal to find the proper one. So in searching for the church of Christ, a definite description must first be obtained, giving all the peculiarities distinguishing it from all others. While here I visited a high bluff or mound, from which I could see the "Blue Hill" twenty-five miles away, but looked much nearer. Took train at Cawker City for Glen Elder, Bro. Roberts remaining to continue the meetings at Little Oak. Saturday night had a good house, also on Sunday night. Had fair liberty on both occasions. According to previous arrangement, I went to a school-house five miles north. Held meeting on Monday night, the topic being the divine calling of Joseph Smith. Held meeting again in Glen Elder, on Wednesday night. Prior to taking train for Linn on Thursday, a young man, T. W. Bruner by name, who had traveled several miles for the purpose of attending the meeting, expressed himself well pleased with the doctrine, it being the first he had ever heard. He lives at Saltville, Mitchell county. While at Glen Elder I was kindly cared for by a Mr. P. Stutz, who was an old acquaintance of Wm. Hinkle, whom he had heard preach many times. Before leaving this county, I should state for his encouragement in the work, that I have heard many words of commendation for Bro. A. H. Parsons, who has labored here in the past. I am glad of this. Though Bro. Parsons is young, yet he is perfectly reliable as a representative of the church. Arriving at Linn, found Bro. E. Sandy, who took me to his house four miles from town. Began meetings on following evening, which continued to the date of this, and longer, with good success.

SAVANNAH, Wayne Co., New York,
August 16th, 1884.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I left Greenwood, Steuben Co., Thursday, the 14th, and arrived here yesterday. Am at the house of Brother Jesse Seelye. He is almost eighty years old. Sr. Seelye is about sixty-nine. A number were baptized here a few years ago, by Brn. Brown and Yerrington. But it seems at the present, that they are mostly backward in the faith, and some of them have joined in with the Adventists again, having formerly been of that order. The outlook at Greenwood and vicinity is good—that is as far as relates to openings and opportunities for the preaching of the word. They would like to see Bro. Wm. Kelley, or some of the other Elders, and have them show light to the people there. There is a Bro. Whitehead about fifty miles north east of here, who has written to me and desires me to visit him, which I think of doing shortly.

Yours in faith,

C. G. LANPHEAR.

No. 911, Broadway,
OAKLAND, Cal.,

August 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—As we Oaklanders as well as the San Francisco Branch, had a day of rejoicing yesterday, I will inform you of the cause. Three gentlemen who have investigated our work, concluded to obey. They are the converts of San Francisco Branch. By request I baptized them. We confirmed them at our afternoon sacrament meeting. One was Dr. J. Wasson, who is not only a graduate of the old allopathic school, but also of the homeopathic, as well as the school of dentistry. Bro. Wasson is a fine scholar; and has lived two years in Rome. He has also visited Jerusalem, Damascus and other oriental countries. He is a native of Kentucky; of the Presbyterian Church; and by the way, having always from his youth endeavored to be a follower of the meek and lowly Savior, has been licensed to preach among the Presbyterians, which he has done as I understand acceptably.

One of the others is the son of Bro. Henry Burgess, of San Jose, grandson of Bro. Monkum of San Francisco. The other is a Bro. Pew, of San Francisco. He is a sterling man, who has for years sought diligently to know the right way and walk in it. They are all members of the San Francisco Branch. The Lord was with us to bless us all in our meeting, and we had a good time. Last evening I concluded my lectures on the "Rise and Progress of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." We had a good attendance and attention at Lincoln, or Saunder's Hall, San Francisco.

Bro. Henry C. Smith of Lamoni, preached here to our branch last evening very acceptably. He starts to-morrow for home. He is gaining in health, and I hope and pray he may get entirely well. I remain yours in bonds.

H. P. BROWN.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug., 12th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Brn. E. L. Kelley and J. C. Foss are doing all they can for the cause in this part. They expect to leave us soon, and I assure you they will be missed. They have been trying to hold up the gospel banner. They have done well. May the good Master bless them for their wise counsel. We are still alive here, doing and hoping for the best. Am glad to see the Hope a weekly. May it live long. May the blessings of God attend you in the labor of love, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

NOAH N. COOKE.

CLEAR DALE, Kansas,

August 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We have been having quite a holiness meeting here. They had camp meeting here last summer, and again this summer. Just closed last week. I think now would be a good time for one of our Elders to scatter a few seeds here, as there has never been any preaching done here by any of our faith that I have heard of. There is good material here to make Latter Day Saints of, and I think there could be a good work done here. If there is any one that can come, he will find a home with me as long as he can stay. Should any think of coming here and will write me at Clear Dale, I will meet them at the station with conveyance, either at Wellington or Oxford. This is a good county, and would be an easy field to labor in, as we have good roads, and good people to labor with.

Yours in hope,

J. S. HARDING.

ATTICA, August 6th, 1884.

Dear Friend and Brother:—The Herald is ever welcome, and is read with great interest, knowing that our heavenly Father is ever ready to impart truth unto all who desire to be guided by it.

When I read the affirmation of the last living witness of the descending angel with the plates that contained the Book of Mormon, I can see the wisdom of God in doing his strange work, and in bringing to pass his acts, his strange acts in these last days. Of the three witnesses I never saw but Oliver Cowdery, and I heard his testimony when at Voree, from where he started for Missouri a short time before his death. I have such evidence of the work of the last days, that I wonder that all can not see it.

Let us look at the revelation given December, 16th, 1833, where the Lord tells us why he suffered all the afflictions to come upon his church he had established for the salvation of all that would come to his law, and live by it. That is testimony of the three books, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. O may the time soon come, when we shall all see light in his light. And again I say unto those who have been scattered by their enemies, read the books; for in them ye think you have eternal life. I am over eighty years old. Please send some of the Elders this way or come yourself.

Your sister in the new and everlasting covenant,

BURLINGTON, Iowa, August 2d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We were all well pleased with Bro. Joseph Lambert's labor here, and his sermons were excellent. He spoke with force and good liberty. Also Bro. Henry A. Stebbins is doing well at present, and I don't think he had ever before such liberty in speaking as he has this time; and my prayer is that the Lord may bless the Labor of his servants, that they may rejoice therein. Last Sunday we had a sacrament meeting that will long be remembered. It was an excellent one. The gifts of the gospel were manifested. Bro. C. A. Hall was also present; and I am glad and thankful that the Lord is merciful toward his children. May he never forsake us in the hour of need.

I still remain your brother in the one faith,

WILLIAM SCHADE.

SCRANTON, Osage Co., Kansas,

July 17th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have received many testimonies and one is the Holy Spirit; and I know that this is the true Church of God, and that we can not be saved unless we obey the commands of God. It is my whole heart's desire that I may live the life of a true Latter Day Saint, that the world may see by my walk and conversation that I am a child of God. It grieves me very much to see some of my brothers and sisters so cold and indifferent in so good a cause, since they have obeyed the first principles, and tasted of the goodness of God.

We have meetings every Sabbath afternoon and evening, and Thursday evenings. We are blessed with the presence of the Holy Spirit, though there are but few that come together for worship; but we feel thankful that the promise is to the few as to the many who come together in his name. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your sister in bonds,

E. E. CHAPMAN.

FANNING, Doniphan Co., Kas.,

August 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived here the 9th inst., at request of Bro. Wm. Gurwell, to debate with Elder Williamson of the Campbellite faith. Will begin to-morrow at nine a. m., in a grove near Highland Station two and a half miles from here. I affirm the identity of the church I represent, in faith, doctrine and polity, with that described in the Scriptures, he to do the same in regard to the church he represents. He was having a basket meeting yesterday, and I obtained the privilege of preaching to his audience in the afternoon. Had good liberty. Preached here at Fanning last night. Had a good audience. Preach here again to-night, and through the week if I can hold out after two sessions of debating through the day. There seems to be much interest among the people.

Yours in the one faith,

D. S. CRAWLY.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

August 15th.—The British expedition for the relief of Khartoum and the rescue of Gordon will be half military and half naval. The sailors will be required to do most of the work. Gen. Wolseley is the author of the plan of the campaign, and will get the full credit if it succeeds. If it fails Mr. Gladstone will no doubt be held responsible.

The cholera record for the last twenty-four hours is as follows: At Toulouse, three deaths; at Carcassone, six deaths; sixteen fresh cases at Nimes and one death; at Cette, seven; at Vogue, three. Three deaths from cholera occurred at Toulon last night. Among the victims was a naval Lieutenant.

A telegram from the City of Mexico says a conspiracy against the Government has been discovered there. It embraces a plot to depose President Gonzales and put in his place Jose Maria Inglesias, and to assassinate Gen. Diaz and all leaders of what are known as the Tuxtepec party. The plot is said to be widespread in the States of Vera Cruz, Puebla, Morelos, and Queretaro, and there is great public anxiety. A number of arrests have been made in the City of Mexico during the week, embracing several prominent persons.

The community of Burlington, Iowa, was startled this morning by the announcement that last night an attempt had been made to blow up with dynamite the residence of W. E. Blake, the attorney who has figured so prominently in the liquor prosecutions in this county. About two o'clock this morning Mr. Blake and family were aroused by a loud report. After daylight Mr. Blake discovered under his window a boiler-iron tube about thirty inches long and two and one-half inches in diameter. Closed at one end, the tube contained about a teacupful of blasting-powder. Proceeding with his investigation he found a cartridge nearly a foot long and nearly an inch thick, and covered with oilcloth. The greater portion of the contents of the cartridge had not been burned. One end of the iron tube was closed, but the other had been shattered by the explosion. A chemist examined the compound in the oilcloth cartridge, and pronounced it dynamite.

Aug. 16.—A great demonstration in favor of the Gladstone franchise measure took place at Aberdeen, Scotland.

In consequence of the menacing tone which the German press has assumed towards England the English papers are urging a strengthening of the naval forces.

There are now forty-one places and thirteen departments in France from which deaths from cholera have been reported, and there are doubtless half as many more towns and villages in which there have been deaths of which no reports have reached the outside world. The incidents of the plague in Alpine villages are often heart-rending and as often wrath-provoking. The better part of the priests are doing their duty nobly, but a few ignorant bigots among them have been responsible for much of the mischief by seizing the opportunity to preach the doctrine that the plague is the result of radicalism. The result has been the natural one—people accept the visitation as a thing which it is useless to combat. The cholera area now reaches from Toulouse in the southwest to Auxerre in the north, in the Department of Yonne, and to Gap in the southeast, in the Hautes-Alpes, thus making a triangle whose sides are respectively 235, 245, and 310 miles long. Auxerre is only about 100 miles from Paris in a southerly direction.

Two deaths from cholera occurred in the suburbs of Toulon last night. Three deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles since 8 o'clock last night. In the province of Campobasso there are thirteen cases of cholera; in Castelnuovo three, in Sermezzana two, in the Province of Parma three, in Seborga two, and in Villafrausa six.

Of the foregoing five died, and four are in a hopeless condition. The following is the record of the hospital at Toulon to-day: Died, 1; admitted, 4; discharged, 10; under treatment, 66. At Marseilles during the last twenty-four hours there have been eight deaths from cholera.

The quick work of the cholera in France is illustrated by the following incident: "At Gizean the disease is attended with general and quick fatality. This was illustrated recently. A woman, while at her housework, was taken ill and died before her husband succeeded in getting medical assistance. He prepared her body for burial, and being in needy circumstances concluded to save her clothing if possible from the confiscation of the officers. He got a wheelbarrow, and placing his dead wife's apparel in it started for a clothing-store not far distant. He was attacked on the trip and died before reaching home."

The preparations for the Khartoum expedition are going busily forward. There is great disgust at the intelligence that strict instructions have been given to officers to confine their operations to the rescue of Gen. Gordon and on no account to assume the initiative against the Mahdi or fight him more than should become necessary in case he makes an attack. The pursuit of this policy is regarded as certain to be followed by an increase of the Mahdi's prestige and the loss of the Soudan. Nobody can find out where the Mahdi is or the strength of his forces, or what are his plans. Meanwhile Osman Digma is increasing his army and making the situation at Suakin uncomfortable, and heat and disease are making havoc among the English garrison there. It has been the fatality of the present Ministry to do popular things after the public patience has been exhausted in demanding them, and then to do them in the weakest and most unpopular manner. There is known to exist great dissatisfaction with the Ministry over the whole policy in Egypt, and this policy has been Mr. Gladstone's own private property.

Under the Gladstone Irish Land act some 144,000 cases of fair rents have been fixed—74,000 in the court and 70,000 by agreement under its auspices—and the total reduction on the previous rents amounts to $2,700,000 per annum. When to this is added all the indirect work that has been done in the form of arrangements made voluntarily between landlords and tenants, under the knowledge that otherwise they would have been made by litigation, it must be confessed that the act has already gone a good way towards beginning the settlement of the Irish land question.

August 18th.—Five deaths from cholera occurred at Arles during the twenty-four hours ending at eight o'clock this evening. At Montfort sur Argens there were two new cases and one death. At Toulon during the twenty-four hours ending at six p. m., there were nine deaths. The sanitary condition of Toulon is less satisfactory owing to the relaxation of precautions by the inhabitants, and a revival of the epidemic is feared.

In the vicinity of Vandalia, Ill., some herds of cattle have been recently affected by a peculiar disease, which resulted in rendering them totally blind. No deaths occurred from the disease.

August 19.—Four deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night. At Toulon there was one death in the hospital and there were several in town. The epidemic is apparently reviving and the number of cases increasing. The reports concerning the cholera during the last twenty-four hours in the several southern departments of France are as follows: Thirteen deaths in the Eastern Pyrenees, five in Herault, four in Gard, five in Aude. Advices from Italy say that at Bergams three fresh cases of cholera are reported, two fatal; at Campobassa five fresh cases and four deaths; at Cozensa two fresh cases; at Garfagnana two fresh cases; at Seborga one; at Caluso one; at Parma six fresh cases and one death. At Toulon there were six deaths from cholera to-day between ten a. m. and six p. m. The number of serious cases is increasing. At Lessenes, near Sollierville, three deaths occurred. The inhabitants of the latter place are panic-stricken. There was one death at La Seyne to-day and one at Brignoles. The record of cholera at the Toulon hospitals to-day is: Admitted, 5; cured, 3; death 1; under treatment, 61. At Marseilles there were fourteen deaths from cholera during the twenty-four hours ended at nine o'clock to night.

A dispatch from Gen. Millot, dated Hanoi, Aug. 15th, says: "I have published a proclamation to the people, coupled with the ultimatum regarding the Regent's pretensions. The French flag has been hoisted over the citadel at Hue, the Capital of Annam."

Yokohama advices say that a decree of the Japan Government establishes four orders—Notables, Dukes, Marquises, and Viscounts. The National Assembly to be established in 1893 will consist of an Upper and Lower House.

An expedition has been sent to withdraw the Egyptian garrison at Hurrah. Sheik Sharfudin, a descendent of the former Imaams of Senaar, the chief city of Yemen, is at the head of the Arab revolt in Yemen. Merchants left Massowah, fearing the Abyssinians would devastate Bogos, a district adjacent to the city.

A terrible plague of locusts has visited Central Spain. The damage to the crops about Ciudad Real is $10,000,000.

Advices from Curnivaca, State of Morelos, Mexico, say that in one district, that of Janacapec, over four thousand head of horses and cattle have perished from the drouth. Advices from down the coast state that the drouth is so severe as to prevent entirely the passage of boats on rivers heretofore considered navigable. Besides this, the locusts are denuding the forests of their herbage. The whole gulf coast has not for years been in such a deplorable condition.

The Mudir of Dongola has a letter from Gen. Gordon, dated Khartoum, July 20th. He says he is safe and everything tranquil, and asks for news of the expedition for his relief. He also says he intends to remain at Khartoum harrassing the rebels by steamers until the expedition arrives. Gordon gives warning that the Nile cataracts are very rapid and dangerous at present. He adds that the troops are well. Maj. Chermiside telegraphs that 3,000 rebels have deserted Osman.

Another Mormon Elder in Tennessee has been wounded. None of the mob have been arrested.

August 19.—Col. Kitchner telegraphs that it is rumored that eight hundred rebels from El Obeid are advancing against Debbeh. After the murder of the Emir bearing letters from the Mahdi to the Mudir of Dongola a new Emir was elected. Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, commander of the Egyptian army, has arrived at Esneh. Officers leave London, England, to-morrow for Egypt provided with maps and plans of the route to Khartoum.

The recent explosion at Kazan, Russia, by which ten persons were killed and several buildings burned, is attributed to the Nihilists. It is now stated that the number killed will aggregate one hundred. A dynamite bomb was found under the window of the Central Police Station. Further explosions are feared. A large body of soldiers is removing the ruins of the buildings blown up the 13th. The authorities are on the alert to prevent further outrages of a similar character.

A dispatch from Shanghai to-day says: Fso Tsung Tang and Shu Tseng Chen, the Chinese Plenipotentiaries, have left Shanghai in accordance with instructions from Peking. There is no prospect of settling the difficulty with France. Thirty-five members of the Board of Censors have presented a memorial to the Empress opposing the conditions offered by the French, and strongly urging hostilities. It is reported that the Empress has decided to declare war. Orders have been sent to Patenotre, the French Minister to China, and Admiral Courbet, directing them to occupy the arsenal at Foo Chow if the French demands are refused.

A physician reported to the Coroner that a man who died at Birmingham, England, this morning was a victim of Asiatic cholera. The Coroner has ordered an inquest.

At Toulon there were two deaths from cholera last night. Fatal cases develop more rapidly and death comes more quickly than at the outbreak of the epidemic. At Marseilles there were eight deaths last night. Reports of the ravages of the cholera in the several departments of Southern France during the twenty-four hours ending at 9 o'clock this morning are as follows: Hérault, fourteen deaths; Gard, six; Aude, four; Eastern Pyrenees, twenty. The bulletin of the progress of the cholera in Italy during the last twenty-four hours is as follows: Scborga, 2 deaths; Panchaliere, 1; Villa Franca, 3; Bergamo, 7; Masacarara, 2; Bergeto, 3. The fresh cases reported were: Villa Franca, 3; Bergamo, 16; Masacarara, 11; Bergeto, 3; Cuneo, 12; Campobasso, 2. At Toulon the record of cholera in the hospitals to-day is: Deaths 0; admitted 4; cured 7; under treatment 58. There were four deaths from cholera at Brignales to-day. At Marseilles during the twenty-four hours ended at 9 to-night there were nine deaths from cholera.

Gov. Cleveland's letter of acceptance has been published. It contains the following points: The office of president is essentially executive. Ours is a government by the people. "When an election to office shall be the selection by the voters of one of their number to assume for a time a public trust instead of his dedication to the profession of politics: when the holders of the ballots, quickened by a sense of duty, shall avenge truth betrayed and pledges broken, and when the suffrage shall be altogether free and uncorrupted, the full realization of a Government by the people will be at hand."

"A true American sentiment recognizes the dignity of labor and the fact that honor lies in honest toil."

"In a free country the curtailment of the absolute rights of the individual should only be such as is essential to the peace and good order of the community. Thus laws unnecessarily interfering with the habits and customs of any one of our people which are not offensive to the moral sentiments of the civilized world, and which are consistent with good citizenship and the public welfare, are unwise and vexatious."

"The people pay the wages of the public employees, and they are entitled to the fair and honest work which the money thus paid should command."

"The statesmanship the people require consists in honesty and frugality, a prompt response to the needs of the people as they arise, and the vigilant protection of all their varied interests."

A gang of young thieves who have been plundering the trains of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad in the vicinity of Naperville and Plano, Ill., was broken up by the Pinkerton Detective Agency a few days ago, and the entire gang is now in the County Jail awaiting trial. Their scheme was to break the seals while the cars were standing still, enter them, and then throw off the freight while the train was in motion. In this way it is said more than $10,000 worth of property was stolen or destroyed. The live-stock cars were plundered in the same way, the pigs and cattle being forced to jump from the train while the cars were moving. A steer and several hogs were captured near Naperville. The prisoners arrested are David Dahlar, William Hauser of Naperville, and Wade Harding, Newton Passage, Elmer Robbins, and William Colburn of Plano. They were all between the ages of 17 and 25 years, and the arrest was made in a pool-room in Naperville while they were playing pool.

August 20.—France has modified her demands on China. The indemnity asked for has been reduced to 200,000,000 francs ($40,000,000). If the money is not paid immediately the French Ambassador at Peking has been instructed to withdraw.

Four deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night and one at Toulon. The public health in the latter city is improved. The report that cholera has appeared at Dunkerque, in the Department DuNord, is denied. At Marseilles, during the twenty-four hours, ended at nine to-night, there were twelve deaths from cholera.

The Breeders' Gazette asserts positively that contagious pleuro-pneumonia has made its appearance among five herds of Jersey cattle in Illinois, and grave fears exist that the infection is much more extensive. The disease was spread from Cass County, and has made its appearance near Geneva, Elmhurst, and Sterling.

Aug. 21.—The reaction against the Clericals in Belgium continues. Two weeks ago a constituency which returned a Clerical Senator July 16th by a large majority elected a pronounced Liberal by an equally large one. The proposals embodied in the new Education act giving Communal Councils power to appoint uncertificated teachers of the public schools is justly very unpopular.

The greatest excitement prevails in Paris in regard to the Franco-Chinese war, which is now regarded as inevitable. The boulevards are crowded, and the French seem delighted now that all negotiations are at an end and hostilities are to begin. A high Chinese official stated that the Chinese Government has done all in its power to avoid the conflict, but the pretensions of the French Ministry as to territory and their unconscionable demand for an indemnity for a wrong committed by the French on the Chinese and not by China on France, cannot be submitted to. The Chinese Government, he declares, will never pay a single sou, but will rather fight to the last man. The Chinese were willing to submit all matters in dispute to the arbitration of the American Minister, feeling assured of the justice of her claims, but M. Ferry knew no impartial tribunal would sanction the French claims and therefore refused. All further negotiations thereupon became impossible, and the Chinese Legation will be at once removed to Berlin to show that the breach between the two countries is final and can not be adjusted.

The Times' Peking dispatch of this date says: The French Consul lowered his flag at one o'clock to-day. The interests of the French subjects are entrusted to the Russian Minister. China absolutely refuses to admit the French claims. A Peking dispatch to the Times says: The Tsung Li Yamen profess to be prepared for war, a Ponce de Leon. They are secretly hoping, however to involve the neutral Powers in a quarrel respecting the treaty ports. The conference to-day between the Chinese Minister and Minister Ferry at Paris, France, was without result.

Advices from Africa state that the natives of the Zambesi country revolted and killed or wounded the entire Portuguese force. Reinforcements are asked for. The British Vice-Consul is missing.

The Jewish riots at Yekaterinoslav, Russia, are more serious than was first reported. Fourteen houses and shops belonging to the Jews were ransacked and demolished. The Jews defended themselves and their property vigorously. Two Jews and one Christian were killed and many persons wounded.

There were four deaths from cholera last night at Toulon and one at Marseilles. Quarantine at Malta has been abolished so far as arrivals from Sicilian ports are concerned. Reports of the ravages of cholera during the last twenty-four hours in the southern departments of France are as follows: Hérault, 9 deaths; Gard, 5; Aude, 2; Eastern Pyrenees, 16. The daily cholera bulletin in Italy is as follows: Bergamo, 4 dead; Campobasso, 3; Castelnuovo, 3; Parma, 1. Fresh cases reported: At Bergamo, 5; at Campobasso, 7; Casense, 1; Castelnuovo, 3. In the Province of Turin 10 were attacked with cholera and 7 died. Two deaths are reported in other towns.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Aug. 16.—A fire started this afternoon in the envelope factory of James Hodgson, in Little Trinity lane, London, England, by the bursting of a gas-engine. Before the employees succeeded in leaving the building all the ways of escape, except by the windows, were cut off. Many were compelled to jump to the street, and several, including women, were injured thereby. The adjoining building occupied by William Chase & Co., American merchants, was also fired. The loss reached £50,000. Twenty engines flooded the burning structures and subdued the flames.

At the Mechanicville roundhouse, at Saratoga, N. Y., at 8 o'clock to-night locomotive No. 3 of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel & Western Railway Company, exploded and was totally wrecked, and two other engines belonging to the same company disabled. Engineer Harrisburgh was seriously injured. The engine house caught fire, but the fire was extinguished by the fire department.

A woman in Springville, Ala., seeing a storm approaching, took refuge in a cave under the house. The lightning struck a tree in the yard, the roots of which ran into the pit, and the fluid followed the roots with fatal results. The infant in the mother's arms at the time she was struck to death, remained uninjured.

Aug. 17.—Early this morning a fire broke out in the City of Anoka, Minn., about twenty miles from Minneapolis. Before the flames were subdued the entire business portion of the city, the high school building, three banks, two flouring mills, an elevator, and several other important structures were destroyed. The fire spread with extraordinary rapidity, and defied every effort to stop its progress. The heat was intense, and many were prostrated while trying to subdue the flames. The losses are estimated at $1,000,000. Washburn & Co., are the heaviest sufferers.

Loss by fire at Grand Haven, Mich., watch factory. Near Walnut Hill, Ill., $2,500.

Aug. 18.—Seventy-eight buildings, comprising two-thirds of the business portion of Grenada, Miss., were destroyed by fire Saturday night. The loss is estimated at $300,000. The insurance is about $65,000. Loss by fire at New Iberia, La., $20,000. By the bursting of a Benzine tank at Corry, Pa., to-day eleven tanks of oil, valued at $15,000, were consumed by fire at Clark & Warren's refinery.

Two freight trains on the Kansas & Texas Railroad collided at Stoutsville, Mo., George Young, the fireman of one, was killed, and Patrick Harmon, the engineer, was seriously injured. Both engines and several cars were wrecked.

The total loss caused by the fire at Anoka, Minn., Saturday, is placed at $700,000, and the insurance is about $300,000. The sufferers are not despondent. Many merchants burned out have resumed business. It is felt that if the Washburn Mills are rebuilt, all the losses will be made good in two years. Loss by fire at Greenville, Texas, forty business houses, $360,000.

A cave at the Fresvillo mine, Mexico, buried six men, three of whom were killed.

This morning at 8:20 a through freight-train running north on the Central Iowa Railway collided with a hand-car just north of the Village of Faulkner, Iowa, throwing the engine off the track, together with nine coal-cars. All went through a bridge and were completely wrecked. Brakeman James McInnery was killed instantly. Engineer Dan Butts had both legs mashed. Fireman Frank Patton was badly scalded. Charles Geise, section foreman, had one leg broken.

August 19.—A fire at Roseburg, Ore., this morning destroyed the Metropolitan Hotel, the general stores of Caro Bros., the United States signal office, and other buildings. Louis Zeigler, the proprietor of the hotel, in trying to save the guests, was burned to a crisp. Mrs. Johansen of Astoria was fatally injured. The total loss will be about $100,000.

A fire at Pomeroy, O., destroyed forty-two buildings. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

During a storm in the northwestern part of Cook County, Ill., Monday, several barns and out-houses were struck by lightning. Four men who sought shelter under a large tree were badly shocked. They were insensible for a time.

Seventeen men were suffocated in the underground canal at Braye, France.

By the explosion of a thrashing engine on the Howell farm, near Cambridge, Mich., two men were instantly killed and another was fatally injured.

Aug. 20.—Barner & Phillips' planing-mill, at Newark, O., a lumber yard adjoining, a dyeing establishment, and two residences, were destroyed by fire. Loss $55,000.

Aug. 21.—On the town line between Alabaster and Tawas, Mich., Ed. Smith, Chas. Brown and Charles Goodville, were obliged to leave their homes. The Smiths were just getting dinner, but had to leave without eating it. All Clark's fences and part of John Preston's burned. Yax and Drouillard's houses are probably burned by this time, as a young lady who escaped down the town line by running through the fire several rods, scorching her parasol and her feet, claims nothing could save those buildings. Oats are burned, potatoes roasted in the fields, and with the strong north-west gale now blowing, other farm houses and crops will be destroyed. Fires are raging on three sides of East Tawas.

Loss by fire at Minneapolis, Minn., $10,000.
Swansea, Ind., $5,000. Lansing, Mich., $10,000.
Evansville Ind., $20,000.

Seven men were burned to death in a mine near Shamokin, Pa. The fire was caused by a gas explosion.

A passenger-train on the Kankakee Line collided with an Indiana, Illinois & Iowa excursion-train near Kankakee, Ill. James Penn, a real-estate agent, was instantly killed, a boy was fatally injured, and several passengers were seriously hurt.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

There were 220 business failures in the United States and Canada during the week ending August 15. There were 232 failures the previous week.

Generally speaking, the Canadian crops this year are much better than they were last. This is the case especially with the barley, pea, and bean crops.

Oliver Dalrymple, the noted Dakota farmer, says he will harvest 32,000 acres of wheat this year, and that the average yield will be about nineteen bushels per acre.

August 16, $500,000 worth of American gold coin reached New York from Europe.

Reports from various points of Arkansas indicate that the cotton crop of the State will yield about 1,000,000 bales this year, which is 300,000 bales more than it has produced in any previous year.

Recent rains have greatly improved the Kansas corn crop, and it is now predicted that the yield will be large beyond precedent.

The aggregate bank clearances in the twenty-six leading cities of the United States last week show a decrease as compared with the corresponding period of last year, of 21.1 per cent. The decrease, at New York was 22.9 per cent. In Chicago it was 7.2 per cent, and the cities outside New York 15.8 per cent.

Two coal-oil wells have lately been discovered in Mexico, one in the State of Vera Cruz, the other at Tantoyuca. They give promise of a handsome outturn.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the grain trade the last week, says: The weather is unaltered. A large proportion of the grain has been harvested with the best results. Wheat returns show that 54 per cent of the yield is over the average, 30 per cent is an average, and 14 per cent under the average. The other crops are slightly under the average. The wheat trade is nominal. New English wheat declined two shillings during the week. The price of wheat ranges at ten shillings and flour at five shillings lower than 1883. The new grain is flinty owing to the excessive heat. Sales of English wheat the last week 27,528 quarters at 38 shillings 2 pence, against 41,799 quarter at 43 shillings 10 pence the corresponding period last year. Foreign wheat at London is demoralized both for present and prospective trades. The arrivals of cargoes off coast numbered sixteen. Four cargoes were sold, four withdrawn, eight removed, and twenty are due. Forward values are nominal at a large decline. Flour is neglected and 6 pence to one shilling cheaper. Barley is neglected; only a few samples being offered. Oats dull; beans and peas unaltered; linseed quiet; maize quiet. There were large arrivals, and prices are unchanged.

Continued dry weather has greatly injured the corn, tobacco, and hay crops in Ohio, Southern Indiana, and Southern Illinois.

The following is the August crop report of the Agricultural Department for the States named:

Indiana—Wheat is turning out much better in quality and quantity than was expected. The yield of 1882 will be equalled, if not surpassed. Corn, tobacco, potatoes, and pasture have suffered from drouth. The rains during the last ten days, however, have improved the condition of each, and the prospects are good for an average crop.

Illinois—The condition of corn is rated three points lower than July 1st. Drouth prevailed during the greater part of July in a majority of the thirty-four counties in the southern division of the State, and during the last week of July heavy rains generally prevailed throughout the State, and in many sections strong winds prostrated the crop. In the parts where the drouth prevailed the recent rains, it is believed, will more than compensate for the damage by wind. July furnished but few hot nights, and the average temperature for the State was below that for July, 1883.

Wisconsin—Wisconsin has the prospect of a large and most excellent corn crop. The southern and eastern portions of the State, in particular, show a small increase in acreage over that of last year, while the condition is more favorable than has existed for years. The night of July 22 a severe storm swept across the State from the North-west, which did considerable damage to standing grain in some localities. Spring wheat seems to recover from the effects of the storm in the main and promises to be a fine crop. The barley crop is most excellent as regards yield and weight.

Minnesota—The weather of the last month has been favorable for crops generally. The average temperature was lower than that of our ordinary July weather. There have been frequent local storms, but for the most part the rainfalls were light, and in some localities of limited extent, hardly sufficient to maintain pasturage. During the closing half of the month a number of severe thunder-storms occurred, occasionally accompanied with high winds, by which the grain was blown down, and in a few instances hail enough fell to cause some damage. Correspondents from nearly all parts of the State not only speak of the crops as being excellent, but say they have never known them better. Corn is fully three weeks ahead of last year's crop at this date. Wheat is all of eight per cent above a good average condition and three per cent better than the crop of 1883. Oats rye, and barley are also considerably above good average crops and the two former superior to those of last year.

Iowa—The night of July 23d a very severe wind and rain storm passed over Iowa, in some localities causing great damage to crops. Corn was blown down, and in some localities large portions were broken off. Hay in the shock and stack was injured. Wheat and rye in stack and shock were blown down and scattered over the fields, and the damage will be to quality more than quantity. Oats were badly blown down, and have to be mowed. A large portion of the apples were blown off the trees.

Heavy rains along the line of the Northern Pacific in Dakota have seriously damaged the wheat crop. From Southern Illinois and Southern Indiana complaints come of the damaging effects of a long-continued drouth. Some rain fell in Central Illinois Monday and Tuesday and the farmers are happy.

Reports from various points in Missouri indicate the oat crop will be slightly above the average; wheat will yield about twenty bushels to the acre; corn is in excellent condition, and promises a large yield; potatoes are small; and the hay crop light. The fruit crop is not up to the average.

Encouraging reports as to the condition of the corn crop continue to be received from several points in Iowa. Only in a few localities is it affected by the drouth.

Southern Ohio is suffering for rain. During the month of June only 277 inches of rain fell there, and during July only 1.73 inches, together but little more than the average precipitation for July alone. With the exception of the 3d inst., no rain has fallen since the 28th of July. To make up anything like the August average, which is 4.17 inches, there must be abundance of rain during the balance of the month. So far only one-third of an inch has fallen.

SEVEN BIBLES OF THE WORLD.

THE seven Bibles of the world are the Koran of the Mohammedans, the Eddas of the Scandinavians, the Try Pitikes of the Buddhists, the Five Kings of the Chinese, the three Vedas of the Hindoes, the Zendavesta, and the Scriptures of the Christians. The Koran is the most recent of these seven Bibles, and not older than the seventh century of our era. It is compounded of quotations from the Old and New Testaments, the Talmud, and the Gospel of St. Barnabas. The Eddas of the Scandinavians were first published in the fourteenth century. The Pitikes of the Buddhists contain sublime morals and pure aspirations, but their author lived and died in the sixth century before Christ. There is nothing of excellence in these sacred books not found in the Bible. The sacred writings of the Chinese are called the Five Kings, "king" meaning web of cloth, or the warp that keeps the threads in their place. They contain the best sayings of the best sages on the ethico-political duties of life. These sayings can not be traced to a period higher than the eleventh century before Christ. The three Vedas are the most ancient books of the Hindoo, and it is the opinion of Max Muller, Wilson, Johnson and Whitney that they are not older than eleven centuries before Christ. The Zendavesta of the Persians is the grandest of all the sacred books next to our Bible. Zoroaster, whose sayings it contains, was born in the twelfth century before Christ. Moses lived and wrote his Pentateuch fifteen centuries before Christ, and therefore has a clear margin of 300 years older than the most ancient of the other sacred writings.

ABOUT WOMEN.

BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution: There is no record anywhere in any history of a happy married state where a man had more than one wife. Lamech had two, but the scriptures say nothing more about him. Adam didn't have but one and Noah one, and they started the business of peopling the world. Old Father Abraham had one, and when he took another on the sly, old Aunt Sarah got after him and she flailed out the second one with a thrash pole and run her off. Jacob had two, and if ever a man deserved two he did; but they didn't get along well, even though they were sisters. Moses didn't have but one. King David had several, but he was cursed with 'em, and actually committed murder to get one of 'em, and lived in anguish ever after. For he said, "My sin is ever before me." Old Solomon must have had an awful time of it, for he had a thousand, and they kept him so harassed and bedeviled that he flew to his inkstand and wrote that he had found one good man, but a good woman in a thousand he had not found. Of course not. How could a woman be good when she was only a thousandth part of a wife? But Solomon repented of his folly, and said it was all vanity, and advised all men to "live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest," and to "beware of strange women." I never think of these surplus wives who are sealed to the Mormons without a feeling of sadness and pity, for every new one causes the other a pang of shame. They are all in prison, and their dependence is like that of the caged bird that tamely looks to its keeper for food. There is no escape, for woman is a proud creature and will suffer in silence rather than parade her folly to the world. Did you ever notice how a woman will suffer and be strong, especially if she has a child or children to keep her company?

Selected Poetry.

HOW LONG WILL IT LAST.

Lights from the window are gleaming and glancing,
Music and Laughter are echoing near.
Save where the twain move apart from the dancing,
Uttering vows each was longing to hear.
Tender his tones in their low meditation,
Timidly downward her glances are cast,
Eyes matched with sapphire, cheeks with carnations;
Fair as the picture; how long will it last?

Think, when old time, of all jokes the grimest,
Whitens the tresses and furrows the brow,
Changing the forms that are lightest and slimmest,
Will your affections be steady as now?
True that to-day in its ardent devotion,
Love takes no heed of the future or past—
Curbing and checking the tide of emotion,
Prudence should whisper, How long will it last?

All were in vain, though the caution be needed;
Prudence is ne'er the companion of youth,
Passion for aye leaves unnoticed, unheeded,
Warnings of wisdom and promptings of truth,
Forging the fetters that bind them together,
Gilding the hours that are flying so fast;
Careless of sunlight or stormiest weather,
Love never questions: How long will it last?

REPRESENTATION.

WHETHER or no, pure representation can only be effected through delegates, it was quite certain that for the transaction of business, in a general conference capacity, the church needed some different method than that which permitted a dozen to speak, and their decision to be binding upon fifteen thousand. And I think it must be gratifying in looking over the minutes of a General Conference, to find that hundreds of votes now obtained, where under the former system important measures were passed with a score. The representation method by delegates, is more in keeping with the dignity of the church. But as measures to carry out the work imposed by the general laws of the church, suggested by mortals, are permissible, it can hardly be expected but that some objectionable feature may be seen. But pure desires to reach the ultimate, will greatly aid in a unanimity touching the preparatory measures. But it sometimes happens, (unfortunately), that motives are attacked instead of efforts to decide on the merits of that which is suggested. In which there is no manhood, much less any signs of Godliness.

The writer never thought that the method of representation, would be a preventive to crookedness, if the desire for crookedness prevailed. It would puzzle a Gabriel to enact a system to prevent this, unless all concerned were disposed to do right and only right. One most gratifying feature in the mode of representation is, it opens the way for every integral part of the body to be heard, when the body meets.

But to the mind of the writer, the fact of the body adopting a delegation system, does not create a necessity for districts to adopt the same, or a similar method. Districts are but integral parts of the body, and there must be a sharp distinction between the local and general, or the integral, and the body itself. And the responsibilities of the former varying from, or being different from the latter, may not the mode of transacting business vary? Districts and branches have a being by virtue of their relation with the body politic. And, so to speak, are bodies corporate, possessing power to regulate their own affairs. And may only be interfered with by general authority, when evidence of a violation of general law, or obtained and recognized precedent, exists. Hence 'tis said, "The Twelve are a traveling, presiding high council, to officiate in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the presidency of the church, agreeably to the institution of heaven, to build up the church and regulate all the affairs of the same," etc. But fearing these officials might arrogate to themselves, legislation obtained to the effect, that only in times of exigencies, were they to have local presidency. But who was to decide as to the times of exigencies was a question. But it was claimed that light came at the last Annual Conference, and a better understanding obtained. Let us so hope. As the church from 1830 progressed, districts and General Conferences were recognized. And whereas the Reorganized Church has accepted the hypothesis, that a command is authority, and the law says, "The several elders composing this Church of Christ, are to meet once in three months, or from time to time as said conference shall direct, or appoint; and said conferences are to do whatever church business is necessary to be done at the time." Admitting this refers to local or district conferences, it is very clear that elders are not only authorized, but commanded to meet in conference, to do whatever business is necessary to be done. Furthermore, General Conference has declared Elders ex officio; and if so in general, they certainly are in local, or district conferences. And no branch or district would think of colliding with a General Conference, or ought not.

In view of these facts, it is difficult to see what mode of representation could be inaugurated to better enable a district to do business legitimately, or satisfactorily.

There are two reasons for the inauguration of methods as auxiliaries to the consummation of a contemplated object: first, a necessity; second, their adaptability to meet exigencies likely to arise. And if these two considerations were had in view as they should be, there would be less ordinations and fewer to be condemned for a prostitution of power to unholy purposes. If it should be urged that the representation method would afford branches an opportunity to appoint delegates to properly represent them, or solicit needed help, etc., it may be noticed that the law provides, that by the hand of a Teacher or Priest, a list of names shall be sent, etc. And as a Teacher is to be a standing minister to the branch, one who sees and knows all in his respective branch, from the president to the last baptized, their moral rectitude, short comings, etc., who is so well adapted to plead for help from a district conference, in the event of a necessity existing for interposition, as he? For he is to see that all do their duty, to watch, labor and teach, to prevent all kinds of evils from creeping in among the flock. But if, in spite of diligence and constant watching, it should come, he is to know what aid to summon, and the remedy to eradicate the evil.

Again, a branch being a body corporate, not only has power, but is under obligation to regulate its own affairs; and constant and due diligence by officials of a branch, will prove a preventive to trouble springing up, so as to create a necessity for outside interference or help. But if perchance trouble should come, constant diligence will qualify them to meet and adjust their own trouble. A failure to discriminate between officiousness and a godly zeal, leading to the performance of heaven's prescribed duties, has been a great hindrance to spiritual development in the Reorganized Church. Nor will she be distinguished from all other organizations as she should be, by moral rectitude, equity, peace and union, until a proper recognition of appointments legitimately made, with a due regard for the provisions in the law; viz: "Let every man learn his duty, and act in the office in which he is appointed." And he who fails, shall not be counted worthy to stand. If this is harsh and God is its author, then who is to blame for its harshness? And who is authorized to soften that which God has made harsh? To be an approved servant of God, by virtue of help received, is possible, but who shall be an accomplished apologist for God? To be hot or cold is God's demand, with promise to the decided and threats to the vacillating. Who dare add or take from, or discourage the decided, and flatter the vacillating?

All are innocent in the eyes of the law; until proven guilty, by a process prescribed. Why then suspect, or snrmise evil against one elevated to a position of trust? Rather let the appointed one go forth—aid him if you can; if you can not aid, do not hinder him. Be suspicious if you must; but hold your accusations and charges until your procedure in charging may be justified.

It is a pity that a necessity for a reorganization in this great latter day work existed. But it did; and was effected; so when the enemy came in like a flood the Spirit of the Lord lifted up a standard against him. This necessity was reflective enough. But attempt to justify the harboring of suspicions against present incumbents, because their predecessors have erred, is infinitely worse, and of all acts the most despicable men can perpetrate; especially among those who give evidence of a proper conception of justice by being teachers to others; for how shall they teach others what they do not know, or practise themselves? If man is morally responsible to God, and law is the rule of action, it must follow, that condemnation or justification comes, as he obeys or disobeys revealed and acknowledged laws. Especially so, when he voluntarily puts himself under, and thereby acknowledges the supremacy of law. "For the Lord is our judge, the Lord is our law-giver, the Lord is our King; he will save us."—Isa. 33:22. "I judge you not, but the word I speak shall judge you at the last day."—Christ.

The above is explicit, and serves to show, with scores of similar passages, that our sincerity, or non-sincerity is to be decided, by abiding in, or failing to abide in, or by, the law. I confess, therefore, without the thought of, much less a claim of being perfect, that I attach much importance to law, very much—think and believe, have taught and intend so to do that the Teacher is under as sacred obligation to be in constant discharge of prescribed duties, as those who by the law are under obligation to be always in the field, to preach the gospel and regulate the affairs of the Church. And that much of apathy, spiritual inactivity, and reproach brought upon the body by immoral conduct is due to the slothfulness, and sheer negligence of Teachers, and other branch officials.

I would not claim that a united set of branch officials ever watching, and working, would altogether prevent evils, but would prevent much of it that creeps in among the slothful and negligent. And when evil did come, they would be prepared to meet and deal with it, vindicating the innocent, condemning the guilty, and guarding the fair fame of the Church. And with a healthy condition of local concerns, brought about and kept up by the diligence, care, wisdom, zeal, and perseverance of branch and district officials, district conferences would have little to do when convened, save agree upon measures for the extension and building up of the cause, by opening up new fields, and seeing that they are supplied with Elders and Priests to break the bread of life. But difficulties have sprung up in branches, and a failure to adjust has seemed to create a necessity for an appeal to another tribunal; and that other tribunal has been a district conference, and so it has often happened, that the time of the district conference has been consumed in attempting to arbitrate or adjust branch difficulties. And in some cases it has been thought that the only object of a district president has been, that in the event of branch troubles it might be known where and to whom to appeal for help; and though not designedly, this has tended to encourage the fractious, who seek to show an unbecoming independence, in a refusal to be subject to branch officials.

Appeals are legitimate, but not to encourage a disregard for legal and duly appointed authority. Branch officials are just as legitimate as any other official, and in their capacity the same respect should be shown. And efforts by angels or devils, that would detract or encourage a disregard for, or disobedience to the least, if there is any least official in the Church, is so much done to subvert the order of heaven, bringing division and strife, instead of strength and peace. Efforts to preserve, encourage and guard the rights of the integral parts, are a means of strength to the body itself; for the body is not one, but many parts. When the parts are healthy, the whole body is full of vigor. The body does not instruct any of its integral parts, that it can only gain and retain health and strength, when the body stops and legislates for it. But rather that it is not only privileged but obligated to keep itself healthy and strong by its own perseverance and zeal. And all the restraint it is under to the body is, that it violate no general law of the body of which it is a part.

What then is the mission of a district? The body decides that two or more branches may form a district. Why? To more systematically meet a demand; viz., the spread of the gospel. This consolidation does not destroy the identity of the branches forming or making the consolidation; nor lessen the duties of officials. Though the willingness of branches to form this compact for the more effectual spread of the gospel may, and does entitle them to whatever privileges may arise from such a compact or organization. But whereas branches are bodies corporate, having power to regulate their own affairs, and elders are authorized by the law to do whatever business is necessary to be done at the time of assembling in conference, it follows that the business referred to must be the adoption of measures and plans for the spread of the gospel, not debarring a conferring together on the welfare of branches, if necessary or desired. And with a good, energetic president, whose time can be wholly occupied in the field, knowing the wants and the opportunities for opening new fields, and those best adapted for certain localities in the district, with a proper co-operation with branch officials, etc., there is no more necessity for a district meeting four times a year, than there is for a fifth wheel in a coach, as there is no necessity for two general conferences when all the local machinery is kept bright, and constant din, arising from every member standing in his place, learning and doing his duties, is heard. "Once in three months, or from time to time, as said conference may direct or appoint," which is in beautiful harmony with the clause not to wait to be commanded in all things, etc., and justifying the exercise of judgment to the extent that, if it shall be for the well being of the cause to meet less frequently, it is to be done.

If an elder is sent to a State, having four districts, and they each meet four times a year, he attends them all, that would be twelve conference meetings. It takes a week to go and come each way. Twenty-four weeks of time are consumed. He is four or five hundred miles from a General Conference; must be there of course. Four weeks spent in reaching there, another four in returning, eight weeks in the aggregate, what time has he in the year for opening new fields of labor? And how long shall it be under such arrangement, before the unknown fields of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, etc., shall be broken into? But says one, we do good in traveling to and from those conferences, visiting and strengthening Saints, forming new acquaintances, etc. Yes, yes. I hear of openhanded generosity, and the teeming of comforts of the festal board, the upholstery of the dormitory, the nuts of the kitchen, the apples of the sitting room, the music of the parlor, and the prayers around the hearthstone, have gladdened my heart and cheered me on the way. Splendid! And sad must be the heart that would not be gladdened under such fascinating and inspiring circumstances. Social gathering and renewed acquaintances are good, very desirable. There are none that have felt the true love of a Saint, but would desire it, and evidence their appreciation of the same. But O, how we used to sing, "Sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven." All blessings coming while in the line of our duty, can be received and appreciated. But shall we evade duty to seek comfort and pleasure? It is proper that branches should receive the benefits of the traveling minister's labor; but not to such an extent as to prevent a reasonable share of labor in opening up new fields. It is also right and very essential, that the Saints should be taught and urged to more appreciate regular worship in their respective branches and evidence appreciation by being regular attendants thereat, always prepared to take a proper part therein.

By a proper system, officials of branches should know all their sheep, and their spiritual status. This might require all their spare time, much patience, labor and perseverance, certainly it would; and can any official stand acquitted before God, unless he is willing thus to act? We might say, O Lord, revive thy work, which perhaps might be done by each trying to revive self. Such a revival is very necessary.

To all officials and non officials, within the limits the General Conference gave me spiritual jurisdiction, I would suggest this revival. Let branch officials become a solid phalanx to build up the strong, strengthen the weak, encourage the despondent, deal gently, but firmly with the wayward; reprove the haughty, rebuke the disobedient, be partial to none. See that all absenters are visited, and the cause of their absence known. See to your branch and district records. See that you are prepared to account for all the members reported to your respective districts, enter as present, scattered or removed. Take pleasure in presenting the true status of your respective branches when called on. Shun exaggerated and incorrect reports, or the practice of making them. Love and present facts. Love not, nor encourage useless display. Presidents of branches might effect good by a change of labor in neighboring branches. Let all Elders and Priests whose labor is not required in branches, go out on Sabbath days, and reason with the people out of the Scriptures on the gospel. Let every branch organize and keep up a Sabbath School. The most effective way to prevent evil in your branches is for every member to be active in the performance of duty. This will occupy all the time, and preclude time for wrong doing. And don't overlook the fact, though it may be old fashioned, that the Teacher is to see that all do their duty. There is much that is artificial in this world. An artificial religion may contribute to the strength and glory of modern babylon, but it won't help a Latter Day Saint. Let all districts or the members thereof, exert themselves to the utmost, to have constantly in the field a live, active president. And when necessary, let all officials in the district, meet in conference capacity, with no other intention than to do what business is necessary. With this, together with the Teachers going up to conference to solicit assistance if needed, present members will grow; the cords of districts will be lengthened, business will be done without a routine necessary to appoint delegates, which at best is complicated, and to many minds perplexing. The simpler the mode of business, if that mode is legal, the better.

The above are but my views touching district representation, etc. I know no reason why any and every district should not, if they desire, choose and adopt a mode of representation, but see no necessity for it, as the law has made ample provision.

BOOK OF COMMANDMENTS.

THE opposition to the work of the Reorganization has never lost an opportunity in stating that there was some very damaging discrepancies between the said "Book of Commandments," and the Doctrine and Covenants. Recusant Latter Day Saints, more especially urge that there is a something very hurtful and inimical to our prosperity. I have many times found myself very much embarrassed, and when L. L. Luse, in an article some time ago garbled a revelation therefrom, to prove that the Doctrine and Covenants was not trust-worthy, but was only patchwork from time to time, or changed to suit the circumstances, I set myself to solve the merits and intrinsic value of the Book of Commandments. The authorization of its publication, may be found in the Life of Joseph Smith, as published in Millennial Star, Vol. 14, p. 163.

"Our council was continued on the first of May, (1832), when it was ordered that three thousand copies of the Book of Commandments be printed, the first edition; that William W. Phelps, Oliver Cowdery, and John Whitmer, be appointed to review and prepare such revelations as shall be deemed proper for publication, for the press, and print them as soon as possible at Independence, Missouri; published by W. W. Phelps and Co."

The next mention found concerning this book, is on p. 449, in a letter dated June 25th, 1833, and signed Joseph Smith, Jun., Sidney Rigdon, F. G. Williams, and addressed to W. W. Phelps, and others in Zion.

"First, as respects getting the Book of Commandments bound, we think that it is not necessary. They will be sold well without binding, and there is no book binder to be had as we know of, nor are there materials to be had for binding, without keeping the book too long from circulation."

In the same letter on p. 450, some mistakes in the book are noted as follows:

"The following errors we have found in the commandments, as printed; fortieth chapter, tenth verse, third line; instead of "corruptible," put "corrupted." Fourteenth verse of the same chapter, fifth line, instead of "respector to persons," put "respector of persons." Twenty-first verse, second line of the same chapter, instead of "respector to," put "respector of." Forty-fourth chapter, twelfth verse, last line, instead of "hands," put "heads."

This is all that I have been able to find touching upon this book. On the 20th of July, 1833, the printing office at Independence, with the contents thereof, including nearly the entire issue of the book, was destroyed by the mob. This was only twenty-five days after the date of the letter of the First Presidency, and considering the slow transit of the mail in those days, if W. W. Phelps & Co. were waiting for instructions from Kirtland, as to the binding and sale of the book, the time must have been very limited from the reception of the letter, till the destruction of the office, and this circumstance will explain, why there are so few extant. Dr. Wm. E. McLellan told me that he gathered up the leaves, as they blew about the street, to compile his book. So far as I have read no account has been made of any report of the committee appointed to "review and prepare," to any council or conference of the church. Neither do I find that any council or conference ever accepted of their labors. No matter what the merits of the book may be, one thing is clear beyond the peradventure of a doubt, namely, the church in no particular can be held responsible for, or under the necessity of submitting thereto, inasmuch as the book is NOT AUTHORITATIVE.

Thus we are justified in concluding that we are not to be troubled, either by "word," "letter" or "Spirit," but abide in the faith, and keep our hand securely fixed upon the iron rod, and then a crown of eternal life shall be the glorious reward.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

UNANSWERED PRAYER.

FOR almost two years I have seen nothing but adversity and poverty staring me in the face. I have prayed to Israel's God, that I may live to see the day when I shall be lifted up from this low situation to prosperity; for I have suffered trials and abuse from a scoffing and frowning world, and been tempted by other people to leave the God I love, and the latter day work, for situations. But I would not, and the result has been, persecute him, throw bread and egg shells at him, and wet rags, and hinder him from getting work. This has all been done, and a good deal more. And yet I see no way of the clouds' disappearing, and the sun's giving me evidence of shining upon me. Admit all these, I have not withheld the last three cents to pay for postage on pieces, either selected or written for the Herald or Hope. But thanks be to God for His testimonies, for his goodness and mercy towards me.

"Not my will but thine be done," ought to inspire every Latter Day Saint. Moses greatly desired to go to the promised land, leading the people whom he had led all the way from Egypt. He "besought the Lord for this." But did God grant his request? Certainly not. But took him up into Mount Pisgah, and gave him such a vision and experience, as showed God's bountiful love to him. Do you think that Moses would even speak of God's not answering his prayer? No! The Apostle Paul speaks of a similar experience. He was troubled with a "thorn in the flesh." Something irksome or distressing to be sure. Concerning this Paul says: "I sought the Lord thrice that it might depart from me." But the answer came, "My grace is sufficient for thee." "My strength is made perfect in weakness." 2 Cor. 12: 8, 9.

Paul I am sure felt this to be a sweet answer to his prayer. The conditions of life seem very unequal. There is very often to our human seeing no reason why one should be prospered while his neighbor is in adversity. There is no reason why honesty, ability, industry, should not bring equal rewards. But they do not. It seems very often that the harder one works, the harder he may work; and the more self-sacrificing he is, the more self-sacrificing he may be. There is no explanation to it all, on any human grounds; and in the face of the dire puzzle, it is often very hard to hold on to the faith once delivered to the Saints, and in Providence. And yet hold on to our faith we must, or else yield to despair. God's plan is larger and better than our human seeing. He has ends to accomplish, of which we do not know, and his ends are always good to those that love and put their trust in Him. And we shall see them by and by. The heart will not easily yield under divine grace. Our course is to hold on to the rod of iron. Exhort daily to watch and pray, for there is to be no cessation to our work; for the night cometh when we can not well work. Infinite goodness and grace are promised to the faithful, "even to the end."

It is quite common to hear prayer spoken of as not answered, when its petitions are not granted. Suppose a letter which you have written to a friend is unanswered. It is difficult to be free from a feeling of neglect. If your letter conveyed a request, and your friend replies declining to grant it, for reasons which it is not wise to state, he has answered your request, although he has not granted it. And if you have perfect confidence in him, you are satisfied. You may even feel as thankful as if he had done what you asked; for his letter may give you a strong evidence of his love, wisdom and goodness towards you.

Not long ago I received a letter from a little Hope. It is amongst the first he has written. It is not creditable as a piece of composition. It is full of mistakes. In spite of these, I understand the meaning of the letter; and I was content, for in it there was his love for the Hope; and encouragement for all to press onward for the prize promised to those who are faithful to the end. What are the prayers we offer to our Heavenly Father, but imperfect utterances like those of this little Hope. But our Heavenly Father understands us, and has promised while we speak he will be ready to hear and answer us. "Verily I say unto you, your Father which is in heaven heareth you." Prayer is a pouring out of our soul's expression, our desires before God. It is a seeking of him with all the heart, with all the soul and feeling. What Jacob did when he said, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."—Genesis 32: 26.

WM. STREET.

CHESTER CITY, Pa.

JOSEPH SMITH AT NAUVOO.

[Concluded.]

The clouds had parted when we emerged from the chamber of curiosities, and there was time to see the Temple before dinner. General Smith ordered a capacious carriage, and we drove to that beautiful eminence, bounded on three sides by the Mississippi, which was covered by the holy city of Nauvoo. The curve in the river enclosed a position lovely enough to furnish a site for the Utopian Communities, of Plato, or Sir Thomas Moore; and here was an orderly city, magnificently laid out and teeming with activity and enterprise. And all the diligent workers, who had reared these handsome stores and comfortable dwellings, bowed in subjection to the man, to whose unexampled absurdities we had listened that morning. Not quite unexampled either. For many years I held trusteeship, which required of me to be a frequent visitor at the McLean Asylum for the insane. I had talked with some of its unhappy inmates, victims of the sad but not uncommon delusion, that each had received the appointment of vice-gerent of the Deity upon earth. It is well known that such unfortunates, if asked to explain their confinement, have a ready reply, "I am sane, the rest of the world is mad, and the majority is against me." It was like a dream to find one's self moving through a prosperous community, where the repulsive claim of one of these pretenders was respectfully acknowledged. It was said that Hamlet had no need to recover his wits when he was dispatched to England, for the demented denizens of that island would never detect his infirmity. If the blasphemous assumptions of Smith seemed like the raving of a lunatic, he had at least, brought them to a market where "all the people were as mad as he." Near the entrance to the Temple we passed a work-man who was laboring upon a huge sun, which he had chiselled from the solid rock. The countenance was of the negro type, and it was surrounded by the conventional rays. "General Smith," said the man, looking up from his task, "Is this like the man-face you saw in the vision?"

"Very near it," answered the prophet, "except" (this was added with an air of careful connoisseurship that was quite overpowering,)—"except that the nose is just a thought too broad."

The Mormon Temple was not fully completed. It was a wonderful structure, altogether indescribable by me. Being presumably, like something Smith had seen in a vision, it certainly can not be compared to any ecclesiastical building which may be discerned by the natural eyesight. It was built of limestone, and was partially supported by huge monolithic pillars, each costing, said the prophet, three thousand dollars. Then in the basement was the baptistry, which centered in a mighty tank surrounded by twelve wooden oxen of colossal size. These animals, we were assured, were temporary, they were to be replaced by stone oxen as fast as they could be made. The Temple, odd and striking as it was, produced no effect that was commensurate with its cost. Perhaps it would have required a genius to have designed anything worthy of that noble site. The city of Nauvoo, with its wide streets sloping gracefully to the farms enclosed on the prairie, seemed to be a better temple to Him who prospers the work of industrious hands, than the grotesque structure on the hill, with all its queer carvings of the suns, moons, and stars. This, however, was by no means the opinion of the man whose fiat had reared the building. In a tone half way between jest and earnest, and which might have been taken for either at the option of the hearer, the prophet put this inquiry: "Is not here one greater than Solomon, who built a Temple with the treasures of his father David, and with the assistance of Hiram, (or Hiram,) King of Tyre? Joseph Smith has built his Temple with no one to aid him in the work."

On returning to the tavern, dinner was served in the kitchen where we had breakfasted. The prophet carved at the head of the board or table, while some twenty persons, Mormons or travelers, (the former mostly coatless) were scattered along its sides. At the close of a substantial meal, a message was brought to the effect that the United States marshal had arrived, and wished to speak to Mr. Adams. This officer as it turned out, wanted my companion's advice about the capture of some criminal, for whom he had a warrant. The matter was one of some difficulty, for, the prophet being absolute in Nauvoo, no man could be arrested or held without his permission. I do not remember what was the outcome of this interview, which was so protracted that it caused Mr. Adams to miss one of the most notable exhibitions of the day.

"General Smith," said Dr. Goforth, when we had adjourned to the green in front of the tavern, "I think Mr. Quincy would like to hear you preach." "Then I shall be glad to do so," was the obliging reply; and mounting the broad step which led from the house, the prophet promptly addressed a sermon to the little group about him. Our numbers were constantly increased from the passers in the streets, and a most attentive audience of more than a hundred persons, soon hung upon every word of the speaker. The text chosen was Mark 16: 15, and the comments though rambling and disconnected, were delivered with the fluency and fervor of a camp meeting orator. The discourse was interrupted several times by a Methodist Minister before referred to, who thought it incumbent upon him to question the soundness of certain theological positions maintained by the speaker. One specimen of the sparring which ensued, I thought worthy of setting down. The prophet is asserting that baptism for the remission of sins is essential to salvation.

Minister.—Stop! What do you say to the penitent thief.

Prophet.—What do you mean by that?

Minister.—You know our Savior said to the thief, "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise," which shows he could not have been baptized before his admission.

Prophet.—How do you know he wasn't baptized before he became a thief?

At this retort the sort of a laugh that is provoked by an unexpected hit, ran through the whole audience; but this demonstration of sympathy was rebuked kindly by a severe look from Smith, who went on to say that the true answer is not in the original Greek, as this gentleman (turning to me) will inform you, the word that has been translated paradise, means simply a place of departed spirits. To that place the penitent thief was conveyed, and there, doubtless, he received the baptism necessary for his admission to the heavenly kingdom." The other objections of his antagonist were parried with a similar adroitness, and in about fifteen minutes the prophet concluded a sermon which it was evident that his disciples had heard with the heartiest satisfaction.

In the afternoon we drove to visit the farms upon the prairie which this enterprising people had enclosed, and were cultivating with every appearance of success. On returning we stopped at a beautiful grove, where there were seats and a platform for speaking. "When the weather permits," said Smith, "we hold our services in this place; but shall cease to do so when the Temple is finished." "I suppose none but Mormon preachers are allowed in Nauvoo," said the Methodist Minister, who had accompanied our expedition. "On the contrary," replied the prophet, "I shall be very happy to have you address my people next Sunday, and I will insure you a most attentive congregation." "What! do you mean that I may say what I please, and that you will make no reply?" "You may certainly say anything you please; but I must reserve the right of adding a word or two, if I judge best." "I promise to speak of you in the most respectable manner." As we rode back there was more dispute between the minister and Smith.

"Come," said the latter, suddenly clapping his antagonist on the knee, to emphasize the production of a triumphant text, "If you can not argue better than that, you shall say all you want to say to my people, and I will promise you to hold my tongue; for there's not one of my people, a Mormon among them who would need my assistance to answer you." Some back thrust was evidently required to pay for this, and the minister soon after having occasion to allude to some erroneous doctrine which I forget, suddenly exclaimed, "Why, I told my congregation the other Sunday, that they might as well believe Joe Smith, as such theology as that." "Did you say Joe Smith in a sermon?" inquired the person to whom the title had been applied. "Of course I did. Why not?" The prophet's reply was given with a quiet superiority that was overwhelming. "Considering only the day and the place, it would have been more respectful to have said Lieutenant General Joseph Smith." Clearly, the worthy minister was no match for the head of the Mormon Church.

I have some relics before me of my visit to Nauvoo. Here is the Book of Mormon bearing the autograph which its alleged author or discoverer, and translator, wrote at my request; and here are some letters addressed to the same personage, which I came by strangely enough. I took them from a public basket of waste paper, which was placed for the service of the inmates of the tavern. Three of these epistles abandoned, I asked leave to keep as memorials of my visit, and no objection to my doing so was made. The most interesting of these letters is dated Manchester, August 29th, 1842, and comes from an Englishman, a young convert to Mormonism. The man writes four pages of gilt edged writing paper to his "beloved brother in the Lord," and sends him by the favor of Elder Snider the following presents: A hat, a black satin stock with front, and a brooch." He would fain join the prophet in Nauvoo, but the way is blocked by that not unheard of obstacle, a mother-in-law. And until this excellent lady "falls asleep," the disciple must deny his eyes the sight of the Master's eyes. The account given by himself by this correspondent, shows with what pathetic sincerity the divine commission of Smith was accepted by a class of men which would seem to be intellectually superior to so miserable a delusion. Suppressing the name of the writer, I shall give a portion of this letter, as it furnished food for reflection, and shows that the secret of the Mormon prophet is not to be fathomed at a glance.

"I take the liberty of writing a few lines, being assured that you are a man of God, and a prophet of the Most High, not only from testimony given by the brethren, but the spirit itself beareth witness. It is true that mine eyes have not seen, and mine ears heard you; but the testimony I have received shows plainly, that God does reveal by his Spirit things that the natural man has not seen by his natural eyes. You may perhaps wonder who the individual is that has written this letter. I will tell you in a few words: My father died about twenty-four years since, leaving my mother a widow with seven children. I remember her teachings well, which were these: Fear God, be strictly honest, and speak truth. I remember when about three or four years of age, being with her in a shop. I saw a pin on the floor. I picked it up and gave it to her. She told me to give it to the shopman, with a sharp reprimand, showing me that it was a sin to take even a pin. The remembrance of this slight circumstance has followed me from that time to the present."

An account of the writer's conversion to Mormonism follows, after which he goes on thus:

"Previously to joining this Church, I was a singer in the Church of England, had eight pounds a year, and a good situation in the week time at a retail hat shop. My wife's brother told me I was robbing my children of their bread in giving up the eight pounds. I told him I was not dependent on that for bread, and said unto him the Lord could make up the difference. He laughed at me; but beloved brother, in about one month from the time I left the Church of England, my master raised my wages four shillings a week, (which was about one shilling more a week than that just sacrificed), and this has continued on ever since, which is now two years this month, for which I thank the Lord, together with many other mercies."

I have quoted enough to show what really good material Smith managed to draw into his net. Were such fish to be caught with Spaulding's tedious romance, and a puerile fable of undecipherable gold plates, and gigantic spectacles? Not these cheap and wretched properties, but some mastering force of the man who handled them, inspired the devoted missionaries who worked such wonders. The remaining letters, both written a year previous to my visit, came from a Chicago lawyer, or attorney, who seemed to have been the personal friend, as well as the legal adviser of the prophet. With the legal advice came warnings of plots which enemies are preparing, and of the probability that a seizure of his person by secret ambush is contemplated. "They hate you," writes this friendly lawyer, "because they have done evil unto you. . . My advice is not to sleep in your own house, but to have some place to sleep in very strongly guarded by your own friends, so that you can resist any sudden attempt that might be made to kidnap you in the night. When the Missourians come on this side and burn houses, depend upon it, they will not hesitate to make attempts to carry you by force. Let me again caution you to be every moment upon your guard."

The man to whom this letter was addressed, had long been familiar with perils. For fourteen years he was surrounded by vindictive enemies, who lost no opportunity to harrass him. He was in danger even when we saw him at the summit of his prosperity, and he was soon to seal his testimony—or if you will,—to expiate or pay his imposture, by death at the hands of dastardly assassins. If these letters go a little way toward interpreting the man, they suggest that any hasty interpretation of him is inadequate. I should not say quite all that struck me about Smith, if I did not mention that he seemed to have a keen sense of the humorous aspects of his position.

"It seems to me, General," I said, as we were driving towards the river, about sunset, "that you have too much power to be trusted to one man." "In your hands, or that of any other person," was the reply, "so much power would no doubt be dangerous. I am the only man in the world whom it would be safe to trust with it. Remember, I am a prophet." The last five words were spoken in a rich, comical aside, as if in hearty recognition of the ridiculous sound they might have in the ears of a gentile. I asked him to test his powers by naming the successful candidate in the approaching presidential election. "Well, I will prophesy that John Tyler will not be the next president; for some things are probable and some things are possible; but Tyler's election is neither one, nor the other." We then went on to talk of politics. Smith recognized the curse and iniquity of slavery, though he opposed the methods of abolitionists. His plan was for the Nation to pay for all the slaves, from the sale of the public lands. "Congress" he said, "should be compelled to take this course by petitions from all parts of the country; but the petitioners must disclaim all alliance with those who would disturb the rights of property recognized by the constitution and foment insurrection." It may be worth while to remark, that Smith's plan was publicly advocated, eleven years later, by one who has mixed so much practical shrewdness with his lofty philosophy. In 1855, when men's minds had been moved to their depths on the question of slavery. Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson, declared that it should be met in accordance, "with the interest of the South, and with the settled conscience of the North. It is not really a great task, a great fight for this country to accomplish, to buy that property of the planter, as the British nation bought the West Indies' slaves." He further states that the "United States will be brought to give every inch of their public lands for a purpose like this." We, who can look upon the terrible cost of the fratricidal war which put an end to slavery, now say, that such a solution of the difficulty would have been worthy a Christian Statesman. But if the retired scholar was in advance of his time when he advocated this disposition of the public property in 1855, what shall I say of the political and religious leader who had committed himself, in print, as well as conversation, to the same course in 1844. If the atmosphere of men's opinions was stirred by such a proposition when war clouds were discernible in the sky, was it not a statesman-like word eleven years earlier, when the heavens looked tranquil and beneficent. General Smith proceeded to unfold still farther his views upon political men and things. He denounced the Missouri compromise as an unjustifiable concession for the benefit of slavery. It was Henry Clay's bid for the presidency. Dr. Goforth might have spared himself the trouble of coming to Nauvoo to electioneer for a duelist, who would fire at John Randolph but, was not brave enough to protect the Saints in their rights as American citizens. Clay had told his people to go to the wilds of Oregon, and set up a government of their own. O yes, the Saints might go into the wilderness, and obtain justice of the Indians, which imbecile, time-serving politicians would not give them in the land of freedom and equality. The prophet then talked of the details of the government. He thought that the numbers of members admitted into the Lower House of the National Government, or Legislature, should be reduced. A crowd only darkened the counsel, and impeded business; A member to every one half million of people in the United States would be ample. The powers of the president should be increased. He should have authority to put down rebellion in a state, without waiting for the request of the governor; for it might happen that the governor himself would be the leader of the rebels. It is needless to remark how later events showed the executive weakness Smith pointed out—a weakness which cost thousands of valuable lives, and millions of dollars; but the man mingled Utopian fallacies with his shrewd suggestions. He talked as from a strong mind utterly unenlightened by the teachings of history. Finally he told me what he would do were he the president of the United States, and, went on to mention that he might one day hold the balance of power between parties, so as to render his election to that office by no means unlikely. Who can wonder that the chair of the National government, or the executive had its place among the visions of this self reliant man? He had already traversed the roughest part of the way, to that coveted position. Born in the lowest ranks of poverty, without book-learning and with the homeliest of all human names he had made himself at the age of thirty-nine a power upon the earth. Of all the multitudinous families of Smith's, (from Adam down, Adam of the wealth of Nations I mean,) none had won so many human hearts, and shaped human minds and lives as this Joseph Smith. His influence whether for good or evil, is potent to-day, and the end is not yet. I have endeavored to give the details of my visit to the Mormon prophet, with absolute accuracy. If the reader does not know just what to make of Joseph Smith, I cannot help him out of the difficulty. I myself, stand helpless before the puzzle.

PROSPECTUS OF THE VINDICATOR OF TRUTH.

FOR some years there has been a strong desire on the part of some of the Saints that we should issue a Periodical in the interest of the English Mission. Without in any way casting reflection upon the promoters of past schemes, we think we are justified in saying that the effort of last Mission Conference is the only one having a practical form.

It will be remembered by many that by resolution of the Annual Conference of the English Mission, held at Stafford, 1883, the publishing of a Periodical was entrusted in the hands of the President and Secretary of the Mission, empowering them to issue as soon as they thought practicable.

To secure them and the Church against any loss, a guarantee fund was opened, and some £8 promised.

Some, no doubt, have wondered why the Periodical has not been forthcoming ere this. In answer to such we beg to say the only reason we can assign is our having no desire to rush into print in a manner which would compel us to call upon the guarantee fund, and even now we come to the front with diffidence as to the success of the enterprise.

Although little has been done that can be seen, we assure our readers that the subject has occupied our minds considerably.

Perhaps there is no one who knows the value a Periodical would be to the Mission better than we, but at the same time we can not shut our eyes to the responsibility of the undertaking.

It appears to us that to carry the undertaking to a successful issue, three things are absolutely necessary.

First—Cheapness.
Second—Simplicity.
Third—Interest.

The first depends upon the quantity subscribed for, the second upon the contributors of matter for the columns, and the third upon the kind of matter published. We think the third is the key of all.

It seems to us that to make a periodical of interest in and out of the Church ranks, it should be got up so as to answer the purpose of a Tract on the principles of the Gospel of Christ, as well as mutual intercourse between the members of the Church. And we are of the opinion that if controversy between brethren on doubtful points be conspicuous by its absence, and some good pithy, sound first principle articles, together with letters of interest and exhortation be had, that enough interest will be created to secure a cheap and profitable paper.

We have been at considerable trouble in obtaining estimates from printers, and have now one which enables us to venture publishing.

We find that an eight page, double column, same size as the Herald used to be, can be issued monthly at halfpenny each, provided one thousand per issue be sold; while a 16 page, same size, can be sold for a penny each if a thousand be sold; but in either case it will be necessary that the thousand copies be sold, or else it can not possibly pay its way.

We submit that if the branches collectively, and the brethren and sisters individually, will put forth interest enough to use a periodical for free distribution as a tract, that either the eight or sixteen pages can be had.

The success of the enterprise does not rest in the hands of Editors, but rather in those of the members at large, and we ask, "Shall it be a success, brethren?" and await your reply, promising to do all we can to help to that end.

One word more and we are through. We hope that no one will slacken his efforts on behalf of the Herald on account of the Vindicator. If our effort should cause but one, who now takes the Church organ, the Herald, to cease his subscription to that paper, we shall be very sorry we made an effort to publish a paper in the interests of the English Mission. Therefore we hope the brethren will continue their support in that direction as well as to our new enterprise. We are, brethren and sisters,

Your fellow servants,

THOMAS TAYLOR, President.
C. H. CATON, Secretary.

DIED.

HICKOX.—At Flintville, Wisconsin, May 7th, 1884, Daniel Hickox, in his 94th, year. He joined the church of Latter Day Saints in 1836 or 37, under the Administration of Joseph the martyr. He retained his faith through all the trials and persecutions of the church. In 1849, hearing many favorable reports through missionaries from Bever Island, he went there; but not finding things as he expected, and not feeling satisfied, he left there and went to Berrien county, Michigan. In 1864 he joined the Reorganization; in 1873 he came to Flintville, where he spent the remainder of his days. He died as he had always lived, with perfect faith and trust in God, and the hope of having a part in the first resurrection. Funeral services by Elder E. E. Clive, Adventist. M. P.

RODGER.

At the residence of Bro. Emanuel Penrod, at Elko, Nevada, at 6:30 p.m., August 3d, 1884, Elder Gland Rodger, President of the Seventy. Bro. Rodger was born at Airdrie, Scotland, in 1820; was baptized August 11th, 1842; served as a Deacon and Priest, and was ordained an Elder, November 26th, 1843. He traveled extensively in Scotland and England; was five years in the Birmingham Conference. He came from Scotland to Utah; was not contented there; removed to California, where he united with the Reorganized Church. He preached much and acceptably in California; and in 1873 was chosen by Bro. A. H. Smith to accompany Bro. C. W. Wandell to Australia. He left San Francisco, November 3d, 1873, for Australia, with Bro. Wandell. They were driven in at Tahiti, and baptized fifty, ordained fourteen, and left the work there in good shape. He was about five years in Australia; buried Bro. Wandell there, and left an excellent work there. He had filled a mission in California since his return from Australia, and left for a second mission in Nevada and California last September. He was an indfatigable laborer, a sound teacher, an exemplary preacher, and a most excellent man. He fell like a soldier at his post, was conscious to the last, and died in excellent hope of the glory to follow.

Bro. Rodger leaves a wife, two married sons, a married daughter, and a grown but single daughter; to whom he was a devoted husband and father, and who mourn him with deep sorrow.

At request of Sr. Rodger, memorial funeral services were held in the Chapel at Lamoni, at 2:30 p.m., August 17th, by Elder Thomas W. Smith and Pres. Joseph Smith, the latter preaching the sermon. Text, Psalm 56.

JENKINS.—At Elk Horn, Oneida Co., Idaho, July 10th, 1884, Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Jenkins, and daughter of John and Elizabeth Lewis, aged 31 years, 2 months and 26 days. She was the mother of six children, four of whom are sleeping side by side in the silent grave. Death has led her to them and made her one of their number. She was a member of the Reorganized Church, and as faithful as the flowers when summer warms the soil. She believed in the literal resurrection of the body, and the final reign and rule of Jesus on the earth. She died as she had lived, a great and good saint, a loving wife, and an affectionate mother. May her husband, her children and her friends, all meet her,

Where joys will last forevermore,
Where union is complete;
Where flowers burst the golden floor,
And blossom at their feet.

ELLIOTT.—At Bozeman, Montana, July 25th, 1884, of consumption, Sister Mollie Elliott; daughter of Bro. B. V. and Sr. Mary Springer, and widow of Bro. Samuel H. Gurley, in the 27th year of her age. She has been feeble in health ever since Bro. Gurley's death, removed to Montana, and thought the change beneficial, she was back at Davis City and Lamoni last year, was taken sick, and returned to Montana as soon as possible; was married to Mr. Arthur Elliott March 30, but failed rapidly. Her mother reached her just before her death. Funeral services by Bro. Reese. Text and hymns selected by Sr. Elliott, before her demise.

TAYLOR.—Near Sebastopol, Cal., July 5th, 1884, of dropsy, Sr. Mary Taylor, daughter of Elam and Polly Meacham, aged 81 years, 4 months and 18 days. Born in Kanan Township, Grafton County, New Hampshire. Was a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church.

OAKLEAF.—At Mound Valley, Kansas, July 21st, 1884, Sr. Christian, wife of Charles Oakleaf, and daughter of Bro. O. and sister E. Olson, aged 27 years, 3 months, 11 days. Funeral sermon by J. T. Davis.

When in sorrow and sadness,
I murmur for thee;
Your dear loving voice,
Seems to whisper to me:
Dear father, take courage,
You will not long wait.
I am waiting for you,
At the Beautiful Gate.

Your dear mother's sadness,
No lesser can be;
Yet she knows that your spirit,
From sorrow is free;
And willing to watch, and patiently wait,
Till the time we will meet,
At the Beautiful Gate.

Your brother and sister,
Their tears now will dry;
And with God's helping grace,
Will more earnestly try,
To live here below,—
That sooner or late,
They will meet you, dear sister,
At the Beautiful Gate.

Your brothers and sisters,
In the household of God;
And the friends whom you loved,
When life's journey you trod;
Shed a tear by your grave,
And all, small and great,
Hope to meet you again,
At the Beautiful Gate.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.
 I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
 Very respectfully,
 N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
 JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
 Yours in bonds,
 J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
 JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
 GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
 JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
 Your brother in Christ,
 O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
 JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
 Yours in bonds,
 WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
 Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
 Yours,
 V. D. BARGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
 MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
 W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
 Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
 Yours in gospel bonds,
 E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents, (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Sept. 6th, 1884.

Now that the debate between Rev. Clark Braden and Elder E. L. Kelley is in book form and accessible to the Elders and Saints, we deem it proper to suggest to those who read it, that they do so fairly and discriminately. We suggest further that they observe closely the style of argument employed by either disputant, but more especially to make the necessary distinction between the statements and assumed facts made by Mr. Braden and those things proved fairly, and about which there can be but little doubt.

In Mr. Braden's zeal to achieve a victory he has been blind to truth, and deaf to justice. He inflamed himself to make "war to the knife, the knife to the hilt," and threw away common prudence, and ignored the plainest rules of argumentation; assuming that in dealing with "Mormonism," as he styled it, he was under no obligation to treat his antagonists with courtesy, kindness, or decency. While claiming the garb of a Christian gentleman, in his treatment of his antagonist he exhibited a total disregard for the sentiments and feelings of those he traduced. Claiming to be honest, he declined to admit it possible that his opponent, or those believing with him, could be entitled to a like claim for honesty of heart, or purpose.

It was agreed at the start that Hedges' Rules of Logic should govern in the debate. Rule 7th reads, "As truth and not victory is the professed object of controversy, whatever proofs may be on either side, should be examined with fairness and candor, and any attempt to ensnare an adversary by arts, or sophistry, or to lessen the force of his reasoning by wit, cavilling, or ridicule, is a violation of the rules of honorable controversy." How far the disputants observed this rule the reader must determine upon reading the respective speeches. It should have dawned upon those who desire to annihilate Mormonism long before this, that such end could not be attained by maintaining a scurrilous warfare upon the character of Joseph Smith, or the Smith family; especially as the advocates of the claims of Mormonism, do not plead the good character of its defenders as an argument in favor of the principles of their faith. But these things have been overlooked, or ignored by our enemies; until it has been forced upon us to conclude that they can not meet us upon the platform of common honor and "good will to men" to compare principles with us. We hope that the elders will inform themselves of the entire arguments of Mr. Braden, for his speeches will be the stock in trade of those who will dispute with us hereafter. His assumptions will be taken as things proved; his statements will be alleged as facts, and his arguments, however specious, will be considered as valid. It is due ourselves and truth to insist that statement is not proof and vituperation is not argument.

MR. BRADEN'S half of the debate will be a disappointment to every intelligent honest Christian or Disciple minister. Mr. Braden's flourish of trumpets, "See me demolish the Mormons;" the premature lauding of his powers in discussion, and the pre-advertisement of what the book would contain, led the elders of the Disciple Church to believe that Mormonism and the Mormons, of every class of belief, would be torn up root, branch and leaflet, twig and rootlet; whereas the facts are the institution still survives, and its defenders are not put down. Hence, when the hitherto friends of Mr. Braden as a Christian debater will read his array of statements and assumptions, they will say, "This our Goliath has met a David. We had trusted to be rid of these Israelites; and lo, they hold the field against us. Our champion has demeaned himself unseemly, and betrayed our cause."

It appears that Rev. Clark Braden's visit to Richmond, Missouri, was not productive of over much credit to himself or his cause. The Editor of the Democrat thus refers to it in his paper for August 21st, 1884.

Elder Clark Braden's Mormon lectures aroused considerable comment in Richmond. We did not attend because we were not able after hard work to leave our home at night. This was our principal reason. Second, we cared nothing whatever about the Mormon subject—and believe that the general reader cares less. We published Mr. Braden's first letter through courtesy and inserted Mr. Kelley's reply because we believe in dealing out exact justice. This done, we announced that all such matter would henceforth be charged for. If Mormons or anti-Mormons care to read up on the subject of Mormonism, they can do so by purchasing the Braden-Kelley debate soon to be issued in pamphlet form.

Mr. Braden's lectures on the "World's Debt to Christianity" we have heard pronounced very interesting and instructive, and these we would have been pleased to have attended had we felt able.

We understand that Mr. Braden complained of his treatment by the Richmond papers. As we have no idea wherein we offended, we can not offer an apology or explanation. And our conscience being clear we shall not lose any sleep over the matter.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

LAMONI was made glad on Monday last to greet Bro. W. W. Blair, and son David, Bro. M. H. Forscutt and wife, Bro. H. A. Stebbins and wife, who all came in on the railway. Bro. Stebbins has been absent some months preaching, and returns home for rest and church work. Bro. Forscutt is on his way east to the field, and Bro. Blair returns home, like a soldier from the war. They are accorded hearty welcome all. Bro. Forscutt spoke on Monday and Tuesday evenings in the chapel near town.

Bro. Mark Forscutt left Lamoni, Wednesday, August 27th, for Lucas, Iowa; thence to Quincy and Pittsfield, Illinois, from which place he will work east to Michigan and Ohio.

We received an article entitled, The Eucharist, written by Bro. R. M. Elvin, but the editorial questions and answers on the subject of the Sacrament in a late issue of the HERALD contains so nearly the same texts and conclusions that we deem it unnecessary to print the article.

There is some difference between being good and being great. There are not a very great many great men; nor can there be. There are many more good men than great men; but the number of these is less than it should be. The chances for becoming great are diminishing as the human race increases in number; and the reign of peace becomes more universal and assured. But as the chances for becoming great grow fewer, the opportunities and inducements to become good increase.

Wanted.—Volumes 3, 6, 16, 18, 20, 21 and 22, of the Millennial Star. Any one having these volumes to spare will confer a favor by donating them to the Library, or selling to us for the Library.

Some one has Volume II, of "Travels in Central America, Chiapas and Yucatan," belonging to the Church Library. The one having it will confer a favor on the librarian, Bro. John Scott, by returning the book, or notifying him by card that he has it, and will return it.

Bro. Clarence StClair was preaching at Good Intent on the 22d.

The Oshkosh Wisconsin North-Western of August 21st is sent us by some brother. It contains a half column good defense of the Reorganization, the result of an interview with some of the brethren there, whose name, however, is not given.

Bro. James Caffall is at Council Bluffs, Iowa, his home. He returned from Colorado recently.

WE are quite willing to reply to any and all inquiries presented to us, when we have time to make the necessary research, or have either information, or capability fitting us to reply. But, like all other men, we much dislike to attempt to reply to questions submitted to us for purposes of cavil, or in cases where the reply will not be considered as entitled to any weight or consideration; or in cases where the answer required may be sought for a personal application. We have several of these last named on our table at present writing.

Brethren who have questions to submit to "Bro. Joseph," with whom the answers he may make will have no force, or weight, if the subjects of the questions are within the purview of his calling and knowledge, will confer a very great favor upon us if they will refrain from asking those questions. To ask such questions is improper, because the answers will do no good. And in cases where we are put to the trouble of searching for texts of Scripture, or points in history, a labor is imposed that is useless.

RELICS.

AMONG the many visitors in the city (St. Joseph, Missouri) yesterday was Mr. Thomas Hughes of Cameron. Mr. Hughes is one among the oldest settlers in the central portion of the State, his father having purchased the farm of Joseph Smith, the Mormon leader, situated at Far West, Caldwell county, about the year 1838, when that branch of the church was driven from the State. He has had in his possession several relics of the old Mormon homestead, among which was a key to the library which once contained the noted tablets, and which is now in possession of one of The Herald force, and he says he can exhibit the cradle in which the present head of the church was rocked in infancy, being a quaint affair. Mr. Hughes still owns a portion of the homestead, but is now engaged in a successful livery business in the thriving town of Cameron."

We should like to know of what material that old cradle is made, for it is just possible that that particular article of household furniture, may have had a mysterious influence upon the mind and body so often rocked to slumber in its embrace. Who can tell whether the mother, whose heart and brain ached in pain with grief and indignation, because of the cruel persecution she and her children suffered from bigoted and unjust men, did not impress upon the character of the lad whose cradle she rocked in her evening meditations and midnight vigils, when murderers skulked near her dwelling, or sought the life of her husband and protector, her scorn of hypocrisy and hatred of wrong. Who can not feel that as she sang her trembling lullaby to her restless boy, her heart was lifted to her God in prayer that upon him should be put a part of her spirit of steadfast trust and resistance to evil. What occult forces tend to shape the destinies of men. How mysterious the providences that shape the life and character. Is it not possible that old cradle, the relic Mr. Hughes seems to prize so highly, may have been designed, quaint and odd as it may be, to help fashion the nature of one destined in after years to re-defend father, mother, and the faith.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. H. Kelley writes from Coldwater, Michigan, August 25th:

Bro. Gordon E. Deuel and I held services here yesterday, in the Fowler School House. Bro. Deuel made a good effort in the morning service. I propose going to Clear Lake this week, and then on to Ohio. There is a good interest among the Saints. Crops are said to be better here than they were last year. It is very dry, however, and the corn is greatly in need of rain.

Bro. Hiram C. Bronson of Kewanee, Illinois, writes August 21st.

I have been reading Braden-Kelley debate, and must say I am proud of the masterly way in which Bro. E. L. Kelley has to my mind vanquished the wonderful warrior.

Bro. Bronson is a man competent to judge the relative merits of both statement and argument. Raised by parents in the faith, and conversant with the main facts in history of the Church, he knows the value of what is said for and against.

Bro. Alexander McCallum and other citizens of Stewartville, Missouri, are prospecting for coal at that place. He writes August 19th:

"We are still going down in the ground after coal, are now down one hundred and seventy-five feet but no coal.

THE Lamoni Cheese Factory is owned and run by Brn. D. Dancer, Ebenezer Robinson, Jun., J. W. Gillen, and Mr. Noah Riggs. What proportion of interest each holds we are not informed, nor is it material. The company was organized some time in the Winter, and as soon as practicable after the Spring opened, two buildings 25 by 50 feet, one story each, were erected; one was fitted up for receiving the milk and making the cheese, and the other for a store room. The milk is received on a platform erected in the front of the building, taken into a room having a floor some three or four feet above the level of the main room, where it is poured from the cans into a large receiver placed on a pair of scales, weighed, the weight recorded on a list containing the names of the patrons and date. There are two tanks on the main floor, one capable of holding something over four thousand pounds of milk, the other perhaps twenty-five hundred pounds. A Mr. Beard, from Champaign county, Illinois, a competent cheese maker, is in charge of the work, and is assisted in the cheese making by his wife and a Sr. Amy Bullis.

They receive the milk, which begins to arrive about seven o'clock in the morning, and is usually all in by half-past eight. It is poured from the receiver on the scales into a spout running nearly to the center of the tank, and delivered upon a doubled strainer of cloth, which removes all impurities so far as they can be removed by straining. When the milk is all received it is heated from a furnace under the tank to the required degree. When this degree is reached prepared rennet is stirred into it. The curd soon forms, the whey rises and is run off by means of a tin syphon, into pipes leading under the floor into tanks in the yard, whence it is taken away by the patrons, or fed to hogs in a pen near by, fattening by feeding of whey being conceded. After the whey is run off the curd is dumped in a strainer and cooler, a shallow vat, in the bottom of which racks with cloth strainers over them are placed to keep the curd from the bottom so that it will drain freely. From the strainer, when cooled and salted, the curd is pressed under separate screws set in a heavy frame securely bolted, and from there taken in the rounded cheeses to the store room.

In a visit to the factory last week, August 21st, we gleaned from Mr. Beard, who patiently heard all our questions, and gave us all the information he could in reply, the following statistical information:

They received in the last six days of May, 6,627 pounds of milk, from which there were 755 pounds of cheese made into 37 packages, or cheeses. In June, 25 days gave 76,702 pounds of milk, 7,058 pounds of curd, 369 cheeses. July 27 days, 105,729 pounds of milk, 10,942 pounds of curd, 498 cheeses. August 21 days, 56,159 pounds of milk, 6,046 pounds of curd, 155 cheeses. This gives a total of 76 days, 245,217 pounds of milk, 24,801 pounds of curd, 1,059 cheeses, a daily average of 3,226 pounds of milk, about 320 $\frac{2}{3}$ pounds of curd, and 14 cheeses.

There are 34 patrons who bring milk, from 195 cows, one being the lowest, and 17 the highest milked by any one patron. This gives 245,217 pounds of milk from 195 cows, a daily average of not quite 17 pounds to the cow. The price paid for milk has been from 70 to 80 cents per 100 pounds.

Correspondence.

LaCROSSE, August 17th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Please give the Saints and the world at large my testimony of the Kingdom of God as accepted by me, which has been confirmed in the last four years in the following manner:

First, in Plano, by an open vision of instruction. Second, in Plano, by healing a child of the diphtheria. Third, in Clinton, by a dream of instruction. Fourth, in Clinton, by opening the eyes of a blind girl, twelve years old, through administering with oil, and imposition of hands, and prayer. Fifth, by questions answered by inspiration thirty miles away from LaCrosse to Riceford. Sixth, by healing fifteen or twenty persons by administering and prayer, several of them having been given up to die by physicians and friends. Seventh, by removing cancer from my wife's foot by administering, after White Beaver, the great medicine man of the Winne-bagos, pronounced it incurable, except by knife. Eighth, some of my own purposes have been thwarted and changed, and I have been directed into a different channel than the one I had prepared to pursue. The most of this experience has been had while I have been isolated from the church; and I am more assured of the truth of the work, and its final triumph, than I ever heretofore have been. Hoping and praying for the purity, power, and glory of this latter day work, I remain your brother in bonds,

JOSE BROWN.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA,
August 21st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Through the politeness of Elder Thistle and friends under his pastoral charge, I was permitted, assisted by Bro. J. Eames of Cheyenne, to occupy Keef's, where I delivered three discourses on Sunday, August 10th, illustrative of our faith. Elder Thistle is pastor of a Baptist (colored) denomination, who at the close of our discourse in the afternoon made a neat speech, expressing his pleasure at hearing a discrimination between the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, and Utah Mormons; saying the former had, and could do more towards exposing and preventing polygamy than any other body; and he thought they were entitled to sympathy and respect from the Christian world. Further, "When our church which is now in course of erection is finished, in the event of Elder Caffall visiting Cheyenne again, we shall be glad to let him occupy it." I have seldom seen such liberality exhibited by orthodox believers in the western country, and think it should be noticed.

JAMES CAFFALL.

WEBB CITY, MISSOURI,
August 22d, 1884.

Dear Readers of the Herald:—As it is written that out of Zion shall come a deliverer, to turn away ungodliness; so in like manner has Bro. Warnky come down from Zion, Independence, and with him came also the power to preach the gospel. He arrived on Sunday, August 9th. We had made previous arrangements in securing the Webb City Hall for him to preach in. He preached twice on Sunday, and also on Monday night, to small but interesting congregations. On Monday Bro. Warnky came in contact with Rev. J. Hecker, Baptist minister of this city. An arrangement for a discussion was made upon the following questions: First, "Resolved, That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the only true Church of Christ on earth." Second, "Resolved, "That the Baptist Church of Christ is the only true Church of Christ on earth." Bro. Warnky affirmed the first proposition, Rev. J. Hacker the second. The King James' translation of the Bible to be the standard of evidence. Six evening sessions of two hours each for each proposition. Each speaker to speak thirty minutes twice each evening. Thinking the Webb City Hall too small for the attendance anticipated, the large and commodious Opera Hall of Messrs. Lester & Co. was obtained. Here we wish to tender thanks to Mr. Lester for his kindness in letting us have the hall on such reasonable terms, $1 per night. The speakers agreed to take up a collection to pay for the use of hall; and if it lacked, each speaker was to pay one half of what was deficient.

The discussion began on Tuesday evening,

August 12th. Bro. Warnky began at once to show what the church was; how it was organized with Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors and Teachers; That these were all qualified by being inspired of God, and endowed with power from on high; and that a certain form was established for the purpose of initiating persons into the church.

1st, That they must exercise faith in God; for it is written, Hebrews 11:6: "He that cometh to God must believe that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

2d, That they must repent, that is, forsake their evil practices, commonly expressed as a change of heart, but properly speaking, change of purpose. Thus faith being established, it becomes necessary for us to show our faith by obedience. Then we enquire, what shall we do? The Apostle Peter being endowed with power from on high tells us to be baptized for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38; also Acts 22:16, and John 3:5; being thus cleansed from our sins, we become fit subjects for the reception of the Holy Spirit, which is conferred through the ordinance of laying on of hands, which Holy Spirit shall be unto us as a light, to guide and confirm us in the truth; and that we may know that our names are recorded in heaven. Then to illustrate, reference was made to our United States' Government, its organization, &c. That in this Republican form of Government is set, first a president, secondly a vice-president, and all the various officers in their order, down to the constable of this city. While he was thus speaking, the light of the Holy Spirit, seemed to flash over the congregation, so that the Church of Christ was clearly to be seen, as said by one of old, a wayfaring man, though accounted a fool, need not err therein. He then showed that if the officers of this Government were to die, or if their term of office should expire, that unless others were placed in their stead, the Government would cease to exist. So with the Church of Christ. In order for the church to continue, the organization must be kept up. He showed that when there were vacancies, others were appointed to fill said vacancies; first Judas, then James; and we see that Matthias was chosen to fill a vacancy, Acts 1. Then Barnabas, then Paul. Acts 14:14; also Andronicus and Junia, Rom. 16:7, and others. This order appears to have been kept up, as far as we have any Bible history, which Bible history shows us to about the year 96. Then it was shown how men of corrupt minds would come in, break up the organization, and lead many astray; and finally how the church went into the wilderness for 1260 years, Rev. 12:6. Then how the church would come out of the wilderness; how it would be again restored through the ministration of angels, Matt. 24:14; also Rev. 14:6, 7. The authority of the Holy Priesthood was conferred, with command to organize the church, which was done in April, 1830. And the purpose for which it is again established, is to gather the elect out of all nations and denominations; and also, the church is being prepared for the coming of the Savior. This church is identical in its organization, with apostles, &c., all inspired of God, with the original church, with all the gifts and blessings, in order that the elect should not be deceived. This church was the bride, the Lamb's wife, making herself ready for the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ.

There is quite an interest manifested, and the discussion is well attended; and though present results may not appear great, yet we feel encouraged for the future. The discussion caused many to come and hear the truth, who would never have come just to hear a Mormon preach. Bro. Warnky made good use of his time, and appeared determined not to lose this opportunity of getting the truth before this people. This appeared to be his object, rather than just to get the mastery over his opponent.

The Center Creek Branch is still alive, and the members at peace one with another, and a desire on the part of each to do his duty, and send greeting to all the readers of the Herald. Let us be united in our endeavors to break down the curtain of thick darkness that intervenes between us and millennial glory, or the day of redemption of Zion. Let the history of the past teach us how to steer our ship in the future, that we may soon enter into the haven of peace and rest.

Your brother in hope,

THOMAS S. HAYTON.

TUSTIN CITY, California,
August 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Have just finished our meetings in this place. Have held nine meetings in the Advent Chapel, which was kindly offered to us by their Elder in charge, Elder Hunt, whom we found to be a man of ability, strong in the Adventist faith, but willing to listen, and also to reason. The attendance was good. Questions were asked and answered nearly every evening. There seemed to be quite an interest. We have sown the seed and we think upon good ground. I never realized so fully before the statement, "that God must give the increase." How useless are our labors unless he waters, and it seems as though this should be the constant prayer of the Elders, that God will water their work. I have been assisted here by Brn. Burton and D. S. Mills. We found a cordial welcome at the house of Sr. Crines, who lives here. We are having meetings Sundays at Laguna Canon, a sea side resort, through the kindness of an infidel, who has a large tent there for skating and dancing purposes, which he allows us to occupy Sunday morning and evening. These meetings are mainly due to efforts of Elder W. Thompson. The work moves slowly but surely onward.

HIRAM HOLT.

DAVIS CITY, IOWA, Aug. 25th, 1884.

Dear Saints:—I often feel comforted when reading the Herald. I very much need instruction concerning this great work. We hear some say they know it is the work of the Lord. I can say the same, and I know for myself. I do not wonder that the honest in heart so often almost lose their way, and can not even feel one ray of light. It is because they are not traveling in the right way. I am so glad that the Savior ever dealt with me so kindly, and that he sent the gospel to me. I have many kind friends that feel so sorry for me, that belong to the M. E. Church. But I told them not to worry about me, for I was in the true light, and my way was clear; and that I was tired of sandy foundations, and that there was great danger in standing there. They could say nothing but weep; and my prayer is that we may live in that way that all may see that we are the children of the Savior that gave his life for us.

The first preaching I ever heard of Latter Day

Saints was at Sr. Bissel's, in Marengo, Illinois, by Bro. H. A. Stebbins in 1865. The next was by Bro. Z. H. Gurley in 1875. I will never forget that day. But I did not feel as I did when Bro. J. R. Lambert preached at the Union Church on May 11th, 1884. I could not stand the truth any longer. I had to stand for the right, or fall forever. The voice came to me, "This is your last call." I dared not keep my seat, but rose to my feet and made a start. May God bless us is my prayer.

Your sister in Christ,

MARY A. HARMON.

SANTA ROSA, California,

August 20th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Price came here the first day of May and preached for us a good many times, for which we feel thankful. He gave three lectures in the Court House, and had a crowded house. They said they liked the preaching, for it was nothing but Bible; but they did not like the name Mormon. Bro. Price has done a good work here. He has set our branch in good working order. We have our meetings every Sunday, and prayer meetings every Wednesday night, for which we feel thankful to the Lord. We think Bro. Price is a good man, and worthy to represent the cause of Christ. We have one Elder, Bro. Hawkins, and one Teacher and one Priest; and they are good men, and trying to do their duty. There are but nine of the Saints that come to meeting; but we have good meetings, and the Spirit of God is with us; and my desire is to live humbly and faithfully, and keep the commandments of God.

Your sister in Christ,

MARGARET PARKS.

GARLAND, Alabama,

Aug., 20th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The two days' meeting appointed at our last session of conference to be held at the Lone Star Church, Monroe Co., Alabama, on the 9th and 10th of August, was well attended by Saints and friends. The brethren had excellent liberty in presenting the word. This branch has been disorganized on account of there being no officers that would act in a branch capacity. This branch has been in a very bad condition for some time past, no one to see that the law was kept. Whisky and its kindred evils, are at the bottom of all this trouble. However, there are some good Saints left that are desirous of seeing the cause prosper. There was a branch organized on the 10th of August about five miles north of Lone Star Church of about sixteen members, with a Priest and Teacher. Formerly were members of Lone Star Branch. The name of this branch is New Hope. Bro. E. W. Cato has been laboring in this district for some time past. He has done a good work among the branches, strengthening and building up the work. He will go to Florida soon. May God bless him and Sr. Cato in their labor of love wherever they go.

Arrangements have been made for a discussion between myself and J. M. Barnes and S. J. S. Cawthon, of the Disciple or Campbellite Church, to be held at Midway, Monroe Co., Ala., on the 8th of September. There is considerable interest being manifest through the country as to the result of the discussion. I am not posted nearly so well as I would like to be. The work is of God and not of man. I trust it will lose nothing from the handling. I have done but little preaching in the last eight years. I hope to do more in the future.

Yours very respectfully,

G. T. CHUTE.

GRAND PRAIRIE,

Dallas County, Texas,

August 23d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Dallas county at the present time, is very dry, weather warm, and some sickness. Crops have already been cut short.

Brn. D. H. Bays and Heman C. Smith, visited our town the latter part of June, and preached several times whilst here. It is believed by some that good was accomplished. They are very much wanted and expected back again, as Bro. Bays and Bro. J. F. Elder have agreed to debate the matter at some time in the future, debate to be held at this place. The questions have already been decided by some in favor of Elder D. H. Bays. The Herald is read by some at Grand Prairie, and is very much liked.

Very respectfully,

THOMAS SMITH.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas,

August 22d, 1884.

Beloved Saints:—I pen a few thoughts for the benefit of all who read the Herald with a view to get information; and for a starting point, I name the first chapter of Ephesians and tenth verse; "that in the dispensation of the fulness of times, he [Christ] might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth, even in him." A dispensation means a time when God renews a covenant from heaven to man, of which we have received the seventh. The Lord through his infinite wisdom, knowing the capacity of man to receive instruction, gave it by similitudes. In six days he brought the world into perfection, and rested on the seventh from all his works. Gen. 2: 2; and in Exodus 20: 9, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord, thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." This observance of the seventh part of the time as a time of rest, has descended to our time. To illustrate this subject, I will quote the Book of Abraham as translated by Joseph Smith. The Lord instructed Abraham that the larger the planet was, the slower was the motion; and that there was a planet called Colob that was near the throne of God, and that it took a thousand years of time in our world to make one day in that planet. It says that this was reckoning after God's time; and that when God decreed the day of rest, he had not given to man his reckoning. This fact is confirmed by a careful reading of the 20th chapter of Revelations, by which we may understand that the second Sabbath of creation will be no longer than the first was. This shows beyond a doubt, the wonderful lesson that God designed to teach men by instituting the Sabbath; that when the earth and men had labored six thousand years under the bondage of sin, and the misery it entails, a thousand years, a glorious Sabbath of rest, should ensue. When the old time Saints got their faith fixed on that sure promise, nothing could move them from it. They took joyfully the spoiling of their goods, and sacrificed their lives also, not merely believing, but knowing, (See 2 Cor. 5), that though they ceased to live here for a time, they would come forth in the morning of the resurrection of the just, to enjoy a thousand years reign with Christ on the earth, restored to its fertility and beauty, as when God pronounced it good, as recorded in the 67th Psalm and 6th verse. Then shall the earth yield her increase. The children of Jacob in Egyptian bondage, was a similitude of the earth and its inhabitants under the bondage of sin. Jesus says: "When a strong man armed keeps his palace his goods are in peace; but when a stronger than he cometh, he taketh from him all his armor wherein he trusted. He will bind the strong man and spoil his goods." The strong man has kept his palace for the last fourteen hundred years in undisturbed security, till the angel Moroni came from heaven to earth, and revealed the Book of Mormon, which contains the fulness of the gospel. Men also received authority by the ministering of angels sent from God expressly to reveal that authority to them to preach the everlasting gospel, and to administer all the ordinances thereof, and to build up the kingdom of God in all the earth according to the order of heaven as revealed to Joseph, the Lord's Seer, and to others whom the Lord designed for master builders in this generation; which kingdom God has decreed shall grow great, and fill the whole earth "and the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the Saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 7: 27. Yours in the hope of eternal life,

JOHN LANDERS.

MILLGROVE, Mo., Aug. 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have been afflicted for several years. I am not enjoying good health yet, but feel that ere long if I am faithful God will bestow the blessing of health upon me, that I may know I am accepted of him. Dear Saints, pray for me, that I may receive my health, also a bright understanding of this latter day work, so that I may do good. I was baptized in 1882, by Bro. Bozarth, and, thanks to our Heavenly Father, I never have regretted the change that I made that day, although I have had trials, temptations and afflictions, such sometimes that I would feel almost discouraged; but my faith is not shaken.

Your sister,

ELLA VANDERPOOL.

MOSS POINT, Jackson Co., Miss.,

Bro. Joseph:—Why was it easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye in Christ's time, than for a rich man to enter the kingdom? Is it not easier for rich men to enter now than it was then? If I was to ask the church, (being rich), what I must do to inherit eternal life, would the answer be like that in Mark 10: 21? Did he require this of this person, because Jerusalem was going to be destroyed, and his property also; or did he tell the person to do this to inherit eternal life? Was not the kingdom like a treasure hidden in a field, the which when a man found he hid, and sold all that he had, and bought that field? And is not this the reason that the Saints that owned property, (Acts 4: 34), sold it, and brought the price to the apostles?

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We, the sisters in this place have no meetings to cheer us. Bro. Brand made our hearts glad in January. We hope to see him again or some other good Elder. We miss Bro. Gibson. I was pleased to see in the Herald that his labor is appreciated in California. I have been a member in the Reorganized Church seventeen years; and with gratitude and love I thank God for the light and pleasure the gospel brings.

Your sister in the covenant,
ANN THOMAS.

OENAVILLE, Bell Co., Texas,
August 21st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—On March 28th, I left Temple, bound for General Conference. Spent a few days pleasantly at Independence, and arrived at Stewartsville the night of April 5th, when I was assigned to room with Bro. R. M. Elvin at Mr. Henry's. If all fared as well as we did, there certainly was no cause for complaint. From Conference went home, (northern Nebraska), and spent a month at home and vicinity, attending to secular business and preaching a few times. Leaving again for the "Sunny South," I called at Magnolia, Galland's Grove, Panama and Persia, Iowa; Nebraska City, Nebraska; Good Intent, Kansas; and St. Joseph and Independence, Missouri. At all these places we preached some and were well received. At Good Intent I met Bro. D. H. Bays, and have been with him ever since until a few days ago, when he left for Bandera and elsewhere.

On June 20th we left Independence, Missouri, and the next day arrived at Grand Prairie, Texas, where reside Bro. and Sr. Spencer Smith, son-in-law and daughter of Bro. J. D. Craven, of Missouri. We opened two new places, one in town and one in a school-house near by. We made many friends, both for ourselves and the cause. I think the foundation is laid there for a good work in the future. Bro. Bays and a Mr. Elder of the Baptist persuasion, made arrangements for a future debate.

Leaving Grand Prairie we came to this place, where we were soon made glad by meeting our co-laborer, W. T. Bozarth; but soon after Brn. Bays and Bozarth were taken sick, and each had a severe time. Bro. Bozarth having previously discovered that his vocal organs were in bad condition, and believing he was unfit for labor, took his departure for home, which we all very much regretted, as we had relied upon him for able and efficient help. Bro. Bays has partially recovered, and I think will get strong in the mountains of western Texas.

Notwithstanding many were prevented from attending by sickness, our conference on the second and third inst., was a success. We were blessed by the Spirit, and felt encouraged and hopeful for the future.

On August 5th the contemplated debate commenced, and for five days, of four hours each, we discussed the proposition, "The Book of Mormon is what it claims to be, and contains a revelation from God."

Bro. Bays has written you in regard to the argument, so I will forbear. Suffice it to say that my opponent, Mr. C. M. Wilmeth, "State Evangelist" and "Editor of Texas Christian," at first acted quite fairly, and I hoped he was going to be as honorable as in our former debate; but as the debate proceeded, he descended to the contemptible Braden style, reading copiously Braden's assertions of what somebody had said about "Joe Smith" and others. Anything Braden said was good enough to present as evidence. This of course made it necessary for us to examine Braden's character for veracity. Though I made no personal charge against Mr. Braden my opponent demanded that I should "take back" what I had said, or he would write to Clark, and then woe betide. One man said I need not go to Nebraska, or anywhere else to prove Braden a liar; for I could prove that by twenty-five men in this country. Mr. Wilmeth claimed that there were forty books published on American Antiquities before the Book of Mormon was. I told him if he would produce one, I would excuse the thirty-nine; but he said they were very scarce documents, and we had to depend upon what those who had examined them said. I then demanded one quotation from one of his forty books, touching points I had introduced in defense of the book. It was not produced.

On the 19th we met again, and Mr. Wilmeth affirmed "Joseph Smith, Jun., taught and practiced polygamy." The only evidence upon this point produced by the affirmative, was read from Braden. What Braden said somebody had made affidavit to. In vain we called for one of those affidavits, not one was produced. Against this we produced the testimony of Wm. Smith, Emma Smith, the teaching of the books, and denials of Joseph and Hyrum up to a few months before their death. But "tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon," that when the audience were called upon by Mr. Pennington, sixty-two voted that "Mr. Wilmeth had sustained himself," while only four voted that Mr. Smith had sustained himself" (according to Pennington's count), on the last proposition. Curious, wasn't it, when neither Mr. Wilmeth nor Mr. Smith had made any attempt to sustain themselves? They not being known in the proposition; but then there were some children whose votes were needed, who would not have known how to vote if it had been stated fairly.

The vote was a miserable expedient to cover defeat. Mr. D. Pennington, Mr. Wilmeth's Moderator, talked about five minutes and then put the vote without consulting us, or giving us a chance to say a word, only as we interrupted him, as he never yielded the floor until the vote was taken. This of itself was both unparliamentary and ungentlemanly. Besides this, they had evidently had this "cut and dried" before. Quite a crowd of young men and boys, who had been at a pump one hundred and fifty yards from the debate, walked down just in time to vote, and one young man who was there told me a runner came for them. Whether they sent the runner, or whether they had a previous understanding with the boys, I do not positively know. Take out this crowd, the children and those who have since acknowledged voting against their judgment to "beat the Mormons," and where, oh where are the voters? By this you can see the trickery and prejudice we had to meet, but to the credit of the people be it said, that this vote probably did not express the sentiment of the audience; as many thinking conservative men and women refused to express themselves. Why do men resort to such contemptible expedients as this, unless to bolster up their tottering fabric?

Since the debate, some one signing himself "D. P.," (observe the initials of the moderator), has rushed into print in the Bell County News, giving a gross perversion of the whole affair, and claiming that Elder Pennington wanted the expression so he could make a faithful report in San Antonio, where he resides. We have authorized another correspondent who replies to "D. P.," to invite either Mr. Pennington or Mr. Wilmeth, to discuss the same issues in San Antonio, so the people of San Antonio can judge for themselves. We are satisfied and hopeful, and will labor for the truth as we shall receive grace from the Master.

In bonds of peace,
HEMAN C. SMITH.

GENERAL NEWS.

August 22.—The Pall Mall Gazette this afternoon says: "The Chinese will not issue a declaration of war, but will inform France and the neutral Powers that she will regard a repetition of the Keelung incident or an attack on Chinese territory as ipse facto a declaration of war. China will ask the other Powers, and especially England, to be strictly neutral. The English colony at Hong Kong has been the base of operations against Tonquin. China expects that in case the French attack is renewed the English colonists will be warned as to their duties as neutrals. It is quite certain the Chinese will immediately cross the southern frontier and invade Tonquin. A dispatch from Peking to the Times says: "The French Legation left Peking yesterday. A telegraph station was opened here to-day. This is the first message wired." A dispatch from Shanghai to Reuter's Telegraph Company says: "Vicomte de Semalle, the French representative at Peking, immediately after lowering the French flag at the legation, started for Shanghai." Admiral Courbet was instructed to bombard the arsenal at Foo Chow this morning and land a detachment of troops and destroy the war material and stores accumulated there, which are of immense value. This is intended as reprisal for the action of the Chinese at Lang Sou. At the same time the French at Keelung were ordered to occupy that port and the coal-mines as security for the indemnity demanded by France.

Li Fong Pao, the Chinese Minister, at Paris has received his passports.

The police at Warsaw have expelled 400 to 500 Germans who have been living in that city on the charge that they habitually violated their contracts and live by robbery. This action on the part of the Russian police is clearly the execution of the treaty secretly made between Germany and Russia that each country would refuse a right of asylum to the expatriated citizens of the other.

The advices from Dongola state that a scout has arrived there from the Mahdi's camp at Lebelgaler, who reports that typhus-fever is decimating the Mahdi's army. Slaten Bey is with the Mahdi. Hussian Pasha, former Governor of Berber, and eighteen followers arrived at camp with sand on their heads as a token of submission to the Mahdi. The Mahdi's army is well organized by former Arabist officers.

The following is the report of the cholera in the Southern Departments of France during the last twenty-four hours: Hereault, 4 deaths; Ande, 5; Gard, 2; Eastern Pyrenees, 21. Five deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night and two at Toulon. The weather is cooler and the public health is improving. It is officially announced that there have been cases of cholera in this city. A stowaway was landed at Waterford, Ireland, from the British steamship Oran Moore, from Liverpool for Baltimore. He was ill and was taken to the infirmary. The doctors pronounce the disease cholera, and believe it is of the Asiatic type. Three other stowaways landed at the same time are missing.

Portugal has sent reinforcements to Quilimane, on the east coast of Africa.

Another plot of the Russian Nihilists has come to grief. The intended victim was Col. Sazonoff of the Russian gendarmerie. The plot, however, was discovered in time, and twenty or thirty arrests have been made.

The Salvation Army is forbidden to hold meetings within the Canton of Berne, in which is situated the chief city of Switzerland.

August 23.—The French fleet bombarded the Chinese port of Foo Choo. It is reported that the Chinese fleet at the place was captured. Two of the French boats were sunk. The Chinese land forces are said to have crossed into Tonquin.

The Jews in Toulon and Marseilles have escaped the ravages of the cholera. Of the Jewish community of 4,000 souls in Marseilles, only seven have been seized with this disease. Two of these seven were life-long invalids, another was ninety-seven years of age, and two others had not observed the Jewish law.

There is a plot in Spain to put Queen Isabella again on the throne.

The Nile continues to rise. Eight steamers will ascend the river to the first cataract to-day. Col. Colville will go to Dongola. It is reported that the followers of the Mahdi are dying at the rate of thirty a day from some intestinal disease.

Up to the morning of to-day the total deaths from cholera in France has been 3,952. These figures have been collected from 131 cities and villages in fifteen departments, and can be trusted as the most correct possible. They have been obtained by a careful study of all the reports of July, supplemented in many cases by official returns obtained directly from the Mayors. Counting by departments, the deaths have been as follows: In the department of the Bouches-Du-Rhone, 2,102; in Var, 974; in Heraul, 210; Ardeche, 111; Basses-Alpes, 110; Pyrenees; Orientales, 111; Aude, 84; Gard, 70; Vaucluse, 61; Hautes-Alpes, 38; Haute-Garonne, 38; Drome, 17; Yonne, 12; Rhone, 10; Gironde, 4.

The outbreak in Switzerland, owing to the difference of the climate and the lateness of the season, is not likely to work serious ravages. Unfortunately the conditions in Italy are not the same as those in Switzerland. In Italy there have been already fully 300 deaths, and the plague increases in virulence as it spreads. A month ago it was predicted that Naples would suffer frightfully if the cholera struck it, as it probably would, and with cases now all around Naples that city can scarcely escape. At Marseilles six of the Octroi Guards, who collect the city import duties, have already died from cholera. It is feared, from what is learned, that the cholera in Lyons will be the next sad feature of the terrible epidemic, and that the disease will be heard from in that city next week.

August 24.—There were eight deaths from cholera at Marseilles Saturday night. There were five deaths from cholera in Toulon Saturday night. The increase is attributed to the hasty return of the inhabitants.

Cholera is spreading in Italy. In the Province of Cuneo there have been fifty-eight deaths in three days, and in the vicinity of Spezia forty-nine deaths.

A German corvet is being equipped for duty on the west coast of Africa.

The French press has been abusing the English without stint for several weeks. An English paper retaliated to-day by expressing a wish that the whole French fleet in Chinese waters might be sunk.

The Foo Chow arsenal was destroyed yesterday after three hours bombardment by Courbet's squadron. Seven Chinese gunboats were sunk and two escaped. The European settlement is undisturbed. The French fleet sustained no damage. The bombardment of Foo Chow began at two o'clock in the afternoon and ceased at eight p. m. Only one Chinese battery replied. The report that two French vessels sunk during the engagement is not confirmed.

The troubles in Zululand loom up again through the action of the Boers in cajoling Cetywayo's son, Dinizula, and getting his sanction to a proclamation of a Dutch Republic. The situation is really more threatening than ever since the Transvaal War.

August 25.—Several persons were arrested in Lisbon yesterday on the charge of uttering seditious sentiments.

A body of Orangemen attacked a Roman Catholic missionary yacht in Henly Harbor, Newfoundland, pulled down the Papal flag, and tarred the boat.

Reports from Berber received at Cairo state that there are now 636 Egyptian officers and soldiers in the hands of the Mahdi and his lieutenants, who treat them worse than slaves. The Mahdi's followers look upon their chief as divinely inspired, and repudiate the Sultan.

China has formally declared war on France. Gen. Millot, the commander of the French in Tonquin, says he is fully able to resent Chinese aggression. The bombardment of the Foo Chow forts was continued yesterday. The French were temporarily repulsed in their attack on the forts at the mouth of the river.

German naval officers took formal possession of the district at the Cameroons River, on the west coast of Africa, the 21st of July. Two days after the British Consul of the district called a meeting of the British traders and the local Kings and Chiefs to protest against the aggressions of the Germans. At the meeting the native representatives resolved to place themselves under the control of the British.

There were two deaths from cholera at Marseilles last night and five at Toulon. The panic at Toulon is revived, and the return of fugitives has been checked. The report of the cholera in the southern departments of France during the last twenty-four hours is: Hereault, 7 deaths;

Aude, 1; Eastern Pyrenees, 21. There has been one death from cholera at Toulon since morning. There was one death to-day at Hyeres and two at La Seyne. Record of cholera in Toulon hospitals to-day: Admitted, 5; deaths, none; discharged, 3; under treatment, 47.

Russia will establish a sanitary cordon on the western frontier to prevent people from France and Italy entering the country. Travelers who left the infected districts in France and Italy three weeks before reaching the Russian frontier will be allowed to proceed. The importation of rags from countries where cholera is prevailing is forbidden.

There have been two deaths from cholera in the Island of Corsica.

The United States Charge d'Affaires at Rome notifies the State Department of an outbreak of cholera in Spezia. The Consul-General at Genoa telegraphs: "Cholera suddenly attacked Spezia the 22d. There were sixty-one cases last night, forty-nine fatal."

When the special train containing eighty Poles who were to take the place of the striking miners at Buchtel, O., arrived at that place early this morning, a mob of strikers congregated and assaulted the leaders of the imported party. A free-fight followed, during which an interpreter for the Poles was seriously injured and others received bruises. The fighting was renewed later in the day. A number of special police are on hand to protect the Poles. The Governor has been asked to call out the militia.

August 26th.—The King of the Congo district protests against the treaty entered into by some of the minor Princes with the African International Association. He says they had no right to cede territory, and that they are still under the rule of Portugal.

China, it is now authoritatively stated, has informed Admiral Courbet that she regards his action and the bombardment of Foo Chow as tantamount to a declaration of war by France.

Advices from Foo Chow to the 24th received 6:15 this evening confirm the reports of the destruction of the whole Chinese fleet. The French lost five men, including an American pilot killed on board the heavily-armed French war-ship, Volta. The French fleet was not damaged.

The electricians on the steamer Faraday yesterday completed the laying of the deep-sea section of the second Mackey-Bennett cable and buoyed the end. The steamer is now returning to London, where the American end of the second cable will be put on board. After that shore-end is landed the Faraday will be employed in laying the section of cable which is to connect Waterville Bay, Ireland, with the shore of France.

The United States steamer Kearsage has received direct orders from Washington to make a cruise along the north and west coast of Africa.

The State Department has received from Mr. Mason, United States' Consul at Marseilles, a report upon the situation at that place and Toulon since the abatement of the cholera epidemic. He says: "The finances of Toulon and Marseilles have been strained to the utmost in cleansing the streets and tenements and caring for the sick and burying the dead. The presence of impending financial ruin weighs heavily upon the business community, and even the ordinary resources of charity are seriously curtailed. The tide of returning fugitives has just set in, and no description can picture the wretchedness and destitution that already exist."

Three deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles last night, and two at Toulon. The deaths from cholera in the southern department of France for the twenty-four hours ended to-night were: Pyrenees Orientales, fifteen; Herault, six; Gard, two; Aude, five. There was one death from cholera in Toulon to-day. The hospital report is: New cases admitted, four; discharged, twelve; deaths, two; under treatment, thirty-seven. At Marseilles there were twelve deaths from cholera to-day. The scourge is increasing in Corsica. Four deaths have occurred near Ajaccio. Several persons were nearly killed from overfumigation at the Italian frontier. The daily bulletin of the progress of cholera in Italy is forty-four deaths and seven new cases.

The International Agricultural Exhibition was opened at Amsterdam yesterday.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt in Eastern Tennessee Monday night. It lasted a minute and a half.

An earthquake shock lasting thirty seconds was felt in the Island of Jersey, in the English Channel. There was no damage.

Complaint is made that early marriages are becoming common among boys and girls in the east end of London. Boys and girls of twelve "keep company," and at fourteen or fifteen every laddie has his lassie. In a single district a boy of sixteen recently married a girl of the same age. In a printing office in one district there are four married boys. The eldest is only nineteen, and receives thirteen shillings a week; the next is eighteen, has three years of his apprenticeship still to serve, and has two children; the youngest is sixteen and has to keep a wife and one child on eleven shillings a week. Another boy is known whose age is between sixteen and seventeen, and he has two children. Still another boy of sixteen has one child.

Aug. 27.—It is reported that Germany and France have entered into a secret alliance. The terms are understood to be that Germany will let France have her own way in China, and that France will not put any obstacle in the way of Germany if the latter nation should think proper to annex a portion of Holland. Both nations agree to help each other in pushing their colonial designs. The report of the alliance causes uneasiness in England.

According to reports received at Sonatag 80,000 Chinese troops invaded Tonquin and had an engagement with the French. In this battle, it is asserted, the French were annihilated, while several thousand Chinese were killed. The French loss in the bombardment of Foo Chow was seven killed and 14 wounded. The Chinese loss is estimated at 1,000 killed and 3,000 wounded. The Chinese man-of-war Yang Wee was exploded by a torpedo after it fired a broadside at the French torpedo-boat. The boiler of the latter was exploded by hand grenades thrown from the Yang Wee, after which the torpedo-boat was sunk to prevent its being captured by the Chinese. The French expected to occupy the heights commanding the Pagoda anchorage. The Chinese forts on the Min River are holding out well against the French bombardment. The French gunboats are still unable to pass down the river. The Chinese authorities are confident of the strength of their forts. It is reported that there are 75,000 Chinese troops in the vicinity of Foo Chow.

The following bulletin shows the progress of cholera in Italy the last twenty-four hours: deaths 38; new cases 78. At La Spezia in the last thirty-six hours there were 17 deaths.

Advices from Calcutta, India, state that a famine in Mysore is inevitable, owing to the drouth. The authorities are taking no steps to provide relief.

Ten head of cattle were killed at Elmhurst, Ill., yesterday, under the instructions of the State Veterinarian, Dr. Paaren. The post-mortem examination showed that the disease was pleuropneumonia of the most virulent type.

Dr. Salmon has submitted his report concerning pleuro-pneumonia in Illinois to the Bureau of Animal Industry. If the infection shall be traced to the herd of Mr. Dye, an extensive Ohio speculator in Jersey cattle, he says it is probable the disease has been sown among animals of nearly every State in the Union. The malady is unquestionably pleuro-pneumonia.

Aug. 28.—Admiral Courbet seems to have been entirely successful before Foo Chow. He silenced the principal Chinese forts without firing many guns. The Celestial troops fled like cowards before the fusillade. There is no confirmation of the sensational rumor that the Chinese had annihilated the French forces in Tonquin.

The following shows the progress of the cholera in Italy for the last twenty-four hours: Bergamo, 13 fresh cases; Bologna, 2 deaths, 1 fresh case; Campobasso, 6 deaths, 17 fresh cases; La-Spezia, 8 deaths, 19 fresh cases; Milan, 1 fresh case; Naples, 3 deaths; Parma, 5 deaths, 2 fresh cases; Turin, 5 deaths, 7 fresh cases. In the Province of Cuneo there were 27 fresh cases, of which 26 were in the Town of Busea; 21 of these cases have already proved fatal.

At Toulon, France, there were two deaths from cholera last night. At Mourillon, outside the city, there are five fresh cases, one fatal. The temperature has fallen suddenly.

There was one death from cholera at Marseilles last night. There were four deaths from cholera at Toulon to-day, two at Laseyne, and five at Marseilles. The record of cholera in the Toulon hospitals for the twenty-four hours ended this evening is: Admitted, 4; died, 1; under treatment, 37. Deaths from cholera in the departments of Southern France to-day, 31.

In Lima, Peru, yesterday, there was a storm of bullets for over six hours. Caceres entered the city with his rabble yelling and firing. The night before all the Government troops were withdrawn into the Cuartel and the palace, and the entry of Caceres, although not unexpected, was somewhat of a surprise. His men captured the Cuartel and the churches Mercede and San Augustin, from which they kept up a fusillade. They also attacked the Guadalupe Railroad station. About 150 persons were killed in Mercaderes and Bodegones streets and near the palace square, where the fire was hottest. Finally the Government troops made a sortie and drove out the mob. Caceres was accompanied by about ninety horsemen. They appeared to have been traveling all night, and were not in condition to fight with troops well fed and fresh from their beds. Three hundred prisoners were taken. Caceres escaped. All telegraph wires were cut for miles out of the city, and no trains run. Nothing occurred at Charillos. The cable staff is all right. Heavy guns were heard for some hours, but no news as to the locality of the firing was received up to 9:30 a. m. All is quiet this morning in Lima. Dead men and horses are being removed and pools of blood cleaned up. The fight in San Augustin Church proceeded with closed doors. Caceres is said to have 1,300 disciplined troops, who were to have attacked Callao. These may return. Last night there were no guards in the streets. All were in the Cuartel and palace.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

August 22.—The forest fires which originated on the plank road and crossed over to the East Tawas road, Mich., have done great damage to the crops, burning standing grain, hay in stack, baking potatoes in the ground, and burning farm fences several miles in extent. On the old Folly farm, fifteen tons of hay and the barn were burned yesterday, and two men had a narrow escape in rescuing some valuable horses which were pasturing on the place. Yesterday afternoon the woods nearly the entire length of the west side of Law's Lake were on fire. The big crossway connecting that town and Wilburtown will be greatly damaged, though not destroyed. A large tract of valuable cedar is now burning on the north side of Law's Lake. To the north of Nelson also fires can be seen. There is also a large fire in Hazen's timber. During last night a heavy northwest gale fanned the flames and caused the fire to run through the Beams and Newman tracts. Marshes and cedar swamps which no one can remember seeing dry are dry now. The house of Julius Hartman was burned, and only one article was saved from it. It is estimated that 5,000 acres are on fire and burned over. Loss by fire at Boonsborough, Iowa, $25,000. The most disastrous and destructive fire ever occurring in Eastern Ohio has just visited the thriving little village of Sarahsville, in Noble County, and came near sweeping the entire town away. Loss $70,000. Loss by fire at Hartford, Conn., $15,000. Cincinnati, O., $50,000. Augusta, Ga., $30,000. Danville, Va., $12,000. New Bedford, Mass., $30,000.

The United States steamship Talapoosa, was sunk off Cottage City, Mass., last night, by collision with another vessel. Four persons were drowned.

In the Greenback colliery, near Post Shamokin, Pa., seven men were suffocated by black damp while battling with a colliery fire.

August 23.—Loss by fire at Duluth, Minn., lumber yards, $100,000. Rathdrum, Idaho, $58,000. Spokane Falls, Wy. T., $20,000. The Michigan forest fires are under control.

A train on the New York & New England Railroad was thrown off the track near Quinebaug, Conn. One smoker and a passenger car fell down an embankment a distance of twenty feet. Many passengers were seriously injured.

Aug. 24.—Loss by fire at Cynthiana, Kentucky, $50,000. Independence, Ind., saw mill, $17,000. Peoria, Ill., $4,000. East Saginaw, Michigan, $25,000. Indianapolis, Indiana, $6,000.

Aug. 25.—Every building excepting one, was burned by the forest fires at Harmon City, Michigan. The black muck in the swamps is burning to the depth of several feet, burning under the roots of the large trees, which topple over into the burning mass. One million feet of logs were burned at West Bay City. Loss by fire at Fort Wayne, Ind., $12,000. Bourbon, Ind., $10,000. Shreveport, La., $35,000. Gravenhurst, Ont., $50,000.

Fire has been raging for three days in Rowa, a town in Austrian Galicia. Three hundred houses have been destroyed, and 3,000 persons are homeless. The fire also destroyed 114 dwellings and 327 farms in and about the large market town of Rozwadow. The harvest, just gathered, was all consumed. There is great dearth of provisions in the town.

Very heavy prairie fires are reported in Umatilla county, Oregon. These fires result from incendiarism, and create great excitement about the Umatilla Indian Agency and the towns of Alkali and Blalocko. Many square miles have been burned over. The destruction of grass is great. At latest accounts the fires were still fiercely raging. The result will be great hardship among many large stockmen of that region during the coming winter.

The heaviest rain-storm known for ten years visited Independence, Mo., last night. The rain fell to the depth of four and one-quarter inches. Lightning struck the Methodist church on Delaware street, tearing off the roof; also the windmill at the gas-works. John Walburn, fireman at the gas-works, was knocked insensible, but soon recovered.

During a recent storm off coast of Newfoundland four men and two women are known to have been lost. It is reported that several boats were lost in St. George's Bay.

Three young English students attending the Moody School at Greenfield, Mass., were drowned Monday evening while bathing.

Aug. 27.—Fire in the Renselaer Polytechnic Institute, at Troy, N. Y., caused a loss of $20,000. Loss by fire at Missouri Valley, Iowa, 6,000. Uhrichville, O., $35,000. Parkedale, Ont., $10,000. Sherman, Tex., $5,500.

Forest fires have committed great ravages in the vicinity of St. Francois du Lac, Quebec.

At Edwardsville, Kansas, Mrs. Maria Humphry was struck by lightning this morning and instantly killed. Much damage was done in the county during the storm and many frail houses wrecked. The crops were a little injured.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

During the week ending August 22, there were 197 failures in the United States and twenty-two in Canada. In both countries there were 220 failures last week.

It is thought that the value of the agricultural products of California this year will be $81,000,000. About $56,000,000 worth of the product will be exported.

Chicago millers complain of the appearance of "smut" in wheat received from Southern Minnesota and Southern Iowa. The "smut" renders the wheat almost useless for flour purposes.

Grain-Inspector Drake says that after a good deal of scouring in the mills "it may be turned into low grades of flour."

An English railway journal gives facts about the proposed extension of the railways of India which are of interest to the farmers of this country, as the competition of Indian wheat with American wheat is really a competition between Indian and American railways. The Government of India, it says, proposes to construct thirty-four lines belonging to private companies, with a total mileage of 3,432 and a capital of $121,440,000, and to encourage thirty projects by guarantees extending to 3,896 miles and costing $140,000,000. These sums are to be raised in part by Government loans and in part by private subscriptions encouraged by Government guarantees. It is believed that capital will also enter without the stimulus of Government guarantees into the work of building roads by private enterprise alone. The total mileage of India when the roads already under consideration are completed will not be much more than 20,000 miles, and the lines will be built slowly. Their usefulness to the Indian competitor of the farmers of the Mississippi Valley will be much impaired by the fact that military and political reasons will influence their routes and operation. The competitive causes that are at work to reduce the railway rates of the United States will be unknown in India, and in that fact exists a great measure of protection for us against our Asiatic rivals.

The financial condition of Mexico is much improved. The banks of the City of Mexico are offering loans freely, and at lower rates than at any time previous this year.

Heavy warm rains fell in Minnesota and Dakota August 23d. The fears of frost which prevailed have passed away. The corn crop will be greatly improved by the rainfall, and grain will not be damaged to any considerable extent. Wheat in Southern and Central Minnesota is in shock.

The Turkish Council of Ministers has approved of the proposed reduction of the petroleum dues.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the corn trade says: Heat and drouth continued throughout the week. The harvest is already finished in the earlier districts. Should the heat continue harvest will be finished this week. Returns so far received show the average yield of various kinds of grain per acre is as follows: Wheat, thirty-three bushels; barley, thirty-three; oats, twenty-nine; beans, twenty-six; peas, twenty-five. Rates for wheat are declining. The finest red wheat commands from thirty-four to thirty-six shillings, and white wheat thirty-eight shillings per quarter. Such prices never occurred before in this country. It is probable they will decline still more. Sales of English wheat the last week 39,993 quarters, at 36 shillings 4 pence, against 37,603 quarters at 43 shillings 8 pence the corresponding week last year. The condition of foreign trade is tangled and indescribable. Cash offers only what values really are. The supply on hand is large. There were eight arrivals off coast. One sold, nine were withdrawn, and four remained, including one American spring wheat. Thirty cargoes are due. Wheat cargoes on passage or for shipment meet with a restricted and cautious demand. Flour is cheaper. It declined during the week 1 shilling a sack all round. Maize is weaker. In barley, beans and peas nothing is doing. Oats are dull. Linseed is quiet and unchanged.

Reports from the twenty-six leading clearing-houses of the United States for the last week show a decrease of 24.7 per cent in the aggregate clearances. In New York the decrease was 31.6 per cent; in Chicago there was an increase of 2.1 per cent. Outside of New York the decrease was but 5 per cent.

W. R. Penick, wholesale druggist of St. Joseph Mo., failed August 27. His assets are said to be equal to his liabilities—$75,000.

Frosts the night of August 24th, seriously damaged the corn and buckwheat crops in Northeastern New York and in portions of Vermont, Connecticut, and New Hampshire.

Chicago elevators contained August 23, 3,089,615 bushels of wheat, 1,258,324 bushels of corn, 382,757 bushels of oats, 206,347 bushels of rye, and 22,822 bushels of barley. Total, 4,959,865 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 7,880,840 bushels a year ago. During last week the stock increased 1,061,858 bushels, including an increase of 435,053 bushels of wheat and 297,740 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada is 17,124,541 bushels of wheat, 3,676,074 bushels of corn, 1,821,699 bushels of oats, 551,482 bushels of rye, and 191,316 bushels of barley. These figures are smaller than those of a week ago by 119,314 in wheat and 752,343 in corn.

GIVING WITHOUT MONEY.

The poor give more than the rich. This proposition holds good as a general principle. Money is by no means the only thing to give in this world; neither do large gifts necessarily contribute more to the happiness of the receiver than small gifts.

Go into any country community and converse with the people. Ask who ministers most to their happiness. You will very likely be told of some poor people who go from house to house, wherever sorrow and suffering demand consolation or relief.

It is astonishing how much one without money can give! A kind word, a helping hand—the warm sympathy that rejoices with those that do rejoice and weeps with those who weep!

No man is so poor, no woman is so poor, as not to be able to contribute largely to the happiness of those around them.

Look on the bright side. It is the right side. The times may be hard but it will make them no easier to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is the sunshine, and not the cloud, that gives beauty to the flower. There is always before and around us that which should cheer and fill the heart with warmth and gladness. The sky is blue ten times where it is black once. You have troubles it may be. So have others. None are free from them—and perhaps it is as well that none should be. They give sinew and tone to life—fortitude and courage to man. That would be a dull sea and the sailor would never acquire skill, where there was nothing to disturb its surface. It is the duty of every one to extract all the happiness and enjoyment he can from within and without him; and above all he should look on the bright side. What though things do look a little dark? The lane will have a turning, and the night will end in broad day. In the long run the great balance rights itself. What appears ill becomes well—that which appears wrong, right.

"NON-ESSENTIALS," WHAT ARE THEY?

VERY frequent do we hear the expression, "We agree upon the essentials in Christianity, but upon the non-essentials we differ." The parties who say this, mean, I suppose, that there are certain matters of faith and practice that are necessary to Salvation, and that, upon these they all agree. (that is the various so called Orthodox and Evangelical churches.) And that the matters concerning which they do not see, or understand alike, are not necessary to Salvation, and may be believed or practiced, or not, as they may elect, God being indifferent in the case.

As a church we have always met this position of the Sectarian world, by the simple proposition if the so called non-essentials is a matter to be believed, or practiced, or both, by virtue of a positive command of God, and applying to the present generation, that, it is essential to Salvation, on the ground, that Jesus declared that "Man should not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God," and "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth, the will of my Father which is in heaven."

To these who say a birth of the Holy Spirit is not essential, and to those who affirm that it is not necessary to be born of the water, we always reply, that Jesus saith, "Verily, verily I say unto thee; Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." If they would accept the Inspired Translation, we would quote, "Break not my commandments to save your lives," and "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so to do, he shall in no wise be saved in the kingdom of heaven." Men can teach by example as well as by precept, either in obedience to law, or in disobedience. And it is written, "Therefore, to him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." And "Whosoever committeth sin, transgresseth also the law; for sin is the transgression of the law."

Every duty is essential either for our temporal or eternal well-being. It was essential for Noah to build the Ark of the form, size, and material that God commanded; had he deviated in either particular, he would have come under condemnation, and it would never have been written to his glory, that "In all things whatsoever God commanded Noah, so did he." It was essential that Moses should build the Tabernacle according to the "pattern" that God gave him. It was essential that the people should "look" at the brazen serpent, erected on a pole in the wilderness by Moses, in order that they might "live," or be saved from the effects of the bite of the venomous living serpents. Not merely to believe that they would be healed if they did look; but to look was the essential act.

It was essential for Joshua and his fellow Israelites to march round the walls of Jericho seven days, once a day, and seven times on the seventh day; and it was essential that the priests should blow their horns, and for the people to shout, in order to obtain the promised display of divine power in the overthrow of the massive walls of Jericho. It was essential to the healing of Naaman the Assyrian leper, that he should dip himself seven times, and in the river Jordan. It is essential to do as God commands at all times, in order to receive the favor or blessing promised, whether that blessing be a present temporal, physical, or spiritual one, or that which concerns the world to come.

The principle is clearly taught in the revelation of August, 1831.

"But he that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth a commandment with a doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned. Who am I that made man, saith the Lord, that will hold him guiltless that obeys not my commandments? Who am I, saith the Lord, that have promised and have not fulfilled? I command and a man obeys not, I revoke, and they receive not the blessing; then they say in their hearts, This is not the work of the Lord, for his promises are not fulfilled. But wo unto such, for their reward lurketh beneath and not from above."

It seems to be hardly necessary to say to Latter Day Saints, that the promises of God are conditional, or that God is unchangeable; and that in times past failure to keep his commandments brought sore trials, and heavy afflictions upon the disobedient, as Paul said to the Hebrews, "For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation," &c. If transgression and disobedience, i. e., doing what they ought not, and not doing what they ought to have done, brought punishment or a "just recompense of reward," God, who is no "respector of persons," will surely punish transgression and disobedience to-day as in former times. The church was commanded fifty years ago, to purchase all the land in the region around about the land which was appointed for the beginning of the gathering of the Saints. They were told that if they did not purchase the land, they would be scourged by their enemies, and driven from the land. They failed to obey, and were scattered, and but few remain to receive an inheritance, as the word said should be the case. The church treated lightly the things they had received, and brought upon themselves condemnation. The Lord declared that they would get into bondage, in the statement that he would raise up a man like unto Moses to deliver them from bondage; and that he would lead them like Israel of old. Israel was forty years in the wilderness before they were permitted to enter Canaan; in the fall of 1833 the Saints were driven out of Jackson county, Missouri, and particularly Independence; and in 1873, or forty years after, a branch of the church was organized in Independence, by Bro. E. C. Brand, (I believe). As Israel of old was in bondage, so is Israel of today, not slaves or bondmen in Egypt, it is true, but a worse bondage if anything, that of the mind, or spirit, as witness the abject fear of the leaders, on the part of the people of Utah, doing as they are told, without questioning the justice or righteousness of the counsel, submission in meekness, and with no courage or apparent desire to assert their right as citizens of this great Republic, to freedom of thought, and speech, and action.

This man to be raised up should lead the people out of bondage, and how? Evidently by leading them back to the old paths, or to return to the "former commandments," "not only to say but to do," and to lead them to remember the Book of Mormon; for it was by treating lightly these commandments, and by forgetting the Book of Mormon, that they went into sin, and darkness, in blindness and unbelief, led captive by Satan at his will. All such pretenders to the presidency of the church as Brigham Young, J. J. Strang, Sidney Rigdon, and others, led those who followed them to disregard the word of the Lord in many respects, notably, however, on the marriage question, on the gathering, and on tithing.

The latest commandments given on the "gathering" through Joseph Smith, were to "gather into the regions round about," a certain particular spot where the "beginning of the gathering," took place. Those regions were designated as Jackson county, and counties round about. These so called leaders, disregarding the command to gather into the "regions round about," went off, with their followers to Utah, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, and elsewhere. It matters not, if as it is argued, and may safely be admitted, that the Lord revoked the command to gather to Independence, and build a temple, and did not require it at the hands of that people any more; yet the fact remains, that the command to gather into the regions round about was not revoked, but reiterated in the revelation of 1873, given to the church through the present Joseph, and endorsed by General Conference, as being what it purported to be, a "revelation from God." Now the Presidency of the Reorganized Church, have sought to honor the revelation or former commandments, and those which were given after, (except it may be—the "word of wisdom" not fully), and to remember the Book of Mormon. Now as far as the "gathering" is concerned, its essentiality or non-essentiality, depends on these two points. First. Did God command it, and does he now command it? Second. What was its purpose or object? To say that God did not command it, is to deny the revelations given through the former president of the church, and that given through the present president, and to repudiate the voice of the General Conference in its acceptance of the same as a revelation from God. Is the church prepared to take this ground, and to abide the results? Let the Elders ponder this question well, as they may have to take positive ground ere long on the question. If it is the law of God, what will you do in the case of those who reject it? If it is not of God, then what shall be done with the revelations which have been received heretofore as the word of God on the subject? What was the object or purpose of gathering? A temporal or eternal salvation? If the latter, then for reasons that all can see, it must form part of the gospel, and must be preached as such, must be believed, and must be obeyed, or else salvation hereafter can not be assured. If a part of the gospel now, it must have been a part of it in Paul's day, and whenever and wherever the gospel was preached. And if not part of the gospel then, it is not essential to salvation in the world to come. It must therefore be essential for a temporal salvation, as the ark was essential to save from the dangers of the flood. This appears to be its purpose, even to save from various evils, calamities, &c., which were to come upon the world. See sec. 45, par. 12, 14 Doctrine and Covenants; Luke 21: 34-36; Rev. 3: 10; Isa. 26: 20, 21. No issue could justly be taken with any one who does not choose to gather into "the regions round about," or to any particular city or town. If it is a command of God, designed to save the obedient from temporal ills, those who ignore it, must abide the consequences, or in other words suffer with the world. But if the ground is taken that there is no commandment in force requiring gathering anywhere; then issue can be taken. If the doctrine be repudiated as not being of God, or in other words, if the revelations on the subject are denied, then the Church must take issue with any who so deny, if any do. Tithing is essential as a temporal measure, and is also commanded of God. See revelations of July 8th, 1838, and October 6th, 1861; and if not a part of the gospel, it is essential to its promulgation. Steam is not a part of the engine, yet it is very essential to the driving of the machinery; without it it would be of but little practical benefit. Air is not a part of the body, but without it the body would die, would be but lifeless clay. The revelation of 1861 expressly says:

"In order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel; and as a means of fulfilling the law, the Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing," &c.

Its essential character is seen, by the words of the 2nd paragraph, "As I live, saith the Lord, in the manner ye execute this matter, so shall ye be judged in the day of judgment." A most serious admonition. It is essential to the promulgation of the gospel, and that is essential to the salvation of the souls of millions perhaps, for they can not hear without a preacher, and he can not preach except he be sent, and how can he be sent unless the church has the means to send him, and to provide for the family he may leave at home? Is tithing then a non-essential, and yet God declares, he will hold the Twelve and Bishop responsible for the manner in which they execute this law? If they are to execute this law, (no matter just now, what the term "execute" may mean), and God will judge them at the day of judgment for a non-performance of duty in the matter, how can the Church say that it is not essential for them to obey the law? What does the revelation of February, 1831, say concerning the "law."

"He that receiveth my law, and doeth it, the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it, and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you."

If tithing is the law, or part of the law of God, given for the government of this church, then it is evident that it is not only essential for "the promulgation of the gospel," but for membership in the church also. If it is not binding on the church to observe the "law of tithing," it can not be obligatory upon the Bishop and the Twelve to "execute" the law; and the revelation of 1861 can not apply to the Bishop and Twelve of this church. But if it does, and that can not be doubted by those who believe that the revelation of 1861 came from God, then the church is as much under obligation to observe the law, as the Bishop and the Twelve are to teach, explain, or execute it. We argue that it was as much the duty of the people to be baptized as it was for the former day apostles to baptise them, as they were commanded to do in Matthew 28: 19. And the Elders are to see that the "law is kept," that is, those Elders whose especial duty is to execute any especial law, or those whose especial duty it is to enforce the law. It makes no difference whether there is any call now or ever will be to build a temple, lay the foundation of Zion, or to pay the debts of the Presidency; the tithing was also "for the priesthood," or as I understand, for the support of their families, and to send them out to preach the gospel; and that there is urgent need of means to this end, no one who understands the necessities of the work in this direction can deny.

Referring to the whole church, and no individual, I would say, that I think the time has come for it to decide what is, and what is not the doctrine, the faith, the order, the law of the church, and then to refuse to recognize as its representatives those who will not teach or obey what it determines as its faith and order.

I am in favor of full latitude for thought and expression on all mere theories or speculations; but I am in favor of authoritative declaration of what is the doctrine of the church as the essentials to salvation; and what are the essentials to the harmonious working of church machinery. It is, however, quite well understood what steps are necessary to a union with the church; it ought to be as clearly understood what faith and works are essential to a retention of the union. If a General Assembly is not practicable at present, at any one time and place, yet it is possible for the several quorums to meet at such time and place as they may agree, and remain until every mooted point is understood or settled; and then a general meeting of all could be arranged, and a comparison of notes be made, and the points of disagreement, if any, could be canvassed and understood. To say that a unity of understanding could not be reached, is to say that the church has lost or forfeited the Spirit of God; or if not, that the Spirit will not guide into all truth, and that God refuses to give wisdom to them that ask for it. When the quorums have agreed among themselves, and meet with the others, and should not agree upon a point or so, then after each side shall have presented its reasons, and there is not a unity of understanding reached, then will come the necessity of an appeal to the source of wisdom, and will be followed by a satisfactory answer. However, it is hardly possible that quorums, as such, would differ; but that individuals in each would in all probability take similar grounds on different points, and if one could become unanimous, all could, and likely would, if led by the same spirit. The effort is worth the making at least.

Some such movement doubtless was contemplated in the revelation of 1882; for the Spirit said: "Ye can not now prosecute missions in many foreign lands, nor is it expedient that the Elders of the first quorums be sent out of the land of America, until the work of the reorganization of my church be more fully established, and a greater unity of understanding between them be obtained." There should be first a unity of understanding among the individual members of the several quorums; and to this end they should get together as quorums, and come to an understanding on points of church polity and doctrine, and then compare their findings one with the other, and if there is a disagreement, discuss the subject, quorum with quorum, till all can understand it, and if there should be a failure to reach an understanding between any two or more quorums, then let wisdom from above be sought for and obtained.

Before I close the subject of essentials, I wish to refer to the use of water instead of wine in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. It is argued that a revelation was given at one time that it did not matter what was used,—i. e., what kind of bread, and whether water or wine. But if there was such a revelation, and given at the time named, i. e., when the saints were journeying toward the "promised land, and were passing through a country where there was only corn bread to be had, and no wine only that which they would have to buy of their enemies, perhaps, it is no excuse for branches who have abundant time and opportunity to prepare wine from one season till the next. The declaration of the revelation found in section 86, Doctrine and Covenants, is that in the sacraments "that it should be wine, yea pure wine of the grape."

In section 17, par. 22, it says: "It is expedient that the church meet together often, to partake of bread and wine in remembrance of the Lord Jesus." Then follows the command as to how the "wine" shall be administered. "He shall take the cup also, and say, O God, the Eternal Father; we ask thee in the name of thy Son Jesus Christ, to bless and sanctify this wine to the souls of all those who drink of it, that they may do it in remembrance of the blood of thy Son which was shed for them," &c. I contend that I have no more right to substitute the word water for wine, and change the formula given, and say bless this water, or as some say bless this "water as wine," than I have to substitute cheese for bread in the paragraph preceding, or to substitute sprinkling instead of baptism, and say I sprinkle you in the name of the Father, &c. I resolved several years ago to not partake of water for wine, nor ask a blessing on it, unless it was not possible to procure wine, and that can hardly be the case in this country; for even if it can not be made by the branch, it can be bought, pure sweet wine, made for sacramental purposes, by those who are not known as enemies, and can be bought in quantities to suit. If it is not essential to do as God has commanded, or to follow the pattern he has given, why in the name of common sense were they given at all? We are expressly told to "Give heed to the words of eternal life; for you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God." If we are honest in our publicly expressed belief in present revelation; and honestly believe that God has spoken in these days, let us decide just how much we believe has come from God, whether every purported revelation, or just certain ones, and then live up to them, or else abandon the doctrine of present revelation, and stand on the New Testament alone. For my part I know that God has revealed light and truth and wisdom in these days, both to myself and through myself, as well as through others; and when I abandon what I have known of this latter-day work, I expect to be consistent, and take the only course left, and that is to disbelieve in Christianity altogether. I am not satisfied with this "daubing with untempered mortar." This "milk and water" policy. I am prepared to learn by the authoritative declaration of a General Assembly of the spiritual authorities of the church, just what the law and order of the church is; and if I do not feel that I can conscientiously and consistently teach and practice it, I propose to step down and out. And if the church does not hold what I believe to be truth, and essential to salvation, and will not consent to my holding and teaching it, I will teach it without its consent, and step outside to do it, as I have done before.

But I consider that this church stands pledged to the reception of truth continually, and has put itself on the platform of progressive thought; yet it must have a positive theology, and in the very nature of its organization, has the right to declare what is truth and what is error; what shall be believed and taught, and what not. Not that it shall say to any one, you must believe this or that, and you must abide with us, whether you will or not; but that you must believe this or that, or you can not abide with us, and you may depart in peace. We claim that we have apostles like as in days of old; but in practice they are considered as another of the non-essentials. They are treated as mere figure heads, and the fault may be their own, in not occupying ground confessedly their own. But be that as it may, whoever heard of any one quoting the sayings of Apostle Ells, or Briggs, or Gurvey, or Kelley, or Lambert, or A. H. Smith, or Lake, as being of authority, or of equal weight with that of Paul, or Peter, or James, or John. We boast of "signs following the believer," and of possessing "spiritual gifts," and yet say that the devil is ever ready to imitate the genuine, and we must be extremely cautious; and that we do not particularly desire any of the outward gifts; we want wisdom, (and show a lack of wisdom in the very position), and the fruits of the Spirit. Why should we not have wisdom? Yes; those to whom the Spirit wills to give it. "But we all need wisdom." I am strongly inclined to believe it. But must we not "covet earnestly the best gifts," and is not that wisdom? It does not say gift, but gifts. Well, what are the best gifts, for the others may be non-essentials? There are no non-essential gifts. The idea of a gift of God being non-essential is preposterous. One member can not say to another, I have no need of you. If there was one gift better than others, and all shall covet, and possess that one, where would be the body? for it would be but one member only. The best gifts for one may not be the best for another; and so the Spirit divides "severally as he will." Each gift is best for the purpose it was designed. The eye is the best gift to the physical body to see with, but not the best to hear with; nor are the ears the best gift to talk with, nor the tongue to walk with, nor the feet to handle with, nor can the hands do the work of the lungs, nor they the work of the stomach, &c. There are no non-essentials in the body of Christ, as there are none in the human structure. There are no non-essentials anywhere; every thing has a use, is good for some purpose. There is one great essential in spiritual matters, and that is to learn that God says what he means, and means what he says.

OUR DESTINY.

"FOR I have created him for my glory, I have formed him, yea I have made him."—Isa. 43:7.

If there exists an Intelligence and Power, designing and creative, and sustaining all things toward and for an object, it must be to subserve the interests of man, or a higher grade or order of beings—evidently not a lower. The Psalmist says:

"When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers; the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him, and the Son of Man that thou visitest him."

Made a little lower than the angels, crowned with glory and honor, dominion over the beasts of the field, fowls and fishes, &c. "When I consider the heavens," &c. The idea that God has so much to do and so much importance is attached to this speck in the universe—this planet on which we have a being, an existence, which above, beneath and around us, is so wrapt in mystery that the power of man has never been able to dispel, was a thing which in my early religious experience used to trouble my thought. "When I considered the heavens," the starry hosts, and the fact of innumerable worlds, it exhausted my thought, and blotted out comprehension in the twinkling of an eye; and I said, What is man, and what does he amount to? Certainly in a corporeal or sensual thought, nothing. My heart was faint; here my way was barred, and I could go no farther; but when I turned my thought inward, I said, What for am I? Why do I exist? My being was not of my own projection; or if being pre-existent, I knew more than I do now. My present ignorance must of necessity render my conclusion, or opinion, faulty, imperfect, insufficient. On the other hand I found myself possessed of aspiration, desire, wants, capacity, which perhaps were boundless, reaching far out, over and beyond the possibilities of this world and life of the senses, into the realm of the unknown, and secured only by the exercise of hope.

Socrates said that "the power to conceive the idea of immortality, proves man to be immortal." It did not satisfy me. It is an argument, but proof is a strong word. Nothing but immortality can prove man immortal. To-morrow will always be in the future, no matter how reasonable or probable evidence may make it; at any rate the to-morrow which lies beyond the grave is so wrapt in doubt and mystery, and that, too, not among the ignorant so far as the wisdom of this world is concerned; on the contrary, an argument is claimed against the idea of immortality from the fact that so many intellectual people oppose it, and consider all the claims that analogy, or religion, can or has made in its favor, far too weak to justify a belief in its truth. But after all, the faith of the Stoics in all ages has been a negation of the hopes of others, rather than a hearty affirmation of anything; and the Jews required a sign, and the Greeks sought for wisdom, and Jew and Gentile are still unsatisfied, and still continue their search for both.

The quality of this planet, or earth, may be superior in its adaptability to produce the changes which may ultimate in grandeur and glory for man. The interest centered here is abundantly testified by the Scriptures. Paul, in Ephesians, 1:9, 10, says:

"Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to the good pleasure which He hath proposed in himself, that in the dispensation of the fulness of times, he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth, even in him."

When is this gathering to take place?

"And righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out my own elect from the four quarters of the earth: for there shall be my tabernacle, and it shall be called Zion, a New Jerusalem."

"And the Lord said unto Enoch, Then shall you and all your city meet him there; and it shall be Zion, which shall come forth out of all the creations which I have made."

"And plagues shall go forth, and they shall not be taken from the earth, until I have completed my work, until all shall know me who remain, even from the least unto the greatest, and shall lift their voice, and with voice together sing this new song, saying, The Lord hath brought again Zion; the Lord hath redeemed his people; the Lord hath gathered all things in one; the Lord hath brought down Zion from above; the Lord hath brought up Zion from beneath."—Doctrine and Covenants, pages 133, 229.

"And I, John, saw the Holy City, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven; and I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with him."

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write, for these words are true and faithful."

I am glad John did write, and Joseph Smith and Paul; for I believe it. It furnishes the grandest hope that has ever dawned upon this imperfect life. "For I reckon," said Paul, "that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope." It must be so. The present scene is a probation and discipline, which precludes a future life for which it is a preparation. The high law of duty and of sacrifice, can not reasonably be calculated from earthly limitations; and our obedience to the higher law, to duty, demands an eternal existence for completion and justification. "For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, waiting for the adoption; to wit, the redemption of our body."

When I look backward upon the past, and upon present history of the human race, and see how plentiful sorrow and suffering have been and are; the pangs of hunger of body and of soul that humanity's flood of tears has never ceased to flow, How can I reconcile this all with God's justice and mercy, were it not for the mission of Christ, who said, "I am come, that they might have life, and have it more abundantly." "Brought to light through the gospel," given to us. "Not in word only, but in power and assurance." Humanity, some creature made in God's image is going out of sight, out into the darkness, the great unknown upon a bridge of faith, stolid indifference, ignorance or despair, every second of time; a multitude every day. What provision has God made for us all? The limitless expanse argues room for all. The aspirations of every soul signify its possibilities; and more, the birth of new desires is the promise of greater achievement. This seems to be true, whether in the ascending or descending scale. What is our destiny? "As the stars differ one from the other in glory, so also is the resurrection from the dead." "All that are in their graves shall hear. They that hear shall live." There as here, there will be blind people that have eyes, deaf ears, hearts that understand not. Like Judas, who after "his transgression went to his own place." God will look after his own vindication of character in justice, mercy and truth. Sin is a transgression of law, known law, else no moral penalty can be justly attached.

Not one person in a hundred ever read the Bible. Fourteen hundred million people in the world to-day, and only one hundred and twenty million have Bibles. How few ever lived who have heard of Christ. God will take care of the sparrows and of them. What is our destiny? Light has come to us, and condemnation will follow its rejection. Paul said to some called to be saints, "Some have not the knowledge of God. I speak this to your shame." And they disputed the truth of the resurrection. To the Ephesians he said, "That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him, the eyes of your understanding being enlightened, that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the Saints; and what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward, who believe according to his mighty power which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead. "Begotten again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead," says Peter. John the Baptist came to prepare the way of the Lord, and to make straight his paths then so crooked, through long years of tradition. The law of God had been made void, ineffectual, laid aside "for the doctrines and commandments of men." Jesus and his disciples presented a religion, by which men could worship profitably, "in Spirit and in truth." It was a light which the learned ignorance of his time, however, could not comprehend, surrounded by thick gloom and spiritual darkness. A system of religion by and through which the righteousness of God was revealed to the individual. I see "the King of Glory" in the Judgment Hall, surrounded by priestly hate and bigotry, that could not brook opposition, crowned with thorns, and in prophetic derision hailed as "King of the Jews." With arms outstretched, with pierced hands and feet, in expiring agony I hear him say, "It is finished;" and the record says there was an earthquake, "and the veil of the temple was rent in twain;" and no intervention of priest, save to teach men "the way," was longer needed. Man himself could enter into the holy of holies. A pilgrimage to the holy mountain to Jerusalem was no longer necessary for the true worshipper; but in spirit through faith and obedience to his name, the true worshipper could come to "know of the doctrine," and worship intelligently and profitably anywhere.

Centuries have rolled away; clouds of apostasy from the faith that once brought salvation to men, have obscured the light of the Sun of Righteousness. "Darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people." Babylon, mystery, which John by the Spirit of God foresaw, is a matter of history and a fact. Churches, temples, religions, everywhere; blind followers of blind leaders, whose disposition to shut the door of the kingdom of heaven against men, neither going in nor suffering those who would enter," is just as good as it was in Jesus' time, as the Elders of Christ's Church can abundantly and truthfully testify. Paul said, in Acts 17, that "God had made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth," that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him." This feeling process has been going on through the ages, to worship is an instinct of the race that argues God and immortality. The prehistoric ruins of so many temples and symbols of worship on this and the other continents of the globe, prove that it is not education, but a part of the being and nature of man. To "worship in spirit and in truth," is the highest means of moral and spiritual elevation possible to man, bringing him nearer to his Maker, learning of His ways assimilating to his divine character in purity and holiness, through the mediation, atonement and reconciliation of Jesus Christ, our Lord. At the times of the ignorance of men in the past ages of the apostasy from the true worship as instituted by Christ, God is willing to wink; but now commands all men everywhere to repent and obey "the everlasting covenant," which so long and so ruthlessly has been broken, "because he has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness, not according to the creeds of men; and hath given assurance unto all men by the testimony of prophecy fulfilled, the advent of Christ, the testimony of the apostles of his resurrection, and to make the testimony of God's servants of all ages secure to us in our day, he has also "begotten us again unto a lively hope," from the darkness of doubt, uncertainty and confusion, concerning our future destiny which babilon's confusion had brought mankind unto, by dispelling the darkness of the past. That the angel which John saw has parted the clouds, bearing the message which reveals the righteousness of God to men, is a glorious and accomplished fact in our day; and the hearts of God's Saints rooted and grounded in the faith, are enabled to endure as seeing him who is invisible. Are enabled to stand, rejoicing in the hope of the glory of God, and the promise of the final and incorruptible inheritance. The just shall live by faith. As to Abraham and the Saints of all ages, so the righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith to us. God said to Abram, "Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art—northward and southward, and eastward and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever; and I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth. Yet Abram was one of those who "died in faith, not having received the promise." Scarcely a Jew owns a foot of that land, unless recently purchased. Paul says, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard; neither have entered the heart of man the things which God hath prepared;" &c.; but God bath revealed them unto us by his Spirit. The hand of the Lord was upon Ezekiel, 37th chapter, and carried him away in the Spirit; and he saw the whole house of Israel in the resurrection, and brought and "placed in their own land."

Abram was assured of this, because the righteousness and faithfulness of God had already been secured by the birth of Isaac when himself and Sarah were old, and according to reason could not expect the fulfillment of the promise, "Sarah thy wife, shall have a son." Now Abraham and Sarah were old and well stricken in age; therefore Sarah laughed within herself; and the Lord said unto Abraham, "Is any thing too hard for the Lord?" Isaac was born, and although time has not permitted the fulfillment of all the promises made to him, yet his seed through Isaac has become already "as numerous as the sand of the sea shore." The whole creation groaneth and travaileth together in pain," and has while man and beast have existed.

Will the better estate be a reality to us? Not here, certainly. The longer we live, the more certain it is, that our ideal is not possible in this life. Can the power of the grave, the awful fact of the dissolution of all the senses men grasp, be annulled by any hope reasonably grounded? "If a man die, shall he live again?" Who was it that said, "I am he that was dead and am alive forevermore, and have the keys of death and hell?" It was he that said to Mary "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." It was he in the faith of whose gospel and of himself, my mother fell asleep, surrounded by the learned ignorance and skepticism of the world, that by its wisdom knew not God in any age; and with hands folded across her breast, awaits the justification and glorious triumph of her faith in the Son of God. A glorious hope; "but hope which is seen is not hope;" but having seen the promises afar off, then do we with patience wait for it, "likewise the spirit helpeth our infirmities." Yes, this is the key which unlocks the mystery of the ages. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his." "Men and brethren what shall we do?" "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." "Except a man be born again, he can not enter the kingdom of God; can not know of the doctrine" except he do his will, as expressed in his covenant. The "key of knowledge" has been taken away by priestcraft, restored by the angel with the gospel message, with a knowledge of God and a hope of his calling, and the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the Saints. Job was afflicted in body, forsaken of friends; but he looked for the reward of the inheritance in the latter day upon the earth, when the meek shall inherit it. Jesus says: "In the world ye shall have tribulation." As a discipline and a means, this life and its trials are all right; but as an end I should be entirely dissatisfied, and call it a failure to accomplish anything like that which an eternal life or existence reveals in possibility. What is our destiny? Attainment to the stature of the ful-ness of Christ in the scale of moral grandeur and spiritual power, will certainly bring us to the opportunities for exercise of those powers—reason and analogy demonstrate this—to this the revealments of God by his Spirit through his servants in all ages abundantly testify. In this hope I shall try to endure and fall asleep in a faith predicated upon evidence that appeals to my reason, my affections, all my heart's wants—in the reception through gospel obedience of the Spirit of God, whose power for searching the deep things of God I have been made the recipient of during the last year. I am not satisfied with present attainment; but with David, "when I awake in his likeness, I shall be satisfied."

FARMER GORDON'S ECONOMY.

Stephen Gordon was a rich farmer with broad acres of fertile land and money at interest but with all this, was always talking economy. "We must economize," was always his theme. His family consisted of a wife and three boys, and an uncle of his, an old man of more than seventy years.

One morning he entered the kitchen where his wife had just been working over butter, and had the great balls all ready for market. "My! Hannah! What butter! It makes a fellow's mouth water to look at it, and I've got forty cents a pound all winter; it's so much better'n most folks' butter they are willing to pay a good price for't. How much have you made this month?"

"This makes forty pounds this month."

"Well, that ain't bad this time of the year."

"No, but it's real hard work to work over so much butter by hand this cold weather. If I only had a butterworker, it would be so much easier; it makes me very tired when I work over ten or fifteen pounds. Can't I have a butter-worker, Stephen?"

"Nonsense, wife! Pay five dollars for a butter-worker? Why, my mother had a large dairy, and she never wanted a butter-worker; she preferred to do it with her hands and save the money rather than spend it on every new thing that came along."

"Well, your father had more grass to mow than you ever had, and he never had a mowing machine or a raking machine, and you have both."

"Well, don't you see how much time and labor they save? Why, I should have to hire twice the men I do if it wasn't for them."

"And don't you suppose it would save me the same time and strength too?"

"Well, perhaps you can have one some time; but I have got so many things to buy this spring; I've got to have a new horse and wagon, and several new fences, and I don't know what. I tell you wife, we must economize all we can," said Stephen, as he left the room.

Yes, that was always the way when she wanted anything; perhaps she might have it some time, but now she must economize. This her husband said five years ago, when she wanted a new stove, and she was using the old cracked stove yet. It was just so about everything in the house. Her home was bare and comfortable. Didn't she economize in everything? Wasn't her wardrobe threadbare, and also that of her boys? Didn't she economize in everything but her table? Oh yes?—and she rattled her dishes in a way that surprised Uncle Moses in the corner. She would economize in a way that Mr. Gordon would feel it.

"Hannah, you shall have a butter-worker if you want it," said Uncle Moses.

"No, uncle; I will have one, but you shan't give it to me. Stephen can afford it, or I would not have asked him. I have taken too much from you alreday, but now I am going to economize so I can have all I need. Husband is always talking economy to his family but I can't see any way that he practices it himself;—but he is going to."

The next day at dinner Mr. Gordon said: "I guess you forgot to put cream in the coffee, Hannah."

"No I didn't forget, but I am saving my cream for butter. I must make all I can, for we must economize." And a little later: "I'm ready for a pie now, wife, or perhaps you've one of those nice puddings?"

"No, Stephen, it costs a great deal to make pastry and puddings, and it takes time, too. We must economize, you know."

"Papa, can't I have a sled? You said last winter perhaps I might this winter," said little Willie the six-year-old.

"And can't I have a pair of skates?" said Fred, a boy of ten. It is such good skating, please buy them for me."

"No indeed, boys, we must economize. I never had a sled or skates, and I guess you can do without them."

"You must have lost lots of fun, then. I'm real sorry for you," said Willie, with tears in his eyes. "I shan't let my boys go without when I'm a man."

A week passed by. In that time the Gordon family had no pastry, cakes or puddings. Now Mr. Gordon liked all kinds of sweetmeats, and it was hard for him to do without them. He craved them so much that when he went to the store he bought half a pound of block sugar and filled his pockets. He had never "economized" on his likings, and he prided himself on a good table. On going home one night he found the minister and his wife making a call. He was glad to see them, of course; and now, he thought to himself, Hannah will have a decent supper once more. But what was his consternation to see, as he seated himself at the table, nothing but bread and butter, cold boiled ham and apple sauce.

"Well," said Mr. Gordon to his wife, "I am afraid the pastor will think your supper a scant one."

"I'm sorry, Stephen, but the fact is, we have been economizing lately, and they came so late I had no time to prepare anything different."

"This delicious bread and butter needs no apology, to say nothing of the other good things," said the clergyman.

Poor Stephen! His pride was deeply hurt as he contrasted his table with others that had been spread.

"Have you met with losses recently?" asked the pastor's wife, with concern.

"Oh no," said Mrs. Gordon; "but in the spring, on a farm, there are a great many things wanted, and we are economizing in order to meet expenses."

The next morning Mr. Gordon called on a neighbor, Mr. Jones, to pay him for a pair of young cattle. "Here is the money for the steers," said Mr. Gordon, handing him a roll of bills.

Mrs. Jones was working over her butter in the kitchen. She had a butter-worker, and it was astonishing how fast she made the butter into cakes and stamped them, draining out every drop of the buttermilk without hardly any exertion, while Mr. Gordon watched her.

"Got a butter-worker, I see."

"Yes; and I don't know how I ever lived without one. It is so easy working butter now compared to what it used to be."

"Here, wife, is twenty dollars you wanted for a cloak. Give Mr. Gordon a receipt for fifty dollars."

Mr. Gordon stared. Twenty dollars for a cloak! When had he given his wife that sum for anything? He looked around the kitchen. Here was a model range, and everything convenient and handy with which the farmer's wife could do her work. What a contrast to Hannah's kitchen! He well knew that he was better able to afford such an outfit than his neighbor was.

On returning, Mr. Gordon first stopped at the barn. Here everything was in order and everything convenient to work with. Was it possible that he had made Hannah do all the economizing? In one corner of the shed was something that looked a little like a sled. His little boy had been trying to make one, and the words of the child rang in his ears, "I shan't let my boys go without when I'm a man." He then went into the house. "Where is Hannah?" he inquired of Uncle Moses.

"She's gone over to see Stiles' sick child."

The farmer sat down and took his paper, but his thoughts were too busy to read. He had never looked so mean in his own eyes before. He was still angry with his wife for humbling him so the night before, by giving the minister and his wife such a supper. Yet now, as he thought it over, he wondered how he could have blamed her.

"Uncle Moses, how much do you think it would cost to clothe a woman for a year?"

"It's never cost much to clothe your'n," said he, his black eyes snapping. "I never thought you could have been so mean and stingy with any one as you have been with her. She's too good for ye, and its time ye found it out. You've got enough to keep her like a lady, but instead of that she can't even have things to work with.

Ye'll never get a cent from me, what I have I'll settle on Hannah and the boys."

"That's all right, but why did you not tell me how selfish I was before?"

"Haven't I been telling ye all the time, and what good did it do? If yer stomach hadn't been pinched a little, yer never would have found out how good it was to follow what yer allers a-preachin' to her, 'We must economize; we must economize!'"

"Well, I did miss the goodies, but that was'n't all the reason, and it's never too late to mend."

After dinner Mrs. Gordon went back to the dying child, and her husband went to town. In about two hours he returned with a tinsmith, a new stove, a new churn and a butter-worker; a new sled for Willie and two pairs of skates for the other boys.

When Mrs. Gordon came home she found the children rejoicing over their presents, and Uncle Moses and Mr. Gordon busy getting tea.

"Why, where did that stove come from?" said the astonished woman, and as her eyes fell upon the new churn and butter-worker, she exclaimed: "Why, what does it mean?"

"It means that we have done 'economizing,' for the present, and that you are to have the money for yourself for all the butter you make. This is your capital to begin on," said her husband, as he handed her twenty-five dollars.

After this Mr. Gordon never told his family again "We must economize," and Hannah never gave him any cause to do so.

Miscellaneous.

DANISH PERIODICAL.

The forthcoming periodical will be an exponent of the divine mission of Joseph Smith, and the doctrines and practices of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in contradistinction to the practices of Utah Mormons. And after mature consideration, the undersigned committee has decided (Providence permitting) to launch the first number on the tempestuous sea of time on October 1st, 1884. But as unforeseen obstacles may beset its first issue, it may be the 15th of the above month ere it will be started, we trust, on its prosperous mission. It will be known as TRUTH'S BANNER, and will be published and issued from the Herald Office. Books under the auspices of the Board of Publication will be opened, and all orders and moneys be sent to Joseph Smith, Box 82, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa.

Will those who so kindly promised to donate money to help to start the paper, make a note of this, and as soon as possible forward what they promised, as above directed.

For the present, the issue of TRUTH'S BANNER will be monthly, double the size of the Advocate, sixteen pages, at One Dollar per year, and will be reduced to Fifty Cents a year as soon as the increase of subscription will justify.

Bro. P. Anderson has consented to act for the time being as its Editor. All who intend to write for the TRUTH'S BANNER, will please address Mr. P. Anderson, No. 1616, Ninth street, Council Bluffs, Iowa. And we hereby appeal to all the Danish brethren and sisters that can contribute, write, translate, etc., to help in these directions. To make the TRUTH'S BANNER a success, is most desirable. To send out a faultless paper is not our expectation. "Be therefore to its faults a little blind;" come to the rescue, and do your best. That improvement and progress may be made in the new, but most essential enterprise, give the coming child proper support, and it will grow and become a power in the land for good. And as drops of water and grains of sand make the ocean and the land, so will dollars and frequent contributions give stability to and make the mission of the TRUTH'S BANNER a grand success.

Brethren H. Neilson of Omaha, James Thompson of Nebraska City, James Ogard of Fremont, Nebraska; P. N. Brix, Denmark; J. C. Christensen, Richfield, Seveir county, Utah; H. N. Hanson, Weston, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa; and R. Warnock of Salt Lake City, Utah; and presidents of branches and the traveling ministry will please act as agents. This co-operation is absolutely necessary to success. We would respectfully suggest, that in sending names you take time, write distinctly, not only the names you send, but the post office, county and state, or name of street and number of house; and so affording every facility possible to enable the employees of the office to do all business entrusted to them for TRUTH'S BANNER with dispatch.

We want to get a good ready, then a good start, then send this little periodical to every dark corner of the earth. A star of hope to the weary and despondent, pointing them to the old paths; and to show Latter Day Israel the difference between promptness and a godly zeal begotten through a love for truth as it is in Christ, and tyranny and priestcraft, as a result of a departure from the simplicity of the gospel of the Son of God.

Think of our little Advocate; how boldly it has marched to the front, how many grand sermons has it preached in thunder tones. Who shall estimate the good it has done? Who has helped to keep that little messenger alive and feels regret, save it be because they haven't done more? The Editor, whom we all know, has spoken approvingly of, and will feel a pleasure in helping the enterprise. He suggests if possible three thousand copies of the first number should be printed and scattered here, there, and everywhere. Thanks to the Editor for suggestions and words of encouragement.

From Bro. P. Anderson we learn that enough money has been promised as a donation, to pay for one issue of a thousand copies. Should others act thus generously, and donate, we might issue two or three thousand copies, as we would like as many to see the new born child as possible. But it has occurred to us that we had better begin at a low stage, and gradually grow, than to cut a big spludge at the start and come down with a crash. It's very old fashioned to be sure; but the safest and best way to reach the topmost round of a ladder, is to place the foot solidly on the first round, then the second, and so on. "We don't want to start a Danish paper and have it fall through," said a brother. Certainly not. And to prevent a failure, let every one send one dollar to Lamoni, just as soon as they read this, for a year's subscription, and induce somebody else to do the same. Beside this, let all that can send articles and letters to the Editor for publication. But let none stagger and fall, if perchance errors or faults should appear; rather move to suggest improvement, etc.

It is but just to say that Bro. P. Anderson has no editorial aspiration. Gladly would he leave the honor and responsibility to another. And we, his fellow committee men, do in his behalf crave from all concerned, respect and indulgence, with the assurance that he may be approached; nay more, he will be glad to hear and accept any suggestions, and correspondingly labor to carry into effect that which will prove most effective to place and keep the paper on a solid basis. Latter Day Saints need not fail in this or any other laudable enterprise. Unanimity of feeling, with well directed and persistent labor, will insure success. Failures only come to us in the consummation of essential work, through disunion, attendant on mistaking license for liberty. With the most ardent desire for the success of TRUTH'S BANNER, and the highest regards for the household of faith, the above is submitted.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

When the Conference of the above named district adjourned, it did so to meet at Mission Branch, LaSalle Co., Ill., October 4th and 5th, 1884, but was omitted in the minutes through hurry, and therefore did not appear.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

The conference of the above district will convene at Union, Jefferson county, Indiana, on Saturday, November 8th, 1884, instead of November 1st, as reported in the minutes of our last conference. HARBERT SCOTT, President.

DIED.

JOHNSON.—At Blue Mills, Jackson County, Missouri, August 14th, 1884, of flux, Bro. John Johnson. Was born in Denmark, 1827. He embraced the gospel there; came to this country in 1861. The following year he joined the Reorganization in the state of Illinois. Shortly after he was ordained to the office of Seventy. Since that time has continued in the faith of the latter day work, and died strong in the faith of a glorious resurrection. His desires had been for many years to obtain a home in Jackson County, Missouri, which the Lord granted him. However, before his illness, he was at work in Whitesville Mill, Andrew County, Missouri. He left there feeling unwell, and came to his home above named. And as he continued to grow worse, he caused a telegram to be sent to the oldest and youngest of his sons to come home; but prior to that, he had advised his children to obey the gospel. The two boys promptly obeyed, and arrived home about one hour and a half before his departure. He was conscious to the last, recognized the boys immediately when they entered the door, and put forth his hand to bid them farewell. Thus the Lord sustains the righteous to the last. He had the satisfaction to behold all his family around him before he departed. He calmly fell asleep in Jesus. A wife and six children are left to mourn his death. Funeral services at the Saints' Chapel, Independence, Missouri, by A. H. Smith.

KAY.—At Council Bluffs, Iowa, August 24th, 1884, Edmund Kay, husband of Sr. Kay. Funeral service at his residence by Elder James Caffall, attended by a goodly number of friends. Deceased was born in Little Colton, Lancashire, England, August 24th, 1826. Came to America in 1850. Has lived in Council Bluffs ever since, and proved a kind husband, indulgent father, an honorable and upright citizen. A wife, two daughters, and one son mourn his loss, with many friends.

WAGNER.—At Benwood, West Virginia, July 17th, 1884, of spinal affliction, daughter of John and Capatola Wagner, aged 4 months and 23 days. Funeral services by Bro. G. T. Griffiths.

WAGNER.—At Benwood, West Virginia, August 12th, 1884, of consumption, Bro. John Wagner, aged 32 years, 4 months, 3 weeks, and 6 days. Bro. Wagner was a very honest and honorable man, and accumulated many friends. He leaves a wife and two children to bear the hardships of this unfriendly world. We, the Benwood Branch, have and express sympathy for them, hoping and trusting in our Father who is in heaven, that the day is not far in the future, when we can take her by the hand and call her sister in the bonds of Christ our Lord. Funeral sermon at church, by G. T. Griffiths. The church was filled to the utmost. A. M. TEAGARDEN.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883. I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage. Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with. Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings. Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion. Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884. Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor. Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883. MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours, W. F. CLARK.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883. Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses; so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well. Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents, (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. We also furnish a Picture Outfit, consisting of a fine Water Color Portrait, (without frame), also small picture from which it was taken, and envelopes and cards, all by mail prepaid for only 98 cents.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE FREE. In writing, mention this paper. Yours in bonds, JOHNS & ORDWAY.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Sept. 13th, 1884.

THE Reunion will be held on the premises of Bro. Henry Garner, in Raglan Township, Harrison county, Iowa, and begins October 4th. It is expected that every body will be there. A good corps of elders will be present to fill the appointments for preaching, and to have charge of the prayer meetings. It was rainy and dull a good part of the time last fall and some discomfort was experienced because of it. This year the time is set nearly a month later; and it will be a wise precaution on the part of all who are intending to attend to provide for both rain and cool weather; for it is not improbable that we shall have frost before and during the session. The Lord can and may give us fair and pleasant days; but it becomes wise people to be prepared to endure what may be feared, as well as to enjoy what is hoped for. What is especially essential for the Saints to bring with them is an abundant stock of patience and cheerfulness—anybody can be cheerful on a fine day, when he can see the smiles of heaven and earth all round him; but it takes a hero, or a christian to be cheerful under a wet tent, on a cloudy, drizzly day, when the face of nature wears a scowl, and the skies seem to weep from sympathy.

The first day of the meeting is Saturday, and as it is likely that the session will continue until over the Sunday week following it will give a nine days' meeting. Invite your neighbors, fix things at home, so that you can stay the session out; and so that you won't have to say, "O, I must go home. I left things in such a condition I can not stay."

The Saints will hope to see Bro. William W. Blair's kindly face among them again. It has been a good while now since he has been permitted to greet the saints of the Western Slope in either conference, or general gathering.

Somebody ought to write some suitable songs of greeting and sing them at the meeting. All should come intending to be prudent, both in eating, drinking and in clothing. Hay should be used carefully with a view to the nine days' stay; and other things accordingly. All should make up their minds to enjoy the Spirit's presence and power, coming in the spirit of peace and contentment in the Holy Ghost, and contribute to the general stock of cheerful and chaste enjoyment. Let care, gloom and despondency keep house alone, but let the tabernacle and tent be filled with the joy of the Lord.

THE warfare of the Saint is not against "flesh and blood but against principalities and powers, and wickedness in high places." Perhaps the statement that one wars not against "flesh and blood" needs qualifying, inasmuch as the besetments of those passions that are of the flesh are to be contended against and overcome. But the warfare referred to by the ancient writer was that in which men fought to shed blood and destroy human life; that was a warfare against flesh and blood, indeed, for which the Saints then, nor Saints now have either warrant, or command. That the army of the Lord is to become very great is very desirable; and we believe that it will so become when the time is ripe for it. But that such army, if composed of Saints, shall become a scourge of conquest, driving people from their homes and lands that themselves may occupy and enjoy, is not compatible with two principles affirmed by the Savior: "He that taketh the sword shall perish by the sword;" and "if by purchase then are ye blessed; but if by blood, as ye are commanded not to shed blood, lo your enemies are upon you and ye shall be scourged from city to city."

The thought that some of the chieftains of Israel are to be great warriors, famed for military skill and prowess, is very attractive to some; but to the Nazarene, war and all its concomitants must have been distasteful; else he would scarcely have said to Peter, "Put up thy sword;" or to Latter Day Israel "I will fight your battles."

It is comforting however, to think that the world's greatest victories have been won upon bloodless fields, where right and truth have met wrong and evil and vanquished them. It is just such a warfare as that last named that the Reorganization is waging. Wrong set up his standard, and round it rallied his subtle courtiers and devotees. Right stood aghast while the people were overcome and led captive. But in due time, Truth, tired by long importunity, rose at last in indignant remonstrance, and the Reorganized Church was the result. The way was for a long time hedged up, but by perseverance room has been won, and now the road to complete success is open, thanks be to God. Now, if each Saint will see that in his especial field he gains in the conflict, success to him will mean a right to the final triumph of all, when the need of warfare will be past, and the Master reigning gloriously in his completed kingdom.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE authorities of the Utah Church direct and counsel the elders and the people over whom they preside, not to discuss with, or go and hear the Josephite speakers. How can those men who years ago upbraided those who dared not hear the elders sent out by the church, now consistently counsel their people "not to hear."

Bro. Clarence StClair and Daniel Munns are laboring together at Good Intent, Kansas, and propose doing some labor in the district. Bro. StClair reports good hearings, and believes that his faith and trust in God and his work are increasing.

Bro. William H. Kelley, of New Albany, Indiana, is to debate the proposition that the church, reproachfully called Campbellites, is the church of the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and organization; and that the church known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is not, in doctrine and organization, in harmony with the New Testament, with Rev. R. A. Owens of the Disciple or Christian Church. Bro. Kelley baptized three last June.

Card from Bro. T. W. Smith, dated at Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, August 28th, stated that he would leave Cheyenne that evening for Ogden, Utah. He would push on as rapidly as he could. Letter from Bro. A. H. Smith, dated at Pueblo, Colorado, August 30th, stated that he was so far on his way, feeling fairly well. "All's well that ends well," closes his letter.

Bro. Jason W. Briggs has returned to Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, from New York. His address will now be Wheeler, Pottawattamie county, Iowa. Those having correspondence with him will please take notice of this change in his address.

Bro. Wm. H. Kelley baptized one at Clear Lake, Indiana, on Monday, September 1st, a man in middle age and an earnest seeker after truth, who has been corresponding with the Editor and Bro. Kelley for some time. Bro. Kelley will go from Coldwater to Antwerp, Ohio, to answer an inquirer.

Bro. I. N. Roberts has baptized ten in Kansas, and two in Far West District since his last report.

Bro. E. M. Reynolds writes from Cuba, Kansas, that now that the evenings are growing longer, he would be glad to see Brn. I. N. Roberts and A. H. Parsons back there to preach.

Bro. Gordon E. Deuel baptized one at Coldwater, August 31st. It is reported that Bro. Deuel preached an excellent sermon on the same day.

Smith, in his dictionary of the Bible, Article, Church, says: "We must not expect to see the Church of Holy Scripture actually existing in its perfection on earth. It is not to be found thus perfect, either in the collected fragments of Christendom, or still less in any one of these fragments, though it is possible that one of those fragments more than another may approach the scriptural and apostolical ideal."

The Cuban Conservative, published at Cuba, Republic county, Kansas, by Bro. John D. Bennett, came to the Editor's table, number one, volume one, bright, cheerful and spicy. It is a purely local paper, the editor reserving the right to conduct his paper in his own way, for the interest of Cuba, Republic county and Kansas; and the benefit of mankind. We extend our  Bro. John, and wish the Conservative a long and useful career.

We have received, from James Dove & Co., 528 Eighteenth street, San Francisco, we believe, numbers two and three of the Olive Branch. The object of this paper as stated in number three is to devote the paper to the "promulgation of the truths that were revealed through brother Joseph Morris, at Weber, together with any other religious matter which we may deem wise to publish in connection with those truths." No subscription price is asked for the paper; but donations are asked for, as it is intended to sustain the paper in that way. Correspondence and communications from all those who were with Joseph Morris in Weber Valley, are requested. Those who were not of the brethren in the valley, who may be "partially interested in the work," will be supplied with the paper upon receipt of address.

BRO. THOMAS MILLARD, of Carson, Nevada, is having a lively theological tilt with some of the Salvation Army in Carson. The local paper, Morning Appeal, gives the following notice of one of Bro. Millard's efforts:

"Elder Millard will preach this evening at the old Theater and make it as lively as possible for those who are identified with the Salvation Army. He disapproves of their methods and will give his reasons. He is mighty in the Scriptures and will read from the sacred writings like a thunder storm.

It is understood that on next Tuesday evening he will be replied to by the Holiness Band. We have thus a great excitement in store for the recreation of the Carson public. Elder Millard wishes a large audience for the reason that he has an important message to deliver upon the great apostasy of the Church of Jesus Christ."

The Index says:

"Elder Thomas Millard, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will preach at the Old Theater Hall Saturday evening, July 26th, at 7:30 p. m. Subject, the Fundamental Principles of the Church of Jesus Christ and the Great Apostasy of the Christian Church. Elder Millard is a forcible speaker, and the Holiness Band and ministers and people of Carson are earnestly invited to attend to hear the other side of the question."

The Enterprise says:

"It is said that Elder Millard, of Carson, threw some pretty hot shot into the Holiness Band last Sunday night at the Theater Hall."

Bishop George A. Blakeslee writes from Galien, Michigan, September 3d, 1884:

This writing finds me at home. After leaving your place I arrived in Independence Saturday evening. Met with the Saints on Sunday and in the afternoon talked to them upon the law of tithing; after occupying an hour, opportunity was given for them to ask questions, many were asked and answered. We now think the law is more fully understood by the Saints that were present, for on the day following quite a number came forward and paid their tithes and offerings. We were very sorry that we could not stay longer with the Saints in that part; but the warm weather and frequent showers made it necessary for me to return home on account of my health. I am now suffering very much with the hay fever. Bro. Alexander H. Smith started for California on the 28th, he will stop a few days in Salt Lake City, then proceed to his mission. He seemed to be in good spirits when he left, and I think he will do the Saints good.

ARE THEY GOING TO BUY IT?

"PRESIDENT Joseph F. Smith and Erastus Snow, accompanied by one wife each, will leave to-morrow for Jackson county, Missouri, the object of their trip being to inspect the original manuscript of the Book of Mormon, which is said to be in the possession of a citizen of that county. Whether they will attempt to procure it, or simply wish to make an examination, is not known. They go over the D. & R. G. and will proceed from Jackson county to St. Louis."

The foregoing is cut from the Salt Lake Evening Chronicle, of August 29th.

What does it signify? Some are asking this question with feverish impatience. We are not in the Councils of the Utah Polygamic Church; but we would guess, that they, or some of them want to see the Manuscript of the Book of Mormon, for similar reasons that many of the Reorganized Church did. "They want to know," you see, and they have sent two quite competent men, in whom they have confidence to look the matter up; that is, if the above report is correct.

THE Chicago Tribune of August 30th says that

"The killing of the Mormon Elders in Tennessee was a brutal murder. The press of the country so pronounces it. But somehow or other all of the papers seem to come to the conclusion, which is very thinly disguised, that while it was a brutal murder it also partook somewhat of the nature of a good scheme."

"A Rev. Mr. Cook—young man—from Rantoul, Ills., performed the pulpit services Sunday at the Congregational Church, Oswego, Illinois. The text of his evening sermon was "The deep things of God." The sermon showed him to be much of a thinker, and while he undertook to make some things more plain—the Trinity for instance—he acknowledged that they must ever remain a mystery (and here it may be said that mysteries are all-essential to religion—without mysteries there could be no religion; God would be taken out of the realm of religion if he could be comprehended by the human mind. Religion is the awe inspired by the incomprehensible, and nothing else could inspire that awe; the incomprehensible therefore is the source of all religion). It is said that the same gentleman will preach here again next Sunday."

It must have been refreshing to hear the learned young man declare with such solemn earnestness that he could not comprehend the trinity of God. Long, long before this young man saw the light, one much wiser than he said, "Thy ways are past finding out."

AN Italian subject, Vincent del Buono by name, a merchant of New Iberia, Louisiana, was lately driven from his home because his political opinions were adverse to those of his neighbors. In the expression of them he gave offence, and he was waited upon by men holding no warrant of authority and compelled to quit business, home and family, or perish.

The unhappy experiences of the Church in the past in States both free and slave at the time, or northern and southern, when those experiences are remembered, give rise to reflections on the political conditions which made such a state of affairs possible.

We are not at liberty to make the HERALD the attempted exponent of our, or, any body else's political faith, or to advocate either side in the present contest between the parties in the field with presidential candidates. We can however, express the conviction that now and for many years back, there has been a necessity for some man of thorough American principles and predilections that has disposition and nerve to enforce the laws international and national, in such ways as to protect men in their rights to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

The lack of such a man in the executive office at the head of the American government, facilitated the persecution and final expulsion of the saints from Ohio, Missouri and Illinois. And though it may be urged that it is not the prerogative of the chief Executive of the nation to intermeddle in the affairs of a state; and that the governors are the proper ones who should be looked to, and are the ones upon whom rests the responsibility in cases like those in which the saints suffered, it would be well of the national laws under the constitution were so framed, that the strong arm of the nation's power might be stretched out by the President in behalf of those to whom the protection of the state is denied, either through indifference, venality or studied political design.

The fact that Standing was killed in Georgia, Berry, Condon, and others in Tennessee, Matthews in Mississippi, and others in other States, Vincent del Buono and many others driven from their homes; and men like Col. Cash turned loose without punishment; all done without subsequent inquiry or just enforcement of the law by either county or State officials, argues strongly in favor of investing the Executive in the White House with the powers adequate to proper inquiry and execution of laws for the suppression of evil, the punishment of crime, and the safety of individuals and well being of the Republic.

Only a day or two since we heard the expression, "It does seem that some form of Monarchical government would be better than this loose way in which our American laws are enforced. The ways in which criminals are prosecuted have made the trial by jury a farce; too wicked and sad to be ignored, or laughed at." Tyranny is hardly more dangerous to society than anarchy. The latter is totally ruinous, while the other is partial. There is no mercy in the latter, while the former is at times merciful. Better one despot than many tyrants.

We believe that our country is the best and grandest in the world. We believe in America and her destiny. We love the institutions by which we are free, and in our warmest zeal write AMERICAN NATION with a "big N." But we hope to live to see some of the deplorable things done away. Among those that we most earnestly desire to see put away from the National honor is the insecurity of men's liberties and lives in entertaining and expressing religious and political opinions. We long to see the time when an Italian, an Englishman, or an American will be safe in the enjoyment of his liberty, on any foot of soil over which the American flag shall float in official protection; when an American citizen at home may not be ashamed because of violence done to another for political, or religious opinion, within the borders of his native land; and when the same American citizen being abroad, is put in jeopardy of his life and liberty, he shall be able to say with absolute confidence "I am an American, citizen of the Republic;" and shall not find his confidence in his home government misplaced.

We may not say which of the present candidates for the office of president and vice president we personally prefer, nor attempt to influence any man's vote; but we may express the wish that the good fortunes of the Republic may prevail and those men be chosen who the most fittingly represent the American idea in the politics of the world; who best typify American institutions, and who will best conserve the interests of the American commonwealth.

The HERALD is not a political sheet; is not published in any political interest; but those whom it represents and in whose interest it is published should be intensely American and loyal as American citizens; loyal and law abiding in every land where they sojourn and labor; upright and honest conservators of the "law of the land," because, through serving and abiding the law of God, they "have no need to break the law of the land."

All are Americans, in the sense of citizenship, who seek this country with intention to make homes here. The safer and more securely the stranger may dwell in the nation's midst, the more certainly will he love the land and become American by adoption; but none can love the country, where he may not live in peace and in the enjoyment of the sweets of domestic, social, religious and political liberty.

You can not be buried in obscurity; you are exposed upon a grand theatre to the view of the world. If your actions are upright and benevolent, be assured they will augment your power and happiness.

Always write the Business portion of your Letter on a separate piece of paper, and let it be brief and explicit.

If you have anything to say to the Editor, or something you wish published, do NOT write it on the back of a business letter. Business is Business, and MUST BE done in a business-like manner.

PLATTSMOUTH, Neb.,

August 27th, 1884.

Dear Herald.—Our late conference appointed me to come here and adjust or regulate the affairs of this branch. I do wish that such appointments were not necessary. Strange, that with all the spirit's admonitions, the many plain instructions of holy writ, with the heart burning experience of the past, the same seeds of trouble are the prolific source and cause of much of the mischief in the church; an unwise desire to be "the greatest in the kingdom," which will always breed trouble and displace the unity so essential to our life and success as the people of "His choice." The depth and wisdom of the Master are unsurpassed when he spoke those words of truth concerning those who offend: "It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and he were drowned in the depth of the sea." These words are worthy of more than a passing consideration, and should be a standing ebenezzer, speaking as the living oracle of God with tongue of inspiration warning all with the firm but positive decree of Heaven. Jesus taught his disciples that they should say unto the people, "Judge not unrighteously, that ye be not judged; but judge righteous judgment. For with what judgment ye shall judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

The carpenter, as is his usual rule, always tests his spirit-level and square, so that his work shall be true, accurate and acceptable. Not only when these tools are first purchased are they thus tested, but frequently does the careful man make such examinations, as we are instructed to do. "Examine yourselves, whether you be in the faith; prove your own selves." This work is not to be done carelessly, and leave us destitute of the fruits of such examination, for there are two purposes or objects in thus testing ourselves by "the law and the testimony." First, that we shall free ourselves from all that is hurtful to our advancing "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." That we may ultimately triumph over all the agencies and weapons of our adversary, who caused us "fightings without and fears within." That there may be established in the heart that hope, "as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast," crowning all those who shall abide therein with eternal life, and everlasting peace, in the never ending kingdom composed of those who are redeemed "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation." Second, that we shall manifest in our walk and conversation that improvement in the knowledge of those duties imposed, and cheerfully complied with, maketh increase in a well begun life, that the grace and peace of the Holy Ghost shall thus strengthen and keep us in humility and meekness, even attracting others to the way of life, and therein blessing them.

I find nothing in this branch that should cause alarm for the good of the cause, nor anything but what might have been easily adjusted among themselves. Neither are there any clouds so dark that any should become faint-hearted, or discouraged. All that is required by these saints are the duties of those in the covenant of peace, loving righteousness, and being above suspicion. That they will have their faith tried is nothing strange, and will prove for their good. That there may arise misunderstanding on the part of some, would not be a justifiable excuse for any to neglect their duty to God, the church, and themselves. With others' faults and shortcomings be not concerned; leave that for those who have the watchcare of the work. There are too many, on whom the responsibility does not rest, that like "Uzza put forth his hand to hold the ark;" however, with the difference in favor of the present over anxious ones, for the mercy and long suffering of God permits them to stumble on as the "oxen." The saints are renting a comfortable room, in a quiet and good locality, and at an excessive low rent. They should not fail to continue to keep the flag thus floating in the breeze, inviting all to come unto Christ. There is a good prospect for some additions here, unless the unwise actions should drive them elsewhere, for which at present there is an opportunity, as the Adventists and the Christians are both working like beavers. They are holding a debate upon the Sabbath question. Elder Cudney, failed to make a strong showing for the keeping of the Fourth commandment. He is either a weak debater, or the question is a weaker one than I had supposed it was. Elder D. R. Lucas, seemed to carry the idea that the old Sabbath was done away, and the first day of the week had took its place, and was surprised that there was any persons that could not so understand it. They both missed the mark in some things, if I am left to judge in harmony with the evidence.

On duty,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

CLEAR LAKE MINN.,

August 25th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Deuel while on his short mission with the Clear Lake Branch, baptized two and blessed eight little ones. I heard him speak five times; and on the Sabbath previous to his departure, he gave us the greatest sermon I ever heard spoken from the Book of Mormon; and proved every word by the Bible. We think him a great speaker and defender of this great and good cause, and hope he or some other Elder will come this way and stay at least a week or two, or all the time, as I think a good work could be done all through this country; as we have received a letter from quite a distance, asking for an Elder in their county; and some would come forty miles if they knew when an Elder would be here amongst us. God is blessing every effort we make when we make it in the right way.

J. T. ENBODY.

PLANO, Ill., Sept. 1st, 1884.

The Saints of Plano Branch are feeling well spiritually, and strong in the faith once delivered to the Saints; though some few are not well in body. One of our brethren, William Harwood, has passed within the veil, gone to his rest. He united with the Church last Spring, baptized by Bro. M. F. Cooper; funeral service by Bro. Whitaker. I have not the items and know not if you have received the notice, or not. Our Methodist friends of the Aurora District held a Campmeeting of seven days duration, in Mr. Lewis Steward's park. The Saints attended, more or less, and were made stronger in their own faith, and rejoiced that we have the light, and have found that straight gate and narrow way, and seem better prepared and encouraged to walk therein; after seeing how much others miss it.

Yours for truth,
W. VICKERY.

MANCHESTER, Red River Co., Tex.,
August 29th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I went over to Silver Hill, Arkansas, and found some, or several Latter Day Saints. Also found others willing to hear the truth. We preached Sunday, at four o'clock, being the third Sunday in August. The church was held in service by a Christian brother at eleven o'clock. We preached at four o'clock. We delivered five discourses at the church; received good attendance and attention. Baptized three August 25th. We preached our farewell sermon in Polk county, Monday night. August 25th at Bro. James Burk's. Bro. Burk had just lost one of his children, and was sick himself. We found good and clever people who are not afraid to hear the truth. The members numbers fifteen and many others are interested. I think if the members continue in labor, and work humbly and meekly, the Silver Hill will become a large branch. We left many interested in the everlasting gospel.

I have been in the church five months; was called to preach and have been doing so ever since. I expect to continue as long as God will let; being only twenty years old, I feel my weakness, but God being my helper, I apprehend no fears, and know that if I am only humble, meek and prayerful I will be blessed. The Manchester Branch is getting along very well.

Your brother in Christ,
J. D. ERWIN.

OLIVET, Mahaska, C., Iowa,
September 2d, 1884.

Editor Herald:—Left here on the 7th ult. for elsewhere to lecture, and returned on 21st. On the 31st of August I had the privilege of baptizing my two nephews, sons of Sr. Sarah E. Laughlin. The Holy Spirit's presence attended the administration of the sacred rite, as also the confirmation. This completes the family circle; my nieces having been baptized 22d June, 1883, by Bro. J. Roth, at Rhodes, Iowa. Their father, a faithful Elder of the church, entered the shining portals on 21st September, 1869, as he was leaving this dark world he said in a whisper, "All is well."

I preached on last Sunday about "sanctification," to a large audience. I believe it to be a wile of the devil. Those who profess, always have to tell they "are holy;" the perfection never seems to be self-proclaiming! If a man makes no errors, never sins, people would surely discover it; but these imitators of "papal infallibility," pope-like, must tell they are holy, and sanctified. Well, if they didn't it would hardly be thought of!

The word of the decease of our worthy and estimable quorum president, was indeed surprising and sad. As secretary of quorum I express my sympathy and condolence to the sadly bereft family, and know the quorum join me in this expression of regard. We held him in highest esteem. He was good, Christlike, faithful, blest; and behind the darkened drapery of death has passed a sainted sire!

"How bright the prospects are,"
The golden shore he sees,
Where all the blessed dwell,
In peace and harmony.

"How bright the prospects are,"
The Savior calls him hence,
To dwell at His right hand,
In perfect blessedness.

"How bright the prospects are,"
(The dear ones he must leave—
For Jesus calls him home—
His crown he shall receive.

"How bright the prospects are,"
The dear ones follow him,
And they shall meet again,
Again we'er parted be.

One by one they are called away to join the great host who have traveled the silent way in ages past.

I am glad the work is moving onward, but I sometimes find those who do not seem in perfect accord with the spirit and movement of the cause. We often hear the "old church" quoted on this and that; on things of minor import, as though in the most minute matters she was a model of perfection! These quotations are generally of a disparaging feature, militating against the true genius of the Reorganization. The "old church" was all right when she did right; but it seems to me according to Book of Doctrine and Covenants, she began to get corrupted at a very early date in some respects. The "old church" was born, grew, looked healthy, got sick, grew worse, and gasped in death, but out of the struggling form was born the "new," and although the latter may seem of slow growth, yet it is a comparatively healthy one. She is born of a more liberal spirit; her system, order and ruling are of a higher and better type. Her leaders are diverse from those of the past, yet in harmony with the better movement. The church shall never again give birth to a monster apostacy. She shall never again produce any polygamous "twelve." Never again shall any hand of evil design drag her banner in the dust of treachery and deceit. Never again shall her fair name be blotted, nor her honor trampled on by Asiatic barbarity. She shall evermore be purely christian, and truly loyal. Her walls are strengthened; her towers higher, and her defence mightier.

Her ministry shall yet move, as it were, in solid phalax, empowered of God, against the enemy in all his crafty phases, and going forth conquering and to conquer, with their spiritual weapons, shall move to final victory, accomplishing the designs of Him who has ordained them and their work, and bring honor, glory and power upon His church forever! This shall surely come. Such belongs to this church of Christ. May the church ever move forward; encouraged by the divine benedictions of heaven, make herself worthy the consumating dispensation; which shall be the grandest and the best of all dispensations.

Yours hopefully,
J. FRANK McDOWELL.

UNION, Jefferson Co., Indiana,
September 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Saints of our branch are alive in the good work of the Master, rejoicing in the good Spirit among them; for which we are glad. The truth has some strong opposers here, but is steadily winning its way among the honest ones. We are building a good substantial church house; when done will cost about $800. We want to have it done by the first, and have it dedicated on the second Sabbath in November, which will be after the election, when the minds of the people will be more quiet; and those who want to be at home to vote can do so and then come. The Saints of our branch, and the entire district, are anxious to have you visit us at that time. I am sure that a great amount of good would result from your visit to the district; so Bro. Joseph, just make up your mind, if the Lord wills it, so you will come.

I remain yours in the one faith,
S. RECTOR.

KINGSTON, Rhode Island,
August 26th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—August 2d, I visited Brockton, Massachusetts, Bro. John Gilbert joining me there. Held services with the church Sunday, and on Monday evening. Tuesday went to Hyde Park, stopping with Bro. Glover. Met with Boston Saints Wednesday evening. Thursday went to Cohasset, but the rain prevented the filling of appointments for meeting that evening. Arrangements were made and meeting held Friday evening, however. Saturday went to Plymouth. Meetings held every evening until Tuesday, Sunday's usual services included. Tuesday I returned to Cohasset, Bro. Gilbert going to Fall River. Preached in the Congregational Church that evening, which had been secured through the kindness of our friends, and with unusual liberty and power, for which I felt to thank God. Both our visits to Cohasset were made interesting, and I believe profitable. The merits of Spiritualism and claims of Infidels were placed side by side with the claims and testimony of the gospel of Christ; and we who believe and know the truth were satisfied and confirmed in the hope which the gospel reveals. When we are careful and wise enough to admit the truth wherever found, make no claims which are not founded in fact, nor insist upon anything more or less as necessary to salvation than that which the gospel of Christ enjoins, our position will be found to be impregnable against the assaults of opposition from every quarter. From Cohasset we returned to Boston, meeting again with the Saints in their usual weekly service. There are noble people here who have long tried to hold up the gospel banner, many times under trying and adverse circumstances, under the presiding care of our faithful brother, E. N. Webster; and their labor and zeal have not been unfruitful. Honest hearted people are dropping in upon them, and all the warnings of priests and bigots and innocent, yet blind followers of blind leaders, can not hush nor still the voice of "the Good Shepherd." From Boston I went to Dennisport. Tried to encourage the Saints, who seem to be to a great extent without a leader, and in a somewhat discouraged condition. I could see no way out of some of their present discouragements, only am comforted to know that there are as good Saints there as anywhere, who love the truth, and have the wisdom and courage to stand for it; and that I also was much blessed in presenting the word. There were urgent requests for a soon return, and we feel that some one ought to go. Our congregation and the attention paid were good. Saturday and Sunday next we expect to meet the Saints and friends at Little Compton, Rhode Island, in their two days' meeting. The following Sunday and longer if necessary, expect to answer Bro. Hoxie's neglected call, to visit Fitchburg, Massachusetts, and aid in opening the gospel door at that place. The harvest is great, laborers few. "To warn the unruly, comfort the feeble minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men, apt to teach, never render railing for railing," etc., is a profitable, though not always pleasant exercise. But we are glad for the hope of the gospel; and whatever doubts may arise as to our ultimate victory, we know that the gospel of Jesus Christ is true, and will ultimate in freedom from the law of sin in our bodily members, and save our bodies from the power of the grave, our spirits disciplined by the spiritual law revealed, we shall reign in a superior and glorified state. The gospel reveals to me in a satisfactory manner the design of God with regard to this planet, and the disposition of its inhabitants. I hope to abide till the end.

In the faith, yours,

M. H. BOND.

WESTFORK, Indiana,

August 29th, 1884.

Bro. J. Smith:—We are not dead, but are trying to do the best we can. We realize what Isaiah says in regard to this latter work when he says, that God will make "a man more precious than gold." It has become so here that nothing short of a knowledge of the work will do us any good; for it seems that our missionaries have come to the conclusion that it is no use to travel to spread the gospel news. We have been here six months and have not heard from them, nor seen them. What is the matter? We are trying to spread the truth, holding meetings, as circumstances and opportunity will permit, with good turnouts and good attention. The Jews had their stumbling stone in Christ; this generation have theirs in Joseph Smith. But like Bro. Derry, we feel that that does not lessen the obligation on our part in the least. It is true that there is, and has been communication between God and man in our generation, and we must tell the people so; or woe, woe, be unto us, whether they believe it or not. May the gracious Lord enable his servants to not "shrink from duty, however unpleasant," but follow their Savior wherever he leads. I see by the Herald that Sr. E. Tompkins is dead. That makes two of our little band of Mt. Pleasant gone; but to have the assurance that we will meet again, in the sweet by and by, is glorious hope. To the rest let me say, "Let my end on earth in this state, be like theirs, faithful to the last." What a happy thought.

Yours in hope of the rest that remains for the people of God,

V. D. BAGGERLY.

Neglect of small things is the rock on which the great majority of the human race have split. Human life consists of a succession of small things, each of which is comparatively unimportant, and yet the happiness and success of every man depend on the manner in which these small events are dealt with. Character is built upon little things—little things well and honorably transacted. The success of a man in business depends on his attention to little things. The comfort of a household is the result of small things well arranged and duly provided for. Good government can only be accomplished in the same way—by well regulated provisions for the doing of little things.

Mr. R. Kendal, Chairman of the West Coast of America Telegraph Company, contributes the following story to a London paper: "As a matter of curiosity and unique experience in connection with the working of submarine telegraph cables, I beg leave to hand you some extracts from the letters from our manager on the west coast of South America, and also from the Captain of our cable-repairing steamer. The extracts go to show that not only is it bad for a whale to attack a cable, but so perfect have the appliances for the repair of cables now become, that, no matter where or in what depth of water they may be broken, they can almost always be repaired as surely and as quickly in mid-ocean as a horse can be shod in a blacksmith's shop. Judging from the extracts it would seem that the whale voluntarily attacked the cable, and, having had a free fight with it, paid for his temerity with his life, for he was held prisoner for seven days and then mangled unto death. The Captain of our repairing steamer writes: 'Having picked up twenty-one knots of cable, and while continuing picking up, an immense whale came up to the bows entangled in the cable. It seemed to be about seventy feet in length. In its struggles to get free the cable cut right into its side, the whole of its entrails coming out and great streams of blood. In its last dying struggle it parted the cable on the bow sheaves and floated to windward of the steamer. The cable was twisted up in the form of a wire rope for about two fathoms, and in six different parts it had the appearance of having been bitten through sufficiently to stop all communication. There is no doubt the whale has been the cause of the interruption.' Our manager also writes: 'The cause of the breakage of the cable, as has been pointed out to you in Capt. Morton's report, was a huge whale which became entangled in the turns of the cable, and was held prisoner for seven days; the interruption was unfortunate, but it is, at least, satisfactory to know that the cable did not give way naturally, and that, where picked up, the sheathing, yarn, and core were found to be in an almost perfect state of preservation—in fact, looked as good as on the day the cable was first laid.'

Aug. 31.—The Packers' and Live-Stock Exchange Joint Executive Committee met at the Stock-Yards, Chicago, August 30th, and adopted rules to regulate the inspection of hogs, which will be posted upon all the scales at the Union Stock-Yards. They are signed by David S. Googin and Joseph Osher, representing the packers, and Samuel Waugh and Eneas A. Ward, representing the Chicago Live-Stock Exchange. The rules take effect September 1st, and are as follows: First—All hogs bought and sold in this market shall be inspected by a public inspector only, except as provided for in Rule 8. Second—The inspectors shall dock all sows that show beyond doubt that the same are pregnant, and all stags that show plainly that they have been used as boars. In no case shall hogs be subject to dockage because the same are rough and coarse. Third—The dockage or shrinkage allowed on hogs shall be forty pounds for each and every piggy sow, and eighty pounds for each and every stag. Fourth—The decision of the inspectors in every case shall be binding on both the buyer and seller thereof, unless such buyer or seller, or both of them, choose to appeal to the referees; and in any case either the buyer or seller or both shall have the right to such an appeal. Fifth—The referees' decision shall in all cases of appeal from inspection be final; and from that there shall be no appeal, but in case they do not agree the said referees shall select a third party who shall decide the case in which he is called, and from his decision there shall be no appeal whatever. Sixth—The compensation of the referees shall be $1.50 in each case in which they shall act; the party calling to pay the referees. Seventh—When a lot of hogs are bought to sort and the buyer does not specify the number he desires to throw out, that particular lot of hogs shall not be subject to dockage. But when in case of such purchase the buyer does specify the number he wants thrown out, then that lot shall be subject to dockage. Eighth—When hogs are sorted before going to the scales, the scale tickets shall be marked "Sorted," but when hogs are bought by agreement without any dockage, the scale-ticket shall be marked "Agreed." Ninth—A record of the dockage shall be kept by the weigh-master, and all weigh-tickets issued by him shall show the dockage as per inspection.

The corner on pork which began to run in May last and continued till August 30th, netted the operators of it $3,000,000. During that time prices ranged from $16 to $23 per barrel. Armour & Co., are the principal ones benefitted by the speculation.

From Aug. 22 to Aug. 29 inclusive the Chicago & Grand Trunk brought from New York twenty-three car-loads of European emigrants, all bound for the West and Northwest.

The school census of Chicago shows 209,631 Germans; 143,000 Americans; 23,509 Poles, 23,755 Swedes; 28,281 Bohemians; 14,005 Irish 20,142 English; 18,292 Norwegians; 8,431 Scotch; 5,971 Danes; 3,466 Canadians; 2,969 Hollanders; 1,506 Russians; 1,118 Welsh; 273 Hungarians; 272 Swiss; 245 Belgians; 107 Spanish; a total of 616,323 white inhabitants. The population of the city according to the census is 629,985, the figures given in the table showing only the white people. There are 5,853 persons in the orphan asylums, hospitals, jails, etc., whose nationalities are unknown, and 7,517 colored people and 292 Mongolians. The Chief census-taker said yesterday that he believed between 10,000 and 15,000 persons had been skipped through the carelessness or negligence of his subordinates. Still, he thought that as many were found as would be by any other set of men. The nationalities of residents were arrived at in this way: Where a family whose heads were Germans, say, were met with, the parents and children, no matter where the latter were born, were called Germans; but if sons or daughters born in this country were married, they were put under the head of Americans. So with the Irish and other nationalities. This, the chief census-taker said, was hardly a fair way, but it was the only way that the nationalities could be arrived at with approximate accuracy.

The popular sentiment in France respecting the attitude of England in regard to the French war against China, is seen by the following from Paris: Never since the battle of Waterloo has public opinion in France been more savagely hostile to England than at the present moment. Papers of all creeds have united in transferring their hatred from Germany to England, and are constantly recalling the fact that when "France has wept or France has bled perfidious Albion has rejoiced." The official Republique Francaise is as loud and bitter as the Cri du Peuple, while the Bonapartist Pais for once gives tongue with the Bebats and Voltaire. The supercilious hypocrisy and sham high moral tone adopted by the entire English press has fairly exasperated France and rankles in the breast of every Frenchman. A prominent French statesman remarked to your correspondent last night: "Even supposing that the slanderous comments in the Times and Standard were true concerning our victory at Foo Chow, yet it does not lie in the mouth of any Englishman to utter one word of disparagement after the bombardment of Copenhagen years ago, and especially after that of Alexandria, where the logical consequences of Admiral Seymour's action was the wanton destruction of a city third in commercial importance in the Mediterranean and handing over an entire civilized community to pillage and fire.

It is now confidently stated that Gen. Millot was recalled in disgrace for his hasty attack on China which has precipitated an "undesirable war." While outwardly belligerent and defiant France is inwardly uneasy and exasperated at her own blunder.

Aug. 30.—The Pall Mall Gazette, London, says: "There is not the slightest foundation to the report that China wishes to come to an agreement with France. The Chinese consider the Foo Chow affair as an act of treachery on the part of Admiral Courbet, who took the advantage accorded to war ships to enter Chinese ports. The barbarity of continuing the fire hours after the Chinese vessels had ceased is the cause of intense excitement against the Europeans."

A prominent journal states: "The opium war waged against China began about 1838. A few years previously British subjects had been allowed to trade with China, which heretofore had been monopolized by the British East India Company. The British merchants found that the Chinese had natural opium. Although this article was contraband the British began to smuggle it in. The Chinese Government endeavored by force to stop the business, but it is said that even the women in the Emperor's harem smoked. Finally, in 1833, the importation of opium was nearly $12,000,000, or more than enough to pay for all the tea sent out of China.

"A riot at last started against the foreigners, and several of them were bamboozed. The Chinese then, by imperial mandate, forbade opium to come in. The Chinese seized 20,000 chests of opium on British ships and destroyed it. It was valued at more than $20,000,000. In a naval action which followed, the British easily beat the Chinese. They then captured the cities on the Chinese coast. Canton, one of the most important cities in China, was captured. Millions of ransom was paid for the town. The British then opened the opium trade. This was in 1841. The English, assisted by other nations, proceeded toward Peking. The Chinese made peace in 1842, China to pay $21,000,000, and to open her captured ports to the British trade.

"The English continued to go on making $23,000,000 a year, and killing Asia with opium; yet, as the darkest hour is just before the dawn, China began to revive and look abroad for the humility and light."

The cholera is still spreading in the Pyrenees villages, but elsewhere in France it has abated its virulence somewhat. The total number of deaths to date is 4,376. Three new departments—Aveyron, which is one of the most mountainous districts in France; Ariège, which also is very mountainous; and Tarn, which is well known for its forests—have reported deaths during the week, while the disease seems to have died out in Gard and Hautes-Alpes. In a department of the Pyrenees (Mount D'Or District) during the week there has been an awful spread of the disease. The last previous report named fifteen villages which have been visited. Now there are thirty, and there is a daily increase. Reports come that there have been great ravages in the department of Drome, but only forty-two deaths have been circumstantially reported from Drome. In the Bouches du Rhone, in which lie Marseilles and Arles, there have been just 100 deaths during the week. A map of the infected country drawn up a week ago would now be useless because of a vast subsequent spread among the villages in the various departments. There have been about twenty-five deaths in Corsica, and some eighty persons are in the insane asylum at Aix. In Italy the situation is alarming, and it is doubly so by the brutal ignorance of the peasantry, who stone the doctors in the streets, and refuse to go to the hospitals. It seems probable that the epidemic will make terrible havoc in Italy before the year closes.

There are five or six firms in the Russian Empire which have the right to deal in books. These firms have a patent to sell from the crown. All other salesmen sell by permits issued, revoked or withheld upon the caprice of the local police. There are two public libraries in the country.

There were 589 emigrants turned loose from the White Star Line steamship Britannic, August 30th. They were driven off the docks of the White Star Line, and refused admittance into Castle Garden.

Sept. 2.—The Iron business of Pittsburg is reported in a very unsatisfactory condition. Six furnaces have been idle for six months with no present prospect for resuming work. The daily production is reckoned at 1,200 tons from nine furnaces. Stock on hand rates at about 3,000 tons. Scarcely any sale of pig iron. About 1,000 tons per month of foundry iron are sold.

Mrs. Smith of Hunter's Point, L. I., was wakened by the attempt of a burglar to take her diamond ring from her finger while she was sleeping; on awakening she grabbed the revolver from under her pillow and run the robbers off, firing at them twice. Plucky Mrs. Smith.

Bishop G. F. Pierce, senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, who has been lying ill at his home in Sparta, Georgia, for several days, is not expected to live, his physicians having no hopes of recovery. The Bishop has been a sufferer from acute disease of the throat for the last four years. It has gradually grown worse, and now he is unable to swallow enough to keep him alive.

The miners' strike at the Ohio mining centers continues. One guard, Hare by name, has been killed. The strikers are determined that the non-union men shall not work; and the latter are being protected by local police and the militia. Gov. Hoadley is visiting the scenes of the rioting. He was at Logan, and left there for New Straitsville and other points at four o'clock.

The miners in the Ohio Central region along Sunday Creek went out to-day on the pretext of not getting the September advance. They are expected to join the Hocking Valley strike, being adjacent.

Frank Woody, in jail at Logan, O., who was arrested for participating in the riot Saturday night and for shooting W. Hare, one of the guards, made a full confession this morning, in which he has given the names of five or six leaders in the attack of Saturday night. Sheriff McCarthy will furnish the names of those implicated as soon as the arrests can be made. Woody is in jail, and the presence of the militia about the jail seems to have had the effect to make him weaken.

Sheriff Truss has returned from the Warrior coal mines, Alabama, and states no men were killed Saturday as reported, but that the striking miners maintain a threatening attitude toward the recently imported Italians and will not allow them to work. The mine owners are endeavoring to prevail on the strikers to leave.

The Sheriff did not call at the miners' camp at Coal Center, Pa., to-day, and in consequence the strikers are still on the ground and as determined as ever. Neel's mines were not visited to-day, and the officers on the ground had a quiet time. A call was made at the Empire Works, but the non-unionists, after a peaceful consultation, declined to come out. The event of the day was the arrival at Courtney of a Hungarians for the purpose of going to work at the Garfield mines. No Hungarians have heretofore been employed in the district, and their advent at this time is regarded with concern. A camp will be established at Courtney to-morrow to prevent them from going to work. Operators say that if the strike continues much longer Hungarians will be introduced in all the mines.

At midnight Gov. Hoadley arrived from Cincinnati and shortly after reaching the Executive office he received the following telegram from Sheriff T. F. McCarty of Hocking county: "The Hon. George Hoadley, Governor, Columbus, O.: All means in my power are entirely exhausted to repress disorder and protect life and property. The strikers are cutting all telegraph wires. I am worn out. Have been going day and night for two months. Please send militia immediately and save further bloodshed. The jail is threatened." To the above telegram the Governor replied as follows: "T. F. McCarty, Sheriff, Logan, Hocking county, Ohio: Telegram just received; troops are coming. How many do you want to guard Logan jail? Can send Lancaster company to Logan if thought best ahead of the rest." As soon as this telegram was sent the Governor issued his order for troops, and the riot alarm was sounded. The members of the different companies in this city were soon preparing themselves for the scene of trouble. At this writing the Governor's Guard, the Fourteenth Regiment, and the Circleville and Lancaster Companies of the Sixth Regiment, and the New Lexington Company of the Seventeenth will all concentrate at Lancaster, from which point they will be immediately taken to Sand Run first, and as soon as quiet is restored there the troops will be divided and stationed at other points that are now threatening trouble.

Some miners had been arrested and incarcerated in the Logan jail, and this excited the rioters to renewed energy, and they began to concentrate around the building and prepare to liberate the prisoners. Sheriff McCarty realized that he would be unable to longer preserve the peace, and issued his call for assistance. The excitement is increasing as the riot alarm continues to sound, and the streets are becoming alive with people. The militia are gathering at the armory. A train on the Hocking Valley is ready to convey them to the scene of the riot, and they are expected to move in a short time. At a late hour the last wire was cut so that there is no communication with points below Logan except as carriers reach southern points and send to the city by circuitous routes. This prevents the authorities from knowing what is going on till two or three hours' time has elapsed, and it is believed that a riot prevails since midnight at certain places.

The bank bosses at New Straitsville report that no men are to be found in that town, and the women refuse to tell their whereabouts. They are believed to be out in riot according to a general and preconcerted plan.

At 1:30 Sheriff McCarty, of Hocking County, telegraphed from Logan, that he has five points in his county where the riot is beyond control, and is unable to get at them so as to give definite information as to what is being done. The Governor replied that 350 troops were on the way and more were under marching orders if needed. The military are being held at 2:15 for further orders. The Lancaster company is at Logan guarding the jail. The Circleville and New Lexington companies have been taken by special train to Lancaster, and all the rest of the troops ordered out are being held at Columbus. The Governor has just left on a special train for the scene of the troubles to investigate the matter for himself, and will then order troops if he thinks it necessary. He can reach the point in one hour and thirty minutes.

At midnight Saturday night 300 or 400 masked men heavily armed appeared at Snake Hollow for the purpose of seeking revenge for many insults thrust upon them since the strike began. Their appearance was the signal for firing from the guards, which was promptly and vigorously returned by the attacking party of miners. The firing was very brisk for a few minutes. When the smoke cleared away it was found that O'Hare from Logan, who was acting as captain of the Snake Hollow guards, was lying dead with several bullet holes in his body. Two other guards had received slight flesh wounds. It is not known whether any of the miners were wounded. None were left on the field. It is said the attacking party had ropes with which to hang "black legs" who had been repeatedly warned to desist from working, and that they had actually placed ropes round the necks of two men. This morning David Woody, a miner living at Nelsonville, was arrested on a charge of complicity in Saturday night's attack and sent to Logan on a special car and placed in jail. The body of the dead man was forwarded to Logan to-night.

The monthly debt statement makes a very favorable showing. Since the beginning of the fiscal year—two months—the annual rate of debt reduction has been $90,000,000. Yet notwithstanding this large debt payment and the ordinary large payments at the end of a fiscal year, including last month $2,500,000 of the Geneva award, the available cash balance is $1,000,000 more than it was two months ago. The cash in the Treasury has increased from $404,000,000 to $414,000,000. This is due in a great measure to receipts of silver and gold certificates, which aggregated $5,000,000. The amount of gold coin and bullion increased from $119,000,000 to 122,500,000 and it is expected that this increase will continue during the fall months.

The decrease in the public debt for August was $8,542,852. During July and August $12,536,141.

Second, the duty on flour to be such that on its delivery here the cost of the American and Spanish product should be the same. Lastly, to admit crude petroleum free.

THE COVERED BRIDGE.

Tell the fainting soul in the weary form,
There's a world of the purest bliss,
That is linked as that soul and form are linked,
By a covered bridge with this.

Yet to reach that realm on the other shore,
We must pass through a transient gloom;
And must walk unseen, unhelped, and alone,
Through that covered bridge—the tomb.

But we all pass over on equal terms;
For the universal toll
Is the outer garb, which the hand of God
Has flung around the soul.

Though the eye is dim and the bridge is dark,
And the river it spans is wide,
Yet faith points through to a shining mount
That looms on the other side.

To enable our feet in the next day's march
To climb up that golden ridge,
We must all lie down for one night's rest
Inside of the Covered Bridge.

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST.

NICHOLAS STAMM, in Herald of June 28th, page 411, says that the article written by Bro. Scott on the kingdom of God, is a good one; but there are or "seem to be some that differ upon some points. They say there is no king, and therefore can be no kingdom."

I have nothing to say about Scott's article; it is in harmony with my faith, except that he does not inform us what the church is, a spiritual or a literal, temporal, physical kingdom.

The word of mine, "nor a king," in my letter in the Herald, page 339, was not absolutely intended to state that we were without a king; but that our Lord Jesus was not yet in his kingdom, or on his own throne, in his physical or literal kingdom, which is to be on the earth. For he is the "Nobleman which went into a far country to receive a kingdom for himself, and then return;" who told his servants to "occupy till I come." (Luke 19:11-13). For his Father will give him the earth for his kingdom. As soon as he receives it, he will return to it. But as long as he has not come, the church is a spiritual kingdom of Christ, guided by the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, which he sent when he went into that "far country." Which far country? Acts 1:9 will answer, and the next two verses point out when, and in what manner he will come into his kingdom from that far off country. Malachi 1:14 is pointed; "For I am a great king, saith the Lord of Hosts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen. No one will deny that; but this same "great king" was not Jesus, the Christ, but his Father. He is a king, not only of this earth, but of the whole universe, all space.

And to prove that we are in his kingdom without the Church of Christ, see Doctrine and Covenants 85:9:

"All kingdoms have a law given, and there are many kingdoms; for there is no space in the which there is no kingdom, and there is no kingdom in which there is no space, either a greater or lesser kingdom. And unto every law there are certain bounds also, and conditions."

We are accustomed to say, the animal kingdom, the mineral kingdom, etc.; every species by itself a kingdom, from the smallest atoms to the largest planets in space. Then all space is an empire, or a kingdom; and the "great king" of Malachi 1:14, is the king of them all; and his throne is in the very focus of his kingdom, while our Jesus Christ was only a "morning star," (Rev. 22:16), with Lucifer (Isa. 14:12) in the celestial conference, Job 38:7. A king is a lord paramount, a lord by himself, and is the highest lawgiver in the universe. Hence our Heavenly Father is the highest lord (law giver) in space, and our Redeemer himself admits it. Matt. 5:48; 19:17; John 8:26, 29.

I did say in my letter that Jesus was only a prince. He is "Prince of Peace," "Prince of life." (Peter and Isaiah). But did Isaiah the Hebrew prophet speak Latin? The word prince is from the Latin, princeps, a captain or premier. I don't believe it, nor do I believe that Peter knew Latin, a poor Hebrew fisherman.

Our Lord Jesus has many names and titles and characters, which are, the second Adam, the Advocate, Alpha and Omega, High Priest, Word of God, Wonderful Counselor, Bright and Morning Star, the True Deliverer, Day Spring, Branch, Stone, Bridegroom, Son of David, Son of God, Son of Man, Only Begotten, First Begotten, Ruler, Savior, Son of the Highest, Shepherd, God, Faithful, Everlasting Father, Mediator, Prince of Life, Prince of Peace, Prophet, Root and Offspring of David, Redeemer, Lion, Lord of Glory, Lamb of God, King of Kings, Lord of Lords, King of Jews, King of Israel, the Holy One of Israel, the Just One, Mighty God, Image of God, Horn of Salvation, Sun of Righteousness, Captain, Apostle, etc.

Did he occupy or have all the above offices at once? No; nor has he intended to go through them all at once. When he comes he will come as a lion, to finish his conquest. Then he will be the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. After that he will be the Great Judge at the end of the "little season." Then he will give up the kingdom to God, to the same Great King of Mal. 1:14, that God may be God of all, 1 Cor. 15:24-28; or in other words, that the Father may be King of all.

But how is it that the above titles do not harmonize with the titles in 1 Cor. 15:24-28, and some other texts in the Bible. He is called "the Everlasting Father," "The Mighty God," Isaiah 9, and that his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom," and that "of his kingdom there will be no end." Dan. 2:44; Luke 1:33; while he is only to rule as king throughout the thousand years and the Magogic dispensation as revealed in Revelations.

The question was, is the church a spiritual or a literal—temporal kingdom?

The church like Christ, has many names, which are: The church militant, body of Christ, an army, (host), congregation, Lord's house, kingdom, (spiritual), Lamb's wife, woman, net, city, heaven, &c. Then we say the church is feminine, while the kingdom of the future is masculine. The church is the battle field, the kingdom conquered is our peaceable home; hence, as our brother says: "This day the voice of battle," i. e., "this day" is the time till the King comes. "I will be your Ruler when I come." Doctrine and Covenants 11:2. "The next the victor's song," in the kingdom proper. The Lord told his Apostles, that there were some standing with him then that should not "taste of death, until they see the Son of Man come in his kingdom." What kingdom was that? Was that the church? No; for that kingdom was among the Jews already. Was that the kingdom into which he went when he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight? Acts 1:9. No; not that heavenly kingdom; for they all saw him go up, and not "some." He went to sit on the throne of his Father, on the right hand of God; a Mediator, not a king. Thence that was not his kingdom, nor the church. The kingdom he is to come in, is the Kingdom of Israel. The foundation was laid from before the world was, and we are the builders. When completed, finished, ready, the King will come.

SECRET COMBINATIONS.

Bro. Joseph:—Your letter of November 1st, was duly received, in which you say you are "seriously in doubt in regard to" publishing the article sent you on secret combinations, or "advertisement of anti-masonic books," as you call it.

You say the matters stated by E. Ronayne in his lectures "were, if true, indicative that Masonry was a thing of profound foolishness, if not of downright wickedness. I doubt the latter, though I may mistake."

Pray tell us what else but foolishness, and even wickedness, can Masonry be? We have plenty of evidence from high Masonic writers, and from other circumstantial and corroborative sources, aside from that given in Ronayne's works, that Masonry, if not a religion, is at least mainly borrowed from a pagan religion—the Baal or Sun—worship of the East, just as Ronayne proves in "The Master's Carpet," from standard Masonic authorities, as he claims to do in its preface sent you; and with such undeniable clearness that we would like to place his "anti-masonic" book by the side of A. Wilford Hall's anti-Darwin book, and have all men know of its claims; for Masons can no more refute it, than Evolutionists and the advocates of the Sound-Wave theory, can meet the logic of the "problem of Human Life."

Masonry, in common with many other modern secret organizations modeled after it, and with the ancient "mysteries," or secret Pagan religion from which it originated, has its farcical and dramatic ceremonies, through which its members have to pass, by which they are Initiated, passed, and raised into its different degrees; and which performances, being only of man, have no real virtue, like the divinely appointed initiatory ordinances of the church. Temples and altars were and are for the purpose of, and associated with, religious worship. Why does Masonry build and make use of these, if not a religious philosophy? Ronayne shows from Masonic text books, that Masonry is nothing short of a religion. And if not a religion, what but child's play and foolishness are its initiatory performances, viewed from a sober and sensible stand-point, even if there were no wicked and murderous oath of secrecy in it? But being in texture the system or form at least, of an idolatrous or heretical religion or worship, we know that all such man-made initiation ordinances can be nothing less than "profound foolishness." And connected as they are with murderous oaths, and with a secret combination, which as such is condemned in the Book of Mormon, and in which Moroni says: "The Lord worketh not," which alone should be sufficient for any Latter Day Saint to know, to keep him also from taking part in the "Lodge work of any such; for where the Lord does not work the devil will,—it must be even more, an abomination, if not "down-right wickedness. The observance of man-made church sacraments, instead of those that the Lord has appointed, is solemn mockery, and blasphemy. Baptism, and the other initiatory performances of the church, would be nothing less than profound foolishness in the sight of God, and their observance by man mere nonsense and useless, only for the fact that he has instituted these ordinances, and the faith and doctrines connected with them, as the straight and narrow way to the Tree and River of Life. In God's command, and in our obeying in spirit and in truth, and in the fact that it is his appointed way, consists their only virtue.

"Unto Cain,"—(the first Freemason, duly initiated in secret into ancient craft Masonry by its founder, and taking upon himself the usual oath of secrecy and death penalty having reference to his throat, See Gen. 5: 14, I. T.), "as all true Masons have done from the beginning of the world," (see "by-laws," etc., of Magnolia Lodge, No. 126, P. 30), "and to his offering" the Lord "had not respect," because he "loved Satan more than God," and offered by Satan's command,—did not come in the right spirit. So also with one who in the "lodge work" of any secret combination, in official capacity or that of a candidate to membership, prays, not to God in and through the name of Christ, as by him commanded, but to T. G. A. O. T. U., being careful not to mention the name of Jesus in any prayer in the lodge (which marks such institution as "anti"—Christ, since it has the nature of a religion); and he that thus prays not necessarily a believer, but perhaps—which to the knowledge of one of the undersigned sometimes happens—a scoffer at christianity and a spiritualist. And when he or they, officiating in an initiation, prays that a live man who is shamming death, may be raised to life, it can be nothing less than "down-right wickedness." For even "prayer, without faith, is sin." Robert Morris, Masonic author, etc., in one of his poetic outbursts, says, "Bring prayer, the watcher in the heavens will heed." Does Mr. Morris believe that the "watcher in the heavens" would heed, or be pleased with such a mockery as either of the cases mentioned above?

Some individuals outside of the church who had read the Book of Mormon, (one a believer therein, another an intelligent Roman Catholic, who had also read the inspired translation of the Bible), seeing that it without reserve discountenanced and condemned secret combinations, have asked me if our church allowed its members to join secret orders, or if any in the church belonged to such. What could I say? I was forced in shame and humility to reply, "I am sorry to inform you that such is the case." The answer was received with "profound" astonishment. And no wonder, after all that they had read against such things in the acknowledged standards of the church! Yet there are elders in the church who advocate and defend secret combinations?

We see no occasion, when any one contends lawfully against polygamy, for calling it a wanton charge and arraignment, and for the simple and all sufficient reason that the acknowledged standard books of the church condemn it. This at least should be sufficient reason, though to be sure, polygamy is mentioned in the epitome of doctrines of the church, while secret combinations are not. Yet there is much more in the Bible and Book of Mormon condemnatory of the latter than there is against polygamy, and just as plain and positive in its nature, it seems to us. Masonry is a secret combination. Yet a number of the Saints and some of the elders, as before remarked, "have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after" this error. And even the president of his church whose name (Christ's) is left out of the lodge, is "seriously in doubt in regard to" assisting in making known by way of the pages of the Herald, a bit of legally sworn testimony, and positive evidence drawn from Masonry itself, against a secret combination, when requested to do so, that those who are interested, or wish to obey Paul's injunction to "prove all things" that they may hold fast only "that which is good," may see or know where to find the evidence against, as well as for, this thing.

We do not doubt the propriety of speaking out against polygamy, or of bringing to the notice of parties likely to be interested or liable to be misled by the fallacious reasoning of its advocates, any book that will show the shallowness of such sophistry, because it might be in one sense an advertisement of such book; but against secret combinations, against which there is much more to be found in scripture, "a wanton charge and arraignment might not be correct!" Not us, but Ronayne, has made the charge and arraignment in that article. If the charge is not true, the first thing to be done by the advocates of Masonry is to "enter proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction for the purpose of convicting the said Edmond Ronayne of perjury," as there requested, and thus "protect the public against imposition and fraud." They have had plenty of time since that charge was made to do so, if they would. If the charge had been false, this could easily have been done, and should have been done; yes, and it would have been done long ago, and his mouth stopped. But this they have not done, and we venture they never will. That they have not done this is sufficient evidence, all things considered, if there was no other, that the charge is true and the arraignment correct. If true and correct from Ronayne's stand-point, who has not half the scripture evidence against secret works that we possess, then that charge and arraignment should not be called wanton by us; and as fast as this is found to be the case, that it is true, it should be summarily followed up by us, by a decisive condemnatory judgment, and secret combinations one and all shunned, as we would shun the gates of hell. For we have the inspired translation of the Bible, showing that Satan is the author and founder of secret combinations and their attendant evils, and makes them his engine of evil and his stronghold; and that it was for these things that the Canaanite nations, or those dispossessed by Israel were judged ready and fit to be destroyed root and branch, old and young, by the armies of Israel; and that these things were also the cause why the Lord finally dispossessed Israel of their own land, and scattered them and made them a hiss and a by-word. We have also the Book of Mormon, showing the Satanic origin as well as purposes and evils of secret oath-bound orders; and how republican governments were overturned, and wicked and tyrannical powers established, oppressing the good and the poor; and how nations were finally brought to destruction, all by means of the power and evils of secret combinations; and expressly and earnestly warning the Gentile world of to-day that these secret societies with their oaths and death penalties that "are had among all nations," will be among us, and work our ruin and destruction when they shall become sufficiently strong, if we do not awaken from our lethargy and watch and labor against them. Yes, and we are there commanded of God to strive to keep these things down! And we have also the revelation of St. John, foretelling a tyrannical power, the "beast," that appears to adopt spiritualism as its religion, and compels all to unite with it, (as the Gaddianton "society" sought to do; see Gaddianhi's letter, Nephi 2: 1), and persecute unto death all who will not, and who have not the mark, or grip, or password or "name of the beast," or the "number of his name." Each lodge of a secret combination is named and also numbered, and therefore has a number to its name; and it seems to us that an evil secret combination that will get into power might come nearer to fulfilling this prophecy of the beast that "came up out of the earth," than anything else; and which united, or will unite, church and state, doubtless, and will have connected with its religion, a miraculous demoniac power. Just as such a miraculous power was had by the priests in the old Greek temples, in connection with the "mysteries"—the masonry of the ancient Greek religion,—a sun and nature worship. And we have the latter day revelations, telling of the "enemy in the secret chambers;" the lodge room is emphatically a secret chamber, always secret and always a chamber; and also telling of a tyrannical power like John's "beast," and of governmental ruin, when all who will not take up the sword, must "flee to Zion for safety."

You "doubt" that Masonry is a thing of foolishness and wickedness! And yet you know it to be a secret combination, and that "all these things" are contrary to the spirit and teaching of the Book of Mormon and Inspired Translation of the Bible. Do you doubt that it is a secret combination? You can not. Then you know that it is contrary to the will of God that any should unite themselves with such; for you must have read in the Book of Mormon what I have already quoted, but which will bear repetition, that "the Lord worketh not in secret combinations, and also that the devil "is the foundation of all these things;" yes, and you have read in the Bible, (Inspired Translation), as also in the Book of Mormon, that Satan and Cain were the authors and institutors of the first of all secret societies, and that the polygamist Lamech was the first to slay a Morgan (Irak), "for the oath's sake," who revealed the secret. If the plain pointing out in our acknowledged standards, that these things are works of darkness and from beneath, and their condemnation there is not to be recognized as of any weight, simply because they are not mentioned in the Epitome, then of what use are our scripture standards, more than such things are to the Brighamite? Have we, also, outgrown them, so that to us also they are not worth "the ashes of a rye straw?" Do you doubt Masonry's secret oaths and death penalties? I think you can not. Then by exercising a little thought and reason, you must know that these death penalties to which they are sworn, are "contrary to the laws of their God, and also the laws of their land;" it is both unscriptural and illegal; it is (or would be, and they swear to have it done) the taking of human life for no cause recognized as just or legal by God or the government; and would be nothing less than murder, by the laws of God or the land. Therefore such secret orders should be classed with the "murderous combinations" of the Book of Mormon, and also be put down by the Government. Why not? Are they not illegal?

Do you "doubt" that the candidate is blindfolded, and led around, and taken through all the farces, tomfoolery and child's-play, stated and illustrated in Ronayne's book and lectures? Then if you will let us know what it is of these that you doubt, we think we shall be able to prove to your satisfaction from very high Masonic authority—Robert Morris, himself, "L. D., Masonic Author and Lecturer, Past Grand Master of Kentucky, First Master of the Royal Solomon Mother Lodge, Jerusalem, &c., &c., aside from, and additional to, the evidence given in the exposes mentioned above, that Ronayne has told nothing but the truth on these subjects. Besides this, one of the undersigned has some knowledge of Masonry, confirmatory of some of Ronayne's statements, from other sources: From having been inside of a Masonic lodge, and knowing that his representations and illustrations thereof are true, and from this fact having presumptive evidence of the truths of his other statements; many of which are also confirmed by our Masonic pamphlet of "By Laws" of the lodge, and "Manual" of the Grange. There in the ante-room hung the sword, used by the Tyler, who stands outside of the lodge-room door with a drawn sword while the lodge is in "communication," or at "work." An acacia bush is represented as placed at the head of the candidate to the mysteries of the third degree of Masonry, while he is shamming death and being prayed to life again, in personating Hiram Abiff, "the widow's son of Tyre," who traditionally "martyred" at Jerusalem, was fictitiously found buried beneath an acacia tree. And there in the lodge-room, hung the "acacia twig." There were the raised "stations" for the various lodge officials, located severally as represented. In the east end of the hall was the Worshipful Master's station, with the "emblem of Deity"—G—"o'er the Master's chair,"—the "Name" of T. G. A. O. T. U., (the Grand Architect of the Universe); while in front of this and the W. Master's station stood an altar, as for sacrificial purposes stood before the idols worshiped in Pagan lands. When any rise to speak or minister in the lodge service, they approach this "altar of Freemasonry,"—on which "they have fore-sworn themselves," and sacrificed their just rights and liberty, when kneeling by it in the initiation,—and give the sign of the degree, and address the W. M., with their faces toward the east. Now read the following description of the ancient Masonry or secret Sun or Baal-worship into which Israel had fallen, and which Masonic writers acknowledge as the origin of modern speculative Masonry:

"And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east."—Ezek. 8: 16.

In the fourteenth verse Ezekiel tells of seeing "women weeping for Tammuz"—(Adonis). And this Tammuz or Adonis was but a mythical personification of the sun, or connected with this idolatry. In verses seven to twelve, Ezekiel gives us another glimpse inside a secret lodge. Then read in the ninth, eleventh and twelfth chapters, of the severe punishment brought on them because they "did after the manner of the heathen round about them." Now read what Robert Morris says of the origin of Masonry:

"It is but a brief seven miles east of this place (Gebal) that Aphaca, the principal seat of the worship of Adonis, or Tammuz, stood. This worship was the Freemasonry of the heathen, and the system upon which King Solomon engraffed the revealed precepts given his fathers upon Sinai. As the wild stock into which the inspired word was engraffed, the Rites of Tammuz deserve the attention of Masonic writers. This is not the place to enlarge upon the theme; but I might be permitted to say, that a system which had the favor and support of the wisest and best cultivated of the human race for two thousand years; * * and that was thought worthy, by so far reaching a mind as King Solomon's, of adoption and incorporation into the inspired theology, can not have been altogether vile. * * They (the Rites of Adonis) must have presented many innocent and pure traits to attract the admiration of Solomon."—Freemasonry in the Holy Land, pages 137-8.

Even the time and place of Solomon's mythical initiation into the Pagan "mysteries"—this "worship of Adonis" or Rites of Tammuz"—this secret Sun-worship and idolatry that "was the Freemasonry of the heathen," is "elegantly" pointed out:

"There is an elegant myth connected with the literature of Masonry, to the effect that upon the arrival of Hiram Abiff at Jerusalem, King Solomon conducted him to a point near the junction of the mountains now termed Olivet and Olfence, and showed him the range entitled Moriah, which he had selected as the site of his projected temple. * * Our story goes on to say that it was in that conference that Hiram initiated King Solomon into the mysteries of Adonis, as practiced for so many centuries in Phoenicia."—Freemasonry in the Holy Land, p. 379.

Suppose that Solomon, or any other man, fall into this idolatry that was the "Freemasonry of the heathen," for conscience sake, what of it? Polygamy also "attracted the admiration of Solomon," and consequently "must have presented many innocent and pure traits," and therefore, according to the drift of the above logic, should also be practiced by Freemasons. He "adopted" heathen polygamy, as well as the heathen religion. Does that make either of these evils or errors a good or divine institution? No; but men "seek to excuse themselves because of that which is written concerning David and Solomon," or to make these great names a breastwork behind which to hide, or defend their evil deeds and indulgencies. Now let us see what is "written" on this subject concerning Solomon:

"But if ye shall at all turn from following me, * * and serve other Gods and worship them; then will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them; and this house which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight; and Israel shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people: * * And they shall say, Why hath the Lord done thus unto this land, and to this house? And they shall answer, Because they forsook the Lord their God, who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them; therefore hath the Lord brought upon them all this evil."—1 Kings 9: 6-9.

"But King Solomon loved many strange women, * * of the nations concerning which the Lord said unto the children of Israel, ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you: for surely they will turn away your heart after their gods: Solomon clave unto these in love. * * And his wives turned away his heart. For it came to pass, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after their gods. * * And Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord. * * And the Lord was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the Lord God of Israel, which had appeared unto him twice and had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods; but he kept not that which the Lord commanded.—1 Kings 11: 1-10.

Now let us see what was one of the "revealed precepts" given Solomon's "fathers upon Sinai," into which he "engrafted the Rites of Tammuz"—the "worship of Adonis—this feature of secret and condemned worship of the Sun—this "Freemasonry of the heathen," from which modern Freemasonry unblushingly claims its origin:

"Take heed to thyself, lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, lest it be for a snare in the midst of thee; but ye shall destroy their altars, break their images, and cut down their groves: for thou shalt worship no other God: for the Lord whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God."—Ex. 34: 12-14.

Again:

"If there be found among you, * * man or woman that hath * * gone and serv'd other Gods, and worshiped them, either the sun, or the moon, or any of the hosts of heaven, * * then shalt thou bring forth that man or that woman, which have committed that wicked thing, unto thy gates, * * and shalt stone them with stones, till they die."—Deut. 17: 2-5.

Yet, in the face of all this plain Scripture testimony, condemning this Pagan "worship of Adonis," with its secret and murderous oaths, and horrid divination rites practiced by its priests in its temples, and of Solomon's doings in connection therewith, Freemasonry has the presumption, in this "enlightened age," to come smiling and confidently forward with the claim of this secret idolatry as its origin in one hand, and that of being the most respectable, righteous, and "sublime institution" on earth, in the other! And, stranger still, the slimy thing is not only tolerated and has plenty of followers generally, but is even fondled in the very lap of the church! For its stealth and presumption, and its halo of mystery, and its claims of sanctity, and its public grand displays and high-sounding titles, have procured for it a great popularity; and the consequent familiarity with it has sealed the eyes of all to its natural hideousness. And few are found that care to enquire what parentage, source, tendencies, or ownership, is indicated by its ear-marks and brands, or to hear and credit their report or testimony.

In the Library of Universal Knowledge—(Chamber's Cyclopaedia with American additions), under the head of "Adonis," we read:

"A yearly festival was celebrated in honor of Adonis, and consisted of two parts—a mourning for his departure to the under world, (see Ezek. 3: 14), and a rejoicing for his return to Venus. * * The myths connected with Adonis belong originally to the east. They display worship of the powers of nature conjoined with that of the heavenly bodies, and Adonis himself appears to be the god of the solar year. The similarity of the name to the Phœnician Adon, which signifies "lords," is unmistakable; and this word Adon was specially applied to the king of heaven, the Sun."

From the same source, under head of "mysteries" let us learn something more of the "Freemasonry of the heathen."

"Mysteries, * * designated certain rites and ceremonies in ancient, chiefly Greek and Roman religions, only known to, and practiced by congregations of certain initiated men and women, at appointed seasons, and in strict seclusion. * * The hold which the nightly secrecy of these meetings, together with their extraordinary worship, must naturally have taken upon minds more fresh and childlike than our advanced ages can boast, (?) was increased by all the mechanical contrivances of the effects of light and sound which the priests could command. * * As far as we have any knowledge of the plots of these mysteries, as scenic representations, they generally brought the stories of the special god and goddesses before the spectators—their births, sufferings, deaths, and resurrections. Many were the outward symbols used, of which such as the Phallus, * * told more or less their own tale. * * The most important mysteries were, in historical times, those of Eleusis, and the Thesmophoron, both representing—each from a different point of view—the rape of Proserpine, and Ceres' search for her: the Thesmophoron mysteries being also in a manner connected with the Dionisian worship. There were further, those of Zeus of Crete—derived from a very remote period—of Bacchus himself, Cybele, and Aphrodite—the two latter with reference to the mysteries of propagation, but celebrated in diametrically opposed ways, the former culminating in the self-mutilation of the worshiper, the latter in prostitution. Further, the mysteries of Orpheus. * * Nor were the other gods and goddesses forgotten: Hera, Minerva, Diana, Hecate, nay, foreign gods like Mithras, and the like, had their due secret solemnities all over the classical soil, and whithersoever Greek (and partly Roman) colonists took their Lares and Penates all over the antique world. The beginning of the reaction in the minds of thinking men, against this most gross and degenerated kind of veneration of the natural powers and instincts is marked by the period of the Hesiodic Poems; and when, toward the end of the classical periods, the mysteries were no longer secret, but public orgies of the most shameless kind, their days were numbered."

They were put down in Rome itself—the rites of Tammuz or Adonis with the rest. Under head of "Eleusinian Mysteries, the sacred rites with which the annual festival of Ceres was celebrated at Eleusis," we read in the above mentioned Library of Universal Knowledge:

"The ancients themselves generally believed that the doctrines revealed to the initiated gave them better hopes than other men enjoyed, both as to the present life and as to a future state of existence. * * The festival itself consisted of two parts, the greater and the lesser mysteries. The celebration of the great mysteries * * lasted nine days. * * The sixth day, * * was the great day of the feast. On that day the statue of Iocchus was borne in pomp along the sacred way from the Ceranicus at Athens to Eleusis, where the votaries spent the night, and were initiated in the last mysteries. * * On the night of the sixth day they were admitted into the innermost sanctuary of the temple. * * They were once more purified, and repeated their original oath of secrecy with an imposing and awful ceremonial, somewhat resembling, it is believed, the forms of modern freemasonry. * * The mysteries were celebrated with the most scrupulous secrecy. No initiated person might reveal what he had seen under pain of death, and no uninitiated person could take part in the ceremonies under the same penalty. . . . The chief priest (answering to the Worshipful Master of modern Masonry) was called the "Hierophant," or Mystagogue; next in rank to him was the Daduchus, or Torch-bearer; after them came the Hieroceryx, or sacred herald, and the priest of the altar."

"The father of Adonis had a place here (at Gebal). The worship of the sun constituted the religion of all the neighboring countries of Tyre."—Lamartine.

Do you "doubt" that masonry borrowed the idea of its forms and initiation ceremonies, oaths and death penalties from, and claims to have come down from the Tyrian or Phœnician secret Baal (sun) worship, by way of Hiram "Abiff,—the widow's son"—"the martyred Hiram," "called from Gebal by King Hiram of Tyre"—"Mason's lord"—"wisest son of Light"—"the Master of the widow's son, whose tragic history seasons every instruction of the Freemasons' lodge?"—(Rob. Morris).

If you still doubt, there is plenty more evidence from standard masonic authority, that can be adduced, showing that Ronayne's "charge and arraignment" on this score is quite true and "correct;" and therefore that "masonry divine," in its very fountain-head, is a thing of not only "profound foolishness," but also of "downright wickedness;" and consequently that when you "doubt the latter," you do "mistake."

One of the undersigned also has some knowledge of Masonry from having once belonged to a secret order which, we can see from Ronayne's description of masonry, and from our other available sources of information, was modeled after that institution in general and in many particulars; and which, its history (written by one high up in the order) states, was originated by men who "were all members of high rank in secret, social and benevolent societies, and therefore proficient in ritualism;" and who sought to produce an order whose members should be united "in the same manner as the Masons and Odd-fellows." This combination, as well as most secret orders that have sprung up since 1717, according to our reading and observation, is a child of "Ancient Craft Masonry," which, with many evils in Romanism, came out of the old idolatrous religions of Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, and Pagan Rome.

In view of the strong condemnation of secret combinations in the text books of the church, we wish to see something corresponding thereto in the church organ, and feel sorry to see any of the Saints going into any of these things, that have the appearance of evil, at the very least; and we still feel to request that the former communication, alluded to in your letter, may be inserted in the Herald, as an introduction or opening wedge for other thoughts that we would like to offer, which would not otherwise be so well understood. We would also like to see the present letter in the Herald, as it covers much of the ground that we designed to go over in the second part of Secret Combinations No. 2, with which we designed to follow up "Secret Combinations No. 1," already sent you. In order to free that manuscript of some of its objectionable features as an advertisement, you may leave off the anti-masonic books and their prices given at the end; and also be careful not to give price nor publisher's address of the books from which the sworn statement and prefaces are copied; because the knowledge thereof might enable some misguided ones to investigate and "prove all things;" and having learned the true nature, origin and history of masonry, (of which the great mass of Freemasons know but little, for the possession of a few signs, grips, and passwords and displaying some masonic emblem on their vest collars, constitutes about all they know or care to learn of the institution), hold fast only "that which is good," and shun that sink of iniquity; and Satan, "the foundation of all these things," would be angry, and "all men would be offended because of the Saints' Herald, who "love darkness rather than light." And though it may not thus be an article, or an advertisement, it will be quotations from truthful and standard works, which will "stand the storm" and "conquer by and by," if all who should, will assist in bringing them to public notice.

We have been unsparing, plain and pointed in our remarks and criticisms, believing that the case called for and justified a little jogging as a sort of "wake up," and hope no personal offense will be taken by any one. When once we have decided to go about doing any thing that should or must be done, we have not the patience to dally and trifle about it (unless it is the casting off of the shackles of our evil and useless habits and propensities, in which case—well, never mind that now);

For he that would succeed in bringing down the game,
Must not fire at random, but first take good aim.

We are inclined to use such means, and go to work in such a way, as seems most likely to effect the object aimed at.

For a thing that's worth doing, as sages oft tell,
Is generally worth doing quite thorough and well.

Possibly we have not been sufficiently regardful of the feelings and position of one whom we have both received sufficient evidence was divinely called to the high and responsible station he has so long filled, as perhaps no other could so well and wisely have done. It may be that the large size and strength of the doses that we are inclined to administer generally, make them nauseating and justly objectionable. It may be that we occasionally give a purgative, when the case only calls for a mild physic, or a mere laxative; or that the lack of a sufficiently heavy coat of sugar on our pills, is a fault. For what the editor of the Herald once said about sugar coated pills, is very true. It was at the Semi-Annual Conference of 1875. Bro. Blair and the editor of the Saints' Herald had been appointed to draft a petition, or a remonstrance—do not remember just what, that one of the Elders present thought should be couched in stronger terms than the two appointed were likely to use. He therefore arose and proposed that some one else should be appointed to do the work; for, said he, in winding up his speech, "We don't expect anything but sugar-coated pills from these two gentlemen." At this the editor, who had remained standing on the speaker's stand, turned to the audience and good humoredly remarked that, "Sugar-coated pills are more palatable, and just as effective as any other."

Wishing that that which is in accordance with the "Scriptures of truth," and pleasing in the sight of heaven, may become manifest, and prevail, we remain,

Your brothers in the true faith,

By request of Bro. A. J. Hinkle, son of Elder George M. Hinkle, we print the following letter, first printed in the Ensign, a paper published at West Buffalo, Scott county, Iowa, by Elder Hinkle and W. E. McLellan, and printed by Isaiah Matteson for them.

G. M. HINKLE TO W. W. PHELPS.

BUFFALO, Scott Co., Iowa Ter.,
August 14th, 1844.

To W. W. PHELPS, Esq., Nauvoo, Ill.,

My Dear Sir:—After so long a time, I take up my pen to address a few lines to you, and thus break that perfect silence which has existed between us ever since we parted in Far West, Missouri, in the Fall of 1838. Then you and I were both dissenters from the church of "Latter Day Saints," though we did not dissent upon exactly the same principles—for I only dissented from the unwise, unhallowed management of the heads or authorities of the church, and not from any true points of doctrine which I ever had believed.—But you said to me that you dissented from the whole Mormon system.

Since then I have been told by good authority, such as Hyrum Smith and others, that you have returned to the bosom of the church, and been received again to fellowship, and all seems to be well with you—if you are happy in the course you are now taking, all I have now to say to you is, at the tribunal of heaven you will have to answer for all your deeds done in the body.

But Sir, there is one point upon which I wish to address the Latter Day Saints through you, in order that the honest hearted and ignorant minded may be corrected, and the malicious hearted slanderers put to shame. It has been the theme of many ever since I left Missouri, to calumniate and vilify me for the course which I, as the acting Colonel of the Militia of Caldwell, pursued in the surrender of the citizens of Far West, Caldwell, &c., to the authorities of Missouri. Those vilifiers have stated it, and vociferated its repetition throughout the length and breadth of our happy land—and the newspapers of the day have thrown it upon the wings of the wind, and no doubt it has gone to the old world, and there been listened to and credited—especially by those of your faith—that I, as a base wretch, after having the confidence of the church—yet in that critical moment of their perils in Missouri, when they in and of Far West were besieged by between three and four thousand men—the story is, that I, there and then, betrayed the Heads of the Church into the hands of the Military authorities of Missouri, and that too, for a large sum of money! And then, as if they intended to heap disgrace upon me, after insult and injury, they said I turned State's evidence against them;—also, that I informed on many of the citizens of Far West, had them arrested and delivered up to the court of inquiry, to be punished. And many such like reports have been put in circulation by my enemies to do me injury; all of which, before God, I declare to be as false as Satan himself.

Now Sir, you are the man who knows more about it than any other man belonging to your church. You know that you, John Corrill, A. Morrison, and myself, were appointed by Joseph Smith to go and confer with the commanding officers of the Missouri Militia, and effect a treaty if possible, on any terms short of a battle.—You know that we went and risked our lives with a white flag, when only a few hours previous, the bearer of one (Charles Rich,) had been fired at on the same field; and we did this to obey the order or request of Joseph Smith. Our object was (at least I felt so), to prevent the effusion of blood, which we all saw must inevitably soon take place, unless something could be immediately done. Were you not present, Sir, at that trying scene? when the eyes of our enemies seemed almost to flash fire when we approached, and I received from the hand of Major General Lucas that unhallowed paper, narrating to us the terms upon which the lives of our families and friends could be saved—viz: "Give up your leaders—your principal men, as hostages to be tried by civil law. Give up all your arms of defence, and ALL leave the State forthwith." He also read to us that generous—no—that execrable order of Governor Boggs, authorizing him to exterminate us, or drive us from the State.—Now Sir, I appeal to your candor; did I at this critical moment, say to General Lucas, or to any of those with him, Give me a sum of money, Judas like, and I will comply? If you answer in the affirmative, then query, were you and the others of the delegation to go partners with me in such an unhallowed speculation? What! thus to betray our friends—our brethren, into the hands of their implacable enemies in the hour of peril—and that too for Missouri gold!!! Or if I did, as has been reported by men high in authority among you, winked at by all, and not contradicted by any—at least so far as I know—did I take the price and snugly lodge it all in my own pocket, without dividing with any of you? You know I did not make that treaty alone. Nay, you well remember that yourself and the others with us, by authority, or request of Joseph Smith himself, agreed to the disgraceful terms. We then urged all to submit. But did I not then and there oppose that part of the order requiring us to give up our arms and immediately leave the State, urging that if any had offended by breaking the law, we were willing and even anxious that such should be punished to the extent of justice, or the magnitude of the crime—but to give up our arms and leave the State, would be virtually throwing away our most sacred rites as citizens of a republican state; and that we would about as soon give up our lives? Did he not become enraged and say that Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, Lyman Wight, P. P. Pratt, and G. W. Robinson must be given up; and no other terms would do? Did he not give us half an hour to consult our friends? When the facts were laid before Joseph, did he not say, "I will go;" and did not the others go with him, and that too voluntarily, so far as you and I were concerned? My understanding was, that those men were to be taken and kept till next morning as hostages. And if they did not, upon reflection and consultation with the officers in the camp of the enemy, during the night, conclude to accept of the terms proposed to us, but chose to fight, then they were to be kept safely, and returned to us in the city next morning, unharmed; and time given us to prepare for an attack by the Militia. During this whole interview and transaction, were not thousands of troops drawn up near the city, ready to fall upon us, provided those demanded as hostages refused to go? And when Smith and the others had given up, without any compulsory measures from us, did not General Lucas demand our arms; but on reflection he agreed to let us retain them till next day, inasmuch as it was then about sunset? Were we not advised next day, by word sent expressly from Joseph Smith to us, to surrender?—When that intelligence was received, did I not draw up the forces under my command, and explain to them the nature of the whole affair, and then request all who were in favor of surrendering, to make it known by marching three paces forward? They made a very slow start, but finally all came forward. We then marched out with slow and solemn step, into a partial hollow square of the enemy, faced inward, grounded arms, and marched away and left them. The town was laid under Martial law and guarded. Then the authorities commenced taking others as prisoners, and kept them under guard to be tried, as they said, by civil law.

No man ever knew me to complain of, or inform on any one. Uniformly when questioned by those seeking victims, I told them that all I knew to be guilty of breaking the law, had fled from the city the night before the surrender. When the Court of Enquiry held its session in Richmond, I did not turn State's evidence, but was legally subpoenaed, as you know.

Therefore, as to my course of conduct there, even under trying circumstances, while retrospecting it, I have no cause of regret. And during the time I was a member of the church, before God and all men, I have a clear conscience; and am willing to give an account of my course at any time.

While I lived in that church I tried to live in peace; and when I left it, I did not leave in order to persecute it, but to get from under the priestly influence of those men who bore down upon those who opposed their views, with an iron rule; with a yoke too intolerable for a high minded man, or an humble Christian spirit to bear. Past experiences had already shown me, that as soon as any one, but especially those of note among them, would leave them, he must suffer all kinds of abuse.—The motto was, "His character must be ruined, or he will injure us." And in return, the Dissenters have said, "Down with the heads of the church; down with the church." And I know that they have sometimes used base means, and published many falsehoods, and brought much persecution on you. This has not been my course. I despise the course which both parties have pursued. I am for peace and for truth, and truth only on all subjects.—Notwithstanding the many slanders that have been set afloat about me, in order to injure and ruin me, this is the first scrap that I have ever published on the subject: and I have written and published this out of mere necessity, in self-defence. I have hitherto been determined, let them say what they would or could, I would bear it, and leave the event with God. Almost six years have rolled away since I withdrew my labors and influence from among that people; and notwithstanding my reserve, some of them still continue to roll down their satanic falsehoods upon me.—I have been informed that one of your number is now in an adjoining neighborhood to this, asserting that I sold the heads of the church, in Missouri, for $700,00. Now Sir, as you are the man who was engaged in the whole affair with me, I request that you write a letter for publication, and either put it in the Times and Seasons, or send it to me; and in it exempt me from those charges, and correct the minds of that people and the public on this subject—for you know that they are as base as the blackness of darkness, and as false as Satan himself. If I felt to retaliate, or to do as other dissenters have done, I might publish much, and do it in truth, about the wickedness of that people; and it might add to the already exasperated state of feeling now existing against them; but, Sir, that is not my purpose. I feel, and always have, to leave them in the hands of God, and to mind my own business;—and I assure you I find enough to do to attend strictly to my own duty;—therefore, write and exhort your brethren "to go and do likewise."

Very respectfully, your friend and well wisher,

G. M. HINKLE.

EVILS OF GOSSIP.

WE have known a country society which withered away to nothing under the dry rot of gossip only. Friendships, once as firm as granite, dissolved to jelly, and then ran away to water, only because of this; love that promised a future as enduring and as stable as truth, evaporated into a morning mist that turned to a day's long tears, only because of this; a father and a son were set foot to foot with the fiery breath of an anger that would never cool again between them; and a husband and a young wife, each straining at the hated lash which in the beginning had been the promise of a God-blessed love, sat mournfully by the side of the grave where all their love and all their joy lay buried, and all because of this. We have seen faith transformed to mean doubt, joy give place to grim despair, and charity take on itself the features of black malevolence, all because of the fell works of scandal, and the magic mutterings of gossip. Great crimes work great wrongs, and the deeper tragedies of human life spring from the larger passions; but woeful and most mournful are the meatalogued tragedies that issue from gossip and detraction; most mournful the shipwreck often made of noble natures and lovely lives by the bitter winds and dead salt-waters of slander. So easy to say, yet so hard to disprove—throwing on the innocent all the burden and the strain of demonstrating their innocence, and punishing them as guilty if unable to pluck out the stings they never see, and to silence words they never hear—gossip and slander are the deadliest and cruelest weapons man has ever forged for his brother's heart.

All who will not pay their just debts? All who are hypocritical? All who are deceitful, and talk about others behind their backs? All who go in debt without the prospect of paying the same? All who are proud and scornful, holding themselves above their fellow-men and shunning those less fortunate than themselves? All who worship money more than they do their Creator? All who speculate off of the ignorance of others? All who are tattlers? All who sell intoxicating liquors to make money? All who think more of a wicked rich man than they do of a pious poor one? All who oppress the poor? All who are vain and self-conceited? All who make long prayers for the sake of being seen and heard of men? When these, and a good many others that could be mentioned, are taken out, some bodies that call themselves churches would probably be left with few members; and yet the Lord would have his hidden ones, his seven thousand that have not bowed the knee to Baal.

ANSWERING A FOOL ACCORDING TO HIS FOLLY.

LET me tell a Dutch story right here, because it comes from a Dutchman in the eastern part of Pennsylvania, and must be a true story. This Dutchman was never ashamed of his religion. In his neighborhood there was a skeptic who said, "You can't believe anything you can't understand," and so some of the better class of people asked the Dutchman if he would not have a conversation with him. He said, "Yes, if you tink best." "Have you any objections to the neighbors coming in?" "No, shust as you tink best." So they made an appointment, and everybody was there. The old gentleman came in and laid by his hat, and was introduced to the skeptic, and he began suddenly by saying: "Vell, now, look here, I pleefs the Bible—what you pleefs?" Said he: "I don't believe anything I can't understand." "O, you must be one very smart man. I was mighty glad I meet you. I ask you some questions. The odder day I was riding along the road and I meet von dog, and that dog he had von of his ears stand up in this way and the odder von he stand down so. Now, vy was dat?" Now, that was very unhandy just then, very unhandy. He either had to prove that the dog did not have one ear standing up and the other slanting down, or else say he did not believe it. So he said, "I don't know." "O, then you are not so very smart, after all. I ask you anoder question. I saw in John Smith's clover patch the clover come up so nice, and I looked over into the field and dere was John Smith's pigs; and dere come out hair on dere packs; and in the very same clover patch was his sheep, and dere came out wool on dere packs. Now, vy was dat?" Now that was as bad as the other, because the same perplexity arose. He had to prove there was wool on the pig, or hair on the back of the sheep; and he couldn't tell why, and therefore he had no business to believe it. Finally he said: "I don't know." "Vell," he said, "you are not half so smart as you tink you are. Now I asks you anoder question. Do you pleeve dere is a God?" "No, I don't believe any such nonsense." "O yes, I hear about you long ago. I know all about you. My Bible knows about you, for in my Bible he says: 'The fool says in his heart there is no God,' but you big fool, you blab it right out."

MAN RESPONSIBLE FOR SECRET THOUGHTS.

"A GOOD man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil; for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh."

The text teacheth that man is swayed to do what is good or what is evil, by the quality of his preponderating thoughts. Because "as a man thinketh in his heart, so he is," Christianity extends its dominion over the secrets of the heart, and aims to purify its concealed currents of thought. The quality of right or wrong pertains to the invisible thoughts as well as to the manifested actions. To God all hearts are open, and he searcheth the heart. From him no secrets are hid, and not one can escape his all-seeing eye. The preacher, therefore, shows: First, that cherished thoughts exert a controlling influence in the formation of moral character, and in shaping the outward actions. No passion of our nature can be brought into activity till after the mind has thought of the object of that passion, formed conceptions concerning it, and dwelt on exaggerated views of the pleasures of indulgence. In the curtained theatre of the heart, passions enact their secret sins of lawless violence on our moral nature. Those that do not blaze forth and blacken the outer man, often burn and scar the hidden man of the heart. Vile literature incite the evil thoughts that supply the fuel to the passion fires that rage within the heart, and which are more consuming because they are concealed and burn virtue in the dark.

Mental revelling in sin is known to God. He understandeth the thoughts afar off.

Hatred is the spirit of murder. Covetousness is mental idolatry. Lustful thought is the essence of adultery. Meditated sin is actual in God's sight. He knoweth the thoughts of the heart. To him we must answer for their character. We must all appear, or be manifested, before the judgment seat of Christ. All secret sins will burst forth into vivid form by the revealing brightness of the great white throne. We can not escape the guilt of cherished evil passions because concealed from mortal eye. Hark! the trumpet's awful sound?

Oh, what fear it shall engender
When the Judge shall come in splendor,
Strict to mark and just to render!
Book where every thought's recorded,
All events all time afforded,
Shall be brought and dooms awarded!

In solemn words, with tremulous tones, the preacher looks at us and closes, saying, "The formation of your religious character—your course of action and kind of influence in the world—your success and triumph in the great battle with foes within—your peace and joy in the Holy Ghost—your steady progress in the divine life—your preparation for all that heaven is and will be to a redeemed soul, and the condition of your final entrance into that glorious, eternal state—all the mighty interests of your being for immortality are to be won or lost in your victory or defeat in that tremendous conflict by which every thought is to be brought into captivity unto the obedience of Christ. Let each soul pray: Cleanse thou me from secret faults. Create in me a clean heart, O! God, and renew a right spirit within me."

LET THEM ALONE.

NEVER try to rob any one of his good opinion of himself. It is the most cruel thing you can do. Moreover, it is by no means doing what you would be done by. Crush a woman's self-esteem, and you make her cross-grained and snappish. Do the same with a man, and you only make him morose. You may mean to create a sweet, humble creature, but you'll never do it. The people who think best of themselves are apt to be best. Women grow pretty in believing they are so, and fine qualities often crop out after one has been told one has them.

It only gratifies a momentary spite to force your own unfavorable opinion of him deep into another's mind. It never, never, never did any good. Ah! if this world, full of ugly people and awkward people, of silly people and vain people, knew their own deficiencies, what a sitting in sackcloth and ashes we should have?

The greatest of all things that a man can possess is a satisfactory identity. If that which he calls I pleases him, it is well with him; otherwise, he is utterly wretched. Let your fellow-beings alone, hold no truthful mirrors before their eyes, unless with a pure intention to uproot sin. So may a mirror without a flaw never be prepared for you. In those things which we can not help, may we ever be blind to our own short-comings. We are neither ugly, nor awkward, nor uninteresting to ourselves, if we do not know it. A fool may have the wisdom of Solomon in his own conceit. Let him be, and the path to the grave will will be easier for him to tread; you will be no worse, he much better.

Leave every man as much self-esteem as his conscience will allow him to cherish. It may be pleasure to enlighten people as to their faults of mind and person, but it is certainly not a duty.

WM. H. KELLEY,

Pres. of District.

ADDRESSES.

W. W. Blair, Lamoni, Decatur Co., Iowa.
Jason W. Briggs, Wheeler, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa.
Frank P. Scarcliff, Lamberta, Baldwin Co., Alabama.
Thomas Nutt, Detroit City, Becker Co., Minnesota.

BORN.

COTCHERN.—At Independence, Missouri, June 22d, 1884, to Bro. and Sr. Cotchern, a daughter: blessed August 10th, by Bro. F. G. Pitt; named Minnie Mabel.

TURNER.—At Chicago, Illinois, June 10th, 1883, Bennetta Francesca.

TURNER.—At Denver, Colorado, about November 17th, 1883, Beulah Etheline Hutchings, adopted daughter of Mr. Benjamin F. and Sister Claire W. L. Turner; blessed at Plattsmouth, Nebraska, August 26th, 1884, by Elder Robert M. Elvin.

DIED.

DEMPESEY.—At St. Joseph, Missouri, August 24th, 1884, after an illness of four days of brain fever, Moroni, M., eldest son of Bro. Albert C. and sister Anna Dempsey; aged 2 years and 10 months. He was a child that was much beloved and is greatly missed by all. He was very patient through his sufferings, which were very great. Funeral services were conducted by Elder George C Smith, August 25th.

MACAULEY.—At Dunnville, Dunn county, Wisconsin, April 14th, 1884, of old age, Bro. John Macauley, in his 86th year. He was born June 11th, 1798, in Tyrone, Ireland, though of Scotch descent. He obeyed the gospel in 1840, being among the first of those at Glasgow, Scotland. He was ordained a High Priest in 1842, when the most of the Twelve were in Great Britain, and was placed in charge of the Glasgow and Paisley Conference. Early in 1844 he emigrated to Nauvoo, and in the time of scattering he joined no faction, but went up the Mississippi east of Lake Pepin, Wisconsin, where the writer found him in October, 1869. He and his wife and sister-in-law all accepted the Reorganized Church, and at their request were baptized at that time. An implicit faith in and a child-like love for God and his brethren marked his whole life, and with good powers of mind he labored unto the very end of his days, striving to enlighten those around him, and in such a good and gentle spirit, that none could be offended. Few if any could excel him in humility and patience, or in kindly acts to his fellow men, and as for the Lord's work his heart and mind were ever upon it, anticipating its success, and the coming of the Lord. Sr. Macauley survives him, but as one who feels that the separation will be but brief, and the re-union an eternal one.

H. A. STEBBINS.

SWINGLEHURST.—At Mokolumne Hill, California, July 21st, 1884, Belle Swinglehurst, aged 27 years, after a long, lingering sickness. This sister had been bed-ridden for nearly two years, when through a visiting friend she heard of the saints in San Francisco, to whom she wrote requesting a special meeting for prayers in her behalf. On the occasion the blessed Spirit was given abundantly to a number especially and repeatedly. From that time she much improved in health, and grew in faith of the work; and finally concluded to visit San Francisco, involving a long stage and steamboat journey, to be baptized into the church. She bore the fatigue of the journey, reaching this city in safety, and was baptized in Oakland, August 26th, 1883. Before returning home, she expressed herself as fully assured of the divinity of the work, and whether it was in the Divine economy that she should be restored to health or taken away, she was reconciled to the will of God. So much Divine manifestation to the saints encouraged them to hope for ultimate recovery; but God's inscrutable providence even saints can not read. We now feel reconciled to His will and our loss, and respectfully tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathies; and may the peace and hope which the gospel gives, be with you and comfort you as it comforted Belle to the last, when like her you are called away to the realities of a better life to come.

BIRD.—At her home, near Weir, Cherokee County, Kansas, August 9th, 1884, Lydia C. Bird, wife of Bro. Charles Bird. She was born January 17th, 1859, in McDonough County, Illinois. Funeral sermon was preached by Elder Evan Davies, to a large concourse of people. She was a sceptic in belief; but before her death she was shown in vision the divinity of the Book of Mormon.

SMITH.—At his home, seven miles north-west of Thayer, Oregon County, Missouri, of pulmonary consumption, Bro. Hezekiah Smith. He was born in Graves County, Kentucky, in 1846; joined the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, April 11th, 1874; moved to Randolph County, Arkansas, in 1877; from thence to Oregon County, Missouri, in 1881. His faith in the gospel was unshaken to the last; he said that he was perfectly resigned to the Father's will. He was baptized by Elder John H. Hansen. He leaves a wife, eight children, and many warm friends to mourn his departure. [Date of death not given.—Ed.]

BROOMELL.—At New Canton, New Jersey, after a very brief illness, Sr. Margaret R., wife of Bro. James Broomell. Deceased was born June 17th, 1821, in Monmouth, Monmouth county, New Jersey. She first united with the church in, or about the year 1840; she was baptized into the Reorganization on September 6th, 1875, by Elder John Stone. For a number of years she lived the life of a Christian, and in her domestic relations she was ever a kind wife and a loving mother. She leaves a husband and four children, two sons and two daughters, to mourn her loss. May they not mourn as those who are without hope, but may they look forward with confidence and with full assurance to the time when they shall meet their loved and lost one and with her be redeemed and glorified in the celestial city not made with hands, where death and sorrow shall be known no more. Funeral sermon by W. O. Owen, from Matthew 24:44; "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

 This is a reply by Elder W. W. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.
Lamoni, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

Magnolia, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
GEO. MONTAGU.

Erno, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

Heber City, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Sept. 20th, 1884.

"THE appearance of this volume now, with the prominence which the Mormon problem has in the public mind, is very opportune, and the book can hardly fail to have a wide reading. Ten sessions were devoted to the first proposition—the one which will excite the most general interest—and it has a most thorough treatment from both sides. Mr. Kelley seems to be a man of ability, of apparent sincerity, and withal, no laggard in debate. We take it that he would be readily accepted by the officials of the Mormon Church to be their champion in a public discussion involving issues fundamental to the existence of that church. The reader will be curious to know what line of argument he would adopt to prove to the people of this age the divine authority of the Book of Mormon. We will not disclose the secret, but leave the reader to see for himself.

As to Mr. Braden—his ability to sift the evidence that would be adduced in support of such a proposition, will not be questioned by any one. His mental characteristic of thoroughness and analysis fit him, in a marked degree, for the work which he has so well done in this volume. Without taking space here to notice the contents of this volume, further than to say it is perhaps the most exhaustive investigation extant of the real nature, spirit and methods of the modern abomination known as Mormonism, we can but urge the importance of knowing more of this iniquity which we are compelled to deal with soon, as a nation, and for this purpose we hope to see this debate meet with a large sale. When we shall have time to examine the book more thoroughly we may give further and fuller notice of it. Price $2.00 in cloth, or $1.25 in paper. It can be had by addressing Clark Braden or Christian Pub. Co."

We quote the above from an advertisement of the Braden-Kelley debate in the Christian Evangelist, of August 28th, 1884. It is a little strange that the publishers of a paper published in the avowed interest of a church called the Church of Christ, should claim that there would be a more general interest in the question whether the Book of Mormon is a revelation from God than that the said Church of Christ, as established by Alexander Campbell and others, or the Church of Jesus Christ as established by Joseph Smith and others, is The Church of Christ as recognized by the characteristics of the church established by Jesus Christ as those characteristics are found stated in the New Testament scriptures. Or as it might be stated in this form. It is of more importance to the general reader to know that the Book of Mormon is or is not of divine origin, than to know that there is now a church on the earth which in the Day of Judgment will be recognized by Jesus Christ and the Father as the only Church of Christ.

We hold quite differently to that. For to us it is of infinitely greater importance to know that there is a church on the earth known and recognized of Christ Jesus, now in the heavens, than that the Book of Mormon should be proved to be either true or false. We think this ought to be apparent to the publishers of the Christian Evangelist, and to those whose representative organ it is. For if there is no church identified of Christ among men, the tenets of which are taught by faithful ambassadors authorized to administer in the ordinances of that church, it is of really small matter whether the Book of Mormon be, or be not of divine origin, or whether Joseph Smith was or was not a prophet; or whether Alexander Campbell was, or was not a great and good reformer. No matter how much the Evangelist, and all its co-workers may seek to mystify the word of God, and disguise the real issue between the Reorganized Church, on the one part, and the Campbellite, or Christian, Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist churches, on the other part, the time must inevitably come when that most vital issue, which is the Church of Christ, must be met and determined.

If any one should succeed in proving that the Book of Mormon was a fraud, Joseph Smith an impostor, so far as claim to receiving an angelic messenger with a commission to declare the gospel is concerned, it would not prove that the principles enunciated by him and others from 1830 to 1844, as the New Testament plan of redemption and salvation, are either untrue or falsely claimed as the gospel. Those facts would still remain; and the question of right to administer as ambassadors for the Christ in promulgating that gospel, would be left open for inquiry, with the odds in favor of the Reorganized Church. For, upon the hypothesis assumed by the church for which the Christian Evangelist is published, (a claim made by other denominations as well), that there is and has been no direct revelation since the apostles' day; and that those organizations known as churches, contradistinguished as Protestant rather than Catholic, are but the outgrowth of the spirit of reformation, and therefore, legitimately of Christ's body, the church; the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the reorganized church, bearing more specifically the characteristics of the church of the New Testament, will be found to be much nearer the definition given by Mr. Smith (not Joseph Smith) in his Bible Dictionary; that is: "We must not expect to see the church of the Holy Scripture actually existing in its perfection on earth. It is not to be found, thus perfect, either in the collected fragments of Christendom, or still less in any one of those fragments; though it is possible that one of those fragments more than another may approach the scriptural and apostolic ideal."

If the claim that the evils into which the primitive church as instituted by Jesus had fallen, were to be eliminated by reformatory processes only, equal honor and authority must be conceded to Luther, Calvin, Knox, Zuinglius, Wesley, Rogers, and Campbell. And if the latter in his zeal for a reformation had a better understanding of the word, and in his process of development out from the cloud of the apostasy of the dark ages, brought the Christian, or Disciple Church nearer to the New Testament examples and standard; then, as a consequence, any who might come out of that reformed church as partially perfected by Mr. Campbell and his associates, would necessarily have all the prestige that had been given by any possible combination of human authority, wisdom, opportunity and circumstance to that reformation, with which to further perfect and draw near to the standard of the word. Hence, if, as these disciples of Mr. Campbell, the Evangelist, Rev. Clark Braden and others included claim Sidney Rigdon was the Black Pope of the Jesuitism of Mormonism, it must follow that Mr. Rigdon had as good right and authority to reform the Christian Church, he being a member of it, as Mr. Campbell had to reform the Baptist Church, of which he was a member, or the Presbyterian Church out of which his father, himself and his sister came.

Campbell disturbed the Baptist Church with his reformatory notions, and declamations against its errors of faith and practice, until that church either forced him out, or he took himself out because they could not abide peaceably together. What authority they gave him he took with him; a part of the same authority, and that part equally as good, Elder Rigdon had received, for he was a joint worker with Mr. Campbell. What authority Mr. Rigdon held in the Baptist and reformed Baptist, Christian or Disciple Church while acting in that church, he as much took out with him, as Mr. Campbell took his authority out of the Baptist and Presbyterian churches when he went out of those churches under a spirit of reformation; and by virtue of such authority so taken out, Mr. Rigdon had as good right to eliminate errors in faith, doctrine and practice from the Christian Church as Luther, Wesley, or Campbell. On this hypothesis the Mormon Church, as the Evangelist calls it, the Church of Jesus Christ as it styles itself, has as legal existence as the Campbellite, or Disciple Church. And it would be just as well for the publishers and writers of that journal to remember this.

The elders of the Disciple, or Christian Church know that the foundations of fact upon which it rests are sandy. They have hitherto relied upon the theory that the other denominations were in the same fix; and have laid immense stress on the argument that the church which they represented was "in faith, doctrine, organization and practice" more nearly in conformity to the New Testament standard than all others. This latter plea they can no longer maintain successfully. So they artfully attempt to cover this issue by assuming some other to be of more vital consequence.

Rev. R. Richardson in his history of the rise of the church called "Disciples of Christ," published in a work by I. Daniel Rupp, of Pennsylvania, in 1844, says on page two hundred and fifty-six of that work, that the Redstone Association, jealous of the "popularity and commanding talents" of Mr. Campbell "dismissed about thirty members, including Alexander Campbell, to Wellsburg, Virginia," where as a new church they "were admitted into the Mahoning Association of Ohio."

Mr. Campbell's views were widely disseminated and finally resulted as stated by Mr. Richardson: "The schism thus produced, was soon extended to Kentucky, to eastern Virginia, and in short to all those Baptist churches and associations into which the views of Mr. Campbell had been introduced by his debates and writings; the Baptists, in all cases, separating from their communion all who favored the sentiments of the Disciples, being unwilling to concede even permission to believe the plain dictates of the Scriptures to those who freely granted to them, without a breach of fellowship, unrestricted liberty of opinion." These recalcitrant Baptists being thus ousted as heretics, proceeded to co-operate together for "the restoration of pure, primitive, apostolic christianity, in letter and spirit; in principle and practice."

Another writer urges that the "Christians, or Christian connexion," had its rise as a church from a nearly simultaneous movement, in which Dr. Abner Jones, of Hartland, Vermont, a Baptist; Elias Smith of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, also a Baptist; Barton W. Stone, of Kentucky, a Presbyterian; and James O'Kelley, of North Carolina, a Methodist, were prime movers.

Of this movement Dr. Millard writes: "As they had taken the scriptures for their guide, pedo baptism was renounced, and believers' baptism by immersion, substituted in its room. On a certain occasion one minister baptized another minister, and then he who had been baptized immersed the others." Now which ever of these horns of dilemma, these christians of the Evangelist may take respecting the validity of their church organization and claim to authoritative action, it originated in the assumed right to reform the church to eliminate its errors and approximate to the standard. The right to reform did not die with Alexander Campbell, Dr. Jones, nor Barton W. Stone; hence, existing in the Disciple Church, it existed with Sidney Rigdon as a Disciple preacher, and was exercised by him upon the principle stated by Thomas Campbell, "the restoration of pure, primitive, apostolic christianity, in principle and practice."

The Disciples having inherited it from their Presbyterian-Baptist progenitors, and true to their instincts, as soon as Sidney Rigdon began to assert this right to advance and maintain reformatory processes, began the crowding out business; and just as they, Mr. Campbell and others, could not find acceptance and room in the Baptist Church for principles more nearly in harmony with New Testament philosophy and truths, and had to go out of said church with their advanced views; so did Sidney Rigdon fail to find room in the Disciple Church and have to go out of it, to find a church and people who would hear and abide more scriptural light. And just as Mr. Campbell and "all who held to his view" were denounced as heretics because of their advanced ideas, by their illiberal Baptist brethren; so did they in turn assail and denounce Sidney Rigdon. It will be discovered that we have argued this question from the basis offered us in the hypothesis that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as established in 1830, and reorganized, or continued, is of human origin only, and that the astute but unscrupulous, whilom Disciple, Sidney Rigdon, and not the ignorant, but vicious and unscrupulous Joseph Smith was its real originator. This hypothesis is the back bone of Rev. Braden's effort in his debate with Elder E. L. Kelley, and is the staple idea in the hostile criticism of the Christian Evangelist, and is offered to us of the Reorganized Church, as the basis of our faith and hope. Assuming this hypothesis so unblushingly offered to us, as the basis of argument, if it can be shown, as it most assuredly can be, that the Reorganized Church is approximately nearer to the Church of the New Testament Scriptures; it is more completely a "restoration of pure primitive apostolic christianity; in principle and practice;" than is the Church of Christ, Christian, or Disciple Church represented by the Evangelist; and as such we commend it to the consideration of that body and the "rest of mankind."

In conclusion; if the human founders of the Disciple or Christian Churches, (or any other) can of right claim the authority to create, organize and maintain churches not in harmony with the teachings of the New Testament, without the claim to aid from divine direction; how much more readily should the right be conceded to the Latter Day Saints to institute and maintain a church that is in accord with New Testament teachings and practice.

THE Elders of the Church, who may be called upon in the course of their ministry at home or abroad, to meet the sum and substance of the Braden attack upon Mormonism, should remember that very bad conduct is charged on the part of the leading men of the Church while they were yet at Kirtland, Ohio; but when the witnesses relied on to prove those accusations are put to the test, they testify that they "knew nothing against the men," that they "heard nothing against them as charged," the witnesses thus defeating the object for which they were introduced.

Mr. Braden in his next to the last speech repeated as many of the scandalous tales against the character of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, Sidney Rigdon and other leading men of those early days, as his time permitted, but when proof was demanded, proof was not presented. The moral of the testimony offered as it appears at the close of the debate, is decidedly in favor of the Saints.

Wild vagaries, excesses of zeal, extravagant expressions of religious fervor, indecencies of gesture and personal abandon in prayer meetings and love feasts, are charged as accompanying the services held by the new converts to Mormonism at Kirtland as the result of the gospel or doctrine taught by Joseph Smith. The witnesses who testify, exonerate Joseph and Hyrum and the leaders from any complicity with such irregular and improper proceedings. They neither heard them teach such things, or knew them to be present, or to partake in them when going on. On the contrary they knew these men both to denounce such conduct as being out of place and improper.

Mr. Braden need not have sought outside testimony to show that scenes of confusion and strange manifestations among devotees took place at Kirtland. Joseph Smith relates the story of such things himself. So does Mother Lucy Smith tell of such things. Joseph states that he had to reprove some very sharply for permitting such things to go on in the meetings.

It is comparatively well known that in many revivals held by various denominations, exhibitions of what is called "the power," have occurred. In these persons would fall, either in strong convulsions, or seemingly unconcious. Sometimes, when the services would be more than usually impressive, numbers would be prostrate at once; and it was customary to spread clean straw in the prayer circles, where those seeking conversion were collected, and where the "power" was usually exhibited, so that those who fell under its influence should neither be hurt nor have their clothing soiled.

It will also be remembered by some who have witnessed those strange manifestations that in cases where the convert, or converts were more than commonly interesting by reason of social rank, or importance, or personal attractiveness, it was usual for the preachers, few or many to gather around the fallen ones and shout and sing and pray that the Lord would perfect what his spirit had begun. Sometimes fervor amounted to frenzy, and the instances are not few where insanity, or dementia followed. It is indeed but a few short months since in a similar revival held at Lake Bluffs, out from Chicago, a young man became so affected by this power, that he seriously injured several persons in a wild, frenzied attack upon them. The course of one minister who had encouraged such exhibitions was seriously condemned, and a sharp controversy was had in regard to the entire revival methods.

It was not strange that in so rapid and striking increase as that which followed the preaching of the ministry of the early Elders, just such extravagancies should have followed. Coming as the converts did out of the several denominations, including the Disciples and Methodists they brought with them more or less of their sectarian leaven. This under the new fervor was calculated to stimulate the nervous and exuberant in temperament; and that no more serious departures from sober-minded conduct are recorded against the Saints of these early days than are, must be attributed to the conservative steadiness of the leading minds of the Church.

History records that the disciples of Luther were prone to strange and grievous excesses in their devotion, and that had it not been for the calmer counsels of Melancthon, who wisely restrained the turbulent, the reform, afterward so widely spread, would at an early date have fallen to pieces, because of those outrageous extravagancies of conduct.

No one, not even Mr. Braden, would insist that the Lutheran reform was to be condemned because of the over zealous conduct of some of its adherents in the streets of Wurtemberg, or elsewhere in Germany; or the doubtful policy pursued by Luther and Melancthon in granting a dispensation permitting a certain royal officer to marry two wives and live in polygamy with them both, on the plea that he could not keep from sinning unless he did so marry. Nor, would the gentleman who charges departures from decorum upon the early Saints in Kirtland, for one moment admit as a good argument against the reform of Mr. Campbell, all the vagaries in hope, theory and practice, that have followed in the wake of the Disciple Church, among the Adventists, Age to Come, Ascensionists, and Holiness people. Why then should we be condemned as believers in heresy, because in disregard of the principles of the gospel as taught by the early leading elders, and despite their protest and without countenance or sanction from them, some of the adherents of the faith did run into wild and extravagant ideas, and exhibit their devotion in an erratic and unbecoming way.

BRADFORD SPRINGER, of Iowa, is visiting his mother, Grandma Springer, at Burnside, Hancock county, Illinois. He also preached four interesting discourses, closing Sunday evening. The house was well filled with an appreciative audience. We hope we may have the pleasure of listening to him again soon.

The foregoing will tell the Saints where brother B. V. Springer is, and what he is doing. The date is September 1st.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE much talked of, and much desired "lesson leaves" service for the HOPE will begin with the HOPE for September 27th. Bro. W. C. Cadwell of the committee appointed last Spring Conference having placed the copy for the first two in the series in our hands. Those interested and active in the Sunday School work, will please take note of these articles; and if they have any suggestions likely to be of service to Bro. Cadwell, address him at Logan, Harrison county, Iowa. Criticism from croakers, lookers on, and those who may be opposed to Sunday School service, is not invited; but notes of suggestion and advice from live co-workers are solicited.

We have quite a number of newspapers sent us by Bro. Wm. Street from Chester, Pennsylvania; for all of which we thank Bro. William.

Bishop W. H. Dame, of Parowan, Iron county, Utah, whose name is connected with that of John D. Lee in the Mountain Meadows Massacre, died at his home on August 16th.

ONE of the brethren writing from his locality gives the readers of the HERALD to understand that the elders and Saints of the branch, or branches of the district, are greatly in need that the traveling ministry should come among them and revive them, as they are about all ready to perish. And also that they, the members and officers of the branch or branches, are holding meetings, have reasonably good times, and are "doing what they can to spread the knowledge of the word of God among the people."

Not long since we published a letter from a member of the "traveling ministry," in which he very pointedly showed that there was a great necessity for more diligence, perseverance, fidelity and assiduity in the performance of branch official duty, and attendance at the meetings; arguing that were the members as self-sacrificing and faithful in these things as they assumed to expect the ministry to be, a very great bar to the effectual preaching of the word by the traveling elders would be removed.

Which of these classes is correct, we wonder. Is it a fact that the life of a branch depends on the labors of the traveling elders. What then becomes of the argument that the field of the traveling ministry is properly the world, or "new ground," and that the practice of the elders in "visiting from branch to branch," is a reprehensible one. And what chance is there for the employment and improvement of the local staff, the "standing ministers to the church." And are the branches deficient in spiritual life and strength because the traveling elders are neglectful and careless in not visiting the branches. On the other hand, can it be true that the careless and indifferent way in which the Saints and local ministry attend meetings and conduct themselves in business and daily life, checks the ardor, dampens the spirits and injures the spiritual prestige and effectiveness of the traveling eldership.

It seems a curious muddle, but we fancy both classes are right, and both are wrong. Each is right as to the effect; both err in laying the blame the one upon the other. Both are in fault. The traveling elder is wrong when he confines himself to the field afforded him in the branches. While he ought not to neglect the Saints in their branches, he ought to venture continually and persistently into new fields; nor should he lay the blame for his own lack of spirituality on the branches, if perchance he may be lacking. They expect him to have both life and light, and he expects them to have force and abiding, faithful lives, consistent with the greatness of their hope.

We suggest that the branches make up their minds to so live and work that whether they ever see a traveling elder or not, the Master will have reason to bless them by his acceptance and his appearing. And that the elders (travelers) shall so labor as to be free from blame, either now, or when the Master comes. And that each class ceases to find fault with the other.

It is reported from Salt Lake City, that a late effort of the leading authorities of the Polygamic Church, to compel certain ones of their bishops to take unto themselves wives, has been stoutly resisted. The parties are Bishop W. W. Cluff, of Coalville, president of the last Legislative Council, and Bishop Abe Hatch, of Wasatch county, who was for a number of years a member of the Legislative Assembly.

It appears that the effort to have these men assume polygamic honors, has been made before, but failed because Mesdames Hatch and Cluff would not consent. Heretofore the attempt was advisory. Now it seems that the refusal, or neglect of these Bishops to "live up to their privileges," has been taken note of; and they have been served with notice to "obey counsel," or take the consequences of defection.

Mr. Cluff has replied to the notice, by sending his resignation of all the offices that he holds in the church. In connection he states to Pres. John Taylor that he has served the church faithfully for thirty years; and has not during that time "understood that polygamy was a compulsory doctrine; that if it had been made a matter of choice of family and citizenship on one side, and preferment in the church on the other, he would forego the latter, and remain true to his family and the laws of his country."

What the result will be is not yet transpired as the reply that Pres. Taylor will make to Mr. Cluff's resignation is not known.

Bishop Hatch's first wife is dead, and his second is much younger than he. The influence of his first wife tended to keep her home uncontaminated from polygamy; how far the second may follow the inclination of the first, and what her influence may be over her husband is now to be tried. Bishop has a good position as bishop; and if he resists the counsel of Pres. Taylor, he will do so at the cost to him of place and lucre consequent to his office; besides resisting the desire to enlarge the borders of his harem here, and his kingdom hereafter; according to the celestial theory.

For the sake of decent humanity and the sacredness of the true home and sphere of woman, it is to be hoped that both of these bishops will resist the application of the priestly lash, and refuse outright to surrender their manhood and citizenship to become breakers of the law of the land and desecrators of God's decrees to the church.

If the freedom of these two men from polygamic contamination, heretofore, is due to the position and voice of the women they were first married to, all true men should delight to honor them with their respect, and give the husbands credit for listening to the pleading of the "wives of their youth," rather than to the counsel of those who sought to enslave them.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Are we to understand from Book of Rules, an Elders' court consists of two or more Elders and one of the two to preside, or do two Elders constitute a court?

Ans.—Two, or more Elders may constitute a court, and one of the two, three or more, may by agreement preside; or if only two, they may preside jointly.

2.—If two Elders (beside the President) constitute a court—can either of the two Elders (if desired) by the accused, or the accuser, act as counsel for either of them?

A.—It is not strictly proper for either one of the court to act as counsel, in the ordinary sense of that term. Any one and all of the court should see that the proceedings should be fairly and impartially conducted.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Elihu T. Dobson, who left Lamoni last spring, wrote from Currinsville, Oregon, August 8th, 1884:

We are quite well, hope these few lines will find you and family the same. I received a letter from an Elder in Texas by the name of J. D. Irwin in answer to that call in Herald. I wrote him to come I would hold his hat. I have been spotted already by M. E. preacher that I might be a Brigamite, if not am no better.

Bro. Ethan Barrows, of Salt Lake City, Utah, adds a postscript to a late business letter, in which he says:

Elder T. W. Smith came in Friday evening and preached twice Sunday in the chapel: Elder A. H. Smith came in Sunday evening. Probably there will be preaching every evening this week, commencing to-night. A. H. S. is afflicted with a cold and his lungs are affected and sore, but is hopeful that it will pass off without injury.

A noble and attractive every-day bearing comes of goodness, of sincerity, of refinement; and these are bred in years, not in moments.

Call to mind the heavier sufferings of others; so may you better bear your own small troubles.

Correspondence.

LYONS, Walworth Co., Wisconsin,
September 2d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Since I wrote you last, I have been doing what I could in the interest of the cause. For a time I labored locally in Sandwich and Plano; and on July 9th I made a visit to Kewanee, my old home, on business, and spent a few days pleasantly with the Saints there, and on the evening of the 13th spoke in the Saints' new meeting house. Their wisdom in obtaining their present place of worship in preference to the old one, is commendable. The latter part of July I started out on my present tour. Passing through Chicago I made a short visit among the Saints there, and in company of Bro. I. L. Rogers attended prayer meeting at the house of Bro. Goode, on the evening of July 30th, Bro. E. C. Briggs presiding, who is making an effort to have things move harmoniously there. August 7th left Chicago for Cortland, Ill., Bro. Wm. Calhoun having succeeded in obtaining the Advent Church in DeKalb for meetings on Sunday, 3d, when I preached twice. I was shown in a dream what would transpire at those meetings, and related it to the Saints at Cortland. The dream was literally fulfilled. On the 7th, Bro. Cherry kindly conveyed me across the country to Marengo. I preached twice while there, near the residence of Bro. David Brand; who with his wife are zealous for the cause. From there he conveyed me to Poplar Grove, Boone county, where I baptized four members of the Marshall family. A year ago they were anxious that some preaching should be done, we got the consent of two of the trustees of the Congregational Church, which was not in use; but after going six miles to obtain the consent of the third, who told us to get the keys, the person holding them refused to give them up. So we had to secure the use of a school house south of town, where I preached three times with good liberty, good attention and fair audiences. One man who had asked questions about the Book of Mormon, after explaining to him and reading out of the Book against polygamy, wanted to know how Brigham Young and his followers could claim to believe that book, and still advocate polygamy. I replied that we had been asking them that question for over thirty years. The folks at Poplar Grove where we were refused the church, suggested the propriety of giving me a coat of tar and feathers, if I preached in their town, supposing me to represent the apostasy in the west. I told the friends there that I thought a broad cloth coat would give me a more respectable appearance before an audience; but up to the time of my leaving neither coat put in an appearance. From there on the 18th, by the kindness of Bro. Joseph Marshall, I was enabled to reach Marengo from which place on the 19th, I proceeded by rail to Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, where I was met by Bro. Henry Southwick, and taken to his hospitable home. Much opposition and prejudice existed at this place, but Bro. Henry succeeded in getting an opening in the school house, at East Delavan, and he and Bro. Anthony Delap put up posters all over the country for miles. I delivered four discourses there to fair audiences, who gave me the best of attention, the Baptist minister among others being present. All spoke well of our efforts, and the brethren and sisters felt encouraged. One lady, daughter-in-law to Bro. Delap, gave her name for baptism. September 2d I left the above place for Lyons, having previously arranged with the Saints at Delavan to meet me the following Sunday, which they did, coming twelve miles across the country. Notices were out that I would preach at the house of Sr. Ann Davis on the morning of Sunday, the 31st. Quite a respectable audience assembled; among others the post master of the village, half a mile distant, and a gentleman who was recently a member of the State Legislature; together with most of the members that remain of the Burlington Branch. The discourse was well received. In the afternoon sacrament was administered, the branch reorganized, Bro. Henry Southwick called to the office of an Elder and made president of the branch. Arrangements were also made for holding meetings in the future, the lady mentioned above was baptized and confirmed.

I feel well, and am blessed in laboring. Shall continue my labors as the Spirit directs.

Yours, &c.,

J. S. PATTERSON.

Readers of Herald: Along life's journey we are passing. By the roadside are flowers, grasses, thorns and thistles; and each in turn attracts our attention, and imparts its distinctive sense of pain or pleasure. It mattereth not whether joy or sadness greet us on our way, each contains its element of instruction, and is necessary in the great school of life and progress. Our chief anxiety should be to know we are on the right way, the "narrow way" that leadeth to the land of unceasing bliss. Jesus our mediator, our king and our friend, was a "man of sorrows," and well "acquainted with grief." His was a life of sadness and of weary toil, that others might learn duty, and be saved in the kingdom of God. When I think of him as one who has suffered patiently, and endured to the bitter end, that I with others might be blessed, my heart turns toward him with earnest longing—longing to see and embrace him, who by his deeds has shown himself to be my friend and worthy of my trust and confidence. One who does for me what I can not do for myself, is indeed my helper in time of need, and worthy of the highest meed of praise I am capable of offering. The offering of my heart I bring, and cast it at the feet of Jesus, my dear Redeemer. My humble service I offer to bring glad tidings of joy and peace to a benighted world; that, without the knowledge of God, know not from whence they came, nor whither they are tending. By this I pledge myself to be the friend of my race. What else have I to live for. Should I succeed to gain the whole world and lose my own soul, or fail to be instrumental in saving others, has not my life been a failure—complete or partial. The obligations of one man to another are, by reason of circumstances, great. Every useful act we perform in life obligates the world of mankind to us. On the other hand, how much could we accomplish or enjoy without the aid and association of others.

The work in this part is moving steadily onward. Trials and vicissitudes such as are common to the work of God in all ages of the world, characterize our efforts here. I don't see how the Saints can "come up through great tribulation" without some spiritual affliction to wade through. Bro. Wight and myself contemplate going to David City ere long. We are hopeful that some good may be done there. We are also desirous of attending the Reunion, with the view and hope of getting the inward man fortified. So far we "keep the munition and watch the way."

In bonds, yours,
GEO. S. HYDE.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
September 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived safe last eve, 5:30 p. m., after a tedious, dusty, heated by day and cold at night ride; a disagreeable journey most of the way, but relieved occasionally by some of the finest scenery in the world. I contracted a severe cold a couple of days before I left home that hung to me in the shape of a hard cough, which made my lungs very sore; and in climbing to those heights obtained by the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad, I suffered severely for breath, and was made painfully aware of the lightness of the atmosphere, and what with coughing, headache, and bleeding at the nose, I was made very uncomfortable, and was glad to get a rest.

On my arrival, made my way to Bro. Robert Warnock's, and cleaned up a little, repaired to the chapel, taking them all by surprise. I found Bro. E. C. Brand and T. W. Smith to the front. My throat, lungs, and voice were in such a condition I could not speak, and was forced to remain a listener to one of T. W. S.'s logical gospel sermons. Rather mild for old Latter Day Saints, who are used to strong meat. I have not seen Bro. Chambers, nor any of our relatives. Have made arrangements to hold meetings Tuesday and following evenings of this week. Bro. T. W. and I alternating. Bro. Warnock tells me prospects for the good of the cause are better now than for a long time before. I can tell better a week hence. It is possible I shall remain ten days or two weeks. Should you have any word for me direct in care Robert Warnock.

In bonds I remain your brother,
ALEXANDER H. SMITH.

FAIRFIELD, Nebraska,

Dear Herald:—We, that is my family and myself, are still holding fast to the gospel, although for the last twelve years we have been alone, except a short time that Bro. N. W. Smith was with us. At times we were cold and had many temptations around us, but in all these years we clung to the faith that was once delivered to the Saints. Thank God for that. We were made glad yesterday to see our second daughter Minnie, age fourteen, go down into the waters of baptism with Elder T. W. Chatburn. Bro. Chatburn lives at Hastings, eighteen miles farther out on what use to be the great American Desert. He has been preaching every other Sunday, morning and evening, all summer. At first our meetings were poorly attended, and I felt at times in despair. But the interest grew, and yesterday the hall was full, and deep interest was manifested. But now just as the people are beginning to wake up, Bro. Chatburn has to leave for his new home at Independence. But I have confidence that the good seed so nobly sown will not die. We very much regret to have our dear brother and his family leave us, but God's will be done, and may heaven bestow its choice blessings on them is our prayer.

I have no doubt the Saints everywhere will read this list with pleasure. We have only begun the work of taking subscriptions. The faith and prayers of the Saints generally are asked towards this undertaking. We also will thankfully receive any donations, however small, from any sister, brother, or friend. FONTANELLE, Adair Co., Iowa,
September 8th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I have something on my mind this morning, (as I often do), that I want to say to you and to some others whose names I have seen in the Herald, not with a design to reproach, but that you may see what is in my heart, as well as in some others. The Master has said in the records of his life when here on earth many things that to me are very precious, and I believe they are so to all wise Saints.

"A good man from the good treasures of his heart, bringeth forth good things; but an evil man from the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth evil things." This principle or doctrine being true, when it was spoken, is it not so to-day. Again the Lord said, "For every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give an account in the day of judgment." If this was good when it was spoken, and worthy to be noticed, is it not so to-day. To my mind it is easy to see what is in the hearts of men, when I hear them talk and goss as they do in this generation. Is it the wise Saints in this dispensation that ask questions, or unwise? I was pleased when I read your note on questions. Here let me say to all who love knowledge from God, believe in him, obey him, keep his law, and love and serve him, as your calling requires you to do, day after day, and year after year, preach and practice that which the Spirit of God requires all faithful servants to do, and you will have but little need to ask questions about this or that. If you do not believe what I say, turn to the 83 section of Book of Covenants, (in my book). Here you can see if you are counted worthy in the sight of the Master, to understand these things; and if you are not, keep up good courage, and work on as our Lord did, till he got the victory over death, hell and the grave. The Lord reveals sacred truths to his servants just in proportion to our calling, our righteousness, or what is needed to fit us for the station he has called us to fill. All who read this section, and can see its force and its value, and its application to the three first named, can learn if they choose, how to perfect themselves in the ways of righteousness. And if they do not succeed in reading the 83d section, let them turn to the 7th section and read to the end of the 8th paragraph. Then all can see what is required of all of us to do to secure salvation, eternal life. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling," not by questioning the prophet. Still a lover of Zion and those who labor to build it up by faith,

BRIGGS ALDEN.

GRAYSVILLE, Ohio,
September 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We left home on the 4th inst., for this place. Expect to labor in and around this region for some time to come. The outlooks are grand. Would not be surprised if many would unite with the church before we left. Have enjoyed great liberty in preaching. I was here last winter and preached ten sermons, but had to leave on account of the flood. Baptized one then. It is my opinion that there are many who are seeking after truth. Bro. J. Ells arrived in Wheeling a few days before we left. He had been very sick, but is almost well again. Since I wrote to the Herald last, I baptized Bro. John Wagner, who died on the 12th of August.

I was very, very sorry to learn of the death of our worthy president and brother, Glauod Rodger. Truly he was a noble man, and a true Latter Day Saint. His example in life was worthy of imitation.

Our health is good, for which we feel thankful to God; and we feel stronger than ever in the glorious work.

Yours in bonds,
G. T. GRIFFITHS.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,
September 6th, 1884.

Beloved Brothers and Sisters:—While we are scattered, let us bear each other's burdens. Let our hearts be full of the love wherewith we were bought, and let us remember one another before the throne of mercy often, knowing that we are but little in our own strength. Let us continually strive for the spirit of love and peace, and be united as one in Christ. Bless others whenever we may, and thus bless ourselves; for when we can help or comfort, or make any one happy, it is happiness and bliss to ourselves. At such a time as this, when all nature rests in peace, I have often been blessed in communion with my God.

Come, oh come, all ye who have received the promised Spirit of peace, praise him in heart and soul, bless his holy name by night and by day. The riches of heaven he has given unto us. We are blessed like unto the Saints anciently with power and influence from God. We have more than all the world can give, through this blessed spirit of love and peace. The Lord will keep him in perfect peace, who trusts in Him, whose mind is stayed on Him, who shall separate him from the love of Christ.

Our branch is in a good condition, with Bro. Waldsmith still president, who with the rest of the officers, has the confidence, love and good will of the Saints in general. Bro. Mark H. Forscutt was with us quite a number of months, and we miss him the more because he stayed with us so long. He took in hand, while here, to help us get an organ to place in our church. You may tell him, dear Herald, the wooden brother is first rate. He reminds us of Uncle Mark, but does not like him, give sound of himself; but when Sr. Ruby Forscutt, or Sr. Gertie Briggs touches him, he is quite obedient, like he was to Uncle Mark. Our last conference was well attended, and we had a good time.

Yours in the hope of salvation,
NICOLINE THOMSON.

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just finished the Braden-Kelley debate. I feel proud of the gentlemanly, Christ-like Spirit of Bro. Kelley's side. Not a single argument did Mr. Braden overthrow. Nothing offered on his side but a pile of repeated, and re-repeated slanders and assertions. To all that have the powers of discrimination between impudent assertions, or reckless statements, and the facts of history, or force of argument, Bro. Kelley's side will be refreshing. Mr. Braden's side is well represented, as a turkey buzzard seeking to meet argument with slanders, stories and scandal, unfit for a fish monger of the port of Ballyshannon, Ireland; and I guess they are downed by Braden. In fact his whole course is contemptible in the extreme. I am still in the faith.

Yours,

J. A. ROBINSON.

DOW CITY, Iowa, Sep. 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish to give you the sentiments expressed in words, of my brother in Utah, concerning his (their) opinion of the Josephites. The following I received a short time ago: "I bear record before God that you have labored hard to turn me away from the truth, when had you gained your point, to-day we would be 'hale fellows well met,' the devil well pleased. But I have received strength to resist your dark influences. I say you and the rest of you apostates have tried to turn me away from Mormonism, into the hell-bound slough of apostasy. You are so far gone in apostasy, Frank, with the rest, [that is my name] that there is no repentance to be found in this life for you. Delivered over to the buffeting of Satan. We might pray for those old apostate Mormons until their death, what would it amount to? Simply nothing; tears will not wash it out. Hence, knowing these things, I have no faith in my brothers. They have procrastinated the day too long already. They want to make us responsible for those elders' death down in Tennessee not long ago. I expect you will rejoice and send gifts to one another, for the horrible murder of those elders. But remember the elders will soon be called home. Then look out; God will speak in his power. Why, the publicans and sinners will shine brighter than those damned, you understand, those damned, do you hear, those infernal, damned, pious Pharisees. I say, when you pray have you learned to turn up your eyes like a dying duck? Still further, that I did, on the 13th of August, 1884, state in a letter to you that your Josephite God was a liar, and I did not fear him, &c., and that he may kiss my foot. I command you to repent in the name of the holy priesthood. This is sufficient, the Lord knows."

I want you to publish the above lines, that all may see the spirit they are of. I apprehend he is not the only one that is possessed of this spirit. He is continually telling me that I am persuading him to turn away from Mormonism. I have taken their own standard books and tried to reason with him from the law and testimony. But it is impossible. They are so self righteous it has blinded all their reasoning faculties. It is entirely wrong with them for a person to express an opinion contrary to their own. I can remember a time when a person in the church would not be allowed to utter such language as is used in Utah. There are many causes that produce these bad effects. One we will find in their polygamic revelation. "If he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, or all manner of blasphemies, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation." Such teaching as that is enough to discourage people from becoming Christians, if it was true; and my brother calls me bad names, because I won't swallow down such nonsense. I have heard intelligent men say they never expected to see any other God but Brigham Young. How is it possible men and women that have once been enlightened, and understood the peaceable things of the kingdom of God, could turn away into such gross darkness. I told him I would rather see my daughters laid in the silent tomb, than be polygamous wives or slaves. As soon as that barrier was broken down, then the whole plan or order of God's kingdom began to be changed. The rights that belonged to the promised seed were to hold the keys of the dispensation of the fulness of times, until God's work was finished. Take this right away, and confusion begins. Hence we see the number of aspirants soon after Joseph Smith's death. As I told James Taylor this Summer, a nephew of John Taylor, on his way home from Tennessee, whenever he broke down that barrier, we are no better than the sectarians. Man has changed the order of God; hence confusion. All such sophistry will not move me from the sure foundation that I have taken.

Bro. Kelley's argument in Kirtland, stands out clear as the sun at noonday. But on the other hand, Braden's argument on the Bible question is nothing but a mystery of darkness. How could it be otherwise. Thank the Lord for the light of truth that he has revealed in this our day. But the Gentiles are much more our friends than the Utah people. I am satisfied from what I can learn, if they had the liberty they would destroy all the leaders of the Reorganization, and force the rest into their church, or destroy them. The same spirit prevails with them, as did in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. God bless his church as long as they will hold fast to the truth.

Your brother in the kingdom of God,
A. F. RUDD.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

September 5th.—It is said that the French have obtained no advantage from taking possession of the Kelung coal-mines, as the Chinese, before they surrendered the region, flooded the mines and destroyed the pumping machinery.

During the last twenty-four hours there have been 122 fresh cases and thirty-seven deaths at Naples, Italy. At Spezia during the last twenty-four hours there were twenty-seven fresh cases and seven deaths. A royal decree has been issued suspending from official duties all the Prefects and Syndics who instituted arbitrary local measures against the cholera, or permitted such measures to be instituted. The Pope has sent $2,000 to Naples to be distributed among the sufferers from the cholera. The populace at Naples are now exciting themselves with the absurd suspicion that the Archbishop is in complicity with the physicians to poison them. The official bulletin shows the ravages of the cholera during the last twenty-four hours to be as follows: New cases, 144; deaths, 125. Six cases of cholera and four deaths are reported from Monforte, Spain, and two deaths from Villna.

Sixty-four persons suspected of plotting against the Czar have been arrested at Warsaw, Poland. A number of women were included.

The rebels attacked Kasalas, Egypt, last night, and were repulsed with great loss.

The irritation of the French press against England is spreading to the public, and the anti-English journals are selling by the thousands on the boulevards.

Advices from New Zealand state that a large emigrant ship, the Lastingham, from London for Wellington, New Zealand, was wrecked in Cook Strait, (an island on which Wellington is situated.) All on board except fourteen of the crew were drowned.

Typhoid fever has broken out at Bellevue Hospital, New York, on account of the defective sanitary arrangements of that institution.

September 6th.—It is reported that China has called for 25,000 men to defend Peking, and granted the Minister of War 12,000,000 francs to purchase munitions of war.

A Hong Kong dispatch to the Times says the British Government at that place has received orders to enforce the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment act, which prohibits the enlistment of recruits by any foreign nation in British ports or on territory under British control. The Governor has notified the French Admiral of these orders, and the latter will respect the measure.

The Cabinet Ministers visiting the cholera-stricken quarters of Naples, Italy, have returned to Rome. They are impressed with the belief that the rapid spread of cholera in Naples is due to the bad sanitary condition of the city. The Sanitary Council has decided that a quarantine at the frontier is groundless. During the last twenty-four hours in Italy the new cases of cholera number 293, deaths 158. The epidemic in the Province of Genoa is confined to Spezia and vicinity. One hundred and sixty-eight of the fresh cases, and sixty-nine of the deaths reported above were in the City of Naples alone. The Prefect of Reggio is summoned to Rome in consequence of the demonstrations at that place.

The bulletin of the progress of cholera in Spain for the last twenty-four hours shows twelve new cases and six deaths. A child from Alicante is down with suspicious sickness.

Investigation of the report of cholera at Bordeaux, France, shows that the few cases there a fortnight ago were isolated and not of an epidemic character.

During the last twenty-four hours there have been five deaths from cholera at Marseilles.

Two hundred fresh cases of cholera are reported at Naples, Italy, the last twenty four hours. The number of deaths today shows a decrease compared with the previous day.

A Danish polar expedition under the direction of Messers. Hoovjaard and Gamel will start from Copenhagen for Franz Josef Land during the next summer.

Dr. Yost, a veterinary surgeon of some eminence, says the death of cattle in the vicinity of Mitchell, Ind., has not been caused by pleuropneumonia, but by the scarcity of pure water. The blood of the animals when placed under a microscope showed the existence of several bacilli. Had the cattle been supplied with pure water this could not be.

September 7th.—Clericals from all the provinces and numbering many thousands paraded at Brussels today amid the vehement hissing and howling of dense crowds of lookers-on, who soon became more demonstrative, blocked the passage of the procession, and tore down banners; fierce scuffles ensued, and many persons, including several policemen, were injured. The police were powerless to stop the disorder, and the gendarmes and civil guards were called out and attempted to reorganize the procession. Their efforts were futile, however, and the confusion became general. The mob stopped the procession at various places. The Clericals, finally finding themselves unable to advance, slowly dispersed. The melee gradually subsided, but great excitement prevailed the whole evening. One hundred and eighty-five arrests were made. It is reported that three of the injured have died. Troops are stationed at various points to preserve order.

There was great excitement at Antwerp today, and many riots in sympathy with the outbreak at Brussels against the Clericals. Gendarmes dispersed the mob. There were a number of arrests.

A large number of young cattle have died recently in the south-west part of Champaign Co., Ill., of blackleg.

September 8th.—Reports have been received in Germany that two of the flagstaffs erected by Dr. Nachtigal, the German Commissioner on the African coast, have been cut down. One was thrown down by English officials and another by the negroes of the Tago tribe. It is also reported that Gen. Buchner, the Provisional Governor of the Cameroons, was insulted by negroes and had to seek refuge in a German factory.

The moral and sanitary condition of the city of Naples, Italy, in the presence of the cholera scourge is terrible in the extreme. The people have lost all self-control and given themselves up to the wildest superstition. It is impossible to take proper precautions to prevent the spread of the disease, as families and friends unite to frustrate the regulations of the authorities. Deaths are concealed and corpses retained in the house until privately buried, from a superstitious dread that a burial in a common grave without religious rites imperils the deceased's hopes of resurrection.

There were four deaths from cholera in Marseilles the last twenty-four hours. At Novelda, Spain, there were six fresh cases and five deaths in the same period, and at Montfort five fresh cases and two deaths. A child from Alcante taken to a lazarette, near Madrid, is recovering. Four other persons exhibit suspicious symptoms. At Anglesola and Balguera there have been several suspicious deaths. A lazarette has been established at Lerida for the reception of persons from these places.

The situation at Naples, Italy, is serious. During the last twenty-four hours nearly 300 fresh cases of cholera have been reported, but the mortality is only 30 per cent of those attacked. A Swede who withholds his name offered 70,000 lire in aid of victims. A Minister of Agriculture and Commerce has requested the bank of Naples to advance the municipality 250,000 lire for the relief of the poor. King Humbert starts for Naples tomorrow. The fete at Turin in aid of cholera sufferers was a great success. The daily bulletin of the progress of cholera the last twenty-four hours in various provinces shows 348 fresh cases and 117 deaths. In the Province of Genoa thirty-two of the fresh cases and eighteen of the deaths were at Spezia. The majority of the fresh cases and deaths in the Provinces of Naples were in the City of Naples.

Col. Colville telegraphs from Dongola that the Harasni tribes have surrendered, thus opening up the whole route from Weriwi to Dongola.

The Pall Mall Gazette states that China has declared war against France. The declaration takes the form of a manifesto by the Emperor to his subjects, calling on them to repel the foreign foe. The same journal asserts that the Chinese forts on the Min River were not badly damaged by the fire from the French fleet. It admits, however, that the naval loss was serious.

The German Consul at Canton has telegraphed to his Government that the Chinese have closed the mouth of the Canton River to steamers.

Diphtheria of a malignant kind has broken out in the Italian quarter of Trenton, N. J. There have been some deaths. It is feared the disease will spread.

A disease, the nature of which is not known, has broken out among the cattle of Uriah Blue, near Clinton, Ill. Some deaths have resulted. It is thought by many that the cattle have eaten poisonous weeds.

During the last eight months of this year 18,263 immigrants settled in Wisconsin.

Vermont and Maine have gone Republican, and Arkansas Democratic, in the late state elections.

A great famine is threatened in Labrador and the northeast coast of Newfoundland owing to the failure of the codfishing this season. The catch will be 500,000 quintals short. About 800 families are reported to be starving already. To add to the horrors the coasts of both Labrador and Newfoundland are surrounded by icebergs. One Captain reports having seen 253

September 9th.—The Trades-Union Congress at Aberdeen, Scotland, adopted resolutions regretting the rejection of the Franchise Bill by the House of Lords. The vote on the resolution was unanimous.

Paris is tonight seething with excitement over the prospect of real war with China. The scenes along the boulevards are comparable to nothing that has been seen in Paris since the days of July, 1870, when the war spirit against Germany was at its highest pitch, and imprecations against the Prussian formed the patriotic shibboleth. The spirit of Chauvin again infests all Paris, with only this difference: that now the cry is "A bas les Chinois!" and that the Chauvinists out-Chauvin their burlesque prototype with swaggering talk about foes who, apparently, are deemed contemptible only because they are distant. The special impetus which the war spirit has received today has been given by a widely circulated report that Premier Ferry has determined to force a declaration of war by France.

The Chinese wish to bar the entrance to the river at Shanghai. The Consuls of the different Powers earnestly protest against the action.

The official bulletin showing the ravages of the cholera in various portions of Italy the last twenty-four hours is 628 fresh cases and 275 deaths. The cases in Benevento and Salerno were refugees from Naples. In Naples the condition is most harrowing. Scenes of misery and wretchedness of the most pitiable character occur on every side. King Humbert has been profoundly affected by the sufferings he witnessed. He has made the first donation to the relief fund. King Humbert gave an audience last evening to the Naples municipal authorities. Orders have been issued for troops to leave the Maddalena barracks and encamp outside. The barracks will be converted into a cholera hospital. The royal party is visiting the poorer quarters of the city today. There was a riot yesterday among the sellers of mineral waters because their traffic was restricted. The epidemic continues to make great ravages. No fresh cases of cholera have occurred in Rome.

Vessels arriving at English ports from Spain which left after the 28th of August are ordered quarantined three days. Vessels arriving from the Mediterranean are subject to a quarantine of ten days with or without clean bill of health. At Marseilles during the twenty-four hours ending at nine tonight there were two deaths from cholera. In the Department of the Pyrenees Orientales there were six deaths from the disease today. At Sterimeze in the Ardeche fourteen persons died suddenly yesterday.

Alicante, Spain is declared infected with cholera. The Government has forbidden the local authorities from quarantining against other places and from establishing lazarettos. These orders are often disregarded on the borders. At Malaga persons even from Madrid with certified bills of health are subjected to seven days' quarantine. There were five deaths from cholera at Novelda today.

During the twenty-four hours ending tonight there were 451 fresh cases and 154 deaths from cholera at Naples, Italy. Many patients were taken to the Fuongratta Hospital, but the populace prevented their admittance. Crowds welcomed King Humbert at Venice today as the second father of his country. He was invited to attend the races. The King replied that he would go to Naples, where the people were dying, not to a place of amusement. The official bulletin of the ravages of cholera in the various provinces of Italy the last twenty-four hours shows 471 fresh cases and 161 deaths. Of these numbers 353 new cases and 116 deaths are in Naples. Twenty-four fresh cases and all the deaths in the Province of Genoa were at Spezia. The physicians of Spezia believe the flies spread cholera.

September 10th.—By a vote of 42 to 25 the Belgian Senate adopted the Clerical Primary Education bill yesterday.

The Movements of the Russian fleet in Chinese waters are taken as an indication that Russia meditates a hostile movement against China while the latter Power is settling her difficulties with France.

The resignation of the Marquis of Ripon as Viceroy of India and the promotion of the Earl of Dufferin to that post were simultaneously announced by the British Government today.

The conduct of France in beginning hostilities against the Chinese without a formal declaration of war has already raised several nice questions as to the rights and duties of neutrals. Three swift ironclads, just built in Germany for the Chinese navy, are now lying at Kiel, and the Pekin authorities have repeatedly solicited the German Government to allow these vessels to sail under the care of the German engineers and sailors by whom they are manned. The German Government has refused, fearing that China's intention was to make use of the vessels as privateers to harass the maritime commerce of France, which might involve Germany in international complications. Learning that the vessels were not to be allowed to leave, China has now offered to sell them to the German Government, and the offer is very likely to be accepted.

It is officially announced that during the twenty-four hours ending last night there were 721 fresh cases of cholera in the City of Naples, and 250 deaths. Since the beginning of the cholera outbreak in Naples there have been 1,100 interments in the cholera section of the cemetery. The official cholera bulletin gives for Italy, during the last twenty-four hours, ninety-five fresh cases and sixty deaths. All vessels from Spanish, French, and Italian Mediterranean ports are prohibited from entering the Harbor of Malta. Advices from the Pyrenees, report seven deaths from cholera.

Six thousand additional troops have been ordered to Yemen, Western Arabia, to suppress the rebellion in that district and be ready for any emergency in Egypt.

To-day was the hottest day of the season in the Atlantic States. There were about fifteen deaths from sunstroke at New York, and seven at Philadelphia. The animals at the State Fair in the latter city suffered terribly.

Five hundred Mormon immigrants were brought to New York by the steamer Wyoming from Liverpool. The immigrants are of the agricultural and mechanical classes.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Sept. 5.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $1,000. Durham, N. C., $25,000. Newburn, N. C., $60,000. Dundee, Ill., $2,800. Near Fort Wayne, Ind., $4,000. Pittsfield, Mass., $15,000.

The roof of the Enterprise Mine at Port Bowk-ley, near Wilkesbarre, Pa., caved in. Nearly one hundred acres settled from four to six feet. The tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad over the mine sank four feet, and traffic was stopped. The mine will probably have to be abandoned. The loss to the owners will be $500,000. Five hundred persons are thrown out of employment.

Sept. 7.—The Molin lumber mills, about twenty-three miles from Pensacola, Fla., belonging to the estate of D. F. Sullivan, were destroyed by fire. The loss is $100,000.

J. C. Smith & Co.'s ice-house at Richmond, Va., a cooper factory, and a large quantity of coal and wood in the adjoining yard were destroyed by fire. The loss is $30,000.

Ten acres of lumber and frame buildings are on fire near Cleveland, O. It is an awful sight. The whole town is red with the glow of sky and flames. Five acres of lurid, blinding light are spread to the view, the river, running the gauntlet of the flames, looks like a stream of boiling metal. Fully 50,000 people line the roofs and hills adjacent. The loss will be millions. The mayor is begging assistance from other towns, in order to save any part of Cleveland.

Loss by fire at Quincy, Illinois, $16,000. Richmond, Va., $30,000. Near Scranton, Pa., $70,000. Vincennes, Ind., $2,500.

Sept. 8.—The losses by fire at Cleveland, O., Sunday night will be about $2,000,000. The insurance will cover about half the loss. Had an engine been located in the district the flames could have been checked five minutes after they broke out. A request for the location of an engine there had been frequently made by the property owners, but was always refused by the Common Council. Six firemen were badly scorched. The loss of the railroad companies is about $250,000, of the City of Cleveland $200,000, and of Woods, Perry & Co., lumber dealers, $450,000. The fire is out, and to-day there remains, instead of thousands of piles of white lumber, fifty acres of black and smoking ruins lit by piles of fire. It is a strange mass of freight cars, charred lumber and logs, and brick and wooden walls that have toppled over.

September 10.—Stocks & Co.'s leather-works at Leeds, England, have been destroyed by fire. The loss is placed at £80,000.

One of the most destructive tornadoes that ever visited that part of the State passed over the country immediately north of Stillwater, Minn., Tuesday evening about 5:30 o'clock, embracing in its course a belt about twelve miles in width. The track of the storm was from northwest to southeast, and swept trees, houses, barns, cattle, and horses almost out of sight. The suffering and loss of property caused by this storm are very great, but owing to the vast extent of country over which it spread no reliable estimate can be made of the value of property destroyed. The principal towns thus far reported where the storm raged in its great fury are Marine, Onoka, Scandia, and the farm region between these places and Stillwater. Three persons were killed at Clear Lake, and the town nearly wiped out. Mills, bridges, dams and buildings were carried away by the floods.

Through the heavy rains at the head-waters of the Chippewa River, Wis., that river was swollen twenty-three feet above low water mark, and caused great damage at Chippewa Falls. Several large buildings and four bridges were swept away. The State Lumber Company's boom was carried away by the flood. The loss at Chippewa Falls and vicinity was about $200,000. The river is still rising and the end is not yet. Railroad travel and traffic in the vicinity are entirely suspended. Only one person is reported to have been drowned.

By the explosion of the cookers in Doheny & Spellman's distillery at Pekin, Ill., the whole building was wrecked. Three men were killed outright and a fourth was fatally injured.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

There were 199 failures in the United States during the week ending yesterday, and thirteen in Canada.

A strata of gas was struck recently near Tolono, Ill., at a depth of ninety-three feet. It is proposed to use it for illuminating and heating purposes and to furnish motive power for stationary engines.

Very encouraging reports concerning the corn crop continue to be received from Illinois, Iowa, and the Northwest. A few days more of warm weather will place the crop beyond all danger from frosts. The yield will be immense. The potato crop is also reported to be first class.

Mahlon Runyon, President of the New Brunswick (N. J.) National Bank, committed suicide September 8, by cutting his throat. He was implicated in the thievery of Cashier Hill, who committed suicide a few days ago. Runyon was a farmer, and had been for five years President of the bank. He was 60 years old. A great mob surrounded the bank and threatened the other officers. The city was wild with excitement. A deficit of $1,000,000 has been discovered by Bank-Examiner Shelley.

The United States Consul at Lyons reports to the State Department at Washington that the French wheat crop of this year will exceed that of 1883 by 30,000,000 bushels, and that the crop is excellent. The wheat yield of England will also be abundant. In consequence of the abundance the price of grain is declining rapidly.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the English corn trade, says: The weather has been stormy, with some slight frosts during the nights which were cold. Rains would greatly benefit the stand. In English wheat values lost their hardening tendency, and the crop proving of unusual weight makes the present values unequal. Sales of English wheat for the week, 62,564 quarters at 34s 3d the quarter, against 54,148 quarters at 41s 8d the quarter the corresponding week last year. In the market for foreign wheat the trade lost its steadiness, and values are somewhat nominal and in buyers' favor. Heavy shipments from the United States show the Americans to be free sellers at current rates. The imports of flour were double those for the same period last year.

Official reports of the state of crops in Nebraska are encouraging. The condition of corn is placed at 106 per cent, wheat 100, rye 100, oats 93, barley 96½, Irish potatoes 104¼, tobacco 100, apples 109½. This is a splendid showing.

In both Iowa and Illinois the corn crop is abundant, and a continuance of the present warm weather will soon place it beyond the reach of frost. In Decatur county the corn is exceptionally good, and much of it now out of danger from slight frosts.

Last week 2,741 packages of cotton goods were exported from the United States. During the year thus far there were 115,159 packages exported, against 115,181 for the corresponding period of last year.

The value of the exports from New York for the week ending yesterday was $6,683,287, against $6,107,107 for the corresponding week of last year. The total exports thus far this year were $222,143,409, against $247,106,107 for the same period last year.

THY KINGDOM COME.

Thy kingdom come.
I heard a Scer cry: "The wilderness,
The solitary place,
Shall yet be glad for Him, and He shall bless (Thy kingdom come) with his revealed face
The forests; they shall drop their precious gum,
And shed for Him their balm: and He shall yield
The grandeur of His speech to charm the field.
"Then all the soothed winds shall drop to listen,
(Thy kingdom come,)
Comforted waters waxen calm shall glisten
With bashful trembling beneath His smile:
And echo ever the while
Shall take, and in her awful joy repeat,
The laughter of His lips—(Thy kingdom come:)
And hills that sit apart shall be no longer dumb,
No, they shall shout and shout,
Raining their lovely royalty along the dewy plain:
And valleys round about.
"And all the well-contented land, made sweet
With flowers she opened at His feet,
Shall answer; shout and make the welkin ring,
And tell it to the stars, shout, shout, and sing;
Her cup being full to the brim,
Her poverty made rich with Him,
Her yearning satisfied to its utmost sum—
Lift up thy voice, O Earth, prepare thy song,
It shall not yet be long,
Lift up, O Earth, for He shall come again,
Thy Lord; and He shall reign, and He shall reign—
Thy kingdom come."

INDIAN EDUCATION.

THE vigorous and persistent efforts during the past few years on the part of certain officers of the United States Government towards the lifting up and advancement of the Indians by educating them, should not be passed by unnoted in the Herald. It is a subject that ought to be of interest to every Latter Day Saint; for the success that has been met with has largely demonstrated the Book of Mormon prophecy regarding their ultimate redemption from the curse of darkness of skin, ignorance of mind and filthiness of person. In recent times the majority of people seemed to think that the red man was only fit to be shoved off into the Pacific, as an interloper and vagabond who interfered with the rights and God-given supremacy of the noble white man. Educating him seemed indeed to be the last thing thought of. It was considered as neither possible nor advisable; and as for duty to him, he had no rights that either christianity or humanity had any call or obligation to respect. The best and quickest way to civilize him was to shoot him, on the general principle expressed by one writer that the "only good Indian is the dead one."

But, as by divine ruling, and often the object and purpose unknown to them, many men have been set to work in Assyria, Babylonia, Egypt, Peru, Central America and elsewhere, to prove the words of prophecy by bringing to light the relics and writings of ancient nations, so in other ways, scientific and educational, are men being put to work to bring about the purposes of God. Humanity can still be moved upon, and the great objects of the Almighty be accomplished, "in his own time, in his own way, and according to his own will," though men see and know it not. So, in this case, the results reached have, year by year, proved that the Indian can be largely helped towards civilization even in a few months or years, from the time he is brought under this best of all reformatory influences. Thus the Lord has brought to pass one of the means of staying the destruction of the "remnant," whose numbers at this time are given as being about three hundred thousand in the United States, old and young being counted.

From newspaper clippings made by me during the past year I condense the following facts concerning the present situation and the progress being made in this educational experiment on the part of the Government. During May, 1884, the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Teller, visited the Indian School at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and on his return to Washington reported that he was much pleased with the progress being made in the school. He was asked if he thought that these schools would solve the Indian problem, and he replied that it was not an open question any longer; for, if even one-half of the Indian children in the United States were placed in such schools, the question would be settled forever; and that the money expended in one year in fighting the Indians and keeping them in subjection, if used to educate their children would go largely towards putting an end to Indian "wars and rumors of wars" forever.

As for what is being done and the progress made the facts are as follows: Four hundred thousand dollars were appropriated this year by the government towards Indian Education, being a greater amount than any previous year. The training school at Carlisle has been in operation over five years, and in May last there were four hundred and fifty-five Indian pupils there, representatives from thirty-seven tribes. It is stated that "the ease with which they acquire not only the knowledge of books, but also of the various branches of industry, shows that the key to the Indian problem has at last been found." They are taught reading, writing, spelling, geography and arithmetic. One part of each day is spent in the workshops, where the mechanical arts are taught, and in the gardens and fields where they are instructed in agriculture. They build wagons, make plows, shoe horses, manufacture their own shoes, etc., while the products of the farm bring in a good revenue. The girls cook and sew and do the light work in the making of shoes, are said to do good work with the needle. Secretary Teller says that he believes all things considered, that the capacity and ability of the Indian youth to profit by the instruction given at Carlisle in the above named elementary branches is "fully equal to that of the whites." He states that they are remarkably apt in the mechanical arts, such as the manufacture of horse-shoes and other articles, while in agriculture they are not at all behind the whites in learning to do skilfully and well the practical and necessary things in farming.

He reports that the training schools at Hampton, Virginia, and Forest Grove, Oregon, are also doing a good work, while the one at Albuquerque, New Mexico and others in Nebraska, Kansas and Indian Territory, though not so fully equipped as the first three before named, are making good progress. As the settlement of the country by the whites has taken from the Indians their old manner of living, by making it an impossibility, he believes it is therefore but just that the Government should teach them other ways of earning a living, and that it is far more economical to teach them how to support themselves than it is either to fight them or to support them at the Nation's expense; and that the first step towards it is to teach them the English language and the elementary branches of an education. They must live, and it is now demonstrated that they can learn and will labor when rightly put at it and instructed how to learn and how to labor.

In answer to questions about whether the effect of this training remains with them after they return to their tribes, Captain Pratt, who has charge of the school at Carlisle, says that close observation has shown that less than ten per cent of them return to their aboriginal habits after leaving the school, while, on the other hand, the effect of distributing hundreds of educated ones among the various tribes has had a great influence for good, and has stimulated other young Indians to seek for a like knowledge of books and the ways of civilization. Hence, instead of great inducements having to be offered to get them away from their tribes for this purpose as formerly the case, the Government is now unable to make room for all who wish to attend school. More space and greater facilities are needed. If these were had it is believed that nine thousand Indians would soon be attending the training schools instead of nine hundred as at present. Captain Pratt thinks that the education of the rising generation of Indians, would solve the Indian question in due time. Ten dollars invested now in the educating of one may save one thousand dollars in fighting or supporting him by and by.

A correspondent at Albuquerque, New Mexico, reports the school there as increasing, and a greater number of tribes being represented at the school. Also that Indian parents are showing more interest in the school, and some are urging that their children be provided for and educated. The Pueblo children spent their two months' vacation among their people, and consequently returned to the school somewhat dirty and ragged, but it was found that they had forgotten very little, in fact reciting at once in the class room as readily as though they had not been away. Some showed an improvement, as instance one boy who had learned and could repeat the names of all the States and Territories, and had refused to join in the dances and plays of his fellows while at home. A Navajoe father brought his seven year old boy to the school because he said that the boy would not give him any peace till he did so, and after that the boy refused to answer except in English. Two boys from Pueblo who were at Carlisle three years and learned the carpenter and blacksmith trades were going to work in Albuquerque and to attend the school evenings.

New buildings were to be erected there that would accommodate one hundred and fifty pupils, to serve as the beginning of a permanent school, a larger establishment, wherein by and by to educate all the Indian youth of Arizona and New Mexico who shall wish to attend. Another year it is hoped that place for three hundred will be had. Thus the Government seems to be in earnest in this matter, and determined to try what effect a good practical education in books and in trades will have upon the aborigines of the land.

The experiments at Carlisle, Hampton and Albuquerque have certainly demonstrated both the wisdom on the part of the officials in charge and the lasting benefit accruing to the Indians from such a movement. And, aside from the philanthropy and justice of such an act, it is the very best thing that the government can do on the score of economy. Teach the Indians to support themselves and they will no longer be a burden; then also will they know how to take care of their own interests and no longer fall an easy prey to designing and swindling Indian contractors and agents, and the still worse post trader, who now take such remorseless advantage of the ignorance of the Indian and cheat him out of his choicest robes and his government annuities for a few glittering trinkets and a little vile whisky, properly called fire-water.

The Pueblos of New Mexico are a half civilized people, who have never received support from the government because they support themselves. The most they need is an education to advance them still more towards civilization. There are said to be among them two thousand, five hundred children of school age, and all live near Albuquerque, hence the present and probable superior benefit of a school at that place. The parents can see their children frequently in case of need, and can witness their advantages and progress, while also the change will not seem so severe to the children, yet they will be far enough removed to be away from the influences of their former ways of life. The hitherto untamable Southern Utes have during the past year allowed twenty-seven of their number to attend the school at Albuquerque. Previous to this not one of the tribe ever attended any school of any kind.

The training in the industrial arts is shown by the report of the Indian Commissioner, in which it was last year stated that the Carlisle and Hampton schools proposed to furnish the Indian agencies this year with two thousand pairs of shoes, four hundred and fifty set of harness, three thousand three hundred and fifty dozen articles of tin ware, and twenty-two dozen halters and bridles. Last year the Carlisle school sent out ten spring wagons. It was expected that during the past year three new training schools would be organized.

The Commissioner also reported last October that on the reservations were seventy-eight boarding schools at which four thousand, three hundred and ninety-six Indians received instruction. Besides these, and those at the training schools, there were five thousand and fourteen at the ordinary day schools established for them, or over ten thousand at all the day, boarding and training schools, or over fourteen hundred more than attended school the previous year. Seven boarding schools were added last year, and ten more were anticipated this year.

At the seventy-eight schools reported upon last October the pupils cultivated one thousand, five hundred and twenty-six acres of land, raising thereon over eighteen thousand bushels of corn, nearly five thousand bushels of oats, over nineteen thousand bushels of vegetables, and made nearly twelve hundred tons of hay, and over four thousand pounds of butter. This shows something of what the Indian is able to accomplish when he is properly instructed and directed how to do, in an organized and systematic manner.

During the five years of the Hampton training school eighty-one thousand dollars were contributed by individuals or societies, and fifty-two thousand dollars by the government. The average cost per pupil each year was $244 at the above school. To aid the government in carrying on its day, boarding and training schools, and to prosecute their own religious, educational and missionary work among the Indians, the religious societies of the United States expended last year two hundred and thirty thousand dollars. This includes their work among the five civilized tribes also.

Last January the Congressional subcommittee on the grievances of the Indians on the Montana reservation reported that the Flatheads on their portion were making rapid advancement in agricultural and mechanical pursuits, and in the education of their children. Many of them have farms well improved and well fenced, and their pastures are well filled with good cattle and horses. More than fifty years ago these Indians sent to the whites at St. Louis and asked that missionaries be sent among them, and much of their progress now is ascribed to the patient and unselfish labors of the Jesuits who went out and established a mission among them on their call.

The committee also reported that the chiefs made an earnest appeal for steps to be taken to keep out whisky and playing cards from the reservation, because of the evils resulting, but, as the Northern Pacific Railroad passes through there, it was feared that little could be done, though Major

Ronan, the agent, had broken up several places where liquor had been sold. The committee further report that Charlot, the chief of the Flatheads is an Indian of fine appearance, and he impressed them "as being a brave and honest man." Also they say: "The general condition of these Indians is so good that the committee feel justified in reporting that their belief is that in a few years the tribe will be as useful and prosperous a community as any in the Far West. They are kind, intelligent, and anxious to learn."

In conclusion I have just obtained information that shows that the number of Indians holding lands and other property individually, the same as do other citizens, is all the time increasing, and that there are now twice as many Indians who pay taxes as there were ten years ago. The most of the Indian lands are yet held in common among the tribes, not in severalty, but the wish among them to hold in severalty is increasing.

How much may be accomplished by the Government and by official and private philanthropists, we do not know, but individually I am glad to see that the hearts and hands of men are being moved upon to accomplish a work that God designs to be brought about in a not far distant time; hence I believe that he will bless every effort to this end, and that he does and will inspire for that purpose. And whatever men or nations will do at his call is so much of progress made, and to their honor and reward. I hope also that the Saints will welcome these evidences that the directing hand of God is moving to accomplish the fulfillment of his word, after men have said that destruction and annihilation were the only portion of the Indian and would be his fate, as one of the doomed races of the earth.

WHO IS ELIAS?

I WILL give the Herald readers a few reasons, with proof texts, for believing that Christ is not the Elias. First we notice John's testimony. John 1:19, 20:

"And he [John] confessed and denied not, but confessed I am not the Christ. And they asked him [John], What then art thou Elias? And he [John] said I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he [John] answered no."

I can not see how John 1:28, has any reference to this subject; but from the 27th to the 33d verses it gives John's testimony, that he [Christ] was not the Elias, but the Son of God.

We next notice the text found and referred to by Bro. Norton, in Luke 1:17: "He [John] is to go before Christ to prepare a people, or make ready a people for the Lord." (Christ). This he is to do in the spirit and power of Elias. This does not make John the Elijah or Elias, or Christ, by any means. Here he asks, "Did Elisha do such a work for the Lord?" And then answers, "No." The text does not say Elijah was to do such a work for the Lord; but it does say that John was to do the work in the spirit and power of Elijah, which he, John, did do. Here the brother makes a point, as though the Church could not accept any thing that savored of Spiritualism. How about Peter, James and John, coming back and doing "a certain work." Please tell us.

In regard to James 5:17, "Elias was a man of like passions as we are, and he prayed," etc.; and first, here is a plain statement that Elias was a man, which Bro. Norton denies; and secondly, that he Elias, was subject to like passions as we are. This shows that Elias possessed the same organism that we do, and was under the same conditions that we are, else the reference to him by James to stimulate our faith would be out of place; and this shows that Elias was not the Christ, for Christ was and is a divine being, the Son of God. John 1:34.

James states that Elias prayed that it might not rain, and it did not for three years and six months. To confirm this statement of James, we refer the reader to 1st Kings 17:1. Here Elijah says to Ahab, "there shall be no rain." That it actually did not rain, we refer you to the thirteenth and fourteenth verses, where Elijah says to the widow, that the barrel of meal shall not waste, nor the cruse of oil fail until the Lord send rain on the earth. In the seventeenth verse Ahab blames Elijah for the drouth. And that it rained in answer to Elijah's prayers, we refer you to 1st Kings 18:40-46. All through this transaction this spirit of power is manifestly present, and James in quoting the event calls him Elias; and in the Emphatic Diaglotte he is rendered Elija. Doctor Cumming of England, one of the greatest scholars and best linguists of the present day, tells us that Elijah in the Hebrew is Elias in the Greek language, and this seems to settle the whole difficulty in this matter. And Elias is yet to come. Who is that other prophet mentioned in John 1:21, 25? Bro. Norton or any one else please answer. GUY.

SPIRITS IN PRISON.

"THE wicked is driven away in his wickedness; but the righteous hath hope in his death."—Proverbs 14:32.

It is a subject of deep thought for the candid mind, as to how the righteous hath hope in the death of the wicked; as the prevalent idea existing among modern Christians is, that there is no chance for a reform, or repentance after death. Some claim that any change is impossible, as the spirit of man after death is in an unconscious condition, until the resurrection morning. Others, however, do not agree with this, but assert that the spirit is a conscious entity; while nearly all agree that there is no promise of mortals having any chance for repentance after death. This doctrine to my mind is an unscriptural one. I believe that there is a possibility that a certain class of people may hear and receive the gospel in the spirit-land, while the body may be clasped in the cold embrace of death! This to my mind is but reasonable; neither do I think it unfounded in the word of God.

Dear reader, if you will start out with me upon the broad field of arguments which lie before us, we will spend a little while in considering this matter, and see if we can find anything in the word of God to support the idea of repentance after death. Let us first consider the language of our text. Does it not state that the righteous hath hope in the death of the wicked? If so, and the spirit is unconscious between death and the resurrection, in what way can the righteous have hope in the death of him that dieth in his sins? Then let us first consider the question, Is the spirit of man unconscious between death and the resurrection? If so, I am at a loss to know what grounds the righteous would have for any hope in the death of the wicked. If you will turn with me to the Book of Revelations 4:1, we will read that a voice said to the revelator, "Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter." Remember the things he was to see were things which should come to pass, or future events; and here, while in the spirit, and looking down through the vista of unborn time, he sees after the opening of the fifth seal, the souls of men under the altar, crying, "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth. We here see that those souls were in a conscious condition; and while waiting there for their reward, they cried, "How long, O Lord," &c. Says one, But are not those who thus cried they who arose at the resurrection of Christ? No! because they who were resurrected at that time came up out of their graves;" (see Matt. 27:52, 53), hence were resurrected bodies, or men; but those under the altar were "the souls of men," not the men themselves, but the souls or spirits of them that had been slain; hence we have found one testimony, showing that the spirit is conscious between death and the resurrection. Again, please turn to Proverbs 5:8-11, and read Solomon's instruction, which says: "Remove thy way far from her, [a strange woman], and come not nigh the door of her house, lest thou give thine honor unto others, and thy years unto the cruel. * * * And thou mourn at the last, when thy flesh and thy body are consumed." Here we find there is a part of man that survives the death of the body, and is capable of mourning, when the flesh and body are consumed. But we have not time to consider the many passages that might be brought to bear on this subject, hence will content ourselves with the testimony given, which shows that the spirit of man survives the death of the body. Hence, by investigation, we may be led to ascertain why the righteous have hope in the death of the wicked.

But, says one, Do we not read in the Good Book, that as the tree falleth, so it lieth, and as death leaves us, judgment finds us? No, we don't find any such passage. I am aware that this is often quoted as scripture, but it certainly can not be found in the word of God. We read in Ecclesiastes 11:3, that "If the clouds be full of rain, they empty themselves upon the earth; and if the tree fall toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be." Not a word about as death leaves us judgment finds us. But says one, Is not that the conclusion we must draw from the verse? I think not; for in speaking of the tree, it can in no wise be applied to the spirit, but to the body, or that part that is cut down by death, or falls. "The spirit of man goeth upward." (Eccl. 3:21). And again, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." (Eccl. 12:7). For further proof of the correctness of this position, please turn to Job 14, where a similar phrase is used; and beginning at the 7th verse, we read:

"For there is hope of a tree [or the body] if it be cut down, [by death], that it will sprout again, [or live again, be resurrected], and that the tender branch thereof [or the spirit] will not cease, [or die]. Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof [or the body] die in the ground; yet through the scent of water [the gospel] it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant."

From this is drawn quite a different picture from the one generally drawn from Eccl. 11:3; but when we compare the two passages together, we readily see that there is no disagreement between them and although the tree falls (or the body dies) yet the spirit does not cease, but through the scent of water, (or gospel means), it will bring forth buds and boughs, like a plant.

Having endeavored to remove a few seeming difficulties, let us look at some of the predictions of the prophets and see if they had any idea of the spirits of men having the privilege of hearing the gospel in the spirit land. I will first call attention to Paul's sayings, in Phil. 2:9-11, which reads:

"Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, [Christ], and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Now it is a fact well known that many of the heathen people have died, who never heard the gospel, or never heard the name of Jesus Christ. Yet we read that "every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." The question arises, How can those people confess that he is Lord, when they never knew or even heard anything about him; or as Paul says, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher."—Rom. 10:14. It is this class of people, (also all those who never heard the gospel in its fullness), who will have a privilege of hearing it in the spirit land; for it would be unjust to condemn them and punish them for not obeying the gospel when they never heard it; while on the other hand, it would also be unjust to save them in the kingdom without their rendering obedience to the gospel plan; but if this is the way, as some affirm, why not keep us all in ignorance of God's will, and then we would all share alike; would all be saved.

But no, dear friends, the gospel is to all people; and those who do not have the privilege of hearing it here, will have a privilege of hearing, with an opportunity of embracing it, in the spirit land. Hence Isaiah says speaking of these:

"They shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited."—Isaiah 24: 22.

Please notice that they are to be visited after many days. Again in Isaiah:

"I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles; to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house."—Isaiah 42: 6, 7.

Again:

"Thus saith the Lord, in an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee and I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages, that thou mayest say to the prisoners, Go forth; to them that are in darkness, Shew yourselves." &c.—Isaiah 49: 8, 9.

Again:

"The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."—Isaiah 61: 1.

From these scriptures we ascertain, that there was a certain class of people to be shut up in the prison; (or place of departed spirits), and after many days they should be visited. Christ's mission was to preach good tidings unto the meek, to bind up the broken-hearted. To be a light to the Gentiles, and to visit the prison house and proclaim liberty to the captives, and set the prisoners free. We think Christ filled this mission. That he went and preached to the spirits in prison, after he was crucified; hence, Zechariah, 9: 11, 12, prophetically describing it, says:

As for thee [Christ] also, by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit, wherein is no water."

They could not have been sent forth by the blood of the covenant, until after Jesus had shed his blood on Calvary; hence, after his crucifixion, he went and preached to the spirits in prison, that had been "shut up for many days." Now hear the language of Jesus, while conversing with his apostles, just prior to his crucifixion:

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live."—John 5: 25.

And now, while they marveled at those words, lest they might construe them in some other way than what he intended, or lest they might think he had reference to the resurrection, he says in the 28th and 29th verses:

"Marvel not at this; [that the hour had come to visit the prisoners]; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth," &c.

Here then we find Jesus' testimony is, that "the hour is coming and now is," for the dead to hear the voice of the Son of God; or for him to go and preach to the spirits that had been shut up in prison; that they might be liberated, or set free. About twenty-nine years after this statement of Jesus, Peter is writing concerning it; and says:

"For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit; by which also [Spirit] he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, which sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was preparing, wherein few, that is eight souls were saved by water."—1 Peter 3: 18-20.

Here we find what Spirits were shut up in prison, and were to be visited after many days. The disobedient ones in the days of Noah. Although Noah was a preacher of righteousness, and did not cease to lift a warning voice to the Antediluvians, yet it is not reasonable to suppose, that every individual heard the preaching of Noah. And during the one hundred and twenty years, while the ark was preparing, many of them passed off from this life, not hearing the testimony of Noah, yet being disobedient; hence were shut up in prison, until Christ should come, who would then teach them the fulness of the gospel, and "send them forth by the blood of the covenant, out of the pit, wherein is no water." And by thus hearing the gospel in the spirit land, they could at the judgment day, testify that Jesus Christ was Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Peter speaking of them again says:

"For, for this cause [the coming judgment] was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, and live according to God in the spirit."

The words "That they might be judged according to men in the flesh," clearly show that they were existing out of the flesh; or were disembodied spirits. Hence the goodness of God, in giving all an equal privilege; thus we see, that he is not willing that any should perish, but desires that all might come unto repentance. But says one, Do we not read that "Baptism is a principle of the doctrine of Christ?" and except we obey that principle we can not see the kingdom? And if so, does it not necessarily shut those prisoners out of the kingdom, seeing they are shut up in the pit, or prison, wherein is no water? No, we think not; as God has provided a way for them, viz: that the living should be baptized for the dead. Baptism by proxy, was clearly taught by the Saints, and also practiced by them, in the days of the apostles. Hence, Paul asked the Corinthians, (after some of them had said there was no resurrection of the dead) "What shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all, why are they then baptized for the dead?"—1 Cor. 15: 29. Also, Paul in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, makes mention of a number of the ancients, who, through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, quenched the violence of fire; &c. Yet he says in the twenty-ninth verse: "God has provided better things for us, that they [the dead] without us should not be made perfect."

Thus viewing the gospel plan, we find a beautiful and a harmonious system, wherein God's mercies are meted out to all; and inasmuch as he has provided a way, whereby all may be saved, so also has he provided a way, whereby all men may hear and obey the same.

CALLED GOD.

IN the ordination prayer, of Brigham Young to the apostleship, February 14th, 1835, occurs these words: "And that heathen nations shall even call him God himself, if he do not rebuke them."—Millennial Star, vol. 15, page 206.

When I read this strange expression, I meditated upon it; was it a prophetic admonition to the man, foreshadowing his apostasy. We have no account of any people, save the church, ever fulfilling this prophecy of idolatry, and the church evidently became heathen, when they called man God, and the only God with whom they had to do. A heathen is one that departs from the worship of God, and no mistake need be made by Latter Day Saints, as to what constitutes the true worship required at their hands, which is contained in the fulness of the gospel. In this relation God tells the Church in the revelation of June, 1829, upon church government, that he gave power unto Joseph, "to translate the Book of Mormon, which contains a record of a fallen people, and the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, and to the Jews also." The same truth is again proclaimed in the revelation of September, 1830:

"Behold, this is wisdom in me; therefore marvel not; for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth with Moroni, whom I sent unto you to reveal the Book of Mormon, containing the fulness of my everlasting gospel."

And once more the Lord in much plainness and kindness, speaks in the law, that was to "govern my church," in the revelation of February 9th, 1831:

"And again, the elders, priests and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon in the which is the fulness of the gospel."

Thus we have it plainly told us in the revelations of God, three separate times that the Book of Mormon, contains the "fulness of the gospel," and nowhere within the lids of that book, are we taught to pay worship to Adam, nor yet B. Young; and as is clearly implied in his ordination, that when the heathen made such a departure, he was to rebuke them; and like illustrious and faithful Paul, "Run in among the people, crying out and saying, Sirs, why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein." B. Young, in failing to follow this noble example in rebuking the heathen, thereby became a party to their idolatry, and dishonored his apostleship.

In the Lord's preface to the Doctrine and Covenants, the object of these revelations is stated to be, "that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world and before kings and rulers." Whenever we can fix the date of the commitment of the everlasting gospel to the church, we find the time that the Lord has set prohibiting any additional items of doctrine, for the clear reason that that which is already full, can not be improved upon. In the revelation of December, 1830, we find this statement:

"And there are none that doeth good except those who are ready to receive the fulness of my gospel, which I have sent forth unto this generation."

Here the language positively indicates that prior to December, 1830, God had sent this everlasting gospel into the world. January 5th, 1831:

"Thou shalt preach the fulness of my gospel which I have sent forth in these last days."

And in the same revelation protection is promised upon the following condition:

"And inasmuch as they do repent and receive the fulness of my gospel, and become sanctified, I will stay my hand in judgment."

Should we obtain sanctification and escape God's judgments, it will be by our abiding faithfully in the revealed principles of the "fulness of the gospel." March 7th, 1831:

"And even so I have sent mine everlasting covenant into the world."

This "everlasting covenant," is the fulness of the gospel, in proof of which I quote, revelation of October 1831:

"Verily I say unto you, blessed are you for receiving mine everlasting covenant, even the fulness of my gospel sent forth unto the children of men, that they might have life."

I make one more quotation from the revelations; viz., November 3d, 1831:

"And for this cause, that men might be made partakers of the glories which were to be revealed; the Lord sent forth the fulness of his gospel, his everlasting covenant, reasoning in plainness and simplicity, to prepare the weak for those things which are coming on the earth."

Had the church paid more strict attention to the things contained in the revelations, it never would have been cried from the house-tops, in all the broad land, The people of Utah are heathens and idolators worshipping a wicked man, who like Solomon "loved many strange women;" and the same result, "and his wives turned away his heart, for it came to pass when Solomon was old, his wives turned away his heart after other gods; and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God." The same sin caused B. Young to deny the faith, neglect his duty, and allowed the heathen to call him God. I earnestly pray that the Father will ere long, give eyesight unto those who sit in darkness, that they may, like the prodigal, arise and confess, "Father, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight;" and thus be a means in saving themselves, and helping to wipe out the shame and disgrace brought on the church by B. Young, by not rebuking the heathen, and suffering himself to be called God. I believe the message of the angel, "Fear God, and give glory to him."

I HAVE seen a man who refused to believe the Bible yet would accept Darwin's theory of evolution, in which there are more missing links than certain facts. I know plenty of people who have not faith in God and his word, but have so much faith in the Canada prophet, that they moved and kept away from the sea coast, when the storm that was predicted did not come. I have conversed with a man in Missouri, who did not believe a word in the Bible; yet he would exalt the works of Shakespeare and Tom Paine.

An officer of the law arrested a hungry little boy for stealing an apple and an orange, in New York; yet the same officer would not arrest a man who sold liquor without a license, and violated the law more ways than one. It is free drinks and silence to those who ought to protect our country and property. Drink! Drink! Drink! How I hate it; hate the seller of it; hate the maker of it, and pity the poor, human victim of the cup, time, money, body, all wasted for rum; beer, whisky. Horrible! To repent is good after a wasted life; but better if there had never been need of repentance, by non-indulgence. I want every reader of the Herald and the Hope to know where I stand on this question. I am a total abstainer from all that will intoxicate. Upwards of ten years since I touched, tasted, or handled.

Oscar Wilde, it is reported, when he saw Niagara Falls exclaimed, "Bulk, but no beauty." A little child soon after cried, "Mamma, I feel like taking off my hat and thanking God for so grand a scene." In this country, where freedom and liberty reign supreme, men are concocting evil against foreign governments and people, and are the instigators of crimes that are sending men three thousand miles away to the gallows, and to an untimely end.

I have seen a man and woman marry out of their faith and belief, and repent it the longest day they lived. I have known men build their houses so large and so fine that they have been encumbered with a debt as long as they lived; and in some instances the sheriff has turned them out of doors. "I know men," said the Emperor Napoleon, "and I know Jesus was not a man. Eighteen hundred years ago he died, defeated and reviled; and yet at this hour there are thousands, all over the world who would die for him. I am defeated and overthrown, and who cares for me now? Who fights, or who conquers for me?"

Lord Byron at the close of his life wrote: "My days are in the yellow; the fruit, the flower of life is gone; the worm, the canker and the grief, are mine alone."

St. Paul exclaimed, "I am now ready to be offered. The time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight of faith; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the Righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but to all those that love his appearing."

"While half of the Christian world is worshipping a Jew, and the other half a Jewess; while both Jew and Gentile receive the law of Moses, sing the Psalms of David, and reverently bow before the God of Abraham, it is not flattery to speak well of an 'Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile.'" Dr. Newman. The other half worshipping a Jewess! that is very good, and puts it in the briefest form, the form of the Roman Catholic idolatry. The Jews hold in honor the Ten Commandments, and they know that the first two of them forbid any more than one God. But the Romanists worship a Jewess in spite of those commandments. It is well put by Dr. Newman; "and should not be forgotten for its brevity, truthfulness and point."—N. T. Observer.

On Sunday, May 27th, 1883, 18,000 persons paid to see a base ball match in Saint Louis, Missouri. On the same day 20,000 Sabbath School children sang in Gilmore's Garden, and 40,000 in Brooklyn the week previous. Ten and fifteen years ago, the Union Soldiers used to decorate the graves of the Union Soldiers only. To-day, Decoration Day, May 30th, 1883, they have decorated Confederate and Union graves, in all parts of the union.

RELICS OF THE MOUND BUILDERS.

IN the mineral annexes to the Main Exhibition building there is an interesting display of the economic resources of the most progressive States, and of this a full description will soon be possible. But in the Ohio department there is now ready for the inspection of the visitor a magnificent collection of implements of war, of the chase, and of the domestic life of the mysterious Mound Builders. This display is not favorably situated to attract attention, but good judges pronounce it, in point of interest, no mean competitor of the famous Smithsonian collection. A large archaeological map, 12 x 15 feet, shows the location, etc., of some of the earth and stone works found in Ohio. From their magnitude and number, it is easily seen that they were erected by a people with a well-organized government, and far too numerous to subsist without a system of agriculture. The immense system of fortifications in the form of circles, squares, octagons, mounds, parallel walls, etc., at Newark, would to-day, with the present tools of steel and steam machinery, require the labor of thousands of men for a long period of time to construct. Yet, as far as can be learned from the remains left, the builders had no tools but wooden and stone ones, with a few of copper, and had no domestic animals at all, and must therefore have carried all this earth in skins or baskets, and from long distances, as, at least in some instances, there is no earth or stone similar to that used in their construction. Among the implements exhibited are spades and hoes of flint, grooved and ungrooved axes of various degrees of finish, shape and size, varying from a few ounces in weight to over sixteen pounds, skin-dressers for tanning purposes, bark peelers for making canoes, pestles for crushing grain and other food, chisels, etc. The materials used for making these are granitic and kindred rocks, hematite, flint, and other hard materials. There are also lance, spear, and arrow heads; knives, scrapers, gouges, awls, drills, and similar tools of flint, jasper, chalcedony, etc., copper being used occasionally for some of these implements.—New York Tribune.

TRUST THE LORD.

TESTIMONY GIVEN AT A FAITH-HEALING MEETING.

A faith-healing meeting was held at the Adelphi Theatre yesterday afternoon. Mr. Kirkland bore testimony to the power of faith in curing biliousness. He had been troubled with a bilious complaint ever since he was young, and had been in the habit of eating lemons during the spring as a cure, but this year he had trusted the Lord to keep him from the attack without any medicine, and so far had enjoyed the most excellent health. Christ has borne our sickness as well as our sins, and so was just as able to cure our diseases as to pardon our sins.

Miss Anna Wylle, of Mount Vernon, Ill., a very delicate, nervous-looking woman, then related in a tremulous voice how she had been healed by faith of spinal disease. She had an injury to her back while young, and six years ago through overwork in a relative's store the insidious disease began gradually to steal upon her. For four years she was very sick, and at times suffered the most terrible spasms, from which none of her physicians could give her any relief. She gradually grew worse, and for the last two years had been quite helpless and the victim of the most excruciating agony. She was carried on a couch to the house of a magnetic-healer, and his treatment gave her a little relief for a time, but she soon became far worse than before. Her means were exhausted, and when every other hope was cut off she resolved to trust the Lord alone for her cure. While she was lying on her bed praying she heard a voice say, "Rise and kneel!" She never doubted that it was God's voice, and obeying the command, she arose and knelt. After she had been praying for about an hour the voice came to her again saying, "Rise and walk!" She raised her head, but just then the tempter came and she was afraid that she could not walk, but she called on the Lord to help her, and raising herself straight up, walked a few steps. She had never slept two hours in succession for two years, but this night, in answer to prayer, she had refreshing rest. Next morning she asked her mother for her clothes, and dressing herself went into a front room, where she was able to sit in a large chair propped up with pillows. Her leg, which the night before had been all drawn up and shrunken, filled up and returned to its normal condition. In the afternoon the voice again whispered to her: "Arise and walk across the room," and putting her foot to the ground with her hand she walked three times across the room. Two days afterwards something touched her foot, and being in excessive pain she cried out: "Lord, stop it, for Christ's sake!" In a moment the pain ceased, and all around her there was a beautiful light, and she felt the presence of God breathing on her like a gentle wind. That night at nine o'clock, when she was praying for relief from pain, the beautiful light again appeared all around, and she was lifted up in a floating sensation four or five feet from her bed, and heard the same voice saying: "Keep on praying; don't doubt, you will be healed." She then felt herself laid down again, and the light disappeared. A second time she had the same vision, and the voice then said: "Keep on praying until you are entirely healed." She felt sure that she would be entirely healed the next day, and the following night did not go to bed, but remained on the couch in the front room. That night Miss Carrie Judd and others were all engaged in united prayer for her. After praying till half-past nine she said to her mother: "Raise the organ, I'm going to play, for the Lord wants me to." She then played and sang two hymns, and feeling a little exhausted soon went to bed. She had occasional returns of jerking spasms in her foot for a few days, but quickly grew stronger. A week past last Sunday she prayed to God to give her strength to go up and down stairs, and the voice again came: "Go tomorrow, speak to some one about salvation." She said: "Lord, I will," and a peaceful calm went through her. In the

July 2d, 1884.

THE JEWISH ANCESTORS OF THE PORTUGUESE KINGS.

The following historical anecdote may not prove uninteresting at the present time, when we have just received a visit from the Emperor of Brazil, and it may account for the interest he takes in Jewish affairs:

It is well known that the Jews of Spain and Portugal were a highly intelligent race, and that they rose to great honors in the Peninsula, both under the Christian and Mohammedan rulers, but after the final overthrow of the Caliphs, the Catholic sovereigns no longer requiring Jewish assistance, relentlessly persecuted the Hebrews, and eventually expelled them. During these persecutions many Israelites left or pretended to leave the religion of their fathers, and were known as "New Christians." These New Christians married freely with the highest nobility, and to-day there are but few Spanish or Portuguese families in the highest circles but what have a mixture of Jewish blood. A certain king of Portugal, becoming alarmed at the power wielded by individuals of Jewish descent, issued a decree that every person with Jewish blood in his or her veins should appear at court distinguished by a white badge, the king hoping by this edict to banish all such persons from his court, as he believed no one would be willing to acknowledge his Jewish blood. On the day named he was surprised to see more than three-fourths of his court wearing the white badge, and he was astounded when the Prime Minister entered, himself wearing in a conspicuous manner the same emblem. He asked him furiously what his business was. His answer was: "I have come to carry out your Majesty's orders. Here are two white badges (at the same time producing them); one is for her Royal Majesty, your august spouse"—"And for whom is the other?" thundered the king. The reply was: "For your Royal Majesty!"

It is needless to say that the edict was immediately recalled. If this anecdote be true—and there is no reason to doubt it—the Emperor of Brazil, who is a lineal descendant and true representative of the Kings of Portugal, must have a large quantity of Jewish blood in his veins.—Jewish Chronicle.

Anger in dispute is like an unquiet horse in a dusty way—it raises such a cloud in the eye of the understanding, that it obscures its vision and impedes its operations.

REUNION COMMITTEE.

The committee appointed to make arrangements for the Union Camp Meeting, to commence on the Fourth of October next, and to convene on the land of Henry Garner, five miles east of Mondamin, Harrison county, Iowa, beg leave to state that arrangements have been made with parties to furnish hay, meat, stands for the sale of necessities, and two eating establishments, at which the two last named will furnish meals at twenty-five cents. Board may be obtained by the week at a reduction. There will be a place prepared in which parties may sleep, by furnishing their own bedding. There will be conveniences to and from the depot, at reasonable rates. Wood plenty, which will be free, unless cord wood is desired. There are but few places in reach of the grounds where board can be got free; therefore, all would best come prepared with the sinews of war. The grounds are amply sufficient to hold all the tents and teams that may come. Bishop Blakeslee will see what rates can be obtained on all roads leading into Council Bluffs.

MARRIED.

MILLWARD—BALDWIN.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Fall River, Mass., August 24th, 1884, by Elder John Potts, brother Richard Millward to sister Esther A. Baldwin, both of Fall River.

"I wish for you a humble cot,
A happy home to be;
Where peace abides—where strife comes not—
Where all in love agree."

DIED.

ROOT.—In Live Oak District, San Benito Co., Cal., August 7th, 1884, of typhoid fever, and internal hemorrhage, Maude E., eldest daughter of Bro. and Sr. J. F. Root, aged 18 years, 5 months, and 17 days. She was a beautiful and accomplished girl, of a sweet and amiable disposition, beloved by all who knew her.

Our darling Maude has left us,
We have said our last good bye;
Her sweet face no more will greet us,
She has reached the realms on high,

BOWEN.—In Butte City, Montana, August 3d, 1884, of diphtheria, David Herbert, aged 11 years, 11 months and 15 days; also Willie, aged 2 years, 6 months and 17 days, sons of Bro. Edward M. and Sr. Mary Bowen. This sad intelligence the writer receives from Bro. and Sr. Bowen, and from Bro. Isaac Harris. Two beautiful, promising boys, smitten down in one day and buried in one grave! How priceless the tender, loving voice of Christ, as it breaks in upon the souls of this sad, sorrowful father and mother and the stricken family and friends: "I am the resurrection and the life;" "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." David was a member of the Church of Christ, and the writer remembers well, and with pleasure, when, two years ago, the little lad walked with his father and himself from Silver Bow to Stuart, a distance of near ten miles, to attend the meetings of the Saints. We have the joyful hope that the little ones are with Christ and the spirits of the just, and that they, with all Christ's people, will "live again" and reign with him forever. W. W. B.

KENT.—At Starkville, Colorado, August 25th, 1884, of cholera infantum, Phebe J., child of John W. and Sarah A. Kent, aged one year, four months and fifteen days. Blessed by James Caffall.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, GENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds,
WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds,
E. W. CATO, SEN.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Sept. 27th, 1884.

Nor many issues since we published a pithy article against secret societies, but especially devoted to the Order of Masonry. The article is in the shape of a letter in reference to one written by us to the author declining to publish a similar attack on the Masonic order; which for reasons we gave the author we refused to publish. One of the reasons was that the article contained notice of several anti-Masonic works, by Ronayne and others which we did not care to advertise free; or in the fashion sent.

We hesitated about inserting the article; and since its insertion we have been criticised somewhat, and probably will be more; but all we care in reference to it is for all who read the article to remember that it stands with all upon its merits, we neither commend, nor condemn it.

The position that we have occupied on this question has been stated by us, but may be again without injury. We are not a Mason; in fact are not a member of any secret society, or order. We have neither time nor money to spend in them, nor inclination to become a member; have never made application for membership in any, nor ever been refused the privilege of uniting. There is nothing good, true, or noble enjoined in the rules of any secret order, by its oath, or vows of membership that is not incumbent upon the Christian by virtue of his baptismal vow. If a man who has made a covenant in baptism, will not out of respect for his God, his fellow man and himself, do the good that lies in his power, no oath that he can take will compel him to do so. An oath is a burden and a care, and the freer men are from them the better; so we believe.

While believing what is written above, we make personally no war on Masonry, the order of Red Men, Knights of Malta, Pithias, or the Golden Circle; the Odd Fellows, or any other beneficiary, or secret society; for to us, two very sufficient reasons: First. We know personally nothing of them; and therefore can not speak, or write from knowledge. Second. Our business and duty require us to teach the gospel means of redemption, by precept and example.

Under the first reason we conceive that he who speaks without knowledge speaks falsely; that is, he can not testify truly without knowledge. Hence, we do not care to denounce without knowledge. Those who know, or care to adopt a different rule than we have, may do as they please. Under the second, we deem it unnecessary to the preaching of the gospel that we shall be constantly attacking what may be constructively out of harmony. If the gospel is taught and is obeyed, the Spirit will guide the individual, if he will heed its admonitions.

It does not follow, nor is it true that because we do not condemn secret societies by name and enforce our condemnation by attack upon them that we sanction and endorse them, either singly, or as a whole. Because the church does not refuse Masons, Odd Fellows and members of other societies admission into membership, nor instruct the Elders to inquire if candidates for baptism are members of any secret order, is not good reason to conclude that these societies are endorsed by the church; and that the church does not excommunicate those who may be members of secret orders does not warrant the statement that the church favors those societies, or that the church rules may be so construed. We make no defense of secret orders, and for the same reasons that we do not denounce them. They must abide the arbitrament of time as other human institutions. Those who choose to single out any one of the many secret orders and confine the statement of the Book of Mormon to it, may do so; and those who choose to find fault with us because we do not condemn what they denounce, may do that too; and we will strive to be content. The writer of the article referred to in this must not take it that we intended any stricture on him, because we do not; we wish to be understood in the matter that is all.

BRO. E. T. SHUPE sends us the Fullerton, Nebraska, Telescope, for August 29th, in which is a letter written by Bro. Shupe, on the continuation of healing by faith, called out by the healing of a Mrs. Irwin, wife of a clergyman who denies the doctrine of signs following the believer. Bro. Shupe's article is very good. The Editor calls attention to the letter stating that it is an excellent one; we give his notice below.

An interesting letter on the sudden recovery of Mrs. Irwin, by one at Webster, Dodge county, who has somehow run across a copy of the Telescope, appears in another place. The writer takes a scriptural view of the case, and by the texts cited and arguments used, brings it within range of the established doctrines of the church from the remotest times of its history even till now, except it be that it is generally claimed by church-people, if we are not mistaken, that the working of miracles is a thing of the past, although it is believed that there is no direct scriptural authority for that belief.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

TWENTY-NINE baptized at Cameron, Ontario, lately. A branch to be organized there to be called the Cameron Branch. So Bro. John H. Lake reports.

Five baptized at Detroit, Minnesota, by Bro. Thomas Nutt.

Bro. E. H. Gurley was at the Bonnett School-house, Decatur county, on the 14th, Bro. H. A. Stebbins at Pleasanton, Brn. H. C. Smith and S. V. Bailey at New Buda, Brn. I. P. Baggerly and J. S. Snively at points in Missouri, and Bro. O. B. Thomas, we believe at High Point, Iowa. So goes the working force of Lamoni. One was baptized at High Point not long since by Bro. M. McHarness.

Bro. E. L. Kelley writes from Kirtland, September 11th, that things were moving slowly there; but his audiences were quite good, as good as before he left for St. Louis, last spring; which under the circumstances he considered was remarkable. The weather was very hot and very dry.

Brn. John R. Evans and Isaac Phillips of the Lucas Branch, visited Lamoni on Thursday the 11th, on their tour of observation in behalf of the company formed last winter, prospecting for a point to locate a coal mine. It is thought by them that Lamoni is within the coal belt, but that the coal must be deep. They spent a half hour in the sanctum pleasantly to us. They left for home on Friday 12th to report progress.

Bro. W. W. Blair visited Richmond on general church business, Friday, September 12th, and stopped there a day. He reports that he had an interesting and profitable interview with Elder David Whitmer, his son David J., John Whitmer, son of Jacob, and Mrs. Scheveisch, daughter of David, Sen., on the general topic of the Book of Mormon, and the faith once delivered to the Saints. Bro. Blair also visited Independence and St. Joseph, holding meeting in the latter place over Sunday, the 14th, and returning to Lamoni on the 15th. He was interviewed at St. Joseph by a Herald reporter on the Utah question, the interview was published in the issue for September 14th, and as usual, while quite fair in the main, contains much that Bro. Blair did not state.

Bro. and sister S. F. Walker have bought a block in Lamoni, and will build a home in the town.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt was to be at Sandwich on the 14th. He was at Kewanee on the 11th and 12th. He had been at Pittsfield, Pike county, Illinois.

Bro. B. V. Springer visited the Editorial rooms of the Herald Office on the 12th instant, fresh from his labors in Missouri, to his field in southern Iowa and north Missouri. The veteran looks thin, but his eyes are bright with undimmed fire, and the gospel energies are still upon him.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt has been laboring in Pike county, Illinois, and has aided greatly in reorganizing and strengthening the branch at Pittsfield.

Bro. Peter Harris and his nephew, Wm. Erwin, have put up a sorghum molasses factory in Lamoni. Mr. Erwin put in thirty acres of cane himself this season. It is said that they are making a fair article of syrup.

We have been reading a work called the "Sanhedrin," for which Sr. Elizabeth Forscutt of Nebraska City, is an agent. It purports to be a collection of writings from the Talmud, which are strongly corroborative of the New Testament history of Christ and his labors. It is an interesting work to read; and if authentic, which we have no means of determining, is of great value to the student elder. The book is by Mahan, and can be had of Sr. Forscutt.

Bro. Alexander McCallum and family of Stewartville, Missouri, are visiting at President Joseph Smith's this week. Sr. McCallum is Pres. Smith's eldest daughter.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith writes cheerfully of the situation in Salt Lake City, though he expresses no opinion as to the outlook.

Josiah M. Lisenbee is hereby requested to report in person, or by letter to James F. Wilson, the Clerk of the Whearso Branch; as matters of importance to him there require his attention.

Bro. John Traxlar of Louisville, Ontario, has bought land near to Lamoni, and will settle one of his sons on it soon.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Who is the author of the Trial of the Witnesses to the Resurrection of Jesus—A Legal Argument.

Ans.—We can give no other answer than is found on title page of the tract.

THE Saints have been ridiculed times out of mind, because they have preached and insisted upon the continuance of miraculous healing by faith, prayer, and the laying on of hands. We give below a case which having seen the report of, Bro. E. T. Dobson of St. Joseph, Missouri, wrote to the woman said to have been healed, and received a confirmatory answer. Bro. W. W. Blair saw the answer while at St. Joseph on the 14th. We cite the case for the purpose to show to these Bible-believing-skeptics, from witnesses within their own ranks, that the God whom the Saints worship will and does hear the prayer of faith.

No uneasiness need be felt by the Saints because healing manifestations are known with others besides the church; for Saints should be prepared to welcome the moving of the Spirit upon the inhabitants of the land in fulfillment of long known prophecies. Human disease and distress are the same among all classes of men, and earnest faith must have its assured reward. We hail these tokens with gladness, believing that they but harbingers a better day in which the lines of faith will be more sharply drawn; when unbelief if not convinced will at least be silenced.

Norcross, Ga., August 7th.—This community is greatly excited over a miraculous faith cure which has just taken place here, the favored person being the wife of Hon. John A. Wimpey, one of the most prominent Republican politicians of the state. For twenty years Mrs. Wimpey has been an invalid. A great portion of the time she has been confined to her bed and was only able to walk across the room, supported by assistance. Of late years she has been confined to her bed entirely, being unable to lift her hands. She is an estimable woman and bore her afflictions with rare fortitude, hardly hoping that she would ever be well again. She has lived in Dahlonega, Atlanta, and for several years in Norcross, and has tried all remedies known to medical science for relief in vain. Neither change of atmosphere, the healing waters of mineral springs, nor the learning and experience of professors, could bring any relief, and she was regarded by all her acquaintances as incurable. All the physicians in Atlanta had given up her case as hopeless.

During the recent district meeting at Norcross there was a remarkable revival in progress, which still continues. After the regular meeting was over Mrs. Wimpey felt deep interest in the work, but was debarred the privileges of an active participation in it by her afflictions. Tuesday morning her bed was rolled into the parlor where she might better hear the singing, while the family all repaired to church. Left alone to her private devotions, she suddenly felt her strength returning, and without doubting that her prayers had at last been answered, she got up and walked across the room filled with rejoicing at her sudden cure. She hastily dressed for church, and, taking her Bible in hand, hurried on to the house of God, where the congregation was assembled. Before she arrived at the door she was recognized and the news spread rapidly through the congregation. The services were suspended and her friends hurried to meet her, while others sat still in blank astonishment. On she came refusing all assistance to mount the steps. She entered the church and walked up to the altar, where she exhorted the people with great power and eloquence. Rev. W. A. Parks declared her cure to be an answer to her prayers from heaven. The whole congregation joined in prayers. Mrs. Wimpey walked back home unaided and went about her household duties, declaring that she felt permanently cured. This incident has given fresh impetus to the religious fervor which has been growing. The doctors confess that they have no theory to offer, as the lady's ailment was such that there was no method known by the profession for its cure. People are coming from all parts inquiring into the wonderful event. As the parties are all so well known, and the event was manifested in so public a manner, it is likely to grow in interest, and the lady's progress will be carefully watched by physicians.

THE Helena, Montana, Herald, of August 7th, 1884, contains the following sharp criticism on Hon. Robert G. Ingersoll, and his manner of argumentation.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO INGERSOLL.

Our people have improved the opportunity quite generally during the past two nights to listen to the great infidel orator, Robert G. Ingersoll, on his favorite topics. After his very plain talk about the Bible and the creeds, the speaker seemed to think it was a little too bad to leave the world without a ruler and life without an object, so he undertook to substitute a religion that he thought would do to stand on. Its main points were drawn from Christ's sermon on the mount. Forgive as ye hope to be forgiven. Be merciful as ye hope to obtain mercy, etc. In general, do to others as you would have others do to you. Be as charitable in your judgments and as active in your sympathies to others as you will wish God to be towards you, if after death you should wake up and find that there was a future life.

Besides this, Ingersoll would have every one cheerful, happy, a good liver, with a well furnished house, good clothes, etc. He thought the world needed good cooks more than preachers. Certainly all will agree that a kind of cooking that will give us pleasure in eating without a heavy head and sour stomach, is better than a poor, dyspeptic sermon.

There are a great many half truths in what Ingersoll says, and it would be a much better world than it is if all would live up to the standard that he lays down.

If Ingersoll could only lecture before the theologians we incline to think he might do a great deal of good, but before a promiscuous assemblage his influence, so far as the portion that is apprehended, seems bad.

If a man will be virtuous, charitable, forgiving, always abounding in good words, good looks, and good deeds, as Ingersoll recommends, he will be a pretty good, practical, working Christian, with a better chance for heaven than any hypocrite, no matter how many times he has been baptized, or what he may pretend to believe.

We accept the test, and so does every Christian, believer and teacher. It is not what a man professes to be, but what he is, that makes him a Christian.

It strikes us that Ingersoll would be using his great talents to better purpose if he accepts and believes, as he says he does, the teachings of Christ, if he would get out an edition of the New Testament properly amended and expurgated. Apparently he has a creed of his own as much as any church that he criticises.

But until he has it reduced into shape, form and substance, better than the shadowy, glittering generalities that lie interspersed among the wrecks of the creeds that he assails, he ought to have the practical good sense and piety to see that he is doing mischief. He is cutting adrift every man's belief and pushing him out to sea without a rudder, chart or compass, and on a sea full of shoals and rocks and liable to fearful tempests.

We do not believe the world will grow better if Ingersoll's discourses were substituted for all the sermons of preachers, and this is not saying but there is truth in much that Ingersoll says, and much error in the creeds and the teachings of all the churches.

HAVING determined on the accomplishment of some worthy end, persevering effort is essential to success. The end itself may be a worthy one, and the desire to attain it may be strong, but without proper and continued exertion, in the use of appropriate means, it never can be reached. A lady once asked the celebrated English painter, Turner, what was the secret of his success. He replied that he had no secret but hard work. This is the true secret of success; but it is a secret that many persons will not learn; and failing to learn it, their expectations are often disappointed. Labor is the genius that changes deformity to beauty, and surmounts difficulties, and secures the most important results. As a general thing, labor is the measure of success.

LOOK ON THE CHEERFUL SIDE.

It is a great misfortune to have a fretful disposition. It takes the fragrance out of one's life, and leaves only weeds where a cheerful disposition would cause the flowers to bloom. The habit of fretting is one that grows rapidly unless it be sternly repressed; and the best way to overcome it is to try always to look on the cheerful side of things.

Correspondence.

Box 240, AUDUBON, Minnesota,
September 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We are trying to battle for the truth in this part of the vineyard, and the work is onward. Elder Nutt is a master in the pulpit. Five were added to the church, August 10th, by baptism under his hands, and more are near the kingdom. Some three months ago, a piece came out in our county paper, among the Audubon items, charging the Martyr with polygamy, and claiming history so stated. Bro. Nutt in a public meeting, called upon them to bring on their master spirits, and he would meet them in public, and prove to the satisfaction of the honest in heart, that it was a lie. But not one dared to oppose him. The work is prospering, and we all think the right man is in the right place, and should it suit the authorities, we shall be glad to have him back with us next summer. I expect to put in some time in the field the coming year, and if nothing happens shall take the field with Bro. Nutt in about three weeks. The calls for preaching the word are on the increase in this land; but the spirit of darkness how he works, and is trying to hinder it from reaching the people; but that day is passing by. The blessings that are promised to the faithful are enjoyed by the church, for which we are thankful.

Yours in the light of the latter days,
HENRY WAY.

BANDERA, Texas,
September 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—After a few days' rest from labors performed in connection with Bro. H. C. Smith, at the close of the debate in Bell county, I took leave of my co-laborer, and started for Oak Island, fifteen miles south of the city of San Antonio, where I arrived August 22d. Here I found the little band of Saints whom I left five years ago, all alive in the work with few exceptions. I need not say I was glad to meet them again, to talk about the good old way, and tell anew the "old, old story." Next day after my arrival, in company with Bro. H. L. Thompson of Bell county, and others, I rode out to secure a site for the new church this little band are trying to build. We went to Mr. Bennet, who, though not a member of the church, promptly and cheerfully gave us an acre of land, most conveniently and beautifully situated for this purpose. May the Lord bless him for his kindness. Through the kindness and aid of Mr. Neil, Mr. McMains and others, the lumber was rapidly being put on the ground last week. If carpenters can be had to do the work, the building will be inclosed in a few weeks. The little flock at this place is under care of Bro. Wm. Waterman, of San Antonia, late of London, England. Held five or six meetings while there, and baptized Bro. Wm. Caruthers, whom I knew nearly thirty-six years ago. He is now in his seventy-fifth year, and full of faith and zeal for the work.

Not having recovered from my sickness in Bell county, and being rather poorly at best, the over-exertion again prostrated me, and I kept my bed most part of the week following. As soon as I was able to ride, I started for this place September 3d. Fifty miles in one day by stage, and almost smothered to suffocation by heat and dust, induced another fit of nervous prostration, from which I am not yet recovered. If the advent of cool weather does not benefit me, I fear that I may be rendered unfit for service in this field, which requires a good constitution, physically speaking, and ability to "rough it." The fever has left me almost deaf, which makes my work really burdensome. I desire prayers for my restoration to health, that I may be able to prosecute the work assigned me. I have arrangements for meeting next Sunday, and expect to do all my strength will allow me to do. It is extremely dry and hot, there having been no rain since some time in May, and stock is suffering for water and food in many places. Prospects for the work, I think, grow brighter, but there is room for improvement.

Fraternally yours,
D. H. BAYS.

Bro. Joseph:—We are too apt to be taken up with the things of this world, and seeking after riches and vanities, and listening to false reports, and then telling them again. How I wish that Saints would find other things to talk about; for we read in God's word, that unless they will stop these things, and live rightly before God, they can never go up to Zion, and can never be saved in the Celestial Kingdom of God. I have an abiding faith in the ultimate success of the Master's cause. There is still a few here who are striving for the truth as it is in Christ. The Holiness People have just closed another one of their camp meetings on our ground, but they made almost a failure this time; and we think that if we can get the Reunion held here next Fall, that it will do a great deal of good; for there are many people here who want a common sense religion. There were numbers of gentlemen came to me during that meeting here, and requested that we should do all that we could to get our next camp meeting here, saying that they were ready to help us with their means.

May God uphold you, and all that labor in love for Christ, is my prayer.

S. C. SMITH.

SPRINGPORT, Michigan,
September 7th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—In the 7th chapter of the Book of the Judges, we find a lesson worthy of notice. Not long after the successor of the prophet Moses had passed away, the people of God were left without a prophet, during which time the age of miracles seemed to be closed, and the church of God was in captivity, being subject to Gentile rule. And when the Lord saw fit to send an angel to ordain Gideon, and put power and might upon him, the angel said to Gideon, "Go in this thy might and lo, I am with you to deliver Israel." But Gideon said: "If the Lord be with us why is all this evil upon us; and where are all the miracles that our fathers told us of?" A most noble and reasonable exclamation, well worthy of imitation in this generation. The conclusion was indeed a wise one. For the "true and living God never was nor never will be a co-worker with any people, who hold that the age of miracles is past forever. Hopeless indeed are all those man-made churches, who have imagined to themselves a God who is not a God of miracles, as in former ages. For the God of the Bible is one and the same in every age. But he is a God of order in every age. Consequently he is not with those who belong to "the city of confusion," save it be by his judgments as heretofore. "History repeats itself," J. Smith; or "God's ways are one eternal round." In the holy gospel glass a man may look and see himself.

We read of "the man of sin," not a man, but "the man." But who is this man? Is he not indeed a plurality? Yes, for his number is given, six hundred and sixty-six in one body. He is the anti-Christ; a beastly power. Not the power of God conferred upon man, as in ages past, when miracles were wrought in answer to prayer. But a beastly power that hath since arisen up "out of the sea." Some like that power once exercised in Palestine by the king of apostate Israel, when he said, "Lay hold on him," meaning God's messenger who was sent to prophesy upon Baal's altar. What a striking resemblance is now manifest between Gentile Israel and the ten tribes of Jacob, when they had a man-made priesthood and worshiped an imaginary God. Truly history does repeat itself. When that division took place in the church of God, Baal worship was instituted and new altars established, and the ordinances of God were mocked by man-made schemes, some like modern customs now practiced by Gentile Israel, who get their religion upon anxious seats and count gospel ordinances non-essential. No wonder why the power of God is denied by them. It is now even far worse than it ever was in ancient Israel; for although they had denied the God of Moses and the prophets, and made one not in the image or likeness of man, yet they had not got so far from any idea of the true and living God, as to imagine he is not in the image or likeness of any creation he has ever made.

"Without body or parts." If such a god is not an idol of the imagination, and a "strange god," then Moses did not speak by the Holy Ghost. It is a denial of both the Father and the Son. And all who worship such a "strange god," are idolatrous heathen. And when they pray to Jesus, is it so that Jesus whose body never saw corruption, and who was the very express image of his Father's person; so also the brightness of his glory. But the Jews, nor any of their fathers, had ever heard of a god who had "no body or parts," until their dispersion among the Gentile nations. And by this historical fact, Moses is known to be a man of God, who saw in the light of God. For man was made in the image and likeness of his maker, God. And so also was the Son of God made in the same image and likeness, and was called the Son of Man, and Son of God by his own mouth. Jesus Christ is the bridegroom, and his church is the bride, the Lamb's wife, who will have on the wedding garment at his appearing.

THE WHEAT AND THE TARES.

Remember the tares are the children of the wicked one. The wheat are the children of the kingdom. Both are to be gathered, each in their season, time, and way. But remember the tares are first to be gathered, and bound in bundles; what for? Or why in bundles? The answer is, To be burned as chaff, separate from the wheat. Who are the reapers? Those who gather out the tares, and bind them into separate bundles, for wages. They are the angels, or Lord's of the harvest called divines or reverends, who are sent to do this kind of work in the last days.

If perchance any of the wheat or children of the kingdom would be found in those bundles, the voice of God will say to them, "Come out of her my people," lest ye be partakers of her sins, and receive of her plagues." "Thrust in thy sharp sickle and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe."—Rev. 14th. I understand the "clusters" here to mean the protestant churches, which are included as a part of that "vine of the earth," now soon to be gathered and cast into the "great wine press of the wrath of God." If I am mistaken in this idea I would be glad if some one would show the mistake. A Baptist minister agreed with me in this matter, save he thought the Baptist Church did not descend through the "Mother of Harlots." Where did her priesthood come from? By what revelation?

Editor Herald:—We have had another call from Bro. M. H. Forscutt. He arrived at Pittsfield this county, on the evening of the 30th ult. I had heard that he was coming, and met him there. He preached in the morning and evening of the 31st, and every evening through the week following till Saturday evening, September 6th, when the Pittsfield Branch met at the house of Bro. H. R. Mills to re-organize and ordain some officers. As there was no Elder in the branch, Bro. C. Mills, the president, having died last June, after some deliberation and a most earnest and solemn season of prayer, the following brethren were chosen and ordained: Bro. H. R. Mills an Elder; Bro. W. H. Williamson Priest; Bro. George Mills, Teacher; and Bro. Charles Williamson, Deacon; Bro. Forscutt officiating. After which, Bro. H. R. Mills was chosen president of the branch, and all the other officers were chosen to act in the discharge of their several duties and callings in the branch, and all received their licenses, and each one a most appropriate and solemn charge from Bro. Forscutt. It was one of those mutual and spiritual seasons that one never forgets. On Sunday 7th, Bro. Forscutt preached in the morning and evening to fair congregations. His preaching was with unusual force and clearness, and did us all good; and we believe that it reached the hearts of some that will confess it yet, and obey the gospel. I think I never saw Bro. Forscutt so wholly and deeply devoted to his calling and work before. He left us on Monday, the 8th, for Peoria, Illinois.

Bro. Joseph:—I have heard much in my life, some before I became a Latter Day Saint, and more since, as to who will be the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven. Now when this subject was introduced in the Lord's time, and his disciples had a little dispute about it, he called a little child, and told them except they became as this little child they could in no wise enter the Kingdom of heaven. Is this good sense in our day? The question has often been propounded to me (not by man) in my old age, and how do you think I have answered it. Who will be the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven, they who know God and Jesus Christ his son, as seen in St. John's gospel 15th chapter, and they who labor on and do the most good here on earth, and that can endure the most abuse and wrong, and forgive the most sins committed by the children of men. Such I think will be likely to be counted worthy of honor in heaven. This inclines me to be patient. God will bless all who crave such favors.

It was sin for the Jews to reject Christ. It was sin for the Gentiles to reject Christ. Then it is now sin for the Gentiles to reject the Book of Mormon. They that do so reject Christ and his gospel. I would like to see it otherwise, but so it is.
Yours truly,

WEST FORK, Indiana,

September 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The work here as far as numbers being added to the church is concerned, is not prospering; but the cause is apparent, for there has been no labor performed, and the branches are not in working condition. Something is wrong, or they would be doing their duty. This is not the case however in all of the district, but in Crawford and Perry counties. Whose duty is it to put the branches in a condition to keep the commandments of the Lord? I think like Bro. T. W. Smith, there are no non-essentials given of the Lord; but we should live by every word that proceeds from God's mouth, whether given by some Peter or Christ, or by the prophets and apostles in our time. If we neglect to meet together to partake of the sacrament, and to exhort and pray for one another as commanded, what can we expect. No wonder that no one is coming into the church. There was a resolution passed that the Bishop's Agent should travel among the branches and teach the law of tithing; but if the branches are not in working order, what inducement is there for any one to labor among them. Brethren, let us consider these things before the next conference, which convenes the eighth of November, and try to see if we can not get into better working order; for God commands it. We may be hindering some of the honest ones from coming to a knowledge of the truth, and they will rise up and condemn us. If we know God's will and do it not, we will be beaten with many stripes. May the Lord bless us all, is my prayer.

Yours in gospel bonds,

DAVID BAGGERLY.

XENIA, Nebraska, Sep. 11th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Came here yesterday, after spending a week in telling the tidings of salvation to the people of Elmwood and vicinity. Notwithstanding the farmers were very busy in haying, the meetings were well attended, and an interest manifested by some; and it needs but labor there to give the increase. But for prior promises I would have kept up the effort for a week or more.

I have completed the careful reading of the first proposition of the Braden-Kelley debate, and have noted down, for future use, many of the untruthful statements of Mr. Braden. Only one item however I will mention here. Mr. Braden states, p. 218, concerning the authorship of the Book of Mormon, "That it has every mark of being arranged by one mind, not many, as Mormons claim. The style is a unit, not diverse as is the case in the Bible. That one mind is Rigdon."

To me the above lacks consistency, as from first to last Mr. Braden seemed possessed with a mania to establish that the "Manuscript Found," written by the Rev. Solomon Spaulding, was the Book of Mormon, in name and narrative; and Braden compiled "twenty-seven great features," that are found in the Manuscript Found and the Book of Mormon. If this parallel exists, then Spaulding and not Rigdon, was that one mind. Braden was badly mixed as some "twenty-two to fourteen years before the Book of Mormon," "Spaulding, a sceptical back-slider in sin," was the sire, as the definition in Webster to the word "begotten" proves, and at a later period Rigdon becomes a mother, because he "conceived." So after all there is more than one mind, it must be the child of Father Solomon Spaulding, and Mother Sidney Rigdon. What wonderful webs these wise ones weave to escape accepting the plain truths in this the coming forth of God's work. Clark Braden says the Book of Mormon is the result of one mind. David B. Dungan, a minister of the same church with Braden, and as good a scholar, and a better debater, stated in a discussion, during April, 1880, at Clear Creek, Nebraska, that he could clearly trace the scholarly writings of the refined Rev. Solomon Spaulding, as also the religious zeal and lofty enthusiasm of Sidney Rigdon, as well as the bungling, blundering drivel of Joseph Smith. Great minds will differ. But "from the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," and "by their fruits ye shall know them." Elder W. H. Hardman, Pastor of Christian Church at Glenwood, Iowa, explaining the style of Braden in debate, told me "that he never made a joint with a tenet saw, but always used a rip saw." I added, "And a gouge," and he replied, "Yes, and with a gouge." My opinion is, that as a rule the ministers of the Christian Church will refuse to endorse Braden, especially when we shall use it.

The prospect for a large crop throughout this State was never better. Nearly all of the corn is out of danger from the frost. Politics is dividing the time and attention of the people somewhat to the hindrance of our labor in the vineyard for the Master.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

PITTSBURGH, Crawford Co., Kan.,
September, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Our conference with the Columbus Branch passed off last Saturday and Sunday harmoniously, with but little exception. I baptized three. On Sunday, two weeks before, a good family of two was baptized at Pleasant View Branch, Bro. J. Thomas officiating; and also a week or two before that, a good promising man was baptized in Elk county, Bro. Otto Baumgartle officiating.

In company with my son, I made a tour in July and August through Cherokee, Labette, Montgomery, Elk and Butler counties, doing all the good we could for the work we love above all else. My health has not been the best since I returned. Am improving, and hope to be fit for service soon. Bro. F. C. Warnky paid us a successful visit. Come again. The local ministry is deserving great credit in this district for untiring efforts to spread the truth. I think it is safe to say, that the work is in a fair condition.

About ten o'clock on the night of the 4th inst., I, and one of my sons, were called upon to go to Pittsburg, five and a half miles, to administer to a sick child that the doctor had given up to die at twelve that night. We arrived half an hour before the set time, and found a little child eleven months old, with nothing to indicate life but a little breath. His body was nearly all wasted away by disease. A number of kind hearted ladies had gathered together to sit with the anxious parents to watch the departing breath. When waiting for our arrival, the anxious father went down town, and begged the doctor to come and see the child once more; but he said, "It's of no use, it would take a miracle to make that child to live past midnight." But it did live! We proceeded to explain our faith and the order of the Church, and to administer in the name of the Lord; and glory be to His name, the child opened its eyes, which it had not done for three days, sat up erect, and took nourishment, and those present shouted for joy at what their eyes beheld. The doctor called the next morning and said, "This is a miracle; for the child is doing fine." I saw the child on the 11th inst., and it was improving as fast as nature could build up the body that was so badly reduced by disease.

COLUMBUS, Kansas,

Bro. Joseph:—It is hard for me to sit up and write, as I have been very sick for a few days, but I am a little better. Pray for me, for I feel that unless I get strength, I can not last long. Our conference was a good one. All seemed to enjoy the good Spirit. The brethren were blessed with great liberty in preaching the word. We had the pleasure of having Bro. F. C. Warnky with us, and he ably presented the word to the good of all. Our young Elders are becoming a power in the hand of God in presenting the word. Bro. John Davis, son of J. T., preached here Saturday night and Sunday with great liberty. Our branch is endeavoring to keep the faith.

Ever praying for the advancement of the work, I remain your fellow laborer,

CLAY CENTER, Clay Co., Kan.,
September 16th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—On the 16th of last month I left home for Renick, Mo., to attend a public discussion to be held between Elder George Hicklin of the Latter Day Saints, and S. S. Norton of the (so called) Church of Christ. I stopped off at Davis City, Iowa, preaching on Sunday and Monday evening, with fair success. The debate at Renick lasted three evenings, commencing on the 20th. At the close our people felt well and hopeful, and confirmed in the "faith once delivered to the Saints." Mr. Norton, the Evangelist, is regarded as a man of first-class ability as a debater and preacher. He seems to be well educated, well read, and he is favored with a very retentive memory. He has an exalted opinion of his own ability, (Braden like), as may be seen from a remark made in his first speech. "You people know my memory; I do not have to carry about a library with me." It was made apparent, too, that he has had a large practice in the use of sophistry, or that he possesses great natural ability in that direction. After the close of the debate, and through the courtesy of our Methodist friends, I spoke on Sunday afternoon, and on Monday evening. The Lord was with us, and the effect was good. I am truly glad that we men of ordinary ability are only required to tell a plain, straight story. We have neither strength, of body nor mind to traverse the devious ways in which too many of our pulpit orators move. I arrived home on the 27th of August, being compelled to leave the field on account of ill health.

September 6th and 7th, attended the Decatur District Conference, at Davis City. Brethren Blair and Gurley were there, who on Sunday, presented to us words of truth and instruction. I spoke on Saturday evening. Monday, Tuesday, and the greater portion of Wednesday were occupied in making the journey from Davis City to this place; a long, hot and trying journey for one in my condition. Bro. J. C. Foss, whom I had requested to meet me at Clay Center, came with me from Blue Rapids. We had an overland trip of about thirty-five miles.

Since our arrival here we have been largely engaged on an important, but very unpleasant affair, which has perplexed some, and destroyed the peace of others for some time in the past. Surely, every day's experience teaches that it is necessary for us to try, with all our might, to be wise and good. No wonder that God, who is infinite in love, should command us, in tones of thunder, to repent of, and abstain from sin.

Bro. Foss and myself spoke to the Saints and people on Sunday last, and I talked to the Saints a little while last night, at our special business meeting. There is a good people here.

If my health will permit, I shall try to do some labor here and elsewhere, before leaving the State; but of late my condition has been so peculiar, that I had seriously thought that the end of my ministerial work had come.

Yours in hope,
J. R. LAMBERT.

BELLAIR, Illinois,
September 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. George Montague has been with us, and staid just long enough to revive our spiritual strength, and get the people in this community somewhat interested, and then had to pass on to his field of labor, and leave us as sheep without a shepherd. His stay with us was truly a season of rejoicing, as we had not heard the sound of the true gospel for some six years, save what we got through the Herald. Brother George baptized three while he was with us, my sister, her husband, and my oldest son. I pray that his effort here may be followed up by some other good Elder, so that the seed that he sowed may be watered and bring forth fruit meet for repentance.

Ever praying for the welfare of those in the one faith,
O. S. GOODIN.

BELLS.

THE invention of bells is attributed to Polonius, Bishop of Nola, Campania, about the year 400. They were first introduced into churches as a defense against thunder and lightning; they were first put up in Croyland Abbey, Lincolnshire, in 945. In the eleventh century, and later, it was the custom to baptize them in the churches before they were used. The curfew bell was established in 1078. It was rung at eight in the evening, when people were obliged to put out their fires and candles. The custom was abolished in 1100. Bellmen were appointed in London in 1556, to ring the bells at night, and cry out, "Take care of your fire and candle; be charitable to the poor, and pray for the dead."

September 12th.—There are now 19,000 French soldiers in Tonquin.

Italy has established quarantine against the cholera on the French frontier. King Humbert has given $80,000 in relief to the cholera sufferers at Naples. The condition of affairs at Naples continued to improve throughout last night. Wooden huts are building to shelter the poor and sick. The apprehended meat famine has been averted and the strike of the butchers has been settled. Public assistance is given to small dealers who have been ruined by the epidemic. The shops close at four o'clock. The city everywhere presents a mournful appearance. A strong gloom prevails. King Humbert declines to leave the city. As King Humbert was passing the prison yesterday the inmates raised a loud shout praying to be set at liberty. Among those dangerously ill with the cholera is a son of King Kalakaua of the Sandwich Islands. The official bulletin of the ravages of the cholera during the last twenty-four hours, in various parts of Italy, is as follows:

William W. Astor, the American Minister to Italy, has subscribed $1,000 to the fund for the relief of the cholera sufferers.

The establishment of local quarantine or lazaretto is forbidden throughout Spain, except by express authority of the Government. The cholera is not spreading. Two children died at the lazaretto today. The disease is suspected to have been cholera. At Elche eight fresh cases and four deaths have been reported since the last account, and at Noveldo seven fresh cases.

Later dispatches confirm the report of the substantial victory of the Mudir of Dongola at Ambukol over the rebels from Kordofan. Recent advices report El Mandi in South Kordofan with an army of 14,000, and that a detachment of 4,000 has been sent to reinforce the army besieging Khartoum.

September 13th.—Mr. John Morley, one of the most able and honest of the English Radical members of parliament, advises a dissolution in January and an appeal to the country on the issue of the abolition of the House of Lords.

King Humbert is now the idol of Italy on account of visits to the cholera-infected slums of Naples. The people admire his courage, and praise his thoughtfulness and zeal in behalf of his people. Wherever he goes he is received by the people most cordially.

A very bad spirit is manifested by the European Continental press towards England. The French newspapers daily denounce the British, the Russian journals indulge in very serious threats, and the German press eulogizes Bismarck for his colonization policy, which is avowedly hostile to England.

The report of the ravages of the cholera in Spanish towns for the last twenty-four hours is as follows:

	Fresh cases.	Deaths.
Novelda	4	2
Elche	12	4
Monforte	6	3
Andor	1	..
Lerida	1	3

Advices from the Pyrenees report six deaths today from cholera.

The bulletin of the ravages of cholera in Italy during the last twenty-four hours is as follows:

	Fresh cases.	Deaths.
Naples (city)	872	395
Naples (province)	32	10

Caserta	6	4
Turin	4	2
Genoa	51	..
Salerno	4	..

Cuneo	6	..
Cremona	2	..

Single cases are reported from various towns. Spezia is still a centre of the epidemic in the Province of Ferrara. Fifty-one cases are reported in that province, of which thirty-five were in Spezia. The Emperor of Austria has telegraphed the King of Italy his admiration for the devotion shown his plague-stricken people. There were more religious processions today by the lower classes, which ended in the participants drinking to excess. The Deputies bitterly denounced the processions. A rumor having spread that a person had arrived at Foggia from Naples who had been seized with cholera, the people flocked to the railway to prevent others leaving the train. The troops dispersed the mob.

The attack of the cholera on Italy is now admitted to be far severer than that on France. Almost incredible stories are told of the rapidity with which it has carried off its victims. In some families four or five members have been swept off together. An old woman and a boy falling together in the street in Naples, were both taken up dead; a lady seized with vomiting while at mass died on reaching home. In fact, death in many cases has occurred within ten minutes of the first symptoms. Many persons have died within three or four hours, and the fatal cases have rarely lasted more than five or six hours. The plague has led, according to all accounts, to a revival of religious feeling so strong that the Archbishop himself has had to discourage religious processions as tending to increase disease. The gambling spirit has also received a great impetus. Thus one day fifty-two mothers rushed to a school and took away fifty-one children, and everybody played these numbers in the Government lottery, and all won. Another day the numbers 3, 4, and 22 corresponded to current events in the streets, and were played extensively, and all three came out. The result was a loss of 2,000,000 francs by the Government, a general debauch by the lucky inhabitants, and a violent increase of cholera.

September 14th.—The antagonism in Belgium between the Clericals and Liberals is becoming uncontrollable and threatens to result in civil war. The Brussels newspapers are flooded with letters from sanguinary Liberals urging the press to publish a signal for a rising against the Clerical party, and the writers promise that when the tocsin is sounded there will be no lack of armed men to enforce the demands of the people. Many members of the nobility, although nominally Catholics, are full of indignation against the Clerical programme, which they look upon as tending to subvert their established rights.

It is reported that the French operations in Tonquin and along the Chinese coast are only part of a grand scheme which includes within its scope the establishment of a strong French Colonial Empire, stretching from the Chinese Sea to British Burmah, and challenging English commercial supremacy in the Far East. The entire Annamese peninsula, including Cambodia, is now substantially in French possession, and the further plan of their campaign has already been announced to include the large islands of Formosa and Hainan. These are but separate steps leading up to the fulfillment of their main purpose, which is the acquisition of Siam, a result which would complete the establishment of the French Indo-China.

Many persons are still dying in Hermasillo, Mexico, of yellow-fever. The presence of this disease at a point so far inland is somewhat remarkable. The disease has also appeared at Tepic, being carried there from San Blas. Tepic is over 2,000 feet above the level of the sea and considered out of the way of yellow-fever zone.

At Pisaaflores, Mexico, the drouth has ruined the crops. Corn has raised to the prohibitive price of 19 cents a pint, and beans to 50 cents. Many families have been forced to go out into the forests, where they live live on herbs and fruits. Others substitute for corn a plant much used by the Indians called chamal, but this is very dangerous, as, if it is cooked too little it is poisonous, while if it is allowed to get overdone it becomes a powerful purgative, making those who eat it deadly sick. Rains, however, have recently fallen in this section, and there is a cheering outlook for a late crop.

So great is the drouth in the State of Geranajerate, Mexico, that at San Felipe, which is in the midst of a finely-irrigated country, the people are suffering from want of water. The springs that supply the irrigating ditches have dried up. Such a thing was never known before.

A rebellious disposition is being again manifested in the Turkish provinces adjoining Greece. A force of 1,000 Turkish troops has been ordered to the frontier.

Advices from China state that the Chinese have no intention of blockading the Woo Sung River, on which Shanghai is situated, unless the French make an attack. Hundreds of stone-laden boats are in position to be sunk on approach of the French fleet. It is believed the neutral Powers will seriously object to closing the river unless formal declaration of war shall have been previously made.

There have been fifteen deaths from cholera in Toulon during the last two days. In the Department of Herault there have been fifty cases and thirty deaths.

Following is a bulletin showing the ravages of cholera in Italy the last twenty-four hours: Naples (city), 643 fresh cases, 237 deaths; Naples (province), thirty fresh cases, ten deaths; Caserta, fourteen fresh cases, four deaths; Cuneo, twenty-one fresh cases, thirteen deaths; Genoa, twenty-five fresh cases, twelve deaths; ten other provinces (names not given), seventeen fresh cases, ten deaths.

In the City of Lerida a fatal case of sporadic cholera has occurred. One suspected case is reported in the suburb of Barcelona, and several suspicious cases in the Province of Tarragona, six of which proved fatal.

Maj. Kitchener telegraphs from Debbeh that the Chief Clerk of the Government at Darfour has arrived by way of Berber. He reports 2,300 persons at Berber. There is a rebel garrison there of 3,200 men, armed with rifles. Aboo Hegel, the Chief of the Cobatal tribe, has 6,000 armed men. The Mahdi's forces extend as far south as Ambukol. Most of the tribes, however, are growing tired of the continuance of misrule, and are inclined to rejoin the Government. It is reported that Gen. Gordon has taken two islands near Sennaar. The Sheiks of the Dengli tribe have repeatedly defeated El Mahdi. It is said all the Sheiks on the Abyssinian frontier have joined the Mahdi.

It is reported that five inches of snow fell at Spring Hill, Cumberland County, Nova Scotia, Sunday, and two inches at Truro.

Jews in Jerusalem were until lately a few hundred families who had gone there to die in the land of their fathers. Now there are at least 50,000, or about one-third of the population. They devote themselves almost exclusively to mercantile occupations. The newcomers are mostly from Bulgaria, Russia, and Hungary.

At Independence, Mo., Christopher Mann, the oldest man in Missouri, celebrated his 110th birthday. His wife, aged 60, his children, grandchildren, and a large number of friends surrounded him. He is feeble, though healthy, and is almost insensible to his surroundings, but when his mind turns to his earlier manhood it clears up, and he talks fluently of his early life in Virginia, later in Kentucky with Daniel Boone, and of the early portion of the forty years at his present home. He was a strong supporter of the Union in the late unpleasantness. He has been a member of the Hardshell Baptist Church for ninety years.

September 17th.—It is believed in London that England will permanently occupy the Sudan. Egyptian securities have advanced in price in consequence of this belief.

Most extraordinary precautions were taken to insure the safety of the three Emperors of Germany, Austria, and Russia, on their routes to the place of conference in Poland. The police were apprised that dynamite would be placed in the coal of the locomotive; the coal was overhauled, and all the passengers on the train were carefully examined. No explosive was discovered.

Advices from Wady Halfa state that the steamer Massifkhir has successfully passed the second cataract. Men volunteer eagerly for the camel corps which Gen. Lord Wolseley has given orders to be formed. Monday 200 Hadendowas attacked twenty policemen and fifty friendly Arabs, the convoy of provisions and thirty women to Suakin. The Hadendowas were completely defeated. This success has had an inspiring effect on the friendly tribes. Yesterday 2,000 of the Amamar tribe attacked the Hadendowas and after an engagement of four hours succeeded in dislodging them, killing seventy and capturing many arms and camels. The loss of the Amamar was thirty killed and wounded.

Two thousand French troops landed to-day at Kinpai Pass, on the Min River below Foo Chow, and attacked the Chinese. The latter were defeated with heavy loss, and are in full retreat.

Fifty-two new cases of cholera and forty-one deaths were reported in Spain.

There were 581 new cases of cholera in Italy yesterday and 321 deaths. In the City of Naples there were 265 deaths and 463 new cases. Reports from sixteen towns in the South of France make a total of thirty deaths from cholera during the last twenty-four hours.

Whole towns were swept away. It is believed that fully 70,000 persons perished. It was feared a pestilence would follow.

The capital stock of the new society is 500,000 marks, or $119,000, divided into twenty syndicate shares of 25,000 marks each. All of these shares have now been subscribed for, and the financial backing of the new enterprise is assured. An eminent Hamburg merchant has been appointed manager of the colonies to be established along the Cameroons River in Upper Guinea, and a large trade is expected. Prince Bismarck echoes the commendation of the Kaiser on the development of the spirit of colonial enterprise among the Germans, and has expressed his personal interest in the society's plans.

N. C. Thompson's bank at Rockford, Ill., suspended September 15. The liabilities are said to be about $750,000. The failure is said to be due to inability to collect for agricultural implements sent out from the Thompson Manufacturing Company of Rockford. The suspension has caused much excitement. Most of the depositors are workingmen.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the corn trade, says: Good progress in the later harvest was made the last week. The dry weather was favorable for threshing. Deliveries of wheat by farmers are on the increase. The price of wheat declined 1 shilling a quarter during the week and flour fell 6 pence. Sales of English wheat for the week, 86,053 quarters at 34 shillings, against 67,665 quarter at 41 shillings 8 pence the corresponding week last year. The foreign wheat market is depressed, and prices still further declined. In the off coast trade thirteen cargoes arrived, six were sold, seven were withdrawn, and six remain. Trade forward is growing worse. Thirty-one shillings a quarter is accepted for No. 2 red winter wheat, flat. Maize in London is scarce and steady. There's no mixed American or spot. The miners' strike in the Pittsburg coal district is being aggressively maintained. The mine-owners find it almost impossible to find men to work at less than the strikers demand. It is not improbable that a compromise may be agreed on. It is reported that some of the operators are already employing union men at the price they have asked.

A CHEERFUL VIEW.

"How dismal you look!" said a bucket to his companion as they were going to a well.

"Ah!" replied the other, "I was reflecting on the uselessness of our being filled; for let us go away ever so full, we always come back empty."

"Dear me, how strange to look at it in that way!" said the bucket. "How I enjoy the thought that however empty we come, we always go away full. Only look at it in that light, and you will be as cheerful as I am."

THE CRUCIFIXION, AND CONSEQUENT ATONEMENT.

SPIRITUAL wickedness is not confined to the barbarous nations and clans of earth, the swarms of infidels, the avowed sinners, or the willful presumptions of orthodoxy. This bane of human happiness invades the pales of the church. It comes along, all unsuspected, and with suavity and apparent humility the warp and woof of death are woven in the professed plan of life. To deny or impair the necessity of the cross of calvary is, to my mind, a heresy of the first magnitude. It is a severing of the chain cable of the soul, and treading down the mercies of God's dear Son. This deadly leaven, I am sorry to think or say, is at work in the hearts of some officials, and perhaps a few of the unsuspecting laity. Some of these professed servants parade their pet theories and private views, around the hearthstone, out on the cross-roads, down to the school-house, over in the village and throughout the cities. Now and then a wiseacre mounts the rostrum, with his batch of gauzy sophistry, while others are not content till they tarnish the columns of our church periodicals. We will not, however heap up or hurl forth many innuendoes, but proceed to labor the subject in great candor, and with all the charity we can command.

The necessity of the "Infinite Atonement" is set forth so copiously and plainly by inspired penmen, that it appears to be presuming on the ignorance of the reader to write it up. Had not adverse views been generated, our time and talent would doubtless flow in another channel at this time. "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." All have sinned and come short of the glory of God; hence they need the great Physician, with his crimson antidote. The apostle's authority, in regard to the death of the Lamb of God, was the authentic word of the Lord, and the aforesaid word was a faithful representative of the divine mind.

Since taking up my pen I glanced over some of the recent numbers of the Herald, and find on pages 251 and 252 of the current volume, a lucid article from the hand of T. Ruth. That production strikes me as solid facts, or as a "nail in a sure place." The wise man thought there was nothing new under the sun, therefore should we revamp some of the evidences or introduce kindred texts, we trust it will not be regarded an upardonable piracy of letters.

Bro. J. F. McDowell's "little thinking" has kicked up "the dust of superstition." "The nobler thought" has the claim of being novel and unique, if nothing more. By examining on pages 331 and 332, you will observe that the whole scope and drift of the brother's effort is an evasive tirade against what he graciously styles "butchery," "murder," &c. He has made the Utopian discovery, that "divest it of all objectionable features," or "God's wisdom" is at fault. The flagrant mistake that this "little thinking" has wrought, is the premise that Jesus was the sole cause of his own death, or suicided, which would evidently be homicide. He kindly furnished some quotations which show the strange attitude in the person of himself v. s. the one that held the keys of the kingdom. See again Acts 3:15, 5:30.

We will now strive to ascertain the attitude of the Omnipotent One, as touching the sacrifice that purifies the conscience: "O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done."

"The Son of Man goeth as it is written of him." "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." "Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him, he hath put him to grief."

In the Inspired Translation Matthew 27:54, we have the words of the Messiah:

"Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, saying, Father, it is finished, thy will is done, yielded up the ghost." "The Son of Man goeth as it is determined." "Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God." "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to arise from the dead." "Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." "Lo, this only have I found that God made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions."—Eccl. 7:29.

Some of these inventors have claimed that it is the life of Christ that saves, while the manner and cause of his death are altogether indifferent.

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up." The writer of this article seems to imagine that "shedding of blood" was in Gethsemane. The phrase "as it were," in his favorite quotation, is a positive denial that our Savior even sweat blood while praying three several times.

It is not in good taste to use the words "blood" and "life" as invariable synonyms. A very few examples of this substitution, will show the fallacy of the assertion: "For the bodies of those beasts whose 'life' (?) is brought into the sanctuary by the high priests for sins, are burned without the camp."—Heb. 13:11. "And almost all things are by the law purged with 'life,' and without the shedding of 'life' there is no remission."—Heb. 9:22.

When we partake of the Lord's supper, the loaf represents the body, and the wine typifies the shed blood of the Anointed. The God that was manifest in the flesh purchased his church with his blood. Acts 20:28. Please do not think for a moment that death by disease would have been sufficient. From the very fact that Infinite wisdom devised and ordained the vicarious atonement it is self evident that it was the best and the only adequate plan to redeem a fallen world, shorn of all strength.

To speak derogatorily of the precious blood of the immaculate Lamb, especially after one has come to the light and had fellowship with the holy brethren, is a sin unto death; for he hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing. (Heb. 10:29). Inasmuch as the Lord Jehovah is both able and willing to save all that will wash their robes, let us not only be cheerfully submissive, but "praise the bridge that carries us over." We are the clay and he is the potter. We are the workmanship and he is the superior mechanic. His thoughts and deeds are more remote from our fleshly devices and acts, than Alcyone, the grand hub of the Pleiades, is from Jack-with-the-lantern, as he takes his nocturnal round in the neglected graveyard, or the wild morass.

It appears that Jesus had to grow in body and in mind. Because he assumed our nature, it is quite apparent that he was subject to hunger, thirst, bodily pain and anguish of spirit. If there was not a possibility of his falling from grace, or divine favor, it has been urged by able thinkers that there could be no temptation for him and hence no victor's wreath to encircle his brow. Satan and his human emissaries spread their temptations before our sympathetic Savior. He yielded never; therefore we have the bright morning star to pilot us through the breakers and whirlpools. He took on him the seed of Abraham; "Wherefore in all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people." Heb. 2:16, 17. Our mediator can be "touched with the feeling of our infirmities," to such complete extent, that when we pine in sickness, or waste away in prison, and receive mercies from the hand of an alien, it inwardly secures the plaudit, "Ye have done it unto me." When Saul of Tarsus was religiously angry, belching out threatenings, persecuting in distant cities, and making havoc of the church, that sweet restraining voice exclaimed, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me."

The exclusive and special salvation is obtainable alone in the kingdom of God. "Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it," &c. The universal redemption brings all mankind before the judgment seat, when each and every one will be ranked in his own order. We are in no wise responsible for the decree of death that is over mortals, and a resurrection comes to sinner and saint alike. "Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are his at his coming," is the order yet to be, whereas, as touching the past, "The graves were opened, and the bodies of the Saints which slept, arose, who were many, and came out of their graves after his resurrection, and went into the Holy City, and appeared unto many."

Christ has atoned for original sin, which separated man from his maker, and brings us back in the judgment. When we are brought before the bar of God, we have to give an account for actual or personal transgression, unless we have heard, accepted and lived according to "The faith." If so be then the blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sins. The precious blood renders divine justice propitious; justifies the recipient, cleanses from sin, overcomes the old serpent, and redeems every persevering Saint of the most high God.—See Rom. 3:25; 5:9; Rev. 1:5; 12:11; 1 Peter 1:18, 19.

It gives spiritual vitality to the new born subject, as a member connects with the living head, and points back to the cross and forward to the crown.—See John 6:54; 1 Cor. 10:16; 11:26. The above triplet of texts refers to the power of the eucharist; and we will dismiss this part of the subject by observing that a person must be born again ere he can discern the Lord's body, or reasonably hope to partake anew in the everlasting kingdom.—John 3:3-5; 1 Cor. 11:29; Mark 14:25; 2 Peter 1:11.

These dissensions upon the thoroughly established and well defined faith of the body, make a bad side show, and work all kinds of internal confusion and corruption. In the early rise of the Church, the engine of authority would have been brought to bear, to quash all such wild, speculative vagaries as we are now called upon to consider. Priestly domination and servile obedience have brought about a liberty of thought and action akin to anarchy. One extreme is generally succeeded by another; but, surely, the right is most always found on medium ground. This fortuitous equalizer challenges our admiration, commands our respect, demands our support, and sincerely craves our jealous care. This "golden mean" "rule of action," is as soft as silk and as strong as steel; or ever merciful, yet firm as adamant. If we have spoken too plainly, or caused a thrill of sadness to jar the heart strings, we beg pardon.

"The law of kindness" has been in our heart, and the superlative good of all concerned has been our only aim. While I regard the feelings of my brethren tenderly, I would sooner ruffle their spirits, if perchance they may be provoked to love and good works, than to compromise a principle of right. Let pure charity assert her realm and reign supreme in your inner being. "My son, despine not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary at his correction. for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, even as a father a son in whom he delighteth."—Prov. 3:11, 12.

But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world. 1 Cor. 11:32. Please read, on this point, a portion of Hebrews 12 chapter. O how I intensely desire the affiliation and cooperation; the unfeigned love, and fervent prayers of every loyal son and virtuous daughter of modern Israel.

"But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1:7.

"Great peace have they which love thy law, and nothing shall offend them."—Psalms 119:165.

Great God preserve thy church as the apple of thine eye, and make her broad, deep, immovable, imperishable platform evident to a candid, investigating world. Let righteousness and mercy sweep through the land, ere justice and judgment will surprise the nations.

FEET WASHING.

EDITOR HERALD:—In Herald of January 19th, 1884, first page, we find the following question asked: "Why is not feet washing practiced in the Reorganized Church?" The answer given is as follows:

There has been no occasion for it, and no command to make it a church rite; any more than there has been for the institution and practice of the 'holy kiss.'

Again, in Herald dated March 8th, 1884, page 146, we read:

"Feet washing was not instituted or commanded as an ordinance of the gospel, and having general application to the body of the people, as a sacrament or rite. If practiced by the Savior, it was at the one time only, and among the twelve disciples only, as an act teaching them the necessity of humility among themselves as ministers; and as a means to overcome the jealousy even then existing among them. When the church was reinstated in 1830, feet washing was not introduced as an ordinance, nor practiced among the members; but was on some occasions had among the ministry, as the history shows; but we know of no rule adopting it as a specific ordinance and binding on the Saints. That any of the quorums may, in their own assemblies, adopt feet washing as an ordinance for some specified object, we believe; but do not see how it can be binding, from any command of God now known in the Scripture."

That feet washing as an ordinance is not applicable to all the members of the church we admit; there being no proof from either ancient or modern revelation that it was practiced or intended to be practiced, except among the ministry. But that feet washing is an ordinance of divine appointment, and for a specified object, and commanded to be observed in its time and place, we think can be clearly shown from the word of God as accepted by the Reorganized Church.

We will refer to and quote from the Doctrine and Covenants, concerning an organization that was commanded to be established in an early day, after the first establishment of the church, and with which, among other things, the washing of feet was connected:

"Remember the great and last promise which I have made unto you; cast away your idle thoughts and excess of laughter far from you; tarry ye in this place, and call a solemn assembly, even of those who are the first laborers in this last kingdom. . . . Behold, I will hasten my work in its time; and I will give unto you who are the first laborers in this last kingdom, a commandment, that you assemble yourselves together, and organize yourselves; and sanctify yourselves; yea purify your hearts, and cleanse your hands and your feet before me, that I may make you clean; that I may testify unto your Father, and your God, and my God, that you are clean from the blood of this wicked generation, that I may fulfill this promise, this great and last promise which I have made unto you, when I will.

"Also, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall continue in prayer and fasting from this time forth. And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand."—Doctrine and Covenants 85:19, 21.

"Therefore, verily I say unto you, my friends, call your solemn assembly, as I have commanded you; and as all have not faith, seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study, and also by faith. Organize yourselves; prepare every needful thing, and establish a house, even a house of prayer, a house of fasting, a house of faith, a house of learning, a house of glory, a house of order, a house of God; that your incomings may be in the name of the Lord; that your outgoings may be in the name of the Lord; that all your salutations may be in the name of the Lord, with uplifted hands unto the Most High.

"Therefore, cease from all your light speeches, from all laughter, from all your lustful desires, from all your pride and lightmindedness, and from all your wicked doings. Appoint among yourselves a teacher, and let not all be spokesmen at once, but let one speak at a time, and let all listen to his sayings, that when all have spoken, that all may be edified of all, and that every man may have an equal privilege. . . .

And again, the order of the house prepared for the presidency of the school of the prophets, established for their instruction in all things that are expedient for them, even for all the officers of the church, or, in other words, those who are called to the ministry in the church, beginning at the High Priests, even down to the Deacons; and this shall be the order of the house of the presidency of the school: He that is appointed to be president, or teacher, shall be found standing in his place in the house which shall be prepared for him."—Doctrine and Covenants 85:36-39.

"And again, verily I say unto thy brethren Sidney Rigdon, and Frederick G. Williams, their sins are forgiven them also and they are accounted as equal with thee in holding the keys of this last kingdom; as also through your administration the keys of the school of the prophets, which I have commanded to be organized, that thereby they may be perfected in their ministry for the salvation of Zion, and of the nations of Israel, and of the Gentiles, as many as will believe, that through your administration, they may receive the word, and through their administration, the word may go forth unto the ends of the earth."—Doctrine and Covenants 87:3.

In section 92 of Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord makes complaint that the church had "not considered the great commandment in all things, that I have given unto you, concerning the building of mine house, for the preparation wherewith I design to prepare mine apostles to prune my vineyard for the last time." He says some were "walking in darkness at noonday; and for this cause I gave unto you a commandment, that you should call your solemn assembly; that your fastings and your mourning might come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. * * * Yea, verily I say unto you, I gave unto you a commandment, that you should build an house, in the which house I design to endow those whom I have chosen with power from on high, for this is the promise of the Father unto you; therefore I commanded you to tarry, even as mine apostles at Jerusalem; nevertheless my servants sinned a very grievous sin; and contentions arose in the school of the prophets, which was very grievous unto me, saith your Lord; therefore I sent them forth to be chastened." He then repeats that it is his "will" that they "should build an house" and if they "kept his commandments they should have power to build it; but if they kept not his commandments the love of the Father should not continue with them; therefore they should walk in darkness." He then gives some instructions in regard to the dimensions of the house, and what portion thereof was to be used for specified purposes. "The higher part of the inner court to be dedicated unto me for the school of mine apostles." This "school of the apostles" undoubtedly being the same as the "school of the prophets."

In section 94 of Doctrine and Covenants the Lord speaks "concerning the school in Zion," and that he was "well pleased" that there should be "a school in Zion;" and says "that it is his will that a house should be built unto him in the land of Zion like unto the pattern which had been given," and that it should be built speedily by the tithing of his people, saying, "Behold this is the tithing and the sacrifice which I, the Lord, require at their hands, that there may be an house built unto me for the salvation of Zion; for a place of thanksgiving for all Saints, and for a place of instruction for all those who are called to the work of the ministry, in all their several callings and offices that they may be perfected in the understanding of their ministry; in theory; in principle and doctrine; in all things pertaining to the kingdom of God on the earth, the keys of which kingdom have been conferred upon you."

In the revelation give January 19th, 1841, in relation to the building of a temple at Nauvoo, the Lord declared:

"And again, verily I say unto you, how shall your washings be acceptable unto me, except ye perform them in an house which ye have built unto my name? For, for this cause I commanded Moses that he should build a tabernacle, that they should bear it with them in the wilderness, and to build an house in the land of promise, that those ordinances might be revealed, which had been hid from before the world was; therefore verily I say unto you, that your anointings and your washings, and your baptisms for the dead, and your solemn assemblies, and your memorials for your sacrifices, by the sons of Levi, and for your oracles in your most holy places, wherein you receive conversations, and your statutes and judgments, for the beginning of the revelations and foundation of Zion, and for her glory, honor and endowment of all her municipalities; are ordained by the ordinance of my holy house, which my people are always commanded to build unto my holy name.

"And verily I say unto you, let this house be built unto my name, that I may reveal my ordinances therein, unto my people; for I deign to reveal unto my church things which have been kept hid from before the foundation of the world; things that pertain to the dispensation of the fullness of times; and I will show unto my servant Joseph all things pertaining to this house, and the priesthood thereof."—Doctrine and Covenants 107: 12, 13.

"Behold, verily I say unto you, this is a sample unto you for a salutation to one another in the house of God, in the school of the prophets. [Please read the five preceding paragraphs of this section.] And ye are called to do this by prayer and thanksgiving, as the Spirit shall give utterance, in all your doings, in the house of the Lord, in the school of the prophets, that it may become a sanctuary, a tabernacle of the Holy Spirit to your edification. And ye shall not receive any among you into this school, save he is clean from the blood of this generation; and he shall be received by the ordinance of the washing of feet, for unto this end was the ordinance of the washing of feet instituted. And again, the ordinance of washing of feet is to be administered by the president, or presiding elder of the church. It is to be commenced with prayer; and after partaking of bread and wine, he is to gird himself, according to the pattern given in the thirteenth chapter of John's testimony concerning me. Amen."—Doc. & Cov. 85:44-46.

From the foregoing quotations it seems to be clearly revealed, that it was the mind and will of the Lord that there should exist in the church an organization known as "the school of the prophets," a solemn assembly wherein all of the ministry from the high priest to the deacon could assemble and be partakers of the blessings to be conferred through the establishment of this organization. That it was to be a place where all the ministry could be "instructed in all their several callings and offices; that they might be perfected in the understanding of their ministry, in theory, in principle, and in doctrine; in all things pertaining to the Kingdom of God on the earth." And that this "perfection of the ministry was really necessary for the "salvation of Zion," and not only Zion, but also the nations of Israel and the Gentiles. And we believe that this perfection of the ministry which was to be accomplished through the medium of the "School of the Prophets," was the endowment which was promised to be given to the ministry, in order to prepare them for the work which was required at their hands. See Doc. & Cov. 92; 102:3, 10.

From the language contained in the quotations we have made, the evidence seems conclusive, that the Lord designs that the place for holding the school of the prophets shall be in a temple, or a house built expressly unto his name, by his command and according to the pattern he has given.

Section 85, paragraphs 45 and 46 of Doctrine and Covenants as above quoted, we think contains no ambiguity as to who is entitled to membership in the school of the prophets, nor as to the manner of their admittance into the same. And we think that therein we find conclusive proof, that feet washing is an ordinance of Divine appointment for a specified purpose, and also who shall administer and how shall it be administered. If then, as is expressly declared in sec. 85, par. 45, Doctrine and Covenants, the ordinance of feet washing was instituted for the purpose of admitting individuals into the school of the prophets, can we not reasonably conclude, that on the occasion of the institution of feet washing, as recorded in the New Testament, John, thirteenth chapter, that Christ did then and there organize the school of the prophets in the ancient church; and no doubt for the same purpose that he commanded the same to be organized in this dispensation; viz., for the purpose of perfecting the ministry for the work required at their hands. If then the school of the prophets was necessary in the ancient church, and also in the first organization of the latter day church—being expressly commanded of God,—then will we not reasonably have to conclude, that the school of the prophets will again be organized in the Reorganized Church, when the "house of God" is again fully "set in order," after the "dark and cloudy day" through which the Saints passed after the death of their prophet in 1844. And when the school of the prophets is again organized, then the washing of feet will have to be observed in order to fulfill the command of God, as written in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

Has the ministry of the Reorganization attained to the necessary perfection to carry the work to all the nations of the earth? If so, why was the revelation given a few years ago which says it is "not expedient that the elders of the first quorums be sent out of the land of America, until the work of the reorganization of my church be more fully established, and a greater unity of understanding between them be obtained." Could we be mistaken in concluding that when "the work of the reorganization" was "more fully established," that the reorganization of the school of the prophets would also be included in this work of reorganizing; for it is by and through the organization of the school of the prophets that the ministry are to become perfected for their work; and when perfected, there would doubtless be "a greater unity of understanding between them" than there is at present. Is not the inference justifiable, that the Lord, knowing the lack of "unity of understanding" among the ministry in regard to many things pertaining to the kingdom of God on the earth would be a serious obstacle in the way of the church presenting its claims to the nations of earth, and hence the revelation just referred to and quoted from.

Aside from the revelation just quoted from, the most superficial reader of the Herald can easily see that there is a great diversity of opinion among the ministry on many things pertaining to the doctrines and principles of the church, thus showing great imperfection, and proving the necessity of some means "of instruction for all those who are called to the work of the ministry, in all their several callings and offices; that they may be perfected in the understanding of their ministry, in theory, in principle and in doctrine; in all things pertaining to the Kingdom of God on the earth."

The Lord having provided a means for accomplishing certain purposes, he will expect us to use the means of his own appointing, and consequently we have every reason to believe, that the school of the prophets will be organized sooner or later for the purposes as set forth in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. And the manner of admitting members into the same is given in definite language, as we have already quoted.

Again, there are prophecies relating to temple building, which we believe are yet unfulfilled. And when a temple is built, in which to perform the ordinances belonging to the House of the Lord, and wherein our "washings and anointings" will be acceptable to the Lord, we expect to see an apartment of the temple set apart for the use of the school of the prophets, according to the pattern given by the Lord when he revealed his mind as to how to build a temple. And in that temple it will be in order to practice feet washing as an ordinance, by which individuals will be admitted as members into the school of the prophets; "for unto this end was the ordinance of the washing of feet instituted;" for thus it is written in the law and commandments of God, as revealed unto the church. Upon what grounds or authority "any of the quorums may in their own assemblies adopt feet washing as an ordinance for some specified object," other than the one specified in the Doctrine and Covenants, we do not know.

That the Spirit of Truth and the light of intelligence, may ever abide with and increase among the Saints, is the prayer of
JOSEPH FLORY.

JOSEPH SMITH ON INTEMPERANCE.

THERE is an old saying that straws show which way the wind blows; and in refutation of the low, vile charges made against Joseph the Palmyra prophet, I copy from his journal, under date of March 12th, 1836:

"I was informed to-day, that a man by the name of Clark froze to death last night, near this place, who was under the influence of ardent spirits. Oh, my God! how long will this monster, intemperance, find its victims on the earth? Methinks until the earth is swept with the wrath and indignation of God, and Christ's kingdom becomes universal. O come, Lord Jesus, and cut short thy work in righteousness."

The above is sufficient to indicate an opposition upon the part of Joseph to the baleful and soul degrading practices of those times. Add to the above the instruction given to the church as early as February 27th, 1833:

"That inasmuch as any man drinketh wine, or strong drink among you, behold, it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father."

There were numerous instances during the years 1834, 1835 and 1836, where persons were arraigned before the High Council on the charge of violating the "Word of Wisdom." If it were practicable to establish that any person or number of persons in the early rise of this church of Christ, were in the habit of using as a beverage, "wine" or "strong drink," it proves naught against the pure moral principle of the law given for the government of the whole membership; but would only reveal the human weakness of those thus guilty, in bringing shame upon the church, disgrace and ultimate ruin of both body and spirit upon themselves. A safe rule of interpreting the law and regulations of the church, and judgment upon the actions of any, is this: That which was wrong and disapproved fifty years ago, is still wrong; for the members of this church to make a practice of drinking "wine" or "strong drink," whether purchased or home made, save for sacramental purpose as provided in the revelation. One exception only would conscience admit of, the washing of the body and administering to those sick, who have need of help other than that furnished by faith. But the safest rule would be, touch not, taste not, handle not the deadly poison.

"TRAIN UP A CHILD IN THE WAY HE SHOULD GO."

THE force of this injunction is apparent to all who have been placed in the charge of children, either as parents or teachers, and to children who have felt the lack of having been thus trained, as well as those who have received and appreciated such training.

All parents love to see their children successful in life and have an honorable name among men. All teachers love to hear those who have been under their instruction spoken of as just and good. That all might be honored before men and in his sight who created them, was the object of man's creation. One should go in that way in which are enjoyed the greatest success and real, lasting satisfaction. A way is proved right by the effect produced by walking therein. There is a way in which a child should go, and in order thereto, he needs training in that direction. Few are those now being trained, who manifest such a way; and many are the sorrows experienced because of this, by parents and children. This should act as a prompter to us to be more diligent in training the coming generation.

There are many willing instruments to train the child into the way it should not go, and many times because the child has not had the proper training, it is led only in that way. Many are the associates with whom it must mingle, whose ways are perverse, and crooked; and by such the child is inclined, unless a strong trellis work of good instruction is its support. The people of God should be the most interested in the proper training of children. They should see the greater need of it, more perfectly understanding the perverseness of the present generation, and the powers at work to lead from the way of life. They, too, should have a better understanding of that way, and the benefits derived by walking therein. The trellis-work of God is given them to use, and they are expressly commanded to use it in the training of the little ones. "But I (the Lord) have commanded you to bring up your children in light and truth"—Doc. and Cov. p. 251, which command we find on page 200, par. 4. "For this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion," that is, that the children should be taught the doctrine of repentance, faith, baptism, and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, and to pray, and walk uprightly before the Lord." This is the way of life. The children's minds are flexible and as easily bent as the little twig. It is in youth that instruction will have the greatest effect. It is then that the most lasting impressions are made for good or evil. Many cite to little deeds of kindness, or expressions of love by some instructor or friend, as the key of their lives for good, whilst others to some unwise act or word, presented to them while young, that has brought them to some bad end. Every life helps to mould the career of the young around us. But there are those who are especially called to make impressions on the minds of the young for good—the parents and teachers; especially the parents and Sabbath School teachers of the church of Jesus Christ. Their acts and words make the deepest impressions, as it is to them the children are necessarily directed to look for good. If not to them, to whom should they look. When the child sees in the parent acts, they have a right to take the liberty to use those acts upon which to base their movements, whether they are right or wrong, wise or unwise. If it hears that parent speak, it has the God-given liberty to base its conversation thereupon, and to expect by so doing that it is in the right, because mother or father did so. The children expect Sabbath School teachers and workers to give such instructions, and manifest such examples as are right; and whether such instructions or examples are right or not, they make a lasting impression upon the lives of the children. The Sabbath School is next in importance to the family for the training of children. As has been wisely expressed, it is the nursery to the kingdom, in which the child should receive such instruction, both by word and example, as shall guide it in after life.

The Sabbath School should be nourished and strengthened. In it all, especially those who have children, should be much interested; and should lend what assistance they can to forward it, and make it powerful in establishing righteousness, and moulding lives of usefulness. We can do many things without command, but must bear in mind to abide those commands given, and seek in this way to fulfill them. We are not commanded to raise up Sabbath Schools nor how to conduct them, nor what must be brought into them for interest and instruction, though we are commanded to teach the children. God has left it to us to use our wisdom in all diligence to establish that which shall assist in carrying out this instruction. God has told us what to teach them, and hence we know what not to teach them. He has not told us what shall be the extent of the means we shall use, or the ways we shall devise; so it is in accordance with the spirit of the command to teach. Among the people of God it will be expected that the greatest exertions will be made to carry out the designs and purposes of God, and to watch the interests of the children with jealous care; for God is a jealous God that his precepts may be observed, and we receive the blessings, and our children, from heaven's rich storehouse. The children must be taught. Let us seek to establish the manner, the ways. Let our lives be of such a character as to make a good impression upon their lives. Let our words be pure and holy. Let the family be so ordered as to be an example to them when they shall take the place of husband or wife, father or mother. Let the parental instruction be such as to give them an understanding of the order of the church of Christ, and the way of entrance, that they may take the places that will be made vacant by our departure. Let the Sabbath School be made powerful in leading the young to Christ, and in the way of uprightness. Let us see to it if we are selected as officers or teachers in the Sabbath School, that we become approved workmen by learning our duty and doing it. Let us see to it that the children lack not such pure, instructive reading, as shall make good impressions on the minds of the young. A lack of this will drive the young to reading such matter as will be injurious to them; for they will read. Their minds are active, and if not fed on the bread of life, will be imbibing the poison of the age—wickedness and idolatry. The sooner the children of God become active in the way of teaching the young, the less will they have to regret, and the effect of thus doing will plant many a laurel in the wreath of honor that is to bedeck the brows of the true children of God.

BUT A CHILD.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

WE left our home in Independence, Missouri, on Thursday, July 24th, and called at Wyandotte and Armstrong, Kansas, and spoke in the neat chapel of the Saints in the latter place. We reached Stewartsville, Missouri, on Friday evening, and preached to good congregations in the chapel, two and a half miles north of the town in the morning of Sunday 27th, and in town at the Opera House at night. We attended a very interesting prayer meeting in the chapel north of town on Thursday evening, 31st of July—Saints from the German, Pleasant Grove, Stewartville and City branches being present, it being the last meeting they expected to attend with us for some time. The house was full, and a very enjoyable meeting it was, and yet quite a sorrowful one; for we felt that it was not only possible, but quite probable that some of the many who had endeared themselves to us by their many acts of kindness, and their upright course as Saints, would not see us again in the flesh. With very few exceptions, the Saints in the different branches in and around Stewartville, are well worthy the name of Saints. We could not ask for a better class of people to live among than the Saints of that region; and the people outside of the church, are friendly, and a law abiding people. The first Sunday in August we spent in Saint Joseph, preaching morning and at night. Had good congregations, and good liberty in speaking; an excellent people are found here also, and the branch is improving under the presidency of Bro. S. Butler. On Tuesday after we left St. Joe for Lamoni, Iowa. Here we remained till Thursday, August 21st. I spoke on the 10th and 17th in the old church in the morning, and at night in the new church in the town. The houses were filled to overflowing, and I had first rate liberty in preaching. We had an excellent testimony meeting in the afternoon of the 10th in the house in town. We were much encouraged by the testimony of Bro. E. H. Gurley, especially by the expression of confidence in the divine approval of our mission. On the 7th at two p. m. we listened to an excellent discourse from Bro. Joseph, on the death of our well beloved brother and fellow soldier in the cause of Christ, Glaud Rodger. No one could be held in higher esteem than he by the Saints who knew him. It is to be regretted that the sermon was not reported, so that it could be published in the Herald. Bro. Rodger was always at the front; and in new or hard fields of labor he was always found, and he died in the field, with his armor on.

I had expected Bro. Blakeslee to meet me by the 12th of August, but he was detained until the 19th, and I was consequently compelled to disappoint the Saints in several places where I had sent appointments ahead.

We were much pleased with Lamoni, there is a noble band of Saints there. The country around is excellent in location, and crops are very good this year. The Saints are building a very commodious, and fine appearing church there. It will seat a thousand people, and has a basement which holds as many more. The building will be none too large for the use of General Conferences which will probably be held in the near future, at Lamoni most of the time, with an occasional one at Kirtland in the Temple there. There is a first class cheese factory at Lamoni, and an excellent quality of cheese is made there by skilful hands.

From Lamoni we went to Lucas on the 21st. I spoke on Friday night and Sunday morning and night, to good congregations and with good liberty. We were made the recipients of a number of favors from the kind hearted Saints, who seemed to think that we needed some tokens of their good will to remember them by, when we would be in the far off lands of Tahiti and Australia. The Saints seem to feel well at Lucas, and are quite united. There are a number of young men of first rate abilities there, who will yet make their mark as able defenders of the faith, and some whose voices may yet be heard among the lost sheep of the house of Israel in Wales, and other parts of Great Britain.

We left on Monday 25th for Council Bluffs, where we remained as guests of Bro. and Sr. Hall, and Bro. and Sr. Caffall, till Wednesday noon, when we left for this place. Through the courtesy of the General Ticket Agent of the Union Pacific Railroad, we obtained tickets at reduced rates to San Francisco, with privilege of a stop over at Salt Lake City, and elsewhere.

We reached Cheyenne, Wyoming, at noon Thursday; and as that train did not go farther, we stopped till after six that evening with Bro. Eames and wife. He took us out to his ranch, and exhibited a fine vegetable garden. He has succeeded in raising an abundance of garden products in that barren land, by digging a canal or ditch of several miles in length, by which he has a steady stream of fresh water flowing into lakes artificially formed, and from which by means of many little ditches he irrigates his large garden. Bro. Eames does not know what the word fail means, and has the energy and push sufficient to make a ranch of that kind pay if any one can. Cheyenne is undoubtedly the richest place of its size in the United States. It has many very fine stores and residences, but it looks so strange with but few trees, and they very small. The grass in the front yards is kept alive and bright by daily watering by lawn sprinklers, the water being furnished by the excellent water works of which Cheyenne is very properly proud.

We left there at about seven p. m. and passed the summit of the Rocky Mountains at half-past eight, and next morning we awoke to see the alkaline plains, of the American Desert. The whole morning was passed in crossing these wilds, the only vegetation in sight being sage brush. The monotony of the scene however, was broken by entrance into Weber Canyon about four o'clock in the afternoon; here the red alkaline plains were exchanged for lofty mountains, and massive rocks of fantastic shapes; and dashing streams of purest water, and beautiful vales; tasty cottages, fields of heavy grain, now just being harvested, and orchards full of ripening fruit. We passed the Devil's Slide, and through the Devil's Gate, a wonderfully wild, yet enchanting gorge in the mountains, and soon we reached Ogden, and were transferred to the Utah Central Road for a ride of thirty-seven miles to Salt Lake City, for which ride we paid two dollars a piece.

We found Bro. Warnock waiting for us, who took us to the house of Sr. Blair, (Bro. Blair having passed us at Lucas, Iowa, on his way to Lamoni). This city presents an opposite picture to that of Cheyenne, for the trees which line the sidewalks on both sides of the wide streets are so large and closely planted, that the houses are sometimes scarcely discernible from the opposite side of the street. The streams of water coming from the mountains, which flow down each side of nearly every street, are pleasant to see, at least to us, for nothing is more attractive to us than streams, and fountains of pure water. The church here is building a very grand edifice called a temple. It is certainly an imposing building, and will be a great attraction to the tourist, and a subject of pride and admiration to the people here. If our church possessed the machinery, and would put it in constant motion that is in force here, there could have been ere this a temple built in Jackson county, Missouri; but as it is not justified by the laws of God governing the Reorganization in employing such methods as have been in vogue here for many years, it will not be done for awhile yet. We have not seen the inside of the tabernacle yet, but expect to do so to-morrow afternoon. Last Monday several of the Saints accompanied us to the Salt Lake, and we took a bath in its waters of twenty per cent of salt. It is no trouble to float on the back for any length of time, without the least exertion to keep the feet up. It is more difficult to get them down after they once reach the surface. We discovered on the beach a polygamous family, a man with two wives, and some seven or eight children. The first wife, that is, the wife, was a meek spirited soul, who seemed just the very one to submit to the usurpation of her right to her husband's affection, without murmuring. The woman or concubine, was a black haired, black eyed, bossy sort of a creature, who ruled the wife, and that with the man's evident approval. In the water the attention of the man was given almost exclusively to the "addition."

Bro. Alexander H. Smith reached here on Sunday night, suffering by a severe cold; since then he has been very sick, with bilious colic. He spoke on Tuesday night to a full house, and delivered an earnest and effective discourse in defense of the original law and order of the church. On Wednesday afternoon, he and I called on his cousin, Samuel H. Smith, who has two "wives." Bro. Alexander and his cousin had a very earnest discussion on the "marriage question," yet all in good nature, Samuel being a very agreeable person to talk with. He has been considerably pressed by the powers that be, Joseph F. particularly has not hesitated to convey the idea to many that Sammy is considerable of an apostate. The reason is, that Sammy is not quite so ready a tool as many are, and has some considerable "mind of his own," and "thinks for himself." This attitude is not acceptable to those on, and those aspiring to the throne here. The following position of Heber C. Kimball is much more acceptable to them: "My prayer is, O Lord, help me to be faithful, and be submissive like the clay in the hands of the potter, that my president can do with me as it seemeth him good."—Extract from remarks made in the Tabernacle by Heber C. Kimball. A man who will not submit to dictation in his business affairs, in his domestic relations, as well as in strictly church matters, no matter if he attends to all religious duties, attends meetings, pays tithing, &c., is considered on the road to apostasy. But let him be "clay in the hands of the potter," and he is all right, even if he may not be very Saintly in his walk and conversation. The more pliant as a tool, the more favors he will receive from those who consider that but one rule only need govern the masses here, and that is "do as you are told and ask no questions." There was a revelation given through Joseph, which points directly to the condition of the people here, and which the person specifically alluded to will have to perform, and that too right here, if ever done at all with hope of success; and that is, wherein the Lord declares that he will raise up a man like unto Moses, who shall deliver Israel out of bondage. Moses did not deliver Israel of old from Egyptian bondage by staying in Palestine, and issuing proclamations; but he went personally into Egypt, and in the presence of Pharaoh and his lords, proclaimed the mission God had sent him to perform, and demanded to his face, "Let my people Israel go." The time is certainly at hand. It is forty years since Joseph was slain, and the leadership was assumed by the usurper, Brigham. It is time the yoke was thrown off.

I spoke twice last Sunday, and on Thursday and Friday nights; had good liberty. Appointment out for to-night, and to-morrow. Bro. Alexander may be able to speak to-morrow. On Tuesday we expect to leave for California.

Yours for the truth,

T. W. SMITH.

THE REVISED BIBLE.

READY FOR THE PRINTER—CHARACTER OF THE CHANGES MADE IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

THE labors of the committees on the Anglo-American revision of the Old Testament are ended, and the work is now in the hands of the printers. It will probably be issued from the University presses of Oxford and Cambridge in the fall. This great work originated in the Convocation of Canterbury, May 6th, 1870, by the appointment of a committee of eminent Biblical scholars and dignitaries of the Church of England, with power to revise the authorized version of 1611, and to associate with them representative Biblical scholars of other denominations. It was decided to make the work international as well as interdenominational. Accordingly the American committee was organized by invitation and with the approval of the British revisers, and began active work in October, 1872.

These committees have worked independently of each other. The American committee has held monthly meetings in New York, where, after a comparison of views, it would vote on a proposed change. A majority vote would be sufficient to carry the subject over to the next meeting, when a two-thirds vote would be necessary to secure its adoption. A change thus voted would be communicated to the English committee. The latter committee, working in much the same manner and holding its meetings in London, would promptly send the results of its labors to the American brethren. Thus a constant correspondence has been kept up between the two committees. It is by means of this correspondence that the revision has been completed. No joint meeting of representatives of the committees has been held. Both committees have gone over all the books of the Old Testament, and no change will be incorporated that has not met the approval of both bodies. In some instances the British revisers have been more conservative than the Americans, and where the latter think their point of sufficient importance it will appear in the appendix, as was done in the case of the revision of the New Testament.

Changes in the text of the Old Testament will be less marked than in the revised edition of the New. In the revision of the latter the translators were aided by a comparison of authentic manuscripts discovered since the translation, in 1611. They were thus led to correct the Greek text, and consequently to make alterations in the text of the English revision. That they might render the original with greater liberalness, they sometimes sacrificed beauties of phrase, even when the meaning was not affected.

In the work now in press there will be little or no occasion for complaint in this regard. The difference between Hebrew and English idioms is such that it is not possible to render with such verbal accuracy from the Hebrew as can be done from the Greek. Where, therefore, one phrase expresses the true meaning, no change occurs. Then, too, the public wish, especially in England, has pronounced against all avoidable changes in the old version.

Another powerful reason why radical changes were impossible is the fact that the original text of the Old Testament remains substantially the same as that used by King James' translators. With the New Testament the case was different. The mission of the revisers of the Old Testament has been not so much to ascertain the correct text, but to find out the true meaning of the old text, the origin of which is lost in antiquity. In this work they have been assisted by the great advance made in the knowledge of the Hebrew language since King James' time. In many instances the old translators wholly mistook the meaning of words, and they were ignorant of much of the Hebrew grammar that is now the common property of scholars. Thus the children of Israel did not, as stated in Exodus 11:2, by divine direction "borrow" of the Egyptians what they never intended to return, but they "asked" for and received gifts. In other cases the tenses of verbs are confused and the sequence of thought contained in the text is lost in the translation. Possessive pronouns are sometimes misplaced. Thus in Psalms 59:17, "God of my mercy" should be "my merciful God."

Much light has also been shed on the meaning of words in the text by the study of Arabic and other Semitic languages. Since the excavations at Ninevah the study of these languages has made great progress. "Some improvements in our translation may be expected also, says President Chase of Harvard, one of the revisers of the New Testament, "from the greatly increased knowledge in recent times of the ways and customs of Oriental people, and of the geography, flora, and fauna of the Bible lands. The mythological satyrs should be veritable goats; and that fabulous beast, the unicorn, should no longer exalt his horn in the Bible, though he may continue to do so on the royal arms of England, but will doubtless give place to the wild ox—the same wild ox, or urus, which Cæsar describes in Germany, and which has been preserved with great care even to our time on a nobleman's estate in Great Britain."

The parallelism in the poetical books will be shown by printing in verse-form, which will be an immense gain in the clearness and force of meaning. For example, the earliest specimen of poetry extant (Gen. 4:23, 24) illustrates itself if arranged in some such way as this:

And Lamech said unto his wives,
Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice;
Ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech,
For I have slain a man to my wounding,
And a young man to my hurt.
If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold,
Truly Lamech seventy and sevenfold.

The completion of this work marks the third great step in the rendering of the Scriptures in the English language. The first translation entire was the work of John Wycliffe in the last quarter of the fourteenth century. There were different attempts to supply the want of a better translation until in 1611 King James' version was given to the world as the best product of the ripest scholarship of that day. That version has stood till the present.

CHOLERA ROUTES.

THE first epidemic was confined to Asia. Starting from India—its old home—it went eastward around the coast to Japan, and in a westward direction through Persia into Arabia on the one hand, and northward to the confines of Russia on the other.

The second epidemic (1829—1832) started in India, and traveling in a northwesterly direction crossed Russia and Germany, and sped thence to England and Ireland, whence it was carried across the ocean, arriving almost simultaneously at New York and Quebec. From these two points it followed the Erie Canal and the line of the lakes to Chicago, then consisting only of the garrison of Fort Dearborn, passed on to Rock Island, and went down the Mississippi River to New Orleans, whence it spread southeasterly to the West Indies and southwesterly to Mexico.

The third (1842—1848) started again from India and passed through Persia to Russia, where it divided, one route passing through Russia and Germany and the other through Austria and France, reuniting in England. Thence it crossed the ocean by two lines, the one terminating at New York. The second touched at New Orleans, and from this point it ascended the Mississippi River to St. Louis, whence it spread to Chicago, the main line, however, following the overland route to California, whence it was taken by vessel to Central America.

The fourth (1865—1866) started from India, whence it crossed Arabia, reaching Marseilles by the Mediterranean. Thence by water and land it went to England, crossing the ocean to New York, and spreading all over the country east of the Mississippi River and into portions of Missouri and Texas.

The fifth (1871—1873) took the customary route from India to Germany, and was brought thence by vessels to New Orleans. It then ascended the Mississippi River raging worst at Memphis, passed along the Ohio River to Cincinnati, and thence to Pittsburg, Philadelphia, and the vicinity of New York. This was the last visit of cholera to this country.

The sixth epidemic was confined to Egypt, where it raged last year, immediately following the Anglo-Egyptian war, sweeping off 50,000 victims in a few weeks. The epidemic of this year broke out at Toulon, a French Mediterranean port, where it was unquestionably brought from Egypt. Up to the present time it is mainly confined to France, having appeared at Lyons, Nice, Grenoble, Nimes, Auteuil, Lasagne, Pignans, Arles, Paris, Marseilles, and Toulon, with the greatest fatality at the two last named places. It has also appeared at Saluzzio in Piedmont, at Constance in Baden, and at Odessa and Poltava in Russia, and late dispatches report it at quarantine off Liverpool, while a second and still more fatal destroyer, the plague has traveled from Persia to the Caucasus.

These charts, lately published by the Chicago Tribune, from which this is copied, abundantly confirm the recent statements of Sir Robert Rawlinson that cholera always follows the traveled and commercial routes, such as the lines of pilgrimages, caravans, and vessel courses on the ocean and great rivers, indicating that these lines must be carefully watched. Meanwhile the remaining precautions are those of cleanliness, disinfection, the destruction of garbage, and personal attention to diet and health.

TRUTH.

Truth will never die; the stars will grow dim, the sun will pale his glory; but truth will be ever young. Integrity, uprightness, honesty, love, goodness, these are all imperishable. No grave can ever entomb these immortal principles. They have been in prison, but they have been freer than before; those who enshrined them in their hearts have been burned at the stake; but out of their ashes other witnesses have arisen. No sea can drown, no storm can wreck, no abyss can swallow up the everlasting truth. You can not kill goodness, and integrity, and righteousness; the way that is consistent with these must be a way everlasting.

SECRET SORROW.

IN the lives of the saddest of us there are bright days when we feel as if we could take the great world into our arms. Then come the gloomy days when the fire will neither burn on our hearths nor in our hearts, and all without and within is dismal, cold, and dark. Believe me, every heart has its secret sorrows, which the world knows not; and we often call a man cold when he is only sad.

Begin the education of the heart, not with the cultivation of noble propensities, but with the cutting away of those that are evil. When once the noxious herbs are withered and rooted out then the more noble plants, strong in themselves, will shoot upwards. The virtues, like the body, become strong and healthy more by labor than nourishment.

We ask for long life but it is deep life, or grand moments that signify. Let the measure of time be spiritual, not mechanical. Life is unnecessarily long. Moments of insight, of fine personal relation, a smile, a glance—what ample borrowers of eternity they are.

DIED.

CLOSSON.—Near Excelsior, Wisconsin, August 23d, 1884, of cholera infantum, Cornelius Elmer, infant son of Bro. F. and Sr. M. Closson, aged 1 year, 6 months and 5 days. Funeral sermon in the Saints' Chapel, by F. M. Cooper.

MILLER.—In the town of Scott, Crawford county, Wisconsin, March 8th, 1884, John Miller, aged 64 years, 2 months and 7 days. Deceased was a kind father, a good citizen; his religious convictions were of the Universalist type. His dying request was for F. M. Cooper to preach his funeral discourse, which was attended to at the Methodist Chapel, in the town of Scott, August 27th, 1884.

JONES.—At Plymouth, Pennsylvania, September 3d, 1884, at the house of Bro. W. W. and Sr. Jennett Jones, their beloved daughter Jennie, age 24 years, and 29 days. Miss Jones was a model young lady, and will be greatly missed by her aged parents, as she was now their only child at home, and by her sister, and also her many friends and acquaintances in the vicinity. On the following Saturday, large numbers of relations and friends met, when Bro. H. S. Gill officiated in reading and praying, and the Rev. T. C. Edwards, Kingston, preached a very appropriate sermon from 1 Cor. 15: 57. After the services her remains were conveyed to Lehman, her last resting place, in full hope of having share in the first resurrection.

"Fold her, O Father, in thine arms,
And let her henceforth be,
A messenger of love between
Our hearts and thee."

JENKINS.—Near Blackfoot City, Deer Lodge Co., Montana, August 17th, 1884, by drowning, Jeremiah P. Jenkins, son of Bro. Roger and Sr. Anna Jenkins. Was born at North Ogden, Utah, November 25th, 1860. Baptized by his father and confirmed by Elder R. C. Moore. He was found by his father in the Takima River, three miles below where he entered the water to bathe. Brother Jenkins spoke a few words and prayed at his funeral, as no one else could be procured. It was a sad and distressing occurrence.

MILLER.—In the town of Scott, Crawford county, Wisconsin, September 6th, 1884, of cholera infantum, Joseph Anderson, son of Mr. B. and Mrs. M. Miller, aged 1 year, 5 months and 2 days. The form of the blighted bud looked beautiful in death. Funeral sermon by F. M. Cooper, in the Methodist Chapel, September 7th, 1884.

MCCAN.—At Hardin, Missouri, August 24th, 1884, Sister Belzaria I., wife of Mr. John McCan, and daughter of Bro. and Sr. E. W. and S. A. Cato. She was born in Monroe county, Alabama, August 11th, 1855; baptized in 1866, by William Litze, in Alabama. Sister McCan leaves a husband and five children, her father and mother, five sisters and three brothers, and friends to mourn her loss. Her last words, "I am willing to go." What a joy to think that God's children are all willing to go, and meet him. May God bless those those left behind. W. L. BOOKER.

WEST.—In the town of Scott, Crawford county, Wisconsin, August 26th, 1884, Mrs. A. West, aged 73 years, 2 months and 27 days. Mother West was a good old lady, respected by all that knew her. Her sympathy was on the side of the latter day work. Funeral sermon by F. M. Cooper, August 27th, 1884.

LUMBAY.—At Twelve Mile Grove, Harrison county, Iowa, March 18th, 1884, Sr. Mary E., wife of Bro. Thomas Lumbay, and daughter of Bro. George and Sr. Elizabeth Mefford. Born February 20th, 1849, in Butler county, Kentucky, baptized March 30th, 1863. For twenty-one years she lived consistent with her profession as a child of God. Was ready for the summons to depart hence, only regretting that she must leave her three darling babes to walk through life without a mother's hand to lead them. A little before her death she called her firstborn to her side, and gave him instruction suited to his childish mind, trying to impress him with the importance of being good, at the same time expressing the earnest hope, that all her friends would live so as to insure their meeting her again, "In that far better land of glory and light." Funeral sermon by C. Derry at Twelve Mile Grove, Harrison county, Iowa, September 7th, 1884.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
 I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
 Very respectfully,
 N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
 JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
 Yours in bonds,
 J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
 JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
 GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
 JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
 Your brother in Christ,
 O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
 JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
 Yours in bonds,
 WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
 Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
 MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
 Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, October 4th, 1884.

REMEMBER the Reunion which convenes October 4th, in Raglan Township, Harrison county, Iowa.

The place is reached by going to Mondamin, a station on the Council Bluffs and Sioux City Railway; thence by team, wagon, or hack, east to the premises of Bro. Henry Garner, who is one of the Committee on grounds, and will take pleasure in directing comers where to camp and pitch their tents.

Every body should go prepared to look after themselves for the most part. There are not many accessible houses to stop at nearer than the village of Mondamin, some three and a half, or four miles away. Temporary shelter where couches and beds may be spread; and places where meals, and food for lunches can be procured will also be provided, so that none need to go hungry, we believe.

We hope that the Committee on grounds will take pains to so arrange the camp, with those who have tents and teams, that the places where the horses are picketed are far enough from the stand and seats, as not to be annoying by stench and litter. It would be well also for the refreshment stands and booths not to be too close, as crowds are more, or less liable to be gathered round them, during services.

At Kirtland, Ohio, a year ago last spring, no police were appointed, and none last April at Stewartsville, Missouri; and no disturbance of any sort occurred. It may not be wise to neglect the precaution of appointing some who will be recognized as conservators of the peace, to act during the session. The laws of Iowa, however, make all church officers interested in such meetings ex-officio peace officers, with authority to arrest offenders against the public peace, and take them before the nearest Justice of the Peace for trial. Nor is it necessary in such cases to first lodge complaint and obtain a warrant for arrest. We hope, however, that all Saints will observe the law and honor the proprieties of such a meeting as a religious reunion should be. If there are "disturbers of the peace," let them be from among them that are without.

Avoid waste of wood, water, or hay and corn, be civil in conduct and respect those who may be acting for the committee. The committee at last Reunion were good men and wrought faithfully for the success of the meeting and the good of those in attendance. The committee having the next in charge will do the same, and we who attend must help them by good behavior.

Another thing; mothers be sure that the children whom you bring to the meeting are clothed, or prepared with clothing proper for cool days and cooler nights, if they should occur; the middle days of October may be damp and cold; and disease engendered by exposure in attending the Reunion may be as fatal as that incurred in visiting the county, or state fair, or going elsewhere for pleasure. If we carelessly, or recklessly dare consequences, we must cheerfully, or doggedly endure them. What we can not avoid we may confidently ask to be relieved from.

Application has been made to the several roads to obtain reduced rates; but up to date, September 25th, no returns have been made that we are informed of; we presume that some arrangements will be made however.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE have been asked whether it would be proper and advisory for a number of the brethren to form a company for the purpose of buying land within the regions, to re-sell to those wishing to make homes, &c. Our answer is, Yes. The one who asked the question is a young man, with years and strength in his favor, if he chooses to engage in the enterprise; and we hope that he will devise wise provision-ary measures to carry the matter into execution. We wish it success. Not a great while ago we published an article in HERALD giving views concerning co-operative associations, which may in some measure be used as a sort of objective point from which to originate better and more proper systems of organizations; the best that are human are imperfect, but success may be given even an imperfect scheme if it be engaged in with a spirit to do right, and to be honest in purpose and in execution.

Fidelity to one's convictions is an excellent virtue. And to die in defense of one's faith has been considered the highest exhibition of courage and fortitude. So have we regarded it. But an afterthought asks for recognition. Is it not better in both principle and practice that a man's convictions be true, and that his assurance of their truth is beyond a peradventure before he essays to die for them. Can any reward be secured by fidelity to an improper principle, or an unsound faith. Do not the evidences upon which we should rely for our convictions require that our fidelity should be given to the truth; and if we are steadfast unto stubborn resistance, it should be out of regard for what is true and that only. It may be heroism to devote one's life to error; but it would be rash to hold that the reward for such heroism must be the same as for a life devoted to the good. Hence it may be easily said that we should use "all diligence to add to our faith virtue," and knowledge, and all christian excellencies, for they are truth.

Bro. P. N. Brix wrote September 8th, that he had baptized two at Aalborg, Denmark, lately.

Bro. T. W. Smith spoke in the Saints' Chapel in Sacramento, Sunday, September 14th, had fair attendance. He reached Oakland, California, on the 17th.

By request we print a letter from Mr. J. T. Cobb of Salt Lake City, to Bro. E. L. Kelley, and Bro. Kelley's reply to it.

The Aledo, Illinois, Democrat, of August 29th, publishes a letter from Bro. M. T. Short, who in his usual terse and fluent style sets forth the contrast between the true and false in faith, the primitive Mormonism and the Utah development.

We are again debtor to Bro. Wm. Street for copies of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, Advocate and Chester Evening News.

The Lamoni cheese factory is still making between two and three hundred pounds of cheese per day. It is of excellent quality as the employees of the Office can assert, Mr. Beard having sent a goodly chunk in to be sampled. There are piles of it waiting buyers and transportation. We saw in passing the factory the morning of the 25th a new lot of "sage cheese," just out of the press. It looked good, and we presume will be good.

RENOUNCED MORMONISM.

Special dispatch to the Globe-Democrat.

SALT LAKE, UTAH, Sep. 22.—Scott Anderson, a prominent Mormon and temperance worker, who has been here something over two years from England, has written a letter to President John Taylor, renouncing Mormonism and denouncing blood atonement and compulsory polygamy which he says, were a horrifying surprise to him on coming here, as no such doctrines were taught him in England. He accuses the sect of indecency and idolatry.

We have been told that there was no compulsory polygamy taught by the church in Utah; but from the above, if true, it would seem that some sort of compulsion had been attempted. Is it not time that those who have placed their hope on that dark feature of Utahism, just told the truth of it, and then abandon it in entirety.

BRETHREN James Baty and Joseph Dewsnup each have a letter in the Manchester, England, Evening News of the 11th a copy of which, mailed by Bro. Dewsnup reached us on the 24th. The letters are written with reference to an article reprinted in the News from the New York Sun, and which we print below, containing statements from Mrs. Paddock, of Salt Lak City, which we have not seen before. If true they are decidedly damaging to the claim that no woman is forced to submit to polygamy.

HORRORS OF MORMONISM.

The Salt Lake correspondent of the New York Sun says:—The sad side of Mormonism is not very often touched upon. Many observers see its ludicrous features and others the dangerous political tendencies of the hierarchy; but few discover the heartbreaking sorrows so closely veiled in hundreds of homes by fanaticism and terror. When Joseph Cook was here he received a letter from Mrs. Paddock, of this city, telling the following story:—"A short time ago an educated young newspaper man came to Utah from England with his young wife. They had fallen under the influence of a Mormon missionary, and were devout believers in the teachings of the saints. For a time they lived here unmolested, but the priesthood at length exerted their influence on the husband to force him into polygamy. The wife finding opposition in vain, at last gave her nominal consent. A second wife was brought into the house. In a short time the first wife became a mother, but the infant never cried aloud. It came voiceless into the world, but it wept in silence all the time. Sleeping or waking the tears flowed from its closed eyes, and in three or four weeks it died. The mother said it died of a broken heart. The mother herself soon followed the child, and both rest together on the hill." Isaac Langton and his wife have grown grey in the faith. For years they have resisted the appeals of the priests and have lived for each other. They have been poor all their lives, and both have had to struggle hard to keep their home and rear their children. A happier couple could not have been found in Utah until recently. Both being near the end of their earthly race, the fond old wife had long ago given up worry or apprehension concerning her husband's loyalty. In his old age, however, the wiles of the priest caught him. He took another wife. The old lady was staggered by the blow, but, restraining her feelings, told the newly-married pair that she would soon be out of their way. Langton and his bride went off on a visit, and on their return on a street car Mrs. Langton No. one, in abject despair, threw herself under the wheels of the vehicle. The driver chanced to have control of the brake, and stopped the car before the old lady was crushed. Her clothing was torn from her, however, and she was seriously injured internally.—George Walker had two wives and married a third, a woman much handsomer than either of the others. The first one died in a few weeks, and the second went insane and was sent home to her parents. Wife No. three, who thus became the only wife, led a very contented life for a while; but she is now filled with rage and grief because her husband has married another woman, and is maintaining her in good style in another part of the city. A young girl named Annie Elmore, who came here from England a while ago with a batch of converts, was immediately beset by several old saints with proposals of marriage. She was unusually pretty and intelligent, and the rivalry of the elders was great. To all she turned a deaf ear, however, and one after another was flatly refused. Then one of the bishops called on her and undertook to terrify her into marrying.

He told her that if she remained chaste he would be compelled to cut her off, not only in this world, but in the next, and explained to her to be cut off was eternal ruin. She defied him to do his worst, and told him that in England the Mormon missionaries had taught that a woman should marry only the man she loved, and that she was bound to do so. The bishop did cut her off, but, learning soon after that she had married a young man who had followed her to this country and joined the church, the excommunication was withdrawn. Just now this true-hearted girl, who withstood the blandishments and threats of her elders so heroically, that she might remain true to her absent lover, is a raving maniac, because he, three months after his marriage with her brought home another wife. Suppressed, denied, and made light of as these things are by the Mormons, they crop up occasionally, revealing the depth of the woe which exists here for the most part in silence.

Correspondence.

SALT LAKE, U. T.,

August 22d, 1884.

Mr. E. L. Kelley.—I feel indignant, I might better say annoyed, at my name, or any portion of it, appearing in the manner it does in the publication, in book form, of the Braden and Kelley Debate. "A person in Salt Lake by the name of Cobb" has never purposed "getting out a work against the Mormons;" said person having been heretofore, and yet being, solely desirous of ascertaining the precise facts regarding Mormonism, and specially the round, unvarnished facts of its inception. As to Mormons themselves, whether "Josephite" Mormons or "Brighamite" Mormons, I know the people too well—have lived in familiar association with them too long—to entertain other than the kindest feelings towards them.

Major Gilbert's letters to me are in quite another strain from his interview with you, as I saw it reported in your Plano Herald; and I am further annoyed to see it in the volume embodying your debate. Yet I must be allowed to remark that, to the best of my knowledge and opinion of Major Gilbert, he is a man consistent and straight forward. I can not conceive of his admitting even in the most remote and qualified manner, anything whatsoever of a divine character as touching the Book of Mormon. He does, or seems to do, this on page 103 of your debate.

If you, Sir, have bowed and crooked your better sense and judgment really to accept the Book of Mormon as a work of divine inspiration, whether in its subject-matter or in the modus operandi of its coming forth, I sincerely think you are a person to be pitied. Having studiously traversed its claims, with all the sobriety of mind I could summon, my own conclusion is, and for some years has been, that in its earliest form Solomon Spaulding wrote it, and that Spaulding's writing was revised and enlarged by Sidney Rigdon. Of this I have no more doubt than I have that I am at this moment addressing you in a letter. I know that the secret acquaintance and association of Rigdon and Smith, prior to the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, has been hotly contested and weakly denied. Of course, this is a cardinal point, one of the cardinal points, in the case. I am not much given to jumping to my conclusions. I have evidence which perfectly satisfies my own mind, and which I think must satisfy the mind of any other unbiased and reasonable creature, that there was a secret acquaintance and association between Smith and Rigdon, prior to the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. And this being so, the question naturally arises, Why was this fact concealed? I have never seen nor heard of one solitary, well-authenticated denial from Sidney Rigdon that he had part in concocting the Book of Mormon. So far as I can learn, he maintained an attitude to his dying day of stubborn silence whenever he was approached for information upon this matter, neither affirming nor denying.

Enough time having been already ridiculously wasted (me jud.) on "pribbles and prabbles" touching Mormonism, and its unspeakably absurd and tiresome "literature," Book of Mormon, Revelations and what not, for one I will not sin further in this regard. I close, expecting you will do me the simple justice to print these lines in your Lamont Herald.

JAS. T. COBB.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Sep. 11th, 1884.

Mr. Jas. T. Cobb, Salt Lake, U. T.:

I am in receipt of a letter bearing subscription as above of August 22d last, and notice it in order that I may point out the errors the author has fallen into.

First. That of addressing me with reference to the expression, "A person in Salt Lake by the name of Cobb," &c., referred to in the discussion at Kirtland. The language is not mine primarily, but that of one J. H. Gilbert, of Palmyra, N. Y., as is plainly shown in the published debate; and it is further shown on pages 122 and 353 of the same, that the reporter of the language had not only sent to this Gilbert the interview when published so that he might make corrections through the same journal, if he had been misunderstood, but had also directed to him a private letter asking him to point out wherein, if in anything, he had been mis-reported. Gilbert it seems could not point out a single important error, for it is fair to presume that had he been able, he would have done so. He is a man accustomed to writing, and as he states himself, "has been for the last forty-five or fifty years trying to get the key to that thing," (the Spaulding story), and hence, no just reason why he should not have answered the gentleman making the report.

Before any proper request can be made of any party with reference to using the evidence referred to, the party "indignant," or as you state, you "might better say annoyed," (and it occurs to me that you might have so stated if you thought you had better), should first approach this Gilbert and forward with such request his reasons for making the statement, if not true, and the particular party by the name of "Cobb" to whom he did refer. It can hardly be said that you are the only "Cobb" in Salt Lake; or did you identify yourself as being the one referred to by reason of your having been in correspondence with this same Gilbert about that same matter as set forth by him in the testimony to which you have referred, and also the one who had written the letters to Mr. Saunders asking him to make an affidavit to the effect that he saw Sidney Rigdon in the State of New York prior to the year 1830? If you are not the person by the name of "Cobb" in Salt Lake, who has been engaged in this wholly unreliable and disreputable business of secretly approaching those unfriendly, or who are the avowed enemies, of a religious society in order to get something to say against it, you should not assume that the testimony used related in the remotest degree to yourself. It would be a cruel burlesque upon the rules of evidence, and a lasting disgrace to any court of justice to tolerate for a moment a thing as evidence, bearing against a man or society, when procured in this way from one unfriendly; yet, this is the kind of invidious work ever brought forward to oppose the gospel of peace taught by the Saints. If any body knows anything damaging to our faith they should know it in our presence as well as while skulking behind, and it can not be said that we have failed to be ready or present at any time or place, where opportunity offered, to hear all that was to be said either for or against us.

Second. The prime object of your letter develops in the effort to rescue Gilbert from the effect of his own utterances. You should then have enclosed to me the letters you refer to written by him and sent you prior to the published interview. You could not state otherwise of the gentleman reporting the interview with Gilbert than that he is a man "consistent and straightforward." Not only this, but that he had taken all the precautions that could of right be demanded of him to have the interview corrected if not properly reported. You say, however, that you can not conceive of his (Gilbert) "admitting even in the most remote and qualified manner, anything whatsoever of a divine character of the Book of Mormon." And in the very next sentence you further say: "He does, or seems to do this, on page 103 of your debate." Well, if he does, or seems to do so, it ought to occur to you, that if you can not conceive of it, the fault is not with me. It must appear by this time that you have played the folly of judging a matter before hearing it, and that very unwisely and indiscreetly too; for had you but taken the second thought you would have known that the reporter of that interview could not, outside of the parties named, have ascertained the facts set out, i. e., those of the Cobb and Gilbert, the Cobb and Saunders, and the Gilbert and Saunders' correspondence and conversation, and the neglect or refusal of Saunders to answer the letters sent him by Cobb upon the question of whether Sidney Rigdon was in New York at a certain time or not; and these are the only important points in the evidence, and Gilbert was the only party seen.

Third. You have presumed in this your first attempt to address me, to charge me with having distorted my "better sense and judgment" to accept the correctness of the claim made for the Book of Mormon, and this, before ever asking my reasons for so believing. You "have traversed its claims with all the sobriety of mind you could summon," and come to a conclusion;—that is enough; nobody else is to traverse its claims, or should they, it would not do to come to a different conclusion from what you did, or they will have "bowed and crooked their better sense and judgment." This effectually settles the question of what the great standard of all excellence is. Hereafter when I am asked to point out the "standard" to which all should appeal and bow in case of controversy, I shall be compelled to refer to Mr. "Cobb." To do otherwise will subject the seeker for light to the charge of "bowing and crooking his better sense and judgment," and per consequence of so being degraded in the scale of human intelligence as to take from him any rights others are bound to respect.

This is more like the horrible intolerance de-icted of the dark ages, than the sentiment of a citizen of the free and enlightened Republic of America. What is the use for others to undertake to investigate the question for themselves, when Mr. Cobb has "traversed its claims with all the sobriety of mind he could summon?" When the Pontiff speaks, remain silent! Henceforth, no "pribbles" and "prabbles!"

The charge of having "bowed and crooked my better sense and judgment," thus made to me or of my brethren, in the face of the facts which are so well known, that we are ever willing and ready to appear and give a reason for our hope, the grounds and truths touching our belief, before any audience or body of people, and upon any platform or in the face of the criticism of any man or body of men, certainly betokens no higher sentiment on the part of the one making it, than that he has the superlative right to insult a man, or body of people, at will, who would but respectfully differ from him in judgment and belief.

Fourth. Continuing, you say: "I know that the secret acquaintance and association of Rigdon and Smith has been hotly contested and weakly denied."

This you think you "know," and that you are not much "given to jumping to your conclusions." The great wonder to me is as to how you got there if you did not jump. Did you ever think of what a hot contest, a weak denial of a thing would make? Yet in this strain you pretend to write of what you "know." The qualifying words easily let you down from the witness stand. There can be no hot contest over such an issue where there is not an emphatic and complete denial. In your over desire to have the issue appear plausible upon your side you attempt to give your knowledge, and it appears in such language as to show strongly upon the side you favor and weakly upon the other; and yet, you would like to pose as one who had fairly and fully investigated this matter, expressing yourself in the letter in a manner that indicates that you think you have done this so effectually and impartially that it is absurd for any body else to try.

Fifth.—You conclude that you have found evidence which perfectly satisfies your mind as to the secret acquaintance of Rigdon and Smith, and write:—"And this being so, the question naturally arises, why was the fact concealed?" What being so, why was the fact concealed?

Only, that Mr. Cobb has evidence which satisfied his mind upon this point.(?) Now, let the balance of mankind stand by and simply hear the opinion of this one, who says he has canvassed in his way and become satisfied. No difference, if thousands of equally able, conscientious and upright men and women have more thoroughly canvassed it and come to a very different conclusion. Do you not begin to perceive by this time that it is just possible that you may occasionally be found jumping to a conclusion as well as other men?

Sixth.—You say: "I have never seen nor heard of one solitary, well-authenticated denial from Sidney Rigdon that he had part in concocting the Book of Mormon."

Turn to page 94, of the Debate you have cited—To the letter of Rigdon himself written in 1839. He says: "If I were to say that I ever heard of the Rev. Solomon Spaulding and his wife, until Dr. P. Hulburt wrote his lie about me, I should be a liar like unto themselves." "The tale in your paper (the Spaulding tale) is one hatched up by this gang from the time of their expulsion." Is this your "weakly" denial?

Page 392, ibid, He (Rigdon) said: "It was a thing that I never thought of until Oliver Cowdery and Parley Pratt introduced it to me." See next page as follows:

Question.—"Were you in the meeting, [a meeting held in the Presbyterian church to raise funds to help Hulburt on in his nefarious' work on the Spaulding tale], and one of the parties who helped to send him?"

Answer.—"Yes sir; but I will say, however, that Sidney Rigdon at the time he made his last speech here, said that he knew nothing about the Book of Mormon until it was presented to him by Oliver Cowdery and Parley Pratt. I never heard of the Spaulding story until it was sprung on me?"

Turn now to page 395, and read the certificate of the Justice who presided during the taking of the evidence, and for once see that it is well authenticated." What have you to the contrary that is as well authenticated?

Seventh.—"So far (you say) as I can learn, he maintained an attitude to his dying day of stubborn silence whenever he was approached for information upon this matter, neither affirming nor denying." If this is the best that you have been able to gather upon that point after bringing "all the sobriety of mind you could summon" to bear upon it, I beg leave to suggest, that hereafter, when you wish to gather ex parte evidence upon the question, that you summon a little assistance—a kind of silent partner at least; or perhaps it will be better, should you play the part of a silent partner. Also suggest, that you will likely find a congenial aid in the P. B. office, at Pittsburg, Mr. Patterson for instance. Wonderful, indeed! Since you are so far apart, that you should so readily see eye to eye, upon this "non-denial business." You, "Never proposed getting out a book against the Mormons." Not over your own signature! Never!! You, "Have lived in familiar association with them too long, to entertain other than the kindest feelings towards them."

Eighth.—While professing friendship and a high respect for those who are not only believers in the Bible, but also believers in the divine origin of the Book of Mormon, you at the same time assume it to be a matter of fact, and well known to those early connected with the church, than Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon were intimately acquainted before the publication of the Book of Mormon, when all have persistently denied it. This at once places those for whom you profess to have such a high regard and respect, in the catalogue with liars and hypocrites. It is not only Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon whose veracity is questioned here, but many others who have lived honorably the denial throughout an upright life. Mrs. Emma Smith must have known it were they acquainted prior to the year, 1830, but for forty-five years she denied it and taught her children it was not true. Mrs. Salisbury, and the late Mrs. Miliken, who resided in Illinois for nearly forty years, both of whom had opportunity to know had there been any such acquaintanceship, ever persistently denied it. David and John Whitmer ever when approached upon this, declared there was no such acquaintance-ship as you claim and they had full opportunity to know. Parley P. Pratt early denied and challenged the correctness of the story, and his circumstantial relations of bringing Rigdon into the church were such that he must have known whether there was such an acquaintance.

Every man and woman who has ever borne evidence upon this, who stood in a situation to know, of which I have any record whatever, has said it was not true. But you pretend to be astonished that it was not admitted! Yet have great respect for these persons and their posterity and associates, because of your "long living in familiar association with them." The same whom you so directly make out to have been and who are still liars and hypocrites. Still you never "jump to your conclusions." It has been long said that consistency was a jewel, but a man will have to search a lifetime to find one in your letter by this adage. At your request, I have forwarded your letter and my answer to The Saints' Herald, Lamoni, Iowa, for publication. But the Editor of that Journal speaks for it, and is ably qualified for his work, and time will develop whether the "pribbles", and "prables" shall appear.
