JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, January 5th, 1884.

THE Sacramento, California, Bee, of a late date, contained the account of an interview of one of its editors with Mr. C. W. Penrose of the Deseret, Utah, News, which account was reproduced in the News of December 11th, and from which we clip the following:

"The question of polygamy cuts a very little figure at present. Few, comparatively, of the Mormon men have more than one wife. In the first place, there are not women enough to go around, and if there were, our people are not rich enough to support such households as we are credited with maintaining. The large cities of the Union hold up their hands in holy horror at the Mormon who has more than one wife, and yet they themselves are very sink-holes of prostitution. It is supremely ridiculous to see Representatives in Congress denounce us most bitterly because of our marriage relations, when it is notorious that they themselves are maintaining four, five and six mistresses."

Several years ago we made the argument against the claim of divine origin for polygamy, that no such system of marriage could have emanated from God, for the very positive reason that the equality of the sexes, born and surviving to a marriageable age, would not permit of its practice. The argument had been previously made by Elder Orson Pratt, one of Utah's ablest men, and after him by Tom, Dick and Harry of the Utah Mormon Elders at home and abroad, that the excess of women over men was a natural argument in favor of the plural wife system. To prove this excess, the statistics of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, and some other of the manufacturing states were cited. But this argument of Messrs. Pratt, Tom, Dick and Harry, has been finally and signally put to flight by the persistent redundancy of men births in Utah and the surrounding Territories inhabited by the much-marrying Mormons. Also by the report of George Q. Cannon, who gives the number of births to be in the proportion of twelve men to eleven women children during the last year. And now comes the unwary admission from Editor Charles W. Penrose, of the Utah Church organ, that there are not "women enough to go around."

It is a very curious admission for any defender of polygamy to make; and comes with especially bad grace from our friend of the News, because of his late statement that any "one really desirous of getting married can do so without difficulty," made in commenting on an editorial by us urging the disparity in number of the sexes. If there are not "enough to go around any way," every man desirous to marry, having but one wife, then there must be some men who can have none; but when even a few men get more than the one wife provided by birth, the number not permitted to bless their lives in marriage is increased. It would be strictly in order for an unmarried man in Utah to go to some one of those favored with two or more, and demand of him that he fulfill the Scripture injunction: "Let him that hath two coats [wives] give to him that hath none." And what a comment on the wisdom of God,—a revelation from him commanding men to marry more than one wife, when there is barely one each provided for by nature.

ELDER JOHN READHEAD, an elder of the Utah church, reports to Joseph F. Smith, counselor to Pres. John Taylor, his mission to the United States; the following portion of which will interest the saints, especially those in Minnesota:

"He afterwards went to Minnesota, met much prejudice, hired a hall, but could not get a congregation. Among Spiritualists, Second Adventists and Josephites, he found the last most bitter and hardened."

This reporting elder takes pains to show that his labors have been attended by but three classes of believers: Spiritualists, Adventists and Josephites. Of these three classes the most bitter are the Josephites. In what this bitterness consists, Mr. Readhead does not report, but the inference is fair, that it was based in the position assumed by the Reorganization in regard to the peculiar tenets of Utah Mormonism, as contradistinguished from the primitive faith; or as the doctrines were left in the books and publications of the church at the death of Joseph and Hyrum. Our elders everywhere have a standing instruction to face these gentlemen from Utah upon these vitally separating dogmas, and to prevent their making any converts, if they can by force of the facts in the case and arguments upon them. We trust no Elder of the Reorganization will be guilty of using, fostering, or encouraging violence against the elders from the Utah Church; or be discourteous in opposition or discussion, when opportunity offers; but we trust just as confidently that not one of them will ever be suffered to come into any locality occupied by our brethren without being met with a fair offer for discussing the difference between the two churches.

BRETHREN I. N. White and Rudolph Etzenhouser have raised a decided excitement at Viola, Iowa. A writer for the Independent, of Springville, who signs himself "Observer," writes very pithily, and styles our brothers "serpent." "Observer" contrasts the two places, Springville where the brethren could not get a hearing, with Viola, where an opportunity was afforded and a good effort started, very much to the credit of Springville, as he supposes, but to the credit of Viola, as brethren White and Etzenhouser, and we must necessarily regard it. He says:

"While we look on the two places mentioned, how readily we can discern the wrong in the latter. But says one on the enemy's side, our brother don't preach Polygamy. No, sir; your brother does not, though he goes as far as his rope allows in this country. That is their way. Ye blind! to talk smoothly and make their religion as being down on Polygamy. Ask them how many innocent lives have been in danger, and how many lost for making known their religion. It might be compared to a child at play with bubbles of soapsuds, for they do look so beautiful and fascinating to the looker on, but take hold of it and naught is there. That is the way with their religion, they make it to look grand and systematic for a time, but there's no substantiality there, which the friends of the Mormons can see if they but open their eyes."

If the people of Viola have their eyes open they will be able to see that men like brethren White and Etzenhouser can certainly mean no harm to those who may come to hear them, for all that they ask is to be heard. If after a hearing men do not choose to accept what is presented, no anathemas, or curses, or ill wishes, or threats, are made by them; but the fullest liberty offered for examination and rejection, or acceptance. How can any Independent newspaper, in a land of free speech and religious liberty, be guilty of proscribing any one without a hearing.

A friend to the truth wrote to Brother White from Viola, and stated that excitement was high; and that at almost all sorts of gatherings the preaching by himself and Bro. Etzenhouser was being discussed, for and against. One Reverend gentleman assailed the brethren from the pulpit in the usual style. This writer further states that nothing was lost to the brethren by this same Reverend gentleman's attack. People who really do their own thinking can afford to hear both sides; and such usually know how to discriminate between fair and unfair methods of speech and work.

BRETHREN have sent us copies of the Philadelphia Press of December 10th, containing a synopsis of a sermon preached by Bro. W. H. Owen, of Brooklyn, New York, in the hall, corner of Ninth and Callowhill streets, in Philadelphia, December 9th. From this synopsis we quote the following striking passages:

"So soon as a church dilutes the Gospel of Christ, so soon does He forsake the church. In other words, God is with you so long as you do this bidding, to 'observe all things whatsoever I have commanded;' the moment we divert from His teaching, that moment does He leave us. Therefore, I say that God is with you alway, if you prove worthy of Him, not otherwise. It is just as fallacious to say that God will remain with a wicked man as to argue that He will stand by a wicked church,—a church that has diluted and diverted His word. It is illogical, unphilosophical and unnatural to suppose that God would nourish such a church, and it is my belief that a church existing on such a foundation must ultimately go to the devil. If we expect God to 'remain with us always, even unto the end of the world,' we must learn and preach the Word as the apostles learned and preached it, unadulterated by any human touch. * * * If we would have hopes of being with God, we must learn the gospel pure, unadulterated, as we find it in the Bible. If we would hope to abide with Him forever, we must accept His word just as he has given it to us, free from human adulteration."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

FOUR were baptized at Lamoni, December 26th, 1883, Bro. H. A. Stebbins performing the rite in the waters of Chain Creek, west of Lamoni: two men and two women, all well informed in the doctrines of the church through long attendance on the preaching of the word. So goes the good work.

Bro. W. W. Blair left Lamoni this week for San Bernardino, over the Southern Pacific route. He will call at Denver, it is likely, on his way west. Bro. Blair goes to California in pursuance of a call from there, and by conference with us, and will spend some weeks before returning to Utah.

Bro. Henry Grim writes that he meets with some curious objections to his efforts in the gospel cause; among them this one. "If you will renounce your belief that Joseph Smith found the Book of Mormon, we will be with you." "But," says Bro. Grim, "this I can not do."

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Childs, of Obe, Allegheny county, New York, is desirous that an Elder shall come there. She is anxious to see and hear some one of the faith. She has sent for the papers and proposes to read for herself.

Bro. Joshua Armstrong, of Nebraska City, has been at work some this winter in the gospel field in Nebraska. He held thirteen meetings with the Palmyra Branch, as per appointment; but failed to get a place at the Clear Creek Branch. He filled an appointment at Bro. Bridges, on Platte River bottoms; but desisted from taking a severe cold walking from Ashland to Clear Creek.

Bro. William Rumel visited Fremont, Nebraska, and while there attended a revival meeting. Upon liberty being given for any to speak, Bro. Rumel essayed to speak of the gospel mission and stated that he "failed to see that salvation was obtained by bowing at the mourners' bench." This raised a commotion and Bro. Rumel was roundly denounced by the preacher and the people. He was called the "devil," a "child of Satan," and some other choice appellations. Bro. Rannie writes that there was considerable excitement at the time. Bro. Rumel remained quiet, but expressed surprise that he had so stirred the people.

We are requested to insert the letter from Bro. Joseph R. Lambert to Bro. John S. Patterson and the reply of Bro. Patterson, as explanatory of any misunderstanding that may have occurred from the reading of former letters by them referring to the Northern Illinois District.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert has preached a number of times at the Keifer School-house near Amboy, Illinois; and nine times in two different houses, one there, the other five miles from Marengo, Illinois. He had good liberty, attendance and interest very fair. He spoke twice in Marengo to the few Saints left there, and had spent two Sundays in the city of Chicago.

Owing to the expense requisite to the heating of the Temple at Kirtland, and the rather poor and dangerous facilities for so doing at the present, it is not found practicable to use it on days when the weather is inclement. Realizing this, the Methodist friends offered Bro. E. L. Kelley the use of their house, which was cheerfully accepted and used. This courtesy reflects credit upon both the Saints and their friends.

Any reader that has volumes of the "Times and Seasons," the "Elder's Journal," the "Morning and Evening Star," the "Missouri Expositor," the "Wasp," the "Expositor," (destroyed at Nauvoo), the "Millennial Star," or any paper published by the Saints before the death of the prophet, or any pamphlets or books published by the Saints before that time, can obtain a good price for them, if they wish to part with them, by notifying the Editor. Any considerable number of separate numbers would be accepted. Also Vols. I and II "Saints' Herald."

THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN MISSION.

It may interest the HERALD readers to know that the Rocky Mountain Mission is making some headway in numerical increase, and very considerable in the extent of its influence for good, both among the Utah Mormons, non-Mormons, and also the National authorities. Its fruits are seen in the fairness with which the press is treating the Reorganized Church, the discrimination made by well informed people between Brighamism and the true, original faith as taught in the church books and other genuine, authentic documents.

For the past two years and more, the mission has been sending more to the coffers of the church than has been drawn therefrom to aid it, and prospects are fair that this will continue. We make this statement because some, including a few ministers, have said they opposed giving a dollar in further aid of that mission. We take pleasure in saying to all such parties that the mission is not likely to ask for further outside aid, except in support of the Advocate, (which is being used very largely and successfully as a free tract), and then only prompt paying subscribers are asked for. We intend to continue the Advocate so long as we are continued in charge of the mission, as we find such a publication next to indispensable to its success. Flattering testimonials from many whose judgment we respect, assure us of their hearty appreciation of our "little missionary." We ask the prayers of all saints for the righteous success of the mission, and the more so as a great crisis is at hand throughout its borders. W. W. BLAIR.

Dear Herald:—I have been a reader of your columns for more than two years; and nearly three months have passed away since God through his wisdom gave me the privilege of entering the fold of Christ. I long to tell you the difference in my feelings now and before I united with the Church. But no tongue can express, no pen can describe, how much happier I am now than I was then. For several years I have been thinking that I ought to join some church. But none of them exactly suited me, until I heard the Latter Day Saints preach. It has been something over two years since my cousin, Heman C. Smith, visited us the first time, and preached once. He has visited us several times since, and preached nearly every time he came. I began to study continually what to do to be saved. I knew not what to do. My mind was almost continually on the subject of religion. I prayed for understanding and a peaceful mind. I soon became convinced that the Latter Day Saints were the church of God. I read the Bible and other books, and the more I studied and learned, the stronger was my conviction. I did not like the idea of being called a "Mormon," but was determined to take up my cross and follow my Savior. Thus things went on until last September seventh, we were visited by cousin Heman and Bro. George Montague, (an old friend of my parent-). They preached a few times while at our house, and on the sixteenth I went to the water, and received the ordinance of baptism by my cousin Heman, and was confirmed by him and Bro. Montague. It was there I found Jesus precious to my soul.

The moment I arose from the water, I felt that my sins were all forgiven; and from that day to this my joy has increased. I also enjoy that peaceful mind, which others who have passed through the narrow gate have enjoyed. Though tender ties be broken and friends forsake, I have never for one moment regretted uniting with the church. I am truly thankful that I have been brought thus far. May God speed the day when my parents, brothers and sisters, will find peace with Jesus as I have, is my prayer. I desire the prayers of all the Saints.

Your sister in bonds of love and peace,

HATTIE WIGHT.

LAWRENCE, Van Buren Co., Mich.,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I arrived at home from Nebraska on the twelfth inst., after a sojourn of nearly five weeks. I enjoyed the visit the best I could under the circumstances, being afflicted with something resembling the dumb ague and fever, a general debility of system, and nervous prostration. Such a condition was a stranger to me, and though I now feel better in some respects, my nervous system is still shattered, and how long it may remain so am unable to predict. I tried to preach a few times while west, at and near Wilber, Nebraska City, and at Shenandoah, Iowa, while attending the Fremont District Conference. The Saints wherever I visited did all they could to encourage me, and manifested much kindness. Bro. L. Anthony's house was our home during our attendance at the Braden-Kelley debate. Others kindly offered to entertain us, and for their kindnesses we feel very grateful. We feel under great obligation to Bro. and Sr. R. M. Elvin, as to others of the Saints at Nebraska City for the brotherly kindness there shown us; and I express thanks for the nine dollars and fifty cents collected by the Nebraska City Branch, to assist us on our way home. The aid was timely.

Brn. Elvin, Armstrong and Caffall are pushing the work in Nebraska; Brn. E. C. Briggs, Kemp and others in Western Iowa.

I hope and trust through the blessing of the Heavenly Father, and the prayers of the Saints, to be able to engage actively in the work ere long. Brethren, pray for us to this end.

Your brother in hope,

C. SCOTT.

CRESTON, Union Co., Iowa,

Dear Herald:—The branch here, consisting of some fifteen members or more, meets every two weeks for worship, and is encouraged from time to time, by the comforting Spirit which leadeth and guideth into all truth. Our branch president is diligent in performing his duties as a branch officer, for which the Saints should feel encouraged, and strive to sustain him by their faith and prayers. We have no preaching, which I regret, for I feel that it is needed here. There has never been but little preaching done here, not enough for the people to get an understanding of our position. I talk when I feel so impressed, to those that seem to lend a listening ear; and there are several such persons in this vicinity.

My prayer is, that some good brother will make an effort to assist us. Now is a good time I think to commence a work here. The Saints

I believe are trying to set a good example here, and that is worth something to the cause. I feel to abide in the work of God, and desire that all the honest in heart may see the truth, as delivered to the Saints of old, not as it is taught by every creed.

Yours in the covenant,

E. D. BULLARD.

President Joseph Smith, Dear Brother:—I want the Herald as long as I can see to read. It gives me much comfort, and cheers me whenever I read the dear brothers' and sisters' letters. Brother George Hicklin was here, and preached four times. They have built a new church in the vicinity, the M. E. Church South, and brother George preached in it twice, and was well treated by all of the members. The Lord bless him wherever he goes; and I pray the same blessing on all the brethren that are out preaching the gospel, that their labors may be blessed wherever they go. We had had no preaching here since Brother Gomer was here, till Brother Hicklin came.

With love to all the Saints,

MRS. JEMIMA CALIFF.

ELMWOOD, Nebraska,

December 18th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I came here last week, and have been busily engaged in trying to tell the story of salvation to those who nightly come out, and pay close attention to the word spoken. I thank the Father of mercy for the peace and light of his Holy Spirit.

This is a stronghold of the Christian Church, and they have lately held a revival meeting, with some degree of success, which seems to have the effect to cause them to be overbearing, and quite intolerant with those who dare to worship at some other shrine. Rev. Cyrus Alton is their minister. He is the man who was to have debated with Bro. Heman C. Smith at this place some time ago, but would neither debate, nor tell in public the name of his church. For a long time after he failed to stand up to his verbal agreement to discuss, he was quite courteous and kindly disposed towards our people. However, since their revival there comes another change. His hostility against "these signs shall follow them that believe," manifests aversion to God's plain promises, both radically and frequently, causing a sister of "the faith which was once delivered to the saints," to ask some questions upon the "signs" which were answered the next Lord's day," by the speaker of those "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," presenting in a public meeting a bottle said to contain strychnine, inviting those who believe that the signs shall follow to come forward and take a dose; and if it did not hurt them, then he would believe.

Passing strange that Christ, at no time or place, either by example or commandment, ever instructed his ministry to carry with them a bottle of strychnine. But as he did not, we can not avail ourselves of this "short cut" or "sharp practice," and we must content ourselves to fight it out upon the gospel gage, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" "He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."

I have given a close and careful reading of that portion of the message of President Arthur relative to Utah problem, and while I would not favor a hasty consent to depriving an individual, nor an organized company of individuals, of their religious, or political liberty or privileges, I am now satisfied to endorse the measure advised by our Chief Magistrate, for the following reasons: The obnoxious polity of the people of Utah, was introduced by stealth, and foisted upon the common people, by cunning leaders in a fraudulent manner. Their practices are in positive opposition to the law of God, as contained in "Truth's triumphal car," and the revelations which come through that prophet, whom God called to reveal the "fulness of the gospel." And while sin was coming in like a flood, the God of our fathers "lifted up an ensign" on the 13th of June, 1852, against the abomination that was publicly made known on the 29th day of August following. And now for more than thirty years there has been an opportunity for that people to hear the invitation, "they also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine." And as the Jews rejected the Master, these people have neglected the day of salvation, and are therefore worthy of severe punishment, for their many sins committed in the open light.

The prophet Joel speaks of a time, "And I will show wonders in the heavens." Something of this nature has been attracting not a little attention, for the past month or more, and all have been expressing their ideas of the "golden glow" in the western sky in the evenings, and in the eastern sky in the mornings. I have given ear to all the opinions, and fail to find any two that agree. Our newspapers all over the country have been chronicling these strange phenomena, and they have not solved this very attractive and interesting manifestation of Him that paints beauty in the clouds and flowers alike. So universal are these peculiar phenomena, that the wise scientists are not ashamed to confess them worthy of notice. Prof. G. P. Serviss, of the Packer Institute of Brooklyn, stated at a meeting of the American Astronomical Society, "the phenomena first appeared in San Francisco about November 20th. It was then supposed that the appearance was caused by some fire burning in the west, although such a supposition placed the fire in the Pacific Ocean. Subsequently the phenomena were observed in the Mississippi Valley. It seemed as if it progressed from west to east across the continent. But on the 9th or 10th of November, two weeks before we saw it, similar phenomena were seen in England.

So widespread was the red glow, that the lecturer soon came to the conclusion that it was due to cosmical causes. He illustrated with diagrams his method of computing the height above the earth of the cause of the red light and said that as nearly as he could calculate, it was about sixty-one miles. It was a question whether matter floating in the earth's atmosphere could attain a height of sixty miles, and still exist in sufficient quantities to produce the effect observed. Mr. Serviss then advanced the theory, that the cause of the phenomena might be reflection from meteoric dust. He said that meteors were known to be in the earth's atmosphere to the number of hundreds of millions, and the products of their combustion were visible as they approached the surface. Meteoric dust had been found in the Arctic regions. Space was filled with clouds of meteors. During the last two or three weeks there had been large numbers of meteors observed in this country and in England. Prof. Brooks, of Phelps, had discovered them when looking for comets, and he was not a man to mistake a flock of birds for telescopic meteors, such as he had testified he had seen. Prof. Coakley was of the opinion that Prof. Draper was the most correct, in ascribing the phenomena to excessive moisture. As a matter of fact, he said, the atmosphere at morn and eve, all through the month of November, had been charged with an extraordinary amount of moisture, and the red appearance was visible on the present morning, just before sunrise. It was simply due to reflection of the sunlight through this very dense medium.

I trust that some of our wise, philosophical brethren will give this subject a careful investigation, and if practical, a true solution.

In bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

HANFORD, California,

December 9th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—You are ever a welcome visitor. You are the only preacher I have. How I long to be where I can hear God's word. It is two years since I have heard an Elder preach. I often think how blessed those are that can have the privilege of hearing the word of life. There are no Latter Day Saints within twenty miles of me. If it is God's will, I wish some Elder would come this way; for I do want my husband and children to hear the truth. How blessed those are that have the privilege of going to church and worshipping God. I sometimes go to hear other denominations but there is something wanting. One goes away hungry as ever. I ask the prayers of all the Saints, that I may ever hold on to the rod of iron, and be saved at last.

Your sister in the one faith,

SARAH HEADRICH.

CHICAGO, Illinois,

655 Walnut street,

December 8th, 1883.

Brothers and Sisters:—By the help of God I will reveal unto you the interpretation commencing with vision of March 15th, 1882, as published in Herald.

The building I was in was the Church of Christ. The great darkness I saw arising in the south-east, is great persecution, contention, wars, trials and tribulations among the people of the eastern continent. There will be large slaughter and great destruction of human flesh, both by land and sea, commencing on the eastern continent. The great noises, the great winds, and the dangerous things in the air were all manner of calamities that tend to destroy flesh, both by land and sea. These calamities will roll forth from land to land and sea to sea, till they have been over the whole earth. The ribbons I saw were flags, representing the different kingdoms and nations that will be encountered in war previous to the establishment of Christ's kingdom on earth. Each color being a flag, representing the different kingdoms and nations. The white flag is the standard of peace and righteousness; under that flag every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, the Great King of the whole earth. Unto this flag shall every other power surrender their flags of different color. The great waves I saw coming up from the south-east, were great armies, bearing the flags of different colors, going to war against Mount Zion. The small waves were the armies of Christ.

The vision of October 5th, 1883, is as follows:

The fire at Washington is mainly a political one, which tends to destroy the constitution of the Government. It will cause persecution and contentions and skirmishing throughout the land. The orchard I saw is the Church of God. The trees are the different large divisions of the church. The limbs of the trees are the branches, the apples are the Saints. The smart man is Christ. The others I saw at work in the orchard are his servants. The small fires I saw in the orchard were that which will divide the good from the bad. There were in the orchard, both in the trees and fruit, two different kinds of rot. One was a dry rot, and the other a wet one; and all fruit that was found tainted with these rots, was severed from the trees. The dry rot is Saints which treat the books lightly, and do not take heed to the voices of the servants of God, but sit down and fold their arms, saying, the establishment of Christ's kingdom in earth is far off. We are all right, and have plenty of time to cleanse and purify ourselves, like unto the five wise virgins.

Dear Saints and friends, such in my opinion are greatly mistaken; for the coming of the Lord Jesus will take such unawares.

The wet rot is spiritualism, and all other isms and secret societies and combinations which are abominations before the Lord.

The following is a general interpretation of all the visions I have had upon this point.

When we shall see these things being fulfilled, which I have spoken of on the Eastern Continent, then our Master will give more abundantly of his Spirit unto the Church, by which the Elders will speak with more power and better liberty than they have heretofore in this generation. When we shall see these things being fulfilled which I have spoken, that should roll from land to land and sea to sea, then shall they that are righteous increase their knowledge in the Lord, and their works shall follow them, that the nations of the earth shall know that they are indeed children of the Most High. When we shall see the fires which I have spoken of commencing to burn in this land, know ye then that the time is near at hand, yea, even at our very doors, when the Master will pour out his Spirit more abundantly on those that faithfully serve him, and are not tainted with either of the rots. And as the smart man elevated the fruit from the lower limbs to the tops of the trees; so also will Christ exalt his Saints that they become rulers over all the land, even as the fruit in the tops of the trees was once all beneath, so also shall the Saints rule over all that live; by the fruit of the earth, and in Christ's name will they do it, recognizing him as their Great King. And when these fires commence to burn over the land, from that time on, Christ will be with his true and faithful Saints at their assemblies to direct them in all things. As the small waves overcame and conquered the large waves, so also will the Saints overcome and conquer the Gentile nations, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. And thus we see, that the little pebble, that fell in the waters above fifty years ago, will roll forth till it becomes a large mountain, even that it fill the the whole earth.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

H. R. WALLACE.

INDEPENDENCE, Jackson Co., Mo.,
December 18th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Our two days' meeting at Independence is over. We had a favorable time, and were blessed by the presence of the Spirit. Some said our Sabbath afternoon prayer meeting was the best they had ever attended here. The Lord greatly blessed us. The Saints were strengthened, and comforted, and made to rejoice. Tongues and prophecy were enjoyed, and the presence of the Spirit was felt throughout the congregation. The preaching was mostly done by Elders Maloney, Stubbart, Waddell, Warnkey, E. Curtis, St. Clair, and Joseph Luff on Sabbath night.

I have lately been down to Holden and Montserrat, where I was over one Sabbath at each place, and preached. Bro. J. C. Foss' efforts at Montserrat are highly spoken of, and praised by the Saints and people there. Also the labors and efforts of others previous have not been without effect for good, and the people's minds are relieved of a good deal of prejudice, insomuch that quite a number there are desirous of hearing more of the doctrine. We hope for an increase of unity, understanding, and wisdom, together with all other Christian graces, to obtain with the Saints throughout the district.

Yours in bonds,

C. G. LANPHEAR.

HANCOCK, Iowa,

December 10th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—The question that I propounded, which you published in one of your October issues, if I mistake not, was as follows: What kingdom does the eleventh horn as spoken in Dan. 7: 7, 8 represent. What is the name of it, and what are the names of the three horns, or kingdoms, which the eleventh horn plucked up by the roots.

"After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly, and it had great iron teeth; it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with its feet. And it was diverse from all the beasts before it. And it had ten horns. [8th verse] I considered the horns, and behold there came up among them another little horn. And by it three of the first horns were plucked up by the roots. And behold this horn had eyes like a man, and a mouth speaking great things."

The little horn seems to possess imperial authority, even greater authority than the eleventh horn ever did possess. It is quite probable that England is the eleventh little horn. Scotland and Ireland and Wales were doubtless the three horns that the little horn plucked up by the roots. The reason why I answer this question myself, is, Bro. Maccauley did not answer at all. He described Pagan Rome, or the fourth beast, which had great iron teeth, and ten horns. Dan. 7: 7, 8. There has been undoubtedly a mistake in transcribing, or translating, in reference to the power that the little horn possessed. It reads in the 21st verse. "The horn made war with the Saints, and prevailed against them, until the Ancient of Days came." Jesus said: "From the days of John the Baptist until now, the Kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." The violent took the kingdom from the Saints. "And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the Saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. And when I saw her I wondered with great admiration."—Rev. 17:6-12.

It is quite probable that the Ancient of Days will be here when the Savior comes. "I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven. And came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought him near before him." Daniel 7:13. "And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people and nations and languages should serve him." The dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away. And his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. Dan. 7:14.

The Saints who suffered martyrdom and lost their kingdom, will redeem it when they come with the Savior in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. Matt. 24:30. "Then shall the Lord Jesus be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thess. 1:7, 8. "And then shall that wicked one be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." 2 Thess. 2:8. "Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God; on them which fell severity, but towards the goodness, if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou shalt be cut off."—Rom. 11:22.

Notwithstanding the Saints are to come up through great tribulation, yet there is a glorious day of rest appointed and set apart for them, when they will reign. Still the kings of the earth, and the beast, or papacy, and the false prophet, or the outcroppings, Mahomedanism, or the converts of the same wonder-working spirits that John the Revelator saw. "And I saw three unclean spirits, like frogs, come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet; for they are spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth to the kings of the earth, to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty."—Rev. 15:13, 14.

The last beast that John saw, "Let him who hath wisdom count the number of the beast; for his number is six hundred, three score and six." Now the false prophet has an imperial job on hand, to deceive all these, as the Gentiles did not continue in his goodness. St. Paul said, they must be cut off. Rom. 11:22. "And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth and their armies, gathered together to make war against him who sat on the white horse, and against his army. And the beast, scarlet colored, was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast; and them that worshiped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire and brimstone. Then those that follow the Lamb whithersoever he goes, sitting on white horses, even the Bride the Lamb's wife, will possess the kingdom." Rev. 19:19, 20. "And the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens, shall be given to the people of the Saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Now the power that overcame the kingdom of our Lord set up eighteen hundred years ago, was Papacy, and it does not belong to any kingdom that ever has existed yet.

I hope all the readers of the Herald will read these lines carefully, and not be hasty to condemn.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—There is a great deal said on the subject of religion. But when we come to think rightly, we find "Without faith it is impossible to please God." We see, then, that we have not only to believe in him as God, but believe that he has given us a law, whereby to be governed. In rendering ourselves subservient to that law, we show to the world our implicit faith in him, as a God who is able to save all who put their trust in him. Then after examining ourselves to see if we be in the faith, and asking God to forgive our past sins, at the same time covenanting with him to keep his commandments inviolate, we can step into the water with a good conscience, and be baptized in the name of Jesus, for the remission of sins. Having advanced thus far, we are rightly equipped for a life-time service of the Lord our God; and at the end he will reward us with a happy admittance into his everlasting kingdom.

Bro. Joseph:—I left Hamburg, Iowa, on the fourteenth of present month. Arrived here the tenth. Left Bro. Kemp at Mill Creek Branch. By some mistake my appointment five miles from Hamburg, was not filled, as they did not come after me. In consequence I left there for home, having been absent just sixty days and preached forty nine times, and once since I came home, having baptized three and helped in the confirmation of same. Have also ministered to quite a number of the sick, and preached one funeral sermon outside of the membership of the church. I think if I had a mission I would stick to it, as I hated to leave the field; but I had no legitimate right there, further than an invitation from Bro. Kemp, the District President.

Yours,

CLARENCE STCLAIR.

Dear Herald Readers:—I enlisted in the work nine years ago, and rejoice in this glorious gospel. I have been afflicted for the last two years, and don't seem to get very much better. I ask you all to pray for me. I feel that the Lord has spared my life for some purpose, and may I be able to do my duty. Inasmuch as I have lived faithful, the Lord has truly blessed me. There are five of us in family, and I am the only one that belongs to this church, but I have hopes that others soon will testify to this latter day work.

Dear Saints, don't you see from what transpires every day around you, that this work is true.

Fight onward, this is the good fight, the fight of faith. We will all have trials and temptations; but don't be discouraged. The time will come when we will rejoice together.

I live five miles from Union, where our little band of Saints meets together. "Let us pray for one another, for the day is fading fast." I intend to try to live more faithful in the days to come than I have in the days gone by. Be mindful of me in your prayers.

I remain your sister in Christ,

EMMA SUTER.

ROCKWELL CITY, Iowa,

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Stamm and father made several efforts here in a school-house, but were bitterly opposed by the Methodists, who are the prevailing society here. They left us to ourselves. There was no reason with them. I am sorry to relate that the most prominent leader in the affair was suddenly cut off by his team running away. We sympathize with the family.

MONDAMIN, Iowa,

December 16th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—You are a welcome weekly visitor at our house. From you we derive spiritual food, so necessary for all who profess to be Latter Day Saints. Through your columns views are exchanged, by which light is thrown upon different subjects. Questions are asked and answered through the same.

In your last issue, a brother writing from London, England, speaks of Elias and Elijah as being two different persons, and asks some questions which I will try to answer. I admit that John the Baptist makes Christ the Elias in John 1:28; but in Matt. 11:15, Christ makes John the Elias. In Luke 1:17, the angel Gabriel, talking to the father of John, tells him what his mission will be. Compare Malachi 4:6, with Luke 1:17, and you will find, that the office-work of John and Elijah is the same. Shall we, therefore, say that these two are one and the same person. Read in this connection Matt. 17:10-14, Inspired Translation. Now to show that Elias and Elijah are one in Scripture, read Luke 4:25; James 5:17; 1 Kings 17:1; Rom. 11:2, 3; 1 Kings 19:10.

He wants to know when Elijah called down fire to consume the people, Luke 9:54. The answer is found in 2 Kings 1:10-12. It is evident to my mind, that John the Baptist came as a restorer, and this is the spirit and power of Elias. With love to all and malice to none,

I am your brother in the gospel of peace,

J. L. GUNSOLLEY.

OMAHA, December 25th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just returned home after being absent visiting different parts of the district. Notwithstanding the lack of faith and godly zeal manifested among some of the Saints, which causes many who believe to remain out of the Church, I still feel cheerful, and am encouraged by the Lord. May God speed the time, when the Saints will realize the importance of their mission, namely, to be saviors of men, not in word only, but in example, by letting our light shine before the world, that they, seeing our good works, may be constrained to believe and obey. If we all could realize the intent of the Savior in speaking to his Father, desiring that his people might all be one, which was that the world might believe that the Father had sent him, (John 17: 21), the work would spread much faster.

There is a great interest in some parts of the district, calls on every hand, but so few to answer them.

Yours in Christ,

W. M. RUMEL.

MARENGO, McHenry Co., Ill.
December 12th, 1883.

Bro. John S. Patterson:—By looking at my last published letter in Herald, you will discover that I did not make you to say that the whole district was in a "deplorable condition," but that all the branches "except two, were in a weak, lifeless and deplorable condition." Again: the statement of your letter as published in Herald, defining the condition of the district, is not nearly so strong as what you presented to me last summer. Thus I am misrepresented by your denial, made to appear as having falsified the facts. Will you please look over the ground, and if you consistently can, correct through the Herald; but if not, then I shall have to do that which I dislike to do, make necessary corrections myself. I wrote the statement simply for the sake of the illustration, not to condemn, discourage, or misrepresent.

Yours in bonds,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

Reply:

SANDWICH, DeKalb Co., Ill.,
December 20th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert:—Yours of the 12th I found waiting my arrival here yesterday, and in reply would say: Your referring to a private conversation had between us, was of very doubtful propriety under the circumstances, considering the feelings that have existed between the district and the mission in the past. I had been doing every thing to cast oil on the troubled waters, and had written to several requesting them to get openings for you to preach, and make your stay among them as pleasant as possible. When your article appeared, myself and others felt wounded, and looked upon it as a probing of the old wound, which we believed to be fast healing over. I never intended you, or any one else to understand the district to be in a deplorable condition, and have no recollection of the word deplorable being used in connection with the district, till I saw it in your published letter. As I then understood and now understand the matter, we were conversing about the condition of the Church as a whole, and recalling what we read in several letters published in the Herald, we concluded that quite a number of the branches were playing the part of the foolish virgins, and were in a cold and spiritless condition. And I made the remark that I found it so in my district, with a few, (not two) exceptions. This and nothing more was what I intended you to understand by my conversation. You ask me to believe that you wrote as you did, "only by way of illustration, not to condemn, discourage, or misrepresent." I accept your explanation. I did not wish you to understand me as you did, but as stated above. Do you accept my explanations?

Yours in bonds,

J. S. PATTERSON.

BLAIR, Nebraska,

December 22d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—After writing my last, I came to this place where I remained, preaching at night and visiting from house to house, distributing tracts and answering the various questions upon doctrine arising because of our visits; preaching in the private residence of Bro. W. T. Hicks, and making preparations to occupy a room rented and fitted up by the Saints and friends of the place and vicinity, until the 12th of November, when Bro. James Caffall came, and for three succeeding evenings held forth to the especial encouragement of some. Much prejudice was removed by the labor done and five were accepted into the fold of Christ, and at the present writing some more are at the door, knocking for admittance.

On November 16th, I left Blair in company with Bro. Caffall, to be in attendance at a two days' meeting held at Omaha, where I enjoyed a refreshing from the Lord, that gave me renewed strength to go on in so good a cause. Receiving especial encouragement from Bro. Caffall and Rumel, both of whom are well fitted for the positions occupied by them, and worthy to be heard in all decisions necessary to be made by them, by virtue of their callings and appointments. They are both especially zealous for the fair name of the church which they represent, which would be pleasingly acceptable were all who are called to represent the church dispositioned as they are in this respect.

On the 20th returned to Blair, where I remained till the 26th, when I visited with Bro. J. Peterson, preaching to a few of his neighbors, whom he had assembled at his house to hear us. On the following day commenced to preach at the school-house where we were refused admittance, but a few weeks before. Thus the Lord opens up the way before us. Good interest and a desire to hear more, manifested. "Come again" was their parting invitation. We then returned to Blair, where we remained till over Sunday, when we went to Fremont to assist in arrangements for the church building at that place and preaching the word. Preached with excellent liberty to fair congregations assembled in the residences of the Saints. The building committee have purchased a lot in an excellent location, one of the most beautiful parts of the city, and have further made arrangements for the commencement of the building, the laying of the foundation. The committee feel much encouraged at the present prospects. Some of the Saints have made considerable sacrifice, and nearly all seem to be straining every effort to have a neat building established in their midst dedicated to God. The committee wish to express thanks for money received from distant brethren in answer to notice in Herald. Would invite others to take notice and do likewise. I am sure all that is received will be used wisely, and with an eye single to the advancement of the cause in which all Saints have common interest. Beloved Saints, give in assisting the Saints in erecting this building, and I do not believe you will ever regret it.

I came to Kennard on the 12th of December, attending a prayer meeting of the Christian Church, at which time I gave out my appointment at that place. Remained there for three nights with increasing interest and attendance, and another invitation to "Come again," as they desired "to hear more." Returned again to Blair, preaching Sunday night. On Tuesday I went to what was once DeSota. The vision of days gone by is now vanished. No DeSota is there. Here was once one of the most prosperous branches of the Church, but of the Saints but one remains there, Sr. Ruby, who will be remembered by many of the brethren who preached there in the past. I enjoyed speaking at DeSota three evenings with increasing interest and attendance. Left with an earnest solicitation to return. I am now at this place, expecting to start for my home soon to take a rest, by making arrangements to go again. This is the rest a traveling Elder receives in this life of sacrifice. I have been treated with great kindness and confidence generally, for which I thank God, and my brethren.

One word in plainness to the Saints of the Northern Nebraska District, as one who loves you, and desires to see you blessed of God in all things. Dancing will never justify nor sanctify you in the sight of God, and the time spent in such folly and vanity will be required of you "in the day when every man's work will be tried of what sort it is." And to further mitigate against such reproach being brought upon the cause, the district conference has spoken and said that they would not tolerate such doings, and that those who would participate in such foolishness would do so contrary to the expressed will of those God has placed over you as your spiritual teachers. Remember dear Saints, that this is a day of warning, and not a day of ease and pleasure; a day of fasting, and not of feasting; a day of praying, and not of dancing; a day of watching that we should not enter into temptation, and not a day of entering into temptation; a day of judgment, and not of peace.

J. FRANK MINTUN.

Summary of News.

Dec. 21st.—Ten of the Glasgow dynamite fenians were found guilty at Edinburg. Five were sentenced to life-terms of imprisonment and five got seven years each.

Bismarck is reported to be opposed to the system of secret voting for members of the Reichstag, being heartily in sympathy with Von Puttkamer, the Minister of the Interior, in his opposition to present methods of exercising the franchise. The prince also believes that imperial institutions and the real desires of the people are not to be reconciled.

The Franco-Tonquin affair begins to reach something like a crisis. The French, after a very stubborn resistance, have captured five strongly-fortified villages which form the principal outposts of Sontag. The attack was made in force both by land and water, and the losses were considerable on both sides. The Chinese, however, still hold the fortress, and it is intimated that it will require very desperate fighting before the French can reach and capture it. Meanwhile in its ultimatum the Chinese Government announced that an attack upon Sontag or Bacninh would be considered a cause for war. The voting of the two credits and the forward movement of the French Admiral indicate that France has no intention of abandoning her position. It now remains to be seen whether China will resist or back squarely out.

The British Ministry has definitely refused to dispatch troops to the Soudan. It is possible that vacancies may be filled, but the army of occupation will not be increased. The King of Abyssinia is massing his troops at Adua, and threatening Massowah. It is stated that about the 1st of December Abyssinian Chiefs attacked an entrenched Egyptian position near Massowah and massacred 500 Egyptians. It is reported that Col. Sartorius revictualled the garrison in Sinkat for two months through friendly natives. It is hoped the garrison at Toka will be similarly relieved. The Governor of Toka telegraphs the Khedive of dissensions among the rebel Egyptian tribes along the Soukin and Berber route. The Hadendua tribe are fighting among themselves.

A telegram from Dr. Harmand, Via Saigon, confirms the serious previous accounts of the poisoning of the Anamite King Hiephema and says under the influence of the anti-French Mandarins Hiephema was succeeded by Kien-phua, a youth of fifteen.

The injury to the Czar of Russia by being thrown from a sledge while hunting is considered as endangering his life.

During the night of Nov. 28th, while the American schooner S. J. Watts, of Jonesport, Me., was sailing into the Bay of Port au Prince the vessel was boarded by a boat's crew from a Haytian gunboat and forced to turn from its course. The schooner was searched by the cut-throat crew, and Captain and seamen subjected to all manner of indignity. Not the slightest respect was paid to the American flag which floated at the peak.

The City of Mexico was yesterday the scene of a riot in which half a dozen people were killed. Great popular odium attaches to the nickel coins now in circulation there. This feeling made itself manifest when President Gonzales appeared on the plaza, and he was subjected to insults and rude treatment. Business was suspended. The bloodshed followed when Mexican troops quelled the disturbance. Diaz walked abroad and was cheered, which gives the affair a peculiar look. The dispatches, however, declare that no revolution is probable.

Dec. 22.—English Radicals are now anxious to bring about peace between France and China.

Old memories and traditions were revived in Lisbon, Portugal, yesterday by a strong shock of earthquake.

Railroad travel and traffic were seriously impeded by the snow-storm of to-day. Trains coming into Chicago were from half an hour to twelve hours behind schedule time. The delays at other points throughout the country were equally serious. Telegraphic communication was also much interrupted through the formation of ice on the wires.

A large meeting of Democrats and Republicans was held tonight at Salt Lake City Utah, for the purpose of indorsing President Arthur's recommendations for a Legislative Council for Utah; also for the purpose of indorsing Gov. Murray's stand for the laws and for good government. The meeting was addressed by leading men, and strong resolutions were passed. The country is appealed to to sustain the President and Governor. Congress is earnestly asked to pass the laws recommended by the president.

Official statistics just published state that 4,958 suicides occurred in Prussia during the year ending in September. Most of the male victims were workmen, and one-fifth of the whole number were women. The newspaper comment on the causes which impel so large a percentage of the poorer classes to seek relief in self-destruction, and some of them, which are inclined toward socialism insist that the present poverty creating system of government is to blame for the despair which leads to so cruel a remedy.

Dec. 24th.—The Arabic official newspaper says the governor of Berber has telegraphed the Khedive that Hicks Pasha and 3,000 Egyptians were killed in the fight with El Mahdi, but Alaedin Pasha, with the remainder of the Egyptian army, encamped at Melbass, where the troops are being provisioned by friendly tribes. The Governor of Dongola, in telegraphing accounts of the fighting between Hicks Pasha and El Mahdi, maintains that the Egyptians were victorious and that the army is intact and is now encamped at Melbass. He adds that Mahdi is at El Obeid, deserted by his followers, who reproached him with not being the Mahdi because he failed to vanquish the Egyptians by divine aid.

A married woman named Vanderlinder was arrested at Leyden, Holland, charged with having murdered the last few years sixteen persons. The victims were nearly all members of her own family. She insured their lives first, and received the insurance money after death. The woman confessed her guilt. It is supposed she poisoned five of her own children.

Dec. 25th.—It is said that the pirates are fighting very bravely in Tonquin, and that the Chinese, who have not yet come into battle, are making preparations which indicate they will do as well as the pirates. The French are believed to have understated their losses. This news is from Spanish sources.

It is asserted in Madria, Spain, that the Chinese troops took no part in the defense of Sontag, and that the French losses in the battle were much greater than have been officially stated. The preparation for the defense of the Red River delta by the Chinese continue on a large scale.

The 2d of December another terrible disaster happened to the Egyptian troops twenty-four miles from Suakin. The force consisted of 500 blacks, 200 Bashi-Bazouks, and twenty cavalry. According to one account it was proceeding to relieve Sincat, which is besieged by the Arabs. According to another it was reconnoitering.

Fourteen hours after starting two native officers returned to Suakin, reporting that the force was almost annihilated. Of the blacks only nine had returned by the 4th inst. The total loss is said to be 680. Two European officers were with them, and the whole was under the command of an Egyptian Major and some native staff officers. The officers say that, being surrounded by 5,000 men, the troops formed a square. The blacks were on three faces and the Bashi-Bazouks on the fourth. The Bashi-Bazouks fell back, throwing the blacks into disorder. The latter especially fought with great bravery, back to back, against overwhelming numbers.

The apathy of the native authorities at Saukin is unequalled. The advanced forts at Saukin are fired on every midnight. Friendly natives have been attacked. The telegraph wire to Djeddah and Jeddah was lately cut within a mile from Saukin. In consequence of the disaster at Suakin the garrison is now reduced to 1,000 men. Dervishes, it is known, are appearing in Upper Egypt, and propose to preach a holy war, as they have already done at Sennaar. The whole country beyond Egypt proper is ablaze. In military opinion it will be impossible for Baker Pasha to march to Berber under present circumstances, as the troops are worthless at Suakin. Baker Pasha will for the time only watch events.

British journals bring interesting details of the industrial census of India in 1881. The total population of the country is 253,891,821, and of this enormous number only 85,544 persons are British born subjects, and 56,646 are soldiers and 12,088 females. Practically less than 17,000 male civilians, wielding an army of 56,000 men control the vast Empire. The whole number of Europeans returned is only 146,612. The occupations of 102,629,000 persons are defined and of these 71,199,000 are engaged in agriculture or the care of animals. In industrial occupations 21,041,000 persons are engaged, 12,859,000 males and 8,182,000 females. The workers in cotton and flax number 5,485,455; in clothing, 2,815,280; in vegetable food, 3,165,429; in stone clay and earthenware, 1,850,974; in houses and buildings, 836,453; in gums and resins, 762,526; in bamboo, cane, rush straw, and leaves, 680,732; in gold silver, and precious stones, 472,956; and in iron and steel only 473,361. Engaged in the work of government, national, local and municipal, are 1,843,000 persons, of whom 315,000 are classed as belonging to the army. The professional classes embrace 1,451,000 persons. It is interesting to notice how widely the proportion of persons engaged in these several departments; in India differs from that which prevails in Western nations. On the other hand, it will be a surprise to many to learn that in the distinctively manufacturing employments as many as 12,500,000 persons are engaged in India, though that proportion—about one in eight of the persons employed—is considerably less than in this country. One would suppose that 5,500,000 workers in cotton and flax ought to be able to supply the population without the importation of such a vast quantity of goods as England sends; but the manufacture is mainly by processes far less effective and economical than those used in the Western nations, though the manufacture by machinery has of late grown rapidly in India.

Dec. 26.—At Geneva a new Anarchist journal named the Explosion has appeared.

The latest advices received say El Mahdi is still at El Obeid. Three thousand Arabs are reported to be threatening Duem.

The Orangemen are making great preparations to oppose the Nationalist meeting announced to be held at Dromore, County Down, January 2d.

A fatal affray occurred at Harbor Grace, N. F., to-day, the results of which may be portentous. The Orangemen held their annual public procession, with flags, band of music, and the full insignia of their order. When the procession was passing Sheephead it was fired into by an armed mob of their antagonistic countrymen numbering some 300, that had entrenched themselves behind a snow-bank. Three men were instantaneously shot dead, named Mercer, Jeans, and Callahan. Numbers of the processionists are wounded, some fatally, some seriously, and many slightly.

The Central Government has dispatched several squads of cavalry and infantry police by special trains and by steamer to the scene of the riot. The city is in a high fever of commotion and panic, and fears are entertained that the disturbance may develop into proportions too vast for the local authorities to cope with.

There were two general fights in South Carolina yesterday. Four men were killed, and several wounded.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Dec. 21.—The village of Venio, in Switzerland, has been destroyed by fire.

Loss by fire at Stewartville, Mo., $20,000. Chicago, Ill., $125,000. Nechesville, Texas, $14,000. Milan, O., $6,000. New Orleans, Tenn., $25,000. A large herd of cattle and horses in Indian Territory, $10,000. Rochester, Pa., $10,000.

The bark Boroma, from Savannah, Ga., rescued the chief officer from the wreck of the ship Regina, from Philadelphia, which went to pieces in a gale on the 4th inst. Two of the crew died from exposure; the rest took a boat and a raft and are still missing.

The survivors of the Spanish mail steamer St. Augustine, which was burned Sunday in the Bay of Biscay, state that thirty-eight men were on board when the four boats put off. It is learned that all were lost, as when the steamer was last seen a heavy sea was running and the vessel was all on fire and there were no other boats. Several of the saved were severely burned.

Dec. 22.—The Jewish school and synagogue at Galata, a suburb of Constantinople, have been burned. The fire broke out in the basement of the German Israelite school-house. The flames spread with such rapidity as to prevent a majority of the children from escaping through doors. Many were thrown or leaped from the upper windows into blankets in the street below. Many were thus injured. Nineteen charred bodies have been recovered. Thirty altogether are missing. The Directress of the school was seized with fright and threw herself from a window and was killed.

Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $15,000. Grand Rapids, Mich., $50,000. Montreal, Que., $35,000.

Near Paris, Ark., five men were drowned, while trying to cross a swollen stream.

The ship Minnie M. Watts, which sailed from New York for San Francisco the 12th of last May with a cargo of railroad iron, has not been heard from since she passed Cape Horn seventy days after leaving port. She is now ninety days overdue, and it is feared that the vessel and crew have been lost.

At Virginus Mine, Colorado, an avalanche of snow killed six persons, and six others were probably fatally injured. The snow is four to five feet deep in the neighboring mountain towns.

Dec. 24.—Loss by fire at St. Louis, Mo., $50,000. Two firemen were killed and four wounded by falling walls.

Today was marked by an almost incredible number of railroad accidents, no less than seven happening in Indiana alone. Near Salem, in that State, a passenger-train went through a bridge into Blue River. Seven persons were crushed to death or drowned, and several injured. Near Avon, Ind., a passenger-train ran into a freight, telescoping the caboose and several cars, resulting in the loss of at least two lives. At Fort Wayne a passenger train on the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad was struck by a switch engine and half a score of passengers injured. On the Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, about twenty miles from Indianapolis, spreading rails caused the complete wreck of a passenger train, though no one was fatally hurt. In addition to this terrible chapter of Christmas casualties, there were two accidents in Minnesota, three in Ohio, and sporadic cases in Connecticut, Illinois, Maine, and elsewhere.

Capt. Bain and five sailors of the ship Regina, which foundered in the gale Dec. 4th, have been rescued, and brought to Cork, Ireland, after having been on a raft five days without food or water.

The steamer Severn exploded her boiler at Carthagena, in the United States of Colombia, killing seven persons and doing considerable damage.

An explosion of gas in Shoenberger & Co.'s stable at Pittsburg, Pa., early this morning completely wrecked their brick stable and instantly killed two valuable horses and four draft mules. Loss $10,000.

The falling of a cage in Pratt Mine, Birmingham, Ala., killed two men and wounded thirteen others.

Dec. 25th.—Loss by fire at St. Louis, Mo., $100,000. One man burned to death. Utica, N. Y., $15,000. Rutland, Vt., $35,000. Cape Girardeau, Mo., $60,000.

It is stated that a passenger train met with an accident on the railroad between Avricourt and Paris, France, and that many passengers were killed or injured.

It is a disagreeable Christmas in the South of England today, with the weather as execrable as can be imagined, and with dense fogs not only in London, but all along the coast. Many vessels are reported ashore, especially along the stretch of land between the Lizard and Portland light.

Dec. 26.—Loss by fire at Fargo, Dak., $36,500. Bloomfield, Ind., $22,000. Cameron, Mo., $4,000. Athol, Mass., $70,000. Waterford, Ont., $30,000. Utica, N. Y., $40,000.

The report that many persons were killed or seriously injured by an accident to a railway train between Avricourt and Paris is incorrect. A train was thrown from the track, but only some freight-cars were shattered.

John S. Austietz and his two daughters were sleighing yesterday near Bluffington, O., and while crossing the Lake Erie & Western track were struck by an express and all killed.

Still another avalanche in the Colorado mountains, happening at noon of Monday last, carried away a shaft-house in which were fourteen men. Eight were killed outright, two were wounded, and four dug themselves out. The catastrophe is reported from Telluride, Ouray county, Colo.

Two parents and five children were drowned in Hardy Creek, Indiana, Sunday night, by a sudden rise of the stream.

Louisville, Ky., and parts of Ohio, are threatened by a flood.

The bark Mohawk, of Quebec, three days out from New York, lay at the mouth of New Haven Harbor, flying a signal of distress. Last Saturday she was ready for sea with a crew of nineteen men all told and a cargo of oil for Calcutta. It was dark Saturday night when the Mohawk passed Hell Gate into the sound and the weather very cold. The men suffered terribly. The man at the wheel had to be relieved every ten minutes to keep from freezing. Not a light could be seen, and the pilot was compelled to use his own judgment in keeping the ship in deep water. The lookout at the topgallant cross-trees had to be constantly changed in order to prevent him from dropping at his post. Everything was coated with ice. All orders to work the ship were executed most painfully by the crew, who before midnight were frostbitten to a man. The gale stiffened and the darkness increased so that full watches were of necessity kept on deck, and these watches were shifted every fifteen minutes. Finally the ship was hove to. Sunday morning the ship's thermometer indicated 25 below zero. The men could not stand the cold, and at 8 o'clock nine of them were unable to move. The ship was finally tacked and headed for New Haven. In setting sail one sailor slipped and fell to the deck headforemost. In the afternoon he died. Shortly after nine o'clock Sunday night the Mohawk reached her present anchorage. Every attention was paid the sufferers, who passed the night in the keenest of agony. Monday morning an attempt was made to get the ship under way and beat her into New Haven, but there were not enough able-bodied men to weigh the anchor. The long boat was cleared away to reach the shore, but there were not hands enough to handle her. The day was one of horror. In the fore-castle lay the corpse of the sailor. In the cabin were nine men, groaning under the maddening pains of their injuries. Yesterday morning the pilot came ashore in his skiff. Assistance was then sent the unfortunate crew, and the nine sailors were placed in the hospital here.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

Dec. 25.—The sales of land by the Government are rightly mentioned by the Financial Chronicle as evidence of the enormous development and growth of Western States and Territories. The sales amounted in the fiscal year 1882-'83 to 16,830,455 acres, the previous year to 12,500,000, once before to 9,000,000 acres, and in no other year exceeded 8,600,000. The increase last year was mainly in Dakota, where 6,689,595 acres were taken, in Nebraska 1,315,104 acres, in Minnesota 1,292,969 acres, in Washington Territory 763,779 acres, and in Oregon 499,770 acres—in the five States and Territories 10,561,217 acres, against 7,073,168 the previous year, and 4,599,961 in the fiscal year 1881, when the total disposals were less than half as large as they were last year. Thus about three-quarters of the increase for two years, and more than half of the total disposals for three years, appear to have been in the regions directly affected by the opening of the Northern Pacific. But it is proper to remember that the great frauds under the Homestead and Timber acts, which have recently been disclosed, render it probable that a part of the land taken in the Northwest will not be immediately brought into use by settlers.

The quantity of coal sent from anthracite mines of Pennsylvania thus far this year has been 30,403,081 tons, against 28,065,602 tons to date last year. There has been an increase of over 2,000,000 tons in the Wyoming regions, over 400,000 each by the Delaware & Hudson and Delaware & Lackawanna, and nearly 500,000 by the Pennsylvania; and about 600,000 from the Schuylkill district, nearly all by the Reading. The delivery from the Lehigh district shows a decrease.

The cokemakers in and about Pittsburg have determined to reduce production to the extent of one day each week. There are 9,549 ovens in the district, of which 8,403 are in blast. The new establishments in West Virginia are able to send as good coke as that of Connellsville to western points, and the competition from that quarter probably has something to do with the dullness about Pittsburg, but the chief cause, of course, has been the partial suspension of iron manufacture in that region.

Dec. 26th.—Amos D. Smith of Providence, R. I., failed for $1,000,000. A host of other minor failures are reported from many parts of the country.

Selected Poetry.

WORK AND WAIT.

A husbandman who many years
Had plowed his fields and sown in tears,
Grew weary with his doubts and fears.
"I toil in vain! these rocks and sands
Will yield no harvest to my hands;
The best seeds rot in barren lands.
"My drooping vine is withering;
No promised grapes its blossoms bring;
No birds among its branches sing.
"My flock is dying on the plain;
The heavens are brass—they yield no rain;
The earth is iron—I toil in vain!"
While yet he spake a breath had stirred
His drooping vine, like wing of bird,
And from its leaves a voice he heard:
"The germs and fruits of life must be Forever hid in mystery,
Yet none can toil in vain for me.
"A mightier hand more skilled than thine
Must hang the clusters on the vine,
And make the fields with harvest shine.
"Man can but work; God can create;
But they who work, and watch, and wait,
Have their reward, though it come late.
"Look up to heaven! behold and hear
The clouds and thunders in thy ear—
An answer to thy doubts and fear."
He looked, and lo! a cloud-draped car,
With trailing smoke and flames afar,
Portending elemental war.
And every thirsty flock and plain
Was rising up to meet the rain,
That came to clothe the fields with grain.
And on the clouds he saw again
The covenant of God with men,
Re-written with his rainbow pen;
"Seed time and harvest shall not fail,
And, though the gates of hell assail,
My truth and promise shall prevail."

HAPPINESS.

ALL desire and are seeking after it. It is the prime object of human ambition, and life without it is an acknowledged failure. It may be right to assert that the science of life is to know how to obtain happiness, present and future. Thousands fail in their pursuit of this desirable object or condition, by reason of a wrong conception of the principle, and the conditions conducive to its enjoyment. True happiness is based upon right principles. Life is a building, and to be of actual worth to its occupant, must be well built and based upon a firm foundation. From the very nature of things, the beginning of any structure is the basis upon which it is to rest. And hence it is, that before life can become of real profit to man, he must lay his foundation upon the solid rock of truth and righteousness. What moments and hours of grief and sorrow, what years of folly and consequent pain, what wretchedness and dark despair might be avoided, if the reality of this sentiment was understood and appreciated. "Whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," is but the revealment of an immutable law, verified in agricultural as well as moral life. He who sows "wild oats" has no reason to expect a wheat harvest. And who is so blind as not to see, that one who spends one half—the first and best half of his life in what he calls "sowing wild oats," must suffer great loss. If anything is gained, it is a knowledge of the depths of sorrow, and will this compensate for the waste of vital powers which might have been used to the advancement of self and others, to the honor and glory of God. Experience is a school in which we all learn more or less according to our aptness and diligence in observation. But he is a dull scholar who requires a lifetime to learn the lesson, that "the wages of sin is death."

The significant fact should be impressed upon the young, that in youth they are laying a foundation upon which to build in after years, and the thought to parents is, that they help, more perhaps than they realize, to fashion the future career of their offspring. The father who stoops so far beneath his position as parent, as to use vulgar or profane language, or engage in any immoral conduct in the presence of his child, has no right to complain, except of himself, if in after years, he or she is found in bad company. He is simply reaping the reward of his labor. He has sown to the flesh, and is reaping corruption, whereas his influence might have been for their good. Who can chronicle the instances where young men and women have been rescued from ruin by the reminiscence of parting words of a loving father or mother. The writer does not recollect the kiss of his dying mother, but has always thought, that could he have remembered some gentle word of tenderness and love, it would have served as a restraint from wrong, and a strong encouragement to do right.

Truly, if there is one moral obligation higher than another between mortals, it is that of parents toward their children. To feed, clothe, and educate them well, is a laudable thing; but those who "omit the weightier matters," by failing to teach them right principles and pure morals, both by precept and example are shorn of much reward. Our happiness, both in time and eternity, is dependent upon a right conception of the object and uses of present life, together with a proper disposition of it. A man's conception of happiness and the conditions prompting it, may be determined by the course he pursues through life. Everything goes to show, that earth with all its appurtenances, was made for the use and to promote the well being of man—not one, but all. And he who makes it his sole object to possess himself of much, to the exclusion of others, has a wrong conception of life and its use, and hence is unhappy. "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding," proves that man is a dual being—physical and spiritual. The former is of elements in common with mother earth and hence is in sympathy with, and may be supplied by her; but the latter—the spiritual or intellectual man has sympathies, desires and aspirations, not reciprocated by blind, unintelligent matter; and one who supposes the wants of his spiritual being may be supplied by an accumulation of earthly store, labors under a misapprehension of the intended uses of these things. That the comfort of the physical man is in a degree essential to the beatitude of the spiritual is doubtless true; but it should be borne in mind, that thirst is slaked as well by water from the gently flowing fountain as from the ponderous river. What brings happiness to one will to all, and so it is, that one human being should have no desires or ends to meet, detrimental to the well being of any. And he who observes not this rule plunges himself in a condition foreign to happiness—momentary gratification perhaps, but endless sorrow. Wise lips have said, "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world, and lose his own soul."

Should any think that riches alone will make them happy, let them imagine themselves in possession of the whole world, stripped of every other inhabitant, and we think they would be willing to share with one or two at least, just for company. Man is a social creature, possessed of many lawful desires, to which self can not respond. We are brethren by creation, made in the image of God. As such we should love one another, thus honoring our Creator; and he who learns not this lesson will fall short of the glory of God. Suspended upon the pivot of our agency, to do good, or evil, and so be happy, or miserable, is made optional with us. God is happy. And who shall not say, that the secret of this felicity is his power and will to do good. The writer believes that man, though finite, possesses in a limited degree every attribute of Deity, and hence may properly become "the sons of God." It is supposed that those who study self-interest are selfish, which as a rule, may be true; but it is equally safe to say, that he who comprehends self-interest will be generous, loving, and kind; and no one can really afford to be otherwise, though this fact is oft times lost sight of by many. Life is a battle-field; not to conquer others, but self. We have all to gain and nothing to lose.

In my muse I see two men, both created for the same purpose,—to do good to each other, and glorify their Father in Heaven. But alas, the only similarity seems to be in their forms—both made in the image of God. The countenance of one is like the sunlight; wherever he goes its genial warmth is felt. The flowers of human happiness spring beneath its rays, and earth is made lovely by his presence. Kind words and acts are freely bestowed by him, and he is not impoverished, but his store increases. We follow him through life. He is not a paragon, but he seeks to make others happy, and in so doing is made happy himself. He does not dread death, for he believes it will be a change for the better. His motive in life is to do good, his rule is to forgive. And now as silvered hairs adorn his placid brow, he is ready to rest with God in peace. Happy, wise, and fortunate man. "O, let me live the life of the righteous, and may my last end be like his." But as tares are among wheat, and thistles among flowers, so selfish men are found. With sadness we turn and follow the other—man, shall we call him? Yes, he is a man, a human being, but how unlike the other. Instead of a genial, smiling face, hatred and distrust are there written. He offers no encouragement to any one, for he cares for none but self. Darkness and gloom follow in his path. He makes no sunshine, and hence enjoys none. He is a friend to no one, and so no one can be his friend. Thus he passes through life. Poor, unfortunate, and unhappy man. More to be pitied than despised. Do you ask, What is such a man living for? What does he seek? Just what all men are living and seeking for, happiness. "He has no right to expect," you say. True, he has not. "Then why does he lead such a life?" We answer, He is deceived. He has mistaken sand for gold. In his eagerness to supply the wants of the physical being, he has forgotten he has a soul—a spiritual entity—susceptible of exquisite happiness, or acute misery, and so the latter and better man is left to perish for want of proper nourishment, care, and cultivation.

The apostle, apparently with the seer's eye, looked upon the resurrection, and explained thus: "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive, but every man in his own order. There is a glory of the sun, and a glory of the moon, and a glory of the stars; and as one star differs from another star in glory, so also [in like manner] is the resurrection from the dead."

Nature teaches us to be kind, loving, generous, cheerful, and happy. Amplitude is written on all the handiwork of God; so selfishness is reprov'd. Mother earth has responded to the physical wants of her children, for six thousand years, more or less; yet doubtless has suffered no loss, while stars above and flowers beneath, all breathe their sentiments of cheerfulness and love. The work of a flower lies in its ability to do good by gratifying, at least two of man's physical senses; and were we to follow the list, we should learn that all things were created for usefulness to something else rather than self, and we have not learned as yet that man—the noblest of God's creations on earth—is an exception to this rule, and it is true that his moral worth, as well as his happiness, depends upon his willingness to do for others, as well as himself.

The only perfect type of humanity was found in the personage of Jesus of Nazareth; and his was a life work for others. How contemptible in the sight of heaven a man must appear who cares and labors, only for self. Some one has said that "Happiness is not a gift, but an attainment." Here, as in most cases, the golden mean lies between the extremes. Evidently, happiness is both an attainment and a gift. While it is true that it is attained by noble and continued efforts to do good, it should not be overlooked that its enjoyment is but the acknowledgment of divine favor.

If there is one place above another, where continual peace and quietude should be found, it is at home. Home! What tender memories cling around the word. There are hearts that beat in unison with our own. A smile steals gently over our face as we think of loving companion, and bright-eyed children. With heart uplifted in silent prayer, we invoke heaven's blessing upon them. Home should be made the center of attraction for the young. A variety of good books should be there. The Herald, Hope, and Advocate, should be there. The songs of Zion should be sung there. If convenient, instrumental music should be made there. The excellency of the gospel should be exemplified there, as the Spirit of God burns upon the altar of every heart. Let discordant and angry passions be banished from the home circle, and confidence and love be the ruling elements.

That the Saints may live up to their exalted privileges, thus honoring themselves and God, we humbly pray. The introduction of the gospel of peace and power, the advancement made in knowledge of the arts and sciences, and the enlightenment of the world at large, as "many go to and fro," and "knowledge is increased," all betoken the dawning of a new era. And as hoary headed Time wafts us toward the shores of eternal bliss, let us chime our anthems of praise to Him who liveth forever and ever.

Fraternally yours,
G. S. HYDE.

MEDITATIONS.

THIS life is a mystery to many: but there are intimations to the observant and studious, that cause fond hope of a better life beyond; and that there is Infinite wisdom in the Creator, mingled in and through all the mysteries of this present life; yea, through all the ills, misery, and woe of mortal life. Now for consideration. "As in Adam all die, [by reason of the fall], even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Then every soul who has lived, and shall live, from Adam down to the morn of resurrection, will come forth from the spirit world, take a body, and live again. Christ is the Savior of all, especially of them that believe. There is a common salvation spoken of by Jude, and a special salvation spoken of by Paul. Every one is to receive a reward according to his works. In Eden the happiness was not complete; yet far exceeding any since the disobedience of our first parents, the curse and division of the earth. Adam and Eve then had nothing to wish for or to fear. They had perfect health and strength. They were not obliged to struggle and toil for food and garments. Life eternal and constant pleasure were before them, if obedient to their Creator, which was as easy and pleasant as their life and condition,—requiring no cross, anxiety, trembling fear or strain of mind, nor struggle of heart; but they had never been ill, never sinned, never been in want; and knew no suffering, nor dread, nor fear. Therefore, their happiness was incomplete; as they had never tasted bitter life; they could not, and of course did not, enjoy the sweet life they then had in the blooming fragrant garden of Eden, filled with delicious fruits, beautiful flowers, birds, and everything desirable to enliven the soul;

please the eye, and gladden the heart. Yet they knew not the wisdom of their Creator, in allowing Satan, a third person or character, in the first act of the grand drama of Edenic bliss, human misery, and final redemption, or restoration of the family of man to enjoyment of life eternal unmixed with evil or discomfort of any sort, a greater bliss than Eden, because of the grand tableaux, death and he that had power to tempt and entice to evil, and had power to inflict with ailments, disease and death, destroyed.

They (Adam and Eve) knew not of this grand drama planned out by their Father above, of which they were the ones to begin the first act of the same. They knew not that it was so designed, decided upon and devised by the councils of heaven, that an evil power, or one who had power to tempt and entice to disregard and disobey the commands of the Great King, Creator and Ruler of all the universe, was to enter Eden, and perform with his subtle art to bring in the poison of sin, suffering and death; to thereby cause a bitter stream, so to speak, to flow from a land flowing then as it were with milk and honey, terminating in an ocean of bitter strife, misery and woe, overflowing the whole earth, because of the curse inflicted through the disobedience of man.

Says one: "I can't see the justice nor goodness of a God, in designing and causing so much distress, terrible calamity and unpleasantness of life, as it is now and has been in every age of the world's history."

Well, my friends, to me it magnifies the goodness, the wisdom, and justice of the Great King and Creator of all; for in the contemplation of this grand and beautiful scheme of man's fall from imperfect bliss to restoration to happiness more complete,—when suffering, evil and death should be no more. By research of sacred writ, and willingness to so believe, the understanding enlarged to reach from time to eternity, it gives an assurance that God, the Great Creator and Ruler of all the universe, is good above all that is good; that his love, mercy and compassion are such, that it is his constant study and work. His greatest anxiety, highest aim, and most priceless object is to bring to pass the eternal life—an immortal life of never ending pleasure and peace to man. And why not? Is not man His noblest work? Are we not told by one of God's servants, that man was made a little lower than the angels? And are we not informed from the most reliable testimony, that God possesses all power—that nothing is impossible to him—and that His nature is love; that he is full of mercy and compassion, without partiality, etc. Then can we not easily believe that he will care more for the noblest part of His creation than for any others? And is there not more joy in thus believing than otherwise? All who are willing to thus believe will of course answer in the affirmative, and never wish to change their belief for the contra-imaginings of wicked men, or the fictitious doctrines of condemned devils, who delight to terrify and discourage, and who "lure but to destroy."

Then brethren, sisters and friends, let us drive away from before us all we can every desponding thought, every foolish fear and unreasonable doubt. Let us "Sing and be content." Let us rejoice in the goodness of God and the plan of redemption. Let us give Him all the glory. Let us encourage ourselves and others all we can to obey God, and live for the life to come. Let us say nothing rather than speak ill of any. Let us forgive as we hope to be forgiven. Let us condemn none, as we hope to not be condemned.

INFERIOR.

KINDNESS.

THE saying is as true as it is old, that "Time is money." The professed object of all Elders, is to do the greatest amount of good, to the greatest number, and in the best and surest way. The Book of Covenants enjoins upon Elders to refrain from preaching, unless they have the Spirit. In my experience of fifteen years, I have been led to see the wisdom that governed in directing as above. How can an Elder be uniformly kind to all persons, under all circumstances, unless he is in possession of the Spirit of God? I can look back and see here and there circumstances in connection with my teaching, that were almost barren of good results because of the spirit which controlled me. I was spending time and money and desired to do good; but the results were not what I desired. Why? Because the kindness I manifested was adulterated. One of the great hindrances to our doing good is our prejudices. How many Elders, ministers and lay members, think you, are entirely free from prejudice? I will speak for myself. I could discover prejudice in others, but not in myself. I now call to mind circumstances, when I should have attended other meetings than our own, and did not because of my prejudice. Is it to be wondered at, that we are treated by others as we treat them? I have come to the conclusion, that I am not without prejudice. Our prejudice may not be of the same degree of hardness, but equally mischievous. If any of us conclude that we are entirely free from this evil, for fear that some of the seed may remain, let us take the telescope of examination, and carefully, prayerfully and honestly, examine our hearts, and if a seed remains let us, by the help of the Lord, eradicate it. We can not do better than to apply this scripture: "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith." If we are in the faith, we will love the Lord. "If a man love me, he will keep my word, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." If the Father and Son have an abiding place in our hearts, it will be manifest through our kindness towards all. If the Spirit of our Master controls us in all we do and say, how much good we would be instrumental in doing. If we were only careful to observe the scripture,—"To do good and communicate forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased," we would find life a pleasure; and instead of manifesting a diseased state of mind, we would possess a healthy, cheerful spirit; and continually scatter sunshine all around us. All who profess to be the followers of Christ, are under a solemn obligation to observe the "Law of the Lord." What a great amount of good we could accomplish by a close observance of the "law." When we are reviled and our good is evil spoken of, how do we receive it? Are we careful not to revile again? If we would do good, we must be kind. "Be kind unto all men, gentle, apt to teach, patient." We must be careful about what we teach, and how we teach. In our zeal to accomplish something great and good, it is possible to do harm, and injure the cause we are laboring to advance. In order that we may accomplish the greatest amount of good, we must perform our work with a kind, gentle and forbearing spirit. If under all circumstances, we would maintain a uniformly kind deportment toward all persons, we would be instrumental in doing great good. Are we under an obligation to do these things, and to observe the "law?" Yes, emphatically. Instead of saying hard things about those who differ from us, let us treat them kindly, and try to help them to a better understanding of what we consider right. "A word fitly spoken, is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." While we pray for a revival of the "work of the Lord," let us bear in mind that the answer to our prayers will be in accordance with our works, or the example of our lives. "Be ye kind, tender hearted, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace."

J. LAKEMAN.

A SUPPOSITION.

Bro. Joseph:—When I read Brother Kelley's letter in the Herald, of December 8th, 1883, the thought occurred to me, Is it possible for the Saints to respond to his appeal; and we believe it is without injury to any.

We will suppose that in the four hundred branches there is an average of five persons who use tobacco, and each one uses twenty-five cents' worth each week, (very few use less and many use more), and that half of the time during the year they quit its use, which would amount to $2,600. The 15,000 on branch records, divided into families of five, would be 3,000, and they make a sacrifice of the use of one pound of tea, which would amount to $3,000; also fifty cents worth of coffee, amounting to $1,500. Each member of the 3,000 families saves fifty cents in buying clothing, (which would injure none, for often merchants discount more) which would amount to $7,500; and every member of branches give a nickle, which would amount to $500, a grand total of $15,100, which would give seventy-five Elders $200 each, and $100 remaining.

There can be no harm done by trying it. Suppose we all try, and see what can be done by a less effort than we make in temporal affairs.

SERMON ON DIVORCE BY REV. DR. ARTHUR MITCHELL.

THOU shalt not commit adultery.—Exodus, 20:14. Of the Ten Commandments two are especially designed to protect the family. This fact would of itself exhibit the importance in God's estimation of that sacred institution. By far the most generous of all earthly sources of happiness is the home. Religion herself, in her endeavors to advance human virtue and enjoyment, has no ally equal to a pure and peaceful home. It is a welcome proof of God's great kindness, of his regard for our daily lives, that he has taken the pains to guard so sacredly by two solemn and specific commandments this fountain from which life's choicest and most enduring pleasures flow.

He speaks first to children, telling them to honor father and mother. Filial obedience unlocks to us at once half the joys of life. What parent must not feel a peculiar thankfulness to God when he finds his authority over his children—that which he knows underlies all their happiness—so kindly and perpetually reinforced by this sacred and eternal voice.

A similar token of God's wise love is found in the Seventh Commandment, designed especially to protect the relation of marriage. He has shown his regard for that sacred institution which is the starting point of the family and the State. A Christian marriage, springing from affection, regulated by prudence, must ever be to the mass of mankind the best of earthly blessings, more fruitful of those daily aids and joys with which God meant to strengthen and gladden our life below, than any other gift which His providence can afford. Over this holy spring, fountain of so much earthly joy and of so much religious blessing, God has set a celestial guard. Here stands the sleepless angel of his law.

By this commandment which we consider to-day, God would warn off from our lives and souls all those sins of every shade which can pollute or in any way pervert marriage. The commandment is "exceeding broad." It is the divine shield thrown over marriage, and it forbids accordingly everything which can tarnish its sacred purity, or detract from the blessings which, in its own constitution, it is adapted to bring. It forbids everything which can lower the estimate of marriage in the mind of the individual, or disqualify him for its holy responsibilities, everything which can tend to weaken the sense of its sacredness, tempt to the breach of its solemn covenant, or degrade it from its sanctity and usefulness in the community at large.

I need not stop to prove to this audience that marriage is not only surrounded by divine guardianship, but that it is itself a divine institution. It has something far deeper for its foundation than a mere human contract. In entering upon it we covenant with God as well as with a fellow creature. The institution itself had a divine origin. Its charter and its law are from God. This has been widely forgotten. Its merely human and secular side has been too exclusively held up before the community, leaving out of view its religious nature, its character as an ordinance of God. It has accordingly been degraded from its Biblical position, practically regarded by many as merely an affair of mutual consent, and capable of being contracted or terminated subject only to the provisions of human law. From this vulgar estimate of marriage legalized errors have sprung, which in turn have confirmed the false views of its character, and aided an irreligious philosophy in loosening its holy bonds.

In regard to the divine ordination of marriage, I need adduce but a single passage of Scripture, a passage in which both its origin and its nature are at once shown. The words to which I refer were spoken by Christ himself, though it is a very significant fact, especially as bearing upon the questionings respecting the Old Testament, so current in our day, that they are only a repetition by Him, almost verbatim, of the language of Genesis, and draw all their force from the validity of Old Testament history. You will find them in the nineteenth chapter of Matthew. The Pharisees had come to him with various inquiries on the subject of divorce, and Jesus answered and said unto them: "Have ye not read that He who made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said, 'For this cause shall a man leave father and mother and shall cleave to his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh?' Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. 'What, therefore, God has joined together let not man put asunder.'"

Marriage then is, by the very terms of its original institution, the joining together of two persons by God. It is God who joins them together. The relation is one created by divine ordination. When once entered upon it can not be terminated by any merely human enactment. If terminated, it can only be by the same authority which first established it. This is the Savior's teaching.

But the question was then immediately asked by the Pharisees, "Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement and to put her (the wife) away?" Our Lord replies: "Moses, because of the hardness of your heart suffered you to put away your wives, but from the beginning it was not so." This remark gives the key, not only to the Mosaic legislation upon this subject, but to others also of the Jewish civil laws. The civil laws given to the Jews were never designed by God as a statement of the whole duty of man. That duty had been clearly set forth elsewhere in many moral precepts, and had already been summed up in that lofty lesson—which has never been surpassed by any later revelation: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and soul, and thy neighbor as thyself." This is an Old Testament command, and to this every Israelite ought to have conformed. As respects marriage in particular, he should have learned its holy and indissoluble character in the plan of God from the scenes and words of Eden. But what if he would not learn this? What was to be done when upon all sides men were cruelly divorcing their wives by a word? Then the magistrates of Israel must be told what procedure to adopt in view of the actual conduct of the people. And that mode of procedure, laid down for the guidance of the magistrates, was contained in the civil law. That is not to be read as God's statement of the whole duty of an obedient soul. It only informs Israel's magistrate how far he might hope to curb the disobedient by the authority and penalties of civil power. A civil law may be varied with reference to the possibility of its being executed; though the perfect requirement of the moral law changes not. It is not probable that God Himself, should he speak to-day, would instruct our magistrates to attempt to punish every case of falsehood. That, however, would be no conniving at falsehood; especially since he has distinctly said, for those who will regard His Word, "Lie not one to another," "Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord." In a similar manner the divine permission of some cases of unjust divorce, their permission so far as the operation of the civil law was concerned, their toleration temporarily among a rude people and but half trained; this did not mean that Jehovah approved of them, that they were consistent with the ideal of marriage. That sacred ideal, the will of heaven, concerning the treatment of wives, the kindness and love with which they were to be cherished, was clearly shown when the man was told that conjugal affection was to be the strongest known on earth, surpassing every other in patience and gentleness and power, so that even father and mother were to be forsaken at its call, and man and wife, they twain, were to be one flesh. What God intended and desired marriage to be was one thing, and it was revealed to Israel in many ways. How far the magistrates were to attempt to compel the people to observe that standard by civil laws, that was another thing. The comparatively low demands of the civil law were expressive of the wickedness of the people, not of the will of God. The peerless sanctity of marriage was proclaimed in Eden. That divine ideal, however, was soon trodden under foot by the guilty passions of men. Jehovah then gave directions as to some methods by which that lawlessness should be restrained, and its more flagrant crimes be punished. His civil laws were, like all other wise laws of that class, as stringent as could be executed by the civil power. But meantime that pre-eminent sanctity with which he had invested marriage, and which he had revealed in the beginning, had not been withdrawn.

These considerations explain the reply given by our Savior to the Pharisees: "Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives; but from the beginning it was not so." Our Lord then immediately reasserts that ancient law of marriage and of divorce, and declares that henceforth that, and that alone, is to be the law for all who belong to his kingdom: "And I say unto you that whosoever puts away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away, doth commit adultery." See also Matthew 5:32: "The marriage union is declared indissoluble, except upon one ground, the ground of crime, a crime of one kind only, a crime in its very nature fatal to all the blessings and hopes intended by the institution.

It is the language of our Savior, "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder." No human courts nor Legislatures can dissolve the bond of marriage in the sight of God, except upon the one ground named by our Lord. On this ground it may be justly severed, and innocent persons who for this reason have been divorced are not to hear a word of reproach; are to receive only pity for their misfortune.

It has been and it is still widely held in the Protestant church, and in the Presbyterian church, that there exists still another ground of justifiable divorce; one more, viz: wilful desertion. This opinion is based upon a passage in the First Epistle to the Corinthians, seventh chapter, fifteenth verse, "But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases." It has been generally supposed that the bondage here referred to is the bondage on the part of the deserted one of remaining unmarried, and that Paul accordingly gives permission to those deserted by husband or wife to marry again. This interpretation of the passage, however, is questioned by many of the best modern commentators. Among these I may mention Bengel, Meyer, Neander, Tholuck and especially President Woolsey, who has given to this subject profound study and whose writings upon the whole question of divorce are deserving of careful perusal by any one who would reach its facts and principles.

It is his opinion, and that of the others I have named, that the words in question have reference to those Christian converts whose heathen husbands determined to separate from them, but who were morbidly conscientious lest they, by consenting to such separation, should hinder the conversion of the unbeliever. In many such cases the consent of the Christian might be a necessity to a legal separation. Some thought they ought not to give that consent, but to persist in maintaining the united life, at any sacrifice of their peace, in hopes of securing the unbelieving partner's conversion. Paul says: No, you are under no such bondage. How do you know you could secure your partner's conversion? It is uncertain. The spirit of the verse is similar to that of the eleventh verse, "Let not the wife depart from her husband. But if she depart (if from necessity she be obliged to depart), let her remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband." In brief, then, Paul here authorizes separation without liberty of remarriage. This interpretation of the passage is confirmed to my own mind by two considerations, for one of which I am indebted to President Woolsey, and for the other to Rev. R. W. Patterson.

In the first place, if the Apostle here is giving permission to any person deserted by his or her partner to marry again, he gives a license greater than any law of the loosest Christian State allows; for, you notice, he grants this permission at once; the bondage ceases immediately, so soon as the partner fairly departs. If Paul meant that the person left was at liberty to marry again, it is inconceivable to me that he should not have bidden him or her at least to wait, and to wait long, for the deserter's possible return. The loosest State law requires that, insisting that desertion shall have extended over a term of years, or at least a year. Paul suggests nothing of the kind. And this is the more remarkable from the fact that he must have been cognizant of instances in which husbands or wives, who had thus deserted their partners, had soon become converts themselves, perhaps in a few months, and were thus ready to be reconciled and to live in Christian wedlock. Would he not then at least have added to his permission some qualification, have advised some delay.

The second consideration, confirming this view that the deserted have not the right to remarry, is drawn from the fact that our Savior supposes as aggravated a case of desertion as one could conceive of, and yet distinctly forbids a person so situated to marry. His case is found in the sermon on the Mount, Matthew 5:32. It is that of a woman who has not only been deserted, but divorced by her husband; divorced by insufficient reasons. Christ says that whosoever marrieth her thus put away, though she be both deserted and by civil law divorced, committeth adultery. The first marriage, though she be both deserted and divorced, still holds in the sight of God. This judgment He reiterates in the 19th chapter of the same Gospel.

In view of these considerations I am unable to see how desertion can be pronounced a Scriptural ground of divorce. It is nevertheless maintained to be such by very many Protestant writers, the most noted of whom is Rev. Charles Hodge, D. D. The language of the Presbyterian confession of faith is as follows: "Nothing but adultery, or such willful desertion as can no way be remedied by the church or civil magistrate, is cause sufficient of dissolving the bond of marriage."

It ought to be said, however, that the desertion had in view as a cause of divorce by these conscientious writers, is a far different thing from that recognized by most modern statutes under that name. When this cause was first recognized by the Puritan colonists of this country, as it had been by the Scotch and Lutheran Churches, desertion was a very different thing from what it is now. In those days going to some far-off country, as the West Indies, or "returning from America to the old country in the spirit of a vagabond, or in disaffection of mind, implied life-long severance from family ties, and the probabilities were great that such a step involved adultery also." This is something vastly different from that so-called desertion where two years meet the condition of the statute, or the law of Indiana where not long ago the statute read, "one year or less."

Even were we to assume, with the generality of Protestants, that permanent or long-continued desertion furnished a Scriptural reason for divorce, and that it had, therefore, two defensible grounds, we should still be standing heaven-high above the laws and usages upon this subject which prevail in most of the States of our Union. According to a statement made by President Woolsey a few years since, the statutes of the various States assign imprisonment, in some cases, for only two years; neglect to provide for the family, cruelty, habits of intoxication. In one State the statute reads: "Whenever the judge deems it reasonable and proper, conducive to domestic harmony, and consistent with the peace and morality of society." In another it is allowable "for any cause for which the court shall deem it proper." Another authorizes it whenever the fact appears "that the parties can not live together in peace and harmony, and that their welfare requires separation." Another, "for any such misconduct as permanently destroys the happiness of the petitioner, and defeats the purposes of the marriage relation."

These laws are bad enough, but, as is well known, the modes of procedure under them are still worse. The statutes themselves utterly ignore the principles of Christ, and the methods resorted to under their loose provisions are in countless cases simply infamous.

Upon looking over the history of divorce legislation in our own country, it is evident that it is much worse now than in earlier times. The tendency has been constantly downward, and the progress has been fearfully rapid.

The actual results of this state of things, as shown by the records of the courts, are most revolting, and ought to awaken profound alarm. Even in New England, where we certainly might look for better things, we find figures which are frightful. In Massachusetts the ratio of annual divorces to annual marriages, during the four years following 1861, was one to forty-four. In Ohio, one to twenty-six. In Vermont, one to twenty-one. In Connecticut, one to twelve. In Prussia there was but one to every twenty-nine marriages, and yet Prussia has a divorce law exceedingly objectionable, and occupies a bad pre-eminence in this respect among the European States. In the Western States it is difficult to obtain exact figures, but it is the estimate of a reliable resident of Indiana, that there are nearly 2,000 divorces annually in that State. This exceeds in badness even Connecticut. As for Ohio, in 1866 there was one divorce to every twenty-six marriages. In 1882 matters had grown so much worse that there was one to every sixteen and ninetenths marriages. In Lake county the ratio of divorces to marriages annually is 1 to 12.9, in Cuyahoga, 1 to 10.9; in Erie, 1 to 7.2; in Ashtabula, 1 to 6.9; in Butler, 1 to 6.7. I draw these figures from a statement presented to a recent convention of the Episcopal Church in the diocese of Southern Ohio by a committee appointed to examine this subject. According to this same authority, the number of divorces in the State during the past fifteen years has doubled, while the population has probably not gained more than 15 per cent. "The suits before the courts in 1882 were 4,500, twice as many as in 1871. For every divorce suit brought there were six marriages in 1882. In Hamilton county there is an average of over one petition a day. At the present rate there will soon be as many persons applying for legal separation as apply for marriage licenses. In twenty years there will be as many divorces as marriages." These estimates were prepared with care, and I have no doubt are substantially correct.

We naturally inquire what are the causes of this state of things? The suggestions of President Woolsey upon this point will be of much weight. He says, "We might count among the causes of unhappy marriages among us, connected with our National character and civilization, anxiety and want of light-heartedness, making home cheerless and leading to drink, the equality of condition which makes the poor, especially in the matter of the dress of females, emulate the rich; the nervous irritability and love of excitement of the Nation, induced in part by our climate; the trashy food of paltry novels, by which false imaginations of matrimonial life are nurtured; the tendency toward material enjoyments; the haste in forming connections, arising out of the ease with which life is sustained; the general freedom of choice and movement which makes law a yoke, while habits of thrift and self-restraint and endurance have in part lost their old power." To these causes I am confident there should be added the corrupting influence of a very large part of the plays and spectacles presented in our theaters. The theater is scarcely to be found where in the course of the season there are not given plays or exhibitions which are violations of all modesty and delicacy, if not of common decency. The smaller towns in the country are filled with flaming advertisements of these spectacles. Excursion trains are run to carry those who will attend them, and thus multitudes, both of the young and the old, not only from the city, but from all corners of the State, are brought to our theaters to sit and feast their eyes upon these exhibitions. There is no question in my mind that there is produced by the theaters, as a whole, a pernicious moral atmosphere whose influence tends powerfully to destroy modesty and purity of thought.

There is reason to believe, however, that a still further addition must be made to the above-named causes for the increasing frequency of divorce. The church is partly chargeable with it. The questions involved in this subject are treated of, it is true, in her literature; but generally in volumes which are not likely to be opened by those who most need to be educated in them, and wholly without adaptation to popular wants. Meantime the pulpit, which should deal with all the great questions of morals as well as doctrines, has been almost entirely silent. I do not remember having ever heard a sermon on this subject in my life.

Not only the clergy, but the members of Christian churches over the country at large—while their hearts are in the main, as we believe, sound on this matter, beyond those of any other class—have failed to give to this subject that consideration, that decisive treatment which it deserves. The act of church discipline, it is true, is peculiarly difficult in matters touching the marriage relation. It is hedged about with practical obstacles. It is also true that allowance is to be made for those offenders who have erred, in view of the remissness of the churches themselves in the past, both in the work of instruction and discipline; but it is time that the long silence should be broken, and the principles of Christ upon this subject distinctly presented and carefully observed in all our churches. It is of the first importance that Christian churches of all denominations should come to a full agreement, both in their principles and practice, concerning marriage and divorce.

Corrupt practice in the Christian church will, above all other means, corrupt the civil law, multiply cases of actual divorce, and utterly degrade the public conception of marriage.

Yet another cause which deserves to be considered of the unfortunate state of things which I have described, has been already named. It is the prevalence and the bold publication of a false philosophy respecting the very foundations of marriage. Audacious thinkers, discarding the Bible, have declared that marriage has no foundations different from those of any other contract, and can, like them, be terminated by the mutual consent of the parties. The utmost freedom is given for the promulgation of these sentiments, and this, taken in connection with the churches' silence and default in duty, has caused these degrading views to be widely received. Even if not fully received, the perpetual and open publication of them, and the knowledge that by many they are accepted, has emboldened numbers, under the pressure of domestic provocations, to entertain the project of divorce who would never have thought of it had they and all around them been accustomed to hear the teachings of the Bible upon this subject fully and pointedly proclaimed.

Beyond question, a most powerful cause of the increase of actual divorces of late years is to be found in the loose laws upon this subject, and still looser administration of them, which have so widely prevailed. I am not forgetful of the fact alleged in defense of some of these laws, that a stringent enforcement of the marriage union may involve innocent persons in much suffering, and oblige them to bear through weary years evil well nigh intolerable. But great as these evils are, they are not to be escaped by a violation of the laws of God, and they are nothing in comparison with the far wider evils resulting when the door is open for easy divorce, by such laws as I have described. Such laws are a frightful source of the very misery in married life which they profess to relieve. They put a premium upon discontent and cruelty and lust. They encourage and foment differences between married persons by promising to reward their repugnance and waywardness at last with liberty. Thus they perpetuate troubles and quarrels which common sense would teach the parties to compose if they knew that, for better or for worse, they were united for life in an indissoluble bond. Such laws, moreover, put an entirely different face upon marriage from that which it wears in God's word. They invite to hasty and ill considered marriages by the promise of a possible or an easy release from their consequences. To borrow another's words, they make the public conception of marriage first trivial, and then polluted.

In fact, loose laws of divorce are the most powerful cause of inconsiderate marriages and of domestic broils. The whole history of legislation proves this to be so. When, towards the close of the seventeenth century, in consequence of the prevalence of a skeptical philosophy, marriage began to put off its religious character, and easy divorce became the principle of Prussian legislation, there were soon found such frivolity in contracting marriage and such abounding family evils, that Frederick the Great, infidel though he was, appalled at what he saw in his dominions, commanded his chancellor to reform his legislation. So it will be found in our country. Every step in legislation making divorce easy is followed by an increase in the number of divorces. The introduction of the "general misconduct" clause in the statute of one State increased the number of divorces in that State five fold.

But there is a depth lower than this. When to easy divorce there is added that atrocious thing, viz., an unlimited liberty to the guilty party of remarriage, so that he or she may leave the court room and marry one who has perhaps been the guilty occasion of the separation, it would seem as if divorce, and adultery itself, received not only a license but a premium from our laws.

There is time at present for only a suggestion touching some possible remedies for this state of things.

Reform the laws. It is true that laws will follow in general the prevalent moral sense of the community. But our present legislation, I can not help thinking, is not up to the level of the public conscience. It is the result largely of inattention to the subject, and silence upon it by the great body of the teachers of the people. Already there are signs of reaction. Some of the most scandalous features of the laws in Vermont, Connecticut and Maine have within a very few years been repealed.

Whether the statutes can be brought up at once to the standard of the New Testament, and enforced at that standard, is matter for doubt. But a great improvement upon our present laws is practicable. The suggestions offered by the committee of the Episcopal Church before referred to, deserve to be widely considered:

First—A period of three weeks shall be required to elapse between the granting of the marriage license and the marriage ceremony, guarded provision being made for cases of special exigency.

Second—The judge shall designate the newspaper or newspapers in which the notice of the divorce suit is to be published.

Third—Neither party to a divorce shall be permitted to remarry for a space of three years after the decree is granted.

Fourth—Divorce trials shall be had only where the parties last resided together, bona fide, unless by reason of the wrong done by the defendant it is necessary to bring it elsewhere.

Fifth—The court shall appoint counsel to represent the defendant, who may be absent; to find such defendant if possible; and to conduct the defense in case he or she can not be found, or being found, refuses to appear.

Sixth—Where crime is disclosed in the proceedings the court shall direct the Prosecuting Attorney to lay the matter before the grand jury.

A severer administration even of the present laws would be an inestimable boon. It is probably in the power of the judges, while they respect every honest plea, to drive quite out of existence that heartless and inhuman set of men, abusing the honorable name of lawyer, who lend their pettifogging knowledge and skill to enable persons to obtain divorces for the most trivial causes, deceiving all persons concerned except Almighty God.

Certainly the laws can be so framed and administered as to impose serious disabilities upon the guilty parties in case of divorce. The laws of New York allow divorce only on the ground of adultery, and refuse to the guilty party liberty of remarriage until the death of the innocent party. Why should not this law be generally adopted?

But after law has done its utmost, its power will be found to be limited. Good laws are of unspeakable importance; but the main remedy for all that class of evils which we have been considering is to be found in the open instruction and faithful discipline of the church, and especially in pure and wholesome and constant teachings respecting all the aspects of marriage in Christian homes.

WHEN you speak evil of another, you must be prepared to have others speak evil of you. There is an old Buddhist proverb which says, He who indulges in enmity is like one who throws ashes to windward, which come back to the same place and cover him all over.

MANNERS are the shadows of virtues, the momentary display of those qualities which our fellow-creatures love and respect. If we strive to become, then, what we strive to appear, manners may often be rendered useful guides to the performance of our duties.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

IN answer to several inquirers, we state that we have been trying for now some months to get the Book of Jasher to keep on sale. Messrs. Jansen McClurg & Co., have our standing order for a number, but state that they find the book out of print. We can not tell where they may be procured. Those who have quoted from it have done so from copies in their possession.

Sr. Ann Chatfield writes from Gilmore City, Iowa, that Bro. N. Stamm was preaching every Sunday with good liberty, in that place. He was purposing to go to Rush Lake soon.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith is at St. Louis preaching; good attendance and attention. So writes Bro. N. N. Cooke, with the added word, "the result is with the Lord."

Bro. W. W. Blair dropped us a line from Denver, Colorado, dated December 30th; where he arrived that morning. He would be one day at Denver, and then on.

Bro. Thomas M. Parr, of Detroit, Becker county, Minnesota, would be pleased to be visited by an Elder. Any one can find him by enquiring for him in Detroit.

A pleasant letter from Bro. Morris T. Short, dated at Millersburg, Illinois, January 1st was received. He began a week's service December 30th but the inclement polar wave with snow storm was interfering to some extent in their expectations.

Bro. A. J. Hinkle, of Pleasanton, Iowa, writes December 31st, 1883, expressing the opinion that if those persons sufficiently well off to afford to build fine houses, use the things named in the Word of Wisdom, buy organs and have the music of them in the church and in their houses, would dispense with some of those things and use the money to build meeting houses and pay the current running expenses of meetings, there would be no necessity of taxing the poor Saints as suggested in the example of the branch at L—— mentioned in a late editorial.

We learn incidentally that Bro. E. C. Briggs is doing some labor in the Fremont District. In a late letter he says: "The power of darkness is on the alert, and supremacy is what he is seeking. There is much to encourage, and yet many things not as they ought to be among us. We must have help from him who is all power to help, and holds the destinies in his own hands, or yield to the inevitable. Glory, glory, glory is offered, or darkness in all its deformity is now just at our doors. Which shall be our choice? Answer, O, answer quickly, is the cry."

Bro. E. C. Brand started for Camp Floyd, Provo, and other points on January 1st. He left Bro. Wm. Gibson to "hold the fort" in Salt Lake City, during his absence; and expected to be gone about three weeks. Correspondence would reach him at either Camp Floyd, or Provo during the time of his absence.

The editors, secretary, superintendent, pressman, "typos" and boys, all return thanks to Bro. William Anderson for his kind New Year's remembrance, and the sweet tokens with which he wished them all a Happy New Year. The arrival by mail of a box of caramels, sweet meats and bon bons from our Bro. Wm. Anderson, of Oakland, California, on the last day of the year was duly noticed and the contents were distributed among all hands, and from Editor to printer's devil all are pleased, and wish that Bro. Anderson's "shadow may never grow less."

Any reader that has volumes of the "Times and Seasons," the "Elder's Journal," the "Morning and Evening Star," the "Missouri Expositor," the "Wasp," the "Expositor," (destroyed at Nauvoo), the "Millennial Star," or any paper published by the Saints before the death of the prophet, or any pamphlets or books published by the Saints before that time, can obtain a good price for them, if they wish to part with them, by notifying the Editor. Any considerable number of separate numbers would be accepted. Also Vols. I and II "Saints' Herald."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. D. J. Phillips, of 1646, Seventh street, Oakland, California, wrote December 25th, 1883:

We have regular meetings in Oakland, every Sunday, and prayer meeting week night. Bro. G. S. Lincoln, of San Francisco Branch, keeps up their regular meetings, and is doing much in distributing tracts all over the city. No one is out preaching in this district at present, except Bro. Dailey; he is doing much good. He was working in his mines, when Bro. Munn hired a man to work in his place, and told him to go to preaching; Bro. Munn is not a preacher, still he proves his faith by his works. God will bless him, and he shall receive his reward.

That is good. It is distributing the burden, one labors in the mine, the other in the gospel field; both are blessed.

Bro. John S. Patterson sent us the Chicago Times containing a sermon by W. H. Littlejohn of Battle Creek, Michigan, on the subject of Spiritual Gifts; of which Bro. Patterson writes:

It will pay for a perusal. Our doctrine seems to be converting the world over again." "I go this week to Livingston county, to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. Lewis, father of Bro. Lars Lewis; and as soon thereafter as practicable will make another trip into Wisconsin. We are all moderately well and doing what we can for the cause."

THE demands of business require that I shall be absent from home for two or three months beginning January 8th, 1884. During this absence all business connected with the Bishopric which properly comes under my care and supervision, will be attended to by Bro. Asa S. Cochran, of the Herald Office. Any person within the district desiring to pay tithing and offering during this time, or needing assistance, may apply to him.

E. BANTA.

CHILDREN'S parties at the houses of the Saints are not bad things in their way, as some sort of social gatherings must be indulged in or society stagnates; but the objection of late hours, if such be kept, lies against these parties with as much force as it does against dancing parties. Another thing should be noticed in regard to them. Dancing is objected to because that to dance heats the blood through exercise; persons so heated are liable to take cold from overexertion and the chill likely to be taken when the exertion ceases. Children, collected in the heated rooms of any ordinary home, at a children's party, romp, race, jump, play hard and fast, to such an extent that many are as heated as they would have been dancing. And, however carefully the host and hostess may be while the children are busy; some of them will rush into cold rooms, or out of doors with their clothing damp from perspiration without the proper precaution of putting on hats, caps, hoods, coats, wraps or shawls, thus running the same risk that they would if they had been dancing with the same exposure. And then when the time for departure has come, which varies from ten to one, according to the wisdom, or carelessness of the good wife of the house, the children turn out of doors to go home, from a few steps to miles away flushed and heated from the heated and confined air of the close and ill ventilated rooms and their romping and play, into the cold winds of the night, many of them to reach home tired, relaxed and chilled to the marrow, and then go to bed without a chance to warm by a fire, then to lie chilly and sleepless through the night. Or if they sleep it is a broken sleep. Then some of these many, not so robust as others, rise next morning fevered with colds, or with sore throat, cough, or other indication of threatened pneumonia; and if such escape downright sickness it is good fortune not good management. So far as heated rooms and late hours may be urged against dancing, just so far may the same be urged against children's parties, especially in the cold season.

Let Saints be consistent, and when the children get together for an evening's play, let the "good wife" prove her worthiness to that title by seeing to it that her own children's guests depart in good season, and sufficiently long after their romping is done to insure their health against exposure. All parents should see to it that the parties given by their children begin early enough to end in good season. We believe that wisdom would dictate that none be held in extremely cold weather; and when held that the time should be judiciously chosen when the children may get together in the afternoon and get home by fair bedtime, when the household is likely to be astir and the house warm enough to let the little folks get warm before going to bed. Many a death among the children has been styled a "dispensation of God's providence," when it would have been much nearer the truth to have called it a dispensation of parents' improvidence; or worse, their folly. Let no one get angry and think we mean him, but let every one weigh what is written, look round him and see if the case is his.

At the Christmas entertainment of the Saints' Rising Star Sunday School, of Plano, in the meeting house there, little Ora Van Dran, daughter of Sr. Paulina Blakely, and niece of Bro. W. H. Deam, of the Herald Office, a child of six and a half years, made a sensation in her rendition of the part of "A mother and her sick babies;" the local paper, the Plano News, giving the following notice of it:

Miss Ora Van Dran, a bright and beautiful child of five years of age, made a grand success in the character of "a mother and her sick babies" at the Rising Star Sunday School entertainment, Christmas eve., and was appreciated by every one present, and grant she may become one of the Stars in the future.

The Kendall County Record has the following notice of the affair:

The Christmas festivities at the Stone church were unusually interesting—a large audience, a large and handsome tree, and select literary and musical programme. After the tree had been picked a handsome cabinet organ was presented to Mrs. George Horton. It was a gift from the members of the Sunday school and church for her services in instructing the children.

Correspondence.

GIRARD, Ottertail, Co., Minnesota,
December 26th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The most of the Saints here are strong in the faith, and are well pleased with the progress the Church is making. Your letters to L. O. Littlefield were a success. I sent your last to those Elders of Utah, who were here preaching, so they can see the word of the Lord on the subject. I wish the Lord would open their eyes, so they could see the light, and be willing to receive the same. It stands every one of us in hand to be ready to battle for the truth, whenever we have an opportunity. I feel willing to bear my testimony to the truth of the work of God; for I know he is true to his children. He is ready and willing to bless them in time of need, if they will humble themselves and ask in faith, believing in his promises. He has heard our prayers many times in behalf of the sick and afflicted. Sometimes they have been healed immediately, and at other times in two or three days.

I will write of one case that has just happened. Bro. Burdick's little girl was taken sick with the rheumatic fever and dropsy on the heart, and they had the doctor attending her, but she got worse all the time. She got so bad she could not lay down, and had not for several days. The doctor said she was liable to go any moment. Bro. Burdick saw he had to have something done for her, so he asked me to administer to her, which I did, and she commenced to get better, and has continued to do so. The second night she slept on the bed, and now she is at play with the other children. We feel to thank the Lord for his goodness unto us. The diphtheria is raging at Clitherall. Several have died with it; but none of the Saints have had it yet.

Your brother in Christ,

J. R. ANDERSON.

SALT RIVER, Macon Co., Mo.,
December 27th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I am still working in the vineyard of the Lord, and I am well, and feeling well in spirits, knowing the Lord is blessing me in my labors, and in trying to do my duty in the Church of Christ.

I have been in Walnut Creek Township, in the north-west corner of Macon Co., Mo., trying to sow the good seed on new ground, and I think good ground. I went there for the last Sunday in November, and preached at eleven a. m. and six thirty p. m., and the school-house was well filled, and good order was kept. Then I preached five nights in the week. The Cumberland Presbyterian minister came from LaPlata, and preached on the Saturday evening and Sunday morning at eleven, and evening at six thirty; and tried in an under-handed way, to make out that what I had preached was not needed. He told us to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and that was the end of the matter. This was at the close on Sunday evening. I started again on Monday evening, and he did good for me and the Church, as it gave the people the chance to see who was wrong, and made many good friends to the Church of Christ. When I left I was by a very large number requested to return there again, as soon as I could.

I was at home for a few days Christmas, and met with the Saints at Bevier, at their Christmas Tree entertainment, and had a good time. I preached for them on Sunday evening. The good Spirit was with me. Have been to Renick, Randolph Co. Found some sickness among the Saints there. Pray for them, they need the prayers of the Saints. I have many calls, more than I can fill. Pray for me, I need the prayers of my brethren. I remain your brother and collaborer in the kingdom of God.

GEORGE HICKLIN.

9 Hazel St., PITTSBURG, Pa.,
December 18th, 1883.

Friend Herald:—Since last I wrote you, I have been engaged in my ministerial vocation, and enjoying to a goodly degree, manifestation of divine favor. More and more do the beauties of the intrinsic worth of this great work unfold themselves to my view, and I greatly adore them. It seems to me that within the past eighteen months, I have received or obtained a greater insight into the work of God than ever before. The tangibility of the work becomes more apparent. The security of its foundations disclosed, and the supremacy of the governing power more fully manifest. The whisperings of the Holy Spirit to me, saying, "I design to make my work victorious, and crown my church with immortal glory, and give unto it final conquest," breathe its infinite worth, and bespeak the divine solidity of the same. When I read the revelations given through the modern prophet, and hear him speak of immortality, eternal life, light, power, worlds, glory, heaven, the prison, sun, moon and stars; law, precept, commands; God, Christ, angels; redemption, resurrection; I harken and adore; I read and praise; I receive and bow in humble reverence to the One who has so wondrously disclosed unto us the great things of God even unto God himself. Upon examination of these things there is much food for thought. And I deem an interchange of thought the very basic principle of intellectual development. We suggest the propriety of such in your columns, friend Herald, as being productive of good.

I express it as an honest conviction that, in Paradise there is upon many questions a diversity of opinion. God may know all things, but Christ admitted he did not, especially as to the time of his second advent. Angelic knowledge is evidently less, for says Peter: "Concerning which salvation the angels desired to look into." Give us equalization of knowledge, give us a monotony of ideas and thought, and who would care to speak to another—they know as much as you do, and see it in the same way. The old Mormonic idea of "eye to eye" would produce intellectual stagnation, and give us a monotonous eternity. Diversity of opinion gives rise to inquiry; inquiry suggests examination; examination is productive of advanced thought, or an abandonment of erroneous ideas. Let a man arrange all his would-be perfected thoughts in a pile, let God hold his plummet by its side and discover how straight they are. Put them in God's balance and how many will be found wanting? Place them in God's sieve and see how many will drop through. Blow the breath of divinity upon them, and see how many will fly as chaffy specimens. "Great men are not always wise, neither do the aged [always] understand." I have no desire to be biased, and hope that divers thoughts, opinions, ideas, may flow freely through your columns, and enliven your aspiring pages. Although on many questions I have "set my stakes," but often have I pulled them up in order to set them further out, so as to enlarge my field for thought and investigation; and in my searching after truth, if I find that the boundary line where my stakes have been driven leads me to the quick sand of uncertainty, I'll pull them up, and if I can't drive them elsewhere I'll lay them down on the "rock of ages," although my fields proportions may look smaller than I might desire. Better secure than insecure. However large my field may be, or small, I shall remember that the boundary line is Christ.

As God beautifully and wisely suggested on the 4th inst., at the close of an Elders' Court, where an erroneous doctrine was called in question, "Ye shall not at any time use inferential texts upon which to found, or from which to formulate a doctrine. And ye shall at no time accept any thing as a doctrine of mine, that is not explicitly taught in the text books of my Church." We know that the Church has large, liberal and "explicitly taught" doctrines and principles upon which she stands as a tower of strength, power, light, life and honor in the world; and that, by standing on these she is supported by "the arm of God," and receives from him, all things needful. It behooveth every individual member to "hold fast that form of doctrine delivered unto them" by Christ, and thereby remain secure, steadfast and unwavering in the Christian calling and work. It seems, to the writer, a work superfluous, and strange to know how many men there are who deliver elaborate discourses on "inferential texts," and claim indirectly, if not directly, an infallibility for their views, while some one else will use the same text or texts, and present directly opposite views, and claim certainty and entire correctness for the thoughts expressed by himself. There are unexplained parables used as "inferential texts;" "horns" and "hoofs," hydra-headed monsters, etc., and the expositions of these have been listened to, wondered at, and by many believed, until some one else tears them down and builds another "air-castle." The evil, the monstrosities of exaggerated ideas, "far-fetched" thoughts, from an elastic imagination by use of texts of uncertain sound that have been palmed off on a too credulous people, and the dire results that have followed can never be written by human pen-power, uttered by mortal tongue; nor the scenes of woe, misery and degradation be painted by artist's pencil. Sometimes I have thought the suggestion of a veteran judge to a young lawyer to be of surpassing worth,—“If you would pluck a few feathers from the wings of your imagination, and put them in the tail of your judgment, it would be better for you.”

I find in many places that the "church articles and covenants" in Book of Doctrine and Covenants, are not read and studied as they should be. The philosophy of revelation—its nature, character, the degrees thereof; the proper channels for its delivery and reception; its necessity; its quality, its import, bearing, its harmony with the accepted, endorsed written revelations of God, should be studied and well understood by the laity of the Church, that they be not imposed upon by large or minor revelations. The one of July 12, 1843, was a "big one" and a notoriously bad one. Its blackness, corruption and utter freedom from any God-like expression; its in-harmony with former revelations; its falsity, its asking for a discarding of righteous principle are well known by us. Stand by the books. Stand by what is "explicitly taught" therein by the Lord. All local revelations should be well tested. The forty-sixth and fiftieth sections in Book of Doctrine and Covenants are well to be studied. All members should endeavor to be faithful in the observance of God's law. God signified to the Saints in a place not long since, saying, "It is almost in vain that my ministry be invited to labor where there is a branch of my Church if my people therein be not faithful; for I have given unto my people to be a light unto the world; therefore ye shall by upright, honest living, let your light shine, that the people in the community where ye reside may see your good works, and believe ye are servants of me." We have much to be thankful for, much to be grateful for.

I can but notice how the work has been maintained in this city. As the veterans are passing away, the sons and grandsons are taking up the banner. And although at times since John E. Page, forty-one years ago, planted the standard of truth on the smoke-clad hills of the iron city, it has been trailed in the dust of apostasy, nevertheless it has never been entirely furled, but some portion of it has been touched by heavenly winds, and now it is fully unfurled, by the posterity of the sainted sires, and attracts the gaze of wondering eyes. It makes me feel happy in God to know that he rules, the church lives, and her power for good is being felt and recognized in and by the world. The work in the district is "looking up." Bro. Ellis is home after some months of labor blest by a power divine. Bro. G. H. Hulmes, branch president, met with a sad misfortune a time ago, but prayers of faith seem to have been somewhat effectual in his behalf.

NEW ORLEANS, La.,

To the Editor; Sir: I thought perhaps your readers would like to hear from the Sunny South. This city is one hundred and ten miles from the mouth of the river, has a population of 225,000, about equally divided, white and colored. Business was never as brisk as now; cotton, sugar and molasses coming in heavy. Boats all loaded to the water. Hotels all full; boarding houses the same. Tramps innumerable; crime rampant. The weather to-day is very fine, though clear and quite cool for this climate, 66 degrees above zero; yesterday was very warm, with occasional showers. Jackson Square is a very beautiful one, in front of the St. Louis Cathedral (about 2 acres) looks green, the plants and shrubs being now at their best; a great contrast to the Northern cities, which are now wearing their winter garb. In the center of the square is a very handsome equestrian statue of "Old Hickory," enclosed by a fine iron fence, on which is inscribed, "By the Eternal, this Union must and shall be preserved." Seats are provided for the comfort of those who wish to linger awhile. Northern capital is crowding itself in here, in the shape of railroads, and factories of different kinds, none being built by Southern capital, although there is plenty of it here. For the most part it is invested in banks, insurance companies, street railroads, cotton, rice and sugar. The factories that have been put in operation here in the last three years pay out a great deal of money for labor, mostly to boys and girls. Although wages is very low, yet abundance of that kind of help is easily obtained. Some articles are very high here. For instance a good roast of beef is twenty to twenty-five cents per pound, turkeys thirty cents per pound, other poultry in proportion; butter (fox river creamery) fifty cents per pound, and never less than forty cents. The weather is very changeable here; some days at this season very hot, others overcoats in good demand; yet the people seem reasonably healthy. The sea side, as you would call them, we call them lake side resorts, are very fine, from six to ten miles from here. Fare for return tickets fifteen cents each. The French market here is the wonder of the South. Meat, fish, fruit, vegetables, crockery, grocery, eating and drinking, street fakirs, notions, in fact every thing you can ask for, from a cambric needle to a locomotive. In a letter like this it can not be described. It must be seen to be appreciated. To-day all seem to be enjoying themselves, fire crackers and tin horns are heard on every side. To-night balls and parties. The Catholic religion predominates largely.

Yours respectfully,

Bro. Joseph:—Does the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints hold that God the Eternal Father is the rock upon which Christ would build his, or the Church? I somehow have conceived the thought, that it had direct reference to the principle of revelation direct from God, as Jesus answered and said, "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." If it had meaning at all, it must have been understood by Peter and all the apostles to have had direct reference to the principle of divine revelation direct from God. Or do we claim as a Church, that we are building upon God, or upon the revealed plan of salvation, as given by direct revelation from God to man; or in other words, to his servants the prophets. If it is through his servants, then it must of necessity be through the revelations of God to man, and upon this knowledge that man receives direct from God the church was to be built, was the principle that Jesus sought to convey. I think that he established this fact when he made the statement in Matthew 4:4. "But he answered and said, It is written, 'Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.'" This makes our beloved Church a progressive Church, or progressive plan of salvation, or else we labor in vain; for if he, Christ, did build upon God, then true enough we have no more need of revelation, and we can only accept the portion of scripture that we have received direct from Christ, and Paul was in error when he declared in Ephesians second chapter, twentieth verse: "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." This in my mind precludes the possibility of a Church being built upon either God, Christ or Peter; but upon just that which Christ answered when Peter said, "Thou art Christ, the son of the living God." "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my father which is in heaven, and upon this rock," of revelation of course, of direct revelation, or communication from heaven to man upon earth.

Was not the mind and will of God revealed to man from the days of Adam through all generations until Moses, and even in all ages by direct revelation; or did not God have a Church or people before the Christ came. If so, how was it established if not by revelation." I understand that the plan of salvation consists simply in implicit obedience to the commandments of God to man; and how can he command, unless he reveals himself either in person or by ambassadors through whom he reveals himself directly. Again, has he not in these last days built his Church upon this same foundation; or has God cast us off. We are laying no other foundation, than the same that was laid by the Master, even Christ Jesus; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto us, but our Father which is in heaven. This time not through Peter, but through his servant Joseph Smith, the seer and revelator. Neither need we altogether depend upon Peter's word, but that he has said unto us in this the last dispensation, "Neither are we perfect without them, any more than they are perfect without us." This to my mind, makes revelation the solid rock of our hope; for if the first Church be lost sight of, or its principles, upon the rock or foundation of revelation it can be continued; for God can again reveal his mind and will as in the beginning, God having revealed himself through his son, his ambassador, does not prevent a continuation of his power, but only confirms the word of Christ to us. While I am perfectly willing to accept a triune rock, that is, principle, cause and effect, or in other words Christ, God and revelation, if this would be more easily understood. Can we discard revelation as being the rock of our salvation, as we have not God with us except by his Spirit, and this Spirit is revelation. Unless we adopt this system of ethics or plan of salvation, we are like a ship without a rudder, and driven wherever the wind listeth without revelation; while on the other hand, revelation will keep us in the right channel, for among the many sects and schisms in the last days, it would be difficult to determine how to please God, and keep his command; and if God was the rock, or Christ, how would I get the knowledge that would direct me to the Church that was built upon God, or Christ. But by revelation I can be both guided and kept in the knowledge of his will concerning me. In other words, we are taught that the knowledge of God shall cover the earth, as the waters now cover the mighty deep. How can this be unless by revelation. Knowledge must in my mind be revealed, truth by truth, the word of God. So that if the world is to be covered with, or filled with the knowledge of God, it must of a surety be by the revealed word of God, his word being both knowledge and truth. And the world can't be filled with the knowledge of God without revelation.

Then it can be true, that the stone cut without hands, can grow till it fills the whole earth. But God can not. He has already his full stature. He can not enlarge. Revelation has, does, and ever shall continue so far as we can learn by searching the scriptures. How sad would have been our condition, if this had not been the case in the last days.

I am writing this so that if I am wrong, some good brother may have a chance to correct me. In love of truth, yours, in gospel bonds,

CLARENCE STCLAIR.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I have just closed a six nights' discussion with a Spiritualist. That is we began a six nights' discussion, but we were so smart that we got through with it in two nights. My antagonist could not stand the fire. The proposition was, Resolved, "That the teachings of modern Spiritualism will lead to a higher civilization of mankind than the teachings of the Bible." The old gentleman, Mr. Augir, said that he did not think we were so well acquainted with the doctrine.

The people here are very anxious to have the matter thoroughly discussed, so they propose to send for another man, and I have agreed to debate with any one they may bring.

We have had fine weather here for over a month, neither snow nor rain, days warm and sun-shiny. It seems strange away here in the north at this time of the year, to see men plowing in their shirt sleeves, but such is the case. I wish it was so that an Elder could come this way, for there is a splendid field here, and I am sure that an excellent work could be done. There is work in this country that ought to be done now, and I will do all I can to sustain an Elder here if one can come. I can give one a good home, if nothing more, and would be most happy to do so.

Your brother in Christ,

J. C. CLAPP.

PEORIA, Illinois,

Bro. Joseph:—I have just returned from Hindsboro, Douglas Co., where I had another pleasant experience in the gospel work. Our engineer had a machine there that did not fill the contract. He had learned that I was somewhere on the Midland Railroad; and as he came to the depot he was watching for me. At length we met. I must go to Hindsboro with him to help him out with the machine. I did so, and at the hotel, after we had done all we could, and telegraphed our house for repairs, at the supper table we heard the town bell ring like a fourth of July, and every one was asking every one else, what was up. After supper, while the company were sitting round, Dr. Barnes and Mr. Clap, a committee appointed by a number of citizens, called and informed me that the bell was ringing for meeting, and I must come and preach. The people, and especially a number of those who were at my meetings before, learned I was in town, word went the rounds like wild fire, and at seven o'clock the house was pretty well filled. They had sent one man nearly a mile for the key, while others made fires after the key arrived, others lit the lamps, two men kept on ringing the bell. I went to the church as soon as I could. And I tell you, Bro. Joseph, a man can preach when he is received that way, and I did preach, while the Spirit was, as old Jeremiah said, like a fire in my bones. I intended to leave in the morning, so did not give out any appointment. Some of the friends came to the hotel after meeting, among them Dr. Barnes, who insisted upon my stopping over Sunday. I had a number of tracts and Epitomes in my grip. These were distributed Saturday, and meeting announced for Saturday and Sunday nights. Saturday did not have the best of liberty for some reason, but Sunday night the very heavens seemed at my command while I preached from the text, "Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints." I spoke for one hour and a half, and got a scolding from some because I stopped. Am under promise to return soon. That part of the country seems to be an inviting field. The people are more of the disposition of men forty years ago, who are ready to accord to all a hearing. What the result of my labors there will be the future alone will reveal; but I do know that never had men or women set before them the old paths plainer than on Sunday night. I could hear the murmuring Monday morning among the people, "Were it not for the prejudices bred by the poisoned weeds of the Utah Apostasy, and carried joyfully as a sweet morsel by the reverends of Christendom, to build up a stumbling block for the honest in heart, I should have been able to baptize some."

With the compliments of the season, Yours fraternally,

Bro. Joseph:—What few members there are here are alive in the work. We hold meeting every Sunday. Bro. Henry Kemp gave us a call and preached a week with good results, and left some investigating and reading, to see if we preach the truth. Bro. J. W. Calkins and A. T. Mortimore, are doing what they can, trying to warn sinners to repentance. I expect to preach some this winter.

Yours in the gospel,

Bro. Joseph:—We are trying to keep our post, and to attend to the duties of a picket of the grand army of Christ. Our spiritual interest I believe is better in our branch at present, than for some time in the past. As the year is closing, we feel thankful that the Saints have been protected as well as they have, although they have felt the scourge of hail some in this region. It has been a year of calamities, we look for an increase of them. I have asked our branch to begin the year by a day of fasting on the first Sabbath, breaking the fast by communion together. I feel as though good might result from an observance in this way. We think there is a sign in the heavens in the evenings and mornings, that is indicative of some great event. I saw, and I suppose many others did, a sign of our late war. One half of the horizon was red, of the same redness that we see now in the evenings. The south half was light enough to see to read by, and no moon. This was a sign to me of the war, and bloodshed in the south half of our government. It occurred about eighteen months before war was declared, as near as my memory serves me. Yours truly,

S. S. WILCOX.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Dec. 27th.—Another harrowing tale of suffering comes from the Russian prisons. The victim is one Netshajeff, a Nihilist, who was sentenced in 1872 to twenty years' penal servitude in the mines of Siberia. It transpires now that he was never deported to Siberia, but has served eleven years of his imprisonment in the Fortress of Alexef Ravelin, which is built on one of the marshy islands in the river Neva, near St. Petersburg. He has succeeded in getting a letter smuggled from the fortress and published in the Will of the People. The letter fully confirms the revelations of cruelty and inhumanity which have recently been made by prisoners in the Fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul and the Troubletskoi Bastion, and some terrible details of suffering are given in addition. The dungeons in which the prisoners are confined are below the water-level in the adjoining river and are bitterly cold and damp in winter, while in summer malaria and scurvy are frightfully prevalent. A new horror has now been added to these gloomy vaults, as the men and women confined there are kept within their cells and the equally cheerless corridors from one year's end to another, outdoor exercise, which was formerly allowed for one hour in the twenty-four, having been entirely suspended since the assassination of the late Czar. The prison officials practice the most shameless extortions upon the prisoners as long as their money lasts, and prisoners without money are fed on horseflesh and chained in the outer range of cells, where between their battles with the water and the rats they soon perish.

The latest sensation regarding Egyptian affairs is a report which is very generally credited at London, England, that Egypt has offered to sell to the highest bidder a concession for a second Suez Canal. The offer is made, of course, in the hope of defending the expenses of the campaign in the Soudan, which have threatened to plunge Egyptian finances into a state more hopeless than even their present condition.

One thousand three hundred Egyptian troops have arrived at Khartoum from Fashodi. They met with no resistance on the way. The garrison at Khartoum now numbers 4,000. A female slave captured by El Mahdi, after slaying a Kababish chief, her master, recently escaped from El Obeid. She reports that the Mahdi is in great fear and has sent his family to a place of safety. The neighboring tribes have refused to help him. An emissary of El Mahdi has been arrested at Minieh, forty miles above Cairo. He declared it was his intention to proceed to Cairo and Mecca. A dispatch states that the rebels are menacing Rimayeh. An Egyptian gunboat embarks the garrison and the inhabitants.

The beautiful refulgence of light observed after sunset and before sunrise has continued to delight Italian eyes up to the morning before yesterday. The singularity and beauty of the sunset for the last week have excited attention all over Italy. Switzerland has not been behind other countries in the matter of gorgeous sunsets. For several evenings she has been treated to spectacles that are rare even in that country, and are certainly most unusual at this time of the year. One in particular was very striking. The sun set in a perfectly cloudless sky, and immediately afterwards the western heavens were aflame with a golden light that burnished the windows to dazzling brilliance and caused the houses to appear as if they were roofed with brass.

When the procession of Orangemen was fired into yesterday at Harbor Grace, N. F., the Orangemen thought the firing was from powder guns carried by their friends until they saw their men fall. Four men were killed—two Orangemen and two Roman Catholics. Eight are reported mortally and eighteen to twenty slightly wounded. Head Constable Doyle is among the wounded. There is a lull in the outbreak at Harbor Grace, but the neighboring town of Carbonear is in a state of the wildest frenzy. Over 1,000 men are parading the streets and preparing to march to Harbor Grace. Crowds are hurrying up from the whole extent of the north shore of Conception Bay, to the scene of the disturbance. All business places are closed, and most of the private dwellings are protected by bars and bolts. The police dispatched from St. Johns reached Harbor Grace last night. If the riot breaks out anew the law officers will be powerless to protect life and property.

The sanitary condition of Havana, West Indies, is improving. There were only ten deaths from yellow fever for the week ending yesterday. The cases are scattered among the population, and are not confined to the shipping and military hospitals, as they are usually.

Temperance legislation is popular in the new counties of Texas. A few weeks ago Falls County was carried by the no license party by a vote of 173 to 17; and in Shelby County the vote stood in favor of no license 713 to 187. The prohibition and no license sentiment is gathering strength in the southern States. Texas is disposed to copy the example of Missouri and Georgia in this matter.

Dec. 28th.—The recent visit of the German Crown Prince to Rome has caused the greatest speculation with regard to the existence or non-existence of a three cornered alliance between Italy, Germany, and Austria. It can be stated on authority above suspicion, that such an alliance exists in writing, signed by the Chancellors of the three powers in September of last year. Contrary to the general belief, however, in the event of hostilities between France and Germany, or Austria, or both, Italy, by a clause of the treaty, has been assured complete liberty of action, and is no way pledged to join the two allies with arms. On the other hand, should France attack Italy the latter may count on the help of Germany and Austria.

Le pares states that a definitive agreement has been concluded between the Suez Canal Company and the British ship-owners upon terms satisfactory to the company.

A Khartoum telegram reports that El Mahdi's troops are advancing on Dongola and Sennaar in two bodies. The latest report of the disaster to the Egyptian troops, near Suakin, given by an officer who was present, shows that it was by no means such an awful affair as has been represented. There were over 450 regulars in the party, besides sixty Bashi-Bazouks, and they had two field-pieces and a mortar. The only enemy they saw was about 150 Arabs armed with swords and spears, and some with big sticks only, whom they at first kept at a distance with the field pieces. But after a while they formed a square and the square was actually broken by thirty men, whereupon those who were not killed took to their heels, the Pasha in command close behind them, and never stopped till they reached the sea. The British Consul Commander Moncrieff, staid behind and showed fight and was killed. But the bulk of the party seem to be alive and well, but with their confidence in the square as a military device much shaken.

The Czar of Russia is still suffering severely from the injuries received the 10th inst., and is unable to transact any but the most urgent business.

It is rumored on the Bourse that the French forces have landed upon the island Hainan, which is opposite the mouths of the delta of Red River, and commands the Straits of Hainan, through which all the commerce via the Gulf of Tonquin passes to Hong Kong.

A Canton dispatch says the Viceroy has been ordered to send troops to the Tonquin frontier. It is rumored that the French have besieged Bacninh, the occupation of which is imminent.

The dispatching of re-enforcements to Tonquin will be hastened. The Government has asked the French steam-ship companies for transports to send 2,000 troops immediately.

The Argentine Government, South America, is about to issue 4,000,000 national dollars to advance public instruction in the provinces and for building 300 schools.

The Rajah of Kolapoor, India, is dead.

There will be in the next Electoral College 401 votes. A majority would be 202. In the States of Alabama, South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana, there are votes as follows: Alabama 10, Mississippi 9, South Carolina 9, Louisiana 8, total 36. The population of these States, white and black, compares as follows:

	White.	Black.
Alabama.....	662,183.....	600,100.....
Mississippi.....	479,398.....	650,291.....
South Carolina.....	391,105.....	604,322.....
Louisiana.....	454,954.....	483,655.....

Dec. 29th.—Fair estimates of the number of lives lost in the year 1883, by the more noticeable accidents give a total of 125,000, or over 342 for each of the 365 days of 1883. Of course these colossal figures are attained principally through the results of three calamities—Ichia, Java, and Syria. Aside from the earthquakes the year was unequaled in shipwrecks, cyclones, fire-scenes, and mining horrors. Over thirty people were killed for each day in January, the Newhall fire, the Russian circus horror, and the Cimbria shipwreck being the principal of thirty calamities during the month. Three hundred and ninety-eight people went down in the Cimbria alone. Two hundred and seventy people burned in the circus at Berditcheff. The panic later on at Sunderland, Eng., caused the death of 197 little children—perhaps the most astonishing catastrophe of the time—and 150 workmen were drowned like rats in the tub called the Daphne on the Clyde. There were 1,697 murders, 107 executions, 135 lynchings, and 727 suicides. The conflagrations which exceeded a destruction of $100,000 each summed up a loss of $41,000,000. The obituary list, while hardly equaling that of the previous year in point of interest—for the world lost no Darwin, or Longfellow, or Emerson—is still a remarkable catalogue, headed by Chambord, Gambetta, Gortschakoff, Alexander H. Stephens, Karl Marx, Schultze-Delitzsche, Turgeneff, and Prof. Anthon.

The total French loss in the battle at Sontag, was 320, of which twenty-five were killed. The enemy's loss is not reliably known. The Turcos behaved like madmen. One company of 140 men threw themselves upon the entrenchments despite the orders of their officers, who seeing the men so impetuous, rushed in front and led them to destruction. Only twenty men and one officer escaped. After the entrenchments had been taken the enemy evacuated Sontag the night of the 16th. The French entered next morning with their guns shouldered. Admiral Courbet does not intend to follow up his victory by an attack on Bacninh until he has received re-enforcements, which cannot arrive before the rainy season again approaches. Thus all the advantage of the recent victory will be lost. M. Tricou left Haiphong the 26th, together with Dr. Harmand and his staff. The latter proceeded directly to France. M. Tricou will stop at Hue to secure the ratification of the new King to Dr. Harmand's treaty of the 25th of August.

Another account says: It is reported that the French loss in killed and wounded at the capture of Sontag was thirty-six officers and nearly 1,000 men. The loss of the Black Flags in the same battle was 6,000. The bulk of the Black Flag army after the defeat at Sontag retreated to Hong Hoa and Namdinh. The French found $2,000,000 in Sontag. It is reported also that China, acting under the advice of the European Powers, has withdrawn the troops from Bacninh.

In the mean time the poor Tonquinese suffer from all sides. The French Government afford no protection against the robbers who pillage and burn the villages which can not protect themselves, as they have been disarmed for more than twenty-five years. Each expedition into the country reveals on all sides villages robbed and burned, pagodas destroyed, and people suffering from the pangs of hunger and terror. If they declare openly for the French, they are exterminated by Dr. Harmand's Mandarins, imported from Hue. If they are indifferent, their property is destroyed and sacked by French reconnoitering parties. Whatever troops approach them they suffer, and when no soldiers are nigh, they are oppressed by the Mandarins.

Six hundred American officers are said to have started from New York for China, to fight against France in the expected war between her and China.

The reports from Egypt as to the whereabouts of El Mahdi are conflicting. Spies who have arrived at Khartoum from El Obeid say that the forces of El Mahdi have divided, and that his plan is to make simultaneous attacks on Dongola and Sennaar. Small bodies of the forces of El Mahdi are hovering around Khartoum and firing at boats on the river and stragglers from the garrison. Their operations caused a report to spread that El Mahdi was closing around the place, and there was great alarm there. The arrival of a re-enforcement of 1,300 Egyptians from Fashoda has not increased the confidence of the English officers. The men are sullen in disposition and of bad physique, and manifest no disposition to fight. The incapacity of the garrison was shown recently when a false alarm was given of the approach of El Mahdi. The garrison when ordered out exhibited great fear, and shrank from approaching the supposed enemy.

Baker Pasha will take the offensive as soon as a second Egyptian corps under Hussein Pasha reaches Berber. The total force under Baker Pasha is 4,000 Egyptians and 4,000 Bedouin auxiliaries, the latter being commanded by Zebehr Pasha. Nearly 300 commissioned and non-commissioned English officers accompany Baker Pasha. If Khartoum is relieved Zebehr Pasha's contingent will advance on Darfour.

The following is the text of the royal decree establishing reciprocity of commerce between Cuba and the United States: "I, the King, wishing to establish solidly and equitably our mercantile relations with the American Republic and without prejudice to any future decision concerning the tariff dues of the Great Antilles now in course of preparation, hereby abrogate the fifth article of the royal decree of the 12th of March, 1867, which required that American merchandise under the Spanish flag pay import duty in Cuba equivalent to the duty levied upon importations under a foreign flag. This decree to go into effect thirty days after publication has been made by the Spanish Consuls in the official newspapers of their locality." The American Minister has presented to the Government a complaint against the consolidation into the internal-revenue of Cuba of capital representing certain illegal seizures made in Cuba upon the property of American citizens. The amount of the claim is about $10,000,000. The principal creditor is Senor Aldema. The American Minister demands immediate cash payment.

The first number of a Socialist monthly entitled Today has just appeared in London. Its articles are smartly written. They treat on nearly every economic and religious heresy. The bourgeois is defied, and the existing spirit of content is denounced. The most prominent project advocated is the independence of Ireland. Mr. Gladstone is called a revolutionary, and his policy is criticised without stint. Dr. Aveling, an intimate friend of Mr. Bradlaugh, in a contribution, violently attacks Christianity, and declares that the theory of a future life is entirely opposed to social progress. A Socialist weekly called Justice will be put on sale Jan. 12, with a similar platform to that of Today.

A circular issued by the Orange Grand Masters in Ireland advises the enrollment of Orange volunteer forces of militia, and, if possible, old soldiers, to strengthen the Orange Society as a fighting force. The Government will be petitioned to allow these volunteers to be armed with rifles, which will be kept in the nearest Orange halls or barracks. The Freeman's Journal says: "If such a document had been issued by a man suspected of leaning to the popular cause in Ireland he would be prosecuted and imprisoned under the Crimes act."

At the last census the natives of Ireland who were present in England and Wales numbered 562,374, being in the proportion of 21.65 to 1,000 of the entire population. The number is not an increasing quantity, for in 1861 it was 601,634, and at each census since it has fallen gradually: These figures show that relatively to the whole population of the country the Irish element is not formidable, but its unequal division over the country concentrates its strength in certain districts. In the agricultural counties the number of Irish is insignificant, but in the manufacturing and mining counties and boroughs they form a large proportion of the population. Thus, in Liverpool they are reckoned at 12.8 per cent, in Birkenhead 8.8, in St. Helen's 8.5, in Manchester

7.5, in Salford 7.4, in Lancashire 6.1, in Cumberland 5.6 per cent, and so on.

Vermont school reports show a remarkable decadence of the educational spirit in that State. There are now in the schools only 72,842 pupils against 74,646 in 1881; the number of teachers has decreased 124 in two years, while the cost of the schools has increased 25 per cent. The decline in the number of pupils is not so much attributable to the decrease in the population, which is hardly noticeable, as to the deterioration in its character. The native American families are moving westward and their places are being taken by French-Canadians, among whom love of learning can not be said to be a strong passion.

An interesting question of the sale of poison is decided. John McCarthy, a consumptive, took Fowler's solution as a tonic. The proper dose is five drops. He took nearly 400 in twenty-four hours. An overdose saved his life. He brought suit against the druggist for selling the poison without a warning label. The defendants claimed the solution did not come under the law requiring a poison label on arsenic. The court held the solution was arsenic under law and convicted the defendant.

Dec. 30th.—The rebels attacked Gezirch, eight miles from Berber. The garrison of the town, consisting of two companies of Bashi Bazouks, repulsed the assailants with heavy loss. The Egyptian loss was slight. The rebels intended to attack Berber, but were thwarted by the defeat. Three thousand Bedouins have left Koreiko to take possession of Berber and Dongola.

The murder of Lieut-Col. Sudeikin, of the Russian gendarmerie, was undoubtedly the work of Nihilists. A letter was found at Sudeikin's house threatening Tolstori, Minister of the Interior, with a similar fate. Sudeikin was a leading member of the Society for the Suppression of Terrorism. A proclamation has been circulated urging Russian patriots to urge war to the knife against their present rulers, and not to leave the entire work to the Narodnia Volnia, a Nihilist journal. A Nihilist was arrested at Prague with compromising papers in his possession.

The Island of Sicily is maintaining its old reputation for deeds of violence, and the British Foreign Office has received such accounts of the activity of brigands there that it has issued an official notice that traveling in the island is unsafe unless the travelers are accompanied by an armed escort.

Near Syracuse, Neb., a young man twenty-one years old, named L. A. White, husked and hauled sixty rods, one hundred and forty bushes of corn by measure, in nine hours and forty-five minutes.

Dec. 31.—Che Ong, Viceroy of Kwangsi, China, and Kwangtung, will not take the field. He expected to start to-day for the Tonquin frontier, but further orders have just arrived from Peking directing him to remain in Canton. The Viceroy of Yunnan will go to the frontier instead. It is stated that he has been ordered to cross the border and assume command in person of the Chinese troops in Tonquin.

It is rumored that China is still very desirous of peace. Europe was told before the capture of Sontag that it would be necessary to seize that place in order to satisfy French honor, and then mediation and further negotiation would be possible. Europe is now told that the capture of Sontag puts mediation out of the question. France cries out to Europe "Hands off!" and demands indemnity from China, as if the Empire were already defeated. France threatens to seize Hainan, Formosa, and the Chusan Islands unless China instantly submits to the demand for indemnity.

There is great excitement, in Dromore, County Down, Ireland. The Orangemen are disappointed because the meeting of the Nationalists announced for New-Year's day has not been prohibited by the Government, and have determined to prevent its being held. Troops are arriving there to preserve order.

El Mahdi intends to descend upon Egypt proper. The insurrectionary movement is spreading along the coast. Baker Pasha is convinced that it is of the most formidable religio-political character. The Abyssinian demonstration on the Kassala road renders the situation still more critical. Nothing can be done at present, as an immediate advance would mean disaster. The British gun-boats have gone to Massowah. One thousand women and children, together with 400 soldiers, are bravely holding out at Sincat. Even with the promptest action on the part of England there will be barely time to save those people from a terrible fate. It is believed 20,000 rebels are between Suakin and Sincat. Should the Egyptians attempt to march on Berber it is believed 100,000 rebels would oppose them. A general order has been issued announcing the appointment of Baker Pasha as Governor-General of Eastern Soudan.

Maj. Holroyd, a British officer, has been dismissed the Egyptian service for striking a native officer.

Mr Parnell's program, published unofficially Thursday, remains uncontradicted. It announces, in addition to former items, that he will push the scheme of Irish county government, that he will favor further land legislation, better planned obstruction in Parliament, and a renewal of organized terror in Ireland on the Land-Legue plan; and finally, he will advocate a complete organization of the Irish vote in England, every Irishman to vote henceforth at his orders.

An attack on the Jesuits at Vienna, Austria, while a Jesuit Priest was addressing a large congregation, mostly women and children, resulted in the death of three persons, and the wounding of many more. Great excitement prevailed.

During the last year 388,541 immigrants have passed through Castle Garden, N. Y. This, as compared with 1882, shows a falling off in the immigration at this point of 66,864. Of the immigrants who arrived during 1883 about 170,000 were Germans. A little more than 90,000 came from the British Isles, and of these over one-half were Irish. About 25,000 came from Italy. Sweden followed with about 20,000 immigrants, and Norway and Hungary each contributed over 11,000. During the last year 58,596 cabin passengers from Europe landed at this port. This shows an increase of 549 over the figures of 1882.

Jan. 1.—Two great mass meetings, one of Nationalists and one of Orangemen, were held at Dromore, Ireland. Processions from the two meetings met and charged into each other. The police separated the combatants. Another collision occurred after the adjournment of the meetings. The combat was quelled by the charging of the Queen's troops.

A Saigon telegram confirms the report that the Black Flags massacred the prisoners captured before Sontag. Admiral Courbet has decided to take active measures of redress. A Khartoum dispatch confirms the report of an engagement between 600 soldiers of the garrison of Gezireh and a force of Egyptian rebels. The soldiers beat off the rebels, who are now trying to retreat on Berber.

Between 1863 and 1867 inclusive the brandy traffic in Russia was burdened with imposts amounting to 100,000,000 of rubles. Those imposts for the last four years now reach the sum of about 150,000,000, showing an increase of 50 per cent. All this, of course, means an increase in the price of intoxicating liquors to those who consume them, yet some how or other the consumers have risen to the occasion, bad as the times are, and the flow of spirits is even greater than before. Ten quarts of brandy is now the annual rate of consumption for every man, woman, and child in the Empire. Every 224 men have a whisky-shop to themselves in the country districts, including villages; in the towns drinking establishments are provided in the proportion of one to every 120 inhabitants; in parts of Podolia, Volhynia, and the Ukraine there are places where as many as ten beer-shops may be reckoned to a single village.

Jan. 2.—The vengeance of the Nihilists, visited so signally on Col. Sudeikin and his assistant, has completely terrorized St. Petersburg once more. Sudeikin was making too free use of one Jablonski, an informer, on whose recitals twenty-seven Nihilists had been given into the hands of the law. If anything may be astonishing after the admission that such a state of society exists this side of Asia, it is the fact that we are in instantaneous communication with the city where such things occur. Material progress and moral barbarism flourish together.

A Cairo Egypt dispatch states that the position of Khartoum is critical. It is reported that the rebels are drawing around the place.

A revolutionary movement is expected to occur on the Franco-Spanish frontier. The Spanish Minister of the Interior has advised the French Prefects of the frontier to take precautions to prevent an uprising.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

Dec. 27.—C. A. Contant & Co., of Chicago, failed for $100,000. William Carroll & Co., of N. Y., for $170,000. A. W. Johnston, Bloomington, Ill., for $6,000. Jefferds, Bailey & Co., Jamestown, N. Y., for $100,000. F. J. Conklin & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., $13,000. H. E. Mann, St. Paul, Minn., $50,000.

At Antwerp, Germany, Ghislain, Cahn, Painvin & Drion, bankers, suspended payment. Liabilities, £400,000.

Four per cent coupon Government bonds sold yesterday at 125, the highest figure ever reached.

Dec. 28.—Wright, Gillies & Bros., N. Y., failed for $125,000. C. S. Benham, San Francisco, Cal., for $200,000. M. Meyenburg & Co. N. Y., for $225,859. Harwood, Delos & Pratt, Toledo, O., for $28,000. Other failures amounting to $258,000 are reported to-day.

Dun's reports show that there were 214 failures in the United States and twenty-four in Canada during the last seven days, being a reduction of eighty-five as compared with the previous week.

Dec. 29th.—Beis Bros. & Co., Cincinnati, O., failed for $400,000. Other failures at same place foot up $117,000. Pittsburg, Pa., iron workers are restricting the production of nails. All the factories in the west will close for six weeks, throwing 5,000 men out of employment.

During the year 1883, up to the close of business Dec. 29th, 7,243,969 gallons of spirits were produced in the Chicago distilleries. The total receipts of internal revenue in the First District of Illinois for the year were $8,774,890.

At Marseilles, France, 2,000 stokers and sailors are on strike.

Dec. 30th.—The Sun's Wall street, N. Y., article says: The year which closes to-day will remain a memorable one in the annals, not only of Wall street, but of all the stock exchanges of the world. The depression in business is quite as great in Paris, London, Amsterdam, and Frankfort as it is in New York. The tumble in prices has not been as heavy in English and German securities, but the American securities held abroad fell as much there as they fell at home while France had a long list of stocks wiped out, and another quite as long showing a fall of 25 to 50 per cent. New York managed, however, to avoid a crash like the one Paris had in the beginning of the year, and went through the process of liquidation and depreciation in a gradual and orderly manner which would be a cause for pride to much older communities. It seems almost incredible that a shrinkage of over one thousand millions of dollars in investment values should have taken place, not only without a panic, but even without any considerable individual failures.

During the last year 848 new business houses have been established at Minneapolis, Minn. The population of that city is now claimed to be 100,000, an increase of 18,000 during the year.

Dec. 31.—The statistics for each year since the resumption of specie payment are as follows:

Years.	Failures.	Liabilities.
1879.....	6,658	$ 98,149,053
1880.....	4,735	65,752,000
1881.....	5,582	81,155,932
1882.....	6,738	101,547,564
1883.....	9,184	172,874,172

The number of failures in the United States during the year just ended was 10,187, against 7,574 in 1882. This is an increase of 34 per cent. The lowest number of failures in the last five years was in 1880, when there were only 4,350.

Matters have not gone well with Canada in a business way during the last year. There was an increase of 143 per cent in the number of failures as compared with the previous year. In 1882 the number was 642; in 1883 it was 1,460.

A dull week in business made a small showing at the clearing-houses—yet only poorer than last year's holiday week by about 3 per cent. Pittsburg, Louisville, Kansas City, and several of the million-dollar towns had plenty of trade, notwithstanding the general stagnation. The total for the whole country was $840,741,823.

In 1883 the public debt was reduced $110,000,000. The December reduction rose again to a gratifying figure—estimated at $12,000,000.

Alexander Brogden, member of Parliament for Wednesbury and an ironmaster, of London, Eng., has failed. Liabilities, £723,000. John Faust Easby, coal merchant, Bradford, has failed. Liabilities, £100,000. Henry Brogden, ironmaster, and formerly a partner with Alexander Brogden, whose failure has already been announced, has also failed. Liabilities, £720,000. Samuel King Church, a colliery proprietor, has failed. Liabilities, £97,000.

Strause & Mayer, Chicago, Ill., failed for a large sum. A. J. Krogstadt, Chicago, Ill., for $1,200. Jacob Jeros, Nashville, Tenn., for $40,000. Ten other minor failures are reported.

Five continuous good years have restored public confidence on the Pacific Coast, which was wanting from 1875 to 1879, and not alone San Francisco but the entire coast shows greater progress than anticipated. During the last four years 2,438 buildings, of which 800 were in 1883, were erected, at a cost of $14,700,000. Two important cable railroads have been opened the last year, bringing within easy reach remote outlying districts.

Commercial statistics of San Francisco show wheat exports to the amount of nearly $23,000,000. There is still a surplus in the State of about a million tons. Farmers are masters of the situation and are holding back. There is a sufficiency of tonnage in port and farmers have received the last season 10 cents more per bushel on an average than the previous season. Exports to China were $4,253,000, about half a million less than in 1882, while to the Hawaiian Islands there is an increase of $317,000 over the previous year. Mexico also shows an increase of $400,000. Bank clearings were $617,921,853, against $629,114,119 in 1882.

Failures on the entire coast exclusive of Utah numbered 643, with $6,825,788 liabilities, and $3,597,738 assets. The State has gained about 50,000 in population by immigration. The Central and Southern parts of the State have advanced in a greater ratio than the Northern, especially San Bernardino, Los Angeles, San Diego, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, and Monterey counties. The northern counties, chiefly depending on mining, are holding their own where quartz-mining is carried on, while hydraulic mining districts, owing to the unsettled debris question, have retrograded. The bullion products for 1883 were $16,050,000 gold, $1,500,000 silver—the same as last year. The wine yield is 9,500,000 gallons, and 30,000 acres are in vines.

Nevada, while not making a good showing in mining, has advanced in other directions, and attention is turned to the cultivating land once thought worthless, and the vast cattle-ranges are opened. Virginia City is no longer what it was. It is only necessary to state that its 234 saloons of 1875 have dwindled down to between thirty and forty. Oregon and Washington Territory have each gained not less than 20,000 in population, and Oregon has now fully 265,000. Arizona continues to open productive mines, and has gained about 10,000 in population.

The annual report of Utah and adjoining Territories shows increased prosperity and growth. The total bullion product of the Pacific coast is placed at $65,000,000. Utah produced $8,000,000 last year. The total for the Territory since the opening of the mines by the Gentiles is $70,000,000. Utah's population is 170,000. Salt Lake has a population of 28,000, an increase of 7,000 since 1880. Nine hundred new buildings were erected in the city this year, costing $1,500,000. One hundred and forty-three miles of railroad were constructed. The Mormon immigrants for the year were 3,000. The assessed valuation of the Territory is $30,000,000.

Two thousand more coal miners are soon to be thrown out of work at Pittsburg, Pa. At Wilkesbarre, Pa., a suspension of all the mines until April 1st, for three days per week has been ordered. At Reading, Pa., three hundred men were thrown out of employment by the shutting down of an iron and rail mill. Wages at several iron mills and one woolen mill in Massachusetts have been reduced from ten to fifteen per cent.

Jan. 1st.—C. W. Savage & Sons, Miles City, Mont., failed for $90,000. Other failures amounting to $18,000, are reported. Business in Georgia has lately been unusually dull.

During the year 1882 imports were in excess of exports eight months out of the twelve. In 1883 the exports were in excess of the imports for all but two months out of eleven. The collateral fact that the year was by no means one of the brightest ones of the decade—was in fact one of the gloomiest this country has ever had without a panic—may lead the reflecting and independent mind to doubt the value of the theory which gages the prosperity of a nation by the excess of that which it gives over that which it receives in its commercial relations with other countries. The surplus of exports over imports for the twelve months ending with Nov. 30th was $120,000,000 during last year; for the preceding twelve months it was but $1,396,802. Last year was one of larger imports than exports of gold and silver—another symptom according to the popular belief of commercial and financial felicity. For the twelve months ending Nov. 30th 1883, the country imported $6,417,636 more specie than it sent out; in the year before our specie exports were $32,701,307 in excess of our imports. Such facts as these three years ago would have been reflected on the stock markets in a rise of values to the extent of millions, as was the fashion in those days of generous booms.

Ten minor failures in the iron trade are reported from Birmingham, England. There are other small failures in the same trade elsewhere.

According to the annual report of Gov. Cleveland, the debt of New York, less the sinking fund is $5,978,301.

The business of Chicago, Ill., for 1883, amounted to $1,050,000,000. Chicago received and handled 4,403,579 barrels of flour and 148,775,283 bushels of grain in 1883.

Jan. 2.—The Crescent Manufacturing Company, Chicago, Ill., failed for $8,000. A. J. De-fassez, New Orleans, La., $72,000. Other failures amounting to $78,800 are reported.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Dec. 27.—Loss by fire at Fort Atkinson, Wis., incendiary, $3,700. Saranac, Mich., $75,000. New Orleans, La., $35,000. The Eagel woolen mill at West Chelmsford, Mass., loss $200,000.

In Bohemia, Europe, a severe shock of earthquake was felt, causing the inhabitants to flee to the neighboring fields.

A gas explosion in New York City injured four persons, and destroyed $9,000 worth of property.

At Silverton, Wyoming, a terrific wind-storm set in the 19th, raging furiously six days, and proving the most destructive of life ever known. A train of twenty-five freight-cars at Monument was overturned by a high wind the 25th.

Dec. 28.—Loss by fire at Bloomfield, Ind., $20,000. Wilmington, Del., $75,000. Seaforth, Ont., Woolen Mills, $30,000. Lodi, O., Flouring Mill, $15,000. Chicago, Ill., $1,500. Leavenworth, Kas., $2,500. Eau Claire, Wis., $1,200. Orangeburgh, S. C., $45,000. Memphis, Tenn., 15,000.

Capt. Scott, the commander of the steamer Plantyn, wrecked on her way from New York to Antwerp, and one of the fifty-three men rescued and landed in Portugal by the brig G. D. T., gives the following account of the disaster: "Nov. 17, latitude 44.17 north, longitude 42.20 west, a hurricane carried away the poop-deck, bridge, the engine-room, skylight, and the main-deck from the poop to the engine-room, leaving only the ironwork intact. The storm brought down one mast, which in its fall, smashed five life-boats and four pinnaces. The water gained upon the engine-room and quenched the fires and filled the hold. Four sailors and one passenger perished at this time, and Dr. Fray-seer, the Plantyn's physician, and four sailors were injured. One of the latter died. Four hundred and sixty tons of the cargo were jettisoned in the efforts to relieve the vessel. Several steamers passed the Plantyn while undergoing the terrible trial, but paid no attention to her signals of distress. The crew worked the pumps and baled water night and day, thus keeping the ship afloat until Dec. 6th, when the brig G. D. T. hove in sight and rescued the passengers and crew. Two men were afterwards transferred to another vessel. The remainder landed at Oporto."

Prof. Davidson received from Alaska to-day particulars of the volcanic disturbances in October last near the entrance of Cook's Inlet.

The morning of the 6th of October a settlement of fishermen on English Bay heard a heavy report, and looking in the direction of the sound, saw immense volumes of smoke and flame suddenly burst forth from the summit of Mount Augustin. The sky became obscured, and a few hours after great quantities of pumice dust began to fall, some fine and smooth; some gritty. At 3:30 the same day an earthquake wave thirty feet high came rushing in over the hamlet, sweeping away all the boats and deluging the houses. The tide at the time being low, the settlement was saved from utter destruction. This was followed by two other waves about eighteen feet high, which were succeeded at irregular intervals by others. Pumice ashes fell to the depth of five inches, making the day so dark lamps had to be lit. At night the surrounding country was illuminated by flames from the crater. Ordinarily Mount Augustin is covered with snow, but this year it is completely bare.

An examination after the disturbances had subsided showed that the mountain was split in two from base to summit and the northern slope had fallen to a level with the surrounding cliffs. Simultaneous with the eruption was the creation of a new island in the passage between Chernaboura Island and the mainland seventy-five feet high and a mile and a half long. The violence of volcanic action was so great that two extinct volcanoes on the peninsula of Alaska, lying to the west, became active. The volcano Illiamna, 12,000 feet high, burst into activity, emitting immense volumes of smoke and dust. Flames were visible at night. It is stated that the wives of the party of Aleut Indians engaged in that locality in other hunting became afraid of the subterranean noises and refused to stay. They returned home, and none of those who remained can be found.

Dec. 29.—Loss by fire at Joliet, Ill., $225,000. Williams' Bridge, N. Y., $25,000. Oxford, Ala., $25,000. Memphis, Tenn., $28,000. Burlington, Ia., $16,000.

Dec. 30th.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $200,000. Four firemen were injured. Jamestown, Dak., $100,000. Norfolk, Va., $8,000. Whitesboro, Tex., incendiary, $35,000.

The steamer Carrier was sunk at the head of Little Hurricane Island, three miles below Owensboro, Ky., at 10 o'clock this morning. One deckhand and two deck passengers, Italians, were drowned. The brig Blanche, was wrecked about 240 miles from St. Johns, N. F. The crew were brought away in an exhausted condition.

Dec. 31.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $40,000. Fargo, Dak., $25,900. Streator, Ill., coal mine fire, $8,000.

Jan. 1st.—Loss by fire at Howard City, Mich., $75,000. Tower City, Dak., $20,000. Breckenridge, Minn., $21,900. Mamaroneck, N. Y., $15,000. Thorndike, Mass., Cottonmill $50,000. Sedalia, Mo., $50,000.

Terrific snow storms and cold weather in Iowa, Kansas and elsewhere, succeeded in slightly impeding railroad travel.

Jan. 2d.—Two steamers were burned at St. Louis, Mo., loss $22,000. Loss by fire at Louisville, Ky., $35,000. Cleveland, O., $15,000. Clintonville, Wis., $8,000. Bismarck, Dakota, $10,000.

A serious railway accident happened on the Iowa Division of the Illinois Central near Fort Dodge this morning. Three passenger-cars went down a fifteen-foot embankment. Mrs. J. H. Smith, of Bureau county, Illinois, was instantly killed, her infant escaping all injury. Seven passengers were wounded, some of them very seriously.

A collision between a freight and passenger train near Toronto, Ont., killed twenty-nine persons, and horribly mutilated fifty-eight others.

Through the sinking of coal-boats and tugs in the Ohio River nine miles below Pittsburg yesterday morning four lives were lost. Ice and a strong current rendered the boats unmanageable.

The ship Adam M. Simpson is reported wrecked just north of Borneo. Loss $200,000. By the breaking of a dam, two houses were wrecked and six persons drowned, at Houghton, Mich.

Selected Poetry.

GLORY TO GOD.

"Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

Glory be to God the Father!
Glory be to God the Son!
Glory be to God the Spirit!
Great Jehovah, Three in One!
Glory, glory,
While eternal ages run!

Glory be to Him who loved us,
Washed us from each spot and stain!
Glory be to Him who bought us,
Made us Kings with Him to reign!
Glory, glory,
To the Lamb that once was slain!

Glory to the King of Angels!
Glory to the Church's King!
Glory to the King of nations!
Heaven and earth your praises bring!
Glory, glory,
To the king of Glory bring!

Glory, blessing, praise eternal!
Thus the choir of angels sings;
Honor, riches, power, dominion!
Thus its praise creation brings;
Glory, glory,
Glory to the King of Kings.

Dr. Horatius Bwar.

"And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse which will stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious."—Isaiah.

"THOU SHALT NOT MUZZLE THE OX THAT TREADETH OUT THE CORN."

WHEN God established his church in the last days and appointed his ministry to work therein, he established the law governing that ministry, and that law must remain until repealed by him who ordained it. The law of tithing is unquestionably one part of that law, but it is not the whole of it. We are not at liberty to ignore any part of God's law. Each precept, command, ordinance, privilege or promise, embodied therein, is in force equally with every other precept, command, ordinance, promise or privilege of that law; and until the church recognizes and obeys it in the letter and spirit in which it is given, prosperity will not greatly follow our labors.

I hold the absolute necessity of obedience to the law of tithing, and firmly believe the cause of truth is languishing because of our backwardness to obey it; and souls are perishing for the lack of hearing the word of God, and the blame must lie at the door of the church. It is a fearful responsibility, but we are inviting its dread consequences.

I admire the zeal of the Bishopric, and that of many of their agents in urging that law upon the church; and I sympathize with them when their appeals are so little heeded, and they find their efforts cramped and crippled by such wide-spread delinquency. We expect the Presidency with the Twelve and Bishopric to send the gospel into all the world, but deny them the means necessary for the work, and then wonder why so little is accomplished, and are almost ready to apostatize because God withholds his blessings. Our inconsistency must be apparent to every one who reflects upon the subject. "If we sow sparingly we shall reap sparingly," is a law as immutable as the giver thereof. All our prayers and tears can not avail us, until we repent and honor the law under which these blessings are promised. The law governing the church renders it impossible that its ministry should be a salaried one. "Freely ye have received, freely give," must ever be the rule that shall govern the ministry, as well as the laity. We are forbidden to preach for hire or divine for money. God will not allow his gospel, nor the souls of men to be made merchandise of by his servants. For this evil "Zion was ploughed as a field, and Jerusalem became heaps." (Micah 3: 11, 12). The same cause will always produce the same effect. Men must preach the gospel from a sense of duty to God and man, and for the love of the gospel, and of the souls of men. If our reward is in dollars and cents, or even in honor and applause, there is great temptation placed in our way, inviting us to wrest the truth, and daub with untempered mortar, as is too frequently done by those who preach for hire and divine for money. Yet the ministry is composed of men, and they have all the necessary wants of men, and there must be some means to supply those wants. We are told the tithing is "for the building of mine house, and for the laying of the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the Presidency of my church," and "for the poor and the needy." The church when fully organized according to the pattern, must have a local ministry to preside and watch over the interests of the several Stakes of Zion, and these are provided for in the law of tithing; but I see no provision in that law for the traveling ministry. It makes provision for their families, but their individual wants, while preaching the gospel to the world, are to be supplied from another source. As in ancient times, they are commanded to "take no thought for the morrow what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, or wherewithal ye shall be clothed." See Doctrine and Covenants p. 228. Book of Mormon p. 462. Also Matt. 6: 30-39, inclusive. They are also commanded "To go without purse and scrip." See Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 83: 3-15. Here we find that God has pledged himself to supply their wants. His ways in this may be various, but he is equal to his purpose. He fed Israel with manna and quails, Elijah by ravens, "The five thousand" with a few loaves and fishes, and he has condescended to tell us some of the means by which he will provide for his traveling ministry in these days. He says, "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money. And he who feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in no wise lose his reward; and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple; by this you may know my disciples." Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 83: 16.

But we are told in a late "Epistolary letter," that "The common usage of the past, or private individual giving, is discouraged, because funds so given are diverted from the possession and use of those whose calling it is to use them for the purposes of the church, as their wisdom may deem necessary." One of the purposes, if not the purpose of the church, is the preaching of the gospel; and this private individual giving is one of God's means to provide for his servants while they are engaged in that ministry. Has the church any right to discourage the use of this means? If it has not, has any individual, member or even quorum, that right? I hold that until God repeals this part of his law providing for his ministry, no power on earth can, and hence we have no right to discourage this "common usage." Discourage this God given order, and you "muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn." While the families of the Elders must be provided for, it is also essential that the Elders themselves be properly sustained. Their wardrobes need replenishing. It would be small credit to the church to let their ministers go with threadbare clothing, and poorly shod; yet he is not to be provided with clothing out of the tithing. Must he take it from the scanty pittance allowed his family? Or shall those among whom he labors and for whom he labors, be allowed to minister to his wants? The latter is God's plan, but this is "discouraged." God has commanded his servants to study; hence they need books sometimes. Unless the church would have their thirst for knowledge quenched, and an ignorant ministry barricading its doors, instead of an intelligent one, opening wide the doors to all the world. Some of the ministry, at least, are social beings, and want to commune with their loved ones at home, and friends far and near. To gratify this very proper and natural desire, they need money; but "private individual giving is discouraged." They can not call upon the Bishop for this necessity. Their families can not aid them without pinching themselves, and they must plod on through this cold world, lonely and forsaken, or equal to it in the effects upon the mind. No word of cheer will reach them if they can not commune with others. This may seem a frivolous thing, but "Put yourselves in their place," and if you have a yearning for communion with friends and home, you will find this want a stern reality. I know a man who once took the coat from his back, and pawned it for four shillings, and then freely paid the money for news from home, while he was preaching the gospel in a foreign land. He was thankful that God had given him the coat, so that he could pawn it, and hear from his friends. But if "private and individual giving is discouraged," it will be a hard matter for him to get another coat to give. It is absolutely necessary for them sometimes to ride upon the railroads, but those corporations allow no "dead heads" in their carriages. I have only mentioned a few of the wants of the traveling ministry, which God has undertaken to supply, if the church does not "discourage private individual giving." And if it does that, the ministry is crippled, and of necessity they must lay down their armor, and return to their several vocations.

But there is either a real, or imaginary cause for the discouraging of private and individual giving. We are told it is "because funds so given are diverted from the possession and use of those whose calling it is to use them for the purposes of the Church as their wisdom may deem necessary." We repeat, it is the duty of the members to tithe themselves according to the law, and the Bishopric has the right of disposing of that means according to the necessities of the Church, as God shall give them wisdom; but if any of those who thus tithe themselves have hearts to feel for the traveling ministry, who may not draw means from the treasury for their individual wants, what right have we to discourage their giving? We may be told they should give it to the Bishop. When a person has tithed himself, the Bishop has no further claim, nor is it likely the person tithed would feel himself bound to respect any such claim if one were made. The means he has left after tithing himself is not claimed in the law. It is his own, he may give it all to the church or withhold it without condemnation; and if he sees a traveling minister in need, it is his privilege to help him. Again, there is nothing in the law that forbids a person who has not tithed himself, to administer to the wants of such minister, nor has the church any right to add to the law of God, in this or any other particular. And in view of the fact that the church has appointed many of its elders to labor within its limits, or where there are organized branches; and as the individual wants of those elders are not to be supplied from the tithing, it would be unjust and cruel to "discourage private individual giving." Such discouragement is at variance with God's law, and would soon thin the ranks of the ministry, and bring shame upon the church. If I understand the Bishopric, they have not discouraged it, but have asked, as they have a right to do, that the Elders shall report to them, the various amounts received by them while on their missions, that there may be no imposition upon the treasury, by drawing money therefrom, when they do not need it. This is in keeping with the law which says: "And again, verily I say unto you, it is expedient that every man who goes forth to proclaim mine everlasting gospel, that inasmuch as they have families, and receive moneys by gift, that they should send it to them, or make use of it for their benefit, as the Lord shall direct them; for thus it seemeth me good. And let all those who have not families, who receive moneys, send it up to the Bishop in Zion."—Doctrine and Covenants, p. 230.

The Elder has first the right to use what is necessary for himself, as is evident from the following, given before the one above referred to: "If thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my store house, that all things may be done according to that which I have said."—Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 42: 14. The words, "thy support," must include his own and his family's wants. This law is just and prevents any man from getting rich out of the church treasury, or by individual giving. I should be guilty of wrong to the church and to my brethren in the ministry, and to their families, if I allowed myself or family to absorb all the means I could or did obtain from private individual giving, and then drew ample means to maintain my family from the treasury. It would be equal to robbery in my view, and I should be very sorry to know that there was a man in the garb of a servant of God, and traveling as a minister for this church, who was guilty of such an act.

From the first of my ministry until now, I have viewed this as God's work, and all that I could do for its progress, I was doing for the glory of God and the well-being of my fellows. If I can make any sacrifice that will redound to the prosperity of truth, I believe it to be my duty. And though thirty-six years have rolled by since I put on the gospel armor, thirty-six years of toil and travel, with only a little interval of rest, I am not wearied; nor have I lost faith in my God or his promises; for I know he will not "muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn." Nor will he permit him wantonly to squander it to the injury of others. God has ever been equal to his promise; I would be glad if I could say I had been as faithful to mine. I believe the majority of my brethren have equal zeal for the cause with me, and I sometimes think they surpass me in this. And if there are any exceptions, I am heartily sorry for the exceptions; for the gospel is a hard thing to make worldly gain out of.

Let us, as a church, work together. Let all give of their means as God has ordained, and when his servants, who have left home and home comforts, break to you the bread of life to feed your starving souls, inspired by God's love, do not put the muzzle on them, but feed, clothe, and give them money, if they need it. By so doing they will have evidence that their labors are appreciated; and that God's word is true. A true servant of God will never impose upon the individual nor the church. He will not be continually pleading poverty in your ears. He will take these complaints to his God, and he will patiently wait his answer in whatever way seemeth best. You may be the honored means of gladdening the heart of that servant; but a woe is pronounced upon those who use the sacred office for filthy lucre. Wishing to be in harmony with all my brethren, and in harmony with God, I subscribe myself a laborer in the vineyard,

A man without virtue, envieth virtue in others.

WAS JOSEPH SMITH A PROPHET OF GOD?

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

At present, society in many parts of our land is considerably agitated over the subject of prophetic claims now presenting themselves in various forms for a following. Said claims when compared in detail, present to the view rather a promiscuous medley in doctrines, purposes and objects. And as we can not consistently believe that our Heavenly Father is the author of the imperfections, variety, shades, contradictions, inconsistencies and shapelessness of Spiritualism, the formless, systemless claims of "The Branch," or of "Joshua," of the state of Maine; or the little aimless, objectless, impertinent "Coming Struggle," or the already exhausted twinkling of W. K. Lay; and while the great minds of Doctors Thomas, Beecher, Swing, the Adams Brothers, and others are adrift upon the great ocean of human speculation, without any definite line of action, trusting almost wholly to human wisdom, denouncing to a great extent the doctrines and modes of thought of the past; an examination of the claim of Joseph Smith the martyr to divine revelation and prophetic prescience in their relation to the work of the Lord in these last days, would we believe, be of interest to all especially interested in said work.

To a great many religiously inclined minds, the propriety of divinely inspired men in these days is doubted, and absolutely denied. But this doubt and denial rest, evidently, on their religious training and misconceptions of the divine character and attributes of God; for we are not now aware of any principle of reason, or scriptural evidence, upon which to predicate this doubt and denial. If it is reasonable to believe that God has in any past age of the world endowed men with prophetic powers, and through them revealed divine wisdom, for the elevation and benefit of his creature man, is it not reasonable to believe that he cares for the welfare of his creature to-day, as much as in any past age? Only on condition that the nations now living, have by their own unfaithfulness rendered themselves unworthy of the bestowments of his guidance, watch-care and direction. Is this the case now? Then, judging the present by the past, we are unworthy the great and glorious end to be achieved through the revelation of the divine will to man. Man is just as powerless to direct himself aright now as in any past age. Is just as imperfect and fallible, is mortal and sinful, and from all these considerations, is just as needful of the help afforded to him through revelation from God now as in any past age.

Scripturally, the revelations given of God to the people of one generation were not considered by the Almighty to be altogether sufficient for all future generations; and hence, we find that the revelations given to Enoch, were not sufficient for the salvation of Noah and those saved in his times. And in addition to all these, God gave laws and commands to Abraham, and all his faithful children. And coming on down through the ages of the Mosaic economy, God raised up prophets early and late, and through them giving "line upon line, and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little," to bless, guide, instruct, and direct them and those of their age into the path of life, thus demonstrating to mankind the truth of the principle, that "God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." Isa. 28; Acts 10.

It seems, from a perusal of the record of God's dealings with the children of men in past ages, that it has ever been his design to cleanse, purify and elevate them to that high moral condition, described in his will, that would admit of communicating his pleasure with respect to them; to them, in every age of the past, and to thus elevate them finally to a holy, happy, and immortalized state. Hence we read:

"And hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us; for in him we live, and move, and have our being; as also certain of your own poets have said, for we are his offspring."—Acts 17: 26-28.

And that "all nations" might not be placed under the necessity of "seeking the Lord," and "feeling after him" in vain, he has chosen to reveal himself to them through the medium of his holy angels, the power of the Holy Ghost, his only begotten Son, and his servants the prophets;—men whom he has qualified and endowed as ministers, instructors, and teachers of his will. Says Isaiah:

"Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? Them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts. For precept must be upon precept; precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; for with stammering lips and another tongue will he speak to this people. To whom he said, This is the rest wherewith ye may cause the weary to rest; and this is the refreshing; yet they would not hear."—Isaiah 28: 9-12.

Thus taught the prophet of God, in relation to His dealings with men in ancient times, times prior to the days of Christ, and thus the prophecies in regard to the future from his days. "Line must be upon line, line upon line; precept upon precept, precept upon precept," "here a little and there a little." "For the word of the Lord must be unto them." And the blessed Savior, "the desire of all nations," "the Prince of Life," who came in the appointed time, to usher in the administration of heaven, the divine scheme of human salvation, according to the highest type possible among mortals, and who ever taught harmoniously with the prophets who lived prior to his day, declared in unmistakable language, not only that it was the will of his Father that the kingdom should be established by, or through the agency of "wise men and prophets," (Luke 11: 49), but, that it was also the "Father's good pleasure to give to" such "the kingdom," (Luke 12), which, says Paul, "Is not in meat and drink, but in righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." (Rom. 14: 17). That it was the Father's design, that the kingdom should also be carried on and perpetuated by men of divine appointment, and inspirational endowment and qualification; hence the injunction to those appointed of Christ, to carry on the "edifying," or building up of the church: "Tarry ye in Jerusalem, until you be endowed with power from on high."—Luke 24: 49. In harmony with the above, Paul, to whom was committed "a dispensation of the gospel" directly from Christ, without the intervening agency of man, (Gal. 1: 11, 12), taught as follows:

"When he (Christ) ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. * * * And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."—Eph. 4: 8-13.

Please observe relative to the foregoing, that the saved ones of earth, will never attain to "the measure of the stature of Christ," till we attain to the same condition he now occupies—a resurrected one. God's design then was, to perpetuate the church, or body of Christ, through the agency of the five classes of officers mentioned "till" we attain to the perfection referred to in the text.

Any revision of these texts that has yet appeared, will not alter the force of this argument, except we expunge verse 11, and the adverb "till" in verse 13, in order to avoid the continuance of "apostles and prophets" in the church, during the continuance of "pastors and teachers;" for the word "till" limits the continuance in the Church of Christ, of the elders or pastors and teachers, just where it limits the apostles and prophets. Now as these officers can only be continued in the church through revelation from God, in any age of the world, we are driven to the conclusion, that it was the design of the founder of the church to continue to reveal himself to his children from time to time, giving them "line upon line," till the day of perfection had arrived, the resurrection. In beautiful agreement with what we quoted from Isaiah, and as necessary to the attainment of the "rest" sought and longed for by the dark, weary, sin-burdened soul, the Savior says:

"This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou has sent."—John 17: 3.

And as to how this knowledge of God is to be attained, the Lord thus explains:

"At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and of earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.

All things are delivered unto me of my Father; and no one knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him. Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and you shall find rest to your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."—Matt. 11: 25-30.

The great Savior of the nations thus commits himself in promise to all that "are weary," on conditions that they "come unto" him, and "learn of" him, that they shall have the knowledge, so necessary to "life eternal" through revelation; the result of obtaining such revelation, to be "rest," a release, on condition of obedience to the requirements of the gospel of Christ, from the burden and consequence of past sins; a removal of the clouds that had darkened the mind and heart with perplexities, doubts and uncertainties, as to our standing before, and acceptance with, God. Only through revelation can absolute certainty, on this the most important of all subjects, be enjoyed by "all ye that labor, and are heavy laden."

But says the world, objecting to revelation from God now a days, While we believe in the revelations contained in the Bible, and that it was of the utmost propriety, and in harmony with divine wisdom that revelations be given to mankind till the New Testament was completed, we also believe that a sufficiency had then been given, and then all revelation was to cease forever, the canon being full. Besides, the fact that no revelation has been given of God for the last fifteen hundred years, confirms us in our position on this subject. This "fact," if it be a fact, does not militate in the least against God's design in the matter, as revealed in the express terms of the New Testament. If this great promise of the Testament covenant, has not been realized by the objecting world, it shows, only too plainly, that the conditions of the covenant have not been complied with by the objector.

Does the fact of Adam's expulsion from the garden prove that it was not God's design that he was to remain there? Does the fact that the generation of Jews that came out of Egypt, failed to enter Canaan, prove that God did not design that they should enter? Did the failure of the Jewish nation to accept Christ when he came to them, prove that God did not design that they should accept him and be saved?

Do you ask, then, why apostles, prophets, and revelations, have not continued uninterruptedly for the last fifteen hundred years. I answer, for the same reason that they are not among us to-day. Do you still query why is this?

Reader, pause for a moment, and consider the present state of the religious world, its divisions, its popularity, its love of money, of fashion, its darkened prejudice, then contemplate the reflections of your own mind, the feelings of your own heart, in relation to this subject, in connection with the spirit that actuated the nations of the past, toward the prophets of old, the Jews toward Christ, when on earth, and some of the Saints to whom Paul said: "Despise not prophesyings," and "Forbid not to speak in tongues," and when you have analyzed this spirit, you will have answered your interrogation to your own satisfaction, "Why has not revelation continued down through the dark ages?"

But, says the objector to continued revelation, Is not revelation after the apostolic age contrary to the teachings of the Book of Revelations, in chapter 22: 18, 19: "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book?"

No. We fail to see that this passage teaches a cessation of revelation at the conclusion of the apostolic age, and for these considerations: In the first chapter of revelations, verse 11, John, while on the Island of Patmos, saw in vision the things in the book related, and is commanded: "What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia." He does as commanded, and in concluding it, uses language in which man is prohibited from adding anything to it whatever, under penalty of the plagues therein referred to. "This book," therefore, refers only to "The Book of Revelations." We can not see that because God prohibits man from adding to his word, he therefore closes his own mouth. "This book" was not a part of the New Testament, as we have it, for the books and letters composing the New Testament, had not yet been gathered up and compiled into its present form. Therefore the language to "add not" could not be construed to mean that the canon was completed, or that no more revelation was to be given after the Book of Revelation was revealed and written. Moreover, if this text means that no more revelation was to be received from God after the Book of Revelation was written, then John himself, the writer of "this book," was the first to incur the threatened displeasure, or penalty. For according to the most recently acknowledged chronology, the late Anglo-American New Testament Revision Committee, John wrote the Book of Revelation about A. D. 94; his gospel about A. D. 95, or 96; and his three Epistles about A. D. 97, or 98. If, therefore, this interpretation was entirely unknown to the apostles and prophets of Christ in their day—this idea of "the canon of Scripture being full"—where, when, and by whom was it originated? There is no divine authority for it.

Again asks our objector: Was it not the design of God to place in the institution called the "kingdom of God," "the body of Christ," "the church," all these extraordinarily endowed officers, and those spiritual gifts promised by Christ, and referred to by Paul and other inspired writers, including all this grand media of divine revelation, only till the Christian religion was fully established among men; and then they were to cease, and give place to ordinary arrangement as exemplified among us to-day?

A strange idea this, indeed! Whence is its origin? Did any of the prophets of old prophesy that such was to be the fate of ancient Christianity? Did Christ ever so teach? Which one of the apostles taught according to the above? Have never yet been able to find the chapter and verse that says God so designed. Did it never occur to your mind that those officers and gifts referred to by you, are parts of the institution called the kingdom of God? As much so as executives, jurors and legislators with their prescribed qualifications are a part of the United States of America? As much a part of the Church of Christ, as the moon and stars are a part of our solar system? Apostles, prophets, evangelists, and inspired elders and teachers, with all their spiritual endowments, are as much a part of the body of Christ, as my feet, my hands, nose, mouth and tongue, ears and eyes, are parts of my body. Let us see if this be true.

"And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

"Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of [composed of] the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord. In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit."

"For we are laborers together with God; ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building." (Matt. 16: 18, 19; Eph. 2: 19-22; 1 Cor. 3: 9).

"And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars; and she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered. And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads. And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth; and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, to devour her child as soon as it was born. And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne."

That this beautiful figure represents the true church of Christ, in an organized state is plainly to be seen from the following:

"And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." (Rev. 12: 1, 4, 5-17).

"For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body, so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jew or Gentile, whether we be bond or free; and have all been made to drink into one spirit. For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not [part] of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling? But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. And if they were all one member, where were the body? But now are they many members, yet but one body. And the eye can not say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of thee. Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary; and those members of the body, which we think to be less honorable, upon these we bestow more abundant honor; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness. For our comely parts have no need; but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honor to that part which lacked: That there should be no schism [division] in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it, or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—(1 Cor. 12: 12-28).

"For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another. Having then gifts differing [not differing faiths or doctrines] according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministry: or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness."—Rom. 12: 4-8.

"There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling. * * But unto every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ. Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. * * * And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets, and some evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: * * * From whom the whole body fitly joined together [not divided into numerous sects] and compact by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."—Eph. 4: 4-12, 16.

The foregoing statements of holy writ, beautifully portray the complete unity of the body of Christ, and the harmony of the parts composing the whole. They also demonstrate the truth of the statement that the various members and officers are the parts of which the whole church, or body is composed. The great framework of the kingdom is therein beautifully described. This body is animated by the "one spirit" of God, with its manifestations and gifts of wisdom, faith, knowledge, tongues, interpretations, prophecies, healings, and discernment of spirits.

Now is it not plain to be seen, that to take away, or remove the parts of which the whole is composed, is simply to remove the building! And the foregoing scriptures do not teach that God, after thus organizing the church, designed to remove or disorganize it; but that God designed the body, as thus "tempered" together, to make "increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love," being thus "fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord." Such was God's design in regard to the Church, as stated by himself. Moreover, if the Church of Christ as originally established, was to be changed, where is the divine authority for the change? What will be offered as a substitute? What new form of church organization, or Christianity, is to take its place?

But, says one, Did not Paul say, "and yet show I unto you a more excellent way?" I am not sure that Paul used just that language. "More" is a comparative word, and indicates another than the supposed "more excellent way." What was the "way?" Evidently the Lord's way, Paul had just devoted the entire twelfth chapter to explaining how all the spiritual gifts were manifested "as he will;" and how "God hath tempered the body together;" how "God hath set the members in the body, every one of them as it hath pleased him;" and it is difficult to conceive how Paul could show us "a more excellent way" of salvation, than the Lord's way! I would rather believe, that some one during the dark ages had mis-translated slightly here, as in some other parts of the Bible, than to think Paul guilty of presuming to tell us he would show us "a more excellent way" than the Lord's way.

It is true, that some, even in the days of Paul, had imbibed the false idea that possibly the entire membership of the church might attain to some one gift, or office, or that the several classes of officers excepting one, might be done away, as indicated by the interrogations of Paul, in verses 29 and 30, and as has been falsely taught by thousands of the worldly wise, ever since that age. And it would have been perfectly true and harmonious with the context for Paul to have said: "Nay. For I have shown you a more excellent way," in reply to this false idea. Hence he says in continuation of the subject: "But covet earnestly the best gifts," [plural], and continues his argument, so notably, in the 13th chapter, beginning with the 8th verse, showing most conclusively, that God designed the spiritual gifts to continue with his church, that it might be able to understand, prophesy, and know "in part," at least, and by the aid of these gifts, to "see" the future glory and inheritance of the Saints, "through a glass darkly," until the day of perfection dawns, when the resplendent light of the sun of righteousness, will swallow up the starlight of our mortal probation, and we shall have attained to the condition of a "perfect man, to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." Pursuing this subject Paul continues, by commandment, not only to "covet earnestly the best gifts," but also to "follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy," and still further: "Even so ye, forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the Church," and "Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the others judge." "For ye may all prophesy one by one." And then he concludes this department of the subject, for the time being, by saying: "If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord." 1 Cor. 12: 31; 13: 8-12; 14: 1, 12, 29, 31, 37.

By the above we learn that God's people are under obligation to him, to expect, "covet," "desire," and "seek" the "best gifts;" spiritual gifts, to the edifying of the church, a means of building up Christianity, Christ's Church among men on earth. "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me," and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest [reveal] myself to him."—John 14: 21.

If, as these Scriptures teach, it was the pleasure of our Heavenly Father that the kingdom of heaven, as thus described by Christ and his authorized servants, should "grow unto an holy temple," make "increase of itself," be "edified," through agency of "the word of the gospel," these designated classes of inspired and Divinely authorized officers, or "members in particular," of the body, together with the regenerating, life-giving power of the Holy Ghost, manifested in its various gifts, and the disciples of Christ are under the obligation of Divine "commandments," to "seek" to enjoy these "gifts," until the perfect day arrives; if God designed all this, why has this beautiful organization, or "body," with all these celestial endowments ceased to exist among the nations of the earth, for the last fourteen hundred years? One thing is certain, nothing resembling the foregoing is seen to-day in all the Greek or Roman Church, or in the Evangelistic Protestant world!

A startling fact is this! A grave discovery! An infinitely important inquiry, is the foregoing. Why this great change? One thing is certain, God and his word are not responsible for it. Then who is? What is the response to this grave interrogation? Why is the religious world benighted and divided into contending sects and parties? Whence the origin of so many varied faiths, supplanting the "one faith" of the Church of Christ of apostolic days? Let us hear from those—some of those who have thought much on this subject, and have deplored the change; with its causes. One writer of some note says:—

"The great apostasy of the Christian Church commenced in the first century, while there were yet inspired apostles and prophets in their midst; hence Paul, just previously to his martyrdom, enumerates a great number who had 'made shipwreck of their faith,' and turned aside unto vain jangling;' teaching 'that the resurrection was already past,' giving 'heed to fables and endless genealogies,' 'doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof came envyings, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness.' This apostasy had become so general that Paul declares to Timothy, 'that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me;' and again he says, 'at my first answer, no man stood with me, but all men forsook me;' he further states, that, 'there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers,' teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.' These apostates, no doubt, pretended to be very righteous; for, says the apostle, 'they profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.' Near the close of the first century, the apostasy had become so universal, that only seven churches throughout all Asia, Africa, and Europe, were considered worthy of being either reprov'd or blessed by the voice of revelation: and even these seven were so corrupted by the doctrine of the Nicolaitans and of Balaam, by the fornications and adulteries of Jezebel, and by losing their 'first love,' and becoming 'neither cold nor hot,' that the Almighty considered them, with a very few exceptions, as 'dead,' and threatened to 'spew them out of his mouth'—to cast them into great tribulation,' and 'kill their children with death'—so 'fight against them with the sword of his mouth'—and to 'remove the candlestick,' or church, out of its place."

John Wesley confirms this view. Sermon sixty-six, subject, The Mystery of Iniquity. He says:

"In the very first society at Rome, there were 'divisions and offenses;' but how early and how powerfully did the Mystery of Iniquity work in the church at Corinth. Not only schisms, heresies, animosities, fierce and bitter contentions, but actual, open sins. We meet with abundant proof, that in all the churches the tares grew up with the wheat, and that the 'Mystery of Iniquity' did everywhere work in a thousand forms. That grand pest of Christianity—a faith without works—was spread far and wide. When St. James wrote his epistle, the tares had produced a plentiful harvest. (See 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th chapters). There was 'envy,' strife, confusion and every evil work. Whoso reads with attention, will be inclined to believe that the tares had well nigh choked the wheat, even at this early period, and that among the most of them, no more than the form of godliness, (if so much), was left."

Moving along a step further in our investigation, we have the testimony of Dr. Buck, as follows:

"The apostles being dead, everything came to pass as they had foretold. The whole Christian system underwent a miserable change; preaching shared the fate of other institutions, and this glory of the primitive church was now generally degenerated. Those writers whom we call the fathers, however, held up to view by some as models of imitation, do not deserve that indiscriminate praise ascribed to them. Christianity, it is true, is found in their writings; but how sadly incorporated with Pagan philosophy and Jewish allegory. . . . Christianity was maintained, though under gradual decay, during the first three centuries." (Page 475. Theo. Dict., Philadelphia Ed., 1830).

The church historian, Mosheim, in describing the decline of the ancient Christian church in the second century, says:

"There is no institution so pure and excellent, which the corruptions and folly of man will not in time alter for the worse, and load with additions foreign to its nature and original design. Such in a particular manner was the fate of Christianity. In this century many unnecessary rites and ceremonies were added to the Christian worship, the introduction of which was extremely offensive to wise and good men. These changes, while they destroyed the beautiful simplicity of the gospel, were naturally pleasing to the gross multitude." (Church History, p. 46).

Thus it appears that the professed Christians kept on drifting farther and farther from original Christianity, losing sight of its simplicity and original design, until it is utterly lost sight of, and the church of Christ, once so resplendent with heavenly light, adorned with habiliments so glorious, coming so pure from the hands of Divinity, becomes marred by the influence of "false teachers," draped in darkness through the selfishness of human wisdom, which, says Paul, "is foolishness with God," and finally sinks, and is buried beneath the debris of human tradition, and the superstition of the "dark ages."

If misfortunes have befallen you by your own misconduct, live, and be wiser for the future. If they have befallen you by the fault of others, live, you have wherewith to reproach yourself. If your character be unjustly attacked, live, time will remove the aspersion. If you have spiteful enemies, live, and disappoint their malevolence. If you have kind and faithful friends, live, to bless and protect them. If you have hope of immortality, live, and prepare to enjoy it.

Henry Ward Beecher: "I believe God, in every age and in all nations, has moved upon the hearts men by his Holy Spirit, inspiring them to whatever is pure, true and noble. I believe that the Scriptures of the Old Testament and New, contain the fruit of that inspiration as it was developed in the Hebrew nation; and I fully and heartily accept the Bible according to the Apostolic and only declaration which the Bible itself gives of the nature of divine inspiration, namely, 2 Tim. 3:16, 17. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness. That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." I believe that as a true understanding of God's work in the outward and material world can be gained only by a careful study of the facts of nature, so the true view of the inspiration of Scripture is to be gained, not by theories or traditions, but by a vigorous study of the facts, its structure, origin, the nature of its contents; and this is all the more necessary in that the Book, as we hold it now, was not an immediate and complete gift of God to man, but was a growth of ages. It was written by different hands, in different languages, with centuries of interval between part and part, and that the chief substance of its truth was conveyed by the Divine mind to the human mind, in the way in which God ordinarily imparts the truth,—through human experience. I believe that the Bible is largely a record of history, and in this respect is to be studied as we study any history; that it contains a large measure of poetry, and that that is to be accepted, not as science, but as we accept poetry; that it is largely a literature, and is to be construed as we construe literature; that it is a record of institutions, laws and worship, which have answered their ends and passed away, and that therefore different parts of scripture have different degrees of value."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is there any evidence that the apostleship was kept up after the first Twelve had died?

Ans.—It is assumed that there was some effort made to keep up the quorum; but it did not continue for very many years.

Q.—Why is not feet washing practiced in the Reorganized Church?

A.—There has been no occasion for it, and no command to make it a church rite; any more than there has been for the institution and practice of the "holy kiss."

Q.—Is it right for the Priest, Teacher, Deacon and members to take the oil with them and administer to them and pray for them that they may be healed?

A.—The Church Articles state that neither Priest, Teacher, Deacon nor lay member may lay on hands. Any one may pray with and for the sick.

Q.—What is meant by "hot drinks" in the Word of Wisdom. We that wish to keep that word, to the very letter can not come to an understanding of the same. We believe we understand what is meant by strong drinks, and also, some have put tobacco entirely away. We do not drink our milk, water, tea, coffee or cocoa hot; but warm, or cold as we feel disposed. But I would ask for my own, and for the benefit of the Saints who are doubtful on the subject. Do hot drinks mean those made hot by fire, or those which are hot of themselves as ginger, pepper, etc., and made into a tea, or drink?

A.—We believe that the hot drinks refer to all liquids heated for the purpose of drink. It is confidently stated that at the time the Word of Wisdom was given, it was understood to mean teas and coffees as beverages.

Q.—Who were the first Twelve Apostles in this church, and what was the mode of choosing them?

A.—Lyman E. Johnson, Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Orson Hyde, David W. Patten, Luke Johnson, William E. McLellan, John F. Boynton, Orson

Pratt, William Smith, Thomas B. Marsh, Parley P. Pratt. They were chosen on the 14th of February, 1835, at a called meeting of the Elders at Kirtland, Ohio. The business of the meeting having been stated by Joseph Smith, he asked the meeting whether the brethren would be satisfied to have the Spirit of the Lord dictate in the choice of the Elders who were to be the Apostles. To this all agreed. The method of procedure was stated to be that the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon should each engage in prayer that they might be led and guided by the Spirit in the choice about to be made; they should then select twelve men from the members of the church who should be set apart to the office of Apostles. These three men, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer and Martin Harris, engaged in prayer, after which they made the choice of the men named.

Q.—Who are the Apostles at this time?

A.—The members of the Twelve at present are: Jason W. Briggs, Josiah Ells, Edmund C. Briggs, James Caffall, John H. Lake, Thomas W. Smith, Joseph R. Lambert, Zenas H. Gurley, William H. Kelley, Alexander H. Smith.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Moses McHarness of Lamoni, visiting Hartford, Michigan, wrote Jan. 4th:

"Arrived here on the 23d of December. Since then I have had a good time visiting the Saints. Last Sabbath met with the Saints in prayer and testimony; felt refreshed and strengthened. It has been very stormy for three days, snowing and the wind blowing. Expect to go north next week."

Bro. Thomas Hougas, presiding Elder of the Mission, LaSalle county, Illinois, branch, engineered a surprise present to Bro. Austin Hayer, who has long served the branch as janitor of the meeting house, the present being an easy chair. The surprise was well carried out; but Bro. Hougas was himself surprised by a company of the Saints retaliating upon him by giving him also an easy chair, at the same assembly called by him to surprise Bro. Hayer. He says of it:

"I can not say there was one man surprised, but two; you see they caught me in my own trap."

There was a surplus of funds and the assembly voted a chair to Sr. Thomas Hougas also. This shows the social side of the church at Mission.

Bro. L. D. Hoisington wrote from Dresden, Otoe county, Nebraska, stating that he and another brother had quit the use of tobacco, and proposed to stand by the Word of Wisdom, so far as they could, he adds:

"I think the Saints all ought to abide by the Word of Wisdom; and then we can stand in holy places, and not be destroyed by the awful destructions that are coming upon the face of the earth."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

NEGOTIATIONS are in progress between Rev. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Bro. E. L. Kelley, for a repetition of the debate between them at Wilber, Nebraska, at Kirtland, Ohio. The propositions are to be the same as those discussed at Wilber. Rev. Braden has notified us that he proposes to "make war upon the the whole institution." "War to the knife and the knife to the hilt." He notifies Bro. Kelley that the contest at Wilber will be "child's play as compared with the one to be urged at Kirtland." From this we infer that Rev. Clark Braden proposes to do what he can, in an honorable way of course, to uproot the faith, practices and traditions of the Reorganized Church, and with them destroy all there is of Mormonism.

Sr. Flora L. Scott writes from Lawrence, Michigan, the burden of her letter, under the pressure of the late sorrow and trial of her husband, Bro. Columbus Scott and herself, is that the Saints should be steadfast and faithful, no matter what may come, as all must be tried.

Bro. John Landers, in his ninetieth year, filled an appointment to preach at the late session of the North-West Kansas District. How few there be who so steadily and persistently keep step to the march of the Truth, faithfully as has this aged brother. We sincerely hope that he may live to St. John's hundred years.

THE Plano News, one of our exchanges, thus notices the HERALD:

The Latter Day Saints' Herald, formerly published at Plano, but now at Lamoni, Iowa, has just completed its 30th volume. It is a very neat and newsy paper, and has made great progress during its career. Success be to it in the future.

THE following is from the Painesville, Ohio, Telegraph:

Dear Sir.—A local in your last week's issue, misrepresents the Kirtland Saints, by stating there was a dance in the Temple the week previous, or "last Saturday night." No such thing occurred, nor would it be permitted; besides, although not remarkably straight laced, they do not dance. Will you please correct and save the Elder in charge from a burden of invitations to "Leap Year Balls?" Will you also oblige by noticing that our services are regular each Sabbath at eleven o'clock a. m.

E. L. KELLEY.

A BROTHER sends us the following slip, which serves to show how public opinion is shaping the thoughts of all nations. The undercurrent that directs all the affairs of men, unseen but forceful, seems to be carrying all things toward the consummation spoken by the prophets. Let them come, must be the direct and devout exclamation of every true believer.

CHRISTMAS AND THE JEWS.

Rabbi Sonneschein, of St. Louis, decides that the American Jew can keep Christmas without in the least violating his religious convictions. He asserts that the 25th of December was celebrated by the pagan world as the time when the longest night gives way to the lengthening of the day, and that the early Christian church, which had originally celebrated the natal day of its founder in the spring, accepted at the end of the fifth century the pagan festival, transferring its celebration of Christ's birth to December. Moreover, the Maccabean priests instituted a festival on the 25th of Kisler, the corresponding Jewish month, to take the place of this pagan feast, when they had by their victory over the Syrian King driven out Greek idolatry. The learned rabbi therefore advocates the celebration of the Jewish Hannuekah upon Christmas, adding, with the generosity of the American Jew: "Our Jewish children may thus learn by practice and example to respect the work of the great Nazarine and the mission of his church. It may not be known to all of you that the three great doctors of mediæval Judaism have unreservedly proclaimed the fact that without the life and work of Jesus, and without the continuous zeal of the church, the nations of the earth could never have been enlisted in the service of the true God, whom they learn to worship and obey so much through the instrumentality of the Christian church."

THE Springville, Iowa, Independent for December 27th, 1883, contains the very good defense of Brn. I. N. White and Rudolph Etzenhouser, which we give below:

Editor Independent: As a citizen of Viola I send you the following communication, simply to state some of our views, and matters as they are. We do not wish to indulge in vituperation, hurling epithets, or even unkind words at Observer who appeared by article in the Independent of the 13th. We have no more sympathy for polygamy than Observer. Hark! "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and shame unto him."—Prov. 18: 13. "Doth our law [law of Pharisees] judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth?"—St. John 7: 51. We do not wish to be less tolerant than those who were accessory to if not the crucifiers of Christ. Hence, we gave the gentlemen in question, White and Etzenhouser, a hearing, and by so doing were furnished evidence from Secretary Frelinghuysen down that they and the people they represent were in no way connected with polygamy or its supporters. The fact that the Secretary of the United States distinguishes these people from the Mormons of Utah, and White and Etzenhouser having credentials from the body thus distinguished is evidence that will stand in any court on earth. The gentlemen in question offered to submit their papers for examination, what more could be offered or asked.

While they were here there appeared an article in the Cedar Rapids Republican from those not of their faith at Edenville (White's home) exonerating them from all statements made against them, and extolling them as exemplary citizens. All of this and their able explanations of the "Word of God" were to us more like the "golden wedge of Ophir" than "soap bubbles," so much so at least that the would-be "soap bubbles" remain with the large majority of Viola's populace, while some other things rest as matters of the past. The large majority we quote from Observer which we acknowledge a fact, by our part in the drama thus acted we are reminded that we have obeyed Paul's injunction, "Prove all things and hold fast that which is good."—Oh, that such majestic teachings were transported by winter's chilling blast and summer's gentle zephyrs until truth's mission was consummated. Viola has ever been willing to give the right of "self representation" to all. In keeping with the motto of State: "Our liberties we prize, our rights we will maintain," otherwise we could hardly sing, "The star spangled banner, Oh, long may it wave, o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave." Should White and Etzenhouser come this way again we shall hear them and all others whose instructions will conduce to a better understanding of the noble, good and true, accessible for man's edification and elevation. "Let brotherly love continue. Be not forgetful to entertain, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."—Heb. 13: 1-2. "And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this counselor, this work be of men, it will come to naught, but if it be of God, ye can not overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God."—Acts 5: 38, 39.

Respectfully,

ONE OF YE BLIND.

MORGANVILLE, Kansas,

December 30th, 1883.

The above railroad station is situated in Clay county, one hundred miles west of Atchison, Kansas, and in the valley of the Republican River. Land this far west is generally good. Wheat and corn were good this year. Corn yields from thirty to forty bushels per acre. Good land to farm is worth from $12 to $20 per acre; seventy-five miles west at about one half price, but with not quite as much rain.

Eight miles east of here is the Goshen Branch of our church, where reside about twenty members, who hold meetings three times per week. And until the present year have had peace almost from the time of their organization. This year two causes of offense have arisen. At Morganville there are seven members of the church, and we hope before another year to convert enough Methodists to form the "Morganville Kansas Branch." We have two Elders here, Brn. A. H. Parsons and R. Hoyer. Bro. J. O. McKnight is a grain dealer here, but teaches the gospel to all he can. We all talk in private and in public as much as we deem it expedient.

Rev. Dundas, (M. E.), told me that Mormons could attend their meeting, but he did not allow them to speak. Said he thought they were following false prophets, and teaching false doctrines. I informed him that if he could appoint a time, we would examine the doctrines of our two churches, and see which was on the Rock. He replied, that he was not sent to preach to Mormons. I told him we were not afraid to have our gospel examined, if he was ashamed of his. He left the church without answering. Bro. I. N. Roberts is helping to keep the "little stone" rolling. He is building on the foundation of apostles and prophets, with Jesus Christ the head, as "chief corner stone." He preaches here December 31st, 1883. Bro. George Beebe, near Clifton, also preaches the word with boldness. Bro. Mahlon Smith (Bishop's Agent) gave the Saints a good discourse on the necessity of tithing and offerings. Laying it at the Apostles' feet, with the Bishop's Agents.

Love to all Saints. Your brother.

W. D. MCKNIGHT.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kan.,

Dec. 29th, 1883.

Beloved Brother Joseph:—I am in my ninetieth year since the twentieth of August. I have thought to write no more for publication; but love to God, and for his great mercy in preserving me through another year, in which I have enjoyed excellent health, calls forth my gratitude, and I wish to say a few words by way of encouragement to the Saints, who are all my delight, my glory and joy, now and forever.

Beloved Saints, it is many years since I set my heart to serve God, according to that measure of light which he then bestowed on the people. I have had a long experience of the Lord's faithfulness to his word. He never fails to perform all he promises. He has said, "I will never leave nor forsake thee," neither will he; but there is in our nature a willingness to depart from the living God, which if we continue to indulge, till we wear out his patience, he will wear in his wrath he shall not enter into his rest, as he did in the days of old. Remember, if men could provoke him then, they can do it now, in the same way and with the same results. The Salt Lake operation stands as a beacon on a mountain, that the Saints in all the world can see, and from which they should take warning, and escape the rocks on which so many of our brethren have gone to destruction. God has called us to be saviors of men; and so long as we continue to be such, we answer the end of our creation; and if we cease to be saviors of men, we are as salt which has lost its savor, only fit to be cast out and trodden under the feet of men. "But I am persuaded better things of you, brethren, and that with all your hearts you will strive to obtain salvation, though I thus speak." Our mission is an important one, if we fill it to the glory of God. Christ has given his life to save men; but they must hear and obey the gospel, to be saved. How important to convey that message to them. How wonderful it is ordered, that all may perform a part of the work. In this the tithing law is seen to good effect. The Lord has said, and shall he not fulfill his word? "Bring all your tithes into my store-house, and prove me herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will remove the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground, and your fruit trees shall not cast their fruit in the field before the time, and all nations shall call you blessed; for you shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of Hosts."

If we truly believe the Lord's word, brethren, let us go to with all our might, and do his will. There is a sufficient number of Saints in the land of Zion, and adjoining counties, to take the curse off all that country, and load themselves and all around them with blessings. Then why should we suffer these evils to increase around us, when the Lord has put it in our power to stay them. The thing can be done, and thank God, that I know it will be done; for a feast of fat things must be prepared in the center of Zion, to which the poor out of all nations, and the meek of the earth, will come, and partake of the marriage supper of the Lamb. The rich have already been invited by a special revelation through Joseph the martyr, and they all refused to come, as Jesus said they would do. This great honor is conferred on the Saints of this age, to prepare the marriage feast; and the first thing required, is by our diligence and faithfulness to take the curse off the land of Zion, that it may become as productive as the garden of Eden, that joy and gladness may be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of praise. I thank the Lord for this the ninetieth New Year's day that I have lived to see. I thank the Publishing committee, that they still continue to send me the Herald. I am glad it comes weekly, and heartily wish it might come daily. A happy New Year to all in the office, and to all Saints who may chance to read it.

As ever your brother in the Lord,

JOHN LANDERS.

HAZEL DELL, Illinois,
January 2d, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph:—I was chosen by the brethren at our district conference, in December, to travel and preach in this district. Since receiving the appointment, I have entered into the good work. Have preached at three points within the bounds of the Brush Creek Branch. The work seems to be onward. I am at this time holding forth at this place. The result of my labor up to this writing, is two baptized, the prospect good for quite a number more to follow in the same good work. We think the work in this district is gaining ground. The prejudice is dying. The truth is shining brightly upon the minds of many. What is in store for us we know not, but one thing we are sure of that all things work well to all who love God. This district has been blessed by the labor of a few faithful Elders, all of whom are men of firmness.

Here permit me to say a few things in reference to myself. I joined the Christian Church at the age of fourteen. Commenced preaching at the age of eighteen. Have spent the greatest part of my life in promulgating and defending the tenets of that church. Being firm in my opinions, I soon became a daring defender of the doctrine taught by Bro. Campbell. I have preached in several different States. Have brought into that church more than two thousand persons. Have conducted twenty-five oral discussions with the different denominations. I always thought I succeeded in maintaining and defending the doctrine of the Christian Church, with the exception of the debate with Elder G. H. Hilliard, of the Latter Day Saints. After meeting and discussing with him, my faith in the positions assumed by my brethren became shaken. I tried to resist with all my powers of mind the impressions the discussion made on my mind. During the month of June, 1883, I had the privilege of hearing the claims of the Saints presented by our beloved brother, T. W. Smith. I could resist no longer. I was compelled to unite with the Saints. Right here permit me to say to my former brethren, that the doctrine preached by the Saints is no delusion, this I can now say experimentally. Now, dear brethren of the Christian Church, let me say to one and all, condemn me not until you fully investigate the doctrine as preached by the Reorganization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I feel satisfied in regard to the result of such an investigation. Hope the good Lord will bless all the honest in heart, and that the time will soon come when we will all see the truth as it is in Jesus. My heart's desire and prayer to God is, that all men may come to the knowledge of the truth, so as to be justified in the sight of God our Heavenly Father. I go from here to Prairie Hall, in Richland county, where I expect to present the gospel to many of my former brethren, whom I hope will be prepared to give us justice.

Yours in the covenant of peace,

J. W. STONE.

BOZEMAN CITY, Montana,

December 29th, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—As to-day is the last Sunday of the year, 1883, and as I am not with the Saints in meeting to-day, as we are alone in this place, still we feel the Spirit is with us. I wish the Herald and its readers a Happy New Year, and good success in the future. I am of the opinion that the least any member of the church can do is to subscribe for all our church papers. They are worth the money we pay for them, for the good news they contain. I like to read the letters and conference minutes generally. Bro. Ch. E. Malmstrom's letter from Utah to the Catholic priest, Father Keily, (I believe I know him), is a good one, and to the point. I would like to read in the Herald Father Keily's answer. If I am not mistaken Brother Malmstrom is a Swede. It makes my heart glad to see my countrymen take interest enough in the work to write letters once in a while to the Herald, to let us know that they are alive.

I remain your humble servant,

MARTIN LUNDWALL.

ISLAND MOUNTAIN, Nevada,

December 29th, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph:—The snow is now about eighteen inches deep, but more in the drifts. It is snowing at this time. Our mail from now on, will have to be carried on snow shoes.

Bro. Glaud Rodger stopped at Elko for awhile, on his way west. He labored in Ruby Valley, and some in Elko. I got several letters from him, but did not get to see him. I get the Herald and Advocate occasionally, which are good companions. God prosper them. I rejoice to see the progress that the Elders are making. May the Father of light continue to guide them. When I saw and read L. O. Littlefield's fourth letter, I predicted it his last. Oh how I rejoiced when I read yours in answer to his. Yours bring light, his bring darkness and doubt. He has to go behind the curtain to get his evidence, which is dark and doubtful. If Littlefield has been with the church so long, why not make an affidavit himself. It looks as if he would rather use the evidence of the dead, than that of the living. I love to see the plainness of the word of God as you use it. As Bro. E. L. Kelley says, so say I. I do not believe your father ever taught or practiced, or sanctioned polygamy, or plural wifery, as the Utah Church claims. They, (the Utah elders), can deny the practice of polygamy when they choose, and condemn it as stoutly as any one; while at the same time practicing it. I am sure a true Latter Day Saint would never have to go in the dark for the word of God.

Ever praying that truth may prevail, with love to all,
E. PENROD.

SCOTTSVILLE, Indiana,

December 27th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Christmas gift! I wish you and yours a prosperous new year. Friend Hoak, of the Campbellite, or Christian Church, publicly arraigned the doctrine of the church, and said he would like to look a miracle man in the face for one hour. I submitted two propositions to him for discussion. His reply was that he did not come out to discuss, but to preach to the people; and since that time he has been back and publicly stated, that now we had to come to time, or back down. That he intended to bring a lawyer preacher, that we would not stand before one quarter of an hour. All I have to say is this: We did not embrace this work with the intention of backing down or out, but as Bro. Blair said to S. M. Henry before the discussion at Mt. Eden, that the battle was not to the strong, nor the race to the swift. The work is the Lord's, and he will care for it.

Bro. T. W. Smith is with us, and we expect a good time. The adversary is as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour; but we trust we are not in darkness in relation to his roarings or advices. Pray for us, and the prosperity of the mission.
Yours in bonds,

M. R. SCOTT.

SAN BERNARDINO, California,

December 27th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just returned home from a Summer spent in the northern part of the State, where I did some work for the Master. The work so far as I can judge, in the central and northern districts is holding its own. The hindrance to the spread of the work is the lack of work, both on the part of the ministry and members. Both districts greatly need one or more Elders constantly in the field. It is not to be wondered at that the work does not move faster when we take into consideration the fact, that on all the coast we have not an Elder steadily at work. One Elder in the field all the time, would do more than is now being done by the local ministry. One thing is quite noticeable among the Saints of California; they are desiring to know something about tithing. There seems to be a willingness on their part to learn and obey. When that time comes, then the work rolls on and Zion prospers. Obedience to the law of tithing brings unity of works as well as belief; and it is works that bring the Spirit and crown. A proper belief in the doctrines of Christ is essential; equally so are works. The body can not expect to prosper while a few are doing the works, and the rest only believing, as has been the case heretofore. But tithing opens up a broad field for all to labor in. If we want unity of blessing in the future, we must have the same of labor here.

Bro. H. P. Brown is keeping the work alive in Oakland, but his labors are confined mostly to that place, while much needs to be done outside of there. Our branch here is about as usual, being kept alive by the efforts of

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,

December 31st, 1883.

Dear Herald:—This is the last day of the year 1883, in which year you have been a more frequent visitor than formerly—always stored with precious food for the hungry mind—carrying good news from friend to friend, and blessings of joy and gladness to those many of the household, who dwell in lonely places, having no other earthly preacher than you, most welcome visitor! In this kingdom I receive continually joy and satisfaction, testimony upon testimony to the truth and divinity of the same. I love God with all my heart, and want to live so that I may have his favor and approbation, upon whom I am always dependent in this changeable difficulty, life. I hope that I shall always live faithful. I find that it is good, but it is hard to be a Saint. I see that I am doing wrong many times when I intended good. I have many weaknesses, great weaknesses they seem, but they must be overcome. I know the inward as well as the outward foe; thus life is a warfare continually. By our own strength we should not be able to conquer and reach the fair mansion above.

Dear Saints, let us be humble, pray for each other, helping each other whenever we may. Let us still "Stand the storm, it won't be very long,

We will anchor by and by."

I was asked what meaning I had attached to the word "highminded" in my last letter. To my thoughts it is a mind familiar with the divine truths of heaven, "spiritually minded."

May you ever live and shine,
May the hungry, thirsty soul,
In you drink and substance find,
Better far than costly gold.

Your friend and well wisher,

NICOLINE THOMSON.

61 Hubbard St., CHICAGO, Ill.,

January 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Since I last wrote you for publication, I have visited and preached at Plano, Sandwich, near Amboy, Marengo and vicinity, and have spent four Sundays in Chicago. At Plano I spent nearly a week, and preached six times. On Sunday morning I listened to a strong and effective discourse by Bro. J. S. Patterson. Near Amboy, in the Kiefer school house, I spoke five times; at Sandwich two times, and at Marengo and vicinity about fourteen times. When at Chicago, I speak twice on Sunday, do other labor that is not apparent—nobody but God and myself knowing much about it. The effects produced by the preaching, at the above named places, were all that I could expect, under the circumstances, and at Plano, and the little village of Coral, near Marengo, they were better and more than I had anticipated.

I have come to the conclusion that it is our duty to make proper effort to do what God has commanded, and leave results with him. It is comparatively easy to baptize, or organize when the people are ready. I never enjoyed better liberty and more of God's Spirit in presenting the word, than since I last left home. To God be all the glory. The Saints, as a rule, have been kind, and many of them have manifested a desire to see the work progress; but the coldness, backwardness, want of faith and God's Spirit, on the part of some, furnish cause for alarm. May God help them to return to the pure gospel, in child-like faith and humility. The outside attendance in the city, is improving of late, and there are unmistakable indications that the heaven is working to some extent, at least. If the Saints, in the branch and out of it, were just what all Saints should be, the work would soon move on grandly. The conflict has been long and terrible, (perhaps the end is not yet), but there is light in the distance. I have more decided views with reference to the duty of the Church to this mission than ever before. Has all this opposition been for the past and present? I can not believe it. It should, however, be borne in mind, that while the devil may be at the root of this and all other evils, the Saints of God have no business, either from ignorance or transgressions, to allow themselves to pass within his grasp.

I like Bro. M. H. Bond's letter in last Herald. To me it has the right ring. Will the Saints give it a careful re-reading. It is high time that all who are sent out to represent God's great truth should build for eternity, and not partly to please men, or from appearances; for where we are guilty of the latter, we always fail to please God; hence do not build up his work, nor lay up for ourselves any treasures in heaven. The gospel we have received requires the strictest integrity on the part of all its adherents and representatives. If we can not, for causes which appear to us to be good, present things as we understand them to be, when we put pen to the paper, or open the mouth to speak; then, for heaven's sake, let the pen remain dry and the mouth closed! "So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." (James 2:12). May God grant to you, and all his people, as much happiness during the New Year, as shall be for the greatest good, and success in the work of the Lord.

Yours in hope,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

CANAAN, Indiana,

December 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. T. W. Smith has done a good work here. The spirit of his calling rests upon him. He has done good preaching at Union. The district is reviving some, and we rejoice that the good Master has not forgotten us. Our prayer has been answered. Difficulties have been settled, and those that had withdrawn, have been reclaimed, and are now assisting us in the work. We have labored a little in the ministry this winter. We desire to do all we can to forward the work of God.

There is an omission of three resolutions in the minutes of our conference in the Herald of December 15th. I wish to have them inserted in the Herald, as I was chosen assistant clerk, that justice may be done to all: "Resolved, That we sustain Bro. T. W. Smith as president of this mission, by our faith, prayers and means. Resolved, That we sustain Bro. Moses R. Scott as a laborer in the District. Resolved, That we request Elders and Priests to labor in the district as much as their circumstances permit." No doubt they slipped Bro. Carmichael's mind, or he overlooked them.

Yours in the one faith,

V. D. BAGGERLY.

WHEELING, West Virginia,

January 1st, 1884.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—The Herald is truly a welcome visitor to me. From its pages I learn many precious truths. The Saints here are well, and our branch in a prosperous condition. We held a watch meeting at our chapel last night, and the Spirit of God was with us. In looking back over the past year, I see many things to be thankful for. One year ago there was no branch of the church here, and now we have a branch and a neat little chapel to worship in. Although the new year brings to my mind sad memories—one year ago to day, my father, Elder Ebeling, had nearly closed his earthly life—yet we trust our loss was his gain, and hope to meet again to part no more. Wishing you all a Happy New Year,

ANNA E. SMITH.

Bro. Henry A. Stebbins:—Brother Taylor informs me that in your letter to him, you make inquiry of me. For nearly two months I have been in close attendance on my sick wife. When you come together for prayer, will you intercede for us? that God would in his infinite mercy restore my wife to health. She is now reduced very low. I am writing in my night watch, when nothing disturbs the stillness but the ceaseless ticking of the clock, reminding me that time is steadily passing away, and bringing nearer with every beat the day so long expected, "the Saints' deliverance." I feel in a retrospective mood, and my thoughts run back through the dim visions of the past, to the time when the man whom God called to open this dispensation, led me into the waters of baptism. This at seven o'clock in the morning of the 10th of April, 1844. I was a resident of Nauvoo, and had been for some time previous. Was personally familiar with the Martyr, and had opportunities of observing his course and general deportment. I don't think the man ever lived who was more beloved by his people; they would have interposed their own lives to shield him. The world knew him not. In the palmy days of Nauvoo, visitors were constantly arriving, with curiosity sharpened by madam rumor, to interview the man of whom so much was said. They beheld a beautiful city, where once was a stagnant, fever-breeding locality; a well ordered community of 25,000 persons, as busy and industrious as bees, gathered from all quarters through the influence of the gospel, and presided over by a man whom all loved, and whose lightest wish was respected, and who was moulding them for good and not evil.

Right here I wish to state, that in those days, I never saw a drunken person staggering on the streets, or heard a profane oath uttered by any of the multitudes daily met there. True, the slime of the serpent has since passed over the scene, but out of all God will yet be glorified, and those who have kept their integrity will reap an abundant reward. Do the Saints of to-day properly appreciate the labors and great sacrifice of the man who died for his people? Nor should we lose sight in this connection, of the brother who would not be separated from him, and went to death with him. A man against whom not even a railing accusation could be brought, sedate and circumspect in his deportment, and who was ever on the side of mercy when dealing with the erring. Is it not well to call these scenes to mind, that we may be stimulated to increased effort, and putting aside the vain frivolities of life, apply ourselves with renewed zeal and energy to the work, that we may the better realize the true end and purpose of our existence. With kind regards to all I remain,

Your brother in the gospel,

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 3d.—The announcement comes from Paris that the present French Ministry is considering the project of selling the railways owned by the Republic. The price named is $84,000,000, and the bidders are the Rothschilds. The money is to be used for the war against China. The Government owns only about 2,000 out of 25,000 miles of main track.

It is stated that Barere, the French Consul General, has informed the Khedive that if England is unwilling or unable to defend Egypt against El Mahdi, France is willing and able to defend her.

The Post's Rome correspondent telegraphs that the Pope's Secretary, Monsignor Boccadi, opened a letter from America addressed to Leo XIII, containing Fenian threats should the Pope continue supporting England against the National cause of Ireland. The letter states that the protection which the Italian Government gives the Pope, who is now the only sovereign safe from dynamite, will be of no avail. The Pope is warned that there are priests he is bound to receive who will obtain access to his presence to sustain the cause of the Irish against oppression.

The German Government has forwarded a favorable reply to the proposal of the Government of Japan that the latter should establish courts of justice which will have jurisdiction over foreigners in that country as well as natives. It is understood that the United States Government has given a similar reply to the Japanese proposition.

The Khedive of Egypt has cut down his own wages 10 per cent, and applied the same economical principle to the income of the hereditary Prince and the expenses of the Egyptian Court.

The National Board of Health has information communicated by the State Department of the continuance of cholera in Alexandria. Judge Farman, of the International Tribunal of Cairo, says: "There are from one to three cases a day resulting in death, and many more in which the attacked recover." He estimates the number of deaths from cholera the last summer at double that given in the official reports. The United States Consul-General at Cairo reports that the official estimate is 48,000 to 50,000. Owing to want of proper organization, however, the returns are not trustworthy. For example, July 24th the sanitary bulletin fixed the deaths in Cairo at 465. From police statistics they exceeded 1,200. The Consul-General reports that in well-informed official circles the number of victims is estimated at between 65,000 and 70,000. In many villages in the interior, he says, the majority of the laboring population died, and in some instances nearly entire communities disappeared, and there is not a sufficient effective force left to cultivate and harvest the crops.

Several of the railroads entering London were guarded Thursday evening to prevent an intended outbreak by Fenians, of which the police claimed to have received information.

The latest version of the recent accident to the Czar is as follows: "The Czar was returning the afternoon of Dec. 17 to Gatchina Palace from a shooting excursion, accompanied by his suite in eight sledges, with a number of servants. Although darkness was coming on the party noticed on the road ahead six men, apparently peasants. The Czar's aides drove forward and ordered the men to clear the way. The men saluted the officers, and appeared to obey the orders, but when the Czar's sledge came on a level with them they suddenly wheeled around and fired at the Czar thrice, and two of them ran toward him. The horses drawing the imperial sledge became frightened and galloped some hundred paces, when the Czar was thrown out of the sledge. A bullet lodged in the Czar's shoulder. It offers, however, no danger. The Czar's followers immediately mounted the sledge horses and followed the assassins, who escaped in a neighboring wood. Owing to the depth of the snow the pursuit was fruitless. One of the pursuing officers ventured too far and has not returned." The Nihilist Executive Committee promised to give the present Czar a fair trial. No constitution and no reforms have been granted, although all were promised. His trial therefore is ended. The Nihilists are much disturbed in consequence of the activity of the police since the murder of Sudeikin. It appears that the Nihilist movement is directed from Paris and Geneva. Over thirty arrests have been made of persons suspected of connection with the murder of Lieut.-Col. Sudeikin. Mme. Wolkenstein, to whose arrest the murder of Sudeikin is attributed, is a sister of the woman who shared all the attempts against the late Czar, and who was finally hanged. A Nihilist proclamation has been issued threatening the Czar. There is much anxiety at Gatchina Palace. A portion of the proclamation reads as follows: "We address you as a citizen and an honest man, and hope that personal ill-feeling will not smother your sense of duty and your desire to learn the truth. We only ask for justice, and for what all civilized nations already possess—personal and political freedom. We ask that representatives of the Russian people should be summoned. We ask for a full amnesty, full freedom of the press, speech, and meetings as the only means of saving Russia from revolution."

Jan. 4.—The relations of England and Egypt are strained. Egypt sent a note to Great Britain pointing out that the present state of things in Egypt can not continue, and asking for a final decision upon the Soudan question. If England refuses the assistance asked the Khedive and Ministry are determined to abandon to Turkey Eastern Soudan and reduce the Egyptian tribute to the Porte. The Egyptian troops will then be concentrated in Egypt proper, thus giving a force of 15,000 men to protect the frontier without the aid of the English army. Evelyn Baring thinks 15,000 men insufficient for that service. Besides the Khedive the English officials have agreed to a reduction of their salaries. It is expected the Cabinet Ministers will do likewise. The saving thus effected is £110,000. It is stated that European Powers having interests in Egypt are about to address a note to England asking what measures she intends to adopt for the protection of their subjects in Egypt. France has sent Barrere, the French Diplomatic Agent, to Cairo with precise instructions on the subject.

The vanguard of El Mahdi's army has arrived at Elais on the Blue Nile. The populace of the Island of Massowah, on the Red Sea coast, have destroyed the dike uniting the island and mainland.

Of the six largest sugar-producing countries of Europe Germany this year carries off the palm, with 800,000 tons, or 39 per cent of the whole. Next come Austria with 475,000 tons, France with 425,000, Russia with 250,000, Belgium with 75,000, and Holland with 25,000. Germany has not only the greatest number of refineries, 357 out of 1,204, but the largest also.

Jan. 5th.—The excitement in St. Petersburg over last week's Nihilist assassination was greatly intensified today by the final reports of the detectives and surgeons who were deputed to make special investigation into the causes of Sudeikin's death. The official report stated that Lieut.-Col. Sudeikin, who was at the time of his death chief of the department of military governorship of St. Petersburg, was slowly tortured until he made certain disclosures, and then killed to prevent his informing the Government that the Nihilists possessed the extorted information. He had long been the most efficient member of the Czar's special force for the suppression of terrorism. He was engaged in the work of tracing several recent assassinations to Jablonski. The latter had been by turns a Nihilist avenger, a Siberian convict, a convert and Government detective, and was at the time immediately preceding the assassination supposed by the police to be living in a sort of vacillation between the service of the Nihilists and that of the Government. Jablonski, suspecting Sudeikin's intentions, placed himself in his way, and eventually secured his confidence and entered his employment as a spy. Friday night Jablonski induced Sudeikin to accompany him to a house near the Newsky prospect, where he said he had a room from which could be overheard the proceedings of a secret society of Nihilists, who were to meet that evening in an adjoining room. Sudeikin fell into the trap and went to Jablonski's apartment. He reached the place at six o'clock, and at about two the following morning was found there dead, his body being literally perforated with dagger wounds. What happened was this: When Sudeikin had seated himself in Jablonski's room, the latter excused himself for a moment. He was no sooner gone into the hallway than the Lieutenant-Colonel realized the whole situation, but decided to remain in the lighted apartment and fight rather than meet his fate in the darkness of the hallway. In a moment Jablonski returned to the room with a band of Nihilists and armed to the teeth. Sudeikin was in citizen's clothes and was unarmed. He was at once attacked. He defended himself savagely with the heavy framework of a chair, but was soon overpowered and bound. His captors then demanded certain police secrets respecting a number of Nihilist leaders. These Sudeikin refused. He was thereupon subjected to a process of torture by stabs and mutilations. After undergoing these for upwards of an hour, he weakened and agreed to divulge. The first confession he made was received with distrust. He was compelled to sign a commission authorizing one of his tormentors to proceed to his apartment and there procure confirmatory documents, the location and access to which were given. A truce was then had and the commissioned conspirator returned with most of Sudeikin's private memoranda. These were found to contain nearly all the information desired by the assassins Sudeikin was then put to death.

The meetings of the London Cabinet councils have not resulted in any definite decision respecting the intervention of England in the Soudan. After yesterday's council, however, instructions were sent to Earl Dufferin, the British Minister to Turkey, to question the Porte as to the terms on which the Turkish expedition would be sent. It is reported that Lord Granville is in favor of using the Turkish troops under condition that the Turkish occupation of the Soudan be for a limited period only. It is not probable that the Porte will assent to such terms if England insists on them. The Egyptian Government is acting in concert with the Sultan in favor of a cession of the Eastern Soudan to Turkey if England should refuse to lend British troops to suppress the Mahdi. Sir Evelyn Baring in his latest report suggested that it might be well to make terms with Abyssinia as against the Mahdi offering as an inducement to Abyssinia that she take a section of Nubian Egypt, which should include Port Massowah.

Baker Pasha has opened communication with Ras Aloula, the commanding General of the Abyssinian forces, asking him to make a demonstration in force against the flank of the Mahdi at the moment that Baker begins his march to relieve Khartoum. The report has reached Baker Pasha that Ras Aloula has, it would appear, in accordance with this program, crossed the frontier and is advancing in the direction of Kassala with 20,000 Abyssinian troops. Baker Pasha's plan of campaign has been approved at Cairo. It is in brief, for the total evacuation of the Southern Soudan and the concentration of the entire available Egyptian force between Suakin and Berber. This will constitute his first line of defense, and Kosseir and Fsneh will make the second line. Baker Pasha's plan includes also an immediate order to the garrison at Khartoum to retire on Berber. The government at Cairo has, however, refused to sanction this last section of the plan, and stipulates that evacuation shall not take place until definite news is received that the advance of the Mahdi is likely to result in the shutting up of the garrison.

It is now clear that the Mahdi must be fought and by English troops, or Egypt must be completely and immediately evacuated. The special correspondents of Ministerial join with those of Conservative journals in representing the Mahdi's movement is spreading in a vast though loose organization to within a few hours of Cairo, and as constantly fed by religious fanaticism and a hatred equally bitter of foreign intrusion and Egyptian misgovernment. The military situation is desperate. Khartoum, closely menaced on one side, is thinly garrisoned and shrieks for the help which is daily promised and daily withheld, while in Suakin Baker Pasha can not lick his wretched soldiers into shape, and his Egyptian and his English officers have come to fisticuffs, and the Abyssinians are threatening. Meantime the Khedive and his Ministers force Mr. Gladstone's hand by pretending, like trades-unionists, to go out on a strike. They point triumphantly to Turkey desirous and France eager to intervene in their aid, and they conclude with a declaration which means nothing short of "help us or clear out." The prospect of French intervention has been the final straw. Radical papers shout as loudly as the Conservative ones do for an English advance against the Mahdi. Everybody now concludes that the Gladstone policy of withdrawal is dead, and that the orders may be issued at any hour for taking over the civil administration and the military affairs of Egypt into English hands.

It is reported there has been an encounter between the Chilian expeditionary forces and Gen. Caceres. Commandant Francisco Mendizabal is said to have been killed.

Jan. 6th.—Henry George arrived in London, Eng., to-day, and was greeted by 1,500 people. In his remarks he stated that he regarded the demonstration as evidence of a great revolution that would sweep the world.

It is denied that a British fleet will be sent to the Red Sea. Beyond her previous orders to protect Egyptian interests, England has taken no further measures.

It is stated that Evelyn Baring read to the Khedive England's reply to the recent Egyptian note. England insists upon the withdrawal of troops from Khartoum to the second cataract of the Nile. Great Britain does not object to the cession of Eastern Soudan to Turkey, or to a Turkish reconquest of the Soudan, provided the Porte pays the expenses. It is stated that the Khedive and Ministers refuse to comply with the English note. The Khedive declared that England was seeking to compel him to abdicate, but he will surrender only to force. The Khedive, in defending his position in an interview at Cairo with the correspondent of the Times, showed that he is personally prepared to yield to the demand of the English note. He repudiated the report that he designed to abdicate. He believed if the Ministry of Cherif Pasha should retire successors could easily be found.

It is stated that Tseng, the Chinese Ambassador, will shortly propose to France the mediation of either England or America in the Tonquin question.

Deputy Talandier's paper, Republique Democratique et Sociale, states that it knows that in a few days numerous reprisals against the English will occur in Ireland to avenge the execution of O'Donnell. It adds that Irish revolutionists will burn London, and American Fenians have studied minutely the operations to be carried on by them.

In a conflict at Izbeck, Hungary, between peasants and farmers of Crown property, two gendarmes who interfered were set upon by a mob. One of the gendarmes was tomahawked. The other shot two of the rioters.

Nearly one-half the residents of the town of Benedict, Charles county, Md., are down with typhoid fever. Out of 180 inhabitants over seventy have had the disease during the last three weeks. In many instances whole families are stricken down. A number of the cases have proved fatal. There is great suffering and distress, and physicians and nurses have been sent to the infected hamlet. The epidemic is supposed to have been caused by the drinking water which comes from several springs said to have been contaminated recently by sinks and manure pits.

Prince Bismarck is attempting to suppress the circulation of socialistic papers in the German Empire.

Jan. 7th.—The Egyptian Ministry tendered their resignations to the Khedive at 8 this evening. Cherif Pasha, the Prime Minister, accompanied the resignations with a letter to the Khedive explaining the reasons for the action. The Khedive accepted the resignation of the Ministers, but requested them to remain in office until their successors are appointed. Riaz Pasha and Nubar Pasha steadily decline the office of forming a new Ministry. It is rumored that El Mahdi has declared he is willing to recognize Halim Pasha as Khedive of Egypt.

It is understood that the French Government regrets the action of the English Cabinet in deciding to refrain from any movement in Soudan outside of Egypt proper. While regretting the course of England, France will offer no objections.

It is said that Admiral Courbet met with such stubborn resistance from the enemy in his attack on Sontag that he has decided to await reinforcements before further movements.

The Standard Oil Company secured transportation from Lake Shore at less rates than any other firm or company could, and thereby crushed all rivals in business. A rival firm brought suit. To-day the Judge of a lower court in Cleveland granted an injunction forbidding the railroad to extend terms to the Standard Oil Company or any other corporation or person which might not be granted to all patrons, rich or poor, great or small.

The farmers of the Sacramento Valley, California, have won their case. A perpetual injunction was to-day issued against hydraulic mining. The miners will be permitted to apply for a new ruling when they shall have discovered a plan to abate the nuisance they have heretofore created by their operations. This is the most important legal question ever decided on the Pacific Coast. The farmers are celebrating their victory.

Vennors almanac for 1884 is out. Opposite the first five days in January, ending with the memorable Saturday just past, is the following legend, which may be of interest: "New-Year's mild; no snow; dust or mud in many sections—Waters quite open—Generally open weather in United States—Local rains or snow and sleet flurries. A great contrast to 1883 January." Weather-prophets have seldom made breaks as bad as this for a starter.

A railroad corporation to construct a line from Bloomington, Ill., to the Mississippi River was licensed by the State yesterday. The promoters are Chicago men. The capital stock is figured at $1,000,000.

The South has been experiencing some arctic weather. Snow has fallen several inches deep in some places. Orange groves have been damaged, and the poor have suffered greatly.

Jan 8th.—Keshub Chunder Sen, a philosopher of India, died yesterday at Calcutta, India.

Tolstoi, Minister of the Interior, of Russia, has received a letter announcing that he has been sentenced to death by the Nihilists. The letter also intimates that it is the intention of the Nihilists to murder Muravieff, the Chief Public Prosecutor, and Dofreskansky, of the public prosecution. Tolstoi's guard is increased to thirty men. Muravieff declined a guard. Many factory hands in Perm, Russia, have been arrested. Revolutionary documents were found with them. Among the workmen in Perm there is a Socialist propaganda. Socialism is rapidly spreading among the working people.

The Porte has been notified by the Khedive of Egypt, that if Turkey shall attempt independently of him to reconquer the Soudan for the purpose of enlarging Turkish control, he will claim a reduction of £665,000 per annum in the tribute which, as present Suzerain, he now pays. It is believed that the Porte has been influenced by France to risk the Khedive's threat. It is known that Turkey has prepared to garrison Suakin, but the Ministry at Constantinople pretend that it is intended to do this merely as a demonstration. Nubar Pasha, the Egyptian Minister of War in 1878, is reported to have accepted the Premiership of the new Ministry, and appointed Edgar Vincent Minister of Finance. El Mahdi's brother-in-law has been captured at Esneh and brought to Cairo. He affirms that Mahdi will not fight the Turkish troops, but will do his utmost to make common cause with them to expel foreigners from Egypt.

The attack upon Bac Ninh by the French will probably be made on the 11th. It is thought it will not prove a casus belli, as China is unprepared for war.

President Arthur submitted to Congress a message recommending an appropriation of $1,000,000 to continue the work of improving the Mississippi river below Cairo.

James Stevenson, of the geological survey, has reported to Maj. Powell as one of the results of last season's field operations the discovery of several more ruined cave and cliff cities, differing in some respects from any he had before examined. The most remarkable was a village of sixty-five underground dwellings situated near the summit of one of the volcanic foot-hills of the San Francisco Mountains in the San Juan region of Arizona.

The Chinese question is again attracting attention in California. Immediately after the passage of the present law there was a halt in the tide of immigration, but now the law is craftily evaded by the presentation of trader's certificates, etc., and every steamer from China brings two or three hundred Chinamen to our western shores.

Reports from Egypt are conflicting, to say the least. One set of advices informs us that the Ministry has resigned because the English Government demanded the abandonment of the Soudan, that the Khedive is in sympathy with the Ministry and has threatened to abdicate, and that he can find no one who is willing to undertake the task of forming a new Ministry. Another set of advices informs us that the Khedive is in favor of England's proposition and concurs heartily in the scheme to abandon the Soudan, and that Nubar Pasha has accepted the Premiership and will form a Ministry which will act in consonance with the English policy. As between these conflicting reports the confusion in the mind of the reader will be almost as dense as the confusion in Egypt itself. Where all other things are uncertain, however, El Mahdi yet remains a certainty.

It is stated that the King of Abyssinia has left Adna with an army and is marching on Massowah. Turkish gun-boats will be sent to the Arabian ports on the Red Sea, where the emissaries of El Mahdi are exciting the populace to arms.

It is reported that five Nihilists, the assassins of Lieut.-Col. Sudeikin, have been arrested. The murderers of Sudeikin were arrested through the information of a cabman who conveyed two of them from the house where the murder was committed. Sudeikin's nephew, dangerously wounded at the time of the murder, will probably recover, but will be insane. Thirty-seven university students here have been arrested for the murder of Sudeikin.

It is stated that the Vatican again insists upon the abolition of an ecclesiastical court, and the Prussian Government refuse to accede thereto. VonSchloezer, the Prussian Minister to the Vatican, has received no fresh instructions in relation to negotiations between Prussia and the Vatican.

There was beside this paid in interest on the public debt $59,160,131 and in the redemption of the public debt $134,178,756. This enormous sum of money was raised mainly from two sources of taxation. From internal revenue, $144,720,368, and from customs $214,706,496. About one-quarter of the internal revenue was collected in the Southern States, and perhaps one-fifth of the tariff taxes.

Jan. 4th.—D. F. Wadsworth & Co., Ishpeming, Mich., failed for $180,000. Goldsmith & Kuhn, New York, for $45,000. Henry Villard of New York has failed. He yesterday made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to William Endicott, Jr., of Boston, and Horace White, of New York.

The Manufacturers' Record publishes an article showing a remarkable increase in the cotton manufacturing interests of the South in the last three years. The figures show that there are now 314 cotton-mills in the South, having 1,276,422 spindles and 24,873 looms, while in 1880 there were only 180 mills, with 713,589 spindles and 15,222 looms. In 1880 the value of manufactured cotton produced was a little over $20,000,000. In 1883 it had risen to $35,000,000 or $40,000,000. During the last three years and a half about $20,000,000 has been invested by new and old cotton-mills in machinery, the bulk of which was paid to Northern and Western machinery manufacturers.

Jan. 5th.—William H. Phelps, Elmwood, Ill., failed for $117,000. McClung, Briggs & Co., Toronto, Ont., for $100,000. Putnam & Phelps, Boston, Mass., $275,000. Charles & Rudolph von Bermuth, New York, for $150,000. B. R. Smith, New York, for $140,000. Dietrich & Co., San Francisco, Cal., for $376,000.

There is little in the present condition of affairs which justifies the expectation of any material improvement in business this year. Railroad schemes have been in past years perhaps the most potent stimulant of general activity, and there is no promise of a great amount of railroad building in 1884. It is likely to be even less than in 1883. Large purchasers of all classes are adopting a very conservative policy, and manufacturers are operating on a restricted scale, while lenders are almost as cautious as at any time last year. Thus the leading forces on which we ordinarily depend for business activity have but a low degree of intensity. Some influence that is not yet visible must come in play or we can not expect any revival of trade except such as will result from the slow process of liquidation and recovery. Much will depend on the crops of the coming season, but if we can not sell our surplus wheat any faster than it is now going abroad a great crop will profit us little.

Returns published in the London Economist reveal the singular fact that the consumption of coffee in England has declined during the last four years from 309,000 cwt. to 285,000 cwt., which allows considerably less than one pound per capita annually, as against more than five pounds of tea. The annual consumption per capita in France is 3½ pounds; in Germany, 5 pounds; in the Scandinavian countries, 6 pounds; in the United States, 8¼ pounds; in Belgium, 9 pounds. Holland probably surpasses Belgium, but the statistics on that point are not satisfactory.

The President of the London Society of Public Analysis makes the astonishing statement that $7,500,000 are paid every year by English consumers for water sold as milk—a sum nearly equal to the product of an additional penny on the income-tax. His experience as a public analyst has convinced him that milk adulteration is the most lucrative business in London, and that the public is practically unprotected under existing laws.

Secretary Swank, of the American Iron and Steel Association, who is preparing an annual report of the iron and steel trade of the United States for 1883, says the year's production of pig-iron equals that of 1882, being 4,623,323 tons. The consumption of pig-iron has been about 4,948,323 tons. The year commenced with 383,655 gross tons of domestic pig-iron unsold. There were imported during the year 325,000 gross tons, all of which has gone into consumption. Adding the estimated production, 4,623,323 gross tons, to the estimated importation, and taking no account of the balance of stock at the beginning and end of the year, the total of 4,948,323 is found to have been the year's consumption. The production of steel rail in 1883 fell below that of 1882. There were also made probably 100,000 tons less of iron rail than in 1882. The total rail tonnage of 1882 was 1,501,881 gross tons, of which 203,459 tons were iron rails and 1,304,392 steel. The total rail production of 1883 was probably 1,300,000 gross tons, of which 1,200,000 tons were steel rails.

The imports of steel rails in 1883 were about 100,000 gross tons, against 200,000 in 1882. In round numbers our consumption of rails in 1883 was 300,000 tons less than in 1882.

Jan. 7th.—The Mark Lane express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: The weather is damp, foggy, and mild, and the growing crops stand unusually well. Values are tending downward, and it is evident the lowest point has not yet been reached for English wheats. Flour is weaker, barley improving, and foreign wheats more lifeless than ever. Stocks are heavy. Flour is dull and rather weaker. Maise is cheaper. Linseed is a shilling dearer. Other articles are in favor of buyers. Cargoes of wheat off coast are in small supply, and the inquiry for them has almost ceased. There have been fair arrivals. Two cargoes were sold, one withdrawn, and three remain. Cargoes on passage for shipment remain unimproved and quotations are nominal. Sales of English wheat for the week, 35,136 quarters at 39 shillings 7 pence per quarter against 28,468, at 40 shillings 7 pence per quarter the corresponding week last year.

During December the English imports decreased, compared with December of last year, £1,498,000, and the exports increased £799,500.

A cartmen's strike has stopped all business at Havana, Cuba. Nothing is doing. The wharves are loaded with goods. The cartmen can hold out for another week. There will be terrible loss all around. The strike, which is against an increase of taxation, will spread.

Last week's clearings for the whole United States, were over a billion dollars—an exceedingly good showing, all things considered.

Some figures from the Italian Postmaster-General's report for the last year are encouraging in the light they throw on the spread of intelligence in that country. Here are some of them: Up to the end of September 17,445,498 lire had been received for postage-stamps, 2,362,305 for post-cards, 4,004,002 for unpaid letters, and 557,156 for newspapers, showing a total increase of 1,838,001 over the preceding year. During the same period 2,942,907 post-parcels were forwarded, an increase of 800,000 over the year 1882; 120,240 parcels were sent abroad, and 283,508 parcels were received, being 37,400 more of the former and 118,288 more of the latter than in the previous year. Of the principal towns, Milan figures with 209,000 parcels sent and received; Rome, 140,000; Turin, 96,000; Florence, 68,000; Naples, 132,000; Genoa, 65,000; and Palermo, 59,000.

Dart & Rogers, fruiterers, Liverpool, Eng., have failed. Liabilities, $100,000. Financial difficulties are reported in other firms in the same trade. Two thousand steel-workers of London, Eng., refuse to work at the reduction of wages. A committee of cotton manufacturers of Manchester, Eng., declare it necessary for the interests of the trade to continue the struggle with the striking weavers to insure the requisition of 5 per cent of the wages.

Iron-works in Pennsylvania have started very generally, a reduction of wages having been accepted by the men.

In response to a request of the Senate the Secretary of the Treasury has submitted to the Upper House of Congress official figures concerning the National debt. The high-water mark was reached Aug. 31, 1865, when the Nation owed $2,756,431,571; June 30, 1883, this colossal burden had been reduced to $1,551,091,207. The reduction, including interest and less cash in the Treasury, has amounted to $1,205,340,363.

Chicago has nearly 19,000,000 bushels of grain in her elevators. New York and Brooklyn have about $13,000,000. The total supply in the United States and Canada, is estimated at $58,000,000.

Since the assassination of President Garfield, at the beginning of July, 1881, railway stocks and bonds have suffered an astonishing decline. Including only about half of the stocks alone that are listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the loss in price since that time has been

These losses, moreover, are computed at the closing prices of Monday and of 1883, though in many cases lower prices have since been made. The average decline in these is about 36 per cent of their par value. Other stocks listed on the exchange have declined on the whole relatively about as much, for in the list above given are some of the soundest and best dividend-payers in the country, as well as others that represent collapsed expectations. The nominal value of all railroad stocks in the country is about three times that of the companies quoted, and the decline in value since July, 1881, has been probably not less than $1,000,000,000. In addition, these great corporations have a still larger amount of bonds outstanding, though the decline in these has not been on the whole so great. If it has been less than half as great—and this is apparently a safe estimate, judging from such securities as are quoted—the apparent loss in the valuation of securities within two years and a half has been over $1,500,000,000.—New York Tribune.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 3.—Loss by fire at Augusta, Ga., two cotton warehouses $200,000. Milwaukee, Wisconsin, $5,000. Wabash, Ind., flouring mill, $13,000. Dalton, Ga., $7,000. Weatherford, Tex., $40,000. Fairfield, Ia., furniture factory, $17,000. Bloomington, Ill., furniture and vinegar factory $3,000.

The St. Lawrence River rose about three feet to-day at Montreal Quebec, and is now causing great inconvenience in the lower parts of the city. All manufactories on Mill street stopped work, the shops being flooded. Six hundred mechanics are out of employment until the water subsides. The press-rooms of the Post are filled with water, and the forms have to go elsewhere.

Two more of the workmen injured in the railway collision near Toronto, Ont., died yesterday. There are several more of the victims who can not, in all likelihood, survive their wounds.

About 2 o'clock this morning the storehouse of H. Frick & Co., at Oakdale Junction, Tenn., was blown up by a keg of giant blasting powder. The building was torn to atoms and the goods scattered in every direction.

The yearly record of shipwreck and loss of life in the Gloucester fisheries shows that seventeen vessels and 209 lives have been lost during the year. Forty of the men are known to have left widows, and the number of fatherless children of which there is a record is sixty-eight. Seventy-one men capsized or gone astray in dories have reached the shore or been rescued from a watery grave, many of them after exposure and suffering that defy description. The year opened auspiciously, January witnessing the loss of but a single vessel and crew in Newfoundland herring fishery, February the loss of one vessel in the Grand Manan fishery, and March passing with the loss of a single vessel in the haddock fishery. Three vessels and forty-five lives, including dory losses, made up the record for the first six months of 1883. The usually placid month of August witnessed the carrying down of two Gloucester vessels with the lives on board. September saw the loss of another vessel and crew, probably from collision, as no storm was reported. In the November gail nine Gloucester vessels went down with all on board.

Jan. 4th.—Syrell & Milroy's jute-mill, near Dundee, Scotland, were burned yesterday morning. Four hundred operatives are thrown out of work.

Jan. 5th.—This evening a train was wrecked at Charlestown, Southern Indiana, on a spur of the Ohio & Mississippi running from Vernon to Louisville. A score of people was hurt, including members of the Yale College Glee Club.

Jan. 6.—Twenty-seven women, five of them religeuse and twenty-two young lady pupils under their instruction, were burned to death in the Convent of the Immaculate Conception, a Roman Catholic educational institution at Belleville, Ill., Saturday night. The fire started in the basement of the convent, a four-story building, and had burned through the first floor when discovered. The retreat of the inmates was cut off by the smoke and flames. There were no means of escape left but jumping from the windows. The managers of the institution, it is asserted, had made no provision for the safety of the inmates in case of fire, and the fire department had no ladders. The young girls were chiefly the children of German-American families living in the southern portion of the State. Many of those who escaped were severely injured by the flames or in jumping from the windows to the frozen ground. Pecuniary loss $75,000.

The Victoria Cotton Mills, at Skipton, England, have burned. The loss is $125,000.

A portion of the bridge on the railway between Wigan and Preston, Eng., collapsed, killing seven workmen and injuring many. A woman was killed by the cars near Elmira, N. Y.

A train of cars was thrown from the track near Valparaiso, Neb., on the Omaha & Republican Valley Railroad. Six persons were seriously and seventeen less seriously wounded.

Three ocean vessels, long overdue at Philadelphia, Pa., have been given up as lost.

A great snow-storm has prevailed in the Middle States, extending into some of the Southern States. Trains are badly delayed.

Jan. 9th.—Austin's lace factory at Long Eaton, near Nottingham, Eng., has burned. Loss £100,000.

The morning of Dec. 28th, a fire occurred outside the concession at Hanoi, China, which reached the artillery. Its origin was a spark from a forge. A great explosion of powder took place. Many shells and munitions for the fleet were destroyed. Several French artillerymen were hurt and ten auxiliaries were wounded.

Long Branch, Atlantic City, and other low-lying places along the ocean were again in terror all yesterday. The damage to property by flood is serious. People were much concerned for their lives as well. No casualties are reported.

Immense damage has been wrought to shipping and eastern Summer resorts by gales. Passenger trains are badly belated, and freights generally abandoned in New York and Pennsylvania. There are great masses of ice in the Ohio River.

Brinton Station, on the Pennsylvania Road, eight miles east of Pittsburg, Pa., was the scene this evening of a terrible accident, which resulted in instantly killing two men and seriously injuring five others, one of whom has since died. All day a large force of men had been employed on the Pittsburg Division of the Pennsylvania Road clearing snow from the track. At a cut just east of Brinton some fifteen or twenty men were engaged. This evening about 7 o'clock, when the Walls accommodation suddenly rounded the bend at Brinton, and before all the men could get out of the cut they were run down. The train was stopped as quickly as possible and backed to the scene of the accident, where a terrible sight met the gaze of the passengers and trainmen. The dead and dying were scattered along the track for fifty yards.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

READER, are you prepared to go farther with us along this cloudy, lonely way; this tour through the wilderness? Then let us proceed to an examination of the evidences of the entire subversion of the ancient church of Christ. In volume 2 of Wesley's Sermons, sermon 94, he says:

"It does not appear that these extraordinary gifts of the Holy Ghost were common in the church for more than two or three centuries; we seldom hear of them after that fatal period when the Emperor Constantine called himself a Christian; and from a vain imagination of promoting the Christian cause thereby, heaped riches, and honor upon the Christians in general, but in particular upon the clergy. From this time they almost totally ceased, very few instances of the kind being found. The cause was not, as has been vulgarly supposed—because there was no more occasion for them, by reason of the world becoming Christian, for this idea is a miserable mistake, as not one twentieth part was at that time, even nominally Christian. The real cause was, that 'the love of many waxed cold,' and the Christians had no more of the Spirit than the heathen. The Son of Man when he came to examine his church, could hardly find faith on the earth. This was the real cause why the gifts of the Holy Spirit were no longer to be found in the Christian church; because the Christians were turned heathens again, and had only a dead form left."

"Fatal period" indeed. Truly the light of the gospel was fast dying out. Not only did religionists of those days assume to change the form of the church organically, and introduce "useless rites and ceremonies," thus "substituting" their own opinions for the heavenly plan of salvation, thus catering to "the gross multitudes;" not only did the chief motive of action with them become "riches," and the "honor" of the world; but the intolerant legislation of "laws," by poor, sinful, ignorant man, to govern his fellows, in their obligations to their Maker. And assumed to affix penalties, and execute those penalties by force of human power.

In proof of the above statements, and as illustrative of the doings of this apostate religion, for the period of about twelve hundred and sixty years, we quote the following from Gibbon, vol. 4, p. 520:

"In the year A. D. 451, those pious emperors, (Leo and Marcion), enforced with arms and edicts, the symbols of their faith; and it was declared by the conscience or honor of five hundred bishops, that the decrees of the Council of Chalcedon (a Catholic Council) might be lawfully supported even with blood."

Of the sixth century, or about A. D. 532, Bower, in his History of the Popes, says:

"The Christian religion, or worship, was now become no less idolatrous than that of the Gentiles, who therefore chose to retain their own, there being no material difference between one and the other—between worshipping the ancient heroes, or the modern Saints."

We learn by these historical paragraphs, that this condition of things existed throughout the entire Roman empire, which at that time comprised the full extent of the civilized world.

To note in detail the history of the transition that occurred in the doctrines, principles and organization of the kingdom of God, resulting in its downfall and disappearance from the earth, would require a considerable volume; hence the most we can do is to briefly recount some of the effects of the changes—the organic substitutes that appeared on the downfall of the ancient Christian Church.

"The rise of heresies induced the primitive Christian Church to assume to itself the appellation of Catholic, being a characteristic to distinguish itself from all sects, who, though they had party names, sometimes sheltered themselves under the name of Christians. The Romish Church now distinguished itself by Catholic, in opposition to all who have separated from her communion, and whom she considers as heretics and schismatics, and herself only as the true and Christian Church." (Buck's Theo. Dict., p. 81).

In the early stages of this apostasy, philosophers and bishops maintained "that the great principles of truth were to be found equally in all" "sects and systems," and "that they differed only in the mode of expressing them. In conformity to this plan, by removing the fables of the priests of Paganism, and the comments and interpretations of the apostles, from Christianity; and by reducing the whole history of the heathen gods to an allegory, they made all the religions of the world harmonize with each other. This plausible system, which was adopted by many pagan writers, and by some of the Christian fathers, extended rapidly for a time, and was the source of innumerable errors and corruptions in the Christian Church." (Wilson's Outlines of History, p. 761).

With such a mighty combination of crystalized traditions, superstitions, paganism, and perverted, distorted and mutilated, misinterpreted Christianity, and all enforced by the civil, or rather military power of the Roman Empire, that at that time ruled the world; and the whole diffused with political prejudice, is it any wonder that the Revelator John, while viewing these events in prophetic vision, styles this huge institution, "Mystery, Babylon the Great?" No wonder he marveled "with great admiration!" More especially when he saw this conglomeration drenched into the souls of all the nations of the earth, at the point of the sword. Surely this was a "flood of waters," sufficient to turn the tide of the religious thought, or opinion, of the whole world, and set it to reeling as "a drunken man." "She made all nations drunk," "with the wine of her lewdness." As organizations are the legitimate outgrowths of any given systems of principles; as republics are the outgrowths of republican doctrines, or theocracies are of immediate revelation from God; and as the principles of "the gospel of the kingdom" of God were now changed, or rather exchanged for an attempted plastering together of a so-called set of religious principles, selected from "all the religions of the world," the organized kingdom of God, the legitimate outgrowth of the operations of the gospel of Christ among men, must also be exchanged for, or be supplanted by, one evolved from this mass of admixtures from "all the religions of the world," an organization of the world! Hence an organization grows out of this medley of Paganism, Polytheism, politics and perverted Christianity, and Judaism, with a so-called vice-gerent of Christ, claiming to be infallible, and head of the church on earth, called after the Pagan name of "Pontiff." And associated with him are a class of inquisitors, called "Cardinals," and next in order are Arch-Bishops, neither of which names or official appellations are known to the revelations of God, as of divine authority. Nor are "Prelates." And a Christianity perverted is mixed in with this eclectic system of the world; this new organization appropriates the names Bishop, Priest, Pastor, Deacon, and so on, more or less as the case may be, but generally more. This metaphorical monarch of the world now assumes its dignity, crowns itself accordingly, lifts its sceptre, and mounts its throne, asserts its supremacy over the whole world. The kings of the earth are but servants of this Politico—Ecclesiasticism, and are engaged as instrumentalities to carry out its will and accomplish its designs. It nationalized its religion, deposed and exalted kings at will, caused all nations to bow at its shrine. It exterminated Christianity, assumed to change "times and laws." Its rise and reign, and the character of its doings, and the extent of its duration, in its consolidated form are thus described by Daniel's prophecy:

"Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise; and another shall arise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings. And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hands until a time and times and the dividing of times." (Dan. 7: 23, 25).

This fourth kingdom is believed by the most learned, to be the Roman Empire, and it is agreed by all that it attained to universal supremacy about B. C. 30, and with slight exceptions it continued so united, some three or more centuries after the coming of Christ; when it began to divide and sub-divide, first into eastern, and western divisions, and then to be sub-divided into the ten divisions represented by the "ten horns" mentioned in the prophecy. The Church of Christ being established, prospered for a season, greatly during the united state of this universal empire, notwithstanding the ten general persecutions waged against it by the Roman Empire. But by and by, the violent began to "take the kingdom by force," and the combined influence, "false teachers" who arose, "teaching perverse things, to draw away disciples after them," the cruel persecutions, the bringing in of "damnable heresies," the aspirations of the ministry for the honor, power and praise of the world, became too great for the church, and pure Christianity sank under the load, gave way to the gradual development of the Politico—Ecclesiasticism, before described in the language of others, and the arts and devices indicated in the combining of certain principles, from all "sects" and the harmonizing of "all the religions of the world," the power arose answering to the "little horn" that was "diverse from the first," in that it had "eyes and a mouth" that spake "great words against the Most High" and into whose hands "times and laws" were "given for a time, and times, and the dividing of times," and that was to "wear out the saints of the Most High." The Church of Christ on earth, being composed of "saints," was consequently worn out!

John represents, in Revelations, chapter twelve, that on the fleeing of the church, or woman, into the wilderness, she is there "nourished from the face of the serpent" for "a time, and times, and half a time." If therefore, her nourishment came "from the face of the serpent," it surely was not from God. She yielded "up to God and to his throne" the divine administrative authority, with which she had been formerly invested; by which, through her ministry, she had administered the doctrines, ordinances and blessings of the gospel or covenant of Christ; and being divested of all inspirational endowments, and consequently being left without the means of divine guidance, or revelation from God, she seeks the aid of the powers of earth, and obtains the assistance, first, of the eastern and western divisions of the Roman Empire through the investment of her ministry, with both religious and political endowments, in the days of Constantine the Great, represented by the "two wings of a great eagle," with which she moved off very rapidly, "into the wilderness." In this wilderness of "Mystery," Paganism, Polytheism, etc., she rules over the world as "Mistress of Nations," the "Mother of Empires," for a period of "forty and two months." For in the united condition of "the beast" and the woman, "power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations." And a combination of the elements of the three preceding universal empires, is represented in the beast. A notable diversity from the former beasts indeed! A body like a leopard, feet like a bear, mouth like a lion.

The apostate, divorced condition of this church in the wilderness, is represented once more by John, in the seventeenth chapter, by the symbol of a woman seated on a beast, "having seven heads and ten horns," gorgeously arrayed, ruling, a Queen of the nations of the earth, ministering her intoxicating doctrines to all nations, herself drunken with the blood of saints and martyrs of Jesus. Thus enthroned, reigning over the world, ministering her creeds, canons, and doctrines, contents of the "golden cup," she subjects the world by force of arms to an acceptance of such doctrines as human infallibility, the supremacy of the Pope over the nations, both religiously and politically, that the sacramental bread and wine are changed into the body and blood of Christ, "the paying divine worship to the host," celibacy of the clergy, and the worship of images and sacred relics, and that the good works of saints are meritorious enough to supply the deficiency of others, a belief that the clergy have power to remit or forgive the sins of the people, for a small sum of money, praying to, or worshipping the dead saints, also, "firmly hold that there is a purgatory, and that the souls therein detained are helped by the suffrages of the faithful," together with the sprinkling of infants, and other superstitious notions too numerous to cite here.

These notions for a faith, with a "ceaseless round of useless ordinances," all bound round with the political band of the Roman Empire, were the religion of the so-called Christian World, for a period of twelve hundred and sixty years. The Bible hid away in the Latin language for several centuries, none but the clergy allowed to read it, with few exceptions; the masses of the people, in abject ignorance, inspired with no higher aspirations than a blind veneration for the clergy, amounting almost to their worship. For the history of those times informs us, that not one twentieth part of the people of the empire knew the alphabets of their languages. The motto of those days was: Do as you are told, and ask no questions about it. If you commit sins in our service, we will pardon them. If heretics are to be sacrificed in honor of our institutions, we declare the sin pardoned before it is committed! How identical is the spirit that actuates poor, arrogant man, when he assumes to act as dictator for man in spiritual things, in all ages of the world. Is it not a strange inconsistency, for any class of men—religious teachers—in any age of the world, to declare all earthly governments as illegal, without any authority whatever, and in rebellion against the kingdom of God, except their religious institution, and yet, when opportunity offers, are anxious to become an integral part,—officers, servants in, and to, those rebellious governments? Illustrations of this inconsistency, have existed at different times in ages past, and our own age is no exception. But such was the case in ages of the past, only when men were in ignorance of the true principles of human civilization, political government, and devoid of a correct understanding of the doctrines and principles of the kingdom of God, and without revelation from God. Is this the condition with such dictators to-day?

We will not traverse this wilderness further, nor dwell longer on this vision of the "dark ages" of mystery, superstition and apostasy; but will pass on to that period of the world, when "the words of God shall be fulfilled," the conclusion of the "times" and "months," when a change in the condition of this ruling power was to take place. Its glory was to terminate, its decline to begin, its dissolution to commence,—the period usually styled, The dawn of the Reformation. And reaching the brow of the mountain this side of that great valley of darkness, we pause, and look back over the scene below. And by the aid of the dim light that now begins to reflect from the religious horizon, we begin to realize faintly how thick the darkness of the past was.

The forms of a few brave men are dimly seen, emerging from the darkness. They struggle heroically to save their fellows, by trying to repair the old building, to re-arrange its furniture. They first try to reform the old woman, but she resists all their efforts, and after various efforts, all in vain, they abandon this enterprise, seeing they can not draw the building out of the darkness, they lay hold of some of the furniture, and with some of its inmates, desert the home of their youth. They build tenements of their own, but the materials being untempered, they do not seem to be sufficiently substantial to endure the great storms—religious revolutions of this period of the world. Great divisions now occur among the builders, and the result is, many parties are formed, and the confusion is renewed. No certainty is yet obtained. No unity of action is reached. And no wonder; for the darkness is yet very great. No definite line of action is yet discovered. No standard of adjudication is yet reared. No certain, guiding star, is yet visible to those confused hosts, and they move along with much uncertainty. Such is the condition of the religious world from the opening of the sixteenth century to the former part of the nineteenth, and still is to a great extent.

We now turn from the realm of symbol and metaphor, to the region of facts, and behold! the Christian world is divided into one thousand different sects and parties. But where is that beautiful structure now, with which the earth was once blessed, called the "Church of God," or "kingdom of God?" The efforts of the reformers were grand but which one of them brought forth the principles of original Christianity, from this dark mass of mixed doctrines, in their purity, and restored the church in its New Testament form, with its living powers and gifts? Who of them all, was able to go down into the ruins of the ancient Church of Christ, where they lay buried under the debris of Paganism, and human superstition, that had been accumulating for sixteen hundred years, over these ruins, and separate and bring them forth, pure and whole again? Suppose some man was able to reproduce out of new material, the form of the Church of Christ, who would breathe into it the breath of life, and set it to operating? How would he know his work was accepted of God? But why thus interrogate? The experiments of the wisest of the past have failed to reinstate the church as it was. Men have given it up, and say it was not designed of God, that Christianity as it once was, should again exist on earth; at least, during man's probation. And this but renews the objection we started out to answer in this article. But we now make a deduction by saying, that if it is not designed that the church shall again exist among men in its original form, with its original endowments, it is fully admitted that what is now called orthodox religion is not the same or identical with that system of religion taught by Christ and the apostles! This accounts for the fact that this latter religion is not taught in the New Testament, and the necessity of making creeds to maintain it.

We do not feel under obligation to accept this latter religion, and feel inclined to ask, whence is its origin? Not from Christ, for it is said by this new religion, that Christ has not revealed anything since the close of the first century of our era. Our only hope then, is to look after a reinstatement of original Christianity, since only through obedience to it, may we be assured of obtaining the salvation Christ therein promised. But it was necessary that the God of heaven should interpose, and by revelation to man, and the sending of his servants, his own son, and the ministering of angels; manifest his own power in establishing his Church in the first place; yes, and it is only through his continuing to reveal his will, that it can be perpetuated, and a re-establishment of Christianity would require the Divine interposition of his power to reveal his purpose to mankind again. The same Bible that predicted this departure from the faith of ancient days, and of the age of darkness just past, and foretold that it would result in "the earth's" being "defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant," (the covenant of Christ. Heb. 13:20). Isa. 24:5, also declares, that just before the final overthrow of Babylon, this gospel of Christ, this "everlasting covenant," was to be renewed by revelation. An holy angel was to be dispatched to earth again, "having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

From this standpoint we propose to investigate the claims of Joseph Smith, as to his Divine calling as a prophet of God. Contrary to all the traditions and public teachings of Christendom in the former part of this century, in regard to revelation from God,—not a creed on all the earth at that time but would have condemned any man in all the ranks, for hinting that revelation was a possible thing, and while all the sects of Christendom were seeking to spread their respective claims abroad, a young lad, about fifteen years old, announced to the world the appearance of an angel of God to him, in glorious vision, declaring this to be the day of preparation for the advent of the Messiah in glory; that the gospel was about to be restored, and he declared to all the nations of the earth, that a people might be prepared to meet the Lord in peace at his second coming. Also, that the age had arrived, in which God was to renew the covenant with the children of Abraham, according to promise made through the prophets of olden times. But says one, This is a great mistake to begin with; for John's angel was not a real angel, it was a symbol, a figure. Then what does it symbolize? Why, the translation of the Bible into the various languages of the earth, and its speedy publication to the nations thereof through the instrumentality of the printing press, and the great missionary efforts of the different denominations of Christendom. Then the gospel brought by the angel is not a real, literal gospel, but a symbolic gospel. And the nations to whom it is to be preached are not real, literal nations, only symbolic nations.

I can hardly conceive how a symbolic angel or messenger, can convey a literal message. Says another, the angel seen by John in Revelation 14:6, represents the ministry of the church, or body of Christ, in their work of building up the church during the reformation Period. If this interpretation of the passage be correct, then three or five distinct angels, would represent so many distinct classes of ministers, of so many different and distinct true churches of Christ. Five angels, with five distinct messages, are seen in the vision in this chapter. Let us apply the logic of the above interpretations to the entire prophecy, and harmonize it with the Scriptural doctrine of the "one body," or "Church," of Ephesians 4th. One class of believers says of this passage, it represented a class of men, of different denominations, in both Europe and America, who taught the soon coming of Christ, to establish his everlasting kingdom, and reign with his saints. They lived and taught about 1828, and subsequently. They also teach that the messages of the first and second angels are now being succeeded by the message of the third, declaring the judgments of God, on those who "receive the mark of the beast." To this position we reply: We are asked to take for granted an assumption for which there is not one word of evidence in all the Bible, or any other revelation of God that we now know of; namely, that the word angel means, or represents, a class of men, in any Bible sense whatever. We read of "the angels of God in heaven," of "the holy angels," "the angels," of whom it is said: "Man" was made, or created, "a little lower than the angels," that man, to become "equal" with them must pass through and beyond the resurrection. Angels immortal in nature. (Psa. 8:5; Luke 22:36; Heb. 2:16).

We also read of "the angels of the churches," to whom John was commanded to "write," give instructions, meaning, as all understand, the seven elders of the seven Churches of Asia. But more than one is referred to, hence the word is used in its plural form, angels. When only one of the angels of the churches is referred to, the word is used in its singular form. "Unto the angel of the church of Ephesus write." We likewise read about "the devil and his angels," "the angels that sinned." (Matt. 25:41; 2 Peter 2:4, but we never read any where, in all the good Book, where the term angel, used in the singular number, ever represents, or symbolizes a class of men, or any other kind of angels.

We reply again, to this assumed position, that if the angel seen flying through the heavens, having the everlasting gospel, means a class of men, then the other four angels seen in the vision must symbolize four other classes of men, with as many different messages, or missions, if the logic be worth anything. And if the same manner of procedure be observed in the future, that has characterized the past, with reference to these classes of men, no two classes will be living at the same time: yet, strange as it may appear, applying this logic (?) to verses seventeen and eighteen, and we have one class of these men giving directions to the other, though dead! And worse than all, according to this angel-Church, angel-class-of-men theory, one of these angel-classes of men is heard giving orders to "the Son of Man," as seen seated "on the white cloud!" This class of men will have risen a little higher than the Pope! High prerogatives for men indeed. But all these consequences are legitimate, if the logic of these objecting theories is sound. We are not prepared to accept of this assumption. Not yet.

The only rational conclusion that we can arrive at, then, concerning this prophecy of John—one consistent with the facts of past history, and the Scriptures, is, that God, in his benevolence and mercy to humanity, is to grant another dispensation of the gospel, through the agency of an holy angel; with divine authority to administer it, to be proclaimed to all the nations of the earth, just prior to, and during the decline and final downfall of the great religious confusion, that now distracts the world; and hence, in this regard, Mr. Smith's claim is not unscriptural. It may be objected to this position, that the gospel has existed on earth ever since it was instituted by Christ, anciently. We are glad to agree that we have in the New Testament, quite an extensive description of the principles of the gospel as taught by Christ and the apostles; also, of the organization of the kingdom; but while this is true, it is also true, that the principles therein described, existed, and were preached, believed, and obeyed, and the church was established, before a description of them was ever transcribed to the manuscripts. (Matt. 4:23; 9:35; Mark, 1:13, 14; Luke 4:18; 9:1-6; Acts 2:37-47). And this written description can at most be but "the word of the gospel." But "the word of the gospel," is but one of at least three elements that enter into, and compose the gospel. Hence it was necessary to authorize men to preach and administer the gospel, and its ordinances. Administrative authority is one of its elements. Jesus, who was "anointed" and "sent" of the Father "to preach the gospel," also said to his ministry: "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." "He that hears whomsoever I send hears me." "Christ having become a High Priest," being "the Apostle and High Priest of our profession," bestowed authority of this nature upon his ministry. "And no man takes this honor to himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron." (Jno. 12: 48, 49; 20: 21; 13: 20; Luke 10: 16; Heb. 9: 11; 3: 1; 5: 4.)

Although the ministry of Christ had received of this authority, also "the word of the gospel," as the word fell from the lips of the Savior, yet they were not to attempt to preach, until they were endowed with power from on high. Paul, authorized with a dispensation of the gospel, says: "And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit, and power: That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." "Our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." (1 Cor. 2: 2, 3; 1 Thess. 1: 5). Thus it is plainly to be seen, that while we have had all the time, a description of the principles, laws, ordinances and doctrines of the kingdom of God, the things therein described, with the authority and power to administer them, are what we have not possessed. These can only be restored by revelation from heaven. Hence the coming of the angel.

Now, if the angel that appeared to Joseph Smith, be the one referred to in the prophecy of Revelations, 14th chapter, and 6th verse, he must bring "the everlasting gospel," and this is what he must authorize Mr. Smith to preach. Had Mr. Smith claimed to have been authorized by an angel of God, to preach the everlasting gospel, and then failed to have taught it, we could, with propriety, have rejected his mission. This can only be determined by a comparison of what he taught, with the doctrine and principles taught by Christ and the apostles anciently, as described in the New Testament. By a perusal of the writings and revelations of Mr. Smith, we learn that he taught as follows:

"After it was truly manifested unto this first elder, that he had received a remission of his sins, he was entangled again in the vanities of the world; but after repenting, and humbling himself, sincerely, through faith, God ministered unto him by an holy angel, whose countenance was as lightning, and whose garments were pure and white, above all other whiteness; and gave unto him commandments which inspired him, and gave unto him power from on high, by the means which were before prepared, to translate the Book of Mormon, which contained a record of a fallen people, and the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, and to the Jews also, which was given by inspiration, and is confirmed to others by the ministering of angels, and is declared unto the world by them, proving to the world, that the Holy Scriptures are true, and that God does inspire men and call them to his holy work in this age and generation, as well as in generations of old, thereby showing that he is the same God yesterday, to-day and forever, amen. Therefore, having so great witnesses, by these shall the world be judged, even as many as shall hereafter come to a knowledge of this work; and those who receive it in faith, and work righteousness, shall receive a crown of eternal life; but those who harden their hearts in unbelief, and reject it, it shall turn to their own condemnation; for the Lord God hath spoken it; and we, the elders of the church have heard, and bear witness to the words of the glorious majesty on high, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen. By these things we know that there is a God in heaven, who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting, the same unchangeable God, the framer of heaven and earth, and all things which are in them, and that he created man male and female; after his own image and in his own likeness created he them, and gave unto them commandments that they should love and serve him, the only living and true God, and that he should be the only being whom they should worship. But by the transgression of these holy laws, man became sensual and devilish, and became fallen man. Wherefore, the Almighty God gave his only Begotten Son, as it is written in those scriptures which have been given of him: he suffered temptations, but gave no heed unto them; he was crucified, died, and rose again the third day; and ascended into heaven, to sit down on the right hand of the Father, to reign with almighty power, according to the will of the Father, that as many as would believe and be baptized in his holy name, and endure in faith to the end, should be saved: not only those who believed after he came in the meridian of time in the flesh, but all those from the beginning, even as many as were before he came, who believed in the words of the holy prophets, who spake as they were inspired by the gift of the Holy Ghost, who truly testified of him in all things, should have eternal life, as well as those who should come after, who should believe in the gifts and callings of God by the Holy Ghost, which beareth record of the Father, and of the Son, which Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are one God, infinite and eternal, without end. Amen."—Doctrine and Covenants, 17: pars. 2, 5.

The foregoing paragraphs embody a condensed statement, or mention at least of the fundamental doctrines taught by Joseph Smith, after the ministration of the "holy angel" to him, and by which he became a witness to, and taught the existence of the "only," "eternal," "everlasting," "unchangeable" God, the "creator of the heavens and the earth, and all things therein." This surely accords with gospel truth. (Isa. 42: 5; Matt 11: 25; 17: 5; Eph. 4: 6; Col. 1: 15; Heb. 1: 10-14; Mal. 3: 6; James 1: 17; Rev. 14: 6, 7. It is also taught, that "God gave his son," the "only begotten," that "he died," "was crucified," "rose again the third day;" that he is "on the right hand of the Father," that all who accept of him as a Savior, may "be saved," should have eternal life;" those before, as well as those after his coming; The atonement of Christ, is evidently gospel truth. Matt. 3: 16, 17; John 3: 16, 17; Acts 26: 22, 23; 1 Cor. 15: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5; Eph. 2: 13-18; Luke 22: 19, 20; Rom. 5: 8, 9; Heb. 13: 20, 21; Rev. 1: 5, 18).

Love to God and service to him, and an obedience to "his holy laws," and acceptance of Christ, by "faith," that all are required to believe in him, are herein taught by Mr. Smith, as necessary to salvation. All will agree that this was taught as gospel doctrine anciently. (John 3: 16; 14: 1; Matt. 17: 5; Mark 1: 13, 14; Heb. 11: 6; Rom. 10: 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 17; Acts 15: 7, 8). Faith in God and his son Jesus Christ is essential to salvation, according to the foregoing citations, and the testimony of Mr. Smith agrees with this, as we have seen.

Says Mr. Smith: "And we know that all men must repent and believe on the name of Jesus Christ, and worship the Father in his name, and endure in faith on his name to the end, or they can not be saved in the kingdom of God." (Par. 6). All will concede that "repentance" is essential to a remission of sins, according to the teachings of Christ and his ministry in ancient days—is one of the principles of the gospel. Matt. 3: 1, 2; 4: 17; Mark 1: 1, 2, 3, 4; Luke 3: 3; Acts 2: 37, 38; 17: 30; Luke 24: 45, 46, 47). Repentance is a ceasing to do evil, and a learning to do well. A laying aside of all that is condemned as evil and wrong by the law of the gospel, a reformation of our character. "For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation, not to be repented of." (2 Cor. 7: 10; Heb 6: 1, 2, 3).

Again, by referring to the foregoing epitome of teaching, it will be observed that baptism in the name of Christ, is declared to be essential to salvation. "And this is my gospel: repentance and baptism by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which showeth all things, and teacheth the peaceable things of the kingdom." So says the revelation of Christ to Joseph, after having been authorized of God, by the angel. (Revelation of 1831). An immersion of a penitent believer in water, for the remission of sins, in the name, or by the authority of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, was taught by Christ anciently, and also by the apostles, as essential to salvation. A part of the scheme of redemption; a part of the gospel of Christ, and not, as some say, a mere church ordinance, in the sense in which it is used by uninspired, unauthorized, modern divines; and as obtained from the creeds invented in the dark ages. According to the Savior, if he be not a second rate teacher, compared with worldly-wise teachers of these days, baptism is not to be administered, or dispensed with, just as we choose! This is no equivocal question. The issue is a direct one. It is a question of the Bible, or creed. God says it is essential. Man says it is not.

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he can not enter the kingdom of God." (Jno. 3: 1, 5, 8; Matt. 3: 13, 17; 7: 21; 28: 19, 20. Mark 1: 1, 5; 16: 14, 18, Luke 3:2, 3; 7:28, 30; Acts 2:37, 38; 8:12, 13, 36, 37, 38, 39; 10:47, 48; 16:30, 31, 32, 33; 19:1, 6; 21:14, 15, 16; Rom. 6:1-6, 17; Gal. 3:17; Eph. 4:4, 5; Col. 2:11, 12, 13; Titus 3:5; James 1:25; 1 Pet. 3:20, 21; Heb. 6:1, 3).

Teaching the doctrine of baptism in all its relations to the gospel plan of salvation, by Mr. Smith, goes far towards justifying his claims to a divine calling to preach and administer a dispensation of the gospel of Christ. Now, according to the doctrine of Christ as found in the New Testament, the laying on of hands of those who are authorized of God, in order to the reception of the Holy Ghost by baptized believers, is one of the principles of the doctrine of Christ. That Mr. Smith taught this doctrine, is evidenced by the fact that this doctrine has been one of the most objectionable features of our faith, to those who differ from us. That the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, is a principle of the gospel, is evident from a careful perusal of the following cited scriptures. (Matt. 28:19, 20, connected with Acts 8:14-19; and 9:17, 18; 19:1, 6; Gal. 1:11, 12. Elders officiating in this ordinance, as well as apostles, 1 Tim. 4:14, 16; Heb. 6:1, 2, 3). Had Mr. Smith failed to teach this principle, after having claimed to receive a dispensation of the gospel through the ministry of an holy angel, one scriptural objection could have been found to his claims to divine authority.

The doctrines of the resurrection of the dead, and the eternal judgment, are prominent topics through all the writings and teachings of Joseph Smith; and will appear to all who search them. The resurrection is the hope of the gospel. All who accept of the gospel, and obey all of its principles, and endure in faith unto the end, will come forth from their graves at the coming of Christ in glory, being raised to immortality, and eternal life, to reign with Christ as kings and priests. (John 5:29; Acts 23:6; 24:14, 15, 16; 1 Cor. 15:21, 22, 23; Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 Thes. 4:15-17).

"Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:6). "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." (Verse 5).

The judgment of mankind is after their resurrection from the dead. (John 5:28, 29; Acts 17:30, 31; 24:15, 16; 2 Tim. 4:1, 2; Heb. 6:1, 3; Rev. 20:12, 14). Men will be punished or rewarded according to the degree of good or evil they shall have done, governed by their opportunities for attaining light and a knowledge of the purposes of God concerning themselves. (John 3:19, 20; Matt. 10:15; 11:20, 22, 23, 24; 12:41, 42; 23:14; 1 Cor. 15:41, 42; Rev. 20:13). "And they were judged, every man according to their works." To conclude this department of the subject, we quote as follows:

"Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, [having in becoming Christians laid the foundation], and of faith toward God. Of the doctrine of baptisms, [of water and Spirit], and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment."—Heb. 6:1, 2.

Six foundational principles of the doctrine of Christ are here grouped together. "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, [as a religious teacher], neither bid him God speed."—3 Jno. 9:10. "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1:8, 9.

We may safely conclude, according to the foregoing evidences regarding the principles of the gospel as taught anciently, and the fact that they have been taught in their proper order, in these last days by Mr. Smith; that his claims to a restoration of them through the medium of an angel of God, are valid, and beyond scriptural question.

UPON a certain occasion, in my endeavor to set in order a branch of the church, I was met with opposition, not from lack of character or ability on the part of the nominee, as they were not questioned, but from sheer caprice. And while considering the case I penned the following: What constitutes a legal nomination to the priesthood by a branch of the church? What is the object intended by the law requiring an expression of a branch as a preliminary to ordination? What are the prerogatives of a branch in the case?

The vote of a branch is given under the supervision of its officers, one or more, as circumstances may determine. Voting implies the right and capability of judging; and the prerogative to give judgment presupposes the exercise of right reason in the judgment, or decision rendered. Motives actuating parties other than those intended to reach a righteous purpose, are not supposed to exist, or in any way control in the rendition of the choice, as truth and right must characterize the deliberations in the councils and decisions of the Saints. To suppose that a branch can, under a capricious, dogmatic decision, because the letter of the law requiring the vote of a branch as a preliminary to ordination, does not set forth the object therefor, nor give direction or rule under which the vote may be rendered, therefore they may vote as they choose, irrespective of capability or character, must be a mistake. It does not comport with righteousness, which always confers or withholds agreeably to the evidence presented.

A branch conference is a court of inquiry, nothing more; and like every other judicial body, is governed by law, and their findings must be in accordance with the facts presented in the case. The law governing the deliberations and decisions of a branch conference, is the same that rules and directs in every court or conference of the church, which says: "Unto every kingdom is given a law, and to every law there are certain bounds and also conditions." Doctrine and Covenants 85:9. Consequently, in the kingdom of God there is no such a thing as judgment, without "conditions."

Although these restrictions and provisions are not always specified in immediate connection with those portions of the law sought to be applied, yet being governing principles, they are always pertinent. No portion of the law of God is a mere formality, but has a specific object in its application. Hence we conclude that the vote required to be taken by a branch as a preliminary to ordination, is one of inquiry, and that is confined to character, and seeming ability to discharge the duties it is intended the nominee shall fill; for upon these qualities the law supposes the branch from association, is competent to judge. If other than these are the objects intended by the law, they do not to me appear. If upon inquiry the nominee is found to possess the qualifications necessary, the conference is bound to confirm the nomination, the right to ordination being with him, and those rights must be respected, otherwise injustice is done, as law is intended to define and secure the right of all to whom it applies. If not, the law is stultified, and it is useless to urge government by law, where the binding force of its provisions are ignored. Neither does it appear, that a branch possesses any further prerogative or jurisdiction upon the subject, other than that which relates to qualifications, the selections and ordinations being with the priesthood. This is proved by the proceedings and example shown in the organization of the church. The heavens in the first instance designated those men, and the offices they were to fill. The disciples were required to give their consent to be thus guided and led, an exhibition of the law of common consent, which they were afterwards instructed to practice. The priesthood designated and ordained others, as made known unto them by the Spirit of revelation. The saints consenting or objecting for cause only. This must of necessity be the rule, because the moment a proposition, or even a revelation is submitted for action, pro. or con., it authorizes the party to whom submitted, to scrutinize it and act upon the exercise of its judgment; neither has that rule of procedure ever been changed. I may here add, if that practice was continued, which seems by the record to be the intention, it would prevent incompetency from being intruded into places it never was intended to fill. Such parties having no gifts or callings from God; for when he calls he qualifies for the work he intends them to do. The others are simply the injudicious callings of men, growing out of the supposed unlimited authority of the branches in the case, the Holy Ghost being no party in the appointment. And their inefficiency proving that it takes something more than a vote of a branch and the laying on of hands, to constitute a messenger of the Most High, "a workman approved of God, that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

A word to the wise is sufficient. The authorities should see to it, that neither recommendations nor rejections are entertained, only upon valid grounds. Upon the premises herein set forth, any action of a branch is subject to review upon an appeal being taken to the district conference. If this is not the fact, it follows that branches constitute infallible courts, whose decisions can not be questioned regarding selections to the priesthood. But says one, that is right, it is democratic, "The government by and for the governed." But the opposite to this is the government of the church. It is theocratic. The law-making power is entirely with the head and the government is enjoined to carry its provisions into righteous effect. That branches should select their own officials, is a liberal and wise provision; but to suppose that a vote of a branch can impede or control the general authorities in the efforts to set in order and regulate the affairs of the church, when the case requires their interference, is contrary to reason, and therefore contrary to rational law. Yet that ground is assumed. But I have never yet heard a reason given therefor. If there are any other intentions in the law requiring a vote of the branch, prior to ordination, other than those respecting qualifications, I shall be pleased to learn. I regard usage as nothing, only when founded in truth and light. JOSIAH ELLS.

Selected Poetry.

ST. JOHN THE AGED.

THE following anonymous poem was found, says the Troy Times, about eight years ago, in a magazine published in Philadelphia. Its beauty of language, fervor of feeling, and exalted religious sentiment, claim for it a wider circulation than it has yet attained.

I'm growing very old. This weary head
That hath so often leaned on Jesus' breast,
In days long past that seem almost a dream,
Is bent and hoary with its weight of years.
These limbs that followed him—my Master—oft
From Galilee to Judea; yea, that stood
Beneath the cross, and trembled with his groans,
Refuse to bear me even through the streets
To preach unto my children. E'en my lips
Refuse to form the words my heart sends forth;
My ears are dull, they scarcely hear the sobs
Of my dear children gathered round my couch;
God lays his hand upon me; yea, his hand—
And not His rod—the gentle hand that I Felt, those three years, so often pressed in mine,
In friendship such as passeth woman's love.
I'm old; so old I can not recollect
The faces of my friends; and I forget
The words and deeds that make up daily life:
But that dear face, and every word He spoke,
Grow more distinct as others fade away,
So that I live with Him and holy dead
More than with living.

Some seventy years ago
I was a fisher by the sacred sea.
It was at sunset. How the tranquil tide
Bathed dreamily the pebbles! How the light

Crept up the distant hills, and in its wake
Soft purple shadows wrapped the dewy fields!
And then He came and called me. Then I gazed,
For the first time, on that sweet face. Those eyes,
From out of which, as from a window, shone
Divinity, looked on my inmost soul,
And lighted it forever. Then his words
Broke on the silence of my heart, and made
The whole world musical. Incarnate Love
Took hold of me and claimed me for its own.
I followed in the twilight, holding fast
His mantle.

O, what holy walks we had,
Through harvest fields, and desolate, dreary wastes!
And oftentimes he leaned upon my arm,
Weary and wayworn. I was young and strong,
And so upbore him. Lord, now I am weak,
And old and feeble! Let me rest on thee!
So, put thine arm around me. Closer still!
How strong thou art! The twilight draws apace.
Come, let us leave these noisy streets and take
The path to Bethany; for Mary's smile
Awaits us at the gate, and Martha's hands
Have long prepared the cheerful evening meal.
Come, James, the Master waits; and Peter, see,
Has gone some steps before,

What say you, friends?
That this is Ephesus, and Christ has gone
Back to his kingdom! Ay, 'tis so, 'tis so.
I know it all; and yet, just now, I seemed
To stand once more upon my native hills,
And touch my Master. O, how oft I've seen
The touching of his garments bring back strength
To palsied limbs! I feel that it has come to mine.
Up! bear me once more to my church! Once more
There let me tell them of the Savior's love;
For, by the sweetness of my Master's voice
Just now, I think he must be very near—
Coming, I trust, to break the veil, which time
Has worn so thin that I can see beyond,
And watch his footsteps.

So, raise up my head.
How dark it is! I can not seem to see
The faces of my flock. Is that the sea
That murmurs so, or is it weeping! Hush.
My little children! God so loved the world
He gave His Son. So love ye one another.
Love God and man. Amen. Now bear me back.
My legacy unto an angry world is this.
I feel my work is finished. Are the streets so full?
What, call the folk my name? The Holy John?
Nay, write me rather, Jesus Christ's beloved,
And lover of my children.

Lay me down
Once more upon my couch, and open wide
The eastern window. See, there comes a light
Like that which broke upon my soul at eve,
When, in the dreary Isle of Patmos, Gabriel came
And touched me on the shoulder. See, it grows
As when we mounted toward the pearly gates.
I know the way! I trod it once before.
And hark! It is the song the ransomed sang
Of glory to the Lamb! How loud it sounds!
And that unwritten one! methinks my soul
Can join it now. But who are those who crowd
The shining way? Say!—joy! 'tis the eleven
With Peter first! How eagerly he looks!
How bright the smiles are beaming on James' face!
I am the last. Once more we are complete
To gather round the Paschal feast. My place
Is next to my Master. O, my Lord, my Lord!
How bright thou art! and yet the very same
I loved in Galilee. 'Tis worth the hundred years
To feel this bliss! So, lift me up, dear Lord, Unto thy bosom. Here shall I abide.

The every-day cares and duties which men call drudgery, are the weights and counterpoises of the clock of time, giving its pendulum a true vibration, and its hands a regular motion, and when they cease to hang upon the wheels, the pendulum no longer swings, the hands no longer move, the clock stands still.

If you intend to do a mean thing, wait till to-morrow. If you are to do a noble thing, do it now.

MARRIED.

PARR—FORSCUTT.—At Nebraska City, Nebraska, in the Saints' Church, December 27th, 1883, by Elder Mark H. Forscutt, father of the bride, Mr. George W. Parr of Omaha, and sister Amy E. Forscutt of Nebraska City. G. M. Ribble and W. H. Crary were groomsmen and Ruby Forscutt and Ella Larsh were bridesmaids. KIRKWOOD—LAPWORTH.—At Crescent City, Iowa, December 20th, 1883, at the home of the bride's mother, by Elder D. K. Dodson, Bro. John Kirkwood to Sr. Agnes Lapworth. A sumptuous supper was served, and a pleasant evening enjoyed by the near relatives of the happy young couple. The presents were numerous and beautiful.

DIED.

SELLERS.—[Near Persia, Iowa], January 10th, 1883, Bro. Thomas Sellers, aged 82 years, 5 months and 1 day. He embraced the gospel in the early days of the church, and in 1860 was baptized by Elder W. W. Blair into the Reorganization. He died firm in the faith. Funeral sermon by Elder D. H. Bays.

GAYLORD.—At Tabor, Fremont county, Iowa, Elizabeth Gaylord, aged 75 years, 8 months and 23 days. Born May 4th, 1808, in Belcher town, Hampshire county, Mass. She obeyed the gospel in 1833, in the State of New York. Soon after, she moved to Kirtland, Ohio, with her husband, Elijah B. Gaylord. From there they followed the fortunes of the Latter Day Saints through Missouri and Illinois, enduring all the persecutions, mobbings, and drivings of that afflicted people; weeping and mourning with them in tribulation, and rejoicing with them in prosperity. They remained with the church until Brigham Young did what he before declared never would be, namely, “take Joseph's place.” Here in Fremont county they, like many others, planted their hearthstone, watching and waiting for the consolation of Israel. She united early in the conflict with the Reorganized Church, and lived to see the promise of the Lord fulfilled to them that remain, “Ye shall find favor,” &c. Sister Gaylord was indeed a mother in Israel. She leaves an honored family to mourn her loss, but they with others realize their loss is her gain. All her life she did good, sowing seeds of kindness, doing good to all. Her life's labor commends her to God and men. Her rest will be glorious. Services by Elder R. J. Anthony, assisted by Elder Henry Kemp.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In reply to a question from the east respecting the resurrection. The righteous and those obedient to the Gospel will be resurrected at the coming of Christ before the Millenium; and the wicked and disobedient dead will not rise until the thousand years are over. See Revelation 20th chapter.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith will be at St. Louis a few days longer, thence home to recuperate, as he is suffering from cold contracted en route.

Bro. F. B. Moyer wrote from Conejos, Colorado, January 11th that four were baptized there, by Bro. W. W. Blair, and it was thought others would follow.

A brother W. Harris sent us a Youngstown, Ohio, News-Register, for January 7th, 1884, which contains the report of a lecture in the Opera House, in that place by W. J. Cogswell, who claims to be an ex-elder of the Brighamite church, of Utah. But from several expressions found in the report, if Mr. Cogswell is correctly reported, it admits of a doubt if he ever was at Salt Lake City, let alone being a trusted elder of that body known as Mormons. We believe that he is stuffing the people, and picking up the shilling for himself, as a result.

The debate between Bro. E. L. Kelley and Rev. Clark Braden, at Kirtland, originally set for February 5th is, by request of Rev. Braden put for one week later, the 12th. Those who may have decided to attend the discussion will take notice of this postponement.

Bro. Ebenezer Robinson, of Davis City, Iowa, has been quite sick, at the home of his son-in-law, Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, for a number of days, but is now, (January 12th), some better.

Bro. Spencer C. Smith wrote from Grand Prairie, Dallas county, Texas, where he arrived in November last. He was from two to three hundred miles from any of the Saints, but was striving for the truth.

Bro. John Eames wrote from Cheyenne, January 11th, 1884, that he had baptized one more at that place, an excellent man of good report. There are now five members in Cheyenne, and Bro. Eames feels that the city ought to be well warned. He had kept at work sounding the word wherever he could for five years, and now thinks that the seed sown is beginning to grow. May the Lord prosper Bro. Eames in every righteous endeavor.

Bro. Thomas Hickling wrote from Newton, New Hampshire, January 11th, desiring that should any of the elders be visiting that vicinity they would call on him. He came to this country last February and would delight to see any of the Saints.

Sr. Mary A. Moon wrote from Weberville, Michigan, January 11th. They have no preaching except from the M. E. and Baptist, which she does not feel satisfied with. She thinks that an Elder might do well there in preaching the word.

Bro. Moses McHarness preached the funeral sermon at the burial services of Sr. Hatch, at Hartford, Michigan, January 6th, 1884, in the meeting house of the Baptist people, who kindly let it for the occasion. He had good liberty of speech and the people gave good attendance. He also met with the Saints at Nauvoo, Michigan on the 11th. He reports cold and stormy weather.

The following named members of the Deer Creek Branch, are reported as scattered members in the district; and it is desired that they report to the branch clerk, C. N. Hutchins, at Blakely, Madison county, Nebraska: Israel A. Hutchins, George W. Montgomery, Georgiana Montgomery, Calvin B. Rice, John W. White.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. BLAIR wrote from Conejos, Colorado, January 11th, 1884.

"I have consented to stay here over next Sunday, and I may baptize some more. I look to see many in this region unite within the next six months. Hope to leave the work in efficient hands."

Sr. Jennie Murphy, of Marshalltown, Iowa, wrote January 10th:

We have just returned from a visit at Boonsboro, and the Saints and friends with whom our lot was cast when truth and the first rays of gospel light and love entered our soul. How precious then seemed the love of the Savior we had found; yet infinitely more precious as the days go by. How my heart rejoiced to see our brothers and sisters striving for the faith once delivered to the Saints, and to hear their testimony and determination to walk the narrow way that leads to life eternal. And also to see their membership increasing under the efficient labor of our brother, R. Etzenhouser; may the kind Father send more such laborers into the field already white and waiting the harvest."

Sixteen were baptized at Richfield, Sevier county, Utah, during a three weeks' stay and labor of Brn. Hansen and Burt there. Bro. Andrew C. Nielson wrote January 9th:

"I am happy to inform you of the glorious time we have had here. Brn. Hansen and Burt have been laboring here for three weeks, and sixteen have been baptized, and more are near. Yesterday we had a sacrament meeting, and the spirit of God was enjoyed in a full measure. A branch was organized and we all feel happy; and are determined to spread the glorious news if God will aid us.

Sr. Mira Snow writing from North Brooksville, Maine, January 10th says:

Thank the brother in England who so kindly showed the correct answer to the question in regard to the tables of stone containing the original Ten Commandments. Trust many have profited by it. Will some one please tell in the Herald what is meant by the ark of his testament that is spoken of in the 11th chapter of Revelations 19 verse? Why were the prophecies generally given in the past tense when their fulfillment was in the future.

We have read of many cases of cure in the present age, by the prayer of faith outside of the Church of Christ, and we believe them to be true. Some people believe that such blessings are bestowed in their own church, but do not exist outside. The gift of healing does not prove that the parties engaged possess the fulness of the spiritual blessings. The apostles had power to heal the sick and cast out devils, but they did not receive the Holy Ghost until the day of Pentecost; then they spoke in tongues and prophesied. They did not receive the latter gifts up to that time, although many of God's children had, before Jesus was authorized to lead the Church. They did not need the second Comforter when He was with them. A person who has great faith may be healed although neither he nor the Elder who officiates has received the Holy Ghost; while, on the other hand some who have received this, the greatest gift, may not have faith to be healed. I have long desired that faith, but have never attained it. Think it must be a gift direct from God, for some express purpose. Saints, one and all, pray that it may be bestowed upon unworthy me.

SENSIBLE John Sharp; see what he says:

"Bishop John Sharp said in a meeting of the Mormon Priesthood at Salt Lake, Saturday, that while in Washington recently he had seen enough to convince him that no power but the Almighty could save the Mormon people, and if God did not pilot the ship would go down."

THE Fall River Sentinel of a late date contains the following notice.

"The Latter Day Saints of Fall River, have just started a series of lectures, in which they propose to give to the public a thorough understanding of their faith and doctrines. The first of these lectures was given in their chapel on Claffin street, by Elder John Gilbert. Mr. Gilbert is very positive in his language. He clearly defined his position in contradistinction to the Utah Mormons. The next lecture will be given Friday, January 11th, by Elder F. M. Sheehy.

Accompanying the clipping was the hand-bill announcing that the "Faith and Doctrines of the Reorganized Church would be exposed on the evenings of January 9, 11, 15 and 17th.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—When the Elders of this Church are called to administer to those outside of the Church, is it right to leave the oil with them to anoint at pleasure?

Ans.—We see no wrong in such use of the oil.

Q.—Has a Deacon the right to do any public speaking in the line of lectures?

A.—Yes. Or expounding or exhorting and inviting all to come to Christ, whenever and wherever opportunity offers.

Q.—Is it right for members to raise the hand to forgive a brother's wrong, and the same time believe that the said brother has done no wrong?

A.—Yes. If a brother be accused and a court find that he should ask forgiveness, those favoring his being forgiven should raise the hand though they might think him to be innocent.

Q.—Is he an orderly member of the church who wrongs his neighbor, to an amount, (few dollars or many), and who will not make restitution to said injured person?

A.—No; if restitution is possible for him, and if his neighbor will accept what is reasonable in the case.

Q.—Would such a member be considered in good standing?

A.—No; if after labor and proper effort he refuses to do what is right. His standing is not questioned till he is accused and tried.

Q.—Did Jesus baptize all John's disciples over again?

A.—We understand not. Indeed, it is claimed by many that Jesus baptized no one, but left the matter of baptizing for the work of his apostles. Others claim that Jesus baptized none, only the twelve apostles. We believe, however, that he did baptize; but do not believe that he re-baptized those baptized by John. He undoubtedly held John's baptism to be good.

Q.—If a member wrongs another, can the offender be properly forgiven by a quarterly conference, if he asks forgiveness of it, without he makes restitution, or is reconciled to his injured brother?

A.—That would be owing to circumstances, and such act would depend upon the conditions of the particular case in which such an occurrence might take place. Absolute restitution may be impracticable, or wholly impossible; the offended brother might demand more than was reasonable, or more than could be honorably yielded; or he might refuse to be reconciled entirely.

Q.—Does the word assess mean to collect, or to take away?

A.—It means neither. It means to determine, decide, or set a value or sum to be paid, or levied and collected.

Correspondence.

HAMBURG, IOWA,

December 26th, 1883.

Dear Herald.—The brethren are trying to live the law the best they can. Some of them have hard times, but they are trying to keep their heads above water. Crops have failed in this part of the country, and about all we have to depend upon is the last year's crop. Bro. Henry Kemp has been preaching here, and has left a good feeling; the people want him to come back; they are getting their eyes open; they are calling for books, and they attend our meetings, and some are interested. We think a big work could be done in Hamburg if things go on rightly. We are putting forth every effort to build a church: we need a house here. Brethren, help us if it is but little: many littles put together, make a big. We invite all branches to help. We have about half the amount that it will take to build the church. We are ready to go to work with a little more means. We invite presidents to help us.

Yours with respect,

NICHOLAS TAYLOR.

WILLIAM CALKINS.

DANIEL COMSTOCK.

COLDWATER, Michigan,

January 5th, 1884.

Editor of the Herald.—November 7th, I left home in order to visit some points in Western Michigan. At Grand Rapids I called on Bro. J. S. Trout, Sr. Trout and daughter, and Sr. Bell Bond, all of whom expressed a trust and confidence in the faith. On the 9th, I arrived at Manistee, and went directly to the residence of Bro. C. W. Conat, to be kindly received and made welcome by Mrs. Conat, he being absent from home, but was expected to return soon. Mrs. Conat is a member of the Baptist Church, but, at once, manifested a sincere interest in one holding a faith similar to that of her husband. Already conversant with the leading features of the faith, she listened with interest to all subjects brought up and conversed by us while there. Raised a Catholic it is not difficult for her to see, that there should be legality and authority recognized in religion. Bro. Conat is doing fairly well in business, and when I came to note, that fourteen regular eaters, big, little, old and young, sat down to his table three times a day, and at night filled up the sleeping apartments, I thought it was well that something like good fortune had overtaken him; and that his name was not just now enrolled in the dependent ministerial list. But there was room for another, however, and number fifteen received a welcome and a home at his house during his stay in Manistee. Bro. Conat has been out on the borders for some time, without church associations, but is in the faith; and is willing to sacrifice for the success of the cause. He finds a good deal of fault, however, with the irascible C. W. Conat. Sr. Conat is not far from seeing the truth. Thanks for kindness and care.

On the 11th, I met with Bro. and Sr. W. B. Horton, and some of their relatives, at the house of Bro. Conat. They have been in the faith for many years, having passed through the sifting time of the dark day of the Church, but have held to their integrity and faith. Bro. Horton has resided at Manistee about ten years, and is very highly respected by the citizens of that place. He is now in charge of the County Poor Farm, located near to Manistee. May the promised consolations of the faith abide with them in their declining years. Manistee is pleasantly situated on the east shore of Lake Michigan, and is said to contain a population of twelve thousand. Has one railroad, a navigable river, a number of saw mills, (the chief source of wealth), churches, excellent school-houses, halls, a public library, a free reading room, the latter in charge of the "Woman's Temperance Union;" supports four newspapers and as many fair-minded editors. Contains a number of wealthy citizens, and quite a large foreign population. Is a city of business and stir. Is, also the home of Mrs. Ann Eliza-Dee-Young-Dinning, of public note. Having never met with this lady of strange fortune, I called at her residence on the afternoon of the 12th, with a view of meeting a friend and seeing and conversing with the woman who has moved multitudes with the story of her life, because of the public protest against the institution in which she was raised, and that she is the fair No. 19 instead of No. 1. She was out for a ride when I arrived, but I was soon introduced to her mother, Mrs. Webb, whom I found lying upon the bed unwell. She is now in years, and has been weakened by a slight paralytic stroke, which affects her speech at times. She seemed pleased with the call, and said it did not worry her to talk. She has evidently been a woman of strong character, and native, practical good sense; and with the devotional, possesses gifts for strategy, and loves wealth and influence. I did not know but she had a new theory for the origin of the faith, so put the question, "The Book of Mormon is a fact, what theory have you for its origin, if you reject the claim made by its friends?" She hesitated, and then answered in true Yankee style, "Was it not made from the Spaulding Manuscript?" Ann Eliza having returned from a long ride through the bracing cold air, seemed refreshed, was cheerful, and appeared to good advantage. After introduction, receiving a generous invitation, I remained until after supper. That over, and the work done, in which Mrs. Dinning manifested a willing and skillful hand, we gathered around the stove for an hour's chat. Mrs. Dinning was plainly, but richly dressed, appears with ease and freedom, is rather good looking, and wears bangs. Is intelligent, uses good language, and shows to have made something of an effort sometime to excel in the literary department. She does not think of entering upon public life again. Said she, "I like domestic work. I have a good home, a good husband, and everything to make me comfortable and happy, and I purpose to enjoy it." She has two sons by her first husband. Mr. Dee, aged seventeen and eighteen, now at school in Chicago. Politically, Mrs. Dinning holds with Governor Murray. Believes that a commission appointed by the Government is the thing for Utah. Brigham Young was the person who baptized Mrs. Webb at an early day; and she lived neighbor to him at Kirtland. The Webbs and the Youngs were quite intimate. I asked the question, "Was Brigham Young the same man in character in Utah, that he was at Kirtland when you first united with the church? You knew him in both places?" "No," said she, "he was no more like the same man in Utah that he was at Kirtland, than if he was not the same person. When at Kirtland he was an humble, devoted, spiritual minded, kind hearted man. In Utah, he was the reverse of this. Seemed to have lost all of the virtues of his former self." Blind ambition, false theories and systems, not unfrequently rob men of their highest virtues, and steel them against all that is tender and lovely. "All of the Youngs are lazy," says Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Dinning. "None will work," and as a rule will own up to this human weakness. Brigham must have been in his dotage, or was like Jesse James when shot by young Ford, "off his guard," when he married Ann Eliza, and then put her in the back ground, and set her to making cheese, while he carried on a high flirtation with No. 20. He might have known that she would not submit to that, to say nothing of the inhuman system. Ann Eliza is a woman of spirit and possesses qualities of resistance. With Mrs. Webb as a skillful manipulator, acting as first counselor, it is a great wonder that she did not dethrone the old monarch. Dismissing the question of religion, there is something of genuine merit about Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Dinning; and they are doubtless justly entitled to the consideration of the first societies.

Wednesday the 14th I went by stage eighteen miles distance, to Onekama, and stopped with Mr. Julius H. Hull, who resides with his two sisters, Emma and Addie, on the old homestead left by their father and mother. Here I was kindly received, and made at home. Their parents were members of the church for many years, and died in the faith. They are highly spoken of by their neighbors, as is the family. It is a sufficient comment on the parents to say that the children have been well raised, taught good habits and morals. I held a number of meetings in the neighborhood, and at Pierport, three miles away; and quite an interest was awakened among the citizens. Sisters Addie E. and Emma J. Hull united with the church by baptism; and we left a number of others seriously investigating, not to say believing. Sr. Addie has had an affliction for a number of years, and doctors could not help her. She writes that she is better than when I was there. May the Saints remember her in their prayers.

I also visited Burnham, eight miles north of Pierport, in company with Mr. J. H. Hull, who was kind enough to furnish a conveyance. Here we met with Bro. Lee Cole and Mr. Dean Hull, who kindly cared for us. Sister Cole was confined to her bed with scrofula, but has since recovered. This is a new town built in the lumbering district. Bro. Cole is succeeding better in business than he did in Iowa, and his faith stays by him. I held three meetings here with small attendance, but some manifested an interest in what was said. By the effort of Bro. Cole, the opening was made in Pierport, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Riley, made me welcome at their house.

Monday 26th I returned to Manistee by lumber wagon, stage, and on foot, the stage having run against a stump when within three miles of town and broke down. It was dark, cold and muddy, but we reached the city. After procuring a hall and advertising by posters and through the papers, and joining in eating a sumptuous thanksgiving dinner at Bro. Conats, on the evening of December 1st, I commenced to preach in Temperance Hall, in Manistee. The audience was not large, but we made a beginning; second and third evenings there was a better attendance, and among the number those of thought and influence. The fourth night there were but few out. The main causes were obvious; there were two balls (dances) in the city, the skating rink active, the sale of church pews, &c., which naturally drew away all except the really interested. We were paying five dollars an evening for the use of the hall, and it was engaged for the next two nights ensuing. So we concluded to postpone further services. We were encouraged by the effort however, and believe the good done for the cause will prove a full remuneration for the effort and outlay. Some are interested and reading. It takes time, means and effort to move a city, especially where there are places to amuse the fun loving and hold the indifferent church going. The church is indebted mainly to Bro. and Sr. Conat, Bro. and Sr. Horton, Bro. J. H. Peters, Bro. Cole and J. H. Hull, for sustaining this trip and effort financially. They "downed with the dust" as though they intended to do something for the planting of the work, if they are not in the ministerial field. May their usefulness continue, and days be many.

For want of time I passed by all places where the word had been preached by others, while on this trip; and I felt to regret that I could not stay all winter in western Michigan, as there are excellent opportunities to present the faith, and the people are willing to hear.

December 4th, I called at Midland, and remained until the afternoon of the 15th with Bro. J. H. Peters and his pleasant family. Bro. Peters has invested in mill property at Midland, and at present seems to be permanently established; and with fortune in his favor, may be able to reap satisfactory fruits of his labor. Best of all he is in the faith, reads the Herald and text books, and watches with pleasure the success of the cause. May he succeed in his earnest desire to do good in the world. Religiously, Mrs. Peters holds with the Presbyterians; is an excellent lady, sensible and liberal, willing that all should be left to follow their religious convictions. Once convinced of the truth of the faith, and she is noble enough to follow in the way shown to be the most correct. She made our visit pleasant for us. Thanks.

Sunday the 16th, I returned to Vernon to fill appointments made while on my way to Midland. Considering the circumstances, they were well attended. There is quite an interest begun there. I sold all of the books I had with me, distributed tracts, and the last evening preached on the stumbling stone of this generation, which was well received. This effort was made by invitation of Sr. J. S. Howard of Moscow, Idaho, who is visiting at her old home, near Vernon. May she be blessed in her effort to lead those near to her in the ways of peace and safety. I am indebted to Messrs. Hiram and A. J. Hovey, for providing me a home while there. Thanks.

I returned home on the 20th, to find all well, and to await the coming of the New Year.

Now Mr. Editor, after looking over this long letter, I believe I am decidedly in favor of issuing the Herald weekly. Yet many things have been left out for the sake of brevity. It may be that I am more highly gifted with prolixity than the power of condensation. Any way we need space. Can't you get out a daily?

Wishing "ye Editor," office workers, and all of the Herald readers, a Happy New Year, just begun, I remain,
WM. H. KELLEY.

CARSON CITY, Nevada,

January 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I arrived here on the 7th. I shall do the best I can in Nevada. I preached twice in Franktown, and felt well. Stayed there during the holidays; found Bro. Smith and saints well, but no meetings; none in Carson for the last three months, nor indeed anywhere else in Nevada. I held three meetings in Elko, a few interested. I now go to see Bro. A. B. Johns. I am glad Bro. Blair has gone to California; I have good letters from there, but they want an Elder. Old Sister Woodward died at the Swamp lately, while sitting in her chair talking and laughing with her neighbors. She was a faithful, good woman. Many of the old ones are passing away.

I can always see much that ought to be done, and oft regret I can do so little. The good Master has borne with my infirmities of the past, I trust him still. My faith is unshaken, satisfied that all's well with the church, and those called to guide in this perilous time. Utah is shaking, thank God. A glad day to many is near at hand. God bless you, Joseph; hold fast to the reins; they are in your hands.

SCOTTSVILLE, Indiana,

January 6th, 1884.

Brother Joseph.—We have just closed a meeting at Eden, a second series of interesting discourses, by Bro. T. W. Smith. He assisted also to put the branch in a good working condition, and flashed the light upon the pathway of both members and officers, so that his services are appreciated to a great extent, and will be long remembered by all among whom he has been laboring in the Southern Indiana District. He labored with all the branches in the north-east part of the district, Eden, Union, Hall's Ridge, New Trenton and Amanda, and spoke twice in the city of New Albany. We regret that he could not visit the southern part of district, as that part is destitute of an Elder. I traveled some in the district with Bro. Smith, and found him to be an excellent traveling companion. He did us much good at our last conference at Union, Jefferson county, Indiana, in the way of general instruction. He assisted also in reorganizing the Union Branch. It is now under the presidency of our much esteemed brother, Samuel Rector. We hope it will now wage an energetic and successful warfare. All the branches in the district ought to profit by their past experiences. If they do this, and live up to the light they have, I predict for them a bright future. If they do not, darkness of course. The Elders of our branch are holding forth in adjoining counties, as the way can be opened. We want to get the working force of our district actively engaged, and for this reason we wish to see them all in attendance at our next quarterly conference, which will convene on the ninth of February, at Pleasant Ridge, Perry county, Indiana, at ten a. m. I would say to all those having charge of branches, let us then and there have a report from every branch in the district. If you can not be there, send them by some one, or through the mail, and direct to Robert Eyres, Lilly Dale, Perry county, Indiana. We want a report from every Elder in the district. We have no time to waste in holding sham conferences. I know that we are poor, and seldom have means to travel on; yet I have learned by experience, that when we will to do a thing, we almost always find a way. Remember that there is an inseparable connection between action and condition. Ever praying for the overspreading of the light of truth,

I remain yours as ever,

HARBERT SCOTT, Dist. Pres.

SCOTTVILLE, Floyd Co., Ind.,
December 28th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I believe that I was at New Trenton when I wrote last. I went from there to Amanda Branch, Butler county, Ohio; although in Ohio, it is a part of Southern Indiana District, and therefore a part of my field. Bro. Mortimer B. Williams, is the president of the branch, and is an efficient laborer in the cause of Christ. The branch had been in a somewhat feeble state, owing to a lack of interest in the meetings on the part of many. The presiding Elder had become nearly discouraged because of not receiving the co-operation of other branch officers in his efforts to keep up the interest. But after some suitable counsel, and earnest exhortation, a determination to awaken was expressed, and shown by proper action. Bro. Thomas Wren was re-elected branch Priest, and the work left in much better condition. I spoke some nine times in the old schoolhouse, which had been fitted up very nicely when Bro. McDowell was laboring there, as a meeting room. I believe the Saints have arranged to rent it for that purpose again. I found material for an efficient laborer in the vineyard, in the person of Bro. Tugling, who was baptized by Bro. Williams about a year ago. I would have ordained him to the office of an Elder, believing that such a step would have been prudent and expedient, but he wanted to have a more satisfactory evidence to himself of his duty in that direction, than he had yet received; and believing that to be reasonable and proper, I did not urge his ordination at that time. There are some excellent Saints in the branch there, who are ready to do their duty in the work of building up the cause there. I left the Amanda Branch, and returned to New Trenton, and spoke on Thursday and Sunday nights, in the Methodist Church. The local minister, Rev. Mr. Steele, assisting me on both occasions, expressed himself as desirous that I should preach all the week in the house. The lives of the Saints around there had been such, that their honesty, piety, and uprightness could not be questioned, and the opinion seems to be, that Mormonism could not be a bad tree if it produced such fruit. But so unreasonable blind, and unjustly prejudiced are many of the Methodists around Stewartville, Mo., including their pastor, that while the character of the Saints there as a general thing, nearly without exception, is as worthy of praise for virtue, truthfulness, and honorable course of life, yet rather than admit that Mormonism proper, can produce such fruit, it is believed that the angelic garb is only assumed, and that the very devil is hidden thereby, and for the present only.

After spending a few days with the Saints at New Trenton, and ordaining Bro. Joseph Chapelow to the office of a Teacher, I left for Union Branch, Jefferson county. I found the Saints somewhat anxious for my arrival, as an Adventist preacher had been holding a number of meetings, and had been preaching the "hobbies" of that people. He gave way for me to speak Tuesday night. I was expected to reply to his preaching, or to his position, but I thought it folly to answer a matter that I had not heard, so spoke on a subject that would set him to thinking, viz., Church Organization; and being questioned as to his judgment of the subject, said, that he would not think of opposing my position. If he accepts the ground presented, it will lead him out of Adventism, surely. I spoke on Friday night, and the next day started for New Albany and the Mt. Eden Branch. Reached New Albany at noon, and expected to meet some one from Mt. Eden, twelve miles in the country, but night came and no one appeared. A snow storm began that night, and continued till noon the next day. Not willing to spend the Sunday in idleness, Bro. Kelley and I went to the Centenary M. E. Church, and heard a good sermon on being like-minded with Christ. In the afternoon, or evening as it is called here, Bro. David Scott, Bro. Kelley and myself, went to the colored Baptist Church, expecting to hear preaching there. There was to be none; but some colored temperance speakers from Louisville, Ky., were expected. However, they did not arrive. Bro. Scott introduced me to the pastor, Elder Bass, and I was invited to speak on temperance. I promised to do so after he would speak awhile. I was called upon to open the meeting with prayer, which I did; and after listening to some well-timed remarks on the subject by the pastor, who is a good speaker, and an educated man, I spoke a while on the theme, and I guess they think that I believed in temperance, and total abstinence, and in regard to tobacco using, and novel reading as well. The pastor asked if I would preach for them that night; I consented, and at night spoke to a good congregation of colored folks, on the subject of the Atonement. I asked the minister to add some remarks if he desired to. He answered, before the people thus, "I would not feel justified in adding anything, lest your minds might possibly be drawn from the subject you heard; for what has been spoken is the solid truth, the gospel in purity," and more of that sort. Many came to me after dismissal, and said they were much edified, for they "heard the truth." I did not preach Baptist views altogether, I assure you. I looked earnestly next morning for some one to come after me, but no one came, and having been earnestly invited to return to Union Branch, if I did not go to Crawford county that week, and as the failure to meet me disarranged my programme completely, I returned by steamboat that afternoon to Madison. I went to a hotel, and staid all night, having reached Madison at 9 p. m. Early next morning I started for Sr. Haskell's, about four miles up the river, and reached there nearly exhausted, after plodding through about four inches of snow. I found Mr. Haskell just ready to start to town, and going from there to the Union Branch. We traveled about thirteen miles facing a cold, bitter wind, to Bro. Rector's. I gave out an appointment for that night, and preached at that time and till Friday night inclusive.

On Saturday, Bro. Ford, Baggerly, Fewell, Kelley, and myself, started for Hall's Ridge, some twelve miles, and we had to face a bitter cold wind, and driving snow for over eight miles. Bro. Ford and I went to the schoolhouse, about three fourths of a mile, plunging through snow-drifts, to find only Bro. Lee and a young man there. When we fortunately found a number of brethren comfortably seated around the fire. I did not preach there nor at the schoolhouse. The weather moderated that night, and then till next night we had rain, which carried off the snow, after first forming sleet so thick that it was not safe for man or beast to travel. The snow melted, and the creeks were soon filled to overflowing; and bridges, fences, corn-shocks, and even animals were carried away. Some of the streams were several feet higher than ever known before. I spoke to a few who came out to Bro. Lee's house on Sunday night in the rain. On Monday I left for Madison, and took the boat at noon for Louisville. I went on to New Albany the same night, and lodged with Bro. Kelley, and Bro. David Scott, who occupy a large house at the corner of Elm and Seventh streets. Next day—(Christmas), I left for Providence on the I. N. A. & C. R. R., where I expected to meet Bro. James Scott, or his son Bro. Monroe Scott; but I found that owing to the miserable state of the roads, they had not been to the post office for several days, and I found my letter in the post office. I then started to walk out to Bro. John Scott's, four miles away. After climbing the ridge, or a steep hill, about a half mile, and tramping through mud about all the way, I reached Bro. Scott's, to find all the family gone away except Bro. John, who was preparing to go out also. We started to walk over to Bro. James Scott's, and after going about a half mile, were overtaken by a team, and gladly accepted an invitation to ride to within a hundred yards of the house. I do not think I could have stood the tramp, if we had been compelled to walk. I found that no appointments were given out for meetings, till Thursday night. On Thursday Bro. Harbert Scott sent his son Winfield, who took me over to their house. I spoke in the Mt. Eden Church, from Thursday till Monday night inclusive. Had good liberty as the rule. Congregations sometimes quite large. The roads were very muddy as it frequently rained. On Monday, Dec. 31st, the branch met, and Bro. Leonard Scott was ordained to the office of a Priest. Bro. Moses R. Scott, who was acting as presiding Elder, resigned, as he became satisfied that he could not fill his mission as an appointee of General Conference, and preside over a branch. Bro. Monroe Scott was chosen to act as Teacher, and is the only branch officer now there; and of course presides. On Tuesday, January 1st., Bro. Harbert took me to New Albany in a drizzling rain, and on next day I left on the "Air Line" for Tunnel Hill, Johnson Co., Ill. I found upon examination of my funds, that I had just twenty-five cents left. But the brethren here have kindly aided me with several dollars. I have been preaching here since Thursday night last, and have appointments for to-night (Tuesday), and to-morrow morning. It has snowed several days, and to-day the snow is over six inches on the level, and this is only forty miles from Cairo. On Saturday the thermometer indicated twenty degrees below zero. It is very difficult to keep warm, for the houses are so open, and the wind sweeping under them, that while a large fire blazes and roars in the fire-place, and one side is nearly roasting, the other is insufferably cold. But then such cold weather does not come often or it would be guarded against better. The people are kind hearted, hospitable, and cheerful. Do all that is in their power to make the traveling ministry comfortable. I expect to leave for Springerton on Thursday, and for Dry Fork Branch on Saturday.

Your brother in the faith,
T. W. SMITH.

BLENHEIM, Kent Co., Ont.,
January 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I came to this place the last of December, 1883. It has been very stormy for the last week. Met with the Saints on Sunday last. Spoke twice. Sacrament meeting in the afternoon. The members here are numerically small, but they are strong in the faith. Brn. Richard Coburn and Samuel Bacon are their presiding officers. On November 16th, met with the Saints in the Usborne Branch. They have a neat church, driving shed and graveyard fenced and completed, which is a credit to the Saints of that place. Bro. R. C. Evans, of London, has volunteered to preach the first Sunday in every month, and they have accepted his offer. I am sure it will result in good. In Ellice there are some faithful Saints, (Bro. Smith and family). The most of the people in that neighborhood are Germans. If a German Elder could go into that part, he would likely do some good. In Alliston the Saints have erected a handsome church. They have meetings occasionally. Quite a number of them have removed from that place, and it leaves but few to meet. I believe, that if an Elder, who would set a good example before Saint and sinner, was placed there, it would result in good. There are many calls for preaching, and a great deal of labor is required in the branches. I have good liberty in talking on the law of tithing. The Saints are coming to an understanding of the temporal law, and I believe ere long this mission will be able to maintain five or six Elders. As a whole, the work is onward in Canada, under the supervision of Bro. John H. Lake. May God crown his efforts with success.

Yours in bonds,
SAMUEL BROWN.

ALTON, Illinois,
January 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I have been laboring of late in the St. Louis District, having visited St. Louis, Belleville, Alma, Caseyville, Gravois and Cheltenham. Have been blessed in spirit, and am glad that I can report a much better spiritual outlook than when I last visited St. Louis. There seems a general awakening among those who for some time have been inactive. Last Sunday afternoon we had a splendid time, a real spiritual feast. It seemed like old times. I can not see any good reason why a glorious work can not be done in St. Louis. Loving union, and a little more activity on the part of the present material in the district, and especially the St. Louis Branch, and the work will be done.

There is in St. Louis some fine young brethren, spiritual minded men, with good intellect, and a desire to do all they can for the work; and I am satisfied, that sooner or later, some of them will be called to the ministry. There is a great drawback to the work there, in that the place where they worship is not a suitable one. The room itself is well enough when you get to it; but it is up three flights of stairs, and in a bad location. Strangers and pious-minded people are not easily persuaded to climb three flights of stairs in search of righteousness. There is now an effort being made to raise the necessary means to build a chapel in the city. I pray God it may succeed. I think there is a splendid chance just now for some of the forehanded of our folks to make a real solid investment, and lay up treasure in heaven, i. e., appropriate about twenty-five hundred or three thousand dollars to the building of said chapel. Who wants to invest? Don't be afraid.

I visited Father Whitehead to-day, and found the aged patriarch as firm in the faith as the rocky hills upon which his earthly home is builded. Though infirm, and crippled in body, his mind is clear, bright, and healthy, filled with the glorious assurance, which only the Spirit of God, the ruling genius of our noble work in Christ can give. The good old man related a circumstance which happened in father's office, in Nauvoo. Reynolds Cahoun, Alpheus Cutler, Bro. Whitehead, Father and several others being present. R. Cahoun asked the question of father, How long will it be before the Saints will return to Missouri to build up the Temple? The answer was, "In about sixty years from the organization of the Church." Six years of that time remains yet to pass. What will be the result?

There are but few Saints in Alton, and the few remaining are so scattered that they can not get together very well for meetings. Removals by death and otherwise have sadly thinned the ranks of the devoted band that once formed the Alton Branch. The few that remain are good, kindhearted Saints, who welcome with joy the Elders who occasionally call in their wanderings. The work at Alton is virtually at a stand. Catholicism, Protestantism, worldly-mindedness, self-righteousness, and a "right smart sprinkling of devilism" alias Spiritualism, rule the day, (and night too for that matter).

I return to St. Louis tomorrow to attend the district conference. I flatter myself that my meetings at St. Louis are becoming more and more interesting, and believe if they could be followed up by some one who would take pains, and try to present the many subjects growing out of our faith, by course, the interest might be revived, and a noble work done there yet.

I am not in the habit of making any great blow of what I am doing, or of what I have done, but I move on and do what I can, and sometimes try to do what I can not, knowing full well I will get a reward for what I do, not for what I do not do, nor for what I expect to do. You know large bodies move slowly, but they get in their work all the same. The above may seem a little ambiguous, perhaps a little out of place; and yet there are those who will understand it, if it comes to be seen of them. An open and avowed enemy is an honorable foe; but the man who would stab you in the back, or go to work to injure your character, or destroy your influence for good, behind your back, is a snake in the grass, most contemptible. Such a one is a false brother or sister, who wilfully slanders and back-bites an innocent person. From such I pray to be delivered. I find the slime of such in some of my travels, and I warn such to beware, their sin will find them out.

The general outlook for the success of the work is good, and the ultimatum seems near at hand. Courage, brethren, the crisis is not fully past, the danger is not over, the struggle will be hard, but by God's Holy Spirit the victory shall be won. Much has been done, much remains to be done, and must be done, before the watchmen can say, "It is well, all is peace in Zion."

With love unfeigned, and constant prayer for all Zion's children, I remain your co-laborer, ALEX. H. SMITH.

WHEELER'S GROVE, Iowa,
January 6th, 1884.

Dear Herald.—We have been blessed with some good preaching this winter, for which we are grateful to God. I often read of those who are not permitted to hear the gospel, only through your pages. Then I thank God that he has permitted his Saints to have so good and faithful an advocate as the dear Herald. Most of our branch are striving to keep the law of God, although we at many times come far short of keeping it as we should, in consequence of which we do not enjoy as many blessings as we would if we were more faithful, (I speak for myself). We have many trials in this life to undergo, but I know that if we are faithful to the end, we will receive a crown of everlasting life. I ask the prayers of the Saints, that this branch of the Church may "shake off the coals from their garments, and arise in the strength of the Lord;" for I feel that the time is short in which we have to work.

May God help his Saints to live faithful, is the prayer of your sister, AMANDA WOOD.

CHEYENNE, W. T.,
January 4th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph.—One year ago last April conference, I left Cheyenne on the 5th, and got to Independence, Mo., on the 7th. I had a very happy time with my brethren, and when Brother Blakeslee was called to be our Bishop, I was blessed with the Spirit of the Lord, testifying that he was called of God.

When I joined the church in the year 1853, I prayed much to the Lord, that he would make known to me if this was his true church. I went and heard Bro. C. W. Penrose, who now is the Editor of the Deseret News in Utah, preach in the Watford Branch, England. I was baptized the same night. I walked into the water, and I looked up to the heavens, and they looked so glorious to me; and the heavenly feelings that rested on me were such that I never can forget that this was the true church of Jesus Christ; and when I came out of the water, I knew I had done the will of my Heavenly Father.

When I was in Independence I went and saw the Temple Block, and this made my heart rejoice. Sunday forenoon I had the pleasure of seeing Bro. Mark H. Forscutt, and of hearing his voice. His text was, "The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord." I wish Bro. Mark would light up another candle or two in the Herald, as it is no trouble for him to preach and write. To see Bro. Henry Kemp's name in the Herald makes my heart glad. It makes me think of the time Brother Henry and myself, thirty years next August, went to Aldenham, England, to preach. He was our presiding elder at that time, and I was a Teacher in the Watford Branch. I wish all of my brothers and sisters had been there to hear the sound of his voice.

On the 13th of April, 1882, I left conference and took train that night for my home in Cheyenne. While on the train on the night of the 14th, about one hundred and fifty miles from Denver, I preached at the rate of thirty miles an hour, as I sat in the sleeper. I prayed to the Lord that I might in some way preach to the people in the sleeper. All of them were at the end of the sleeper, having a good time, singing and speaking. I was alone in the other end of the car. All at once they all came up to me and said, "Sir, we have come to ask you to give us a speech of some kind; we feel we would like to hear from you." I said, "With pleasure, gentlemen." I was pleased to take the floor, and I preached one hour or more, and they gave me a vote of thanks. One of them came to me and said, "Come into the first class car and preach, as some wish to hear you." I said, "With pleasure," and stood in the center of the car and preached to them about one hour. As soon as I got through, another man asked me if I would come to the second class car. I said with "With pleasure." So I spoke about the same time there, and the train running. I felt so happy that I could preach to the people, if it would bring souls to Jesus.

About one year ago, in Cheyenne, there was a snow blockade, and a passenger train with nine cars had to lay over all day on Sunday. I thought there was a chance for me. Many of the strangers came over to my lunch room. I told them I wanted to come and preach in their cars. They all seemed willing, so I went and spoke in four before dinner, and at night I spoke to the rest. One of the men in the car was a Methodist minister; he wanted me to preach in his car first. I spoke of a holy angel coming to Joseph Smith. As soon as I spoke of Joseph being a prophet of God, he rose up and said he wished me not to speak of Joseph Smith. He had lived near Joseph Smith when he was a boy. His name should not be spoken of in the car, and all that wished me to still keep on preaching, raise the right hand. I did not get one vote, and I was ordered out of the car. How true were the words of the angel, that Joseph's name should be for good or evil in all the world. May my Heavenly Father bless all his people.

Your brother in bonds,

JOHN EAMES.

INLAND, Iowa,

January 6th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—There are only three of us here who are Saints. There used to be a small branch here, but they are scattered far and wide. Our opportunities for attending meetings are very few. There has been no preaching here for several years, although there have been Elders assigned to the Eastern Iowa District for labor. They seem to forget us entirely. I wonder if they don't consider we're glad to see some of the same faith now and then. I attended the conference of Buffalo Prairie, and I truly heard preaching such as I had not heard for years; not like the written sermons I hear read here occasionally. The latter is not that for which we hunger. It seems very hard to live aright, when we can have no association with Saints, and no church privileges; but with God's help we strive on, trying to keep in the narrow way. I ask a deep interest in the prayers of the Saints for us. Hoping we may all meet in the "beautiful beyond," I am your sister in the gospel,

FLORA.

HOLLISTER, California,
January, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The good work is not progressing very rapidly at present here. There are many good Saints here that are trying to serve God, and be prepared to stand before the great judgment bar with a clear record. I have not done very much myself, but I am still strong in the faith. Praying for the success of Zion,

I am as ever your brother in the one faith,
L. E. HUTCHINGS.

EDENVILLE, Iowa,
January 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The church here continues to prosper. I had the pleasure of baptizing six souls on the 30th of December. Though it was quite cold, yet we felt blessed and warmed by the Spirit while at the water. At the confirmation, the Spirit was present in power. The saints of this branch have organized a Saints' Scripture School. Meet each Sunday forenoon. The Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, are used as the books to teach from. I think it a grand step for the young; will make them able to represent the gospel understandingly. I'm feeling strong in the work. Does my soul good to see the work march along.

Yours in Christ,
D. C. WHITE.

THREE RIVERS, Jackson Co., Miss.,
December 30th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Please let me give a reason for the doubts that are in me, and if any of the Saints can overthrow my arguments by common sense, reason and scripture, it will strengthen some one's faith, if it does not convince me. In the first place I ask myself, if I would know what God has said to Isaiah, Jeremiah, Daniel, Paul, Peter or John, without the Bible. If I would not, then who revealed it to me, God or man. 2. I ask the church if it would know what God has said to any of the prophets, either on the eastern or western continent, without the Bible or Book of Mormon? If not, will the Reorganized Church answer for the church of the new covenant?

I understand that the law is to be written in the heart and mind under the new covenant; and this I think agrees with the teaching of Christ when he said, that when the Holy Ghost was come it would lead them into all truth, and bring all (not part) things, (independent of letters, for his apostles, some of them at least, were illiterate men) to their remembrance, and show them things to come. The church claims this same Spirit, and also admits, indirectly, that it would not know what God had said without the Bible and Book of Mormon. If God had written his mind and will, and given it to his apostles for a standard to try false prophets and spirits by, instead of the Holy Ghost, the church would correspond with his church eighteen hundred years ago. These are some of the reasons for the doubts that are in me.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 10th.—There is no truth in the report that threatening letters have been addressed to the Pope or to Mgr. Boccali, the Papal private secretary.

The agitation in Ireland based upon Lord Rossamore's recent Orange protest is briskly maintained. Three-fourths of the Magistrates have already publicly placed themselves on record in opposition to the platform which Lord Rossmore has laid down as the only one on which loyal Irishmen can stand. In the County Cork alone 148 Magistrates have declared that loyalty and Orangeism are incompatible, and that they will not be coerced into inaction or submission by the braggadocio of the anti-Catholic partisans. The Orange societies are making arrangements for a series of meetings to be held in England and Scotland.

The steamer conveying the last re-enforcements for Suakin has been wrecked on the Red Sea near that town. The troops and crew were saved, but the ammunition and mules were lost. The Government is considering the best means for evacuating the Soudan. Troubles have broken out in the Provinces of Beni, Suf, and Fayoum. The Bedouins are harassing the population. The Governors have asked for re-enforcements.

A great religious Sheik who has arrived at Suakin from Cairo has issued a proclamation exhorting the tribes in revolt to submit to the Khedive. Reports from Sinkat dated the 2d say that place cannot hold out beyond the 10th. The sufferings of the garrison are already severe. The commander states that if not aided by the 10th he will try to fight his way to the coast.

It is stated that the French Cabinet is divided upon the Egyptian question. Ferry thinks the present a good time for France to regain her position in Egypt while some of his colleagues deprecate any action in the matter.

The Viceroy of Canton, China, has notified the Consuls of his intention to blockade the northern approach to the city, and also to lay torpedoes at the other approach, known as the Macao Reach, which is obstructed by a bridge at the south end of Dane Island. Steamboat Captains are notified by the owners to avoid the northern approach. The official report of the losses of the French at the capture of Sontag says: Four officers were killed, eleven seriously and eleven slightly wounded; 77 men were killed and 231 wounded. The Chinese in Hainan solicit imperial protection against the French. It is reported that 2,000 men are proceeding to Hainan.

It is rumored that the Nihilists recently attempted to murder the Chief of Police of St. Petersburg.

At Christiana, in the impeachment trial of the Ministers of State of Norway, the counsel for the defense opened the pleadings on the second count of the indictment, which charges the Ministers with refusing to sanction the bill for arming the people.

It now appears that the great German navy, on which a hundred million dollars have been expended, is worthless. This is not the assertion of enemies, but the declaration of a leading German paper. There is no navy, but a lot of old iron, which is a poor representative of the French millions that have been wasted in naval experiments.

Jan. 11th.—The work of blockading the Canton River is progressing. A review of the gun-firing was held at the Bogue forts. Chinese troops are embarking for Hainan. Another ironclad for the Chinese navy has been launched.

It is reported that owing to Fenian threats the garrison at Windsor Castle, London, Eng., has been ordered ready to turn out at a moment's notice.

The troubles in the Provinces of Beni Seuf and Fayoum, sixty-two miles south west of Cairo, Egypt, which were caused by raids of the Bedouins, have been quelled. Nubar Pasha, the Prime Minister, has approved Clifford Lloyd's proposed reforms for the City of Alexandria, whereby the sanitary affairs will be remodeled in accordance with British ideas. The Ministry of War has drafted a statement regarding the proposed evacuation of the Soudan, showing that there are 21,000 men and eighty-four guns in the Soudan. The removal to Khartoum of ammunition stored at Kassala would require 4,000 camels, or 6,000 if the material on the Abyssinian frontier is also removed. It will be necessary to make the journey by river, which will take three months and require 1,300 boats. Several Bedouin tribes along the Nile between Khartoum and Berber have declared for El Mahdi. Orders have been sent to Khartoum for the civil population to quit the town immediately. Emissaries of El Mahdi have arrived at Assouan. They were fired upon by the Bedouins. The European inhabitants evacuated Berber the 8th inst. It is reported that the natives have destroyed the telegraph poles between Khartoum and Sennaar. Eighty-four thousand men have left El Obeid for Khartoum.

Perhaps the most curious statistical information drawn out by the closing of the year just past is that which the New York World offers under the head of "Stealings for 1883." The World classifies the year's peculations as follows:

Occupations.	No.	Amount.
Bankers	19	$ 3,581,000
Bank cashiers and clerks.....	12	1,070,000
Brokers.....	6	559,000
State Treasurers	3	363,000
Merchants and agents.....	28	2,360,000
Clerks, Treasurers, etc.	31	970,000
Charity and trust	9	1,031,000
City employes.....	20	1,786,000
County employes and revenue agents	16	709,000
Lawyers	4	451,000
Totals.....	148	$13,380,000

In Egypt they always have the sun in its splendor; but the oldest inhabitant cannot remember such magnificent sunsets and afterglows, as are visible now every evening. In Naples, Italy, the same experience is had.

Jan. 12th.—According to the Paris Figaro, direct negotiations between France and China are to be resumed on the basis of an amnesty for the Black Flags and a new frontier for Tonquin.

The City of Khartoum is now considered lost to Egypt. Col. Coetlogon, commanding the forces there, again telegraphs to the Khedive for instant orders to retreat. The Mudir of Khartoum has returned from a tour of inspection of the country toward Sennaar, and reports that all the tribes of the provinces around Khartoum have declared for El Mahdi. The Berber tribes are also raising El Mahdi's standard. The Mudir has advised the immediate withdrawal from Khartoum of all the Christian population, European or native, on the ground that El Mahdi's followers will massacre all unless they embrace Mohammedanism. Nubar Pasha, the Egyptian Prime Minister, yesterday telegraphed from Cairo an order that all the Christian population should leave Khartoum, but that the garrison should remain until further news should be received relative to the advance of the forces under El Mahdi. Col. Coetlogon's spies from El Obeid bring reports that the main body of El Mahdi's forces have been provisioned for a long march, and that it is advancing upon Khartoum in numbers variously estimated at from 70,000 to 90,000. Large crowds of the Coptic populace, including women and children, are preparing for the journey from Khartoum to Berber under a guard of troops. The Mohammedan rabble of Khartoum threaten to pillage houses and plunder the baggage carried by the fugitives. Arab mobs are attacking the copts throughout the provinces of Upper Egypt, and the copts have sent to Cairo for arms and protection. Everything throughout Upper Egypt denotes the immediate spread of the insurrection to Lower Egypt, and it is feared that when the retreat from Khartoum begins Col. Coetlogon will be cut off and a massacre will be the result. Baker Pasha has failed in his negotiations with the Abyssinian leader Ras Aloula for assistance in his efforts to relieve Sinkat and Toka, as Aloula made the surrender of the port of Massowah the initial step to an agreement. Aloula is reported to be beyond Kerenk with his forces, aiming at the seizure of the immense stores of Egyptian war material in Kassala. Capt. Richard Burton, the recognized authority in Mohammedan movements, advises the recall of Arabi Pasha, who is now in exile at Colombo, Ceylon, and the use of his services to suppress the Mahdi revolt. Capt. Burton writes: "The Soudan once thoroughly aroused, the light of the fire will inflame the whole Moslem world. Arabi Pasha has already proclaimed El Mahdi of the Soudan an impostor, urging that the Savior of Islam must come from the Arab tribes Koreish, to which Arabi Pasha belongs. Arabi Pasha would proclaim a religious war against the impostor, causing all the Bedouin tribes to forsake El Mahdi."

It is stated that the Egyptian Government has given orders to evacuate Khartoum, the guns to be spiked, and the powder destroyed. It is believed that all efforts will now be concentrated in the defense of Massowah and Suakin. When the Egyptians evacuate Khartoum and the adjacent cities, it is estimated that 11,000 Christians and Europeans will be victims of Moslem fanaticism unless they can be immediately transported to Upper Egypt. It is thought the Government will send a flotilla up the Nile to assist in their escape, the hopes of which are very slender.

A sudden change is noted in the relation of the Khedive and Sultan. The latter is manifesting a more friendly feeling toward the Khedive. Zebehr Pasha's troops will leave Suez today for Suakin to assist Baker Pasha in relieving the garrison of Toka and Sinkat. Baker Pasha's expedition, after accomplishing the relief of these posts, will return to Cairo.

The movements of Chinese military forces are incessant, and it is calculated that over 200,000 Chinese troops are now armed with Remington rifles. Strong earthworks and fortifications are being constructed upon the roads leading to Pekin. The German Government will send Capt. Paarchen to take command of the German naval squadron in China, with instructions to co-operate with Admiral McDowell, commander of the British squadron, in the protection of commercial interests. The Chinese fear that the French are entertaining designs upon Canton. The people are very uneasy. Reports from Haipong say that Admiral Courbet will advance upon Bachninh without awaiting re-enforcements. The Tageblatt publishes a decree of the Emperor of China urging energetic resistance to the aggressions of the French.

The Czar of Russia, and royal family have gone to Anitchkoff Palace.

The Chilian Chamber of Deputies has approved the treaty of peace with Peru.

There were severe shocks of earthquake yesterday in the Towns of Linguaglossa and Chastiglione, Sicily.

At Pesth the Upper Houses of the Diet rejected—200 to 191—the bill legalizing marriages between Jews and Christians.

The English Consul General is collecting evidence of the losses of the British subjects in Madagascar during the recent bombardment and other military operations of the French.

Four thousand people committed suicide in Paris last year.

Jan. 13th.—Pirates attacked Namdinh, Tonquin, on all sides the nights of the 1st and 2d inst. Many were killed and wounded, and many houses burned. The 4th, the post of Batang, near Hanoi, was attacked and the enemy compelled to retire in disorder, carrying away many killed and wounded. The insurgent's bands are being reorganized. Sontag advises state that nearly all the fugitives are returning, supplied with arms. It is reported that a Chinese army is descending from the Provinces of Quangsi for the purpose of occupying Bacninh. The authorities of Canton Province are vigorously preparing for war. They are building a telegraph line between Canton and Tonquin frontier. The Viceroy of Canton has issued a proclamation summoning the people to prepare to repel the French invaders, at the same time expressing friendship toward other nations. Admiral Meyer telegraphed Admiral Peyron yesterday that the state of public feeling at Hong Kong was very satisfactory. Pirates are being vigorously pursued, and are gradually forsaking the Delta.

Six thousand Chinese troops have been sent to Hainan. The greatest activity prevails in Canton. Barges have been sunk in Canton River to block the channel.

The Chinese troops sent to Hainan possessed good physique and were fairly armed, but indifferently drilled. The Chinese state that some extraordinary steps are imminent.

It is reported that rebels have burned and sacked Helonan, Egypt. They are now marching in great force against Rufas on the east bank of the Blue Nile, and Musalimia, on the west bank. There are small garrisons at those places. The Government has received advices from Suakin that an agreement has been effected with several hitherto hostile chiefs on the Suakin-Berber route to Khartoum by which it is hoped the evacuation of the Soudan will be facilitated. It is intended to dispatch Abd El Kader, Minister of War, to Khartoum to supervise the evacuation. El Mahdi demands £2,000 ransom for five nuns and four priests whom he holds in captivity. The Austrian Consul is asking merchants to subscribe the amount. It has been decided to retain Suakin in Egypt. The Rebels made a night attack on Tokar December 20th, but were repulsed. They looted the house of one of the principal merchants of the town, carrying off his wife and daughter. The garrison lost five killed and seven wounded. The Rebels entrenched 600 yards from town. The garrison is short of ammunition. Letters from Sinkat state that the town can not hold out beyond the 30th. The garrison is suffering severely from cold. It is stated that the Porte has definitely decided not to interfere in the Soudan. It is stated that tribes of Tripoli are moving toward El Mahdi.

Jan. 14.—A dispatch from Hai-Phong, Ton-Phong, Tonquin, dated Jan. 10th, says: The country is quiet. The hostile bands have dispersed. Admiral Courbet has ordered a fortnight's provisions forwarded to the French forces from Hai-phong for the movement against Bacninh. It is reported that the French advance force has already left Haidzuong for the purpose of joining the main body of French troops from Hanoi, or their crossing the Red River. An attack on Bacninh is expected to take place Thursday. It is reported that the members of the imperial family of China offered a portion of their fortunes to assist in war against France. A Hai-phong dispatch dated the 10th says: There are indications of a speedy advance on Bacninh. The French hold a strong strategic position for attack. The Chinese troops at Bacninh number 10,000. They are splendidly armed. The recently-poisoned King of Annam was succeeded by a nephew of King Tudoc, who died in July last. The new King is fifteen years old.

A Khartoum dispatch says the people on both sides of the Blue Nile have declared for El Mahdi. All communication with Sennaar is stopped. The steamers sent to convey troops and dispatches to Sennaar have returned after proceeding a short distance. Thirty thousand rebels hold Halifeh, on the line of telegraph along the White Nile.

It is reported that Sheik Senoussin is advancing to join El Mahdi. If true, Egypt is in the greatest danger, as the influence of Senoussin extends over the whole North African maritime province to Egypt.

Jan. 15th—Castelar, the great Spanish Republican, rose in the Chamber of Deputies and condemned his King for consenting to play so small a role in the recent visit to Germany. He denounced the royal visit as imprudent and inopportune, and accused Minister Sagasta of making Spain the tool of Germany. Castelar, in the course of his speech, was called to order for remark thought to be disrespectful to Kaiser Wilhelm.

A prominent Chinese merchant, a member of one of the Six Companies of the Pacific Coast, has just arrived in Oregon from China by steamer. He gives a very different version of the storming of Sontag from that published by the French. He acknowledges that about 3,000 Chinese were killed during the engagement, but claims that the French force was almost annihilated. The Chinese, he said, had filled the ground with torpedoes and by cunning military tactics lured the French army to enter the fatal limits. A fearful explosion followed, causing frightful havoc in the French forces. He says the French version of the affair is greatly exaggerated. He spoke in very complimentary terms of the courage and military powers of his country-men, and intimates strongly that the French will not have a walk over at Bacninh.

Since the captures of Sontag there have been fewer pirates near Hanoi and Hai-Phong. The Black Flags burned several villages on the left bank of the Black river. The French are making reconnaissances. The pirates threaten the Province of Namdiuh, but Col. Brionvil's columns are pressing them everywhere. Tricon is at Hue.

It has been decided to raise the Turkish contingents principally in Albania, which shall form the third brigade of the Egyptian army. The officers are English. Abdel Kader, Minister of War, estimates that the evacuation of the Soudan will occupy seven months and involve an expenditure of £1,000,000. The Economic Committee recently appointed by the Khedive recommends the discharge of 1,500 native officers. Advices from Cairo say a committee has been formed to protect commercial interests in the Soudan. The committee will address a petition to the Khedive and the Consuls-General of Egypt protesting against the abandonment of the Soudan by the Egyptian Government.

A Suakin dispatch says Abyssinia is tranquil. The insecurity on the border is due to the presence of robbers, with whom the Egyptian officers are in collusion. Baker Pasha has dismissed Muktar Pasha from the Governorship of Massonah and appointed in his place Mason, an American, who has had great experience in the Soudan. Baker Pasha declares that the situation is far more hopeful than he expected to find it.

It is stated at St. Petersburg, Russia, that the officials have obtained possession of a letter in cipher found in the lodgings of a Nihilist in London who had been closely communicating with the Irish malcontents. The letter, it is believed, advises a simultaneous attack upon the Emperor of Germany and the Czar of Russia.

The final report on the census of Bengal, taken in 1881, gives a remarkable picture of the only province in India where the British Government might possibly be elected by a plebiscite. The Lieutenant-Governorship is nearly as large as France, or 193,000 square miles; and contains double her population, or 69,500,000 souls. The average density of population is 371.41 to the square mile, and the rate of increase is within a fraction of 11 per 1,000 per annum. Of the total, 45,000,000 are Hindoos, 21,500,000 Mohammedans, 135,000 Christians, and a little above that number Buddhists, while most of the remainder profess various savage creeds. Polygamy, though allowed by law to all but Christians, is in practice extremely rare, the number of persons with more than one wife being only two per 1,000. Out of every 1,000 persons 955 are altogether illiterate, and only twenty-nine can both read and write, the average of illiteracy being of course swelled by the nearly complete ignorance of the women, of whom only sixteen in 10,000 can read and write. Natives who can not read are not necessarily as ignorant as Europeans in the same position; but the figures strongly support the arguments of those who think that the whole strength of the Education Department should for a generation at least be devoted to primary education.

Jan. 16.—It is rumored that Khartoum has been captured. The Governor of Bahr-el-Ghazal asks for reinforcements to quell the revolt in that district which is plainly fomented by emissaries of El Mahdi. A telegram to the Austrian Consul from Khartoum says all the higher Egyptian officials at El Obeid have been massacred.

A private letter from a gentleman residing in Canton, dated December 5, says China is determined to fight, and war can only be avoided by France backing clear down to the ground. France has made an awful muddle of the whole affair. Had she acted with force at first Tonquin would be hers and everything be quiet. The idea of occupying the country with only a thousand or two of troops was too absurd for serious contemplation, but that is just what France had attempted. France in her delay and want of resolution, had led China to believe that fear kept her back, and this idea had taken such hold of the Chinese mind that she would not be satisfied with anything short of a complete surrender of the position which France has assumed in Tonquin. Troops are pouring in from the north and being raised at Canton. The writer says a Chinaman told him the other day: "It's no use trying to get along peaceably with a country like France, which is the most troublesome nation that ever existed. China must rise up as one man and crush the pride of the French. Germany tried it, but although she succeeded in winning the day stopped short of the mark, so now it rests with China to complete the humiliation of proud and arrogant France." Such is the sentiment of all Chinese, from the highest to the lowest.

The Chinese expect that if Bacninh falls into the hands of the French the latter will either occupy Yulin-Kan, the southern city on the Island of Hainan, or bombard Canton. The French repudiate any such idea. It is stated that 1,500 additional reinforcements will start from France for Tonquin about the end of January.

The Brigand Chief Sissi was shot dead in Sardinia by carbiniers, while arresting him. He made a desperate resistance.

Troubles are reported to have broken out in the Khyber territory, Afghanistan, Asia. Abdullanur, the most powerful Khyber Kchief, was shot in a bloody feud Monday. Since 1879 he has been a steady friend of England.

Great alarm has been caused at Montevideo, South America, by immense tidal waves, one of which caused the death of a woman bather. They are attributed to volcanic movements. Each wave is preceded by a large dark cloud.

The Austrian Minister of Commerce has approved of the scheme for a regular monthly line of steamers between Trieste and New York. The steamers will begin running the 1st of February. The Southern Pacific Railway Company has also taken initial steps for a direct line of steamers from Trieste to New Orleans via Havana, and purposes making preparations for larger imports of American cotton, owing to the unsettled state of affairs in Egypt.

Schuyver, the explorer of Equatorial Africa is dead. Francis Hall, the well-known engraver, is dead.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

M. Waterman & Co., grain-dealers, of San Francisco, have failed for $1,000,000. Buddey & Co., of Utica, N. Y., dry goods, have assigned, with liabilities of $200,000.

The outlook for 1884 in the iron trade is not encouraging in London, England. Leading iron manufacturers anticipate that there will be a marked decrease in shipbuilding in consequence of the expected collapse of speculative builders. It is probable therefore that there will be less demand for pig-iron for home consumption, but the ironmasters hope for an increased export trade, which will effect an improvement in prices.

The Mexican National Bank to-day declared a dividend of six per cent, promising another of 8 per cent in March, making a total for the fiscal year of 14 per cent upon the paid-up capital. The Mercantile Bank has already declared a 3 per cent dividend, and promises another of 13, a total for the year of 16 per cent. The National Bank has contracted to receive the nickel coin, for which the Government issues certificates receivable for importation duties.

Jan. 11th.—Russia yesterday paid 50,000,000 rubles of her public debt.

The movement in Germany for the establishment of workmen's colonies is making rapid headway despite the adverse criticism of many of the leading journals. Colonies for emigration are being formed in the Black Forest, and the Odenwald committees, sitting at Karlsruhe, Frieberg, and Heidelberg, are directing the operations of the Colonial Verein. They came together recently at Frankfort and resolved to push the matter of sending more German workmen to Paraguay, where a colony had already been established.

The ironmasters of Cleveland, Yorkshire, Eng., owing to the depression of the pig-iron market, are making arrangements to extinguish the fires in twenty iron furnaces in the belief that they will thus accomplish an advance in prices.

Last week, according to Dun, the business failures in the United States and Canada numbered 333. The week before 348 houses went down. These figures are the largest which have been recorded since the time the late National Bankruptcy law went out of existence.

Secretary Folger called in $10,000,000 more of the 3 per cent Government bonds.

The Senate appropriated $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River.

Three heavy failures were announced in New York yesterday, two being the direct result of the fall in wheat. J. W. Fuller & Co., have liabilities of not over $100,000. They had been doing a speculative business, as had E. W. Coleman & Co., whose assignment created a decided sensation on 'Change. William P. & Ambrose Parsons, builders, have liabilities of $637,000 and actual assets of $110,000.

Jan. 13th.—Over 14,000 men are now employed in the construction of the Panama Canal. The work proceeds rapidly.

There was a meeting of 4,000 unemployed persons, including several women, in the Salie Levis Paris, France, today. Violent speeches were delivered favoring armed revolution as the only means of ending the stagnation in trade. The delegates present from workingmen's associations, however, adopted a more moderate tone expressing the belief that an appeal to the Chambers would mitigate the crisis. A proposal of workingmen to go to the Palais Bourbon en masse Monday was rejected, and the meeting separated quietly. The steamship companies having again declined to accept the conditions of the striking seamen and stokers, at Marseilles, France, the strikers have induced those who hitherto held aloof from the strike to join the movement.

The nailmakers at Parker Mills, South Wareham Works, Mass., and Tremont Works struck tonight against a reduction.

Advices received today from nearly all the sugar and orange-growing parishes of Louisiana say the late cold spell occasioned little serious damage. Some loss is reported in Pointe Coupee and East and West Baton Rouge Parishes, but it is not alarming: Advices from Mobile say the late cold snap has caused immense damage in that section. The loss to the orange groves is estimated at nearly a million dollars, and the value of vegetables killed in Mobile County alone will reach the same sum.

A Texas stock-dealer asserts that 2,000,000 head of cattle are fed on "free grass" in his State. The net profits of the owners of the stock are about 25 per cent, and the aggregate value is $40,000,000. The lands on which the cattle are fed are largely the property of the public schools of the State.

Jan. 14th.—The Russian Budget for 1884 estimates a deficit of 3,406,662 rubles, which the Government proposes to cover by new taxes.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: "The weather continues mild and trade goes from bad to worse. All else but sound samples of wheat are absolutely unsalable. Flour ruled dull at sixpence to one shilling lower. Barleys are steady. Wheat afloat is unimproved for cargoes off coast. There have been five arrivals. Two were sold, one withdrawn, and two remained, including a cargo of No. 2 American red winter wheat. Sales English wheat for the week, 44,144 quarters at 38 shillings 9 pence a quarter, against 32,389 quarters at 40 shillings the corresponding week last year."

Last week's clearings reach a little over the billion notch. The West felt the squeeze, while the New-Year's money flowing east considerably brightened the financial outlook in that region. With prices steadily shrinking, a billion dollars of clearings means a comfortable amount of business, comparatively speaking. Large dry-goods firms already feel the beneficent influences of the reasonable weather, and have much to be good-natured about.

Track laying on the north end of the Mexican Central has been completed to a point 644 miles south of Paso del Norte, leaving a gap of 126 miles to be laid. A large force is employed on the south end working northward. It is confidently expected the entire work of track laying will be completed by April 1. A matter of two weeks will suffice for the inspection of the road by the Mexican Government and the arranging of details. It is safe to say trains will be running through to the City of Mexico from El Paso, Texa, by April 15th.

Jan 15th.—Duncan A. Grant, a lace dealer of New York City, has failed for $630,000.

The cotton manufacturers of Manchester, England, have decided to continue the struggle with the strikers. Measures will be taken to restrict supplies of the operatives.

The last year was one of loss to those engaged in the whale fisheries, and the results are discouraging. Indications point to a steady decrease in the number of vessels sailing from Atlantic ports and perhaps a small increase in the number sailing from San Francisco.

It is estimated that there are now in the United States 15,000,000 milch cows; and that there are made annually 1,300,000,000 pounds of butter and 450,000,000 pounds of cheese. In 1880, as shown by the census, 772,204,000 pounds of butter were made on farms, and 29,451,000 pounds in factories, and a total of 243,145,000 pounds of cheese. Besides this, over 17,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine, [artificial butter made from animal fat with the addition of some milk and other substances] were also manufactured.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 10th.—Eight persons were killed or injured by fire in the barracks at Braga, Portugal.

Nine negroes on one plantation in North Carolina were frozen to death last Saturday.

The evening of January 8th the bark Elmina, from England, came ashore above the life-saving station at West Creek, Pa. Communication was made by a shot line and whip, but before the crew could be landed the vessel broke up and all hands were lost. The puny Idlewild, Capt. William White, was kept by the ice in the great Choptank River from Friday night until Monday morning, and long before the crew arrived in port their food and fuel became exhausted and they narrowly escaped freezing to death.

An explosion of fire-damp in the Ferfay Coal-Mine at Arras, France, killed seven men and injured twelve men. All the injured were rescued. It is feared that five others perished.

Jan. 14th.—A big drowning disaster is reported from the Chinese Sea. A vessel foundered, carrying down six European and 198 Chinese passengers.

The powder-magazine in the Cornwall ore-hills Lebanon, Pa., exploded this morning. A workman named Posey was blown to atoms. The explosion was felt a mile away.

It is to be presumed that the Gloucester fisheries will never fail for want of men enough to carry them on. And yet the figures that are furnished at intervals are well calculated to induce those who believe that life is worth living to look elsewhere for occupation. The Cape Ann Advertiser reports that during the eight years ending with 1883 the total loss of life in these fisheries was 998. During 1883 alone seventeen vessels and 209 lives were lost. The worst year in the sad history of the perilous business was 1873, when thirty-one vessels and 174 lives were sacrificed.

Jan. 15th.—The oil region has furnished many catastrophes peculiar to that part of the country, but none more horrible than the one of to-day. A stream of waste oil flowed across the track of a country railroad near Bradford, Pa. A crowded passenger-train passed by. It is believed the fire-box ignited the oil and that a boiler explosion followed. Flames immediately enveloped the train. A panic and crush ensued. People were forced back into the cars by the flames at the doors, and hurt themselves badly in making an exit through the windows. Three women were burned to death and fifteen persons seriously injured by wounds and burns.

The American dredge No. 2 has burned at Panama. Loss, $150,000; The fire is supposed to have been incendiary.

A broken rail threw a train down an embankment, near Millsap, Tex. The air was rent with shrieks and groans, and many were rendered unconscious. The Pullman and adjoining coach were wedged in each other. None in the Pullman were hurt but about thirty in the other coach sustained severe injuries, the injuries to one woman believed to be fatal. Two trains collided near Lisbon, N. M., injuring seven persons, one fatally.

In an attempt to lift a pot of hot soup from a stove last night in Pittsburg, Pa., Mrs. Patric Hannahan, who was intoxicated, upset the contents of the vessel over her two children, aged respectively two and four years, scalding them so badly that both will die.

At Danville, Ky., a roof was crushed in by weight of snow, and several persons injured, one of them fatally.

Jan. 16th.—5:30 a. m.—A furious fire is raging on the premises of S. W. Silver & Co., colonial merchants and publishers at Sun Court No. 67, Cornhill, London, England. The whole city is illuminated. The fire engines are arriving on the scene from all parts of the metropolis. 7 a. m.—The Silver & Co. fire has been subdued, but fifteen engines are still playing on the building. The fire broke out shortly after 5 o'clock. The roof fell half an hour later. Despite the early hour the fire was viewed by thousands. Vehicle traffic was diverted from the neighborhood. It is impossible yet to estimate the loss, which is necessarily heavy.

Eleven miners were killed by a fall in a Welsh shaft yesterday morning.

One more victim of yesterday's oil fire and railroad accident in Pennsylvania has died.

At Fall River, Mass., a woman while saturating her carpet with benzine, set fire to the house, which resulted in her death, and the serious and probably fatal injury of her husband.

CROP REPORTS.

Prof. J. R. Dodge, Statistician of the Agricultural Department, has just completed his preliminary estimates of the principal crops for 1883. Of the corn crop the Professor will say:

The average yield per acre for the present year is nearly twenty-three bushels—more exactly, by the preliminary estimates following, 22.7—which is 12 per cent less than an average yield for a series of years. This stands for quantity of the present crop; quality is another consideration.

The following estimates of the corn crop in the Northwestern States are given:

States.	Acres.	Yield per acre.	Total bushels.
Michigan.....	911,165	23.5	21,412,300
Indiana.....	3,541,482	27	95,620,000
Illinois.....	8,141,463	25	203,786,500
Wisconsin.....	1,122,826	21	23,579,300
Minnesota.....	727,155	20.8	15,124,800
Iowa.....	6,980,621	24.3	169,629,000
Kansas.....	4,708,473	36.7	172,800,900
Nebraska.....	2,813,303	36	101,278,900

Total yield for all the States and Territories, 1,551,066,835 bushels.

Our Illinois agents make the quality 31 per cent less than the average in that State. An effort will be made later, after the worst of the crop has been fed, to test the feeding value of the year's product. One feature of corn-growing in 1883 should prove a lesson to the farmers of the country; that is, the general use of seed corn in the West grown in lower latitudes. The planting of Nebraska seed in Minnesota, and of Kansas seed in Illinois, has demonstrated the folly of attempting to acclimatize the Southern maize in the more Northern districts. Much loss from frost would have been avoided had the seed corn been carefully selected from the best corn grown in the immediate neighborhood.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT.

Conference of above district will convene at San Bernardino, Cal., February 2d, 1884, at eleven a. m. Bro. W. W. Blair will be present. Come ye Saints from far and near in all this region. Bring the Spirit of God and receive a blessing. D. S. MILLS, Dist. Pres.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

Conference will convene in the Stone Church, Plano, Illinois, on Saturday, February 9th, 1884, at half-past ten a. m., when we hope to meet a full representation from the several branches. We also cordially invite Bishop Blakeslee to be present with us if convenient, also any of the Elders passing are requested to stay and help make a pleasant and profitable time.

AN APPEAL.

AN appeal to all, especially those who read, write, correct and translate, and are willing otherwise to assist in the publication of a periodical in the Danish language. In looking and traveling over the state of Nebraska, or parts thereof, we found some conversant with the Danish language—members of the Church; others not in the Church, but favorable; others upon whom favorable impressions might be made, could they have access to a periodical issued in the Danish Language, illustrative of the gospel, or latter day work. There are some members who can but partially read the English language, that have long wished for a semi-monthly or monthly periodical, that they might read the doings and progress of the work in their own tongue.

The object of this appeal is to learn how many would assist to start or publish a periodical in the Danish language. The size and frequency of its issues to depend upon the assistance rendered. We, by this appeal, make no arrangements or promises. The object being specially to learn what help can be secured. That such a move is needed, and ought to be made, is quite clear; but there are many things to be thought of, and obstacles to be met and overcome. It is not contemplated, that such a project shall be a source of individual profit. Nor will any person be called upon to give or pay over means, until plans for its consummation shall be matured, and the way seen, for the coming forth of the periodical. Let all those who desire to assist in such an enterprise, correspond with or write to Mr. Peter Anderson, and inform him how much they would give, if it shall be necessary to raise a little capital to start the project. And how many will subscribe at a dollar a year, if it shall be found necessary to charge that much. Let presidents of branches present this matter to all concerned; the Danish brethren and sisters to their friends, and get all the help possible, that it may be known by next general conference, April 6th, 1884, what help may be depended on, that conference may take some steps, or make arrangements to accomplish the object if possible.

Let all know that no ultimatum can be reached, without preparatory labors. Who knows but that the issuing of a semi-monthly or monthly Danish periodical, may lay a foundation for a great work. Can, or will any one deny the necessity of this work? But a mere acquiescence of its necessity is not enough; action, labor, money, and brains are needed, with a corresponding determination to bring them into requisition for the good of the cause.

Let all the readers of the Herald think of the struggles and continuance of Bro. Brix, and how little the church has done to aid and encourage him in his struggles. And then let them all ask themselves how they would feel, were they in his position. The press is a mighty lever. Books and tracts will go and preach loud sermons at all hours, where Elders can not possibly go. Years ago a woman saw a bit of waste paper in a wood box. Looking she saw the word Reorganization. No other word was legible. Her curiosity became excited, to know what Reorganization meant. By diligent inquiry, found what it meant. And through this little incident, she, and others became members of the church. And who can tell, if a Danish periodical is born, properly nourished and cared for, what grand results may be thus brought about. It would certainly be a means of great assistance to Bro. Brix. The Saints are sadly in arrears in these public enterprises. We talk, purpose, discuss and pass resolutions plenty, yes, too much, and too many for the amount of real, practical business or work done. The importance of the work, and our responsibilities, demand less theorizing and more, very much more practice. A German once said the church was doing nothing for his nation. Well, perhaps not. But if we can now by perseverance and proper cooperation, start a Danish periodical, it ought to be done. And who can tell, but that it may open the way for a German periodical; or shall we dash away the prospect of establishing a Danish periodical, which seems brighter to us than for a German periodical, to please a German brother who might become a little petulous, stand on his dignity, and say, If you don't start a German periodical I won't help a Danish arrangement. No. But move forward, to reach and accomplish that which appears for the present the most practical, improving and adding as the way may open, ever and always having in view the general welfare of the cause. Individualism may be considered; but at the expense, or to hinder the general welfare of the cause, never. And the exhibition of undue impetuosity or persistency, is a trait tending to disqualify, for labor, thought, consideration and decision, that a representative or a judge in Israel may be called upon to perform. The object of this appeal and suggestion to correspond with Bro. P. Anderson is not to prevent thought, consideration and labors others may be called upon to perform, in the event of a beginning of the contemplated work. For we presume the Board of Publication, Bishopric and others, will have to plan, suggest, &c., but merely to agitate and get the matter before the people, that they may think, and act if they will.

Bro. Anderson has an assortment of tracts on hand, illustrative of our faith, and on application they may be had on terms he will make known. The brother does not claim that these show evidence of perfection. So let none stand off and ridicule, if per chance errors in Grammar or otherwise, shall appear. If their grammatical construction shall be at fault, since grammarians are constantly criticising grammarians, it will not be much of a wonder. It is said of the Rev. Joseph Cook, that in a recent lecture he used ten words not found in Webster's dictionary. But we think in his Monday lectures on biology, delivered in Boston, and printed in book form, he uses more than ten words not found in Webster's dictionary. Let us do the best we can, looking for the grand time when the Lord shall give his people a pure language. Bro. Anderson will be glad of any suggestion, or help, that can be offered. Let all that can, move, and move at once. In the event of capital being needed, one brother has promised twenty-five dollars; others less sums. We again suggest, that all say what they will do, that the matter may be presented to the next General Conference. One advantage in communicating to Bro. Anderson, is the fact that some can only express themselves in their own tongue.

Address Mr. P. Anderson, No. 1616 Ninth street, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

JAMES CAFFALL,
PETER ANDERSON.

Bro. Anderson has preached considerably in Council Bluffs and vicinity, and will visit and labor in Nebraska, and will have the ready co-operation and good will of Bro. W. Rumel, the present president of the Northern Nebraska District. As there are Danish brethren and sisters that will like to hear the word, sing and pray occasionally in their own tongue; and we think there are friends outside of the fold whose hearts may be reached. And we hope the Danish brethren and sisters will extend their hearty co-operation to Bro. Anderson. We think him worthy of their esteem, confidence and assistance; nor need any be behind; but we look especially to the Danish Saints for needed help in this work. There has long been a need for this work in Nebraska. Let us all help in the much needed labor, and defer the discussion of vexed and nonsensical questions, until a more convenient season. Let the simplicity of the grand old gospel be heard, and its fruits be made visible in our lives. This is the course that will win. Skepticism may have caused some to halt, but the gospel is true to-day, just as true as it was twenty or thirty years ago, which induced you to leave the land of your fathers, to face the troubles and inconvenience of coming to a strange land, or among a strange people, whose language you knew not, and whose customs and manners were new to you; and perhaps to be deceived by false, instead of being encouraged by true brethren. But all this does not lessen your obligations to God; nor will skepticism, materialism, or spiritualism be effective in making up for the disappointments you may have met, through the blighting of anticipation in meeting gospel effects, etc. The gospel carries its own proof, power, light, consolation and joys; but only distributes when and where its precepts are honored and obeyed. We anticipate noble works and god record by the Danish brethren and sisters in Nebraska. Shall we be disappointed? We have had no opportunity of conferring with Bro. Anthony or the brethren of the Southern Nebraska District, but have reason to believe that they will look in favor, and to the utmost of their ability co-operate in such a move. It will not be amiss if any of the Saints know in or out of Nebraska (for though our suggestions touching ministerial labor are confined to Nebraska, as it and Colorado are the only places we hold spiritual jurisdiction over, as per action of General Conference, our invitation for help extends wherever the Herald goes), of any brother or sister adapted to write, read, correct and translate the Danish language, to suggest the same to Bro. Anderson, or if they wish to do so, Bro. Joseph Smith, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, whom we believe is business manager of the Board of Publication.

JAMES CAFFALL.

MEDITATIONS.

I WAS just thinking about a sermon I read of, that was preached at a certain place for the profit of some who were considered somewhat careless in their way of living. When the preacher came to the point in his sermon where he exclaimed, "Where's the drunkard!" and paused a moment, the deacon, who was in the habit of imbibing too freely forbidden drink, rose and said, "Here I am." After a bit the minister came to another point, when he shouted in thunder tone, "Where's the hypocrite! Then followed a death-like stillness. The deacon turned around and looked at the old squire who sat behind him, and who was known to be a notorious hypocrite; but as there was no response the same was repeated, "Where's the hypocrite!" Another silence ensued, when the deacon sung out, "Get up squire, I got up when my turn came." This puts me in mind of the scripture that says, "An open confession is good for the soul." So I thought that whatever our failing may be that is known to others, it is better to confess the same. I noticed in Herald for January 5th, in an article on kindness, that he confesses to having prejudice, and I thought it would be no harder to confess hypocrisy than to confess prejudice. We are told of a means of knowing who it is that repents—"they who confess," etc. It is a mark of humility, an evidence of meekness. The Master has said, "to none is the wrath of God kindled but to them who acknowledge him not, and who keep not his commandments." The world to-day have a great privilege granted to them, and it is a pity that all can not see it. By believing sound doctrine, such as Christ and his apostles taught, by repentance, ceasing from sin, being baptized by those authorized to administer, and by reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, and by then being willing to live for the same, to enable them to live peaceably, patiently and mildly; so that when the Lord comes to make the crooked straight, and to usher in the great millennial era, when Satan is to be bound for a thousand years, the curse removed from the earth, the continents and islands united together, the mountains made low and the valleys filled up; when God is to pour out of his Spirit on all flesh, no enmity of man or beast there, when

"No strife shall rage,
Nor hostile feuds disturb those peaceful years;
To plowshares men shall beat their swords,
To pruning hooks their spears."

When the meek are to inherit the earth, build houses, plant vineyards, eat, drink, be merry and wise, nothing to hurt, destroy, nor make afraid. No pestilence by day, nor destructive storm by night. No sighing, sorrow, anxiety, grief, sickness, losses, pain nor death; and all who are inclined and desirous to be good, and to serve God and keep his law, can have the chance to do so without any hindering weight or besetting sin. We are free agents to choose, or refuse, to be there then.

INFERIOR.

WAS JOSEPH SMITH A PROPHET OF GOD?

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

As being consistent with, and as legitimately growing out of the foregoing system of principles, in their operations in the minds and hearts of the children of men, Mr. Smith was led to teach the recovery of the church from the wilderness, and its reinstatement upon its original, New Testament basis. Hence, among his earliest instructions by the angel, it is said:

"Then will the Lord give the Holy Priesthood to some, and they will begin to proclaim this gospel, and baptize by water, and after that they shall have power to give the Holy Ghost by the laying on of their hands. Then will persecution rage more and more, for the iniquities of men shall be revealed, and those who are not built upon the Rock will seek to overthrow the church; but it will increase the more opposed, and spread farther and farther." "In this, the beginning of the rising up, and the coming forth of my church out of the wilderness; clear as the sun, and fair as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners." (Remarkable visions, p. 15; Doc. & Cov., sec. 4:3).

Organically, the church was to consist of apostles, prophets, evangelists, bishops, pastors, teachers and helps, governments, deacons, etc. All the members to exhibit the fruits of the Spirit, and according to their faithfulness and righteousness to be blest with the gifts promised to the faithful. (1 Cor. 12; Eph. 4; Gal. 5:22, 23, 24; 2 Pet. 1:5, 10).

Of the numerous prophecies that relate to this great work of the last days, we can quote but a very few in this connection; descriptive also, of the character of the work. David foresaw this work, and prophesied as follows:

Thou shalt arise, and have mercy on Zion; for the time to favor her, yea, the set time, is come, for thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof. So the heathen shall fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory."

And all this just prior to the time "when the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms to serve the Lord." (Psalms 10:11, 16, 22). Zion, the church of the apostolic age, was built up just after the Lord appeared in his humility. (Matt. 16:15, 16). Isaiah represents that the building up of Zion will take place about the time of the restoration of Israel to their own land, preparatory to the coming of Christ to rule, reign, and reward his saints.

"O, Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O, Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God! Behold, the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him. Behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him." (Isa. 40:9, 10).

Christ's coming to reign and reward all men, is yet future. (Matt. 16:27; 25:31; and Rev. 22:12). It was evidently to the incipient stages of this latter day work that Isaiah referred, when he prophetically exclaimed:

"Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. For behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people; but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising, * * * and they shall call thee, The City of the Lord, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel." (60:1, 2, 3, 14).

The work begins, while yet the nations of the earth are in gross "darkness;" but the curtains of futurity are rolled back, and the progress of the work is opened to the vision of Isaiah, is unfolded till he finally sees Zion become "an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations." "Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders." "Thy people shall be all righteous." Such a glorious period has never been in the past. It must be in the future. The Apostle Paul, while treating on the subject of the "fall; and rising again of many in Israel," near the fulness of the times of the Gentiles, connects the salvation of Israel, with the building up of Zion, as follows:

"For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins." (Rom. 11:25-27).

Any class of men who shall attempt to convert Israel before the time expires, indicated by the word "until" in the above text, will try to shorten the period specified, and prove Paul's prophecy false! Will prove they are not the Zion referred to herein. The "covenant,—my covenant" is the one offered to the Jews by Christ, and which they then rejected, which will necessitate its reinstatement, or renewal, as it existed then, with all of its facts, doctrines, ordinances and confirmatory blessings. And this is just as impossible to-day, without revelation from God, as it was to the nations eighteen hundred years ago. Peter seems to have had this very subject in his mind when he said to the Jews:

"Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord. And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive, until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets, since the world began." (Acts 3: 19-21).

Christ comes, then, during the times of restitution or restoration. Paul says:

"Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself. That in the dispensation of the fulness of times, he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in him." Eph. 1: 9, 10.

This great work of restoration, "dispensation of the fulness of times," relates to the earth, as well as to the heaven. Can this work be done on earth by the Lord, and nobody on the earth be aware of it? It concerns us—our salvation in Christ. Now, inasmuch as the Lord's work in any age of the world on earth, relates to man's salvation; and as "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation," we can not conceive how this work of the last days, could be introduced among mankind other than by authorizing a "dispensation" of the gospel, the very means ordained of God to enlighten man with respect to his purposes; the very means by which man is gathered into Christ, "gathered in one even in him." The Savior, when giving instruction to his disciples, in reference to the destruction of Jerusalem, and a general history of some of the more important events of the world, to transpire down the centuries subsequent to his day; also foretelling the signs that should precede his coming in glory, and more particularly in answer to the interrogation: "And what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world," predicts the character and nature of the most important sign to man of all, in these words:

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matt. 24: 14).

While John the Revelator represents a restoration of "the everlasting gospel, to be preached to every kindred, tribe, tongue, and nation, during the transpiring of other events just preceding "the harvest of the earth," Jesus predicts that "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached for a witness to all nations," just prior to the end of the world. The time, and the language used by both, show that both refer to the very same time and work.

The doctrines taught by Mr. Smith, and the character of the work he claims to have been authorized through the angel to lay the foundation of, corresponds completely to the doctrines of the Savior, as taught by him, as "this gospel of the kingdom;" and to the beginning of the fulfillment of the array of prophecy, as laid before you in this article. Strange, indeed, if he was an impostor, that he should, at the age of from fifteen to seventeen years, conceive of a scheme to memorialize himself, and impose on his fellow men, that so agrees with the latter day work of the Lord, as described by the prophets of the Lord!

The record of his vision, and of the communications of the angels to him, show that the apostasy to which we have referred, with its consequent darkness, confusion, the breaking of the everlasting, or gospel covenant; the rise of Mystery Babylon, the illegitimacy of the daughters, together with the restoration of the gospel, the renewal of the everlasting covenant, the consequent building up of the church, the preparing of a people for the coming of Christ in glory, the restoration of the children of Israel to the covenant land of their fathers, that this is the age of the world in which these things are to be done, were contemplated in the communication of God to him, as brought by the angel. It is easier to believe that he was commissioned by the angel of God, and was by him taught these great things, than to believe that he made them.

Mr. Smith was the first to declare, with authority from God, that this is the age of the world in which the children of Israel are to be gathered back to the land of their fathers, the land of Canaan. He informs us that the angel that appeared to him, cited his attention to the prophecy of Isaiah, chapter eleven, and Joel, chapter two, also, to the prophecy of Malachi, chapter four, informing him that their contents were about to be fulfilled. The prophecies of the Bible so abound with evidences of the latter day gathering of Israel, that we may refer to but a few of the more pointed ones, and this we do to show that the nature of the message Mr. Smith declared to the world agrees most perfectly with "the law and the testimony," given before. For it is said, "If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." (Isa. 8: 20). "To the law and to the testimony" then, we appeal, as to the validity of these claims. Isaiah the prophet, while viewing the darkened, intoxicated, apostate condition of "the multitude of all the nations" that fought against Mount Zion, or Jerusalem, whom Jesus defines to be "the Gentiles," in Luke, chapter twenty-one, verse twenty-four; in that period of their history when to them the prophets and seers were covered, and their prophecies as a "sealed book;" in that period when the word of God would be to them superceded by the precepts of men,—creeds, rituals, prayer books, articles of faith, catechisms, disciplines, etc., when by these the fear of the Lord would be taught them; in that day, and among those nations, the Lord declares He will "proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder, among this people; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." In that day the wise of the world would seek to invert the truth, and turn "things upside down;" try to make it appear to the people that the Lord would accept as service to him what he condemns as sin. When they would represent as the kingdom of God that institution of things of which God says: "Her sins have reached unto heaven." They were to go so far as to say that "abominable" things, and "grosser crimes" are holy works and principles! (Isaiah 29: 7-16). And that we might not be misled by any man in reference to the time when this "marvelous work and this wonder," was to be by the Lord begun, Isaiah says, in verse seventeen, that it was to be in a very little while followed by the restoration of the rains to Palestine, in their proper seasons, which have been withheld ever since the Jews were scattered by "the Gentiles," (Isa. 5: 6), and the consequent fertility of the land. Of this Ezekiel says:

"But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are at hand to come. For behold I am for you, and I will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown." (Ezek. 36: 8, 9).

Joel also says:

"Fear not, O land; be glad and rejoice! for the Lord will do great things. Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field; for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig tree and the vine do yield their strength. Be glad, then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God; for he hath given you the former rain moderately and he will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month." (Joel 2: 21-23).

The restoration of the gospel by the angel of God, the beginning of its proclamation, the beginning of the organization of the church according to the New Testament pattern, answering to "the marvelous work and the wonder," of Isaiah 29th, dates about 1829-30, and according to the testimony of Dr. Barclay, Mr. D. A. Randall, of Columbus, O., Sir. Moses Montefiore, the great Jewish philanthropist, Louis Van Buren, of Indiana, lately deceased, and other missionaries, geographers, and travelers to the Holy Land, the former and latter rains began to be restored "moderately" to the land of Palestine, in A. D., 1846, and continued to increase, according to measurement, till the year 1853, when the rains were restored to such an extent as to "astonish the very natives." The grape, the fig, the fruit of the land, the wine, the oil, and the wheat, are beginning to be produced in great abundance again. Lebanon is in very deed being turned into a fruitful field again, as predicted. Mr. Smith then did not mistake the age of the fulfillment of these Bible prophecies, and come in at the wrong time; nor the nature of the work.

Following the preparation of the holy land to receive its children, so long "scattered and peeled," so long "sifted as in a sieve" among the nations as captives and strangers, with pallid countenances, and shamed faces, the arm of the Lord was to be manifested among the people, preparing the way for their return to the land of their Fathers, to be removed thence no more forever. "Therefore, thus saith the Lord, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale." The contrast in their condition seventy-five years ago, and now, is very great and wonderful indeed; then held in derision, a hiss and a by-word, not looked upon as being worthy of citizenship in any nation of earth. Hated, persecuted and slain. But now, a citizen, a juror, a judge, a legislator, a Prime Minister to the gentiles, a merchant, a financial director, and the leading banker of the world! Tenderly attended by the kings and queens of the nations. Israel will not be under the necessity of reclaiming his land this time by conquest. He is not able, nor will the circumstances attending his restoration thereto require it. Once he took it in possession by direction of the Lord, amidst miraculous display, clad in armor bright. Once he returned from captivity, and entered his home in great humility, and with repentance for transgression; but now, in accord with the social and political, and civilized status of the age,

"Men shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, (procure deeds as title) and seal them, and take witnesses in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south; for I will cause their captivity to return, saith the Lord." (Jer. 32:44).

The Lord was to "set his hand again the second time," in order to the bringing about of these glorious events, (Isa. 11:1); was to "lift up his hand," that is, reveal his will, as at the first when he "chose Israel, and lifted up (his) mine hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob, and madest myself known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, (something), I am the Lord your God." "Then said I unto them," (Eze. 20:5, 7). "So will I plead with you, saith the Lord God. And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant," (verses 36, 37), Yes, after this, the Lord will bring Jerusalem "health and cure, and I will heal them, and cure them, and I will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth." (Jer. 33:6). Then it is that Joel's prophecy will begin to receive its ultimate fulfillment.

"And it shall come to pass afterward that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy. Your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions; and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days, will I pour out of my Spirit. And I will show wonders in the heaven and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. * * * The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come." (Chap. 2: 28-31).

It appears according to the prophecies of the Bible, then, that revelation from God is to characterize the latter day work of the Lord, at all stages of its accomplishment; therefore, if the testimony of the prophets is to be accredited, the claims of Mr. Smith to divine revelation and commission, as one of the instrumentalities through whom the work was to be ushered in, is not inconsistent with the economy of God, and scripture truth, but is in complete harmony with them.

Again, the sayings of the prophets represent, that in connection with the revelation of the hand of the Lord, to gather Israel, and restore their land to its ancient fertility, in the last days; "he shall set up an ensign for the nations." That in their religiously divided, distracted and confused condition, they may have some certain rallying point. This ensign was to be lifted up, in the dispensation of the assembling of "the outcasts of Israel, and the gathering together of the dispersed of Judah;" not at the first coming of Christ, when they were to be led away captive into all nations, and their house left unto them desolate. (Matt. 23:34-39; Luke 21:24).

The gospel ensign, lifted up to the nations by the personal ministry of Christ and the apostles, was lifted up at Jerusalem. The gospel began to be preached at Jerusalem. (Luke 24:47). But Isaiah, who prophesied at Jerusalem, (see chapter 33), while viewing with the eye of prophecy the Lord lifting up an ensign to the nations in the days of Israel's gathering, beholds it lifted up from afar:

"And he will lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will hiss unto them from the end of the earth; and behold, they shall come with speed swiftly." (See chap. 11:12; 5:26).

And while treating of the subject of the lifting up of the ensign, just "afore the harvest," he represents the ensign as being lifted up on "a land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia." (Chap. 18). Now, should we locate ourselves in Jerusalem, seven hundred years before Christ, where the prophet then was, and view Ethiopia, then comprising the greater portion of upper Africa, and extending to the westward of Egypt, even on to the northwest of Egypt, its rivers running into the Atlantic Ocean, there is no land "shadowing with wings," till we reach the land now called North and South America. Here to our profound astonishment we behold North and South America, extending northward and southward, like the extending wings of a bird, and connected by the Isthmus of Darien. Our authority for the ancient boundary of Ethiopia is the writings of the ancient historian, Herodotus, and a map found on page 15, of Wilson's Outlines of History, volume one, published in 1870.

America is the only land represented on any map that we have yet seen, that in the least looks like a "land shadowing with wings." It is the only land that does fill the prophetic description, as to shape or likeness, or geographical locality. Here, then, the invitation was to be given to "All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth; see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye."—Isa. 18:1-3. This last great warning was to be given to "all the inhabitants of the world," "just afore the harvest," which Jesus says "is the end of the world," (Matt. 13), and in the day when a present is to be brought to the Lord of a nation scattered and peeled," or Israel—"to the place of the name of the Lord, the Mount Zion." Please compare verses 4, 5 and 6 with Eze. 39:17-22; and Rev. 19:17, 18.

A beautiful metaphor is this the prophet used, by which to represent the opening scenes of the great latter day work of the Lord. This is evidently the gospel ensign that is to be lifted up by the Lord. The gospel trumpet that is to be blown in the ears of all nations, preparatory to the "harvest" referred to, and seems to synchronize with the work referred to in Matt. 24:14; and Rev. 14:6, 7; also in its universality. But the clouds of heaven, in giving back the former and latter rains to the land of Canaan, the yielding of the fruit again to the returning people of the Jews; the returning of its ancient glory to Lebanon, the present increase in the value of land in Palestine; the returning of the Jews; all bear testimony to our senses, that the events that were to immediately follow the ushering in of the "marvelous work and the wonder," and the lifting up of the ensign, are now in process of fulfillment.

Mr. Smith could not of himself alone, have been so extraordinarily endowed, as to have adjusted himself in his claims, to the exact fulfillment of these prophecies, as to the nature of the work to be done, the time when and the place where it was to commence, save by the inspiration of the Lord. It is too late now to begin the work predicted in the prophecies we have referred to. Nothing but the inspiration of God could have introduced the work that corresponds so completely with the prophecies here cited, and now being consummated.

The visions of Mr. Smith bear intrinsic evidence of their divinity. They agree with "the law and the testimony." The surrounding circumstances attending their reception, agree in declaring them to be of divine origin. Let us examine them briefly: He being at the time of his first vision in great trouble regarding the future welfare of his soul, occasioned by the religious excitement then prevailing in his vicinity, carried on by divided, contending parties; and being unable at that age to decide who was right and accepted of God, he was induced by the statement of James, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God," to pray to the Lord, as a last and only resort, for a decision of the problem, and being in great trial he retired to a secret resort to pray; and being so engaged, he says:

"Just at this moment of great alarm, I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me. It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the enemy which held me bound. When the light rested upon me, I saw two personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said, (pointing to the other), 'THIS IS MY BELOVED SON, HEAR HIM.'"

He was then informed that he was to stand still for the present, and not unite with any of the religious parties; but to await further directions to be given after.

Of the character of these directions, we have treated. Hence, we now consider the visions. Being inspired with great faith in God, by obtaining the answer to his former prayers, and expecting further directions, according to promise, and being made conscious of his proneness to sin, and while seeking to obtain a knowledge of his standing before the Heavenly Father, and "while in the act of calling upon God," Joseph says:

"I discovered a light appearing in my room, which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noonday, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside, standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor. He had on a loose robe of most exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant; his hands were naked, and his arms also, a little above the wrist; so also were his feet naked, as were his legs, a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare. I could discover that he had no other clothing on but this robe, as it was open, so that I could see into his bosom. Not only was his robe exceedingly white, but his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance was truly like lightning. The room was exceedingly light; but not so very bright as immediately around his person. When I first looked upon him, I was afraid; but the fear soon left me. He called me by name, and said unto me, that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Nephi. That God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues; or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people."

That there might not be the least room for mistake about the fact of the appearance of the angel, and in order that he might be fully impressed with the importance of the work he was about to be commissioned to do, the visitation of the angel was renewed twice, ere the dawn of the morning appeared. He was not asleep, but awake, seeking unto the Lord in prayer, for light and wisdom concerning his standing in the sight of the Lord. Some years—six or seven perhaps—after the vision just related, while considering the great work now about to be begun, while striving to come to a proper understanding of the subject of baptism for the remission of sins, being associated at this time with O. Cowdery, it is by them related that, one clear, beautiful May-day, in 1829, while praying to God for light on this subject they received as follows:

"While we were thus employed, praying and calling upon the Lord, a messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon us, he ordained us, saying unto us: 'Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the Priesthood of Aaron which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness.'—See Pearl of Great Price.

The object in copying these descriptions of the visions, is to allow them to stand out in opposition to the very uses that are sought to be made of them sometimes. We notice that they testify to the fact of the existence of God and his Son Jesus Christ. As the visions of Moses and the elders of Israel, (Ex. 24: 9-11), reveal the Lord in light and glory as a "personage;" "as it were the body of heaven in his clearness," under his feet; as Isaiah "saw the Lord high and lifted up;" (Isa. 6: 1); as also that of Ezekiel, saw "the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord;" (Ezek. 1: 28), and as the visions of Stephen, (Acts 7), by the Holy Ghost, revealed the Father and the Son, with those of John the Revelator, (Rev. 1: 13-15; 20: 11. So these visions of Joseph, after the lapse of sixteen hundred years of darkness, and in the opening of that period of the world when the existence of God as a personal being, is the most universally denied, reveal this great fact anew. This, as nearly all are aware, Spiritualism, Agnosticism, Atheism, and a great proportion of Orthodoxy, deny. A force, or incomprehensible power, or evolution, is all that is claimed by those mentioned, with the exception of the Orthodox. These personages come and administer in the name, or by the authority of Messiah. The revelations of Spiritualism denounce the God of the Bible, and his Son Jesus. The angels come to Joseph, to certify to "the law and the testimony" of the apostles and prophets of old; to declare the fulfillment of their ancient prophecies. They come "in clouds of light," exercising power over the very element of darkness of the night. And in a glory and light more brilliant than "the glitter of the May sunbeam," and speak of the things that pertain to the purposes of Jehovah, and the salvation of poor, fallen man. They speak of a reformation of the human character, "of righteousness and of a judgment to come." They speak of the blessings to be attained unto through the reception of the Holy Ghost—its revelations to men of pure and holy characters, by obedience to the principles of the gospel of Christ. How unlike the tappings and table rappings, the supposed appearances of the spirits of the dead, veiled in dark curtains of night, bringing trouble to the sorrow stricken hearts of the deceived ones, mourning for their departed loved ones, as manifested in modern Spiritualism. The personages appearing to Joseph Smith come to renew to man, and teach the renewal of that divine authority, by which the laws of the kingdom of God, and the gospel have ever been administered, called in the Bible, "priesthood." At the time these revelations were made to Joseph the Martyr, the subject of the priesthood, properly, was an untaught subject in the religious world; that principle by which the hand of God is acknowledged here below, superintending his church and kingdom on earth.

David, in Psalm 132, in speaking of the rise of Zion, the Church of Christ in the latter days, says:

"I will clothe her priests with salvation; and her saints shall shout aloud for joy."

And Isaiah, speaking of the day of Israel's return to build up the old places, (whether of Jerusalem, literal, or the church, it matters not to us now), and the desolations of many generations, says of the ministry:

"But ye shall be named priests of the Lord; men shall call you the ministers of our God." (Chapter 61).

This priesthood restored, will, as intimated by the angel to Joseph, be again conferred upon the sons of Levi, for the kingdom was taken from the Jews, it will be remembered, and hence we read:

"I will also take of them for priests and for levites saith the Lord."

This will be done through the bringing of the children of Israel into the bond of the covenant, as before referred to. Also predicted by Jeremiah, (chap. 31: 31-34), and hence it is declared that following the work of bringing them into the "New Covenant" of Christ:

"I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness." (31: 14).

The harmony of these visions of Joseph with the words of prophecy, as uttered in days of old, the perfect agreement of the purposes of their being given with the purposes of the Lord to be accomplished in the last days, show incontrovertible evidence, intrinsically considered, of their divinity. From the intrinsic evidence, of the visions of Joseph Smith, we conclude he was inspired and commissioned of God to do the work that he did, pertaining to the gospel and the Church of Christ. They contemplate as their purposes, the freeing of the minds of the children of men from the clouds of darkness, and human superstition, that lowered around them for so many ages, confusing, dividing, and leading them astray, spiritually; the illuminating of their minds with gospel light; their deliverance from the bondage of sin, the reformation of their characters, their translation into the kingdom of light of Christ, and their elevation to the condition of the children of God, in a state of immortality, everlasting peace and glory, the society of the angels, and the inheritance of Christ, and of his eternal kingdom. Beautiful visions, sublime their purposes, truth their burden, humanity redeemed, sanctified and glorified, their object.

In passing on to the consideration of this subject, in its various features, we will not pronounce sentence, for or against Joseph Smith, from the standpoint of either his foes or his friends. All the prophets had their opposers as well as their friends. The opinion of the world, in any age when prophets were living, has ever been that they were bad men. This was the case with Abel, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Elijah, Isaiah, and all the prophets and apostles; even the Savior of the world was by the world condemned and slain, because the people of his times thought he was a bad man. I would not exalt Joseph Smith to be equal with the Savior, but I do believe the people of to-day are just as much opposed to the reproofs of the prophets of God, as they were in the time of Christ. Just as much endeared to their traditions as then. Joseph Smith was hated, opposed, mobbed, misrepresented, persecuted, and finally slain, just as other prophets before him had been. Any inference then, that might be drawn from the opinions of the world respecting him, judging the present by the past, would be in favor of the divinity of his mission. The Lord's rule, or test, by which the claims of men to divine authority and prophetic attainments, is, "By their fruits ye shall know them." (Matt. 7:20). The "fruits" of a prophet would unmistakably be his teaching, doctrines, practices and prophecies, and their fulfillment, or non-fulfillment. Joseph's doctrines and teachings we have been examining. We find them harmonizing strictly with the teachings of the prophets, and apostles of old; also with those of Christ.

Sunday morning session: Elder Alexander H. Smith preached. Afternoon session: The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Elders William Smith and William Still. Elder John Beaird was re-elected president of district for the ensuing six months. Elders Noah N. Cooke and William Smith were sustained as his counselors. John G. Smith was re-elected district clerk. Elder Charles J. Peat was by vote sustained as agent for the district tract fund, and authorized to receive donations and collections for this fund. All the authorities of the church were sustained in righteousness.

A petition from John Beaird was read as follows: "To the Saint Louis District Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, now assembled: Whereas this conference has now been organized about twenty years, and Whereas during all of this long period of time, no effort has as yet been made to erect a house of worship unto the Lord, which would be suitable to hold conferences in, and to transact business in, even suitable to hold the General Conference in, if we should be honored at any time with such privilege; and Whereas the dignity and magnitude of God's work in this part of his vineyard appear to make it a necessity that we now make an effort to erect a house of worship, to be built by subscriptions, donations and collections. Therefore, Resolved, That this conference appoint brethren to open a book of subscription for the purposes above intended. And as soon as they get sufficient money paid in, and guaranteed to make the building a success, that they at once employ builders, and have the house built as soon as possible, in some central locality in St. Louis, Missouri. Respectfully, John Beaird."

On motion this petition was approved, and the resolution incorporated with it was adopted by the conference. On separate motions, John Beaird, Alexander H. Smith, Richard D. Cottam, William T. Kyte, William O. Thomas, Joseph E. Betts, sen., and Thomas E. Taylor, were elected to serve as a Meeting-house Building Committee, to carry out the above resolution, and devise other necessary ways and means for the successful prosecution of the work of building a meeting house in St. Louis.

A short time was then occupied in singing, bearing testimony, etc. Evening session.—Elder Alexander H. Smith preached on the law of tithing.

Adjourned to meet in the Hall, No. 1302, Broadway, St. Louis, Missouri, on Saturday afternoon, March 29th, 1884, for the transaction of business, and on the following Sunday morning at 10 o'clock for worship.

Miscellaneous.

APRIL CONFERENCE, 1884.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

The next General Conference is to be held at Stewartsville, Mo., which is located on the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad, twenty-one miles east of St. Joseph,—commencing April 6th, 1884. The Stewartsville City Branch appointed a committee to make all necessary arrangements for the coming general conference, and believing that all things should be prepared before hand, the committee take this timely opportunity to report the result through the Herald, that all who contemplate coming, may know just what can be depended upon.

The membership here is not sufficiently strong to entertain free all who may come, which would give rise to the necessity of some, at least, having to pay board. Not wishing to be partial judges between our brethren, by saying to one, go yonder and pay four dollars a week for your board; to another, go elsewhere and get yours for three, and to another, go with one of the saints and be cared for free, the committee set about to devise some means of equalization. After a careful search, they found that board and lodging may, by a system of equalization, be obtained at an average cost of two dollars and fifty cents per week, which will be vouchsafed on the following conditions:

1. All who contemplate coming will report the same as soon as possible, by postal card or otherwise, to J. M. Terry, secretary of the committee, that their places may be assigned.
2. Brn. Alex. McCallum and J. M. Terry, may be found in the waiting room of the depot, on the arrival of each train, who may be known by those not acquainted with them, by a blue badge on their coat, who will take charge of those arriving, and will upon payment of two dollars and fifty cents per week for the time expected to stay, assign them a place to board, and give them a certificate, which will entitle them to the same.

By a careful canvass among the citizens and saints of our town and adjoining country, boarding has been engaged for a sufficient number, we think, to accommodate all who may come. As the board can be had at such a low rate, we feel that it will not be unreasonable to ask the same from all, ex-officio and delegate members included. The lawful members of the conference will be cared for first, and the accommodations will be extended to others as far as the committee has any power.

Those who come by team should make the same known early, and the committee can say to such, that they will provide them with camping ground, and horse feed at cost. It might be well to state, that the Saints get nothing for what they entertain, as that is used to reduce the rates charged by those among the citizens; and should there be an overplus after paying the necessary expenses, it will go into the hands of the Bishop. Any further information may be obtained by addressing the secretary.

An effort will be made to get reduced rates on the rail road, which will be reported in due time.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, February 2d, 1884.

The following editorial from the Chicago Times of January 17th, 1884, sent us by Bro. E. L. Kelley, contains the essence of so just criticism upon the situation in Utah and Governor Murray's position in regard to it, that we give it that the law loving and curious among the Saints may see how it looks put in a logically legal shape.

The message of Governor Murray to the Utah assembly is at once a complaint against "ecclesiastical power" and a confession of the weakness of the civil government of which Mr. Murray is the executive.

It has been charged, he says, "that the ecclesiastical power would not permit the legislature to pass certain [proposed] laws" that he considers as necessary to "assimilate Utah to the country as far as laws are concerned." The projects of law he alludes to appear to be these: 1. An act to repeal an act that "gives unwarranted powers to the greatest of church corporations," by pretending to vest in ecclesiastical courts powers that can be exercised in America only by civil courts. 2. An act to give right of dower to the wife in the estate of the husband. 3. An act to forbid and punish polygamy, bigamy, etc. 4. An act to repeal an act incorporating a certain "perpetual immigration company." 5. An act to establish public schools. 6. An act declaring marriage to be a civil contract.

It is charged that "the ecclesiastical power" will not permit the collective statesmen of Utah to enact the statutes indicated. "This is a fearful charge," says Mr. Murray, "here in free America, especially against a legislature that derives its existence from an act of Congress," and its compensation by a congressional appropriation from the national treasury. Whether it is more "fearful" as a charge against that kind of a legislative assembly, or as an index of incapacity, if not of imbecility, in an administration that also derives its existence from an act of Congress and its compensation from the national treasury, and is clothed with the power and charged with the duty of executing the national authority in Utah, is a question that invites consideration.

The local enactment that is said to give unwarranted and dangerous powers to the Mormon ecclesiastical establishment is absolutely null and void, as Mr. Murray shows. By an express enactment approved July 1st, 1862, congress annulled it; yet, says Mr. Murray, the Utah legislature "re-enacted it in the compiled laws of 1876." He adds: "A law of the territory that has been disapproved by Congress should not be allowed to remain on the statute books." Why? What difference does it make whether that composition of words is in that book or not in it? Having been annulled by the national authority, it is not "a law of the territory." If the assembly at Salt Lake should order Vennor's almanac, including all his dreadful weather prognostications, to be engrossed on the statute book, would that awful document be a law of the territory, which it would be the duty of the territorial administration (the judiciary and the executive erected by act of Congress) to apply and execute? Doubtless it would be, more truly than the local enactment that assumed to give civil jurisdiction to ecclesiastical courts—a measure that congress expressly annulled more than twenty years ago—is such a law. The language of the governor, treating that empty composition as a territorial law, is nonsensical. It is not a law at all; has not any character or index of a law; is nothing but a lot of verbal rubbish that no judge, no governor, no civil functionary of any grade or kind, has the duty to administer, to execute, to respect, or to treat with the least respect. Why ask a legislative body to admit—what certainly is not true—that that mass of verbal rubbish is a law, by formally passing an act to repeal it? Why do not the judiciary and executive that compose the civil administration of Utah perform their function by enforcing the national law that has nullified and superseded that pretended local enactment? Is the fact that they do not to be taken as a proof of their strength or of their weakness, of their fitness or of their unfitness to discharge the high trust that the national authority has committed to them?

Why ask an assembly of fanatical religionists, that hold polygamy to be sanctioned by the legislature of heaven, to pass an act against polygamy? If Congress has not formally repealed the heavenly enactment, it has passed an act making the practice of polygamy in Utah (though not in Washington) a crime, sanctioning severe penalties upon any that practice it, and sending to Utah full-fledged judicial and executive establishments to execute the law of Congress. Why don't they execute it? Is it because the administrators of the heavenly ordinance in that province are stronger than the administrators of the laws of Congress? If that is the explanation of the failure of the civil administration of Utah to perform its office, the obviously right course for the national authority to pursue is to send a military force to Utah sufficiently strong to support the civil administration against the heavenly hosts. To ask a provincial legislature to pass an act contrary to the decree of heaven is not only a confession of feebleness by the Utah executive, but is foolishness. Would an enactment of a petty local legislature directed against an ordinance of the Almighty be more effective than an act of the supreme national legislature directed against that celestial ordinance? If the civil administration of Utah is unable to execute the latter, how could it be expected to execute the former?

It appears, however, that the Utah administration has executed the law of Congress in one instance. One George Reynolds, who had taken to himself a number of wives by authority of the decree of heaven, but contrary to the act of Congress, was tried and convicted for offending against the latter. Denying that the act of Congress was the higher law, he carried the question to the supreme national court, and that tribunal of last resort held that the act of Congress was the supreme law of Utah, which it was the duty of the civil administration of that province to execute, the law of heaven and the ecclesiastical power to the contrary notwithstanding. Accordingly, "Reynolds suffered the penalty of his transgression." The governor himself thus proves the supremacy of the civil over the ecclesiastical power in Utah; proves that the civil law is already ample to punish the crime of polygamy, and that the civil administration is amply armed with authority to execute that law. What more could a civil administration capable of discharging its trust desire? Why ask a little local legislative assembly to pass laws against polygamy, "with effective measures for their execution," when the supreme legislature has already done so, when the supreme judiciary has declared their validity, and when their execution by a capable administration has been practically demonstrated? Is not the petition of Governor Murray to the petty assembly at Salt Lake, instead of furnishing any proof of the alleged supremacy of ecclesiastical power in that province, a humiliating confession of the feebleness, the incapacity, the unworthiness of the present civil administration?

With respect to the other enactments that Mr. Murray begs the assembly of the Saints to pass, it will be seen that they have no relation to the polygamy question. A local law of dower might and might not be beneficial; but is not necessary to justice, for dower is a common-law right that any lawful wife in Utah can maintain in the courts, without any local statute. The local enactment incorporating the Mormon immigration concern can be annulled by an act of Congress quite as easily as by an act of the statesmen at Salt Lake. And a civil law of marriage, and another setting up a public school system, can be enacted by Congress with the same ease.

and celerity that the statute to punish polygamy, or the statute to disfranchise polygamists, was enacted.

What is needed in Utah more than anything else (excepting a reduction of the religious spirit) is not a local legislative assembly to grind out a grist of local statutes aimed at the ecclesiastical power. It is a local administration capable of exerting the civil power; of performing its function by executing the laws of Congress that its members have been appointed, commissioned, and commanded to execute.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. W. W. BLAIR has baptized eleven at Manassa, Ephraim and Antonito, Colorado, and organized a branch to be known as the Freedom Branch; William L. Ball, formerly a Bishop in the Utah church, is the presiding elder. There have been fifty applications for baptism, and it is probable that very many more will obey in time.

Bro. Wm. Kendrick writes from Stepney Green, London, England, sending some lines for the Herald. He states that things move slowly. Numbers acknowledge the truth as taught, but few only obey. The same excuses are made for delay and disobedience there as in America.

Sr. Christy wrote from Akron, Iowa, January 14th. She is poorly in health but full of hope, and love for God and his work. She wishes the addresses of any of the Saints living at Sioux City, Iowa. She would like to call on them when she visits the city which she does at times. She further states there is a partial opportunity to get the Baptist Church for a meeting, and wishes to know who can fill such an appointment if it can be obtained. She will help pay expenses, though not able to do much.

Bro. T. W. Smith is working his way homeward preaching by the way. His address will be Stewartsville until after April session of conference. He writes that he has had "splendid liberty in preaching lately."

Joseph R. Lambert's address will be Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, until further notice. Sickness in his family will require him to be at his home for the time being. He returned home Wednesday, the twenty-third of January.

THERE are eloquent things to say, when time and circumstances favor; and many such things have been said. Among them is the following extract from the speech of a negro in the Texas State Legislature, and copied from the Fort Worth (Texas) Gazette.

The most thoroughly eloquent and effective speeches ever made in the Texas Legislature were pronounced by two negroes, and both were of the same general import—a slave's devotion to "old marster and misstiss." The following is an extract from one of these speeches: "There can be no great race enmity between us. This can not come while my old marster and misstiss live. No, nor while their children and mine survive. They were kind and generous to me. I knew no want of to-day or care for the morrow when I was their property. Look at these wrinkled, rough hands. They tell the tale. They tell how I toiled for them. And the story is not ended. They are old and helpless now, and live as I once did, in a little cabin, and I still toil for them. I send them half of every dollar I draw from the State Treasury; and when their daughter, a beautiful and good girl, whom I used to carry when she was a child in these strong arms, was married not long ago, I sent her a check for $1,000. Have I not the right to ask you, gentlemen of the majority, to deal generously with my race?"

THE HERALD readers may add to their geographical knowledge the following, if not already known by them:

Soudan is the name given by the Egyptians to all their dependent Empire stretching from the Third Cataract for an indefinite distance towards the lakes, and from the Red Sea to the western border of Darfur. This Empire comprises much of Nubia, all Sennaar, Kordofan, and all Darfur. It is said to be about 1,000 miles square, or as large as India. This vast extent of 1,000,000 square miles is said to be inhabited by about 120,000,000 people, most of them Mussulmans, and many of these of exceptional ferocity, fanaticism, and daring.

FROM the Willoughby, Ohio, Independent, we clip the following, written doubtless in the interest of the Disciple Church, and with the kindly intention to warn the members of that denomination to keep out of the way of our truth. But the writer pays a tribute to that truth when he says that the Bible is not a good weapon to knock a Mormon down with.

Editor Willoughby Independent:—In your paper of the 4th I see that there is a disposition on the part of a Disciple minister in your region to dignify the Mormons by holding a discussion with one of their Elders. This, we think, bad policy and bad morals; but is just what the Mormon Elder wants. It will give him an opportunity and a crowd that he otherwise could never reach. We believe that the great majority of that denomination are honest in their religious views, and are trying to imitate as far as they can, the conduct of the early Christians. Probably there is more love amongst these "Latter Day Saints" than there was amongst the Christian fathers immediately after the death of the apostles. We are also willing to admit that they have made a desert into fruitful fields and blooming gardens, and that the great majority of their converts have been helped, elevated, and taught industrious habits. To the poor, ignorant and down-trodden of Europe, that religion has been a blessing, a great blessing in this—it has given them a home, a farm, a chance to work for themselves, and see that they were each accumulating something for old age or "a rainy day." Seeing these fruits, they credit their religion with it all, and are ready to fight or even die for a religion that has aided them to such an extent.

These converts are never taught that it was government, with its public lands and liberal institutions that had given them all these benefits, and that they could have obtained and enjoyed all they possess without tolerating an institution that is repugnant to the morals and well being of all civilized people. In this day of practical experiments, it might do to give them a little corner of this great country in which to try their social and religious experiment, and see if they can build up a town or city free from all those vices and crimes now so common in the enlightened world. That they are honest, and that their religion is with them a power, both for great good and great evil, we think no one conversant with their history will deny. They want to go back to days of "primitive Christianity," and perform everything that was done by the prophets, kings, and apostles of that early day. And the Disciple divine may find before he gets through with this discussion that the bible is not as good a weapon to knock a Mormon down with as he may have thought, and may want to use a more carnal weapon—or, perhaps, two of them, for we assure him that the Mormon will be on his feet in the middle of the ring whenever "time" is called on the contestants. And the result of the discussion will be, we fear, that too many of the hearers will go away thinking or fearing that Mormonism is just as true as any other religion. No good citizen can desire an effect so deplorable; and there is nothing to be gained by trying to unsettle or destroy the religious convictions of a community, and the man or men who attempt it should know that he or they have something better to put in its place.

With the observation and experience that Mentor had in the winter of 1830 and 1831, in the little discussions between the same denominations, around in the school-houses in which and by which the Disciple church in the latter place lost over half its members; while not a Presbyterian, Congregationalist, or Episcopalian, and few Methodists paid any attention to them, and were not led astray by them. That church never recovered from that collision. It debated and treated the early Mormons as if they had some religion worth examining, and was lost.

Every person in a community wants a religion that he or she is satisfied with, that is as good as there is; then they should feel and say—we don't want to hear it discussed or doubted, and won't hear it assailed, and when that is to be done we will stay away. We don't think the Mormon church, if it had been in existence during Paul's ministry, would have given him any more trouble than did the Corinthian. We think religion, like everything else connected with the moral or physical well-being of the human family, is progressive; and thus great progress, particularly in the last three centuries, has been made; and it is but little credit to any religion to prove that it is now just what it was in the days of the apostles—with no change or improvement to meet the varied condition of the family of man since that time.

We can not believe that either the Disciple church or the citizens of Kirtland want another Mormon church or congregation in their midst; and if they do not we hope they will stay away and never add their presence to a meeting gotten up for a religious discussion of Mormonism. Don't persecute them, or even speak unkindly of them, but keep yourselves outside of all their meetings; and if you hear a man, woman or child express a desire to attend their gatherings, quietly insinuate that the community expects better things from them, and that if they do they will lose in some degree with the better class of people. A neighborhood acting in concert can quietly and kindly "freeze out" all those who want to destroy the very foundations of society. We hope the people will stay away, and let this discussion be held in a vacant room to empty seats. M.

ILLINOIS, January 10th, 1884.

Correspondence.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah,

January 15th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I returned to this place on the 12th from the south, having made a trip in company with Bro. Thomas Burt of Springville, through San Pete and Sevier counties. I am happy to say that we have been blessed in our labors; that the Lord opened and prepared the way before us. We first commenced our efforts at Fountain Green, where we were kindly furnished a hall by a Mr. Hansen, free of charge, and we held two meetings, it being as far as we could learn the first attempt of the Reorganized Church at that place. Our congregations were large, but the behavior of the people was not what becomes a civilized community, much less those professing to be saints of God. When we were returning from our last meeting to our lodging, we were treated with a shower of rocks by a crowd of young men that followed, but somehow they missed us, and we escaped harm. We next preached at Moroni, in the Presbyterian School-house. I performed some labor at that place last Spring, and there are a few there who are with us in faith, but for want of courage do not take hold. From Moroni we went to Spring City, held two meetings in Sr. Johnson's house, and we also preached once in Mount Pleasant, where there are many friends to the cause; but for the want of a suitable place to preach in, we made our stay short. We had pressing invitations from Bro. Nielson at Richfield, Sevier county, to come there and labor; but we had no way of reaching there but to walk, so we started out with the satchel on our shoulder, regular tramp style. Stopped at Ephraim, but did not preach. We were finally met by Bro. Jensen of Gunnison with his team, who took us to his home, where we spent the Sabbath, and preached once to a small gathering. Bro. Jensen took us to Richfield, where we obtained the meeting house for one meeting, by paying one dollar and fifty cents for it; and these saints thought they did us a great favor. But friends were gained by our efforts, and an opening was made, private houses were offered, and we continued our work, doing the best we could. The people seemed to be hungering for the truth, and we held in all twelve meetings in this place, which resulted in the baptism of seventeen persons, and in the organization of a branch, to be known as the Richfield Branch. Bro. Jens C. Christensen was ordained a Priest, and chosen to preside, and Bro. Andrew C. Nielsen was chosen branch secretary. We deemed it unwise to make further ordinations at this time; but promised to visit Richfield again to labor among them. We think that a good work can be done in that part of the country. Quite a number seem to be very near the kingdom. We also preached at Central, four miles from Richfield, at Elsinore eight miles, and at Monroe twelve miles from there. In all these places the interest is good, and the parting words of our friends were, Come again. At Monroe we obtained the free use of a hall belonging to a Mr. Walter Jones, who also furnished light and fuel, and who together with other citizens of the place, treated us with much kindness.

We held in all twenty-two meetings in Sevier county, and were disturbed in our services only once, which was at Central. Meeting was held in the school-house. We were interrupted several times, and were finally told that if we did not close, they would put out the lights; so we dismissed. But this treatment did not injure the work; for fair-thinking men and women did not endorse it; and we gained friends thereby. We returned by way of Scipio, Millard county, Bro. Christensen taking us with his team. We left Richfield bright and early, intending to make the trip in a day, the distance being about forty-five miles; but when darkness came on we were informed by a traveler whom we met, that we were yet ten or twelve miles from Scipio; and as the road was bad, and our little mules tired, we camped for the night, finding shelter for the animals by the ruins of an old house. Sister Christensen had us provided with plenty to eat, so after supper we wrapped ourselves in our blankets under the wagon cover, and passed the night tolerably comfortable. We reached Scipio the next day about eleven o'clock. Met a man on the street and enquired if there were any Josephites in the place. He said no; but pointed out where one Clawson was living, and he thought he was leaning that way. We found Mr. Clawson, who took us in, apparently glad to see us, and learned that he had been a subscriber to the Saints' Herald since 1876, and since then they have been waiting and praying for some of our elders to come there. We preached twice to them, and baptized and confirmed Bro. and Sr. Clawson.

Brother Clawson took us with his team to Juab station, on the railway, and we took the train,—Bro. Burt for his home in Springville, and I for this place, feeling well and thankful to the Lord for his blessings to us. We pray that he may continue to use us in his service, for the work is his, and we realize that if we do anything for its advancement it must be because the Lord is working through us. The diphtheria scourge is raging in some parts here to an alarming extent. Praying for the redemption of Zion and the gathering of the pure in heart,

I remain yours in gospel bonds,

H. N. HANSEN.

PLUM HOLLOW, Iowa,

January 18th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—The work of the Lord is, I think, onward in this district. There are many believing the gospel, and a few that have obeyed—good, faithful souls I believe. Our last conference held at Shenandoah, was a success. Since that time, we have preached mostly at Mill Creek and Hamburg; some in the Gaylord settlement. At Hamburg we had quite a time, Elder E. C. Briggs debating with the Christian Minister of that place; he not being satisfied, sent for another to help them out, Elder Johnson, who put in his appearance as some great one, and challenged Bro. Briggs to come to the front. He did so, and bravely too. The question for two nights' debate was, "Resolved, that there should be a succession of apostles with the gifts of the Holy Spirit." E. C. Briggs affirmed, Elder Johnson of the Christian Church, denied. All I have to say is, the truth prevailed as it always will. Brother Briggs enjoyed the good Spirit of God, the truth was made manifest, and the honest in heart rejoiced. Mr. Johnson could not possibly stay any longer than the two nights, although Bro. Briggs wanted him to stay a week, and reason with him out of the Scriptures. Bro. Briggs preached four nights after the debate ended. I think much good was done.

We are now holding meetings at Plum Hollow, in the Brick Church owned by the United Brethren, obtained by Bro. William Leaka. We have preached four nights this week with good liberty to fair congregations. Have appointments for to-night and to-morrow night. The brethren and sisters that can turn out, do well in singing and assisting in these meetings. May God bless them is my prayer.

Yours in bonds,

HENRY KEMP.

MANASSA, Conejos Co., Colo.,

Dec. 28th, 1883.

EDITOR OF SAINTS' HERALD, Lamoni, Iowa:

DEAR SIR:—Ever since my name appeared in the columns of the Salt Lake Desert News as an apostate from the Brighamite Mormon Church, I have been thinking that I would write to you, and beg the favor of a little space in your valuable paper for the purpose of vindicating my honor and integrity, and as a duty which I owe to my many friends and acquaintances, by placing before them and your many and intelligent readers a few simple facts in relation to the matter. I will first state, so that you can have a tolerably correct idea of the character of the writer, that I have from my earliest recollections been a God-fearing and worshipping son of Adam; consequently it will not appear in the least strange, to find me enlisted under the bright folds of the gospel banner, as was revealed to and taught by the Prophet Joseph. Neither did I, as many do, jump at it, and lay hold of it the first time I came in contact with it. But I read the latter day works, and compared them with the ancient. Digested them thoroughly, until I was convinced in my mind and heart, that I had at last found the kingdom of God, which the prophet Daniel said should be established on the earth in the latter days. At the earliest opportunity I was baptized and confirmed a member of the Brighamite Church, which was only the first step taken. It was a very great trial to me, to have all of my early traditions and air castles vanish from my heart like the morning mist before the God of day; yet it was nothing to compare with the next step to be taken; namely, laying upon the altar of sacrifice all that I had held sacred; my kindred, friends, the land where I first breathed the breath of life, and where the bones of my ancestors and my own dear offspring rest in silent repose. To tear loose all these tender chords, which were entwined around my heart, was almost equivalent to rending soul from body. Yet I accomplished it all for the gospel's sake, and gathered out here with the body of the Church, where I thought I would be taught more perfectly the ways of the Lord. I was under the impression that I would receive "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little." But what has been the result, and what have I been doomed to witness and en-ture in such a short period of time! Instead of finding a band of brothers and sisters and Saints of God indeed, and the kingdom of God on earth, I found all the jarring elements of contention and discord. I think that the most appropriate inscription that could be placed over the entrance thereof would read thus: They who enter here leave all hope behind; or, They who enter here leave all liberty behind.

Now let us see what is the true meaning of the word apostasy? Webster renders it thus: First, "An abandonment of what one has voluntarily professed." Second, "A total desertion or departure from one's faith." Now let us see what this pseudo-hierarchy, or priestly oligarchy, which went through with that farce of a trial in my case, says is the meaning of the word, by its late decision against me. Here are the charges that S. S. Smith, the president of this stake, preferred against me. "For causing dissensions and divisions amongst the people; and in disobeying counsel." Whose counsel? His, the said Smith's. What in? In all things, whether private, social, or political. Now let me lay before you the grounds whereon these charges were predicated: 1. In the latter part of last year, there was a case of small-pox in the town of Antonito, a village about ten miles distant. And as two of my family had been there about six or seven days previous, there was a succession of meetings held here, for the purpose of devising the best means for the protection of the community from the disease. This was all well enough, if they had stopped there. But by their fiery speeches, with said Smith's sanction, there was such a panic created amongst the people, that a mob of them came upon my household, and threatened them with violence if they did not leave the place by a certain hour. For this gross outrage I blamed the said Smith; for he could have kept the whole outrageous affair from being perpetrated. And on the ground that I held him responsible for it, he predicates his first charge. The ground for his second charge, was a petition which I got up, and which was signed by a majority of the voters in Manassa, to compel William Christensen to relinquish the teachership of the public school here—a man whom the said Smith had installed in that position. After the people had expressed their wishes by petition, Smith did not respect them, but put him in. How is that for untrammelled freedom. And because I took the stand I did against Christensen, Smith made his charge number two. These are the only charges preferred against me. Can reason or common sense make a case of apostasy out of such a frivolous pretext or subterfuge? Let an intelligent public be the judge. But when S. S. Smith said wig wag, all of his serfs had to wag; and according to their decision, I was turned over to Beelzebub, to be buffeted around for a time.

To further illustrate the injustice of Smith, I will give you another example. It is the case of Bishop Wm. L. Ball. Let it be distinctly understood, that Bishop Ball is a man whose honesty and integrity can not be doubted, and is generally liked by all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance. Yet at the same time, he is of the most solid firmness, where he considers it right and correct. After he has made up his mind on any subject, it is seldom he alters his convictions; for they are formed by profound and mature deliberations. Also, he is a man who holds sacred the rights and liberties of all others, and is ever ready and willing to use all his power, means and influence in defending the oppressed and right against oppression and wrong. At the first conference after the departure of Ball, who was sent on a mission to the southern States, the said Smith nominated a man by the name of Dalton, a kinsman, for the position held by Ball. A person whom the people did not know anything about, as he was an entire stranger to them. When the vote was taken Dalton did not receive a majority; but on the contrary a very small minority. And as the people feared the priestly lash, they dared not vote against him. Consequently he was declared elected, and installed in the office. Neither has he ever been sustained by succeeding conferences, that I have ever been able to learn. Neither will he be, if all reports are true; as it is generally believed by the people, that he is a confirmed infidel, and is not a believer in the ancient scriptures. But the people have to endure him because Smith wants him in the office. And when Bishop Ball returned after a short absence, and found out how outrageously Smith had treated him, he was so much hurt that he made public expression of his indignation in regard to the matter. And when I presented to him the petition against Christensen, he signed it. For the signing of which, Smith preferred a charge of apostasy, and had him cut off from the church.

In conclusion I will only add, that by observation and personal knowledge, the government of the Brighamite Church, (if we take this particular settlement as a criterion), is antagonistic to republicanism, and all free institutions; and is a despotic, tyrannical, priestly oligarchy. There are many others here who entertain the same views, as the withdrawal of several of their most substantial members goes to prove. And there are a great many more, who will kick out of the traces the first time the priestly lash comes down too heavily. I will now state for the benefit of the uninitiated, what it takes to constitute a good Brighamite Saint, one in whom there is no guile. 1. Implicit obedience to all commands emanating from those in authority. 2. The payment of all tithing punctually. A person can do whatsoever he pleases, provided he don't break those two great commandments, whereon all the law and the profits hang.

Very respectfully, yours &c.,
FELIX B. MOYERS.

Dear Herald:—I have been a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church since August 12th, 1882. For many years I had longed to find a church that I could believe taught the principles of God aright, and of latter years I read the Bible, and prayed earnestly to find it. Six months prior to joining this church, I heard brother R. M. Elvin preach, and I truly felt that the Spirit of God was with him, and that in answer to my prayers, God had sent one of his messengers to me, so praises be to God forever. I have learned to love this latter day work greatly; and I desire the prayers of all the Saints, that I may be a useful member in the cause of Christ. The only preacher I have, is the Herald, and I prize it greatly. Brother Elvin comes once in several months. With love to all the Saints,

I am yours in the love of Christ,
ADALINE GRAF.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I have been traveling some in the two months past, trying to tell the people what to do to be saved, and most of the time with extra liberty. Preached some for the Saints of Morgan Branch, Gallia Co., Ohio. Then to Union Grove, West Virginia. Then set out afoot for a walk of twenty miles in twelve inches of snow; arrived at Bro. Hickman's tired, but was soon rested and refreshed by the kindness and hospitality of Bro. and Sr. Hickman. I held meeting there over a week; baptized one and was assailed by one of the Disciple order's big guns, a regular debater. He was silenced and completely confounded. Then I got the privilege to preach one discourse in the house where he was holding a protracted meeting. Text, "Seek first the Kingdom of God." Spoke almost two hours with good liberty. Then on my way home got to present our plea in a new place in Meiggs Co, Ohio. Left some interested. Think they soon will call for more. Results of my trip, three of the noble of earth inducted into the Kingdom of God. Ever praying that the church may be pure, and that this great work may still move onward,

I am yours in the one hope,
JAMES MOLER.

PHILADELPHIA, January 17th, 1884.

Dear Brother:—It is useless for me to repeat what Bro. M. O. Matthews has said in regard to my visit to New Park, Pa.; but I am glad to learn by his letter that my visit has resulted in good. I can only say that I have received a letter from them, saying, that the people around Airville, where I preached while there, wish us to return and spend a week with them. I am pleased to learn that my preaching has removed the prejudice that existed there. After I left there, I went to Frederick City, Maryland, where I met Bro. Geo. W. Crouse and the rest of the Saints, and preached seven times for them, and added one to our number there, as I took her name and by her request presented it to the district conference, and she was unanimously received by vote of the same on her original baptism. I left two others who are convinced and almost ready for the water. I hope to baptize them on my return there, which will be as soon as possible. The work there will be slow on account of prejudice, which I hope time will wear away. We can afford to wait. I left the Saints there feeling well.

While in New Park, Pa., we received a letter from some party in Cecil county, Maryland, who had heard of us in York county, Pa., and wished me to call upon them. I answered the letter, stating that I would come if they would find a place for me to preach. They answered, and offered me their chapel. I accepted the offer, and visited them on Sunday, January 6th. It is about fifty miles from Philadelphia. I was very cold and tired when I got there. After dinner, when the Methodist congregation assembled in the chapel, about thirty in number, their preacher did not come, it was so cold and slippery; therefore one of the trustees of the chapel called on me, and asked me to fill his place, which I did as best I could. I then published my meeting for seven p. m., when about one hundred and thirty came together, and I preached with good liberty. I was attacked by a professor, who tried to tear my doctrine to pieces, but I replied to him, and the props fell from under him, and when he made the attempt to explain, the people turned their back and walked out of the church, and left him standing in the stand. I was then requested to preach again on Monday evening, which I did to a crowded house. I was then asked to come to Providence Paper Mills, (a place about six miles distant), by a man who was at the meeting, and preach at his house (they have no church) on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. I accepted, and went and preached to a full house on each evening, although it was fearful weather. I left there on Thursday noon to fill another appointment at the chapel that evening, but with a promise to return as soon as I could. I preached Thursday evening to a packed house, with good liberty. I was then persuaded to stay another night, and preach to them again, which I did to a full house, it snowing very hard. I left there on Saturday morning with a promise to return in two weeks if possible. They say I have made more friends than any man that ever came there. I hope that is so, for we need them. I have sent them word that I will preach for them again on Sunday, February 3d, at 7:30 p. m. I found some old Saints, who belonged to the Church in your father's day, who were cut off by the Brighamites because they would not accept Brigham Young. These I hope to gather into the fold, with many others; for it is impressed upon my mind that that is a good field, and I will look after it. The old Saints have been scattered like sheep without a shepherd for many years. Some are over eighty-five years old. May God bless them.

With kind regards to all the Saints, I remain yours in bonds,

JOSEPH A. STEWART.

MILLERSBURG, Illinois,

January 19th, 1884.

Saints' Herald; greeting.—On contemplating writing doctrinal articles my wits recoil. The fundamental principles of the faith have been set forth quite frequently since the inauguration of the great latter-day work. These gospel topics have been promulgated, by those of good mental calibre, from the incipiency of this dispensation. The field of hidden treasures has been ploughed to the subsoil, critically reviewed, studiously enlarged and embellished like a royal garden, or a well kept park. As the beauty of the landscape is enhanced with sloping swards, gushing rills, placid lakelets, sundry woods, divers flowers and varied grains, so will the "holy ground" appear to a better advantage when viewed, with "the eyes of your understanding," from various standpoints. This is a generation of thinkers, and therefore no meager attainments will longer secure the meed of praise. Should we all, however, neglect the minor concerns of life, the grand and glorious events are so few and far between, that we should grow feeble with inaction; restless with feverish anxiety, and despair with deferred hope. A few atoms would hardly form a mountain, or a hillock; but an indefinite number of the veriest particles will build a vast range, or define a plateau. A thousand million tons of snow and ice, be they ever so judiciously arranged, could not bar out the marine adventurers of the north from their fruitless researches. This earth is either greatly concave at the poles, or tubular through. We favor the latter conjecture, and suppose the "lost tribes" dwell in or immediately adjacent to the northern entrance. While the convex surface of the globe is a "hell" for fallen angels, (see 2 Pet. 2:4), and the sea monster was a miniature one for Jonah, the "heart of the earth," where Christ went, seems to be the prison for incorrigible human spirits. This "bottomless pit" is evidently in the earth's center, and "the wicked" must attend that school of correction, where they must hear the gospel and accept it, or welter for ages. To substantiate this position, please take concordance or reference bible and find the following and similar phrases: "The lowest hell," "turned into hell," "my soul in hell," "go down quick into hell," "hell from beneath," "depths of hell," "cast down to hell," "dig into hell," "nether parts of the earth," "down into the pit," "Abraham afar off," "great gulf fixed," "key of the bottomless pit," "keys of hell and death." When you knock the bottom out of a tub you have the sides left, unless it falls to staves. When God perforated the earth, he made an incision quite large enough for David's "bed," as well as the rich man and the wicked hosts "with all the nations that forget God," or never learn of him aright.

Having located the temporary abode of the majority, we wish to enquire into the whereabouts of the minority. The sun is the headquarters or habitation of the glorified of this solar system. Our bodies are "terrestrial" now, but when we "put on immortality" we will be changed to "celestial," or the "glory of the sun." God is "in the sun," and the light thereof, and Jesus is at his "right hand," while the immortals are heirs of the Father, and joint heirs with the Son. The foretaste is "the heavenly gift," "the Holy Ghost," "the good word of God," and "powers of the world to come." John spoke of the church under the figure of a "woman clothed with the sun," which means the accompaniment of the glory and light of God's spiritual law. When this earth is redeemed it will be self-luminous, like the sun; hence it will be heaven in the grand absolute. We will not obtain our light from other constellations, or artificial means; but God will lighten the new earth. When the child of Mary was transfigured into "excellent glory," "his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as light." After "this same Jesus" was clothed with omnipotent power on earth, and glorified in heaven, Saul of Tarsus, in rehearsing his conversion to Agrippa, said, "At midday, O King, I saw in the way a light from heaven above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me, and them that journeyed with me." We do not hold that the planets will be blotted out of existence; but simply look for the time when "the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." See Psalms 37; Isaiah 60; Rev. 21st and 22d.

Having taken a cursory glance at some of the outposts, we will return to our present environments. This fleeting now is filled with grave responsibilities. We can reflect on the past and anticipate the future, but this fleeting present is what we ought to occupy. When I read, or otherwise learn of blessings received, and joyful expectations entertained, by the loved children of Zion, how it cheers and strengthens my poor wayward heart. When I behold the operation of seditions, schismatic sticklers, that are blatant about "the law," "order," "the spirit," "justice," "right," &c., my soul is burdened with pity and contempt. We are sadly over stocked with these charlatans, that, not only prevent the spread of the gospel, but work seriously against the growth and peace of the membership at large. This everlasting pulling, hauling and wrangling, has an unclean devil for its chief inspirer; howbeit his saintly subjects might even speak in tongues or prophesy, and that too in the absence of charity. Some may say the penman is opposed to the gifts, because he does not countenance these presumptuous, perverse, benighted spirits. I greatly rejoice in the signs, miracles, gifts and manifestations of the Holy Ghost; and like Moses, "would to God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that he would put his Spirit upon all of them."

I hope and pray that our district malcontents may repent thoroughly, and learn to cooperate, or be brought to silence for the very work's sake. Individually I propose to "keep the even tenor of my way," and redouble my diligence when I see these evils creeping into the church: "For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you." "Then said he unto his disciples, It is impossible but that offenses come; but woe unto him through whom they come." Give none offense, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God, "that the ministry be not blamed."

These strange freaks, and awful perversions are chastisements, or trials of our faith. The salt sea waves give bounds to the habitation of man; and we are of the firm conviction, that these petty annoyances should be circumscribed. "But they shall proceed no further; for their folly should be made manifest unto all men, as theirs also was." (2 Tim. 3:9). "There hath no temptation taken you, but such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that you may be able to bear it." 1 Cor. 10:13. "Have salt in yourself, and be at peace one with another," Mark 9:50. "Great peace have they which love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." Psalms 119:165.

We do not want to be ruled with severity, nor do we wish to lord it over any one, but simply to respect and honor those dignitaries to whom honor is due. I have been corrected and reproved by my superiors a very few times; and partially called in question the necessity for; or, at least, the propriety of the service; but I never have impugned the motives, or allowed any root of bitterness to spring up and grow in my heart. When there is a painful necessity for a rebuke, the one that uses the rod should hasten to apply the balm. Palliatives on a rotten tooth are mis-spent mercies; and overdrawn forbearance not only defeats the objects in view, but widens the breach. Because apostate priests have usurped authority, and imposed ponderous burdens, some have unadvisably "cut cable" and become a law to themselves.

The first fortnight of this year we delivered a series of discourses here, and had good attendance and liberty. On to-morrow we are to hold forth in Buffalo Prairie Church, and then away to points in Knox county. I feel healthy in body, vigorous in spirit, firm in purpose and very confident of the ultimate triumphs of this system of faith and works. My caution tells me that the depravity of the race is very great, and the deceit of the heart is alarming; but that God's mercy is unbounded, and therefore help is forthcoming. "Science falsely so called," and demons are mustering their squadrons, but the good Lord will have power over his own, and bear them off to a most glorious victory. Great blessings for the righteous and divers calamities for the wicked, will surely multiply. The power of the priesthood will perpetuate the truth in the land; and the designs and purposes of Jehovah will spread abroad and flourish all through the world, either for weal or woe. The conflict may grow more fierce, but let us "die in the harness," if we are not permitted to behold, in the flesh, the King in his glory. I joy in the prosperity of the work, and when the wheels of progress seem to roll backward, I feel as blue and heavy as lead. My spiritual barometer fluctuates with the fortunes and misfortunes of this church, although Paul said, "Let every man prove his own work, and then he shall have rejoicing in himself, alone, and not in another." I may be somewhat uncouth and impulsive, but I ever strive to cultivate a forgiving disposition. I bear malice to nobody, but love the works of our Creator, in all the grades of intellectuality, and in the endless variety of animate and inanimate matter. As a factor of his hand I worship at his shrine, for he also beholds the tiniest flower, the feeblest bird, or the smallest animalcule of the briny deep. Let his praise reverberate through the glad earth, while his glory permeates the ages and illumines the heavens.

M. T. SHORT.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Illinois,
January 15th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Our conference was held on the 5th and 6th of this month, and notwithstanding the extremely cold weather, we had a good attendance, and the Lord was present with us by his Spirit. He is comforting his Saints, and inspiring them continually, so that they are now moving hand in hand with the Lord. The Saints of the St. Louis District will never look back again. We can not any longer afford to let the work of God suffer, but are determined by his authority and Spirit, which have been given to us, to raise high the everlasting gospel standard, and to cry aloud to our fellow men everywhere to repent of their sins, and exercise faith in a living and loving Savior. The Saints here are realizing now, that it is a most glorious thing to be in fellowship with God, and to enjoy his bright smiles, and to have the assurance that he will make all powers bend, and bow low in humble submission, that his will may be done now upon the earth by his Saints. They rejoice that they live in this great day in which God has so often spoken from the heavens to his prophets and Saints, and declared to them what his will was and is now. A resolution was passed at conference to build a house of worship in St. Louis, suitable to hold conference in, even the General Conference, if at any time we should be honored with such a privilege. A building committee was appointed, and requested to open books of subscription and to collect money from all who desired to see a house built in St. Louis for the purpose named. Bro. Alexander H. Smith left here for home last Wednesday. The Saints were well pleased with his visit here. He held two days' meetings in nearly all of the branches, and visited amongst the Saints. During his stay he preached in St. Louis every Sunday, to large and increasing congregations of Saints and people. They will be most happy to hear of him coming here again soon. It is also desired that he should bring the Bishop with him, or one of the Bishop's counselors, that the temporal law of God might be expounded, in order that we may be the more able to chase darkness from among us, and walk in all of the freedom and light of the gospel. Bro. Alexander's preaching in this district was grand. It lifted us right where God could reach us in his own way, and we believe that much of his labor will be as good seed in good ground, and will bring forth abundantly to the standing and increase of the Saints. Bro. Joseph, I pray that the Lord may bless you now, after your long labor and patient waiting and praying for the unity of the Saints, and full obedience to God's law.

Your brother in Christ,

JOHN BEAIRD.

KEOKUK, Ia., December 29th, 1883.

To the Herald Readers:—I have been laboring some in Henry county, and stopped with Brother Marion Dorothy. Held four meetings. The soil seemed in a good condition to receive the seed, but time will test its depth. I think of going back soon.

I attended the Burlington conference, then went out to Van Buren county, and stopped with Bro. Joseph Benjamin. Spent a week with him and the rest of the Saints. They were baptized by J. H. Lake, and are still strong in the faith. I held four meetings there, had good time, and good turn out. They are anxious to hear the gospel, and want more preaching. I came home December 25th, and attended the Christmas tree in our little church. Had a good time, saw many bright faces of the children. Our branch is still having good meetings, and is looking for Bro. Wm. Smith and H. C. Bronson. Still hope to be faithful, labor in the field, and do all the good I can in this life.

Still remain your brother,

B. F. DURFEE.

DETROIT, Minnesota,

January 13th, 1884.

Dear Brother:—We are made glad by the weekly appearance of the Herald. We have not had a Saints' meeting within our reach for about five years; yet we are trying to keep alive, and to let our light shine here in this cold north-west. We don't want to believe that the people are so wicked that God won't send us preaching. We believe it is for want of means. We were made glad again this week by two noisy, shouting preachers. They came to hold forth a week, but gave it up after three or four nights. They preached nights, and called among the neighbors days, and prayed for them. Finally they came and prayed for us, but they did not tell the Lord in their prayers, to seize us, as I heard they did at one house; but they made some noise. When they were done, I told them I had no fault to find with their prayers, but their groaning and such noise was uncalled for. I told them if all had made as much on the day of Pentecost, it must have been frightful indeed.

That night they were left to stay in the school-house, when it was extremely cold. Next night I sent my girls to tell them if they got no better chance, to come to the old Mormon's, and he would take better care of them; so they came. Next morning we showed them the fall of the old church, and its being wiped out by the old Roman Church, also its rise in these last days; also of the birth of water and the spirit, also the need of a Holy Priesthood. They told me how they were called. I told them Giteau was called the same way to kill our president. The only place they stuck on was that Christ's blood was applied to their hearts by praying. I told them they could not pray themselves into the law of Christ. We tried to teach them a more perfect way than that they had. They went home saying they were glad they came to see us, and promised to come again. They appeared to be good, honest men.

Jan. 20th.—I meditate much on the word of God, and on dreams and visions from my boyhood; the Bible unfolds to me clearly and beautifully, my dreams and visions. A robe that was given me by a personage long ago, having on a white robe also, has been made clear and plain. I wish to say to my brethren, and all who may be concerned, and those who have seen this glow in the heavens, that the bridegroom will come sooner or later, and he will expect a bride. To some it will be given to know the spirit by which this is written. If any desire, drop me a line, and I will date back some years, and give something of an outline of my life.

A. TABBUT.

BUCHANAN, Henry Co., Tenn.,
January 15th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—The Eagle Creek Branch has been disorganized by removal, but is now reorganized by brethren Frank P. Scarcliff, and W. H. Griffin. Brother Scarcliff and wife visited us a short time ago. We are trying to keep the camp fire blazing, to roll on the good work of the Master. Brother Griffin is preaching once a month for us. Persecution seems not so great as heretofore. We are taught when we are persecuted, to rejoice and be exceeding glad; for great shall be our reward. We desire an interest in the prayers of all Saints, that we may hold out faithful to the end.

I subscribe myself your brother in love.

DOW CITY, Iowa,

January, 1884.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins:—Our conference in December was well attended, and a good spirit was manifested throughout. Bro. E. C. Briggs was with us a part of the time, and remained over and preached for us a few evenings, much to the edification and instruction of the Saints and friends who came out to hear him. Since then Bro. Derry has been amongst us, cheering and blessing us with timely and encouraging instruction. The weather was intensely cold while he was with us, preventing many from coming out to hear him, who were desirous of doing so. The health of the brethren so far as I know is good, except that of Bro. John A. McIntosh. The weight of years is upon him. But it affords comfort to us as well as to him, to feel the assurance that he has "fought the good fight, that he has kept the faith, and that from henceforth is laid up for him a crown of righteousness." May it be so said of us!

Yours in the bonds of peace,

JOHN PERR.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 17th.—Events thicken. Bismarck's right-hand man and confidant, the Count von Hatzfeld, who arrived in Rome on an important special mission two days ago, has "gone to Canossa" for the Chancellor. He has already had two long interviews with Cardinal Jacobini, the Papal Secretary of State, and drove away from his hotel this morning in great state to the Vatican, where he was closeted with the Holy Father.

It is stated on good authority that a perfect understanding exists between the Sultan and Mr. Gladstone about extending Turkish authority on the western shore of the Red Sea. Preparations are now actively going on to dispatch to Jiddah a much larger quantity of troops than was originally contemplated. Orders have been sent to the Turkish squadron to rendezvous at Jiddah and to await the arrival of troops. Twenty-five army surgeons have been appointed for service at Suakin, and will start immediately. The advance guard of the Turkish army has orders to occupy Suakin the moment Baker Pasha's force starts for the interior or returns to Suez. The Governor-General of Soudan reports that the insurgents have cut off the retreat of the garrisons in the province of Sennaar and rendered the Nile impassable below Duem by sinking boats. The relief of Sinkat is considered hopeless. There are 27,000 rebels between Suakin and Sinkat.

The Chinese seem to be in earnest in the defence of Canton. Junks are dumping stores on the north beach below Wampo. Back of the beach piles are being driven for a bridge, where a bamboo bridge a mile long crosses the rice-fields. Both barriers are covered with heavy batteries mounted on earth works. On both sides of the river and on the intervening island are large encampments of soldiers. In the forts and in the vicinity of Canton drilling was going on yesterday. Today they are executing evolutions and firing blank cartridges. The artillerymen have constant target practice with sixteen-ton guns. The French Consul at Canton protests against the blockade of the river. The German Consul has referred the matter to his Minister at Peking.

It is said the English Charge d'Affaires at Peking has induced the Chinese Cabinet to declare that China will be satisfied if the French abstain from invading Lang Son and Cao Binh. The Chinese forces at Bac Ninh have been ordered to withdraw twenty-five leagues northward. The mediation of America after the capture of Bac Ninh is considered certain.

The nephew of Lieut.-Col. Sudeikin, wounded by the Nihilists who assassinated his uncle, died today without recovering consciousness. The murder of Col. Sudeikin has exercised a terribly depressing effect among the higher Russian officials. The Emperor summoned Count Tolstoi, the Minister of the Interior, and violently reproached him for lack of energy and incapacity. Tolstoi thereupon resigned.

At Rome a conference is discussing the project of a uniform hour system with a common meridian. A diplomatic conference will assemble at Washington shortly to effect an international agreement on the subject.

The North German Gazette announces that new treaties between Germany and Corea were concluded Nov. 26, 1883. They contain more favorable conditions than the treaty of 1882, and secure to Germany the same rights and privileges regarding commerce and navigation as are enjoyed by China and Japan.

At Paris the Communists have recently made very impudent demonstrations in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies.

The second session of the fifth Parliament of Canada opened at Ottawa yesterday.

Baron St. Luzanne, Governor-General of Monaco, is dead.

The House passed the Senate bill appropriating $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River.

Gov. Hale, of Wyoming, delivered his message to the Legislature yesterday.

Robert Harris was yesterday elected President of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company instead of Villard.

Iowa's new State Capitol at Des Moines was dedicated yesterday. The Hon. John A. Kasson made the principal address.

In accordance with the correct ideas of Jersey justice, James Egan, formerly Speaker of the House of Representatives of that Commonwealth, has been fined, imprisoned, and forever disqualified from holding office. His offense was having attempted to bribe a fellow-member.

Jan. 18th.—It is denied at Paris, that the United States will mediate between China and France. Six new gunboats have been ordered built for the French fleet in Tonquin waters. In consequence of the protest of the British Government, the work of obstructing the Canton River has been suspended by the Chinese. An attache of the French Legation in an interview said France was determined to take Bac Ninh at all costs. When that object was accomplished she would be ready to accept the mediation of England or the United States.

An official dispatch states the whole country around Khartoum is in open rebellion against Egyptian Government. Eight Egyptian officials, including the Governor of the town, have been hanged at El Obeid. Their heads were fixed upon poles in front of El Mahdi's residence.

The King of Spain has accepted the resignation of the Ministry; and, in view of the impossibility of effecting an agreement with the Liberals, charged Canovas del Castillo, Conservative, with the formation of a new Cabinet.

There were 5,491 persons assisted last year by the United Hebrew Relief Association, of whom the majority were genuine or pretended Russian refugees.

There are now about a thousand Americans in the Territory of Alaska. They are appealing for the establishment at once of a government over that country, which is said to possess inexhaustible stores of timber, fish and minerals.

Irish land shows a continuous tendency to go out of cultivation—the area under all crops being this year but 15,151,230 acres, as against 15,212,390 last year, and 15,304,235 the year before. The decline extends alike to corn, green crops, flax, and rotation grasses; and even potatoes occupy 30,000 acres less than in 1882. The decrease in the area under wheat is enormous, amounting to less than 58,000 acres or nearly 38 per cent. The growth in permanent pasture does not, as in England, keep pace with the abandonment of tillage. On the contrary, the cultivated area in the whole of Ireland shows a diminution in the year of more than 60,000 acres. There is some increase in the number of cattle, and a slight increase in sheep and lambs; but the number of both the latter is about 28 per cent less than two years ago. In pigs there has been a decrease for the year of over 100,000.

Jan. 19th.—The new Spanish Ministry is as follows: President of the Council—Canovas Del Castillo. Minister of Foreign Affairs—De Elduayen. Minister of Finance—Cos Gayon. Minister of the Interior—Romero y Robledo. Minister of Justice—Silvela. Minister of Commerce and Agriculture—Pidal y Mon. Minister of War—De Miravalles. Minister of Marine—Admiral Anlequera. Minister of Colonies—Tajada Valdozera.

The new Spanish Prime Minister announces that the programme of the Government will be based upon liberal lines, and he shall constantly endeavor to keep free from international politics.

A dispatch from Hoi-How states that Chinese troops from Canton have landed there with stores and torpedoes. The English Vice-Consul asks for a gunboat.

The position of the troops and Europeans at Khartoum is most critical. Their retreat is cut off. The Arabs hold both sides of the river. The Arabs are also closing around Berber. The general cry is, "Who shall help us; we are deserted." The rebels captured, within three hours' march from Suakin, the Sheik Moussa, who recently brought in half his tribe, which had joined the rebels. His tribemen have gone to rescue him, and a portion of the garrison has gone out to support them. Osman Digna, chief of the rebels, sent a communication refusing to negotiate with the Egyptians. He occupies a position on the Sinkat route twenty-seven miles from Suakin. It is reported that Abyssinia demands the cession of Bogos Terry and Port Massowah under threat that the King will declare war. Egypt is willing to cede Bogos and Port Zoulla, South Massowah, on condition that Abyssinia operates against El Mahdi.

The accession of the Conservatives to office in Spain is held, curiously enough, to better guarantee Radical and Republican quietude than the success of Sagasta's friends, who, on account of their lukewarmness, are more fiercely hated than open opponents. The army is uneasy, but Alfonso has the reputation of being a man to risk everything and to shoot first. France is also seriously disturbed. The destitution of a quarter of a million of people is acknowledged, and there seems some chance of the passage of a grant of 3,000,000 of francs to release the tools of mechanics from the pawn offices, the widest advance toward Socialism yet made, and a useless one, too, because work and not tools is what is wanted. Young Prince Victor is playing shrewdly for the Bonapartist succession by writing a letter in which, professing his filial obedience, he really discloses his readiness to supersede his father. He has also proved his orthodoxy by a big subscription to Peter's pence and by making an offer to visit the Pope, which the Holy See, with characteristic sagacity, declined. In Russia the clericals and the Government are at each other's throats again. The Nihilists have given up the printing press, and now employ the hektograph. The murderers of Sudeikin have probably escaped, and while the Czar and his Ministers are trembling in their skins the general population of St. Petersburg is described as going as gayly to the theatres as the Parisians did during the regime of Robespierre. Down in far Croatia the Diet, disturbed by the obstruction of one member and the rotten-egging of another, is deep in all the mysteries of "naming," suspension, and cloture, and the Chinese and French Embassies in London have been telling the interviewer with equal emphasis that they mean fight.

The attacks upon landlords, which form one of the features in English journalism, are getting more and more personal.

A secret printing office has been discovered at St. Petersburg and eighteen persons arrested.

Col. Stuart Knox, County Grand Master of the Orangemen, has issued an appeal to the Orangemen of Tyrone to march Thursday next and demand justice for the murder of young Griffen at Dromore.

Jan. 20.—It is believed at Cairo that Sir Evelyn Baring, the British Commissioner in Egypt, has practically superseded the Khedive and is now the real ruler of the country. Dispatches from Khartoum state that a great army of El Mahdi's followers is expected to attack that place within ten days. Colonel Coetlogan telegraphs that the rebels are actively recruiting almost within sight of Khartoum. The reports from Cairo of wholesale massacres in the Soudan are generally discredited at Khartoum. The Italian gunboat Rapido has arrived at Suakin to protect the interests of Italian merchants and residents.

There was a large gathering of the Orangemen of Formanagh County at Enniskillen, Ireland, yesterday, and a meeting of the Irish National League was held at the same time and place. The result was a riot. The police made a charge upon the factions while the fight was in progress and were attacked by the rioters with stones and other missiles. Two of the constables were severely injured. Many arrests were made. A large meeting of Nationalists was also held at Boyle, but there was no disturbance, as the Orangemen refrained from attending the meeting.

Jan. 21.—Seven hundred black recruits for the Egyptian army had to be driven by cavalry to the train at London, Eng., waiting to transport them to Suez. The Lord Mayor has been requested to grant the use of Guild Hall for a meeting to protest against the evacuation of the Soudan.

The Porte telegraphed the Turkish Ambassador at London to exchange views with the British Government in regard to Egypt, owing to the decision to evacuate the Soudan without consulting the Porte. The Khedive has received a telegram from the Governor of the Soudan saying that on the arrival at Khartoum of the garrison of Sennaar, which is shortly expected, the town will be able to repulse any attack.

Baker Pasha's negotiations with the tribal chiefs have been successful. The Sheiks who visited the Egyptian camp represent 35,000 men who are willing to fight. A large body of Arabs from tribes actually with the rebels have entered camp. It is stated that a retreat on Berber has been proclaimed at Khartoum. Independently of the army 25,000 persons must quit the town.

Jan. 22.—It is stated that Admiral Courbet has been instructed not to attack Bacninh for the present.

The total number of soldiers in Khartoum is 6,100, of which 2,000 are Chaggias, and are known to be disaffected. The black troops are also unreliable, and the whole garrison is in a state of demoralization on account of the long arrears of pay. There are only two small steamers that navigate the river to Berber. It is evident that the evacuation of Khartoum will take months. Meantime the rebel forces are daily increasing south of the town. It is also reported that rebels are coming from the west. Saia Bey repelled an attack by the rebels near Mesalamia. The information at Cairo is that there is disaffection among the troops at Khartoum. Officers and men are confident of withstanding a siege. A Sheik living near Khartoum has received a letter from El Mahdi with a number of Remington rifles. He is consequently beating the war-drum. A gunboat is soon to demand the rifles. If refused the Sheik's village will be burned.

Intelligence received at Athens, Greece, from the Turkish Capital states that notwithstanding the recent suggestions of the Porte, no preparations have as yet been made by the authorities for the dispatch of gunboats to Suakin. A telegram has been received at Khartoum announcing that the only survivor of Hicks Pasha's army is a servant of Major von Seckendorff.

It is reported that Madagascar has accepted the French ultimatum.

A Frenchman and a Portuguese have been arrested in Madrid suspected of meditating an attack upon King Alfonso.

The London East India Association has sent a memorial to the President of the Council of India, urging the desirability of extending the railways in India to enable India to compete with America in the supply of wheat and seed cotton.

James Nutt, the slayer of Dukes, who betrayed his sister and slew his father, was acquitted at Pittsburg, Pa., to-day. Counsel for defendant said in his speech to the jury, that historically, there had been no case in 200 years where a jury had convicted a man who had slain the traducer of a wife or sister's honor. He closed with an appeal to the jury to render a verdict of acquittal without leaving the box.

Jan. 23d.—Central Pacific railroad has agreed to pay a million dollars of back-taxes in California.

There is great agitation in commercial-circles at Buenos Ayres, South America, on account of the new taxes on intoxicants. The first National Bank of Leadville, Colorado, failed, with deposits amounting to $325,000.

Jan. 23.—Sir Charles Dilke, in speaking at Kensington, said England had no interest in maintaining Egyptian domination throughout the Soudan. England would, however, maintain domination upon the Red Sea, especially with the view to prevent the slave trade. There are many persons who consider vanished the influence "Chinese" Gordon had in the Soudan, and think he will run the risk of assassination at the hands of the rebels. Two Sheikhs accompany him to Khartoum. Gen. Wood, commander of the British troops, has gone to Port Said to meet "Chinese" Gordon. Baker Pasha has gone to Trinkitat to attempt to relieve Toka.

A Hong Kong dispatch points out that French occupation of Chusan, Formosa, or Hainan would amount to a casus belli with England, as according to the treaty of 1846, it was stipulated that, upon the evacuation of Chusan by the British, it should never be ceded to any other foreign power, and England undertook, in the event of an attack, to protect the Chusan dependencies and restore them to China. The Chinese could and would insist upon the fulfillment of these stipulations.

The Irish Times states that the British Home Office and police have been warned that serious steps are being taken to perpetrate outrages in England in connection with the New York Irish World's "O'Donnell's vengeance fund." It is stated that of £1,800 subscribed to the fund between £600 and £800 was forwarded to London last week. English detectives are working hard to trace the holders of the money.

A force of Uhlans has been ordered to Croatia in view of expected disturbances.

A number of Krupp guns have been landed in Madagascar and sent to the Capital. The Arabs have commenced the slave trade on the West Coast, where 1,000 African slaves have been landed.

It is stated that, notwithstanding the recent change in the Ministry of Madrid, Germany still favors Spain's ambition to rank among the great Powers, by the conversion of the Spanish Legation at Berlin and the German Legation at Madrid into Embassies, but Germany will wait the initiative from Madrid.

There are twenty-three cases of smallpox in the Indianapolis, Ind., jail.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 17.—The reformatory ship Clarence burned on the River Mersey, near Liverpool. All on board were saved.

The fire in S. W. Silver & Co.'s publishing house at London caused a damage of £35,000.

The hotel at Las Vegas, N. M., has been destroyed by fire. It was an immense structure, delightfully situated. Loss $250,000.

New York City had another fire. Property in Exchange court was destroyed to the amount of $200,000. Hotel at Suwanee, Fla., burned; loss $51,000. Loss by fire at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, $55,000. Canastota, N. Y., $70,000.

Near Scranton, Pa., last night nine powder-mills blew up. It was thought at a late hour that many people had lost their lives.

Jan. 18th.—Loss by fire at Lockport, N. Y., paper mill, $60,000. Kankakee, Ill., railroad depot, $4,000. Washington, Kas., postoffice and business buildings, $58,000. Junction City, Ky., postoffice and business buildings, $35,000. Newark, N. J., $30,000. Providence, R. I., bank building, $50,000.

A great rain-storm has prevailed for many hours in the Southern States.

A terrific explosion took place yesterday morning in the Cold Springs Chemical Works near Allentown, Pa., wrecking a portion of the building, killing three men, and terribly mutilating three others.

The whole North End of Boston was violently shaken by a terrific explosion, probably of gas, about one o'clock this morning. Two men passing the building in which it occurred at the time, were knocked down and severely injured.

A boiler explosion in Rochester, N. H., caused the death of four men, and injured several others.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock last night fire was discovered in the boiler-room of the Consumers' Powder Company's mills at Storrs Junction, Pa., on a branch of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad. No provisions had been made for extinguishing fire, and the efforts of the watchman and Superintendent to quench the flames with pails of water were futile. In a short time the building, which included the grist mill, was in flames. Half an hour afterward the sparks set fire to the barrel-house, in which there was considerable powder in process of preparation. A terrific explosion occurred, and the villages for miles around were shaken. The fire had attracted to the scene a large number of people from Peckville, about a mile and a half away. When the explosion occurred four young men, fearing further explosions, started down the Peckville road. They had gone about half a mile when they were startled by another detonation. The press-mill had exploded, and the young men prostrated themselves upon the ground. When the shock passed away all of them, with the exception of L. H. Emory, bookkeeper of the Grassy Island Coal Company, arose. A heavy piece of casting had struck him on the back of the neck and nearly severed his head from his body. Another piece of machinery struck and broke one of the legs of another bookkeeper named Williams, who had sought safety in the dense woods that encircle the works. Following the destruction of the press-mill the canning-mill exploded and demolished the canister-house. About 2,000 kegs of powder were destroyed. The works were erected last summer, and all the machinery was new and of the best pattern. The loss is $50,000, with no insurance. The fire was of incendiary origin.

A marine catastrophe of the greatest note since the wreck of the Cimbria is recorded this morning. The steamer City of Columbus, plying between Boston and Savannah, left Boston at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon, carrying eighty-two first-class and twenty-two steerage passengers. Women and children made up about one-third of these two lists. The crew numbered forty-five men. The total number of people on board is thus placed at 147. At 3:45 a. m. yesterday, while off the Island of Martha's Vineyard, at a point thirty miles directly south of New Bedford, Mass., the vessel went on a double ledge of submerged rocks and keeled over. A majority of the passengers got on deck. All the boats were swamped. Many persons left the vessel in various descriptions of floating devices, but all lost their lives save seventeen, who were rescued from the rigging by the revenue-cutter Dexter. Four other people died on board the cutter. The Captain was among the survivors. About 130 lives are believed to have been lost. The ledges of rock which wrecked the Columbus are off Gay's Head Lights, to the south.

Jan. 19th.—A boiler explosion in Cincinnati, O., caused a loss of $103,000. Loss by fire at Lipsic, O., $35,000. Lowell, Mich., $25,000. Minden, La., $53,000. Carfer, N. Y., canning factory, $8,000. Lucknow, Ont., grist mill $12,000.

A saw mill boiler burst near Columbia, Ill., wrecking the engine and room, and severely injuring several persons. An iron foundry steam boiler at Natkins, N. Y., exploded. The floors, molds and roof of the building were brought down. Loss $5,000. An explosion in the oil works, at Williamsburg, N. Y., caused a loss of $1,000 and severely burned one man.

Jan. 20.—Loss by fire at Toronto, Ont., $40,000. Chicago, Ill., $150,000.

Jan. 21st.—Lusby's Music-Hall, in Whitechapel, London, was burned last night. Loss £40,000. Loss by fire at Clio, Mich., $35,000. Memphis, Tenn., $62,000. Elgin, Ill., $15,000. Hot Springs, Ark., $12,000. St. Paul, Minn., $20,000. Vistula, Ind., $5,000.

A train was derailed near Macon, Mo., and several persons injured.

Jan. 22d.—Two serious fires are reported from Canada. A sugar-refinery at Montreal burned, with a loss of $150,000, and the Commercial Hotel and several business buildings at Cornwall, Ont., were destroyed, involving a loss of $100,000. The Y. M. C. A. at Cornwall was burned out. Loss by fire at Wilkesbarre, Pa., $100,000. Youngstown, O., $8,000. Laporte, Ind., $6,000. Minneapolis, Minn., $10,000. Bristol, Conn., $25,000.

A railway accident near Dayton, O., on the Toledo, Cincinnati & St. Louis, injured seven people badly and hurt fourteen other passengers less seriously.

Jan. 23d.—Twenty-two families were burned out and made destitute by a fire in Wood Haven, L. I.

Loss by fire at Hamilton, Ont., $16,000. Arkansas City, Ark., block of business houses, $75,000.

A heavy gale that is prevailing throughout the British Isles, and along the coast is seriously interfering with the telegraph lines. The wires at all points are prostrated. The storm extends throughout the Kingdom. Five men and five women lost their lives.

An explosion in the Province of Mine, Germany, killed sixteen persons.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

WE will now introduce some of Mr. Smith's prophecies, uttered in the name of the Lord, and see if they vindicate his claims to Divine authority and prophetic commission. But before we commence the trial, we will introduce the Divine standard, by which we propose to conduct our inquiry.

"If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign, or a wonder, and the sign, or the wonder come to pass whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go serve other Gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them, thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams; for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul." (Deut. 13:1-3).

By this rule, though given to ancient Israel, we are informed that if any man comes among us claiming to be supernaturally endowed, and gives signs and wonders, and they come to pass, yet, if he teaches doctrines or principles that conflict with, or contradict the doctrines revealed to us of God, in any given dispensation, when we may be living, we are not to follow that man. Again:

"When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously; thou shalt not be afraid of him."—Deut. 18:22.

On one occasion two prophets collided in their prophetic statements, in reference to the duration of the captivity of Israel in the kingdom of Babylon, Jeremiah stating they would remain seventy years, and Hananiah prophesying their return to Canaan in two full years, Jeremiah submitted the following to the people as a final decision of the controversy.

"The prophets that have been before me, and before thee of old, prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence. The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known that the Lord hath truly sent him."

The Savior submitted his prophecies to this test. (Jer. 28:8, 9; John 14:28, 29).

In the light of the foregoing Biblical prophet-test, let us examine some of the prophecies of Joseph Smith, the Martyr. During the year's intervening between 1823 to 1830, after the first visit of the angel of God to Mr. Smith, he informed those with whom he was associated at that period, that the angel said that "the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ" was about to "brought forth by the power of God, it shall be carried to the Gentiles, of whom many will receive it, and after will the seed of Israel be brought into the fold of their Redeemer by obeying it also." That by it "will the Lord work a great and marvelous work; the wisdom of the wise shall become as nought, and the understanding of the prudent shall be hid, and because the power of God shall be displayed, those who profess to know the truth, but walk in deceit, shall tremble with anger; but with signs and with wonders, with gifts and with healings, with the manifestations of the power of God, and with the Holy Ghost, shall the hearts of the faithful be comforted." As these communications began to be published abroad, opposition began, persecutions commenced. The high and the low, the rich and the poor, the pulpit and the press, both secular and religious, alike engaged in opposition to the development of the word. All human probabilities forbade the idea of the work going forth, much less its assuming the proportions of "a marvelous work and a wonder." But notwithstanding the fact that added to the combined opposition just mentioned, with the combining of secret organizations called mobs, when the time arrived for the gospel restored to begin to be preached, honest men and women began to believe and accept of the teachings; and notwithstanding the fact that the believing ones had to flee from place to place, and the further fact that the history of Joseph Smith's life was one of continued and very cruel mockings, mobbings, persecutions bitter; with imprisonments oft, and beset on every hand with enemies, to the end of his brief ministerial career, he lived to see the "fulness of the gospel" go forth to the Gentiles—several nations,—of whom some two hundred thousand had received it, in the short space of about fourteen years from the time the church was organized, in the year 1830. No man claiming to be called of God to the accomplishment of a work for the Lord, could more effectually lay his claims open to the world of mankind to be tested, and proved by mankind to be either true or false, than to declare that those faithful to the conditions submitted by the claimant, should be comforted with the manifestations of the power of God, with healings, and the gifts of the Holy Ghost. Yet such was the frankness and openness of the message set forth in the claims of Joseph, as certified to him by the angel of the Lord fifty-two years ago. If this great promise was not realized by those who accept the latter day work, it seems rather unreasonable that honest men and women in this great land of religious liberty, where all are so highly civilized, would continue to adhere to, and live in the work all their lifetime; and testify to all that the blessings as promised are realized. Such would not be the course taken by rational beings.

Now, it is almost invariably the course of impostors, "wolves in sheep's clothing," when seeking to obtain a following, to array themselves in the garb the sheep are used to, to teach such things as will take with the people. But unlike the would be great ones that preceded Mr. Smith, he did not fall in with the popular tide in any respect, neither in doctrine, principle, or the developments of the future. And while all the great world was expecting to see what they called Christianity, prevail over the world very rapidly, and the world become subject to the mild sceptre of Christ, the swords beat to plowshares, the spears into pruning hooks, and all the wars to cease; the nations settle all their difficulties by arbitration; and the glorious millennium dawn on the world; Joseph predicted in opposition to these opinions, that evil works and workers, would increase among men; that commotions and perplexities would lower over the nations of the earth, like clouds that threaten the peace, and awe the heart. That crime of every name and character would increase; that judgments awaited the people; that finally, peace would be taken from the earth; that a place of safety for the wicked would not be found.

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamities which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments unto others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world."—Doc. and Cov. 1:4.

"For a desolating scourge shall go forth among the inhabitants of the earth, and shall continue to be poured out from time to time, if they repent not, until the earth is empty, and the inhabitants thereof are consumed away, and utterly destroyed by the brightness of my coming."—Doc. and Cov. 4:3.

Since the above prophecies were uttered, from 52 to 53 years ago, the evils have increased in number and magnitude, till they become to the nations great "calamities," as stated in the prophecy. Such is Nihilism in Russia, spreading consternation throughout that vast domain. So also Socialism in the German Empire, and Communism in France. These three combinations acknowledge no obligations to the Deity whatever. Society is unsafe and unsettled where they exercise any influence whatever. The cholera, that "dreadful scourge," as it is called by many of our leading physicians, and of which they say, "Its essential character, and true origin are yet entirely unknown," appearing in Western Europe for the first, in 1831, went forth, laying waste at noonday, and destroying in midnight darkness, through Europe; visited England in 1832, and America the same year; and has "continued" to "be poured out from time to time" since. And plagues, famines, and pestilences of various kinds, have continued to increase, and the end, it seems is not yet.

After the church, in its doctrines, ordinances and its organization, began to be developed; and the work, which Joseph had predicted would become "a great and marvelous work," (Doctrine and Covenants, 3:1), began to be established; a goodly number of men were called to the ministry. It was the design of the Lord that the ministry so chosen should go forth among the people, and publish the gospel, and build up the church among them.

And that the ministry and the church might be more fully qualified for the work, and better prepared to meet and withstand the opposition to be brought to bear against them, not only through the power of argumentation, but through wily manifestations of false and deceptive spirits, then beginning to appear, and that they might be forewarned that such spirits were to become more prevalent and powerful. In June, 1831, the following revelation and prophecy were given to Joseph the Martyr:

"And again, I will give unto you a pattern in all things, that ye may not be deceived; for Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations; wherefore, he that prayeth whose spirit is contrite, the same is accepted of me, if he obey mine ordinances. He that speaketh, whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek, and edifieth, the same is of God, if he obey mine ordinances. And again, he that trembleth under my power shall be made strong, and shall bring forth fruits of praise, and wisdom, according to the revelations and truths which I have given you. And again, he that is overcome and bringeth not forth fruits, even according to this pattern, is not of me; wherefore by this pattern ye shall know the spirits in all cases, under the whole heavens."—Doc. and Cov. 52: 4, 5.

That this prophecy has been and is being fulfilled most signally, no one, either in or out of the church, at all acquainted with the history of the last forty years, can fail to see. There have been manifestations by false spirits, in given localities, in various ages of the world; but they never operate so powerfully and universally, as when the power of God, by the laws of the kingdom of God, is manifested among the children of men. Such was the case in the times of Noah, of Moses, (Ex. chaps. 7 and 8; 2 Tim. 3: 8), of Samuel and the prophets, (1 Sam. 28: 7-16; 1 Kings 22; Isa. 8: 19, 20). And in the time of Christ and the apostles. But we are not aware, that the history of the world affords a parallel to the last forty-three years, in the rapid and widespread developments of spiritualistic phenomena and influence. Who would have thought, in the year 1830, that following the restoration and promulgation of the everlasting gospel, there would be from six million to seven millions of those now called Spiritualists, of various phazes in the United States in fifty-two years from that date. Who would have thought that the doctrine of new revelation, then so universally and so strenuously denied, and opposed, would to-day be acknowledged as being true, and accepted in a hundred forms, by a vast majority of religiously inclined people of the age. At the same time, this vast majority of the people, so accepting this "new departure," as universally refuse to accept of the conditions—the "ordinances" of the gospel—as required by the pattern given in the prophecy. Indeed, a great proportion of the believers in the spirit manifestations and revelations of this age, deny the essentiality of any ordinance whatever; more especially those of the gospel, and a great many of them deny the deity of Christ himself.

And this class is daily increasing. No human foresight could have portrayed what is here foretold by this revelation to Joseph Smith. The great orthodox doctrine, at the time this prophecy was given, was, convert the world, morality is going to just flood the earth soon. The millennium will soon be here! Joseph's prophecy was just to the contrary. The tendency of the age, religiously, and the facts of present history show that orthodoxy, in this regard, is a miserable failure; while at the same time, they prove that Joseph Smith was a divinely inspired prophet, in a manner that rebukes all caviling, and with a certainty that is even astonishing! But according to the pattern given through Joseph Smith in the prophecy, no spiritual manifestation is to be accepted as Divine, that does not accord with, and confirm the principles and "ordinances" of the gospel of Christ. This but reiterates the entire teachings of the New Testament on this subject, and manifests a degree of wisdom which never characterized an impostor in any age of the world, so far as history informs us.

In order to show more fully, that Joseph Smith was not inclined in the least to follow along in the channel of popular opinion, or accept the teachings of those considered great; did not allow himself to be guided by what the popular world considered to be standard doctrines; was not influenced by those ideas taught to the world, by the clergy of his times, not even in his youth, especially with reference to cessation of wars, the bringing in of the millennium, through the moral prestige of the pulpit and the press, prior to the coming of Christ in glory, all of which was in human probabilities likely to be the case; but that he taught altogether differently, which is not the course taken by impostors. (See Gal. 1: 10; 2 Cor. 10: 12; John 7: 18). We quote the following prophecy, made by Christ to his disciples of old, with reference to the period just preceding his second coming, and the gathering of Israel, revealed anew to Joseph Smith in March, 1831.

"And in that day shall be heard of wars and rumors of wars, and the whole earth shall be in commotion, and men's hearts shall fail them, and they shall say that Christ delayeth his coming until the end of the earth. And the love of men shall wax cold, and iniquity shall abound; and when the time of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fulness of my gospel; but they receive it not, for they perceive not the light, and they turn their hearts from me, because of the precepts of men; and in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled; and there shall be men standing in that generation that shall not pass, until they shall see an overflowing scourge, for a desolating sickness shall come over the land; but my disciples shall stand in holy places, and shall not be moved; but among the wicked, men shall lift up their voices and curse God, and die. And there shall be earthquakes also, in divers places, and many desolations; yet men will harden their hearts against me, and they will take up the sword one against another, and they will kill one another."—Doc. and Cov. 45: 4.

H. W. Beecher, in a speech delivered at the village of Paw Paw, VanBuren county, Michigan, in the autumn of 1878, said, during the course of his remarks, "I prophesied twenty years ago, that wars would soon cease;" but he further stated that the tendency of the teachings of the times had led him "to prophesy falsely;" but in this he but expressed the universal sentiment of Christendom, ever since the opening of the century. The continual mutterings of the dissatisfied nations of earth at each other, together with the fact that no year has passed in the last twenty without war and commotion, attest the Divine inspiration of the opening sentences of the prophecy just quoted.

"The spiritual dearth that has been for some time, and that now so alarmingly prevails in religious circles, and that is, just now, causing the various religious parties to begin to institute measures to revive the churches; that at present induces the ministers to solemnly ask the question: Why are all the congregations in the cities composed almost wholly of women; that prompts the holding of Evangelical Conferences, or conventions, proves beyond question that 'the love of men' is waxing 'cold.'"—New York Tribune, of November 23d, 1881.

Dr. Rylance, of N. Y., Episcopal, says of the condition of the church, it is "very unsatisfactory," to a degree that is almost "discouraging." There is "much dead-wood" in the churches. "He deplors the prevalence of "scientific skepticism." "He regards the outlook as anything but hopeful." About one in nine of New York's population, exclusive of Catholics, are church going people.—Detroit Free Press. The rapid and widespread increase of crime in high places and low, crime of every character, proves most conclusively that the hearts of men are being hardened against the Lord, instead of being converted to him. Illustrative of this item of the prophecy, we glean from an article published in the Christian Weekly, of February 21st, 1880, concerning Nihilism, its rapid spread through Russia, Europe and America, and its objects and purposes:

"In one sentence, Nihilism means the overthrow and complete destruction of all existing institutions, religious, domestic, social, and civil, leaving for the next generation to build out of the ruins better ones. In their own language, the first thing to be done is to 'Tear out of our hearts the belief in the existence of God.' 'Our mission is one of universal, relentless, and terror-striking destruction.' The object of our organization is to concentrate all the forces of this world into an invincible and all-destroying power. Such is their own authoritative and open declaration of purpose. Of course, they justify assassination of all in authority, and the destruction by dagger and pistol and fire of all life and property, which stand in the way of their success."

The Contemporary Review, for January, 1880, affirms, that in Russia, Nihilism has an immense following. It is a well known fact that organizations, of similar principles exist in all the leading cities in the United States; and that their numbers increase daily. In a sermon preached a few months ago by Rev. Lewis Curtis, of Chicago, on "What ails our laws?" He says: "In the seven years between 1871 and 1878, the increase in the number of convicts in the United States was one hundred per cent." These facts indicate most plainly, that instead of the world being converted to Christianity, "They receive not the fulness of the gospel, for they perceive not the light," just as the prophecy before us indicates. Surely it ought to "be known, that the Lord hath truly sent that man,"—Joseph Smith—a prophet in these last days. In December, 1832, the Lord instructed "the first" elders of the church, that is, those who had been laboring in the missionary field for nearly two years, to gather together, for a little season, and while thus assembled, they were to apply themselves to the study of the truth, and to pray and fast, and "cleanse," "purify," and "sanctify," and "prepare" themselves to go forth to the work again soon, better qualified for the work, being endowed with power from on high, to a greater degree than formerly; being thus empowered to bear their "testimony" to the truth of the gospel, as restored to the people to whom it was declared. And that when the elders should comply with the requirements made of them, and go forth and preach the gospel, and should bear "testimony" to its truthfulness, Joseph prophesied to them saying:

"And after your testimony, cometh wrath and indignation upon the people; for after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground, and shall not be able to stand. And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea, heaving themselves beyond their bounds. And all things shall be in commotion; and surely men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people."—Doctrine and Covenants, 85: 25.

This prophecy is a strange one, and full of important points. It concerns things over which only the arm of Omnipotence holds power and control. He alone can so fashion events as to demonstrate this prophecy to be either true or false. Have "earthquakes" so increased in numbers and destructiveness since the year 1832, as to even frustrate the calculations and philosophy of the scientists of the hour? And have they "caused groanings" in the earth, unusually astonishing to investigators of Nature's phenomena?

The Prophetic Times, in an issue of 1868, says of this subject:

"The attention of the world is being forced to the contemplation of very startling phenomena of late, in the shape of earthquakes, tidal waves, etc. Disturbances of the earth, and of the tides of the sea, and of the course of nature, on an unprecedented scale, have been the subject of excited tidings from all quarters of the globe. Editors and scientific men have been led to pronounce upon them as among the most remarkable and extensive of which there is any written record."

On the subject of "earthquakes" and volcanos, the New York Sun of some three or four years ago, remarked:

"Such a universal pother in the bowels of the planet was never known before in human experience. * * Certain it is, that a great rebellion has taken place from some cause or other, (not known to scientists), and that the earth has been shaken from center to circumference. So far from there being any decrease of vigor in the igneous energies, they are more active than ever. * * All over the globe, as by general conspiracy and premeditated simultaneous movement, there has been a regular Walpurgis hellabaloo, and fiery dance of destruction and death."

The great calamity that came upon Iceland in the winter of 1874-5, caused by "earthquakes," was said to be "an unparalleled disaster." The outbreak began about Christmas and continued almost uninterruptedly till May following. "For seven weeks before Christmas the inhabitants were terrified by subterranean noises 'groanings' like thunder, which extended through nearly two thirds of the island." "Early in January, earthquakes followed in all directions. . . . More than eight hundred people were rendered homeless. . . . Early in March there seemed to be a general upheaval in the whole central portion of the island. . . . Amid tremendous shocks of thundering beneath, . . . they split open at the top, and vomited forth their burning contents upon the surface of the ground, covering a distance of two hundred miles." Ten thousand people are said to have lost nearly all their earthly possessions. "Several hundred persons are reported to have perished. The world-renowned geysers have dried up since the terrible eruptions began, and instead of water, these mysterious funnels emit immense quantities of hot smoke and ashes, which during the night, rising several thousand feet into the air, appear like gigantic columns of flameless fire, visible for hundreds of miles. It is said that no historic record of any volcanic eruption any where in the world compares with this, either in territory over which it extends, the number of newly opened craters, or the time of its duration."

During the year 1867, "earthquakes" visited St. Thomas, St. Croix, Tortola, Peter's Island, and Little Saba. There was immense loss of life, vessels and merchandise. Violent and very destructive "earthquakes" occurred at Kingston, Mayaguez, and at Porto Rico. There were one hundred and fourteen shocks of earthquakes at Porto Rico in eight days. "Earthquakes" shook up the West India islands, some of the smaller ones disappearing in 1867. The Pacific coast with its inhabitants, was torn and mangled by "earthquakes" in 1871, and many lives and immense amounts of property were destroyed by their ravages. Says a recent writer.

"The shocks have followed no particular direction, and been confined to no particular quarter of the earth."

"The Present Conflict of Science with Religion," written by Mr. Morris, on page 530, says of the earthquake at Arica:

"On the 13th of August, 1868, there occurred a fearful and most destructive earthquake on the Pacific coast of South America; those who perished by it were counted by tens of thousands, whilst the property destroyed could only be estimated by millions of dollars. The crust of the earth was swayed and upheaved a distance measured along the shore of some two hundred and fifty miles, while the disturbances extended far away under the sea."

Of this, one writer remarks:

"This produced undoubtedly the greatest commotion of the waters of the globe that has occurred since the days of Noah."

"Even in San Pedro Bay," continues the narrative, "full five thousand miles from the center of disturbance, a wave twice the height of an ordinary house, rolled in with unspeakable violence, only a few hours after the earthquake." Says the London Times of the year 1875:

"Out of the 365 days of 1875, one hundred were marked by terrestrial disturbances, of which authentic records exist." "It is estimated that no fewer than twenty thousand people lost their lives during the destruction caused by these earthquakes, while the damage to property was enormous."

We must not omit to mention the earthquake that visited Peru and Ecuador recently, probably ten years ago, by which ten cities and towns were destroyed and which resulted in the death of thirty-two thousand souls, and over three hundred millions of property; said to be "the most disastrous earthquake recorded since that fatal catastrophe, in which Lisbon and sixty thousand inhabitants perished in 1755. But why need we cite additional testimonies on this point? The foregoing is sufficient to establish the truth of this part of the prophecy in the minds of all reasonable, thinking persons. The untold destructions by "lightnings," that continually occur of late years, with the universal fear and dread that hovers over the world at the present time, caused by the terrible "voice of thunderings," need only be mentioned; connected with the awe with which the people are inspired when contemplating the subject, as attested by their own expressed fearful apprehensions, to verify the terms of the prophecy in this regard. We might quote at great length from numerous testimonies now before us, testimonies, too, of journalists and scientists, but the expressed fear and dread of society, caused by the destructions witnessed by them, in all parts of the world, through the agency of "the fierce and vivid lightnings," and the knowledge the people have of their increasing destructiveness, render it unnecessary.

THE STICK OF EPHRAIM.

DEAR HERALD:—The Heralds of September 1st and December 22d, 1883, are before me; the former containing an article from Bro. H. C. Bronson, and the latter one from Bro. Josiah Ells, both reviewing my article in Herald of July 28th, 1883, on the above subject. Both of these answers have caused me no little astonishment, for the following reasons: The writer of the first article plainly leaves the impression that no matter what the Bible and the Book of Mormon say upon this topic, whatever the Doctrine and Covenants has to say, (and this according to his understanding), that therefor that "should settle all controversy on this point." This position would be very unjust, brother, towards the Bible and the Book of Mormon, to say the least. I think, to every candid mind, in the nature of the question; the Bible and the Book of Mormon would come first, for touching the history of a people, or any question appertaining to that history, if that people's history strikes the point in question, they should be heard first, and their testimony is of more value than one of thousands of years afterwards, when neither the settling nor unsettling of that question criminales that "people." Again: the testimony of the party or book in question, as to his or its genealogy, I think will strike a candid mind as of the greatest weight.

I have not admitted that a conflict appears between the three books of the Church on this point. If both of these brethren will turn to my article, Herald July 28th, they will notice that I gave "vent to some of my difficulties in endeavoring to prove that it is the stick of Ephraim." Hence I expected if it was probable that I was in the dark, that any one replying to mine would take up those passages cited, one by one, and by analyzing, and by virtue of superior knowledge, would bring forth from "the store house" that light, that would plainly apply to those passages. But they have made special answer to the point of "tense," and the latter also; to the point of "stick," forgetting to analyze Ezek. 37: 16, 19, and those that follow, from the Bible and the Book of Mormon, which writing I had preceded with the statement of "the more proper thoughts." Upon the question of tense, I have for some time been aware that some expressions of past tense form, were not fulfilled till succeeding ages. But shall we conclude that therefore all expressions of Holy Writ in the past tense form, signify futurity? Let us see just one.

"But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren."—Luke 22: 32.

Are we to understand that this special prayer of Christ for Simon, had not yet been offered? I certainly think it had been. I agree with the brethren on those passages cited by them as to the time of fulfillment. Isaiah 9: 6, is of the same class; but, take those passages alone, in the absence of proof as to time of fulfillment, and then apply as we do, and we destroy a well established rule of language. Hence, you will notice, that citing a few like instances of expression that were not fulfilled till after years, does not prove my position "futile;" for the "tense" holds good till positive proof is submitted to the contrary. I never claimed for that point infallibility.

When you or any one asserts that the Book of Mormon contains a fulfillment of Hosea 8: 12, you have then shouldered the burthen of proof. The position of Bro. Ells, that a part is in the Bible and a part in the Book of Mormon, is a new one, and it strikes me that he is at variance with the Elders also. In simple terms, whenever the Book of Mormon is proven to contain "the great things of my law," then (and not before) can Hosea 8: 12 apply to that book; but until that time, custom of language should be observed. As to the "stick" in question I thank Bro. Ells for calling my attention to the first chapter of the Book of Mormon; however, the inference there in regard to the Bible, I can not yet harmonize with other things; for there are so many who have written that the Bible was kept on parchments rolled on sticks, (see Isaiah 8: 1. also), though likely there were various copies, and some were kept on "plates." However, I am perfectly willing to accept the thought that "sticks" and "records" are synonymous. The brother uses the word "records" frequently. Then the "stick of Ephraim" and the "records" of Ephraim are the same. "Of" is a preposition and shows a relation between "stick" or "records" and Ephraim; hence to be "of" it must come from, or be concerning them in chief; consequently, a book to be the "stick of Ephraim," must be a record from, or of Ephraim. Judah is the principal and kingly tribe of the Bible. Manasseh the principal and kingly tribe of the Book of Mormon. Hence it looks exceedingly strange that any one should affirm, that the Book of Mormon is the "stick of Ephraim," because that book is neither written by, nor concerning them in chief, but is a record (or stick) of Manasseh, as those many passages conjointly referred to that book by me in my article of July 28th, clearly show, (one typographical error excepted viz: "P. 135 pars. 6, 19," should be P. 135, pars. 6, 1).

I am content to take the book for just what it represents itself to be, Z. Brook, and P. P. Pratt to the contrary notwithstanding. Why the writers should have been so precise in stating their genealogy, thereby giving such positive evidence, is a question of grave importance; and I should not hold myself guiltless should I endeavor to controvert the weight of that testimony. It is not a technical point, but a plain statement of the book itself; let the "stick of Ephraim" be where ever it may. True, I did not attempt to tell what "the subject matter alluded to by Hosea" was, for the very reason, Bro. Ells, I did not, neither do I know. But you in the second column of your article, define your views as "that portion of law, which in its practical application, will produce the highest standard of moral excellence; viz., knowledge and perfection in the things of God." "This degree of intelligence, and moral excellence the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ declares attainable through the observance of the statutes and ordinances therein set forth," etc. In conjunction with this, you cite section 108, par. 6 of Doctrine and Covenants, showing that the "servants" (or eldership) of Christ, are "Ephraim." Well, what a peculiar lot of "servants" they are: let us quote:

"I have written to him [Ephraim] the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing."—Hosea. 8: 12.

Now the two facts in the above are inseparably united; hence, if the first implies a "standard of moral excellence," the second applies to that identical same people, and the conclusion of this entire thought, viz.; that the "servants" of Christ should consider a "standard of moral excellence," a "strange thing," as couched in the spirit of Hosea's expression, is a pretty severe criticism on the moral standing of those "servants." So far as "numbers" are concerned, if we were to establish the marks, perhaps we would not care as to size, etc. But the marks are established that "the stick of Ephraim" will be with the great number, (Ezek. 37: 16, 19), not the smallest, as the people of the Book of Mormon were. Let us read:

"Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; behold I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand." (Ezek. 37: 19).

Here you will notice that at the time when the Lord God will put "the stick of Joseph" with the "stick of Judah," that the "stick of Joseph" will be in the hand of Ephraim and ["the hands of"] the tribes of Israel his [Ephraim's] fellows." This verse classes them together, not I. Who shall separate the "tribes of Israel" from "Ephraim" at the time that those two sticks are to be put together? "Tribes" may be many, if we count after a pattern in 1st Kings 12: 21; for of Judah and Benjamin "an hundred and four score thousand warriors"—one hundred and eighty thousand i. e., ninety thousand in each tribe then. I do not care a fig for the numbers, but the book says "tribes of Israel his [Ephraim's] fellows; let it so be. I believe that God had something to do with the prophecy. The sixteenth verse says, "For all the house of Israel his [Joseph's or Ephraim's] companions." So whether the tribes be large or small, there are more tribes with Ephraim than with Judah, and though they may be small as well as otherwise, it is a poor rule that wont work both ways. The Book of Mormon was written by a small "branch broken off" of Manasseh. Hence Ezekiel shows (whether considered essential by us or not) that "numbers" is one of the marks to be found in conjunction with that work; as Baptism of Water and Laying on of Hands, are two of the marks (though by many ridiculed) to be found in the "doctrine of Christ." Hence, brother, I conclude that your dispute is with Ezekiel, not E. H. Gurley. Judah had some of "the children of Israel" for "companions" also Benjamin. See 1st Kings 12:21, 23; 2d Chron. 11:1. This was after the division of the twelve tribes, and they intended to fight against "the children of Israel," the ten tribes are called "the house of Israel," and by some "all Israel." These points, though each one of itself be small, together form an aggregate of testimony, to the effect that the Book of Mormon can not be "the stick of Ephraim; for as I wrote in my previous article, "though I admit that Joseph the Seer was of Ephraim" (the number here admitted is small enough), I ask in candor, where are those "tribes of Israel" that were to be "his [Ephraim's] fellows," if Joseph the Seer was the Ephraim referred to by Ezekiel? And in whose (tribes of Israel's) hands the "stick of Joseph" was also to be found? And until that is done I fail to see how we may legitimately apply Ezekiel 37:16-19. And brethren, should I make no attempt nor be able to show where the "stick of Ephraim" is, that thought has nothing to do in the premises. The idea that because the Bible speaks of "the stick of Ephraim," and that we have a book written by a small "branch broken off" of the house of Israel, that therefore that book must be "the stick of Ephraim," as it seems by the expressions of some, is simply foolishness, to say the least of it, though that "book" is IN fulfillment of Isaiah 29:11, 12, 18, which says nothing about Ephraim; and it looks doubly so when the book shows that it is a "record" (or stick) of Manasseh. And should I admit that your objections to my article were well taken, it still does not prove the affirmative of this question. The reasoning of Bro. Ells sounds very pleasant, but I believe his position to be "false in its premises." The superior blessing was given to Ephraim (in whatever quality of blessing the greater numbers may be considered) Gen. 48:19, and Deut. 33:17, and likely, as has been claimed, the "birth-right" fell to him when Jacob laid his right hand upon his head as by the inspiration of God; but the fact that Manasseh was also to be "great" and a "people," as of him should be "thousands," seems to have been lost sight of in examining this vast subject. And in the sealing declared by John, see Rev. 7, where twelve thousand of each of the twelve tribes of Israel are "sealed," we notice that "Joseph" and "Manasseh" are named, but Ephraim is not; whether Ephraim bears the name of Joseph, or has lost his identity, it matters not, but it seems evident that Manasseh is not "swallowed up" as some hold, as his identity is preserved till the time of that sealing. Turning to 1st Kings 11:30, 31, we learn that a prophet of God Ahijah took a new garment, and rent it in twelve pieces, and gave ten to Jeroboam, typical of God's rending the kingdom (of Israel) out of the hand of Solomon, and giving ten tribes to Jeroboam; and then by reading 1st Kings 12:21, 2d Chron. 11:1, we learn that "Judah" and "Benjamin" sustain the house of David; (hence the other two "pieces" of the garment) in fulfillment of the figure. The dates here given are nine hundred and eighty-four to nine hundred and seventy-five years before Christ, and this 12th chapter of 1st Kings also shows a part at least of Jeroboam's sin, which sin was sustained by the "people," for he "made two calves of gold," and the people worshipped them. Now it must be apparent to all that Ephraim was among that "people," for as Ephraim's posterity existed and were to excel Manasseh's as ten is to one, (Deut. 33:17), and my Bible tells me that Jeroboam was an Ephraimite; and as we see that Judah and Benjamin were with Rheoboam, therefore, I learn where "Ephraim hath made many altars to sin," which Hosea declares some fifteen years afterwards. Other references could be cited. The time that God rent the kingdom from Solomon, and divided it as referred to above, was also two hundred and forty-two years before the commencement of that decree against Ephraim by the mouth of Isaiah; viz: that "within three score and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people." Isaiah 7:8.

I see that Bro. Ells and I agree as to the idolatry, and the time thereof of Ephraim. Good; but I infer from Bro. Ell's writing in the latter part of second, and first part of third column, also in latter part of his article, "Ephraim's cast off, wandering condition among the Gentile nations," etc., that no part of Ephraim was with "Israel" in the latter's captive state, and their traveling into foreign lands; if I have misunderstood the brother here he will please pardon me, but whether he meant so or not, this fact occurs. "Israel," composed of ten tribes, of whom "Ephraim" must have been one, as also "the half tribe of Manasseh," was led away by Shalmanezzer, king of Assyria, forty-four years before the allotted time for the fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah 7:8, wherein "Ephraim shall be broken, that it be not a people." Hence I conclude as before, that "Ephraim he hath mixed himself among" the house of Israel, as well as other nations; and as the brother quotes Hosea 9:17, "They should become wanderers among the nations," why limit this to the Gentiles? Let us take it in its broad sense, unless you have proof to the contrary. Once more:

"I have seen a horrible thing in the house of Israel; there is the whoredom of Ephraim, Israel is defiled."—Hosea 6:10.

Here we learn of a great sin upon the part of Ephraim, and the special point—it is seen in Israel,—and the result of it is an evil effect upon Israel. Now you ask, When did this evil take place? The book shows that it was one hundred and ninety-five years after the twelve tribes were divided. Now the time of this division (1st Kings 12:20) is given as nine hundred and seventy-five years before Christ. The time that "Israel" was carried away, (2d Kings 17:6), is given as seven hundred and twenty-one before Christ. The prophecy of Isaiah that "Ephraim should be broken that it be not a people," (Isaiah 7:8), is given as seven hundred and forty-two years before Christ, and the "three score and five years" would not end till six hundred and seventy-seven years before Christ, or forty-four years after they were led away. The time of beholding the sin of "Ephraim" in "Israel," Hosea 6:10, is given as 780, B. C. If I be answered that chronologists err, because they differ, I answer that I use but one in this article, and if he does err, that error will be uniform throughout the Old Testament no doubt.

I have in my possession a "Historical Epitome of the Holy Bible, with Usher's Chronology," but the name of the epitome's author is not given. He it is that calls "Jeroboam an Ephraimite," and also states:

"Jeroboam elected king of the separated tribes, [all Israel, Ephraim], makes Sechem [and later Tirzah] his capital, and fortifies Penuel east of Jordan against Syria. Mistrusting God's promise, (1 Kings 11:38), and fearing lest religious intercourse with Jerusalem cause reunion, he organizes a worship of Jehovah under the emblem of Aaron's golden calf at the extremities of his kingdom, Bethel and Dan, utilizing the people's usage of time-honored sanctuaries (see 1 Kings 3:2). He builds a state temple (Amos 7:13) at Bethel, replaces the Mosaic hierarchy by a priesthood from the tribes indiscriminately, and adds a feast; but preserves generally the institutions of Moses' law, (Hosea 2:11, &c.) and counterfeits the ritual of the temple."

I have copied thus much for what information it may give, and by it we learn that "all Israel" is called "Ephraim;" their king an "Ephraimite." In Gen. 48:16, we learn of both Manasseh and Ephraim: "And let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth," evidently among the inhabitants of the earth.

I have been amused in listening to some one trying to make it appear, that the "midst of the earth," referred to America. If any wish to apply it to the physical earth, and it be "round like a ball or an orange," then one point of its surface is just as much its "midst," or center, as another. But we have need to keep in mind the fact, that they were to become a "multitude." In the 19th verse as also in Deut. 33:17, we learn that this boy, Ephraim's posterity, would become "a multitude of nations," (hardly just to apply it to Gentile nations only, to say the least), and also "ten thousands," (almost unlimited). These points I want you to consider; and though some of Ephraim are to be the "servants" of Christ at the time of the fulfillment of Sec. 108, par. 6, (for all I know not yet commenced to be fulfilled, i. e., that special work), do not run away with the thought that all of Ephraim will then be in the church, much less now. Jacob in blessing Joseph (Gen. 49:22-26) declares of him "whose branches (not branch as some seem to think) run over the wall;" that the blessing of Jacob had "prevailed above the blessing" of his fathers, "unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills." The blessing conferred upon Abram, (so far as land was concerned), was the land of Canaan, Gen. 12:5-7; 13:15; 24:7. Confirmed unto Isaac, Gen. 26:4; and again to Jacob 28:13; also testified of by Moses, Exodus 32:13. But now as Jacob blessed Joseph, a greater blessing is promised, for this last, though not denying that the first was not to stop with the comparatively narrow confines of Canaan, but the borders of it were to be extended, reach out and encircle "unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills,"—hills and mountains. It would then encircle a goodly part of the earth. Here then is the superiority (so far as land is concerned) of Jacob's blessing upon Joseph. Has the posterity of Joseph, or those of his brethren received it? Certainly not, see Heb. 11:8-16. "Now they desire a better country, that is an heavenly." Also, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises." In conjunction see Ezek. 37:12, 22-25. Zech. 14:9. Oh glorious day! "And so all Israel shall be saved;" but, "All are not Israel that are of Israel." Israel was made two kingdoms, but in that day "they shall be no more two kingdoms." I again remark, they have not received it, neither will they till that ever to be praised Jesus, the Christ, shall come and sit on the throne of his glory," and subdue all things, and reign according to his right, bought with his blood on Calvary's cross. Praise God! We too may be there, by becoming "Israel" "by adoption," whether we be "Jew or Gentile," Ephraim or Manasseh. Whatever race or color, it matters not, whether white, red, black, yellow or brown, all who are there will be one in Christ Jesus. This because all lines of nationalities will be wiped out, and become one new, grand nation under Christ. Why? Because "God hath made of one blood all nations for to dwell on the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation." Acts 17:26. "God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted." Ephraim, so far as the "servants" of Christ are concerned, that may possibly be in the church now, certainly has not yet received his land; for those "servants" or elders; many of them, have no home, some have small ones, and the best of them (financially) do not compare with the promise. I suppose that they, too, like those of God, are looking for "an heavenly country" and certainly the spirit of the gospel's perfect law, seeks for perfect things. "Ephraim is my first born," yes.

I have heard it stated that the book stated and meant in the "latter day." I have failed to find the text so indicating, but have understood it to signify the "birth right" conferred upon him by his grand father's blessing under the Patriarchal order of olden times. Literally, Ephraim was the youngest, so was Jacob younger than Esau.

In Doctrine and Covenants sec. 26, is a passage used to bring me back. Let us read a portion.

"And with Moroni whom I have sent unto you to reveal the Book of Mormon, containing the fulness of my everlasting gospel, to whom I have committed the keys of the record of the stick of Ephraim."

Mark it, I heartily endorse Bro. Bronson's definition of the word "keys," as meaning "reveal, open, bring to light," &c. Now this being the meaning of the word "keys," you will notice first, that it is inference only that calls the Book of Mormon "the stick of Ephraim." The revelation does not say it is, and that inference is not as good as to infer that the Book of Mormon committed to Moroni is the "keys" of "the stick of Ephraim." It seems plain to me from the language, "the keys of the record," etc., that "the keys of" could not be the "record" itself. Would it be consistent to suppose for a moment, a lock would have within its covers a key to "reveal, open, to bring to light" itself? I think not, but rather that the key would be a separate piece, with which the lock might be opened, revealed, or brought to light. Is the Bible the keys of the record of the stick of Judah? The Bible is sustained in the world principally through tradition. It gives testimony concerning the Book of Mormon, which places the Bible in the position of being the keys of the record of the stick of Manasseh. Just so the Book of Mormon gives testimony concerning another book coming from "the other tribes of the house of Israel, which I have led away," with whom Ephraim is no doubt mixed, and who are called Ephraim, and their king an Ephraimite, by a Bible compiler, and with whom Ezekiel, a prophet of God, places them, both during the time of writing, and the coming forth of "the stick of Joseph," or "Ephraim."

The Book of Mormon shows that itself is not of Ephraim, one grand point, to "reveal, open, and bring to light;" and if you will turn to Book of Nephi 7:3, you will read of the third fold, to whom Christ was to go. Is it not reasonable to infer, that they would write a book? I see Bro. Ells and I agree on this point. For proof go to second book of (first) Nephi 12:8-10.

"Wherefore, because that ye have a Bible," (or other books either for that matter in my belief), "ye need not suppose that it contains all my words; neither need ye suppose that I have not caused more to be written; for I command all men, both in the east, and in the west, and in the north and in the south, and in the islands of the sea, that they shall write the words I speak unto them; for out of the books which shall be written, I will judge the world, every man according to their works, according to that which is written. For behold I shall speak unto the Jews and they shall write it! and I shall also speak unto the Nephites, and they shall write it! and I shall also speak unto the other tribes of the house of Israel, which I have led away, and they shall write it; and I shall also speak unto all nations of the earth, and they shall write it. And it shall come to pass, that the Jews shall have the words of the Nephites," (not yet fulfilled evidently), "and the Nephites shall have the words of the Jews, and the Nephites and the Jews shall have the words of the lost tribes of Israel, and the lost tribes of Israel shall have the words of the Nephites and the Jews."

None of this ninth verse has yet been fulfilled, has it?

"And it shall come to pass that my people which are of the house of Israel, shall be gathered home unto the lands of their possessions; and my word also shall be gathered in one; * * that I covenanted with Abraham that I would remember his seed forever."

We are not left to inference, but have a plain statement, that those "tribes," ("Ephraim's fellows," or "companions") will also have a book. These points the Book of Mormon "brings to light, opens and reveals," and as Ephraim is to become a "multitude of nations," perhaps bearing Joseph's name, I look for him to come with those ten tribes; as much of Ephraim's posterity, to say the least, as will be found in the church; and then we will see the stick of Ephraim, or the record of the stick of Ephraim; while I accept the Book of Mormon as committed to Moroni and revealed to Joseph the Seer, as a record of Manasseh of Divine authenticity, and as it was committed to Moroni, it was the "keys" to a book not yet obtained by us.

Bro. Bronson here strikes on tense. He should notice that I found no fault whatever with the tense of any passage, but he denies the tense of Hosea 8:12, and then emphasizes the same tense of section 26. Brother, how is this? The tense is all right, but you mis-read my article. "I have committed the keys." I only denied the point that the Book of Mormon is the stick of Ephraim, not that the Book of Mormon is the "keys," nor that those "keys" had been committed to Moroni.

In conclusion, I knew that my position had less adherents in the church than the other, and that more or less prejudice would first have to be broken; but so far from following the line of the early elders, on some points, I say let us "return." And so far from following any elder, let us rather follow the word of God, which "liveth and abideth forever." In hopes of Zion when Jesus shall reign, I am your brother in Christ,

E. H. GURLRY.

And strong as love can make it;
And each loving heart be found to beat,
In harmony with their God complete,
That sin may never shake it.

While struggling with life's trial:
The darkest clouds with light be riven,
While joys of earth, and bliss from heaven,
Shall crown their faith so loyal.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, February 9th, 1884.

Two methods of procedure, aside from legislative enactments, are advocated for adoption by the Government in its policy toward Utah. Each method has its adherents, and these adherents roundly denounce the folly of the course recommended by their opposites—and they are widely apart and very greatly in opposition the one to the other. One method is represented by a speaker at the organization of an Anti-Polygamy Association at Cleveland, Ohio, who said:

"After years of eloquence, and the eventful sacrifice of human blood, slavery was abolished and the nation purified of its deepest stain. The work of purification is not over, however, and polygamy should go the way of slavery, even if war is necessary to accomplish that end."

The other in the expression of a gentleman who proposed that a "few hundred ministers who could preach with the fervor and zeal of the apostles be sent into Utah to preach the gospel;" and adds "it surely ought to be possible for such an effort to reach and redeem the people of Utah." The trouble with these doctors is, that they are bad practitioners and do not properly diagnose the case they presume to prescribe for. The advocates of the project to send so-called evangelical and orthodox ministers as missionaries to Utah, do not know that however much the Mormons may be denounced as ignorant abroad, they could easily select a half dozen men from among their number who would successfully defend, argumentatively, against the entire phalanx of an army of missionaries so called and sent. Doctor Newnam volunteered to do battle in the orthodox interest, and was worsted by Elder Orson Pratt, in the discussion at Salt Lake.

They who would send war upon the Mormons, ought to reflect how utterly contemptible such counsel is. For the Government to declare war against Utah, is like taking a krupp 300 pounder, or the Woolwich Giant cannon to smash a musquito. It would sadly compromise the dignity and grandeur of the United States to so publicly declare its inability to enforce the civil regulations of the country, and the government can not afford to do that. An enforcement of the laws of the land, strictly, fairly, promptly and uniformly, is the only necessary policy of the Government, and this ought at once to be entered upon. We have been accused of wanting to set the Government upon the Mormons of Utah because we were their enemies. This is not true, but we have been loyal to the land of our birth, and dislike to see a crime flourish and be fostered under the sheltering plea of "It is our religion."

ELDER ANDREW JENSEN, of the Utah Church, wrote to the Deseret News, January 23d, a letter which we quote below:

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 23d, 1884.

Editor Deseret News:—In my travels as a missionary both at home and abroad, I have frequently met with members of the so-called Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and in my conversations with them I have occasionally listened to their denunciation of the endowments, received by the Latter-day Saints, in the house of the Lord, stating positively that no such doctrine was ever taught in the days of Joseph Smith the prophet. In all cases I have been able to prove the reverse by referring to the Prophet's own writings, which seems to be very clear concerning this very doctrine, and the following extracts from the History of Joseph Smith speak for itself:

"Wednesday, May 4th, 1842. I spent the day in the upper part of my store, that is in my private office (so-called, because in that room I kept my sacred writings, translated ancient records, and received revelations), and in my general business office or lodge room (that is, where the masonic fraternity met occasionally, for want of a better place), in council with Gen. James Adams, of Springfield, Patriarch Hyrum Smith, Bishops Newel K. Whitney and George Miller, and Presidents Brigham Young, H. C. Kimball and W. Richards, instructing them in the principles and order of the Priesthood, attending to washings, anointings, endowments, and communication of keys, pertaining to the Aaronic Priesthood, and so on to the higher order of the Melchisedec Priesthood, setting forth the order pertaining to the Ancient of Days, and all those plans and principles by which any one is enabled to secure the fullness of those blessings which have been prepared for the Church of the First Born, and come up and abide in the presence of the Eloheim in the Eternal worlds. In this council was instituted the ancient order of things for the first time in these last days. And the communications I made to this council were of things spiritual, and to be received only by the spiritual minded; and there was nothing made known to these men but what will be made known to all of the Saints of the last days, so soon as they are prepared to receive, and a proper place is prepared to communicate them, even to the weakest of the Saints; therefore let the Saints be diligent in building the Temple and all houses which they have been or shall hereafter be commanded of God to build, and wait their time with patience in all meekness, faith and perseverance unto the end, knowing assuredly that all these things referred to in this council are always governed by the principle of revelation."—(Mill. Star, vol. 19, page 391). Also:

"Friday, May 26th, 1843. I met in council in the upper room with my brother Hyrum, Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Willard Richards, Gen. Jas. Adams, Bishop N. K. Whitney and William Law, and gave them their endowments, and also instructions in the Priesthood, on the new and everlasting covenant, etc."—(Mill. Star, vol. 21, page 170).

Peradventure some of your readers may not be aware that the foregoing is recorded in Church History. I respectfully draw their attention to it.

Your Brother in the Gospel,

ANDREW JENSEN.

Elder Jensen is right, the "extracts do speak for themselves;" the trouble is with the elder and his co-workers. One of the most clearly taught things in the first extract is that the things made known on that day were "spiritual" and would be made known at some time then future, and that to facilitate that work "the Temple and all houses which" they had then been "commanded to build or should thereafter be commanded of God to build" should be builded. That was never done. So say the facts of history.

The private and personal endowments which Joseph Smith may have given, are not the endowments which the men of the Reorganized Church whom Elder Jensen has met are contending against, so far as the law of God found in the Doctrine and Covenants warrants them to determine what are the characteristics of the endowment to be received by the church, and the elders especially, when the revelation should be finally made. The statement at the close of the first extract is that that the "things referred to in the council" were "always governed by the principle of revelation." When, and where was the revelation given through Joseph Smith, authorizing, or permitting endowments of even a similar sort to those conferred upon those men, in any place other than in the Temple and buildings at that time in process of erection? When and through whom has there come a revelation relating to endowments directing the ceremonies, commanding the ritual and specifying what was to be conferred? By authority of what revelation, and when and by whom given to the church, or any body of its believers, are endowment ceremonies conducted at Salt Lake City, or St. George, Utah, in an Endowment House, not commanded of God to be built by his people?

We think that we have serious reasons for receiving extracts from the history of Joseph Smith, or those taken from his journal, not published during his lifetime, with some grains of salt. The reasons for this are these. Joseph Smith's Journal is not the history of the church. The history of the church might not be complete without much that occurred in Joseph Smith's life being noted, or incorporated in it. The blessing of Brigham Young, James Adams, William Law and others by Joseph Smith, in a council specially sitting for that, or a casual purpose, does not establish church doctrine. If so, then the blessing of other men at dissimilar times, and for other purposes, establishes contrary doctrines. The Journal of Joseph Smith was private property, and at his death should have been turned over to his widow and his heirs. Instead of that, the Journal, with letters and papers and books, both those of a private and public character, which were in his office were kept by the Twelve, Brigham Young at their head. That Journal, the private history of the man, were in the hands of men who could make them to read in accordance with subsequent developments, —who should say them nay. The history of many events after the death of the martyrs was regulated by the memory of George A. Smith, the Historian of the Utah Church; and his memory, if like other men might be perfect in things necessary or convenient to remember, and to others "non mi recordo." It is not competent without proof to charge undue changing in that record, but the situation suggests the possibility; and the fact that the Journal should have become the property of Joseph Smith's widow and his heirs, but was kept from them, gives room for presumption when extracts from the Journal are quoted against these same heirs.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE letter from Bro. F. B. Moyer, in last issue, was written before the visit of Bro. Blair to Manassa, and before Bro. Moyer united with the Reorganized Church.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert was called home by the sickness of his step-daughter, who is quite low of consumption.

Bro. C. G. Lanphear wrote from Independence, Missouri, January 24th, that he and Bro. Curtis would go to Holden on the 25th. Bro. J. Luff would go to Montserrat. Bro. Alexander H. Smith was at home, but busy with the affairs of his mission work.

Bro. Wm. Anderson, of Oakland, California, lectured in Watsonville, California, from January 19th until the series was complete; subject, "Materialism, or the Gospel Harmonized."

Bro. Lambert reached San Bernardino, California, January 20th. He began meetings on the 22d, and intended to remain at San Bernardino until February 5th. His address till then would be at that place. From there he would go to Santa Ana. The district conference would convene there February 2d.

In the obituary notice of Elder William Acker, published in the HERALD of January 26th, read 1883 instead of "1882." The funeral discourse of Brother Acker was preached in St. Louis, Missouri, on Sunday evening, January 13th, 1884, by Elder William Smith. Also, on page 51 of the same HERALD, read at Midland from the 14th and 15th, instead of from "4th to 15th."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Hyrum C. Bronson wrote from Burlington, Iowa, January 26th.

I conducted a series of meetings last week at Rock Creek Branch with good results. I am now on my way to Montrose, where I commence a series to-morrow. And thence on to Keokuk.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—In case of a branch having only a presiding Elder and a Teacher acting as officials, if the president resigns the charge, does that disorganize the branch; or is the teacher the presiding officer?

Ans.—The above question has been asked and answered so frequently that it seems monotonous. The branch is not disorganized by such resignation; and the Teacher is the presiding officer.

Q.—Where there is an organized branch of the Church, if any one desires to be baptized, should it be made known in the Saints' meeting, and an action taken on it by the branch?

A.—Not necessarily. It would be owing to the circumstances governing the case; and whether there had been any rule established in the branch respecting such cases.

Q.—If a traveling Elder comes into an organized branch, and baptizes any one, how is such baptized person to be received as a member of that branch?

A.—If such baptism was done by the knowledge and consent or under the supervision of the officer or officers of the branch, the person should be enrolled as a member of the branch, just the same as if the baptism had been performed by the officer of the branch. But if there is a branch rule requiring that all members are to be received by vote, then such person should be received by vote; and the rule holds good though the baptism may have been performed by the president of the branch himself. The first is the better method. Traveling Elders should not baptize within the jurisdiction of an organized branch, only with the knowledge and direction of the officers of that branch.

Q.—If a man be baptized by a Priest and dies before an opportunity for the rite of confirmation, will he come forth in the resurrection of the just?

A.—Yes; as we understand it.

Q.—Was David inspired of God when he prayed the prayer found in the 109th Psalm?

A.—Not necessarily. He may have been angry, hurt, or sorely oppressed when he so prayed. It does not necessarily follow that all that David said or did was inspired of God.

At a meeting and banquet of Scotlands sons in honor of Robert Burns, given at the National Hotel, Peoria, Illinois, January 25th, the toast, "The land of our adoption" was responded to by Mr. J. A. Robinson, whose address was one of the best and most eloquent of the evening. He claimed that Americans native to the soil were not entitled to very much credit, because they really couldn't help being born here, whereas Scotchmen and Irishmen and Germans came here by the exercise of good taste and judgment, seeking the fair land of liberty by choice, that they might enjoy its blessings and give their children the heritage of freedom. Mr. Robinson reviewed the natural wealth of America and the stupendous developments brought about by American industry and energy, comparing it with the bleak and sterile land of his birth, where the struggle for existence was so hard." So states the Peoria Evening Transcript of the 26th.

CHARLES W. PENROSE, of Utah, and Editor of the Deseret News wrote only a short time ago, that polygamy was not an essential part of Mormonism; but apostle Teasdale of the Utah Twelve, seems to hold a contrary opinion. In a late discourse in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, the Apostle said:

I don't go back on one principle of the gospel. I believe in plural marriage as much as I do in baptism for the remission of sins. I will not give up one of my principles. I do not fear to face man. As for God, I'd fear to go behind the veil and meet those who would know I had given up the first principle of the gospel. I bear testimony that plural marriage is a necessity—the church can't exist without it. It is one of the landmarks of the church.

Which is right the apostle or the church organ.

THAT cancerous affections are frequently traceable to the use of tobacco, we have tried to show in the Herald, once before. Here is an instance in support of what we then wrote.

The Hon. William D. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, "father of the House of Representatives," says his health was never better than now. He attributes the cancerous tumor in the mouth, which last year caused him so much trouble, entirely to the use of tobacco. "For fifty years," he says, "I chewed and smoked. Last spring I endeavored to break the habit, but it brought on nervous prostration. I am happy to say that I have conquered the habit, and now do not use the weed in any form."

THE following slip from the Salt Lake Tribune January 24th, 1884, was sent us by Bro. W. W. Blair's son, William A., from Salt Lake City.

COLORADO MORMONS.

BEING SHAKEN UP BY ELDER BLAIR, MANY QUIT THE POLYGAMOUS BRANCH.

EDS. TRIBUNE:—The Mormon settlements in this county have lately been visited by Rev. W. W. Blair of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, who has shelled the ranks of the polygamous Mormons here with grape and canister, with such effect as to win from Utah Mormonism a large number of its followers, and seriously shake the faith of many more. He has just organized a church at Manassa, stronghold of the Mormons in this State, and fifty or more will soon be baptized. About thirty or more have applied for membership. Scores who have been brought under the influence of his work for the past two weeks have had their eyes opened to the evils of polygamy, priestly dictators in temporal and political matters, and priestcraft generally.

The Mormons from the Southern States very readily turn from the vagaries and sorrows of Utah Mormonism when they are exposed. But many of them are poor and despondent, and this may cause some to still adhere to their polygamous leaders till they can be aided in securing labor or other means of support aside from the Mormons. Many have left here for other parts during the past few months, and others intend leaving soon unless a great change for the better takes place, while others are determined to remain and maintain their right at any cost.

The work now begun by Rev. W. W. Blair should be followed up faithfully in order to forever free this region from the blight of Utah Mormonism. Mr. Blair hopes to return and labor here again by and by, and when he does he will be warmly welcomed by all classes of our people except the Mormon leaders and their blind devotees. The fruits of his work will tell well throughout this region for all time to come. Mr. Blair is a man of marked ability, and rare acuteness, and devoted to the people in such a way as to cause a mighty shaking among the dry bones of the Mormon hierarchy, although since he left, the priests have set up a howl like unto the howl of a wolf at a distance that had let its prey escape. While he was here none dared to venture a discussion with him. Now he is away the leaders tell their subjects they would have discussed with him if it had not been the Josephites are held now by the Mormon people as the devil and his hosts. Says the president of the Mormons here, "Who ever knew of anyone coming down from heaven to discuss with the devil?" More anon.

MANASSA, Col., Jan. 21st, 1884.

Extra precautions are being taken to protect the Prince of Wales during his visit to Bristol, owing to the fact that numerous menacing letters are received. The police have arrested a farmer who is believed to be insane, who purchased a gun with the avowed intention of shooting the Prince.

In spite of the proclamation of the authorities of Ireland, the Nationalists evaded the police and the military and held a meeting at Castle Wellan, a small market town in Ulster.

Correspondence.

BRIDGEPORT, Connecticut,

January 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Elder W. O. Owen, of Brooklyn, New York, preached at Faith Mission, in this city, December 15th, to a large audience. The people were pleased with his sermon, and some of them said that it was the best sermon they ever heard. There are four live Latter Day Saints in this city, and we have started a weekly prayer meeting, to be held on every Thursday evening. Elder Owen said that he would meet with us as often as he could. I feel sure that God will bless our efforts, and we shall reap if we faint not. We ask an interest in the prayers of all the Saints, that the truth may be made plain to all the honest hearted people of this city. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

Your sister in the one faith,

PLEASANTON, IOWA,

January 25th, 1884.

Editor Herald.—I have frequently been asked the reason why I have not answered the statements of Bro. John Hawley made in letter through Herald some time since, in which he rejects my "testimony," also published in Herald previously.

The "reason" I think very obvious to those who read carefully. Bro. Hawley did not reject my "testimony" because of any disagreement between it and the testimony of Christ and his apostles, as seen in the New Testament and Book of Mormon, at least he did not so allege, but because it did not include certain local doctrines, commands and policies,—such as a "Gathering" with its Temple building, Baptismal Font underneath it in which live folks are to be baptized for dead ones, a Patriarch for the whole church, a certain law for tithing by which the priesthood were to be supported and the debts of the Presidency paid, &c., &c., all of which were given to and practiced by the church some forty years ago or more. Now these points of doctrine and practice, together with some others, were duly considered by the church in General Conference at Galland's Grove, Iowa, in September, 1879 or 1880, having been previously mooted by various ones under various circumstances, and the decision of the body then, and her present position, if I understand it is, that these things were not included in the Epitome of the Faith as in anywise essential to salvation, but really non-essential. This position is in harmony with the one taken before Secretary Frelinghuysen in March last, and which one was positively affirmed before him, as the only true faith of the church. A reference to the paper presented will confirm this statement. Now that same paper, or rather a copy of it, was reported to the Church in General Conference at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6th, 1883, together with the acts of the committee thereon, which was endorsed by the body in its entirety, hence for any one to reject my testimony, or any other person's, when it is in harmony with that expressed in the Epitome of the Faith, is simply to reject the present position of the church. I admit, however, that the act at Galland's Grove may not be, or is not final, that the church can change the whole matter, but it certainly must stand until so changed, and knowing that an issue exists with us upon these points and others, I think steps should be taken to settle the matter, that each and all may have the benefit of a decision, as to my mind the church will be compelled by the logic of events to affirm some definite position, and stand or fall thereon. I have not in this intended to discuss the merits of the case, but simply make the above statements as a "reason" why I did not reply.

I also noticed in the Herald recently, an article on the Godhead, by a brother in Utah, who seemed somewhat moved because of an article from me upon the same subject sometime since. I do not remember now whether mine was prompted from anything he had written or not, or whether I made any reference to him or not; but one thing is definite and sure, that in his last one he has completely overshot the mark, when in any sense he seeks to connect my ideas with "eternity of spirits;" and for him to ask me, or challenge me, or any one else to prove the negative of the position when even the affirmative has not been argued by him, is simply absurd, to put it mildly; and further, so far as Brigham Young and others with him are concerned, I never heard of any one before him ever charging them with disbelief in the doctrine of "eternity of spirits," or eternal existence of spirits, or pre-existence of spirits; for if they did not believe in such doctrine, then I confess I have misunderstood them. I think Brigham Young's own words in public sermon, wherein he sought to justify polygamy proves this, to-wit: "When our father Adam came into the Garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives, with him. He helped to make and organize this world. He is Michael the Archangel, the Ancient of Days, about whom holy men have written and spoken. He is our FATHER and our GOD, and the only God with whom we have to do. Every man upon the earth, professing Christians or non-professing, must hear it, and will know it sooner or later."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 50.

Stronger language could hardly be employed to place one on the record in favor of "eternity of spirits," or pre-existing as a self-acting agent, and I wish the reader to notice specially here that the principle affirmed as a fact is made germane to the carrying out of the scheme. Orson Pratt also affirmed polygamy upon the same hypothesis, averring its correctness as a "continuation of the lives" having existed in all ages past; existing now, and will so continue, "passing by the angels and the gods," in this great work of development in other worlds, etcetera. I fancy that these men and their works have been misrepresented or misunderstood by the brother, for certain it is that they did not believe that the spirit of man was created about the time, or only a little before the body was; but to the contrary, they believe that God is the father of our spirits in fact, and that they lived with him before the world was made. This may be seen by reading the first sermon publicly delivered in defense of polygamy by Orson Pratt, August 29th, 1852, at Salt Lake City. Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 54, I quote: "We shall endeavor to set forth before this enlightened assembly some of the causes why the Almighty has revealed such a doctrine, and why it is considered a part and portion of our religious faith. * * The 'Mormons' have a peculiar doctrine in regard to our pre-existence, different from the views of the Christian world, so called who do not believe that man had a pre-existence." Now follows the statement that the "religious, world" believe "that man, both body and spirit, begins to live about the time that he is born into this world, or a little before; that then is the beginning of life."

In opposition to this theory he sets up the "peculiar" faith of the "Mormons," and affirms that we existed "when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy."—Job 38:7. Of this Mr. Pratt said: "The sons of God, recollect, shouted for joy, because there was a beautiful habitation being built, so that they could get tabernacles, and dwell therein," &c., &c., He further says: "Do you bring it home to yourselves, brethren and sisters? Do you realize that you and I were there? Can you bring it to your minds that you and I were among that happy number that shouted for joy when this creation was made? Says one, I don't recollect it! No wonder; for your recollection is taken from you, because you are in a tabernacle that is earthly; and all this is right and necessary."—Journal of Discourses, p. 55. Again, on page 57, he says: "We are told that among this great family of spirits, some were more noble and great than others, having more intelligence. Where do you read that? says one. Out of the Book of Abraham, translated from the Egyptian papyrus by the prophet Joseph Smith. Among the great and numerous family of spirits, "the begotten sons and daughters of God, there are some more intelligent than others; and the Lord showed unto Abraham "the intelligences that were organized before the world was; and among all these there were many of the noble and great ones." The quotation marks used by Mr. Pratt show the language quoted from the Book of Abraham, which is presented as his and the faith of the church. Now while to me this argument of Mr. Pratt's is a sort of sublime bosh, yet I believe it wrong to misrepresent the man, and though he and I are strongly opposed to one another in these matters, I propose so far as I am concerned, to give him even handed justice; and when any brother of the Reorganization represents him or Brigham Young as not believing in "eternity of spirits," or pre-existence of spirits, I think they mistake their positions entirely, and misrepresent them. I beg pardon of the Herald readers for indulging even in a brief notice of this spirit business. However, I thought it proper in this connection, simply for the purpose of doing what I consider just to men not permitted to answer for themselves. I have sought to avoid anything like a discussion of the principles, but simply to state the position of others.

Yours for truth,
Z. H. GURLEY.

HAZEL DELL, Illinois,
January 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Elders Morris and Henson, of Brush Creek Branch, Bro. Hilliard and Father Green, have been preaching in this district occasionally, but no particular nor regular meetings ever being held. November last, Father Green held two meetings, beginning on Saturday, p. m., and holding over Sunday. He baptized seven, myself being among them. December 28th, Bro. Stone commenced meeting at Hazel Dell Schoolhouse, and although the weather was very inclement, we had a good attendance, and a great interest was manifested by the people. Bro. Stone is a good talker, and he held his audience as it were, spellbound. Two more young men were baptized before the meeting was closed. I never saw in any place as much interest taken as here during this meeting. His last sermon was on the resurrection, and the people liked his way of looking at it. I think there will be more added to the church if we can only have preaching. Praying that the gospel may spread, and that more "reapers" may be found, as the harvest is now ripe, and prosperity may attend the church, I am your brother in the gospel,

SAMUEL H. COOK.

BLUE RAPIDS, Marshall Co., Kan.,
January 7th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—A short distance north of this beautiful manufacturing village, is what is known as the Independence Crossing of the Big Blue River. This is on the old Mormon trail. In passing up the valley road to Marysville, the traveller, by turning away from the regular road a few rods, to a spot secluded by high, overhanging rocks, may visit the famous alcove springs, which flow into a beautiful basin formed by nature in the outjutting magnesian walls, and thence down across the valley to the river. This spot was the camping ground at an early day, for large companies of emigrants, bound, some for that "salt land not inhabited" for their religion's sake, and others to seek wealth further on in California. On the rocks and walls around this romantic spot, are yet to be found the names and initials of many who here were obliged to wait patiently, as might be for days, the subsidence of the river to a fordable depth. During these delays, many were attacked by sickness, and the stones which mark their last resting places, are still to be seen. Dr. Boyakin, an early resident of this county, and for years its Superintendent of Public Instruction, in a discussion with Elder Heman C. Smith, at Blue Rapids, asserted that it was a few miles west of this crossing, in this county, that Parley P. Pratt met his death at the hand of a man, a part of whose family had been proselyted to the faith taught by him, and had joined an expedition emigrating to Utah. Others of the first settlers in this valley, also testify to seeing the name of P. P. Pratt inscribed on a large tree near this crossing. Touching scenes and incidents are also related by survivors from the plains, who revisit this spot, and point out the last resting place of some companion, who they here helped to lay away, to rest from the trials and sufferings of their journey. A visit to these springs, and seeing these marks of the past, and hearing their history, though it inspires the tourist with sad reflections of the times when this valley was thronged with the assembled trains, waiting to move forward into perhaps worse trials and disappointments; yet even here the providence of God through the Spirit of the gospel and the righteousness of the saints, has wrought out a great contrast in the progress and results of the latter day work. The Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, if they could speak, would no doubt express their sympathy for the futile efforts made in the past, by the banished children of God, to build themselves homes along their shores; and joy at the present welcome extended by the people, to those who honor the same principles in righteousness, and are industrious, law-abiding citizens. This same Blue River is also a witness of far different scenes now, than those which occurred on its banks thirty years ago. For the past seven years, many a Sabbath day has witnessed, but a short distance below this old crossing, a procession making its way from the little church in Blue Rapids, generally accompanied by its honored Pastor, Father John Landers, to the bank below the stately manufactories built on either side, where the sun brightly shining, has lit up so many hallowed scenes of immersion of contrite souls in the clear waters of this river. The more also is the admiration and reverence of those who were present soon after the formation of this church seven years ago, at the severe test the truth of the vital principles of the faith of the saints was put to, in public discussion between Elder Heman C. Smith and the wily and well informed Dr. Boyakin. But the few pioneers of the gospel here then, saw by faith, light in the darkness, and success in the righteousness and intelligence and fulness of those gospel principles; and have lived to see the beautiful river which flows along their homes converted into a very Jordan of the west. We are glad the simple history narrated above, is only a parallel of the providential dealings of God with his people elsewhere, and a sign of the approaching day, when, if they continue humble and faithful, they will receive praise and fame where they suffered before and were put to shame.

Your brother,
MAHLON SMITH.

LAKEPORT, Michigan,
January 21st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I was converted by the Bible, and baptized by a Methodist Elder, his being the only denomination in our community then. Ten years after I had joined, my husband died, leaving me with four children, and but very little to provide for them with. Then came my persecution from the members of the church. I felt it could not be the Church of Christ, and I prayed to God to know. Four years ago last June my oldest son died. The night before he died I went to bed and closed my eyes, and saw a face as of a man before me. When I opened my eyes I could see nothing, and when I closed them it was there. It looked like pictures I have seen of Christ. The same summer I saw with my eyes shut, what was like looking on the heads of multitudes of people. When I opened my eyes, I could see nothing. That summer my neighbors asked me why I did not go to meeting. I told them I was going to wait till God sent a minister that preached like they did in olden times. Up to the year eighteen eighty one, I had not seen an Elder, but had heard fearful reports about them. My brother asked for the schoolhouse and it was denied. I went to the school officers, and fared no better. I came home and offered my petition to a higher power, and asked God if he had sent the Elders that he would open a way for them to preach. Soon my brother got a letter from Elder Cornish, that he would come and preach, if he could have a place to preach in. My brother got the grove. He came and preached twice on Sunday; and Monday being school meeting, my brother put it to vote, that the schoolhouse was to be open to all denominations or closed to all, and it was opened to all. So I was convinced and was baptized. The day after, Elder Cornish's house and mill were burnt. He was called here to baptize Mrs. Smith and me. Then my brother took him home. If any Elder comes this way I would like to have him call and give us a sermon. My brother, Lyman Whitford, lives in Port Huron, on the east end of Pine street. If any Elder is passing that way, he would like to have him call. He said there were a few that said they would walk a good ways to hear one preach; for they have never heard a Latter Day Saint.

A sister in Christ,

BRAIDWOOD, Will Co., Illinois,
December 20th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Your weekly visits have been very welcome to me. I read your pages with joy, and sometimes I feel sad. Joyful when I read of the goodness of our Heavenly Father in giving the manifestations of his Holy Spirit in our different branches, and of the miraculous cures in healing the sick; sad when I read how our good Elders are misrepresented and persecuted for the gospel's sake. "Blessed are ye when persecuted for righteousness sake, for great is your reward in heaven." I felt sad reading Sister Emma's last letter. Sister Emma and her companion show their faith by their works, and I just imagined I could hear our Savior saying unto them, "Well done, good and faithful servants, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

We have preaching here every Sabbath day by Elder John S. Kier, assisted by Elder Evan Griffiths. May our Heavenly Father continue to enlighten the minds of my brothers and sisters that write for your columns, that you may be as bright and shining for 1884 as you have ever been.

Yours respectfully,
Sister MAGGIE KELSO.

PLANO, Ill., January 15th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph Smith:—We are still striving to do our duties in the fear of the Lord, trusting in the love and mercy, which have been over us until the present time. The Saints of the Plano Branch commenced the new year by holding prayer meeting from house to house, and are still keeping them up. Over forty of them came out to my place last night, and held a prayer meeting, and were blessed with a portion of the Spirit of the Master, as they are in all of the meetings. We trust it will result in good to the cause here, as there seems to be quite an interest taken. In these things we rejoice; yet all is not peace. Some think we do not root out the tares as we ought to, and because of iniquity in some, the love of others waxes cold, and some of the iniquity is supposed. There are many things that are not as we would like to see them, but are thankful that they are no worse. When will the day come that the Saints will have charity for each other, that they may not look at the faults of their brethren with the large end of the glass, their own with the little end, and thus do wrong to themselves and others, and thereby hinder the work, and mar the peace of those who are striving to do their duty and live the religion of this latter day. May it come soon. I would have liked to have had you with us last night, so you could have heard Bro. Cooper. I tell you he is a faithful brother, and a powerful preacher. He ought to be in the field. He could do a great deal of good. There is only one fault with him, he is somewhat bashful. He does not seem to like to commence; but when he gets to work, that all leaves him, and he speaks with force, power and eloquence, and holds his audience almost spellbound. Our Sunday School is in the charge of Sister Abbie A. Horton now, and is doing well under her guidance. Our sacrament meetings are and have been well attended, average over forty all through last year. I am thankful to our Father, that I am engaged in this work, that he ever permitted me to hear the gospel as it is in Christ, and put it in my heart to obey it. May the Lord bless you in your labor of love, and all that appertains to you.

Yours in bonds,
W. VICKERY.

HOOKER, Neb., January 23d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I came here from the Southern Nebraska District Conference, held at Wilber, Neb., on the 13th inst. On my way to Palmyra to the conference, at a small station named Bennett, I took the train for Wilber; and on the train I met with Bro. R. J. Anthony, also bound for Wilber. I was really glad to see him. We dined in a restaurant at Lincoln. About two hours' run from there brought us to Crete, a flourishing town situated on the Big Blue. Arrived at Wilber about four p. m., and on the platform were Saints and friends, ready to receive us. This was on Saturday, and at seven p. m. we met with the Saints at the house of Bro. Levi Anthony, in prayer and testimony meeting. The Saints enjoyed themselves. I felt blessed and strengthened. The next morning at half past ten, conference convened. We had the pleasure of hearing Bro. "Jeff" preach with power and demonstration of the Spirit, as he usually does. There was also preaching at three p. m., at one p. m.; and at nine a. m. Monday morning business session. It passed off quietly.

Bro. R. M. Elvin departed with Bro. Butler to Odel, in the south-west part of Gage county, Nebraska. Bro. "Jeff," his brother Levi and I, remained and held meeting through the week. I stayed with them up to Thursday, and then parted with them at the depot at Wilber, for Dewitt. There I met Bro. Henry Savage and wife, and went out home with them. Next day Bro. Rogers came for me, and brought me to Hooker on Saturday last, a very cold day. I commenced meeting here the same evening. There are some here believing, and investigating. The cry is great for preaching, but the laborers are few. I wish you all at Lamoni a happy new year, and the same to all the Saints and all good people.

Yours in bonds of peace,
JOSHUA ARMSTRONG.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I pray that God may give me a portion of his grace, while I write the following in regard to our Utah brethren, who are deceived by the latter day apostasy. I verily believe that there are many of our brethren in Utah and other Territories, and in foreign lands and the islands of the sea, that would very soon turn back to the old paths, if a greater effort on our part, spiritually speaking, was made. It is true the ministry have done a most excellent work, and are still working faithfully and manfully in behalf of the Utah mission. And the prayers of the Saints have gone up to God for these our brethren, and also for the ministry, that they might be prosperous in winning many back to the true fold of God as declared in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, not forgetting the Herald, Zion's Hope, Saints' Advocate, and the many tracts that have gone out; they are doing an excellent work. I do not say the traveling ministry could have done more, but is the Lord not watching his people in the way he has commanded them. Yes, dear Saints, and I am sure the work can be doubled in a very short time. How shall it be done? Let our faith and prayers go up to God, that the word of the Lord may come to Bro. Joseph Smith, to send a proclamation all through the church and kingdom of Christ, crying to the saints everywhere, Come, dear saints, let us prepare a fast, and come before the Lord in faith, and pray for these our brethren who have strayed from the true covenants of the church of Christ, and that their souls may be illuminated by the goodness of God, that they may be brought to see and know the true church of Jesus Christ. Surely the Lord will magnify his great and holy name.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
JAMES HOUSTON.

HOOKER, Neb., December 31st, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I can truly say that my faith is as strong as ever, and I know that my heavenly Father hears our feeble breathings here, and my heart's desire and prayer to God are, that his work may roll on here faster than it does now. The weather has been favorable, not even a tracking snow yet, and those false teachers Paul prophesied should come, and should "preach for hire and divine for money," make merchandise out of the people, greedy of filthy lucre, have failed entirely here; so it seems like the field is preparing to receive the everlasting gospel. Can't some good brother come this way and spend the winter, who has been blest with the authority to give to the people the words of eternal life. If any come, we will try to help them all we can. If it was not for the Herald, Advocate and Hope, we would famish for spiritual food.

Ever praying for the prosperity of Zion, I subscribe myself your brother in Christ,

S. A. ROGERS.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.,

Dear Herald:—I desire to bear my testimony for the gospel of Christ through the Herald to all the world, believers and unbelievers. Before I came in contact with the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints, I was a Catholic in word, but never in deed. I could not have faith in their religion, because I could not believe that God wants the people to worship him in that way. Everything was dark to me; and therefore I could not join their church, and did not belong to any for a long time. But nevertheless, I felt glad in my heart to know that there is a God, who would be willing to hear and answer prayer if I would come before him with a humble heart and contrite spirit, to ask him for wisdom, and understanding of his unchangeable being. So I did pray many times in secret, and I can say, that God has answered my petitions, and I feel to thank him with all my heart that he has guided me into the right way, even from darkness to his marvelous light. I am not able to express the satisfaction and love which God has planted in my heart, since I was obedient to the gospel. I feel strong in the faith, and am striving to serve God. My husband also rejoices in the faith, and we are greatly blest. I ask all the Saints to remember us in their prayers. The weekly Herald is a welcome friend to us. It brings so much interesting news and spiritual food, helps us to go on in this glorious work. My prayer is always, that God may bless his children everywhere, and our branch here in Providence, especially, that we may have more of the love of God and his holy Spirit in our hearts, to show the world that we are saints indeed, and that we may work together in peace and harmony for the Master's cause.

Your sister in Christ,

ANNA LECKNEY.

Dear Herald.—Thy pages are a source of great comfort. I love to read the many bright testimonies of my dear brothers and sisters. It gives me more strength in the weary journey of life. It has been five years since I came into the fold of Christ. I know this gospel is true. It is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. I dreamed last June that I looked south, and a little up in the heavens was a bright golden horn, or bugle, all carved, the most beautiful thing that I ever saw, pointing towards Lamoni. While looking at it, it began to fade. There proceeded from it three beautiful birds, very large, and as white as snow. They came in abreast together, took a circle, flew so close over my head that I kneeled down and looked up while they were passing. They circled around, went whence they came. I awoke rejoicing. If any can interpret this I would be glad.

Your sister in Christ,

ANNA SCHNEIDER.

CLEAR WATER, Nebraska,

Joseph Smith; Dear Brother.—We are having a protracted season of cold, stormy weather. Those who have plenty of timber, or money to buy fuel, have but a vague conception of the inconveniences to which some homesteaders on the western plains are subjected. Those who live near the largest rivers, usually can get wood, and some is to be found along the creeks and ravines. The latter is appropriated by the first settlers, and is of short duration. Here we can get green cottonwood for two dollars per cord in the tree. Sometimes we get a bargain, and it costs us less. Iowa coal sells for seven dollars and fifty cents per ton. A great many burn more or less corn. Hay of the right kind, burned in a suitable stove, makes a very good fire. Corn stalks beat nothing, but there is much "vanity and vexation of spirit" in the use of them as fuel.

Recently I took a little trip northward about twelve miles, where resides Dr. Herman, a member of the Church; also family of Geo. W. Peyton, the most of whom belong. With Bro. Herman I visited from house to house five days in succession, and on Sunday at eleven held service at the house of Bro. Peyton. Several came out, and I felt blessed in presenting the word of life to them. A neighbor whom we had visited, Williams by name, cordially invited us to meet at their house in the evening, which we were glad to do. All seemed to enjoy the meeting. Our short sermon was agreeably supplemented by singing with accompaniment on the organ. It was agreed to have our next at Mr. Northgraves. On Monday night the house was quite well filled, and good liberty was given in presenting the word. Still another, living two and one-half miles away, offered his house in which to hold service; but as conference was near at hand, no more appointments were made. I have reason to believe that good was done, both by visiting and preaching. Much kindness was shown toward us by the people.

Our conference was not largely attended on account of the inclement weather; nevertheless, a season of peace was enjoyed. I purpose to do what I can to forward the work of God among men. It is my desire to comprehend the nature of my calling, and to discharge every known duty. I find the latter day work to be a wonderful school of experience. Evidently it is the design of the great Teacher, to instruct those who are willing to learn. Our knowledge to be of worth to ourselves and benefit to others must be practical, and this is only gained by experience. No matter how severe the trial, how strong the temptation, how deep the sorrow and woe, if we but prove true to the covenant we have made, we shall rise above every hindrance and difficulty, to praise our Great King. For God the Father is our friend, and he only desires "Our dross to consume, and our gold to refine." If Paul, Peter, James, John, and many of the ancient Saints, endured trial, temptation, and some of them martyrdom, for the cause of Christ and the hope of eternal life; and if Jesus, that just and holy one, "endured the cross, despising the shame," for the glory that was set before him, what reason have I to suppose that the balmy breezes of God's love shall waft me to the pearly gates of paradise, without effort, purpose, or sacrifice on my part. It is a fact of consequence, that we can not serve, at the same time, God and mammon. Jesus said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and follow me; for, whosoever will save his life must be willing to lose it for my sake; and whosoever will be willing to lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it."—Luke 9:23, 24. I desire to be a true follower of the Lamb, meek, humble, gentle, faithful, that his Spirit may ever abide in my heart; and if need be, to lay down my life for his sake. I have found it to be of worth to me to "examine myself, whether or not I was in the faith." Not that I have for one moment doubted the latter day work, or the authenticity of the gospel; but to ascertain whether I was sound in doctrine, in precept, in principle, in practice. I humbly confess that my own feeble vision reveals to me from time to time, a sad deficiency on my part. However, I am not discouraged, but purpose in my mind and heart to "deal justly," love mercy, and walk uprightly before God.

Hopefully I remain yours in sacred bonds,

GEO. S. HYDE.

GREAT BEND, Kansas,

January 5th, 1884.

Brother Joseph.—I am not forgetful of my duties to God and the church. Although many miles from the place I had learned to love so well, because of association with God's people, and the many blessings I have received from his bountiful hand, the same spirit strives with me, and enables me to look with faith to a higher and better life. My faith in the work is unshaken, and as many others testify, I look forward with joy and pleasure to a rest with the Saints. I enjoy the Herald more than I ever did before. I think, but for a few things, it is a paper of which the church can be justly proud. May God bless it in its mission of truth. I often think of and pray for those who are struggling against so many obstacles to preach the word. Great will be their reward in the great day of settlement. I ask the prayers of the Saints, that I may not fall by the wayside.

With love for the truth, Yours,

O. L. FERGUSON.

REESE, Michigan,

January 22d, 1884.

Editor of Herald.—I thought I would suggest a few thoughts concerning the wheat and tares. Matthew 13:30. "Let both grow together until the time of the harvest," &c. The subject has been considered by different expositors of the Bible, and met with various opinions. It has been the opinion of many both in and out of the Church, that the tares represent a class of individuals that never was favorable to the gospel (Gentiles). That as God sends rain on the just and unjust, hence they are of the world. Let us see what the scriptures teach: "Another parable put he forth, saying, the kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field; but while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat." Matt. 13:2, 4. From this stand-point I am forced to believe, that the tares are among the wheat. Moreover, the parable of the ten virgins, Matt. 25, proves the tares to be among the wheat. One half was foolish, i. e., had no oil in their lamps. This oil represents the Spirit. They had certainly made shipwreck of their faith, and their lamps had gone out after being lighted. The first resort of foolish Saints, or those bearing the name, would be to ask wise Saints to lend them some of their oil, when the bridegroom came. What a deplorable picture of darkness. Better never have known the way. Jesus says the publicore and harlots will go into the kingdom of God before you. In the second epistle of Peter, 2:21, 22, he says: "It had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandments delivered unto them. But it happened unto them according to the true proverb, The dog is turned to his own vomit again, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire."

This true proverb presents an awful scene. True it is, the condition of things presented is awful. What could be worse? Horror of horrors. Let us examine the fifth chapter of Galatians. Well, says one, we do not believe it is very bad to take a glass of intoxicating drink, beer or whisky, as long as we do not get drunk. Or, if I go to a dance, that is only a little amusement, that is not very bad. Now Saints, if any one is guilty of these things, depend upon it, he is fulfilling the lust of the flesh, and shall of the flesh reap corruption. To such I say, you can not enter the kingdom of heaven. The devil is not going to tempt you to murder at the first. It is these little foxes that destroy the vine. He will weave a net to catch you, by causing you to wander little by little, perhaps by getting you to join a secret combination, or by going to varieties or theaters. At the same time the salvation of your soul is little thought of. When God comes to reckon with those servants, where will be their advancement, or what will be their excuse. "Let the wheat and the tares grow together, until the time of the harvest." The tares are among the wheat. See Jude 12 v. "These are spots of your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear, clouds without water, trees whose fruit is withered." Again. "The kingdom of heaven is like a net cast into the sea, and gathereth of every kind." Matt. 13:47. For proof that the tares are among the wheat, read the 41 verse. "The son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity." This verse needs but little comment. The last is a positive statement, that there are those in the kingdom, that offend and do iniquity. 2 Cor. 11:26 the apostle Paul, in talking about perils, makes mention of being in perils among false brethren.

Says one, why not bring unruly ones to trial; and if found guilty, count them as a heathen man, or publican. Yes, but it is hard to convince persons that are wolves in sheep's clothing; and when brought to trial, the last excuse will be, If I have done wrong, to be sure I am sorry; but still they are sensual, devilish, not having the Spirit, no repentance about it. "If any man have not the Spirit, he is none of his." Rom. 8:9. 2 Cor. 13:5, reads: Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith. Know your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except you are reprobrates."

The sense of this scripture is this. There was need in the days of Paul for the Saints to examine themselves, and I am strongly impressed that there is need of the same in our day. We read, that "the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is;" and in that day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to the gospel, may the record of our lives be such, as will give us an entrance into the mansions of eternal glory.

I am, as ever, yours fraternally,

E. DELONG.

MONTROSE, Iowa,
December 30th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—Since you were here we have had some severe trials; but the Lord has been very merciful, and has brought us through thus far. September 19th, Sister E. A. Newberry was taken very sick. Her life was despaired of. The doctors said she must die; but we could not give her up. So by the prayers of the Saints, and obedience to God's word by calling for his servant, our worthy president, to come and administer to her, she was spared, for which we render God all the praise. In November an aged brother, McGlaughlin, of this place, formerly of Hannibal, Missouri, was taken home to rest. He was a member of the old church in the days of the Martyr. Has always been a firm believer in the doctrine, but never united with the Reorganized Church. Shortly before his death he had a vision of the place he was going to. He related it thus: After lying very quiet for some little time, he looked up at his faithful wife, and said, Mother, how did I get down here? She, supposing him to be wandering in mind, said, Why, pa, you have not been anywhere but here. Yes, mother, I was up there with the disciples; it is all joy and peace up there. There is no sorrow there; but I do not know how I got down here again. He was a great sufferer, but bore it all with patience. His age was seventy-six. He was conscious to the last, and peacefully fell asleep in Christ, on the sixteenth of November.

On the 23d of November, Bro. M. T. Short came here, and remained with us until the twenty-ninth, when he left for Burlington to attend our district conference. While here he gave us some splendid sermons, although he was suffering with a bad cold. His efforts here were well liked by those outside of the church. There is a number who are nearly ready for the water. Since he was here the Holiness People have been holding a protracted meeting in the M. E. Church; but have not had much success, but few attending; not many converts this time. God grant that the people may be enabled to discern truth from error. I am striving in my weakness to keep in the straight and narrow path, the more so as we see the day approaching. Please remember us at Montrose, that the Lord may raise us up some one to help us. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am your sister in the gospel of Christ,

RUTH A. TURNER.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 24th.—Samuel W. Baker, who commanded the first expedition for the suppression of the slave trade in Central Africa, under the auspices of Ismail Pasha, the former Khedive, says: "Gen. Gordon and myself recently agreed thoroughly upon the course now forced upon the English Ministry by events in Egypt. I fear it is now too late to fulfill the programme, which would have saved much misery and bloodshed had it been adopted two months ago. Our cowardly abandonment of the Soudan has encouraged disloyalty, and has broken the spirit of both officers and troops. The employment of Gen. Gordon at this time is like summoning a fire brigade after the building has been consumed. The Ministry's conduct upon Egyptian affairs is a national humiliation." Gen. Gordon arrived this afternoon and had a conference with the British Minister. The Egyptian Ministry has sent a circular to the Power participating in the International Tribunal, proposing a reassembling of the Judicial Reform Commission. Gen. Gordon proceeds to Khartoum without an escort.

The Dutch expedition sent to the relief of the captured crew of the British steamer Nisero, wrecked on the east coast of Sumatra, comprised a battalion of infantry under the military commander of Acheen. The expedition landed at Tenom. The Rajah there, whose tribe looted the wreck, held the crew (twenty-five men, including one American) as prisoners, and refuse all proffers of ransom. The land and naval forces bombarded and burned the Rajah's Capital. The resistance of the natives was desperate. The Dutch forces fought well, and captured two strongholds of the Rajah by assault, but had several officers and men wounded. The crew, if alive are prisoners.

The French attack on Bacninh is postponed until the middle of February.

Two thousand Turcomans, under the Mussulman fanatic Knarf Leyd, were defeated and dispersed by the Persians at Meschid.

Russia makes a formal demand on Turkey to immediately pay £250,000 still owing of the indemnity exacted after the Turco-Russian war.

At St. Petersburg all the female medical students, a class from which many Nihilists have enlisted, are now compelled to reside in a house provided by the authorities, and be at home before nine in the evening.

London, England, is excited over the rumor that dynamite has been purchased by the "O'Donnell vengeance fund", and is now being distributed in small packages over that city.

Jan. 25.—The Captain of the American steamer Brooklyn was not allowed to land in Madagascar unless he would make use of a French boat, which he declined to do.

At present the Austrian grand division of the Austro-Hungarian Empire is hotly discussing the question of adopting the German as its official language. The "Empire" of Austria (not Austria-Hungary) consists of the Provinces of Bohemia, Calmatia, Galicia, Upper Austria, Lower Austria, Salzburg, Styria, Carinthia, Carniola, Bukowina, Moravia, Silesia, Tyrol, Vorarlberg, Gorizia, Istria, and Trieste. The heterogeneous character of Franz Josef's realms may be further understood when it is stated that the Kingdom of Hungary with all her provinces is still to be added to the novel political structure called Austria-Hungary.

Col. Coetlogon contends that there is food enough in Khartoum to last 6,000 men five months, and the usual grain supplies are arriving. Gen. Gordon is conferring with the civil and military authorities of Egypt and England. The mission of Gen. Gordon is to effect a complete evacuation of the Soudan, inclusive of Khartoum. The Khedive has appointed him Governor of the Soudan with full powers, and has strongly advised him to take measures to secure the safety of the civilians and Europeans. The Khedive has summoned to Cairo Abdel Shakoor, son of the late Sultan of Darfour, and offered to cede him the province of Darfour on the condition that freedom of commerce shall be maintained and the slave trade suppressed, promising that he would not be required to pay tribute. Abdel Shakoor intimated that he would probably accept the offer. Gen. Gordon shares fully Evelyn Baridg's views in regard to the necessity of withdrawal from Khartoum as the sole alternative. Gen. Gordon is willing to recommend the retention of the Soudan, and if Great Britain will pay for its reconquest will undertake to govern this country.

The police today surprised a nest of Socialists, at Charkow, Russia, the majority of whom were arrested. Important papers were secured. Intelligence received from Moscow states that on the occasion of the recent arrest of students there the police seized various documents showing that a formal league having revolutionary tendencies existed among the students. News which has been received from St. Petersburg states and all the officials at the Gatschina Palace are under the strictest control. With regard to the recent assassination of Col. Sudeikin, the police of St. Petersburg are displaying the greatest possible activity, without, however having yet been able to obtain any clew as to the whereabouts of Degajeff. The arrest of the man Wolkenstein is not yet confirmed. The Lettish press is being subjected to a rigorous censorship, having lately shown a tendency to indulge in inflammatory language. A list of names was found in Col. Sudeikin's escritoire, many of which were marked "Dangerous," and all persons thus designated have been arrested, including a well-known journalist named Krivenko. Miss Usoff, Treasurer of the Society for the relief of prisoners, is believed to have effected the escape of the prisoners from Siberia.

Admiral Courbet telegraphs that he has established the blockade of Tonquin, preventing the entry of material contraband of war. The legitimate trade is unmolested. The French expedition south against the insurgents was successful.

Placards proclaiming hostility to foreigners are posted throughout Hoi How. A mob recently attacked foreigners, who took refuge in the British Consulate. The Chinese officials have taken precaution against a recurrence of such demonstrations.

The Senate has passed a bill organizing the District of Alaska, with a Governor and many other officers.

A startling showing has lately been made of the utter worthlessness and low morality of the United States Navy. Misconduct of all descriptions is deliberately overlooked, and more officers are employed than can possibly be made use of.

Jan. 26.—Trade prospects in England are gloomy. Labor will be greatly curtailed.

The present Austro-German alliance may be styled offensive and defensive, though the principal point of the agreement is that of "assistance in case of need." The necessity arises if one of the allied powers, being engaged in war, finds itself in difficulty, or liable to defeat, and in this case the ally is bound to render military assistance. The mobilization of the ally, however, is not necessary until the necessity becomes actual. This alliance sprang from the recent threatened danger of a Russian attack on Austria. Italy is also connected with this alliance, but in a different manner, resulting from her geographical position.

Chinese Gordon has taken the place at Khartoum as the main arbiter of the fate of Egypt and Mr. Gladstone. Already things have assumed a more favorable turn. Some natives profess that Gordon's presence alone will demoralize the Mahdi's forces, and that he will so stiffen the Khartoum garrison as to make them baffle a siege. The reports from the city are now hopeful, but Gordon goes without escort through the desert, and cannot reach his destinations under eighteen days, and the whole future is still really as uncertain as ever.

The news from Russia suggests greater boldness and cleverness by the Nihilist murderers than even first accounts. The chief assassin obtained Sudeikin's lengthy report on the organization by enticing away the wife, and the one page of the great detective's manuscript left has led to several arrests of important and hitherto unsuspected persons. The Czar, tried by seclusion, is going about to all kinds of entertainments, and his advisers are making desperate attempts to conciliate the nobility, whose loyalty has been cool since the emancipation of the serfs. In Vienna Socialism has become so formidable that the city will soon be placed in a state of siege, and it is significant that the last murderer of a detective was armed with dynamite cartridges, which he vigorously attempted to use.

Jan. 27.—Great military preparations have been made at Floridsdorf, Austria, to protect the police building. The greatest excitement and consternation prevail among the population, especially as the name of the murderer of Detective Blotch is still unknown. The murderer is well educated, refined, and of an elegant appearance. Anarchist papers have just appeared warmly praising the murderer, and because he hit the mark calling him the "sharpshooter." The anarchists have published a list of names (among which are those of prominent financiers and journalists) of persons who have been condemned by the Executive Committee. Another son of the murderer Eisert died from wounds inflicted by the robbers.

The murderer of Detective Blotch refuses to divulge anything beyond the fact that he is a member of the Socialist Executive which resolved on Blotch's death. The murderer was photographed against his will, and the portrait was exhibited throughout Vienna. The features indicate great strength of character. One hundred and seventy soldiers and a strong police force have been sent to Floridsdorf. Patrols were on duty all night in Vienna. Much alarm was caused by many false reports from abroad regarding the projects of the Socialists.

Gen. Gordon, his military secretary, Lieut-Col. Stewart, and the new Sultan Darfour started for Khartoum yesterday evening. Gen. Gordon has £104,000 at his disposal for military purposes. Telegraphic communication with Khartoum is restored. The Governor of Dongola telegraphs that many tribes, including the powerful Bicharieh tribe, have submitted to Baker Pasha, military commander of Suakin. They ask the remission of six month's taxes and that they be recompensed for losses in the rebellion. They guarantee free passage to traders' caravans. Other tribes are expected to make submission. Gen. Gordon takes with him copies of the proclamation to be distributed among the various tribes of the Soudan. He expects to arrive at Khartoum in a fortnight. Five hundred troops started today for Suakin. When they arrive the relief of Sinkat will be attempted. The new Sultan, Darfour, is a son of the former Sultan. The Kingdom will be restored on conditions that slavery be abolished and commerce be free and unrestricted.

The steamers sent to clear the Blue Nile failed. They were attacked by the rebels with great fury. The rebels wanted to attack, and were only repulsed after eighty rockets had been fired into their ranks and after they had suffered heavy loss. El Mahdi left El Obeid nine days ago. His destinuation is unknown. He has 37,000 men and plenty of ammunition and Krupp guns. El Mahdi lost only 300 men during the engagement with Hicks Pasha.

Two hundred and fifty five marines sailed from Brest, France, yesterday, for Tonquin.

Jan. 28.—It is now believed the murderer of Detective Bloch is the man who murdered Police-Commissary Klubeck recently. The body of Bloch was buried side of Klubeck's body yesterday. The Governor of Floridsdorf, Austria, and several police officers have received letters threatening death. The murderer of Bloch is examined twice daily. He merely repeats: "You will never know who I am. I am one of a powerful organization which is to reform society, and rid it of you bloodthirsty rascals."

Murders in Vienna, are growing alarmingly frequent.

It is stated that Gen. Gordon, before his departure for the Soudan, telegraphed to Col. Coetlogon the commander at Khartoum, to send a trusty messenger to El Mahdi, and ordering Coetlogon to suspend operations until Gordon's arrival. Six hundred men left Cairo yesterday for Suakin.

The small city of Asterma, Spain, was the scene yesterday of religious commotion. A party of students, under the leadership of priests, made an attack on an Englishman and a native who were hawking bibles. They even threatened to burn the Spaniard. The victims unavailingly appealed to the police for protection.

The language of the Marquis Tseng, the Chinese Ambassador, continues most warlike. He is only awaiting an attack on Bacninh to make a formal declaration of war against France. The Chinese Government has ordered the Viceroy of the different provinces to report immediately the number of soldiers they can furnish.

Jan. 29th.—The excitement at Vienna continues. The murdered detective was buried with great honors.

Sabielloff, of Russia, the officer of the gendarmes sent to Kharkoff by Col. Sudeikin to investigate Nihilism, was assassinated the 26th inst. The police have discovered a plot for an uprising of the peasants in Little Russia, and also a scheme for putting strychnine in the Czar's bread. Many arrests have been made.

At a meeting of 400 Socialists in the Boulevard Memlmontant at Paris, France, a resolution was adopted declaring revolution the only means for ending the labor crisis.

The funeral of the murdered Detective Bloch, at Vienna, Aus., was attended by immense throngs of people. Wreaths in great numbers were placed upon the coffin. The murderer has shown such violence at times that it has been necessary to place him in irons.

A number of Irish and Irish-American dynamiters have recently arrived at Paris, France, including several revolutionists, well known at Scotland Yard. English detectives in service at New York state that Capt. McAfferty is also among the number. They come to concert future measures with certain Irish residents.

It is rumored the British fleet in the Mediterranean has been ordered to Alexandria, in view of the unsettled condition of affairs in Egypt. The next English budget will contain provision for keeping in Egypt an army of occupation of 6,000 men. A general order has been issued asking for the names of British soldiers entitled to have their wives and families sent to them from England. The commander of the British troops is engaging numerous English officers for the Egyptian army. Everything points to a British occupation of Egypt for an indefinite period.

A dispatch from Matamoros, Mex., says that the Rev. Father Damazo Soto, of Concordia, State of Vera Cruz, has discovered the key to the Aztec writings.

CROP REPORTS.

The crop outlook in California now is not very encouraging. Rain is wanted within two weeks to make an average harvest. The southern part of the State has been more fortunate than the north and central, where less than one-half of last year's rain has fallen. It has been the driest season for seven years. In the coast counties ocean fogs serve the purpose of light showers. Grain looks well. Considerable more work has been done than heretofore, much land being dry-plowed, and about the same acreage has been seeded as last year. Pastures are suffering. Sheep-men have lost considerable. Cattle-men are getting alarmed and will suffer severely unless rain comes shortly. The season is so far advanced that, even if rain should come as hoped for, the crop will not exceed the average. As yet there are no indications of showers. The weather is cold, with the wind in the wrong quarter.

According to the latest reports but little damage was done to fruit in Michigan by the severe weather of two weeks ago. On the other hand, fruit-growers in Central Illinois say that the storm had a serious effect on the cherry orchards.

Prof. J. R. Dodge, Statistician of the Agricultural Department, has just completed his preliminary estimates of the principal crops for 1883.

Of the wheat crop the report says: There was no warrant in the returns for the commonly reported deficiency of 20 or 25 per cent. The depreciation is nearer one-sixth. A false impression was made by the heavy deficiency of the Ohio basin, for which the high condition and large area in spring wheat made some compensation. The August report of spring wheat was favorable with few exceptions throughout the Northwest. The result was a small reduction of area in wheat and a yield per acre about a half bushel less than an average crop. Following is an estimate of the crop of 1883:

Michigan	1,786,500	14.0	25,011,000
Indiana	2,735,370	10.4	28,447,800
Illinois	2,215,000	10	22,150,000
Wisconsin	1,593,900	12.3	19,604,000
Minnesota	2,597,940	13	33,773,200

The cotton product, as shown by the December returns, is about 6,000,000 bales. There will be another investigation after the close of the cotton harvest and the shipment of a large portion of the crop, when precise results will be approached more nearly than has been possible hitherto.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

There is great destitution among miners working in the ore beds of lower Mercurzie, Lehigh County, Pa., and along the East Pennsylvania Railroad. Their pay was reduced recently from 75 to 65 cents a day, and now storekeepers refuse to give them the usual monthly credit, demanding cash. Contractors say the reduction was necessitated by the fall of price in iron. Only a few mines are in operation, and as a result hundreds of miners are idle. The striking coal miners at Buena Vista, Pa., persisted in parading again today. Officers have gone to the works tonight, and will make wholesale arrests tomorrow. Trouble is anticipated. Twenty-five strikers, principally foreigners, resumed work today.

Chinese bankers and financiers are said to be in despair over the woes of their country. Suicides among them are frequent.

William H. Guion, of New York, agent of the Guion Line of European steamers, made an assignment. The liabilities are estimated at $400,000. His assignment is purely a personal one, and does not effect the steamship line.

A general advance of ten per cent in the price of glassware has been ordered by the manufacturers.

Jan. 21.—At Glasgow Robert Kettle & Co., cotton-yarn merchants, have failed. Liabilities, £300,000.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: The weather is mild, damp and foggy. Autumn crops are not too forward, but if the mildness continues, a premature Spring growth is anticipated. The wheat crop looks well, but the position begins to assume elements of danger. Values are declining except for choice, perfect samples. Flour is cheaper. Malting barleys tend upwards. Foreign wheat is dull and declining. Maize is cheaper. The new crop of mixed American turned out to be of an inferior quality. Round maize is to-day 6d@1s. cheaper. Cargoes on passage met with little attention, their values being nominal.

A notice has been posted by all the corporations of Lowell, Mass., reducing wages ten per cent on February first. The Atlantic Mills of Lawrence, Mass., give notice that February first there will be a reduction of wages of not over ten per cent.

Jan. 22d.—The master ship builders at Aberdeen, Scotland, have notified their employees that wages will be reduced ten per cent.

At Glasgow, 1,250 employees of the Steel Company of Scotland, have accepted the masters' terms and resumed work.

Chicago now has nearly 21,000,000 bushels of grain in store.

The announcement is made that nearly all the rail-mills, iron-works, furnaces, and stove-foundries in St. Louis, Mo., are either closed or running at half or less of their capacity; that all glass-works are closed, and that there is great depression in all classes of building, throwing perhaps 8,000 men out of employment and withdrawing a very large sum of money from circulation which had heretofore been paid for wages.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

The clearings of the United States fell a little short of a billion dollars last week. The showing, on the basis of the last year's average, is not bad, but is about $700,000,000 less than the figures of three years ago at this season.

Messrs. MacGregor & Pringle, wool brokers, in Leith, Scotland, have suspended payment, with liabilities said to amount to £80,000.

The improvement in the condition of general trade, according to advices to Bradstreet's, as evinced in the increased movement of merchandise and in more firmness in prices mentioned a week ago, has since been maintained. The greatest activity noted has been at New York and Chicago. From Boston word comes of a better distribution, though there, as elsewhere, the increased sales have thus far been almost exclusively for immediate wants rather than to anticipate future requirements.

Failures last week diminished, according to Dun, by the enormous number of 108. But the figures are still far too high, reaching 317 for the United States and Canada. When the boom was going, the average weekly list counted up about ninety.

The Japanese Government has issued a new loan of $18,500,000 on railway construction, redeemable in thirty years at annual drawings.

The English Employers' Association have advised the proprietors of the Blackburn mills to work their looms only three days in a week. The Oldham Limited Liability Association, representing several million spindles, has resolved to curtail the production of yarn in order to prevent the increase of stock.

A large decrease is noted in the shipments of grain, flour, and provisions to the East during the week as compared with the corresponding seven days of last year.

The Cleveland Paper Company failed yesterday, owing $200,000. Over 400 hands were employed.

Baron Rothschild has loaned $4,750,000 to the Egyptian Government on the strength of the recent action of the Gladstonites in sending "Chinese" Gordon to Khartoum.

The Iron & Steel Association reports the total production of pig-iron in this country during the past year was 5,146,972 tons.

J. B. Wadsworth, of Morrisville, N. Y., the proprietor of eighteen cheese factories, has failed. Liabilities, $72,000.

Haworth & Co., commission merchants, of Liverpool, have failed for £50,000.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: The weather has been rough. Wind and floods did serious damage. Friday sellers were of the opinion that values had gone low enough, and endeavored to make a stand, but to-day the wheat market was disappointing to sellers. Flour was depressed and quiet. Barley was quiet and steady. Foreign wheat was unimproved and dull. Maize: The United States crop of 1883 is coming forward. Old mixed American is held for 26 shillings 6 pence, ex-ship. Three cargoes have arrived off coast. One cargo of No. 1 California was withdrawn, one was sold, and four remained, including one No. 2 American and one No. 1 California. For cargoes on passage there was a greater inquiry. Sales of English wheat during the week, 66,386 quarters at 38 shillings per quarter, against 62,535 quarters at 40 shillings 4 pence the corresponding week last year.

The net earnings of the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad Company in 1883 were $1,488,019, an increase of $76,149. The net earnings of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad last year were $9,881,785; applicable to dividends, $4,507,860.

At Paris the extraordinary budget, with the exception of the proposed credit of three million francs for constructing railways in Senegal, has been adopted by the Chamber of Deputies—418 to 8. The Senate unanimously adopted the extraordinary budget as passed by the Chamber of Deputies.

Canada has another colossal failure, that of the British Canadian Lumbering and Timber Company, which has assigned owing over a million.

Work was resumed in the Allentown Rolling Mill Company's smaller mill at Allentown, Pa., giving employment to one hundred persons.

The Exeter Manufacturing Company, of Exeter, N. H., February 11th, reduces the wages of its employees.

It is now certain that the Cleveland Rolling Mill Company of Cleveland, Ohio., has received enough orders to run the rail mill for the next year and a half. One order consists of over 100,000 and the other 50,000 rails. The Bessemer Steel Works have started up with three and eight hour turns, and will be kept working steadily hereafter. A new gang of laborers has been placed at work on the rail mill, so as to get it ready as soon as possible. The other departments which are idle will start up about the middle of February.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 24th.—An awful catastrophe is reported from Crested Butte, Colo. At 8 o'clock this morning an explosion occurred at a mine owned by a Colorado Coal & Iron Company. Upwards of fifty men were in the mine, and fifteen dead bodies have been recovered. The other men are in the inner drifts and cannot be reached. The pumping apparatus has failed, and but faint hopes are entertained that any of the miners will emerge alive. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by a leak in the air compressor.

The falling of a skylight in a school building in New York City, injured several children and one teacher.

The Italian bark Miocugino is ashore near Silloth, Eng. Eleven of the crew, and pilot were rescued, the remainder were drowned.

The railroads were blockaded with snow in the vicinity of Paxton, Ill., last night. A heavy snow-storm occurred last night, and travelers on both roads were delayed today. There has been a heavy snow-storm the last twenty-four hours, with a fierce wind at Vergennes, Vt. The mercury has fallen 60° since yesterday. All trains have been abandoned at Peterboro, Ont., owing to a snow-storm. The weather is bitterly cold. Snow again blocked the Quebec Central Railway. The drifts are twenty feet deep.

The London, Eng., Meteorological Office recently reported that for the four weeks ending Dec. 24th 1883, the weather was "very superior" to that of the same period in the two preceding years. "When compared with the mean conditions for December during the twenty-four years 1857-'80," according to the official report, "It appears the year 1883 has been warmer than the average by 1° or 2° in all parts of the country." The 4th, 6th, and 9th, of Jan. 1884, also, the official reports note, "Temperature is high for the season," the thermometer the 9th ranging from 46° to 55° over Ireland and England, and from 41° to 47° in Scotland, and the air "soft and genial." A correspondent of Nature reports observing Dec. 26th nineteen flowering plants near Bath. This phenomenon of almost June weather in England occurring in January, and the persistence of the high winter temperature, forcibly suggests a connection with the atmospheric phenomenon which caused the extraordinary "red skies." But whatever may be the cause of the warm British winter, it has been already beneficial in enabling farmers to push agricultural operations, and has given the Autumn-sown wheat a good start.

Jan. 25th.—St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral at Fond du Lac, Wis., burned yesterday morning. Loss $20,000. Loss by fire at Washington, Ia., $13,000. Minneapolis, Minn., stove works, $18,000. Vincennes, Ind., ware-house, $3,000. The Scotia Coal-Mine at Maccan, Cumberland County, N. S. is on fire. The seam worked from has frequently given trouble by taking fire. As the works extended refuse coal has fallen from the roof, etc., and gradually heated and ignited. The eastern portion of the Scotia Mine has been in a state of slow combustion for several years. The presence of fire was felt during the summer, and the old works were built off.

Thirty-four bodies have been recovered from the mine in Colorado. Fifty-nine people were killed in all.

A train was derailed near Bluffton, Ind., and several persons injured.

Jan. 26th.—A building adjoining the Minnesota State Penitentiary worth $20,000, was burned yesterday. Loss by fire at Cairo, Ill., $6,500; an aged woman was burned to death. New York City, $75,000. Xenia, O., three stores, $75,000. Curtis Creek, Md., fertilizer factory, $50,000. Philadelphia, Pa., wood works, $40,000. Buena Vista, Col., business block, $20,000.

Two ships engaged in the Australian trade collided in the English Channel; seventeen persons were saved, but twenty others are missing, and all hope of their rescue has been abandoned. The ship Simla was sunk. The other vessel, the City of Lucknow, was last seen burning signal lights. It is feared she has gone down.

There are furious gales throughout Great Britain and Ireland. The telegraph lines are disabled. There was a thunder-storm at Cork, Ireland, yesterday. The River Lee is swollen by rains, and there is much damage on the banks.

Twenty-three more dead bodies were taken from the Colorado mine yesterday, making fifty-seven so far in all.

Jan. 27th.—Loss by fire, near Montreal, Quebec, fluid beef factory, $100,000. Gilman, Ill., business block, $8,000. Waupaca, Wis., flouring mill, $20,000. Oshkosh, Wis., $7,000.

The village of Bransdorf, Austria is burning. A violent gale is blowing.

Twenty-two of the crew of the ship Simla, sunk in the English Channel by collision with the ship City of Lucknow, were drowned. The City of Lucknow has arrived at Gravesend.

An explosion yesterday in a colliery at Rhonda Valley, Wales, killed eleven miners. A rescuing party of three men, including the manager, were also killed.

The wind blew a hurricane all last night, at London, Eng. Much damage was done the city. Many persons were injured. The glass roof of the Westminster Aquarium was demolished during the performance. A panic ensued and several persons were hurt. A printing office in Haymarket was unroofed and a boy killed. Many vessels were wrecked and a large number of lives lost. Telegraph communication with the Continent, also the Atlantic cables, were interrupted several hours. The storm raged in Paris. Railway and telegraph communications were broken in all directions and wires prostrated. There was much damage in the suburbs. Many persons were injured in the streets. An immense number of lamps and windows were wrecked, trees uprooted, and chimneys demolished. Freethinkers' Hall, Portsmouth, was destroyed. No boats are allowed to leave Portsmouth. At Hastings the theater and pier had to be closed, the electric lights along the parade were extinguished, and seas dashed over the streets, making walking dangerous. At Monmouth, Wye, and Monnow the rivers burst their bounds and flooded the highways. Southampton and Eastbourne suffered severely. Railway traffic is greatly deranged. At Torquay there were many casualties. A mail-cart was overturned by the violence of the wind. Many boats were swamped. The iron chapel at Newcastle went down. The falling roof killed a woman and two children. At Leeds the roof of a dwelling collapsed, killing one and injuring four occupants. The mail-train between Durham and Darlington was twice stopped by the gale. The shops on the Isle of Wight closed early. A lady was knocked down by the wind and had a leg broken. At Newry Ireland, houses were unroofed. The police barracks were made untenable, and the police were compelled to take refuge in the court house. The bark Nokomis, Capt. Murphy, from Londonderry for Baltimore, anchored in Lough Feryle, parted her cables and was driven to sea. It is feared the vessel and crew are lost. Reports from all parts of the kingdom agree that the gale was of almost unparalleled severity. The railway station at Elmswell was hurled across the track. Seven bodies have been washed ashore at Hythe. The steamer Frissia, at Plymouth, reports tremendous seas. A bark was towed into Dover with her masts literally torn out of the deck.

Jan. 28th.—Loss by fire at Hope, Ark., $60,000. Warsaw, Ind., $12,500. Belleville Ont., $25,000. Lofayette, Ind., $4,000. Near Bristol, Ind., $3,000.

Reports continue of disasters by Saturday's gale in the English Channel and in the North Sea. The meteorological office finds it impossible to prepare forecasts for the north. The ship Juno, from Liverpool for Calcutta, foundered in the Mercy, and all hands, twenty-five, were lost. Many barges sunk in the Mersey during the storm. At Newcastle-on-Tyne the spire of All Saints' Church was badly damaged and the roof partially destroyed. In Ireland the Letter Kenney Railway train was overturned. Near Londonderry sixty yards of embankment of the Northern Railway were swept away, and the mail train had a narrow escape. During the storm Saturday night the Austrian bark Cviet was wrecked at Land's End, and the Captain and a sailor were drowned. The mail steamer Thibet, for Bombay, has returned to Plymouth disabled, having encountered a terrific gale 123 miles south west of Eddystone light. The break-water at Port Erin, Isle of Man, costing £70,000, is entirely destroyed. Dainlith's wire factory, near Widnes, is demolished, the buildings, engines, boilers, etc., being a mass of ruins.

A second exploring party descended into the mine in the Rhonda Valley, in Wales, the scene of yesterday's explosion, but was forced to return by noxious gas. The workings are a complete wreck, and sixty-eight horses are killed. No trace of the first has been found party of explorers, three in number, including the manager of the colliery. The disaster throws 1,000 men out of employment. A third exploring party penetrated 500 yards into the pit and found two corpses, one that of Manager Thomas, who led the first rescuing party. Manager Thomas was awarded the Albert medal for heroism in consideration of bravery in rescuing imprisoned miners a few years ago. There was an explosion of fire-damp in a colliery at Rowley, Staffordshire, Eng. Five miners were badly burned. The roof of the Jesuit College at Carrion De Los Condes, Spain, fell yesterday. A priest, workman, and thirteen scholars were badly injured.

At the Hague, Germany, a fire in a stearine-candle factory yesterday destroyed 100,000 kilograms of lard. Total loss, £25,000. Five hundred men are thrown out of employment.

At Point Narrows, Tenn., a passenger train was ditched; the engineer was killed, and several others wounded. Two trains, a gravel and freight, collided near Boston, Mass., and derailed and damaged twenty-nine cars.

WAS JOSEPH SMITH A PROPHET OF GOD?

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

[Concluded.]

Of the testimony of the voice of tempests, of the storm's sway, causing death in the deep, and destructions on the land, little need be written here, to convince even unbelievers, of the fulfillment of this division of the prophecy. "The name cyclone is given to the terrific hurricanes that visit the Indian Ocean; and surely they are the most terrible and disastrous phenomena in nature. According to all accounts of those who have witnessed it, nothing can exceed the terrific sublimity of the cyclone. Nature seems to anticipate the dread disaster, and sits in sackcloth and ashes. The fleecy clouds wandering in the upper air seem veiled in a dirty vapor. The sun looks weird and spectral from a vague halo. Clouds pile themselves in huge, fantastic forms. The air is hot and oppressive. The barometer falls rapidly. Already the great wind is tearing the heavens above. The clouds are rent in shreds, and scattered like feathers in a whirlwind. The birds wheel around together, then start away. Now a great, dark mass rises, and spreads out, veiling the dim, blue heaven with blackness, stained as if with blood. Darkness falls as if from heaven, and the tempest smites the water. Lightnings fall in cascades, flame out from the low clouds that creep along, and flash from the water. But the howl of the winds, the roar of the water, the groaning and snapping of the ship's timbers, all mingled in a wild, confused wail, drown the roar of the thunder." "It is recorded that in 1837, a cyclone demolished a strong fortress at St. Thomas. The water was lifted out of the harbor and dashed over the land, until the bed was bare where thirty feet of water had been. More than that, blocks of stone were torn from the dried bed of the harbor, and hurled high upon the shore." The foregoing taken from a number of the Madison (Indiana) Courier, of five or six years ago, is not only grandly and awfully descriptive, but uses the names cyclone and tempest, interchangeably. The occasion of its being written was the visitation of southern Indiana by one of these cyclones. It drew fish weighing several pounds each, out of the Ohio river at Vevay, and dropped them in some of their door yards. It also shows that these fearful and destructive tempests are no longer confined to the region of the equator; and that scientific men are called upon to notice and investigate them. These terrible tempests were not witnessed by the inhabitants of the Temperate Zone, in 1832, when the prophecy of Joseph Smith was uttered declaring the visitation of these tempests on the people. But listen to the mournful tread of the wild, rushing tempest, as it chimes its sorrow forth in "Mt. Carmel's Iliad,"—"The prey of the tornado," it lies wrecked in its prosperity. The beautiful city of the Wabash; a county in mourning for the death of its citizens and the ruin of its homes. Eighty families rendered homeless, many killed and wounded. This was in the year 1877. In 1878 the country was shocked by the experiences and accounts of "death in the deep," "the hurricane in the east," "wholesale destruction, with appalling sacrifice of life." "Hundreds of sail vessels and steamers wrecked." "An oyster fleet of one hundred sail all lost or badly damaged." "One ship known to have taken down every soul on board," "An unprecedented storm," "Over forty churches" in the city of Philadelphia "of all denominations were more or less damaged." "Boston, Oct. 23d: The storm which is prevailing throughout the Union, has not left New England out in the cold." Such are the headings of the accounts of the great storm of October 23d, 1878.

May 31st, 1879, the following was heralded abroad by the journals of the country: "Cyclone. Portions of Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri visited by a fearful tornado. The town of Irving almost totally destroyed. Many lives lost, and much damage done to property along the course of the storm." Of one of these tempests that visited the east some years since, the Boston Journal says: "Until the heavens shall pass away like a scroll, the elements shall melt with fervent heat, and the world itself shall be burnt up, we do not expect to witness such another scene." The almost total destruction of Marshfield, Mo., in 1880, with its two hundred wounded souls, its eighty-five or ninety killed, by a cyclone; with that of New Ulm a short time ago; the suffering and death, and great destruction recently at Grinnel, in the State of Iowa, all testify in thunder tones that Joseph was inspired of God when he prophesied in 1832 that the testimony of the elders to the people of the truthfulness of the gospel, would be followed by the testimony "of the voice of tempests," "the voice of the waves of the sea, heaving themselves beyond their bounds." It is very strange, indeed, that Joseph Smith should have made such a prediction as this, with the language of the Lord as found in Job. 38:8, 11, and Jer. 5:22, before him; the bounds of the waves set by a "perpetual decree," and "though they roar, yet can they not pass over it," unless he was ignorant of the existence of such scriptures; though he may have been ignorant of the statements, yet the fact remained. If the "decree" still standing unalterable in the days of Jeremiah, was to terminate in the latter days, how would Joseph know it, save by revelation from the one who made the decree? Not a prophet or apostle, from the days of Jeremiah to those of Joseph Smith, intimated the termination of this decree. Not even the Savior. He intimated that the waves of the sea would "roar" in the last days, but this is admitted in the language revealing the decree. But if Joseph Smith predicted the termination of that ancient decree, in the year 1832, and the waves of the sea have actually "heaved themselves beyond their bounds" since 1832, we are forced to the conclusion that he discovered it by revelation from God. This is the only conclusion to be reached from the very nature of the case. This we will demonstrate, if the events prophesied of, coming to pass in exact fulfillment of the prophecy, will do it. Let the predicted events speak for themselves.

As early as the year 1867, this notable prophecy of Joseph Smith began to be fulfilled, for "at the Island of St. Thomas, the waves rose sixty or seventy feet higher than common," and heaved themselves beyond their bounds. By these waves, a United States war steamer was carried out upon the land, and left there high above its anchorage. In 1868, at the Sandwich Islands, the waves of the sea rose higher than ever before, heaving themselves beyond their bounds, destroying a number of the little coast towns, also destroying life and property. August the 13th, 1868 occurred the great earthquake at Arica, causing the great tidal wave, that beat along the coast of the Pacific, from San Francisco to Cape Horn.

A wave half a hundred feet high, whose length seemed immeasurable, was seen advancing, like a dark wall upon the unfortunate City, Arica, a large part of which was overwhelmed by it; while two ships of war were carried far beyond the town, and there left stranded, high and dry. At Chola, three such waves swept in, and overflowed nearly the whole town, the sea passing more than half a mile beyond its usual limits. At Iquique, the people beheld the inrushing wave while it was still a great way off. A dark blue mass of water, some fifty feet in height, was sweeping in upon the town, with inconceivable rapidity. Many Buildings were washed away, and in the low-lying parts of the town, there was a terrible loss of life.

Without stopping to notice the tidal waves of Galveston, Texas, and at Cleveland Ohio, recently, we will pass on to cite the great Bengal-Storm-wave, of December 29th, 1876, when the waves of the sea, rose twenty to thirty feet high, heaving themselves beyond their bounds, to a distance of six miles, and destroying more than two hundred thousand lives, November 31st, 1876. Also on the 9th of May, 1877, on the western coast of South America, occurred a great earthquake and tidal wave, by which fourteen towns were totally destroyed, also, six hundred lives were lost, with twenty million of dollars worth of property. The United States steamer, Watteree, stranded on a bar in 1868, was lifted bodily, and floated two miles north of her old position. Three elements of destruction were busy at once; fire, water and the earthquake. The wave which succeeded the earthquake and completed the work of destruction, was sixty feet high. Lapena Blanca mine was sunk in, smothering two thousand workmen, of whom forty were cornish miners. Comment here is unnecessary. These historical facts given in the language of others, about which no doubts exist in the minds of any person at all posted, prove Joseph Smith to have been inspired of God beyond a peradventure, and to try to evade this conclusion, is worse than useless.

A moment's thought relative to the condition of society in America, with its antagonism between "labor and capital," its "Chinese-immigration" question, its present inability to successfully handle the polygamy question, "Star-Route" and other swindles. England, with its Irish question, its Egyptian war, its South African difficulties, and other complexities and perplexities. Germany with its socialism, a secret opposition society, its seven contesting political parties, all in the political field, the rebellion against the heavy taxation collected to support their large and increasing army. Russia, overwhelmed with its internal broils, its clamorous peasantry, for freedom from vigorous servitude and poverty, its Nihilism, opposed to all law and "right." Turkey, struggling for an existence, and not able to pay one sixth of the interest on her indebtedness. The possibility that the Jews may soon call in their outstanding money, and let the financial bottom out of the leading governments of the earth. The universal and wide-spreading of Infidelity, Atheism, the deceptions of the many false spirits that are abroad in the earth, against which Christianity complains that it does not successfully resist, will convince us that "all things 'are' in commotion," "the hearts of men" are failing "them," "and all things" are indeed in commotion; "and fear" is coming on the nations, as foretold by Joseph Smith the Prophet and Seer of the Lord, in these last days.

A great, clear, and most pointed prophecy was delivered by Mr. Smith, on the 25th day of December, 1832, as follows:

"Verily thus saith the Lord, concerning the wars that will shortly come to pass, beginning at the rebellion of South Carolina, which will eventually terminate in the death and misery of many souls. The days will come that war will be poured out upon all nations, beginning at that place; for behold, the Southern States shall be divided against the Northern States, and the Southern States will call on other nations, even the nation of Great Britain, as it is called, and they shall also call upon other nations, in order to defend themselves against other nations; and thus war shall be poured out upon all nations. And it shall come to pass, after many days, slaves shall rise up against their Masters, who shall be marshalled and disciplined for war; and it shall come to pass also, that the remnants who are left of the land will marshal themselves, and shall become exceeding angry, and shall vex the Gentiles with a sore vexation: and thus, with the sword, and by blood-shed, the inhabitants of the earth shall mourn: and with famine, and plague, and earthquakes, and the thunder of heaven, and the fierce and vivid lightnings also, shall the inhabitants of the earth be made to feel the wrath, and indignation and chastening hand of an Almighty God, until the consumption decreed hath made a full end of all nations: that the cry of the Saints, and of the blood of the Saints, shall cease to come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, from the earth to be avenged of their enemies. Wherefore, stand ye in holy places, and be not moved, until the day of the Lord come; for behold it cometh quickly saith the Lord, Amen."

"This revelation and prophecy, given twenty-nine years before the great "Civil War" in the United States, was in print prior to 1852, for a Mr. John Hyde, who wrote a work against the Latter Day Saints entitled "Mormonism," which was issued by Fetridge and Company, of New York, in 1853 cites this revelation, on the 174th page of the work, as evidence against the prophetic character of Joseph Smith. And Mr. Beadle, who issued a work against the Mormons in 1870, says he copied this revelation from a paper called "The Seer," published by Mr. O. Pratt, in Washington, D. C. in 1853. I copy it from The Pearl of Great Price, printed at Liverpool, England, in 1851. The copy of the work that I have, was given to me by a brother Henry Sutcliff, now deceased, late of Perry Co., Ind., who brought it with him from England, in 1857 or 1858.

This prophecy must have been given for the express purpose of removing the remotest doubt entertained by any of the prophetic character of Joseph Smith. This prophecy has been, and is being so palpably and perfectly fulfilled, that a citation of the history of the events referred to therein, is all that seems necessary. Comment is quite unnecessary. In fact to study the history of events as they have occurred, in their relation to this prophecy, makes it one of the most wonderful predictions I ever investigated. I can account for its plainness only on the hypothesis that the more vigorous the opposition to the work of the Lord, the more powerful the evidence in its favor becomes.

That a cruel and bloody civil war did sweep through our land, beginning with "the rebellion of South Carolina," in 1861, and continued for over four years, "terminating" in the death of some six or seven hundred thousand souls, and the indescribable "misery" of hundreds of thousands of others in many ways, is only too well known to be dwelt on here. "That the Southern States," were "divided against the Northern States" as the prophecy indicated, is attested by the history, and is known to be the case by many now living.

The Southern States did "call on other nations, even the nation of Great Britain as it is called," for "In 1861, a commission was appointed to England and France of which William L. Yancy was chief," and, "Subsequently, Mason and Slidel went, to procure the acknowledgement of the Southern Confederacy, as legal." (Smucker's History of The Civil War, pp. 198, 277, vol. 1. That war has been, and is being "poured out upon all nations, beginning at "the rebellion of South Carolina," since 1861, the following testimonies abundantly prove: "In 1862, France and Mexico were involved in war, and which continued till 1864." "In 1863, Prussia and Denmark engaged in what is known as the 'Schleswig—Holstein war.'" "And in 1864, Austria joined Prussia in the Schleswig—Holstein war." "By the war between Prussia and Austria (in 1866) Austria was compelled to withdraw from the confederation." "War between France and Germany in 1870, and 1871." "In 1876, war was concluded between Abyssinia and Egypt." "In 1876, peace was proclaimed between Guatemala and Salvador, South America." "Civil war in Morocco in 1877." "Russia—Turkish war of 1877-8." English—Afghan war of 1877, 1878, and 1879." "In 1878, 1879, 1880, war between Chili and Bolivia." "Civil war in Spain, in 1878, 1879, and 1880." Our authority for the foregoing statements of history, is the common school geographies of our country, the journals, and the memory of many now living. And besides these, a recent writer states that Central America, Cuba, Holland, Italy, Greece, Algeria, China, Japan, Corea, "with many districts in Asia and Africa have been visited with the war-fiend since the rebellion of South Carolina in 1860." (See Joseph the Seer).

Need we refer to the state of anarchy, war and mobocracy that does, and has prevailed in South America, in all its horrible forms, and deathly destructiveness and terror,—for the last three or four years? The late war between France and Tunis. The late engagement between England and Egypt, or the Holy Crusade now being prosecuted by the False Prophet in Soudan, to more fully vindicate the terms of the prophecy? No one is able now to portray to the mind, the horror, cruelty, misery, sorrow and loss entailed on surviving humanity, by this series of, in a majority of cases,—long and bloody and expensive wars, in which every civilized nation on the face of the globe has been engaged in the last twenty-two years, without an exception, almost! And the nations of the earth still expect wars to continue. They continue to enlarge their armies, to augment the power of their fleets, and invent instruments and means of destruction and defense. Take the world as a whole, and it resembles a vast and very active military camp. The society of the world is in a state of unrest, continually agitated like the troubled, and ever-flowing ocean-tide. Ever casting up the miry dregs of cruelty, misery, destruction, and wickedness of every conceivable character; all mingled with suffering and human woe. And if we are able to decipher the language of the spirit now moving the poor masses of the oppressed of earth, the hand writing on their wall indicates the approaching end of some of the older governments of the earth. During the progress of the civil war in the United States, no less than two hundred thousands slaves rose up "against their masters," who were "marshalled and disciplined for war," by people of the north, as saith the prophecy.

"The remnants who are left of the land," the Indians, soon after the commencement of the rebellion, did "marshall themselves," and became "exceeding angry" at the deceptions that were practiced on them by the agents of the government, and other provocations; and have almost ever since that time, "vexed the [nation], Gentiles, with a sore vexation." The Indian question, how to proceed with the Indian, is a problem that has vexed the Government of the United States for some years. Ever since the terrible massacre of one thousand to fifteen hundred souls in Minnesota, in 1862 to the present, the relentless and barbarous hand of the Lamanite has been stretched out, indignantly visiting death and destruction to the citizen and the property, both of the government and to individuals. In a communication to the President of the United States in 1875, Governor Osborn, of Kansas, "says that since Kansas has been a state three million dollars have been expended in defending the people against Indian hostilities. Claims for property taken and destroyed to the amount of three hundred and fifty thousand dollars had been verified, and this represents but a small portion of the amount destroyed and stolen. He closes by saying to the President, that he believes that the policy of the President is animated by a desire for the best; but he believes that he has made a mistake." This statement has to do with only one section of the west, and to the pecuniary feature of the case. Could the entire moneyed cost of the Indian wars of the last twenty years, throughout the borders of the great west be given, together with the great loss of life, in one general statement, it would indicate indeed, "the remnants of the land" as having been "exceeding angry," and as having been up to the present, a terrible "vexation." Says the pamphlet, Joseph the Seer: "It has been reported that for every Indian captured and killed during some of the Indian wars since 1862, it has cost the whites the lives of nine white men, and five million dollars in money." Of 1862, the historian Barnes, says: "Bands of warriors under Little Crow and other chiefs perpetrated the most horrible massacres in Minnesota, Iowa, and Dakota. Over seven hundred whites were slain, and many thousands driven from their homes."—United States History, p. 244.

Details could be multiplied, illustrative of cruelty, barbarity, murder, and destructions by the Indians since 1861, and of the "sore vexation" inflicted by them on the nation and its citizens. But their acts are recorded in history, and are before the reader, also the prophecy; therefore read, ponder, and be convinced! Of "the fierce and vivid lightnings," and the "thunders of Heaven," also "the earthquakes," by which "the inhabitants of the earth" were to "be made to feel the wrath, and indignation, and chastening hand of an Almighty God," we have written in another place the evidences of the fulfillment of these items of the prophecy, are so numerous, so universal, so loudly expressed by "the inhabitants of the earth" generally, that further testimony here is unnecessary. Concerning the "famines," they have been so numerous during the last twenty years, we will only refer to a few of the most not able and destructive instances.

In 1865-6, The World's Crisis, of Boston, gives the accounts of a "Terrible Famine in India," which were "heart-rending." No less than seventy-five thousand persons are daily fed by public charity, and it is estimated that an equal number is supported privately, chiefly by the Hindoos. The number of deaths from starvation averages twenty-five hundred per week, and one week reached thirty-five hundred! Besides these, many die in the interior, whose cases are not reported."

The London Times, Chicago Tribune, and other European and American journals, give horrible accounts of a terrible "famine" that raged through portions of Persia, especially the southern part, between the years 1870-75, followed by "pestilence," very destructive and desolating in its character and nature, and by which "half of the Kingdom of Persia" was being "rapidly depopulated." "Most of the dead lie unburied," and, "more than one human being is said to have been killed and eaten." "Between Shiraz and Bushire, thousands of dead bodies lie unburied."

Following this was "the drouth in Australia" caused by less rain falling in a given three, or four months, than at any time since the colonization of the country. In many localities the earth had no more grass on it than "a boarded floor." "In many instances the water was poisoned and had a very offensive smell." The people in some of the more remote localities combined themselves into "mobs" for self preservation. "Horses, cattle and sheep" died "in great numbers." "A letter from the Barrier Ranges reports that forty thousand sheep died on one station, for the want of water."

According to the Levant Herald, a very severe famine prevailed in Asia Minor, in 1875, during which thousands of human beings perished. In 1880, famine again visited Asia Minor, with all of its attendant horrors. A letter dated Selmas, July 5th, 1880, says: "The streets are full of dead bodies, which are generally only buried when in a state of putrefaction." Thousands were so poor as not to be able "to buy even one 'pound' of bread." In the year 1877, India was again visited by famine, covering an area of fifty-four thousand square miles in Bombay, containing a population of eight millions; and eight thousand square miles in Madras, and eighteen million inhabitants. Lord Carnarvon stated that a force of one million, five hundred and ninety persons were employed on "the relief works" in the two districts thus famine stricken. "The cost to the State is estimated at over two millions sterling in Bombay, and four millions in Madras." The same authority stated that seven hundred and fifty thousand persons died from the famine in India." Of the year 1880, it is recorded that, "Appalling accounts continue to come from Armenia and Kurdistan. The famine extended over a hundred thousand square miles. Appeals for help have been published by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Marquis of Salisbury, and Earl of Shaftesbury."

Without noticing many other accounts of famines in other parts of the globe, merely mentioning the fact that hundreds of persons are suffering for food in Ireland now, we conclude the testimony on this point by referring briefly to "The famine in China," during the years 1876-8, that in so brief a period brought untold misery and suffering to so many millions of earth's children. The official records inform us that during this famine the living were reduced to the sorry necessity of not only devouring the dead, but the stronger ones laid hold on the weak and starving ones, and slew them, and ate them." "Every pound received from England may save a life, say the missionaries on the spot. But to save a life is nothing in comparison with saving a parent from killing his children, or a child from killing his parents, for the same purposes for which they would kill sheep or oxen; namely, in order to use them as meat." The mere suggestion is one which revolts the very body almost as much as it revolts the soul. Yet the dry official report says: "In the earlier period of distress the living fed upon the bodies of the dead; next, the strong devoured the weak; and now the general destitution has arrived at such a climax, that men devour those of their own flesh and blood. History contains no record of so terrible and distressing a state of things, and if prompt measures of relief be not instituted, the whole region must soon be depopulated."

The Chinese authorities themselves assert that five millions of people had died, either of the famine, or of the violence of those who wanted to avoid starvation for themselves."—London Spectator, June 22d, 1878. We are surely safe in concluding from the foregoing testimonies that so fully verify the prophecy of Joseph Smith, that, "when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known that the Lord hath truly sent him." The persecutions to be passed through subsequent to the revelation of the great prophecy now under consideration, as intimated therein in the language: "That the cry of the saints, and of the blood of the saints, shall cease to come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, from the earth to be avenged of their enemies," were predicted to a certain extent by Joseph Smith, more than a year prior to this statement, and nearly two years before the persecutions predicted began. In a revelation, dated August, 1831, we read:

"Ye can not behold with your natural eyes, for the present time, the design of your God concerning those things which shall come to pass hereafter, and the glory that shall follow, after much tribulation. For after much tribulation cometh the blessing. * * * Remember this which I tell you before, that you may lay it to heart, and receive that [glory] which shall follow."—Doc. and Cov., 58: 2, 3.

At the time these prophecies were made there were no human probabilities, that such terrible persecutions would be brought against them, as to result in the shedding of their blood. So "much tribulation" as all this did not then seem imminent. But about two years after the first of these statements, the fires of persecution began to rage against the Saints in the western part of the State of Missouri, which resulted in the destruction of much of their property, the demolition of some of their houses, their being whipped, their wives and children fiendishly abused, and the killing of a number, including an old patriot of the American Revolution; being driven from their homes, and otherwise criminally misused.

The instrument of writing drawn up by the persecutors, wherein their intentions to drive the Saints from their homes are set forth; and the reasons therefor, do not charge the Saints with unconstitutional conduct: nor do they claim any legal or constitutional right for their exterminating intentions. The charge preferred against the saints was: "They openly blaspheme the most High God, and cast contempt upon His holy religion, by pretending to receive revelations direct from heaven,—by pretending to speak in unknown tongues by direct inspiration." . . . "We therefore agree, that after timely warning, and upon receiving an adequate compensation for what little property they cannot take with them, they refuse to leave us in peace as they found us, we agree to use such means as may be sufficient to remove them. And intending as we do to rid our society, peaceably if we can, forcibly if we must; and believing as we do that the arm of the civil law does not afford us a guarantee, or at least a sufficient one, against the evils which are now inflicted upon us, and seem to be increasing by the said religious sect; deem it expedient and of the highest importance, to form ourselves into a company for the better and easier accomplishment of our purpose; a purpose which we deem it almost superfluous to say, is justified as well by the law of nature as by the law of self preservation."

"The law of nature" here referred to, that moved this "company" to "organize," and go forth to "rid our society," of "the said sect," by persecution, mobocracy and forcible expulsion, reminds one of "the law of nature" that moved the Romans in the days of Nero, to institute a siege of extermination against what the historian Tacitus calls, the great "evil," that was introduced into the world by Christ at Jerusalem, and along with other "evils," had found its way to the City of Rome. Among other things that attached to this "evil," as Tacitus calls it, it will be remembered was: "They shall speak with new tongues." This "company" further state, be it remembered to their honor:—"We do not contend that we have the least right, under the constitution and laws of the country, to expel by force. But we would indeed be blind, if we did not foresee, that the first blow that is struck at this moment of deep excitement, must and will speedily involve every individual in a war, bearing ruin, woe, and desolation in its course." Though asserting that they were able to "foresee" that the first blow struck, would "involve every individual in a war," yet they were "intending," and were willing to strike this "first blow." This testimony surely reveals the invisible origin of the causes of the predicted persecutions, and by the evidence of their enemies, the Saints are clear of the false charge of having by any unconstitutional acts caused the difficulties. The Saints, to show their respect for the laws of their country, submitted peaceably to these confessedly illegal proceedings of their persecutors, and in the midst of cruel, and bitter persecutions, in some instances even unto death, left Jackson county, and went further north. But after all this; after making new homes in another county, the relentless hand of persecution was laid upon them, and continued to involve in really useless and uncalled for difficulties, until public opinion had risen to such a height against them, that they were finally expelled from the State of Missouri, by an exterminating order from the governor. By these trials and persecutions that the Saints passed through during the seven years, the prophecy of Joseph in regard to these things, is most wonderfully fulfilled. In a prophecy given by Joseph in the latter part of 1832, which may be found in the Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 673, is predicted a misfortune to come upon the Church, which was to result in throwing the Church into great disorder and confusion; also the fact and manner of his own death, and that the Lord would authorize a successor to him, through whom the Church was to be set in order again, and move on to triumph. From the revelation we quote:

"And it shall come to pass that I, the Lord God, will send one mighty and strong, holding the sceptre of power in his hand, clothed with light for a covering, whose mouth shall utter words, eternal words, while his bowels shall be a fountain of truth, to set in order the house of God, * * * while that man who was called of God [prior to the year 1832] and appointed, that putteth forth his hand to steady the ark of God, shall fall by the shaft of death, like as a tree that is smitten by the vivid shaft of lightning."

Joseph, as is well known, fell in death suddenly, as a tree when smitten with lightning; pierced by the gunshot of the assassin, nearly twelve years after the prophecy was given. He did not live to see the great "disorder" come over the Church, as he had predicted; but following close upon his death it came, with all its sad results, throwing a cloud of darkness, and great confusion over the church, caused, in a great measure, as he had predicted years before, (1837), by the evil genius of hypocritical and blasphemous spirits, then actuating some would be leading ones in the Church, (see Doctrine and Covenants, 105: 9, 10), introducing "a day of wrath, a day of burning, a day of desolation, of weeping, of mourning, and of lamentation—and as a whirlwind it shall come upon all the face of the earth, saith the Lord. And upon my house shall it begin, and from my house shall it go forth, saith the Lord."

Such was the history of the church from the year 1844 to 1853, the true saints scattered far and wide from each other in a state of disorder. "The leaders of my people causing them to err," and leading numbers of them beyond the pale of civilization, beyond the Rocky Mountains of the west, there to enslave them in the bondage of darkness, error, sin, and the doctrines of demons. But beyond the dark, rolling clouds of this, to the church, day of gloom, was to be seen by the eye of faith, by the true child of God, a ray of light, the "silver lining" was dimly seen. The lamp of the sure word of prophecy, that shines in a dark place, was seen reflecting through the mists of the veil, its rays the while becoming more powerful and brilliant, and the promise of God, to send one "clothed with light for a covering," to set in order the house of God," is ere long realized. And the faith so long shrouded in the shadow of error begins once more to shine out in its native light and purity. Zion was made to realize, during the beginning of this predicted "day of desolation, of mourning, and of lamentation," this day of the church's disorder, the Lord's great displeasure at sin and error, as visibly as they had ever realized his favor and approbation for truth, obedience and righteousness, and was led to exclaim, in her anguish and disappointment: "The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me." But the chastening "afterward" "yielded the peaceable fruits of righteousness." It was of necessity that "schisms" should appear, that the "approved" ones "might be made manifest," (1st Cor. 11:19), and after the self-ejection of the heretic, after the "destroyers, and they that made" Zion "waste, shall go forth of [or out of] thee," and after they that attempted to "swallow thee up shall be far away from thee," as far away at least as Utah! and after, in consequence of these great misfortunes, the children of Zion had made haste, or been made ashamed of the conduct of the heretics, the comforting reply of the Lord to Zion is:

"Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands, thy walls are continually before me." "The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me; give place to me that I may dwell."—Isaiah, chap. 49.

"I will send one mighty and strong to set in order the house of God." A beautiful harmony exists here, between the prophecies of Isaiah and of Joseph Smith. And after the fulfillment of the word of prophecy, and the dark cloud began to roll back, and a proper preparation on the part of the Saints had been made, during the years elapsing from 1852 to 1860, in the States of Wisconsin and Illinois, the promise of the Lord to send one "to set in order the house of God," was realized by the saints, when in the year 1860, Joseph Smith, the oldest son of Joseph the martyr, by especial direction and command of God, and in accordance with the law of God governing in the case, was ordained to the presiding eldership of the church at Amboy, Illinois, and the result of his efforts so far is the development of the reorganization of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, on the basis of original doctrines and principles of the church when founded in 1830.

This great fact,—the acknowledged existence of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints—the further fact that Joseph Smith is the only one that is fulfilling the prophecy of the Martyr, ought to clearly convince any of the remaining factions of the former church, where the truth in the matter is, and who is on the Lord's side.

We submit this fact to all, as insurmountable evidence that Joseph Smith the Martyr was inspired and authorized of God—was sent of God as a prophet. We feel convinced from all the foregoing evidences, with many others that might be given, that Joseph Smith, the Martyr, was a prophet of God. Many other testimonies could be presented to sustain the proposition affirmed in this article; but the length to which we have already gone, and our inability to treat the subject in the manner its importance demands, forbid our claiming your attention further at this time.

Our only reason for writing so lengthily as we have done is, we believe the subject in all its bearings, to all lovers of truth, is a most important one. The Bible prophecies relating to the great apostasy of the ancient church, culminating in the period now called "The Dark Ages," and out of which have grown so much religious division and strife, confusion and uncertainty, the inability of man unaided of God, to extricate himself from the sad dilemma, all render reasonable the great conception that God would interpose and come to the rescue, restore the old path, the straight and narrow way, the many prophecies, as we have seen, that point to just that work, the doctrine taught as that restoration, being the identical doctrine taught anciently according to the Bible, render the claims of Mr. Smith scriptural, the exact fulfillment of his prophecies uttered in the name of the Lord establish to a demonstration that he was sent of God, a prophet to the people, in this "dispensation of the fulness of times," a restorer of "the gospel of the kingdom," to be "preached in all the world, for a witness to all nations and then shall the end come."

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

The above district conference was held at Wehn's Hall, at Wilber, Saline county, Nebraska, January 13th and 14th, 1884. Levi Anthony president, R. M. Elvin secretary. The word was preached by brethren R. J. Anthony, J. Armstrong and R. M. Elvin, to large and attentive congregations.

Monday, 14th.—Levi Anthony, district president, reported. District Secretary reported. Bishop's Agent's report: September 1st, 1883, on hand $1.70, received $189.45, total $191.15. Expended $154; January 1st, 1884, to balance $37.15. J. W. Waldsmith agent. Report received and referred to a committee. Elders Stephen Butlers, Wm. D. Gregory, R. J. Anthony, Robt. M. Elvin (baptized 2); Priests Robert White and John O. Savage, and Teachers Henry P. Savage and Daniel Broliar, reported.

Address by Elder James Caffall, President of the Mission.—To the president and brethren of the Southern Nebraska District, in conference assembled: With unfeigned regrets I hereby announce my inability to participate in your deliberations, and resort to this method of reporting. As per request made at your previous session I attend the two days' meetings at Nebraska City and Plattsmouth, visited Eight Mile Grove and Moroni Branch, preaching in all thirty discourses. Believing this a duty, I felt well in its performance. As to results I have nothing to say. I would respectfully suggest the necessity of active, persistent and continuous ministerial labors in your district. (1.) If practicable, the appointing and properly sustaining a man as a presiding officer, who ought to be free to devote his whole time in traveling in the district, which of course would require the hearty co-operation of every member of the district. (2.) As many Elders beside the president as can be sustained. Much ought to be done by the local officers in laboring on the Sabbaths, whose labors are not required in branches. (3.) Branch officers should be active in encouraging, visiting, and when necessary in reproving and admonishing members.

I don't believe the gospel economy was given by God as an experiment, to be modified, changed, or abrogated to meet the whims or caprice of man. Other systems may thus change for the purpose above named, but the gospel plan never.

Hence, however onerous the duties of members or officials are, they must, if we would gain and retain God's favor, be performed. The Priest and Teacher may have been diligent last month, but the incoming month must find them at their post, laboring with an untiring zeal, and godly fear. The importance of Teachers' and Deacons' work, may be seen in the fact, that they are standing ministers to the Church, while elders and priests may be called to travel; see D. C. Sec. 83 par 22. And whenever you see branch officers united, and active, full of vigor and spiritual life, you see a live, united and happy branch. But when no official labor is done outside of a prayer-meeting in the week, and perchance, if it's not too hot or too cold, and the Saints have no cousin John, or neighbor Brown to come to visit, or by them to be visited, an occasional Sunday meeting, you see a cold, dilatory lot of Saints. And if trouble arises involving a necessity for labor with a view to adjudication, to vindicate the innocent, punish the guilty, and guard the fair fame of the Church, it's neglected under the pretext, it won't do to be too severe, or too hasty, or some other silly pretext. And by and by we hear of a disorganization of a branch, because of discordant elements, which proves one of two things; viz, a defective law, or a failure from indisposition or otherwise to administer the law. It is not expected in any human government, that any official will be qualified for any position, but to move or fill the duties of that position: So in the church—and when one accepts the position of Deacon, Teacher, Priest or Elder; it's tantamount to a covenant that he will faithfully labor in that position, and a failure therein, will bring condemnation—or this item of law that says, "He that does not show himself approved shall not be counted worthy to stand," is without significance and force. See Sec. 105, par 42, D. C. To bring sheep into the fold is very essential; nor is the work necessary to keep them, when once brought into the fold, of less importance. And the more active and lively the officers, the better are they prepared to feed and encourage the flock.

Elder Joshua Armstrong reported. Elders Henderson Fields, J. W. Waldsmith, James Thomson, Wm. B. Smith, and Wm. A. Moore, reported by letter; also Priest Jesse L. Spurgin. Branch Reports:—Nebraska City 130, including 1 High Priest, 7 Elders, 5 Priests, 2 Teachers, 2 Deacons; 2 baptized, 7 received by letter, 2 removed by letter. Blue River 72, including 2 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers, 2 Deacons. Palmyra 31, including 1 Elder, 2 Priests, 2 Deacons. Plattsmouth 30, including 2 Elders, 2 Priests.

Resolved, That Elder Joshua Armstrong labor with the members of the Clear Creek branch, and report at the next conference the propriety of continuing the organization at that place. Elder R. J. Anthony was invited to labor in the district. The president of the district was authorized to represent the district at the next General Conference, and the district to bear his expenses. Elders Robt. M. Elvin, J. Armstrong and J. W. Waldsmith, were appointed delegates to the April conference. General and district authorities were duly sustained.

Adjourned to meet with the Palmyra Branch, May 4th, 1884, at 10:30, a. m.

BORN.

PHILLIPS.—At Chicago, Ill., November 23d, 1883, to Bro. and Sr. T. A. Phillips, a daughter. Mother and daughter both doing well.

DIED.

KELLEY.—At Jonesport, Maine, December 10th, 1883, Bro. Aran Kelley, aged 79 years, 10 months. Remarks on funeral occasion by J. Benner.

CHAPPELOW.—At his mother's home, two miles south of New Trenton, Ind., November 2d, 1883, William H. Chappelow. Had been afflicted with cancer on the cheek about eleven years. His sufferings were indeed great; but he bore them patiently. Was born May 14th, 1839. Was baptized by Elder B. V. Springer, February 9th, 1874. Was ordained an Elder May 10th, 1874. Was ever faithful in performing his duties as president of the New Trenton Branch. Preached at different places as long as his health would permit. He was aware of the near approach of death. Said he was not afraid to die. Funeral sermon by Elder T. W. Smith, at New Trenton M. E. Church.

THOMAS.—At Cheltenham, St. Louis county, Missouri, on January 4th, of dropsy, Sr. Martha O. Thomas, wife of Bro. W. O. Thomas, aged 68 years, 5 months, and 25 days. She united with the Church in Staffordshire, England, in 1842. Came to America, and became identified with the Reorganization in 1864, and continued faithful unto death; and although she suffered much and long, she endured all with Christian patience and fortitude, frequently speaking in glowing terms of the bright beyond, to which she was hastening, with a full assurance of a peaceful rest in the paradise of God, until the bright dawning of the resurrection of those who sleep in Jesus. Her house, heart and purse, were ever open to the servants of God; as many of the Elders who read this can testify. In compliance with her request, and a promise made over a year ago, the writer hereof conducted the funeral service at the Saints' Church, in Cheltenham, on January 7th, 1884, delivering the funeral discourse to a large concourse of sympathizing relatives and friends, from Revelations 14:13. The words of the text will be engraved on her monument. We laid her away to rest in the Bellefontaine Cemetery, St. Louis.

"Sleep on dear sister, rest in peace,
From sorrow free;
The days of our appointed time we'll wait,
To come to thee.
We'll try to ever faithful be,
And thus prepare
For the great resurrection morn,
And meet thee there. B. V. SPRINGER.

BROWN.—Near Fonda, Iowa, [January, 1884], of old age, Nathan Brown. Born in Rhode Island, April 13th, 1793. He chose July 4th, 1879, as his favorite day for birth into the kingdom of God, being baptized by E. C. Brown. Drew a pension until death for services in the war of 1812.

PORTEOUS.—At West Point, California, July 4th, 1883, Bro. James Porteous. He was born in Scotland, October 4th, 1815, and obeyed the gospel in 1845.

HUGHES.—At the home of her sister, near Elvaston, Illinois, January 16th, 1884. Sr. Levina Hughes. Her home was in Big Bend, Kansas. She was on a visit to her mother and sister when she contracted her death's illness. She was born in 1825, in Storyville, Ohio. Was married in 1840, and baptized in 1864, at Nauvoo, Illinois, by President Joseph Smith. Her husband died in 1874. She leaves five children to mourn her loss. Funeral service by B. F. Durfee.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

MR. JOHN T. CAINE, delegate from Utah, in Congress, says that polygamy is not "thought necessary to salvation, but requisite, on account of the doctrine of the incompleteness of woman without marriage."

Bro. Wm. M. Rumel and J. F. Mintun were at Fremont, Nebraska, February 4th, and doing what they could in the cause.

Bro. John S. Patterson wrote us from Sandwich, Illinois, February 4th. He states that the conference for the Northern Illinois District would convene at Plano, that week; and a profitable time was anticipated. Bro. John's old enemy, rheumatism, has troubled him this winter, and while he still labors for the Master and hopes to continue, he feels that the burden must be borne by younger men. He reports the work in fair condition.

Sr. Mary A. Wilcox, wrote from New Philadelphia, Ohio, and is extremely anxious that some one of the servants of God should visit that place. She says: "Please send some one, if possible; they can make their home with us."

Bro. I. N. White has been holding meetings at Ford, Iowa, latter part of January and February 1st, 2d, 3d. The local Ford correspondent writing to the Indianola Herald, says: "Quite an interest manifested to see how he handles the Mormon question. He is of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, so called. Is radical, and most antagonistical to Utah Mormonism, or Brigham Youngism."

Bro. E. C. Brand has been honorably treated at Provo, Utah, by the pastor of the M. E. Church, Rev. Smith, who lent him the use of his house to speak in, and opened the meeting by prayer. Also at Beaver, Rev. Brick, of the same M. E. Church, not only permitted the use of his house for six sermons, but gave up an appointment on the Sunday for the purpose, opening and closing the services for him. For these courtesies Bro. Brand desires the HERALD to permit his thanks to these men; and he also desires to thank Miss Woodhouse, organist for the M. E. Church, at Beaver, for kindly attending every meeting and playing and singing, leading the song service. We give the brother's thanks to these parties, and add our own on the behalf of the church. Bro. Brand wrote from Nephi, January 26th, but would be in Salt Lake City February 2d.

On page 36 of current volume of HERALD, first column and ninth line, read "By the labors of a few," instead of "By the labors of Hiram Holt."

A canvass of the Iowa Legislature, in regard to the religious proclivities of its members has been made, a newspaper man having looked the matter up. Forty report no religious preference; of the rest, Methodist Episcopal, 11; Disciples, 2; Presbyterians, 11; Catholics, 4; Church of God, 1; Universalist, 1; Congregational, 4; P. E. Methodist, 1; Lutheran, 1; Christian, 1; Latter Day Saints, (anti-polygamy), 1; Evangelical, 1. The janitor is a Baptist; the door-keeper weighs 200 pounds of African Methodism; and the sergeant-at-arms and clerk are of the M. E. persuasion. The anti-polygamy member is the Democratic Representative from Decatur county, Bro. E. Banta.

A BROTHER who from age and opportunity knows whereof he affirms writes us:

"I had to laugh at that first spiritual marriage of the late Edward Hunter, of the Utah Church. It was a happy affair(?) We crossed the plains to Utah with them, and if that was a fair sample of 'Celestial Marriage' and a man's salvation depended on entering into 'that new and everlasting covenant,' I should prefer to emigrate to Satan's empire at once; the old man himself used to call her 'Jezebel.'"

It is a lovely institution!

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—When an Elder is called to administer to the sick, has he any right, or authority from the books of the Church to advise the taking of medicine?

Ans.—No. The books are silent in regard to the matter of advising the taking of medicine. When there is not faith to be healed, however, nursing with teas and mild herbs is permissible.

Q.—Is there any law in the Church that will grant pay to the Priest for his time spent in visiting the Saints of his branch?

A.—No, none that we are informed about. Branches may do so if they choose, but there is no rule on the subject.

Q.—Can a Latter Day Saint go to any other church and say to them, "I will join your church if you will take me in in the Mormon faith. I will not give up my faith." They accept him, and then is he a Latter Day Saint still? He keeps the faith.

A.—Such person would not be a member of the Church in good standing, could not be permitted to partake of the sacrament with the Saints, nor expect the fellowship of the Church as before. We have known such cases, so must answer that persons can so join other churches; though why such churches should receive one on such a confession of faith we never clearly understood.

Q.—Can a Latter Day Saint join the Methodist Church on a six months' probation? If at the expiration of that time, the members of that Church do not see fit to take him in as a permanent member, could he return to the Church and be received without rebaptism?

A.—To the first part of the question we must answer, Yes, for it has been done. To the second part we answer Yes; he may be forgiven and restored to fellowship by vote.

Q.—Word of Wisdom, par. 2. "All wholesome herbs hath God ordained for the constitution, nature, and use of man, every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof." When may herbs and fruit be pronounced out of season?

A.—Whenever, by reason of decay, or loss of flavor, or nutritive properties any herb or fruit becomes unpalatable or unprofitable for food it is out of season.

Q.—Are canned fruits, vegetables, preserves, pickles, chowchow, etc., prohibited by the above?

A.—No. The climate in which we have six months summer and from six to nine months in the year when life must be preserved by the use of prepared and preserved articles of food, all methods by which fruits and vegetables may be kept to retain some part, or all of their nutritive properties are permissible.

Q.—Does the statement refer to times of the year, or the condition of the fruit?

A.—To the condition of the fruit; an apple, or potato is in season so long as it may be kept in preservation of its qualities, i. e., from decay, and fit to be eaten.

Q.—To what season do canned currants, gooseberries, peaches, &c., belong?

A.—To the season of canned fruits. Green and unripe fruits, are unfit to be eaten even in the season of their growth, and are no better when pickled, preserved or canned. Whoever believes they are to eat nothing only as they pluck it ripe from tree, or shrub, or vine, will need either to move into a climate where there is something ripening every day and month, wait till the earth's renovation, or eat snowballs and icicles and drink mist and fog.

Q.—Where is the distinct line between justification and sanctification? When does sanctification take place?

A.—We do not know that we can point out the lines between justification and sanctification, so that any and every case may be seen and told at a glance; so much depends upon the circumstances of each case. But as we understand it, the man who does what the law requires, so far as the letter is concerned is justified; and he that has been so justified by law who receives of the Spirit of obedience to such a degree that he no more has any inclination to either deny or break the law, is sanctified. As for instance, he who "receives of the Spirit unto the remission of his sins" and is baptized for that remission, he is justified; and when he receives of the Holy Ghost, the gift of which is promised, having no desire, or inclination to sin, he is sanctified, that is, saved, while he continues in such state; the word sanctification meaning in a saved, or blameless condition. Exactly when this takes place in the life of any man, will be hard for himself to say; and quite out of the power of any other, except Christ to say.

To answer the question in the light of the meaning put upon sanctification, as held by some religionists, that they can not sin, we could only say that we believe, as concerning man in the flesh, that they are not and can not be sanctified until they are dead and incapable of committing the sins of the flesh; for, the revelations, as well as the New Testament seem to warrant the conclusion that so long as a man lives in the flesh, he has the power and capability to sin. While we believe this, and strongly, we believe it to be entirely possible for a man to receive of the Spirit and to so live that he not only will not sin, nor will he have the desire to sin. Such a man is in a saved, or sanctified state; not because he has not the capability to commit sin, but because having the power, he has the disposition and will not to sin.

We have known men who claimed that they were sanctified, made holy, and could not sin, who would and did do things that are forbidden in the New Testament law, and which if we had done them would be counted even by them as sins. But we were then, as we are now, of the opinion that whatever is sinful, the doing of which constitutes a man a sinner, a wicked, or an ungodly man, is just as sinful when done by a man said either by himself, or others to be sanctified. And one of the things that to-day is making the profession of religion of small effect in commending that profession to them that are without, is the committing of acts not in harmony with the idea of holiness, and seeking to escape the condemnation due such sins by claiming to be in a sanctified state; that is, meaning that they have been so miraculously dealt by through the mercy of God, the merits of Christ and their belief, that what they do is not sinful, though if done by any body else it would be sin. We have no confidence in a sanctification of that sort; for we believe that if any man sin, and continues in sinning it is he that sins, notwithstanding it may be "sin dwelling in him" that prompts him to sin. Hence if it is the devil in man that prompts him to sin and he does sin, as the devil has no business (using the word "business" to mean a proper right to be there) in the man, and the man no business to let him either to enter in, or to stay after he is in, the man and not the devil is responsible for the sin, and must suffer for it.

Glory, honor, and exaltation will be the reward to him who having the power and ability to sin, overcomes both, and remains both justified and sanctified.

Correspondence.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,
January 28th, 1884.

Pres. Joseph Smith; Dear Brother:—There appears an appeal in the last issue of the Herald, in relation to the Scandinavians, which is a very welcome one to me; for I hope now the favored time of the Lord has come. I have no inclination to find fault; therefore excuse me if I criticize the heading of it, as I pray for the extension of the appeal, not only to Denmark, but to Norway and Sweden, which comprise the Scandinavian Mission. This same mission is greatly on my mind. I left Denmark in the spring of 1866, and came to this country with the hope of walking right in through the gates of Zion; but since the laws and regulations of God in respect to Zion were opened to my view through the aid of the good Spirit, Zion was still scattered among the nations of the earth; consequently her gates could not be found. I turned my heart to God, and asked him for aid to bear the disappointment. I examined the law of God again; and while in darkness and trouble, a light appeared and a voice was heard: "Seek God and not men." It pleased God to present to me the "Reorganization," as being his people and his Zion. On the 22d day of October, 1866, I joined myself to that church. After that, there arose in my mind an anxiety to go back and tell my friends what had happened to me. I had been traveling all over the land preaching B. Young's doctrine for five years. After finding the mistake and repairing it, I desired to go and tell them of my real joy and satisfaction, and preach the true gospel of Jesus Christ. Time and again I hid myself behind the trees, poured out my soul's desire unto Him who doeth all things well, that he might open a way for me to fulfill my desire. It did not please him to hear me at once; but to my surprise, a voice was heard, as it were, an unseen power touched me. I was commanded to "hush, and keep still; that in his own time he would move, and raise up noble men in these countries to perform his work; be thou faithful and thy time shall come." Since then I have kept silent, but watched with an eager eye the movements of God through his servants in respect to the noble work over there; for I know, as I live, that a great army will rise up in those lands, and shine brilliantly in the kingdom of God. Therefore my Scandinavian brethren and sisters, arise, and bless the day that you can help perform His work; for be it known unto you, that we are in a measure responsible for the salvation of the people in the lands from where we came. There can be no trouble in respect to means to make this a success; for we have plenty of means and to spare. I think an agent should be appointed by the Church in every branch, to solicit means and subscriptions, and other necessary support, because what is everybody's business is nobody's business. My wife and I are willing to do all we can to help on the work in this way. With love and respect to you and all earnest souls,

Your brother,

JAMES THOMSEN.

MANISTEE, Michigan,

January 24th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I saw in Herald for January 19th, this question: "Is it right for Priests, Teachers, Deacons and members, to minister to sick?" Answer: "The Church Articles state that neither Priests, Teachers, Deacons, nor lay members, may lay on hands. Any one may pray for and with the sick."

Reading the above, I would learn that I, being a lay member, have no right to administer the oil, nor lay on hands for the healing of the sick. Is this really so? Do I misunderstand the answer to the above question? If my understanding of it is right, then I will ask, How will Christ fulfill his promise to the believer, as given in the last chapter of Mark? "They shall lay hands on sick," etc. The Spirit is given to every one who believes; and the gifts are divided as it suits the Lord. One has healing, another prophecy, tongues, &c. I can find no Bible for the answer given. Please tell me where the Church Articles get their authority for such a statement. Desirous to learn,

I remain yours in the faith,

C. W. CONAT.

PERSIA, Iowa, Jan. 30th, 1880.

Bro. Joseph:—For some time past I have been holding meetings, in common with Elders P. Cadwell, Crabb, Montague and Mintun, in Magnolia. What the results may be there I can not tell; the meetings were fairly attended by outsiders, and good attention paid. Bro. Joseph Seddon of Persia, requested me to hold a series of meetings in that place, where I arrived on the 20th inst., and then entered upon the work in the presence of a crowded hall. I continued until Tuesday evening, when I was called away to Galland's Grove, but returned here on Friday, where I found Elders Crabb and Cadwell, who took part with me. Elder Seddon furnished the hall, and paid my fare, as he was desirous of having the truth established here. It was then thought wisdom by the president of the district, to request the president of the branch to take control; but he declining, yet giving his sanction to the continuance, the meetings were continued, Elder Cadwell conducting meetings until the 27th inst., Bro. Crabb and the writer doing the preaching. On the 28th Elder Cadwell baptized two who had in years past wandered from the fold. Since then the meetings are conducted alternately by the writer and Elder Crabb, and will continue until Friday night, when they will close for the present, and the work be left in care of the Spring Creek Branch. Here is a grand chance for building a church, if the brethren will unite their efforts, which would accommodate all the Saints in this region, and enable them to have a good branch. I hope all the Saints here will see the necessity of rising to the opportunity, and uniting all their powers, with an eye single to the glory of God, that a house may be reared where the gospel may be preached, and the Saints fed with the bread of life. I will add that Bro. David Chambers has assumed the responsibility of paying for the use of the hall this week. My continual efforts are for the spread of truth, and I leave the result with God.

CHARLES DERRY.

NEWPORT, Nova Scotia,
January 18th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Though we are strangers to you, and to most of the readers of the Herald, yet I trust we are not strangers to the gospel, and the way it was restored in the latter days. A little over one year ago Joseph F. Burton came to this county, preaching the gospel in its fulness. He was opposed by all classes, and at times the storm would threaten to engulf him; still he has held his ground, and, to-day he, with us, can rejoice that he has not come in vain to this province. There are two branches organized, one in Hants county, the other in Kings; besides this the seed has been scattered almost all over the Province, and the field for labor is large. We feel to pray that the Father will send laborers into this field. We who have engaged in the work, can give many and strong testimonies that it is true. That they who do the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine. It has been revealed to us that this church is built upon the three firm blockings; that they are capable of holding us up out of the mud of the world; and if watered daily by prayer we shall grow. Also that our duty is to walk humbly, to resist steadily the powers of Satan. That we should strive to unsheath the word of God, that while we thus walk, God will be our Father. May God grant that we may walk after the Spirit. And as we feel the time will be short until Elder Burton will leave for home, and as the enemy is standing, waiting to see the work go down in Nova Scotia as soon as he leaves; we would ask all that are interested in the work to pray the Father to help the Saints here to put on the whole armor, that they may be able to withstand the fiery darts of the wicked; and that the little plant, or twig, that has been planted on the dry hill, being watered daily by prayer, may continue to grow.

Yours in bonds,

J. W. DIMOCK.

Bro. Joseph.—I desire to ask through the Herald, that if any of the Saints happen to have the good fortune to hear of a lecture, by Mr. Coffeen, of Danville, Illinois, upon the Pyramids of Egypt, to not miss it by any means. Joseph, it is a complete vindication of the position taken by the Saints as against Darwinism. It sustains scientifically the Book of Abraham, translated by your father; in fact it is a vindication of Mormonism, without knowing it. It shows that the Great Pyramid is a religious and scientific monument, that attained to perfection, astronomically and mathematically, unknown in our age, or any other. It will strengthen the faith of any Elder or member to hear it.

Yours very truly,

J. A. ROBINSON.

Editor Herald.—When I call to mind the fact that much has been written and spoken in our day concerning the gospel; and also the fact that the Herald has been almost filled with articles opposed to each other, I am forced to ask, Where will the honest go to find the truth? It is evident to my mind, that they will have to look for it in some other way than from man. Except they try their teachings by the law and the testimony; for if they speak not according to it, it is because there is no light in them. Paul pronounced a curse on any one preaching any other gospel than that they preached. Jesus said: "I am the way, the truth, and the light; he that climbeth up some other way, is a thief," &c. John says, "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." With these facts before us, I think it is high time we begin to dig deep, and found our house on the rock of eternal truth; and cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; and follow the teaching of him who hath said, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," and "Cry nothing but repentance to this generation;" and to lay up treasure in heaven; and to look for a "city, that hath foundation, whose builder and maker is God." Mark the expression, "builder and maker is God." For my part I am sick of, here is Zion, or there is Zion, (or here is a stake, or there). I think it is time we begin to look up like the Saints of old, and endure as "Seeing him who is invisible," and try and be content to wait for that city the Revelator saw, whose streets were paved with gold. Let the gathering be, until God shall send his angels and gather his elect, as promised by him. Much more might be said; but I forbear.

Yours for truth,

M. M. TURPEN.

Dear Herald.—We welcome your weekly visits, and think of the many Saints that are cheered by your appearance. When I read and realize how many have given there time and talent for the sake of publishing the gospel to those who are still in darkness, I often think how much there is yet to be accomplished. I think if all the Saints could realize how much their help is needed to carry on this work, they would awake to a sense of duty, and trust in the words of the Lord.

I wish I could express the sweet pleading voices I heard in a dream not long since. It was a hymn, and the theme was for the Elders. I only remember these lines:

"Now if you can assist us,
It would make my heart glad."

Oh, such music. I awoke, and yet it seems as if I could hear the echo still. Shall they plead in vain? Dear Saints, are we living for our selves, or for the cause we have enlisted in? How many unnecessary presents have been bought for Christmas, and New Years? How many have sent in presents for the cause of Christ? Let us all try and remember next Christmas, and count the cause as one of our family, and divide the same, so our Elders may also receive a Christmas present. As it is never too late to do good, let us commence with the New Year, and send in our free will offerings, tithes and sacrifices; for if we wait until we get all we need, I fear we will be found as one who said, "Take thy ease; and the Lord said, Thou Fool, this night thy soul is required of thee." How much advantage have we gained since we came to a knowledge of the light? Could we give up the cause? No, we could not live outside of the Church. Is this all? We could not do without any of our blessings; and yet there are many who have never had the privilege of hearing. Some one sent the word to us, are we doing all we can to help others to hear.

I have received many blessings, and yet I have done very little. My health is very poor, and for three months, until about the twentieth of December, I almost despaired of ever getting well; but when I cast all my care on our Savior, he came to my rescue, and since that time I have been gaining. I have often been prompted to bear a testimony to the world of a case of healing which occurred about a year ago. I had a spot on my forehead, which had been there for twenty years. It began to get sore, for it was a cancer; and it was very painful for some two months, and at times felt as if there were hundreds of needles sticking in it. I was well satisfied it was a cancer, as my mother had one, and grandmother also. There was no Elder here to administer to me; and one day a person said, Rebecca, if I was you, I would go to some good doctor, and the words ran through me like an electric shock. I said no, never; and as I came home I said to my niece that was with me, Lettie, if the Lord does not cure my face, I will never go to a doctor, no never. I anointed the spot with oil, and knelt down and prayed, and did so every day; and in less than two weeks it was healed. At the time it was as large as a common shirt button. I know that it was healed through faith and prayer.

JONESBORO, January 19th, 1884.

Dear Herald.—My thoughts are on a part in the first resurrection. My theme is too high, too gloriously sublime, I might almost say for an angel to give the faintest idea of it. I am just born into the glorious liberty of the children of God, and can as yet have but few glimpses of the glory that shall be revealed in us. But thoughts and feelings that burn upon my heart, I feel a strong impression to write. I pray that I may gather a few thoughts from the boundless field of truth for the perusal of those of like precious faith and hope. Can it be anything but hope and faith in the resurrection? How these words should ring in our ears, and re-echo in our hearts. The hope of reigning a thousand years with Christ, our bodies fashioned like his glorious body. What kind of persons ought we to be. This hope, big with immortality, reaching within the veil, where Christ our forerunner has gone, surely we should walk worthy of our profession, "Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." May our hope grow brighter until the perfect day. This inspires my heart to a more earnest work for the Master. I have been visiting the branches in Eastern Maine. Some are alive in the work, others careless, seeking the pleasures of the world. Hope the good Father may bless his cause in this part of the vineyard. I am doing all I can to encourage the Saints to activity; feel a desire to do more. I hope it will not be said, the harvest is past, the summer ended, and I am not saved.

Yours in the conflict,

JOHN BENNER.

CLYDE, Kan., January, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I write from here on my return home from a point in Sr. Stewart's neighborhood, where I have been elevating the standard of Emanuel. My presence there has set orthodoxy in a flurry, causing its advocates to revive the old "Joe Smith scandal," &c., resulting in an unfavorable reaction. Here I met Bro. John Moxon, who is engaged a few miles away in teaching. I never met him before, nor heard of him. He entered the house after service had commenced; yet I readily recognized a stranger, who was not a stranger, from all other strangers present. The work of separation between those who love and accept truth, and those "who will not endure sound doctrine," is slowly but surely progressing; and the harvest will come, when the seed I have labored to sow will be garnered by some one. My only desire is, that the winnowed crop will hold out in weight as well as measure.

Yours in bonds of the gospel,

JOHN D. BENNETT.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Hicklin has again visited our neighborhood, at what is known as the Bunce School-house. He came here on Saturday before the second Sunday in this month, and stayed until Wednesday after the third Sunday. Preached twelve times, twice on each Sunday. We had good attendance all the time, with one exception. After that we had increased attendance, and Bro. Hicklin left many friends here; and they invited him back, several of them, and some of them say he has preached the whole truth, while other denominations only preach a part of it. I believe that there can soon be a church organized here, if it is not neglected. Pray for us in this neighborhood.

Yours truly,

CHEYENNE, W. T.,

Dear Brothers and Sisters and Readers of the Saints' Herald:—I had not the opportunity of being trained up in the law and dealings of God with man; for my parents died when I was a small boy. So thus I was left to work out my own salvation. I have been in search of salvation for seven years; and in that time I have been a good deal with the M. E. Church, and some with the Baptists; but I could not find a resting place with either; for my heart told me they were not the places that God had ordained for me. Therefore I said on the last Sabbath in 1883, If God will open up the way for me, I will contribute my all to him and his will, if it was to die; "For now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know, even as also I am known." You may ask me how I know that I am in the right path. Because I now read the word of God with an understanding mind. The word of God is my guide. Pray for me, that I may have wisdom to perform my duty every way, both to God and to Saints. I want to be obedient to to all who are over me, that I may be useful to my church. While visiting my sister in Illinois, in 1869, she said to me, You will be a member of my church. I said, No, I will be a Methodist, and I thought they were God's chosen people, and therefore I was with them off and on for seven years. But I thank God, that I have found the true church. My sister's name is Ruth Griswold. She lived the last time I heard from her, in Rochelle, Ogle county, Illinois. My sister and Mrs. Stuart were baptized by Bro. Joseph Smith.

Bro. Joseph:—Have been preaching to full houses in Nodaway county, Missouri, with the best of attention, both from reverend preachers and people. I am invited to call again. I shall return next week. I baptized three. I attended the Nodaway conference; it was remarked by several that it was the best one they had seen there for several years. I was from home thirty-two days, preached twenty sermons, and felt the Spirit of the Master to speak the word; and enjoyed the best of liberty and freedom. The Saints were good, and very liberal with their means to help J. C. along, to whom I can but offer my humble thanks. I learned that Brn. I. N. Roberts and Wildermuth did good while they were there. The people spoke highly of them. To this I can say, good boys, I hope they will conduct themselves everywhere they go so the people will love them, and then the people will naturally love their gospel.

Yours for right,

J. C. FOSS.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—On Monday, January 29th, closed at Dennisport as peaceful a conference as ever was held in the east. All the meetings were blessed by the presence of the Spirit. Congregations numbering several hundred attended the preaching services. We are going to try and drive the stakes firmly in this city, by holding our next conference here the latter part of May. Give us all the help you can, that every city, town and village between the east and the west may rejoice in the fulness of the gospel.

With love, yours,

JOHN SMITH.

Attached to the letter was the following newspaper clipping:

"The Latter Day Saints' annual conference in Dennisport, closed Sunday evening. Delegates from New Bedford, Fall River, Providence, and other places were present. Business was transacted Saturday. Services were held in Ocean Hall on Sunday, when Elder M. H. Bond of Michigan, and Elder John Gilbert of Fall River, delivered discourses, and praise service was held in the evening, after which Elder F. M. Sheehy of Providence, spoke on Fulfilled Prophecies."

PLANO, Illinois,

Dear Brother Joseph:—Two years ago next April I was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Since then I have been trying to walk in accordance with God's will, though I make many crooked steps. When I was baptized I was sick, had been afflicted for some time. The doctors had done all they could for me, and had gotten all my money. Then I had to go to the Lord. I wrote to you stating my condition, and asked you to remember me in your prayers. You answered, and I got the letter, and have been gaining ever since; and my faith grows stronger every day. I hope by the grace of God to be saved in his kingdom.

My little girl was taken very sick last week, had all the symptoms of lung fever. I went to prayer meeting, and asked for the prayers of the Saints; and Sister Fassett arose and spoke by the Spirit, and said your child shall get well. When I went home, I found it better, and it is now as well as it ever was. I feel thankful for this evidence, that we all can have these blessings if we are only faithful. Pray for me, that I may at last gain the crown laid up for the faithful.

I remain your sister in Christ,

ANNA WRIGHT.

VIOLA, Iowa, February 4th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—The bluster seems to have largely abated here, and some of the best citizens are our staunch friends. Some have expressed themselves as ready to be baptized soon. I am satisfied with the situation, believing it only a question of time, when a good branch may be raised up. Bro. John S. Roth, of the Sheridan Branch, has been here with me, and acquitted himself nobly in defense of the work. I chanced to meet the Rev. Pye the other day, and told him I heard he had finally concluded White and myself were not polygamists. He said, Well, yes, he had heard I denounced Old Joe Smith; and if so, he had so concluded. I assured him that I was ready to defend Joseph Smith, and the work brought forth through him as God's servant. I offered my service, either private or public, but he said we would get off our base. I told him it would not comport well with our ministerial dignity, and I was not afraid to run the risk. But he would neither agree for private consultation, nor public exchange of views. All of this transpired at the depot with many present. All went off quite pleasantly. Some said he was quite irritated, but I thought did well.

I am your brother in Christ,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

LINDLEY, Mo., January 20th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Herald is indeed a welcome visitor to us. There are no Saints living within twenty or thirty miles of us; consequently the Herald is all the preacher we have. We have had no preaching here since last Spring, when Bro. W. T. Bozarth was here, and created quite a sensation among the people. I am favorably impressed with the letters written by brethren John Landers and Edward L. Page. It always encourages me to hear from those old time Saints. The Christians at this place have been holding a protracted meeting for the past week, with only partial success.

Dear Saints, it has been over eight years since I obeyed the gospel of Christ; and my desires are to go on in the good cause in which I have enlisted. Our mission is an important one, and we should strive to fill it to the glory of God. Let us strive to keep his law and obey his commandments, that we may enter into his rest when he shall come.

Your sister,

HUTCHINSON, Colorado,

Dear Herald:—I struck Wisner, Nebraska, on the seventeenth of the present month, a point where I think missionary labor may be done with effect, which from some cause has been overlooked. Found Bro. and Sr. Farley, whom I had the pleasure of baptizing six or seven years ago, still struggling and hoping, solid in the belief that the gospel will if believed and practiced, bring about all that is necessary for man's future happiness, though the struggle in mortality may be continuous. Securing a school-house five or six miles from Wisner, delivered two gospel discourses on Sunday 20th, to larger congregations than were expected; from whom as auditors, I received great respect, some declaring they heard preaching by a Latter Day Saint for the first time. I had decided to plant the Mormon battery at two or three points, with corresponding efforts to get the people a little accustomed to the sound, if possible, of shot discharged therefrom. But while thus planning, was by telegraph summoned to the above place, Bro. John Ellis having died. But the dispatch failed to reach in time to arrange to be present at his interment, which occurred on the 22d. But in time to deliver a funeral discourse in his remembrance, on Sunday, 27th January. Surely we are in a world of change.

In hope,

JAMES CAFFALL.

STREATOR, Illinois,

Dear Brother Joseph:—The Saints of Streator Branch met at their hall at ten a. m., Sunday, January 20th, for the purpose of organizing anew our Sunday School. A goodly number of children were present; and after opening exercises by branch president, proceeded to election of officers for the school, which resulted as follows: superintendent, Bro. Alfred Tarling. Assistant superintendent, Bro. John Worden. Secretary, Sr. Carrie N. Cooper. Treasurer, Bro. William Morell. Librarian, Sr. C. N. Cooper. Considerable necessary business was transacted, to complete the organization, and an excellent feeling prevailed. The school is to be known as the Star of Bethlehem Sabbath School, to meet every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. May their star never set, but increase in brilliancy and beauty, till the perfect day. The secretary was instructed to send a report of the organization to the Herald for publication.

In the afternoon, the Saints reassembled for social meeting; and truly it was an excellent one, the blessed Holy Spirit melting all hearts. It was encouraging to us. "We have passed through many heavy trials;" but we still hold up our heads, and desire "to the weary end to endure." There is a good feeling among the Saints, and it is their determination to push the work here. May God bless our efforts is my prayer.

Your sister in Christ,

BIRDSEYE, Dubois Co., Indiana,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I think the prospects are good for an ingathering ere long at different points. The seed has been sown, and the harvest will surely come by and by. Bro. Harbert, and W. H. Kelley from New Albany, left here this morning for Marietta. I am to remain here till over Sunday, as there seems to be an increasing interest. The Methodists shutting us out last September made friends to the work. We are occupying, by the kindness of Mr. Farver, a large room being fitted up for a drug store. Some thought that a man would not be safe in introducing the work here, as there are four or five saloons. Here I am alone, as Jesus said, "As a sheep among wolves;" but I don't feel that I am alone altogether. Surely God is with me by his Spirit, and not only me, but all his people. As the poet said,

"Must Simon bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No, there is a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me."

O, how true! They seem as if they were the words of inspiration. In the experience of all true Saints, there is a cross. It is a cross indeed to many of the Elders to raise the standard of truth in localities where the difference between the doctrine of the Reorganized Church and the Brighamites is not known. Is it not humiliating to be classed with those people that we know are living in violation of the laws of God and the land. My opinion is, that the honest will be gathered out from Brighamism, and the rest will be cut off. As I heard a man say not long since, the only way to get rid of a cancer, was to cut it out. They have taught one thing, and practiced another; therefore they can not be believed on oath, and we are misrepresented on their account.

Yours, M. R. SCOTT.

SOUTH RAWDON, Nova Scotia,
January 19th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Since writing to you we have had some very pleasant meetings and enjoyable times. Christmas Bro. Holmes Davison came up here and we had some very good meetings, the people getting more and more interested as our meetings continued. New Years Bro. and Sr. Dimock, Bro. and Sr. Davison, Emma and I went to Delhaven; and the day after we all met at Bro. Robert Newcomb's, and organized the "Cornwallis Branch," of nine members; Bro. H. J. Davison president, and Robert Newcomb Priest and Teacher. The Sunday following, I baptized Elisha Beach, Sr. Beach's husband, so now there are ten in the branch, all honorable, pious, godly people, of good repute in their neighborhood.

Bro. R. Newcomb had been to work near the bay shore; and talking of the great latter day work. The people got anxious to hear some preaching, so we went to Woodworth's Bay. We held three meetings there to good, attentive audiences, in a private house; for we were in the dominions of David Freeman, who would not meet Bro. Holmes Davison, but who still continues to foam out to his own shame, slanders and falsehoods against a people whose doctrines and faith he neither understands, nor can successfully contradict. Some of his members tried to close the Lower Peraux Hall against us, but failed, for the majority of the people were in favor of right and fair play; and some deserve credit for maintaining their position, that we should not be barred out from the hall, of whom is Mr. Loomer, of the firm of Vaughan and Loomer, ship builders, Mr. Woolaver, Mr. Harris Newcomb, J. P., and others. Those others, Christians, then enquired of the magistrates if they would be arrested if they should disturb our meetings. The answer was manifested; for when I preached there afterward, you might have heard a pin drop all through the services; and the leading people of the vicinity were present. Many are investigating yet; but slow to obey. I sometimes get impatient at the seemingly slow progress of the work in this land. But is it not in very deed the last days, and as a gleaner of grapes after the vintage. Forty-five years ago the Elders preached the same doctrines in this land and elsewhere, and hundreds obeyed the truth. Now the Elders teach the same, and the people obey one at a time. Will there yet be a time when people will obey as they are convinced of the truth. It seems to me the consummation approaches fast. Tokens of Christ's coming in the heavens, the sun, on the earth, perplexities in religion, in commerce, in politics, or in governments; and as we see this, and then the Spirit bears testimony, saying, "I will hasten my work in its time," I feel to say, "Amen, come quickly, Lord Jesus;" for iniquity is abounding in the land. But there is another voice of the Spirit also, saying, "Let no one deceive himself, that he shall not account for his stewardship unto me." How is it, brethren? What account shall we render? "If our heart condemn us, God is greater." May he give us grace to persevere and overcome, is my desire and prayer.

Yours in Christ,

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

WILBER, Saline Co., Neb.,
January 28th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—Two years have passed since Robert Elvin buried all of our family in the Blue at Wilber. We rising from our watery grave, I trust, to newness of life in Christ. I never realized until now what it means to be "dead to the world." When in the Methodist Church, I thought I lived a life of self denial, was almost a martyr to my faith! Looking back forty years, I see a marked difference in the way I joined that church, and the one I belong to now. Today I love the Methodist Church, and shall ever be grateful to its members who so tenderly cared for me, shedding the light that was in them, upon my darkened pathway, dispersing in a measure the clouds of doubt and infidelity, that so nearly shipwrecked my soul. It pains me to leave those dear Christian friends; but I dare not stay with them, but must press on to that greater light, that will one day illuminate the whole world. I have been kindly treated by all since I came into this latter day work. Have never been grieved but once, at what is said of us. In the discussion at Wilber, last November, when Clarke Braden took the Inspired Translation in his hands, denouncing it as a wicked book, a book of lies, a blasphemous work, and then threw it from him with such bitter contempt, he gave me a stab that I can not forget; for that book is my life and light, and a lamp to my feet; and I can but feel sorry that the man, so gifted in worldly lore, is no better able to discern spiritual things, and pray that he may soon see the light.

I believe the gifts are with us as a people, and many are beginning to see the power of God.

Some would say to me, Have you seen any miracle wrought, that you are so strong in your belief that the sick can be healed by the power of God through obedience? I said, Nay. I had asked for no sign and none had been given me. I simply took God at his word, and was blest. But a sign was given; for it came to me that I should be brought very low, even to death's door, and then be raised by the power of God, and this to convince my friends of the truth. I was taken sick, suffered extremely, nearly every one thought I could not live. Then my husband sent for Dr. Anthony, our Elder, and he administered to me. When brother Broliar knelt in prayer, I felt the healing power, as it came in the room like a current of cool air in July. Before the meeting, I was burning up it seemed, the fever raged so. Still nothing would assuage that intense thirst. The Elder laid his hands on my head, rebuked the fever, and it left me immediately. Lying still and free from pain, though weak yet, I did not drink for twenty-four hours after the fever left me. The next day I dressed and went out of doors, imprudently and contrary to advice of friends. I was soon on the bed again, lower than before; and again the Elders came, and I was restored as it were from death. My mind was very weak, still I knew that I should be restored to life; for although I wanted to go, (such sweetness and glory were shown me); yet a work was given me to do while I lay suffering, so that I was glad to take up the burden of life again, and I must go on till the flesh fails me, and my life dies out here. My room was crowded with friends not of our faith; but all I think were much moved. Speculation has been rife since my recovery. Some ascribe it to a strong will power, others to magnetism, while another says it was a remarkable thing that I got well without taking medicine, all forgetting to acknowledge the power of God. No, not all; for I have talked with some whose hearts are touched, and I feel it impressed upon me to work. I have asked of the Master, and he has graciously answered me. No peaceful cottage near Lamoni, no meeting and blending with the Saints so dear to me, no rest here for my feet; but to live and work among those who are not of the ark of safety, and this is my joy.

LOVE S. THOMPSON.

SACRAMENTO CITY, California,
January 30th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We as a branch in Sacramento, are doing the best we can under the circumstances. The branch when I was appointed president, was in an almost disorganized condition, having no branch officers; but thanks to our Heavenly Father, there were as good Saints in it as you will generally find, and full of the Spirit, such as Srs. Hunt, Bushby, Bagnell, Blair, Roher, mother-in-law to Bro. M. B. Oliver, Calderwood; and those dear sisters held the fort, after the death of the late Bro. Webb, our former president. A dear good brother he was, full of faith in the gospel until his last words, and always bore a faithful testimony to the latter day work at home and abroad; and was well thought of and respected by the world, and loved by the Saints, and especially by the Saints of this branch. He was the one who conceived the idea of building a house to worship in, which the rest of the Saints are trying now to do.

The dear sisters held the fort, and paid for the use of the hall, until Bro. D. J. Phillips, our ex-district president, called a meeting of the Saints, and I was chosen their president. I am trying to do the best I can. And now I think we will get along, for I have more help in the persons of Elder J. R. Cook, acting as Branch Priest, and Elder G. W. Harlow, acting as Teacher. Bro. Joseph, please you and all of the Saints in Lamoni, pray for me, that I may hold out faithful.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, in bonds of the gospel,
JAMES H. PARR.

LIMERICK, Ohio,

January 1st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—On the 26th of December I had the following dream: I was at home; a man appeared at my table having three tin cups. The first was filled with milk, one with water and the other was empty. Directing my attention to the first filled with milk, he said, "This represents the Church of Jesus Christ of these latter days. This you see is pure." Then taking the cup, he poured a small portion of the milk into the empty cup; then a little water from the other cup, then he put in some dirt, slops, and other filth, until it was full, and then said, "This is the Brighamite Church, the church in Utah. You see it is corrupt and abominable." Next he filled the first, or milk tin (which was about two thirds full of milk), with water from the water tin, until it was full, and then said, "This represents the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the Josephites. You see this is not pure." I said, No. I said nothing else that I remember. He was of medium size, dark complexion, dark beard, streaked with gray, and dressed in dark clothes. I would like to have comments.

SACRAMENTO, California,

January 20th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—It is a little over two years, since we, the Saints in Sacramento, were impressed by the Spirit of God, to try and get a meeting house of our own. Where we met on Sunday was a Public Hall, that was rented to any one through the week for anything they wanted, such as club, or lodge, or dance. Sunday morning we would have to sweep up cigar stumps and ashes, and tobacco spits. It was not a very fit place for worship. We have a lot bought and paid for, and about fifty dollars and twenty-five cents toward the building. We wish the Saints to assist us with their prayers, and from those who can afford it, a little means would be very acceptable. We pray the Lord to bless the giver a hundred fold. The following circular will show more fully our object in wanting a house of worship:

"The members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, in the City of Sacramento, Cal., have long felt the want of a place to meet in, dedicated to God for his holy worship, and where they can invite the public, and also for Sabbath School purposes, fearless of any annoying reflections on the vanities and probable vices, common to public halls, such in which they have long met, and for which they have paid enough to have built a 'House of God; a house of prayer for all people.'

A suitable site for such a building, and for so low a sum, is now offered us, that we have resolved with united effort, at the risk of sacrifice, to buy it and begin to build. We have also unanimously decided to sustain our committee of five, for the management of this business.

And to confidently request your kind co-operation, we ask your prayers, your confidence in our success, your cheerful aid, as 'tending to the Lord,' and your cordial influence in endeavoring to interest your friends and acquaintances in this worthy object.

Correspondence, donations, etc., can be addressed to G. W. Harlow, Brighton, Sacramento Co., California.

Agents and all who contribute to this sacred cause, will receive properly signed receipts for all offerings presented for the above purpose."

I see by the conference minutes, that Joseph Dewsnup is president of Manchester Branch, Manchester, England. That was my branch, and Bro. Joseph was there when I was. It does me good to read the minutes, as I can feel the same influence as when I was there. The Lord is blessing us in Sacramento. Three have been baptized under the labors of Bro. Daly. We are expecting Bro. Wm. Anderson from Oakland next Sunday to preach to us. May the Lord bless all good Saints, is the prayer of your humble sister in the gospel of Christ. My address is 929, O. St., Sacramento, California.

MRS. SARAH HUNT.

FLORENCE, Kan., Jan'y 30th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I accidentally fell in company on the train between here and Emporia, with a very respectable old gentleman of about seventy-five years of age, who was once acquainted with your father, and at one time visited him in Nauvoo, and shared his hospitalities. He spoke in high terms of both your father and mother, and said he could not have been treated better by his own people. I asked him if he believed your father was a polygamist. He replied that he knew he (your father) was not a polygamist, and never was, as he had a chance to know, for he had eaten at his table, and slept in his house. He said on one occasion, your father offered to wrestle, saying to him, "I can throw down any man on the ground." However the old gentleman said they did not wrestle, as Smith had the appearance of being a very stout man. The old gentleman's name is Houghton, and run a water mill at one time on the Des Moines River. Said he gave a number of the Mormons work there, after they had been driven from Nauvoo. Although Mr. Houghton is not a believer in our claims, he is very liberal, and adds another testimony, that Joseph the Martyr was not a polygamist, and he believed him to be a good man.

Yours in gospel bonds,

A. P. FREE.

NORTH BRANCH, Lapeer Co., Mich.,

January 21st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I am making new openings in the northern part of this county, and shall endeavor to make an opening in the village of North Branch soon. Yesterday I addressed an interested people in a school house three miles south of the village. I was blessed with good liberty, and to such a degree as to attract the attention of the little folks, and the expression of the people was, that I should continue the meetings there, which I shall endeavor to do. When I leave here I expect to visit Tuscola county: Your brother in Christ,

LEVI PHELPS.

HOLSTEIN, Grey Co., Ont.,
January 18th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Having been appointed as a committee to labor with Bro. S. Brown and J. H. Lake in adjusting several matters relating to some of the branches in London District, we started some time after our October conference, visited some of the branches, labored and preached, with little success in some cases; tried to get some new openings: succeeded in getting turned out of school house in one place, church in another; went to Riverview, in Dufferin county, about twenty miles east of Egremont Branch. Got good hearing, left splendid feeling among the people, who I think received me the kindest, and showed the most hospitality I have met with since entering the field. Was permitted to use Union Church for a time; but finally shut out. Then several neighbors kindly tendered use of their houses. Was invited to visit and talk on the truth, and partake of their bounties, which if they were brethren, could not have been given with better grace. Mention Mr. and Mrs. Williams, storekeeper; Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Thompson, saw miller; Mr. Hannah, Mr. Jones, Jordan, Hulbert, Stewart, and if I omit others, it is not out of disrespect. Baptized three: a brother and sister Shields, and a fine young man named D. McGillvery, who has been out to Utah and seen the abominations; who understands the difference between that system and the truth. I left several who say they will be baptized at no distant day. May God grant them the resolution to carry out their good intentions, is the prayer of your brother in bonds,
J. A. McINTOSH.

AUGUSTA, Butler Co., Kan.
February, 1884.

Brother Joseph.—I have seen all the Brethren that seemed to take offense at my letter in Herald of November 24th; and there are no hard feelings now, as forgiveness has been required, and freely granted for the error in December 15th letter; so I will explain a little.

The lands then spoken of as raising forty to fifty bushels per acre, are not government lands, except some man forfeits his claim by fraud, and loses his improvements as any one can see, and is held at from five to ten dollars per acre. The word timber here refers to rivers and creeks, where trees of any kind and size grow, and is generally owned by old settlers, and made a source of good profit; though in Michigan there is much timber logged and burned, which is better than most of this. I have traveled over a goodly portion of Butler Co., and have seen no timber worthy of the name as applied in timber countries, excepting, perhaps some small timber for ax handles, fence posts, etc. I have heard of a saw mill and saw timber, but have not seen them. Men who have money can make money here, judging from the past; but you who have no money, don't come here to get rich, lest you be disappointed. If the spirit of the Lord commands you to come, and promises a continuation of the bountiful crops of the past year, or promises you a goodly increase in the harvest of souls, don't be afraid to come.

My only hope of riches is in the Lord. Except he break the bonds that now bind by reason of transgression, how can we become builders of Zion. "Lord, help thou our unbelief," and help us to see eye to eye.

Yours in bonds,
M. N. COLE.

NORWOOD, Wright Co., Missouri,
January 23d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I have been receiving so many letters of inquiry about this country, that I find it impossible to answer all of them separately. This country is somewhat broken and rocky in places, but well watered with good springs and small creeks. The water is very clear with no alkali. It is also well grassed and timbered, and affords a most excellent range for hogs, cattle and sheep. The climate is mild and healthy. Some of the land is too rough for plow land, but there is a great deal of very good plow land. There is no prairie land in this country. Improved farms bring from three to twenty dollars per acre, according to locality and improvement. Raw land from one dollar and a quarter to fifteen dollars per acre. Hay, wheat, corn and potatoes, grow well here. Also fruits of almost every variety. Especially apples, peaches and grapes. The country is filling up very fast; but I think that quite a number could get cheap homes here yet. There is no branch of the church here, and I would be very glad if some of the Saints would come here; but I would advise all to come and look at the country before they move here. I will do all I can to show the country to any that come. I live two hundred and sixty-one miles southeast from Kansas City, Missouri, and two hundred and twenty-six miles northwest from Memphis, Tennessee, on the K. C. F. S. & M. or G. Railroad. Hay is selling for eight dollars per ton. Wheat eighty-five cents per bushel, corn forty-five, potatoes fifty, pork five cents per pound, net. Cows are worth from fifteen to thirty-five dollars each. If any of the brethren come to this country they will find me in the store with C. Lehman and Co.

Yours in the one faith,
W. H. SCHOFIELD.

AKRON, Iowa, Feb. 4th, 1884.

Dear Herald.—I have obtained the use of the Baptist Church to hold meetings in, to begin Thursday evening, and hold over one Sabbath; and as the Church is unoccupied, now, or in this month, will be the surest time to get it, as the Advents are to have it by and by. I ask again, Is there any one that can come and do some preaching for us? If there is please write so that I can make farther arrangements.

Your sister, striving to work for the Master,
M. A. CHRISTY.

WESTON, Iowa, Jan'y 31st, 1884.

Brother Joseph.—We have a little branch here, known as the Weston Scandinavian Branch; and as the name indicates, is composed of Scandinavian people. All around us there are many of our country folks; but as we have no place to meet in, except here and there in private houses; (our school-house has been denied us), therefore birth was given to the idea of building a house in which we could worship, and where we could invite people to come and hear the doctrines preached by the saints, believing it would be acceptable unto God if a house was erected for that purpose in the right way and with the Spirit of God directing, which of course we should all strive to have leading us in all our undertakings. We also think it would be an honor to the church, and especially the Scandinavian part. Therefore we come, asking all to co-operate with us in the building of this another house to God; and to the Scandinavian brethren and sisters we make special appeal, as we think it is the only effort, as far as we know, by saints of our nationality to build a house to God. The saints in the branch here are poor, but most of them are willing to bear as much of the burden as they can. The branch elected a committee to take steps for the accomplishing of the above, consisting of brethren John F. Drebis, Hemming Hansen, Hans Peterson. Bro. John F. Drebis was elected chairman of the committee, and to him may be sent whatever any one may give for the above named object.

Yours for truth,

JOHN F. DREBIS.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Jan. 30.—Baker Pasha, with 1,600 troops, landed at Trinkitat, Egypt, Monday, and an additional body of 2,000 men landed Tuesday, completing the force for the relief of Tokar. Nearly 20,000 rebels are between Trinkitat and Tokar. The first battle will probably be fought where Capt. Moncrieff, the British Consul at Suakin, was killed by the rebels—seven miles distant—as the rebels are massing at that point. Small bodies of the enemy which approached within 4,000 yards of the camp were shelled by the British gunboat Sphinx. Gen. Gordon has arrived at Assouan. Osman Dinga is ill.

The cable between Suez and Suakin has been completed.

A Khartoum dispatch says a soldier succeeded in getting through from Rupaz. He reports that Sala Bey is hard-pressed and requires men and ammunition. The Sheikhs in the vicinity have received a letter from Gen. Gordon asking them to come in. It is feared that the summons are now to late. Sheikh Senoussi and his tribe, recently reported to be advancing to join El Mahdi, not only have not joined El Mahdi, but have decreed that he is a false prophet and adventurer, and that Mussulmans must on no account follow him.

In spite of the many arrests the agrarian agitation continues in Pskow and Vitebsk, Russia. So intense is the irritation of the peasants in the latter province that the Governor has telegraphed to St. Petersburg asking that the troops specially sent to Vitebsk be withdrawn, as a collision is feared. Appeals addressed to the educated classes have appeared in White Russia, urging them to join in the struggle against absolutism.

The Nihilists have poisoned Degaiff, alias Jablonsky, the chief murderer of Lieut.-Col. Sudeikin, because of his many double dealings.

The sensational dispatch from Kharkoff alleging the discovery of a plot for poisoning the Czar, and for a general uprising of the peasantry in Little Russia, and asserting that Special Officer Sabieloff, sent by Col. Sudeikin to Kharkoff to investigate Nihilism, had been assassinated, is flatly denied by a St. Petersburg dispatch. The telegram says nothing has happened at Kharkoff beyond the discovery of a secret printing-press.

Jan 31.—The Government of Austria has ordered a state of siege to be established in Vienna, Korneburg, and Neustadt. This gives the Government the right to search private houses without judiciary order, to exile suspects without trial, to conduct trials without a jury, to suspend the liberty of the press, to open all private letters, and to dissolve all public and private meetings. These drastic measures, together with the universal hatred of the Austrian police, cause general uneasiness and discontent, driving into the ranks of the discontented many who would otherwise be peaceful citizens, and, in fact, promoting the alliance of the Socialists, Anarchists, and Nihilists. The President of the Council and Minister of the Interior have sent a letter to the Lower House of the Reichsrath explaining that extraordinary measures are being taken in consequence of recent crimes, the present means being insufficient to suppress them.

The police have discovered a Socialist plot to rescue the Russo-Polish student Podlewski, who has been imprisoned at Berlin for the last nine months. Two Socialist leaders have been placed under arrest. Active correspondence is disclosed between Podlewski and the Socialist workmen in Posen.

The Russian Nihilist Mendlessohn, whom the Prussian police conveyed across the Russian frontier, managed to escape, and has reached Paris.

Gen Gordon leaves Assouan today en route for Khartoum. He has written a letter to El Mahdi asking him to send the European prisoners in his possession to Khartoum. Gen. Gordon has telegraphed to Khartoum saying: "You are men, not women. Be not afraid. I am coming."

Col. Sortorius telegraphs from Suakin as follows: "Sinkat and Tokar are still ours. I am going to join Baker Pasha at Trinkitat tomorrow. We will advance Friday. Baker Pasha recently made a cavalry reconnaissance and attacked Osman Digna, and killed and wounded over 120 of his men. The friendly tribes are still hesitating to move the last ten miles toward Tokar. I have written Baker Pasha, strongly urging an immediate advance from Trinkitat. Three days after Baker Pasha's reconnaissance I made a sortie with the infantry. Osman Digna attacked me, but lost several men, whereupon he retired inland. I am doubtful about the relief of Sinkat. Otherwise all is well."

Gen. Gordon left his specie at Assouan. He will receive advances of £119,000 from the Greek merchants at Khartoum.

Thomas Cook & Son, who control the entire steamboat traffic of the Nile, have been asked to place every available steamer, barge, and sailboat in readiness to convey troops, stores, and munitions of war to Upper Egypt, and also to bring any number of people down the river in case the evacuation of Khartoum is decided upon. The manager has started for Egypt to supervise the matter in person. Deep anxiety is felt regarding Baker Pasha's hazardous attempt to relieve Tokar. Baker will take with him 1,400 Egyptian infantry, 300 Egyptian cavalry, 2,040 Soudanese, and 150 Turkish cavalry, four Krupp guns, two Gatlings, and two rockets.

Peace is completely restored on the Egypto-Abyssinian frontier, and trade is reopened between Kassala and Massowah. Advices from Sinkat are heartrending. It is said the people have eaten all the dogs in town, and only horses and one bag of barley remain. There will be nothing left Feb. 1, when, unless relieved, the inhabitants intend to try to cut their way to Suakin. They say they had better be killed than starve. Tewfik Pasha made a sally from Sinkat the 19th inst. He lost nineteen men. Fifty rebels were killed and many wounded. On receipt of the news that the Government intended to abandon the Soudan, the Cadi of Suakin secretly assembled the leading Arab inhabitants of the town and advised them to join El Mahdi. The same night the Cadi and twelve followers joined the rebels. The defection has produced a bad effect. During the recent cavalry reconnoissance from Suakin the Turkish detachment became panic-stricken and bolted. Maj. Giles rallied them, however, by charging the enemy and killing five men with his own hand.

The Zulu Chief Zibepu and his followers defeated the Usutus in a bloody battle Jan. 22, in South Africa.

A dispatch from Tobermory, Island of Mull, one of the Hebrides group, says six men belonging to a secret society at Mull have been arrested on the charge of conspiracy to destroy public buildings with dynamite and subvert her Majesty's Government.

Owing to the depreciation of landed property in Ireland, a scheme is in preparation for the relief of owners. It is proposed to establish a land bank, with Government guarantee, which shall be empowered to lend money to landlords to pay off incumbrances created before the Land act, and also to lend money to the tenants for the purpose of purchasing holdings.

Several mountain tribes under Ali Pasha, formerly chief of the Albanian League, have revolted and seized the reins of Government. They had resolved to oppose the cession of the districts of Gusinje and Kraina to Montenegro, Europe. The 19th inst they entered Montenegro territory, but were repulsed, losing fifty men. The Prince of Montenegro reinforced the troops on the frontier and entered into an alliance with Miridites. Large quantities of arms are being conveyed to Bosnia and Herzegovinia, where rebellion is being fomented.

Feb. 1.—The increase of crime, especially robberies, in Vienna, Austria, has almost caused a reign of terror. A scavenger today received a cartridge from a stranger and handed it to a policeman; the cartridge exploded, probably fatally wounding the policeman.

A spy captured near Trinkitat says 7,000 rebels are five miles distant. The spy is a mere boy, who came armed with a spear to avenge the death of his father, killed by a shell Tuesday. The youth fought furiously until wounded. Baker Pasha has sent letters promising full pardon to the rebels who submit. The relief of Tokar and Sinkat is dependent upon diplomacy as much as upon arms. An unconfirmed report states that Sinkat has been relieved by friendly tribes. The commander at Tokar, in the Soudan, writes: "It would be impossible for our condition to be worse. The rebels have filled up all the wells outside of town. The water inside is brackish and bad, and the troops are suffering from diarrhea. There is great fear that it will be necessary shortly to surrender. Only ten to twenty rounds of ammunition per man are still left. The rebels continue fighting day and night."

England intrusted to Lord Dufferin the drawing up of plans for Egyptian reform. Lord Dufferin, designing the machinery of government to which he has given the somewhat general term of "institutions," would seem to have adopted the design of a pyramid, with manhood suffrage as its base and the Khedive as its apex. Manhood suffrage elects the village constituencies of spokesmen, who themselves elect the Provincial Councils, the members of which form nearly half of the Legislative Council. The Legislative Council itself furnishes thirty out of eighty members of the General Assembly; from the General Assembly are taken the eight Ministers, and these last are responsible to the Khedive.

Manhood Suffrage—The basis of representation is every male Egyptian subject exceeding 20 years of age not in military service, not having been found guilty of any serious offense, and not being declared insolvent. The number of persons who fulfill these conditions out of an estimated population of 6,800,000 is 903,420. Of this number 797,571 from about 5,300 village constituencies; the remaining 105,849 are electors for the towns of Cairo (65,016), Alexandria (29,841), Damietta (6, 329), Port Said (2,730), Rosetta (2,423), Suez (1,979), El Arish (299), and Ismailia (232).

Village Constituencies—The 797,571 only hold their vote for the purpose of electing in each of the 4,300 constituencies one "electeur delegate," or spokesman, to represent them at the election of the Provincial Council—that is, they do not choose their provincial representative, but they elect the men who shall choose him.

Provincial Councils—These 4,300 spokesmen are then convened by Keedivial decree to meet at the chief town of the province to which their villages severally belong, and there to elect a Provincial Council for their own province. There are seventy counselors to be elected in fourteen different constituencies, the highest number of electors in any one being 544, the lowest ninety, and the average 307.

Legislative Council—This consists of thirty members. Fourteen are sent from the Provincial Councils each to represent its province. Fourteen are named by the Khedive upon the proposition of his Ministers, and among them are a President and one Vice President, the Second Vice President being chosen from among the rest of the body. The remaining two represent the eight towns, one for Cairo and the others for Alexandria, Damietta, Port Said, Rosetta, Suez, El Arish, and Ismailia.

The General Assembly consists of eighty-four members, as follows: The Cabinet of Ministers, 8; the entire Legislative Council, 30; and additional elected members, 46. The forty-six are chosen by the spokesmen of the different towns and villages.

A convention of farmers at Carlow, Ireland, denounced Lord Rosmore and the Orangemen. It was resolved to prohibit hunting on the lands of the farmers, and if necessary prevent it. The farmers declare they will poison their grounds.

The Servian Government is selling the property of the peasants in the districts recently in revolt to raise money to pay the expenses of suppressing the insurrection. Thirteen school-teachers have been dismissed for promoting agitation.

The Governor of Lower Austria has issued a manifesto which declares that any one harboring persons who have been expelled from Austrian territory, or who shall attend Anarchist, Socialist, or other meetings not strictly legitimate and legal, shall be punished by a fine of 1,000 florins ($500) and six months' imprisonment.

A terrible epizootic has made its appearance among the sheep in Montana. Out of 20,000 animals belonging to one ranch 5,500 have died.

Feb. 2d.—Advices from Cairo today indicate that the alarm for the fate of the garrison of Tokar and Sinkat is greatly intensified. The delay of Baker Pasha's advance has without doubt sealed the fate of Sinkat, where Tewfik Bay, with 400 soldiers and 1,000 women and children has been besieged for some weeks past. A messenger reached Suakin from Tewfik Thursday, who announced that unless relief reaches Sinkat by Saturday Tewfik would make one rally more, and, in case he was defeated, would then surrender. It is reported that the delay of Baker Pasha to advance is due to the disaffection of the black troops, owing to the removal of their leader, Zobeir Pasha. The English officers with Baker Pasha at Trinkitat report that the Egyptian troops are utterly inefficient in drill and the use of rifles, while the native officers are cowardly and unwilling to march, on the ground that defeat is certain. Baker will await the arrival of friendly Sheikhs, and do all in his power to relieve Tokar by the use of diplomacy and bribery before forcing his troops to march inland. Military critics calculate that in case Baker Pasha is compelled to cut his way through to Tokar the chances are three to one in favor of the complete annihilation of all his forces.

The Austrian police have compiled a list of foreigners who are to be expelled from the country. The police also have closed the printing-office at which the Socialist paper, the Future, was published.

Placards were posted throughout the City of Paris yesterday evening inciting the disaffected policemen and starving workmen to arms.

Wendell Phillips died about six o'clock last evening, surrounded by his relatives and friends.

The Apache Indians are reported to be murdering and ravaging in the vicinity of Sonora, Arizona. Four men have been killed since January 25th.

A new feature of life in Ireland which has grown to considerable proportions through the inspiration of the Parnell movement, and which has hitherto escaped the attention of the outside world, is the growth of the literary spirit among the young men of that country. In every considerable centre of population, as Mr. Redmond said recently, libraries and reading-rooms have been established, and literary societies have been organized. Thomas Davis and John Blake Dillon and their associates of the Young Ireland party tried a similar experiment in 1843, but it was hardly successful. They had not the proper material to work on. The masses were unlettered. Since their time the National school system has been perfected, and all the men of Ireland under forty years of age have had good educational advantages. They have very generally profited thereby. The Young Ireland party gave them a literature and the idea of organization which the men of the present day have gracefully and fittingly acknowledged by calling their societies after the leaders of that body, and the central organization in Dublin the Young Ireland Society.

At a meeting held in Ballymote, Ireland, there was a riot growing out of an attack by Orangemen. Three Nationalists and two Orangemen were wounded. The intervention of the police alone prevented the houses of Orangemen being wrecked.

Feb. 3.—The Turkish Ambassador to Great Britain has informed the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs that the Porte is preparing a note to the Powers insisting upon the retention of the Soudan as an integral part of Egypt under the Sultan's suzerainty, and stating that the Porte desires the Soudan question referred to a conference of foreign Ambassadors at London or Constantinople. The Queen's speech, drafted for submission to the Cabinet Council, affirms the intention of England to withdraw the troops from Egypt as soon as the conditions of peace and prosperity will admit of the withdrawal.

The enemy made an unsuccessful attack upon the fortified camp of the Egyptians. Owing to the scarcity of provisions at Sinkat a party made a sortie for forage. All were cut to pieces by the enemy. Six hundred blacks, armed with Remington rifles, have left Suakin to join Baker Pasha at Trinkitat. Gen. Gordon has appointed Col. Stewart, Military Secretary, Lieutenant-Governor of the Soudan. Baker Pasha's advance on Tokar has begun. The Tokar garrison are preparing to make a sortie to aid Baker Pasha's advance.

The placards posted in Paris inciting disaffected policemen and starving workmen to arms are supposed to have been issued by a committee of the revolutionary party. Large numbers of the placards were destroyed by the police.

There were 33,000 deaths from diphtheria in the Province of Kharokof, Austria, between 1878 and 1882.

Additional arrests of Socialists were made at Vienna, Austria, Saturday and Sunday.

A letter was received by the palace authorities to-day at Constantinople, which purports to disclose a plot to murder the Sultan. The letter implicates in the plot the Grand Vizier and other high Turkish officials, and is dated Varna, though it is believed that it emanates from London. It is probable that a commission will be sent to London to inquire into the origin of the letter.

Abraham Hayward, the English author, died in London.

Feb. 4.—Austrian Anarchists have succeeded in creating a genuine reign of terror in the Capital such as "lookers on in Vienna" have not witnessed since the revolution of '48. The police claim to have discovered a plot to assassinate the Emperor. The conspirators have replenished their supply of dynamite from the Government stores. Between the Anarchists and police, peaceful citizens are in constant dread. The mails have been violated by both parties, for the officials have opened private letters and the revolutionists have stolen 258,000 florins from Pesth and Vienna Post-Offices. Public buildings are heavily guarded, and a complete censorship of the press has been established.

Col. Harrington has arrived in Suakin, Egypt, and taken command of the garrison. A French Consul has been dispatched to Khartoum. Bismarck has advised the Porte to postpone the proposed issue of the circular to the Powers in regard to the Sultan's rights of suzerainty over the Soudan. The Sultan having asked the Seraskier (the commander of the forces) what transports and troops it was possible to send to the Soudan, the Seraskier reported to the Council of Ministers that nearly all the ships of the fleet are in want of equipment and munitions; that no transports are obtainable, and that an expedition to the Soudan is impossible without English aid. Gen. Gordon telegraphs that a message has reached him from the Soudan hailing his mission with gladness. He considers the dispatch of British troops to Assouan needless. An Austrian just returned from the rebel camp states that Osman Digna has 3,000 men around Sinkat and 4,000 men near Tokar waiting to fall upon that place before attacking Suakin.

At Berlin, Prussia, several large meetings of Socialist workmen were held Sunday.

It is announced that Explorer O'Neill has arrived at Mozambique, Africa. He has traversed 1,400 miles of hitherto unexplored country between Mozambique and Lake Nyassa. O'Neill discovered Lake Amurambu, which he declares to be the true source of the Pierna River. He reports that Lake Shirwa is smaller than described. On his return O'Neill followed the Valley of Lake Loango, which he describes as well peopled.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 30th.—A small fire in New York, seriously injured five persons. Loss by fire at Rome, N. Y., $20,300. One life was lost. Phillipsburg, Pa., glass works, $125,000. Mound City, Ill., flouring mill, $12,000.

Within a radius of ten miles of Ayr, Scotland, 200,000 trees were blown down in a recent storm, 100,000 on the estate of the Marquis of Ailsa.

The steamer Rhywabons, bound from Holyhead to Cardiff, Wales, struck on a group of rocks near Cardiff last night. The mate, five men, and a boy escaped in a small boat. Half an hour after leaving the steamer they saw her lights disappear. The Captain and ten men remained on board the steamer and were probably lost.

Jan. 31.—A fire in the business portion of Peoria, Ill., destroyed property worth $110,000. Loss by fire at Toronto, Ont., two grain elevators and contents, $252,000. Minneapolis Minn., $20,000. Milwaukee, Wis., $2,000. Goodwin, Dak., two hotels, $17,000.

At Broad Ripple, seven miles from Indianapolis, Ind., on the Indianapolis & Chicago Air-Line Railroad, about 10 o'clock this morning, the middle portion of a passenger-train fell through a rotten bridge over the White River, repeating the scenes at Ashtabula, but with less horror. A portion of the wreck was submerged, and the exposed remnant blazed briskly for an hour or more. Six people were burned to a crisp. Two persons are dying and seven were hurt less seriously. A gang of workmen who were fixing the bridge are spoken of in the dispatches as having also been "slightly injured." One man fell to the ice, was driven through it by the falling wreck, and swam ashore, still able to walk. Some of the victims had been fastened in the timbers without being hurt otherwise, and were forced to watch the approach of the fire, which could have been put out at its start with one bucketful of water. In some cases no help reached them.

At 6 o'clock this morning a passenger train on the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway ran into a land-slide near Raccoon Mountain, seven miles from Chattanooga and thirteen miles from the scene of the terrible accident of last Tuesday. There was a dense fog, and the engineer did not see the obstruction until within thirty feet of it, when he told the fireman to jump, but stuck to the engine himself and applied the air-brakes. The engine and baggage-car were demolished. Conductor Wood and Engineer Long escaped with comparatively slight injuries, and the passengers, although severely shocked, were not hurt. The slide extended half a mile up the mountain and covered the track for many yards. The escape of the train from an accident even more terrible than that which occurred two days ago was miraculous. The conductor and engineer reached Nashville this evening, and are under medical treatment.

The ice in the Youghiogheny and Upper Monongahela Rivers broke up this morning. Near Elizabeth, Pa., twelve barges belonging to Joseph Walton & Co. were swept away. All but three were recovered. The steamer Celia, which for a year past has been tied up at Vandegriff's distillery near Fredericktown, broke loose. She struck a pier of the bridge and stove in her cabin. Several attempts were made to pull her ashore, but the current was too strong. The men abandoned her and came ashore. She has been used as a grain store-house and wharf boat at the distillery. The dam at Lemond's was completely swept away. From Burgettstown comes the report that many families were driven out of their homes before daylight, and that many houses were ruined. A bridge over the mouth of Big Raccoon Creek was carried away. The tipples of the Iron City Coal Company went down before daybreak. At West Newton and Broadford the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks are covered with water, and trains are greatly delayed. A wooden bridge was swept off its piers and soon floated out of sight. Just before it went down the stage-coach, loaded with six passengers, passed over.

Feb. 1.—A lace factory, several coal depots and shops, and five dwellings were destroyed at Paris, France. One hundred families were rendered homeless. Loss, 1,000,000 francs.

Incendiaries are charged with the recent great fires in Toronto.

Loss by fire in Belmont, Wis., $25,000. Nashville, Tenn., $20,000. Searcy, Ark., $20,000. Lexington, Ky., $4,500.

A barrel of gasoline in a hardware store at Alliance, O., exploded this afternoon with truly frightful results. The building was three stories in height. Five families lived in the upper portions of the structure. The building was totally demolished. Nineteen people were in the doomed place at the time, and all are believed to have been killed, though only two bodies have been recovered. The ruins took fire and were partly consumed. A woman in the street was fatally wounded.

At Rogersfield, N. Y., one man was killed, one mortally wounded, and several others mangled by a detached ore car in one of the mines.

Feb. 2.—At Iquique, Peru, fire yesterday destroyed Bodega Eck Trorer & Co.'s store, containing 28,000 quintals of saltpeter; also the saw-mill of James Ingies & Co.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt at two o'clock this morning, at Millersburg, O., sufficient to awaken people and rattle the windows.

Y., injured a large number of people, but none fatally.

Feb. 4th.—Loss by fire at Chattanooga, Tenn., $5,000. South Toledo, O., flouring mills, $19,000. Camden, Pa., lithographic works, $60,000. Baltimore, Md., $5,000.

The ship Theodore H. Rand was in collision off Beachy Head with an unknown brigantine, which sank. All on board except one person were drowned.

The schooner S. C. Noyes, herring-laden, was sunk in a collision off Rhode Island. The crew were picked up, much frostbitten, after being ten hours in an open boat.

There is a good deal of apprehension in regard to the flood in the Ohio. It is raining from Pittsburg to Cairo. The tributaries are all full, and the Ohio is rising at the rate of an inch an hour with fifty feet and some inches in the channel at Cincinnati. The cellars in the bottoms are already filling. Five feet more is the danger point, ten feet more shuts off the supply of gas, and twelve feet more will stop the pumps at the water-works. It was at about this time last year that the destructive flood occurred, and that experience increases apprehension now. Heavy rain fell nearly all the afternoon, growing heavier at night. The rain ceased between ten and eleven o'clock to-night. The air is slightly cooler, windy, and cloudy. The river continues to rise nearly two inches an hour, standing fifty-one feet and four inches at 2 a. m. It will require several more feet rise before what may be termed serious disaster comes, such as the suspension of manufacturing, interruption to railroad traffic, and the flooding of dwellings.

This afternoon the Ohio River suddenly recommenced rising rapidly at Madison, Ind., and is now swelling two and a half inches an hour. It is considered certain that it will come over the banks, stopping both starch works and other industries along the river front. The water is already in Clement's factory, and the engine-room of the shipyard is endangered. Property is being removed.

January will long be remembered as a month of appalling disasters and conflagrations. No year within the memory of the oldest historian has been ushered in with so much loss of life and property, and this and the coming generation will long have cause to remember the heartrending accidents which have characterized it. Railroads and conflagrations, the oceans and explosions in collieries and mines have each played an important part in the destruction of human life and property. On the 3d of January occurred the terrible railway accident near Toronto, in which twenty-eight souls were sent into eternity. On the 5th the horrible convent fire at Belleville, Ills., occurred, when twenty-five young ladies lost their lives. On the 9th the bark Elmira was lost at Long Branch, N. J., with sixteen souls on board. A lapse of nine days ensued, when the world was shocked by the news of the wrecking of the City of Columbus, off Gay Head island, with a loss of one hundred persons. Following soon after was the loss of a fishing schooner at Gloucester, Mass., fourteen men being drowned. On the 24th occurred the terrible explosion of fire-damp in a Crested Butte, Col., mine, which killed fifty-seven miners. The same day news was received of the loss of the Gloucester fishing fleet, and a schooner, off St. John, N. B., which added fifty-two more to the list. On the 28th news was received of the loss of a schooner off Gloucester, Mass., with 14 lives, and two days after another schooner at the same place was reported lost with 14 persons. The same day occurred a dynamite explosion, near Port Arthur, Manitoba, which took 5 more lives. The next and last day of the month occurred the terrible accident near Indianapolis, in which 6 lives were sent out of the world. During the past month 378 lives were lost in North America through the medium of fires, railways, storms, wrecks, etc. During the same time Europe has suffered the loss of 286 lives through different accidents, the most prominent of which was the wrecking of the steamer Hueaiyren off the Chinese coast, with a loss of 200 lives. The remarkable phenomenon of so much loss of life seems to have instilled itself into the workings of the fire element, as the record shows that in the United States alone the astonishing amount of $3,677,000 worth of property was destroyed by fire. The "fire fiend" seems to have been held in check across the ocean, as the record shows that only $875,000 damage was done by this element of destruction, the main part of the loss falling upon Great Britain.

In the cane district of East and West Baton Rouge the rain and cold weather have done much damage, and it is feared the stubble is lost and the plant-cane seriously injured. The planters are very much discouraged as to the prospects of the yield.

In some provincial exchanges the prices declined 1s. In London prices continue yet lower to-day. Only choicest English and foreign maintain former prices. Flour is very quiet. Barley is very dull. Foreign wheat is lower. The decline appears unfathomable. Over production seems likely to continue and increase. In the meantime trade must suffer from a plethora of supply. Maize is weaker. A DAY DREAM.

It was morning. The earthly creations of God glistened with dew. Soft breezes from heaven played about among the branches, and the leaves, and over the soft velvet of vernal green that decked the plain. And the soft light of the celestial orb of day dispelled the veil of darkness from over the existent beauties of God's terrestrial creations.

Moved by the wings of fancy, I stood upon a wooded height overlooking the verdant plain. East, west, north and south, beauty, peace, and verdure seen, and the rich alluvial soil ready to respond to the touch of him who seeks for food. Blessed be the all provident power of God.

Yonder towards the west, my attention is directed toward a dense mist that seems to be rising before the morning light. Beneath the mist I see what seems to be a multitude of people. I turn, and to my right I discover a personage with thoughtful earnest brow, yet with a sad and troubled look, also gazing earnestly at the multitude. I had seen him before. I knew him to be of high and noble birth. His name is reason. I knew him to have a lofty mission from God. I ask him the meaning of the multitude. He told me they were striving to erect a building by the command of God. The foundations have been laid for ages. A proclamation had gone forth that upon the foundation laid, a building should be erected, to glitter with gold, silver, and precious stones. The plans and specifications were drawn up in the courts of heaven, and all the conditions were made very plain, and very exacting, so as to insure a perfect building; not one imperfect stone or imperfectly laid piece of material would be allowed to remain in place; as it was evident if it did, that all that would be built upon the imperfect work would have to be destroyed, to get back to the perfect symmetry of the perfect foundation. And besides, it was intended that the building should be everlasting in its character.

It was intended by the architect, that all the workmen engaging to work upon the building, should be imbued with the loftiest, purest, and holiest motives, in the work. That love, gentleness, justice, and mercy, and charity, should fill their hearts. And indeed except these principles do fill their hearts, they soon fail in the peculiar intelligence needed to do the work, and to select proper material, especially as imperfect material lies about in great abundance; for while it is true the architect has placed close to the foundation, bright and proper material in abundance, there are about and in the midst of the multitude, many emissaries of an enemy; who desires to hinder and destroy his designs. Their names are,—envy, strife, evil surmising, jealousy, false pride, prejudice, wilful ignorance, false ambition, zeal without humility. These emissaries, and many others, have been very diligent in placing imperfect building material in the midst of that provided by the architect for the use of his workmen. And it requires great wisdom to be always able to distinguish the good from the bad. The last mentioned emissary of the enemy is one of the most dangerous, as he is always an enemy of the architect; yet he often leads persons to suppose from the excess of zeal without humility, and therefore without knowledge, which he instills into those over whom he obtains influence, the opinion that he is an indispensable friend; and where careful, prayerful workmanship is most needed, this self-sufficient arrogant zeal, often leads honest souls to neglect the simple perfect laws the architect has given, and leads them through thinking more of the laws of the creature than the creator, and thus, becoming a law unto themselves, so that in supposed strength but direct weakness, they zealously build that which alas must be destroyed. And the more thus built without humility, the greater the loss. I noticed some over whom this evil had gained sway, that with satisfaction they thought of the amount they had builded; and seemed lost to the fact that it was not gold, silver, and precious stones that had been used by them for material.

My guide continued,—I said the foundations had been laid for ages. Ages ago men built upon it. Some with proper material, but alas many with imperfect material. Some even with wood, hay and stubble. Thus you see, though the foundation is still all there, but little of the superstructure has been completed; for all the work done with imperfect material has been destroyed, rejected. Then through the failing to follow the directions in regard to the work, the intelligence necessary to enable persons to learn the situation of the true foundation whereupon to build has been lost, and multitudes for ages have been led here and there, by blind guides unauthorized by the architect, and therefore uninstructed in regard to the true nature of the foundation. Hence they have arisen from time to time saying, Lo here is the true foundation, and Lo there. As a result of these blind guides, vast multitudes here and there over earth's fair domains, are building on shifting sands.

Thus for ages the foundation has been lost, and man through unbelief, had lost the glorious opportunity of working on the foundation, and thus accomplishing through the perfect law of God, the glorious result of earth's redemption from evil.

Here is a multitude of people, led by one authorized by the architect, and instructed fully as to the whereabouts of the true foundation, and how and with what material to build. They have begun. Many have worked hard and passed beyond. Much work has been built of an enduring character, but alas mingled with it so much to be destroyed, that the remaining part seems very little.

I have watched with anxious eyes the people at work. Let us approach nearer to the multitude.—With my guide I came close to the foundation. Surely I thought the architect well said long ago, that if men builded hereon with proper material, that though wind and storms beat upon it, it would not fall. Powerful and strong it is as the pillars of heaven, broad and deep as infinity.

The first workman to demand our attention was a very aged, feeble old man; yet he was working with joy, at times in sorrow; for the enemy's emissaries had at times deceived him, and caused him to build differently from the instructions of the architect whom he loved. Some of his work had not stood the test of the architect's examination; as was evident from the wrecked fragments of work that lay at his feet. But he was building more carefully. I now noticed another strange thing, that when any work was built on the foundation in strict accordance with the rules given by the architect for the workmen, it emitted a glorious light. This did not appear in the imperfect work. My guide informed me that this was a distinctive trait of the work that would remain. If the work was not of an enduring character, it was dull and lifeless; even dark like night in color.

My heart went out for the old man, for I saw his patience and humble zeal. I also saw with joy, that even though his strength did not seem greater than for his own task, yet he seemed ever ready to help with willing hand others who were fainter and weaker than he. At times I saw him take of the rare and precious stone charity, of which there is abundant provision, but often hard to find by reason of the great amount of dark material mingled with the precious stones. I would see him, his hands filled with these precious stones, hasten to provide some weaker one with material, and kind encouragement; until, with empty hands, he would return to seek for more. Patiently he worked in love. The storms of passion, hate and sin, found no resting place with him.

Yonder I see a woman at work. Weak and weary she seems, and yet upon her worn face there gleams a look of heavenly joy and radiant peace. Upon one of her weary arms she bears a babe. I approach closer to see her work. The stones with which she has builded are very small, but O, so bright, (the widow's mite), and from the portion of the wall upon which she has toiled there comes a radiant light. Above her I think I hear a voice, sweet and soft, like softest æolian sounds. It seems to say, Eternal rest is near for thee, and joy, joy, joy. Again I see a little child at work. She is laying little treasures of precious worth upon the walls. I ask my guide the name of some of them. They are so bright, and yet the hands that lay them are so weak and so small. He tells me that the names of the stones are obedience, love, study of useful things, charity, gentle words, true modesty, patience. And how they shine (and a little child shall lead them).

Yonder I see a youth, in the first flush of manhood building, strong, clear, and bright his work does look. May he continue carefully, prayerfully, for I see the influence of one of the emissaries of the enemy close to him, striving to place a dark, worthless stone in his hand, with which to build. But he has the precious stone of humility in his hand, which reflects back such a bright light that he sees by its reflection, the worthless nature of the stone offered, and takes the material of godly walk and conversation, sobriety and temperance, zeal with knowledge, zeal with patience, zeal with humility, soft answers that turn away wrath, and many other stones of like worth. Seeking carefully with the light he is able to retain from the possession of the precious stone of humility. How strong, how glorious his work appears, worthy of the wondrous foundation. Yes, for the material like that of the foundation, came from heaven, ("all good comes from above, and all evil from beneath"). May God help him to continue in the possession of humility and truth, and help him to continue to reject all worthless material offered him, and build to the end of the work with gold, silver, and precious stones.

I observed now a thing which gave much joy to the workers with the good material, and that was, that the work they did while they were humble and careful to follow the directions given them, not only reflected light back upon them, and enabled them to choose the proper material, but it also enabled others who had drawn near to the foundation to see the beauty, and to understand and admire the work; that they too desired and did begin to assist with the work. ("That others seeing your good works may glorify your father which is in heaven"). And thus they continued rejoicing in the work. Many others I saw doing shining, eternal work, old and young. I felt to rejoice with great rejoicing. My guide also assumed a look of peaceful joy. Why, I ask him, was your brow so troubled and your look so sad, when first I saw you gazing on the multitude. Look again, he said. I now discovered that because of the reflected light upon the work we had been gazing upon, I had failed to notice multitudes around and among them also at work. I felt my heart go out to them also; but alas in sadness and distress, and sad foreboding for the future of their work. From their work there came no reflection of light, no luster. It was dull, dead, dark, and would have to perish. No gold, no silver, no precious stones. Instead there was chaff, lusterless stones, material of no value. The more of this work done; the greater the fall. Poor souls, how earnestly some of them work. They are sure of the foundation. Yes, they have no doubt of that, but alas, they have forgotten to take heed how they build thereon. My guide continued: "Some attempt to build with stones, and material which we will name after the emissaries who introduce their dark stones among the architect's material. Here is one who has built much with zeal without knowledge, and zeal without humility, and zeal without charity. These are very mischievous stones. All work done with them will have to be destroyed; for with zeal without knowledge they have the architect's directions, ("In vain do ye call me Lord, Lord, and do not the things I say"). Of zeal without humility, they have the instructions, ("That except ye become as a little child, ye can in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven"). Also of zeal without charity, they have the instructions from one bearing authority from the architect that, ("Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as a sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not charity, I am nothing." "Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not, charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up"). Each of these stones will have to come out of the wall. O fatal error, with what satisfaction the deluded one vaunteth the work he hath done. Alas, will not some good angel open the eyes of all such earnest workers, ere it is too late. The law of the architect is strict, but very plain; so plain that a wayfaring man need not err therein. Yes, 'tis just, no work can remain in the building that does not accord strictly with the plan; it must perish. Else the building would be composed of the weakness of man, and not the perfection of God. Sad I felt as we advanced along the walls upon these perfect foundations, so much lusterless work is being built but to be destroyed. As we advance, I see numbers who seem to be mingling with the workmen, and yet I look in vain for their work upon the foundation. I can discover none. I ask my guide, Are they not also workers? If not, why are they here in the midst of the dangers and discomforts that surround the building being erected. He answered, "They enlisted as workers, and made a covenant with the architect that they would work in accordance with his directions. But thus far they have suffered the time to pass, without even commencing to work. This is very sad, as they are to receive wages according to the work they do, and the manner in which they do it. If they do no work, the reward of the unfaithful is theirs. Not only are they losing time, but the emissaries of the enemy are peculiarly successful with those who are not diligent. They are in great danger."

As we passed some portions of the walls, I observed a thing strange and very sad. And I noticed my guide's face assume a stern aspect, and one of intense sadness. The cause was this: Some of the workmen, who had been deceived into using the dark material for building, had become so imbued with the intense darkness that emanated from the work they had done with the dark, dull stones and worthless material. For if a radiant influence and light proceeded from the good material, so an influence and effect opposite in its character came forth from the opposite material. As the effect of the good was to increase the intelligence of the persons so building, so the other increased the darkness. Thus they became at times so affected with an unreasonable dislike for the work of their fellows, that often they would tear down and destroy their work. Indeed, so darkened did they become, that they would wantonly destroy the work of years, simply through bitterness of spirit. I ask my guide if these persons who had built wisely, and thus had their work destroyed, would lose the reward of their labors. He answered: "Nay, the architect has means whereby account is kept of all work done, by whom done and how done; and none shall lose the reward, if their work is destroyed by no fault of their own."

O for wisdom to guide the workers, that all may build and none destroy. My guide also informed me that they who work according to the directions given, use a cement to connect the precious stones together. The cement is composed of truth and consistency—truth to connect the stones, that there be no wide seams, and consistency so that the cement may not become brittle, and so fail to hold properly.

My attention was also directed to two exceedingly dark kinds of stones, that lay about in great abundance among the material about the foundation. I was informed that the names of these stones were envy and petty ambition. I observed with sorrow that many of those who had long been building successfully, unfortunately at times, by allowing themselves to gaze too long upon these fatal stones, until they would become imbued with their influence; when finally they would place one of them upon their shining work. This always had a very fatal effect.

The workman, no matter how useful he had been, would now become blind, and make use of much material that would necessitate the destruction of what he had built, unless he would speedily discover his mistake, and remove the stones, his hours of useful work would be passed. I also noticed that for the sake of order, and because it was a part of the plan, some of the workmen were appointed as overseers of different portions of the work, and to assist the people in their different duties. Many did their work nobly and so long as they kept much of the precious stone of humility about them, and studied well to learn their duty, they did well and great was their joy. But alas, some of these men often became a hinderance to the poor workmen whom they ought to be helping, by reason of two dark and fatal stones, which the enemy of the Architect would endeavor, by every means, to place in the hands of these overseers and watchmen. These stones my guide informed me, are called arrogance and presumption. And I saw, that after they would possess one of these stones, and become influenced by the black darkness that came from it so dense, that like a fog it could be felt, these men lost their influence, and seldom again became efficient servants. My guide informed me, that the architect, having foreseen this peculiar danger that these men would fall into, had specially directed them to a very bright stone called meekness, ("Come learn of me; for I am meek and lowly of heart.") So the work went on, some paying strict attention to the plans and specifications, and some ignoring all except such portions as were agreeable to them.

At last, turning to my guide I asked, What shall be the end, for the night is approaching? "Come with me," he said "to yonder mountain, and we shall see." Attaining the mountain's height he said: "Turn and look." A heavy darkness hung over all the plain. "Tis night now," he said, "when no man can work. The architect, attended by the hosts of heaven, will come and finish the rest. The faithful laborers have ascended, the unfaithful have perished." Over the plain the fury of a great storm is gathering. The purifying lightnings of omnipotence flash, the terrible thunders roll. Flame from above descends, and laps with destroying tongues, till nothing but that which stands the purifying trial by fire remains. The storm of fury at last ceases. All nature becomes calm and darkness lies over all. With soul filled with awe, I turn to my guide, and ask again what of the end. He answered, "The morning approaches, and that foreseen by John upon Patmos will soon be fulfilled, wherein he said: 'And I heard a great voice from heaven, saying, behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them. And shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write for these words are true and faithful. And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my Son.'" Rev. 21: 3-7.

EXPLANATORY.

DEAR HERALD:—Without any desire whatever to open up a controversy with any one about anything we might have said in your columns, we may be excused for making a short reply to a criticism offered by Bro. Derry upon a passage in our Epistolary, which he seems very anxious that the Church should know is very remote from the truth as found in the revealed word of God. The objectionable passage reads as follows:

"The common usage of the past, or private, individual giving is discouraged; because funds so given are diverted from the possession and use of those whose calling it is to use them for the purposes of the Church, as their wisdom may deem necessary."

In the first place it should be understood, that I am alone responsible for it; the Bishop and his counselors may, or may not, have a view in harmony with it. We gave it as an independent thought, and we believe it to be a sound one; and in so believing, are not aware that we are adding to, nor taking from, the law of God. The passage in its wording seems sufficiently plain to convey its true meaning; yet the inference made by Bro. Derry, is very remote indeed from it. He seems to think that its import is to deprive the traveling Elder of every resource to meet his daily recurring wants, and says:

"Some of the ministry at least are social beings, and want to commune with their loved ones at home, and friends far and near. To gratify this proper and natural desire, they need money; but 'private, individual giving is discouraged.' They can not call upon the Bishop for this necessity. Their families can not aid them without pinching themselves, and they must plod on through this cold world, lonely and forsaken, or equal to it in its effects upon the mind. No word of cheer can reach them, if they can not commune with others."

An awful plight to be in we admit; but all Saints and prospective missionaries can take consolation in the fact, that there is no reality in the picture. The passage from which such a thought is evolved, neither contemplates nor warrants such a predicament for a worthy minister of God. Instead of "muzzeling the ox," or in other words binding him down with discouraging surroundings, impairing his usefulness, our opinion and desire is this: That to enable him to work with perfect ease of body and mind, he should be left free and unfettered from the ordinary, every day cares of life; and no words create my ideal missionary more than those of our blessed Lord: "Take no thought for the morrow, what you shall eat, or what you shall drink, or wherewithal ye shall be clothed."

I can very easily imagine how we can have just such a ministry as the Savior desires; and just how we can create a ministry to suit the pen picture given us by the brother. We have yet to learn that any word of God contemplates taking a man from every comfortable association in life, and making him entirely dependent upon promiscuous and uncertain givings from saint and sinner, for his comforts and daily recurring needs. Of course our ministers are social beings, and the very highest types of dignified manhood, too; perfect heroes, or they never could undertake to sacrifice home and all its happy joys, to offer the world the only terms of reconciliation with Christ. As such we claim for them the highest regard and attention from the Church. Apparently intimidated at the discouraging of private individual giving view, the brother says, "They can not call upon the Bishop." Who authoritatively says they can not? Another new view introduced by the brother. Let us see what God says about it. Speaking of tithing he says about its uses, "For the building of mine house, and for the laying of the foundation of Zion, and for the Priesthood. As a member of that Priesthood, the brother prefers that he shall be sustained entirely by outside charity, without a single help from Church revenues, as God declares to be for the Priesthood use.

Can you point us to a single Church want that has not a legitimate claim upon it? But let us come back to the missionary. Let him be fully persuaded of this fact at the commencement of his mission, that in case his wants are not supplied by private givings, he has still an interest in Church revenues; assure him that his family is to be provided for, and that he is not a solitary plodder, and an outcast; but will have the kindest consideration the Church can bestow, then you send a missionary who has confidence, his daily wants and constantly recurring needs will give him no concern. He develops into a veritable champion of truth, and will speedily promote the interest of the cause and the glory of God.

Suppose we make him entirely dependent on private givings, and independent of all church revenues, and what then? We care not how devoted he may be, nor how determined he may feel to make any and every sacrifice, and count them as gain for Christ, who shall say that every prospective meal not seen, and every couch for rest as yet unobtained, and every article of dress, and every other need that will come, will not enter largely into his thoughts, and claim a large share of earnest solicitude from that brother. Send an Elder out thus, and it is no difficult matter to see how possible it may soon be that dire necessity may demand from him the sacrifice of his only remaining coat, and to hunt his couch in the desolate barn, and intrude himself into the field of another, to secure that with which to appease hunger. How many we have heard testify to this experience, and as often have we wondered if the good Lord desired such things to be; and if so, how such can ever be reconciled with his own words. Is it possible that frail man could endure such things, and have no earnest care about them.

We will say that the "private individual givings" that we were writing about, is not the private individual givings Bro. Derry was evidently thinking about when criticizing it. Our meaning was this: That "private individual giving" should be discouraged, only where it interfered or prevented individuals meeting their tithing obligations. When we wrote it we did so advisedly, because we know that some individuals are more inclined to a personal disbursement of their own funds, as they deem proper, than to submitting them to other persons for that purpose. Now we claim such action to be injurious to the cause, as thereby there is not only a diversion of means from proper sources of supply, and uses; but in many cases, as we have seen, an injudicious sacrifice of means, that is calculated to produce unpleasant and regretful memories in the future, as well as depriving the giver of that suitable recognition by the church, which his liberality deserves. We fail to see where our advice infringes the law of God. The payment of a tithe is a pre-eminent law of the church, an obligation all should cheerfully assume, because God has asked it. His cause requires it, and all God's servants are commanded to teach it. I have only done so; and again say that any method that interferes with it, should have the disapproval of all.

Another thought enters the brother's mind, which the passage is not responsible for, i. e. the remaining property of the tithing payer; it is surmised that the church makes some pretension to this also. Nothing of the kind. The liberal view of its present Bishopric makes no claim upon it whatever, reserving it to the possessor as his private capital, from which an annual interest shall evolve; and it is to this as a resource that the missionary may look for help in his time of need, according to the promise of God, and the generous liberality of the giver.

The Bishop nor his agents, will ever make the slightest protest against the missionary receiving help from any source, either in or out of the church; but suppose such private givings fail, (and they are terribly uncertain, I am told), as in the case of the poor missionary who pawned his coat for four shillings, and spent it in communing with home, what shall be done with him? Would you deny him assistance from the Church, and thus pile up his degradation and squalid misery? We would not; but have him make his wants known as a member of the priesthood of God, to those whose duty it is to provide for poor and missionary alike, and then comfort his heart in the best possible manner, and as early as it was possible to reach him. Although readily acknowledging outside, promiscuous giving, as a means of resource declared by Almighty God, to throw him upon this sole dependence, it seems to me an awfully humiliating position for any honorable and dignified man to be in. How often he must have to endure the sad bitterness of hope deferred, and in his dire distresses it seems he must feel like disregarding the law in the Decalogue, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods."

Our greatest desire is, that all Saints may keep the tithing law, so that a strong fund may be found in the church with which to meet all its wants; and the discouraging of private, individual giving in the sense we have named in our Epistolary, we trust no member can object to, Bro. Derry not excepted.

GALLEN, Mich., Jan'y 25, 1884.

BRO. JOS. SMITH; Dear Sir: Enclosed I hand you two lists of money received by me for Kirtland Temple, which I wish you would publish entire: one from San Francisco, California, from Thomas J. Andrews, and the other from Brother R. J. Benjamin, of the Kewanee District, Illinois. Also, please make the following correction. See printed report, last item received in my report to Kirtland Temple. It now reads: "Received from a friend, ten cents;" it should read: "Received from a friend, ten dollars." Ten dollars from Nebraska through Bro. Rumel. The list from Bro. T. J. Andrews, or a part of said list, has been heretofore published. Bro. Andrews writes me that there were some errors in the names of those which were formerly published, and he requested the entire report to be published.

You will also please publish the following:—On being officially notified of the resignation of Bro. Isaac R. Ross, of the Spring River District, Kansas, in consequence of ill health, and that Bro. R. H. Davies was recommended to me as my agent for said district: I now therefore ap-

MITE SOCIETY.

The treasurer submitted the following report: "Received during the ten months, $15.80. Paid out $14.34, leaving balance in treasury of $1.46."

MARY E. MCGUIRE, Sec.

FOURTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

To the Elders of the Fourth Quorum, Dear Brethren:—At a meeting of our Quorum in September, 1880, I was chosen secretary. Since that time, I have heard nothing from you only as I have learned it through the Herald. This ought not to be. I think it was the duty of those acting as secretaries of the different meetings held since that time, (September 1880), to furnish me with a copy of their proceedings; but such has not been the case. I have written several letters to the President of the Quorum, but have received no answer; (it may be that he did not get them), and I do not know the address of his counselors. I had a notice in the Herald, that all the members of the Quorum could have a license, if they would send five cents in postage stamps; and since that time I have issued licenses to fourteen of the members, which are all that I heard from.

Brethren, why is this? Are we satisfied by merely having our names on the Quorum record? If it is necessary that Elders be organized into Quorums, it is necessary that the members recognize such organizations, and be governed by all righteous acts of such bodies.

In conclusion, I will say that I expect to meet our record in the "Sweet by and by," and I don't want it to be in such a condition, that I will have to be ashamed of it.

If any one can assist me in ascertaining the date of the death, or expulsion of the following members, he will confer a favor upon me: J. L. Buckingham, R. D. Evans, Richard Groom, Joel Hall, (also his genealogy and ordination), J. K. Kent and E. H. Webb. I would also like to have the genealogies of Hans N. Hansen, David Lewis, A. F. Rudd, Robert Ross, Jacob Snyder, G. T. Waterman, John T. Williamson, Edward Bowlsom, E. R. Lanphear, W. H. Jordan, Edgar Sherman and C. D. Stevens.

The time is short that we have to work; therefore, let us go to with our might, and try to make for ourselves a name that others may not be ashamed to acknowledge. Shall the cause of Christ languish, and we rest at ease? I hope all the members will send their reports to the General Conference. They can be sent directly to me, at box 73, Temple, Bell Co., Texas; or to Bro. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Decatur Co., Iowa. Those of the Quorum who want licenses can have them by sending their addresses, and three cents in postage stamps to A. J. Cato, above address, which is my permanent address as long as I remain in the South-western mission.

Yours in gospel bonds,
A. J. CATO.

MARRIED.

YOUNG—PETT.—At Three Bee Tree Grove, Crawford county, Iowa, January 24th, 1884, by Elder Charles Derry, Bro. David P. Young to Sr. Ellen Nevada Pett. A pleasant time was enjoyed by about eighty relatives and friends, who gave hearty expression to their good wishes for the perpetual happiness and prosperity of the youthful pair.

May their voyage o'er life's troubled sea,
Be clear of rocks and shoals;
And every gale well laden be,
With solid joys and happy glee,
Their young hearts to console.

DIED.

SMITH.—At Clear Lake, Indiana, October 18th, 1883, of diphtheria, Harriet Adaline Smith, daughter of A. J. and Arzille A. Smith, aged 7 years, 2 months and 4 days. Blessed by Joseph Smith and W. H. Kelley, June 4th, 1880. Funeral sermon by Wm. H. Kelley, Jan. 13th, 1884.

WILLIAMS.—At Staunton, Macoupin county, Illinois, January 14th, 1884, of pneumonia, Sister Jane Williams, wife of Elder Wm. Williams. She was born October 15th, 1818, in Glamorgan-shire, South Wales. United with the church in 1848. Emigrated to this country in 1853, and stayed near this place and St. Louis ever since. When Bro. John T. Philips came and told us that Bro. Joseph had taken his place to guide the old ship, she and I were baptized by him, in September, 1864. She was a member of Cheltenham Branch. She went to sleep in peace. She was a brave Saint, to bear the banner of the gospel. She leaves a husband and five children to mourn her loss. She was buried in Collinsville, Illinois. James Miller spoke at the house, and by the grave. Wm. Williams.

ELLIS.—Bro. John Ellis, of Hutchinson, Colorado, after twenty months lingering illness, caused by paralysis, departed this life after struggling in mortality 75 years and twenty-eight days, January 18th, 1840. From wife, two daughters with their husbands, who survive him, every attention was paid, and all that could be was done for his comfort and prolongation of life. But death triumphed. Nor were Saints or friends slow to sympathize and help. For probity, truthfulness, and straightforward dealing, few comparatively, equal, and none surpass Bro. J. Ellis in seventy-five years' struggle; hence, a great man has fallen in Israel; great, because he sought to be good. For twenty years he served as an engineer in plying a boat between Liverpool and Birkenhead, and a few more years service would from the company have entitled him to a life pension for faithful service. But thinking it a duty to go to Utah, all that was forfeited, and with family he endured the fatigue of a journey thither but to meet with disappointment. Leaving there, after tarrying a short time in Nebraska City, in 1862 came to the above place, which was then a comparative wilderness, where he abode until his death. And in these twenty-two years' sojourn in the capacity of a son of toil, going in and out, dealing, &c., with the sons of men, not a charge of wrong doing towards his fellows can be brought. His remains were interred on the 22d of January, and a funeral sermon preached on the 27th. The number of friends and neighbors in attendance to do honor to his memory, in this mountainous, and sparsely settled country, is truly astonishing; and from all, irrespective of age, sect or party, there comes but one verdict, viz: "Father Ellis was a good man." Surely there is something in a name. Wife, children, grandchildren, Saints and neighbors, feel that we can ill afford to lose such a husband, father, brother, and friend. And notwithstanding a resignation, leading to a submission to the inevitable, the death of Bro. Ellis has cast a gloom over the old homestead, familiarly known as the "Omaha Ranch." And the Saints feel that an exemplary, worthy member has fallen, whose amen at the giving of thanks, as his own offerings, were always heard in the church and at the family altar. And indeed, the eyes can go in no direction, or the thought wander to any spot, but there appears a vacancy, causing sadness through his death. A wife, two daughters, their husbands, with eleven grandchildren, with a host of friends survive him.

SUTOR.—At her home five miles south of Union Branch, Jefferson county, Indiana, January 19th, 1884, Sr. Emaline Sutor, in the 39th year of her age. Baptized into the Reorganized Church, August 17th, 1873, by Bro. B. V. Springer. Funeral services held at Smyrna Church, by Elder S. Rector. The many friends scattered throughout the church will be glad to know that Sr. Sutor died rejoicing in the latter day faith, bearing a last testimony to the truth of the work, that will bear its fruit in due time.

Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 23d, 1884.

APOSTLE GEORGE TEASDALE of the Utah Mormons, in a discourse delivered in the Assembly Hall, Salt Lake City, Utah, January 13th, 1884, as published in Deseret News, said:

"I bear my solemn testimony that plural marriage is as true as any principle that has been revealed from the heavens. I bear my testimony that it is a necessity and that the Church of Christ in its fulness never existed without it."

How any man endowed with any sharpness, or common sense, can bear so foolish a testimony as the above is a curious thing.

Apostle George Q Cannon, of the Utah Church, says that plural marriage "was not an essential doctrine of Mormonism at the beginning, nor is it now." Delegate John T. Caine, also a leading Mormon from Salt Lake, says that it is "not essential." Charles W. Penrose, Editor of the Deseret News, also states that the "Church existed without polygamy," or plural marriage.

We could multiply these statements from their own ministry but it is not needful. The Lord has said something about the "fulness of the gospel" and his church; let us see what it is.

In the Book of Mormon, which book we are commanded to "remember" to "do" as commanded therein, we read;

"Wherefore, my beloved brethren, I know that if ye follow the Son with full purpose of heart, acting no hypocrisy and no deception before God, but with real intent, repenting of your sins, witnessing unto the Father that ye are willing to take upon you the name of Christ, by baptism: yea, by following your Lord and your Savior down into the water, according to his word; behold, then shall ye receive the Holy Ghost; yea, then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost; and then can ye speak with the tongue of angels, and shout praises unto the Holy One of Israel." "And now behold, my beloved brethren, this is the way; and there is none other way, nor name given under heaven, whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God. And now behold, this is the doctrine of Christ, and the only and true doctrine of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, which is one God, without end. Amen."—2 Nephi 13: 2, 6.

"And he that will hear my voice, shall be my sheep; and him shall ye receive into the Church; and him will I also receive. For behold, this is my church; whosoever is baptized, shall be baptized unto repentance."

"And again, I say unto you, ye must repent, and be baptized in my name, and become as a little child, or ye can in no wise inherit the kingdom of God. Verily, verily I say unto you, this is my doctrine; and whoso buildeth upon this, buildeth upon my rock; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against them. And whoso shall declare more, or less than this, and establish it for my doctrine, the same cometh of evil."—Nephi 5: 9.

"Verily, verily I say unto you, this is my gospel; and ye know the things that ye must do in my church."—Nephi 12: 4.

In the revelation which opens the dispensation the statement is made that the Lord, knowing what was to take place on the earth called his servant Joseph Smith, and others that the "fulness of the gospel might be proclaimed."—B. of C. sec. 1: 4.

"Behold, this is my doctrine: Whosoever repenteth and cometh unto me, the same is my church; whosoever declareth more or less than this, the same is not of me, but is against me, therefore he is not of my church."—B. of C. sec. 10, (37), par. 16.

It is stated in Doctrine and Covenants, section 17, (2), paragraph 2, that God inspired Joseph Smith the first elder in the church, to "translate the Book of Mormon, which contains a record of a fallen people, and the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles."

"I have sent unto you to reveal the Book of Mormon, containing the fulness of the everlasting gospel."—B. of C. sec. 26, (50), par. 2.

"For even now, already, summer is nigh, and I have sent forth the fulness of my gospel by the hand of my servant Joseph."—B. of C. 34, (11), 4.

"And this is my gospel: repentance and baptism by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which showeth all things and teacheth the peaceable things of the kingdom."—B. of C. 39: (5), 2.

"And again, the elders, priests and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of the gospel."—B. of C. 42: (13); 5.

"Verily, I say unto you, blessed are you for receiving mine everlasting covenant, even the fulness of my gospel."—B. of C. 66; (75); 1, October 1831.

"And the record which we bear is the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ." The vision.

"And for this cause, that men might be made partakers of the glories that were to be revealed, the Lord sent forth the fulness of his gospel, his everlasting covenant."—B. of C. 108. Appendix, Nov. 3, 1831.

Any one who will take a moment's trouble can easily trace the divine economy of God in giving to the church his word, the gospel, the everlasting covenant at the first establishing of the church in 1830. Any testimony which proposes to add an extra covenant to the everlasting one, a new fulness to the "fulness of the everlasting gospel," must bear a more sacred claim to the confidence and esteem of the true believers in the mission of Joseph Smith, the Book of Mormon and the gospel of Jesus Christ, than the last pledged apostle of plural marriage.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

DISCUSSION between Rev. Clark Braden, of the Disciples, and Bro. E. L. Kelley at Kirtland Ohio, was to begin Tuesday, February 12th. How it is progressing we can not say.

Bro. Joshua Armstrong was at Bennett, Nebraska, February 7th, laboring to present the word to the people; weather stormy, congregations small.

Bro. and Sr. Stephen Mitchell living at Green River City, Wyoming, have not seen an Elder for a year, and would be pleased with a visit from some one of the traveling Elders; he thinks that there are some would be baptized if opportunity offered.

Bro. O. A. Richey, of Clear Water, Nebraska, desires us to state that any one wishing to invest in a grist mill, water power, can learn of such a site and property by addressing him, when all particulars will be given.

Bro. G. Trebs, writing from Socorro, New Mexico, states that should any of the missionaries of the church pass that way, going to or from California, southern route, he would be much pleased to see them and would try and get the courthouse for them to preach in. Bro. Trebs is one of those left of the wreck of the James Collen Brewster effort to colonize in the west, and is strong in the latter day work.

Messrs. Johns and Ordway, of Peoria, Illinois, are of the opinion that any of the traveling ministry who will write them sending address, may hear of something greatly to their advantage. Address Johns and Ordway, 605 Illinois Avenue, Peoria, Peoria county, Illinois.

On second page of HERALD for January 5th, second column and fifth line from top, instead of "bridges" read "bargers." Same number, eleventh page, read "May" instead of "Mary."

A BROTHER writes: "It is time that we begin to dig deep and found our houses on the rock of eternal truth."

We agree with this sentiment most cordially. But it occurs to us that whoever digs can not at the time he commences to dig see the foundation, or know where to place the corners of his house. In digging he must remove more or less of the surface, or whatever may obstruct his vision and prevent his building. No one can dig very deep without having some rubbish piled up, or carried away, which neither goes into the foundations, nor can be put into the building. If the foundation was in sight, or could be got at without digging, why dig? There would be no necessity.

These brethren of ours who write so seemingly from opposite standing places, are digging. The views and arguments expressed by them, are akin to the rubbish cast up in their digging. If they dig honestly, that is, with honest intentions, they must in time reach the foundation. If they dig idly, or viciously, just to see the debris fly, they will most certainly accomplish nothing more than to be constantly throwing aside the same rubbish, as it will steadily fall back upon themselves to plague them in their vain efforts at digging.

We are constantly asking other men to examine, to read, to argue, to reflect, to hear other and adverse opinions to those they hold, to investigate, to compare what others present with what they have and to reason. All these things we ask them to do in order that they may "prove all things and hold fast that which is good." Why is it then that we are so afraid of the expression of different ideas from each other? Why is it that the examinations attempted by some of the Elders in the HERALD are construed into division, strife and contention? Why should we not do among ourselves what we ask others to do outside of our own circle? Is it possible that argument is to be employed only in dispute with them that are without? Is it to be supposed that men will drift into oneness of idea without interchange of thought? If there is a foundation, may we dig for it? And shall our earnest digging be taken as a token of departure from the faith? We hope not. Dig deep brethren, and keep digging till we agree, or understand each other in love.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—In what year was the city of Babylon destroyed, and in what history is it recorded?

A.—Babylon was founded by Belus, the Nimrod of Holy Writ, as is supposed, 2245 before Christ. Ninus united the sovereignties of Assyria and Babylon 2059 before Christ. This empire existed according to Eusebius, 1240 years; according to Justin, 1300 years; according to Herodotus, 500 or 600. One historian, Blair, adopts Eusebius' statement, and calculates from 2059, to the close of the reign of Sardanapalus in 820 B. C. Babylon continued with more or less splendor until taken by Darius in 511 B. C. The items are given in Putnam's Dictionary of Dates, Eusebius, Rollin, Lenglet, Blair and Usher. Also in Chambers' and the American Encyclopedia, under the head of Babylon and Babylonia. No specific date is assigned as the time of its destruction as it gradually grew less and less important and finally fell into complete decay as foretold by the prophet.

Q.—Is it necessary that a president of a branch have a first and second counselor?

A.—No. The Book of Covenants has no provision for them. A branch may adopt such rule if it sees fit so to do.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. R. J. Anthony has been laboring at Wilber, Nebraska, since our conference in January and the result is that one was baptized, and others are near.

So writes Bro. Levi in charge of district.

Bro Hiram Rathbun, has removed from Grand Ledge, Eaton county, to Lansing, Ingham county, Michigan. He wrote us on January 31st.

My residence is No. 316 on Capitol Avenue a little south of the capitol building. Any of the Saints passing this way, are invited to call. If Bro. Kelley in his perambulations over the state of Michigan should stumble over this way and fall into this city we shall be glad to pick him up and take him into all the comforts of our home. Our house is the Lord's, and any of the Lord's dear children are, not only invited, but are welcome to come home.

Correspondence.

LOVINGTON, Ill., Feb., 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just left Arthur, where I had four good meetings. On my arrival I found considerable prejudice manifested by some. A church was refused; but the gentlemen who invited me obtained an old church building, after the school-house had been refused; put up a stove, and hired men to put it in good shape. The Disciples had appointments to keep their flock at home, that none might hear me. The opposition did good. It brought out all classes. Saturday night the house was well filled. A gentleman named Marten, stepped up and wanted to know how long it was since I left Utah. I satisfied him on that point. Then he said, "I want to give you a subject," I said, "All right." I did not know but he was going to give me, what Bro. Jason W. Briggs told me a clergyman gave him once, "Am not I thine Ass." I made up my mind to ride him, if he did. Imagine my surprise, when the thirty-seventh of Ezekiel was selected. So the first shot fired was the Book of Mormon straight. It was a whole battery, with canister and grape.

I offered to have the audience select the next subject. They did so, and the Atonement was the subject. They got it by the power of the Spirit, in its far reaching principles, in the morning's discourse. By this time the people began to get wild with enthusiasm. At half-past two the gospel of the kingdom was the subject. The house full, Campbellite Church deserted. I ought to feel ashamed, for I dissected the Campbellite system, until I compared it to an Orthodox God, without body, parts or passions.

It commenced to rain. I asked the Lord to stop it, but my prayer was not answered. I thought a wet blanket was thrown over my meeting for the night. Imagine my surprise to find the house packed to its utmost, platform filled, and one half ladies. The Law of Adoption was the theme. I forgot time, so intense was the interest; when I looked, I found I had spoken, and rapidly, for one hour and a half. I tried to stop. They sang out, "Go on, go on another hour," all over the church. I went on a little farther, and stopped. I hope to go back before long. I tell you, Joseph, this beats traveling around the branches.

Yours truly,

J. A. ROBINSON.

KEWANEE, Ill., Feb. 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just returned from holding a series of meetings at Montrose, Iowa, and indeed we had a glorious time. The Lord was with us all to bless. Their little chapel would not begin to hold the congregations. Last Sunday night the house was densely packed, and many had to go away, there not being room for any more. I continued all of last week holding services there with increasing interest. Many were loth to have the meetings close. There is quite a number there ready for baptism; but seem to be afraid of the cold water. Many seemed to be considerably exercised spiritually. I expect to commence a series of meetings on Sunday, the tenth, at Kewanee, and thence to our quarterly conference, at Millersburg.

Yours for truth,

H. C. BRONSON.

WEIR CITY, Kansas,

February 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I see from the Herald, that another debate is to be held between Bro. E. L. Kelley, and Rev. C. Braden. The brethren at the Wilber,—Nebraska—debate, will no doubt remember the Rev. P. M. Shick, of Mound Valley, Kansas, who before entering into the debate with me upon those same propositions, went to Nebraska to hear that debate, and would perhaps like to hear that we made many friends for the cause during the debate of thirteen sessions; and when at the close he was presented by one of his brother ministers with a nice arm chair, that our president moderator, (an Infidel), in behalf of the citizens of Mound Valley, presented me with twenty dollars for the love, courtesy and respect for all, manifested under the abuse I had to endure. That they did not agree with either of us about religion, but respected a gentleman whatever his faith might be. I am informed that they are anxious to hear preaching there now. They have sent to North Missouri for another minister, at an expense, they say, of fifty dollars, whom I am to meet in the spring upon the following: Resolved, That the Book of Mormon teaches more of the doctrine of Christ than the Christian, or Disciple Church.

We had a very good conference, four young brethren being called to the ministry, who have already buckled on the armor, and are battling for the good cause.

Your fellow laborer,

ODELL, Nebraska, Feb. 8th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Upon the close of my meetings at Elmwood, I returned home and spent the holidays at my own fireside. Immediately thereafter I shipped to Wilber, and in company with Doctor Anthony, braving the biting cold and snowstorm, we hied ourselves to Freeman, where we held meetings for a week; the attendance was small on account of the very severe weather. We returned to Wilber to be present and take part in our quarterly conference. Bro. R. J. Anthony, the heavy weight from Freemont District, the man of "strong doctrine," was present, and helped to make the meetings interesting. I came here on the 15th ult. Arrived the evening that the third revival meeting closed. I was permitted to give my experience, and tell of my hope. I was muchly encouraged by the many "Amens," "Bless Gods," "Praise the Lords," and so forth. The next evening I began telling the people the way of life, as contained in the plan of salvation. I closed last evening, having delivered in all twenty-four discourses; the attendance was good during the whole time, and the order was on a par with other places, where they behave. There were three causes that kept some from attending. First, sickness; second, "Don't care;" third, piety, so-called. A deep interest was manifested by several, not only in giving close attention to the preaching, but also in private conversation; and in asking questions in writing. At the close of the meeting several persons informed me that they were desirous of continuing the investigation. One man informed me that he thought he would attend the April Conference. One question was in relation to Joseph Smith's walking upon the water in Ohio. I am inclined to the opinion, that the introduction helped us, and that no Elder will again be troubled there with any of these silly tales. Elders Stephen Butler and Thomas J. Smith both live in the vicinity of the schoolhouse where I held this series of meetings. They will keep up regular appointments, and I have good hope that in time there will here be planted a branch of the church. One important feature of this part of Nebraska is the fact that this is a new country, only being some five or six years since the red man left here, and gave place to the present settlers. Society is therefore just forming, and it would be of great advantage to the church to give this field a close canvass while the opportunity of accomplishing lasting good lasts, while all is so very favorable to the sowing of the good seed. I especially make mention that some of the warmest friends made here, and those who stood firmly for free speech, equal rights and liberty, were members and friends of the Christian Church. In my experience this was something new, and I wish to give due credit to every man that is willing to hear our testimony before he renders judgment.

To any of the Saints who are wishing to find a home in a good locality, and get new land that will double in valuation in the next ten years, here is an opportunity. Many of the farmers here had little or nothing when they came here, and purchased eighty or a hundred and sixty acres, and only paying from three to five dollars per acre. Now the land is worth from twelve fifty to twenty-five dollars per acre; and many are willing to sell, because they have done so well, and they imagine that they could do better still further west. This part of the "old reservation" lies on the Nebraska and Kansas State line. Crops all grow well, and both forest and fruit trees, that have been set out look thrifty and attractive. I have lived in Nebraska almost twenty-eight years, and have traveled over a greater portion of the State, and I am willing to concede that this is the finest portion I have ever visited. I do not believe the land here is quite as rich as that nearer the Missouri River, but the lay of the land is much more attractive. Good markets and easy access to two railroads. Plenty of stone and water, but timber scarce.

In gospel bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

GENOA, Nevada, Jan'y 28th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Herald of 26th has just come. Please correct a mistake in my letter. "No meetings in Nevada." There has been a small meeting of saints in this place every other Sunday for the last two months; Bro. David I. Jones president. I wrote as informed before I got here. The few are firm and faithful. I have preached twice in the church of this place, and had a fair hearing. The people friendly. The choir did the singing, accompanied by the organ. I leave now for Franktown, for next Sunday. I could get no meeting at Mottsville. Many there down with the measles. If all's well, I shall return here soon.

Yours,

GLAUD RODGER.

No. 4,729, Jacob St.,
WHEELING, W. Va.,
February 12th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—On the 22d of January, I left home for Monroe county, Ohio, where I staid until the 8th inst. When I left home everything was calm and peaceful, but alas, when I returned on the 9th inst. the raging waters of the Ohio River had wrought a wonderful change. From hill to hill the river flowed swiftly on, bearing onward people, houses and stock of every kind. Wheeling was partially, and Benwood was almost wholly submerged; and thousands of people in a few small houses, boxcars, and on the hillside. I found my wife and babe in a small house with one hundred and sixty-five others. They had been rescued by Bro. Thomas Humes, from a second story window, where the water was nearly on the floor. It was heartrending, (my wife says), to hear the cries of, Help! Help! Oh save me! Save my children! Strong men shouted until they were hoarse. On account of the rapid rise of the water, and the scarcity of skiffs and flats, many were rescued from the roofs. It is simply impossible to describe the anguish, distress and destruction of those dreary hours.

Sr. Ebeling, a widow with eight children, had a comfortable cottage swept away with all her furniture and clothing in it. No means of sustenance, except the earnings of her three boys, the oldest about sixteen years of age. Bro. Linton, a poor man, with six in family, had the house he lived in carried off its foundation, and his furniture and clothing destroyed. Bro. Thomas Humes had his house partly demolished, and furniture ruined. Sr. Gill, a widow, with six in family; furniture and clothing ruined. Bro. Morris with a large family, A. M. Teagarden, J. A. Smith and myself, shared the same fate. The water was eight feet deep in our church. Our organ, sofa, Sunday School books, were all in the water. The building remained on its foundation, and it is not seriously damaged.

We are left in very poor circumstances, with no means to care for ourselves. We are depending on the mercies of others. We do not expect much assistance from the citizens, as there are many thousands here left in the same condition as ourselves. Hence we are driven to the necessity of soliciting aid from our brethren abroad, hoping and praying that they will remember us in our present ordeal.

Yours in haste,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

AGENCY, Mo., Feb'y 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Frank Steffe, Boston, Mass., wrote me that some time ago he was guided by the Spirit to visit a German Baptist Church there, and found that they had no regular preacher, so the Deacon had to do the service, and preached unto them twice on the Sabbath day. After the morning service the Deacon asked Bro. Steffe if he belonged to any church. He replied that he belonged to the Church of Jesus Christ, and asked the privilege of preaching, which was granted him in the afternoon. He writes that this was the first time he preached in German, but felt greatly assisted by the Spirit of God, so that after the close, the whole congregation shook hands with him, inviting him to come again. But there was a man there who knew him, and he told them he was a Mormon. Then all got disgusted and forbid him to come again. But the Deacon's wife wanted to see him, and invited him to their house, she trying to redeem him from his lost state, and convert him to the Baptist Church. But the scale turned, and she got converted to our church, together with another lady. He baptized them on the 20th of January, and the Deacon on the 22d. He thinks that the little Baptist Church will soon break up, and his prayers are, if there are more honest souls there, that they may soon come to a knowledge of the truth. The Deacon is a native of Zurich, and his wife from Bern, Switzerland. His love is to all the Saints, and he asks an interest in all our prayers.

Yours in Christ Jesus,

J. L. BEAR.

LLANELLY, South Wales,

January, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I went to church in our chapel on the 24th of August, 1883. Our dear brother, Benjamin Thomas, was there. He was chosen to preside over the meeting unanimously, and indeed we had a good time there, too. The Spirit of the Lord made manifest unto us great and marvelous things; and through the spiritual gifts, the assembly testified of the good spirit they felt under his presidency. Brother Benjamin said he never had felt so good for a long time before. He testified that he never was so well pleased as he was that night, partly owing to the ministration he performed on the 22d day of August, two days prior to his dreadful accident. On that evening he had baptized his wife, and he confirmed her the same night. Sister Margaret Thomas is a good Saint indeed. She was not willing to have any one to officiate in the ordinance except her husband, and she bore a strong testimony to the work she embraced.

Bro. Benjamin Thomas told me as he was coming home from prayer meeting, and at the station road, that he felt himself quite feeble. "Do you know," says he "what I would like to have if my Father which is in heaven would permit it?" I says, "I do not." "Well," he says, "owing to the severe pain which I have suffered, I should like, when my time comes to go like this," (striking both hands together). He had a severe pain in his head for the last two years. We stopped at the station awhile together, to talk about the good times we had at the Saints' meeting, and the good times we expected in the future. Then we parted from each other homeward. After we started about ten yards, he called me again to have another long conversation. Then I went home. The same evening about eleven o'clock, the news reached my neighborhood, that he was killed instantly. There was a prayer meeting held in the house on Monday night, and the funeral took place on Thursday. The preaching was done at the house by brother David William; and at the grave by Rev. Davis, pastor of the Congregational Church. A good feeling was made manifest towards him by all. He was a good servant of our Lord, yes, a very good Elder in the Church. He has done more work than any one else in South Wales; and we know that he has preached in time and out of time. He was a faithful servant, although he was not perfect. He did all he could do well. We think he is gone from here to receive his reward, and from the church militant to the church triumphant. We hope we shall follow him so far as he followed Christ. We hope to meet him again in a state of happiness, and finally receive our welcome into the kingdom of our Father, and that through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

RICHARD TREHARNE,
Elder in Llanelly Branch.

VALENTINE, Nodaway Co., Mo.,
February 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am here again, laying before the people the just claims of the living God. I labored here all last month. Had a good time. Baptized three. The people are very much interested. Hope others will obey. The Disciple (or Christian) ministers are very much alarmed. They said last month, after I left for home a few days, it would take them six months to get the people back where they were before. What must it be now, for they are farther advanced in the doctrine than they were last month. Surely they never can get the people to see as they see again. We have the crowd; houses well filled; best of liberty and freedom—thank the good Father.

I go this week for a day or two to Sweet Home. Return here, and may stay over Sunday next, and then to Barnard, to deliver a series of lectures. This is a good field to preach in. Plenty of friends, plenty of houses to preach in, and well taken care of.

J. C. Foss.

DEWITT, Saline Co., Nebraska,
January 31st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am glad the Herald comes every week. It is a welcome visitor to us. I don't think I could do without it. I hope while the world stands, it may continue its noble work, and ever be instrumental in enlightening its readers in this glorious work. Elder R. J. Anthony preached in our school-house last night. It was a very able sermon, as the Spirit of Christ accompanied him in his undertakings. I pray that God will bless his work in all the world, that honest people everywhere may be led to obey his holy truth, that the power of Christ may triumph over all other power. I rejoice that I have obeyed the gospel in its purity, and hope the Spirit of Christ may be with me to the end of this life.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
SUSANNA SAVAGE.

WAUKON, Iowa, Feb'y 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We had a week's visit with two of God's servants, Elders White and Etzenhouser. It was like water to a thirsty soul. Baptized two belonging to my family; and I think I can see the power of God manifested, as saith the gospel, by dreams and visions, and a seeking after knowledge. The preaching made a lasting impression on some. I am trying by the help of the Lord to back up the truth they preached, by giving my Heralds and books to read, and I am preaching almost daily in my shop. If our lives agree with our desires in prayer, God will answer. I feel stronger in the latter day work, as I see the little stone-kingdom rolling on.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Feb 5.—The English Parliament opened with no unusual excitement.

The Khedive has a telegram from Baker Pasha reporting his defeat near Tokar. His losses were 2,000 men, four Krupp cannon, and two Gatling guns. The Turks and Europeans fought well. Baker Pasha will return at once to Suakin with the remainder of his force.

Later dispatches reiterate previous reports that Baker Pasha met with a serious defeat. Baker Pasha had with him 3,500 men. He was advancing when defeated.

Baker Pasha began his advance from the intrenchments at Trinkitat Sunday. His force consisted of 3,000 troops, badly armed and short of ammunition, and many of whom showed an unwillingness to proceed. Baker Pasha had sent from Trinkitat to Cairo an urgent appeal for rifles to replace the old muskets with which numbers of his troops were armed. In reply he received orders to try to force his way to Tokar without delay and, with the English officers connected with the expedition, began the march, expecting defeat. Spies had falsely reported the roads clear with the exception of small bands of rebels. Monday forenoon a portion of the advance encountered a body of Osman Digna's troops and a fight ensued, which was more of a rout than a battle.

Baker Pasha lost all his camels and baggage in the fight. Most of the Egyptian officers and men bolted. Col. Sartorius tried hard to rally them, but without success. The Europeans behaved splendidly. Col. Sartorius narrowly escaped with his life. The enemy pursued almost into Trinkitat. The Europeans, police, and Turkish infantry were cut to pieces. Fourteen European and three native officers are missing. The fight was begun by a few Arab horsemen attacking Baker Pasha's cavalry, which fled. Baker then formed a square, which the enemy surrounded. The rest of the Egyptians then fled in confusion, and the gunners deserted their guns. Baker Pasha was several times surrounded by the enemy, but, with his staff, managed to cut his way through. The enemy's force was inferior in numbers to Baker Pasha's. Only three sides of a square were formed, owing to the fact that two companies of Egyptian troops stood still, overcome with fright. The enemy poured into this gap, when the Egyptians threw away their rifles and flung themselves upon the ground, screaming for mercy. The troops on one side of the square killed many of their own men by wild firing. The enemy betrayed profound contempt for their opponents. All the stores at Trinkitat were brought away. Col. Burnaby is safe. The marines landed at Suakin to prevent a panic.

The report of Baker Pasha's defeat, produced the most intense excitement at London, Eng.

A Port-au-Prince (Hayti) publication gives the names of twenty-one persons shot at Miragoane. Fifteen other persons were shot, whose names are unknown. There have been almost daily executions at Jacmel of persons not included in the armistice. During the week ending Jan. 10th, forty-seven persons were shot in spite of the appeals of foreign Consuls to await the arrival of President Salomon. Eighty insurgents fought their way through from Miragoane to Petit Goave, where fifty-two of them were killed. A number of revolutionists still remain in the woods.

Great rains have recently fallen in California.

Feb. 6.—A dynamite cartridge has been discovered lying against the rail tramway running through Landstrasse and Hauptstrasse, Vienna, Austria, so placed as to leave no doubt but that it was intended to blow up a tram-car.

Later advices regarding the defeat of Baker Pasha state that the slaughter of his forces continued all the way back to Trinkitat. The Egyptians were panic-stricken and fell upon their knees, but their appeals for mercy were fruitless. The Arabs seized them by their necks, thrust spears into their backs, and savagely cut their throats.

Intense excitement prevails in Suakin. An attack of the enemy is expected. The forts are occupied by English mariners. The French agent has telegraphed for a man-of-war.

A Suakin dispatch says that the enemy surrounded and destroyed Tewfik Bey and 400 followers between Sinkat and the coast while attempting to cut their way through the enemy.

All special dispatches agree that Tokar and Sinkat are hopelessly lost. The fact that the British gunboats have left Trinkitat creates a bad impression upon the minds of Egyptians and encourages the rebels in their fanaticism.

The rebels captured five guns, 36,000 pounds of cannon ammunition, 3,000 rifles, and an enormous quantity of cartridges.

The Trinkitat, where Baker Pasha's army were cut up like sheep in the shambles, lies on the seashore between Tokar and Suakin, and is sixteen miles direct from Tokar. Suakin is the point on the Red Sea where many of the caravan and pilgrim routes from Nubia and other countries of the Soudan terminate; in short, it is the connecting link between Arabia and a vast region of Mohammedan Africa.

The Government has advices confirming the report of the massacre of Tewfik Bey and his followers. The tribes beyond Korosko are in full revolt. Gen. Gordon, who has arrived at Korosko, is unable to proceed on his journey to Khartoum. A correspondent at Suakin says that the wires between Massowah and Kassala are cut. Osman Digna induced the tribes along that line to join him. The landing of marines has greatly reassured the populace, but a strict lookout is kept for treachery on the part of the Egyptian officers who refuse to do duty. The belief in El Mahdi is increasing.

A letter from a Russian just published, states that the masses there desire Russia to engage in war and be defeated, in order that they may gain freedom.

Cincinnati is in danger of a recurrence of last spring's great catastrophe. The river is over the sixty-foot mark. All the towns above are in the condition usual at this time of year. The floods in other regions are as bad as they average, though far below the records of 1882 and 1883.

Feb. 7th.—Late advices from El Mahdi's camp, received last night, confirm the report that the False Prophet has started out to subjugate the entire world. The recent victories of the rebels have so emboldened them that they are advancing along the entire caravan route. All telegraphic communication north of Khartoum has been severed, and grave fears are entertained that the Mussulmans of Suakin will treacherously rise and massacre the European residents. Great excitement still prevails in London.

The transport Poorah at Portsmouth has been ordered to prepare to sail forthwith. It will take 500 marines to Suakin. Official advices from Cairo announce that the total number of killed near Tokar was 2,250, including ninety-six officers, sixteen of whom were staff officers. Baker Pasha telegraphs he has at present under his command 3,500 men, a third of whom are unarmed. It is officially denied that the tribes beyond Korosko are in revolt.

It is estimated that 600 rebels were killed in the late fight. The Khedive has sent a message of sympathy to Baker Pasha. Baker Pasha telegraphs that his men will be able to hold out for only a short time behind intrenchments. Spies report that the rebels intend to attack Suakin. The Governor of Dongola telegraphs that Berlin and Dongola are quiet. A Prefect of Police will be appointed at Suakin, with full powers over the natives, as many of them are regularly informing Osman Digna, the rebel chief, of what is being done at Suakin. It is expected Gen. Sir Evelyn Woods' army will go to Suakin. Travelers coming down the Nile report that the news of Gen. Gordon's mission was welcomed along the river. The English sailors in charge of the central work at Suakin are on the best terms with Baker Pasha's troops. Thirteen thousand rifles were discovered in possession of the Egyptian Governor, who ought to have delivered them to Baker Pasha on the latter's arrival. The Bazaar is crowded with a mutinous rabble of soldiers, and if the enemy attacks the town the blacks, who are more mutinous than the Egyptians, will probably join the populace in the uprising against the foreigners. The enemy now possesses 4,000 Remington rifles, five Krupp guns, two Gatling guns, two rocket tubes and an abundance of ammunition.

A steamer from Massowah reports that the revolt is extending from Kassala toward the Red Sea. Everything is quiet in Abyssinia, but the natives of the territory on the frontier are declaring for the rebels, with whom the so-called friendly tribes are co-operating.

French war material for six gun-boats will be sent to Tonquin. China is negotiating with an English firm for the construction of telegraph lines to connect Canton with the places in Tonquin occupied by the Chinese.

Feb. 8th.—Spies from Sinkat report that the garrison there, having eaten up the camels, cats, and dogs, are now devouring tree-leaves. Col. Sartorius has closed up all the liquor stores at Suakin which had been infested by officers and soldiers. The British gunboats Euryalus and Decoy are in positions to shell the enemy, if necessary. A letter from Tewfik Bey dated Sinkat, Feb. 3, states that he had sent Osman Digna, the Rebel Chief, an offer to surrender. Advices from Suakin announce that a state of siege has been proclaimed. Some English Aldershot regiments have been ordered to prepare for foreign service, and more marines have been dispatched to Egypt. The ironclad Monarch and the torpedo ship Hecla, with 300 marines, have gone to Port Said.

The French Naval Division of the Levant has been ordered to extend the sphere of its action to the Red Sea and the western portion of the Gulf of Aden.

Wholesale arrests of persons merely suspected of Socialism are being made at St. Petersburg, Russia. All foreigners employed upon the railways are notified that they must be naturalized or they will be dismissed at the expiration of three months. The paper Studentsvo is out. It declares that the time has arrived for a general revolt.

Official dispatches from Tonquin announce that the rebels in the provinces of Namdinh and Sontag have been dispersed with heavy losses. The rebel leader Dedoc was wounded and took refuge in Bacninh. Between 400 and 500 rebels were slain. The gun-boat Perceval destroyed nests of pirates at Savalow and Fow Tainson, killing and wounding many. An excellent feeling prevails at Hue. The King has appointed two delegates to assist Admiral Courbet in pacifying the country. Telegraph connection between Hanoi and Paris is expected to be completed by the 15th inst.

The treaty between Portugal and England, relative to the Congo, provides for the free navigation of the river, and fixes the Portuguese boundary of the Zambesi region between Shire River and Lake Nyassa. It is not yet ratified.

Advices from St. Paul de Loanda, Africa, dated Jan. 15, state that an attack has been made upon the whites by the Muculla natives. During the fighting an explosion of gunpowder killed forty natives. The English and Portuguese gunboats landed marines.

Feb. 9.—Cetewayo, of South Africa, is again reported dead—this time from heart-disease.

It is stated that the British Government has abandoned the policy previously agreed upon of confining operations in Egypt to the vicinity of the Red Sea and the coast region, and the Ministers are said to be discussing the advisability of sending an Anglo-Indian contingent to Berber by way of Suakin. France is said to be willing to co-operate with England in pacifying the Sudan. Gen. Gordon has been spoken four days beyond Korosko.

Admiral Seymour received a summons after yesterday's Cabinet Council, in London, Eng. He was directed to be ready to set out for Egypt at an hour's notice. Admiral Hewitt is invested with the civil and military command of Suakin. He will have at his disposal within a fortnight a force of 3,000 marines. There is absolutely no hope of recovering the stragglers from the battle of Tokar.

Trouble is in preparation for England in India. The new ruler of Hyderabad, a practically independent but always friendly State, is not yet 18, and is an impassive voluptuary; the new Premier is not 20, and haughty and indiscreet, while the always turbulent nobles have already begun to fight among themselves.

An examination of the Russian Socialist arrested at Cracow showed a connection between the Austrian and Russian Socialists. During the debate in the Lower House of the Reichsrath on exceptional measures for the suppression of the Socialists, documents will be offered showing that plots existed which threatened the lives of the highest personages of the realm.

Last night an armed force attacked the police barracks and residence of Deputy Mallar, at San Juan, Argentine Republic, South America. The Governor is reported killed. Several persons were wounded. The body of Senator Gomez was found in the bush murdered. Troops quelled the disturbance.

All the more important towns and cities in Germany are about to be connected by wire direct, so that, for example, a message from Breslau to Cologne will not require to be first telegraphed to Berlin, as hitherto. Again, Frankfurt-on-the-Main will be connected by direct wire with Emden, which is the starting point for the English and American cable, so that a considerable saving of time will thus be affected. It may also be mentioned that continued experiments at the head office with dynamo-electricity as a substitute for the working force of the ordinary battery current have conclusively shown the practicability of using the former with the same success as the latter.

Feb. 10.—During the recent battle the garrison at Tokar, on hearing the Egyptian guns, made a gallant sortie from the town against the rebels, but were compelled to fight their way back. Rebels are reported within six miles of Suakin. Egyptian cavalry are reconnoitering, and the British ships are preparing to receive the rebels. The Khedive has appointed the British Admiral Hewitt commander at Suakin, at the request of the British Government. A less gloomy view is now taken of the situation at Tokar and Sinkat. It is reported that a convoy of provisions has entered Sinkat. The Turkish squadron in the Persian Gulf is shortly to be ordered to the Red Sea. The Porte is sending troops to El Hedjaz in Arabia, where emissaries of El Mahdi are fomenting disturbances. The proclamation investing Admiral Hewitt with the command at Suakin concludes: "The inhabitants need have no fear, as the British Government has promised to protect Suakin, which is now perfectly safe."

There is great excitement in Vienna, Austria, to-day. Another police officer has been shot and dangerously wounded. The assassin escaped. To-day the Parliamentary Commission approved the decree establishing a state of siege. Groups of workmen were singing noisily all day, keeping the police and troops busy preventing disturbances. Many placards were posted at Dresden, signed, "The Socialist Executive Committee," saying, "Only blood can avenge our cause."

Mount Aetna is in a state of eruption. A band of 800 Indians recently attacked and murdered most of the inhabitants of Omitlan in one of the southernmost provinces of Mexico. The stores and dwellings were plundered and the women and children subjected to brutal outrages. A large force of Mexican soldiers has been dispatched to quell the outrages. An attempt of a civil force to put down the revolutionary mob was defeated with a loss of twenty-five men killed.

An armed band of Mexicans threatens to raid the Village of Eagle Pass on the Texan side of the Rio Grande in order to get possession of two persons charged with the murder of a citizen of Saragossa on the Mexican side. The Texan authorities are preparing to resist. All the available military force will be placed at the disposal of the Sheriff of the county for that purpose.

Feb. 11.—From a number of conflicting reports received during the last few hours it has been possible to gather but few of the details of a horrible massacre of Christians which has occurred in Tonquin. It is regarded as certain that 300 or more catechists have been brutally murdered in their homes.

The Egyptian Governor-General at Suakin, Egypt, has been dismissed. Many rebels are near the town. Admiral Hewitt to-day reviewed the whole garrison and afterward inspected the filthy prison in which many persons have been kept for a long period without trial, their sole offense being sympathizing with Arabi Pasha. A French gunboat has been ordered to take the French Consul and French subjects on board if the rebels attack the town, but not to assist in the defense. The rebels advanced this evening to within a mile and a half of the town. The Mudir of Dongola telegraphs to Cairo that the Sheikhs between Sherdy and Ombukol have promised to protect the caravans and keep the route to Khartoum open. This is regarded as a good sign. El Mahdi's troops have taken Sankeit, a town near Kassola and Ravina, a small seaport north of Suakin. An English gunboat has been dispatched to shell Ravina.

Gen. Gordon telegraphs from Berber that the country is now more quiet. All telegrams agree that Gen. Gordon is in excellent spirits and confident of success, and that he has everywhere been well received. Orders are issued to ship to Egypt from England immediately 2,500,000 cartridges and a large quantity of nine-pounder shells. It is believed that the Government has empowered Admiral Hewitt, in command at Suakin, to send a column of English troops to the relief of Tokar and Sinkat, and has also proposed to supply him with a sufficient force to defend the Red Sea ports.

The removal of Baker Pasha gives additional stimulus to the already over-excited feeling in Egypt. It is said the Government is dissatisfied with Baker's report in regard to the recent fight with the rebels, in which he lost 2,000 men, and with his action in leaving Trinkitat so suddenly, and has ordered him to report at Cairo at once. Col. Hallan has been ordered to succeed Baker Pasha in command, and will leave at once for Suakin, with Maj. Piggott and Hallam, of the Egyptian army, who will reorganize the remnant of Baker's command. With the assistance of the marines recently landed they expect to be able to prevent that city from falling into the hands of the rebels. A messenger arrived at Suakin yesterday from Sinkat bearing an appeal for assistance from the beleaguered garrison at that place. A reply was returned that it was impossible at present to send any relief, as at least 1,500 additional men are needed to protect Sua-kin from being sacked by the rebels. This messenger stated in regard to Tewfik Bey's slaughter, with 400 Egyptian troops, that Tewfik had offered to surrender on condition that the lives of himself and men be spared, but the commander of the rebels declined to accept the offer.

Suspicious persons are being imprisoned at Vienna, Austria, daily, for carrying daggers, revolvers, and dynamite cartridges. The Social Democrats at Berlin are making vigorous preparations for the coming elections. The police yesterday broke up two meetings of workmen. The Government, hitherto unconcerned, is now closely watching the present movement.

Thomas Chenery, editor of the London Times since 1877, and distinguished as an Oriental scholar, is dead.

John Hutton Balfour, of London, the distinguished botanist and physician, is dead, aged 76.

Feb. 12.—A farmer was assassinated near New Ross, Ireland, while passing along the highway.

News of the fall of Sinkat reached Suakin this morning. It was brought by a friendly Arab Chief. The garrison made a sortie, and for a long time successfully repulsed the rebel attacks, but at last the attacking forces gained the advantage and completely destroyed the garrison, except a few made prisoners. The fate of the women and children is unknown. Further advices of the fall of Sinkat state that Tewfik Bey, preferring death to surrender, blew up the fortifications, spiked his guns, and made a sortie. His 600 men were all massacred. The streets of Suakin present a heart-rending appearance, being thronged with women whose weeping and wailing give unmistakable evidence of their distress and forebodings.

The British Minister at Cairo telegraphs that after the battle the rebels entered Sinkat and put every one to the sword.

The greatest activity prevails at Suez. Preparation for the dispatch of forces to Suakin for the relief of Tokar is being rapidly pushed. Contingent infantry and cavalry with guns and camels will be sent forward as soon as possible.

A dispatch from the Morning Post from Constantinople says: "While Lord Dufferin is conducting negotiations with the Porte with a view of determining the basis of the Turkish intervention in the Soudan, the Marquis de Noailles, French Ambassador, has informed the Porte that France has received assurances from England that no Turkish intervention in the Soudan would be allowed. This has naturally greatly increased the irritation of the Porte." The British Cabinet are painfully impressed. It is probable that large re-enforcements of troops and marines will be immediately dispatched to Egypt. Seven men-of-war belonging to the Channel Squadron have been ordered to Egyptian waters.

The massacre of Christians in Tonquin announced yesterday occurred in the Province of Phauhoa, between Hue and the Lower Delta, some time ago.

The Navajo Indians made an attack on some New Mexican sheep-men. They drove the men from their Ranch, threatened to murder them if they returned, and then killed their sheep.

Feb. 13th.—Lord Wolseley, Adjutant-General of the British army, telegraphed last evening to Lieut.-Gen. Stephenson, commanding the forces in Egypt, to collect a force for the relief of Tokar, if possible, and, if not, for the deliverance of the Red Sea ports. Gen. Graham will take supreme command of this force, with Col. Butler in command of the infantry and Col. Stewart in command of the cavalry. There is to be a brigade of five solid battalions in line within a few days. If necessary the garrison at Alexandria can be brought to Cairo, the former city being left under charge of the fleet. The Tenth Hussars, now in the Suez Canal homeward bound, are ordered to Suakin.

The Black Watch, the Gordon Highlanders, the Sixteenth Rifles, the Eighteenth Hussars, a battalion of Egyptian troops with English officers, and an Egyptian camel battery manned by British artillerymen, have been ordered from Cairo to Suakin, and are expected to reach there within a week. The British garrison at Alexandria will be transferred to Cairo, its place being taken by English marines.

Gen. Gordon has sent word to Col. Coetlogan directing him, if unable to hold Khartoum, to explode the forts in order to facilitate the recapture of the city. Gen. Gordon with several powerful Chiefs left Berber to-day for Khartoum. He will move slowly, as he desires to see the people along the rivers.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Feb. 7th.—The residence of Constantine Rosetti, the well-known journalist and formerly Minister of the Interior, burned, with many valuable documents bearing on the history of Roumania.

Loss by fire at St. Louis Mo., $61,000. Eau Claire, Wis., $4,500.

The Ohio River is again on the rampage, and for a thousand miles of its tortuous course is threatening destruction over the area of the bottom-lands on either side. A flood in this river is an annual occurrence, though not always disastrous. It is rare that overwhelming floods follow each other in succession, but the indications are now that the calamity of last year will speedily be repeated. In 1882 the highest stage of water was fifty-eight feet seven inches, but it did not occasion great suffering. Last February it reached sixty-six feet four inches and caused widespread disaster. The latest dispatches at this time record sixty-one feet eight inches and the river still rising. The present rise began Jan. 29, and though nine days have passed it may take several days more before the highest stage is reached.

An entire square in the centre of Hazleton, Pa., a town of 8,000 inhabitants, suddenly sank three feet this afternoon. Four buildings were wrecked. No one was hurt. The town had been undermined by the coal-diggers.

Four men were drowned at Evansburg, O., while crossing the Tuscarawas River.

At a lentown, Pa., five men were killed, and many wounded, by the falling of walls in a fire.

Feb. 8th.—Loss by fire at Middleport, N. Y., $18,000. Zanesville, O., railroad shop, $15,000. Lower Genesee Falls, N. Y., $19,000. Buckey City, O., flour-mills, $15,000.

Advices from Trinidad report that six buildings were destroyed by fire Jan. 27th. The loss is estimated at nearly $400,000; One life lost.

At nine o'clock last night the gages in the Ohio River at Cincinnati showed a depth of sixty-three feet of water, and the rise has not yet stopped. The lower part of the city is under water. Lower down the river the water is slowly receding, but at Craio a gradual advance is noted. Fifteen thousand people are homeless and helpless at Wheeling, W. Va., and great destitution is reported from Lawrenceburg, Ind., and Shawneetown and Metropolis, Ill. The Mississippi is falling rapidly at St. Louis. Two people were taken out of an island house dead, at Wheeling. Several people at this place are dying from overwork and exposure, and dozens are sick. Five sixth of the manufacturing establishments, including all the mills but one, are under water; and the damage to this place it is thought will exceed $2,000,000. At Benwood, a town of about 3,000 inhabitants, but six houses remain out of water. Belfre O., is under water, and about three-fourths of Marietta. Two men were drowned near Wheeling, while trying to secure people from the upper stories of their houses. Wellsburg, W. Va., is half washed away, and the people are on the hillside, without food or shelter.

At Cincinnati, O., the greatest flood since the city was founded, almost a hundred years, is threatened. The flood touches the Pearl Street Market House, and on Vine street reaches half way from Second to Pearl street. The Mill Creek bottom is a great lake a mile and a half wide and reaching back five miles to the Chester Park race track and Spring Grove Cemetery. Cumminsville is more than half under water, and the avenue is impassable. All the railway tracks in the West End except the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton are under water, and the flood is creeping into the stock yards along the river front from Columbia to the South Side, a distance of nine miles. There is a strip from one to five squares wide submerged. The buildings inundated are mostly factories, warehouses, and the houses of industrious mechanics. On the Kentucky side of the river there is a repetition of the desolate scenes of last winter. The lower streets of Covington are under water. Newport is half submerged, and Bellevue and Dayton inundated back to the bluffs. Two thousand people housed and fed in school houses. One man was drowned. The country between Louisville and Evansville is devastated. At Lawrenceburg it is from one to five miles to dry land in any direction. At Shawneetown, Ill., the flood is again upon the town, and many of the people are homeless. At Coshocton, O., four men were drowned. At this place the flood is higher than ever before known. All the tributaries of the Ohio are on the rampage, and flooding the country around them. The river is rising at Little Rock, Arkansas.

At Ripley O., many houses have been swept away, and many people are homeless.

Feb. 9th.—Loss by fire at Omaha, Neb., $55,000. Sabina O., $20,000.

Reports from the flooded towns along the Ohio River continue to be of the most gloomy character. At Cincinnati it is thought the river will rise beyond the record of 1832, if it does not exceed the great flood of last year. Wheeling, W. Va., is afflicted in no ordinary manner by both fire and water. The inhabitants in the suburbs display great antipathy to the relief-boats, and have fired into several steamers on the ground that the waves made by them rock the houses still standing. At Pittsburg the trouble appears to be over. Metropolis and Shawneetown, Ill., send reports of dire distress. At midnight the river was slowly rising at Louisville and Cairo.

Feb. 10th.—The principal business blocks at Helena, Ark., were burned. Loss by fire at Wolcott, N. Y., $100,000. Appleton, Wis., $3,000. Bloomington, Ill., $6,000.

The steamer Nottingham, from London for N. Y., which sailed Jan. 19th, was struck by an iceberg Feb. 2. Two large holes were made in the side, and it required the utmost exertions of the crew to keep her afloat until Feb. 5th, when the steamer State of Nebraska came alongside and took them off. They were landed in New York yesterday. The 3d of February they signaled a large steamer, which, however, paid no attention to them. The crew numbered ninety-two.

It rained the greater part this afternoon along the whole length of the Ohio Valley, and the river is still rising. The rain at several points came down in torrents. It is the greatest flood of the century in the Ohio. The trains from Columbus to Cincinnati, ran a distance of two miles through three feet of water. The water to-day on both sides of the embankment sustaining the tracks of the Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore Road in Millcreek Valley so softened the earth as to cause two slides, leaving the track unsupported. This compels trains to enter Cincinnati on the Cincinnati Hamilton and Dayton track at the junction seven miles from Cincinnati. The Bee-Line trains will be compelled to make their terminus at the stock-yards, about three miles from the regular depot. The Cincinnati, Washington & Baltimore Road has been opened through to Parkersburg and through trains will be resumed. Lamps have been placed on the telegraph poles in the inundated district, and every boat is required to carry lights. That part of the city is therefore much better lighted than the streets that have not been submerged. Innumerable boats of all descriptions are being paddled about. The police patrol the inundated districts in skiffs. People who had moved to the second stories of their houses were to-day deserting them, carrying to dry land such of value as they could.

Almost the entire population of Wheeling has been at work either in taking the preliminary steps towards restoring their ruined homes or in ministering to the necessities of thousands of sufferers. Many business houses have been open and those who have money are supplying immediate wants. There were no services at the churches, they being filled with the homeless or occupied for relief purposes. The pictures of distress, especially in the southern portion of the city, would draw tears from the eyes of a sphinx.

About noon a bottle was found floating in the river opposite the lower end of town. In it was a visiting card bearing the name of Anne Clark. On it were these words in pencil: "We are from the island, drowning. Mollie Sage, Minnie Hauk, and Birne Rabbit are gone. Farewell friends." There was no date. The weather is turning cold and a heavy rain is falling, insuring great suffering among hundreds of thinly-clad women and children. The Ohio River Railroad is believed to be entirely ruined. Section after section of trestle work, bridges, and cars were washed away.

The lower part of Metropolis, Ill., is submerged. Fulton, Ind., and Milton, Ky., are completely submerged and deserted. The water is still rising, and is at the door of the Aurora National Bank, at Aurora, Ind. Only one drug store remains out of water.

Feb. 11th.—At Kharkof, Russia, six warehouses in the so-called Moscow Bazar were destroyed by fire. There is little hope of saving the remainder of the bazar. The loss is enormous.

The Clepington Waste-Works at Dundee, Scotland, were burned Yesterday morning. Four firemen were killed.

Severe gales and snow-storms are prevailing in Scotland and North Wales.

Two prisoners were roasted alive in the jail at Wausau, Wis., which burned yesterday morning. The fire is believed to have been started by one of the victims, as the flames were first discovered in his cell, but they spread so rapidly that the two convicts could not be rescued. Loss by fire at West Newbury, Mass., $50,000. Erie, Pa., $25,000. Keokuk, Ia., $3,000.

The Ohio River at Cincinnati is now higher by many inches than was ever before known since authentic records have been kept, and it is still rising. The gage is now on its way toward sixty-eight feet. The damage, however, has not been more than one-tenth as great as that of last year, owing to precautions taken in time. The greatest loss is from the interruption to business. At Wheeling the river is falling, but terrible distress prevails in the vicinity, and several cases of starvation have been reported. Between Louisville and Evansville miles upon miles of farming lands are submerged, but even here the damage has been lessened by removing the corn from the low lands. The Lower Mississippi is rising.

The following table shows the highest stage of water at Cincinnati each year since 1858, and also in 1832 and 1847:

At five o'clock this afternoon the water had reached Pearl street, Cincinnati, from the Central avenue to Broadway. The East and West End street cars ran only to the Broadway hill. The Cincinnati approach of the Newport Bridge was deep under water. The new Little Miami passenger station was surrounded and the Little Miami and Louisville & Nashville freight houses were inundated. The fires in the water works had been put out, and for a distance of five miles along the river bank, through Fulton, Pendleton, Columbia, and the suburbs on the Little Miami bottom the water had risen in many places to the second floors of the buildings. A thousand dwellings of the better class in the West End, which no previous flood had reached, are now likely to be invaded. The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad, the highest railway track entering the city, was under water, but the trains from half a dozen roads less fortunately situated were still coming into the city over that track.

Cumminsville is one great lake, and the back water has surrounded the beautiful Spring Grove Cemetery, which is six miles from the Ohio River. In Covington the water works have failed and there has been no gas for three days. All buildings below Third and some points below Fourth, west of Madison street are flooded. In Newport, which contains a population of 20,000, there are 6,000 people entirely homeless and a great many more living in the second stories of their houses. Many of the inundated buildings are toppling from their foundations, and people are being removed in boats from the upper floors. In Bellevue and Dayton the situation grows worse every hour. Many frame buildings have been anchored with ropes. Buildings are shaken by the waves from passing tow-boats, and the people are threatening to shoot into boats that do not keep in midstream. There are buildings with nothing but their roofs out of water. The village of California is cut off from all communication with the outside world. The town hall is full of people. The supplies of provisions are nearly exhausted.

Since last Wednesday morning the population of Wheeling, W. Va., has regarded with intense excitement the work of destruction that has been going on. Hundreds of men have been compelled to stand by and see their property destroyed without being able to interfere. They have in numberless cases lost the accumulations of a lifetime, and are left far advanced toward the evening of life in absolute want. Men who a week ago were the owners of handsome residences and could gratify almost every wish now know not where to lay their heads or how to provide food and clothing for their hungry and shivering families. The City of Wheeling has suffered greater loss in the last six days than during the entire 100 years of its existence combined. Nothing like it has ever been dreamed of by its people, much less experienced, and years will not be sufficient to efface the last trace of this great calamity. The losses are as follows: Wheeling—Aggregate loss to mills, $100,000; business men, $325,000; families, Fourth Ward, $50,000; Fifth Ward, $80,000; Sixth Ward, $125,000; Seventh Ward (the island), $700,000; Eighth Ward, $500,000; total city, $1,880,000. To this must be added Martin's Ferry, $200,000; Fulton, $100,000; Benwood, $100,000; Bridgeport, $75,000; and Bellaire, $250,000; making a grand total of $2,605,000 within five miles of the city-hall. There is a great amount of suffering, and many children have died from hunger and exposure.

The estimate loss at Parkersburg is $1,000,000.

The Baltimore & Ohio freight depot is broken to pieces, and the iron bridge over the Kanawha is going out. The Ohio River Railroad has its engines and several gondolas in the river. The Parkersburg Mill Company has lost $30,000 in grain.

In Belfre forty-three houses have been swept away, also street pumps, and the flour and planing mills.

Williamstown and Harmar, twelve miles above are entirely submerged.

There is great distress at Marietta. Three-fourths of the town is under water. The grain elevator is burst. The railroad and county bridges over the Muskingum are both swept away and private residences unnumbered. Each of the towns mentioned has organized relief committees. Marietta and Harmar are suffering from famine.

The country surrounding Evansville, Ind., is inundated. The water in many of the houses across the river and thence to within two or three miles east of Henderson is almost up to the second-story windows.

The water is steadily approaching last year's flood limit at Louisville, Ky. Stock, fences and bridges have been swept away near Hillsboro, Ill.

All of Newberg, parts of Rockport and Cannelton, all of Tell city and Troy, and the greater parts of Derby, Leavenworth, Manckport, and New Amsterdam, Ind., and of Lewisport, Cloverport, Hawesville, and Brandonburg, Ky., are under the flood. There is great suffering already at all these towns and large loss of property. Many farms are completely covered, and much stock, farm implements, and produce lost.

There is a general suspension of work throughout the mining region. Rain and melting snow have submerged the workings. Large forces are endeavoring to dam the mountain streams. In some mines there is from thirty to forty feet of water.

The glass-works at Wellsburg, W. Va., were damaged $15,000 by the flood.

Feb. 12th.—At St. Louis, Mo., a river steamer was destroyed by fire, loss $95,000. The military buildings at Fort Sully, Dak., are on fire. Loss by fire at North Bennington, Vt., paper mill, $55,000. Ludington, Mich., $6,000. Leon, Ia., Leeson's grain elevator, $10,000. Troy, N. Y., paper mill, $15,000. Oneida, N. Y., $50,000. Toronto, Ont., soap works, $50,000.

There was a violent earthquake at Bittlis, Asiatic Turkey. A number of buildings were destroyed. A tornado of great fury struck Waco, and other Texas towns, and passed over a large part of Arkansas, doing immense damage.

At 9 o'clock to-night the river at Cincinnati had risen to sixty-eight feet ten inches. This is two feet and a half higher than the previously unprecedented flood of 1883. No trains except those on the Northern Narrow-Gage come nearer their depots than Chester Park, which is seven miles from the post office and the principal hotels. A visit to one of the school-houses to-night where the homeless are lodged showed that 400 people were lying on the floors of ten rooms. Three rooms were devoted to white families, two to colored people, and five to white men. They lay in some of the rooms so close together it would have been difficult to walk across the floor without stepping on somebody. Joseph Prung and George Wirtz were drowned in Mill Creek to-night by falling from a boat. At midnight the water reached sixty-nine feet—a rise of an inch and three-quarters in two hours.

At Louisville, Ky., all previous records have been surpassed. Over four thousand people have been driven to the upper stories of their houses. Twenty-six houses have been wrecked at Ripley, O. More than two thirds of the town is under water.

During a rain-storm which swept over Evansville, Ind., this afternoon about 4 o'clock, lasting an hour, thirteen persons were drowned. They were the occupants of three skiffs, which were approaching the city from the Kentucky side.

The condition of things in Newport, Ky., is growing still more frightful. The worst fears about damage to the foundations of buildings are being realized. To-day a fine residence, built last year at a cost of $10,000, toppled over and is a complete mass of ruins. Fortunately, the family had removed before the crash. Many more buildings are in danger, and it is feared this afternoon and to-night may bring a calamity of a worse nature. Many people are in houses unable to get away, and must be lost if the houses fall.

At Buffalo half the town was submerged, but the people as a general thing are well supplied with food. At Leon Place 200 people are suffering for food and clothing. At Point Pleasant, a town of 3,000 people, there is not a foot of ground which is not six feet under water. Store-houses, goods, dwellings—in fact, all kinds of houses—are hid from the second story by water. Fully 100 houses have been upset and washed away. People are living on the decks of barges, in the courthouse—in fact, wherever they can get shelter. Many have gone to the hills for safety. The whole lower part of the Kanawha River Valley is overflowed, and in many places the river is fully three to five miles wide. The city has sent provisions to Guyandotte on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway for flood sufferers. The people will have to be fed for fully eight days yet. The people are in a deplorable condition. Many farmers have lost all their corn, wheat, hay, and oats, and also some stock, along the Kanawha River, and help is needed forthwith. Twelve houses have been swept away at Lawrenceburg, Ind. The levee broke Wednesday night, inundating the city and leaving the poorer of the people to care for themselves, and the demand arises stronger and stronger for food.

Several salt furnaces at Pomeroy, Ohio, and in the neighboring towns were completely wrecked and others are badly damaged. Thousands of barrels of salt were destroyed. The coal mines at Minersville, Syracuse and Hartford City, neighboring villages, are flooded, and it will require months of time and large expense to free them from the water. In the meantime many miners will be obliged to seek employment elsewhere. The Hartford City Coal & Salt Company estimate their damages at $100,000. The Syracuse Coal & Salt Company have suffered nearly as badly. At Racine, nine miles above Pomeroy, one hundred and five houses are moved from their foundations, and a number have floated away. A similar condition of affairs exists all along the river between here and Parkersburg. Middleport, two miles below Pomeroy, is also under water. Many merchants there, not anticipating the unprecedented rise, left their goods in their stores, awoke Saturday morning to find them under water.

The greater portion of Uniontown, Ky., is submerged and communication is held by skiffs only. Caseyville is badly flooded. The loss of property is very great. Smithland, Ky., will be entirely under water in the next forty-eight hours, while New Liberty, opposite, is overflowed and almost deserted by the inhabitants, a few remaining as a guard.

One man was drowned at Wheeling, W. Va. The water is slowly approaching the danger-line at Memphis, Tenn. The Arkansas River is rising and threatening destruction to some of the towns on its banks. Nineteen feet of water are now submerging the lower districts of the two divisions of Pittsburg, Pa., and numerous cases of destitution are reported.

Feb. 13.—Seven persons were drowned at Dundee, Scotland, Tuesday. They were pleasure seekers.

All efforts to keep the water out of Shawneetown, Ill., have failed, the Ohio having broken through the south levee. The water now stands from five to fifteen feet deep in the street. The situation at Lawrenceburg, Ind., is even worse than before. Two hundred houses have been destroyed, and the people are deserting their flooded homes. At Cincinnati the gages showed a depth of seventy feet four inches at 10 o'clock last night, four feet higher than last year. At New Martinsville, W. Va., the opposition to the steamers is so great that the people have mounted a cannon and fired into every passing boat. Measures for the relief of the sufferers are being instituted all over the country. The War Department is distributing money by telegraph. The Ohio Legislature has appropriated $200,000 and the Kentucky Legislature $25,000. This will all be needed, as some of the smaller towns have been literally swept out of existence.

Cincinnati has a river front of nine miles, and extends five miles back along both banks of Mill Creek. There is, therefore a flooded district of nineteen miles in length. The width varies from one square in Columbia and Sedamsville, where the hills rise abruptly, to a mile in the Mill Creek bottoms and Cumminsville. At one o'clock, February 14, the water at Cincinnati was seventy feet seven and a half inches. The water in the afternoon of the thirteenth, almost touched the Smith street bridge. The roofs were all that could be seen of the freight cars which were left standing in the Grand Central Passenger Depot. A train of cars standing on a track outside was entirely covered, and their position could only be detected by a row of iron wheels on the top of the break-rods. In the West End the water had reached such a height as to cause the greatest consternation. People on every street were moving out, some of them from fright and others evidently none too soon. The high ground in Lincoln Park, which had formed an island, gradually grew smaller until it was a spot no larger than the top of a flour barrel.

Cumminsville is two-thirds under water. People who were staying in the second stories of their houses were to-day taken out with some of their goods on rafts. Relief-boats rowed through the flooded streets. The streets of Cumminsville are full of floating frames, which is all there is left of the hot-houses of the gardeners. Up Mill Creek bottom the water is all around Spring Grove Cemetery, and the lower portions of the cemetery are submerged. Covington is entirely surrounded by water. In Newport thirteen houses floated off during the night, and many others were lifted from their foundations. This morning nine thousand people were fed.

The meagre news from points along the Ohio Valley, both above and below, is of the saddest nature. The larger towns, which are strongly built, are reporting great devastation and suffering, but there are dozens of little towns of from 200 to 500 inhabitants, built upon the low sandy bottom of the Ohio, which are entirely cut off from the outside world, which must be in a most direful situation, having no warning of the continued rise above, and many lives may have been lost of which no report has been made. From some of those towns the residents are known to have escaped to the hills. Their houses are small and most of them frames, and many of them must have broken to pieces and floated away. Old river Captains say that when the water subsides some of these towns, it will be found, have been entirely swept away. How the people of such towns are to find homes and become re-established in business is one of the serious problems the flood is going to leave behind it.

The beautiful valley from Wheeling W. Va., to Marietta, O., is a picture of desolation and ruin. The flood has not subsided, and heavy local rains give rise to strong fears of another swell. The small towns have suffered most. New Martinsville, W. Virginia, is a sickening sight. The town is abandoned, and people are camped on the hill side.

The town of Cochransville is wholly demolished. Only three houses remain intact. The unhappy people are clustered like cattle on the hill-tops, worn, weak, and lacking food. All the beautiful homes are swept away and the tree-tops are crowded with furniture, houses, and barns. Three hundred houses with chimneys passed Marietta in a single day. The situation is deplorable. Want increases as the water falls. Over 2,000 people call daily on the relief committees for food. Starvation stares thousands in the face unless aid is had from abroad. No one has yet responded to calls. The farmers are heavy losers, and can not get to the city with products. The loss in the county is estimated at $2,500,000.

Every house but one in Milton, Ky., is submerged. Ironton, Ohio, is two-thirds under water. More than half the people are homeless and out of food. Greenup, Ky., is completely submerged. There is great suffering among the poor.

Heavy rains and floods are prevailing in Indian Territory; washouts are numerous, and trains greatly delayed. Some of the low lands along White River, Arkansas, are overflowed.

HENRY HALLIDAY.

IN MEMORIAM.

We mourn the loss of one most dear,—
As husband, father, brother, friend;
One of the noblest in his sphere,
Nor would we check the rising tear,
Or bid our silent grief to end.

We miss his noble, manly form;
His very footsteps cheered our hearts;
We miss his mien so mild and calm—
However great the threaten'g storm,
His presence comfort did impart.

We miss him from his quiet home,
We miss him from his vacant chair;
Here did his manly virtues bloom,
And shed abroad a rich perfume—
The fairest flowers of the fair.

We miss him in the walks of life,
In manhood's greatness there he stood,
Erect amid the battle's strife,
Contending for eternal life,
His manly voice rang out for God.

We miss him in the house of God,
His cheering smile, his beaming eye,
Holding aloft the iron rod,
To point the path the Savior trod—
The path that leads to bliss on high.

We miss his earnest, heartfelt prayer,
In meekness at the mercy seat.
Our wants were all presented there,
He only sought with us a share,
His joy with ours was all complete.

We miss him when our feet have strayed,
To dark forbidden paths of sin;
How tenderly our feet he'd lead
From sin's dark, dank, and loathsome shade,
To virtue's path so pure and clean.

We miss him, but we do not mourn
As those who have no hope in God;
Our hearts anticipate that morn,
When Christ in glory shall return,
To crown us kings and priests to God.

Then shall we meet to part no more,
(Where sin and woe can not invade),
Our brother who has gone before,
Upon that bright and blissful shore,
In joys that never, never fade.

THOUGHTS ON THE OFFICE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

THE HOLY SPIRIT IS GIVEN FOR A WITNESS.

It witnessed to John the Baptist the Savior of the world. He said he was told that on whomsoever he should see the Spirit descend, the same was he. It witnessed for Paul and the Saints, through Agabus, that bonds awaited him at Jerusalem, inasmuch that those who heard the prophecy, wept, and Paul said, "Why weep ye? Why grieve ye my heart?" &c. But it was not new to him, for he said that the Holy Spirit witnessed in every city, (I suppose there were churches at these places), that bonds awaited him at Jerusalem: It witnessed for Peter and the six brethren that went with him to Cornelius, and for the brethren also who afterward accused him of teaching that the Gentiles had a right to the Gospel; and they glorified God, and said, "Then hath God granted unto the Gentiles repentance unto life, and they ceased to accuse Peter." It witnessed for the twelve all things the Master had said unto them, and they bore witness to the world of the matter. It bore witness to the spirits of the disciples, that they were the children of God, and they testified to the same.

THE HOLY SPIRIT IS AN INSTRUCTOR.

God gave it for an instructor to the children of Israel.—Neh. 9:20. It instructed the Apostles, not only by bringing all things that Jesus had said to them to their remembrance, but also by showing them things to come. It instructs the Saints, through certain prophets who had come down from Jerusalem, to separate Paul and Barnabas unto the work whereunto the Lord said he had called them; and they accordingly laid hands on them [separated them, I suppose ordained them] and sent them away; and they went preaching the gospel. It instructed the father and mother of the forerunner of Christ, that they must name the prophet John; and they accordingly did so, rather than after his father, as the relatives wished them to do. It instructed Joseph and Mary to flee into Egypt, that Herod sought the young child's life; and when Herod was dead, to return home, but by another way, lest the son of Herod (who reigned in his stead) should destroy the child.

THE HOLY SPIRIT IS THE COMFORTER.

It comforts the children of the kingdom in the place of Jesus. He said: "If I go not away, the comforter will not come; but if I go away, I will send you another comforter. He shall abide with you forever." He will guide you into all truth. He will take of the things of the father, and show them unto you."

We are told that "when man sleepeth, God puts his spirit upon him;" and I suppose the man would dream something comforting. Job tells us, "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." We are told that he will withhold no good thing, but will reveal his "secrets to his servants, the prophets," which would certainly be comforting to them. But we are told, that "the world can not receive this comfortor, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him;" and further, that "No man knoweth the things of God save by the Spirit of God which is in him; even as no man knoweth the things of man save by the spirit of man which is in him." It comforts by giving strength, helping our infirmities. Rom. 8:26.

It is the comforter, because it is the means by which God dwells with his people. "Ye are builded together for an habitation of God through the spirit. Know ye not that your body is the temple of God? If any man defile the temple, him will God destroy." It comforts the children of God by reproving unrighteousness, and approving righteousness. And now, since we have "tasted (realized) the good word of God and the powers of the world to come," since we have been made partakers and to know the peacable things of the kingdom, we can rejoice together with those of old, having awakened within us that desire and confident expectation—hope, "which is an anchor to the soul which reaches to that within the veil, whither the forerunner hath gone." Having received of these precious jewels, if we keep them bright, the great Giver will give more, and we will not forget, (having first known), "that we were purged from our old sins; but by retaining this Spirit, working with us," we have confidence, yea, we know, that there is a world to come. Hence we believe in a resurrection

"Though our bodies go down to the tomb, Since Jesus has lain there, we dread not its gloom."

Having had these things committed to us in earthen vessels, we can confidently believe in the fourth and last work of the spirit,

TO QUICKEN OR MAKE ALIVE.

John 6:63: "The spirit quickeneth, but the flesh profiteth nothing." 2 Cor. 3:6: "The spirit gives life, but the letter killeth." 1 Peter 3:18: "Christ was put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit. If the spirit of him that raised up Christ from the dead dwell in you, he will also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you." If we had not this spirit-work, we might not believe in a world to come, or a resurrection to a new life. But thanks be to the Giver, "For the promise is to you and to your children, and to all them [Gentiles] that are afar off, even to as many as the Lord our God shall call." "To all who will believe in the testimony which God hath given of his son, in that he hath raised him from the dead, and is therefore with him able to give us all things." To those who will thus have faith and repent—"break off their sins by righteousness, and their iniquities by turning to the Lord," and being baptized in his name, (by his authority), and then accepting the laying on of hands, as others have and do, they shall receive of this Spirit-work, and thus have the seal of their adoption into the household of faith; and withal, have the anchor, which is the same that others of olden times had, which is both sure and steadfast.

Since man is a two fold being—an inward and an outward man, a natural and a spiritual man, as we are told in the Scriptures of many who, when they died, it was said that they yielded up, or gave up the ghost (spirit). Our Savior on the cross, Ananias and Sapphira. And when one was supposed to be dead, one said, "He is not dead, his spirit is yet in him"—had not gone out. Paul said he "knew a man, whether in the body or out of the body he knew not." These scriptures show the necessity of a two fold baptism in order to an application to the person as a whole or complete being. Such as the following: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."

In this expression, if Jesus spoke of water baptism, he also spoke of Spirit baptism. We find that those who had been prepared by the baptism of water by John, (he told them of one who was coming after him, who would baptize them with the Holy Ghost (Spirit), Jesus told to go and tarry at Jerusalem, till they were indued with this power from on high; and they seemed to understand the doctrine of John and the Master better than some do to-day, who think that the kingdom had been organized prior to this; for they say to him, "Lord, wilt thou at this time [that is when they receive of the power] restore the kingdom to Israel?" But following—they went and tarried, and received this operation of the Spirit; and then we begin to read of a church, and of additions to it. And after this, in teaching others they testify that God had "translated them from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear son, by his Spirit." This is in keeping with the teachings of John and the Master, that without it they did not, nor could not get in there. Where is the understanding man that will teach other, notwithstanding all seeming teaching of things as though they were, when they were not. But now, as it appears that this Spirit work is of such great moment, such lasting good; and since it has been poured from the heavens upon those who had been prepared for its reception by the one who was "to prepare and make ready a people for the Lord," and since it is to abide with the church forever, the question arises more particularly as to the how that others received and may receive it since it was poured from the heavens. "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to that word, it is because there is no light in them."

In the primitive church we find there were those who had authority, and who did administer the Spirit in some way. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every truth be established." Paul tells us, speaking of himself and Timothy, "God hath made us able ministers, not of the letter (or law) only, but of the Spirit." Again it is stated: "He that ministereth the Spirit among you, doth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith."

We know what it is to administer the wine, the bread, and baptism. So likewise we may know what is meant by administering the Spirit. For it follows that when Phillip preached at Samaria, (whose calling it seems was more particularly to serve tables), "and when they believed Phillip, preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, they were baptized, both men and women, which, when the saints at Jerusalem heard, they sent unto them Peter and John, who, when they came down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost; and when they had laid their hands on them, the Holy Ghost came on them, and they spake with tongues and prophesied." Annanias coming to Paul, or Saul, and placing his hands on him said, "The Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that [mark this] you might receive your sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost." This was before Paul had been Baptized, or born of water; and perhaps this is how his spiritual, or real man, was born out of [not at] due time, or the time expected. Another translation of Paul's language reads: "I am as one coming to an untimely birth." Webster says untimely means, "Before the time." Again, Paul passing through the upper coast, came to Ephesus, and finding certain disciples, said to them, have you received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. And Paul said, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism." But when he referred them to the teaching of John in this matter, "they were baptized in the name [by the authority] of Jesus Christ; and when Paul had laid his hands on them, they received the Holy Ghost." We see by these witnesses, that after they had been translated into the kingdom, or in other words, had become an organized body, or church, of which Jesus was the head, they did not only administer in the name of Jesus the water, but also the Spirit baptism.

Let me exhort those who have this treasure in earthen vessels, to seek to keep in it and retain it; and thus earnestly contend for the doctrine once delivered to the saints, for in so doing we are told they shall have both the Father and the Son. And let those who have not received it, earnestly seek to do so by believing and obeying the doctrine as found plainly taught in the New Testament Scriptures; and I give them my testimony, that they will do so to their own satisfaction. But those who disbelieve in this working power, to comfort and strengthen the followers of Jesus while in the flesh, let me ask, Have you the hope, which is an anchor to the soul, that this Holy Spirit will do the office work last alluded to in this article, viz., quicken and raise you from the dead? If we doubt its work among the children of men in this life, how can we with confidence look for it to perform the all-important work of the resurrection from the dead? If we have no personal evidence of our own, I fear that our confidence would be very, very weak indeed. May the good Master stir us up and help us all, to Believe his word, and trust his grace,

And of these blessings have a foretaste.

'Tis a lamp to our path, and a guide to our feet,

And that we receive, is our drink and our meat.

Your brother and friend in the bonds of the gospel, and in the hope of the first resurrection,

HORN OF SALVATION.

"The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower." Thus did the sweet singer of Israel trill upon his "harp of a thousand strings," to the attracted hosts, that were delighted, not only with the cadence of his harpings, but also that he was a man after God's own heart. So may we all sing, if we will but abide in the law granted as a light to our path and a lamp to our feet. Profession by the mouth will be empty worship, unless we shall exhibit by a consistent walk and conversation, that we are cheerfully bearing the cross, and denying the lusts, wishes, desires of the flesh. And that God may in very deed be our "horn of salvation," it will not only be necessary that our minds become a storehouse of useful knowledge, but that we should bestir ourselves in creating opportunities for making known unto others the value of understanding the "law of life," not more so of the spirit than the body. For the body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, and the unchangeable rule is that the Spirit will not abide in unholy temples.

A very important question obtrudes itself for our investigation; and it would be profitable for us to call a halt in our gliding down the stream of life, and carefully examine whether we are in any wise affected by the inspirational statement, "When I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation." Is it possible that we should journey on in a work-a-day style, until at the foot of the hill of time, we unload this house of flesh, that the spirit may pass over the river of death into a land of peace and plenty, without ever considering or understanding the "common salvation," or the possession of the knowledge that God is "my horn of salvation."

To prompt some in the attempt to make their bodies fit dwelling places for the Holy Spirit, is the moving impulse of my heart. The wise man chimes in the solemn warning, that "pride goeth before a fall." Then whatever is pride, or causes us to be proud in heart, worketh against our ultimate triumph over the world, the flesh and the devil, and may subject us to the power of death, hell and the grave; at least till the reign of peace be past, in which event misery would love company in chanting the doleful confession, "the harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Some, however, may be more successful in the conflict, and boast with much satisfaction, in proclaiming, "We have passed through many heavy trials," and won the race mid thorns, even been compelled to crawl through the needle's eye, and here we are saved as by the "skin of our teeth;" and notwithstanding "if any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss, but he himself may be saved; yet so as by fire;" for "I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of the Lord," etc.

Should some persons make themselves objects of notice on account of some peculiar habit or manner of living, or dress, that would be no excuse for me to become also eccentric, or to float to the other extreme, and cause a contrast that would set agog the tongues of those that delight in spreading the actions of everybody. Let there be a desire in all, to fill the station God hath appointed unto them.

In pointing out the stumbling stones that so thickly lie in the way, we would show our love for the truth by making all statements in kindness and plainness, knowing that neither the "belly-worshippers and broadcloth, nor flashy, dry-goods professors, are manifesting that simplicity and meekness found with the babe in the manger; and so characteristic of all his revelations to man, when he speaks concerning the care, purity and adornments of the body." One matter-of-fact man, in writing upon the prevailing weakness and sin of professors, uses the following very sensible language:

"Deal wisely, yet emphatically, with the sins of Israel. Bring the sword of the Spirit down with energy on the pride and carnality of the church, and allow no man's cud to go untouched, no matter how far back it may lie in his cheek, or how firmly he may clench it between his teeth. Pipes and cut—and—dry ditto."

Dr. Joseph Angus gives us another nut to crack, in the following:

"The income of all our missionary societies does not equal a hundredth part of the sum raised in Great Britain by taxation, nor does it amount to a ten thousandth part of the sum annually spent on tobacco, or a hundred thousandth part of the cost to the kingdom of intoxicating drinks."

Helen Gilpin, missionary to Madagascar, writes to the National Temperance Advocate, July, 1877:

"The Queen of Madagascar forbids the drinking and the sale of intoxicating spirits; but these are forced into the land to a fearful extent, by the nations of England, France and America. The present state of the coast of Madagascar, in consequence of the quantity of spirits brought into the country, is most deplorable—much worse than when the people were in heathen darkness. If Christian nations would do what is right in the matter, we should have no need of a temperance movement on the Island of Madagascar."

Did the Christian nations do right, then the vision "of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters; with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication," would be a failure. Yet another faithful witness is found in Canon Wilberforce, in his sermon at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Eng., 1877, upon the use and sale of intoxicating drink. "Was there ever a time when charity was more eagerly solicited, when pauperism was more appallingly rampant? And yet, amidst all this want and suffering, this nation is annually pouring out a perfect pyramid of gold upon a mere indulgence—an enormous sum of money, which outstrips all the other national expenses. One hundred and fifty million pounds sterling are wasted—aye, ten thousand times worse than wasted—in intoxicating drinks; a sum which is sixty million pounds sterling in excess of our whole national revenue, and one sixth of our national debt—a sum which means more than twenty pounds sterling spent in intoxicating drinks upon an average by every family in the kingdom; and thus, mark you, all the legitimate trades of this country, except one, are depressed; and toil-worn men and women, groan under the burden of their local taxation. This blighting curse is not only robbing men of money, but is robbing Jesus of the souls he loves. It is desolating our churches, it is swelling infidelity and sin, it is originating, strengthening, and fostering prostitution and Sabbath-breaking. Let me tell you that a census which was taken not long since in a teeming London parish upon a Sunday night shows that eighteen thousand persons were found in various places of worship, but not less than twenty thousand were found in the drink-shops and gin palaces of the same parish on that single night—a clear gain of something like two thousand for the devil—and it is simply notorious that wherever the English name and English flag are borne by British enterprise and British commerce, there rises up the wail, which follows in the track of British intemperance. A native prince of high rank in India, in a published speech delivered in this metropolis, has openly said: 'The helpless widows of India are uttering their curses against the British Government, for having introduced this thing into their midst; and the cry of India is echoed back to us from the far, far West. 'What do you preach,' asked a North American Indian not long since of a missionary. 'Christ,' was the answer. 'Then away with you,' he said; 'we don't want Christ. We were once a powerful nation, and our enemies feared us, and our wigwams were wealthy, and our young men were brave; but the white man came, and he preached Christ to us, and he brought the accursed fire-water with him, and now our wigwams are poor, our glory is gone—we do not want Christ.'

While this tidal-wave of intemperance, with all of its concomitant evils, is swarming in the foot-prints of Christian civilization, and is arousing the attention of those who stand in the van of all good and noble workers, who labor so faithfully to drive hence every wrong and sin that blights and poisons the spirit, and corrupts and sows the seed of sickness and death in the body, are we up and prepared, with our armor on, and ready to stand in the conflict as true and unflinching representatives of the "Power of God," giving all an evidence by a life untarnished, that we have surely found shelter in the "fortress" and "high tower," and then in the same spirit of the good shepherd let us brave the storm of evil and sin, in search of those who have not yet been able to read their titles clear; and have not obtained the grace and pardon from the "horn of salvation;" and in so doing we shall not only save ourselves, but also be a means of saving others.

The blue-eyed missionary writes, that "this is a generation of thinkers." Permit me to suggest that he drops the "h" from the word "thinkers," and he will find one of the prolific causes of hindrance to the spread of the saving principles of the "horn of salvation." For there are some so righteous, that like the "dog in the manger;" they will neither eat the hay nor let the ox eat it, or as Jesus said of the Pharisees, "For ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in." As war has been declared against us, "war to the knife, and the knife to the hilt," I say I am glad of it, and I earnestly pray that no quarters shall be granted; that the music of the contest may resound from the rock-ribbed shores of Maine, to the golden gates of California, and that it shall be of such an attractive nature, that every man "in the army of the Lord," shall answer the roll call, not in dress-parade uniform, but in the power and spirit of the restored gospel, willing to bear his part in the fight unto victory," against all that are opposed to the "horn of salvation."

THOUGHTS OF A VISION.

BEING much troubled last Spring concerning Mr. Lay's work, I went from time to time in the lonely solitude of the woods, where I prayed long and earnestly that God would reveal to me the truth in regard to this man, (Mr. Lay), and if he was a false prophet he should prevent him from deluding the people. I also prayed to God that he should send his beloved Son to me. I spent hours thus pleading to God that he would grant my long desired wish; for I have from boyhood desired to see Christ personally. And I now believe fully that this can transpire, if we possess a full faith that there really is a personal Christ; and if we have virtue enough to keep and obey his commandments, and ask God without wavering, we will see Christ face to face.

I now make known to the world that I have seen Christ, not with this body I now possess, but with another body. This I suppose will be a perplexity to most of my readers, but as it can be proven by the Scriptures that Christ was, and had a body before he was born of Mary his mother; and further, as we are the image of God, and were formed by him in the spirit, before the world was, so it should not be a perplexity to any one if I say that I was in another body.

I now will attempt to place before my readers the circumstances whereby I saw Christ, and my readers can judge for themselves whether I saw Christ or not. I will describe a dream which I had soon after the supplication by prayer. I went to my bedroom which was small, situated at the southeast wing of the house. The bed stood east and west, with the head towards the east, close to the south wall, leaving barely room enough for a washstand and a chair to stand at the north side of room. The walls were papered, and the floor covered with carpet, making it a nice little sleeping room. As I was of poor health at this time, and felt unusually gloomy, and tired of this wretched life, I asked God to give me consolation, that I could bear up under my affliction. I went to bed, and soon fell into deep sleep, waking up towards morning with great rushing of wind at my ears, and with a great, delightful vision stamped upon my mind. I will now place before my readers this great and wonderful vision, which is as clear to my mind now as it was when I awoke, that ever memorable night. Now, dear reader, follow me in this real appearing acting drama.

I awake, my room is brighter than electric light can make it, the washstand with mirror is vanished, and in the place of it stands the chair; the walls are ornamented with artificial flowers of the finest art, and changing from one form to another. What is this that I behold. O my heart bounds with joy, my long desired wish is now about to be fulfilled. Thus three times my room illuminates with overpowering brightness. Notwithstanding this overwhelming brightness, I keep my presence of mind, being strengthened by the desire to receive knowledge from the realms of heaven. In the third act of brightness a holy personage appears from the east wall of my room, glides to the chair, and seats himself upon it facing me. Why have they tried to make me believe that Christ is such a low appearing being, almost naught. There before me he sits, the very type of manhood, of handsome appearance, dressed in the style of the present day; he wears a dark suit of fine workmanship. His white linen shirt lies neatly on his full breast, with a collar fastened artfully about his neck, in the style of the present day. His head is slightly bowed, sits firmly upon his broad, massive shoulders. His hair, of dark brown color, curls beautifully about his head; he wears a beard of the same hue, which gives a beautiful ornament to his face, which is firm, but of mild appearance. His eyes are large, and well illuminated, ornamented with heavy, dark, eye-lashes, which cause a very fine appearance. His forehead which is bare from the many curls, looks large and perfectly formed. In all a perfect man; and by appearance, I should judge, twenty-five or six years old. I fall weeping upon his breast, like one who has found a heaven of rest. He says cry, I wonder that you do not cry more. O what a great and holy light comes from his countenance as he utters these words. It is too much, I tremble and look exhausted about me. He is too pure for my black and hardened heart. I see it all plainly. There on the bed lies my earthly body, lean and shriveled—darkness forms about me.

A CHURCH ORGAN.

THE mission of the Herald as a church organ should be, and is, to reach as many members and non-members as possible. This being the case there must be something, of necessity, in the Herald to suit both classes. The man that never heard the gospel does not want the same kind of reading that the Saints do, and when a non-member takes up the majority of our Heralds he finds but very little to interest him, as the greater part of the paper is taken up with reading that just suits old and new members. My experience is that the letters are the most interesting part of the Herald to the member, while on the other hand the letters are of but little interest to the non-member, who knows nothing about the gospel, or the spirit in which the letters are written. The news summary in the Herald is splendid for reference, and of great value to the Elders, and to those who do not have access to the daily papers; but does not interest the non-member that is seeking after the plan of salvation.

Some brother writes his views on a subject, and it is printed in the Herald, (and read by many as good authority, as the Herald is the church organ). The next week there is an article on the same subject, contradicting the other in the strongest terms, (read and taken down as authority, because the church organ has printed them both, they not knowing that the Herald has stated time and again, that every article in the Herald is there on its own merits). Again, most of the articles in the Herald are strong meat, suitable only for old members, who are able by long practice and hard study, to eat such strong meat; but are not fit for babes and non-members, and are not attractive to, neither calculated for, a non-member who is just starting out, (having just caught a glimmering of the light), to seek the kingdom of God; but on the other hand are calculated to drive the non-member, with the babes and sucklings, farther from the little glimmer of light they have received. This should not be the case, but our church organ should be the means, yes, a power in every member's hands to draw others into the same faith. For the above reasons, I could conscientiously give but few of my Heralds to non-members, realizing that strong meat, and the opposing views and letters of my brethren were not the milk that they wanted to lead them unto the kingdom of God. And at the same time I realize that the church needs just such a paper as the Herald is now, where the Elders, and all others, as far as there is room, should have the opportunity of discussing their views, in a proper manner and under certain restrictions; and with letters from all the different fields of labor, and all parts of the world; with the news also from all parts of the world. I would like also to see it an advertising medium, for everything that is respectable. Now I believe such a paper could be sustained, and would in a short time reach a very large circulation. The first page should be set apart to a concise statement of our position on the Utah question, with other vital questions of the day, with the declaration, that this paper was not the church organ, and the Editor was only responsible for articles under his own signature. This would leave the church free, and let every tub stand on its own bottom. Such a paper could be put into any and all places, without having the effect pointed out in the fore part of this article. Such a paper would attract the attention of many able and liberal writers, (as there is not such a religious or Christian paper extant at present to my knowledge), who would like to have the opportunity of giving and discussing their views in some paper that could lay aside sectarian bigotry, and give to every man a hearing, and a fair, square chance. Would not such a paper be a greater help, both financially and spiritually, than our Herald is at present, with only a limited circulation, and that almost entirely among members, (many of them like myself, who could not recommend the paper as the church organ, with all the differences of opinion and strong meats, to non-members). While on the other hand, I know of many others who would be glad to take such a paper as I have described, and try to induce others to do the same. The larger the circulation, the more the advertisements, and the cheaper the paper. I would be glad to canvass for such a paper, and I think the church needs such a paper. It also needs another paper, a church organ, in the full sense of the word, devoted entirely to the doctrines of the Church, as set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Covenants, the first page setting forth our standpoint on the Utah question, and several pages devoted to the milk of kindness, the first principles of the gospel, the prophecies concerning the coming forth of the church in the last days, and the Book of Mormon, with the signs of the times, the gathering of Israel, and other matters that would be interesting to both members and non-members. Then we would have a standard, something to refer to as authority, a paper that could be put into the hands of any and all persons, without fear that they would come back and point out some contradiction, and ask if that was inspired of God, as we profess to have prophets and apostles and high priests, and if we have them, their writings should be inspired, as other apostles and prophets were.

I have not written for the purpose of finding fault, or blaming any one for the past, but I am trying to make suggestions for the future. Yesterday I visited the free library, and the Young Men's Christian Association's reading rooms, for the purpose of seeing what could be done by putting our papers before the public in this way. I found many persons readers, and many papers and books of all the different sects and denominations; but not one of our books or papers was to be found. This should not be the case. I said to myself, our papers should be the head and front, and should be in every reading room and library in the country, and should be a mighty power felt in all parts of the world. We have the light; it should shine and be felt, as the sun's rays are felt.

If we can not have two papers, would it not be wise to make the Herald a church organ, or a part of it at least, and the other part open for other matter, with some gospel in all of the papers, so that our paper would furnish food for the member and the non-member. Then our papers could be put into reading rooms and all other places, without fear of the effect they would have. I would like to see them in every place where people assemble to read, and would work to that end, if some changes were made, so that I did not fear the effects. At the present, my reasons for writing this article are, I see that the church has a want in this direction that should be supplied, and I know of no other way to get that want supplied than letting it be known. I do not pretend to say that my suggestions are the best; but they will tend to bring out the thoughts of abler minds than mine, and so may it be.

Yours in gospel bonds,

A. HAWS.

REPLY TO "M." OF ILLINOIS.

EDITOR WILLOUGHBY INDEPENDENT:

IN your issue of the 18th of January occurs an article signed "M.," discouraging free investigations—the hearing of all sides and thus judging a matter upon its merits from the evidence adduced—but advises the passing of judgment without hearing. That men are safer, wiser, and more apt to be in the right who refuse to investigate than those who accept the teachings of the New Testament, and "Prove all things and hold fast that which is good." We are not quite ready in this enlightened day to accept the doctrine that "ignorance is the mother of devotion;" neither that it is the way to progress, is virtuous or wise, or complimentary to people, to judge a cause before hearing it, or after hearing one side only. "It is a folly and a shame," says Solomon, "to judge a matter before hearing it."

"M." says, "It is bad policy and bad morals" to discuss with the Latter Day Saints. Why? Because, says M., "It is just what the Mormon Elder wants; it will give him an opportunity and a crowd." Just so; but will not his opponent have just as good an opportunity and just as good a crowd? Of course, that would not be "bad policy" or wicked. But what ails this volunteer adviser to the Kirtland people from the Sucker State! O! he is just afraid the people are going to be deceived if they attempt to investigate a matter; hence, he speaks and advises them all to stay at home—silently confessing that they have not sense enough to judge for themselves—and fools, hypocrites, and intolerant bigots pass judgment on Mr. Kelley's and Mr. Braden's views without ever hearing them. If this is not sweet advice in the light of this nineteenth century, then we can not judge.

But what burdens the soul of this Kirtland guardian is not so much the turning out and hearing, but he fears the results of the discussion will not be as he would wish; that the "Mormon," as he is pleased to call him, will be found to be on the side of the New Testament. He says: "The Disciple divine may find before he gets through with the discussion that the Bible is not as good a weapon to knock a Mormon down with as he may have thought, and may want to use a more carnal weapon, or, perhaps two of them; for we assure him that the Mormon will be on his feet in the middle of the ring whenever

'time' is called on the contestants; and the results of the discussion will be, we fear, that too many of the hearers will go away thinking or fearing that Mormonism is just as true as any other religion." Did you ever? Is not that just what every honest man and woman should acknowledge, if it be found after investigation and comparison with other views that it possesses as much, or more, truth as is found in other denominations? Should the right and fairness injure any one? Are you not just a little fearful, friend M., that you have a weak cause, and that the people, if they exercise their God-given rights and faculties by hearing for themselves, will discover that weakness? If the Latter Day Saints have truth let us have it. If Disciples have truth let us have that. If one has more than the other let us learn that. If they have naught but fog let us become satisfied of that fact.

But M. says "Don't go." Why? Oh, the Disciple may not be able to "knock the Mormon down" with the New Testament; i. e., the Mormon is liable to show that the New Testament is on his side of the question. That would make M. too sick. "The Disciple will need to take a more carnal weapon." Ah! M. wants the "Mormon" knocked down, right or wrong. If he can not do it with the New Testament take "a more carnal weapon." Take a maul, set up the thumb-screws, drive a stake and kindle a fire, and let the inquisition decide; kill him, any way, is the doctrine of this Sucker. Not so hasty, M., the Kirtland people possess too much American blood; are too well raised than to permit any unfairness or injustice towards either party; besides, they are going to turn out like free men and hear and then judge.

But M. is a kind of theologian. He says: "Trying to unsettle the religious convictions of a community." No danger of unsettling them if they are founded in the truth; if not, they ought to be unsettled. Yours was the sentiment of the opposition to reform and progress in the days of Luther, Calvin, Knox, Wesley and all who contended for progress. It was the cry of the Jews in Christ's time. "Don't unsettle us," said all the Pharisees, and Sadducees, and others. Why? Because they held to a religion founded in error, and they were fearful that Jesus would lift the veil and the people would see its deformities. They did not want to be "unsettled." They said, "Don't go to hear Christ," and put Him out of the synagogue; endeavored to "freeze him out," by staying away and going around the community and "insinuating" against Him. When they failed to knock Christ and his apostles down with the Bible, they resorted to the "more carnal weapons," and whipped and crucified them.

But M. goes on: "The discussions between these same denominations, in 1830-31, the Disciple churches of Mentor and Kirtland lost over half their members." Ah! What of it? Did not they follow their convictions, or did they join the Latter Day Saints, just to be blind and in the dark? And are we now to stop all investigations? Are the Latter Day Saints shrewd enough to make black white and white black? especially when Mr. Braden is present, one of the most skilled of controversialists?

But M. says: "The Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians, and Congregationalists did not attend the discussions." He thinks this the wisest course. If this be true, what respect would Mr. M. have for the opinions of those denominations, of either the Latter Day Saints or Disciple faith? Do they know anything about the real merits of either? Too thin!

"Religion is progressive," says M., "and it is but little credit to any religion to prove that it is now just what it was in the days of the apostles." More evidence this that our friend from the Sucker State (?) is a theologian. Is not the Bible the Christian's guide? Does it not contain the principles of true religion? Were not these principles revealed by Christ and His Apostles? Were they not as true then as now? If true, who can improve them? Dare any one say that he can improve the New Testament, and thus progress in religion? The true faith was established by Christ. A divergence from that brought intolerance, blindness, bigotry, and the forsakers of true religion. A return to the primitive order will give to the world the religion revealed from Heaven; and the cultivation of the sentiment, "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them;" "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

But M. admits sincerity, love, honesty, and a desire to return to primitive Christianity to be among the Latter Day Saints. If they are honest, but blind, as admitted by M., the thing for those who see is to open their eyes. This Mr. Braden professes to do. But the Latter Day Saints, also, believe in opening eyes; hence this discussion, to discover if possible who needs most to have their eyes opened.

But friend M. is just a little too willing to "admit." He says he is "willing to admit that" the Latter Day Saints "have turned a desert into fruitful fields and blooming gardens." Now don't, Mr. M., smother us all with so much glory. "Honor to whom honor is due." The Latter Day Saints of Kirtland have turned no deserts into blooming gardens, and claim none of the glory of that commendable work. Was you not aware of it?

But M. commenced to get good, it would seem, before he got his article completed. He says: "Don't persecute them, or even speak unkindly of them." What would you do? "Keep outside of their meetings." What else? "If you hear a man, woman or child express a desire to attend, quietly insinuate that the community expects better things of them; and that if they do they will lose in some degree with the better class of people;" i. e., somebody will "turn up his nose" at him or her when they meet them on the street—M., for instance—and thus "freeze out" the Saints. No, Mr. M., you would not "speak unkindly of us," not you, but you would advise to go around the neighborhood "insinuating" against people to prejudice their minds, and thus crawl and skulk about in the neighborhood, stab in the dark, and carry on a dark and hidden warfare; but you would never come out to the light. How can you go around "insinuating" against people and say no ill of them? I hardly think the people of Kirtland are ready to adopt such a snakish practice. Better be frank and honest and open and above board. My advice to the Kirtland people and all other people is to attend the discussion; bring their Bibles, paper and pencils; take notes; hear for themselves, and then give credit where it is due; and if any one comes "insinuating" around that they don't know enough to judge themselves, just say, stand aside and let the light shine, or "get behind me, Satan," and show them the door.

FAIR PLAY.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS SINCE THE PROCLAMATION OF PEACE.

THE SCENES AND EVENTS ATTENDING THE CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES IN 1783.

A STORY is told that Lafayette, not long before his death, was present at a banquet given by Marbois, and that when the supper hour arrived the guests were shown from the elegant apartments in which the evening had been spent into what seemed to be an imitation of the principal room of some old Dutch farmhouse. The guests gazed in wonder at the low ceiling, the large, heavy beams, the small, bare, uncurtained window. At length "The seven doors and one window!" exclaimed Lafayette. "We are at Washington's headquarters on the Hudson fifty years ago!"

It was in the quaint old mansion at Newburg, the mansion with the oft described seven doors and one window, that Washington had his headquarters at the time when the cessation of hostilities was proclaimed to the American army.

At Paris, on the 20th of January, 1783, a provisional treaty had been signed, and upon receiving official information from Franklin and Adams, Congress made proclamation that hostilities should cease. On the 18th of April Washington issued his order for the reading of the proclamation to the army. One sentence of this order we can almost imagine to have been written by one of those valiant, fighting preachers, who so gloriously led the English Puritans to battle and to victory:

"And the commander-in-chief orders that the chaplains, with the several brigades, will render thanks to Almighty God for all his mercies, particularly for his overruling the wrath of man to his own glory, and causing the rage of war to cease among the nations."

On the 19th day of April, just eight years after the battle of Lexington, the proclamation was read to the soldiers. During the war the army had greatly changed its character, but not as armies sometimes change their character during a long and terrible struggle. The army of Frederick the Great, at the beginning of the Seven Years' War, consisted of veterans drilled and trained to perfection; at the close it was largely made up of soldiers not to be compared with those who had conquered at Lobositz and Prague. At the beginning of the Revolutionary War the American Army was composed of men brave and fearless, but unused to the discipline of the camp and battlefield; at the close it was composed of men equally brave and equally fearless, but disciplined and matured by years of stern warfare.

Since the practical ending of the war at the time of the surrender of Cornwallis, the position of the American army had been peculiarly painful and trying. While active hostilities were in progress they had, indeed, undergone great sufferings; they had borne the bitter cold of Valley Forge; they had, with the spirit which prompted the starving French soldiers to rush eagerly to the fight at Malplaquet, crossed the Delaware amid snow and ice to attack the camp of their invaders. But the courage of endurance is far nobler than the courage of action, and this higher courage they had been during many weary months called upon to exercise.

At the close of the year 1781 the main body of the army was established amid the picturesque scenery of the Hudson, largely in the county named by the early settlers in honor of their great countryman, William of Orange. Here they were forced to lie idle while their pay was withheld and they were often in want not only of the comforts, but almost of the necessities of life. Their families, too, were in want, and it hardly needed the additional fact that the employes of the civil service were paid promptly to provoke the soldiers almost to the bounds of endurance.

The condition of the Southern army was much the same. Greene reported in January, 1782, that many of his men were actually barefoot and greatly in need of clothing. Morris could only write to him: "You must continue your exertions with or without men, or provisions, clothing or pay."

In July, 1782, the last blood was shed on the battlefield during the war, and from that time the soldiers of both the Northern and Southern divisions had nothing to do but to wait with what patience they could. Affairs were in such a condition that contracts for provisioning the army were dissolved from want of means to meet them, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that the soldiers were furnished with sufficient to keep them from starvation. So the year wore on.

At length, on January 6th, 1783, a committee of officers presented the claims of the army to Congress and asked that measures of relief be adopted. No immediate benefits resulted, and it was inevitable that under such circumstances the minds of many would turn to the expedient of securing their rights by the exercise of their own power.

The feeling almost culminated in March in a violent outbreak. On the 10th of the month an anonymous address, since known to have been written by the aide-de-camp of Gates, was circulated through the camp.

In eloquent language the writer pictured the distress and privations of the army, pointed plainly to the sword as the only means of obtaining justice, and called a meeting of the officers for the evening of the 11th.

The notice came to the attention of Washington. He knew that it would be useless to openly oppose the officers; that his only course was to cautiously guide them. In general orders he expressed his disapprobation of the anonymous and irregular call, and himself directed them to meet on the 15th. The meeting would be presided over by the senior officer present.

Another anonymous letter was now circulated, claiming that by countenancing a meeting at all under the circumstances Washington showed his sympathy with the movement.

Before the 15th Washington sent for many of the officers and personally urged upon them the importance of peaceable measures.

The officers assembled. Gates was in the chair. To the surprise of all it was seen that Washington was also with them. He apologized for his presence, which the gravity of the situation had rendered necessary, and then went on to present his analysis of the anonymous addresses. He strongly condemned the measures urged, appealed to the patriotism of the officers to prevent rash and unlawful proceedings, and asked them to place confidence in the intentions and promises of the Government.

"I have grown gray in your service, and now find myself growing blind," said he, in a tone which touched all present, as he paused a moment to put on spectacles while reading a letter received from a member of Congress. On concluding his address he withdrew.

The current of feeling was changed. The officers thanked him for his communications, voted that no distresses should induce them to sully the reputation and glory that they had acquired by their arduous services, unanimously condemned the anonymous addresses, and requested Washington to write to the President of Congress, explain the needs of the army, and urge the necessity of speedy relief.

The narrow escape from riot and lawlessness had its effect in rousing Congress to adopt temporary measures for ameliorating the condition of the army. Soon afterward the cessation of hostilities was proclaimed, furloughs were freely granted and singly or in small parties large numbers of the soldiers made their way quietly back to their own firesides.

Not long after this the famous "Society of the Cincinnati" was organized. It met with bitter hostility in many quarters, particularly on account of the clause in its construction which made membership hereditary in the eldest male posterity. It is probable, however, that this opposition was caused, not so much by anxiety for the liberties of the country, as it was by that hatred of anything resembling aristocratic institutions which the people of a new republic always feel, and which was shown so strikingly in the opening years of the French revolution.

In October, by proclamation of Congress, all officers and soldiers absent on furlough were discharged from further service, and all others who had enlisted for the war were to be discharged from and after the 3d of November. In general orders Washington referred to the proclamation and bade the army "an affectionate and long farewell." Only a small number, consisting of such as had enlisted for a definite time, were still retained in service.

The parting from his officers took place in New York on the 4th of December, and Washington, "with a heart full of love and gratitude," expressed his most sincere hope that in their latter days they might enjoy the prosperity so well earned by their honorable toil during the war. Affectionately then he took the hand of each officer in turn, and, no one speaking a word, they all followed him to the ferry. He entered the boat, and as it glided away, they silently returned his farewell salutation.

On his way to Congress to resign his command he was everywhere met by crowds who lined the road to catch a glimpse of him. In the south of England, a hundred years before this, crowds had strewn with flowers the pathway of a young leader, popular for a handsome face and agreeable manner, not for a firm character or stern integrity. The crowds that met Washington honored him for his unswerving loyalty, his unshaken courage and resolution, his pure and lofty character; he had not only succeeded, but what Addison's Portius considered of far more importance, he had deserved to succeed. On the 23d of December he presented his resignation to Congress. In accepting it the presiding officer spoke in the highest terms of the priceless services rendered by Washington during the war. "The glory of your virtues," he added, "will not terminate with your military command; it will continue to animate remotest ages."

This prophecy seems likely to be verified, for almost all writers, of whatever nationality, unite in honoring the memory of "the hero who sheathes his sword after a life of spotless honor, a purity unreproached, a courage indomitable, and a consummate victory."

DIED.

PHELPS.—At the house of her parents, at Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, February 7th, 1884, of consumption, Sr. Laura Jannette Phelps, daughter of Sr. Joseph R. Lambert, aged 19 years, 10 months and 19 days. Funeral discourse by Elder Joseph Smith. She bore her sufferings for one year, patiently, and for the last few weeks of her earthly existence they were very great. She obeyed the gospel at Magnolia, Iowa, in April, 1875. About two weeks before she went to rest, she had the following dream, which she related to her mother early the next morning: She seemed to be hungry, and asked for something to eat at a place where a restaurant was once kept. They (the people at the supposed restaurant), informed her that they did not give meals any longer, but would grant her request. She told them of a journey she had to perform; but they advised her not to go, saying she could never accomplish it. "I must go," was her reply, and she started. Her way lay through grass which was taller than her head, with a thick undergrowth, on which grew red berries. It was so difficult for her to get through, that she had to part the grass with her hands. She became very tired and weary, at which time a bright light was seen ahead, and suddenly she stepped out of the grass and found herself in a beautiful city. We miss her, O so much; but, thank God, the bright hope of the gospel is left. With gratitude to God, we tender thanks to the Saints of Lamoni, for their thoughtful kindness in time of need.

J. R. and A. E. LAMBERT.

SMITH.—In Bennington, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, of ague and fever, Lyman Seth Smith, aged 38 years and 16 days. The memory of the just is blessed. He departed strong in the faith.

Sr. Young was a faithful wife, and affectionate mother, and an exemplary Saint. She leaves a husband and two little girls, besides a large number of other relatives and friends, to mourn her loss. Funeral sermon by Bro. Wm. Anderson of Oakland, California.

FELLOWS.—At his residence, in Ottawa, LaSalle Co., Illinois, January 29th, 1884, of consumption; Sr. Nelly Fellows, aged 31 years, 11 months. Funeral services held in the Methodist Church, at Norway, LaSalle Co., Illinois, January 31st, 1884, by Elder Thomas Hougas, to a crowded house.

EATON.—At Deer Isle, Maine, January 22d, 1884, George W., son of brother J. B. and sister Hannah Eaton, aged 19 years, 22 days.

Dear brother, thou art gone to rest;
Thy sins are all forgiven;
The Saints in light have welcomed thee
To share the joys of heaven.
Dear brother, thou art gone to rest;
And this shall be our prayer—
That when we reach our journey's end,
Thy glory we may share.

PARKER.—In Warren county, Illinois, June 15th, 1882, Bro. Harry Parker, aged 76 years, 7 months and 24 days. Baptized by Elder J. W. Gillen, in 1862. Funeral sermon by Samuel Shelton, an Elder of the Christian Church.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren.—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Sr. HANNAH B. WOODWARD, writes from East Concord, Essex county, Vermont, that she obeyed the gospel at Peterboro, New Hampshire, in 1841, though her home was in Vermont. She is informed by hearsay that there are churches in the New England States, and wishes to learn where they are, being desirous of hearing the gospel again. A HERALD of 1865 fell into her hands, and seeing Bro. Isaac Sheen's name in it, wrote him directing to Plano, Illinois; the letter was sent us by Postmaster Graham, of Plano, for which we thank him. Will Brn. John Gilbert, John Smith and E. N. Webster please to write to Sr. Woodward; giving her items of the location of branches and their railway connection. Comfort the sheep in the mountains, brethren.

We now have on sale a short biographical sketch of the early life of Bro. William B. Smith, only surviving brother of Joseph and Hyrum, with an interesting account of some of the incidents connected with the Smith family and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. Price twenty-five cents each, or in lots of five and upward for twenty cents each. The book can also be had by addressing Wm. B. Smith, Elkader, Clayton Co., Iowa.

The branch at Lucas, Iowa, is again improving, the Saints having good meetings.

Bro. M. B. Oliver, who was at one time associated with the HERALD, died at Osceola, Iowa, Saturday, February 9th. We have not as yet received the particulars.

The efforts of the Illinois correspondent of the Willoughby Independent, "M," to keep hearers away from the debate at Kirtland, between Rev. Braden and Bro. E. L. Kelley, are likely to defeat the writer's own design, for the house was well filled at opening, and it is expected that large audiences will be in attendance throughout.

Sr. Bourguoin, of St. Joseph, Missouri, writes very encouragingly of the good the HERALD does herself and her companion. Brn. John Hawley and John Pett were at Coalville, Iowa, preaching February 12th; so letter from Bro. Hawley informs us.

Bro. Joseph A. Stewart, of Philadelphia, baptized four at Providence Paper Mills, Cecil county, Maryland, on the 7th of February. Daniel C. Carter, Mary E. Carter, Joseph H. Carter and Sophia Carter. Bro. Stewart mentions their names as he thinks they may be known to some of the Saints in Iowa. Bro. Stewart has the use of a chapel at Elk Mills, where he was to be on the 17th.

The committee on General Conference appointed by the branch at Stewartville, Missouri, give the following notice:

RAILROAD FARE TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Rates have been obtained as follows: Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad will return those for one third who pay full fare in going. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs Railroad will return for one half fare those who pay full fare in going. Tickets obtained for return at Union Depot in St. Joseph. The attendance at Conference of those desiring return tickets must be certified to by proper authority of Conference. Farther rates are sought for from other companies, which will be reported if obtained.

J. M. TERRY, Secretary of Committee.

Bro. SMITH.—As there is some controversy in the Plainville Branch, upon the relation of the word "Mormon" to the church; and not wishing to see contention among the Saints, I will simply state the difficulty, ask a few questions, and ask you to please answer, either through the Herald or by letter. Some claim that the word "Mormon" ought not to be used by the Saints; that a "Mormon" is a polygamist, and that when the word is used, it is to ridicule and cast contempt upon the Saints. Others say that "Mormon" is accepted by the church, and that it was also accepted by the original church. The discussion is not confined to the branch, but has been carried to the public, and now is in the local papers, (inclosed is one article). Will you tell me if this church accept the name "Mormon," and if they do for what reasons? Hoping to hear from you soon, I will remain your brother in the gospel. ULYSSES W. GREENE.

IN reply to Bro. Ulysses W. Green, who writes from Plainville, Massachusetts.

The church does not accept the word "Mormons" as the characteristic denominational name properly applying to the members of the church. Nor do the Elders of the church call each other Mormons, or use the word as applying to themselves and co-members in any other sense than the one of opprobrium and reproach as used by opposers and enemies to the church and its doctrines. The word does not apply to the saints; nor should it be accepted by any of them as a proper appellation, no matter how innocent the word may be in itself. If it applies to any class of believers in the mission of Joseph Smith and the latter day work, it is to the Utah Church; and there it only applies because of long custom, at first as a term of reproach, afterwards acquiesced in because of its persistent use; in precisely the same form that the word Methodist became applied to the body now bearing that name; or the word Campbellites became applied to the Disciple, or Christian Church. Saints, or Latter Day Saints, is the term to accept, members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Nor should there be any contention among the saints about it.

A Mormon, so-called, is not necessarily a polygamist. He may, or may not be; as not more than one in five of the Mormons of Utah is a polygamist; but the church in Utah accepts the doctrine of polygamy, and in making this the feature by which they are known from the Reorganized Church, they ought, as Bro. Z. H. Gurley pithily states, to be called "Polygamists," and neither Mormons nor Saints.

Webster defines a Mormon to be a follower of Joseph Smith, &c. But Webster had no more right to make the word "Mormon" to be the appellation by which the church or its membership should be known than we have to name the congregation that meets in the "People's Church" in Chicago, "Thomasites," because Dr. Thomas is their preacher, and the one for whom the congregation was organized.

A BROTHER writes that some of the Saints of the branch where he lives would like for us to say something in the HERALD about life insurance. We, of course, don't know which side of the subject our brother is desirous that we should take, and may possibly wake up a hornet's nest either way.

If any one takes out a policy in a Life Insurance Company upon the idea that his life is prolonged by it, or that he will be less liable to the attacks of disease, or less liable to accidents by which he will die, he is throwing his money quite uselessly away; for no man's life can be prolonged by any such insurance. As a business transaction life insurance is in the nature of a mutual benefit society, with the large percentage of benefit derived therefrom going to the originators and officers of the company; with the lesser percentage incidentally accruing, going to the persons in whose favor the policy is drawn, usually the widow and children of the one whose life is insured.

There is no moral law involved in the matter; except the possibility of obtaining a policy upon fraudulent representations, or the liability of the heirs of a policy to be swindled out of the benefits intended by fraud, or failure on the part of the company. Of the first contingency we hope Saints are not afraid. Of the second; business men and those who insure must run the chances, just the same as the merchant who buys goods must run the risk of their spoiling on his hands, or a failure to sell them. In very many instances life insurance has been a good thing for widow and children, we know of some such. In many there is nearly as much paid out by the insured as the policy will return to the family; and in some instances a portion larger, or smaller, of the amount for insurance is forfeited by carelessness, or compelled failure to meet the requisite premium payments.

If the Saints were as wise, faithful and provident for themselves and each other as it is possible for them to be, there would be no great need for any to whom life insurance would be a benefit to accrue to them and theirs, to make application to the world's insurance companies, for they would organize such among themselves and for themselves. But in this possibly, as in some other things, the "children of this world are wiser in their generation, than the children of the kingdom." Therefore, while we by no means counsel the Saints to provide for the future of their families by securing policies of Life Insurance; we can not state that they should not do so if they see proper. We think, however, that if similar sums as those required to secure the policies were saved and put into good and safe deposits, or investment properly guarded, the results to the families of the investors would be almost practically the same, while they would escape any possible condemnation from their neighbor's law "thou shalt not do so and so." A good home, secured and well improved, sound bodies and sound minds, industrious and frugal habits, a solid hate for shams and idleness, a love for what is noble and good, a proper regard for labor, are about the best bequests that a father and husband can leave a family. We have known instances in which men have been insured, in which the best thing those men ever did for their wives and children was to die for them; as, while living they caused continued shame and distress, more acute and harder to bear than the grief wrought by death could be; but dying, the insurance brought more comfort and competence than the family ever enjoyed before. But dear Saints, don't go and insure your lives and then die to make your families happy in your death.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is the last judgment described in Matt. 25: 31-46, or is there a judgment after Christ destroys the last enemy which is death?

Ans.—We understand that the judgment referred to in Matthew is the last, or the judgment of final determination upon all nations.

Q.—Is the battle of "Gog and Magog" spoken of in the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezekiel to be fought before or after the Millennium? And is it the same as foretold by Zachariah 14? If before the Millennium how shall we harmonize Zachariah 14, with the History of the Church, wherein Joseph is made to say "it is to be after the millennium?"

A.—We do not know.

Q.—Is it advisable and proper for a district president to sit on an Elders' Court, even when requested to do so, by the vote of a branch?"

A.—No.

Q.—What historian is the author of "In the year A. D. 569 the last vestige of the church departed?"

A.—We do not know, never having met the statement.

Q.—Do not chronologists generally agree that Christ wrought in the ministry seven and a half years instead of only three and a half?

A.—We have never seen the statement that his ministry covered seven and one half years, as urged by chronologists."

Bro. W. H. Kelley writes from Kirtland, Ohio, February 18th:

This evening's session has just closed. The Spaulding story gave way like a land slide in time of a freshet, and so went under. As that forms the spinal column to the array of falsehood brought against the Book of Mormon, the strong fortress has been taken. A great interest is manifest and good order prevails. We are hopeful and happy and are confident that the Lord is with us, and that the Saints have not forgotten us.

We clip the following item from the Sullivan (Illinois) Progress:

The Rev. Robinson, of Peoria, preached Saturday night and Sunday at the old church at Arthur, Illinois. Quite a good turnout to hear him each time. Curiosity, we are inclined to think, took a good many, he being a Mormon. He is an eloquent speaker.

Correspondence.

SOUTH RAWDON, Hants Co., N. S.,
February 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Bro. John Dimock and I were out on a short trip in Halifax county, and on our way found two old Saints, Bro. and Sr. John Whiston, of Montague, Halifax county. He was baptized in 1843, she in 1844. We held several meetings on our trip. In Glen Margaret, we were offered the Methodist meeting house, and accepted. The people there were very much pleased with our doctrines. Bro. Dimock spoke to them awhile on the restoration, and opened out the subject very plainly. We are expecting Bro. Lakeman over here March 1st, at which time the two branches will unite in conference. There are quite a number more ready for baptism. We expect to leave here about the 15th of March—so our correspondents will please address us after that date at Santa Ana, Los Angeles Co., California. I have been permitted a glimpse of the perfect happiness to be received with Christ by those who are willing to follow him through evil as well as good report, and to see dimly the truth of the proposition, "That our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." "If we bear the cross we will wear the crown." "If we suffer, we will reign with him,—and to bear the reproach, scorn, and contumely of the world is to suffer with him—and if we can have corresponding humility, we might be permitted to suffer, even to be baptized with the baptism he was baptized with, that we might reign with him. So we may emulate our brethren of to-day, who have suffered the loss of all things for Christ's sake, and of the worthies of all ages who have suffered the reproach of Christ, rather than have the treasures of this world, or to be accounted great in the halls of the nations. Not only of this day, but of all ages have many rejoiced in persecutions, afflictions, etc., but the world was not worthy of them; but bye and bye all will meet. Their love will be increased and cemented by the bond of brotherhood, of suffering for or with Christ. Certainly those who have not suffered with him can not enter into a fulness of Christ's glory. Who can say, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me?"

Yours in bonds,

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

TERRA COTTA, Kansas,

December 3d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—We have reason to rejoice through hearing the gospel preached by Bro. Kent, from Clay county, Kansas. There is only a few Saints here, (only seven), and we are so far apart that we do not get together very often. We do not hear any preaching, except when Bro. Kent visits us, which he does as often as he can. Bro. Tarsons was here about a year ago. We were up to Goshen to conference in June, and my husband was up last fall. He took a man up there to be baptized (Bro. Thompson). Bro. Kent left some investigating. Any Elder that comes this way, we would like to have call on us. Ever praying for the spread of the gospel, I remain your sister in bonds, MRS. EMELINE J. DAVISON.

BEVIER, Macon Co., Missouri,

February 13th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph Smith.—Since I wrote last I have been visiting all the branches in the Northeast Missouri District, and find some doing well, I may say all but one, and that one is Bevier. The work outside of the branches presents a good appearance. The prospects are good for quite a number coming into the Church before long, especially in Walnut Creek Township, this county. I have labored in that place, and made many friends to the cause, insomuch that I understand two of the Cumberland Presbyterian ministers are going to get after me, and tear the doctrine I have been preaching all to pieces. One says he is able to do it. I shall try and be there at the time to help them do something in that line. In and around St. Catherines, Linn county, Mo., I have made many friends to the cause. I am requested to go to Grantsville, Linn county. We have no members there at all. But a Mr. William T. Hunter heard me preach one Sunday, five miles north of St. Catherines, and he says I must come to his place, and can have the church or school house, and may stop at his house as long as I will stay in that part. I am requested to go back into Knox county again. I have been asked to come and preach in the schoolhouse in Glass-town, in this county, and at Brush Creek and Black Jack. We could have the church in Calleo, if there was any one to attend to it. I can not attend to half the calls. It looks to me that something must be wrong, when I hear brethren, Elders and Priests, say that they can not get school houses to preach in. Brethren, we must do right at home, for we do not know whose eyes are upon us.

"Do what is right, the day-dawn is breaking,
Hailing a future of freedom and light;
Angels above us are silent notes taking,
Of every action, do what is right.

CHORUS:—

"Do what is right, let the consequence follow;
Battle for freedom in spirit and might;
And with stout hearts look ye forth till to-morrow,
God will protect you, do what is right.

"Do what is right, the shackles are falling,
Chains of the bondsmen no longer are bright;
Lightened by hope, soon they'll cease to be galling,
Truth goeth onward, do what is right.

"Do what is right. Be faithful and fearless,
Onward, press onward, the goal is in sight;
Eyes that are wet now, ere long will be tearless, Blessings await you in doing what's right."

I will say that my desire is to work and do all I can in this great work; and while time shall be given me here upon the earth I want to labor and help to build up the kingdom of God; and were it not for the testimony I have received of the truthfulness of this latter day work I should not be where I am to-day. But as I know it to be true, I must try and do my duty in it, and in order. Pray for me, and you all shall have my prayers.

Your brother and co-laborer for truth,

GEORGE HICKLIN.

FITCHBURG, Massachusetts,
February 3d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—For the past twenty years I have been a great sufferer with what many called hemorrhoid piles and ulcerated bowels. But as physicians often disagree, so they did in my case; and for the last three or four years, they have pronounced it a cancerous tumor. But it was hard for me to believe it, and I would not, until this last year, when my sufferings have been very intense. Since coming into the church, about four years ago, I have been administered to by different Elders a number of times. I always received a blessing and felt better, but was not healed. I would not call again on a doctor, so I have suffered on from month to month, growing worse. Last September I took to my bed, feeling that my days were numbered. One day my friends thought I was dying, I too felt that heaven was very near. Soon I was lost to all sense of life, and seemed to be away in the midst of a great glory, the light being greater than any I ever experienced. The Lord was by my side, and two bright beings approached me, with a white robe and a bright crown. They were about to put them upon me, when I turned to my Lord saying, "Let me return to my loved ones once more, that I may help my husband a little longer in the way, and that I may guide my children through the slippery paths of youth." The Lord said, "Thy prayer is heard, thy petition is granted. You shall return for a short season; but when I call again, you shall come unto me and rest." I came back and found them all weeping but trying to bring me back to life. Soon after I was in earnest prayer, when I felt that the Spirit directed me to go away from home, where I might find the Elders, and I should be healed. I was so very low, that of course all thought it was impossible, so I asked the Lord that if it was his will he would give us a test that none need doubt, and that at noon he would give me strength to arise, dress and walk alone across the room. I left it with him, and soon fell into a good sleep.

I awoke a few minutes before noon. As my husband came in to dinner, I arose, dressed and walked alone to the table in the next room; sat up and ate my dinner with the family. It was enough proof for all, though I did not walk again. Two days after I was carried to the cars, and my son went with me to Providence, where I remained with a dear sister in the gospel, whose faith was not strong enough to believe that I could ever recover. But I am thankful, that my God was not afar off. With faith in him and in his servants, I called and he answered, I was entirely healed. His promise unto me was verified. I am now at home, growing stronger every day and feeling quite well. I am striving to do my duty in the fear of God. There are no Saints here, and the gospel has never been preached in this place. We have asked the Elders to come, as many have expressed a desire to hear. I hope the day is not far distant when the light shall shine even here, and many receive the truth with gladness.

Your sister in the gospel,

A. HOXIE.

CUBA, Kan., Feb'y 3d, 1884.

Saints' Herald.—I have often heard of the deception that it is claimed Joseph Smith perpetrated, or tried to perpetrate, on the people near Kirtland, Ohio, by walking on the water. The story is decidedly transparent, but is told for the truth. It is about as follows: Joseph Smith had placed benches under the water, but some of the bad boys found them, and displaced one of them, so that the Prophet came to grief. One good Christian woman here had a brother that helped to remove the bench, and she believes the story firmly. Unfortunately for the story, the brother is dead. What I want is the address of parties living near where this thing happened, so I can correspond with them on the subject. You may think this a very trivial thing, but I heard a loud mouthed minister of the Congregational denomination using this story to very good effect. I am not a member of any church.

Respectfully yours,

F. T. BAKER.

RUSK PENITENTIARY, Texas,
February 3d, 1884.

Editor Saints' Herald, Lamoni, Iowa:—I receive the Herald regularly, and it is a welcome visitor. It goes the rounds of many cells, and I am constrained to believe, brings glad tidings of much joy unto many of the unfortunates of this prison. I must tell you that I find many are anxiously enquiring after the truth. I find many men of fair intelligence in this place, who have drunk to the very dregs the cup of humiliation and shame, but are now anxious, and many of them show a determination to lead a new life. I am endeavoring to hold out what little encouragement I can, circumstanced as I am; and I am proud to say to you, that all the persecutions that have been heaped upon me, have not shaken my faith in the least. Through the kind mercies of him who ruleth all things well, I hope to hold out faithful unto the end. I will state, that I think I have had my faith sorely tested since my persecutions began. I have been forsaken by family relations; and many of the brethren to whom I have written, asking an interest in their prayers, have treated my letters with silent contempt. In my despair I wrote you, asking you to send me the Herald, and to my happy surprise,

I have been receiving it regularly, for which please to accept many heart-felt thanks. All reading matter of our Church is much sought after here, and if some of the brethren would be so kind as to send a few tracts occasionally, I think they would prove to be seed well sown, and I would take pleasure in distributing them amongst those who would appreciate them.

This morning I obtained permission from our chaplain, who is a Methodist Minister, (and I must say, I believe a good old man), to make a little talk on next Sunday, and perhaps on many Sundays following. We have a commodious chapel, and I have been conducting Sunday School Exercises for the past three or four weeks.

In bonds of hope and faith, I am your brother,
J. O. STEWART.

UNIONBURGH, Iowa,

February 3d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—In the Herald for December 15th, 1883, Bro. C. D. Norton, of London, England, sends to ask if Elijah and Elias are the same person. He says that Bro. Harvey had stated in a sermon, that they were; and he further adds, that when persons make statements, they should prove them. Now I think that Elijah and Elias are the same, for the following reasons: That it is Elias the Tishbite that spoke the word of the Lord to Ahab, king of Israel, that there should be no rain, nor dew these years, but according to the word of the Lord, 1st Kings, 17: 1, it was Elias, the Tishbite, that was commanded to go to the eastward, and hide by the Brook Cherith; "for I have commanded the ravens to feed thee."—1 Kings 17: 3. It is to Elias the Tishbite that the word of the Lord came, for him to arise and go to Zarephath. "Behold I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee."—1 Kings 17: 8. It was this same Elias the Tishbite that brought the widow's son to life, after he had died. It was also this same Elias that asked the people, "why halt ye between two opinions?" but that they should both try their gods, which would answer. It is Elias that told Ahab to get up and eat, "for there is a sound of abundance of rain. And it came to pass in the meanwhile, that the heavens were black with clouds, and there was a great rain," &c. And how he wished to die, thinking that he was alone; and how he threw his mantle at Elisha, and anointed him to be a prophet in his room, &c.

The brother asks, When did Elijah call down fire to consume the people. In the first chapter of 2 Kings, we read of a captain and his fifty men, consumed by fire; and another captain and his fifty consumed in the same way, at the command of this same Elias, the Tishbite, in confirmation of his being a man of God; that is the way that it reads in my Welsh Bible. In fact we have not the Word Elijah in the Welsh Bible at all. In Malachi, we read that "He will send Elias, the prophet," &c. The brother talks about his being hundreds of years older than his father. I don't know about that; but this Elias, the Tishbite, lived in the days of Ahab, the king, who commenced his reign about the year 922, B. C., and Ahab reigned over Israel about twenty-one years. I think that this mixing up of the name of Elias and Elijah, originated with the translators; for here we have it in English, in most places at least, Elijah; while we have it in Welsh both in the Old and New Testament, every time, Elias.

Also in the Welsh Book of Mormon, it is Elias every time. Also in the Welsh Pearl of Great Price, relating to the angel's visit to Joseph, the term is Elias. Please read Bro. Blair's explanation in his excellent little book, Joseph the Seer, page 98, that Elias is Elijah in Hebrew, and that Elijah is Elias in Greek. And it seems to me, that we are laboring under the same difficulty today; for what is Elijah in the English language, is Elias in the Welsh. Ever praying for the prosperity of the cause of Zion,

I am your sister in the one faith,
ELIZABETH THOMAS.

CABOOL, Texas Co., Missouri,
February 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I wish to ask of those who think they would be able to lend, a loan of two hundred dollars. This sum would start me in a business that would be self-supporting. Then my husband could go and preach, as that seems to be his desire. I am aware that many places need the good seed. If two hundred Saints would lend me one dollar apiece, that sum would be so small that they would not miss it like a large sum. It might take me two or three years to pay it all back. Dear Saints, should you lend me the desired amount, I will give you my honor that I will pay back as I can. Should you comply with my wishes, please send it to Bro. Joseph Smith, at Lamoni, Iowa. Send your full name with the amount loaned, and your address, so that when I get the amount desired, you can be notified through the Herald, and I can have your names with each one's amount paid in, so I can pay back, and cancel as I do so.

I am as ever a sister in the church,
MARY A. ATWELL.

MORGANVILLE, Kansas,
February 6th, 1884.

Dear Saints and Herald.—We live in a good farming community in Kansas. Farms are worth twenty to thirty dollars per acre. A new flouring mill is being erected here. We have no branch of our church yet, but we are at work. I keep a grocery store, and talk every day to Methodist, Baptist, and devout men, mostly Norwegian and Swedes. At first they thought Mormons were very wicked people. The Saints worked at carrying grain, hauling, buying, selling, &c., and talking, until now this people come to the store of an evening and talk. Some of the the best Methodists have moved into my house, and say their preacher behaves very queer. One night last week Rev. Dundas, (M. E.), said he would give warning, that the next Mormon that pokes in the (M. E.) meetings, would be fined. I had only said I was daily searching the Scriptures, to see what Christ had done and what he had asked us to do; and I was trying to follow him in my every day walk. After meeting, Bro. John O. McKnight tried to button-hole the minister and have an interview, but he would not be interviewed. So Uncle John (six feet and a half high), stood up on a seat by the preacher, and made a gospel speech, and said he hoped the Lord would forgive Mr. Dundas for such talk as he had used about Mormons speaking in meetings, and also for not wanting to talk with them. We need more public preaching here, as soon as all will hear Latter Day Saint Elders preach. We made many friends by the church members signing a petition, asking the County Judge not to grant a Druggist's License to Dr. Powell to sell intoxicating liquors in Morganville. The M. E. leaders asked Bro. J. O. McKnight what they should do with Dr. Powell, (M. E.), for selling whisky to Mr. Patterson, and causing his team to run away. Bro. John said he had confidence enough in the Methodist Church yet, to think they would not allow such members to go without correction. Old Grandfather D. D. Thompson said he "Hoped our doctrine was right," but he was afraid it could not be proved to be, beyond a doubt. We are trying to "prove all things" to honest folks, and depend upon God for our reward.

Your brother,
W. D. MCKNIGHT.

No. 1416, Monroe-st., St. Louis, Mo.,
February 13th, 1884.

Dear Bro. Joseph.—I write to tell you of the knowledge that I have of the gospel, for which I feel most thankful to my Heavenly Father. I have now been a member of the church since May 18th, 1879. The Lord has blessed me with both knowledge and friends, as I often think it strange that I should have been guided to the Church of Christ, being the youngest of a large family, and the only one that has obeyed it. The Lord will protect his saints when in trials or danger, if they live in faith according to the gospel of Jesus Christ. God was our protector while crossing the ocean. I could scarcely imagine how a vessel could keep in the water while the sea was rolling mountains high. It brings to my mind that verse which says:

God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform;
He plants his footsteps on the sea,
And rides upon the storm.

When we arrived at St. Louis, we were very happy to find such kind friends, and the same Spirit among the saints here as in England. I was very pleased to see Brother Alexander, and hear the good sermons he preached in St. Louis. I think they did much good here. Since conference we have reorganized the Sunday School, which seems quite a success. I pray that God will enable us to press onward, that it may be the means of doing much good, and win souls to Christ.

Asking an interest in your faith and prayers, I am your brother in the gospel,

JOSEPH G. COLE.

CUBA, Mo., February 9th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I dreamed that the plates that were retained by the angel when the Book of Mormon was translated, had been restored and translated by some individual in the church; but I don't know him. The book was larger in size than the Book of Mormon, and the type was much larger. The church had published so many of the books that they were distributed among all the different denominations, and the consequence was that the people apostatized from all the sectarian churches, so that the preachers were left to themselves. There was nobody to preach to, consequently the preachers called a convention among themselves concerning the great confusion; but their decision was not made known to me. There was with the book some large yellow roots, that were full of pure water, and I was made to understand that it was for the purpose of feeding the Saints. We should like to have this interpreted. Bro. Joseph Smith.—Preaching in this country is not in vain; good congregations, good order. On Friday night, at the close of my meeting, a Campbellite preacher by the name of Joseph D. Smith, stepped up to me and commenced to find fault with my doctrine, and thought he could prove it false. I said, "What have you heard me preach that is false?" He said, "You hold that Christ's kingdom, in its organization, is not on earth?" I said, "That is what I believe." He then gave me a challenge, and of course I gladly accepted. The proposition was then drawn up: Resolved, That Christ has a kingdom on the earth at present. Joseph D. Smith affirms, J. C. Foss denies. Half hour each for two hours. I supposed he was going to show us that the Christian Church was the kingdom of God. But instead of that, he labored hard trying to show us that the kingdom of Christ was organized on the day of Pentecost; and not one word about its being here now. I took his own scripture and condemned his position; and proved that the Bible informed us that the kingdom of Christ would be organized, but not until the dead in Christ were raised, and Christ, sitting on the throne of David, reigning over the house of Jacob. I told him that I admitted that the church was organized eighteen hundred years ago; but the kingdom was not, in its complete organization. His quotations of scripture were Matt. 3:2, 4:17, 10:7, 12:28, 16:19, 17:5; Mark 1:14, 9:1; Luke 9:27, 11:12, 12:31, 14:15, 19:11; St. John 3:5; Acts 1:6; 1 Cor. 15:24; Heb. 12:28; 2 Thess. 1:5; 2 Pet. 1:11. He dwelt on the above for the first half hour, and in his next rehearsed them. I used his quotations, and also the following: Luke 12:32, 22:29, 30. Matt. 8:11, 18:1-3; St. John 3:5; 2 Tim. 4:1; 1 Cor. 15:50; Isa. 23:1; Jer. 23:5; Dan. 2:44, 7:9, 22; Rev. 11:15, 5:10; with a host of others. He asked the chairman, Mr. Rumsey, several times if his time was not almost up. At the close of the debate a vote was taken. Four voted for Mr. Smith, members of his church, and twenty-two for J. C. Foss. Many others in the house did not vote on either side. I spoke on Sunday to an interested congregation. I commence a course of sermons here on Thursday next, in the Presbyterian Church.

Pray for me,
J. C. Foss.

LELAND, Ill., Feb. 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I went to Plano conference to get my hope strengthened, as it has been tried a little through my weakness. I have learned some of my weaknesses. My faith was that if I could be near them when they should receive some of the spiritual drops, it might strengthen me also a little; for I needed it very much. I have but little faith in myself when I look upon my work seeing I have compassed none. But in the cause that I have espoused I have better faith than ever before. We have excellent meetings. Brother Patterson has been here twice. We will try to keep up prayer meetings if we can. We are few in number and scattered. When I read brother James Thompson's letter in the Herald, it touched my feelings, as I have had a little of the same disappointment myself. If the time has come for the Scandinavian Mission I am pleased. But I believe that the tracts and the elders should go before the Herald, so as to get some to receive it. I do not mean to dictate in this matter; but I am willing to help a little when it is to, move. My weaknesses come on fast. I would like to see you very much, but must be contented without. My love to all.

ODEN JACOBS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa,

February 14th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Since our appeal in the Herald of January 26th, I have received letters from several of the brethren, who seem anxious that a periodical should be started this Spring; and in order that this may be accomplished, they have promised to contribute certain amounts to aid the Church. I believe that a paper in the Scandinavian language would do a great deal of preaching, especially in Utah, where (according to a letter from Bro. Hanson) the opening in some places is good among the Scandinavians. I have the following tracts translated into the Danish language, "The Voice of the Good Shepherd," "The Kingdom of God," "The Sabbath Question," "Polygamy," "Epitome of the Faith," and "What is Truth." Hope that some of the brethren can make use of them.

Ever praying for the progress of the truth, I remain your brother,

PETER ANDERSON.

MANASSA, Conejos Co., Colorado,

February 15th, 1884.

President Joseph Smith; Dear Brother.—The cause here is in a prosperous condition. Our meetings are well attended and increasing in numbers. The southern people are generally with us in sentiment and spirit. We are meeting with a great deal of persecution from our Utah Brighamite friends. The President of the Stake has, through his Teachers warned the people to have nothing to do with me whatever. Some say I will go to hell sure. Others say the ground ought to drink my blood.

I am persuaded that every honest man and woman connected with the Brighamite Church in Utah, that will pause, and let reason dictate, where these evils are shown up to them, will "come out of her." For I think if there is any place or people on the earth, where that prophecy can properly be applied that says "come out of her, O my people, that you receive not of her plagues and partake not of her sins," it is certainly the Utah Brighamites. There is no people where there is more confusion; and we are taught that Babylon is confusion. Since I have investigated the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, I have no hesitancy in denouncing secret endowments, polygamy and priestcraft, as emanating from the devil. Therefore, am I to be censured for leaving them; or in other words, for not submitting to the dictates of an unscrupulous priesthood, and swallowing all their nonsense without murmuring or complaining? I think not. I have ever felt that God has created me a free moral agent; and he will hold me to a strict account for that agency. But says the president here, and his blind devotees, "We have heard Bro. Ball bear his testimony to the latter day work, when he was a Brighamite." So they have. I still have the same testimony to bear. I asked some of them the other day if they ever heard me bear testimony to Brigham Young's being the equal successor to the Prophet Joseph, or to the correctness of the principle of plurality of wives. I do not think they ever did, although I believed Brigham to be the right man in the right place, and polygamy to be a divine institution. But why? because I was not acquainted with our own works. As soon as I acquainted myself with the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and other church works, I changed my opinion; and through the blessings of God the scales have fallen from my eyes, and I am able to see that the Reorganized Church is a continuation of the original church and doctrines. And if there is any reality in Mormonism, which I believe with all my heart, you are the only recognized successor to your father, Joseph the Prophet. Then why should the Brighamites denounce me and my brethren as being apostates? Do we not believe in the principles as taught us by the Elders at our homes in the states? Most assuredly we do. It is only a pretense. They are afraid their craft is in danger; a drowning man will catch at a straw.

We are in a very cold, rigorous climate; and many of our people are suffering from a lack of food and proper clothing. There are some three hundred of us in all, that are wishing to get away from here in the spring for the east, either Kansas or Missouri.

Praying for the welfare and prosperity of the Reorganized Church, I remain your brother in the gospel of Christ,

WM. L. BALL.

CHEYENNE, February 12th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I am pleased to say that Cheyenne is looking brighter. The Leader reporter heard we had a great meeting on Sunday night. He called on me for all the news. I ordained a Priest, I told him, Mr. Thomas Barrett, and that he had been a member of the M. E. Church for seven years. That I baptized him five weeks ago. We had twelve at our Sunday School. We had a splendid meeting at Mr. Burts; several strangers came, and the Spirit of the Lord is with us. I feel we shall have a branch of the church at Cheyenne. Bro. Barrett has moved into a larger house, and one room is for our church and Sunday School. He lives on the south side of the track, and there is not a church on that side; but we will have one to-morrow night, if all is well. I have appointed Bro. Barrett to preach to-morrow night.

Brothers and sisters, pray for us in Cheyenne, that we may be the means of bringing many souls to Jesus. We have four places to preach in in Cheyenne, one south, one east, one north, and my home in the center; and in the little meetings the Lord has blessed us.

I just came home from Bro. Barretts, where I preached to-night, and there were about nine men in my sitting room. Bro. Barrett came in to get warm. I said, Bro. Barrett, I have a good church here, I will hold a meeting right away. So I off with my hat, and commenced to talk of the glorious work; and the Lord blessed me. It seems so impressed on my mind that if we could have the Hope become a weekly, what a blessing it would be. And if we all pray and put our hands in our pockets, and send what we can spare, it will soon become a weekly. We find all Sunday Schools have papers for children every Sunday. We are the royal branch of Joseph. Let us not be behind others. I pray my Heavenly Father to bless all his people.

Your brother,

JOHN EAMES.

PAYSON CITY, Utah,

February 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I have just been reading in the Herald the appeal from brethren Caffall and Anderson, and was glad to see that some of my brethren could see the necessity of a paper in the Danish language. I believe it is a step in the right direction, and especially since my labor in Utah have I felt the need of reading matter for the Scandinavian people. I hope that all interested, will now put forth an effort, and let the work be done. Do not wait to see what somebody else will do; but let us manifest our love for the cause of Christ by doing what we can for its advancement. Bro. Burt and self have started on a trip south again, but we make but slow headway on account of stormy weather and deep snow. If possible shall visit Richfield and other places in Sevier county. I have labored lately at Provo City and other places in Utah county, and found several who I think will obey in the near future.

Yours in gospel bonds,

H. N. HANSEN.

BOONSBORO, Iowa,

February 12th, 1884.

Dear Brother.—Although not a subscriber to the Herald very long, I have been a reader of it at times for some time before entering into the fold; but never was it so interesting as now. I long to tell what different feelings we have now from what we had before we united with the church. No tongue can express, no pen describe, how much more happiness there is at our home. It has to be felt to be realized. It almost seems as a dream to me; for my husband was a man addicted to strong drink; that he has entirely abandoned; and oh the anguish of that wife's, or mother's heart, who has such to bear. But God showed my husband in a vision, that the day had come for him to be redeemed. He prayed for understanding, and a peaceful mind. He proposing it, we attended the Latter Day Saints' Church, and were not long in being convinced that it was the only true Church, of Jesus Christ; and received knowledge and testimony from God. We prayed earnestly and were shown that obedience was the true path, so we were baptized some six months ago by Bro. William McBurney. We had not been long baptized when Bro. R. Etzenhouser happened along. If our belief was that the Latter Day Saints had the true gospel of Jesus Christ, how much more so when we had heard him preach. He preached in all about eighteen sermons at that time, and made some able efforts. Our branch has revived under his labors, and it is now in splendid condition. A number were brought to the fold. I want to testify to the world of the blessings we have received since coming into the work, hoping it may get an entrance to my home at Hyde Park, Pa. I see through the Herald that this gospel is being preached there. I desire my kindred to know that my husband has reformed, and that his heart is in the work. I exhort the Saints to more fully observe the commandments, and if their faith be not unwavering, to call upon the Elders of the church in case of sickness; for I feel that God will bless his Saints at all times, if they humbly ask him, nothing doubting.

On the night of the 12th of January, 1884, our only daughter, aged eighteen months, was taken very sick with croup and a severe cold, which produced lung fever. The next day, the child being very sick, my husband got Elders White and Etzenhouser, and they administered to and anointed her in the afternoon, and again at evening. She kept getting worse through the night. Brn. White and Etzenhouser stayed with us. At about three o'clock in the morning, I noticed a great change. I noticed that she was unconscious, and O, the anguish of my heart, having lost three before. No one but the mother, who has sat by the bedside of her dying infant, can describe the woe. Bro. Etzenhouser again administered to her, and prayed that the Lord might restore her. The prayers of Brn. White and Etzenhouser we never shall forget. Our Heavenly Father heard, and restored our darling. Inside of twenty minutes, from the third time she was administered to, she was resting sweetly; and next morning on opening her eyes, was pleasant and smiling, with no symptoms of sickness, but was weak.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. MATILDA HOWELL.

PLEASANTON, Decatur Co., Iowa,
February 13th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—As my health is slowly improving from the severe attack of pneumonia and lung fever under which I have been laboring since the last of December, I am able to occupy a portion of my time in reading; and of all the books and papers at my command, there is not one which gives me more solid instruction, or real pleasure, than the Book of Mormon. It is true, I take great pleasure in reading the teachings of our Savior and his apostles, as recorded in the New Testament: for therein we find the gospel of Christ set forth in its plainness, with all the great and precious promises attached thereto; and Jesus said, "If any man will do his [Father's] will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."—John 1:17. The scenes, as recorded in the New Testament, were enacted upon the Asiatic Continent; yet the gospel there set forth, is applicable to all nations. Most of the scenes recorded in the Book of Mormon were enacted upon this land, the continent of America, therefore to me doubly interesting. It not only gives us a minute history of the vast nation of Mound Builders, but also of that other civilized race, now extinct, both of which left monuments of civilization so clearly developed that scientists have come to the conclusion that America has been peopled by two distinct civilized races, prior to the aborigines of our country. Among both those races there were many prophets of the Lord, who believed in Christ, and who not only wrote of events which transpired among their people, but also prophesied of future events, many of which are clearly transpiring in our day. Some of them set forth the doctrine of Christ, the gospel in its fullness. Nephi, in the 13th chapter of Second Nephi, gives all the principles of the gospel: faith, repentance, baptism in water for remission of sins, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, and bears this strong, but true testimony, to-wit: "And behold, my beloved brethren, this is the way; and there is none other way nor name given under heaven, whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God. And now, behold, this is the doctrine of Christ, and the only and true doctrine of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, which is one God, without end. Amen."

Nephi is not alone in his testimony of what constitutes the only and true doctrine, or plan of salvation; but Jesus Christ, after his crucifixion and resurrection, came and ministered to the Nephites, the people on this continent, in the which he established among them his doctrine, his gospel, the principles of which were identically the same as testified of by Nephi, and the same as taught by himself and his apostles in Jerusalem, and the land of Palestine; and he made to the Nephites this positive declaration: "Verily, verily I say unto you, that this is my doctrine; and whoso buildeth upon this, buildeth upon my rock, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against them. And whoso shall declare more or less than this, and establish it for my doctrine, the same cometh of evil, and is not built upon my rock, but he buildeth upon a sandy foundation, and the gates of hell standeth open to receive such, when the floods come, and the winds beat upon them."

Paul, in his letter to the Galatians, confirms these two testimonies, when he says: "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

All these witnesses certify, in words or in substance, that, when we have obeyed these principles of the gospel, we have entered into the straight and narrow path which leads to life everlasting and that we must continue to walk in all humility and lowliness of heart before the Lord, doing unto others as we would that they should do unto us, and endure in faith and faithfulness to the end of our days, that we may attain unto that better resurrection promised in the scriptures.

They also assure us, that when we obey the gospel we are all placed upon an equal footing, and that we need no days—man to stand between us and our Heavenly Father, only the man Christ Jesus.

With these great truths so clearly set before us, I marvel and wonder that any people, who have become acquainted with, and who have received them, could be made to believe that some additional principles or things must be received and obeyed, in order to attain unto salvation.

Brethren, let us see to it, that we build upon the sure foundation, and that our cup is filled with the pure sincere milk of the word.

Your brother,

EBENEZER ROBINSON.

ROCKWELL CITY, IOWA,

February 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I have been down south to Camp Creek to the dedication of the church. A Methodist preached in the forenoon, Bro. Whiting in the evening, assisted by the Methodist preacher, the house being well filled, and the people very orderly and attentive. In the forenoon the house was packed. The meeting house is a fine building. On Monday evening I preached in the school-house in the neighborhood where the president of the branch resides. The people turned out well. I don't know that ever people gave me such attention. It seemed to me that the people were hungry for the word; and God greatly blessed me with his Holy Spirit. Bro. Goff, from Crawford county, followed me. The Saints seem to be well thought of and live in a fine country; the very best of land. If they continue faithful, and have the word preached to the people in time to come, will I think build up a large branch there. The president is a good man, and invited me to come back again to preach. Bro. Knox and I have preached in the school-house here every Sunday since I have been here. People are very much prejudiced in this neighborhood. Yesterday a Methodist preacher came in just as I took the stand. After I got through, I asked him if he had anything to say. He arose and said that so far as he understood me, that I preached the truth, and that he would recommend my preaching. I asked him to sing some. He did, and then dismissed the meeting.

Yours,

N. STAM.

CHESTER, Illinois,

February 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—There is a few of us here, the remains of a little branch organized about January, 1865, under the presidency of Elder Richard Rowley, late of Davenport, Iowa. We were doing very well till April, 1866, when he and family, with Bro. George Hayward and family, left for Davenport, leaving five of us here. Shortly afterward, I went to Richland county, Ill., and so our branch was broken. I returned in 1874, and found but little left of the hope once resting with them. I have been trying to bring them back to the old way as much as I could, though I am no preacher; and I write to ask if some Elder from St. Louis, or somewhere near, could come and set us right. There are several others I think that will come in at the gate. The signs of the times are causing some to think that the "day of the Lord" is approaching.

The Herald is all the preacher we have had for several years. It is a good one. I like it as a weekly, and would like it better if it was a semi-weekly. Your Littlefield letters were clinchers, and broke the last straw of hope of a drowning system. If an elder can come, we will try to make him comfortable during his stay, and will try to pay expenses. We would like to have one come this month or next, before the working season comes on, as we are poor, and have to labor. Any one wishing to correspond with me, can do so by addressing me at Chester, Randolph Co., Illinois.

Yours in bonds,

JASPER M. TOUSLEY.

BRIDGPORT, Connecticut,

February 13th, 1884.

Dear Sir and Brother:—I feel led to write to you. Though I never saw you, yet I do not feel that we are strangers. As I am your subordinate in a royal and holy priesthood, and the only one in Bridgport, I regard it as one of my duties to report progress to you. We have begun the system of two meetings a week, and the sacrament once a month. As soon as the weather opens I shall begin to hold out of door meetings; for I feel that the Lord will bless this people if I am faithful. To this end, dear brother, I ask you to pray for me, that the Lord will bless me by giving the Spirit of revelation to lead me in my duties.

I have had three sick in my little charge this last week, and very sick too. I ministered to them to the limits of my holy office, and the Lord in his boundless mercy honored my faith, raised up the sick, and we rejoice together in love and thankfulness for such a priesthood, in its degrees of perfect order, that reach up the steps of the great white throne, to the eternal and everlasting God, who is our Father, the Beginning and the End, the Author and Finisher of our faith. To whom we have actual access, by and through the Holy Priesthood. Hence we are wise, not in the wisdom of men, but in the knowledge of God, who reveals his will concerning us, to us daily. Hence our Bible is always open before us. O how my heart swells with emotion, and the soul seems as if it had grown too large for this body. It seems to be shaking its plumage as though it were to take its flight to the eternal throne. Why should it, yet so unworthy, yet so richly blest. Our sister Vincent has been very sick, but is getting along nicely now. Pray for us dear brother, that with such zeal as our faith may produce, we may manifest the fruits of a righteous minister, and bring souls to Christ. We pray that the very God of Israel will uphold you with the right hand of his power, that the Divine Spirit will always be with you, and reveal to you the spiritual condition of this branch of his church; and that God, the Holy Ghost, may overshadow, defend and shield you from all our foes, seen and unseen to the end, and you may surrender your charge to Christ when he comes, as he surrenders his charge to God the Father.

Your brother,

R. W. W. PREECE.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Feb. 14th.—A ruffian seized Mr. Gladstone by the collar yesterday on the streets of London and shook him roughly. The assailant escaped and has not yet been apprehended.

A meeting of 15,000 people at Sheffield, England, last night denounced the policy of Mr. Gladstone in Equatorial Africa as "a sacrifice of the national honor and prestige."

Turkey has a new trouble on her hands. The Cretans are again in a revolt, arising from the determination of the Sultan that the Christians in Crete, who belong to the Greek Church, shall be regulated by the Mohammedan religious laws. So long as these laws applied only to civil affairs the Cretans made no serious objections; but when it was sought to regulate their ecclesiastical affairs they at once resisted. More than this, the rates of taxation have been largely increased to help support the mosques, and in several cases lands have been levied upon to satisfy their demands. All this has aroused the liberty-loving Cretans, who were granted self-government under the treaty of 1878, and the extent of the revolt is indicated by the order of the Porte to dispatch 5,000 troops to the island. Every revolt of the Cretans during recent periods has resulted in their attaining a large degree of liberty.

The Czar of Russia for the last month has been in such a deplorable state of nervous depression that to all intents and purposes he may be regarded as insane. He is thoroughly terror-stricken and lives in a state of panic which would be ludicrous if it did not produce such melancholy consequences. The present state of things in Russia cannot last many months, and what the issue will be no man can predict. The attitude of Russia toward Germany has become absolutely servile in its dependence.

The disasters which have befallen the troops under Baker Pasha and Tewfik Bey have caused the greatest anxiety and alarm. At Constantinople the Sultan has decided to send large re-enforcements to Jeddah. Three Austrian Lloyd's steamers have been chartered for the purpose. One left Sunday, another today, and the third will leave tomorrow. All carry a great quantity of military stores, provisions, and ammunition, and several mountain guns. Only a few of the troops embark at Constantinople, the bulk of the troops being received on route at the Dardanelles, Salonica, Smyrna, and Syrian ports. No men have been taken from Crete on account of the effervescent condition of the population. The rumored insurrection is untrue, although both Mohammedan and Christian demonstrations are taking place with the view of securing the next election for a Governor of the same faith of the respective factions. The Cretan chiefs are all now at Athens. The intended re-enforcements amount to over 5,000 men. They will be ready at Jeddah in the event of an arrangement with England for immediate service in the Soudan.

News of the dispatch of the British forces is spreading rapidly and the rebels are dispersing. A battery of the First brigade of Artillery at Chat-ham, has been placed on full war footing for foreign service. The rebels have abandoned a position ten miles from Suakin. Wyld, of the intelligence Bureau Department, has returned to Cairo from Abyssinia. He reports four tribes hostile to El Mahdi and waiting an opportunity to attack him. The Hadindowah tribe, however, the most powerful in the Eastern Soudan, has declared for El Mahdi, whose emissaries are also stirring up a rebellion in Yemen. The tribes of Mery have taken the oath of submission and fidelity to Russia.

Feb. 15th.—"Chinese" Gordon, as is well known, is a man of profound religious convictions, and studies the Bible with an enthusiasm that is usually supposed to belong to the theologian more than to the soldier. A curious proof of this, according to the Whitehall Review, was afforded during one of his visits to England, when he paid several visits to Kew and made eager inquiries of all the officials at the gardens, from Sir Joseph Hooker downwards, as to whether they could give him any information of any kind which would enable him satisfactorily to determine the exact botanical nature and characteristics of the tree of life.

Bastian, the American Spiritualist, has been exposed as a fraud, in Vienna, Austria, and expelled from the city.

El Mahdi is preparing to storm Tokar, Egypt. Yemen, Arabia, is in revolt. At the capture of Sinkat, the rebels killed 200 women, and some children.

Preparations for war in the Soudan seem to be energetic enough at Suez. The situation of the English Generals on the Upper Nile, however, could not well be more critical. They are even in danger from the Egyptian troops which they command.

Feb. 17th.—Gen. Gordon has arrived at Khartoum, and has issued a proclamation recognizing the Mahdi as Sultan of Kordofan, remitting half the taxes of the region, and permitting the slave trade. The Arabs of the city are reported to be satisfied.

The enemy is mustering for an attack on Suakin. Three thousand of Baker Pasha's troops are ready to fall in, but nobody trusts them. Steady blacks man the redoubts. The Porte will send 10,000 men to Jeddah, Arabia, to be in readiness for service in the Soudan if needed. The rebels are bombarding Tokar with Krupp guns captured during the encounter with Baker Pasha's forces. The commandant of the garrison is wavering, and it is doubtful whether he will be able to hold out until relief arrives. The military council has decided to disband the Egyptian army.

An agrarian agitation is being carried on in Southern and Western Russia, and the Governors of the provinces in those regions are appealing for military re-enforcements in order to protect the landlords from the assaults of the peasants.

Four men fired on the carbineer of King Humbert's train near Corneto, Italy, yesterday. The carbineer returned the fire, wounding one of his assailants. A bottle of gun-powder with a lighted fuse attached was also thrown at the train, without doing any damage, however.

The delegates recently appointed by the Manitoba farmers to present a statement of their grievances to the Dominion Government have returned to their homes, and report that their mission has been a complete failure. The authorities at Ottawa refuse to do anything towards removing the causes of complaint. There is great indignation among the Manitobans over the blunt and discourteous refusals, and meetings have been called to consider the situation.

Feb. 18th.—France is strengthening her fleet in the Mediterranean. This excites some interest at London.

On Gen. Gordon's arrival at Khartoum, thousands crowded to kiss his hands and feet, calling him "The Sultan of the Soudan." Addressing the people Gen. Gordon said: "I come without soldiers, but with God on my side to redress evils. I will not fight with any weapons, but will mete out justice. There shall be no more Bashi-Bazouks." The populace say Gen. Gordon is giving them more than El Mahdi could give. Gen. Gordon is sending copies of his proclamation in all directions.

A letter from El Obeid says that the Mahdi is in great fear of assassination. Visitors are permitted to approach him only on all-fours, and must remain at a considerable distance.

The condition of the Christian missionaries is most deplorable. They live in straw huts outside the town, and are destitute of food, clothing and money. The negro novices have been enrolled in the army or sold into slavery. One priest became a Mussulman.

The police have seized quantities of revolutionary prints in several suburbs of Vienna.

Many Christians have been massacred in Annam since the beginning of January. The Annamite Minister of War is implicated. The Chinese Viceroy, prior to the capture of Sontag, orders the Black Flags to murder every Christian in the city.

The Mark Lane Express in its review of the British grain trade of last week says: The mild, springlike weather favored the sowing of beans and peas. Preparations to sow spring grain crops are being rapidly made. The autumn-sown crops look exceedingly well. Trade in native wheat is not improved. Flour is rather cheaper. Other articles are not altered in prices. Foreign wheats are inanimate and unimproved. Trade in Liverpool is dull. White wheats are weaker. Flour is unchanged. Cargoes off coast are not improved. There were fourteen arrivals and four sales, five withdrawn, and seven remain, including five Californian. Cargoes on passage and for shipment are lifeless. Nothing is doing in American red winter wheat. Sales of English wheat last week, 52,221 quarters at 37 shillings 3 pence, against 53,121 quarters at 41 shillings the corresponding week last year.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Feb. 14.—A waterspout caused immense damage in Arequipa, Peru, and the environs. The loss is estimated at 500,000 soles. Several persons were drowned.

A cyclone, the first of the early spring season, swept across the northern part of Georgia, Wednesday. A church and hundreds of cabins were blown down; many cattle were drowned; and several persons were killed.

A mass of ice went rattling over the Caspian Sea, and all the fishermen who were working on the cake are believed to have been lost.

There was a great fire in a cotton-mill at Tourcoing, a manufacturing city in the north of France.

Shawneetown, Ill., is still fifteen feet under water. At Lawrenceburg, Ind., a high wind set the waves rolling, which displaced or upturned many houses. At Cincinnati the waters, after reaching the unprecedented height of seventy-two feet, have receded an inch. People, East, West, North, and South, are bestirring themselves to relieve the sufferings of the victims who have been driven from their homes.

There is a picture of desolation about the Falls of the Ohio that has no parallel in the history of the nineteenth century. The merciless river has crept steadily out of its banks and over the highlands until the two cities on the Indiana side are almost billow-buried, and the third, on the Kentucky shore (Louisville), seems to be at the mercy of the flood. At 11 o'clock last night the river passed the high marks of 1883—forty-four feet eight inches—and rose about an inch an hour till daybreak, when the rate of rise was reduced to about a quarter of an inch hourly. At six p.m. the marks show forty-six feet. The cold wave is causing distress among those who are poorly sheltered.

The flooded districts of Louisville, suffered greatly by the wind last night. The worst expectations were realized, and this morning the water lying between Fulton street and Washington was literally covered with debris of the wreck. Everything is chaos, and but few houses are left unhurt. When the wind veered round last night and blew a strong gale from the north the water was lashed into a foam. Billow after billow was sent rolling in to break upon the inundated districts. Houses popped up like corks in the water, to dash against each other in the current. Lumber piles were toppled over and floated off, while sheds and buildings of lighter and less durable structure were torn to pieces and carried off in the flood piecemeal. A terrible wail went up from the flooded district as it labored against the wind and water, and the groaning and crash of the houses could be heard on Main street. Those who were aroused by the noise thought that it was the water that had broken in upon the city. The flood sufferers who had been driven from their homes flocked to the water's edge to watch their houses as they drifted down, but none dared to breast the storm. This morning at day break the shores were fairly lined with a crowd of expectant people, and shortly afterward a thousand little boats were swimming the water to hunt for their former homes. The scene along the river front as the lifeboats approached with the morning provisions, was at once pathetic and ridiculous. Long before the boat approached the front this morning Clay street was crowded with sufferers; old men, little children, and weak half famished women jostled each other in the crowd to get to the front. When the boat came in sight the news spread through the streets from mouth to mouth till every block was moving with people. They fought and shoved each other like so many hogs in a pen.

The suffering is great at Jeffersonville. The people are crowded together in churches and school-houses, almost to suffocation. The relief measures in operation are very inadequate. The waves did much damage to property last night. Two more feet of water will flood the penitentiary, which has 600 convicts.

The 125 families of lime-burners at Utica, twelve miles above Louisville, are still huddled together in one church, sadly in need of relief. The Town of Clarksville, Ind., is almost washed away.

The water is rising upon the outskirts of Dycusburg, Ky., while Pinkneyville and all small hamlets thence to Smithland at the mouth of the river are entirely under water. House-tops at the former place are just peeping out of the muddy waves. The lower portions of Smithland, in the rear of the town, are submerged, and only the slight elevation offered by the wharf is inhabitable. The water has entered the lower rooms of manufacturing establishments at Paducah, causing a total suspension of work. There is not a foot of dry land on the Kentucky shore between Paducah and Cairo. At Metropolis this morning the water was just going into the hotel located on the wharf, while all buildings adjacent are gradually going under. The Town of Joppa, just below Metropolis, is entirely overflowed, and the inhabitants are roosting in upper stories.

Three-fourths of the town of Irontown, O., is under water, including the entire business portion. The water is seven feet higher than in 1883. Thousands are homeless and penniless. Frame houses were swept from their foundations, and a brick building crumbled into the waters. A strong current is sweeping through the streets. At Hanging Rock but four houses are above water. Coryville has but two houses above the flood. Bottom-lands are devastated. The post-office is under water, and mail is delivered from the court-house. Starvation stares thousands in the face. The iron-mills were stopped, and many employes destitute before the flood came. Three thousand people are homeless at Madison, Ind.

Feb. 15.—At Cincinnati the water has receded several inches. Three hundred houses have been swept away at Lawrenceburg, Ind.

By the crumbling of a water-soaked boarding-house at Cincinnati ten people were killed. Six other persons were drowned at other points in the flooded districts.

Feb. 16.—According to the estimates of a newspaper correspondent, who rode by boat from Evansville to New Albany, a distance of 200 miles, there are 10,000 homeless people along the banks of the Ohio River between those two points. At Shawneetown the river is slowly rising, and still greater horrors seem to be in store for that afflicted city. At Lawrenceburg great destitution prevails. The Ohio at Cincinnati is taking its time to recede, but is none the less falling. At Louisville it is stationary.

Feb. 17.—At Cairo, Paducah, Shawneetown, and other points on the Ohio River, according to latest accounts, the water was still rising, and, as rain was falling, it was anticipated that the rise would continue. Nearly all the houses on the Kentucky side have been submerged. The worst is not over yet at these points, it is feared. At Cincinnati and Wheeling the river is subsiding.

A severe wind and rain storm raged at San Francisco. Considerable damage was done to railroad and telegraph lines.

Feb. 18.—Four men were killed and one seriously injured by an avalanche at Park City, Utah.

Reuben Hart and his wife, colored, of Crockett, Tex., went to church Sunday night and locked their six children in the house. The house burned and all the children perished.

The water at Evansville, Ind., continues to rise. At points below it is also rising. New Albany, Ind., is nearly all under water. Bridgeport, a few miles below New Albany, presents a pitiable sight. The town was abandoned several days ago; and of the houses that had not been washed away, only the roofs were visible. A relief boat passing down the river, found that Rosewood was entirely under water and almost wholly destroyed. At West Point, Ky., much destitution was discovered. There were at least 350 families almost without food and entirely without fuel, and many of them sick. Two hundred and fifty of the men had been thrown out of employment in the stone quarries and had no money with which to properly provision themselves when the flood came upon them.

At Mauckport 250 destitute people were found and their needs supplied. The town was almost completely under water, only the chimneys and roofs of many buildings being visible. A church on higher ground than that upon which the greater portion of the town stands contained ninety people, all in want, who hailed the arrival of the boat with joy. Two thousand five hundred rations were delivered there. At Amsterdam 150 families were found in needy circumstances. More than half the town was under water. Leavenworth was found to be entirely submerged, and 500 persons were in need of aid. Dozens of frame houses had floated from their foundations and were held to trees by stout ropes. Many of them, however, will prove total wrecks. At this point the river extended from hill to hill—a width of twelve miles—over a part of which the largest boats could run with ease. Many of the inhabitants were quartered in the court-house. Two thousand five hundred rations were left there.

Schooner Point was completely submerged. At Wolf Creek 250 persons in needy circumstances were found, and 400 rations were left for them. At Derby there was considerable suffering. The number of destitute people was estimated at 100, and 4,000 rations were distributed.

At Rome the swells from the boat as she landed lifted three houses from their foundations. Much suffering was encountered, and 3,000 rations were put off. The entire front of Stephensport was flooded, and 100 families were in need and were provided with 400 rations. All the upper portion of Cloverport is under water. Fifteen hundred rations were turned over to the local relief committee. Tobinsport, on the opposite bank of the river, is a total wreck. One hundred and fifty people were found to be in need, and 800 rations put off. Most of the inhabitants had removed to the other side of the river. Three-fourths of Hawesville is under water, and 500 persons were found to be in need of help; 4,000 rations were turned over to the local relief committee for distribution. Tell City, with 2,300 inhabitants was completely flooded. At this point several residents of Maxville, a small town a mile below, which had been completely swept away, were found and their needs supplied. Great distress prevailed at and near Grandview, and 1,000 rations were distributed.

Seven thousand rations were left at Rockport for distribution in the interior, where much suffering was reported to exist. On the Kentucky shore opposite, hundreds of farms are under water, and many houses have been carried away.

Enterprise, is in a deplorable condition. The entire town is submerged to the depth of several feet. There was great distress, and 1,000 rations were left.

Ninety people in needy circumstances were found at Grissom's Landing, and 1000 rations were left for them. Monarch's distillery, situated at this point, contains 12,000 barrels of whisky, and is partially under water. Newburg was found to be all right, but upon the opposite side of the river a vast amount of property has been destroyed, and hundreds of families driven from their homes; 3,000 rations were left there. The boat on this trip relieved 6,000 persons and distributed 35,000 rations. At six o'clock this evening, at Shawneetown, the river was within six inches of last year's highest point, and rising at the rate of a quarter of an inch an hour.

The water is falling slowly at the upper Ohio River towns; and the work of cleaning and moving back into deserted homes is being vigorously prosecuted. Much destitution and suffering prevails.

Feb. 19.—A cyclone this afternoon formed at the mouth of the Cahawba River, in Central Alabama, or still further southwest, and traveled northeastward in the valley of this unimportant stream, wreaking death and destruction in many places. The settlements worst stricken, so far as reports have been received, were Lead Station, Amberson, and Ladiga. From these points the funnel or funnels went on to Northern Georgia, where their presence was noted at various places. Every house at Lead Station was destroyed, and six persons were killed and fifteen seriously wounded. A special train went with physicians from Birmingham to the scene. The gyrations of the funnel involved a territory half a mile wide, leaving the usual snake-like track of utter ruin. From Oxmoor, six miles from Birmingham, there came rumors of great harm. Every house in Amberson was blown down, and Ladiga suffered great damage. The number of casualties in this region, which is sixty miles northeast of Birmingham, is put at fourteen persons killed.

The dam of the Los Angeles River in California, broke Sunday evening, producing the most disastrous flood ever experienced. The lower portion of the city was completely inundated. Hundreds of families were obliged to abandon their homes and seek shelter in the hills. Forty buildings were washed away. The loss is $150,000. From Los Angeles to Mojave, a distance of 100 miles, hardly a mile of the Southern Pacific track remains intact. East to San Geronio, eighty miles, the devastation is equally great. The California Southern, from Colton to San Diego, is washed out. Travel in all directions is suspended. It will probably be two months before communication is properly re-established. Reports received from towns in the southern portion of San Joaquin Valley announce the heaviest floods ever known in that section.

Many of the districts inundated from the Ohio and its tributaries, were swept by a destructive storm of wind and rain. Many houses were blown down by the wind, and carried away by the flood. The destruction of property can not be computed, but is placed at hundreds of thousands of dollars. In New Albany, Ind., a town of 23,000 inhabitants, 10,000 are dependent on charity. There were heavy rain and high wind at Cincinnati, O., and the river commenced to rise again. At Memphis, Tenn., the water is five inches above the danger line.

THE CHURCH; AND DUTIES OF THE SAINTS IN THE TEMPORAL THINGS.

BY THE BISHOPRIC.

To the Saints, the faithful in Christ, and to all everywhere who are devoted to the proclamation of his gospel:—

The year just closed must be looked back upon by us all, as having been one which afforded as many opportunities for accomplishing good, preaching the gospel and working righteousness, as perhaps any that have come and gone in the history of the Church.

What has actually been done by us, individually and as a body, toward the advancement of such good, carrying on the proclamation of the word, and fulfilling the law—will bear its relationship to these opportunities in the time when we shall render a just and true account of our stewardships unto Him, who is the faithful and true, the Lord of all, and head of the Church.

And the opportunities which have been improved, those neglected, and of the number which shall open up during the year of which we are now at the entrance, will bear a relationship to each other, to each of us, to the rewards to be rendered, and the general work of establishing the gospel of peace, in proportion as we shall now enter and occupy as commanded in his word, with all our energies, ability and strength.

Mindful of these things, and of the strictness with which all must render unto the Lord an account of their work, it is with no ordinary feeling of duty and responsibility, that the Bishopric have determined to appeal directly to you in behalf of that department of church work of which they have the more immediate concern and oversight, and which holds so important a place in the building up and establishment of the gospel cause.

The unanswered calls for spiritual laborers; the large number of ministers confining themselves almost wholly to the work of providing for their families; the absence of that spiritual strength among many of the churches that should specially characterize the work; and the difficulty on the part of the church to care for the necessities of the families of active ministers, and for the care and relief of the poor and afflicted, are all tokens bearing evidence of a great lack of duty on the part of the body in some regard; and it shall here be sufficient to simply refer to the fact, without attempting to charge the blame upon any definitive part or portion of the same.

Lest, however, it should prove to be in the line of our own work, and by way of caution and duty, and for the purpose of placing that department known as the "temporal," in such condition that it may fairly aid and support the spiritual, in going forward in strength, and vigorously prosecuting the work of preaching the gospel and building up the kingdom of heaven; herein the assistance of all, the good will of all, the blessings and prayers of all, and the offerings and sacrifices of all are urged and invoked in behalf of the work, and particularly this branch of it; realizing as we do that the temporal department is not now, nor ever has, since the organization of the church in 1830, been placed in that condition, and made that refuge and support to the work of the ministry and church in its general duties, that is clearly designed for it under the law as contained in the Scriptures and revelations.

As individuals and all members of the same body, with equal rights and liberties thereunder, we should be equally interested in the welfare and building up of that body; and the first thought on the part of every one should be to ask what particular work and duty is required of him in the way of building. And when the answer is had to this inquiry, the next step should be to go forward and perform that work with a firm determination, and eye single to the glory of God and the good of the body, without stopping to inquire, or without reference to the fact, of whether the brother or sister upon the right, or the left, will perform his or her part or not.

It is the labor thus performed, with full purpose of heart and in wisdom under the law, that truly enters fittingly into the structure of this spiritual house, or as has been most tersely said: "According to the effectual working in the measure of every part," wrought under the true and fashioning influences of the Holy Spirit, in love working unto him who is the head, even Christ:

"From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."—Eph. 4:16.

Equal interests ought to make themselves manifest in equal works. Not that one should do just as much as another; for much more may be required of one than another in amount, whether of a spiritual laborer in teaching, or of a temporal, in acquiring and making of offerings: but equal in the sense of each doing all that he can for the success and growth of this spiritual structure, having consecrated himself and all that he has to the service and glory of God. He who has received of goods to the amount of two talents, must employ the two; and he who has received five, must occupy accordingly; for, "to every man" is distributed, "according to his several ability." And when the final rewards are made up, the equality is still recognized.

It is said alike to him who had wrought according to his two talents, and to him who had wrought with the five; "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

This equality of interest enjoined in the law on the part of every one, is calculated of itself, to dispel and check the jarrings, contentions, envyings, strife, and lustful, and covetous desires, which otherwise creep in and corrupt the body. For a man will not readily do that which he perceives to be against the success of that in which his highest interest centers; hence, the urgent necessity of calling the attention of the church to these things, as set forth in the revelations in its earlier days; (Book of Covenants sections 102 and 98), and the plain and specific declaration then made, that, "Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her to myself." And the fact stated is evident with very little reflection; for if this law is ignored in the prosecution of the work, if the work was finished and not by right rule, it would be so unlike him, having been fashioned by another law, that it would bear no resemblance or likeness to his will, or heavenly things.

It is not only a question of the building up and growth of the work that we are required to look to, but manner and means as well; and it will be found just as vain and useless, for us as any other people, to do our work, "teaching the doctrines and commandments of men."

The law was given for the purpose of preparing a people to be the Lord's. That part relating to things spiritual and the spirituality of man, for the purpose of directing the growth and development of his spiritual nature; of so guiding and leading him as to bring him into closer communion and more perfect rapport with those things which relate to heaven and the divine being. That relating to temporal things, to so direct and govern him in these, as to bring into subjection the evil and grosser nature, such as covetousness, selfishness, strife and the many unjust desires to which we are subject; and to aid in the development of those qualities closely allied to the spiritual, of morality, virtue and beneficence; and thus bring out the higher qualities of the human heart and character. On the principle that "he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" And this love, as the other, is manifest by the works of the law. "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous." He will remember Jesus' cause and its interests; care with a more willing heart for the poor and needy, and go forward with kindness to the suffering, relieving the destitute; "visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and keep himself unspotted from the vices of the world."

Thus, the law of Christ governing in both spiritual and temporal relations, will certainly accomplish the work whereunto it has been established; for God is true and his covenants are certain. But should his law not be permitted to govern, it can not and will not bring about that peace in which our hope is bound; since it is only under its operations that the building up of the kingdom of righteousness is possible. There is manifestly a higher and more controlling purpose to be seen in the commitment of the law relating to temporal matters, than that of worldly gain, or the bringing of a few coffers into the treasury. If wealth, or means, were all that is lacking in order to the building up and establishing the kingdom of God, he who created the wealth of the world and controls all things, could readily supply the want; but there must be a prepared people as well as means; and he who is unchangeable has established the way of this preparation, the regeneration and development of the children, and this preparation must first be made. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight," is fairly illustrative of the principle.

This brings us to face fairly the issue of the relationship of the work to, and our respective duties and obligations under, the law. And it will become well the purpose of this article, if we shall succeed in clearly pointing out some of those which are termed duties in temporal things, together with some proper reasons for their performance; treating the subject, if possible, as to the parties and their obligations; the intent and purpose of the giver; the amount required under the law; and the method and manner of giving.

1. OF THE PARTIES AND THEIR OBLIGATIONS.

The church in the New Testament is likened to a family; a household; temple; body; and in the body "every one members one of another;" in the temple as "lively stones;" children of the house over which is Christ; a family whose branches extend into heaven: implying clearly in each illustrative symbol, a relationship of duty, of mutual obligations, and dependence on the part of the membership upon each other, and upon Jesus who is the head. Hence, the leading and chief characteristics of this association are and were to be, the unity of the Spirit; of intention; of works; of faith, and of hope; for to be a member indeed, one must "put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness," and labor for the full accomplishment of the one purpose of the body, as he would for the success of an undertaking only in his own interest.

"Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, in one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling."—Eph. 4:4 (Inspired Translation.)

By the discharge of these duties and obligations under the law do we work righteousness, "put on robes of righteousness;" and they who fail to labor in accordance with their abilities, are even in a worse condition than they who build of wood, hay, or stubble. These last do not take heed how they build, and their works will not stand in that day, when "the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." But of the former, it is said, they are "slothful servants;" "have not on the wedding garments;" they had not attempted to do the bidding of the master of the house, and must be expelled therefrom.

"So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."—Luke 12: 21.

The rich and the poor are to abide the principles of the law, and each let their works be manifest in the same according to the ability given to perform. (Book of Covenants, sec. 56, par. 5.)

The apostle urging these common duties upon the church at Corinth says:

"Now concerning the collection for the Saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.

The only exceptions possible under this instruction would be to those who have not anything; and of whom it is stated, "ye shall impart of that which you have to give" for their relief.

The revelation of, 1831, is also thus general in its application to parties, for the particular blessings which it promises, are not only for a part, but made to, and desirable on the part of all.

"Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man) and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after to-day cometh the burning; this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon. Wherefore, if ye believe me, ye will labor while it is called to-day."—B. of C., sec. 64, par. 5.

This again, is in harmony with the general application of the law as it related to Israel under the prophets.

"Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation."—Mal. 3:8, 9.

When Jesus refers to these duties on the part of the people he associates them with those matters considered more worthy under the law, and urges the importance of fulfilling this part with all others:

"But I say unto you, woe be unto you, Pharisees! For ye tithe mint, and rue, and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment, and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."—Luke 11:42.

The duty originally, is made as general as the gifts and blessings of God, of life and the means of living, unto the human family; and is one of the agencies that has been ordained by him who is the judge of all, by which to try the human family, as he saith through the prophet:

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Mal. 3:10.

The instruction to the Saints in, 1873, should encourage them to vie with each other in works that are good and calculated to benefit mankind.

"Behold, if my servants and my handmaidens, of the different organizations for good among my people, shall continue in righteousness, they shall be blessed, even as they bless others of the household of faith."—B. of C., sec. 117, par. 12.

When David celebrated before the Lord

the gifts made by the willing hearts of Israel he unfolded the theory upon which man may justly be called upon to aid the work of the kingdom of heaven. He says:

"Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name. But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all this comes from thee, and of thine own have we given thee."—2 Chron. 29: 13, 14.

Clearly then, if we have part and lot in the kingdom, we are of the parties referred to, as having duties connected therewith; either in being specially engaged in sowing the seed, the good word of the kingdom, or in the position of one who, "ministereth seed to the sower," or possibly both; let us therefore not deceive ourselves as those who have no "oil in their vessels," but labor that our vessels may be found filled, and ready to meet the hour of necessity, when the cry shall go forth, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

2. OF THE INTENT AND PURPOSE OF THE GIVER.

To perform the duties required under the law, it is necessary both for the attainment of the objects for which the law was given, and as a complete compliance with the same, that we do so voluntarily; from pure motives; in faith; and with full intention and desire to fulfill all that our Heavenly Father has enjoined. In support of this general principle the following citations are given which are sufficiently explicit without comment.

Jesus says:

"Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven." * * * "But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth: That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly."—Matt. 6: 1, 3, 4.

"He that giveth let him do so with simplicity."—Paul, Rom. 12: 8.

"Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind."—B. of C. sec. 64, par. 7.

"Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give: not grudgingly, or of necessity: for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver."—1 Cor. 9: 7.

"And again, Alma commanded that the people of the church should impart of their substance, every one according to that which he had; if he have more abundantly, he should impart more abundantly; and he that had but little, but little should be required; and to him that had not should be given. And thus they should impart of their substance, of their own free will and good desires toward God, and to those priests that stood in need, yea, and to every needy, naked soul. And this he said unto them, having been commanded of God."—B. of M. page 178.

In the scriptures of the Old Testament the same good will is taught as having been required on the part of Israel, and without which there could be no acceptable offering.

"Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring me an offering: of every man that giveth it willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering."—Ex. 25: 2.

"Thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother. But thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth."—Deut. 15: 7, 8.

It is not by "close fists," nor with doubt ful countenances, that the work must be done; but by "opening the hand wide"—"with the heart willingly."

Indeed, this is the only way we can fully comply with any requirement in the kingdom of God. And because men do not reach this plane of action, moving "by the renewing of the mind" and conversion of the heart in their work, they must fail of the reward promised in this life, and be of the number of whom it is said, "they strive to enter in but are not able." Whether we will or not is optional with ourselves; nevertheless the testimony of God standeth sure; and the promises are made to those who obey him from the heart, fervently. Under such a principle of action as this it is not possible to treat man as a mere machine; neither to force or oppress a people.

There is no room for the "do as you are told" policy, or the popular church schemes for "fleecing the flock" to take root: For men and women act under the conviction of an enlightened conscience and move from the principles of force entering into the government of beings in the divine life of conviction of duty and desire for good.

3. OF THE AMOUNT REQUIRED UNDER THE LAW.

That with which man is blest here, he is in some sense under obligations for; he can not at will and independently of himself create or make it; neither the sunshine, the dew, nor the rain is at his command, much less life and all of its attendant blessings. These we may consistently and fairly attribute to the Creator and upholder of all that is good; to him, as we are taught by the apostle, who is not "worshipped with men's hands as though he needed anything, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things." Being then so blest and obligated in our lives, trusted with that which is not our own but another's, it is highly proper that the test of our faithfulness to duty and development of soul herein, be made before the commitment to our trust of "the true riches." And men are expected here, to show by their works the proper qualities of soul, of honesty, benevolence, and charity; rendering a just and true account as required, in proportion as they have been blest with the things of life; and this, before admittance to the association of the worthies who have obtained "a good report," and "kept the faith," even with the offering of life itself. The apostle says:—"Let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him."

"Alma commanded that the people of the church should impart of their substance, every one according to that which he had; if he have more abundantly, he should impart more abundantly; and he that had but little, little should be required." The revelation of February, 1831, reads:

"If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and deed which can not be broken."—B. of C., sec. 42, par. 8.

"And the twelve were with him, (Jesus), and Joanna, the wife of Chuza Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance."—Luke 8: 1, 3.

These citations clearly show that men are justly required to remember the treasury of the Lord, and in proportion to their several abilities; to give of their properties according to that which they have; even according, as God hath prospered him." This rule is certainly founded in the principles of justice; it deals fairly with man, and in its relation one with another, and, therefore is equitable; it is according to that which is acknowledged to be the divine code; and hence right, because according to the law by which we are to be judged when the rewards for right and wrong doing are to be meted out to every one.

Just what the proportion is, to a certain extent, is also specified, and definitely settled by the law. The amount so fixed comes under the head of, and is denominated "tithes;" this term being used in the Scriptures so far as pertaining to duties of persons under the gospel economy, or observances with regard to temporal things in the church, to denote:

1. A tenth part.
2. Surplus property consecration.

The first, is that which has been applicable to the church in all dispensations and under all conditions. This was the portion Jacob vowed he would give to the Lord while he journeyed to Padan-aram, if he should be blest with bread to eat and raiment to put on, saying:

"And the place of this stone which I have set for a pillar, shall be the place of God's house; and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee."—Gen. 28: 22.

This tenth was also of the increase as is more definitely ascertained from the history of the observance of the rule by Abraham, and the further fact, that whatever was required for a full compliance with the law, was of the newly acquired, and not of that upon which the tenth had already been paid. It is said that Abram, who complied with this law—

"Gave a tenth part of all."—Heb. 7: 2.

"One tenth part of all that he possessed."—Book of Mormon, page 241.

And again—

"Gave a tenth of the spoils."—Heb. 7: 4.

These statements particularizing the observance of the law by the "father of the faithful" are guiding illustrations of the duties required of the faithful ones, who, like Abraham, obey the gospel. As was his duty he paid to the High Priest a tenth of all with which the Lord had blessed him, all of which at the time was increase; for when he started out in life he had only that of which he had need, being yet in his father-in-laws's house, and hence when he makes the offering, to "the keeper of the store-house of God," he faithfully consecrated "one-tenth part of all that he possessed." Afterwards when he returned with an increase from the slaughter of the kings, he also renders the just tribute to the High Priest, "of the spoils." This view is in harmony with the plain history of the transaction as it is set forth in the

Inspired Translation of the Scriptures:

"And Abram gave him tithes of all he had taken."—Gen. 14: 20.

"Wherefore, Abram paid unto him [Meichise-dek, the High Priest and keeper of the store-house,] tithes of all that he had, of all the riches which he possessed, which God had given him more than that which he had need."—v. 36-39.

This was afterwards required of all the children of Abraham, both by promise and the covenant; wherefore it is said:

"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine."—Prov. 3: 9, 10.

Again:

"Bring ye all the tithes into the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the fields, saith the Lord of Hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed, for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of Hosts."—Mal. 3: 10-12; and B. of M., p. 468.

After delivering these, with other words of the prophet Malachi, according to the record in the Book of Mormon, the statement is made:

"And now it came to pass that when Jesus had told these things, he expounded them unto the multitude, and he did expound all things unto them, both great and small. And he saith, These Scriptures which ye had not with you, the Father commanded that I should give unto you, for it was wisdom in him that they should be given unto future generations."—B. of M., p. 469.

In the specific instruction to the church, in our own time, it is written:

"Verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned [at his coming]."—B. of C., sec. 64, par. 5.

And again, in the year 1861:

"In order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law, the Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing."—B. of C., sec. 114, par. 1.

Don't overlook the idea—that the law is to be fulfilled. Of all people we should fully appreciate the reason of this. The law then is binding upon the church at the present time, and should be executed; put in force—administered; as any other relating to the body,—the church. The Twelve and Bishop, upon whom is laid the duty of execution, are agreed as to what this law is, and also the manner of execution; and whatever differences in opinion may have been said or thought, hitherto, to have existed between these quorums, it will be proper for us in this connection to state, that upon a comparison of views touching the principles generally governing under the law, during the Kirtland Conference, April, 1833, there was found, at that time, to be entire agreement.

Neither ought it to be supposed that where one of these quorums act touching this law the other is at variance; for since members in each must in the day of final account answer as to their acts with reference to the same, due deference to each other and the judgment of each as brethren, must be recognized in order to conform to the common rules of courtesy between man and man, saying nothing of the audacious presumption it must be for one of these parties to act contrary to the wishes of the other in the execution of this law, when the Lord has laid the responsibility of the same upon all.

"As I live, saith the Lord, in the manner ye execute this matter, so shall ye be judged in the day of judgment."—B. of C., sec. 114, par. 2.

We conclude then, that if these quorums are to give an account of their action in this matter in the day of judgment; the members to whom it is to be administered, the church generally, must also give an account in that day in the matter of obedience to the same.

The inquiry is made direct then, since the law is in force and equally binding upon the body as any other, what does it require of each and every member? The answer must of necessity be:—Entire, full and complete obedience as any other.

And it may not be amiss, to here remind the brethren of the fact, that when they teach faith, repentance, baptism, a godly walk and conversation, &c., they make no half way work of it; and the Saints would feel horrified generally, should they find any of their number teaching and practicing half repentance, half baptism, or half of the Christian graces only. But it would be just about as consistent to immerse a man's feet or hands, or sprinkle a little water on his head and call it a full and hearty compliance with the ordinance of baptism, as for one to undertake to comply with the law of tithing, by giving the fiftieth, seventy-fifth, or one hundredth part of the increase.

But, it is persisted, what is the increase? The answer is: Whatever a man has been blest with in the way of means over and above the living:—Of all the riches which he possesses, which God has given him more than that which he has need.

It may be thought that this would call for a large sum in many instances. Doubtless it will in a few. But it must be remembered that it will be no more of a burden to the giver, if the heart is right, than the poor man's dollar, or the widow's mite. And when the wealthiest shall have done their whole duty, the amount of the consecration, will not it be likely equal an hundredth part of the offering of Abraham, the father of the faithful, which he paid after he had returned from a sojourn of a few years in Egypt; for, he "was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold." And he "paid tithes of all that he had, of all the riches which he possessed, which God had given him more than that which he had need." The question also arises:—If a person has been making contributions in the shape of freewill offerings for a number of years, is the law still applicable and binding as to him?

If he has been faithful and done simply his duty in making freewill offerings, he has thus far certainly done well; for, as will be seen hereafter this is a duty required under the gospel covenant; and a person should take such an interest in the cause of Christ and humanity as to scatter these special blessings all along life's pathway; and such will have a recompense therefor in the resurrection of the just, if they are just. God so bestows his especial blessings upon us when we ask him and are in need, and whether we are worthy or not. But such act on the part of a person would not be a compliance with the law of tithing as set forth in the Scriptures, unless at the time when it was done the party intended to so comply with that law and distributed the proper amount, and to the proper person as provided therein. There is no doubt but while Abraham sojourned in Egypt and all along his course of life such bestowal of offerings were received from his hand and which proved blessings to the recipients; but notwithstanding this, he complied with the law in all of its requirements and rendered a true account to Melchisedek the keeper of the storehouse for the church.

Specific instruction, secondly, is given as to the amount of the offering, under the head of "surplus property;" which, under the state or condition of the society at the time, was made the first duty of the saints, or the "beginning of tithing." Unlike the general law of tithing referred to herein, it does not seem to have been the rule applicable under all conditions of the body; but, that relating under certain circumstances, as it would only be possible under such to carry out the intention and provisions of the same.

Perhaps the most correct and simple explanation that could in a few words be given of this part of the law, would be that, it is the specific rule governing as to the amount of the gift under the law of consecrations, which provides for an exhibit and inventory, or "the laying of all things before the Bishop;" and contemplating the mutual transfer of properties, for beneficiary rights and inheritances, and the adjustment of inharmonious relations between the rich and the poor.

To execute this, requires:

1. A place and duly organized body; Zion or a stake.
2. Assisting officers in these stations who are not necessary to the enforcement of the law referred to in the revelation of 1861.
3. Ability on the part of the Bishop to carry out the undertakings on the part of the body.
4. A people who are united in faith, spirit, the truth, sentiment, habits, pursuits, rights and interests and who will willingly conform to the law.

It is not claimed by the Bishopric that this law is binding upon any, except possibly, those claiming to act under the direction of the revelations and settling upon the land of zion; (that specifically so termed in this connection); but as to these, nothing in this article shall be construed as a formal opinion with regard to the obligations of such. Attention is simply called to the fact that it is definitely stated that he who shall go up unto the land of zion making preparation beforehand, fully realizing the responsibilities and obligations of such a step, "Shall be accounted as a wise steward. This is also an ensample."—(Rev. Sec. 72, 5; also to W. W. Phelps Sept., 1832.)

It may be said that the saints in Zion are no more circumspect, and no more readily conform to the law of the kingdom of Christ, than those of any other place. But it should be remembered that more is required of such, and that if there is nothing of this nature to be gained by the removal, parties can not be considered wise who go.

Notice is called to the matter for the reason that it is not desired that any shall go there under a misapprehension of the attending obligations and duties; and also to prevent perhaps, as great a stampede from the land hereafter, as there is now a feeling in that direction.

In every age of the Church it has been an easy matter to find persons who were willing to go up and inhabit; set down to the feast; but not so easy to find those who were willing to make the sacrifices required and fully abide the law governing.

It will not be questioned, that the instruction to the Church at this time is, "to stay," or "settle in the regions round about," as may consistently be done. (B. of C. sec. 102, par. 6, 7, and B. of C. sec. 117, par. 11).

The statement is also made, that:

"It is not expedient in me that there shall be any stakes appointed until I command my people. When it shall be necessary I will command that they be established."—B. of C., sec. 117, par. 11.

Together, these avoid the conditions named for the successful carrying out of the law set out in section 106, or "surplus property;" a fixed place (and this included certain officers) being requisite in that, to the successful working of the rule. 1. The land of zion. 2. All the stakes. Perhaps at the time the revelation was given the only places strictly apply so the terms could be properly executed were Far West, (where it was given) Kirtland and in what was strictly termed Zion.

Where the rule of surplus properties is carried into effect there is necessarily associated in the execution certain officers with fixed duties, (and consequently attaching responsibilities), viz: the First Presidency and High Priests, which are not in terms or by implication, except in so far as the Twelve are under the direction of the Presidency, made parties to the execution of the law spoken of in the revelation of 1861.

The Twelve, whose duties are "to build up the church and regulate all the affairs of the same, in all nations," whatever its condition, are named with the Bishop, (whose duties also are general and resulting, whatever the state or condition of the body), as the responsible officers in the execution of the law of tithing then referred to; and thus by the terms of the regulation we have a proof that the law therein referred to of "tithing" was that binding upon the church in all conditions and circumstances, and is in agreement with all that is written upon this law as coming through the head, and the fact that the Lord in his instructions is ever in harmony with his own word, and that his ways are not crooked, whatever men may think in regard to the same.

When we take up the revelation of September, 1882, and read: "Nor is it expedient that the elders of the first quorums be sent out of the land of America until the work of the re-organization of my church be more fully established, and a greater unity of understanding between them be obtained," we are again reminded of the unalterable decrees of the "Just One," and the fact that if man would attain to the excellency of the things promised, he must observe the directions pointing the way to the same.

There is no specific instruction with regard to the amount required under the law of consecrations so far as it relates to "free-will offerings;" neither is there with regard to just how long a man shall pray or preach; yet, as these other duties, this also is closely enjoined as a proper observance for all of the faithful, not only for an especial work or gift to the Lord through the Bishop, but such offerings or donations should be made for the especial objects also of defraying incidental expenses of meetings, the repairing and building of churches and in aid of such enterprises as a majority of the members of the branch may decide to engage in for the good of the work. Circumstances and ability to perform will govern as to the amount with the wise; and a person should be very careful in his work in this, that he fail not to enter into the measure working heartily for the success, although the decision of the majority may have been contrary to his own judgment and wishes as to the wisdom of the undertaking itself.

It should be remembered that seldom any step is undertaken for the real good of the work without having a minority party in opposition; for all have not alike examined, and perhaps been unprejudiced alike in their examinations, of the step; but after a decision has been reached it is in harmony with the highest principle of government in the kingdom of God, as the Republic, that the minority shall then submit and enter into active support of the measure which is now made the act of the body. A man can not be true to the body, true to the interests of Christ who is over the body, and be, do, or act rebellious in such cases. True he is not bound to change his mind as to the feasibility of the measure; but he is bound to respect the principle, "that the will of the majority is the highest law," and this, in whatever government in which the people have had given to them the privilege and right to decide upon a matter. And the minority must show that respect by conforming to the order until such time as through the instruction and education of the body it may determine otherwise. The true theory and underlying principle touching this is incorporated in the instruction of the wise king Mosiah to his people upon the question of what is the best kind of government:

"Now it is not common that the voice of the people desireth anything contrary to that which is right; but it is common for the lesser part of the people to desire that which is not right; therefore this shall ye observe, and make it your law to do your business by the voice of the people. And if the time comes that the voice of the people doth choose iniquity, then is the time that the judgments of God will come upon you, yea, then is the time he will visit you with great destruction even as he has hitherto visited this land."—B. of M. page 207.

Whatever may be said of the dealings of God with the human family, he has always honored his own laws respecting them, and among which is that of man's agency; couched with the rights and privileges which he has recognized as belonging to the church, is found that of action by its members in branch, conference and general assembly capacity upon certain matters belonging respectively to these bodies; and when due action is taken by these upon such matter, good order, good government, and good membership, all demand due respect and good will toward the same until it is rescinded by this same body or reversed on appeal.—Don't fail to get the true position. Must conform until such change is made, not refuse to conform till the change; and he who will not so respectfully conduct himself toward the decision and act of the majority, must cut the ridiculous figure of occupying the self-important and conceited position of not only knowing more than the entire majority that adopted the course, but of also being able to see further into the undeveloped future than he who gave the law permitting the act of the majority to stand as the act of the body; and thus he becomes a law unto himself. The fact of so many complaints being brought to the attention of the Bishop of persons refusing absolutely to do anything toward the help of branch, district and other work of the body because forsooth their policy was not adopted, calls forth specifically an allusion to this matter, and it is hoped that the saints will readily see that if they can not always have their plans adopted, they can accept of the next best, or the best that can be put in operative force; waiting patiently till the majority can move higher. No doubt all plans and theories which are formulated by man are to a great extent imperfect;—having been instituted by imperfect beings, or as they looked through a darkened glass and saw the light;—nevertheless, it is right and proper that we should go forward and do the best possible, without waiting for what we know to be a perfect rule, or to receive a revelation to do in all things.

In the revelations it is stated:

"Verily I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own freewill, and bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves."—B. of C. sec. 58, par. 6.

In concluding with reference to the amount required under the law in the present condition of the church it may be concisely stated:—

1. That it is the duty of each and every one, if they have not already, to at once comply with the law enjoined under the system of tithes which has prevailed where the gospel has been preached and accepted in the different ages.

2. Make such other contributions as may be within their power and as necessity demands, in the way of freewill offerings.

Together they are termed consecrations—offerings set apart in a right spirit and devoted to the work of God and the well being and happiness of man. B. of C. sec. 82: 2 and sec. 42: 8, 9.

The first, consisting of a tenth of what a man has, (for which he has not paid) more than he has need: call it the increase, interest or amount, it makes no difference. This is put into the hands of the Bishop, the head of the treasury, "the keeper of the storehouse."

The second, consisting of such things as a person from the due appreciation of the demands and necessities of the work of God, or wants of his fellow man may from the desires of his heart bring forward and give as a special offering: and hence a free-will offering.

These are also paid into the hands of the Bishop, into the storehouse, but usually kept separate from the tithes: 2 Chron. 31: 11, 12 and 14 and Neh. 13: 13.

Contributions are also properly made to branch treasurers for incidental expenses; means handed the traveling ministers as their immediate necessities may require and a person wish to aid and has ability so to do, after having fully complied with the law to the church; and such also to persons not in the ministry if one desires to so use his means; and all tends to benefit the giver, if done in the right spirit, more than the recipient; and it is thus "more blessed to give than to receive;" but a person can not be his own bishop to distribute the things which is required to be placed in the treasury of the church. This brings up the 4th statement for consideration:

4. THE METHOD AND MANNER OF GIVING.

Upon the question of just how to give, who to, and in what manner there has been so many suggestions and plans by first one and then another in the past, that it would indeed be wonderful if any had been fully complied with. It is much easier to suggest new ways and not carry them out perhaps, than to put in force and full operation that taught in the books. The gifts of the patriarch were to the proper party, the one duly appointed to receive as has been seen already; to the one authorized and set apart to receive these things and to look after the wants of the poor and care for the church. The Lord through Malachi says: "Bring ye all the tithes into my storehouse."

In the time of the Savior's personal oversight and work, it was well understood that whatever was given for these purposes was placed in the hands of the treasurer; the one who "carried the bag;" and the custom was for him to look after the wants of the disciples, together with those of the poor and needy. (John 12: 6 and 13: 29). The Book of Covenants says: "And they shall be laid before the Bishop of my church and his counselors." And is to be distributed for the preaching of the gospel, the poor and needy, &c., as appointed by the High Counsel, the Twelve, and the Bishop and his Counsel, (Sec. 42: 8, 10 and sec. 114), and as a preparatory fund to be used for the general good of the body as the work shall progress.

To carry out this law and as a means to assist in placing the consecrations in the proper place, the revelation of, 1873, directs that the Bishop may also "choose and appoint Bishop's Agents, until it shall be wisdom in me," (says the Lord) "to ordain other Bishops, in the districts and large branches of my church." (B. of C., sec. 117, par. 10). The Bishop has endeavored to comply with this instruction and agents have been appointed wherever it has been thought necessary to the interests of the work and the execution of the law.

The question is often raised, whether the districts can appoint these agents; and in some districts the discussion of it has been the order of the conferences. This with a few other inquiries may be answered in this connection:

1. As to the appointment of agents. The very term, "agent," ought to determine who should appoint. It is not common for one party to appoint an agent for another without a reason therefor. If he is in some way incapable of doing his own business or has specifically delegated the right to another to act for him then it may be done. It has not yet been questioned but that the Bishop was prepared to act, and he has never delegated the right to others to appoint. These facts are quite sufficient to determine the matter. But it is further plainly settled by the law itself: "The Bishop of my church may also choose and appoint Bishop's Agents." He is the one to act in this in all instances. In doing so he often consults with parties both in and outside of the district where the appointment is to made; the object being to get good and acceptable men; and districts may as in the case of other church officers sustain by vote the appointment; but can not receive the resignation of an agent, appoint an agent, prosecute an agent or in any way interfere with his duties, except through the principal, the Bishop. This rule is essential to the protection of both principal and agent in their work. If the agent is unfaithful, derelict in duty, unjust, or an extortioner, it is proper to quietly report the act wherein, to the Bishop.

2. Agents in their respective districts are required to report to the district conferences all of the receipts and expenditures by them of tithing or offerings of whatever nature, together with the names of the parties so contributing or receiving the same; and the conferences may examine and approve or disapprove of the same and are requested so to do; and should the agent fail or refuse to render such showing the Bishop ought at once to be notified of the fact. This is for the information, satisfaction, and protection of the district, the Bishop and the church.

3. Agents are required to keep separate accounts of all tithing and freewill offerings coming into their hands and make report of the same to the Bishop. This may be done by them sending in the report when made for the district conferences, or as heretofore annually. The names then together with the amount paid into the treasury are entered to the proper accounts upon the Bishop's books and thus due record is kept for future use as provided in the revelation.

Every member's name in the church should appear upon this record and however numerous have been the complaints of negligence in this regard in the past, it is now confidently expected on the part of the Bishopric, that the entire church membership will from this time forward see to it that this part of the law is carried out as any other.

To this end the agents are instructed to make a complete record of all the members in their respective districts leaving spaces opposite the names in which to enter the consecrations of the Saints, (tithing and freewill offerings), as they shall be handed in, and thus with the number which the Bishop will enter directly upon his books, he will have the name and amount contributed of every member in the church. The record should be as complete as possible to make it, and especially contain the name and the amount paid as the "tithing" of every member not specially engaged in the ministry and as many of these as may in any way have an increase of funds

They are also to receive and enter all freewill offerings made in like manner and thus it is hoped the record may be comparatively complete by the first of April next.

This is the manner of carrying out the law as it is set out in the books and we urge that it be fulfilled.

It will not do either, to suppose that it is best to wait for a more convenient time. It is to be a work of sacrifice; done not without an effort; not by giving something you can as well do without, but by an earnest, appreciable effort in giving.

We ask the brethren, everywhere, are you ready to come forward and do as is required of those who are to be favored by the Just One; occupy as we have prayed for the way to open and let Zion be seen by the light of your works?

Are there any who do not desire to have their names placed thus with the faithful, or who would for all their earthly gains be willing to have it said to them: "For I was a hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked and ye clothed me not: Sick, and in prison and ye visited me not."

But, says one, that language applies to those who were never members, to the goats not the sheep. That argument would not in the least help the matter; for if such strong language as is found in the condemnation was to those who never accepted the gospel of Christ, how much stronger must be that, to those who had become acquainted with the privileges of the brethren and the "good word of God" and then did not these things.

Let us remember that it is not simply the act of coming into the fold that will distinguish the sheep in the day of retribution, but it is also in the work of taking on the clothing of the sheep; performing good works; "In every nation he that worketh righteousness is accepted of him." And it is plain to be seen that although a person may have been directed into the right fold and mixed all his life long with the sheep, if he has not lived and acted like one during his probation, he is likely to come out a different type in color, disposition, and desires.

The body is in great need; sick, afflicted, hungry, naked, occasionally the members imprisoned, and Jesus in the instruction reminds us of the fact that these conditions would be those of his own people and to them, many would not do what was in their power, and binding upon them as a duty. "For as much as ye did it not to the least of these, (my brethren), ye did it not to me." Let us then not be found slothful servants neither undutiful children, but arise and in a oneness of works, move forward as the Master has directed.

The work of enrollment and collections will greatly be accelerated by each member taking upon him or herself the task of seeing the agent if he should be too bashful to attend to his duties in this regard. By placing the name and the amount of the offering upon a slip of paper, or in an envelope and handing it to the agent or the person in the branch selected to receive these consecrations for the purpose of forwarding to the agent or the Bishop, you will greatly aid these officers in their work. They will have sufficient to enable them to enter these items upon the record at their convenience. Do the saints comply thus with the law the treasury will have plenty to meet all just demands and to spare: to this end was the law given and we believe it equal to all the emergencies. This done, and the incidental expenses of branches are easily met by the little contributions the saints desire to make from time to time, and thus the "passing of the hat" at our services may, as it ought, fairly be dispensed with without any loss to the treasury.

Be sure that the agent is not permitted to miss you. Would you like to be forgotten in this grand and glorious work? The time will come when it will be found to the welfare and interest of all to have these names in the right place, and to this end with you we shall strive and labor. With the united, earnest and intelligent efforts of all, as sought by the Church, and as becomes the spiritual house, the kingdom from above, these calls for spiritual laborers from every part of the land may be fully answered. Ministers of the word will no longer be compelled to cease their labors and look after worldly affairs, the mammon of the life, in order "that the gospel may be free," but with love and confidence in their hearts, that their families shall have protection in their absence and to Jesus the mediator and head of the church, they will "forsake all," the comforts, blessings, cares, joys and happiness of home, family and friends for the love of the Master, and the interests of that kingdom that is "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." The ebbing life will soon in full return to the branches, and in the reanimation of all through the power of the Holy Spirit, the Church may arise and again stand upon its feet.

The wants of the aged and necessitous will then everywhere be met, and peace and plenty return to the barns and presses of the saints; for God will in the richness of his love bountifully bless them. The gospel of the kingdom will go forth to all the world "for a witness" and then shall the end come. Are we all ready to so live and enjoy? Praying ever for the blessings of the Holy One upon you, we are in bonds of love, High Priests Charles Derry, Phineas Cadwell and J. C. Crabb; Geo. Montague, John B. Lytle and Davis H. Bays of the Seventy; Elders E. R. Lanphear, J. M. Putney, David Chambers, E. McEvers, Henry Garner, Richard Farmer, Isaac Shupe, L. Marchant, Donald Maule, Andrew Johnson, Nephi Yocum, Wm. Chambers, P. L. Stephenson, Frederick Collins, Wm. C. Cadwell and A. W. Lockling; Priests B. M. Green, John Chapman and Wm. T. Fallon; Teachers Wm. R. Davison, Orson Lockling, John Babb, E. Shupe and Richard Chatburn; and Deacon Wm. Trosper, reported. Elders E. R. Lanphear and J. M. Putney had each baptized 1, and Elder David Chambers 4.

The committee appointed to visit Union Grove Branch reported as follows: "Your committee reports, that I visited the Union Grove Branch on Sunday, September 30th, 1883, and preached twice to attentive audiences both Saints and strangers. I again visited it on the 7th of October, and preached twice that day and had good liberty in breaking to them the bread of life. I visited among the Saints and preached on the 8th, 9th and 10th. I also preached in the Goodenough school-house on the 11th, at the request of the president of the Union Grove Branch, making in all seven discourses in the vicinity of that branch. There seemed in their hearts an abiding faith in the latter day work; but there seems to be lacking the spirit of unity and godly zeal; and as in many places, there is lacking some good, wise, spiritual, leading spirit to take charge, who is able to be at all the meetings, and to inspire the members with confidence; or in other words, in whom the members could have confidence. The present president is a good man; but circumstances prevent his constant attendance on Sunday, and in his absence the cause suffers loss. Another cause of decay in the branch is the want of being properly visited by the branch officers, as provided for in the law. Again the neglect to commemorate the Lord's death is another cause, which grows out of the preceding causes. "Except ye eat of my flesh and drink of my blood, ye have no life in you," is a declaration that proves itself true wherever it is neglected. Lastly, I fear the use of strong drinks has been a potent means of darkening the minds and estranging the hearts of many of those who have been called to "bear the vessels of the Lord." This has discouraged many of the younger members of the branch, and disgusted them, so that their faith has grown weak, and they have relapsed into a negligent condition. I would yet recommend forbearance on the part of the district, and the visitation of them by the authorities of the district; and believe if they could unite with the Spring Creek Branch, it would be a good move for both branches. I think that if the Union Grove, Spring Creek, Salem and Six Mile Grove Branches, could agree to unite in one branch, and choose wise, spiritual officers over it, it would be much better for the cause of truth and the members generally. Then they could build a church at Persia, which would be a good central position for a branch; and there would generally be sufficient members together to insure good interesting meetings. Since my labors there I have visited the president, who informed me that although the Saints seemed revived under my labors, yet they had settled back into the old state of lethargy. This to me is evidence of the necessity of some spiritual, leading spirit, to be constantly with them to beckon them on to duty. Trusting that my efforts may be satisfactory to God and my brethren, I have the honor to be your brother in Christ, sole member of committee.

The report was received, the recommendations adopted, and the committee discharged.

On motion the chair appointed a committee, consisting of Brn. Geo. Montague, J. M. Putney and John B. Lytle, to consider the case of Spring Creek Branch against John Chapman Jr., and report if possible at this session of conference.

Bro. Phineas Cadwell reported on behalf of himself and Bro. Wm. R. Davison, committee appointed to visit members of old Morning Star Branch. Had visited them some three weeks since, and suggested that they unite with some convenient branch; and some of them, amounting with some new members who have been recently baptized, to thirteen names, sent in a request to become members of the Magnolia Branch. The report was received, and the committee discharged.

Bro. Nephi Yocum was recommended by this conference to his quorum, (3d Elders), to receive an Elder's license. Bro. B. M. Green was recommended to his quorum to receive a Priest's license, his having been destroyed by fire. Bro. Prior L. Stephenson was granted an Elder's license.

On separate motions the following missions were appointed: David Chambers and Nephi Yocum to the southern part of Harrison county. Geo. Montague in Harrison county as circumstances would permit. E. R. Lanphear and Richard Farmer to their former mission on Willow. Wm. C. Cadwell associated with Charles Derry in Correctionville mission. Henry Garner and Prior L. Stephenson in western part of Harrison county, and in Monona county. J. B. Lytle and J. M. Putney northern part of Harrison county and southern part of Monona county. B. M. Green and Isaac Shupe to labor under the direction of the president of the district as their circumstances would permit.

On motion the chair appointed a committee to draft an order of business for our quarterly conferences, to be reported at the next session; viz, Phineas Cadwell, Charles Derry and David Chambers.

The committee appointed to consider case of officers of Spring Creek Branch against John Chapman, Jr., reported as follows: "That after a careful hearing of the case, we affirm the decision of the former court and recommend: whereas, we think there has been error upon the part of the branch, as also upon the part of Bro. Chapman, that mutual concessions be made, and the brother restored to fellowship." Geo. Montague, J. M. Putney, J. B. Lytle, committee. The report was received, adopted, and the committee discharged.

All the authorities of the church were sustained in righteousness. J. C. Crabb was sustained as president, P. Cadwell as assistant president, and Wm. C. Cadwell as secretary of district.

Preaching by Charles Derry Sunday morning, D. H. Bays Sunday afternoon, and J. C. Crabb Sunday evening.

Adjourned to meet at Little Sioux, the second Saturday in March, 1884, at 11 o'clock a. m.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

CO-OPERATIVE METHODS.

THESE have been so many, and so varied in their character, the objects of their creation, the benefits sought to be derived from them, their nominal provisions and their actual results, that it is with considerable diffidence and hesitation that any one, even partially informed in regard to the history of communism, common and joint stock, and co-operative movements, will attempt new theories, or urge the trying of any of the old ones.

There are some that promised fairly, but the principal reason for their failure was the same that has ruined enterprises begun in good faith among all classes of men, the neglect, or wilful refusal of those engaged in them to observe the rules of the organizations adopted by themselves in the spirit of those rules.

The qualities of charity, mercy, loving-kindness, brotherly-regard, and other recognized graces, all point to the establishment of some sort of equality between the members of communities intended to be religious, or beneficiary. The revelations of Jesus Christ to the church endorse or teach a similar thing. But in the carrying out of the scheme of equality there has, so far, been such a wide diversity of opinion as to what meaning should be placed upon the word equal, or equality. It would seem that all those desirous to avail themselves of the benefits of unity might easily agree upon the terms of their association. For unless there is a unity in fact more than in name, there is not the unity prescribed in the charge of the Savior to be "one."

There are many who need the help that association with stronger men than themselves necessarily gives. They have not the strength, moral courage, nor pluck to stand firmly in their own capabilities; but when permitted to speak and act for and in behalf of an association they are both strong and efficient. There must surely be some way by which such help can be afforded them. What is it?

Any unity that depends upon the subservient obedience to the will of one, is looked upon with suspicion by some of the Saints; and by others it is regarded with abhorrence. "Every one should have an equal voice in the disposition of company affairs," is the usual opinion held by the major part of those who advocate the equality idea.

Perhaps no objection may be properly urged against this. It may be inquired, what is an equal voice. As for instance, we quote below from the constitution of a reform movement, called the Brotherly Co-operators. "No investment of the capital of the incorporation shall be made after a written protest by any member against the same has been tendered to the President, or council, until such protest is withdrawn."

In this provision it is put into the power of each member of the society to prevent the carrying out of any investment of capital determined upon in the council by which the affairs of the association are to be directed, by protesting against it; and until he chooses to withdraw such protest the counsel of the majority can not prevail. The question must occur, if the objection against a society being ruled and governed by the will of one of its members in the directing of its affairs affirmatively is a good one; and the principle, one man power, a bad one and dangerous; is the controlling and directing of the affairs of such body by one man by his "wont," any better.

Again, in the same constitution there is a provision that excludes any person desirous to become a member of the brotherly association if two members vote against him. As for instance, if the Society has one hundred members, and Mr. A. desires to unite with it, his name is to be presented, and if ninety-eight vote for his reception and two against it, he can not become a member. This is the will of two controlling. This seems not to be equal, but decidedly to the contrary.

Another clause provides that if any member desires to withdraw from the association he may do so if two thirds of the members so decide by vote. Labor is assessed as capital, at the rate of fifty cents for each day's labor, of four hours each; when therefore a member withdraws he can not take the labor already performed with him and must leave it with the Society; provided however, the Society may by a unanimous vote purchase the withdrawing member's stock. Of course, if there are those who object few or many, the vote is not unanimous, and the member must go out, if he does go, without his invested capital. It would then seem that a few might by a systematic course of annoyance practiced upon other members, cause them to become discontented and finally to withdraw, and by a refusal to vote with the majority in such way as to make the vote unanimous, gradually work the stock into the hands of a few, more or less, of the same way of thinking.

We do not say that Saints would so act; but something of a similar sort of unequal provisions has disrupted the most of the common stock and co-operative concerns of which we have read, and we see no reason to anticipate a better fate for others if the same elements of weakness be found in them. Besides this, nominal Saints are much the same as other human beings; and until a sufficient conversion among those who wish to enter into co-operative association shall be had to think of another's good to be as desirable as their own, to the exclusion of personal selfishness, the liability to frustrate good plans by a too positive "will" or "wont" must remain.

We have intimated at several times that there was a grave necessity for the organization and effective existence of an association, the object of which will be to buy lands, farms, &c., for rent, or sale to Saints of small means, but willing minds, and industrious intentions; that they may be aided to make homes for themselves and families, and to become good and helpful citizens of the church and state. Can this be done? We think so. How?

1. A company of men willing to use the means with which their care, industry, and frugality have blessed them, under the kindness of God, for the good of their fellow churchmen who have not been so blessed, or so capable as themselves.

2. This company should be or organized according to the laws of the state and states where it is proposed to operate.

3. The capital stock should be $.— with privilege to increase to $.—

4. The constitution should provide: 1. That any person in good standing in the church should be eligible to pay in stock and become a member of the company. 2. That the shares should be small enough to permit persons of limited means to subscribe. 3. Stockholders should be secured against loss by investment in compliance with the statutes providing for such cases.

5. The business should be under the management and control of a Board of Directors, or Council, not less than three nor more than seven, to be chosen from among the stockholders annually.

6. This Board of Directors should meet at stated periods as often as once in three months, and at the call of the President, or the Secretary if requested by any two of the members of the company in writing.

7. At the first meeting of the stockholders after the requisite amount of capital stock has been subscribed, due notice of which meeting shall have been given to each stockholder, articles of incorporation shall be agreed upon by vote; and a Board of Directors, or a council Consisting of not less than three, nor more than seven to be chosen from the stockholders shall be elected who shall serve for the term of one year; or until their successors are elected.

8. These Directors, or Councillors may at their first meeting after election choose one from their number who shall be the president, and one who shall be the treasurer; and appoint a secretary who may or may not be a stockholder. The duties of these officers shall be the same as those of other officers in other and similar organizations.

9. The president and treasurer shall form an executive committee, and shall carry into effect the resolutions and orders of the board, and shall act in the interests of the association when the board is not in session, or in cases of emergency, when the board can not be convened without loss, or delay. But in all things be subject to the Board.

10. The object of the organization being to help worthy persons to make homes, rather than to accumulate wealth, it is agreed that loans may be made from the capital stock of the association; in one of the three following ways: 1st. Directly to the person being aided, the borrower to give notes with approved personal, or real estate security, at the legal rate of interest of the state in which the borrower intends to settle. 2d. The person intending to make his home to select the property to be purchased, paying thereon a part of the purchase money from his own resources, the society to furnish the remainder to be expended in the purchase, the loan so effected to be secured by note and mortgage on the property purchased; running reasonable time to permit the borrower to pay without distress, at a rate of interest not to exceed six per cent per annum. 3d. The society to purchase the property agreed upon, put the borrower, or buyer in possession with bond for deed, with a condition that upon the payment of the purchase money, with use at a rate not to exceed six per cent per annum, and allowing reasonable time for payment.

11. These loans may also be accompanied with moneys to pay for seed, tools and teams to work lands so purchased; to build houses, dig wells, build fences, set out orchards, or otherwise improve the property purchased to make it more home like and comfortable as may be agreed to between the purchaser and the company.

12. The association reserves the right to vary from the foregoing rule, according to the discretion of the council, or executive committee; except that in no case shall any greater sum be charged as interest, or any improper or inadequate security be taken; but the society may remit any portion, or all of the interest on any sum loaned, or land purchased and sold; provided the industry and care of the purchaser or borrower shall justify such remittance in the opinion and discretion of the council or executive committee.

13. The society reserves the right to hold advisory control of all lands purchased and resold by it, or upon which they hold incumbrances according to the second and third provisions of clause tenth, to this extent that they may insist upon the purchaser properly working the land, using full and energetic means to prevent waste, and to cultivate in the best way to build up the home interest. And while the society holds itself in readiness to aid the worthy by legitimate means, it will insist upon all those who accept aid of them to keep the terms of the contract as it shall be made between them in good faith that the capital of the company may be kept whole as a continued means to help many.

14. No loans shall be made except by the council, while in session.

15. When any person shall be desirous of receiving aid from the association, he may make an application to the president, or secretary; who shall at once make every proper inquiry into the standing, worthiness, and condition of the applicant, and report the same to the next session of the board, which shall then determine the matter by consideration and vote. If the decision be favorable, then the executive committee shall proceed to carry the decision into effect. No property shall be bought or sold except upon consideration and vote of the board. Any person wishing to sell to or buy from the association, may make application to the president, or secretary, who shall make the necessary enquiries, and report the facts to the board at its next session, which shall then determine the matter.

16. The society may purchase lands with a view to re-selling them to settlers, may make such improvements as may be advisable, and then sell such lands to those who may wish to settle on them for home purposes, putting such prices upon such lands as will cover the cost of land and improvements, and such additional per centage as time and expenditures may make necessary.

FEET washing was not instituted or commanded as an ordinance of the gospel, and having general application to the body of the people, as a sacrament or rite. If practiced by the Savior, it was at the one time only, and among the twelve disciples only, as an act teaching them the necessity of humility among themselves as ministers; and as a means to overcome the jealousy even then existing among them.

When the church was reinstated in 1830, feet washing was not introduced as an ordinance, nor practiced among the members; but was on some occasions had among the ministry, as the history shows; but we know of no rule adopting it as a specific ordinance and binding on the Saints. That any of the quorums may, in their own assemblies adopt feet washing as an ordinance for some specified object, and their mutual benefit, we believe, but do not see how it can be binding from any command of God now known in Scripture. In some of the congregations that believe and practice feet washing, as an ordinance, the men wash each other's feet and the women wash the feet of women; which disturbs the claim for the practice as a church ordinance at once; for if instituted by Christ at all it was for the ministry to wash the feet of disciples; and no distinction between the sexes is made. Nor can any be found in any of the ordinances of the gospel as instituted of Christ. The Elders of the church may minister in baptism, laying on of hands, and the sacrament to both men and women; and Paul's expression, "there is neither male nor female, bond nor free, but ye are all one in Christ Jesus," makes the same proposition clear.

Of a similar nature to the washing of feet as a church ordinance is that of the "holy kiss;" mentioned in 1 Peter 5:14; except that the authority commanding the act is not so great, differing all the way from Peter to Christ. A similar command, or request is made by Paul to the Romans, 16:16, to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 16:20, 2 Cor. 13:12, and to the Thessalonians, 1 Thess. 5:26, of King James' translation. But in all these texts in the Inspired Translation except the one in 2 Peter 5:14, the word "kiss" is "salutation," followed in most places by "the church," or "I Paul also salute you." It may have been a personal custom with Paul and Peter, and possibly more of the elders, to salute the brethren of the ministry with a kiss at meeting and parting with them; as it now is with some classes of German men to kiss intimate friends and connections of the same sex; as may be witnessed in any community of Germans almost in the land; but it is a social custom and not a religious one. The Russians and members of the Greek Church when attending the services that usually mark the Christmas tide held in the churches, until midnight of Christmas Eve, when the clock tells the midnight hour, at its closing stroke all class and sex distinctions are lost, and each one turns in the place where he, or she is standing and salutes with a kiss the nearest right or left hand neighbor, no matter who it may be, prince, peasant, or beggar, man or woman, youth or maiden, boy or girl, exclaiming in joyful tones, "He is risen!" It is not an ordinance, nor is it regarded as one, commanded of God; but it is custom, originating no one knows how, or when, recognizing the leveling, or elevating character of Christ's mission, making the human family one. Strangers and foreigners, laymen and churchmen, believer and unbeliever, all are welcome in the churches on that night, and all share in the enthusiasm and the salutation. Lovers and fastidious persons, however, usually take care that the neighbors nearest to them and likeliest to share in the kiss of fraternal regard in Christ, are those whom it is no sacrifice of personal comfort and satisfaction to embrace.

We may have been unfortunate in our observations, or the occasions when the "kiss of charity", the "holy kiss," as respectively named by Paul and Peter, as a church practice has passed under our notice; for it has been quite too apparent that unfair discrimination in favor of the one kissing (proffering it) on the part of the man and elder has carried the conviction that however strong an attempt had been made on the part of the church to make the practice a "kiss of charity," the charity was to the gratification of the flesh.

There is no warrant in any of the texts, from Romans to Peter, to conclude that the members of the church indiscriminately are to salute each other with a kiss. To dignify, as a church ordinance, a practice in which men kiss women and avoid men, and women prefer to be kissed by men rather than women, even in the assemblies in the places of meeting is to give improper sanction to possible evil. And if it be claimed that men should only wash the feet of men, and kiss the men of the congregation only, while women perform the same rite of feet washing and practice the holy kiss among themselves, it is but to admit its tendency to carnality; and precludes the practice of it as an ordinance free from taint of sin.

No such ordinance, or practice is commanded or permitted to the Latter Day Saints, and ought not to be.

THERE is now living near Lamoni, Iowa, a Mr. N. D. Earl, who is not a member of the church, and has never belonged to any other order, who with some others was journeying west in 1834 and fell in company with the Saints coming from Kirtland to Far West, President Joseph Smith among them. Mr. Earl states that at a point between Indianapolis and Newtown, Indiana, he heard Pres. Smith preach, and that in the course of his sermon he stated that there would at some time then future be a rebellion in the United States, that the slaves would be set free and would be armed and equipped for war. Some other things in connection with it he remembers; for soon after this occurrence he with a number of young men like himself, went over to Newtown, or Frankfort, Indiana, to hear Pres. Smith preach again, and there heard a lawyer, whose name he thinks was Gregory, but is not certain, question Elder Smith about the prediction concerning the rebellion, when Mr. Smith repeated what he had stated in his prior discourse. Mr. Earl is now about seventy years of age, and remembers Pres. Joseph Smith well; was with the company for many days, talked, walked, joked and wrestled with the prophet; and now regards him as an earnest, honorable, upright man; who fervently believed in himself and his mission. Mr. Earl, while not accepting, or denying the doctrines taught by the martyr, believes him to have been thoroughly conscientious in his beliefs, and a good man. Unlike a great many whom we have met who "knew all about old Joseph Smith," Mr. Earl shows evidence that he really had met the man, and that what he vouches for really did take place.

When shown the picture of the martyr in the History of Joseph, by E. Tullidge, without being advised of what the work was, and asked if he had ever seen the man whom the picture represented, he replied at once, "Why, yes sir; I knew that man. It is Joseph Smith." He also remembered Hyrum, and recognized his picture at once.

Mr. Earl is not certain as to the exact date, but distinctly remembers the occurrence stated above; and made affidavit to the fact stated readily at our request.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Henry A. Stebbins preached at Allendale, Worth county, Missouri, from February 7th to 19th, sixteen times, including an effort before the temperance association and citizens, by invitation from the society. He baptized during the time six, including two men and their wives, who have but recently heard the gospel. A place to baptize was secured by cutting through ice twenty-two inches thick. A number beside those baptized are more or less convinced of the truth as they confessed; some of whom will obey ere long, if the work can be continued at Allendale, within reasonable time. Bro. Stebbins expresses the hope that some one will take up the work there soon; but if not before the April session of conference, he will again make an effort there. Bro. Stebbins says:

To brother Joseph Hammer belongs the chief credit for having the gospel preached there, and to brethren David Husher and William Birk for assisting otherwise. The branch say to tell all that they are now, they think, prepared to go ahead more vigorously and hoping for still further success in their midst.

Bro. Jobe Brown wrote from North La-Crosse, Wisconsin, February 16th:

I have been preaching some with tolerable liberty. I filled one appointment of seven years' standing, to be preached when the powers of the heavens were to be shaken (Matt. 24:29). I proved 1883 to have fulfilled that event. I was given a collection unasked for of $6.65, and was invited by a rising vote of nearly all the congregation to come again, which I intend to do at a proper time. I made no compromises with error, but preached the truth. Laboring, hoping, and praying for the prosperity and cleansing of the sanctuary—the church.

Bro. Blair was lately at Los Angeles, California, leaving Santa Ana on account of the rains. They have had terrible rains there. Will return to San Bernardino, to be present at their conference the 6th of March. He says,

I fear our people through Gospel Swamp have suffered much from the floods.

He expected to remain in that part of California until the tenth or eleventh of March.

Brn. John Hawley and John Pett report excellent meetings at Coalville, Iowa, and vicinity, where they have been preaching of late. Says Bro. Hawley:

"We did not fail to present tithing, as that was part of our mission; and I think that we did good to the Saints."

Bro. James Caffall wrote from Hutchinson, Col., February 25th, that he will leave there for Manassa Junction, Col., Wednesday, the 27th. He says:

The disaffection among the Mormons is creating considerable stir. The Presbyterians are actively sending relief to the destitute. They seem to think that the opportunity for them to get the balance of power against the Mormons in Colorado is presented to them.

We wish Bro. James success at Manassa.

Bro. E. C. Brand wrote the Herald February 26th, from Wanship, Utah:

I feel encouraged with the hope that the day is dawning, and that I shall be permitted to see the bands broken and loosed from the necks of the oath-bound daughters of Utah.

Bro. E. C. Brown of Fonda, Iowa, says February 14th:

I have been up to Cherokee, preaching for ten days, and two have given in their names for the new birth, besides moving a mountain of prejudice.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The local newspapers are currently reporting a miracle that is said to have occurred at Missouri Valley, Iowa; it is as follows: A Mr. G. C. Walker living near Missouri Valley for some fourteen years, has been deprived of the power of speech for the last five years. On Sunday, February 3d, he rose in meeting at the M. E. Church, and after a moment's whispering spoke in his natural voice restored. This he repeated, asking the congregation to join with him in giving God praise for healing him. We wonder if it is not about time that the ministry of the M. E. Church began to quit abusing Latter Day Saints for believing in miracles.

Bro. John Burlington writes February 22d, that the Saints of St. Joseph, Missouri, sent fifty dollars to Bro. G. T. Griffiths to assist in the relief of the Saints of Wheeling from their disaster by the late flood in the Ohio.

Bro. Joseph Lakeman was to deliver the fourth lecture in a series of several being conducted on the Island of Grand Manan, under the auspices of several gentlemen who reside at North Head and Woodward's Cove, the latter being the place where Bro. Lakeman lives. A copy of the Island Press, containing the notice of the series of lectures was sent us by Bro. Lakeman. He is sanguine of success, and thinks a good effort should be made there this next summer.

Bro. S. C. Good of Chicago has sent us a slip from the Inter Ocean of December 24th, 1883, containing a statement reported to the Art Society of London, England, by Captains Seabaum and Wiggins, which affirms the finding of people ostensibly of Hebrew origin, near the North Pole, above latitude 80 degrees north.

Bro. Elisha C. Dobson offers his furniture business for sale to some brother desirous to go into that line, at Lamoni, Iowa. He says that there is a good chance for some one.

Bro. Edgar W. Knights has sent us a copy of the Brighton Independent, of which he is the publisher at Ward 25, Boston, Massachusetts. It seems to be a bright, newsy sheet. Any of the Saints desiring a Boston paper, would be interested in knowing that the Independent may be obtained at one dollar per year in advance, directing to the Independent, Brighton, Massachusetts. We give brother Edgar good wishes for success.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Feb. 21.—Firing was heard early this morning in the direction of Trinkitat. Gen. Graham, commander of the Tokar expedition, will arrive at Suakin to-night. Large bodies of rebels are moving in the direction of Osman Digma's position near Suakin. A Suakin dispatch says: "The rebels present a formidable appearance. We shall beat them, but require the best kind of men to do so." Col. Barnaby reports that a body of rebels is approaching the town. Reports from Gen. Gordon state that after the restoration of order he will leave Col. Stewart in command of Khartoum and proceed to Kordofan. His object is an interview with El Mahdi, in order to learn the fate of Hicks Pasha. Commander Ralph, who has just returned from a visit to King John, of Abyssinia, reports that if the King obtains a seaport which he needs he will secure the retreat of the garrison on the Kassala line through Abyssinia. Advices from Shanghai report a revolt in Magnolia.

Feb. 22d.—The garrison at Tokar have surrendered. Five soldiers who arrived at Suakin from Tokar report that the rebels kept up a constant fire of artillery and rifles. Tuesday the garrison recognized the necessity of conferring with the rebels. Wednesday Yakoob and Mccavi Effendi, the Chief of Police, with the Sergeant of Artillery, went out and conferred with the rebels. On returning they informed the garrison that they must surrender their arms Thursday. Many soldiers murmured at this, and a large proportion of them escaped during the night. Tokar was surrendered Thursday as had been arranged. Gen. Graham, commander of the proposed Tokar relief expedition, announces by telegram his arrival at Suakin. He states that no report of the actual surrender of Tokar is yet received. The troops were being landed at Trinkitat with the utmost rapidity. Refugees from Tokar report that the inhabitants were the first to suggest submission, and the garrison followed. All the officials of the town declared for the Mahdi. The behavior of the rebels toward the inhabitants and garrison was very friendly. Everything indicates that the Egyptian officers at Tokar preferred to surrender to the rebels rather than the Christians. A Soudanese Lieutenant wished to fight, however, and tried to assemble the soldiers, but in vain. The revolt at Masowah is spreading. El Mahdi has appointed his brother, Ali Yussuf, Governor of Darfour, and ordered him to levy 7,000 men and march to Kordofan to re-enforce the main body of the Mahdi's troops.

The greatest excitement prevails throughout London and in Parliament at the news of the surrender of Tokar. Twelve hundred British troops are now at Suakin and 3,200 at Trinkitat. The Governor at Kassala favors El Mahdi, and would rather evacuate the town than fight him. A portion of the Khartoum garrison has left the town. Three thousand nine hundred blacks remain at Khartoum and 3,000 at Sennoar. At Cairo a ferment was caused in the native quarter of the Bazaar to-day by the rumor that the English had been defeated. El Mahdi has sent a letter to King John of Abyssinia demanding his adherence to the Prophet. King John returned a contemptuous reply.

The Mahdi is not an Arabian, and is hardly of the Semitic race. He is black as Cetewayo, and his Islamism is tinged with more than the average degree of superstitious paganism.

Thousands of people are dying of fever in South Java.

At St. Petersburg, Russia, sixteen persons, including the anchoress Kenniz Raja, have been banished since the beginning of January.

About 900 Cree Indians are in revolt in the Northwest Territory. They have captured the Government supply of provisions.

The National Democratic convention has been called to meet at noon, on Tuesday, July 8th, in Chicago, Ill. The National Greenback Labor convention will meet at Indianapolis, Ind., Wednesday, May 28th.

Feb. 23.—England is alarmed over the Asiatic conquests of Russia, and has asked an explicit statement in regard to the annexation of Nerv.

The refugees from Tokar maintain that Ma-caur Bey, the Civil Governor of Tokar, sold the surrender. He has all the while been an advocate of submission to the Mahdi.

Osman Digma is reported to be at Teb with a large force and eager for a fight.

Admiral Hewitt, Baker Pasha, and Gen. Graham have started for Trinkitat.

Gen. Gordon's manifesto informs the insurgents that the Sultan, the Commander of the Faithful, intends to dispatch a great army to conquer the country.

Gordon exhorts them to accept his offers of peace in order to preserve themselves from Turkish invasion.

Feb. 24.—It is reported at Suakin that Osman Digma will soon attack that place. The negro inhabitants of the town are favorably disposed towards him, and it is feared that in case of attack they will massacre the European inhabitants. Also it is reported that "Chinese" Gordon's proclamations have not had the required effect. The Mahdi does not abate his demands. England is trying to negotiate with the King of Abyssinia, but the latter is not as complaisant as he might be. Admiral Hewitt and Gen. Graham, of the English forces, seem not to be capable of agreeing on a plan of military operations, and the Mahdi's Lieutenant, Osman Digma, at latest accounts was defiant and aggressive. The "rebels," as the followers of the Mahdi are called by the English, are in great force in the vicinity of Tokar.

The whole British expedition, numbering 4,300 men, landed at Trinkitat to-day. Rebels could be seen on all sides. It is estimated that there are from 10,000 to 12,000 of them in the immediate vicinity of Trinkitat. The men-of-war Jumla, Hecla, Ranger, Careysfort, and Orontes are at Trinkitat, and the Euryalus, Decoy, and Sphinx at Suakin.

Gen. Graham sent forward from Trinkitat 200 cavalry, and more are following. A general advance will be made to-morrow. A fort has been erected 6,000 yards from Trinkitat. An immediate advance has been ordered.

Gen. Milot, commander of the land forces in Tonquin, has left three battalions at Sontag and three at Haiphong, and is preparing to operate against Bacninh with 9,000 men.

Advices from the Province of Poltava, South Russia, state that Jews there unable to show that they are possessed of landed property are expelled the province. Many of them have been forced to cross the Austrian frontier. A petition presented to Count Tolstoi, Russian Minister of the Interior, begging for time to enable the Jews to purchase land remains unanswered.

The social sensation, at Scranton, Pa., is by no means an uninteresting one, and will bring into relief the extraordinary prejudices of occasional individuals of the Hebrew race. Upon the marriage of the daughter to a Gentile the Hebrew parents published in the city papers among the 'obituaries' of the day a death-notice reciting the sorrow of the family over the "death" of the child. It reflects great credit upon the leaders of the Judaic tribe however, to know that they condemn in severe terms the action of the parents. A prominent and wealthy Hebrew of Scranton published a card characterizing the deed of Mr. Levy, the father, as "vile, wicked, and inhuman." The rabbi at Wilkesbarre, Pa., has also taken prompt steps to undo the harm which the angry Levy patriarch has come near inflicting upon his people. The rabbi warns Americans not to accept the sentiments of this unhappy family as those of the Israelites of the United States.

The Mennonites who recently settled in Nebraska now occupy three whole counties, and, besides being good farmers and hard workers, are extremely economical. A recent traveler says of their habits: "When it comes to economy they are right there, early and late. What can't be sold off their farms they feed to the pigs, and what the pigs won't eat they eat themselves. I know a family of father, mother five children, and one grown relative, eight of 'em in all, and their grocer bill doesn't average 50 cents a week. And why should it? They don't use sugar, nor tea, nor baking powder, nor anything of that kind. They make their own butter, and use browned barley for coffee. They go to bed nightly soon after sun-down to save oil, and never buy any coal, but make the children carry in corn-stalks and such things to burn. Everything they buy—harness, tools, lumber, etc.—is bought at wholesale in Chicago and then parceled out around at cost. Most of the time they ship their grain to Chicago themselves.

The Attorney-General of Iowa has decided that salaries of school-teachers are payable monthly, and if longer withheld, can be collected with interest.

The situation in the Soudan is very alarming. It is reported to-night that the rebels are about to attack Suakin. There is every indication that Gen. Gordon has changed his plans and will evacuate Khartoum with as much celerity as possible. The latest report says that the General, having become convinced of the danger of attempting to hold Khartoum on account of the rebellious spirit shown by a number of Sheikhs who so warmly received him on his entrance into Khartoum, has determined on evacuating the place at once. The General has destroyed all the military stores and spiked all the guns which would be liable to incumber a retreat from the town so as to prevent them falling into the hands of the Mahdi, who is reported making a forced march upon Khartoum. He has sent Col. Coetlogan to Berber with 2,000 of the garrison of Khartoum.

The report that El Mahdi is marching toward Khartoum is confirmed. He liberated twelve members of the Catholic mission before leaving El Obeid, receiving a ransom of £2,800 through the Austrian Consul at Khartoum. El Mahdi's inaction after his victory at El Obeid is explained thus: Finding the Sheikhs of the principal tribes wished to go home with their spoils in order to attend to the harvest, he proclaimed a holy truce during the months of Moharren and Safar, ending the date of the anniversary of the birth of the Prophet. That time having expired the campaign is resumed. Great uneasiness is felt at Cairo at the report that the powerful Beshareen Arabs, who occupy the territory between Khartoum and Wady Halfa and eastward as far as Berber, have revolted. If this is true, Gen. Gordon, with Khartoum and the other garrisons, are cut off. The Mahdi's emissaries are going throughout the whole of Egypt bearing the simple message, "I am coming; be ready." This passes from mouth to mouth, and the situation is becoming serious. It is positively asserted that El Mahdi and King John of Abyssinia have signed a convention to the effect that King John shall remain neutral, and in return he shall receive a portion of the Red Sea and a large accession of territory.

Seven thousand Arabs have re-enforced the army of Osman Digma, who has taken command in person. He has altogether 18,000 against 5,000 British troops. Two Egyptian battalions with two Gatling-guns and twenty tons of ammunition will start for Assouan Thursday. The English troops follow. El Mahdi appeals to the Moslems of India to support Islam. The men-of-war at Suakin fired during the night to keep the rebels at a distance. Gen. Gordon continues to send cheering telegrams to Cairo.

It is said Russia has voluntarily offered England a pledge to stop at Merv and use her influence with the Khans of Bokohara and Khiva to facilitate English commerce. It is also stated that the Russian Government has invited England to join in constructing a canal from the Sea of Arabia to the Indian frontier. Russia offers to reduce her armament on the German frontier if Germany will do the same.

The great steamship Great Eastern has been purchased by the English Government for a coal hulk at Gibraltar.

Forty Indian children from the vicinity of the Black Hills arrived at Wabash, Ind., today in charge of a trustee of White's Institute, a normal labor educational institution of the Quaker Church ten miles south of the city. The children are to be placed in the school, and, together with the thirty-seven who were brought here from the West last year, receive a thorough education. The United States bears the expense of their transportation, and tuition is furnished by the institution free. There are now thirty-five Indian boys and forty-two girls in the institution, representing every important tribe in the Northwest.

Feb. 27.—The advance of the English troops on Teb commenced before daybreak to-day. Two hundred and fifty men left the garrison at Trinkitat and a force of 3,500 advanced to the attack. It was expected a battle would be fought about nine in the morning. The naval brigade joined Gen. Graham with two nine pounders. There is a growing anxiety in Cairo about the result of the expedition and less confidence that the English will be victorious. The black troops at Suakin were found in communication with Ashmed Baroudi, second in command under Osman Digma. Admiral Hewett has forbidden them to leave camp, and stationed the gunboats Decoy and Sphinx so their guns command the camp, with orders to open fire if there are any symptoms of mutiny. The British camp is well protected with earth-works. Spies report that Osman Digma is threatening Suakin. Admiral Hewett has returned to Suakin. The rebels are massing one mile from Fort Baker, and firing at the British videts, without, however, doing any harm. A Krupp gun has just been mounted at the fort. A fight took place to-day on the Berber Road, nine miles from Suakin, between the rebels and friendly tribes. Some of the latter cut their way through. Two thousand men gathered from tribes numbering ten thousand wish to come in to-morrow. The friendly tribes desire to fight if supported. The Mudir of Meina to-day arrested a rebel emissary, who confessed, under pressure, that El Mahdi's men were advancing more in hopes of plunder than for political reasons. According to mail accounts of Baker Pasha's defeat, fifteen Austrian, four German, and four Swiss officers were killed. A man who left El Obeid ten days ago arrived at Trinkitat this morning. He reports the garrisons of El Fasher, Darra, Masteri and Foga still surrounded, while the garrisons of Om Shanga and Thasi have surrendered. He says there has been no fighting at Bahrgazelle; saw three Englishmen at El Obeid who were captured at Kashgil; they were well treated; the missionaries were not molested. The Mahdi has only a garrison at El Obeid. The Arabs have gone to their villages, but are under promise to assemble in case of war. The new Sultan of Darfour refuses to leave Korosko until he receives £1,000. Gen. Gordon reports the Soudan tranquil, and is sending 300 invalids down the river.

Tokar surrendered Friday last, and the rebels intend to fight in three lines, closing on the rear of the British as the troops advance.

The rebels lost 1,300 in the recent fight with Baker Pasha. It is stated that dissensions exist everywhere in the rebel ranks.

The police are convinced that the advanced Irish party have made Paris their headquarters in Europe for the preparation of their dynamite schemes. The Inspectors say the Nationalist colony includes representatives of three Centers of the Irish Republican Brotherhood. The first section comprises the former Fenians, James Stephens, John O'Leary, and Gen. McAdaras. The last named disavows belonging to the society.

At Christiania, Sweden, Christian August Selmer, Minister of State, impeached, has been adjudged guilty and sentenced to forfeit his membership of the Royal Council and pay the costs—about $5,000.

A Fenian is in jail at Winnipeg. He is the correspondent of the New York Irish world. He is supposed to have incited the recent discontent in the Northwest Territory.

At Toledo, O., a negro on trial charged with marrying a white woman was yesterday found guilty and sentenced to three months in jail and a fine of $100.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Feb. 21st.—Loss by fire at Palmyra, Wis., $35,000. Little Rock, Ark., $25,000. Center Point, Ark., the post office, a store and newspaper office. Linden, Wis., $8,000. Erie, Pa., round house, $15,000.

Details of the havoc wrought by Tuesday's cyclone in the South Atlantic States are even more horrible than first and subsequent reports. In the vicinity of Raleigh, N. C., the track of the storm is ten miles long and as straight as an arrow. After skipping the earth for forty miles it fell upon Rockingham, N. C., where twenty-five persons are reported killed and immense damage was done to property. Two distinct tornadoes passed through the state of Alabama simultaneously—one passing east of Montgomery, doing great damage to property between there and Columbus, Ga. The estimate total loss is $20,000. The destruction of telegraph lines makes news inaccessible. The cyclone passing through the western part of Alabama, from south-west to southeast was first noticed at Scott's Station, then at Marion, next at Brock's Gap, Leed's Station, Cross Plains, and Cave Springs. At Scott's Station one man was killed and two were injured. At Marion one man was killed by falling timbers, several injured, and the southern portion of the city completely wrecked. Near Cross Plains eight persons were killed and fifty wounded, some fatally. At Stock's Mills five persons were buried yesterday. Many are dying, and there are a large number of injured. At Rock Run the school-house was blown away. Six children were killed and six blown away and not found. The business portion of Goodwater, Ala., was destroyed. The damage is $100,000.

At Leeds, Ga., twelve persons were killed and 33 wounded. Near Franklin a family of five is missing. Twelve persons were killed in Jones Co., and fifty wounded. Fully 300 people in all were killed in Georgia, by storms, and the property loss will equal fully $2,000,000.

One hundred persons were killed in South Carolina. In North Carolina much destruction to life and property was wrought, and hundreds of men women and children are without food, clothing or shelter. Not less than sixty lives were lost in this state.

Shawneetown, Ill., has been almost entirely abandoned by its inhabitants, owing to the terrible destruction of property by storm and flood, and it is said that several years of prosperity will hardly put the town where it was before the flood. Uniontown, Ky., and Metropolis, Ill., are similarly afflicted. The water is almost out of Lawrenceburg and Aurora. The river at Cairo is nearly stationary, and the people believe the worst is over.

Gales have caused serious damage in various parts of the United Kingdom. A terrific hurricane prevailed in St. George's Channel. There was a large tidal wave in the River Mersey.

Feb. 22d.—Fire at Mayaguez, Porto Rico, yesterday destroyed forty-two houses. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

Loss by fire at Winainac, Ind., $25,000. Pittsburg, Pa., $6,000. Worcester, Mass., Cleveland machine company works. Shelbyville, Tenn., 6 large stores, $30,000.

The Southern cyclone did much more damage than was at first supposed. In Richmond Co., N. C., fifty persons were killed and one hundred wounded. Every house of one small village was leveled to the ground.

A stump five feet in diameter, not over two feet high, was blown up by the roots and carried hundreds of yards. Hundreds of smaller stumps were torn up by the roots and timber was twisted and torn in a surprising manner. At Birmingham, Ala., one family were all killed. The number of dead and wounded cannot now be accurately ascertained. It will reach a thousand or more.

Feb. 23d.—Loss by fire at Cassville, W. Va., $20,000. Ionia, Mich., $10,000. Pittsburg, Pa., $15,000.

Three coaches of a train of the Colorado Central Railroad were blown from the track by a terrific gale of wind. Two ladies were slightly burned and several passengers injured. The accident occurred near Georgetown, Colo., in exactly the same place where an entire train was wrecked three years ago by the wind.

About 2:30 this morning a passenger train on the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad crashed through a bridge over the Chariton River, killed a boy and wounded a score of passengers, three being so seriously injured they are not expected to live.

A careful estimate of the damages along the Ohio, by the storm of Tuesday last, proves that the reports of losses were nowhere exaggerated and that much of the property supposed to be in good condition at the time the wind subsided has since been washed away. Much additional damage was caused throughout this territory by a strong and steady gale which blew all day yesterday. While it bore no comparison with the storm of Tuesday, it caused many houses to float away, and compelled all steamers to suspend business and tie up wherever they could find a place. Owing to the swells which swept the streets at Paducah, the boats were not permitted to land at the wharf, but six or seven boats tied up at a point about three miles north of the city, where a few hundred acres of low land along the river bank are still out of the water. Below Shawneetown for twenty or thirty miles the river stretches out into the woods on either side.

Feb. 24.—A fire at Jackson, Mich., destroyed one of the finest business blocks in that city. In the conflagration two lives are known to have been lost. It is feared that others perished. The loss was about $150,000. A wooden warehouse at St. Paul, Minn., occupied by various firms, was destroyed by fire. Loss $125,000. Loss by fire in Chicago, Illinois, $30,000. Green Bay, Wis., $10,000. Corsicana, Texas, $50,000.

Reports from the Tribune's special correspondents at Cairo, Paducah, Mound City, and other river places indicate a gradual subsidence of the floods in the Ohio River Valley.

Feb. 25.—Two Denver, Col., hotels, adjoining each other, burned. There was a panic, which was well justified by the dangers of the situation. Three men were burned to death. Many persons escaped with only their night clothes. Loss by fire at Whitehall, Mich., $11,000. Compton, Quebec, $15,000. At Vienna, La., nine business houses were burned.

Four persons were injured, and $1,000 worth of property destroyed, at Toronto, Ont., by an explosion of gas.

Feb. 25.—Shortly after one o'clock this morning a terrible explosion occurred in the cloak room of the Victoria Railway Station at London. The explosive was undoubtedly dynamite. A large portion of the roof was blown off and nearly all the glass work in the station destroyed. Seven men were sent to the hospital with severe injuries. Extensive damage was done surrounding property. Two reports accompanied the explosion, the noise being like the discharge from a cannon, and was followed by an immediate rush of flames. The booking office, cloak room, and waiting room were completely shattered, and are a confused mass of debris. Luckily all the trains had ceased running, and there were only a few persons about the station.

Feb. 27.—Loss by fire at Lincoln, Neb., $75,000. Duluth, Minn., $12,000. Philadelphia, Pa., $30,000. Nicholasville, Ky., $27,000. Columbus, O., $18,000. Toledo, O., $15,000.

The chief Inspector of Explosives asserts that there is no doubt the explosion at Victoria Station, London, was caused by nitro-glycerine.

At Omaha, Neb., a powder magazine exploded, killing four boys, and obliterating the building. It was the most horrible sight ever seen in the city.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

Four thousand miners have struck at Auzin, in the Department of Du Nord, France.

Ten millions of 8 per cent bonds have been called by the Secretary of the Treasury, the interest to cease May 1st.

Business in the Island of Cuba was probably never so depressed as at present. Confidence may not be wholly destroyed in Cuban finance and the conduct of business, but it is the simplest truth to say that all men who have anything to lose in Havana and in other leading business centres of the island are looking gloom-ily out for a certain "Black Friday" at no distant date, unless the mode of conducting the commercial business of the island be speedily and thoroughly altered.

Bradstreet's reports 218 failures in the United States last week. About 83 per cent were traders whose captial did not exceed $5,000. Thirty-three Canadian suspensions were recorded. These figures are all smaller than those of the preceding week.

Emile & Cordier, shippers of Rochefort, France, with a branch at Bordeaux, have failed. Liabilities, 5,500,000 francs. The failure involves firms at Angouleme, La Rochelle, and Niort. A stock broker named Maynier, who was involved, hanged himself. A banker, of France, named Radille has suspended. Liabilities 3,500,000 francs, chiefly peasants' earnings. Francis McGinty, a corn-trader, of Liverpool, Eng., has failed for £35,000.

The strike of the coal-miners at Auzin, France, has assumed large proportions; of 11,400 miners, only 4,600 are at work.

A new Chicago mining enterprise has been organized. It is called the Alma Placer Mining Company, and the capital is $250,000. The incorporators are N. K. Fairbank, Z. G. Simmons, and F. H. Hood.

The discovery of extensive and valuable deposits of tin near King's Mountain, in Cleveland county, North Carolina, has created such an excitement as has hitherto been unknown in all that section of the State. The discovery is remarkable, because of the fact that none of the geologists had found tin in appreciable quantities, and it was left to a young man, an amateur mineralogist to ascertain the presence of immense beds of the ore. This young man is Robert Claywell. The ore can be found lying upon the surface of the ground even in the streets of the Town of King's Mountain, and excavations have developed the fact that extensive beds of tin ore underlie not only the town itself, but a considerable section round about. No tin-mine has ever been worked in the United States, and the attention of capitalists in all parts of the country is hence specially attracted to this one. There are several mines of tin in Cornwall, one or two in Wales, a few on the Continent of Europe, and the metal has been discovered in Australia. Tin is worth about $450 per ton, and its high price and comparative scarcity in the markets of the world lend additional value to the discovery at King's Mountain.

The Coal masters of Ansan, in France, have agreed to advance the wages of their miners.

The Wheat and bean crops of Upper Egypt are splendid. The sugar crop is probably the largest on record.

The Russia Administration in Turkestan which has just been superseded got away with 100,000,000 rubles ($73,400,000). Tcherniaeff had been in authority for about a year and a half. It is said that Tcherniaeff has fallen into disgrace as a concession to English susceptibilities.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: Wheats show signs of active growth. The consumption of breadstuffs continues small. Fine native wheats are scarce and firm. Flour is dull. Foreign wheat is unimproved and receipts small. In cargoes off coast there was rather more business. Eight cargoes arrived; seven were sold, two withdrawn, and one remained. For cargoes on passage and for shipment there was little inquiry. Sales of English wheat for the week, 53,198 quarters at 36 shillings 11 pence per quarter, against 48,263 quarters at 41 shillings 9 pence the corresponding week last year.

The boiler of the steamer Kotsai, from Hong Kong to Macao, exploded, killing eight Europeans and nine natives.

How serious has been the prohibition against the importation of American pork into France and Germany will be seen by the following table: From $8,251,398 worth in 1882 to $617,408 in 1883 is a serious decline. The trade reached its highest in the previous year, and if it remained unrestricted it would have now attained large proportions. The business done with France in 1882 was 25 per cent greater than in 1881; the increase in the case of Germany was over 90 per cent.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Feb. 21st, 1884.

J. Smith; Dear Brother:—The discussion of the first proposition closed last evening, having continued eight evenings. Braden has scoured Dan and Beersheba for lies, filth and scandal, and dumped it out in brazen assertions, without proof. Fair minded men of his own denomination expressed themselves unreservedly as against his course and manner. Of course there are some that will perhaps call it good; but men of sense will read his slang only to be disgusted. After his time was extended two evenings by his request, he never came in with his onslaught of polygamy, until next to his last speech, when Ed. only had thirty minutes to close a nine evenings' discussion, and reply to his onslaught on Joseph Smith the seer, as the author of polygamy, stating that he commenced in Kirtland, and it was the cause of his death, &c. But Ed. went for him like lightning, and knocked all of the thunder out of it, and that was all there was in it.

The Saints will not be ashamed to read the affirmative arguments; and I hardly think there will be a man on earth that has buzzard enough about him to stand the reading of the whole of the negative. But as the book is to be published, everybody can test for himself. Discussion of second question is postponed until Monday evening of next week. We are feeling well, and the "bow of promise" referred to, is in our favor. The Lord willing we shall be by Friend Braden's side to his heart's content, with his "war to the knife, and knife to the hilt." The Kirtland people stand by the right.

Feb. 25th—We had one of the largest and most attentive audiences yesterday, that we have ever had in Kirtland, at the same time that Mr. Braden was holding forth at the Baptist Church in this village. This will give you an idea as to the estimate the people put on the attack he makes on our faith. His attack on many of the old citizens of this place who lived here years ago, did not get him any glory here; for the people don't hesitate to say that they are falsehoods made out of whole cloth. Braden is the most dogmatical-asserter that I have ever met that pretended to know what he is about. He attempts to prove but little, and that by the worst characters extant; but he goes on to assert that this or that is true, without the least foundation for it, save his statement, or something that somebody said that is either dead or about to die, that no one ever heard of but Braden. The Disciples themselves do not endorse his course. One lady across the way, who hailed him as a lion and deliverer when he came, attended our church yesterday, while Braden was holding forth in the village. She says if he keeps on he will make Mormons of the whole of them. On yesterday afternoon Braden lectured in the Baptist Church on "What Christianity had done for the world." In answering Jamison, Ingersol, Underwood, when they would tell him that Christians had caused more bloodshed and manifested more bigotry, tyranny and intolerance than any other power in the world, etc., he replied, "Where does it say in this Bible that Christians can do that? The things taught in this Bible are one thing, and the way people act is another." Yet pretty much all of the audience were aware that his whole effort to crush the Latter Day Saints was not by attacking the Book of Mormon directly, but by slandering those who had professed a faith in the work. Yet when the infidel attacks the Bible in the same manner, O, how disgusted he is.

If this shall find your nerves as quiet and comfortable as ours are here, we shall calculate that you are happy.

Yours in the faith,

WM. H. KELLEY.

GARLAND, Butler Co., Alabama,

February 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—After writing my last letter for the Herald, I preached a while in Tennessee, then visited the Farmington Branch in Kentucky, preaching for them in their meeting house three times, and once at Bro. Snow's, nine miles from the chapel. Leaving there I went to Kenton, Tenn., and preached once in the Presbyterian church of that place. October the 23d I reached Magnolia Plantation, Baldwin Co., Alabama, my home. I remained there three weeks, laboring with my hands week days, making preparations to leave again, and preaching Sundays. Whilst at home this time I had the pleasure of baptizing my wife's mother. My wife joined last August when Bro. Anthony was preaching in this neighborhood.

At the close of my laboring-rest, bidding the dear ones good bye, I went to Jackson county, Mississippi, remaining there about four weeks, trying to encourage and teach the Saints of the Three Rivers and Bluff Creek Branches, by preaching the word. Whilst at the Bluff Creek Branch I baptized one; others are convinced, but were not ready to obey.

Went back to Baldwin county, Alabama, and on Sunday, December 23d, preached at the Brook's Cedron Baptist Church, about two miles from my home. I enjoyed fair liberty. It was the second time a Latter Day Saint had preached at Brook's Cedron, Bro. Anthony having delivered a funeral discourse there last summer. The aged pastor was present, listening attentively, and at the close of my discourse made a lengthy talk, endorsing some of my remarks and objecting to part of them. I was not allowed to give out another appointment, as one or two of his members objected to my preaching there. On the 5th Sunday in December I preached at Swift's Camp. The following two Sabbaths I was unable to keep my appointments, on account of a severe spell of sickness. Brn. Givens and Reeder were present, however, to conduct the meetings. Third Sunday in January, though very weak, I managed to meet my appointment at Bro. Reeder's mill. Twelve miles of my journey to this place I walked, lying down upon the ground to rest once or twice during each of the weary miles traveled. Fourth Sunday I preached at Sr. Leven's near my home. First Sunday in February found me one hundred miles farther up in the State, at the Pleasant Hill Branch of the Alabama District, and I talked twice to the people in the Saints' Chapel that pleasant Sabbath day. With the exception of the one severe spell in January, my health has been generally better. I feel hopeful, and determined to battle on for the right.

Yours in bonds,

FRANK P. SCARLEFF.

WILBER, Nebraska,
February 25th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Next day after writing to you, I came here, and found that Bro. R. J. Anthony had awakened quite an interest. The day after my arrival, was the United Brethren's annual meeting, and I was permitted to be present to hear, consider, and inwardly digest. From the statement made by the minister, it was his duty to that day preach "a missionary sermon." However, I was surprised that the whole discourse pivoted upon a "God called ministry," even as was Aaron; and no other was authorized to preach the gospel. I was getting very much in sympathy with the speaker, as he waxed warm in pleading the necessity of revelation designating those who would be acceptable to God as ministers. But oh how transitory are all the uninspired theories of man, that are put forward to take the place of God's order of things. I was doomed to disappointment in this labored effort; for after presenting the unity and durability of the method that was in force for thousands of years, it was all knocked into flinders, with "until the general call came, 'Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel unto every creature.'" Since which time, all have to go under this general call. I beg to be excused, from calling upon the living to turn from sin, while in the panoply of the dead. I can not work in such harness.

But there was something else of great interest to me made manifest; that only a few years ago they had sent some missionaries to Africa, and found the people cannibals; but now there are several flourishing societies of God fearing Christians, the result of the labors of those faithful missionaries. That for every ten dollars expended, one soul had been saved from cannibalism to the religion of Christ. I suppose that this man was not aware, that some forty years ago the Latter Day Saints' Elders had canvassed that same field, and that at the present time the Reorganization have three members there. The sermon was to an end. Now we were informed that all who would give fifty cents or more, would have their names printed in the proceedings of the general conference, and also receive a copy of the minutes. Five or six were enrolled, and then the hat went round. The class book roll was then read. The first two names read were removed at their own request by one vote, negative not called. Those who were present, when their names were read, would get up and give in their experience and desires, and the rest would say "pass." Those who were not present, the minister talked for.

The weather has been very unpropitious for the past two weeks, for the holding of meetings, and part of the time it seemed that "old saint Nick" was putting in his very best licks; for aurora borealis got up and shook himself, and to complicate the matter more, the school teacher quit the school and went to Kansas, taking the keys along. I did not stop preaching, and I am satisfied that ere long several here will unite with the church. Some informed me that they would accept and unite with us.

The saints here are expecting and are arranging to have Bro. R. J. Anthony locate here with his family, and they hope to have his labor in this vicinity during the ensuing year. I am of the opinion that his coming here will be of advantage to the cause in this part of Nebraska; and I hope that the General Conference will favorably consider appointing him to this field. Mr. Luse has returned from Kirtland, and I understand that he says that Bro. Kelley has the sympathy of the people there, and is more stern than he was in the Wilber contest. I hope that the truth will not only be made manifest to those who will be present, but also to those who will be permitted to read the same, should it be published.

There is a large immigration to this state from the East now. Good crops for the past two years have made this an attractive place for the people of the older states to come and make themselves homes.

In gospel bonds,

GIRARD, Minn., Feb'y 22d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Bro. Thomas Nutt arrived at Clitherall, Minnesota, the 26th of January, and preached there next day. Monday, Bro. Hammer brought him out to my place, and he preached six times in this settlement: Then I went to Silver Lake with him, and he commenced preaching there. He went from there to Battle Lake; from there to old Clitherall, and spoke four times there. Now he is in this settlement again. He has spoken eighteen times, and there are calls for more. Quite a number have given their names for baptism already, and more are favorable. We will attend to the baptism in a few days. Some say he preaches the truth, and others say such things are not required now-a-days as apostles, prophets, and the gifts of the gospel; they are done away, they say. Our learned ministers have always taught us they were no longer needed, and they ought to know. Most assuredly they ought to, but they don't. We think Bro. Nutt is the right man for this district. He is surely a servant of God.

Your brother in Christ,

Brother Joseph:—I rejoice in this work. When I read the pages of the Herald, and the letters of the same, it forces tears of joy down my cheeks. It is encouraging to me. I rejoice to see the letter of Father Landers, who baptized me when I was a little boy, and my father and mother into the Reorganized Church. My father and mother embraced the Church in an early day, in Ohio. From there through Missouri and Illinois, enduring all the persecutions, mobbings and drivings of that afflicted people; weeping and mourning with them. My father has gone out of his house at night to sleep, for fear of getting killed. After the slaughter at Haun's Mill, my father helped to bury eighteen of the Saints. My father and mother were acquainted with your father and mother, and often heard your father talk against polygamy; and heard him say, If Brigham Young ever got to lead the Church, he would lead it down to hell. What did Brigham do but fulfill these words. We live about ten miles from the Delana Branch. The last time I was at meeting, Bro. William Bozarth preached. His voice rang over the room with words of power. Thank God for restoring him to his health, for he is a good man. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that my eyes may be opened, and my tongue loosed, that I can use the Master's sword when in time of need. May God bless you, and all the Saints.

Your brother in the faith,

JAVIS HUNTSMAN.

GRAND MANAN, Maine,
February 18th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The Episcopal minister, who was holding meetings some two miles away from where we were holding the funeral services of Bro. Zusker, dismissed his congregation, drove to our meeting, and by invitation, took a seat in the desk; closed our meeting by benediction, and drove back to place of burial. The Baptist church honored the occasion by dismissing their meeting and attending the funeral. What a change has taken place. It is wonderful. Only ten or twelve years ago, the ministers of these same churches (not these ministers) said to me, "It is a pity that there is not a law preventing you from holding meetings on this island." Bro. Joseph, it appears more like a dream, than a reality. The Lord is at work, and "He will work, and none can hinder." We are growing more in favor every day, the doctrine is being better understood, and consequently more acceptable. I am engaged to lecture before the Institute to-morrow evening; subject, "The religion of the Bible." What an opportunity for the presentation of the truth! Peace and good will are manifested in our branch; and I hope that it will not be long before we shall have the pleasure of adding to our number.

With kind regards for all, I remain your brother in Christ,

JOS. LAKEMAN.

ODELL, Gage Co., Nebraska,

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. R. M. Elvin has just left us after preaching twenty-four discourses with good liberty. The two evenings he defended your father as a prophet, it seemed he was specially blessed with the spirit of his calling. Some seem favorably impressed; others say it would have been better if he had not come. We are satisfied with his effort. If Bro. R. J. Anthony could give us a call, with that sound doctrine that he takes so much delight in placing before the people, it would be very satisfactory. If he will send us a card to that effect, we will try and have the way prepared before him.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

S. BUTLER.

RHODES, Marshall Co., Iowa,

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. I. N. White and myself went to Newton Friday, and returned Monday. Had two services, one testimony at two o'clock, preaching at night. Left the Saints feeling better.

Bro. T. R. White and myself are in business here together, general merchandise. We would move from here if we could find a good point. If some brother knowing of a good point, a county seat preferred, and will write giving advantages, we will come and see what our chances are. The Elders here are all working, also Priests and Teachers. Some brother at Stewartsville write us.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Bro. G. E. Deuel is here. The Congregational Church was secured to hold services in, at one dollar per evening. Good interest was manifest. This morning the janitor was ordered to close the doors against Bro. Deuel. He has held four sessions, with increasing congregations. Where meeting will be to-night is yet to be learned. Times here are becoming bad.

SAN BERNARDINO, California,
February, 13th, 1884.

Joseph Smith, Dear Brother:—Our beloved brother, W. W. Blair, left us this morning, after a visit of three weeks. He expects to return in March to attend our conference. He preached a number of times to us while here, and gave us some good advice. I think if we could have an elder with us like him, the work would be more prosperous in this part. May God bestow upon him the choicest of his blessings and bless his every effort to spread the gospel. The Herald is a welcome friend to us. It brings us so much interesting news of this glorious work. Feeling assured that this is the work of the Lord, we feel to press forward in the good cause. My prayer is always that God will bless his children everywhere, our branch in Sanbernardino especially, that we may have more of the love of God in our hearts, to show to the world that we are saints in very deed, that we may work together in peace and harmony for the Master's cause.

Your sister in Christ,
LOUANNA WISE.

Village of TARONA, Papeete, Tahiti,
January 10th, 1884.

Reverend Joseph Smith, President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints:—May the blessing of God Almighty, and the love of Jesus Christ be ever with you, our beloved friend and teacher, servant of the Most High God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

I forward to you, servant of God, the substance of a dream which I have always considered as very ominous. It being probably an inspiration from the Almighty respecting matters to come and to take place hereafter, I beg you then, reverend and dear sir, to explain as to what these matters may regard, and to what may be the teachings of the Almighty in so very extraordinary a dream, and whether it is not something prophetic respecting the spread of our holy cause.

THOMAS COFFIN, called TAMU, Pasteur.
Tahiti, October, 1878.

We went on in our boat, and landed in the district of Vairao, in the peninsula of Tairapu, island of Tahiti. We determined, as it was then near sunset, to pass the night there; consequently we spread our mats under the shade of a large tree called the ati (iron wood). A short time after that darkness had spread itself over the face of the land. I fell asleep and dreamed that the heavens were illuminated, that they appeared to be of many colors. It was then that there were lightnings and thunderings, and I beheld the mighty and wonderful works of God, those that show forth his majesty and power. I trembled and feared greatly, I knew not what to do. My reflection was: "Is this that last, that terrible day of the Lord?" But a voice whispered to me: "No, it is not, fear not, for much work is yet to be done, the conversion of the world, of the human family." I then saw a large, a very large ship, somewhat similar to men of war that we have seen here; and I heard a voice saying to me, "By this shall our word be sent forth, throughout every corner of the habitable globe. By this shall men learn that thou art God, and God alone." A short time after, everything was covered as with a dark cloud, and then the ship appeared again, light as a cork, with her sails spread, ready as it were to carry thy word, O Lord, to every land! As I looked and beheld, as it were bright and holy ones appeared, and the whole was overshadowed as with a bright cloud; and a voice said unto me: "By this and by my messengers shall my word and my doctrine be carried to every land." It appeared as if in the days of old, in the days of Jacob, that there were angels crying in accents of love: "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good will towards men." I then descended towards the sea side, and saw a beautiful boat. In it were persons adorned in bright garments, and I thought to myself, Can these be temporal, can these be spiritual? Are not these they that are mentioned in the first chapter of Hebrews, "Who maketh his angels spirits, and his messengers a flame of fire?"

Oh! let our good work be carried on, that all nations may know that thou art the Lord and thou alone.

Our numbers are daily increasing, in Tahiti as well as in the Chain Islands. Our cause must spread, for it is the Lord's. His work must prosper. We thank you, reverend sir, for the works and periodicals you have so kindly sent. They are always translated for us, or read over to us by W. Barff, to whom we are all thankful.

Believe us, reverend and dear sir, as ever, your most faithful disciples and friends.

HANCOCK, Iowa, February 12th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I have the request of Sr. Mira Snow before me, for some one to show the substantial meaning of the 11th chapter of Rev., 19 verse. It was a firm decree in the mind of the Most High before the earth was brought into the family of our solar system, to give the martyrs a glorious resurrection from the dead, with all the righteous; and to reward them, his servants the prophets, and all the Saints, "And them that fear thy name, both small and great." And also his decree was to destroy those who make the world a wilderness, and destroy his Saints. This was and is the will and indelibly written testament of the Most High. And also to make the kingdoms of this world the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, "And he shall reign forever and forever." J. GALLUP.

CORINTH, Ontario,

February, 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Our hearts were made glad yesterday, by the advent of Bro. Richard Evans, of London. He seems to be a promising young Priest. The work seems to be in a sort of sleepy condition here; but I hope something may happen, that we may be aroused to diligence soon. I love the Herald, and it does seem to me that it gets more and more interesting, as the time moves on. I read with interest old Bro. Lander's letters. To me the thoughts suggested in it are glorious. Hope the old veteran of the cross may live to see the curse removed from the land of Zion. I rejoice more and more in the gospel of Jesus, as new beauties open to my understanding. With Bro. Landers and Bro. Kelly, I too, would rejoice to see the Herald a daily; for it seems that I could find time to read one every day, although I have to work. But I feel thankful that the cause of our Heavenly Master is onward. Ultimately, I know it will triumph, although the horizon looks so overcast with dark clouds sometimes. It seems to me that I can see light and glory shining through the clouds. I feel encouraged, and determined through strength divine, to keep fast hold to the rod of iron. Hope you remember us here, in this far off corner of the Lord's Vineyard. Hope Bro. Lake may be returned to this mission.

Mrs. JENNIE PEARSON.

ARCADIA, Kansas,
February 19th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We are trying to keep up our monthly meetings. We are not having any preaching here this winter on account of having no place to hold meeting. They have closed the schoolhouse against us, and our private houses are all too small to hold meetings in. We have a new school house built in town this winter, which I think we will be able to get for preaching. Bro. Alexander Smith's discourses when here were well liked by all who heard him. I think if he could have stayed longer, he would have awakened quite an interest.

Bro. Ezzell accepted the challenge of the reverend Baptist divine for a debate that I spoke of in my last letter; but the reverend failed to come to time, for reasons that have not been explained by him or his friends. Bro. Ezzell was informed that he could not have the schoolhouse any more to preach in. I suppose he thought like the Illinois correspondent of the Ohio paper, that it would give us too good a crowd to speak to; and as Bro. Ezzell confined him to the Bible, I suppose he thought it a poor weapon to fight Mormonism with, and the best way was to shut him out entirely by closing the house against him.

The different societies have been holding protracted meetings here this winter with but little success. The people seem to be very indifferent and unconcerned about religious matters. It seems as if the spirit of deep sleep was poured out upon the people, some of us Saints not excepted, especially in this branch. I hope we will be led out of our lethargy and arise and let our light shine like a city on a hill. To this end I would ask an interest in the prayers of all the Saints. Yours in the faith,

HENRY HAINS.

LONGWOOD, Ont.,

February 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—This leaves myself and all the Saints in this region well. Have baptized three at this place, and some others have given in their names which I expect to administer to in a day or two. I was called away from here to join Bro. S. Moore and Sr. Nellie Smith in wedlock, on the 12th inst. After making them happy, I returned to this place. As the interest is very good, expect to stay here for two weeks, and then go to Rodney on C. S. R. R. East of Ridgetown, where Bro. John H. Lake now is, and from where he has written me to go to Rodney. I find a deepening interest in nearly-all places. I find more apathy and indifference in the branches than in new places. Probably "knowledge puffeth up" with the branches. I have found a gentleman who is a member of the Brighamite Faith, his name is Mr. Blanchard. He is a very fine old man, and declares that just as soon as he is convinced as to the true successor in particular, he will be with us. It seems to be a part of my work to hunt up men of that faith and labor with them. I have quite a list of others scattered through Canada, which I have been trying to reach.

The winter has been cold and plenty of snow; financial and commercial business slack and dull, which is all the better for the gospel; for when all goes well in the busy old world, and men are making money fast they say to the gospel preacher, "We will hear thee at a more convenient time." But when money is scarce, business dull, &c., there is a chance to draw men's minds to the good work. Having plenty of time on hand, some are led of curiosity, others through a spirit of opposition or controversy, still others from interested motives, and on the whole I think it is about as it should be. The interested ones give the poor laboring Elder courage, the opposing ones call for a cross questioning, which is good, as it brings out points, and shows both sides, thus giving probably more general satisfaction all around. It is necessary that men should "produce their cause," "bring forth their strong reasons," in order for God to show them how he can beat them with the poor, simple, things of naught, confounding the wise; and consequently no flesh can glory in his presence.

Yours in gospel bonds,

J. A. McINTOSH.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,

November 30th, 1883.

CHY. E. MALMSTROM, Esq.,

Springville, Utah:

Dear and Respected Sir:—Your esteemed favor, written with spirit, in a sincere and earnest tone, was duly received. The letter confirms the first impression made on my mind when I had the honor of forming your acquaintance, viz., that you were in search of truth, and that you would gladly embrace it, if your reason could convince you that it was to be found in the Catholic Church.

In religious subjects, we must carry calmness of mind, a Catholic Spirit, and a respect for every man's honest opinions. We must carry with us a disposition to seek for truth, and that love for man and all that is human, which will prevent us from harboring, for one moment, a single intolerant feeling; and which will prevent a single harsh word from ever escaping us. We may subject, we ought to subject all opinions to the most rigid investigation, not for the sake of triumphing over adversaries, not for the sake of proving others in the wrong; but for the purpose of discovering the truth, and quickening our love and reverence for mankind. Men honestly differ in their views. The views of all, without a certain and unerring guide, are more or less partial, and therefore defective, and therefore erroneous; and no one who is fallible, therefore has the right to condemn another. We should all wed ourselves to the truth, and give it an uncompromising support. With this long and perhaps unnecessary preface, I now, most respectfully submit my reply to your question.

You submit the merits of the case to the answer to the questions, "Has the Catholic Church authority from Christ? 2. Does she teach the same doctrine in everything as Christ did?" In my answer I will presume that you admit, with the great body of Christians the Divinity of Christ; and to your first question will say yes, and for proof will refer you to the Savior's farewell address to his apostles, after he had sealed the great work of our redemption with his precious blood on the cross, before he returns to his Heavenly Father, he to his disciples whom he raised to the apostolate, and imparts to them the commission to convert the whole world to his religion, and to make all mankind his humble followers:

"All power is given to me in heaven and earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations; baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the son, and of the Holy Ghost," &c., &c. St. Matt. 28: 18-20. Again: "And he said to them; Go ye into the whole world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned."—St. Mark 16: 15, 16. Another: "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you."—St. John 20: 21.

From this commission of Christ, we learn that the eleven poor Jewish fishermen, who were without human learning, without wealth, without worldly influence, or natural eloquence, without any human qualifications whatever for the undertaking, received authority from Christ—to do what? "To teach all nations," to "preach the gospel to every creature." The plain and natural meaning of this commission is, that the apostles had authority from Christ. But the Catholic Church is the only church which dates her origin from Christ, and was the church of the Apostles. It necessarily follows that she has her authority from Christ.

The answer to your second question is contained in the answer to the first. Having her authority from Christ, she must "teach the same doctrine as Christ did," otherwise Christ would not command the faithful to listen to her teaching. "Whosoever will not receive you, nor hear your words, going forth from that house, shake the dust from your feet."—St. Matt. 10: 14, 15. Again: "He that heareth you, heareth me," &c. St. Luke 10: 16. If she could possibly teach a different doctrine from that of Christ, then would Christ's command to hear her voice be inexplicable, because Christ, as God, would have foreseen that error would in time creep into her teaching. Yet Christ without limitation, either as to time or doctrine, commands the faithful, "If he shall not hear the church, let him be to thee as the heathen and the publican."—St. Matt. 18: 17. Truly then, do you write, that this "is the all important question;" for upon it is founded the great unswerving faith of Catholics.

"Did not Jesus speak the same tongue as the Jews? The Catholic Church claims her authority from Peter," &c.

Jesus used the Syro-Chaldaic language, and it is the received opinion that St. Matthew wrote his gospel in that language. The Catholic Church does not claim her authority from Peter, but from Christ himself. Your application of the Rock to Jesus, as "the Rock of our salvation," plainly violates all rules of just interpretation. Since Cephas signifies a rock, and Christ says to Simon, "Thou art Cephas, and upon this Rock I will build my church," the relator leaves no room for ambiguity. Besides, there would be a confusion of metaphors and ideas, if Christ should, in the same breath, speak of himself as builder and foundation. Both figures may be applied to him separately, under different points of view; but it would be incongruous, not to say absurd, to apply both at one and the same time. God is frequently called a rock, on account of his insuperable and everlasting power, Christ is styled the "Rock of Ages," because he is at all times the strength and refuge of all who flee to him. He is a spiritual rock, from which the waters of salvation issue, and of which the material rock of the desert was a type. But it would be absurd to infer since, that the rock spoken of by Christ when he said "Upon this rock I will build my church," is Christ himself. Any attempt to explain "this rock" of Christ, is not countenanced by the difference of gender of the words of the text; "tu ai Petros, Kai epi Haute te Petra." (I give the Greek in English characters). Peter is called Petros because the Greeks never apply a feminine noun to a man, except in derision; the rock is called "Petra" because this term more properly designates a rock, although the other term is equivalent. The relator plainly identifies the subject, and excludes all distinction, as the language in which Christ spoke has the same word in both places. All modern commentators of note maintain that any application of "this rock" to other than Peter, is untenable. See Bloomfield (an Anglican Commentator, in locum).

Bishop Marsh, (Protestant), Comparative view app., p. 217. John George Rosenmuller, Scholia in Novum Test. tom. i, p. 336. Norumban. 1815. "Now let us see if the gates of hell prevailed against the Rock (Jesus)."

As say logicians, this is begging the question, and any explanation founded on this assumption, viz., Christ as the rock, being a something different and distinct from his church, which he authorized to teach in his name, will not stand. Do you believe for a moment, that if the Apostles or their successors should cease to teach nations to "observe all things," whatsoever Jesus had commanded them, that he would be with them? therefore the promise to be with them to the end of the world, was on the condition that they should teach all the nations, etc? It is impossible to conceive Christ the God-man, giving a commission, and promising to send the Spirit of Truth to direct his Apostles and their successors in their teaching, and permitting them at the same time to teach differently from him. Why command us to hear the church under no less a penalty than to be treated as heathens and publicans, if we did not listen to her teaching. As God he would have foreseen the time and manner of her errors, and he would qualify his command, and forewarn us in some manner to beware of error in the teaching of his church. He does not do it; on the contrary promises to be all days with his church, guarding the deposit of faith.

Your reference to Infant baptism proves nothing, because we know that Christ gave a command that all should be baptized for the remission of original sin. "Unless one is born again of water." (John 3: 3, 5). I give a literal translation of the Latin text, "nisi quis," etc. The command to believe and baptize as a matter of course applies to adults, to whom the Apostles preached. Faith is a gift of God according to St. Paul, and in the case of infant baptism, the "habit" of faith is infused into the soul. I think the "faith of our fathers" states this point very clearly, showing the necessity of baptism before one can be freed from original sin. You can not deny the arguments showing that we all are born in sin; and if so, how is it washed away from infants, if you deviate from the teachings of Christ, "Unless man is born again," etc., and the tradition of nineteen centuries.

Whenever the natural means fails, God has given signs and wonders to Catholic missionaries in Pagan lands. Read the life St. Francis Xavier in India, and you will read of many well authenticated miracles; of Lourdes in France, from Protestant testimony; Louis Lateau in Belgium, and you will find the "sour grapes" are yet as they have been for nineteen centuries, within her reach.

Pardon this long letter. My respect for your earnestness prompted it; and whilst I know that seldom any conversion is the result of controversy, I will hope and pray, that it may be different in your case. Pray God, who is infinitely good, to enlighten you in this all important question, upon which salvation depends. If the arguments in favor of the Catholic Church convince, and the will refuses its assent, pray that God may enlighten and give the faith to believe; for faith is a gift of God, and unless he in his goodness and mercy, grant it, we may not ever find it. We should ask God to enlighten our understanding, that we may see heavenly things as we do earthly, illuminate our intellect with the light of faith; and what reason may fail to do, viz., to dispel the darkness which obscures the light of faith from burning brightly in our heart, can be removed by one bright ray of divine light.

With profound esteem, I have the honor to be your humble servant in Christ,

SYNOPSIS OF A LECTURE

BY ELDER E. C. BRAND,

IN SAINTS' CHAPEL, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH,
Sunday, February 3d, 1884.

SUBJECT: FRAUDS OF CELESTIAL MARRIAGE.

THE speaker said that certain questions had been presented, which would form the basis of his remarks.

1. Who was the first polygamist? When doctors disagree, who shall decide? So with so-called prophets. If we answer this question on the authority of Brigham Young, then Adam was the first polygamist; for when he brought forth that polygamic revelation that teaches that this principle is the only means of exaltation; and that if we reject it "then are ye damned," it was asked of him, (Brigham), How then did Adam get his exaltation; for you have shown us in our endowments, how God created Adam and the woman Eve, (or Miss Eliza Snow)? To meet this difficulty, Brigham resorts to the scheme of publishing to all people, (see his sermon in Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, page 50,) that "when Adam came to this earth, he brought Eve, one of his celestial wives with him;" that "he is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do." How the Lord could find out that he was alone is a mystery; and as the Scriptures teach that Adam died, and that Christ was the "first fruits of them that slept;" Adam was dependent on his son for his resurrection. The Book of Mormon teaches that "Jesus Christ is the Eternal God," and that he created Adam. Thus Brigham in substituting the creature for the creator, as an object of worship, follows in the track of all polygamous nations; first step polygamy, then idolatry, then murder.

But if we take the testimony of John Taylor, then Cain was the first polygamist; for in vol. 6, Times and Seasons, he informs us, under the date of 1845, two years after the date of the bogus revelation, that "Cain went down into the land of Nod, and taught a plurality of wives, and that the giants practiced the same iniquity." But we will now answer the question according to the New Translation of Joseph the Martyr, where we read that the double murderer, Lamech, was the first polygamist; that Lamech having entered into a covenant with Satan after the manner of Cain; and Irad, the son of Enoch, having revealed the secret, Lamech slew him, not as Cain who slew Abel, for the sake of getting gain, but that he slew him for the oath's sake, for Irad had divulged it. This takes us to the beginning of the chapter, where we read that "Cain loved Satan more than God;" and that "Satan said unto Cain, Swear unto me by thy throat, [as many of you have done], and swear thy brethren by their heads, and by the living God, and this that thy Father may not know it; and I will this day deliver thy brother's flocks into thy hand." Here then originates both the polygamic and the endowment covenant, which the Book of Mormon shows was handed down from Cain.

The second question is, Who was the author of the Polygamic revelation? We answer, Brigham Young and W. W. Phelps; for in a discourse preached by Brigham Young, on the 21st of June, 1874, he states that this principle was revealed to him in England, in 1839, while there on a mission; that he had it for himself, and kept it to himself; and that on his return to Nauvoo in 1841, he conversed with Joseph about it; but that Joseph and the Church at that time, knew nothing about it. Phelps also on the stand before this, said "It took us some ten or twelve days to write the revelation. I wrote some of it." In February, 1844, Joseph Smith, in Times and Seasons, four months before his death, cuts off and publishes to the world, "an Elder" named Hyrum Brown, for "preaching polygamy and other corrupt doctrines." Is it possible that God revealed to him in 1843 polygamy as a holy principle, and he such a hypocrite as to cut a man off, and pretend that it was a corrupt principle? The next month Hyrum denounces it and says, "As far as celestial glory is concerned, all who obey the principles of the gospel will attain to it." And from the time of Joseph's death, up to 1852, the Elders and leaders of the church, have lied about it, and denied it; and when it could no more be covered up, Brigham, in 1852, had his bogus revelation read, and then lied by saying that the leaders had not practiced it, although there were hundreds of polygamists under the sound of his voice. He also said that it was a copy, and Emma Smith had burned the original; and Emma, a virtuous lady, respected, for forty years lived in Nauvoo, a truthful woman, testified that it was a "lie out of whole cloth;" that she "never saw such a revelation."

The third question is, What about the seven women in Isaiah 4th chapter? This was one of the arguments made by that profound philosopher, Orson Pratt. The Bible was divided into chapters about three hundred and fifty years ago, and in this case the division comes in the middle of a paragraph, which commences with verse 16 of 3d chapter. Joseph, in the Inspired Translation, places that first verse of the fourth chapter, where it belongs, that is, as the last verse of the third chapter; and by reading the whole paragraph, we find that these seven women will be "scabby," "ragged," "stinking," and "bald-headed." What gentleman would allow such a bevy of celestial beauties to hang on to his coat tails? Truly it is a pity, that such a man as Orson Pratt was bound to resort to such examples to sustain this rotten system.

Fourthly; what about the women that have made affidavits that they were Joseph's wives? Why, we shall cross examine them. When our first Elder came here, a woman at Session's settlement, told him to shut his mouth about polygamy; that she was J. Smith's wife, "and that child is his daughter," said she, pointing to a girl. He was staggered; but on being advised to return and find out the age of the girl, he found that she was born years after Joseph's death. The woman colored, and said, "Well, she is J. Smith's daughter by proxy, any how." I now present before you a copy of Deseret News for 1869; and these affidavits are mostly taken at that time, to stay the damaging effects of the exposure of this fraud by the Josephite Elders. One I present and read, made by Miss Emily-Dow-Partridge-Young. She swears that she was married (or sealed) to J. Smith, on the 11th of May, 1843, (two months before the date of the polygamic revelation), by J. Adams, a High Priest, (who denied this in London, in 1873), and in presence of Emma Smith, (who also denied it on her death bed). Then comes three stars showing a part of the affidavit was suppressed. But we have at last obtained the whole affidavit, by the politeness of Mr. L. O. Littlefield, who has kindly furnished the missing link; in which it appears, that when she swore, she testified that she was thus married, according to the "laws on marriage in said church," which marriage law, says that polygamy is a crime. No wonder then, that they suppressed this and that Brigham Young had this marriage law taken out of his last edition of Doctrine and Covenants, and his bogus revelation inserted in its stead. Again, shortly after her thus swearing, Mr. Newman debated with Mr. Pratt, who in his writings shows that the church does not practice polygamy on account of any thing written in the three books of the church. "For in 1831 God gave us a holy law," strictly confining us to one wife; but we practice it on account of a revelation given to Joseph Smith, 12th day of July, 1843." And, "If any man had practiced polygamy before this time, it would have been adultery and the abomination the Book of Mormon speaks of. Miss Dow-Partridge-Smith-Young, etc., etc., swears that on the 11th day of May, 1843, she and Joseph Smith violated the laws of Illinois, made and provided concerning the crime of bigamy; and also the rules of the church, which made polygamy a crime, and which was retained by them in their Book of Covenants as late as the 1854 edition. And in November last, one of the Elite ladies in Ogden, told me that she could swear that Hyrum Smith married four women to his brother Joseph, giving the names of this Emily, and three others. When Emily's affidavit was brought to bear upon her, where Emily swears that Adams did it, she weakened, and said I am mistaken; but I got it straight from my sister Alice." Another woman Miss or Mrs. Zina Huntington, when her husband, Mr. Jacobs, was catechized in Florence, Nebraska, how he knew that his wife was sealed to Joseph Smith, he said that he knew it, for Brigham told him so; yet he was not divorced from her, and lived with her at the time he pretended to know that Joseph Smith was sealed to her. So much for affidavits.

Now a word concerning statistics. O. Pratt tells us that a woman can not be saved without a man; and that there are so many more women than men, therefore the men must have pity and marry them to save them. Then gives the population of Massachusetts, where every one knows there are so many factories employing females, and women flocking from all the States in the Union to that place. I might as well give the statistics of the mining camps in California and urge polyandry. But the United States census for each decade, shows a large increase in the excess of the male population, to wit:

In 1820.....	158,123.....	excess of males
In 1830.....	193,372.....	excess of males
In 1840.....	307,611.....	excess of males
In 1850.....	483,446.....	excess of males
In 1860.....	727,038.....	excess of males

In 1870 there is a falling off in the figures on account of the war, in which 600,000 men were killed; but add this to 428,759 which was the excess in spite of the war, and the excess would have been but for the war, one million and twenty-eight thousand seven hundred and fifty-nine. Utah is full and overflowing. A man can not tell his children to go out east or west, and take up a homestead, unless he takes it on top of Mount Nebo, or some such a mountain peak. So that your rising generation of "Utah's best crop," and your emigration must spread with the Territories, to live their religion; and the prospect for them from a statistical standpoint is not very inviting. Let me give you the population of the adjacent territories, according to the United States census in 1870.

So in Wyoming instead of its being as in Isaiah fourth, seven women, it will be seven men hunting down one woman.

SERMON BY ELDER JOHN G. SMITH,

Of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Delivered in the Hall No. 1302, Broadway, St. Louis, Missouri, January 27th, 1884.

TEXT, Acts 17: 16-32. Paul's preaching to the Athenians. Paul the Apostle of the Gentiles, is held in high veneration and esteem by professing Christians. If we are to judge from pen pictures of his admirers, Paul must have presented a grand and majestic appearance upon this memorable occasion. That the principles which he taught are noble and manly, grand and sublime, all will readily agree; but if I am permitted to judge by the statements of Paul himself, and of those who personally knew him, he was very much like the description foretold in regard to Jesus his Master, "A root out of a dry ground, having no form nor comeliness, that when they should see him he should be desired of them." Tradition informs us, that Paul was a man of diminutive stature, and afflicted with sore eyes, and very far from being a fluent speaker. It was said of him, "that his letters were powerful, but his bodily presence was weak, and his speech contemptible." Paul in appearance was a contrast to the Athenian orator, Demosthens, and much more so to that of the Roman orator Cicero; who is glowingly described, as,

"Gathering his flowing robes he seemed to stand,
In act to speak, and gracefully waved his hand."

Let us now turn our attention from Paul, to suggest a few thoughts in regard to his hearers. To begin with, it must be borne in mind, that at this period when Paul visited Athens, the Roman Empire was in the zenith of its power. Its sway over the provinces conquered by its legions, was well nigh undisputed. The Greeks quietly submitted to the inevitable, and their politicians and statesmen not caring to enter the service of the Roman Government, stood aloof, their occupation being gone. Rome was the seat of government, but Athens was the metropolis of fashion, of literature, of art and science, of philosophy, of refinement and taste. To Athens as a center of attraction flocked the rich and fashionable, the poet and literary man, the artist and scientist, the painter and sculptor, and the philosophers of the different schools of Zeno and Epicurus. Reflecting on these things we can readily believe the Athenians spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell or to hear some new thing.

Paul after rebuking his Athenian audience for being too superstitious, declared unto them concerning the unknown God whom they ignorantly worshiped. Probably it might be well to enquire if the God who made the world is not even yet in this the nineteenth century unknown to the great mass of mankind, including professors of religion as well as nonprofessors. And do they not worship him amiss and ignorantly? There are a few men in our day who ignore the evidences presented to the reflecting mind in the book of nature, (the universe we behold), in regard to the probability of the existence of God. These men are called Atheists. In our day they are a more numerous class who profess they do not know there is a God, they say the evidence is insufficient to decide. David answers these classes of men as follows, Psalms 14: 1-4, Inspired Translation:

"The fool hath said in his heart, There is no man that hath seen God. Because he showeth himself not unto us, therefore there is no God. Behold they are corrupt; they have done abominable works, and none of them doeth good. For the Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, and by his voice said unto his servants, Seek ye among the children of men, to see if there are any who do understand God. And he opened his mouth unto the Lord, and said, Behold, all these who say they are thine. The Lord answered and said, They are together become filthy, thou canst behold none of them that are doing good; no, not one. All they have for their teachers are workers of iniquity, and there is no knowledge in them."

Passages in the New Testament are quoted by some to show that no man hath seen God at any time. In the Inspired Translation by Joseph Smith, such passages have a qualifying clause attached; such as, "Except them who believe;" 1 John 4: 12; "Unless quickened by the Spirit of God," &c., thus harmonizing these passages with numerous ones in the Old Testament, where it positively states that men saw God. Truth is ever harmonious with truth.

I will now quote from the articles of the faith of a popular sect, their views concerning God:

"Article 1. There is but one living and true God, who is a pure spirit invisible, without body, parts, or passions," &c. 2. "In the unity of the Godhead there are three persons, or substances, of one substance, power and glory; the Father, the Word, or Son, and the Holy Ghost."

The portions of this creed I will more particularly object to, are, that "God is invisible, and without body, parts, or passions." I read in the Bible that God made man in his own image, and that Jesus was his only begotten Son according to the flesh, and the express image of his person. Jesus after his resurrection said, "Handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as you see me have." Here then we have one of the persons of the Godhead with a body and parts, and of him it is written, "He is the express image of the Father's person." We can then draw our own inferences regarding God the Father. In regard to God not having passions: It is written, "He is angry with the wicked;"—"That his fury shall come up in his face;"—"That he hates putting away;"—"That he loves the world;"—"That he repenteth of the evil;"—"That I will avenge me of mine adversaries;"—"That I rejoice over thee;" &c. In regard to the invisibility of God: When man was first created, God walked and talked with him, and gave him commandments to observe, and not until he had sinned by disobeying the commands of God was he shut out from his presence. Enoch walked and talked with God. Abraham also saw God, when God came down to see for himself concerning the reports about Sodom. Jacob after wrestling all night with a man, making enquiry of his name, who he was, and receiving his blessing, &c., called the name of the place Peniel, "For I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved." In Exodus 24: 9-11, it reads:

"Then went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the Elders of Israel; And they saw the God of Israel; and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of a sapphire stone, and as it were the body of heaven in his clearness. Upon the nobles of the children of Israel he laid not his hand; also they saw God, and did eat and drink."

Now let us read the testimony of Isaiah, chapter 6: 1-7:

"In the year that King Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. * * * And one Seraphim cried unto another and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of Hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory. And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him who cried, and the house was filled with smoke. Then said I, woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts. Then flew one of the Seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar; and he laid it upon my mouth, and said, "Lo this has touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." &c.

Ezekiel testifies in chapter 1: 26-28, in regard to the appearance of God, as follows:

"As I was among the captives, by the river of Chebar, [that the heavens were] opened, and I saw visions of God. * * * And above the firmament that was over their heads was [the likeness of a throne,] as the appearance of a sapphire stone; and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness of the appearance of a man above upon it. And I saw as the color of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upwards, and from the appearance of his loins even downwards, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about, as the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. [This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord. And when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake. And he said unto me, Son of man, stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee. And the Spirit entered into me.]"

The testimony of Stephen [the martyr in Acts 7: 55, 56, is recorded as follows:

"But he being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God. And said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God."

Some will say these passages of scripture which state that men were permitted the privilege of seeing and conversing with God, must not be understood literally; they were merely visions, not realities, but bodies, or the appearance of the bodies of men, assumed by the invisible God to suit the occasion. Curious is it not for men who profess to honor God, to say that God would stoop to practice a sham or deception upon the sons of men, which they virtually do? An excuse may be offered for their thus dishonoring God; because of the ages of spiritual darkness which have held full sway upon the earth, since the death of the Apostles and Saints of the early Christian Church. During this long period, darkness has covered the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people; the knowledge of the true God, and the power of Godliness were unknown among men, or as John Wesley puts it, "the Christians were turned heathens again, having only a dead form left." The minds of the people are beclouded, because of the false traditions and teachings they have inherited. Though in possession of the Scriptures, the record of the Jews, they have failed to understand the import of such passages, as "God made man in his own image,"—"The Father of Spirits,"—"We are the offspring of God." These passages if not meaningless to them, are to say the least very vague, and full of mystery; and yet to the saints who have received an unction from the Holy One, they furnish a key with which to understand the reason why God so loved the world, as to send his only begotten son. To those who have a knowledge of the true God, all the statements written by uninspired men about Jesus Christ having two whole and perfect natures, his Godhood and manhood, are distinctions which are superfluous and unwise, seeing they convey the idea that God and man are distinct species.

I will now touch upon another misconception in the minds of some concerning God; it is this: that God is everywhere present, his circumference is everywhere, his center nowhere in particular, that he fills immensity, &c. This doctrine is in one sense true, and in another sense it is untrue. When the Spirit of God is referred to as being omnipresent it is true, as illustrated by David, Psalms 139: 7-12. "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell [hades] thou art there." It must be borne in mind that the Spirit of God is not a personage; but is a subtle and all powerful essence or element proceeding from the Father and the Son, and is disseminated throughout space, pervading all matter, and is the grand agent in creating or organizing, in giving life, in upholding and sustaining, and if need be of destroying and reorganizing, subject to the will of the Father and the Son. It is untrue in the sense that the Father and the Son are everywhere present, they being personages; God the Father being a personage of spirit, and the Son being a personage of tabernacle. We will now sum up the matter by formulating our creed in regard to the Godhead: There are two persons in the Godhead; the Father and the Son; these two, with the Holy Spirit which proceedeth from the Father and the Son, constitute the Godhead; or in other words, these three constitute the great, matchless, governing and supreme power over all things; by whom all things were created and made, that were created and made, and these three constitute the Godhead, and being of the same mind and will, are one.

I will now take up for our consideration another principle spoken of by Paul, verse 27: "That men should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him and find him, though he be not far from every one of us." The Inspired Translation gives this reading, "If they are willing to find him." Jesus taught, "that there is a light that lighteth every man who cometh into the world." In other words, the spirit of man being an emanation from God, has within the man a portion of the Spirit of God, even from the period of his first organization in the world; and as he grows up to years of accountability, inasmuch as he hearkens to, and heeds the suggestions of the good Spirit, then will he receive grace added to grace, or in other words, he will receive more abundantly of the Spirit of God; but on the other hand, if the suggestions of the Spirit of God are not heeded, and he yields to the temptations of the evil spirit, then the Spirit of the Lord being grieved, if he repents not, will gradually withdraw from him, leaving him subject to the evil one; for whom ye list, or choose to obey, his servants ye are.

As an illustration of the principle of feeling after God, and finding him, I will give a slight sketch from the life of Joseph Smith, the martyred prophet; as his was a notable example of feeling after God, and of successfully finding him. "Joseph Smith was born December 23d, 1805, at Sharon, Windsor Co., Vermont. When about ten years of age his parents removed with him to Palmyra, Ontario Co., now Wayne Co., New York. About four years later, the family removed to the village of Manchester in the same county. About this time, or shortly after, a Mr. Lane, a Presiding Elder of the Methodist Church, visited the vicinity. Elder Lane was a talented man, possessing a good share of literary endowments, and apparent humility. There was a great awakening or excitement on the subject of religion, and much enquiry for the word of life. Large additions were made to the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist churches. Mr. Lane's manner of communication was peculiarly calculated to awaken the intellect of the hearer, and arouse the sinner to look around him for safety. Much good instruction was always drawn from his discourses on the Scriptures, and in common with others, the mind of Joseph Smith was awakened. For a length of time the reformation seemed to move on in a harmonious manner; but as the excitement ceased, or those who had expressed anxieties had professed a belief in the pardoning influence and condescension of the Savior, a general struggle was made by the leading characters of the different sects for proselytes. Then strife seemed to take the place of that apparent union and harmony which had previously characterized the motives and exhortations of the old professors, and a cry, "I am right, you are wrong," was introduced in their stead. In this general strife for followers, his mother, one sister, and two of his natural brothers, were persuaded to unite with the Presbyterians. This gave opportunity for further reflection. After strong solicitations to unite with one of these different societies, and seeing the apparent proselyting disposition manifested with equal warmth by each, where could he go? If he went to one, he was told they were right and all others were wrong. If to another the same was heard from them. All professed to be the true church, and if not, they were certainly hypocritical; because if I am presented with a system of religion, and enquire of my teacher whether it is correct, and he informs me that he is not certain, he acknowledges at once that he is teaching without authority, and acting without a commission. The mind of Joseph Smith was by some influence directed to that Scripture which saith: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." He resolved to test it practically. For this purpose he retired to a solitary place in the woods. I will read his statement of what then occurred.

"After I had retired into the place where I had previously designed to go, having looked around me, and finding myself alone, I kneeled down and began to offer up the desires of my heart to God. I had scarcely done so, when I was seized upon by some power which entirely overcame me, and had such astonishing influence over me as to bind my tongue so I could not speak. Thick darkness gathered around me, and it seemed to me for a time as if I were doomed to sudden destruction. But exerting all my powers to call upon God to deliver me out of the power of this enemy which had seized upon me, and at the very moment when I was ready to sink into despair and abandon myself to destruction, not to an imaginary ruin, but to the power of some actual being from the unseen world, who had such a marvelous power as I had never before felt in any being. Just at this moment of great alarm, I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually till it fell upon me. It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the power of the enemy which had held me bound. When the light rested upon me, I saw two personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me calling me by name, and said, (pointing to the other), "This is my beloved Son; hear him!" As soon as I was able to speak I asked the question, "Which of the sects I should join?" I was answered that I must join none of them, for they were all wrong, and the personage who addressed me said that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt, they draw near to me with their lips but their hearts are far from me; they teach for doctrine the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof. He again forbade me to join with any of them; and many other things did he say unto me which I can not write at this time."

I will now give a quotation from the testimony of Oliver Cowdery in regard to the ordination of himself and Joseph Smith to the Holy Priesthood.

"The Lord who is rich in mercy, and ever willing to answer the consistent prayer of the humble, after we had called upon him in a fervent manner aside from the abodes of men, condescended to manifest to us his will. On a sudden, as from the midst of eternity, the voice of the Redeemer spake peace to us, while the veil was parted and the angel of God came down clothed with glory, and delivered the anxiously looked for message and the keys of the gospel of repentance. What joy! what wonder! what amazement! While the world were racked and distracted; while millions were groping as the blind for the wall, and while all men were resting upon uncertainty, as a general mass, our eyes beheld—our ears heard, as in the 'blaze of day'; yes more—above the glitter of the May sun-beam, which then shed its brilliancy over the face of nature! Then his voice though mild pierced to the center, and his words, 'I am thy fellow servant,' dispelled every fear. We listened, we gazed, we admired! 'Twas the voice of the angel from glory.—'Twas a message from the Most High! and as we heard we rejoiced, while his love enkindled upon our souls, and we were wrapt in the vision of the Almighty! Where was room for doubt? No-where. Uncertainty had fled, doubt had sunk no more to rise, while fiction and deception had fled forever! But think for a moment what joy filled our hearts, and with what surprise we must have bowed, (for who would not have bowed the knee for such a blessing?) when we received under his hand the Holy Priesthood, as he said, 'Upon you my fellow servants in the name of Messiah, I confer this priesthood and this authority, which shall remain upon earth, that the sons of Levi may yet offer an offering unto the Lord in righteousness!'"

I will now quote from the vision of Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon.

"Now this caused us to marvel, for it was given unto us of the Spirit; and while we meditated upon these things, the Lord touched the eyes of our understandings and they were opened, and the glory of the Lord shone round about; and we beheld the glory of the Son on the right hand of the Father, and received of his fulness; and saw the holy angels, and they who are sanctified before his throne, worshiping God and the Lamb, who worship him forever and ever. And now after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony last of all which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God, and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the only begotten of the Father,—that by him, and through him, and of him the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God."

I will now leave these testimonies concerning God with you. Surely they are for our encouragement. Then let us be diligent in living our religion, and let us exercise strong faith, that we too in due time may be redeemed from the fall, and brought back into the presence of God.

I thank you for your attention. May God bless you, and all honest seekers after truth in every land and clime. I ask this blessing in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

HAVE A POLITIC.

BOB BURDETTE'S ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN OF POLITICAL ASPIRATION.

Be something, young man. If none of the existing parties satisfy you, organize one of your own, and go "sloshing around." But have a politic. Institute a war cry. View with alarm and point with pride on your own hook, but do view and point. If you are very vigorous you may also at times "recoil with horror." You will find this very effective toward the close of the campaign. If I had time, my son, I believe I could fit you out with a full and complete assortment of tools, weapons and armor for politics.

You should have, at the opening of the campaign, besides the matters already mentioned:

One dozen kegs of nails, wherewith to nail the enemy's lies. Shriek every time you nail a lie "Down with the Mormons."

A few judicious lies to toss around carelessly and not too early, just to keep them busy. Shout when you scatter them. Say something mean about the Mormons.

A few "demands" for things that we already have, and have had for fifty years. Nobody will notice this if you only yell them out lustily, and with the air of a man who is saying something new. The older the "demand" the louder you must yell when you make it. "Demand" especially that the Mormons be suppressed.

Some "pledges" more or less. Pledge yourself to something easy—the abolition of Mormonism, the abolition of slavery and unyielding opposition to the payment of the Confederate bonds of the State of Ohio. Roar about it, and give it to the Mormons red hot.

Remember the soldiers. This is eminently proper, patriotic and cheap. 'Twill cost you a cent. Stand upon the house-tops, and in a loud voice call them "the defenders of the Republic," and declare that they shall have their rights. Along near the close of the campaign you might also promise them their lefts. That's what they'll get anyhow, but you needn't say anything about that. Keep as noisy as possible and howl: "The Mormons must go."

Arraign the administration! Oh! every time arraign the administration. And a common arraignment will not do. If any platform contain not a scathing arraignment of the administration the same is a liar and a horse-thief, be the same more or less. If, unfortunately, you are on the side of the administration, then you must arraign the other party. But you labor under a great disadvantage if you are in with the administration. It is so much easier to stand in the street and throw stones at the window than to stand in the window and throw stones into the street.

Blessed be the opposition. Because why? You're liable to run out of stones. There are no stones in the house, whereas the street is full of 'em, and the man in the window can't throw until the man in the street has first fired a rock at him. And if it so be that the first dornick catches him in the eye, his case is distressing; or if it be that while he is stooping to pick up the first stone the man in the street fires half a dozen more at his stooping figure, then is the last state of the man in the house worse than the first. "Holler" as loud as you throw fast, and let the Mormons have it all the time.

For the reasons set forth above, never fight on the defensive. Always keep going up and down like a raging lion, seeking where you may investigate somebody. "You haven't taught me any of the parries," said a young soldier to an old Prussian fencing master. "Parries be—" (I have forgotten the Prussian for that word) replied the old mustache. "You thrust; let the other fellow parry." Lay it on to the Mormons, every lick.

By all means have a slogan. No party is equipped for contest until it has a slogan. In some wards you will want a slogan that holds a quart. Down with the Mormons, remember. And talk loud.

Pat civil-service reform on the back. Remember that, in the hands of the administration, it is a mere instrument of partisan tyranny and nepotism, an object of selfish ambition and base personal greed; but in your hands and those of your relatives, by consanguinity, marriage and adoption, public station would be a place of honor and honesty, capacity and fidelity, and constitute the only valid claims to public indorsement. And right here, oh how you can scathe the Mormons!

In regard to the tariff, denounce Mormonism as a scandal and a reproach, that is breeding a demoralization from its foul and festering chaps, that is fetid with rank corruption, that threatens to pollute the entire system of the grandest Government on "God's green earth." This will catch the free pro-traditionists.

I think there's about all you need to start with, my boy, and the other things will occur to you as the campaign advances. It's always safe to let into the Mormons. They have no friends east of the Rocky mountains, and very few west. Some of these points you may have to modify a little, but in the main you can use them as they are. They have been used by two parties during the past twenty years, and have come out radiant with victory and noble defeat every time.

Miscellaneous.

FIRST QUORUM OF ELDERS.

In the discharge of duty, send I this salutation to the First Quorum of Elders, praying our Heavenly Father that peace, mercy and grace, may be unto you. The time for our annual meeting is fast approaching, and I earnestly request that every member will promptly, and with as much expedition as possible, report himself to me at Stewartsville, DeKalb Co., Missouri, on or before April 6th. My understanding of quorum organization is, that every member of the organization report to his quorum, and the quorum reports to the general body. I make this statement for the reason that some have neglected to report, on account of their not laboring under a general or quarterly conference appointment. Some of "God's noblemen," members of our quorum, have fallen asleep in death since our last annual gathering. Peace to their ashes; and may theirs be a crown of eternal life, and a companionship with the "King of Saints," when he cometh to reign. It gives me pain of heart to inform you that some have been so forgetful of their holy calling as to permit their honor and good name to become tarnished. May the healing power of true repentance and a proper reparation be their defense when we shall reach an examination. Let all those who shall attend in person, come fired with a desire for the good of our Master's cause. That we may be directed in all the responsible duties of our office by the Holy Spirit, is the prayer of your servant and fellow laborer.

ROBT. M. ELVIN, President.

HIGH PRIESTS' QUORUM.

It has been the request of the quorum, that all High Priests report by letter once each year; therefore, this is to notify these brethren everywhere, that now is the time of year for making such reports, that they may be in hand before the General Conference convenes, at which time the quorum will meet to transact business.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

We, the undersigned, take this means of returning our thanks to our friends and well wishers at Freeman, Nebraska, for the donation of $29. We ask God that he will remember you kindly in all your "almsdeeds," not only in your fields and herds, but that the same blessing shall come unto you, that was bestowed upon that "devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always." For it is the highest aim and moving impulse of our souls, that we shall awake within men the desire, to make the chief object of life, their salvation in the kingdom of God. For gospel truth we abide, very respectfully yours,

LEVI ANTHONY,
ROBT. M. ELVIN.

BORN.

MORRELL.—At Streator, Illinois, June 9th, 1883, to Bro. William and Sr. Mary Morrell, twin daughters, blessed November 16th, 1883, by Elders John S. Patterson and Jacob Stanley, and named Hattie and Henrietta.

STANLEY.—At Streator, Illinois, July 27th, 1883, to Bro. Jacob and Sr. Margaret Stanley, a son. Blessed January 6th, 1884, by Elder John S. Kier, and named William.

STALEY.—At Cave Springs, Kansas, December 24th, 1883, to Bro. L. S. and Sr. N. Staley, twin girls. One died December 29th; the other is growing finely.

DIED.

TOOMBS.—At Providence, R. I., January 1st, 1884, brother William E. Toombs. He was born in Boylston, Worcester Co., Mass., April 26th, 1847. Baptized December 19th, 1880, by Elder C. N. Brown. When the time of his departure approached, he exclaimed, "All is well, all is well." Calmly and peacefully the lamp of life was extinguished, and one more was added to the list of those who have gone before. Funeral services conducted by Elder F. A. Potter.

LARKEY.—At Buck Horn, Jackson Co., Iowa, January 21st, 1884, of cancer, Sr. Nancy Larkey. She suffered much, but bore it with patience. Her faith was unshaken. A loving mother, faithful Saint, and kind neighbor. Her aged companion survives her; but his days will be short. They passed through the troubles of the Church in Missouri, and finally settled near Iron Hills, Iowa. We miss her, but our loss is her gain; and calmly we say, "Thy will be done." She was born December 4, 1812. United with the Reorganization February 8th, 1863.

Aged 72 years, 1 month, 18 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Jerome Ruby.

HOLMES.—In Long Valley, Monterey county, California, January 25th, 1884, of quick consumption, Sr. Anna Penelope, eldest daughter of Bro. John J. and Sr. Ella Holmes. She was sick about six months. Notwithstanding the many earnest and fervent prayers of her parents and friends, the Lord saw fit to take her away. God's will be done.

Dearest sister, thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When death's gloomy night has fled,
Then on earth with joy to greet thee,
Where no bitter tears are shed.

ZUSKER.—At Grand Manan, Me., February 15th, 1884, Bro. Matthew Zusker, aged 73 years, 10 months and 14 days. Funeral services February 17th, by Elder Joseph Lakeman.

SIDERS.—At Fremont, Nebraska, February 11th, 1884, Sr. Viola E. Siders, born March 20th, 1860, Henry Co., Ill.; baptized near Fremont, Neb., October 14th 1883. Faithful till death. Funeral services by Elder J. F. Mintun.

Sleep on, dear one, and take thy rest.
From sorrow thou art free;
Our loss is great, but we submit,
As it is gain to thee.

GIBBS.—At Fulton, Wisconsin, January 31st, 1884, Sr. Martha Gibbs, aged 85 years, 11 months and eight days. She died strong in the faith. Her testimony was that the work was of God. The sermon was by the Rev. S. L. Eldred, of the United Brethren faith. Was buried in the Evansville Cemetery. She united with the church in the early days, and has always been a firm believer and ready defender of the faith, as I can testify. She lived until she would rather go than stay; and thus your grandfather Smith's patriarchal blessing, that she should live until she was satisfied with life, was fulfilled. We know our loss is her gain, and feel to say, Thy will be done.

WALKER.—Near Sweet Home, Nodaway Co., Missouri, January 28th, 1884, Charles Oliver, son of Orson and Sarah E. Walker, aged 3 months and 8 days. This sudden and unexpected death, calls forth the heart-felt sympathies for its parents and friends for death has come

To us with a solemn knell,
And look from our dear home
Our little one, that was so dear,
And left us all alone.

BEEMER.—At Fremont, Nebraska, February 8th, 1884, David S. Beemer, aged 72 years, 7 months and 4 days. Although not a member of the Church, yet during nearly two years prior to his death, he had a great interest in the doctrines of the Church, advocating them at every opportunity. He lived consistently with his belief, and died in peace expressing himself satisfied with life. Funeral services by Elder J. Frank Mintun.

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
GEO. MONTAGUE.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
W. F. CLARK.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

BRO. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. and Sr. William and Eliza Bracy, colored, wrote from Mecosta City, Mich., February 21st, that there are four waiting the coming of an Elder for baptism at that place, directing their letter to Norman W. Smith, with whom they are acquainted. Will it be practicable for some Elder to visit them? Should they wish to address them before going, direct to William Bracy, Mecosta City, Mecosta Co., Michigan, post office box No. 17.

Bro. W. H. Kelley wrote from Kirtland, February 29th, that the discussion on the second question: "Is the Church of which I, Clark Braden, am a member, identical in faith, organization, doctrine, and practice, with the Church of Christ as was left perfected by the Apostles;" closed on the evening of the 28th. It is clear from the tone of Bro. Kelley's letter that we will have no cause to hang our heads from the result of the Braden-Kelley debate at Kirtland.

Bro. John Eames baptized three others at Cheyenne, February 28th. He wrote March 1st, that he thought that the Saints there now numbering more than six would organize a branch to be known as the Cheyenne Branch. The local paper, the Leader, of February 29th, states that the persons baptized by Bro. Eames were baptized some months ago in Minnesota by one Elder Buchanan, of the Utah Church, who deliberately told them that the Church in Utah did "not practice nor believe in it," (polygamy), but advised them to emigrate to Salt Lake as soon as they could. They went as far as Cheyenne last fall, heard of Bro. Eames, visited him, with the result stated above. If the statement made by the Leader is correct, this Elder Buchanan certainly went abroad with a lying spirit in his mouth—who put it there? the devil, or Pres. John Taylor?

Bro. Eric Johnson writes from 214 Sedgwick street, Chicago, February 24th, sending assistance for the brethren in Wheeling, who have been drowned out by the flood.

He writes very feelingly in regard to it. Hopes that there is a general response to the call for help. We have already noted the effort made by Bro. Burlington, in St. Joseph, Mo.

Sr. S. A. Fletcher and her husband living at Oxford, Sumner county, Kansas, would like that when opportunity should serve, an Elder passing through that region should call on them; although Sr. Fletcher does not know that one could get any opportunity to reach the people there. They have not heard a sermon in four years.

Bro. John Eames wrote from Cheyenne, March 3d, that on the previous Sunday he had organized a branch in that place numbering twelve, including two Elders, two Priests and one Teacher. He rejoices that a branch has been organized in his town, and desires the prayers of the Saints that he may have wisdom to keep the flock in the faith.

Elder Thomas Willard, of Carson City, Nevada, sends us a copy of the Daily Index for February 13th, in which the visit of Bro. W. W. Blair to Manassa, Colorado, and its portent to Utah Mormonism, are very fairly presented. Good, let the camp fires and beacon lights flash along the horizon, over every line of road and along every water course, and in every city and hamlet in the land of America.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. W. Blair wrote from Los Angeles, California, February 26th:

The weather has been fine the past ten days, and everything vegetable is booming. I hear that but little damage was done in Gospel Swamp by the late terrible floods in this region, and that great good will result from the thorough rains, in many ways. We baptized two young ladies at Green Meadows, six miles west of this, last Sunday. Six or eight more persons express their intention of uniting with us soon. We organized the branch here more fully yesterday. The prospects for the branch are good. I expect to remain here and in this vicinity till March 4th, and then go back to San Bernardino for eight or ten days. I have had but one letter in the past fifteen days, (owing to washouts on Railroads, no doubt), but we hope mails will come and go regularly hereafter, though it is not likely the Railroad from here to San Francisco will be repaired fully till about March 15th or 20th. I greatly hope you will have a good time at the Stewartville Conference, and that steps may be taken to prevent further watering the milk. I have noticed, and deeply regretted, this watering process, for years past, and hope the time may soon come when it will be fully and thoroughly stopped. The church needs the "sincere milk of the word," and occasionally some "meat" also.

Elder Jerome Ruby, in a foot note to conference minutes, says:

Elders Reynolds and Johnson's discourse Sunday was truly "A feast of fat things." They were greatly blessed with the Spirit, and their preaching was a demonstration of God's power and favor. May our Heavenly Father continue to so bless them, and all his servants.

Bro. W. N. Ray, of Des Moines, Iowa, wrote us March third that Bro. E. Banta preached there twice the day before on the first principles of the gospel to attentive audiences. He says:

I see by the Herald that Bro. E. Robinson has been sick. I can say with him that I take great pleasure in reading the Book of Mormon. I think it is the best book of all books.

Bro. David Brand writes from Coral, Illinois:

We get along as well as we can. We had some good preaching by Bro. Joseph R. Lambert, but it seems not to take much effect upon the people. We keep sowing, and after awhile there may be a growth.

REV. L. L. LUSE, of Wilber, Nebraska, who visited Kirtland, Ohio, and was there, we suppose during a part of the debate between brother Kelley and Rev. Clark Braden, wrote a letter to his paper in Nebraska, a copy of which Bro. R. M. Elvin sent us, in which letter he stated that Kirtland looked deserted and dilapidated, dull, forsaken, and words to a similar effect; attributing it to the "influence of Mormonism" that had fallen like a blight on the land etc., etc., etc.

If Rev. L. L. Luse will write the name and give the county and state or territory, where a colony of Latter Day Saints ever settled, where they did not by their labor, industry and enterprise, cause the land to bring forth its increase; and where they did not build houses good to dwell in, make gardens and plant and cultivate them, and make things flourish generally, (and to make the task easier for him if possible, we will include the Mormons of Utah, for the purpose of an example), we will cheerfully publish the items in answer to this inquiry in the HERALD.

Further, we will ask the Rev. L. L. Luse to furnish us the name and locality of any village, town, or city, founded and built up by Latter Day Saints, and from which they have been driven, in every instance without legal process, or pretext, that has not remained as they left it, or has gone into decay, become "desolate and deserted looking." We shall except Omaha and Council Bluffs from his list, should he attempt to quote them; because when the Mormons stopped there, they were sojourners only, en route for a spot further west.

We have heard of "the blighting influence of Mormonism," as affecting the material prosperity of the land before; and reverend gentlemen like Mr. Luse, have referred to it as if it were a "sweet morsel" for them to roll under their tongues; and think it about time somebody asked for the proofs. Is it not admitted that the Saints have every where been industrious, frugal, and energetic, (except the leader Joseph Smith; who is always accused by his enemies as being lazy, &c.) Did not a mere handful in numbers build the Temple at Kirtland, as poor an affair as Mr. Luse says it is. Did they not reclaim the swamp, dispel malaria, found a city and build a Temple at Nauvoo, and fill the country there with laborers. And are not the footprints of the fleeing hosts from the Missouri to the Golden Gate, every where teeming with the proofs of care, labor, thrift and material success and prosperity—why the rabid persecutors of the Utah Mormons, who damn their polygamic practices with one breath, praise their frugality and industry with the next. It is astonishing how men professing an intelligent belief in Christ and to be followers of the meek and lowly Lamb, who despised a sham and hated a lie, can so far forget themselves in their spleen, as to afford not to give even their enemies, and those whom they deem in the most outrageous of errors, credit for what good there may be in them.

Let Rev. L. L. Luse go back to Hancock county, live in Nauvoo for a while, and talk with men who were there in the time when the Saints were there, and after they left, as it was the fortune of the editor of the HERALD to do; and he will hear good, earnest, honest men, who are not Mormons, or Saints, but who have been and are now in favor of progress and prosperity, say that while the Saints were there there was material prosperity, but when they were driven out a curse seemed to be left behind them. In our own time the city ran down from nearly 2,700 to less than 1,300, and a short time since an article in the Independent, local paper, stated that of all the number of voters in the city only about 120 were liable to poll tax. If there was ever any "blighting influence" following the Saints, which affected the material prosperity of the country where they settled and whence they were driven; it followed after them and was the result of the desolating influence of bigotry, and intolerance, that could not bear to see thrift and independence attach to other religions than their own.

We are not friendly to Utah's favorite practice, plural marriage, and whatever its concomitants may be, but men who assert that they love truth ought not to be ashamed or afraid to give even the devil his due; and lack of industry and failure to practice the arts that create prosperity, are not sins for which any considerable body of believers in the latter day work will ever be called to answer for.

BRO. JOSEPH LAKEMAN sends us a copy of the Island Press, of Grand Manan, for February 24th; containing the following notice of his lecture.

The third lecture of the course delivered under the auspices of the Intellectual Institute in connection with the Island Press Association, was delivered on Tuesday evening last, in the Town Hall, North Head, by Elder Joseph Lakeman, U.

S. Consular Agent, on the 'Religion of the Bible.' Mr. Lakeman who is a very pleasing speaker, was in good voice and had a very large and exceedingly attentive audience. We congratulate him on his success in giving a plain, clear, lucid statement of his opinions, although no doubt he had much more to say, had time permitted. We shall be glad to hear from the eloquent gentleman on some future occasion, when he may perhaps call attention to other difficulties which beset the pathway of earnest enquirers after the truth, and refer to other stumbling blocks which cause distress to the earnest minded. Miss McNichol, who ably presided at the organ, and the Messrs. McNichol with Mr. W. E. Tatton's kind assistance, furnished excellent music before and after Mr. Lakeman's fluent lecture.

FROM the Norfolk, Nebraska, Journal, of February 29th, we clip the following:

Postmaster H. J. Hudson, of Columbus, who is an eloquent speaker, has prepared an interesting lecture on "The Early History of Genoa," which he delivered at the latter place Tuesday evening. Mr. Hudson is one of the oldest settlers in the North Platte country, and went to the place where Genoa now stands with the Mormons long before the Pawnees were located there. His lecture explains the formation of the old ditches, cellars, and other distinctive marks left by the Mormons in Nance county.

Correspondence.

WIRT, Jefferson Co., Ind.,
February 26th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—Bro. James G. Scott has just closed a series of meetings with us at the Union Branch, which resulted in the baptizing of seven splendid members into the branch, and quite a number more not far from the kingdom. The work has never been in better standing than at the present time. It has rained almost continuously during our meetings of over three weeks' duration, yet the people came out in great numbers, and gave the best of attention. The Good Spirit prevailed to a marked degree. The saints of our branch unite with us in thanking Bro. Scott for his timely aid while with us, and especially for his orderly walk and godly conversation. We expect to renew the conflict here in a few weeks, and extend it to other points in the district as much as our means will permit. Hoping the brethren and sisters of the district will remember that my address as Bishop's Agent, is Wirt, Jefferson Co., Indiana, and thanking all for past favors,

I remain as ever yours,

S. RECTOR.

CAROL, Texas Co., Missouri,
February 27th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish to say through the Herald should there be any of the Elders passing through this section on their way to conference, that could stop and preach about one or two weeks, I think there could be much good done, I was asked by a druggist of this place last Sabbath to write for one of our Elders to come. He said they could have a home with him as long as they would stay. Please do not forget this part of the mission at the Spring Conference. I am aware had we the aid of some experienced Elder, there would soon be enough members at this place to organize a branch. Norwood is not far away from here, where Brn. Schofield and Campbell live.

A sister in the truth,

MARY A. ATWELL.

No. 220, Hidalgo St.,
SAN ANTONIO, Texas,
February 25th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Bro. Allen and I succeeded in awakening a better interest near McDade than I expected when I last wrote. We held three meetings there which were quite well attended. Thence we returned to the Live Oak Branch, and held a few more meetings, and I then left them for Cook's Point, where I had a pleasant visit with Saints and friends who have always bade me welcome; but as there is no opportunity to reach the people there with the truth, (with but few exceptions), I moved on, and on December 15th I joined Bro. Cato at Milano, where he had previously done considerable labor. We held four meetings together, and were remarkably blest in the presentation of the word. While at Milano we were pleasantly and kindly entertained by Dr. Barmore and Mr. W. H. Smith. December 18th, I accompanied Bro. and Sr. Cato to Hearne, where we held one preaching service with the Central Branch, and one meeting for the purpose of confirming three (colored) who had been baptized by our colored brother, Ed. White. May he become an instrument in God's hands in saving many of his race!

On December 22d, we were met by Mr. Shelton at Marlin, Falls county, and conveyed to his home, where we were kindly entertained for several days, and held three meetings. Mr. Shelton is of the Methodist persuasion, but is not radical, but treated us with great kindness, which we shall not soon forget. Sr. Shelton is a Latter Day Saint, and her mother, Sr. Zackery, who resides with her, was baptized December 26th, by Bro. A. J. Cato. Both the Baptist and Methodist houses were closed against us near Marlin. December 28th found us at Elmwood, where we met a few times with the Saints. Bro. Cato then went to Temple and commenced meetings, while I opened up a new place on Deer Creek, where I had good audiences and interest. I have made three visits there, the last time in company with Bro. Thompson, who assisted me in preaching. I was greatly assisted also by Saints and friends of Elmwood, who accompanied me, and added to the enjoyment of the service by singing the songs of Zion. During this time I assisted Bro. Cato a few times in his meetings at Temple. On February 9th and 10th I attended the Texas Central District Conference, at Paige, and was well satisfied. I think I never enjoyed better liberty in speaking, and also enjoyed the instructions of Brn. Cato and O. Thompson, while they broke the bread of life. Having been corresponding with Elder C. M. Wilmeth in regard to discussion, it became necessary for me to return to Elmwood after conference, to complete arrangements. It was finally arranged to commence debate at 10 o'clock a. m., March 5th, 1884, at Elmwood, and devote two days each to the following propositions: 1. Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints the Church of Christ? 2. Is the Christian Church (which C. M. Wilmeth represents) the Church of Christ?

Having been strongly impressed for some time to visit San Antonio, and the way being opened, I came here on the 22d inst., and found three of the household of faith; viz: Bro. and Sr. Wm. Waterman, and Sr. Eliza Kilford, all recently from London, England. In meeting with these Saints who heard the gospel upon a foreign shore, I feel the influence of that same Spirit which I have often felt in communion with the Saints, both north and south, in our own land. Surely they have all had one common teacher! Yesterday we met in Bro. Waterman's room, and had a glorious time. I administered the sacrament to these faithful souls, and gave them such instructions as I felt led to give, after which each one of them bore testimony to the work, while God's Spirit seemed to fill all the room where we were sitting. One friend, a Mr. Henry A. Thompson, of Birmingham, England, was with us; and when we were done speaking he spoke, and said he felt he must become a member of the church. So last night we retired to the water, and I had the privilege of immersing him. The first child born into the Kingdom of God in this city. May many follow I pray. I think of going to Oak Island to-day or to-morrow, and perhaps Bro. Waterman may go with me. I would like to visit Bandera and Stockdale while in this region of the country, but the coming debate forbids.

I wish to state through the Herald that Elder S. P. Sherrill, who has for two years been under charges, has made a full and complete confession of his wrongs to the Elmwood Branch, and has been forgiven and reinstated to full fellowship. I hope the Saints in the mission will have enough of the Spirit of Christ to bury the past, and render him the encouragement needed to overcome. May God lead him and us, and keep us all spotless until the perfect day.

I feel well in the work. The Spirit's power has been with me richly, and my joy and peace are so complete in communion with the Spirit, as to eclipse all my past experiences. I have much hopes of the future prosperity of the work in this mission. I trust all the Saints will pray for the mission.

Yours in hopes of eternal life,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

LACROSSE, Hancock Co., Illinois,
March 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—On the last of February I went to Farmington Conference of the Nauvoo and String Prairie District. Arriving at Keokuk Friday evening, I first called on Bro. Spicer, and found him confined to his room, having been in poor health almost all winter. Next morning Bro. Durfee and I took the train for Farmington, where we arrived in company with Brn. Henry Pitt and George Lambert. Of the Saints some few were alive, some sick, and the rest sleeping. Found Bro. M. T. Short there ready for duty. We had a very pleasant business session. I preached Saturday night with liberty. Appointed Bro. Short to preach Sunday at eleven o'clock, and at night. Then went in company with Bro. Durfee, and spent the time till half after one Sunday morning, with Bro. Henry Stevens, listening to his talk about the early days of Mormonism. His face at times would brighten, his eyes would shine, and our hearts would burn with the Spirit's power, when he told of the trials of Kirtland, Missouri, and Nauvoo. God bless the old veteran. How his testimony helped to strengthen my faith to strive to hold out like him, faithful till the end. At two o'clock took train for Keokuk, where I preached at eleven o'clock. Social meeting at half-past two p. m.; preached at night with good liberty. Monday got home.

S. J. SALISBURY.

Dow City, Iowa,

February 28th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Have been laboring in the northern part of the district lately, with Bro. John Hawley. We went as far as Coalville and Hals, in Webster county. Preached several times at Coalville, and had a good and profitable time with the few faithful Saints in those places. There seemed to be little or no interest comparatively amongst the outside world in what is known to them as Mormonism, while other denominations holding protracted meetings made converts almost nightly. We found one occasionally inquiring after the way of life. It reminded me of the question proposed by the disciples to the Master, "Will there many be saved?" He replied, "Strait is the gate and narrow the way that leads unto life, and few there be that find it." But we preached the gospel as a witness preparatory to the end. With kind regards,

Yours in the bonds of peace,

JOHN PETT.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri,

February 20th, 1884.

Dear Brother:—I moved to this place from the Spring River District about three months ago. Before I left there I tried to get a location with the church on Cow Creek; but it appears that was not the will of the Lord; for by dream and direction of the Spirit, and the word of the Lord, I came here, for which I am very thankful. I pray to my God that I may be worthy of an inheritance on this land. My whole desires are for the cause of the Master, knowing it to be his work, not man's. We have in Independence what I believe will be in the near future, the Banner Branch. We have faithful officers, trying to do their duty; and all the members also feeling to do right, and that there is a necessity for them to cultivate a spirit of love and union. To my mind the signs of the times demand a compliance with all of the law and revelation that God has given to the church in this last dispensation. There are two principles which I fear many will be wrecked upon. The temporal law and pride. They proved the destruction of many in the Nephites' days; and I think I see it cropping out as a signal of danger in our day. As I see the shoals and the breakers, I desire to be humble and obedient to the will of our Heavenly Father, praying for the righteousness of the Saints, that the end may come.

I remain your servant for the Master's cause,

STEPHEN MALONEY.

ARMOUR, Iowa,

February 26th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—I desire that the remnant of my days may be spent doing good, letting my light shine, and living a life consistent with my profession, that none need stumble over my weakness. There seem to be many who wholly disregard the Word of Wisdom. When I first embraced the gospel my soul was filled with love to God for his mercy in taking me out of darkness into his marvelous light. At that time I was a slave to that filthy, offensive weed, tobacco, in the form of snuff. I read in the Book of Covenants, that it was pleasing to God that his Saints should refrain from these things pointed out in the revelation. I thought the sacrifice was not too great for me to make to please my Heavenly Father. I therefore resolved to keep the Word of Wisdom. I bear my testimony, that the promise was verified to me. From my youth until that time, I was seldom free from the headache. Was then entirely relieved, and my strength renewed. Could run and not weary, walk and not faint, besides the promise of wisdom and great treasures of knowledge. Last but not least, the destroying angel should pass by and not hurt them, as it did the Children of Israel. I think he has already commenced his mission. I know that all who adhere to these things will be blessed. I am nearly seventy-five years old. My strength is fast failing, but can calmly see life ebbing, realizing that a few more struggles and sufferings over, I shall bid adieu to all who are near and dear to me on earth, and joy to meet the loved ones who lonely left us here, to rest in the paradise of bliss, where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.

Bro. Joseph, my desire is ever to the Lord, that he will strengthen and help you to perform the arduous task of contending against the powers of darkness and vexatious spirits that arise to oppose the truth, that you may put them to confusion and silence, as in the case of L. O. Littlefield. Brethren and sisters, old and young, let us awake to righteousness, improve each fleeting moment, be diligent in business, fervent in spirit, that we be not found among the sleepers in life's great harvest day. Ever desiring the prayers of the faithful, as ever your sister in Christ,

HASTINGS, Nebraska,

February 29th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Since last writing you I have baptized four, and have "gone west to grow up with the country." Myself and family are located for a time at least in this city, which is a very fine one of some seven thousand inhabitants, and not a Latter Day Saint in it to my knowledge, save myself and family. There are several very fine congregations of other denominations here. On becoming acquainted, we were besieged by each of them to join their several choirs; and as there was no Church of Latter Day Saints here, we thought it no harm to lend a helping hand in order to become acquainted, and perchance to sandwich a thought occasionally when an opportunity should present. To-day we find ourselves the major portion of the M. E. choir. Laudations are abundant, and the Rev. Mr. Jones has said we had "given his church an impetus which had been long desired and prayed for by himself and members." Of course they do not know that we are what is commonly known as Mormons, although we have stated to several that we were Latter Day Saints, and we have our own amusements at home, thinking of our entire ostracism when the true state of affairs is revealed. If the Lord is willing some one will have heard the gospel in Hastings before this time next year.

We look for and appreciate your weekly visits more than ever before. Yours is the only familiar face that greets us in this land of strangers, and it is to us like a light in a dark place. Lions sometimes become timid; and the question asked and answered through the Herald in regard to us being "Mormons," seemed to give me comfort indeed. I do not like the name, from the fact that in the minds of the world every thing mean and contemptible seems to be connected with it; and when we acknowledge ourselves "Mormons" it is the "wet blanket thrown over us," and the stepping stone to persecution, ridicule and ostracism, and a name that seems only to be connected with that sink of iniquity in the west, and their unrighteous acts. I think the sooner the Saints denounce the name entirely, and answer only to and be acknowledged by their proper name, Latter Day Saints, the better for us as a people. There must be a dividing line, and why not make it here instead of wasting hours of time in showing position and condition between us as Mormons, and them as Salt Lake Mormons.

If there are any Saints adjacent to Hastings, I should be pleased to correspond with them. Would like also to know what conference district this is in, and who the district president is. Would like to act in harmony with him in sowing the seed here. If any of the Saints should come this way, they will find our latch string out as usual. Ever praying for the weel of Zion,

I am yours, still in the faith,

T. W. CHATBURN.

GREENVILLE, Sonoma Co., Cal.,
February 27th, 1884.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—We have no branch of the church at this place. I have not heard any preaching for about six years; but I know the doctrine that the Saints preach is true; so I am holding on to what light I have, and praying earnestly for more. I wish one or more of the Elders traveling through California, would call on us. My parents live here and they belong to the Church. As far as I know, we are the only believers around Greenville. I am a cripple and sorely afflicted, and I ask you all to pray for me. Your sister in Christ,

TRYPHENA CASE.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.,
February 25th, 1884.

Dear Bro. Joseph:—I was at Hebronville, with Bro. H. H. Thompson, on my return from General Conference at Kirtland. On the last Sunday in April, 1883, I baptized six—the heads of two families, also two young ladies—and they are growing strong in the work. At that time we had three families where we could hold meetings in their houses. One of these moved to East Attleboro, giving us a chance to hold meetings in that place, which we have occupied as we could, until last October. Since that time we have held a meeting there once in two weeks, and the interest is very good; some are candidates for baptism soon. The first named place is eight miles from the city, the second twelve, while at Barrowsville, four miles farther on, we have held two meetings—the first of the kind held there; they were glad to hear the gospel, and wish us to come again. We have in our travels, Brn. E. Perthel, a Branch Priest, and I. S. Brown, whom we at times send to a vacant place; and by so doing keep up the interest, they being well accepted. At Hill's Grove where the District Conference gave Elder H. H. Thompson a mission, Sr. Hopkins, with her little family, of a husband and twelve children, received us with extended hands, and open doors for the work; also proved her zeal for the cause by asking in her neighbors, to hear for themselves.

Simultaneously with the foregoing opening, through Bro. Thompson, at the house of Mr. and and Sr. Budlong, a distance below the village, a sister had opened to her mind, the light, and truth, for which she had been seeking the last four and twenty years. She and a daughter, likewise a married lady, were of the first four that I baptized October 7th, some two hundred, or nearly, being present as witnesses; another daughter is now rejoicing. Was given up to die, by the M. D's.—away from home, but the Elders being called, she was blessed, and though nearly gone, to the great astonishment of the people, was the next day (though stormy), moved on a stretcher near a mile, to her father's house, and is now well, enjoys the meetings, and is a candidate for baptism. This case is only one of many, in which the Lord has blessed those calling for his holy ordinances.

I must mention the case of Bro. Reynolds, brought into our meetings by Sr. Hopkins. He, with a nice little family was trying to serve the Lord by the light they had in the Advent faith, he being an Elder. On finding the gospel, with its gifts and blessings, received it joyfully, the Lord blessing him in body as well as spirit, to which he bore strong testimony before his obedience; he being the fifth that I baptized there. He is called and ordained to the office of Priest, and has received the spirit of his calling, and commenced preaching. Bro. Payne, a churchman now declares with joy, that after thirty years of anxious looking for the true gospel, he has now found it to his heart's content; I baptized him December 16th. His wife though afflicted, has been blessed by administration. There are now five places at Hill's Grove and vicinity, eight miles from Providence, where we can hold meeting; one being an invitation of the colored church, near where we baptize, which we have not yet occupied for want of time, and all glad to have us come, and to hear the gospel preached. For nine months I have been able to remain at home only two Sunday's. I was thrown from a sleigh and broke my collar bone, but I am in the field again, and thank the Lord that he has spared my life, and permitted me to be instrumental in his hand, to bring thirteen souls into the kingdom. February 24th, I baptized Mrs. Nichols. We are having meetings here now every Sunday at 11 a.m., and 3 p.m.; and sometimes we stay and hold one in the evening, and the Lord gives us of his Spirit, and good liberty in declaring his gospel. We go forth rejoicing in its gifts and blessings, by which the will of the Lord is made known, and the sick blessed and restored. I desire the prayers of all Saints, that I may be kept humble and prayerful in this good work, and hold out to the end.

Yours in gospel bonds,

GEORGE S. YERRINGTON.

TAYLOR RIDGE, Ill.,
February 27th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—We have just returned from the Millersburg Conference. It was not largely attended, but we had a good time. The good Spirit was with us. We feel much strengthened. We have learned to love this latter day work, and we desire the prayers of all the Saints, that we may be useful members in the cause. The only minister we have is the Herald. I assure you it is a welcome guest at our house.

We remain yours in the love of Christ,

K. M. & J. R. BARNETT.

PERRY, Iowa, Feb'y 25th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I love the latter day work dearly. We have had no preaching here for a long time. I hope the time may come when it will be more favorable here for the preaching of the pure gospel. The Methodist people all over the county of Dallas have been making an effort to revive their society, and have in some places, I hear, made some converts. At the school-house three miles east of our place, the Methodists were holding a protracted meeting, and were making converts, when the school director interfered, told them they were demoralizing the school, stopped the meeting, and closed the house against them. To the saints at Edenville I wish to say, that I very much desired to be present with them at their district conference; but at present don't think I can come. I am in poor health, have been all winter, and for the past week worse than common. I therefore beg an interest in the prayers of all saints, hoping that the kind Father may remember me according to the multitude of his tender mercies, and bless me yet awhile with health sufficient to labor for my own support, and those depending on me; yet I shall try to be willing to say, "Thy will be done, O Lord, not mine." I close with a prayer for all.

Your sister in hope of Eternal Life,

S. E. BOUTON.

WYANDOTTE, Kansas,
March 28th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—It is strange how well our preaching takes as long as the people and their ministers don't know who we are. Last Sunday I went to my usual field of labor, (Pomeroy, Kan.), having no appointment there, but intending going three or four miles farther by team; but finding it was useless to go farther that day, concluded to go and hear a Kansas City Baptist minister preach at the school house at eleven a.m. There was quite a number present. He preached about one hour, and when he was about to close, he asked if there were any appointments, or if any one had anything to say. I got up in my seat, and said that I would like to address this people for about half an hour if there were no objections. There were no objections, he closed his meeting, and I took the stand; text, Matt. 28: 18, 19. I told them of the great necessity of teaching to observe all things that the Lord had commanded, and baptism for the remission of sins as was taught on the day of Pentecost. The great promise that was made to the believer on that day, and that it was to them and their children, and to all that are afar off from Peter's day, even as many as the Lord would call. That the Lord was calling us and all the ends of the earth. I spoke considerably on baptism for adults only, and that infant baptism or springling was not in the book. That we have heard so much about this death-bed repentance, etc., and to prove that such people go to heaven, they quote the thief on the cross, and that Christ went straight to heaven and the thief with him. Christ said to Mary, "I have not yet ascended to my father." And Peter tells us, that "he was put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit, by which he went and preached to the spirits in prison, who sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering waited in the days of Noah," &c. And if they were satisfied to take chances with the thief on the cross, they would have to go with the disobedient spirits. It was, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." I crowded in all that I could in the half hour. I had good liberty, the congregation and the preacher paying great attention. After I got through, the preacher came to me, caught hold of my hand and said, "God bless you, sir, this country needs many more men like you." Asked my name and where I resided. I was glad for this opportunity, as there were some there that would not come to hear me preach, who thought I was poisoning the minds of the people. Prejudice and tradition go a long ways, and blind the minds of the people.

Your in the gospel,

RODERICK MAY.

DOW CITY, Iowa, March 2d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I don't agree with Bro. Gurley's exposition of Ephraim. It is evident that the tribes were mixed up a great deal. Some few went with the ten tribes; no doubt a good many of Manasseh went with them; but the body of them were among the Gentile nations. Israel was not called nations, only as a whole, or combined, but tribes. Has not Manasseh inherited Joseph's land for many generations? Isaiah 11: 12, 13, shows that Judah and Ephraim are face to face, and have been for generations; and this too in the very days that the ensign is to be raised up to the nations. Will Bro. Gurley tell us where the Tribe of Dan is, as spoken of in the seventh of Revelations, the sealed book. This tribe is lost, don't come in remembrance as a tribe. But we find Manasseh in his place.

May the Lord's blessing rest upon the honest in heart in his church, is my prayer.

A. F. RUDD.

FONTANELLE, IOWA,

February 27th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—What few there are of us here have been feeling like scattered sheep, so you can imagine our joy to see one of the shepherds of Israel come among us, our beloved brother, G. E. Deuel. He arrived here on the 16th instant. The congregational Church was secured, and on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, we listened to the word of God. Bro. Joseph, it is like feeding starving children. You who are blessed with the glorious light of the truth, can imagine how we were filled and made glad at the sound. Glorious work! I can not help exclaiming, "How beautiful are the feet of him that carryeth the glad tidings of peace!"

Saturday evening we did not use the church. On Sunday at three p. m., Bro. Deuel gave us the history of the Sabbath; viz, the Eden Sabbath, the Patriarchial, the Christian, and the Sabbath of the latter days, or modern Sabbath. There had been an Advent Elder here, preaching his doctrines, and made some converts, quite a number of them. He has been making it his custom to come here every other Saturday; and it being his day to come the 23d, a good many were anxious to see the two Elders meet in discussion; for there has been considerable indignation felt by the people because of the so called Sabbath keepers, and the condemnation by them of the Lord's Sabbath. But, curious incident! Elder Pegg did not come. Of course he was detained away! How could he help but be? How well Bro. Deuel's defense of the Christian Sabbath suited the people of Fontanelle, I could not say. Of course he was a "Mormon," but I heard some say they thought it the very best argument ever presented on the question. I have reasons to believe that good seed has been sown in this town, and I pray the Lord to bless it. We could not have the house any more. The reason seems obscure in the face of facts; for we furnished everything, and paid them for the use of it. Those who heard, and we had very fair congregations considering the prejudice against "Mormonism," have something to set them to thinking. Bro. Deuel went home yesterday. He woke us up some from our lethargy, exhorted us to live as becometh Saints, and I hope we will all profit by his word. I thank God for sending us the "good shepherd" to feed the famishing flock. With love to the Saints and a prayer for your welfare;

I am ever your sister in the gospel of Jesus,
HATTIE BAKER.

ANACONDA, Deer Lodge Co., Mont.,
Feb'y 28th, 1884.

Mr. Joseph Smith.—Elder Blair was here last summer, but I did not hear of it until he was gone. I was very ill at the time, and I believe if he had come and laid hands on me I should have been well right away. I am led to believe that your church is the true Church of Christ, and I hope to yet become a member of it. I was brought up in the English Church, and my relatives were highly indignant at my expressing my opinion, some years since, when home last, about the church. I was dissatisfied with it, and told them what I had read and heard about the Latter Day Saints. They told me that they were imposters.

J. W. Jensen, of Willow Glen, will tell any of the Elders where I live when they come to Montana. My address is, Mrs. Eliza Dingle, Lost Creek Ranch, Anaconda P. O., Deer Lodge Co., Montana Territory.

No. 235, Graham Street,
BROOKLYN, N. Y.,

February 26th, 1884.

Dear Bro. Joseph.—It is now about four months since I was appointed by Elder Zenas H. Gurley, the president, to travel in the Eastern Mission, and preach the gospel. Thus far my labors have been confined to a small part of this vast field, namely, Brooklyn, N. Y., Philadelphia, Pa., Hornerstown and Allentown, N. J., and Bridgeport, Connecticut; also, last week I spent with Bro. Stewart at Elk Mills and Providence Mills, Maryland, and addressed large and attentive audiences. These places had been opened by Elder Stewart, and the prospects are very encouraging there, he having before then baptized four, and one since. Nearly everywhere the prospects are good. But when I first went into the field, I found everything in good order everywhere, reflecting favorably on the judgment and skill of the President of the Mission, who is exceedingly popular and much beloved by all who know him. They are hoping and praying that they will soon hear him again.

In Bridgeport, Conn., the Lord has been pleased to add to their small number a very able, zealous and popular man, Captain R. W. W. Preece, who is universally known and respected in the town as an Evangelist, and an energetic worker. I baptized him about a month ago, and ordained him as directed by the Holy Spirit to the office of a Priest on the same day, on which occasion the Spirit very powerfully rested on every one in our little meeting, numbering about eight. We had a glorious time. Ever since our dear brother has been preaching and prophesying in the name of the Lord. We have reason to hope that he will be an exceedingly useful man, and be the means in God's hand of turning many to righteousness.

On the following Sunday I had the satisfaction of baptizing another in the Delaware river, near Philadelphia, Bro. John Zimmerman. These are all I have baptized; the people turn out well to hear generally, and pay good attention. We have also reason to hope, that ere long God will add to our number in many places. Always praying that God may fill you with the Spirit of your high calling,

I am yours in Christ,

W. O. OWEN.

NEW PROVIDENCE, Clark Co., Ind.,
February 25th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Two missionaries called at my house the sixteenth of this month to lodge for the night, floating under the banner of Latter Day Saints; Elders John G. M. Barnes, and James A. Anderson, Brighamites from Kaysville, Utah, sent on a mission to Indiana, Michigan, Ohio. We warn the Saints of them, as they have nearly our articles of faith, with your father's name on them. They staid with me until morning, reasoning on the apostasy, or rejection of the church. We challenged them for a public discussion. They refused, said they would not discuss. They went back into Jackson and Warren counties, Indiana. They said that there was a branch of their people there. Is that in our district? They are deceiving the people, and we are misrepresented by them. We think Bro. T. W. Smith ought to look after the work, or send some one there to set our claims forth rightly.

Yours in the faith,

JAMES M. SCOTT.

NORTH PLYMOUTH,
February 19th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph.—I been laboring in South Pond district for the past four months, with quite good attendance. I baptized two more Sunday, making six in all in that place. They are noble sisters, and they are ready to defend Mormonism when occasion requires. The minister told them to look out for us Mormons. They think that we have more than horns. But I thank the Almighty that he has by his Spirit planted a battery here that can not be shaken. I find that he has plenty of heavenly powder when occasion requires; and they will know that your father was martyred, for I will defend the cause that he brought forth.

Love to all the Saints. Your brother in the gospel truth,
N. R. NICKERSON.

NEWPORT, N. Y.,

March 2d, 1883.

Dear Brother.—My husband died February twenty-third. It is a great loss to me, but not without a hope to meet him in the first resurrection. The dead in Christ shall rise first. We were both baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ, in 1842. We have both kept in the faith. We received the Heralds in the morning of the day on which my husband died at night. He wanted me to read some to him, and I did. They were our sermons. He was just such a firm man as Bro. Henry Halliday. We lived in England, Graveley, Cambridgeshire, till 1861. There was a large branch there, till that abominable doctrine came. My husband has been sick since last fall, but kept about till the last day. I send my kind love to you and all my brothers and sisters in the church. My husband, William Spring, was 81 years old. I am 75. My husband and I were married 55 years last June.

Sister HANNAH SPRING.

SPRINGPORT, Michigan,
February 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Not long since I was on a short visit at the Methodist parsonage, and heard a most scandalous rumor about one "old Joe Smith," and Mountain Meadow Massacre. They said "old Joe" ought to have his throat cut, etc., and that a celebrated lecturer had said this winter in Springport, that Mormonism is the greatest curse now upon earth. I went to see and talk with that gentleman. Springport paid him about sixty dollars, so I was informed. I told him what I heard at the parsonage. He denied it in presence of a number. I thought perhaps he only said it in private conversation to please the company he was in. So I asked him if he could tell me what that power is, "by whose sorceries all nations are deceived." Being a Presbyterian Minister, he knew how the Bible reads; but I found him poorly qualified to interpret one of the prophecies. But so plain a question he felt ashamed to be ignorant of; so answered me as though he knew as much about it as the great majority. After I had proved him, I found him in as much ignorance and more than a blind man ought to be. Therefore I became bold to teach him important scriptural prophecies relating to these latter days. You may guess what the Spirit of Truth would say; for it would take me quite a while to write what was said during that half hour. But I would like it, if I could see it in public print. But I feel sensible of the present need of that same Spirit of Truth, if I should attempt to relate the substance of that soul-stirring interview. That powerful woman, sitting upon a scarlet colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, reigning over the kings of the earth, with whom the merchants of the earth lived deliciously, and commit fornication with her—certainly that woman could not mean "old Joe," for the kings have not committed fornication with him yet, and now can not; for he is gone. Neither is it Mormonism; for no one of the nations has yet embraced it, or offered to support its ministry by salaries and donations; nor does any beastly power array the Mormon Church. The woman means church, or any ecclesiastical power, "full of names," includes Protestant names with Catholics. The beast that carries her means the "dragon," or human legislation. All this is symbolically true in its application to the popular religion of what is called modern Christianity. It can not be true independent of Catholicism, or Protestantism. Together it constitutes the vine of the earth, with its branches. Who can doubt it? The reaping day is also near at hand, even the supper of the Great God, when kings and captains will be food for beasts and birds. Not many kings among the Mormons. Therefore this can not mean that little despised company, where this, "the hour of God's judgment began." The cities of the Saints are made desolate; but this is only the beginning of sorrow. For from this "until the time of her end, desolations are determined." That which has been meted to us, will be doubly doubled.

Another view of this symbolical power, the anti-Christ. "Let the mind that hath wisdom count the number of the beast, for it is the number of a man, and his number is 666." When Constantine began to make laws for the church, instead of such as Jesus had made, the symbol was changed, and the man of sin took the place of the woman, and became the anti-Christ, or man of sin. And every Protestant branch, from that time to this, has followed his example of making ecclesiastical laws to govern their several branches, until the whole number of the vine is completed; and it is not only the "man of sin" in one complex body; but it is opposed to the Lamb's wife. So much so, that the ministry stand ready to persecute the woman, and drive her into the wilderness as did the whore. In the holy scriptures, human governments, are spoken of as different beasts, such as they nearest resemble in their several codes of laws. But ecclesiastical or rule, is spoken of, not as some beast at the head of it, but "a man." His number is not that of a beast; but of a man. I am persuaded to believe this is the very man who will be found without the wedding garment, when the King comes in to see the guests. For if one of their baptisms is "nonessential" to salvation, so is that of every one of the body of the anti-Christ, or man of sin. It is all included under one general head, viz, "the man of sin." Their members are not baptized into Christ, but into anti-Christ. They do not consider water baptism a saving ordinance. One of their number said in preaching from the words of the Lord to Nicodemus, that he was not talking about water, but Spirit, when he said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." I doubt very much the propriety of putting new wine into old bottles, or the Holy Ghost into unholy temples. And none but the holy ministry of God's order, can properly confer the gifts of the Spirit, or baptize in the name of Jesus. And this being a settled doctrine of the Scriptures, it follows that the work of all others will come under the head of imposture and anti-Christ, and none of their names will be written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.,

Dear Brother Joseph:—Is the church the kingdom as some affirm? If the church and kingdom are synonymous, then each word can be used interchangeable, and good sense made of every passage in which they are found. I will substitute the word kingdom in the place of church, and what a jargon it makes: "They ordained them elders in every kingdom." Acts 14, 23. "Being brought on their way by the kingdom." 15: 3. "He went through Syria, confirming the kingdom." 41 v. "And so were the kingdoms established in faith, and increased in number daily." Acts 16: 5. "Greet the kingdom that is in their house." Rom. 16: 5-16. 1 Cor. 16: 19. Colos. 4: 15.

Was the kingdom set up on the day of Pentecost? No. The Bible does not say so, and it would be contrary to Daniel 2:44. The Jews, God's people, to whom the kingdom originally belonged, rejected Jesus their King, and put him to death. Jesus the King is absent, having gone into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. Luke 19: 12. The Heavens have received Jesus, and will retain him until the times of the restitution of all thing. Acts 3:21. During His absence the gospel will take out of every nation a people for his name, who are to be joint heirs with him. Rom. 8: 17, and to be a royal priesthood. Peter, 2: 9. Jesus will return to build again the tabernacle of David. Acts 15: 16, to share the kingdom with his people. Matt. 25: 34.

Yours in the gospel,

T. H. MOORE.

ST. JOHN, Stafford Co., Kansas.
February 23d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I will give my testimony concerning the work of God. I was convinced at Green Oak, Alleghany county, Pennsylvania, that the signs followed them that believed. I asked God to show me one, and I would serve him all my day. So he granted me my desires, and by so doing gave me a chance to keep my promise, and serve him from that time to this, which has been about fourteen years. I like very well to be in his service. And after I received a manifestation from God, I was baptized by a man called of God, and was born of the water, and my sins were forgiven. Then they laid hands on me for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and I received it, and with it the gift of faith, of knowledge, and tongues. It was not long till I received a testimony that your father was called of God to keep God's commandments. That the Lord had established his church by your father, Joseph Smith, which still exists, and I believe will last forever. I was assured that God would not allow men to exalt themselves, nor let his servants walk in forbidden paths. Nevertheless, I soon became aware that some forsook God, and God left them to their own strength.

JOHN MCKEWEN.

LOGAN, Iowa, February 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I enclose a slip from the New York Sun, of Sunday, December 9th, 1883. There is a good deal of food for thought in it. To my mind it accounts in a great measure for the impotency of this nation in their dealing with the abomination of polygamy in Utah; for it is contrary to nature and reason to expect an unclean element to effect a purification of another element affected with a like uncleanness. It is also another and striking illustration of the fallen condition of the churches, willing for hire and the popular demands of the times, to wink at what appears to me to be a very plain violation of God's law, even though, as stated in the article, directly contrary to the provisions of their own creeds.

But the most important idea that it seems to me should be impressed upon us as a people, after an examination of this subject, is its practical application to us as a church. The spirit of the times, and the most popular teachings of our modern philosophy, all tend to loose and imperfect ideas of the binding force and importance of the marriage relation. It is natural that man should drift with the tide. We are too often led to consider a custom that has the sanction, either directly or indirectly, of human law, to be an established principle of action, whether in or out of the church. Our ideas with reference to the marriage relation are no exception. A perverted moral public sentiment has within the last century demanded, and human administrators of political states pretty much the world over, have conceded, the enactment of very different provisions governing the matrimonial state, than God ever conceived, or primitive man demanded. I fear too many of us, even of latter day Israel, are disposed to consider these established worldly customs binding and right.

Now it seems to me, that the principle of God's law with reference to this subject is, once married, married for all time. That no matter what sin either party may be guilty of, the pledge of fidelity of the other is just as binding as to his or her actions, as though there had been no violation of the compact. That there is no such principle as divorce known to the gospel in its absolute and scriptural sense; and that the people of God owe it to each other and the world, as well as themselves, to see that their acts set the seal of truth and conviction upon this idea.

Your brother in the gospel,

WM. C. CADWELL.

OUR TWO KINDS OF POLYGAMY.

According to the Rev. Dr. Bacon, two forms of polygamy are practiced in this country. They are the straightforward polygamy of the Mormons of Utah, and the practical though unavowed polygamy rendered possible by the divorce laws of New England especially.

There is a great difference between the two, however; for the Mormon polygamist supports all his wives and their children, while the New England polygamist gets rid of one wife by divorce proceedings before he takes another. The Mormon polygamy, therefore, seems to be in some important respects morally superior to that practiced by professed or nominal Christians. If a Mormon wants a new wife, he may get one, but he is not released from his obligations to his other wife or wives. He simply adds her to the household over which he presides. The divorce laws of many of our States, however, enable a man to have several wives in succession, supporting only one of them at a time, though all may continue alive, and though none may have broken the marriage contract as it is interpreted by the Church which solemnized the marriage.

Both of these two forms of polygamy—the one sanctioned by a religious fanaticism, but condemned by civil law, and the other condemned by religion, but permitted by law—are now prominent subjects of discussion. To get rid of the Mormon polygamy, Gen. Rosecrans would introduce into the Constitution an amendment prohibiting it; Senator Edmunds would declare vacant all the elective offices in the Territory of Utah, and impose their duties on a Board of five persons to be appointed; and, finally, President Arthur advises the abolition of the Territorial Government and the assumption of absolute political control by Congress.

To stamp out polygamy at the East, some people are urging a constitutional amendment giving Congress power to secure a uniform system of marriage and divorce, and others want the State laws to be brought into harmony in regard to those subjects, so that divorce shall nowhere be granted except for adultery, and the old distinction, preserved in this State, between divorce from bed and board and divorce from the bonds of matrimony, shall be made.

We have learned, however, from experience that, whatever the laws, the Mormons will continue to practice polygamy under the precepts and sanctions of their religion. The only really efficient way of breaking up the Oriental custom there is to convert them from Mormonism, unless indeed, we leave polygamy as they practice it to die out of itself, as it surely will do with the lapse of time and the increasing population of their Territory. Polygamy can not long subsist by the side of monogamy, at least the regular polygamy. It is too expensive, and monogamy is naturally preferred by women. But an institution which is dying out from natural causes may get new life from opposition, or from what its supporters can construe as persecution, especially when it is founded in religious fanaticism.

The prohibition of polygamy in the Constitution, the abolition of the Territorial Government of Utah, the making of any devisable laws against polygamy, will not crush out the practice so long as the Mormons believe that in taking many wives they are obeying a higher law. And the more you try to drive them against their will, the more stubborn their resistance is sure to be.

As to our Eastern polygamy, as Dr. Bacon calls it, the main remedy proposed, a constitutional amendment and a uniform marriage and divorce law by Congress, is not to be thought of for a moment. The regulation of marriages and divorces belongs to the States, and the transfer of powers which belong to them to the Federal Government would encourage evils of far more momentous consequences than those which can be referred to their present inharmonious divorce laws. The great danger which menaces this country is political centralization.

And what reason is there for supposing that Congress would enact a divorce law more stringent than the laws of the States? At the meeting of the Congregational Club of this city on Monday, ministers advocated the constitutional amendment and the uniform divorce law, because divorce "was spreading so rapidly and doing so much to annihilate the most sacred form of social existence, marriage." "As things are now," said the Rev. Dr. Ingersoll, "I can get married here and go to some other State and get unmarried." But, suppose you got the constitutional amendment and the uniform divorce law from Congress, might not the divorce be made all the easier for you? Congress might allow you to get unmarried without taking the trouble to go to another State. Whatever the law one Congress passed, and however few the causes of divorce it allowed, another Congress might give us as free a divorce law as that of Rhode Island, for instance. The religious people who want to trust the preservation of the sanctity of marriage to Congress because State Legislatures do not regard it, show a very unreasonable reliance.

The sanctity of marriage suffers in these days because religious faith has declined. Divorces are more frequent because lawmakers and those who live under the laws regard marriage as a civil and not a religious contract. They are encouraged, too, by ministers who are ready to marry divorced people, though the divorces were obtained in violation of the religion they preach.

The great remedy for divorce which the clergy should concern themselves about, is the conversion of people to Christianity. After that, the Church should treat divorce as a sin and remarriage as adultery, if the divorce is obtained for other reasons than those allowed by religion. The Roman Catholics have no trouble about the matter, for they recognize no divorce at all, whatever the law, State or Federal. The sanctity of marriage, and marriage itself as a religious institution, must be preserved and defended by religion. When the State deals with it, it can only be as civil contract.

Dear Brother Joseph:—I wish to bear my testimony to this work. I know it is of God. I have received that knowledge for myself. I feel thankful to my Father for this. The work in this place moves slowly. Elder Robert Thurtchley and Priest David Winn are doing all they can to keep the work alive in this place. We have meeting every Sabbath, and I hope that we may strive to live as becometh Saints of God, that we may receive the blessings that God has promised. Ever praying for the spread of this great truth,

I remain your sister in gospel bonds,

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Feb. 28th.—Another package of explosives has been found in London. The discovery was made in the Charing Cross station. No arrests have yet been made. Paris is still thought to be the rendezvous of the present conspiracy.

Gladstone has introduced in the Commons the Franchise bill, which would strengthen the State by enfranchising the people capable of exercising the rights of franchise. America, he declares, has only recovered from the Civil War so quickly because of the fact that every capable citizen had been intrusted with the rights of franchise.

At a carnival and festival at Vallareal, Portugal, yesterday, an affray occurred between the military and people. Fifteen persons were injured.

Photiades Pasha has resigned the Governorship of Crete. It is believed preparations are making for a great Cretan revolt.

Gen. Graham marched from Fort Baker this afternoon, bivouacked tonight, and resumes the march on Teb tomorrow. One company is left to guard Trinkitat. Two Egyptian battalions have started for Assouan. Fresh directions have been sent Gen. Graham repeating the previous orders to restrict his operations to the defense of Suakin.

It is officially reported at Washington that the foot-and-mouth disease prevails among the cattle of almost every county in England.

Feb. 29th.—Information was lodged with the police of London, Eng., that an attempt to blow up the courts with dynamite was imminent. They arrested three men and seized a large quantity of dynamite discovered in a house in Clare Market, near the Strand. The dynamite discovered at Charing Cross and Paddington Stations was labeled "Atlas Powder." Both clocks were of American make. A copy of the New York Sun, dated Feb. 6th, 1884, was in the valise at Paddington Station. The English Government has decided to send a courteous dispatch to America relative to the actions of Americans in countenancing and assisting the dynamiters.

Gen Gordon's proclamation to the Soudanese, issued Tuesday, is as follows: "Since my arrival I have given you sound advice. Everything has been done to insure quietness and stop bloodshed. My advice has not been followed. I am therefore forced against my will to summon the British troops. They will arrive in a few days, when I shall severely punish all who do not change their conduct."

Sexton, member of Parliament for Sligo, publishes letters from former Orangemen, whose names and addresses are given, showing the Orange organization is a secret society, revealing the mysteries of initiation and explaining that the object of the society is purely anti-papist.

Advices from Haiphong state that the French gunboats with 1,000 men have occupied the extreme post of the rebels on the Song Foi River, ten miles below Bacninh. The Chinese skirmishers were firing from the neighboring heights, and burning the surrounding villages. The gunboats were returning the fire. According to latest reports 30,000 Chinese had returned to Bacninh.

A new motive power, which it is claimed can be generated at one-fourth the cost of steam, has been discovered. Capitalists have advanced $8,000,000 for its development.

Mar. 1st.—A black bag made of American cloth has been found in the cloak room of the Ludgate Hill Station, containing forty-five packages of dynamite, and a portion of an American alarm clock. The bag found at Ludgate Hill Station was deposited Monday. It contains thirty or forty cakes of whitish yellow powder. Each package was inclosed in paper and all packed around a small alarm-clock, to which a pistol was attached. It was so arranged that when the clock ran down it would fire the contents of the pistol among the packets. The police are in possession of evidence that one of the valises seized in London was deposited in the railroad depot at Southampton by two passengers from New York, who landed at that port. The temper of London is excitement rather than alarm over the dynamite outrages.

Pat Joyce, Secretary of the Council of the Fenian Brotherhood in New York, says that the dynamiters there discovered a process of making an explosive out of soap and sugar that will cause havoc in England. Americans, he says, have gone over to teach Irishmen on the other side how to make it. This stuff, he says, was used to blow up the Victoria Station in London. British ships, Mr. Joyce added, are carrying machines over every day.

The police have at Vienna, Aust., arrested an Anarchist named Kammerer, who came there from Switzerland. When arrested Kammerer discharged a pistol at the officers. A bomb was found in the prisoner's house.

At Teb, near Trinkitat, the British troops under Gen. Graham, met and defeated the forces of the Mahdi. Friday morning the English force, numbering about 5,000 men, formed itself in battle order in an oblong square, with the Highlanders in the advance, as they were at Tel-el-Kebir, and commenced its march on the Arab army. They had proceeded but a mile when the Arabs opened fire upon them, at the same time slowly retreating. The British steadily advanced for three miles, until they came in sight of the Arab earthworks. The Highlanders, cheering, moved forward until they were within 800 yards of the works, and waited for the ranks to close up. The Arabs were on their flanks and in front in great numbers, but still the Scotch pressed on. The Arabs charged them with their spears, only to be mown down like grass in great numbers. Having cleared the space in front of them, the British army stormed the works and carried them, and after four hours' fighting the whole camp was in their possession, together with the cannon which Baker Pasha's Egyptian sheep had lost three weeks before. The Arabs retreated with the British troopers pursuing them, and it was the intention of Gen. Graham to push on to Tokar, whose garrison recently surrendered to the Arabs. In spite of the fierceness of the Arab attack, the British are reported to have lost but forty-four killed and 142 wounded, while the Arabs lost 1,000 killed, besides the wounded, the number of which is not given.

March 2.—The French Government has decided to expel all suspected Irish dynamitards from France.

The Sultan has refused permission for the establishment of a French college at Beyrout on the ground that public instruction would interfere with the rights of the Government.

The Sultan insists that the commercial treaty between Turkey and the United States will expire June 4, of this year. Minister Wallace holds the contrary opinion. The Sultan is, however, willing to allow the existing tariff to remain until negotiations with other Powers are concluded, and will concede to the United States the same commercial advantages accorded to other nations by a new treaty.

Gen. Graham's force occupied Tokar Saturday four hours after the close of the battle at Teb. There was some skirmishing during the march. The Arab's loss in Saturday's fight is placed at 1,100. Osman Digma with a large force is in the vicinity of Tokar prepared to contest the ground with the English, and a battle is imminent. Gen. Graham's efforts will be now directed to establishing a line of communication between Suakin and Berber. With this purpose he has convoked a meeting with friendly Sheiks.

All reports commend the steadiness with which the British moved on Teb. The square in which they advanced to battle was never broken. The determination and bravery of the rebels is shown in the fact that when they were charged by the cavalry great numbers of them threw themselves upon their backs on the ground and speared the horses of the troopers as they dashed over them. After the battle Baker Pasha and Admiral Hewett returned to Trinkitat. The soldiers and sailors heartily cheered Baker Pasha, who was so severely wounded as to be unable to walk. Veterans who took part in the battle say they never met a more resolute foe. The enemy's trenches were found completely filled with corpses. The Arabs at Houdeida have declared in favor of El Mahdi. The Governor has telegraphed Sennaar for troops.

The Government, convinced that Gen. Gordon's mission will fail and his life be put in peril, offered Abd El Kader Pasha, Minister of War, under the sanction of Baring, British Minister, the Governorship of Khartoum. Abd El Kader refuses the office unless Gen. Gordon assents.

The railway officials at London, England, now insist upon the inspection of all baggage left at terminal stations.

A box containing clockwork exploded in the post-office at Guesen, Germany, to-day. One official was severely wounded.

The Canadian Cabinet at its meeting Saturday, it is reported, agreed to make many valuable concessions to the demands of the Manitoba farmers. The Federal subsidy will be increased triennially in proportion to the increase in population; Government aid will be given to the proposed railroad from Winnipeg to Hudson's Bay; and the odd-numbered sections of the public lands will be placed at the disposal of the Provincial Government. It is expected that these concessions will fully satisfy the people of the Northwest provinces.

March 3.—A reward of $5,000 has been offered for the detection of the authors of the recent dynamite explosion in London.

After his signal victory over the rebels under Osman Digma at the wells of Teb, Gen. Graham advanced rapidly on the Town of Tokar, reaching that place by Saturday noon. But a few shots were exchanged with the rebels who were holding the town, and then as the British square advanced the enemy fled to the mountains, pursued by the hussars, who kept up a continual skirmish with the fugitives. The garrison of Tokar was found to be in a most pitiable plight. The inhabitants were in a most miserable condition, and the soldiers hostile to the Arabs all in chains. From the people it was learned that the rebels had been in possession of the town since February 6th. A portion of the garrison was sent back to Trinkitat and the fortifications forthwith blown up. The remains of Morice Bey, Surgeon Leslie, and four other Europeans who were killed at the time of Baker Pasha's defeat were buried with the customary military honors in the captured city.

Gen. Graham will send the Egyptian troops, found at Tokar to join the garrison at Suakin. The English troops will be withdrawn to Teb, whence after receiving supplies of water, provisions, and munitions they will advance to Tamanieb. Before the British renew the attack Osman Digma will be offered a conference. Five thousand rebels who fled from Tokar when the British entered Saturday have joined Osman Digma. Only 1,000 of them are Soudanese, the rest being fanatics sent from Kordofan and Darfour. If Osman Digma refuses to surrender, it is expected the rest of the tribes under the Sheiks will express their desire to come to terms.

A dispatch from Khartoum says: El Mahdi has forbidden the Sheiks of the White Nile and Blue Nile to advance to Khartoum or provoke hostilities. Four hitherto hostile chiefs have submitted to Gen. Gordon. Three soldiers of the old garrison of El Obeid have arrived here. They report great misery at El Obeid. El Mahdi fears the tribesmen and inhabitants, and a reign of terror exists. El Mahdi has stored up all the rifles, saying they belong to the Egyptian Government and he will deliver them to its representatives. El Mahdi received Gen. Gordon's letter naming him Sultan of Kordofan with ecstasies of delight, and gave the messenger who brought the letter a robe of honor.

It is now almost certain the dynamite outrages in London, Eng., were the work of four men who arrived from America, Feb. 20th.

At Pesth, Hungary, a number of Socialists recognized a detective in a tavern and badly beat him. He is now in a precarious condition.

At a meeting of Anarchists in Paris a resolution was adopted to adhere to the declaration of the New York Anarchists approving the attitude of the Vianese Socialists.

It is said Montenegro is making preparations for a campaign in Albania. Six thousand men are concentrated on the frontier. Prince Nicholas of Montenegro designs to settle the frontier question this spring by a coup de main, seizing the territory which Montenegro claims.

March 4.—De Cassagnac, the Bonapartist editor and duelist, now urges an alliance of all Monarchists—Imperialists, Legitimists, and Orleansists—in opposition to the Republic.

The London police have learned that nine persons whom there is reason to suspect of being dynamite plotters have been landed at Southampton from the steamer Dora from America. Extraordinary precautions are being taken to insure the safety of Buckingham Palace. The movements of all persons found lurking about the neighborhood are closely watched.

The Swiss police are searching the houses of the Anarchists. The President of the Berne Anarchist Club has been arrested.

Prussia's proposal to the Bundesrath regarding the Anti-Socialist law is to prolong the law until 1886, on the ground that many attacks upon life and property are traceable to the Socialists.

Gen. Graham will attack Osman Digma at Tamanieb, where the rebel force is encamped.

A dispatch from Madrid says: Speculators have subscribed £120,000 to raise a revolutionary movement similar to that of August, 1883. The Government is fully informed in regard to the plot. Descriptions of the supposed dynamiters are sent to all parts of Europe, and steps were taken to have them arrested.

When the law for manumission of the Cuban slaves was passed several years ago they numbered 385,355. It is estimated that all but 100,000 have already been set free, and it is thought all will be free within a year.

The bill prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquors in Iowa, which passed the Iowa House last week, was agreed to in the Senate and signed by the Governor. The law goes into effect July 4th.

The National Freethinkers' Convention will be held September 3d, at Cassadaga Lake.

March 5.—Crete has carried the day. The Porte will appoint a Christian Governor.

A dispatch from Havre says: "There are thirty Irish-American Fenians at Havre. The dynamite factory between Amiens and Boulogne is strictly watched. It is stated that the alleged informer McDermott, who is in Paris, has offered to give valuable information to the English police. He will do so at the risk of his life, as the Clana-Gael declare they will assassinate him. A special agent from Dublin is aiding Inspector Moser."

An Irish Migration Company, with a capital of £250,000 has been formed. Parnell is Chairman, and Sir Baldwin Leighton, Jacob Bright, and Edmund Dwyer Gray, members of Parliament, are among the Directors.

Gen. Graham has arrived at Suakin. The troops are embarking at Trinkitat for Suakin. The cavalry, before leaving Tokar, discovered Osman Digma stationed ten miles from Suakin. Reports have reached Suakin that the Bedouins of Jeddah are in revolt against Turkey. It is expected that a stage of siege will be declared.

Gordon's reports of the submission of the Sheiks are distrusted at Cairo. It is said he is the dupe of the Sheiks, who take bribes and delude him with false news. It is reported that Sheik Ibrahim, on the White Nile, with 9,000

Arabs, and Sheik Busser, on the Blue Nile, with 8,000 men, are advancing on Khartoum. Gen. Graham is making preparations at Suakin to advance upon Tamanieb. The Sheiks of several tribes have sent envoys offering to desert Osman Digma and assist the English if paid for their services. Twenty-seven hundred bodies were buried at Teb, including the Egyptians killed in the fight between Baker Pasha's troops and the rebels. Capt. Mason, the English agent at Mas-sowah, is organizing an Abyssinian contingent under English officers to operate on Khartoum if El Mahdi continues fighting. Gen. Gordon asks further supplies of money. The Treasury at Cairo sent him £4,000 and a number of decorations. An Arab reports that Osman Digma has 4,000 men at Tamameb and more twenty-three miles from Suakin. The slaves are determined to support Osman Digma. Naval and military officers are strongly urging the Government to give Osman Digma a lesson. The garrison at Gennaar is safe, but prevented by marauders from descending the Nile. Troops from Trinkitat will not land at the Town of Suakin, but a little south. An Arab at Suakin from Osman Digma's camp reports the rebel leader still bitterly hostile to the English.

Admiral Hewett and Gen. Graham have issued a joint decree summoning the Sheiks of the tribes of Suakin, and saying if they come they will be protected; but if they refuse the fate of Teb awaits them.

The Porte has been sounding the Powers regarding the Soudan. Germany replied that she will not intervene, and suggests that Turkey arrange the matter directly with England. The other Powers made similar replies. In view of this, Musurus Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador at London, has requested Earl Granville to use the Sultan's influence in seeking to conciliate the Soudanese.

The Austrian police have discovered that the Anarchists possess a large quantity of dynamite. Lectures were given last autumn in the workmen's quarters at Vienna, on the best methods of making and storing explosives. The police made a raid and discovered three laboratories fitted up for making explosives, with large quantities of dynamite. The police are convinced that other laboratories exist, and the press has therefore been forbidden to publish anything regarding their movements. A workman was recently caught trying to smuggle small bombs from a suburb into Vienna. It is believed the police have secured the services of an Anarchist informer.

The arrests of Anarchists by the Swiss police still continue.

An attack by the French on Bacninh is expected daily. Several heavy skirmishes have taken place.

Above Shreveport the river is falling rapidly and but little additional damage is apprehended. Trains on the Louisville, New Orleans & Texas Railway were discontinued last week, the track being under water west of the Yazoo River. Great apprehension is felt concerning the safety of the Bolivar, Ilowarsa, and Longwood levees. Every effort is being made to hold them. The water is going through Biggs' crevasse below Delta, and has overflowed the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Texas Railroad, causing the discontinuance of trains between Delta and Monroe. Trains are running from Delta to Tallulah, eighteen miles, and from Monroe to Delhi, thirty-six miles. From Delta to Monroe the only communication is by skiffs. The rapidly rising water in the Bayou Macon will cause the discontinuance of trains between Monroe and Delhi in a few days. The backwater from the Biggs crevasse is gradually overflowing the lower part of Madison Parish. The water is going through a break at Hardscrabble, doing much local damage. In Bolivar County, Miss., a break 350 feet wide was made in the levee, and the plantations near are being overflowed. At Helena, Ark., the river rose nine inches during the last twenty-four hours.

This was the close of the regular winter season for packing hogs. In Chicago the excess of receipts over shipments of live hogs was only 1,967,147 head. The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British grain trade says: "There exists material from which a large wheat crop is possible. The fine native wheats are firm, and inferior white and red weaker. Flour is inactive. Foreign wheat is unimproved, and receipts small. Cargoes off coast declined 9d. Two cargoes of No. 1 California have gone to the Continent without extra freight at 39s 6d. Eleven cargoes have arrived, four were sold, and four withdrawn, including one No. 1 California and one No. 2 California. Sales of English wheat during the week, 61,854 quarters at 37s 3d per quarter, against 45,939 quarters at 42s 6d the corresponding week last year.

BAPTISM AND THE LORD'S SUPPER.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THE question is, were they intended by him to be continued in his church only for a few years, or until he comes again. His followers should understand the true nature of his kingdom. This is exciting in the minds of certain classes at this period a considerable degree of attention. Many view it as deserving, and are inclined to give it a more serious consideration than they have hitherto bestowed upon it; and surely no one can blame such persons, if the object of their solicitude is to know and to do the will of Christ. Let not this circumstance give any one a moment's uneasiness. Divine truth has nothing to fear from investigation; it will lose nothing of its excellence and glory by being brought to light. On the contrary it invites that test, and commends a spirit of rigid enquiry and diligent search. "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good," is a divine command. It is only error that dreads investigation. The one so investigating should seek the mind of the Supreme Head of the church. He has nothing to gain nor much to lose pertaining unto this world by the decision to which he might come; but avowing Christ as his only master; it becomes him as a servant to do the will of his Lord; that his enquiry and prayer should be as with the converted Saul, "Lord, what would'st thou have me to do?"

That Christ required and still requires his servants to obey his commandments, no believer in the New Testament can for a moment doubt. "If ye love me," said he, "keep my commandments." (John 14:15, 24). "Why call me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6:46). "Not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 7:21).

The apostles were required by Christ's final charge to them, never to forget his demand upon the obedience of his people. It was: "Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you;" and the promise to encourage this obedience follows, "And lo I am with you always, even unto to the end of the world." (Matt. 28:18, 20).

Now what is to be the guide of an enquirer with regard to the will of Christ? Where is the Christian to learn the mind of the Lord, and who will so instruct him, that he shall be certain that in the obedience he attempts to render he is actually doing what Christ would have him to do? To this important enquiry we give unto you the words of Jesus Christ: "Search the Scriptures, they are they which testify of me." (John 5:39). Christ made his will known to his apostles, and they in teaching his will and writing it for the guide of the church in after ages, were promised by their Redeemer, the aid of the Holy Ghost. "He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you." (John 14:25, 26). Prayer is proper. Consultation with well instructed Christians is becoming. The perusal of the writings of judicious, pious authors bearing upon the subject is commendable; but yet, if the Scriptures be neglected the grossest errors may be retained, or new errors imbibed. All men not under the measure of divine inspiration enjoyed by the prophets and apostles, are liable to egregious error, of which we have alas too many examples in the professing world to render proof necessary. But what these men wrote, moved by the Holy Ghost, for our instruction in things pertaining to our duty to God, and the way of salvation, must be unerring truth, and infallibly contain the mind of God. First epistle of Peter 1:21, 22. Concerning us no other source of instruction is certain. Thus the Divine Spirit addresses us to "the law and the testimony. If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isaiah 8:20. "The Holy Scriptures are able to make thee wise unto salvation." "They are given by inspiration of God; for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good work." 2 Tim. 3:11, 17. Who will dare to alter, explain away, add to or take from the will of our Heavenly Father as given in his word? Every word of God is pure. "Add not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar." Prov. 5:21-23. "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command thee; neither shall ye diminish aught from it. If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book." Deut. 4:2. "If any take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life." Rev. 20:18.

With such views of the Holy Scriptures, let us humbly learn from them the Divine mind regarding the ordinances enjoined in the New Testament: first, water baptism; second, the baptism of the Holy Ghost; third, the Lord's Supper. These are three points to which I solicit my readers' attention; but shall content myself in putting before you the first point, Water baptism by John the Baptist, was it of God? I shall endeavor to show from Scripture, history and inspired writers, that it was, and that it had no part or lot in the Mosaic or Jewish dispensation, as many affirm. They also say that it was not an institution first enjoined upon and first administered by him, but was copied or continued from the usual practice of the Jews. Some go so far as to say that Christ and his disciples observed the rite of baptism in the same way, merely as a Jewish ordinance; and so far as it was continued by the apostles it was in condescension to the weakness of the Jewish converts; from these premises many draw this conclusion. That as the Old Testament dispensation, with all its rites and ceremonies, was to be done away upon the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ, and to give place to that spiritual kingdom which the Messiah was to set up; so the ordinance of baptism, being an Old Testament rite, was to be abolished and cease when the spiritual reign of Jesus should be established, and its spirituality understood. Thus it is made to appear that John's ministry belonged to the typical and shadowy dispensation; and as no abrogation of types and shadows took place till the crucifixion of Christ, so the observance of John's baptism in common with the other rituals of that dispensation, was to continue till that important period. He, that is Christ, ended that typical dispensation by his own, which was of a pure and spiritual nature. There was a peculiar propriety in this, for these typical rites and ceremonies being of divine appointment, their force or obligation lasted till the New Covenant Dispensation was completely introduced, which did not take place till the great sacrifice was completed. Here their obligation ended; but they were continued in condescension a considerable time after their obligation had ceased. The author of the foregoing is Elisha Bates, and it can be found in Doctrine of Friends, chap. 11, p. 210-214. By turning to chap. 4th, p. 78-79, we find that Joseph John Gurney holds to the same, with the adding of the eucharist. These are the traditions of men, held up by various sects of to-day. They all more or less lead the people to believe the same theory. I shall now endeavor to show that the whole of this theory lacks support by evidence, and is contrary to the plain statements of the New Testament. I shall endeavor to maintain the negative of these opinions, and adduce scriptural reasons for the perpetuity of this ordinance. I may refer to eminent authors in support of them, and leave the subject to the serious reflections of my readers.

I state first, that John's ministry did not belong to the typical and shadowy dispensation of the law; but that he was sent immediately from God, with a new commission as much as Moses was. That his ministry contained no portion of the ritual law, but the pure gospel of Jesus Christ; and that the intention of it was to direct his hearers from the law to Christ. Three things were the chief themes of John's ministry. 1. Repentance towards God. 2. Faith in the coming Savior. 3. Christ's sacrifice the means of taking away sins, and hence the unspeakable blessing of the forgiveness of sins without the deeds of the law to them that repent, believe, and are baptized by water. Upon a reception of them he was to prepare the way of the Lord, as the prophets had foretold, and as the angel Gabriel more plainly declared; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord, that is for Christ, who was in a few months to follow him. For this work John was a special messenger raised up, sent of God, filled with the Holy Ghost, and to whom the word of God came by special and immediate revelation; hence the testimony of the inspired word. "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." "And the word of the Lord came unto John in the wilderness; and he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins; saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

John preached the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel, saying unto the people that they should believe on him who should come after him, that is on Christ Jesus. "John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." "And looking upon Jesus as he walked he saith, Behold the Lamb of God." See following passages Matt. 7: 1; Luke 1: 13-19; Luke 3: 1-9; John 1: 6-7; Isa. 60: 3; Mal. 3: 1; Acts 13: 24-26; 19: 4; John 1: 29-36.

Without quoting further I ask, Is this my learned friend's preaching the law? Is it a ministry that belonged to the typical and shadowy dispensation? Is it not the gospel that Christ preached, and required his apostles to preach to all nations? Is it not as free from the law, and bearing as much and as exclusively upon the heart, as spiritual and as full of Christ? Compare John's faithful addresses to the Jews generally, and to the Pharisees' who depended on the words of the law in particular, with the preaching of Peter in Acts 2: 3, and Paul's in Acts 13, and they will be found one and the same. Had John been under the law, and subject to its authority, instead of directing the conscious sinner to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world, he would have instructed him to bring his offerings for the sin he had committed unto the priest, who should slay it for a peace offering, and make an atonement for him. Instead of this legal instruction, John points immediately to Christ as the only Savior of sinners; and never in a single instance required obedience to the ritual law of Moses, or the observance of any of its ordinances, as what God required of hearers as the fruits of repentance. He exhorted them to believe in Christ, as the only Savior that taketh away the sins of the whole world; and at the same time exploded all the vain hopes of those who trusted they were righteous by keeping the law. He preached true Christianity, which to be introduced into the world, behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise again from the dead; for this was as he himself says, "that repentance and remission of sins might be preached in his name among all nations."—Luke 24: 46, 47. The farther revelations of the truth were to be made by the Redeemer, after John had quitted the world. Still further by the apostles when their Savior had ascended, and they had received the Holy Ghost. Yet, as far as John's preaching went, it was the opening of the pure gospel of Jesus; it was the dawning of the gospel day, the first pure light of the sun of the New Testament Dispensation; hence we find, that they who received it, (John's ministry), were presently turned over to Christ, as a people prepared for the Lord. We read the testimony of two of our early historians, Messrs. Scott and Dodderidge, who say that with the ministry of John, the New Testament dispensation began, and the kingdom of heaven was preached. Going from man I would refer my readers to two express testimonies of Scripture upon the subject.—See Mark 1: 1, 2; Luke 16: 16. In the first passage we have a well known author writing that John the Baptist was the forerunner of Christ, and the first mentioned proclaimer of the incarnated Messiah. Matthew Henry says, "The preaching of Christ is pure, and John the Baptist preached him." The historian, Dr. Hammond, in his writings of the early ages, or beginning of the New Testament dispensation, says, "That our Savior did not intend by the kingdom of God, the ministry of the shadowy dispensation, is surely too evident to need any comment; but that he did intend the gospel is sufficiently clear by his setting it in contradistinction to the law and the prophets, and as succeeding to them in order of time." John's ministry was intermediate between the law and Christ; but upon the questions, Was he a teacher of the Mosaic Law system, or a teacher of Christianity? Did he teach the law of Moses or preach the gospel of Christ? I conceive no doubt can now remain upon my readers' minds after the reading of this evidence.

John's baptism was not the continuation of a rite practiced by the Jews before his appearance, but an ordinance of divine institution, enjoined upon and practiced by this John. It is true that under the law there were enjoined upon the Jews divers washings, partial washings as of the hands, the feet, &c., and total washings, or immersions of their whole bodies, see Ex. 30: 17-21; 40: 30-32; Lev. 14: 8; 17: 15, 16. These are referred to by the apostle Paul, Heb. 9: 10. By these quotations you will observe that these washings were not complete ritual ordinances, but mere ceremonies preserved for the priests as they entered the tabernacle; and for persons who had contracted legal defilement. It is not therefore from these divers washings of the law, that the learned advocates for the principles I am opposing pretend that John borrowed his baptism; but what is called Jewish proselyte baptism; that is, the baptism of persons not of the seed of Abraham; but who became proselytes to the Jewish Religion, and desired to be incorporated with that body; and which they received once and no more at the time of their admission. Thus Dr. Wall in his writings says:

"This solemn baptizing of proselytes, differed from the rest of their divers washings, which St. Paul, Heb 9: 10, says were customary among the Jews, in this: those others were many times repeated, but this was never given but once."

Joseph John Gurner in his writings says:

"These points of resemblance between the proselyte baptism, are so important and so striking, as to render it nearly indisputable, that the one baptism was borrowed from the other."

In reply to this doctrine, that John borrowed his baptism from that of Jewish proselytes, I state that there is no proof that any such practice as the baptism of Jewish proselytes was in existence until after John, our Redeemer and his apostles, had left this world. It is certain that the baptism of proselytes was not commanded of God; as the divine law does not enjoin it. It is no where referred to in the writings of Philo, Judas, or of Josephus, who were Jewish writers of the same century with the apostles, the latter of whom described particularly the admission of proselytes. Nor is there any allusion to the practice in the New Testament, or in the writings of the early Christian Fathers before the third century after Christ. The first pretended written references to this proselyte baptism, are in the Jewish Talmud, of which there were two, the Jerusalem and the Babylonish. They are composed of what are called the Mishna and Gemara, the former being a compilation of the Jewish traditions, or what are called oral laws. The latter is a commentary upon the former. The Mishna was not written, as the Jews themselves confess, till about one hundred years after the destruction of Jerusalem, i. e., not till about the close of the second century after Christ. Baxtorf says that the Jerusalem Talmud was completed by Rabbi Jochanan, 230 years after Christ; but the Gemara, which is by far the greater part of the Babylonish Talmud, was not made till 300 years after Christ. Supposing for argument's sake, that the Jews had such a practice, as it is confessedly founded on their traditions, unauthorized of God, I ask, Is it likely that he who rebuked the Jews for making the word of God of none effect through their traditions, (see Mark 7: 13), would found one of his gospel ordinances for the New Testament Church upon such a guilty encroachment of God's prerogatives? Would he who branded Jewish teachers of his day as the vilest hypocrites, and as whited sepulchers; and who charged as one of their greatest faults, that they rigidly observed their unauthorized customs, and condemned the innocent disciples for not conforming to their customs, and especially to their washings which are called baptisms, and which were urged, not on the authority of God's laws, but that they might hold to the traditions of the elders. Mark 7: 2, 13. Would he, I ask, so far honor and sanction one of these unauthorized customs as to submit to it, and to submit to it openly before a multitude of people, and that too, very nearly at the same time that he condemned it in the strongest and severest terms. I venture to answer that this is impossible. He could not say, "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness," when referring to a human invention; a disregard of the throne of his Father, who forbade the slightest addition to his law. Deut. 4: 2. His baptism must have another origin, even supposing the Jews had such a rite founded on such authority.

I now produce evidence to prove the contrary of the hypothesis referred to, and to show that John's baptism was a divine institution, enjoined of God upon John; and that he observed it purely as such. I would ask my readers to study the following remarks. When John introduced his ministry and baptism, the Jews sent a deputation of Pharisees to him, to inquire into the nature and authority of his mission. They began by inquiring if he was the Christ, which he denied. Then if he was Elijah or Elias, as they meant and expected Elijah, personally risen from the dead. This he also denied. Then if he was that prophet predicted by Moses, (Deut. 18: 15). This he also denied. Then followed a question in point. "Why baptizeth thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet." John 1:19, 25. Upon this I am warranted to conclude, that if baptism was so common a thing among the Jews as is pretended, and which any of the Jewish priests might administer; John being a priest by birth, and not only so, but counted by all men to be a prophet indeed, this question why he baptized never would have been put. That this enquiry intimates that to introduce this rite required divine authority, such as was expected to attend the Christ, or Elias, or that prophet. If John was neither of them, they inferred he had no authority to introduce this rite, for a divinely commissioned person alone could have such authority. Then still more decisive is John's reply to the Jews, and his address on the day following containing an answer to this important enquiry. He tells them from whom he derived his authority to baptize, and with whom the ordinance originated. "After me cometh a man who is preferred before me, that he should be manifested to Israel. Therefore am I come, baptizing with water." Now let my readers carefully reflect upon the next words: "And I know him not. But he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me." Read John 1:26, 33. John in these few words unequivocally teaches these three things. 1st. That God sent him. 2d. That God enjoined upon him this particular work, to baptize with water; and that the communication he received from heaven, was immediate, clear and direct, "the same said unto me." Who after observing this inspired testimony, would entertain the notion that John had borrowed his practice from an unauthorized Jewish superstition. To a candid enquirer after truth, this passage alone is sufficient to settle the question; for it contains John's own testimony upon the subject. Speaking of John, Matthew Henry says, "He did not run without sending. God sent him to baptize. He had a warrant from heaven for what he did." John says, "He that sent me said unto me." Dr. Clark says: "From this we may clearly perceive, that John had a most intimate acquaintance with the Divine Being, and received, not only his call and mission at first, but every subsequent direction by immediate, unequivocal inspiration."

If any doubt yet remains, I adduce the plainly implied testimony of Christ. In order to convict the Jews of their guilt in disregarding John's ministry, and the testimony he had borne of him as the Messiah, our Lord put the following questions to them. "I will also ask you one question, The baptism of John, was it of heaven, or was it of man. Answer me."—Matt. 11: 29-33. Had baptism been a common rite to the Jews, introduced by the Rabbis, how easy and ready would have been the answer to that effect; and the design of convicting them would of course have failed; but knowing that it had no such origin; that it was commonly admitted to be from heaven, but if they gave this as their answer our Redeemer would have rejoined the appalling and convicting enquiry, "Why then did ye not believe him;" they resolved to escape from the dilemma and the charge by replying, "We can not tell." This reference of Christ to the baptism of John, is equivalent to a positive assertion, that John's baptism was an appointment of the God of heaven, and hence the guilt of those persons who disregarded the testimony of that messenger of God as you have done. Our Redeemer having borne his testimony that John was more than a prophet, and never exceeded by any born into the world, it is added, that "all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John; but the Pharisees and the lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him."—Luke 1: 27-30. On this I only add, If declining to receive baptism of John was rejecting the counsel of God, it must follow that John's baptism was the counsel of God, an ordinance, not of human invention, but of God's wise and gracious appointment. Hence it is here intimated, as implied in the last passage, that is was daring and guilty rebellion on the part of them to whom he was sent—to reject or neglect this ordinance of God, and the ministry associated with it.

Deeming the above arguments sufficient to refute that John borrowed his rite of baptism from a Jewish rite then existing; and sufficient also to prove that John was a peacher of the gospel, and his baptism was of God's appointment, in my next I shall proceed to adduce reasons for the perpetuity of baptism as a Christian ordinance.

LONDON, Eng.

RAMBLES IN THE DISTRICT.—No. I.

On Tuesday morning, February 19th, 1884, the officer who carries both pleasure and sorrow in one hand, brought me a letter, post mark, Plymouth. In it was an invitation to come and confirm two persons who had been baptized for the remission of their sins. On Saturday, February 23d, at half-past three p.m., I boarded one of Nahum's chariots for Plymouth. The day was very wet, it having rained all day, and when I reached Taunton, it had changed to snow. Notwithstanding bad weather, on we sped, until half-past six found us at Plymouth; the storm and wind having increased in fury, with the night very dark, but with hopes of a brighter day, we did not fear. As I alighted from the train, I saw near me a man with a lantern; and as I looked up in his face, behold it was Bro. Nickerson, the president, who was waiting for me. As I gazed upon the light I was reminded of the "virgins' lamp," and I hope that mine may be burning as bright and clear when the Lord comes. After a hearty shake of the hand, we trudged along for his home; was stopped on the way by a good brother, who gave us a cordial welcome. As we entered his house, I felt that there the peace of the gospel rested. Another short journey, and I reached the home of my worthy escort. Was made welcome by his wife, and after supper met with a few of the saints, when tithing and freewill offerings were the topic of conversation. After an hour thus spent, prayer was offered and we retired.

Sunday, February 24th, awoke at the dawn of day, and found a sudden change in the atmosphere; John Frost had been at work, and had laid his icy hand wherever he could grasp, and held things rather firmly. A cold northerly blowing indicated a continuance. Breakfast was prepared, but before partaking, the family was called together by the "good man of the house," a portion of Scripture read, and prayer was offered. O that every house could erect such an altar! What a blessing it would be! After breakfast, a journey of six miles before us on foot to the place of meeting. Several brethren and sisters were added to our number, as we plodded over the frozen ground until we came to a neat little chapel, which was loaned to the saints.

At eleven a. m. by the aid of the Spirit, I tried to show the necessity of "water baptism." Good liberty, as I always have on this topic. Adjourned to a house near by for a confirmation meeting. Several of the saints bore testimony, and the good Spirit was present to bless. One brother certified, that before he knew this faith, he had been pronounced incurable of the asthma; but he now thanked God that he had been healed. Confirmed those who had been baptized, and who were anxiously waiting for the Spirit. In this little gathering we were all comforted and blest. At two p. m. adjourned to the chapel for preaching, when the subject was authority. The Lord again remembered us, by bestowing his Spirit; and at the close the Saints acknowledged instruction to be good. Started for home another six miles. Could it be possible that the ministry are not sincere? Is it love of gold or love of crown? Called on the way and conversed with a sick lady and prayed with her. A little further and then administered to a sick brother and sister, who felt grateful for the blessings of the gospel. A further journey of a few miles through the woods, and we rested at the hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. Chase. Here I partook of supper, which I truly appreciated, it being the first meal since breakfast. I find that when engaged in deep spiritual work, it is not good to take much animal food. The brethren informed me that I had to preach at another place before I went to bed.

At half-past seven we met in a chapel where our able missionaries, Sheehy and Gilbert, had presented the truth, the listeners were kindly invited to contribute, and the result was eighty-five cents. After this day's labor I felt like seeking my bed; so after a hearty shake of the hand, pressing invitations to come again, and thanks to kind heaven for help bestowed in the labor of the day, I retired, went to sleep without rocking, and resting as snug and well as a nut in a shell. Monday, February twenty-fifth, arose well and hearty, ready to do battle again. Met the "Char-iot," and at 6:40 a.m. started for home, where I arrived safe and sound, and resumed my daily avocation. Would not the life of an Elder make an interesting work, if followed in all his labors, both temporally and spiritually?

JOHN SMITH.

A VISION.

In the year 1859 the following vision was shown me. A small branch of the Old Organization, as we now call it, was located in the town of Royalton, Berrien county, Michigan. Some of the members of this branch had come from New York State, and we were at the time thinking of immigrating to Utah, to join the body of the Saints; not knowing at that time that polygamy was taught there, or even believed.

In my vision I went to Utah. At times others were with me on the way; but their faith did not seem to be of that genuine character that it ought to be. The streams that we crossed on the way, were so far apart that our water supply would be nearly exhausted at times. The streams of water were very beautiful, and the water tasted delightful. We crossed a barren plain on the way, a wild waste, with only clumps of low brush. Just before we reached our destination, approaching the border of the valleys of the mountains, we found but one entrance to the great valley, rather to the north-east of the locality we wished to visit. After passing through the entrance, went down a long descent till we reached the valley. We halted near a large body of people, who were all in confusion. Brigham Young was standing up with a small crowd about him, composed mostly of the chief authorities of the church, to whom he was preaching false doctrine. I heard him preach his sermon through, and was impressed that he would so continue to preach his deceptions to the end. The greater part of the people were greatly dissatisfied, were aware they had been deceived, were very desirous of coming away. This larger body of people was divided from Brigham's crowd, and I knew he was a false teacher. My wife's aunt (who had previously gone to Utah), came to me, and she was bitterly weeping because, as she said, "they had been so wofully deceived by Brigham Young."

I then observed that Utah was very rich in minerals, gold and silver; some of those I met, gave me some of the silver money. We then went on down the valley till we came to a beautiful lake. The ground around was sodded over with green grass. I sat down on the velvety green, and calmly surveyed the lonely surroundings. We then took up our line of march down the valley, and on through the city. Streams of pure, cold water came trickling down the sides of the mountains, to water the valley below. Snow appeared on the distant mountain tops. Great numbers of the people were very anxious to leave Utah, because of the deceptions that were practiced on them; but for some reason were not permitted to come. We then started to return again to the states, and after passing through the entrance and re-crossing the barren plain, we very suddenly came to an open prairie, a long distance this side of Utah. This was the most lonely and beautiful place I had ever beheld. It was a place of safety. A city was beginning to be built here, and a church was here located and organized. It was not like the church in Utah. Perfect order was here maintained, and the truth was here taught. This city and the surroundings were of a pure white appearance. I was impressed that this was the Church of Christ. I saw as it were great armies coming from Utah to this lonely place. The leading representative or leader of this church, had never been contaminated with the doctrines of Brigham Young. This vision was shown me the year before Young Joseph was ordained president of the Reorganization.

Your brother in hope,

JAMES HOWELL.

Selections.

THE OLD-FASHIONED HOME.

The words of Howard Crosby, in regard to young women, are timely for the fashionable denizens of our cities. My thoughts go to the country. New England is full of empty farm-houses, because young women prefer the factory, or the garret in the city, with the pleasures and licenses that come with them, to a place in the heart of a good man who wears coarse boots, coarse clothes, and his hands hard with farm work. Few women are willing to milk cows, nurse lambs, feed pigs, raise chickens, make butter and cheese, as did our mothers. The men of brawn and brain in the world today came from such mothers. Jay Gould, William H. Vanderbilt, and many more like them, had mothers not afraid to work with brave, hard-working husbands. When Daniel Webster desired to go through college, his father, who was a farmer, consulted his wife, famed for her sweet butter, and they said, "the boys must be educated let come what will to us." Educated they were.

The same was true of Mrs. John Adams and the mother of Henry Clay. We need girls in the country that will honor the brave boy who loves land and horses and cattle, and who would be proud to take the premium at the county fair for something besides fast driving.

Such woman ought to be raised in our cities. Last Summer I saw such an one in Wisconsin. She had been delicately reared. She went into the West on a visit. A farmer boy pleased her. He proposed marriage. Friends objected. She insisted that her hand should go with her heart. They were married. Two strong children have been born to them. Their house is a gem of beauty. Their parlor is open to the sun. It is full of flowers. The piano is seldom closed. The children are learning to play it. Her dairy is her pride. She cleared last year three hundred dollars on eggs and poultry. Their library is rich with choicest books. Costly paintings hang on their walls. She is happy in the manly love of a noble man. I slept in the spare bed. I sat at their table. I rode behind their fine horses, and thanked God that I had seen one woman whom I had known in a city, ready to aid in building up on this earth, and at this time, an old-fashioned home.

THE LARGEST CAVE ON EARTH.

The great cave lately discovered in Kentucky, has been visited by a multitude of people from various points of the United States. We think that Leitchfield, Grayson county, is destined to become the great "Mecca" of the world—for the Masonic fraternity, and scientists generally.

For the last two weeks no one has been admitted to the cave except upon presenting a written permit from Mr. Rogers, and those who have been fortunate enough to obtain admission have been principally scientists from abroad, who journeyed here to see the great wonder for themselves. It was necessary to take this step, as the cave was rapidly being despoiled of its contents. Indeed, several of the mummies and some of the smaller Masonic emblems were carried off before Mr. Rogers—or, in fact, any of our citizens—realized the importance of the discovery, and of preserving the contents of the cave intact. The subterranean river has been so swollen from the excessive rains of the last month that no explorations have been made in the avenues beyond it. Excavations have been made, however, in the chambers or catacombs where the mummies and Masonic emblems were found, and in the vicinity of the pyramid, and several tablets with queer hieroglyphics have been dug up, also some bronze and copper vases, and pieces of pottery. A mound was opened and found to contain six well preserved mummies, reposing in regular order with feet radiating from the center.

In the discovery of this cave the key is undoubtedly found that will unlock the mystery of the prehistoric race of America, and also prove their identity with the ancient Egyptian race, who undoubtedly crossed over and peopled this continent, built temples, and flourished in a high degree of civilization until wiped out of existence by the ruthless hand of the savage. The caves of Kentucky undoubtedly afforded them shelter and protection, and were used as a sort of catacomb for the storage of all that was near and dear to them, including their illustrious dead. Such at least seems to have been the case in this instance, whether this theory will apply to the other caves of Kentucky or not.

Many beautiful formations have been discovered during the last week. The stalactites and stalagmites glisten like so many million diamonds. The pillars and columns of alabaster are beautiful beyond description, and its wonders will have to be seen to be fully appreciated.

THE POWER OF WATER.

THE properties of water are only partially understood by those who have never seen it under high pressure. The Virginia City Water Company gets its supply from Mariette Lake, on the Tahoe side of the mountain. It gets it through by a long tunnel, is then on the crest of a high mountain opposite Mount Davidson, with Washoe Valley between. To cross this valley by a flume would be almost impossible, so the water is carried down the mountainside to the bottom and crosses under the V. & T. railroad track, on the divide between Washoe and Eagle Valleys, then up again to the required height in iron pipes. The depression created in the line of carriage is 1,720 feet, and the pressure on the pipes is 800 pounds to the square inch. One pipe is eleven inches in diameter, and is quarter-inch iron, lap-welded, and eighteen feet long, with screw joints. There is little trouble from it; but the other, which is twelve inches in diameter and is riveted pipe, makes more or less trouble all the time. The pipe is laid with the seam down, and whenever a crack is made by the frost or sun warping it, or from any other cause, the stream pours forth with tremendous force. If the joint is broken open, of course the whole stream is loose and goes roaring down the mountain, but usually the escape is very small. The break last week was less than five-eighths of an inch in diameter, and yet the water in the flume was lowered an inch and a half by it, and the pressure went down fifteen or twenty pounds. Capt. Overton says that fifty inches of water went through it. It has been probably a year in cutting out, and was made by a little stream hardly visible to the naked eye that escaped through a joint and struck the pipe two or three feet off, eating away the iron until the pressure inside broke it through. When such a break occurs the noise can be heard for half a mile, and the earth shakes for hundreds of feet around. A break the size of a knitting-needle will cut a hole in the pipe in half a hour. Such breaks are repaired by putting a band around the pipe, pouring in molten lead and tamping it in. Such a stream bores through a rock like a sand-blast. The flying water is as hard as iron, and feels rough like a file to the touch. It is impossible to turn it with the hand, as it tears the flesh off the bones and if the fingers are stuck into the stream, with the point up, the nails are instantly turned back, and sometimes torn loose from the flesh.

ADVICE TO YOUNG WRITERS.

WILLIAM Cullen Bryant once gave the following sensible advice to a young man who had offered him an article for his paper:

My young friend, I observe that you have used several French expressions in your letter. I think, if you will study the English language, that you will find it capable of expressing all the ideas that you may have. I have always found it so, and in all that I have written I do not recall an instance where I was tempted to use a foreign word, but that, on searching, I have found a better one in my own language.

Be simple, unaffected; be honest in your speaking and writing. Never use a long word when a short one will do as well.

Call a spade by its name, not a well known oblong instrument of manual labor; let a home be a home, and not a residence: a place not a locality, and so on of the rest. When a short word will do, you always lose by a long one. You lose in clearness; you lose in honest expression of meaning; and, in the estimation of all men who are capable of judging, you lose in reputation for ability.

The only true way to shine, even in this false world, is to be modest and unassuming. Falsehood may be a thick crust, but in the course of time truth will find a place to break through. Elegance of language may not be in the power of us all, but simplicity and straightforwardness are.

Write much as you would speak, and as you think. If with your inferior, speak no coarser than usual: if with your superior, speak no finer. Be what you say, and within the rules of prudence. No one ever was a gainer by singularity of words or in pronunciation. The truly wise man will so speak that no one will observe how he speaks. A man may show great knowledge of chemistry by carrying bladders of strange gases to breathe; but one will enjoy better health, and find more time for business, who lives on common air.

Sidney Smith once remarked: "After you have written an article, take your pen and strike out half the words, and you will be surprised to see how much stronger it is."

BAD THOUGHTS.—Bad thoughts, if cherished, blight virtue, destroy purity, and undermine the stablest foundations of character. They are like rot in timber; like rust in iron. They eat into the man. And when the process has gone on for a while, and there comes the stress of an outward temptation, down they go into a mass of ruins. Ships go out to sea, all bright with fresh paint, their sails all spread, and never reach port. Why? They met a storm and went down, because they were rotten. Under the paint was decay. Just so bad thoughts; vile, impure thoughts and imagination, rot the manly oak of character, rust the iron of principle, slacken all the stays of virtue, and leave the man or woman to the violence of temptation, with no interior of reserve power to withstand the shock. Bad thoughts fed and fattened are the bottom vice of society.

Miscellaneous.

TO THE TWELVE.

Brethren of the Quorum of the Twelve, will please be reminded of the agreement made at the conference last spring to meet ten days before the opening of next conference. It will not be forgotten that at least six will be necessary to transact business. If that number can not be present for that length of time, it would be well that the president be notified of the fact, either directly or through me. The nights could be profitably spent in preaching, if not enough business should be presented to require night sessions. I will see that convenient homes be found in time.

T. W. SMITH, Sec'y of Quorum.

FOURTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Dear Brethren.—Those of you who have been inquiring of me about your licences, will be better informed by reading Bro. A. J. Cato's letter in Herald of February 14th, 1884. Why he has charged you five cents, or any other sum, for sending you your licences, I do not know; but suppose the amount raised by us and put into the hands of the secretary at our meetings in 1879 and 1880 was not enough to pay for blanks, postage, &c. I have had no communication from him on this or any other subject, although he says he has written to me several times. (He may have misdirected.) I will be glad to hear from each and every one of you, and receive your reports before the meetings of the coming conference. It might do to report to Bro. Cato, or some other member of the quorum; but it is best to have uniformity. Besides the resolutions passed by you at all our meetings, were that you report to the president of the quorum. Hoping to hear from many of you, and to meet you at the coming conference; and that you may be the cause of doing much good in spreading the gospel,

I remain your brother in Christ,

G. F. WATERMAN,

President Fourth Quorum of Elders.

DIED.

BLATT.—At Independence, Missouri, February 25th, 1884, of typhoid pneumonia, Sr. Cora Ellen, daughter of Bro. Joseph and Sr. Disa J. Blatt. She was born in Doniphan county, Kansas, June 27th, 1869; baptized June 10th, 1883, in Independence, Missouri, by J. C. Foss. Her illness lasted but ten days. A widowed mother, eight brothers and one sister, remain to mourn the departure of one of the sweetest, most amiable, and innocent ones we have ever had the pleasure of knowing and loving; for to know her was to love her. Funeral sermon at the Saints' Meeting House, by Joseph Luff. A large company of sympathizing friends paid their tribute of respect by attendance thereat.

LARKEY.—At Baldwin, Iowa, February 22d, 1884, Bro. Edward Larkey, Sen., aged 74 years, 9 months and 5 days. Survived his companion one month and one day. He united with the church in its infancy, and has ever been faithful. During the dark and gloomy days that followed the death of Joseph and Hyrum, he kept aloof from all the factions, and united with the Reorganization in 1863, being rebaptized by Elder Horace Bartlett, and ordained the same day to the office of an Elder, by Horace Bartlett and C. G. Lanphear.

THOMAS.—At Netawaka, Kansas, January 24th, 1884, Sr. Sarah Thomas, wife of the late deceased Elder George Thomas, of Atchison, Kansas. Born in South Wales, April, 1815; united with the church in 1850; emigrated in 1855, but soon afterward disconnected themselves with the Utah Church. United with the Reorganization, August 26th, 1868. She lived a consistent, Christian life from infancy till death. On the last Sabbath before her sickness, she bore a strong testimony to the work, spoke in tongues and interpreted the same; giving wise instruction and exhortation, to the edifying of the saints. Another faithful saint passed away to the glorious beyond. Funeral services at the house of her daughter and Elder D. Williams, by H. Green.

To JUDGE from the report of the Belgian Association against the abuse of alcoholic drinks, Belgium must be a terribly drunken country. According to the statistics which the society has obtained, each inhabitant of King Leopold's dominions drinks more than twelve quarts of brandy and two hundred and twenty-five quarts of beer every year. Hitherto the German has been considered the typical beer-drinker; but he is a mere babe with his ninety quarts of beer per annum compared with the Belgian with his two hundred and twenty-five. In Belgium there is one saloon to every forty-four inhabitants, and the money annually expended in these drinking-shops amounts to $95,000,000, in a population of five and a half millions. During the last forty years there has been an enormous increase in crime throughout the country—an increase altogether out of proportion to the augmentation of the population. Forty years ago crimes of violence averaged about 11,000 a year; now they have reached 36,000. In 1840 there were 204 suicides, and in 1880 there were 533. It is a little odd, in face of these startling figures, that one sees so few drunken people in the streets of Belgian towns. But foreigners when they are drunk are for the most part wise enough to stay indoors.

A CLERGYMAN in Tennessee is known as the "satisfying preacher." Whenever a church begins to grow tired of its regular pastor the "satisfying preacher" is sent for. And so atrociously bad is he that after hearing him once or twice the congregation is entirely "satisfied" to keep the pastor it has. A new avenue of usefulness is thus opened to poor preachers. They will act as a sort of counterpoise to those peripatetic preachers whose showy eloquence often causes a congregation to be dissatisfied with its humdrum pastor.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

THE BRADEN-KELLEY DISCUSSION.

FROM the brief and imperfect information that has reached us, we make the following summary of the debate on the first proposition, which reads: "Is the Book of Mormon of Divine origin, and its teachings entitled to the belief and respect of all people?" Elder Kelley presented archaeological evidences to show that the Book of Mormon history agrees with the discoveries of modern scientists made since its publication. Also scriptural evidence showing an exact agreement between the Book of Mormon and the Bible as to doctrine.

Elder Braden replied that there had been no communication from God to the world since the days of the first apostles. That under them the church was perfected and handed in its perfect state to the world. That since their time no one has received the Holy Ghost, and all the light that Christians receive or can receive now-a-days from God, is the word of God as contained in the Bible. He attacked the character of Joseph Smith, and attempted to show that he was not such a man as God would be likely to choose as an instrument through which to present to the world an inspired record. He presented the Spaulding Story as the basis of the Book of Mormon. He assailed without stint the characters of the early men of the church, affirming that Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon conspired together to foist a new religion upon the world. He affirmed that Sidney Rigdon stole the manuscript of Spaulding's story, as is supposed, at Pittsburg, about 1815, or if not then, in 1823.

Elder Kelley then continued his lines of argument, which consisted of proofs from the Bible, and archaeological evidences gathered from various authors of repute on Ancient America, her inhabitants, architecture, the agricultural and domestic habits of her people, their religion, language, government, &c. This he followed by an argument from sacred and profane history, showing the kind of argument which was resorted to in all ages of the world, when God sent a message to the earth by apostles or prophets, or on the appearance of a new scientific truth. He showed that the primitive method was not to meet the issue upon its merits, but by an attack by means of misrepresentations and hatched up stories. This he declared was the method of attack used by his opponent. He did not meet the issue upon the claims of the book itself, but by circulating stories about those who had to do with it, to undermine their character, so that men would not pass upon it in the light of its claims.

Elder Braden replied that all inspiration was confined to the Apostolic Age. That the Holy Ghost did its work in that age, since which time we have the Bible as the Christian's guide. There was but one baptism—that of the water. He divided the Holy Ghost into four parts: The Holy Ghost as manifest in miracles; as manifest in conviction, which took place by hearing the word; the indwelling of the Holy Ghost by the word of God in the heart; the Holy Ghost which moves on bad men, beasts, etc., such as Balaam's ass, when she rebuked the madness of the prophet. Then he presented quotations showing what different parties in various places said and talked about, showing, as the speaker claimed, that Sidney Rigdon was the author of the Book of Mormon; that he stole one manuscript, and Smith stole two from one Spaulding, and they together got up the Book of Mormon. Then Smith stole a peepstone from one of his neighbor's children, by which inspiration the Book of Mormon was to be given to the world, and a new religion started. He criticised the Book of Mormon by reason of the frequent use of the phrase, "came to pass," and the further use of much bad English. He read a number of statements said to have been made by various parties, showing that Smith was not a man morally of the kind that would be likely to formulate a new Bible for any other purpose than that of making money.

Elder Kelley next introduced a legal argument, showing that he had made out a prima facie case, and that his opponent had not attempted to break his chain of evidence, but had gone off to prove an alibi, under the claim of the Spaulding statements. That by so doing the negative conceded that the positions of the affirmative were invulnerable, and stated that upon this hypothesis only, he would notice the Spaulding story. He proceeded to show that the negative had not brought evidence to support his theory, not even reading from a single statement or affidavit of those depended upon, and cited as witnesses by him, but that the negative had stated in his own words only what he could prove by them. He then asked that two of the witnesses cited, Mr. Rudolph of Mentor, and Mr. E. D. Howe of Painsville, the last being the author of "Mormonism Unveiled," be brought and put upon the stand for examination. He stated that he had had conversations with both of them, and that neither of them knew a single fact to support the position of the negative.

Elder Braden then presented statements to sustain the Spaulding story as the origin of the Book of Mormon, alleging that Sidney Rigdon stole a copy of Spaulding's manuscript while in Pittsburg, and that Joseph Smith stole two others while in Pennsylvania; that Smith stole a peepstone in the shape of a baby's foot, which was the means of bringing about the interpretation. That Martin Harris' wife burned the first manuscript that was translated, and that Sidney Rigdon was sent for to reproduce it. He then showed up Smith as a prophet and general and banker, and gave a graphic account of the building of the Temple at Kirtland; of the move of the people to Missouri, and thence to Salt Lake; recounted the divisions into Cutlerites, Strangites, etc.; gave Smith's character as associated with Brigham Young; O. P. Rockwell and the Pratts were presented; connection with the sisters of the black and white veil; the giving of the polyamist revelation, and his death at Carthage, Ill. He also referred to the coming forth of the Reorganization in 1852, and the protest against polygamy made by it; the coming forth of Joseph Smith the son of Joseph Smith the prophet to take his father's place. He cited some statements of Alexander Campbell, Adamson Bently and D. Atwater, claiming that Sidney Rigdon said two years before the Book of Mormon appeared, that there would be a "most wonderful book published some day;" that Sidney Rigdon left the association in 1830 because he was jealous of Campbell, Scott and Bently.

Elder Kelley then continued the comparison of E. D. Howe's extracts with the record from which they claim to have been taken, in order to show that the text had been garbled in every case, for the purpose of making out that the Latter Day Saints believe in and practise a system of extorting money from those who accept the faith. Howe says: "They shall contribute all of their property unto me. When it is contributed unto me, it can not be taken from me," etc. Whereas the record says: "If ye love me ye shall contribute of thy properties for the support of the poor of my people such as thou hast to impart unto them. That inasmuch as ye do it to one of the least of these my disciples ye do it unto me." He then showed that the statements in Howe's book that were relied upon as evidence were not evidence at all. They do not pretend to be affidavits, but statements, some of which are merely copied by the writer, and are found in quotation marks. That the affidavits that appear under the names of Peter Ingersol and William Stafford, and declared to have been made before Thomas P. Baldwin, Judge of Wayne County Court, were frauds; for there was no such person acting as Judge of Wayne county, New York, at the time referred to when said affidavits were said to have been made. He gave in evidence two letters from the Clerk of Courts in Wayne county, New York, to the effect that no such person as Thomas P. Baldwin ever acted as Judge in that county, and that "David Arne, Jr., was county Judge in 1833," the time at which these affidavits are said to have been taken. He then quoted the testimony of Mrs. Matilda Davison, Solomon Spaulding's widow, as found in Charles Mackey's history of the Latter Day Saints, published in London, England, in 1851, which contained the statement that one D. P. Hurlbut came to her house and procured the "Manuscript Found," with the view of getting it published, and that an agreement was made to that effect. Hurlbut took the manuscript away, but did not publish it, as "it did not read as he expected;" and that he never returned it. It was destroyed. It contained about forty or fifty pages of manuscript.

Mr. Braden replied by continuing the claims of Spaulding Story as the basis of the Book of Mormon. That it was re-modeled by Smith and Rigdon. He then read passages from the Book of Mormon, which he claimed were introduced by Sidney Rigdon. Sidney Rigdon never did anything by halves. That according to Nephi, (otherwise Sidney), God's inspiration on this continent was far ahead of that on the Eastern Continent. That the Bible said there were three hours of darkness at the time of Christ's crucifixion, but Sidney had it three days over in America. Doubting Thomas put his fingers into the prints of the nails that pierced his Savior; but over in America Christ appeared to the whole multitude and they put their fingers into the prints of the nails. Thousands of them did this in a few minutes. According to Nephi, one Jared built eight canoes that were as long as a tree. This measurement was like the old lady's, as long as a shack. The sides thereof were tight like a dish, and the tops thereof and the bottom thereof. How is that for inspiration? So he proceeded to ridicule the whole story of Jared's crossing the ocean, the carrying of fish with him, the holes in the tops and bottoms of the canoes, the receiving of light from the illuminated stones, etc. The Book of Mormon has Sidney's formula for baptizing, "having authority I baptize," etc. One of the prophets over in America prophesied of Christ long before he came, and told that he should be born of a virgin by the name of Mary; that he should have a forerunner named John; that he should be crucified, etc. This shows that Sidney took this part from the New Testament. He alleged that the Book of Mormon was against Free Masonry just as Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon were. The Book of Mormon spoke of the ox in America.

Elder Kelley then answered the objections of the negative that the Book of Mormon could not be the Stick of Ephraim, because Manasseh and not Ephraim emigrated to America, by showing that Ephraim was to be scattered among the nations, mixed among the people, and that in the last days when the Lord should commence his work of restoration of the Jews to Palestine, that Ephraim was to be remembered, brought out from among the people. Stated that the secret societies spoken of in the Book of Mormon were organized for the purpose of murder and getting gain, and had nothing to do with Free Masonry. That this band of robbers had its fortifications in the mountains as the Book of Mormon states, is proved by archaeological discoveries of recent date. He cited Short, Baldwin, Stephens and Catherwood.

Elder Braden then maintained that the knowledge of steel was not known to the Israelites, neither the writing nor engraving on metals. That they wrote upon parchment. That many things found in the Book of Mormon were plagiarisms from the Bible. The Book of Mormon contained many of Sidney Rigdon's revival phrases. He repeated the stealing of the manuscript by Sidney Rigdon in Pittsburg, in 1816, while he was learning the tannery trade. Stated that the battle of the Jaredites over in New York was the most astounding thing that ever occurred. The whole nation, babies and all, were armed and they fought and fought, till there was not one left. Afterwards there was another great nation gathered at the same place, and they fought and fought till they were all destroyed. This all took place in New York so that Smith could find their plates and translate them. He again ridiculed the story of the eight canoes with a hole in the top and another in the bottom. That when water came in they were to stop the hole, that is the hole in the water. It reminded him of the story of birds building nests till they stand out thirty feet over the water. He repeated that the prophecies of the Book of Mormon relating to Christ, were the work of Rigdon, and were taken from the New Testament. Repeated his objection in regard to the ox being found in a wild state on the continent when the people first made their appearance.

Elder Kelley then proceeded to answer the objections of the negative. Stated that they were captious, not founded in fact. Were all explained by the book itself. The Israelites made and engraved upon metallic gold plates, and upon stone. Working in metals began with Tubal Cain. Proved by professor Winchell that all the domestic animals of this country originally came from Asia. The Book of Mormon stated emphatically in 1830 that this was the case, and that the Curelom and Cumom were also here. These facts have been proven scientifically since. The conveying of fish from place to place was nothing extraordinary. It was done here in the United States by the fish culturists. In regard to Jared's barges he showed that the best life boats now in use in the English and American Navies, were made like they were, that is with a hole in the bottom; that this was among the latest patents. Showed from the works of Short, Baldwin and Cottonwood, that the most formidable fortifications on the continent extend from the Wabash to New York State. This was in the region where the Book of Mormon locates the great battle. Stated that the negative had not made a single objection upon which he was willing to stand or fall. The Book of Mormon did not claim to reveal a perfect language. There never had been a perfect language since the confusion of tongues at the Tower of Babel. The simplicity of the language of the Book of Mormon was in its favor. It could be understood by all classes. Joseph Smith's illiteracy was no objection to the book. The apostles of Christ were all illiterate save Paul. Showed the existence of two civilized races upon this continent previous to its discovery. The old civilization was in central and South America just where the Book of Mormon puts it. Webster uses the word ox to represent the male among cattle. The Bible and all modern writers did the same. Mrs. Spaulding gave D. P. Hurlbut the manuscript, and he gave it to E. D. Howe, and Howe burnt it while it was in his possession. No part of it was ever published.

Elder Braden stated that Mrs. Davison did not give D. P. Hurlbut the manuscript, but gave him an order to get it out of a trunk. Patterson the printer says that he knew but little about what was going on in the office. His statement that there was no such manuscript about the office amounted to nothing. How could a star be seen in the day time as claimed by the Book of Mormon? The Book of Mormon quotes from Shakespeare. Science proves that the animals were introduced on the continent by Europeans. Chase and Saunders say that they did see Sidney Rigdon in New York State. The Book of Mormon is a fraud because it has both the English and the Hebraic idioms in it. It is full of obsolete words and expressions, and hundreds of times the phrase, "And it came to pass." If the Lord had translated the Book of Mormon he would have put it in decent English. The blunders in King James' Bible are not in the original manuscripts. Spaulding was a monomaniac, and not learned. Was called "Old come to pass." Rigdon had a high-spread-eagle style about him, but he was ignorant. The prosy part of the Book of Mormon was Spaulding's, the blunders Cowdery's, the fanaticism Harris', the religious part Rigdon's, the stupid and ignorant part Smith's. The Book of Mormon says the gospel was preached in America. The Bible says it was to be preached in all the world through the apostles. The Bible says the Lord confounded all languages. Sidney's band outwitted the Lord, and ran off so that he could not confound their language. The Mormon God is corporeal, eats, drinks and digests. The God of the Bible is a Spirit. The lowest display of religion is seen among the negroes of the south, the spiritualists and Mormons. The Book of Mormon is distinct from all other histories. The Book of Mormon gave no proof that it was translated.

Elder Kelley then corrected the statement of the negative that the Smith family did not belong to any church, and read from the history of Joseph Smith, showing that several of them were members of the Presbyterian Church. Proceeded to show that the 29th chapter of Isaiah was fulfilled in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. When the sealed book was to come forth that the learned could not read, the Lord was to inspire a man who was not learned to read it. When the Book of Mormon was revealed, a few of the characters were taken to Professors Anthon and Mitchell, of New York, but they could not read them. Anthon acknowledged that he was waited on by an "honest looking farmer, with certain strange characters," etc. Contradicted a statement made by the negative, that in the manuscript copy of the Book of Mormon, there were no capital letters at the beginning of sentences, proper names and chapters. Read a telegram from David Whitmer, of Richmond, Mo., who has the original manuscript copy in his possession, who stated that there were in it all the necessary capital letters, punctuation marks, etc. The objection that the Book of Mormon was not in good language, could also be urged against the Bible. The scholarly Paul did not present his message as the excellency of speech of man's wisdom.

Elder Braden replied by saying, that David Whitmer averred that the angels yoked themselves up and plowed seven acres for one of the Mormons. That the angel Moroni trudged along the road with a pack upon his back like an old tramp, behind a wagon one day, and Whitmer invited him to ride. David Whitmer was a "poor ass," and had repeatedly stated to his neighbors that he had not seen the angel. Said he saw it with his spiritual eyes. The witnesses to the Book of Mormon were a gang of liars. They all belonged to the same gang and were related. The Book of Mormon said there should be but three witnesses, but there were twelve that saw the plates. The angel brought leaf by leaf for Joe to translate, and they were handled and scattered around like dishes. Asserted that Joseph never got a single plate. Proceeded to show discrepancies in the testimony of the various witnesses in regard to the plates. It would have taken two thousand sheets of foolscap paper to have contained the printed matter of the Book of Mormon. The plates weighed 250 pounds, but Joe carried them in his arms, and the goggles, the brass plates, the sword of Laban, ball of direction, ran two miles and knocked two men down on the way. The Book of Mormon talks about glass a thousand years before glass was known. They were all inspired. Joe was inspired to translate, Oliver to write, Harris to see, and the type-setter to set it up. The first edition of the Book of Mormon does not read like the present one, a great many changes having been made. What was the use of bringing cattle and sheep over here when the wilderness was full of them.

Elder Kelley in his last speech proceeded to prove that Palestine was being turned from its sterility to a fruitful land, citing the reports of recent travelers in that country that the early and the latter rains were restored in 1853, to the astonishment of the natives, and the whole land was being restored to its ancient fertility. He cited Ezekiel 37 and Isaiah 29, to show that before the favor of God should be turned toward that land and the curse removed and its restoration to its primitive fertility, a book was brought to light to the world and brought out of the ground; and that the Book of Mormon is the only one known to man that in any sense answers to these predictions as to either character or time. Denied that there were to be found in the Book of Mormon a single quotation from the Bible. That the words said to be taken from Shakespeare, "The cold and silent grave, whence I shall not return," were no more in accord with the expression in the Book of Mormon, than they were with the language of Job written over two thousand years before Shakespeare. The Book of Mormon claims to be a record of the people who lived on this continent anciently, and of what God did for them. If its teachings and principles were not in accord with those in the Bible, it would be an insurmountable argument against it. In the Rig-Veda, of date at least twelve hundred years before Christ, is the language, "O Lord have mercy, give me my daily bread." Who will claim that Jesus stole this when he taught his disciples how to pray. The words Christ and Christian were not only used on this continent before the birth of the Savior, but on the Eastern Continent also. Enseleious, the historian, says that both the name Jesus and that of Christ were honored by the pious prophets of old. Moses esteemed the reproach of Christ as greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. That it is said that while the Children of Israel were in the wilderness they drank of that spiritual rock which was Christ. Showed that the entire list of witnesses to prove the Spaulding story as the basis of the Book of Mormon was taken from Howe's work, excepting A. Campbell and Z. Rudolph. That he had shown that that work contained at least five hundred perverted readings and garbled extracts from the Book of Mormon; and if the author would change the statements of the book to make a case against it, no dependence could be placed in the pretended statements of witnesses it contained, especially when the author of that book had burned the original of the Spaulding manuscript which he had in his hands, and then the original of the statements of the witnesses, as soon as his book was in print. Said that polygamy had nothing to do with the question before them. Read from the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, showing and claiming that no records in the world condemned the doctrine as pointedly as did they.

Elder Braden then cited what several persons had said, as he affirmed, accusing Joseph Smith of the crime of polygamy. Said it was no use for the Reorganized Church to deny it, the proof was too plain. Emma Smith of course denied it, but she burnt the polygamous revelation herself. Quoted from the Latter Day Saints' Herald volume I, the testimony of William Marks, to the effect that Joseph in a private conversation with him shortly before his death, had condemned the doctrine of polygamy, and had instructed him to take steps against it, and to have those who were practising it cut off from the church. Declared it was the abominable spiritual wife doctrine that caused Smith's death. Said if he proved Joseph Smith to have been in polygamy, he proved the Book of Mormon not true, for God would not speak through such a character. This closed the discussion on the first proposition.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Church Secretary desires that reports of districts intended for the General Conference should be made out and sent to him before conference, if possible, so that they may be prepared in season. Also if the ministry will make out written reports and send in good season it will be a favor. Address Henry A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa, up to April 1st, after that address Stewartsville, Mo. They may be sent either to President Smith or Secretary Stebbins.

Bro. Joseph A. Stewart reports enough Saints at Cecil, Maryland, to organize a branch—eight in all. He has lately baptized one there, and taken the names of two veterans for union with the Church on their old baptism.

Bro. Hans N. Hansen has baptized seven more at Richfield, Utah. The branch there now numbers twenty-seven.

March fourth a branch was organized at Salt Lake City, to be known as the Salt Lake Mission Branch. Elder R. Warnock was chosen president. They were blessed with the presence of the Spirit in power; so writes Bro. E. C. Brand.

Sr. Lizzie E. Richardson, of Williamsburg, Neb., wrote March 3d, sending a dollar for the Wheeling Saints who have suffered from the floods. She expresses the hope that the Saints will give them the assistance they so much need. She wishes Bro. Elvin or Caffall would call at Williamsburg, and preach the gospel there. Will help pay expenses if they do so.

Three families of Saints left Lamoni on the 10th, to make homes in Dakota, under the Homestead Law. Elder Charles Sheen, wife, son and daughter; Bro. Sheen is a brother of the former Editor of the Herald. Bro. Fred Sheen, wife, and family. Bro. Henry Stafford and wife. These Saints have resided in Decatur County about nine years, and we wish them success in their new home; and we hope they will form the nucleus of the first branch of the Church of Jesus Christ in Dakota. Their post office is Highmore, Hyde county, Dakota. We learn that Bro. Dan Moore also accompanied them. On the 12th Bro. John Newton, wife, and family, left here to make their home in Fayette county, Iowa.

Bro. N. Stamm wrote from Rockwell City, Iowa, that he had recently baptized one there. There are eight Saints now at that place, whom he thinks might be organized into a branch.

By letter from Bro. Ira P. Brown, of Providence, R. I., we learn that Bro. Albert G. Angell and wife request that some Elder call on their son, Jeremiah L. Angell, living at the corner of Clark and Vasques Streets, Denver, Colorado. Elders traveling in that region please take notice.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. H. Kelley, writing from Kirtland, Ohio, under date of March 12th, says:

I am engaged to meet a Mr. W. R. Coovert in discussion, at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, May 5th. He belongs to the Church of God, or Winebrenerians. Propositions similar to those discussed here. It is to be held in his church in the city. We had the finest audience here last Sabbath that has been present since the conference; and a warm feeling of appreciation and friendship not exhibited before.

On account of the publication clause being stricken out, the bill will take effect on the 4th of July.

Grain elevators are to be erected throughout Russia by a commercial corporation called the Russo-American Company. The Russian Government may make grants in aid thereof, though a portion of the Russian press is opposed on patriotic grounds, and the Czar may not sanction the scheme.

Correspondence.

CHATHAM, Ont.,
March 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—In the early part of the winter we labored in the London District. The most of the saints of that district seem to manifest a firm faith and reliance in God, and in the latter day work. In London Branch, a Rev. gentleman of that city seemed to think he could inform the Saints and the public about Joseph Smith, of his parentage, and of the rise of the latter day work. He has delivered some lectures to that effect. He kept the notice of his first lecture so quiet, that but few of the public outside of his own congregation, knew of it. When it was heard of by the saints, Bro. R. C. Evans went and called on the Rev. gentleman, and got the privilege to peruse the manuscript of the lecture, and got some of the leading points. When Bro. Evans, (who is being published in the paper as the Boy Preacher), requested him to meet him in public discussion upon the subject matter of his lecture; but he declined, preferring to discuss in his own way. Then Bro. Evans informed him that he should review his lecture at a stated time, and invited him to be present, but he would not promise to come. Due notice was given to the public that the review would take place in the Saints' Church. I have been informed that there was a large congregation out to hear, and good order prevailed. Bro. Evans enjoyed good liberty, in showing the fallacy of the Rev. gentleman's position, and presenting the truth. Afterwards he repeated his lecture in his own church, and Bro. George Mottashed was present; and at the close requested the Rev. gentleman to meet him the next evening in his own church, and discuss the merits of the lecture properly. But he was informed that no such liberty could be granted. Bro. Mottashed informed him that it would be reviewed in the Saints' Church; and Bro. Hunt writes me that at the time Bro. Mottashed reviewed, the church was well filled with attentive listeners, and he did well in defense of the truth, and in showing the absurdities of the gentleman's arguments. He is well satisfied with results from the review.

Bro. McIntosh is at Longwood, holding a series of meetings, and had baptized ten when last heard from, and has stirred up a hornet's nest among the Campbellites. They have sent to Michigan for a debater to come and annihilate his doctrine. Bro. McIntosh expects to hold the fort by the help of the Master. Bro. Samuel Brown has just returned from a short tour. He has been with Bro. Robb to Petrolia and Oil City, and other points in that vicinity. He thinks there has and can be much good done in those places. Bro. R. C. Evans has had a short vacation from business, and felt that he wanted to do something for the Master's cause, so he went to Corinth and Walsingham, and aroused the Saints, and astonished the people as the "Boy Preacher," and helped set the leaven to work again in those parts. I left the London District on the 17th of January, and came into this part of the mission by request of John Langford, Esq., of Kent Bridge, to assist in a discussion between himself and Mr. Arnold, an infidel, upon the question, "Resolved: That the Scriptures were written by Divine Inspiration." The discussion was to take place on Friday evening, 25th of January. Each of the disputants was to have the privilege to choose two assistants, if he wished. Mr. Langford chose Rev. Madden, of Thamesville, and myself to assist him; and as peculiar as it may seem, Mr. Arnold got the Rev. Gibson of Blemheim, and Mr. Barns, a noted infidel, to assist him to deny the inspiration of the Scripture. There were three judges. The decision was in favor of the affirmative; so infidelity's deformed head had to bow once more to Christianity. But the idea of having to meet one claiming to be a Christian Minister, locking arms with infidelity against the inspiration of the Bible, or scriptures! I am led to believe, that there are many infidels covered up with the sheepskin cover of Christianity, for the bread and butter.

February eighth, I went to Ridgetown. Held several meetings there, with good liberty, good order and attention. As the Salvation Army was making a raid on the town, the rude boys followed the drum and went with the rabble; but there were some that still were enquiring for the old paths; and when we pointed out the old way in which Jesus walked, there were three persuaded to follow him through the door of baptism, two men the heads of families, and one young man. He was there from Petrolia, selling goods. His parents live in Port Huron, Michigan. The Saints are putting forth an effort to organize into a branch. I directed them to write to the president of the district to attend to it. I then went to Blenheim, found the Saints well cared for by the presidency of Bro. R. Coburn. Had a number of pleasant meetings while there. Hope the Saints were comforted and encouraged on in the fight of faith. Have just come to this place, and expect to do what I can for the Master's cause in these parts, until about the 15th inst., then start west to the conference.

Yours in bonds,

JOHN H. LAKE.

LONGWOOD, Ont., March 3d, 1884.

Dear Brother:—Have been preaching for some weeks in Middlesex Co., near Longwood Station, on the Great Western Railroad. have made many friends for the cause, removed mountains of prejudice, stirred up the Disciples to anger. They have sent to Michigan for a champion debater, he came, and has been going for Spaulding Story, Book of Mormon, Joseph Smith, Polygamy, &c., &c., stabbing away behind my back, furiously. I attended one of his meetings last night, took him to task, got him so puzzled that he flanked. I received a direct challenge from one of their preacher's, Campbell by name, who sent for this other man, McKellar; but now he refuses to come to time. While talking over matters last night with him before a crowded house, I asked where he got his authority. He answered, "That is impudent." But I made the matter a little more impudent before letting him off. He denounced all Latter Day Saints as polygamous Mormons, &c. One of his followers said in reference to laying on hands for healing the sick, that as he did not believe any such things, he would believe if he saw it done; and said he had a dog killed yesterday by the cars, and if I would lay hands on the dog and raise him he would believe. I answered the fool according to his folly, and said I thought he was the meanest dog I had ever met, so I would begin with him. May be the laugh was on the other side next time. Then as "Old Joe Smith was a liar, a thief, polygamist, &c., Book of Mormon a forgery, and the doctrine a heresy, just show us a sign, say some and we will believe. Yes, of course, swallow the whole thing. Did not let them off on these matters. Made more friends than ever, I think. I have also baptized ten. This makes them mad. Have upset the ideas of some of their honest investigation; this hurts worse than all. Have received word from Bro. John H. Lake to organize a branch, as we have sixteen here in all, six whom moved here from Picton, and expect several others by baptism soon. This is in Bro. A. Leverton's district. Will expect him to look after the babes here, as I leave in a few days for Rodney, Canada Southern Railroad, at request of Bro. John, as there is urgent call for preaching there and elsewhere. So many calls, I can't fill them

Your brother in bonds,

J. A. McINTOSH.

GENOA, Nevada, March 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We are all well, but going slowly on account of too much snow. Roads are now getting passable. I am trying to bring things into a better working shape. But few here to help. Had again a good hearing at the church of this place on Sunday evening; Mr. Willis, the minister, opened the meeting. We intend to hold conference at Franktown on the 23d. The Saints are far scattered, many gone no one knows where. Those who hear seem interested. I expect next week to get to Dayton and Virginia, and expect to open meetings in Empire. I had a good letter from Australia last week. They want help very much.

G. RODGER.

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa,

March 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Just after writing you from Viola, I went north into Bremer county, at the solicitation of Sr. Fuhr, of Grove Hill, where I spoke twice. Bro. Benjamin Shippy (brother of John Shippy), who lived seven miles away, being present, we returned with him, and spoke a number of times in the locality where Bro. H. P. Brown labored some twenty years ago, Bro. Shippy being one of the number then baptized. One evening while singing the opening hymn, a quantity of cayenne pepper and tobacco was thrown on the stove. Its fumes being inhaled, brought almost the entire large audience to violent coughing, some almost suffocated, others fainting. In less time than I can write it, all were out of the house; could the rascals have been found, the enraged audience would have used them roughly. I announced the service would be had, and by ventilation and firing, but fifteen minutes elapsed till all was at rights; and as the preacher was not affected, he spoke with excellent liberty for an hour and a half; so really we were not disturbed at all. The next day I baptized Bro. Shippy's sister, a lady of seventy or more, who had been a subscriber to the Herald for some years; his wife, and a married daughter. At the confirmation, Bro. Shippy's cup of joy seemed full. It was apparent that the kind Father had watched over him all these years, while he was battling for the work. We left them satisfied, and hoping some Elder would happen their way ere long. Others there are investigating.

On the twentieth I arrived at Springville, to visit a day with friends who had stood by us in the times of conflict. On the twenty-second at Viola, to find a complication of affairs, a weight of responsibility, and an anxious care for the outcome. Beginning 22d, spoke till 26th, when at the direction of Bro. I. N. White, Bro. McDowell came from Dubuque to our relief, speaking from 26th of February to 5th of March. His labor was well received by the citizens, and edifying to me. On the 3d the school election took place, in the outcome of which we had an intense interest, as the director, Mr. Hoffman, had been ostracised much for allowing our occupancy; the opposition had planned for a month to defeat his re-election. The issue was straight—Mormon and anti-Mormon. Our friends were all on hand; the opposition were surprised at the size of crowd, and some of opposition wavered, as the entire vote was 56, and 49 of which were in our favor, 6 for the direct opponent, and one scattering. In this we saw the work pass through a crisis in triumph, which we rejoiced in, as also the loyalty of Viola.

On the 4th we were privileged to plant the work at Viola, by baptizing Mrs. Hart, a most estimable lady, and another young woman. We felt at our arrival we were in a conflict, and as the victories doubled, our gratitude widened. We were pained to see Mr. Leonard, of three score and ten, depart this life on the third. He was of the Christian Church, but accepting what we presented, as far as he understood; his faculties having been impaired by paralysis, having had two strokes, the third effecting his death, after a lingering of two weeks. We took consolation in the fact of his having expressed his desire as to the work, and that at the time of the last stroke he was advocating our cause. The wife of the deceased is investigating the work, as are others, and we are hopeful. Some wished those baptized would not live to rise; but they and their colleagues are defeated, the work is started, and the end is not yet. As we sped away from Viola today, a quiet, thrilling peace pervaded our being, while we recounted the experiences had in the labor done. We rejoice in the work of latter days; it will triumph in spite of men and devils.

Your brother in Christ,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

ELKADER, Iowa, March 2d, 1884.

Dear Joseph:—Events this winter have unexpectedly kept me from the fields of labor. I wrote to the Bishop for aid, expecting then to leave in a few days; but my horse stepping on my foot while taking him from the stable, so injured my foot that I was not able to wear a shoe or a boot for three weeks. This misfortune combined with a severe cold that settled on my lungs, has confined me at home until the present. I am now thinking much about April Conference; but from the want of means to pay expenses, I perceive that I shall be left out in the cold, unless some Saint, whose heart is filled with the true spirit of Christian love and charity, should bestow a compliment upon me. That I have now but little reason to expect. In case I can not be at the conference to speak for myself, I hope to be remembered by that honorable body, and by them continued in the field, some where in the States of Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, or elsewhere, as may be deemed best. I have so arranged my affairs, that as soon as this severe cold and winter weather is over, I shall be loose footed again for the mission field, unless some unforeseen providence prevents.

I hope that all Latter Day Saints and friends will not be slow in forwarding their small tribute in exchange for the book entitled William Smith on the Origin of this Latter Day Work. It is a pamphlet of forty-one pages, nicely printed, and covered with blue and yellow paper, containing an account of the angel's visits to Joseph Smith, and the marvelous finding of the golden plates; also an engraving of Mother Lucy Smith, the mother of the prophet and seer of the last days; also an engraving of the author of the work. By lot, twenty cents a copy; single copy, twenty-five cents. Address, Wm. B. Smith, Elkader, Clayton county, Iowa. These books are also for sale at Lamoni. All orders will be promptly attended to. May God bless all good efforts to spread the gospel kingdom.

WM. B. SMITH.

FREMONT, Neb., March 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The conference of this district, held in Omaha on February 29th, March 1st and 2d, was a success. The business passed off pleasantly, and the reports show a general advancement in the district. We think all can look back on the year that has passed since our present presiding officer was placed in charge, with a great degree of pleasure, because of the good that has been done, especially in putting the branches in proper order. At no time since the district was organized, were things so prosperous as at present; and if we shall continue to prosper, it will depend on the faithfulness of all concerned.

Yours in bonds,

ED. RANNIE, Jun.

No 387, Pleasant Street,

FALL RIVER, Mass.,

March 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Since my last communication I have labored in Providence, Georgeville, Plainville, East Attleboro, Cumberland, Fall River, and Little Compton, R. I. At the last named place we made quite a siege. Brethren Sheehy, Bond, Coombs, Halstead, Perry and the writer, constantly battered away there about every night for two weeks or more. Quite an excitement prevailed, and we are assured that good was accomplished. When last there in company with Bro. Bond, we were pleased to see Myron baptize one, Bro. Joseph Pearce, notwithstanding the ice was about a foot thick. Since then, Bro. Coombs has paid them another visit, and he baptized sister Cynthia Pearce, Bro. Joseph Pearce's wife; and there are a number of others who are ready, only waiting a favorable opportunity to obey. We have now eight baptized members in that place, and there are good prospects of a branch being organized, and a good work done. Already subscription papers are out, and quite a little sum subscribed towards building a chapel; and the Saints there, with the friends, appear in earnest, and are determined to push on the work. In company with Bro. Halstead, we have just made them another short visit, and preached to them; and am sorry to have to report, as is usual, that we found the pious and sanctimonious of the so called Orthodox, arraying themselves against the truth. I admire outspoken and manly opposition from those who from honest conviction can not see as we see; but this low, sneaking way of doing things, I can not help but despise. This sneaking into houses when we are not there, and trying to persuade people that they are committing sin by going to hear the Mormons; telling them we are a low and vulgar set, a bad lot altogether, &c. The last method adopted by the Rev. Mr. Hart, pastor of the Congregational Church, is a novelty. He has got up what he termed a "Mormon Concert," for the Sunday School; and last Sunday evening I understand it came off. I am informed that all kinds of slang against the Mormons were indulged in by him about Joseph Smith being a swindler, &c. He had some bogus money, he said he got in Illinois last summer, that he said Joseph Smith made. Had Brigham Young represented, together with a number of Salt Lake Mormons. He stated that the Mormons had a system of tithing, by which they supported their missionaries, and if they converted any body, and they were too poor, they were helped out to Salt Lake out of this tithing. "Mormons were Mormons no matter if they did call themselves Latter Day Saints," and all Mormons in the end would have to go to Utah, and consequently would be polygamists," &c.

The gospel we preach is never mentioned by these pious frauds! The principles which we challenge them to disprove from the New Testament Scriptures, they utterly refuse to investigate; but begin to look for something bad; and if they can conjure up any thing bad, and like the buzzards of the west, which pass by whole fields of wholesome grain, choose to feast and glut themselves on carrion. It seems to me that Rev. Hart and his associates should not stop at Joseph Smith and the Mormons, but keep right on; and now should get up a Bible Concert, and passing by all the pure teachings of that book, begin to represent the bad deeds accredited to some of those ancient worthies, i. e., Noah, Lot, Moses, David, Solomon, &c., and because of these bad things exclude the Bible from his church altogether. "O consistency, thou art a jewel."

We expect to return there again before long. Saturday, January 26th, found me at Dennis Port, attending the Massachusetts District Conference, which we can say was a decided success. The speakers during the whole day on Sunday were wonderfully blessed by the Spirit in presenting the word. At the close of the afternoon service the writer was permitted to baptize another soul. Preaching meetings were continued until Wednesday evening after conference; a good interest manifest. On Wednesday I returned home, with the intention of starting in a few days for the State of Maine, to attend conference of the Western Maine District, at Queen's Landing; and then labor a few months there and in eastern Maine; but alas, I have been hindered by one of those unforeseen circumstances that we can not control, sickness in my family hindered. When I left the cape I little thought of the severe trial I was about to undergo. P. P. Bliss' composition says:

"I know not what awaits me,
God kindly veils mine eyes."

On Sunday evening following my return from preaching, our little girl and only child we found in a high fever. We did what we could for her during the night. Next day, Monday, while working over her, she went into convulsions. She apparently recovered from that, but in the night she was again in a very high fever, and the next day threatened again with convulsions, which finally developed itself into what the physician said he should call typhoid pneumonia. For about fifteen days she appeared to linger between life and death; twice she had congestion of the lungs, first the left, then the right. They would stop acting, and she lay gasping for breath. Once I lost my faith in her recovery, when she had been given up by the physician; but as I saw her linger, I became more collected, and my faith and hopes returned. I laid my hands upon her, and prayed God to spare her unto us. From that time forth I never ceased to implore Almighty God for her recovery. When her right lung became congested, and she sank into a semi-comatose state, and the physician shook his head in doubt, I did not lose faith. I was determined that she should live. I praise God that our united prayers were heard, and that she was resuscitated, and now she has almost recovered. It was a great strain upon my system, both mentally and physically; but I had seen two of my children die before, and I could not let this one go, when I knew the Lord had power to save her. She is living to-day, bless God, although it is looked upon as a "resurrection from the dead." I expect in a day or two more to be off again into the "harvest field," discharging my duty as one of God's servants. "The field is indeed wide." "The harvest truly is great." "The laborers are very few." O God, send forth laborers into thy vineyard. The signs of the times indicate we are living in "perilous times," "wars and rumors of wars," earthquakes, disasters by sea and by land, by fire, by storm, and by floods. Thousands of lives are being cut off from the earth and millions of property are being destroyed. Labor is depressed, a spirit of unrest pervades every department of life. Truly all things are in commotion. May we be faithful to the great work intrusted to our care, that we may find rest and peace with the redeemed in Christ. Soliciting the prayers of all Saints,

Your brother in the love of truth,

JOHN GILBERT.

ADELPHI, Polk Co., Iowa,

Dear Herald:—To-day I am sad and lonely for him who was dearer to me than life. Although I am left with two little children to mourn his loss, I do not feel discouraged in the work. Of late the Saints here seem to be awakening to the sense of their duty. We do not have regular preaching here. Bro. Gordon Deuel was with us a few days after conference, and baptized four; and Bro. White, of Edenville, was here a few weeks ago, and one more was added. I ask the prayers of all the Saints, that I may be faithful to the end, and bring up my children to praise God's holy name.

Your sister,

M. J. STUART.

SHERMAN CITY, Kansas,

March 4th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—At the last conference in Spring River District, I was ordained an Elder, and have since that time been advocating the gospel wherever I have the opportunity, and have been blest in so doing. A church member told me that I need not try to preach to the people here, as they were so down on us that they would not come out and hear; but they do come and give good attention. I ask a part in the faith and prayers of the Saints, that God will bless me in my effort for truth. If some traveling Elder can come this way, I would be glad.

Yours in bonds,

CHARLES RYAN.

MOSELLE, Mo., March 6th, 1884.

Editor Herald:—Did Elder John C. Foss, in his debate with Elder Smith, in Nodaway county, Missouri, in denying the existence of the Kingdom of Christ on earth, represent the doctrine of Church, or was it simply a chimera of his brain? If it is the doctrine of the Church, I have been forty-five years in ignorance.

Yours for truth,

B. V. SPRINGER.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

March 7th.—Osman Digma refuses to negotiate with Gen. Graham. The British leader, therefore, is advancing for another battle. Two Chiefs of the Amara tribe, with 120 men and forty camels, have arrived at Suakin. They report that the losses of the rebels at Teb amounted to 6,000 killed and wounded. Gen. Gordon has requested that a first installment of 600 Indian troops be dispatched to form the nucleus of an army at Khartoum. Mahmoud Ali, the leading Sheik, who has been regarded as friendly to the English, has stopped Admiral Hewett's proclamation to the tribes on the ground that if pardon is offered before the rebels ask it more trouble will certainly follow. A deputation from several of the tribes which fought against the British at Teb is now at Suakin. They report that the tribes under Osman Digma waver in their allegiance as the news of the British victory becomes more widely known. The Kabbabish tribe has arrested El Mahdi's march to Khartoum, and is being joined by other tribes. Osman Digma's troops are determined to fight to the last. Rebel sentries are posted upon all the hills to signal the British advance.

The Parnellites, irritated at the refusal of the Government to reopen the Irish land question, intended to begin forthwith a great agitation in Ireland, and make strong appeals to the Irish to demand the amendment of the Land act. The Parnellites will open subscriptions to a special fund for agitation purposes. Michael Davitt's services will be secured. A conference of the leaders will be held at Easter to discuss the programme.

The Clan-na-Gael has begun operations at Paris, France. A man who says he is an Irish-American, and who closely resembles the informer McDermott, was brutally assaulted by four men in the Place du Trome early this morning. The victim's voice showed the assailant had mistaken their man, but they would nevertheless have killed him if he had refused to promise not to inform the police.

The Italian Embassadors are instructed to confer with the Powers in regard to the proposed European demand upon the United States Government to legislate against dynamiters.

A quantity of dynamite and nitro-glycerine was discovered in a house in Favoriten, a suburb of Vienna, Aus., opposite the mansion of Baron Rothschild. The supposition is that it was to destroy the mansion.

Gen. Millot, commander of the French land forces, with his staff, has crossed from Hanoi to the right bank of the Red River, and is advancing along the right bank of the canal, near the rapids, to effect a junction with Gen. Negrier, who has left Haidzuong for Bacninh. Another column is advancing to the north, so as to cut off the retreat of the Chinese. Fighting at Bacninh is imminent. Measures are being taken to block the delta and suppress piracy.

At the Foreign Consulate in Jacmel, Hayti, 280 refugees await the President's decision of execution or pardon. In a riot in Providence-town, Trinidad, the police fired, killed two rioters and wounded several.

Twenty-seven thousand dollars were stolen last Saturday afternoon from the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Cashier's office at the corner of Franklin and Adam street, Chicago.

There are icebergs in Lake Michigan said by the sailors to be from twenty to thirty feet high.

A district circular in shape of a diameter of fifty miles, with its center somewhere in Greenwood and other counties, in Southeastern Kansas, is affected by the foot and mouth disease. Gov. Glick, a prominent stock-raiser, is giving exclusive official attention to the matter, and believes that the disease can be stamped out with the expenditure of $5,000. The locality is already closely quarantined. This is the first outbreak of this cattle-pest in America. The disease generally leaves the animal without feet. Although few cases in themselves fatal are recorded, the peculiar effects of the contagion render the slaughter of the victim necessary in nearly all instances.

The reports that Manitoba's grievances had been adjusted prove to be false. She grows daily more rebellious. Coupled with this firmer stand comes the information from Ottawa that the Premier ridicules the demands of the disaffected provincials, and declares that a few dollars would stop all their complaints.

March 8th.—Admiral Hewett will go to Mas-sowah to arrange a treaty with King John, who agrees through his agent to place Abyssinia under an English protectorate. The latest advices received from Gen. Graham at Suakin report that the forces under Osman Digma are breaking up. The Sheikhs, after last night's conference with Osman, advised him to go to Suakin and meet Admiral Hewett and Baker Pasha. It is probable that there will be a conference tomorrow. It seems well assured now that there will be no further battle, as the tribes are dispersing. Gen. Gordon has telegraphed to the Government asking for a detachment of Indian Moslem troops to serve as a nucleus for a Soudanese army. With not more than 500 men from the Indian service as a kernel, he says he can rally a Soudanese force of 10,000. Gen. Graham has been ordered not to advance unless he is sure of finding the enemy. Graham's cavalry will reconnoiter tonight. Osman Digma is urging his followers to fight, assuring them that success is certain. He will watch from afar as they do battle, invoking the blessing of Allah. Gen. Gordon recommends as immediate attack upon Osman Digma. A messenger from the enemy's camp reports that despite Osman's exhortations his followers are demoralized. The situation appears favorable for negotiations. Consul Baker has telegraphed the British Minister at Cairo offering to go to Osman's camp and bring him to terms. He believes the tribes will not only conclude a treaty of peace but will undertake to keep the road to Berber open. Osman Digma is preaching a holy war. Mohammed, he urges, failed at first, but in the end was triumphant. Osman will take no part personally in future battles.

An Anarchist named Morphy has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment and fined 5,000 francs for advocating assassination in Socialist newspapers in Paris, France.

The police are watching the movements of eighty-three persons in France suspected of belonging to the dynamite party. The brother of Joseph Brady, the Phenix Park assassin, is living in the Quartier Latin, Paris.

A dynamite plot has been discovered at Pesth, Hungary. The police seized several packages of explosives forwarded by anarchists through the parcels-post.

The murder of Col. Sudeikin has so thoroughly frightened the masses of Russia, that it is difficult to obtain candidates for the police. Gen. Greaser has received a fifteenth letter threatening him with death.

The final spike of a continuous line of railroad between the City of Mexico and the Rio Grande, was driven at a town in the state of Zacatecas in the presence of a number of distinguished people.

March 9th.—The Irish invincibles have not a monopoly of dynamite operations. It is reported that the Comte de Paris was sought to be assassinated last week by means of an infernal machine operated by clockwork, which was done up in a railway package and directed to him. The parcel was found at railway office in Lyons and examined. Had it reached its destination the domestics of the Count would have been the sufferers, as he was at Cannes. Another dynamite machine exploded in the Lyons Custom-House yesterday, killing an official.

The Czar and Emperor William will meet at Darmstadt on the occasion of the marriage of the Duke Sergius to the Princess Elizabeth of Hesse in June, and will talk over political matters. Bismarck, De Giers, and Prince Orloff, the Russian Minister at Berlin, will be present. It has not yet been decided whether or not Francis Joseph of Austria will be invited.

Osman Digma, the Mahdi's lieutenant, refuses to surrender to Gen. Graham, and the latter telegraphs that he will advance to give him battle tomorrow morning. English advices represent the Arab force as badly demoralized. The tribes refuse to fight, and there are many desertions. Gen. Graham appears to be hampered by the instructions of the British Government that he must not advance beyond Tamanieb. Gen. Stephenson urges that he be permitted to pursue as far as Sinkat, but Sir Evelyn Baring, at Cairo, refuses to accede to this.

Four German Jews, acquitted at Konitz, Prussia, of the charge of setting fire to a synagogue at Neustettin, have been severely maltreated by the populace of the latter place. One of them was nearly killed by a mob. The majority of the Jewish shops and houses in Neustettin were destroyed. The police were powerless to prevent the outrages.

Earl Granville has informed Turkey that it will not now be permitted to interfere in Egyptian troubles, and that its interference would be highly objectionable to the Egyptians.

The Peruvians are anxious for peace and urge on Pierola the duty of signing the treaty with Chili.

March 10.—The French Government has resolved to adopt the most energetic measures against the Bonapartist Pretender.

An advanced Irish Nationalist has declared that the Nationalists are annoyed, but in no way discouraged, at the failure of dynamite attempts. They are determined to persevere. He predicted a long series of explosives in England in the immediate future. Mechanism has been invented which renders explosion certain and obviates the use of clock-work. At a recent meeting of the Invincibles at Paris, France, lots were drawn for men to accomplish the murder of McDermott. This resulted in the selection of four men. It was decided to seek McDermott in the other capitals of Europe, if he is not found in Paris. Tynan, the supposed notorious "No. 1," has been written to and is expected in Paris early in the summer, when he will assume entire direction of operations.

Seventy picked detectives have been collected in London and instructed in the system of espionage regarding the dynamiters.

The Foreign Office has sent dispatches to the British Minister at Washington in regard to dynamite outrages. It is supposed they are intended as a basis for overtures with the United States Government, but no communication on the subject of any kind has been yet received by Minister Lowell.

The murder of a policeman at Grunn, the Capital of Moravia, is announced. It is believed to be the work of Anarchists. The police of Vienna and Pesth are busy unvailing an extensive Anarchist plot. There was a great meeting of Nihilists and Socialists to-day, at Geneva, Switzerland, ostensibly to express sympathy with the refugees and raise funds to carry out their movement. The chief orator, a man named Klopfen, in his speech said Socialism could not be stopped; that neither priests nor nobles could kill it; but that it would march on until it encircled the world.

A new political party has been formed in Germany, by a union of the Secessionists and Progressists.

The treaty of peace with Chili has been ratified by the Constituent Assembly of Peru.

March 11.—The combined advance of the French upon Bacninh has hitherto met with little opposition. Gen. Millot's manœuvre in abandoning the direct road from Hanoi to Bacninh was entirely unexpected, and is likely to disconcert the enemy. All the efforts of the Chinese had been directed to fortifying the works along the direct road, where they dug entrenchments, erected redoubts, and filled the villages with troops. Gen. Millot, starting from the Seven Pagodas, turns off along the Canal des Rapides, the banks of which were clear. Then he heliographed to Gen. Negrier to advance from Haidzuong and join him on the canal. Thence both will clear the river of the barriers which prevent the gunboats from co-operating. Then Gen. Millot will invest Bacninh on the east and south, while Gen. Negrier will cut off the retreat of the Chinese. Both columns are provided with pontoons and all scientific resources.

Gen. Millot opened a cannonade upon Bacninh Monday. At Canton there are all the signs of a prolonged war, but no hostility to foreigners.

is however, manifested. Tonquin advises report that the French column advancing upon Bacninh from Haid Zuong has had a successful engagement with the enemy.

Firing has begun at Zariba. Gen. Graham, Col. Stewart, and the whole force have gone thither, including the guard detailed for the forts at Suakin, which consisted of 730 British and 600 Egyptian troops. The Highlanders working on the entrenched fort at Zariba were attacked by Osman Digma's advance at six last evening. Only 422 marines now defend the forts at Suakin. Scouts from the direction of Tamanieb report that Osman, with 7,000 men, is moving toward Zariba in hope of destroying the British stores of water in a series of night attacks. Osman retains as adherents the great tribe of Huddridowas, whose Sheikh urged that night assaults were the best kind of strategy against England's arms of precision. The firing at Zariba was owing to the attempt of 300 rebels to cut off the British convoy. The British cavalry quickly dispersed the rebels. A number of Egyptian camel-drivers promptly bolted during the attack. The battle raged two and a half hours. The rebel loss is estimated at 4,000 killed and 6,000 wounded.

Among the many Nihilists recently arrested at St. Petersburg, Russia, are the author Kreiwenko, a high officer of the Ministry of Ways and Communications, and five students.

The yellow fever is raging at Tehuantepec City, Mexico. John Myers, an American railroad contractor, is among the dead this morning. People are leaving the city.

By a vote of 144 to 50 the bill extending the suffrage to women was defeated in the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

By a vote of 26 to 24 the Iowa Senate passed the bill for the submission of a constitutional amendment in favor of woman suffrage to a vote of the people. It is thought the bill will not pass the House.

Gov. Glick, of Kansas, has issued a proclamation calling an extraordinary session of the Legislature of that State beginning Tuesday, March, 18, for the purpose of adopting such measures as may be deemed most effectual in checking the foot-and-mouth disease.

The deaths are announced of Henry A. Tilden, brother of Samuel J. Tilden, at New Lebanon, N. Y., in his 63d year, and of Baroness Lionel de Rothschild at London, England.

A box addressed to the Comte de Paris, and seized in Lyons, contained dynamite sufficient to kill many persons.

Two German Anarchists have been arrested at Fribourg.

The foot and mouth disease is spreading in Kansas.

The Mexican Treaty has been ratified by the Senate of the United States.

March 12.—A Socialistic propaganda is being urged in the mining districts of Bohemia by means of letters and circulars. A dynamite explosion occurred in a hotel at Fulham, England, yesterday. One man was killed. It is attributed to Fenians.

A correspondent of the London Times at Alexandria, Egypt, takes a gloomy view of the situation at Khartoum. He denounces the policy of the British Government, and says if Gen. Gordon is not to be left to his fate English or Indian troops must be sent to the relief of Khartoum. The British have taken a position one mile from the rebel camp. An attack will be made at daybreak with seven Gatling guns. The cavalry will probably fight dismounted. Hidden in the trenches and pits are hordes of rebels. British scouts are frequently fired upon.

Inspector Moser has returned to London from Paris. He failed to find evidence that the Fenians of Paris make dynamite or were implicated in the London explosion. He believes the nine men on board the steamer Danube brought the dynamite to London. These men the police are now tracking. Socialist documents having been circulated among the coal districts of Bohemia. Suspicious letters and parcels arriving by post from America, England, and Switzerland are subject to careful examination by the authorities. The two German Anarchists arrested yesterday at Fribourg, Switzerland, were named Otter and Falk. The arrest was instigated by the Vienna police.

Direct advices from Pultawa, Russia, state that all Jews are expelled who can not show that they possess landed property, however small. Many have already been forced to cross the Austrian frontier. A petition addressed to the Minister, Count Tolstoi, begging for a postponement to enable the Jews to purchase land, remained unanswered. The Governor is deaf to expostulations, and carries out his orders without mercy.

The Irish Justices, in opening the assizes, agree that there has been a gratifying diminution of crime.

Peace between Chili and Peru has been definitely arranged. The treaty has been ratified by the representative bodies of the two countries.

The foot-and-mouth disease is reported to have broken out near Effingham, Ill., among the cattle of a farmer named Charles Dubrock. It is feared that the distemper is not confined to that point.

March 13.—Bacninh has been captured by the French forces. The Chinese garrison made but a feeble resistance and fled in all direction. The French loss was seventy. The loss of the Celestials was quite heavy.

The forces under Gen. Graham last evening took a position one mile from the rebel camp. The rebels opened fire on the British forces at one o'clock this morning. The British at once formed to repel the charge, but no attack came. The men were thereupon ordered to lie down again. The fire of the rebels continued all night, but the British did not reply. One officer and two men were wounded and one man killed.

Fighting began at daybreak. The infantry and artillery completely routed the enemy from their pits and trenches. The battle had not lasted for more than half an hour when victory for the British was made certain. A dispatch from Gen. Graham, dated Osman Digma's Camp, March 13, 11:40 a. m., says: "The camp of the enemy has been taken after hard fighting since eight o'clock this morning. Over seventy British were killed and one hundred wounded."

Latter dispatches say the bivouac last night was exceedingly unpleasant. The Arabs kept up a persistent fusilade till just before day-break. The bright moonlight rendered objects distinctly visible at a long distance, but prevented the enemy attempting a sudden onset. The rebels directed their fire especially towards the hospital wagons, which were conspicuous in the moonlight. The surgeons and Gen. Graham's staff officers had many narrow escapes. At sunrise a Gar-diner gun and a nine pounder were turned against the rebels who were within 1,300 hundred yards of the British position and afforded a most excellent target. The Arabs were soon compelled to retire to their main position near the Tamai wells. Col. Stewart's cavalry arrived at half-past six, and took their position on the British left, so as to turn the enemy's right. The loss of Osman Digma's forces in this morning's engagement was 2,400 men. Gen. Graham has taken up his quarters for the present in the camp from which Osman Digma and the rebel hosts were driven. The enemy fought most stubbornly. The battle was much heavier than in the engagement at Teb. The sailors, the Black Watch Regiment, and the York and Lancaster Regiments suffered the heaviest losses.

The British forces advanced in two brigades, which were thrown into the form of squares. A series of encounters followed. Soon after leaving Sariba the great body of the rebels charged the leading square piercing it in many places. The British sailors inside the square immediately closed up, and rebels were repulsed with great slaughter. The advance was again resumed, when immense hordes rushed upon the British from both sides. A terrible struggle ensued. The Arabs fought with the greatest pluck and bravado, but nearly all were killed. The Second Brigade met with an obstinate resistance, and was at one time repulsed. The Gatling and Gardner guns fell into the hands of the rebels, and were only recovered after a severe fight, when the British likewise gained possession of the rebel camp. The Hussars made a forward movement and cut off the rebels' retreat to Sinkat. It is hoped to save the families of the massacred garrison.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

In the ordinary French budget for 1885 the revenue and expenditure estimates nearly balance. The extraordinary budget, amounting to 208,000,000 francs, will be covered by short-time treasury bonds.

The British imports for February decreased, compared with February of last year, £289,000, and the exports increased £627,000.

An increase in the weekly number of failures is reported by the commercial agencies. The total for the United States and Canada is 328.

Nearly $4,000,000 in gold went out of the country this week.

The actual condition of France may be best illustrated by a comparative statement. The estimated revenue of Great Britain, with a population of 36,000,000 for the present year is £84,000,000 or $420,000,000. Deducting £8,000,000, or $40,000,000, placed in the sinking fund for payment on the debt, there is left for all expenses $380,000,000. And Great Britain is not an economical country, for large sums of money are squandered without productive results upon the members of the royal family, unnecessary officeholders and sinecures of all descriptions. The expenses of the United States, with 56,000,000 people, for 1883, were $265,408,137, and the income $398,287,000, leaving a surplus of $132,879,000 to be applied to the debt. How is it with France? She has a population of less than 38,000,000, hardly 2,000,000 larger than Great Britain, almost 20,000,000 less than this country, and yet her national expense last year were $605,000,000, well nigh twice as large as those of Great Britain, and not far from three times as as large as those of the United States, leaving her a deficit of 73,000,000 francs, or $14,600,000, to be provided for by extra taxation in a country already loaded down, not only with general taxes, but with a scheme of local taxation that allows nothing to escape the drag-nets of the municipality and the commune.

The French shareholders of the Suez Canal Company protest strongly against the convention of De Lesseps with the English shipowners. The angers De Lesseps, who threatens that he will resign the management of the company if the convention is rejected, as he will consider such a rejection a vote of censure.

Since the 1st of July 256,552,750 postal cards have been issued from the Post Office Department at Washington, against 260,226,250 issued during the corresponding period of last year. Before July there had been a gradual increase averaging 14 per cent per year. The decrease since that time has been due to the introduction of the two-cent letter postage.

An experienced miner who arrived at Miles City, Mont., this week, from the Coeur d'Alene district reports the presence of several thousand adventurous prospectors in that region waiting for the snow to disappear to commence operations. The snow is over three feet in depth on the level ground at present, and it is not likely that all will have disappeared sooner than the middle of May, by which time it is thought 40,000 persons will have arrived in the neighborhood.

The commercial situation is very critical in Cuba. The low prices of sugar, the tightness of the money market, and the general distrust are accelerating a crisis that may involve all branches of business. At Sagua Rodriguez & Co., sugar exporters, have failed with liabilities exceeding $2,000,000. At Cardenas Miyares & Co., banking and commission merchants, also engaged in sugar exporting, have suspended, being heavily involved in the failure of Rodriguez. McKellar, Luling & Co., are in difficulties of long standing. The sugar market is depressed by the scarcity of sugar exporters, so many of whom have failed during the last few years. One or two banks in Havana are regarded with distrust.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British grain trade says: "Fine qualities of white wheat are firm; in some provinces 6d@1s is dearer. Flour is dull. The foreign wheat trade is rather worse, owing to more pressure to sell. The few California cargoes off coast were taken at an advance of about 6d. Sixteen cargoes have arrived, and seven were sold, one withdrawn, and nine remained, including eight No. 1 Californian. Sales of English wheat for the week 54,505 quarters at 37s 7d per quarter, against 47,497 quarters at 42s 6d the corresponding week last year.

The trade of the United States with Mexico has been growing rapidly in the last eight years. In 1874 we exported to that country but $5,000,000; last year our exports were $16,587,000. Mexico's exports to this country in the same time have risen from $4,346,000 to $8,177,000.

Cowan & Co., merchants of Glasgow, have failed. Liabilities, £100,000.

The Coeur d'Alene mines, which have become so noted in the last few months, are located about thirty-five miles south of Thompson's Falls, a young and thriving town, on the Northern Pacific Railway, and about 200 miles west of Helena.

There are now published in the United Kingdom of Great Britain 2,105 newspapers, of which England has 1,578, Wales 80, Scotland 181, Ireland 156, and the Isles 20. London alone has 401. In the year 1846 the total of newspapers for the United Kingdom was only 551, of which 14 were dailies. The daily newspapers now number 179. The number of magazines published in the United Kingdom is 1,260.

The deficit in the indirect taxes in France for January and February amounts to 11,500,000 francs.

The shareholders of the Suez Canal Company have ratified the convention of D. Lesseps and the English shipowners.

Reports from various points in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa, and Kansas, indicate that the winter wheat crop is in good average condition. The sudden thaw has affected it detrimentally, but, generally speaking, the wheat farmers throughout the States named are hopeful.

Owing to the competition of the Minnesota and Illinois millers in the Canadian markets, it is reported that the flour trade of Montreal, Toronto, and other cities of the Dominion is badly demoralized. The Canadian millers are therefore demanding an increase in the duty on flour or a reduction of the duty on wheat. The Dominion bakers say that the Canadian wheat is of a quality so poor that the flour made from it has to be mixed with American brands to make loaves of average quality. Agents for Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, and even St. Louis houses are picking up a considerable trade across the line, much to the annoyance of Canadian millers and wheat-growers.

At a meeting of the Presidents of the leading Eastern roads the following freight-rates between New York and Chicago were agreed on: Seventh class (provisions), 25 cents per 100 lbs.; eighth class (flour and grain), 20 cents; ninth class (bulk meats), 30 cents; live hogs (to Boston and New York), 25 cents. This is a reduction of ten cents all round. It is announced that the utmost harmony prevails between the trunk-lines, and that the pool arrangements are in no way threatened. The meeting was unanimous, and there is little doubt that the new rates will be maintained.

A notice posted in the carding and spinning rooms of the Barnaby Mill, Fall River, Mass., states that a reduction will be made March 17th. The carders will strike if the reduction is over 10 per cent. Picker bosses are paid $1.25 per day; in other mills the pay is $1.50. The manager of the Halifax cotton-factory has notified operatives that after Monday, March 17th, they will have only forty-five hours' work a week, instead of sixty, as heretofore. The Excelsior Stove-Works of Quincy, Illinois, will resume at the reduced rates agreed upon by the employers of molders in Quincy—15 per cent off from the board prices.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

March 7.—Loss by fire near Madison, Wis., $3,000. Near Davenport, Ia., $4,000. Richmond, Ind., $6,000. Wooster, O., incendiary, $4,000.

Many openings are being made in the levee about New Orleans, and grave fears are entertained that the water will yet do much damage in that vicinity.

March 8.—A fine growing crop of wheat in the vicinity of Cairo, Ill., has been ruined by the floods. Augusta, Ky., said to have been the most beautiful little town in the Ohio Valley, is now one of the most desolate. Over one hundred houses have gone off their foundations, and and over five hundred people are homeless.

March 9.—The entire business portion of Cassville, W. Va., was destroyed by fire; loss $12,000.

There is a serious break in the Mississippi levee above New Orleans. The waters are pouring through in torrents, and all efforts to mend it have thus far proved unavailing. Small breaks have appeared at other points. The Tennessee River at Chattanooga has overflowed and railroad traffic in that vicinity is interrupted.

The Santa Clara Valley for a distance of eighteen miles is a vast lake. The damage to property is fully half a million. It is still raining.

Five men employed in the construction of a railroad in Pyle Canon, Union County, Oreg., were caught under a mass of earth and rock Saturday and instantly killed.

A terrible accident occurred at Alta, near Salt Lake City, Friday. A snow-slide swept away the machinery of the Emma Mine at that place, causing the death of eleven men and two women.

March 10.—Loss by fire at Pittsburg, Kas., $30,000. Vandalia, Mo., $20,000. Battle Creek, Mich. $5,000. Cincinnati, O., $20,000. Toronto Ont., $3,000.

A schooner was wrecked last night at Wick, Scotland, and six of her crew were drowned.

March 11.—Loss by fire at St. Vincent, Minn., $14,000. Davenport, Ia., $5,000. Near Lincoln, Ill., $3,500. Utica, N. Y., $30,000. Oneil, Neb., $9,000.

A cyclone swept over the country in the vicinity of Starkville, Miss., yesterday. Many buildings were blown down, and one person injured. Loss $12,000.

The severest blizzard of the season is reported to be raging in Minnesota and Dakota. The snowfall is very heavy. Railroad travel is much interrupted.

March 12.—Allegan, Mich., was swept by flames, leaving the town in a deplorable condition. Loss $500,000. Loss by fire at Grand Rapids, Mich., $150,000. Chicago, Ill., $2,700. Galena, Ill., $4,500. Worcester, Mass., wool store, $40,000. On a boat at Savannah, Ga., $98,000. East St. Louis, $200,000.

The Canadian Pacific train which left Ottawa Saturday for Montreal did not reach that city until to day. The track at some points was covered with twenty feet of snow.

March 13.—Ferdinand Schueffler and William Denooyer were burned to death in the fire at Grand Rapids, Mich., yesterday. They were cut off by the flames in the sixth story of a carpet-sweeper factory.

About one o'clock this morning one of the most appalling mine disasters on record occurred near Pocahontas, Tazewell County, Virginia. At the hour mentioned a gas explosion took place in Laurel-Creek Mine at that point, where 150 men were employed. Every man of them was instantly killed, and the engines, cars and machinery were shattered into atoms. The disaster is without doubt attributable to the insufficient character of the machinery for conveying off the noxious gases. Most of the victims of the awful calamity were fathers of large families. Eight bodies have been recovered, and the mine is on fire.

CHARITY.

Composed by Sr. Carrie A. Thomas, of Lamoni, Iowa, in her last sickness.

Since lying sick upon my bed,
And long before, I've heard things said,
Which, some how, make one feel so bad.
I wish to tell the thoughts I've had.

First, it is in the Scriptures said,
That if by Charity we're led,
We are a light; for this is love
Sent down upon us from above.

Now hatred is the opposite,
And comes right from the infernal pit.
Bear this in mind, then you may see,
Why love and hatred ne'er agree.

But Charity, or love, is this:
When injured, just return a kiss.
In other words, ('tis hard to learn).
But do some good deed in return.

Yes; Charity will suffer long;
Will meekly bear whatever wrong.
A husband, wife, a saint, a friend,
In human weakness may extend.

E'en more; an enemy may be Subdued by kindness, perfectly;
And afterwards, will oft remain
The firmest friend one can obtain.

Then it is so sad to see,
Brethren and neighbors disagree.
If enemies can be subdued,
Friends should avoid all fuss or feud.

But how can neighbors live quite close,
Say, both within one yard, or house;
And ne'er each other's failings mind,
Or have a cause for thoughts unkind?

Why 'tis an easy matter quite,
If love be there, all will be right.
Such love, I mean, so full and free,
As that shown forth on Calvary.

That one should die that all might live,
And all his murderers forgive;
Such love, a neighbor's wrongs would bear,
And for his welfare kindly care.

But selfish love, if love it be,
One may discern quite easily.
'Tis talk and tattle, and back-bite,
While self does nothing else but right.

A brother's fault told o'er and o'er,
As it may chance, from door to door;
Will often change, and grow so fast,
That it becomes a crime at last.

While bitter hate will thrive, and fill
The heart of Him who bears the ill.
'Till that good Spirit once our guide,
Is grieved, and forced to stay outside.

Here my heart sickens; O beware,
And never an evil tiding bear.
Don't even think an evil thought,
For this is Charity well wrought.

Some things are writ' of olden time,
Which do indeed appear sublime,
That faith should be so great and strong,
A mountain could be moved along.

Or one might be so good and meek,
That he in angel tongues could speak;
Or one might live so good and right,
All myst'ries he could bring to light.

E'en more, to feed the poor below,
All earthly goods one might bestow;
And then at last despised and spurned,
Give his poor body to be burned.

Sure those who may to this attain,
The great reward will truly gain,

And reach Eternal bliss. O, no,
Apostle Paul does not say say so;
But contrary, his words declare,
Save Charity, or love, is there.
He said should he all this pass through,
And fail to love as he should do.
I'm nothing. Yes; these words are strange;
Yet nothing can this edict change.—
Only a tinkling cymbal he,
Who claims a faithful saint to be;
But can not bear a brother's wrong,
Or think no evil all day long.

Well; I still am very weak,
And can not all my feelings speak;
But hope you will my rhymes excuse,
And not my plain remarks refuse.
For if I still am spared alive,
For this one thing I mean to strive:—
From hatred I will ever flee.
Oh! may the Lord my helper be,
And envy, malice, jealousy,
With these continued war shall be,
'Till by the grace of God above,
My heart becomes a well of love.
O, may we all together strive,
And overcome while yet alive.

THE AMERICAN "ANTIQUARIAN" OF JANUARY, 1884.

A BRIEF review of the last number of this journal will show to the readers of the Herald the tendency of advanced thought in departments of knowledge connected with their faith. The first article is "Native Races of Columbia," and contains the following facts:

"To this fair (at Zorocota) resorted the Northern Chibcha, the Azatac Chipatac and the industrious, skillful and intelligent Guane, the latter as already stated in a former paper, being noted for their fine forms and very light color, notwithstanding their territory was in the hot country."

The most interesting part of this statement is the last clause, for climate is supposed to be the principal cause of differences of color between races. Some of the tribes of British Columbia are fair, with brown eyes and fine features and flaxy hair. There are newspaper reports of a white tribe of Indians in Southern Sonora. And Bancroft and Plongeon report a fierce white tribe in the unexplored regions of Central America. The Moquis women are fair, because they work in doors. Ruling families among Indians are lighter colored. Intelligence improves the complexion. Civilization with faith and refinement will certainly improve (if not restore the original) complexion of the children of Joseph, but they were half Egyptian, and hence dark colored at the first.

In the next paragraph mention is made of immense blocks of undressed marble, at Porras, which a chief, in former times, collected to build a temple with. Columns seen in Lieva were supposed to be for the same service; but the Bulletin of "the Geographical Society of Paris for 1847, shows that these columns were in Situ, forming part of a vast edifice, the object of which is unknown." These columns are doubtless a part of the system of very ancient ruins found in all the northern states of South America, and traceable through the Isthmus of Darien into Central America. They are not only the oldest but grandest and most skillfully planned of any on the Western Continent. They conflict with the latest verdict of advanced science, that civilization is an evolution and preceded, always and everywhere, by barbarism. They include what Bourbourg calls the Cyclopean ruins of Central America—a class distinct from those generally known to abound there; the Cyclopean ruins of Titicaca, Peru; the great roads of Peru, repaired (but not built) by the Incas; and possibly, the gold, copper and stone vestiges found underneath the living forest in the province of Esmareldas, and those found below high-tide mark in a bed of marine sediment on the coast of Ecuador; the mounds of Marietta, O., containing the rust of iron implements, and the stone mound of Newark, O., containing Hebrew inscriptions. The oldest age in America recognized by scientists is the Bronze or Copper Age; but before it, and before the time of Votan's empire, in Central America, and before that of the Toltecs in Mexico, was an Iron Age. The ancient dialects of Peru all have a name for iron; the name surely implies the substance, and the Cyclopean architecture implies the necessity of iron implements. Archæology, in its present stage, is not reliable. The mystery of the continent has not been guessed, and the work must all be gone over again with a view to discriminate between the ancient and the medieval ruins.

In the above category might be placed the hieroglyphics in Bolivia on a mountain that has, since the inscriptions were made, been rent asunder by a stupendous convulsion, and also the old temple near La Paz that commemorates the flood.

The next paragraph introduces the Culture Hero of the Chibcha:

"This ancient came from the east, had a long beard, bound up by a band. He wore a tunic without collar or vestment, to which was added a mantle, &c. . . The Chibcha were at the time, according to their own tradition, in the lowest state of barbarism; . . . were without any knowledge of a future life, nor had they any form of government for the present. The civilizer began his preaching at Boza. . . From Boza he passed to Menquita, Fontibon, and soon after to Cota. At the latter place the concourse became so great that it became necessary to construct a ditch around a small hill that he might not be pressed upon. . . He not only taught them to spin and to weave cotton mantles, &c., but to dye and paint them in divers colors. He subsequently passed toward the north and thence down to the country of the Guane, where he found a people most apt in understanding his teaching. He not only taught by precept, but by example, and his life during the long time he spent in civilizing these peoples was in all respects pure, and a model of virtue. Ultimately he disappeared in Sogamosa, leaving as heretofore stated, a successor, who should continue his teachings and be a guardian of the lands and regulations which had been established by general consent, solely by the force of persuasion and example. . . Nearly all the early historians agree that one so pure and exemplary could be none other than Saint Thomas or Saint Bartholomew, who according to tradition, were sent eastward to preach the gospel of Christ, and who are by some, believed to have passed to this continent."

Traditions with this explanation are perpetuated in various parts of South America, Central America and Mexico. The hero is generally described as a bearded white man, who came suddenly, taught and instituted an exalted system of faith and morals, and then disappeared. The Mexican tradition of Quetzalcoatl agrees so nearly with the history of Christ that it can only be explained as a vague relic of their ancient faith.

Quetzalcoatl, when he had concluded his mission, and passed on to the shores of the Mexican gulf, took leave of his followers, promising that he and his descendants would revisit them hereafter, and then, entering his wizard skiff, made of serpents' skins, embarks on the great ocean for the fabled land of Tlapalan. He was said to have been tall in stature, with a white skin, long dark hair, and a flowing beard. The Mexicans were expecting his return when Cortez came, and they mistook Cortez for him at first, and they were afraid to resist him; and they were finally overcome more by their superstition than by the Spanish arms. Bochica was the hero of Columbia, and enacted a part similar to that of those already described as did Gucumatz, in Guatemala, and Wexepicocha in Oajaca and Zama and Cuculcan in Ucatan, and Votan in Chiapas. Chili had her mysterious apostle, and the people of Brazil paid similar honors to Sume and Paye-Syme.

"Besides these are numerous vague traditions of settlements or nations of white men, who lived apart from the other people of the country, and were possessed of an advanced civilization."

It is said of Quetzalcoatl, that he wore a mantle marked with crosses. All these heroes were white, and taught love and every high virtue, as well as the useful arts. They must have taught and instituted those beliefs and rites peculiar to Christianity, which all writers assert were a part of the religious systems of these peoples at the time of the conquest. Lord Kingsborough maintains that the Mexicans were Jews. They practiced infant baptism for remission of sins, had a ceremony like the sacrament of the Lord's supper, and held many Jewish traditions. There are thousands of facts and considerations, like these I have given, that go to prove that these southern nations had once been Christians, and during the lapse of a millennium of years of steady decline, had preserved but dim traces of their former state. The myths of the old world have generally been traced back to some great facts of which they were projections, like shadows cast out across the dark channel of time. So will these myths of America be traced back to their origin in the great experiences of the past.

The second article in the Magazine is devoted to the Emblematic Mounds of Wisconsin:

"They are for the most part situated on high points of land . . . some of them may have been for burial places, the effigies representing persons found in the mounds . . . should be considered a kind of picture writing. . . . The totems were built into the soil and made expressive of the names of clans. . . . Some were signal stations, some military defenses; others were game-drives."

Pidgeon thought they commemorated treaties, conquest, boundaries, accession of chiefs, &c. They are barbarous and distinct from all other mounds.

Article four is "Abraham's Offering of Isaac," the main thought of which is that in Ur, where Abraham was reared, the offering of the first born to the God of the Sun, was the supreme test of faithfulness; and the act was the result of Pagan training on a devout and earnest nature.

Fifth, under the head of "Correspondence" is given an account of the discovery of copper implements in New York. The copper spear heads found in Onondaga county have a sharp, contracted tang; those found at Plattsburg have broad or tapering tangs; this denotes local fashioning. The copper celts of Onondaga are wrought—not cast. A copper knife from Lake Champlain is $2\frac{1}{2} \times 1\frac{1}{2}$ inches. These copper spears are like those found in Vermont and about 4 inches long; another, differing greatly, is from Seneca river. Those resembling this last, are from Onondaga county. One gouge, reported, is $11\frac{1}{2} \times 1\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Several others not so long are compared with specimens in the Smithsonian collection, also several celts. "All are of native copper with striated, granulated and hammered surfaces."

Other articles described of brass and copper are modern Indian relics. Formerly copper implements found in New York were sold as old copper to the smiths, and thus perished. Reference is made to a "skeleton in armor," locality, Fall River. Altogether this is a meager exhibit compared with the accounts of wagon loads of iron implements found in his neighborhood in Western New York, with which B. Young, Sen., used to proselyte unsuspecting and enthusiastic pilgrims. The fact that the French once had forts and missions in Onondaga county, explains some things that an ambitious man would not have time to enquire into. It is a strange and significant fact that the migrations of the ancient inhabitants of America reached their limit in Western New York. In this number of the Antiquarian is notice of a book on "The Mounds of the Mississippi Valley," by Lucian Carr, in favor of the view that the mounds were built by the tribes found in the possession of the countries where they exist. The editor reviewing the book, says:

"Mr. Carr certainly conveys to his readers an erroneous impression as to Mr. Squire's views. It is true that able investigator modified his views in reaching the conclusion that the earth works of Western New York were of Iroquois origin. But Mr. Carr should have added that the study of these remains convinced Mr. Squire, all the more firmly, that the great mounds of Ohio, &c., proceeded from a totally different people, and one in a decidedly higher state of culture."

The exact line of demarkation between the ancient and modern civilization has not yet been drawn. We know from Champlain, that when yet unvisited by white men, the Indians of the Lake Superior region not only mined for copper, but melted it into sheets, and hammered it into shape, making bracelets and arrow-heads.

In a stone quarry near Jerusalem, an unfinished column has been found that was intended for the ancient temple. A farmer near the Damascus gate could not keep his ground moist enough to be productive; investigation proved that he had been farming over the top of an ancient church.

Article six is an editorial on the "Tablet of the Cross at Palenque."

"That the cross existed in America in prehistoric times may be shown from various monuments." * * * "The association of sacrifice with the cross is a surprising circumstance. We do not claim that it is any evidence of the historic origin of the cross, or that the sacrifice had any connection with the Jewish or Christian idea of sacrifice, but we refer to the fact as very significant. It is possible that sacrifice had a prehistoric origin as well as the cross; and that both were peculiarities of native worship before they were incorporated by the Jews, and before the cross became a Christian symbol. It seems hardly probable that the advanced symbolism of the cross and the Christian idea of sacrifice, had deteriorated, and with this deterioration had been introduced into America; but it is more probable that we have here that which preceded the historic custom and symbol. The development having been parallel in America with something which presumably existed in Asia, but which has been lost in the passage of time. Everything in America is in that arrested state which reveals the prehistoric without the addition of the historic symbolism, while in Asia the prehistoric has been buried under the accumulation of the historic. The cross in America was undoubtedly a symbol around which clustered human sacrifices. We see this from the picture of the tablet. The divinity is the thunder bird. The cross is a support for the divinity. A priest is offering a sacrifice to the thunder bird. The sacrifice offered is that of a child, which is held up to the bird in the hands of the priest. This custom was practiced by the Mayas."

The above, by the Editor, Dr. Peet, is learned and comprehensive, and may be regarded as the final verdict of the age upon a question that has perplexed it long—"peculiarities of nature worship." It is true that the cross was the symbol of salvation in Egypt in prehistoric times. A priesthood descended from the family of Noah, and who preserved the knowledge of I Am that I Am—"The sole living God," may have been the inspired transmitters of an inspired knowledge pertaining to the plan of salvation. But the accepted theory concerning Egypt is that the cross was at first the high water mark of the Nile. When that was reached the people knew that the whole valley was inundated, and they were saved from famine. The cross was thus made to be a symbol of spiritual salvation, and an object of worship. This idea could have been transferred to their neighbors the Phœnicians, but how to distant America? In America the cross was associated with human sacrifice and with Phallic worship, while the early worship of Egypt, India and America, was pure and monotheistic; and these pure forms were no more likely to deteriorate than "the advanced symbolism of the cross and the Christian idea of sacrifice." That such deterioration occurred is proved by the facts and analogies noticed in this review when treating of the Culture heroes.

The Mayas at the time of the conquest practiced human sacrifice, but their ancient faith, according to Dr. Plongeon was monotheistic; and the sculptures on their oldest monuments represent fine-featured bearded men. The race and faith alike had deteriorated. Plongeon has certainly traced the Mayas and their language and beliefs back to their origin in the Old World in anti-Christian times, and the symbolism of the cross may have been a part of the transported faith; but it is fairly deducible from the great mass of facts relating to the case, a hundredth part of which I have not presented, that Christianity was once the prevailing religion in America. Coronado professed to have found at Zuni not only crosses, but three Christians. Botorini discovered a painting of a cross near the hill of Teangniztipetl, a cubit in size, also the painting of another cross drawn by machinery, from an inaccessible cave in Lower Mizteca, where it had been deposited in prehistoric times. At Neyarit, Jalisco the cross of Tepic was a celebrated relic. "Near Chacala, Colima, there is a tank, and near it a cross, well carved, with points in fine lines. On it was seen a most devoted crucifix. Under it are other lines of characters with the said points, which seemed Hebrew or Syriac." "Guatulco, Oajaca, was likewise one of the many localities described by the early Catholic writers as containing a wonderful cross, left here probably by St. Thomas." There is no mention of any Pagan symbols in connection with these crosses.

This deterioration of the Christian worship in America is made probable, and is explained by an analogous result among the ancient eastern nations. The pure patriarchal faith survived but a few generations among the nations descended from the sons of Noah. And this is more strange and inexplicable from the fact that they were not sunk so low in barbarism as the American nations were. Science is of the earth and is evolved, built up, improved; religion is from heaven and deteriorates in this impure, earthly realm. This is the truth of history—the explanation of the different dispensations. If the Jewish system had not declined, the Christian dispensation, with its reformations and restorations, would not have been necessary. That the patriarchal faith became obscured can be proven independently of scriptural declarations. The myths of the ancient Pagan nations were corrupted traditions of the great truth of the more ancient system. Researches in philology and archaeology are extending the domain of knowledge back into the night of time, as a few facts will illustrate.—The feats of Nimrod are perpetuated by a sign in the heavens. Orion, the giant and mighty hunter, with belt, dogs, and a hare. Noah is the sign Centaur, and is bearing a victim to the altar. The Ark is represented in the sky by Argo—the stem of a ship. The old Greeks taught that this sign commemorated the first ship that ever was constructed, and was placed in the sphere by divine wisdom. The Egyptians held that the Argo was the ship in which Osiris and Isis (god and goddess) sailed on the great flood. In the Hindoo language this ship was called Argha, and the persons saved in it were Iowara and Isi. The Persians called the ship Arg, and near it they pictured the dove, and at a distance a raven perched on a sea monster. Adam is the sign Hercules with his foot on the Dragon's head. Sepentarius is the promised "seed," &c. As the Pagan myths represent more ancient truths, so will the American myths, superstitions and traditions be found to do.

The next article of interest is "Human Bones in the Quarternary." Says the review:

"This is a most important discovery, as hitherto human bones that can be indisputably referred to the drift period have been very few in number, and the localities in which they have occurred have been restricted to the valleys of the Rhine, the Somme and the Seine. The gravel pit in which the human remains were found, is situated about two hundred and ninety above the level of the sea, and thirty-six above that of Nori Morne."

This does not prove that the sharp flints, associated only with animal bones, found in the drift of the Rhine, Somme and Seine, were implements. The benches or higher level gravel beds of those rivers are tens of thousands of years older than the present beds, yet they contain illimitable quantities of such "implements" as no savage tribe in any zone now uses, but which are stored in the museums and marked "spades" and "hatchets." I believe that there is a pretty good sized shipload of these flints, thus preserved, that were never seen by human eyes till tens or hundreds of thousands of years after they were splintered into this "questionable shape" by the pressure of ice mountains that crept over the earth, in the days when the earth, in aphelion, was more distant from the sun; but making due allowance for the mistakes of men whom "much learning" hath made mad, we must be prepared for an addition of many thousands of years to the chronology given in the Lectures on Faith; and yet if tens of thousands of years are added, they are but a hair's breadth in the illimitable span of years that mark the earth's life up to the present time; and still, with multiplied emphasis, is Christ "the Lamb slain from before the foundations of the world." The magazine closes with an advertisement of a pamphlet on "Inscribed Tablets," that contain and leave out great wonders.

SAID Mr. James T. Fields, in his lecture on "Fiction," in the Brooklyn Athenæum last night: "I recently paid a visit to the Pomeroy boy, who was sentenced to be hanged for killing three children, but whose sentence was afterward commuted to imprisonment for life. I asked him if he read much. He said that he did. 'What kind of books do you read?' said I. 'Mostly one kind,' he said—'mostly dime novels.' 'What is the best book you have read?' I asked. 'Well, I like 'Buffalo Bill' best,' he replied. 'It was full of murders and pictures about murders.' 'Well,' I asked, 'how did you feel after reading such a book?' 'O,' said he, 'I felt as if I wanted to do the same.'"

And further, those persons entrusted with receiving and disbursing of church funds are ex officio agents for the Bishop, and as such, are made responsible to, and are under, his council and direction in this specific matter. GENERAL CONFERENCE APPOINTEES.

T. W. SMITH, Sect. of Quorum.

TO THE SEVENTIES.

Dearly Beloved Brethren.—In view of the latter day work, and the great responsibility which now rests upon the shoulders of all who have entered into this priesthood and covenant, I write unto you, hoping that at the coming conference of April 6th, all who are standing members of this Quorum will give a report of past labors and future purposes. Many of our number are in the field, and have done nobly; and their labors are greatly blest, and they are becoming a strong arm in the spirit and power of the gospel in the world: for such there is a great reward, and an endowment promised, if they continue in faithfulness. But many others, whose names are enrolled, are silent, and we never hear from them. Brethren, consider the high calling, and the account of that calling which will have to be given at a future day, remembering, that if chosen as especial witnesses for Christ, our work is before us, to seek and to save the lost and fallen sons of men, and bring them to Him who has called us to this great work. Many obstacles may seem to stand in the way; among the rest the care of home and family, (a duty we all feel), has kept some from doing the good that in their hearts they wished to do. But now as the temporal matters of the law seem to be better understood with the church at large, we hope soon to see the fetters broken, and the humble, faithful servant of God at liberty, sounding the warning voice, and trusting in him who has said, "It is my will to provide for my Saints."

Others of our number, having plenty of this world's comforts, craving still for more, may perhaps have forgotten that treasures laid up on earth, are not to be compared with treasures laid up in heaven. That a life of ease here, may have its reward here. But a life of sacrifice to the cause of God here, claims the great reward promised in the hereafter. The spirit for the office work of a Seventy, is not obtained by ordination alone; but by a faithful performance of the duties of that office and calling. Neither can the ordination to that office benefit us in the life beyond, if not faithful to that work while here. "As a man soweth, so shall he also reap," is a solemn truth; and we all are in a measure what we make ourselves, whether to honor or to dishonor. Time is passing, and great changes seem at hand, which ever remind us of the word of the Lord to his servants at the ushering in of this last dispensation, "Cry aloud, and spare not. It is a day of warning, and not a day of many words." Upon whom, then, rests more especially this responsibility? Upon the Twelve and the Seventies. They are called to be the first in the ranks to spread the gospel to the world, and open up the Kingdom of God among the nations of the earth. The day is not now "to prosecute many foreign missions;" but the instruments for the great work are being prepared. The experience necessary many are passing through, that they may be wise and mighty in wielding the sword of truth. As a quorum we can not afford to stand still, while the judgments of God are threatening the nations. Let those, then, who have halted by the way, now arise, gird on the armor, take up their line of march, and follow the example of those now in the field, whose boldness, and faith, and perseverance, are worthy of imitation. Fear not; "The race is not alone to the swift, nor the battle to the strong." The one talent must not be despised. As before, "not many wise, not many noble are called;" but the weak things of the earth are made by the Spirit the most powerful weapons to divide the light from the darkness, and make manifest the truth as in Christ. Let us then work as God hath given unto us, faithful in little, that we may be blessed with much.

It has been long desired that our quorum be more perfectly organized, according to the law given. But the Lord has given us to understand that it is not "expedient now." Therefore, as we are, we must work contented till the Lord again speaks unto us through the channel he has ordained. We are and ever shall be, (till the great work is wound up), under the direction of the Twelve. So let us ever pray, that the spirit of the Good Master may direct them in all their councils and deliberations for the advancement of the work, the glory of God, and our salvation; and although far separated from each other for the gospel's sake, let us be one in spirit, mind, and thought; loving, honoring, and respecting each other, as the disciples of Christ; ever fighting against iniquity in every phase. Standing firm and steadfast on the rock of truth, living examples of all that is good, pure, and holy.

I shall not have the privilege of meeting with you at the coming conference; but rest assured you have my best wishes, and my confidence, that what ever changes may be made, shall be made by you for the greatest good of the work. To this end I pray that the Lord may be with you by his Spirit, in much wisdom and power, that unity and peace may abound in every heart. That when our work is done, we may still be one.

GLAUD RODGER, Pres. of Seventies.

GENOA, Nevada, March 5th, 1884.

FIRST QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

Brethren:—It seems necessary that as many of our number as can conveniently do so, should meet during General Conference. Our former president, Lawrence Conover, has been expelled from the Church for transgression, and several of the members have been ordained Elders. These vacancies should be filled, and the quorum put in working order. Reports from those who can not attend are desired, which may be sent to me during this month, and later to Bro. H. A. Stebbins, at Stewartsville, Mo.

ASA S. COCHRAN, Sec'y.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 14th, 1884.

ORGANIZATION OF MITE SOCIETY.

A few of the Saints of Plano came together on the 21st of November, 1883, and organized themselves into a society, to be called a Dorcas Mite Society, for the purpose of saving the mites, and applying them whenever the opportunity offers, and help is needed. We trust that the Lord when he comes, may find us earnestly laboring in his vineyard. We will so continue, as long as he blesses us with his presence, and his Spirit abides in our midst. From November 21st to March 6th, we have received $5.04, and expended $1.86, leaving in treasury $3.18, besides about fifteen pounds of sewed carpet rags, and one quilt ready for sale. MRS. HATTIE WHITE, Sec'y.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, in the person of Bro. C. N. Brown, of Providence, R. I., we had an exemplary and noble brother; a gentleman and a friend. And whereas, he has by death been removed from our Quorum and the Church; Therefore be it Resolved: That we, as a quorum, do hereby express our regret and sorrow, but not as for those who have no hope. And we hereby express and tender our condolence and sympathy, and love to and for the friends and relatives so sadly bereaved of our loved brother's association. By order of quorum: G. Rodger, president; J. F. McDowell, secretary. Committee: B. V. Springer, C. Scott, J. F. McDowell.

May they live to enjoy the sweets of life here and hereafter.

DIED.

NORTHCUTT.—At her home, in Plano, Ill., February 22d, 1884, Eliza A. Northcutt, daughter of Sr. Julia A. Marks, aged 35 years, 11 months, 17 days. Deceased was baptized by Elder Alpheus Cutler, when nine years of age; was made a recipient of the blessings of the gospel; and her last words on earth were, "I am prepared to go." Though quite young, she was the mother of thirteen children. Seven little buds were blighted on earth by the power of death, and had preceded their mother to that better land. A husband and and six children remain to mourn the loss of a faithful and devoted wife and mother. Sermon in the Saints' church, by F. M. Cooper.

ETZENHOUSER.—At Independence, Mo., February 10th, 1884, sister Magdalena Etzenhouser, aged 49 years, 9 months and 10 days. Sister Etzenhouser has been a member of the church about five years, and died a firm believer in the gospel, and in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral sermon by Elder F. G. Pitt.

OLIVER.—Near Osceola, Iowa, February 9th, 1884, of malarial fever terminating in brain fever, Elder Milton B. Oliver; born December 10th, 1833; baptized 22d December, 1866. He suffered much for three weeks; but his last hours were quiet; he passed away in peace, saying he was prepared to go. He was a faithful brother, and leaves a wife and children to mourn his loss. Funeral services by Bro. George Spencer.

GRIFFITHS.—At Lucas, Iowa, February 8th, 1884, Bro. Lorenzo T. Griffiths, aged 21 years, 1 month, and 19 days. Was baptized August 14th, 1881. Died in peace, and in hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral services by Elder J. R. Evans.

WORDEN.—At his residence, five miles northwest of Stewartsville, Mo., February 9th, 1884, Bro. Oliver P. Worden, aged 64 years, 2 months and 19 days. After much suffering, which was manfully borne, he passed away calmly. He was delivered from the bondage of Atheism into the liberty of the gospel of Christ by a personal experience, which proved to him that "There is a spirit in man." Funeral sermon by J. M. Terry.

He suffered long, and bore it well;
His trials came thick and fast;
But he's gone, with the blest and redeemed to dwell,
His conflicts have ended at last. J. M. T.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY; Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

APT PRESENTATIONS.

It would appear by the reports we hear from the debate, that Mr. Braden trusted for victory to his cause in invective, the rehearsal of stale slang against the character of Joseph Smith and his fellow elders, the bad stories and criminal accusations told by the enemies of the church, rather than to a truthful presentation of facts and the legitimate deductions of argument and proper examination. This resulted in making him bitter and unfair in his course. It is stated, also, that Bro. Kelley preserved the dignified character of a Christian disputant, and avoided abuse and improper language. The contrast between the debaters was, therefore, strong; and the effect produced on the community is seen in the presentations to the parties engaged. Bro. Kelley maintained the prestige of Christian deportment which the Bible enjoins, the conclusion is reached by his hearers, that he does not need to be reminded of that book; Mr. Braden forgot the character he was supposed to bear, that of a representative of a branch of Christian believers, engaged in a polemic contest for truth, and the conclusion of his friends, (as friends of their own cause, also), is that he needs a reminder, hence they give him a Bible. It is one of the neatest as well as the keenest sarcasms that it was possible for Mr. Braden's friends to have indulged in. The proverb, "Better is the rebuke of a friend than the kiss of an enemy," is aptly illustrated in this gift of a Bible to Rev. Braden; and it is to be hoped that he will profit by the hint conveyed.

KIRTLAND SOCIAL LIFE.

The following clipping from the Willoughby Independent, written by a correspondent from Kirtland, Ohio, read in connection with Bro. W. H. Kelley's letter in this issue, will give a clear idea of the impression made upon the citizens of Kirtland by the discussion, and by the previous preaching of the word in that place:

EDITOR WILLOUGHBY INDEPENDENT:

Saturday evening last will be long remembered as one of the largest and most enthusiastic social gatherings in the history of Kirtland. The event that called forth this company was the work of the late discussion between the Rev. Clark Braden, of Illinois, of the Disciple Church, and E. L. Kelley, now of Kirtland, formerly of Glenwood, Iowa, of the Reorganized Church of Christ of L. D. S. The gathering was in recognition of the work of Mr. Kelley during the discussion, and made a surprise to him and his family—and also a further honor to Elder Wm. H. Kelley, of Coldwater, Mich., who has for the past year rendered at times ministerial labor in Kirtland. The company consisted of seventy-five citizens of Kirtland, nearly all of whom had attended upon the eighteen sessions of the discussion just closed, and none of whom are connected with the church of which Mr. Kelley is a member; and a number of other citizens who had attended upon the discussion sent their regrets at not being able to be present from various causes of hindrance.

Before the court commenced to hear evidence upon matters under dispute during the discussion, with reference to character, &c., had adjourned, this company began to gather, and by eight o'clock the hotel building (Mr. Kelley's residence) was filled with Kirtland's noble-hearted citizens, who in their gathering had not forgotten to provide for the necessities of the occasion, as evidenced by the fine supper of Ohio's choicest things, of which eighty-four persons sat down to enjoy. Prior to this, however, Mr. W. H. Kelley, E. L. and his wife, were invited with the company into the large room of the hotel building, and here was displayed the tangible evidences of the esteem and consideration of these citizens in the presentation of a large and elegant rattan rocking chair to E. L. Kelley, an excellent and beautiful lady's rocking chair to Mrs. E. L. Kelley, a beautiful quilt from the ladies of Kirtland to Mrs. Kelley, and also a neatly made silk cushion from Mrs. C. P. Green. Also, to Elder W. H. Kelley a fine large photograph album, and to Mrs. W. H. Kelley a beautiful quilt, by the ladies of Kirtland—the object of these gifts and mementoes being more specifically and fully set forth by the addresses and speeches upon the occasion, and especially that of the citizens, made by L. V. Sanborn, Esq., of Kirtland, as follows:

"MR. E. L. KELLEY: A few of your friends and neighbors have met at your house this evening for the purpose of expressing, by word and by deed, our appreciation of you as a citizen, as a neighbor and as a Christian. We come in unity of sentiment with regard to our views as to the sincerity of your belief. During the late discussion in which you have been engaged, we have had strong evidences of your faith by the charity of your language, in return for the abuses of your opponent. But in strict keeping with the agreement for the discussion. You have met the enemy on every issue and he is vanquished; and now we have come to crown the success of your efforts, and to encourage you, if possible, by our visit and our sentiments, in the maintenance of that manly bearing and Christian spirit which has so characterized your conduct and your language through the entire discussion. We admire the honest and able manner in which you discussed the questions at issue, and especially denounce the dishonest, unqualified language of your opponent, whose part of the debate was not argument but mere slander and villification, which pleased and satisfied only the bigoted, the prejudiced, or the weak minded. And we believe it would be a serious mistake for members of this community to support or favor such an act, knowing the dishonorable reputation of the man, whose manner and language does not belie that reputation—just because he opposes the religion of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, whose only sin (if it may be called a sin) is in believing the whole of the Bible, and a little more. But I must apply my remarks more particularly to yourself. We have come to honor your ability; to acknowledge your wisdom; to declare our respect for your character; and to admit your honesty of purpose; and as a token of these sentiments, as an expression of the good-will we bear toward you and a memento of this occasion, we present you in the name of the gentlemen of Kirtland this beautiful chair, the comforts of which, we hope you will enjoy for many years. And to you, Mrs. Kelley, we would say that while we were seeking to reward and honor your husband, we also thought it right and proper to pay a certain degree of respect and honor to yourself, as one possessing the inestimable qualities of a Christian lady. Therefore, we have purchased this chair, which we now present to you with our compliments. We have also a nice new bed quilt, that has been pieced by the ladies of Kirtland, which they desire to present to you, with the best wishes of all those who enjoy the pleasure of your acquaintance."

To this address Mr. Kelley replied as follows:

RESPECTED FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS OF KIRTLAND: Your unexpected gathering, much less this further unexpected token, presented as it has been in such gifted words of thought and consideration, I feel honors me far more than I have deserved at your hands; and if I at this time shall fail to express to you the fullest possible heartfelt thanks, it is from my inability to make a selection and choice of words, rather than the lack of a deep sense of my feelings and gratitude towards you. These tokens I especially shall ever prize because of the occasion and presentation by those who make no particular profession, and also of those who are members of societies other than my own. I am more than glad, too, that I am able to say to you that my faith and religious principles are such that I am bound to respect each one of you, and each society, represented here, with all their rights, privileges, and honesty of purpose which I claim for myself, in order for me to be a good and worthy member of that society. It is from this principle and stand-point that I have labored during the discussion just closed; knowing that whatever the attitude of others, I, to truly represent the faith which I hold to be that of the humble one of Nazareth, must not forget that due regard to the feelings and sentiments of others, and toleration of the opinions of all mankind, is a prominent, cardinal, and vital feature of that faith. I have felt hurt more on account of the unjust accusation made against the citizens of Kirtland, because they dared to stand for that which they saw to be right and fair, than for anything said or manifest toward myself. But the wisdom and honor you have displayed during the past four weeks, and your readiness to impartially hear and weigh a matter, must ever redound to your credit and place you side by side in intelligence, honor and true worth, with the foremost of American citizens. Let me again say, that for these tokens of your esteem and confidence I humbly and gratefully thank you; and earnestly assure you that it shall be the purpose of my life to so work and act that you shall never have cause to regret your part in this pleasant occasion."

Mrs. Kelley replied as follows:

"DEAR FRIENDS OF KIRTLAND: I wish to express my sincere thanks, but my heart is too full to do so as I should like. But for these presents as tokens of your regard, and the gathering here this evening as an expression of your feelings towards us, and especially towards my husband in his recent work, who I know has tried to do that work faithfully and well, I thank you very much, and hope that you shall never have cause or reason to regret your part in this, to me, most enjoyable occasion."

Mr. Sanborn, in behalf of the company, here turned to Elder W. H. Kelley, and addressed the following remarks:

"And to you, sir, we would say, that we still have another beautiful quilt, pieced by the same ladies, which they desire to present to you, that you will in turn present it to your wife, Mrs. Kelley; that although she is an entire stranger to the ladies of Kirtland, yet they know if she is worthy of your respect and your love, she is also worthy of their esteem. They send it with their best wishes. And lastly, we would acknowledge our indebtedness to you for the many earnest prayers and instructive sermons delivered in our midst, for which you have our sincere thanks, accompanied by the present of this photograph album, as an expression of our regards for you."

Mr. Kelley replied:

"These presents, ladies and gentlemen, are a very great surprise to me. I was not anticipating anything of the kind. Like my brother and sister, who have just spoken, I am not able at this time to express fully my appreciation of this demonstration from you as citizens and neighbors. I appreciate these presents because they express more than their intrinsic value, and are made by a community of people not one of whom is identified with us denominationally, representing several religious bodies, with skeptics of various beliefs and orders; and these are testimonials expressive of the sentiment that you are non-partisan in the search for light and truth in the world; and that you are willing to unite in the recognition and encouragement of that which presents itself as true and just, without regarding the sentiment as to whether it may be powerful and popular, or be applauded by others. That you are willing, as American citizens to rise above denominational bias and distinctions, and declare that decency, justice and equity should be recognized and encouraged between our fellow-men of whatever name, and that truth should be acknowledged and applauded from whatever source it may emanate. I thank you, ladies and gentlemen, for this unselfish demonstration of the appreciation of my services in your midst as a citizen and neighbor. I shall highly prize these presents because made at this time in the recognition of justice and right, and made, too, by the friendly hands of the citizens of Kirtland. I trust that my life may be such as to be worthy of your respect and esteem."

Thus the exercises of the evening began, and the large company from the enjoyment of the occasion and the social gathering only dispersed as the hour drew near to twelve o'clock. ZETA.

KIRTLAND, March 10th, 1884.

WE CLIP the following from the Painsville (Ohio) Democrat, of March 15th, which appears under the head of "Kirtland Cullings." The foregoing from the Willoughby Independent, is also reproduced in the same paper. Painsville, let it be remembered, is the home of Mr. E. D. Howe, the author of "Mormonism Unveiled," on which Braden principally founded his attack on the Book of Mormon. Error marches fast, and consequently gains many temporary victories; but the grand, irresistible march of truth, must at last be entirely successful:

"The discussions are over, but some excitement remains. It was remarked here one day last week by a person from Chester that the people of Chester were disgusted with Rev. (?) Braden, (by the way, he lectured in one of their churches a week ago last Sunday), and I think their disgust was pretty well proven by the present that was given him by Rev. Hayden in their behalf, the last evening, the teachings of which he might practice to better advantage—a handsome Bible.

INDEPENDENCE.

WHOEVER among Latter Day Saints moves into Independence, Missouri, or its immediate vicinity, intending to make a residence and a home there, under the conviction that it is Zion, the place and abode of the pure in heart, and expecting that he will be privileged there to enjoy the restful, peaceful, and sanctifying influences that are to rule in Zion, should remember that consistent with the hope of peace which has incited him to change places of abode, he should be duly prepared in mind to accept whatever disabilities and changes in climate, soil, manner of toil and business such change involves; and to abide by such liabilities to law, both of the state and nation and of God, as may follow such change of residence. For instance, there are those who believe that certain laws, or parts of laws, are of effect and in force in Zion, or upon the inhabitants of certain localities defined by metes and bounds, and known as Zion; and that until the people of God are assembled there, those parts of the law are not applicable to them, and are therefore inoperative. It should follow then that if these persons ever remove into the circle where the blessings are supposed to fall, then they should at once proceed to comply with the requirements of the law, which inoperative abroad, become obligatory in the new home.

Prominent among those rules will be found a number involving a good deal of self-abnegation, giving up, or denying one's self of pleasures, of comfort and sense; the sacrifice of some ease; the giving in proper and open form to the carrying on of local church work and missionary service, and the giving of private charity with a liberal hand for the relief of the distressed, hungry and destitute. If they are not prepared to yield necessary obedience to these requirements they ought not to go into the blessed region, or if they do, must not complain if they fail, most signally, to receive and enjoy the blessings sighed for.

Another thing. The inhabitants of Zion, the "pure in heart," must be the children of peace. The following must not be found among them: murderers, thieves, adulterers, fornicators, liars, whoremongers, profane swearers, vicious persons, idlers, tale bearers, busy bodies, scandal mongers, deceivers, vain, or foolish persons. The dwellers in the happy land must be good citizens of the state, because of the convictions of their faith. They must be good, because they love the good. They must do right, because they know and love the right. They must serve the state, because they love the rule of righteous and good men. They must be industrious, because industry brings competence and health. They must be frugal, because frugality increases the private and general store. They should be provident, for the consciousness that supplies for necessities are assured gives contentment; which is next of kin to happiness.

A change has been wrought in the inhabitants of Missouri, a change that has largely affected the social, religious and political condition of the people. The adoption by the General Government of measures emancipating the slaves, thus abolishing slavery in Missouri, removed one of the fruitful causes of discord between the Saints and other citizens of the state. No other issue now pending in politics is of such a nature as to possibly array the Saints on one side of it as a unit, except, possibly, the one of prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks; but on this question it fortunately happens that the Saints are with the larger number and the better class of society. The question is not especially a political one, though it may be made one in time, but is a question of social and domestic good, or evil, as it may prevail to the one side or the other. The Saints can not in keeping with their baptismal covenant sanction drunkenness; nor can they be friendly to that policy that fosters it. The ordinary questions of Governmental powers and policies, are so nearly balanced between the two great parties that there are Saints found on both sides, and some on third party issues besides. These differences they hold in amity; because with Saints politics are not first in importance; as they rightly conclude that a man may be loyal to his country though he belong to either of the schools of politics. Principles have been at work by which a new leaven has been infused into Missouri, largely affecting the northern part of the state, which has made it practicable for men like Saints ought to be, to move in there and make their homes, with reasonable assurance of being undisturbed. This assurance may be continued, we believe, indefinitely, upon the practice of the principles affecting human conduct taught in the church, and to which elders and members are alike pledged. Those principles involve a proper regard for the laws of the state, both in their observance and the supporting of their execution. They who so conduct themselves as to be free from blame before the laws of the land and of God, may of right live as the pure in heart where they may elect their Zion to be. Principles of truth, love and right will endure, and they who practice them shall not be moved.

WE clip the following notices from the Sandwich, Ill., Argus, of March 15th:

On Sunday morning next, Elder Josiah Ells, of Pittsburg, Pa., will preach in the Latter Day Saints' Church. He is a good speaker and will interest all who listen to him.

Elder G. T. Griffiths of Wheeling, West Va., occupied the Latter Day Saints' pulpit last Sabbath evening.

SPENCER CRITICISED.

IN an address delivered by Sir Edmund Beckett, before the Victoria Institute of London, January 21st, the beauties of Scientific conclusions are shown to be quite absurd. He refers to Mr. Herbert Spencer and his philosophy as follows:

"Darwin founded all his conclusions (whether they are all right or not) on the largest induction from facts that he could make; and perhaps no philosopher ever took more pains to investigate them in so many directions throughout nature. The other kind of evolutionary philosophy is entirely different in its mode of proceeding; and all its conclusions simply come to this: that the law of nature which its discoverers from a vast number of experiments call the conservation or correlation of forces, or the constancy of the sum of all the forces in the universe, is renamed by Mr. Spencer 'The Persistence of Force' (which omits transformation or correlation), and then pronounced to be the sole fundamental, self-existent, necessary thing or truth; except that he is obliged also to assume some unknown kind of homogeneous universal matter with no properties besides: and these two between them have made all things by the processes which he designates as we shall see.

"We are allowed, and indeed invited, to put behind persistent force something else, which is called the absolute, unconditioned, unknowable and unknowing, 'universal immanence,' which never did, or does, anything but maintain or start indestructible force. Consequently, for all practical purposes, 'the unknown reality which works in us,' of which matter and motion and force are 'the symbols,' simply is indestructible force; a set of remarkable discoveries, indeed—that force is a symbol of force, and that motion is caused by force and that matter is only cognizable by its properties or forces. And yet his primeval matter was homogeneous, and therefore had to acquire, and did acquire, all its heterogeneous properties somehow from the action of some one force upon it.

"Moreover, the only true religion consists in acknowledging—first, this new kind of unknowable; and secondly, the impossibility of knowing any more about it. Every religion that professes to know anything more of it, is ipso facto, 'irreligious and absurd.' Yet that is just what is professed by every religion that is or ever has been, however else they differ. Nay, Mr. Spencer himself is as irreligious and absurd in that respect as the believers in Jupiter, or Mormon, or Mumbo Jumbo, for he professes to know all the functions of his Supreme Reality and Power—viz., that it 'works in us' and made and maintains, and practically is, persistent or indestructible but transformable force, and nothing else. We profess to know no more of our Supreme Power than it has told us. Mr. Spencer professes to know everything by the light of his own intellect. Which, then, is the most 'irreligious and absurd,' according to his own dictum?"

Sir Edmund Beckett then proceeds to consider at length Mr. Spencer's philosophical work, and draws the following conclusions:—

"Whichever end we begin at in our reasoning, whether at Mr. Spencer's 'Unknowable and Persistent Force,' or the latest phenomena of the present world, we are equally landed in some confessedly 'incomprehensible' process, or one for which no possible physical cause can be discovered or invented, or suggested in intelligible language with any rational probability. What does that mean, except that the final cause or agent must be above physical, or supernatural, or at any rate what Newton called 'immaterial.' Indeed Mr. Spencer calls his prime cause an 'immaterial reality,' which is practically the same thing, bearing in mind that he will never use other people's phrases. Only he denies that his immaterial agent does anything except maintain indestructible force and 'work in us,' whatever he means by that. Whether he means anything or nothing, both these phrases leave the problem of cosmogony as unexplained and as incomprehensible as if he had simply and dogmatically said, 'The world made itself by persistent force, and that is all we know about it, and therefore there was, and is, no designing Creator.

"I promised to say a word before I finished about his nickname of the 'carpenter theory of creation' for ours, which is no doubt calculated to please those who do not want to see through its absurdity, or to remember that carpenters neither make nor alter the nature of their materials, and much less produce their results by making general laws for causing bits of wood to grow of themselves into chairs and tables, besides other very obvious differences below the notice of a synthetic unifier of all knowledge. And if the nickname were as good as it is bad, it is only the Spencerian appropriation of the epithet, 'anthropomorphic,' which had often been applied before by materialists to the creative theory. To say nothing of its being wrong etymologically (for no theory imputes the form of man to God) it practically means this:—Men have some intelligence, foresight and inventive power, and some gradually increasing scientific and mathematical knowledge. Our Creator has infinitely more of all those things, and omnipotence besides. Therefore the creative theory assumes a God like men. If such nonsense wants making more evident by illustration, here is one:—Frogs have some intelligence, foresight, locomotive power, and will and knowledge how to maintain themselves and their species, to avoid certain dangers, and generally to gain the objects of their life. Therefore attributing those same powers in a much higher degree, with many others, to man, is a batrachomorphic theory of human nature. That is just as good logic as the other, and as the Spencerian philosophy of creation from beginning to end. And if the old theory of a designed creation is only maintained (as he says) 'in the pride of ignorance,' I suppose the rejection of it for undesigned and 'unfathomable mysteries' of self-transforming forces and self-generated properties of matter, and of effects without causes, is the modesty of omniscience."

Correspondence.

NEW PROVIDENCE, Indiana,
February 29th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just returned from a mission in Jefferson county, Indiana, in which I have been wonderfully blest. I left home on the 29th of January, and returned on the 27th of February; preached twenty-nine times at Union, baptized seven on the 13th, and three on the 25th of February. Had two testimony meetings, in which the Saints were filled with the Spirit, and built up in the faith and hope of the gospel. There is a fearful responsibility on those that are teaching the people. They should be careful to teach no more, no less than what Jesus taught; for Jesus said, "He that breaks one of the least commandments, and teaches men so to do, can not be saved in the kingdom of God."

All through the meetings the rain fell; most of time we had full houses and solemn attention. I feel grateful to my Heavenly Father for all these blessings; also to the Saints at Union Branch for their hospitality toward me. Love to all the Saints in all the world. Ever yours in the covenant,

JAMES G. SCOTT.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah,
March 12th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Having just returned from a trip south into Sevier county, I write that the good work is still progressing in that part of Utah; for although the weather was stormy a good portion of the time, and the roads very bad, Bro. Burt and self succeeded in making some stir among the people, by preaching, and distributing Advocates and your letter to Littlefield.

Bro. Coleman at Nephi furnished us with a team to travel with, for which assistance we feel thankful indeed. We stayed at Richfield seven days, and held seven meetings, well attended, and baptized seven. The branch there now numbers twenty-seven, and in good condition. A house of worship is a necessity, and the Saints intend to build one. A number of friends say they will assist; and it is to be hoped that the work will be done soon; for I believe great good will result. We also preached at Monroe, and Elsinon in the same county, and in all of these places the interest is good; and at Scipio, in Millard county, we preached a number of times, and baptized two. We left quite a number believing in the work of the Reorganization. We had invitations from Gunnison and Selina, and other places in San Pete county, that we could not fill.

I am of the opinion that a good work can yet be done in Utah, by persistent and patient labor. I am satisfied that a half dozen Elders can find plenty of work in Southern Utah, and that a good work could be done. It is a general complaint among friends to the cause, that our Elders pass through only once in a while, get up a stir among the people, then leave and nothing is heard from the Reorganized Church for years after. This is not written to find fault with my brethren; for I must leave the mission now myself; and unless others follow to carry on the work, there will be cause for the same complaint. It is highly necessary that there should be at least one Elder traveling in this mission, who could speak the Scandinavian Language; as quite a number of that nationality here do not understand English; and if possible I hope that the Church will so appoint.

Yours in Christ,

H. N. HANSEN.

OENAVILLE, Bell Co., Texas,
March 10th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—February 26th Bro. Barber came to San Antonio from Oak Island, and Bro. Waterman and I went home with him, and commenced work right away. The Saints were rejoiced to meet us and have the privilege of assembling together again. The night of the 27th, Bro. Waterman preached at the residence of our genial friend, Wm. Polk Neal, and the next day we met at the same place and organized a branch, to be known as the Oak Island Branch. Bro. Wm. Waterman was chosen to preside, Bro. John Barber to act as clerk, and Sister Julia Neal treasurer. Bro. Waterman and three other members reside in San Antonio, and the rest of the branch at Oak Island. Bro. Waterman will be at San Antonio and Oak Island on alternate Sundays; while the Saints at Oak Island will hold prayer meetings on the Sundays that he is not with them; and doubtless those at San Antonio will remember to pray while he is absent from them. May God bless and prosper the branch, and endow Bro. Waterman with wisdom, power, meekness and love, to lead these worthy saints to more spiritual and higher enjoyment. On the 29th we repaired to Wedina River, where I led two more into their watery grave. At the organization, Mr. Neal suggested the propriety of building a house of worship; and offered $25.00. Papers were immediately written out, and between sixty and seventy dollars subscribed in a few minutes. May they succeed. I remained at Oak Island until Sunday, 2d inst, preaching each night and on Sunday morning with good liberty. We had an enjoyable time, a real feast, in speaking, praying, and singing the praise of God; and by the way we have some of the sweet singers of Israel at Oak Island. Our thanks are due Mr. John Thompson, and Miss Laura Neal, for their valuable assistance in playing the organ for us during our services.

On Sunday night I preached at Bro. Waterman's residence, at San. Antonio; but few out but I felt well. The morning of the 3d, I bade adieu to saints and friends, and in company with Frankie McMains, sped on my way to Temple, where we arrived in the afternoon, and walked to Elmwood. On the 5th, we met at the Elmwood School-house for the debate spoken of in our last. Elder Wilmeth did not appear until afternoon; but in a few moments after his arrival things were arranged, and the contest begun. On the first proposition, "Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints the Church of Christ?" we had an interesting time; but the objections were all old ones, which we had met many times before. The second proposition, "Is the Christian Church (which C. M. Wilmeth represents) the Church of Christ?" was examined, and found to be like Isaiah's bed, too short to "stretch himself on," and the cover too "narrow to wrap himself in." On the first proposition there was an intense interest manifested; and the interest was good on the second, with the majority of the audience, but I knew where the shoe was pinching when the members of the "Christian Church" began to squirm, and make fun and faces at me while speaking; but I was not non-plussed at that. When I shoot into a flock of birds it encourages me to see them flutter. Bro. Wilmeth, like Bro. Braden, is a great hand to make assertions without proof; but judging from Bro. Kelley's account of Bro. Braden, I think Bro. Wilmeth much the more honorable man in discussion. He made no attempt to fasten the reproach of polygamy upon Joseph Smith; but was content to let it rest where it belongs; and more than that, though he made a desperate effort to make out that we were an offshoot from the Utah Church, yet, when the evidence to the contrary was conclusive, he came out like a man, and acknowledged before the audience, that he was mistaken. I call that true grit. It was noble, and established a confidence in his integrity, with me, which I hope will not be overthrown. The debate lasted four days, and was ably and impartially conducted by Prof. Watford as chairman, and Elders W. L. Harrison and A. J. Cato as moderators.

We came out of the contest comforted, strengthened, and encouraged. The Saints here had never seen the principles of the gospel put to such a test before, but they are rejoicing. The people here have long desired to see some "smart man" get hold of us. They have been gratified, and we shall see what the result will be. We are to meet again, August 5th, to spend five days on the following: "Resolved that the Book of Mormon is what it purports to be, and contains a revelation of God's will to man."

Hopefully,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

GIRARD, Minnesota,
March 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Since Bro. Nutt came here he has preached twenty-eight times, and attended several other meetings. We called a conference at Silver Lake on the second of March, and Brn. Way and Nutt spoke in the forenoon, and in the afternoon baptized four. In the evening confirmation, and in the morning attended to conference business. Afternoon baptized seven, and confirmed them. In the evening prayer meeting; and then we adjourned until Wednesday, three o'clock p.m., at Girard; and baptized ten more. That makes twenty-one baptized. Bro. Nutt has gone up to Oak Lake, with Brn. H. Way and T. J. Martin, to help revive the work in that part. We have been greatly blessed with the Spirit of God to direct us in all we have done. Hoping we may ever live so we can have claim on the Lord in every time of trouble.

Your brother in Christ,

J. R. ANDERSON.

TABOR, Iowa,

March 13th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have been preaching about all I could. I am going to Wilber, Nebraska, to live. Bro. Wm. Leeka has secured the United Brethren Church, in Fremont City, and I go there to-morrow night to hold forth over Sunday. From the general outlook as I see it, preaching as we do a restored gospel, we come directly in conflict with all churches; while we can consistently commend the virtues and all the good that may be incorporated in their systems, we are compelled to question their authority, and that charge is a serious one. "The ax is laid at the root of the tree." It will not do to put "New wine into old bottles." Neither can we make any compromise. I am led to believe we have failed to sufficiently urge the Divine calling of Joseph the Seer, and the claims for the Book of Mormon. His calling, and the restoration of the gospel, with the Book of Mormon, are so consistent with God's dealings with mankind, that we ought to take a great pleasure in presenting the claims of the church. Of course such things will disturb religionists. "War to the knife, and the knife to the hilt," is the watch-word of the Goliath, the mighty warrior, Clark Braden; and that only gives the sentiment of all the combined hosts. That is the bugle call to arms, and about all I have met use the same weapons that Clark Braden uses. The prophet Isaiah gives us a weapon that fits such cases. "That frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad; that turneth wise men backward, and maketh their knowledge foolishness. That confirmeth the word of his servant, and performeth the counsel of his messengers." I have met but few ministers, but what would use every story that has ever been told about Joseph Smith; and the most unreasonable ones seemed to suit them the best; and they almost invariably get mad when their tokens are frustrated.

In bonds, yours,

RUSHVILLE, Schuyler Co., Ills.,

January 31st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Goodale came up on the 11th of February, stayed two weeks and preached for us, and set our branch in order again. It seems that if we could realize the joy there is over one sinner that repents and obeys the gospel, we would be more careful in our ways of living, and never do any thing to offend the Heavenly Host, or do any thing to cause our names to be cast out, or bring grief to those in heaven, or to those of our branch or district of which we are members. Pray for us. Yours,

WM. J. CURRY.

BENWOOD, West Va.,

February 24th, 1884.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—We have had a very big flood here, and the water has done a great deal of damage. The water was seven feet ten inches in our house, and eight feet in the church. We had never thought that the water would come in the house, and so we never took anything out. So every thing was under water; there is nothing left around the house, not even the fence. Let us lay up treasure in heaven; for here to-day we have and to-morrow we have nothing; but no one can rob us of eternal life if we are faithful. I have been in the work since last May. I learn that if we are faithful before God, he will enlighten our minds, and we will understand many precious things. My spirit delights in the Herald; and there I find many strengthening things.

We have no preaching here now, for Bro. Griffiths and wife left here on the 17th, for Pittsburg Conference. Let us all live faithfully, that we may meet in time to come. I thank God for ever leading me into the truth, and giving me a heart to obey the truth. It seems to me that we are living in the last days; and it seems that trouble is starting in our own homes; for we are to be tried as fire. I hope the saints will remember the Benwood Branch, who have suffered from the flood. The branch is in good condition spiritually. Hoping you will remember me in your prayers; that I may ever be faithful unto the end. Yours for truth,

MARY S. GILL.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb.,

March 13th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Upon the close of meetings near Wilber, at which a deep interest was manifest by several, some of whom have signified their intention of uniting with the church, I went to Roperville, and spent four days at the comfortable abode of Bro. John O. Savage; and notwithstanding the unfavorable condition of the weather, I was successful in talking once to a congregation of about a dozen, upon a gospel topic. Thence to the Savage School-house, by way of Rose Hill, where I blessed some children. On Saturday evening and Sunday morning I addressed a small audience. Found Sr. Susanna Savage upon the sick list. Spent four evenings at Barkey, and was made welcome at the home of Bro. S. V. Jewell; had a full house each time. Five years ago, when the first preaching was done here, it was almost impossible to sandwich in more than one or two sermons, on account of the activity of the several religious societies that occupied the house. I have visited them about semi-annually since; only three have obeyed, and only one of them remains in the vicinity. During the past winter there has been no preaching done there; and by the way, their school teacher was an M. E. minister; and strange, the Baptist Church standing close by, is without service. At no place where I have labored, was more strenuous efforts made to prevent the publishing of the truth. With much satisfaction I count as friends to myself and the cause, as staunch and good men as reside there, and I still entertain a hope of an ingathering. Returned to Wilber and spoke two evenings; storm preventing the usual attendance, and making void the object of my visit. Dr. Levi Anthony, district watchman, hired a livery rig, and we journeyed about seventeen miles west, in a snow storm; but were rewarded with being permitted to hold three good meetings; and learned that some of the people had made the attempt to give us a warm reception by way of a public discussion, but both the ministers declined the task. We left with good opinion of the people of "Spunky Valley," and shall be pleased to again greet them in their pleasant new school-house.

On this trip I obtained some strange, and I hope very instructive experience. One thing I am well satisfied of, that mistakes and disappointments, largely form the warp and woof, that make up life's result. Happy shall we be in the final time of reckoning, if but wise in permitting past mistakes to act as torches of light to prevent a recurrence of former indiscretions, and thereby prove a "lamp to our feet and a light to our path." I wish it were so that the acceptance of the gospel would cause an upright and blameless life in all of those who take upon themselves the name of Christ, for there is no part of our ministerial duty so perplexing and irksome as to deal with or apologize for the waywardness of church members, which not only retards the progress of the work, but weakens the effectiveness of the workmen in the vineyard of the Lord. While it may be true, that "it is human to err," and that it is "God-like to forgive;" still I am inclined to the thought that the writer was inspired with the right conception, when he wrote, "He that seeks repentance for the past must owe the angels virtue for the future;" and thereby we may escape the entanglements of sin and the blandishments of those who delight themselves in the folly of this world.

The outlook for the work in this State is certainly very encouraging, not only in an increase from the present dwellers of the land, but there is a tide of immigration flowing into the State, among which there is an occasional saint; and we bid them welcome, and trust that they shall bring with them a strong desire for the Master's cause, until his praise shall be heard to the joy of many.

RICHLAND, Union Co., D. T.,

March 9th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—If any of your readers are looking for a good location for business, they had better come to Richland, Union Co., Dakota. It is a new railroad town, and bids fair for the County Seat. It is about twenty-five miles northwest of Sioux City, Ia., the line from Sioux City to Tower City on the Northern Pacific. Grading will commence near Richland as soon as the weather will permit. Lots sell from fifty dollars upwards. Good water and a beautiful town sight; and large country to make good trade. Come and see for yourselves. We need some Latter Day Saints here, to help clear away the rubbish, and let the light shine in.

LILLY SMITH.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri,

March 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—As I have been unable to get to meeting of late on account of poor health, I sit and read the dear Herald. It is a welcome visitor. We can learn many precious truths from its pages. It has gladdened my heart many times since it has become a weekly.

Dear Saints, I receive continually joy and satisfaction, and testimony upon testimony to the truth and divinity of this latter day work. I love it, and am thankful that I have been permitted to obey this gospel. I love God with all my heart, and desire to keep his commandments, and live as becometh a Saint, that I may have his favor and approbation. I have many weaknesses to overcome, and many times I can see where I have done wrong when I have intended good; but by our own strength we shall not be able to conquer, and reach that heavenly mansion prepared for the just. Therefore let us be faithful, live humbly, pray for each other, and all have charity. Pray for me, that I may live so as to be accounted worthy to receive the crown.

Yours in Christian bonds,

ELLA ST. CLAIR.

COALVILLE, Iowa,
March 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I was down to Angus a few weeks back, to see four members there, baptized by Bro. Thompson. They are without a shepherd; and in hopes Bro. Thompson will return to Angus, and attend to feeding them with the sincere milk of the word. I preached twice in school-house with liberty and fair attendance; am impressed that there could be a large branch raised up there by a steady laborer. Any Elder passing through Angus, who inquires at the Standard Coal Company's shaft for Bro. David McBurney, or Bro. Thomas Robinson, will find shelter.

Yours ever, in gospel truth,
JAMES ALLEN, Sen.

NEW ALBANY, Indiana,
March 3d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—On the second of February, Bro. M. R. and H. Scott and myself, started for district conference, about a hundred miles. We went by rail to Birdseye, which was reached at ten a. m., and we were kindly entertained by an ex-representative of Dubois county, after which we set about to prepare a place for the purpose of holding meeting. The Methodist Church house is closed against all who will not subscribe to their creed, it being the only church house in the town. Through the courtesy of Mr. Farver, we obtained a large room. About sixty people gathered. Bro. Harbert Scott then led off in a masterly manner on the theme that man can not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. The line was so plainly drawn, and plank after plank of the great platform of man's redemption was adjusted in that way, that a wayfaring man though accounted a fool, need not err therein. After meeting we were beset on every hand with invitations to call on the people at their homes, so in company with Bro. H. Scott we called on an old lady and her daughter, and found in her (Mrs. Saunders) an admirable hostess, who in days gone by had been an enemy to this latter day work, but now is a friend. We left Birdseye in charge of Bro. M. R. Scott; and started for Bro. Ferguson's, who took us to Marietta, which we reached about one o'clock on Saturday. At seven o'clock we met in the school-house, with about seventy-five people. Some of these have tried to meet the doctrine logically, and some have tried to meet it physically; but we felt it our duty to warn them of those things that pertain to salvation. Sunday morning at ten a. m. we had a large congregation, as also at seven p. m. Monday, still raining, when we were joined by our brother from Birdseye, who traveled the entire journey in the rain. Bro. M. R. Scott works well. We continued the meetings until Thursday night; and then left for conference at Pleasant Ridge, in company with M. R. Scott, Harbert Scott, Bro. Wm. Nayan, and Bro. Wm. Robinson's son, Norman. We reached there about two p. m., on Friday, when we met those few isolated but faithful Saints in prayer and business meeting preparatory to conference, that we might more fully enjoy the Spirit of our Master. Conference convened in the Christian Church, (where Mr. Treat met Mark Forscutt in debate), and they kindly withdrew their appointment, and gave us full possession. Their presiding elder, Emery Terry, attended all of our meetings, in which I think much good has been done. After meeting Saturday night, when Bro. M. R. Scott had submitted an able argument against infidelity, we went home with an old gentleman who is an infidel. We had an appointment at Marietta for seven o'clock Monday night, which we reached at eight o'clock. A goodly number was waiting for us. We held meeting next night and then left for Tasswell, the closest point on the railroad. On account of rain and floods we had to walk home through mud and water. Had a terrible time. The city where I live I found entirely surrounded with water, and we never have witnessed such a terrible wreck of property. Fully one half of the city was under water, and thousands out of homes, and taking advantage of everything in the shape of a house that would turn rain. My little family was safe and sound, as were Bro. David Scott and family.

There are nine or ten Saints living in the city; no branch. We have no meetings at all, so we are at times left to ourselves, but we look for brighter days. Hoping and laboring to have a branch organized here,

I am fraternally yours,
WILL. KELLEY.

GUILFORD, Missouri,
February 24th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Herald comes to me every Saturday, for which I am very thankful. It seems like it is better week by week, and I wish it was printed in the Danish language; not for my own part, for I can read both languages very well, but for the sake of my countrymen, who can not read the English language. The letters from the faithful Elders are very good, and ought to strengthen every one to live upright before the Lord.

J. C. Foss has been here. He is a faithful Elder; gives good instructions, carries a good spirit with him. He will preach in Barnard to-day and part of next week. May the Lord bless him, and every member that is faithful, is my wish.

Your brother,
JACOB NELSON.

TYRE, Sanilac Co., Michigan,
March 2d, 1884.

I see in Herald of February 16th, 1884, a question asking what is meant by the talents in twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew, verse fourteen. The man represented here as traveling into a far country, is God, who called his own servants. These are they who are called of God. The goods spoken of here are the gospel given to them to preach throughout the land for the benefit of the human family. Verse fifteen. The talents spoken of here are the amount of light given to each one, and with light comes power. Verses sixteen, seventeen. These went forth doing the will of God, preaching the word; trusting in God they endured unto the end. Verse eighteen represents one who went not forth and preached the word. The light that God had given him he did not let shine, but was as one who hid it under a bushel. Verses nineteen to twenty-three. These two represented in the above five verses, have worked with a will, and by so doing have grown in grace and in the knowledge of God. Therefore gaining confidence in God, gaining power, they trusted in God, and not in man, (for it is written, "Cursed is he that trusteth in the arm of flesh,") they endured unto the end. They were as polished shafts in Israel, and did gather sheaves into the Lord's garner. They fought the good fight and kept the faith. Verses twenty-four to thirty. The one represented here did not preach the word, or sow the good seed. He did not set forth the light, but hid it. Did not grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, but rather sought after earthly things, perhaps afraid of the persecutions of the world. He thought the Lord was a hard Master, loved the ways of the world more than the ways of God. He started in the race, but did not endure unto the end; therefore the Lord taketh away the light he had given him, and also the reward that would have been his had he run well, and addeth it unto his good and faithful servant. Hence the Scripture, "For unto every one that hath shall be given; but to him that hath no light in himself, the light which God hath giver shall be taken away. He shall be counted as an unprofitable servant, and shall be cast into outer darkness."

Trusting in God, I am yours,
W. A. SINCLAIR.

CHESTER, Pa., February 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—In answer to "Enquirer," from Bevier, Missouri. The design of our Lord and Master, in this parable, is to teach us all to use our time, abilities and money, and whatever we have, diligently, in the best way we can, to promote his glory. These are our talents intrusted to us to use properly. Talents were some of gold and some of silver. A golden talent was worth thirty-five thousand dollars, and a silver one twenty-two hundred and fifty dollars. But some of our talents are worth a great deal, and are of more value than these, and must be answered for by even the poorest amongst us. If we diligently use them, although we may not be able to use them to the same advantage as others, yet our gracious Lord will approve of what we have done, and say to us now, and hereafter, "Well done, good and faithful servants," &c. But if we hide our talents, as if they were buried in the earth, do no good with them, produce nothing to God's glory and to him who gave them to us, then we shall be like the wicked, slothful servant mentioned. And perhaps God will take what he gave to us and give to another; but certainly he will cast us away, with those unprofitable, if we do not use them.

GENERAL NEWS.

March 14.—Further details of the desperate battle yesterday between Graham's forces and the rebels near Tamai Wells, show that during the confusion which ensued when the Arabs made their wild rush upon the British lines and caused them to retreat, the newspaper reporters and other non-combatants took part in the fray and used their revolvers freely and with deadly effect against the enemy. After the battle Osman's camp and three villages were burned. Among the trophies, Osman's standard was taken and Tewfik Bey's standard was recaptured. The British loss is considerably heavier than at first reported. The number of killed reaches roo and the wounded 150. Gen. Graham's forces are returning to Suakin. Osman Digma fled to the hills. The Arabs retired before the English slowly and sullenly. They were defeated, but not put to rout. They walked away as if sauntering through a bazaar, with arms folded or swinging at their sides. Many were shot down, but this did not hasten their companions' speed. It was impossible to take prisoners. The wounded Arabs would lie motionless without uttering a single cry or moan, and watch their chance to stab the advancing British with knife or spear. The victors walked among the wounded as among so many vipers. A wounded Arab killed a British marine during the night. Another attempted to stab Col. Stewart while his aide-de-camp was giving a wounded man water. Admiral Hewitt to-day sent out a fresh circular to the tribes, warning them that if they do not obey the summons to submit that the fate of the Arabs who fell at Teb and Tamanieb will overtake them. Gen. Graham telegraphs that the Sheiks are more peaceable since Osman's defeat. It is expected the road to Berber will be clear within ten days. Gen. Graham and Col. Stewart, with their staffs, have returned to Suakin. The wounded will return to-day. The latter are doing well. While destroying the rebel ammunition the troops unearthed and destroyed 2,000 Remington rifles. The wounded rebels state that Osman Digma's nephew and many Chiefs were killed in Thursday's fight. Osman was present early in the fight, but fled when defeat was inevitable. One thousand five hundred rebel corpses were found in one pit. Gen. Graham telegraphs that five officers and eighty-six men were killed and eight officers and 103 men wounded. Nineteen men are missing. The rebels numbered from 10,000 to 12,000. Three officers and seven men of the Naval Brigade were killed at the guns. Over 2,000 rebels were killed. The rebels charged regardless of their great loss. They left 600 dead at one point of the square.

Degaieff, the Russian Nihilist, and believed to have been the leader of the party that murdered Col. Sudeikin, arrived in England recently and has departed for America. Col. Dobrinski has been appointed successor to Col. Sudeikin as chief of the department in the military governorship of St. Petersburg for the preservation of order. A large secret fund has been placed at his disposal.

A mechanic named Jens Neilsen has been imprisoned for life at Copenhagen, Denmark, for arson. He confesses also to having set fire to the Victoria Docks in London in 1881.

The police to-day made a raid upon the haunts of the Anarchists at Pesth, Germany. They arrested the editors Zukunft and Slepszawa and thirty-six other persons.

Gen. Millot, commander of the French land-forces in Tonquin, telegraphs as follows from Phanghoa: "We marched this morning to Bacninh. The First Brigades, proceeding via Chi, carried in brilliant manner the heights of Tsungson, which were protected by five earthworks. The Second Brigade, supported by the flotilla, rapidly carried the defenses of Vatuoi and Dam Laobuoi, and resolutely pursued the enemy to the heights of Dahicua, which were occupied by a combined movement. The details of the operations succeeded perfectly. The troops marched admirably in spite of the difficult ground."

March 15.—The spirit of the Arab leaders in the Soudan revolt, appears still to be unbroken. As many as thirty tribes are still ready to maintain the war. Telegraphic communication was cut beyond Berber, and a steamer descending the Nile, was fired upon.

Gen. Millot telegraphs to the Minister of Marine that the French captured at Bacninh 100 pieces of artillery, including several Krupp guns, a large number of rifles, a quantity of gunpowder, and flags of the Chinese Generals. The senate to-day adopted a resolution congratulating the army in Tonquin on its success. Earl Granville, the British Minister for Foreign Affairs, has been appealed to, it is said, by Marquis Tseng, to bring about peace between China and France. The French, it is believed, will not be averse to negotiation.

In Berlin to-day it was semi-officially announced that the principal Powers of Europe had agreed to join in the confederation proposed jointly by Germany and France for the suppression of all anarchical forms of Socialism. The announcement was, however, coupled with the statement that the country most necessary to the success of the confederation, Switzerland; had finally and unreservedly refused to join. The Swiss Federal Council, in its note of declination, takes the position that the nature of the Government of Switzerland forbids and renders unnecessary the espionage and discrimination proposed, and states that, so far as Swiss experience has shown, the so-called anarchists are a vulgar and unimportant lot of criminals easily made amenable to the regular criminal laws and not worth the especial notice of the Government or of a confederation of governments. The attitude of Switzerland is a serious disappointment to Bismarck, and it is believed he will eventually cause the abandonment of the proposed confederation, which would be impracticable so long as Switzerland offered a harbor to anarchists.

In Paris there is much uneasiness in diplomatic circles by official information from Berlin to the effect that sudden and extraordinary activity has developed in the German navy. The Imperial Admiralty has just issued an order commanding the immediate doubling of the number of German marines and sailors. New submarine batteries on a most extensive scale have also been ordered. The German Government has also taken steps to establish on a permanent basis a German commercial station in West Africa.

A bandit band in the Province of Santa Clara, Cuba, had an encounter with the troops yesterday. Three bandits were killed and eleven taken prisoners. Of the remaining thirty, twenty-two gave themselves up and eight escaped. Among the last was Durace, the leader.

The French are advancing from Bacninh on Thanguyen and Langoon for the purpose of establishing a "scientific frontier."

The fuller reports of the battle Thursday in the Soudan, make it appear that it was a more extensive and important engagement than was indicated by the first dispatches. They do not, however, show that Gen. Graham has won a final victory. Although the British remained in possession of the field at the end of the battle, they have fallen back in one direction, while Osman's forces have fallen back in another, and have made no attempt to pursue their advantage to a decisive result. This fact throws a shade of doubt over the exultation of the official dispatches.

A paper called Free Speech has appeared at St. Petersburg, Russia. It summons the youth of Russia to oppose the despotic form of government, and says: "The Russian State machine is rapidly decaying. Discontent is increasing among all classes. Revolutionary ideas are spreading everywhere, even in the army. The day of victory is approaching." The paper strongly deprecates terrorism and favors a union of all branches of Socialists, who, it says, should pursue the desired end by moral energy, not by brute force.

The Cattle Quarantine Committee in the Neosho Falls district of Kansas have determined on the destruction of the herds in which the foot-and-mouth disease has appeared, the burning of the infected carcasses, and a thorough system of quarantine and disinfection.

Robert Smalls, one of the ablest men of the colored race in America, was elected to Congress from the Seventh District of South Carolina, in the place of Congressman Mackey, deceased. There was no opposition.

The spirit of Osman Digma and some of his fanatical adherents is far from broken. He has returned with as many as 2,000 followers to the neighborhood of his former encampment. He adopts the same tone in intercourse with his people as before the last disaster, and is exhorting them to a religious war. He assures them that in the third battle success will be theirs, but the tribes are much demoralized, as they reflect upon the full significance of their crushing defeat. Osman does not hesitate to make use of stern measures toward any followers who show signs of disaffection. Two Sheiks who attempted to leave the camp had been placed in chains. Admiral Hewitt's proclamation offering a reward for Osman's head reached the hands of Sheiks with him. They read it, and spurned it with supreme contempt. Osman's scouts to the number of 150 are watching close about Shandoub. They are under orders to kill all stragglers, whether English or of friendly tribes.

The Austrian Minister at Berne has sent the Swiss Bundesrath a note relative to revolutionary intrigues. This is regarded as the beginning of an international campaign against the anarchists.

Li Hung Chang, Viceroy of China, is submitting a basis for peace to the English and American Ministers at Peking, and asking them to intervene.

It is asserted that France will demand a heavy indemnity from China and will occupy Chinese territory to guarantee its payment. Gen. Millot, the commander of the French land forces in Tonquin, has been instructed to advance as far as he considered advisable. The occupation of Longson, Kavbary, and Lavkai is thought to be necessary in order to provide for the security of Tonquin. Gen. Millot telegraphs that the rout of the Chinese is complete. It is useless to pursue them further. Fort Phulang will be the advance post. A dispatch from Peking says the greatest exasperation exists here against France. If she advances her extravagant demands public opinion will prevent their acceptance. The Black Flags are on the verge of meeting, their pay being in arrears.

Gen. Ferrer has been arrested, at Madrid, Spain, Gen. Hidalgo has also been arrested. These officers are believed to be implicated in the widespread conspiracy against the Government.

The scene about the entrance to the House of Commons this afternoon, where numerous committees were sitting, was of a most unusual character. The clerks and porters carrying bags and boxes to the committee-rooms were stopped by the police and their parcels subjected to thorough examination, so as to prevent the possibility of the introduction of dynamite.

Alleged cases of trichiniasis in the vicinity of Latrobe, Pa., are reported. One death has resulted and two others are feared.

Illinois and Iowa farmers generally incline to the belief that the disease which has broken out among the cattle of Effingham county and other parts of Illinois, and near Wapello, in Iowa, is not foot-and-mouth disease, but foot-rot. Some of the veterinary surgeons also incline to this belief.

At a meeting of the Veterinary Association of the United States at Boston, resolutions were adopted attributing the spread of the foot-and-mouth disease in the vicinity of Portland, Me., to the carelessness of the sanitary officers at that place, charging the United States' quarantine authorities with being incompetent, and demanding a larger representation for the members of the veterinary profession on the Cattle Commission.

March 19.—France will not make peace with China except on a basis of indemnity for the cost of the war and a recognition of French supremacy over Tonquin.

Matters do not improve for the British in Sudan or Egypt. There is a general rising of the Arab tribes. Osman Digma's forces are being hourly augmented. Gen. Graham is calling for reinforcements from England. His troops are suffering very severely from the intense heat and the brackish water of the country. It is reported that Lupton Bey and his forces have been annihilated in Dongola.

Jenkinson, the head of the Irish detective department has organized a detective corps consisting of English, Irish, and American policemen to watch the operations of the dynamite emissaries in Great Britain.

The Swiss Federal Council has decided to grant the extradition of anarchists whenever asked for. Otherwise the anarchists will be expelled from the country.

Gen. Millot has decided to attack the Black Flags in Hunghoa. Advices from Saigon state the Governor of the colony has returned from Cambodia, where he concluded a convention with the King very favorable to France. It establishes a mixed tribunal consisting of ten Frenchmen and two mandarins, which will be empowered to determine the amount of direct contributions to France and settled all disputes between European nations. The King congratulates the Governor on the French success in Tonquin.

It is reported that negotiations between the Prussian and Russian Governments have led to the adoption by Prince Bismarck on the Egyptian question of the Russian programme, which is altogether opposed to the English. Russia won't hear of an English protectorate, and demands the absolute neutralization of the Suez Canal and the Nile Valley. The German Chancellor, who, under the pretext of neutrality, though favorable to English views, has hitherto stood aloof, has suddenly changed his attitude, and this evolution can not fail to be felt in the coming negotiations when the Porte will submit the Egyptian question to the Powers, and Russia, certain of German support, will call for a European Congress.

Several inhabitants of Badajos, Spain, concerned in the military rising of last August, have been arrested. One thousand five hundred rifles were discovered at Malaga.

According to the French Consul at Khartoum, Gen. Gordon acknowledges his inability to hold that city against the Arabs, and depends for support on Zobeir Pasha, "the king of the slave-dealers."

No opposition to the progress of the French army in Tonquin has been made manifest. The French, however, propose to take time by the forelock, and to establish a scientific frontier of garrison towns.

"United Ireland," the organ of the Parnellite party, is rejoiced at the stubborn opposition of Osman Digma's force to the British, and in reference to the reward offered for the head of the Mahdi's lieutenant, says: "Ireland prays that Osman may escape British assassination and be spared to lead his gallant spearmen to victory."

Simon Beattie, a Chicago veterinary surgeon who has inspected the infected herds at Neosho Falls, Kas., says they are not suffering from foot-and-mouth disease, nor any other contagious distemper, as far as he is able to determine. He inclines to the belief that the disease is nothing more than foot-rot.

The Kansas Legislature passed a bill providing for the appointment of a State Veterinary Surgeon. Considerable progress was also made with a measure providing for the appointment of a Live-Stock Sanitary Commission.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

During the last week the number of business failures in the United States was 174, against 230 the previous week. The number of failures in Canada showed no decrease.

The rush of miners and prospectors to the vicinity of the Cœur d'Alene gold discoveries continues. Every train on the Northern Pacific Road carries hundreds. In Eagle City there are 3,000 people waiting.

Great efforts are now being made by the Government of Canada for the improvement of its means of transportation. A large proportion of the new avenues of transportation are to compete with the railroads and canals of the United States, and in addition to this they will open new land to cultivation and markets, and will in this way bring to bear a new competition upon the American farmer. All but 726 miles of the 3,268 of the Canadian Pacific Road are completed. This road will compete sharply with the railroads of this country not only for continental business, but ultimately for that which will spring up overland with Asia. Its wheat-fields will add millions of bushels a year to the abundant supplies that are already beginning to drag down the price in the world's markets. Mr. Nimmo, of the Bureau of Statistics, in his recent report on the "Reciprocity of Transportation Facilities Between the United States and Canada," gives a resume of the extraordinary concessions and subventions which the people of that country have made to the Canada Pacific. The gift outright to it of 714 miles of completed road, worth at least $20,000,000, a subsidy of $25,000,000 in money, a grant of 25,000,000 acres of land, all of which is to be land fit for settlement, a guarantee of 3 per cent dividends on the capital stock of $100,000,000, freedom from taxation of all materials imported for building the road, of the stations, buildings, equipment, and capital stock, and of the land-grant for twenty years, a prohibition of the construction of any competing roads for twenty years—these bounties and privileges show the people of Canada to be in earnest with regard to the completion of the road, which they look upon as not less important politically than commercially. Besides this, the Canadian Government has appropriated the sum of $45,115,648 for the canals to connect the upper lakes with tidewater on the St. Lawrence. These canals will compete with the Erie Canal, which is far inferior to them in width and depth, and through their agency Montreal will compete with Portland.

According to the Cincinnati Price Current the number of hogs packed in the seven leading packing cities of the United States during the last winter was 3,867,485, against 4,450,940 during the winter of last year. The falling off in Chicago alone was 546,439 hogs.

Chicago merchants report a scarcity of seed-corn in the northern parts of Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa.

Much of the winter wheat of Illinois is said to have been killed, or badly injured, by the late frosts.

It is estimated that one hundred and fifty thousand bushels of seed corn will be needed in the state of Wisconsin.

The Mark Lane Express in its review of the British grain trade for the last week says the trade in cargoes off coast was more active, but the supply bare. California was taken at 39@41s. Two cargoes have gone to Havre at 39s 11½d@39s 3d without extra freight. Seven cargoes have arrived, ten were sold, eight withdrew, and one remained. Sales of English wheat for a week, 59,699 quarters at 37s. 7d. per quarter, against 57,824 quarters at 42s 2d the corresponding week of last year.

Last week the clearings for the whole country fell to $824,497,411, a very great decrease from the report of the previous week, and a shrinkage of one-fifth from the like transactions by check of the corresponding week in 1883. The squeeze has been felt most seriously in the East, one of the New England manufacturing towns showing a falling off of 40 per cent. The extremes since 1880 have been $1,700,000,000 and $650,000,000.

At Tetschen, Bohemia, 5,000 factory operatives have struck.

There seems to be no doubt that there will be a rich yield from the mines in the Couer d'Alene district, and the rush of prospectors continues. Several rich leads have been struck already. Building operations at Eagle City are progressing. Timber fetches a large price, and working-men are paid from $5 to $8 per day.

March 16.—Loss by fire at Milwaukee, Wis., $50,000. New York City, $40,000.

The Conyngham coal mine, five miles from Wilkesbarre, Pa., took fire, and was burning at latest accounts. Fortunately no miners were down at the time.

Landslides and washouts along the Northern Pacific Road have caused a delay of three days in the arrival of through trains. The road is now cleared of obstructions.

Two freight trains near South Bend, Ind., collided, wrecking both engines, a number of cars, and wounding four train men, one of them fatally. A building fell at Dubuque, Iowa, crushing one man to death.

March 17.—A fire at South Chicago at an early hour yesterday morning destroyed nineteen frame buildings, causing a total loss of $65,000. No lives were lost, but a number of people had very narrow escapes. Two barns near Omaha, Neb., burned to the ground last Sunday morning, and eighteen horses and twenty-six cows perished in the flames; besides a large amount of grain. Loss $10,000.

A snowslide is reported at Conundrum Gulch, Colo., about seventy miles west of Leadville. A small mining-camp was buried and five men killed.

March 18.—Loss by fire at St. Louis, Mo., $75,000. Ashland, Ill., grain elevator, $9,500. Knife Falls, Minn., incendiary, $35,000. Moberly, Mo., $44,000. Oldenburg, Ind., flouring mill, $20,000. Durham, Ont., foundry, $25,000.

There was an explosion of gas in a merchant's house at Paris, France. A police officer and fireman were killed and twenty persons injured, including a number of passers-by.

March 19.—Loss by fire at Chicago, $9,000.

A Morgan City, La., special reports a severe storm there this morning. Several small dwellings and fences were demolished and roofs damaged. The Presbyterian Church was moved from its foundation. The church at Berwick was completely wrecked.

A violent storm of wind, attended with torrents of rain, swept over Louisiana to-day from the gulf coast to the State line. There was a good deal of damage done to property, and in New Orleans fences and signs were blown down and buildings unroofed. Some injury was also done to the shipping in port, caused by vessels breaking loose from their moorings and falling foul of each other, but no grave disaster occurred, and there was no loss of life. Public interest was centered on the river levees, which are already oppressed by the great weight and force of the mighty river, which lashes its barriers and is constantly eating them away. Under the influence of the wind the waves were driven over the levees at twenty places along the city's front, and but for the numbers of anxious people gathered along the banks prepared with tools and material to stop the incipient crevasses many serious disasters would have occurred. The situation at best is bad enough.

During the day numerous breaks were reported. The worst of these was in the Parish of West Baton Rouge, where a serious break had occurred, and which in spite of all exertions was rapidly widening. It is on the west side of the river in a rich sugar country. At Mulatto Point, just above Belsir plantation, a crevasse was discovered this morning. It was rapidly widening, defying every exertion from experienced planters to stop it. It will inundate many miles of country on the west bank of the river. It was seventy-five feet wide at dark. The crevasse at Fashion plantation, on the west bank, twenty-nine miles above the city, in the Parish of St. Charles, is a serious break, and there is but little hope that it can be closed at the present high stage of water and in the face of the rising river. A very serious crevasse is announced this evening in Orleans Parish, west bank, on the Flathers place, seven miles below Algiers. It was sixty feet wide and ten feet deep, and will tax the utmost efforts to close it.

Among the minor breaks two are reported in St. James Parish, near the court-house, and two opposite New Orleans—one at Freetown Ferry and one near the Texas Pacific Railroad stock-yards. They were taken in time, and will probably be secured. The Davis crevasse on the west bank in St. Charles Parish, which broke out last week and flooded the Morgan & Texas Pacific Railway is still open with little or no hope of stopping it. Steam pile-drivers and all the forces and appliances of the two railroad companies appear to have been employed in vain, and the work is abandoned.

The flood-water from the Morganza crevasse, which broke in Pointe Coupe Parish Friday last, has reached the Atchafalaya River, and has flooded that stream at the West Melville crossing of the Texas Pacific Railroad. The railroad track there is forty inches under water, and trains are stopped. The country on the Vicksburg & Shreveport Railroad on the Louisiana side of the river is all under water from Delta nearly to Monroe, a distance of seventy miles. The Morganza crevasse is more than 3,000 feet wide, and is pouring a river into the country. As soon as it fills up the Atchafalaya basin, which receives its floods, the water will spread over a vast area of country.

The Mississippi River has risen from nine to twelve inches to-day nearly all the way from Vicksburg down to the mouth of Red River, and this swell must be expected to do great damage to the levees below there.

A violent shock of earthquake was felt at Heart's Content, Newfoundland, Monday. Houses were shaken, the ice in the lakes and harbor was rent, and the hills rocked. Last night the sky over the place was illuminated as if by a great conflagration.

Mrs. G. D. Alsop, who resides near Louisville, Ky., gave four of her children opium, instead of powdered rhubarb, by mistake. Two of them died. The other two are not expected to live.

March 20.—Information to-night from Bayou Sara is that the Morganza levee has been entirely washed away for its full length of 7,000 feet. The first break in the sandpile occurred a week ago, when a gap of sixty feet wide occurred, and the water commenced pouring through a stream twenty-five feet deep. The conviction is general that the break was a most fortunate thing for the people of New Orleans during yesterday's storm in which the river was fully an inch above high-water mark in front of that city and running over the levee in twenty places. Had the water that escaped through the crevasse come that way it would inevitably have inundated the city and put its streets many feet under water. The news from the levees to-day is not discouraging. No new breaks are reported, and those that last occurred are being repaired. The water is falling slowly, and the day has been sunshiny and pleasant.

A portion of a train went down an embankment thirty feet, near Salem, O., by which two persons were killed, and several others injured. The boiler of the engine exploded and hurled the fireman and engineer a distance of four hundred yards, killing them instantly.

KIRTLAND DEBATE.

EDITOR HERALD:—The discussion closed here on Friday evening, the 7th instant, after the holding of eighteen sessions. There was a large audience in attendance, and the usual interest manifest. A number of Campbellites, but few of whom had been in attendance on any previous evening, and they only occasionally, were down from Chester, in order to brace up their falling hero in his last effort. Braden came in with an instrument of death and destruction in his hand, which consisted of a wooden stick about the length of an ordinary pitchfork handle, and rounded and pointed with iron, which gave it the appearance of a fish spear. This he exhibited during the evening as a Mormon war implement, had in use at the time the Saints lived in Kirtland. Some of the citizens said they had used it to spear fish with many a time, but none had ever heard it charged before that it was invented by the Saints in an early day in order to defend themselves against their enemies, save one, a friend and fellow Disciple of Braden, and he only had heard so. Further inquiry into the matter proved that only three of these were ever seen by any one here, and that after a large number of the Saints had moved away. As Braden walked towards the platform bearing his war relic, there was quite a demonstration of applause. This was something of a surprise; for he had conducted himself in such an ungentlemanly and abusive manner, that the regular audience had utterly refused for a number of days to applaud any thing that he said. He not only attacked his opponent, but the audience itself; calling the people Infidels, Danites and clackers, with their brains in their heels. He went to such an extreme in treating the audience with ridicule, and slandering the living and dead, male and female, old and young, alike, that there was strong talk among the citizens of holding an indignation meeting, in order to banish the coarse slanderer from the community. But they decided to hear him through. The evening's discussion was rather exciting, each speaker being frequently applauded. At the conclusion, Braden's friends from Chester, presented to him a large family Bible; Mr. Hayden, a Campbellite preacher of Willoughby, making the presentation speech. His speech was a sly, cunning, Campbellite effort, in which he carried the idea, that Clark Braden had been defending the Bible against the Infidel attacks of E. L. Kelley. Braden replied that he was highly gratified at receiving such a testimonial at their hands; and that he had been defending that blessed volume for lo! these many years, and proposed to continue, &c. But

E. L. had learned that the time to nip a thistle is when it first buds, and he arose and congratulated the Rev. Clark on his good fortune at receiving such a treasure at the hands of his admirers; and said that he hoped that he would read it, and that it would do him good, so that if he ever got into another discussion with the Latter Day Saints, he would be better posted, and know more about what is in the Bible than he does now. This had a quieting effect on the searchers after truth who came only to the last evening of the discussion, and brought their Bible along with them, in order to award their defender of their faith for his effort. Of course they knew he was deserving, and knew who to reward before ever hearing a speech. This scene, enacted by the Campbellites in order to cast an impression that they are the only Bible believers and Bible defenders, was received as an insult by nearly the whole of the audience, who had been regular attendants at the discussion; and several of the Chester people came up and said, "I want you to know that we did not have anything to do in presenting the Bible to such a man as that."

Braden's great effort and aim all through the discussion, was to attack men and women's character, who had at some time professed the faith of the Saints. Though he was reminded time and again, that such a course was not argumentative, neither a proper method to test the merits of any work; and if accepted as a proper course by which to test institutions, religious, or what not, that all alike would have to go by as unworthy; for facts and systems of faith are one thing, and the conduct of people is another. That if all is to rest on the actions of the people, all institutions must go down, Christianity as taught by Christ along with the rest. That sin and iniquity had covered the earth and society from Abel to the present time; and that patriarchs and prophets, apostles and elders, had exhibited their share of human weakness all along the ages. That no church or sect could stand tried by such a rule. That the denomination of which his opponent is a leader, will go down with the rest. But Braden could not take a hint, nor be persuaded from his onslaught on character, and tirade of slurs. At last E. L. said, "Seeing my opponent so persistent in his course, I will just read a little extract from a paper; not because there is any argument in it, but to show my opponent the force and character of his method of attack." He then read the following from the Table Rock Argus (Neb.) in the Falls City Journal:

"This office has received a pamphlet entitled 'Ingersoll Unmasked,' by Clark Braden. Braden requests us to advertise himself and his pamphlet free, which is characteristic of the dead beat. The Kearney Journal, Oakland Independent, Omaha Watchman, and a few other exchanges, have puffed this fraud, and we hope they will publish our version of Braden Unmasked. We personally know Clark Braden to be an unscrupulous liar. A number of years ago, in Pawnee City, he villainously slandered the character of Joshua R. Giddings, the old anti-slavery hero, for which he was taken to account then and there. Braden is a liar by nature, and a charlatan by profession. He exhausted his resources for knav-ery in this State, and is no longer recognized by his own church in the east. No respectable publishing house would take Braden's pamphlet, and he was obliged to print it at his own expense and in his own name."

"The editor of the Argus received a similar pamphlet with the same request. From what we can learn of Mr. Braden, he is a scoundrel and villain of the blackest dye, and is worthy of no endorsement at the hands of respectable publishers. Christianity evidently needs no such defenders as Clark Braden, formerly of Pawnee county, Nebraska."

The reading of this was greeted with such rounds of applause by the audience, that the reader had to request them to keep quiet, so that he could proceed. It was noticeable that this struck Braden like a clap of thunder out a clear sky; but he nerved himself to the situation, and never said a word. The next evening however, he replied by saying that the article was gotten up and published by an infidel; was read by an infidel, and applauded by an infidel audience; but failed to say whether it was true or false. He was again reminded that the article was read, not because there was any argument in it, but to show that Mr. Braden's method of warfare was unjust and productive of no good; and that if carried out it would not only destroy all religious institutions, but Mr. Braden himself.

He had made several boastful threats during the discussion, that he could prove by the citizens of Kirtland that Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, Martin Harris and others, were guilty of such and such things. During the last evening of the discussion his opponent called attention to the fact that he had from the first of the discussion challenged him to produce a single witness, and put him upon the witness stand for examination, who would support his assertions, and he had failed to produce but a single one, and that was a Campbellite Preacher, who lived far away, and he knew not a single material fact against the church or any of the prominent men connected with it; but did confess upon cross examination, to having stolen from one of them. And he charged Braden again of not being able to bring the witnesses he had claimed to support his statements; and said he was ready to meet him before a proper officer yet, and bring witnesses in Kirtland, and test the matter. Braden being thus driven to the wall, said he would do it, but failed to set his time, or even make a move to produce his evidence. After adjournment he was again asked to fix the time and bring his witnesses, and the time of one o'clock, Saturday, was fixed. The Justice was on hand, and about two o'clock Braden arrived with two witnesses, the same preacher who had formerly been on the stand, and Mr. William Smith, whom those who attended the Kirtland Conference last Spring, will remember as the person who talked in their social meetings, and paid such respect to some of the officers. If Mr. Braden expected much of these men he was certainly disappointed, as will be seen by their testimony which will be furnished to the readers of the Herald, to show the worst that can be proved against the Saints by those called old settlers at Kirtland.

With this will also be given the testimony of a half dozen or more of the old citizens, whom Kelley produced, and whose testimony is clear and explicit, and will be of value to the cause where men try to attack the work on the ground of character, and use against the Saints the weapons of falsehood and villification. At the close of the discussion, Braden returned thanks to the moderators, and then to the few in the audience who were ladies and gentlemen, he said, and the rest he would turn over to Mr. Kelley. Besides the Campbellites who were out that night for the first time to make a show for Braden, he evidently turned the entire audience, with the exception of a possible half dozen, over to his opponent. Thus ended the memorable Braden-attack on the Latter Day Saints; "war to the knife and the knife to the hilt."

The discussion had hardly closed, however, when the citizens of Kirtland came out en masse, and gave a great surprise to E. L. Kelley, Mrs. E. L., and myself, bringing with them a finely prepared supper for making the evening most enjoyable, and a number of presents to E. L. and wife, as tokens of their esteem and appreciation of his work in the discussion; and last but not least, a few excellent presents to W. H. and wife, the which shall ever call to my mind the good will and unselfishness of Kirtland's worthy citizens. Best of all was the able address of Mr. L. B. Sanborn, and the hearty sentiments which the large concourse of citizens expressed through him, for the work of our side in the past discussion, and our labors for the Master's cause for some time past. Others have given particulars of the evenings exercises; and I leave those disinterested to tell the story. It is now given out, five days after the discussion, that the Campbellites are going to have a reunion, and make a donation for Braden to beat Kelley's if they can. But whatever they do in their little side show at this late date, one thing is certain; they will have few, if anybody, to assist them, who attended through the debate.

WM. H. KELLEY.

KIRTLAND, O., March 10th, 1884.

EVERY FRUIT IN THE SEASON THEREOF.

AFTER a somewhat matured reflection,—the result of nearly thirty-nine years of observation, research and practical experiment; and at the age of fifty years save one, I am prepared to give it as my conviction, that properly understood, the "Word of Wisdom" is the grandest guide to a healthful diet ever given to man. I have read volumes on dietetics, but in this "Word of Wisdom" I find in the briefest words, the sum total of a life long experience and study: nay more, for therein is a promise beyond the power of the finite mind to search out or even conceive without the aid of inspiration from the divine architect, who hath planned all things from the beginning with an "eternal fitness," unto the end.

"All wholesome herbs God hath ordained for the constitution, nature, and use of man." The word "wholesome" in this connection is to be understood "after the manner of our language," (Covenants: 5), tending to promote health, and is particularly applicable under the rule for the "sick, who have not faith to be healed," (Doc. and Cov. page 144, par. 12), though not necessarily exclusively to them, as the term "use of man" implies a wider range than a medicinal remedy, as the sequence "to be used with prudence and thanksgiving," implies, and is in accord with the apostolic injunction regarding food. "For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer." (1 Tim. 4: 5). In Ohio (where I believe this revelation was given) and elsewhere, it was—and may be yet—a custom to gather from the first tender herbage for "pottage," as prudence and experience might suggest as good for food, among the choice varieties was the "poke" sprout, which had to be selected with particular reference to "the season thereof," or it might result a la mode school of the prophets, "death in the pot." (2 Kings 4: 40).

But there is another branch to this subject in which I feel a deeper interest, i. e., the text which heads this article, especially "the season thereof." Grain is not affected by time if properly secured from moisture and vermin, as regards "seasons;" consequently the limitation to "season" has little or no bearing thereon—and therefore leaves that part of the arrangement unqualifiedly applicable under all circumstances; hence there is no "unclean" grain—distinctions of any sort, nor circumscription neither present nor past.

Man has learned the preserving art to perfection, sufficient for the preservation of meats—flesh—for an indefinite period. But it is a question whether this is essential for man's necessities or according to the mind of the Lord in the face of the declaration. "I the Lord hath ordained" "flesh of beasts and fowls of the air for the use of man." This act of setting apart animal creatures does not reach beyond the covenant with Noah after the flood. At the time of creation it was ordained for "the cow and the bear to feed together," and the lion to eat the same food as the ox, and that man though monarch, was not the "terror" of all he surveyed; and the "fear" of him was not "upon every beast of the field, and fowl of the air, and fish of the sea," until the ratification of the Noatic covenant. Then in after years a more clearly defined distinction between clean and unclean birds, beasts and fishes. In the Christian dispensation this distinctive line has been removed, but in our day a circumscription has been laid on all flesh foods on the earth, enjoining "prudence," "thanksgiving," moderation and to seasons of "winter (intense ?) cold or famine." But the line is drawn still closer on "fowls of heaven (wild ?) and all wild animals," being used only in times of famine and excess of hunger."

First, then, we have absolute abstinence from all flesh foods. Second, free access to all animated nature for food, restricted only from the use of blood. Third, the definitive line between clean and unclean. Fourth, the only limitation being abstinence from things strangled, meats offered to idols and blood and thanksgiving, and last, but not least for us, is the enjoinder to "thanksgiving" moderation and seasons of winter, cold, or famine. Science sustains the decree, and my own experience confirms it. So much then for the "season thereof" on that part of the question.

"And every fruit in the season thereof." Among the first ripening fruits of the season is the strawberry. This luscious little favorite can not be surpassed for excellence—in its season—the period of ripening. Thence onward the well ordered home is supplied with a succession of fruits, delicious in their "season," including the cherry, currant, apple, pear, peach, the generous melon and grape. During these successive fruit seasons, my experience has been,

My hateful eat,
The same repeat,
And like them every one.
O pure and fair,
This food so rare,
Made up of all that's best.
That greenish globe
In emerald robe
A mold of luscious size.
Eat slice on slice
And scoop it nice,
And throw the rind away.
Fruits! I love them well
As time could tell,
And never knew they hurt me;
But greet the Spring
That ushers in,
Nature's feasting seasons.

Of all Summer fruits, apples are about the only ones that can be kept in their natural condition through the winter months successfully; therefore the apple "season" is from crop to crop, or nearly so. So it is with potatoes, turnips, cabbages, onions, some varieties of squashes, &c. I have given much attention to gardening in Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Kansas. My observation has taught me that melons of the same year's plantings and at intervals, only attain perfect development at about one period, or season." I have frequently selected handsome perfect melons, and laid them carefully away, trying various plans to preserve their flavor and excellence. I have cut them at various times and as late as Christmas, and even where they gave every appearance of excellent preservation; but was invariably surprised to find what a long way a small quantity would extend in sating my desire. As God has ordained and created foods for the "constitution and nature of man," adapting "all grain as good" for his purpose, in conjunction with fruits, in and above ground, yet there is a distinctive recommend given to "remember and keep this rule" as a commandment, before the promise is made.

Oranges, lemons, figs, with other tropical fruits, and rice, are productions of other climes than ours, and enter very largely into the food portions of men in those climes. Cocoa nuts, dates, figs, peppers and other spices, are productions of iceless regions. The natives of those regions use them as common things of diet, and of them form bone, muscle, sinew, brain, and attain the full stature of manhood, with physical qualifications suitable to the demands of their surroundings—lithe, active forms. In another clime where frost reigns supreme, the conditions are reversed; train-oil and blubber supplant the acids and fruits of the sunny south. The natives feast on these oleaginous substances, which nature produces by sea and land, and grow to the measure of manhood, fitted for the turmoil and inclement surroundings of their seemingly inhospitable country.

May we not find in these two divergings a testimony of the wisdom exercised by the great lawgiver—one "in times of winter, cold, famine and excessive hunger," so prevalent in the ice bound north; the other among the tropical plants, fruits and spices of the "sunny south," where perpetual spring time and harvest abound, and where winter and cold reign supreme? Where man becomes adapted to his elementary, and natural surrounding, and these surroundings adapted to his necessities?

But Zion is established between these diverging conditions; and we as her children are clustering around her borders. Our location is composed of both elements. Our oleaginous cravings are supplied from the pig sty and the cattle stall. We take the tender twig, and seed of "the precious fruits brought forth by the sun," and engraft them into our soil. And when the sun pours down his burden of heat, we pluck the toothsome morsels "in their season." When the frosts of autumn bear tidings of the approaching cold blasts of the north, we remember our oleaginous stores to furnish the needed fuel to withstand the chilling breath of the ice-crowned king.

Dried, preserved, and canned fruits are perfectly admissible, though not necessarily essential as food stores in this land of unlimited resources. They are but substitutes at most, and as such aid in the general supply of "variety," rather than the dependence. It is certainly evident to the reflective mind, that the graduated qualities of summer, fall and winter fruits, especially apples, are so adapted as to supply the demand of our constitution and nature in their natural condition, with the necessary material for our health and comfort, without resort to artificial means of preservation. And in accord with that already said, we have found that potatoes, cabbage, beans, turnips, squashes, besides the varieties of grains, &c., are well calculated with the flesh foods added—to make life quite endurable without the aid of canned fruits. Dried and canned goods are not to be despised, especially for the sick-room. So also may we say of fruits grown in other countries. The enumerations of food productions in the Word of Wisdom are only those that are produced in the climate of Zion's location; concerning foreign production nothing is said. Tea, coffee, spices, prunes, oranges, rice, &c., are not mentioned, neither in approval nor otherwise. But this I know, that the soil and climate—ours especially—produce foods in abundant variety and adaptability for all needs and comfort. I am fully convinced, that if there is any element in rice, tea, coffee or spices, essential to the nature and constitution of man, the climate where he dwells can, and will produce it, by imported plant, seed, or other method. The burden of the revelation herein referred to, is an injunction to temperance. While strong drink is prohibited, wine is enjoined as essential to Christian obligation. Tobacco too is tabooed as a beverage, in common with strong drink, yet both are useful in their proper places.

During the past thirty-nine years of my life, I have not used strong drink of any kind, save in a very limited capacity in the form of medicine. Never drank a glass of beer in my life, nor used tobacco in any form—except one cigar; rarely ever drink anything stronger than water; flesh meats I have always used sparingly. These principles were adopted and put in practice many years before I had any knowledge of the latter day work. I endorse them as true temperance principles; but temperance is not abstinence. I am sometimes amused and grieved, when I read some of the earnest outpourings, of some of my brethren on the tobacco question, and at times would fain apologize for a seeming want of charity toward those who can not, or do not practice, as they (the writers) see. I would to God that every Latter Day Saint were in practice even more perfect than I have been. But when I find a dear Saint, especially one who has spent a life of usefulness to his fellow man, and I see him sipping comfort from a cup of tea, or wreathing his trials in clouds of curling smoke, I can not find it in my heart to chide him; perchance when the Book of Life is opened, my case may not be brighter than his. "UNDERSTANDING OF THE PRUDENT HID."

WHILE meditating upon the above caption this morning, a thought entered my mind in such sober plainness, that it almost looks like drollery. The idea itself is a sober one of great weight. But it is indeed a singular thought, that any good thing should transpire in this generation, that should cause the "understanding of the prudent to be hid, and the wisdom of the wise to fail." In what then must such wisdom and prudence consist? It seems to me rather droll, if not foolish, that such a great outcry should be made against only one "false prophet" upon the whole earth; as though just one false prophet could do more damage, in this generation, than all the false teachers in Christendom could do good. The prudent have forseen the evil of prophets, and hid themselves from it, under the wise conclusion, that there never should be any more but false ones. Consequently all that the false teachers have now to do, is to "beware of them." It is indeed high time, that such understanding was "hid;" yes, and deeply covered, together with all such sectarian popularity as has obtained a place in the mind of the nominally wise. For if I can read right in the true gospel prophecy, it is not that false prophets in the last days, but false teachers, should bring in or introduce damnable heresies. These "heaps" of false teachers that men now "procure to themselves"—by hiring them, are they that do the great damage by "turning the ears of the people away from the truth, so that they will not endure sound doctrine." But all these "heaps" of jargon will club together, like Pilate and Herod, to war against one man, one unpopular, poor man, of no reputation. Pilate the good and Herod the king, enemies to each other, now make up and unite together, like all the jarring sects in Christendom, to cry out, "away with him." But the time draws near, when this current will run up stream, unto the overwhelming of all who help to put it in motion. J. S. C.

THE AUSTRALIAN MISSION.

DEAR HERALD:—You are ever a welcome visitor, and in reading your pages I take much delight. The history and progress of the latter day work is the first and greatest thought of the true Latter Day Saint; and as one called to take part with my brethren in the spread of the gospel, and ever praying for its prosperity both at home and abroad; and as the General Conference is near at hand, my mind is drawn out to feel after the far off and scattered flock of Australia. I am satisfied that mission is not properly understood, neither has it been properly represented in the conference reports for the last six or seven years. I have waited to see the report corrected, but have waited in vain. The saints there are far scattered; and before I left, many moved off hundreds of miles, branches were broken up, and some became careless and weak in the faith; others fell back into the world and became unworthy. The few in Sydney remain about as they were. The twelve composing the branch at Port Stephens, with Bro. Buckman as Elder, all moved away, and have never reported since. The once flourishing branch at Waratah, became the Wallsend Branch. Bro. Gillen labored there, and added quite a number. The branch at Bungwall once numbering twenty-three, with Elder John Wright as president, nearly all moved away. But nearly all are firm in the work, though divided from each other. The Bungay Branch on the Manning River, with Bro. Luther Ballard president, nearly all moved away, and now form the Nambucca Branch. Bro. Gillen also added quite a number there. But along the Manning River there are still a number of scattered members, and many friendly to the cause. I left New South Wales and went to Victoria, some seven hundred miles; preached at several points, and found friends, baptized six, and left several believing. Bro. Gillen also went there, baptized many, and organized a branch. This was at Queen's Ferry, Western Port. The greater part of the Saints are standing firm in the work.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." Perhaps they have put more into the coffers of the church, than any of the same number now in the Reorganization. Their cry now is for help. Send us some faithful ministers. We want a shepherd, &c., &c. Can we hear this appeal from time to time, and not feel in our inmost soul that they are brethren and sisters of the same fold. Why should a mission so important be neglected? Why start the mission if not with a determination to carry it to the end? The Lord has said, "Ye can not now prosecute many foreign missions." But does not say ye shall not prosecute any, nor build up those already begun. I am aware that some are opposed to the church supporting foreign missions now, because of the expense attached to sending Elders abroad. But so far as I am personally concerned, the Australian Mission did not cost the Church in America one cent. I sent to the Church more in tithing than I received to take me out there, besides hundreds of dollars I paid into the office for books, Heralds, &c.; and all the long years on that mission, I never received one cent from the church in this land; I did not need it. I found a people open-hearted, and ever willing to assist in every hour of need. Neither was my family a burden to the Church here. Perhaps all the support received did not exceed two hundred dollars in all my absence on that mission, of five years and seven months. I hope that mission will receive much consideration at the coming conference. The Lord has said,—"It is not expedient that the Elders of the first quorums be sent out of the land of America, until the work of the Reorganization of my church be more fully established," &c. The wisdom in this will no doubt be made manifest in the near future; but there are other Elders who are worthy of confidence of the Church, men both of wisdom and experience, who, judging by their past labors, are worthy of recommendation to that mission; and although the sacrifice may be great, they are willing to aid in looking up the scattered of the flock, and adding to the number such as God may give. I shall ever believe that in that far off land, a great church of the Saints shall arise. They are a prosperous and growing nation, in a rich and good land; and as we as a body are getting better understood over the world, and the truth becoming more manifest, by the signs of the times, we expect many who once stood afar off, will begin to consider and enquire after the way of the Lord. To aid this good thought, let us pray that the Divine Spirit may direct in the calling forth and sending ministers to the help of the needy and lonely. Far be it from me to dictate to superior wisdom; but merely give my thoughts as suggestions, hoping the same may lead to the help of those who are, and ever shall be, near to my heart.

Never can I reflect on the Australian Mission, but my heart is filled with gratitude to God, for unbounded mercy and loving kindness, in directing my steps and opening up my way among strangers, when alone, having laid my traveling companion in the silent grave. I was cheered and borne up by the Good Spirit, when on foot and alone, in the dreary woods. The trees, the flowers, the birds, were my companions; and all nature spoke praise, while I traveled. Sometimes twenty miles in the wilderness, without seeing a house or a single person, startled only at times by the thundering leap of the kangaroo, or the scream of the parrot. I baptized a few here and there, scattered over hundreds of miles; and the thoughts of meeting them, the kindest of hearts, helped to cheer me on; and the hope of letters from the loved ones at home, was another great comfort in those lonely years, never to be forgotten. Being assured of a safe return; and that my family would be preserved, which was given unto me by Him who has all wisdom, I never feared. Often when asked by the Saints why I could be so cheerful so far from home and family, my reply was, "I am not on my own business, or I might not feel so well." Whoever may be sent, may consider themselves at home when they land in Sydney. They will find friends. It is not wisdom that one go alone. If possible two or more should be sent. The wisdom of the law on this point can easily be seen. Ever praying for the welfare of the cause, both at home and abroad, I remain in the faith,

Yours,

G. RODGER.

sult and wound the members, and destroy the faith of the church of which he is an officer, and has not remonstrated nor attempted a defense of the doctrine of the church; therefore be it Resolved, that we consider the course of said Elder Riedel to be decidedly inconsistent, and deserving of censure; and that a committee of three be appointed to visit and labor with Bro. Riedel, and seek if possible to reclaim him from his error, and obtain from him satisfactory explanation. Brn. J. T. Kinnaman, T. W. Smith and I. N. Roberts, were appointed said committee.

Afternoon Session.—Petition from the Boonsborough Branch: "Whereas, it was found at the last conference of the Des Moines District, that General Conference had never severed us from the Galland's Grove District, have expressed for our release as we have desired. Therefore, be it Resolved, That in pursuance of the suggestion of the last conference of the Des Moines District, we hereby petition the General Conference of 1884, through the delegates from the Des Moines District, that action be taken in our case, releasing us from the Galland's Grove District, and attaching us to the Des Moines District. Put before and passed unanimously by the Boonsborough Branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, this 15th day January, 1884."

Resolved, That our delegates be authorized to present said petition to the General Conference.

Whereas, of late there has been considerable difficulty in harmonizing between church recorder and secretary of our district; and whereas a portion of this at least grows out of there being other books used for records, instead of those furnished by the church; Therefore be it Resolved, That all the branches be required to purchase record books at the Herald Office, and all matters be transcribed as soon as it can be done, by those most available. That we respectfully petition the General Conference, to be held at Stewartville, Mo., April 6th, 1884, to grant unto the Des Moines District, the following defined territory of the following named counties; and that such be known as the district of Des Moines; viz, beginning at south-west with Madison county, extending eastward to the east line of Washington county, extending northward on the east to along Johnson, Linn, Buchanan and Bremer counties on the west; northward along western border of Madison, Dallas, Boon, Hamilton and Wright counties.

Moved that Elder I. N. White be appointed as delegate to represent the Des Moines District at the General Conference. That Elder R. Etzenhouser also act as a representative of the Des Moines District at the General Conference. That we sustain I. N. White as president, and John Sayer as secretary for the next three months.

Whereas, we desire the return of Brn. J. F. McDowell and R. Etzenhouser to the district to labor for the coming year; Therefore, be it Resolved, that this item of our minutes be presented to the Quorum of the Twelve by I. N. White, at the General Conference. That we sustain the spiritual authorities of the church in righteousness. That we sustain I. N. White as Bishop's Agent.

Report of Bishop's Agent.—Received $88.97. Paid out $45.15. March 1st, cash on hand, $43.82.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Rev. Skull, to meet in his church on Sunday, for prayer meeting and preaching, at 11 a. m.

Report of committee on Sheridan Branch difficulties: "We your committee, submit the following supplement to former report, for your consideration, hoping it may meet with your approval, and that after hearing, you in your kindness will release us. This pertains to the case of Bro. and Sr. Gregory. We find after having visited Bro. Gregory, that in order to deal with him, his case should have a hearing by a Court of Elders; he desires an investigation; he was willing to meet the brethren half way, but will not recognize the church officers. We recommend mercy in his case. In regard to Sister Gregory, we believe if all things were favorable, she would be more spiritual. Wm. C. Nirk and W. S. Loar." Resolved, That the committee be released, and a Court of Elders appointed to try the case pending in the Sheridan Branch. That John Davis, Bro. Loar and John Sayer, act as that court.

Preaching Saturday evening by J. S. Roth, assisted by J. F. McDowell. Prayer session 9 a. m., Sunday; preaching at 11 a. m., by J. F. McDowell, assisted by R. Etzenhouser. At 2:30 p. m., sacrament and fellowship meeting. Preaching at 7:30 p. m., by R. Etzenhouser. Sunday afternoon Bro. McDowell baptized 3.

Resolved, That we adjourn to meet in the Saints' Church, Des Moines, Iowa, on the 6th of June, 1884, at 7:30 p. m.

Miscellaneous.

SPRING RIVER DISTRICT.

Beloved Brethren and Sisters:—Having been recommended by your late conference to the Bishop, and appointed by him to be his agent in this district of the church, in place of our beloved brother, I. R. Ross, who had to resign on account of ill health, all books, papers, and moneys have been properly transferred to my custody, and I now am ready to act in this capacity for the Master's cause, hoping I will deserve your continued and unbroken confidence; and as well your hearty co-operation for the advancement of the work, both in the district and at large.

If each one will ask himself, throughout the district, What have I done in tithing and free-will offering for the good of the work in the past year; I think that (by the show of the books) the majority will have the answer, "Well, we can't alter the past, but we can do better perhaps in the future." To this end, I call your attention particularly to the instruction of the Bishopric in Herald for March 1st, 1884. I hope that the presidents of branches will help me, as well as all individuals, to carry these out. Let us have a little sum to every name if we can. I want to visit you all as soon as possible; until then do what you can for the work, according to the law governing this department; and may the grace of God abide with you now, and forever. Send all communications and moneys to R. H. Davis, Box 4, Mound Valley, Labette county, Kansas.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
R. H. DAVIS.

MARRIED.

JOHN—THOMAS.—At the bride's residence, Lucas, Iowa, February 23d, 1884, by Elder Evan B. Morgan, Mr. William John to Sr. Maggie Ann Thomas. May every trouble be softened to them, and blessings multiplied.

DIED.

GESBURGER.—At her residence near Springerton, White county, Illinois, of pneumonia fever, January 11th, 1884, Roya Gesburger. Her funeral sermon was preached by Elder J. W. Stone, January 12th. She was born February 6th, 1833, in Germany. United with the church October 26th, 1874, baptized and confirmed by Elder G. H. Hilliard. She was among the first to embrace the truth at this place. She lived a faithful member until death. She leaves two children, a husband, and brethren and sisters to mourn; but not without hope.

MILLIGAN.—At his residence in Ray county, Missouri, February 18th, 1884, of pneumonia fever, Bro. James Milligan, aged 65 years and 6 months. Deceased was born August 18th, 1818, in Stark county, Ohio. Was baptized October 5th, 1872, in Ray county, Missouri, by Elder Joseph B. Belcher. He came to Missouri in 1839. Married Miss Mary Caroline Fowler, in 1840, whom he leaves with ten children to mourn his loss. He was conscious to the last, and gave many expressions of his acceptance and willingness to depart. He desired to be administered to in his last moments, which was done by Father Powell, and then he sweetly and calmly passed away without a struggle. Funeral services conducted by Father David Powell, assisted by Elder W. L. Booker.

BRADLEY.—At Lamoni, Iowa, March 5th, 1884, of spinal fever, Carlin Clyde, child of Bro. William and Sr. Eva Bradley, aged 11 months. Another sweet child gone before. Funeral sermon by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

COBB.—Eliza Cobb, wife of Rowland Cobb, Little Sioux, Harrison county, Iowa, departed this life on the 28th day of February, 1884. She was born November 26th, 1810, in the State of Vermont. Rowland Cobb, husband of the above, departed this life on the 8th day of March, 1884, at the above place. He was born July 6th, 1802, in Vermont. Father Cobb had been sick some weeks, and when on the 22d of February I called to administer to him the consolations of the gospel, Sister Cobb was waiting upon him as a ministering angel. In a day or two after, the care and anxiety had been too much, and she was compelled to take to her bed, where she lingered until the 28th, when she calmly fell asleep in Jesus, leaving her companion, whose couch she had so anxiously watched, to linger for a few days more on earth. This aged couple had walked together for fifty-four years, sharing each other's joys and sorrows. They had obeyed the gospel over forty years ago, and after the death of the Prophet they followed the Twelve to Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1846; but being disgusted with the evils that had crept into the church, they went to Missouri, and from there to Pennsylvania; but in 1854 they returned to this western country, and not knowing what better to do, they cast their lot in with Thompson, at Preparation; but upon discovering the fraud of that impostor, they separated themselves from him; and when the Elders of the Reorganized Church of Christ sounded the glad tidings of truth again in their ears, they gladly acknowledged the same, and became identified again with the people of God. While they had imbibed some peculiar ideas, their faith in the gospel was never clouded, and up to the moment of their departure their hope was bright, and their trust in God unshaken, and with this hope and trust they have passed away to the Paradise of God. "In life they were one, and in death they were but for a brief space divided." They leave two sons and two daughters; may these so live that they may be prepared to meet with their beloved parents again, where "there shall be no more sorrow, pain nor death," and "where there shall be no more night." Funeral sermon preached from John 11:25. Elders P. Cadwell and J. M. Putney took part in the service. C. DERRY.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, April 5th, 1884.

THE Cleveland, Ohio, Herald, for March 23d contains the following; which is very apropos, for the reason that Rev. Clark Braden reiterated the statement respecting David Whitmer's denial of his testimony, in the Kirtland discussion, and the testimony and explanation given below were read by Bro. E. L. Kelley in refutation of the charge made.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.

THE STORY OF ITS ORIGIN.

THE STATEMENT OF MR. DAVID WHITMER, ONE OF THE THREE IMMORTAL WITNESSES.

KIRTLAND, O., March 20th, 1884.

To the Editor of THE HERALD:

In your issue of this date appears the "personal" relating to David Whitmer, of Richmond, Ray county, Mo., as follows:

"David F. Whitmer, still living in Missouri at the age of eighty, was one of the three witnesses who in 1830 published a certificate declaring that they saw an angel come down with the golden book which Joseph Smith pretended to interpret. But when the witnesses were older and wiser they abjured Mormonism and declared their former testimony false."

The information, from whatever source, is certainly untrue, and believing the Herald desires to present facts to its readers, I cheerfully forward the same, with a request that they be published. If what the people generally call Mormonism is to be made odious to all mankind, it must be done by attacking the thing itself and pointing out its errors, and not something which is falsely said about it. David Whitmer is at present, and for nearly fifty years has been, a resident of Richmond,

Missouri. On the 28th of February last I directed a letter to him with reference to a similar statement to the above, made here in Kirtland. He returned the following answer, dated March 3d, 1884:

"Oliver Cowdery, one of the three witnesses, never, to my knowledge, denied any part of his testimony. On the contrary, as I have done, he protested against every fabrication made by designing persons and parties, and emphatically testified as written in the Book of Mormon until his death, which occurred in this place. His wife and child, yet living, furnish one of the best pictures of a living faith in what their father testified to before death as written in the Book of Mormon.

[Signed] DAVID WHITMER."

Inclosed in the letter was his own late published statement, which I transmit herewith, with a request for publication, together with the list of witnesses from his own town subjoined.

I make this request for the reason that there are thousands misled by reason of the false and fraudulent stories published in various shapes with reference to this very matter, and the other side ought to be entitled to a fair hearing. Now is a good time to settle the matter, too, before the aged Whitmer's death. There are many in Northern Ohio, and elsewhere too, who desire to know just what position this "living witness" to the Book of Mormon occupies toward it, and what its connection, if any, with either of the bodies claiming to be the successor to the church established in 1830, at Palmyra, N. Y. This will give the Herald readers the facts together with his address, and any who may be further disposed can ascertain for themselves by direct correspondence.

Martin Harris, the third witness, who lived in this place till the year 1872, never denied his testimony, but was ever ready to affirm it as being true, as more than fifty citizens in this place will testify. If the statement is questioned, I will gladly furnish the Herald with the names and statements of these citizens.

The truth of this matter will not, or ought not to hurt any person.

Very respectfully submitted,

E. L. KELLEY.

The following is the statement of David Whitmer, Sr., as well as an extract from the Conservator:

Unto all Nations, Kindred, Tongues, and People, unto whom these presents shall come:

It having been represented by one John Murphy, of Polo, Caldwell county, Mo., that I, in a conversation with him last summer, denied my testimony as one of the three witnesses to the "Book of Mor-

To the end, therefore, that he may understand me now, if he did not then; and that the world may know the truth, I wish now, standing, as it were in the very sunset of life, and in the fear of God, once for all, to make this public statement:

That I have never, at any time, denied that testimony, or any part thereof, which has so long since been published with that Book, as one of the three witnesses. Those who know me best, well know that I have always adhered to that testimony. And that no man may be misled, or doubt my present views in regard to the same, I do again affirm the truth of all my statements; as then made and published.

"He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear;" it was no delusion! What is written is written—and he that readeth let him understand.

And that no one may be deceived or misled by this statement, I wish here to state that I do not indorse polygamy or spiritual wifeism. It is a great evil, shocking to the moral sense, and the more so because practiced in the name of religion. It is of man and not of God, and is especially forbidden in the Book of Mormon itself.

I do not indorse the change of the name of the Church, for as the wife takes the name of her husband so should the Church of the Lamb of God take the name of its head, even Christ himself. It is the Church of Christ.

As to the High Priesthood, Jesus Christ himself is the Last Great High Priest, this too after the order of Melchisedec, as I understand the Holy Scriptures.

Finally—I do not indorse any of the teachings of the so-called Mormons, or Latter Day Saints, which are in conflict with the Gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, as taught in the Bible and Book of Mormon; for the same gospel is plainly taught in both these books as I understand the word of God.

And if any man doubt, should he not carefully and honestly read and understand the same, before presuming to sit in judgment and condemning the light, which shineth in darkness, and showeth the way of eternal life as pointed out by the unerring hand of God.

In the Spirit of Christ, who hath said: "Follow thou me, for I am the life, the light and the way," I submit this statement to the world, God in whom I trust being my judge as to the sincerity of my motives and the faith and hope that is in me of Eternal Life.

My sincere desire is that the world may be benefited by this plain and simple statement of the truth.

And all the honor be to the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, which is one God. Amen!

DAVID WHITMER, SR.
Richmond, Mo., March 19th, 1881.

AN EXPLANATION.

Elsewhere we publish a letter from David Whitmer, Sr., an old and well known citizen of Ray, as well as an indorsement of his standing as a man signed by a number of the leading citizens of this community, in reply to some unwarranted aspersions made upon him.

There is no doubt that Mr. Whitmer, who was one of the three witnesses of the authenticity of the gold plates from which he asserts that Joe Smith translated the Book of Mormon (a fac simile of the characters he now has in his possession with the original records), is firmly convinced of its divine origin, and while he makes no efforts to obtrude his views or beliefs, he simply wants the world to know that so far as he is concerned there is no "variableness or shadow of turning." Having resided here for nearly a half a century it is with no little pride that he points to his past record with the consciousness that he has done nothing derogatory to his character as a citizen and a believer in the Son of Mary to warrant such an attack on him, come from what source it may, and now with the lilies of seventy-five winters crowning him like an aureole and his pilgrimage on earth well nigh ended, he reiterates his former statements, and will leave futurity to solve the problem that he was but a passing witness of its fulfillment. His attacks on the vileness that has sprung up with the Utah Church must have a salutary effect upon those bigamists who have made adultery the corner-stone in the edifice of their belief.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Salt Lake Deseret News for March 7th has a commendation of a Panorama of Book of Mormon Pictures. Across the margin of the paper some one has written: "How would an illustration of Jacob preaching in condemnation of polygamy do, for a subject; as an addition to those already covered by the present panorama?" We think it would do admirably and suggest it in connection with some improvements already suggested by the Deseret News man, who expresses himself candidly that he thinks the panorama might be improved.

Bro. J. F. Mintun has has a good presentation of the faith in the Saturday Evening Journal, of Fremont, Nebraska, for February 9th and March 1st.

Bro. Robert M. Elvin had the Epitome of Faith in the Syracuse, Nebraska, Journal for January 4th and 11th. Good, the faith is being disseminated by every presentation.

Bro. Stephen Butler writes from Odell, Osage county, Kansas, sending a circular pamphlet describing Gage county, in that State. He states that he will send it to any one desiring information in regard to lands there, on receipt of address and stamp for postage.

The New York Tribune has a dispatch from Matamoras, Mexico, to the effect that the Rev. Father Dianzo Soto, of Concordia, Vera Cruz, had discovered a key to the writings of the Aztecs. It is not yet confirmed, but if it proves to be correct it must result in great good to the literary and scientific world. We hope it may be true.

Bro. J. D. Jones, of Kewanee, Illinois, wrote us a good letter bearing date March 7th, which from its length, with a goodly number of others, we were obliged to pass, not having room for all. A long address from Bro. James Caffall to the Northern Nebraska District Conference, we were for similar reasons under necessity to leave out, which we regret, as the passing of time and the changes natural to human affairs soon put things out of season.

Bro. N. Stamm baptized one at Tinn Lake on February 20th. There are eight near there now belonging to the church.

Bro. E. C. Elliott writes from Lansing, Leavenworth county, Kansas, that he would be much pleased if any of the Elders who may be passing through Virginia, would call on L. T. Elliott, Bealington, Barbour county, West Virginia, and tell them in his name to entertain them as they told the gospel story. His mother, brothers, and sisters live there and would give them a home for the time.

Bro. Thomas Nutt has baptized twenty-one up to date, in his trip to Minnesota, in answer to the request of the Saints of Clitheral, Oxford and other parts in Ottertail and adjoining counties. This is encouraging.

We learn that Bro. James Caffall has been and may now be at Manassa, and Conejos, Colorado, following the effort made by Bro. Blair last winter. We believe that Bro. Caffall will do much good there.

Letters from Bro. W. W. Blair, indicate that that portion of California, watered by the Santa Ana river and its mountain torrent tributaries, is suffering much from tremendous rain falls, which have swollen the river out of all proportions. Like the Missouri, it is cutting new channels across the alluvial bottoms to the ocean. Brn. Mills, Garner and some others were in its way, and it has swept their lands away. The land of the orange blossom, the vine and the bee suffers this year from floods the same as does the lands bordering the beautiful river Ohio, and that along the "Father of Waters."

Seventeen thousand pounds of mail matter have been sent out of the Herald Office for the year ending March 15th, 1884, on which the postage has been $340. And this includes the paper mail only.

Bro. Charles W. Lamb, of Magnolia, Iowa, sends us a copy of The Rescuer, an anti-Masonic paper published at Goshen, Indiana. We also exchange with the Freeman, anti-Masonic, published at Albany, Missouri.

We thank Elder J. A. Forgeus, of Little Sioux, Iowa, for copies of The Catholic, and Irish World.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—If a number of members withdraw from a branch and organize within four or five miles of said branch, and that without a vote of the same, would said organization be legal? If not legal, would the officers chosen and ordained be considered legally ordained?

A.—This question is referred to the District Conference where such course may have been pursued.

Q.—Why is the revelation and prophecy given December 25th, 1832, concerning the war left out of the Doctrine and Covenants?

A.—Because the Church has never seen fit to order it to be printed in that work. It was not in the Doctrine and Covenants published in 1834-5, and it has not been deemed necessary to include it in that work since.

Q.—Can a person who believes that Saturday is the Sabbath and practices the same, properly represent the church as an elder?

A.—Yes, provided that he does not preach his views as the views of the Church; or urge his practice offensively upon his co-workers. We know quite a number of good men who believe Saturday to be the Seventh Day Sabbath; and who are yet efficient elders. They state both the views of the church and their own when questioned on the subject, and are awaiting the arbitrament of time and God's will.

CUBA, Kansas, March 9th, 1884.

Saints' Herald:—I wish to ask a few questions concerning the land on which the Temple is to be built. Does the land belong to the church? 2d. Has it ever been occupied for any other purpose? If not, why not? 3d. How large a tract of land is it? 4th. Did the Saints that were driven out of Missouri, ever receive any remuneration for their lands? Was the prophecy of Joseph Smith, concerning the civil war, ever published in any work, or periodicals prior to the rebellion? If so, where could it be found?

F. T. BAKER.

A.—If the foregoing questions refer to the Temple, or Temple Lot, in Missouri, all we can answer is this. What is known as the Temple Lot, Independence, Missouri, is held by a party of believers in Mormonism, known as Hedrickites; though we believe that they call themselves, Christ's Church, or the Church of Christ, numbering, we think, about eighteen or twenty now, and living mainly in Independence and vicinity. We do not know who is now their president. It was divided and some parts are held by the heirs of Elder Eaton, and some by other persons, members of the organization referred to.

It is said by some that the tract was originally fifty-three acres; by others, seven; we think it is now some three and a half or four, and covers the spot where the corner stone is said to have been laid. The site itself has never been occupied except as a common grazing ground for village cattle, a playground, a common highway, &c. We do not know why.

Nearly nine out of every ten of those of the Saints who owned property in and around Independence, and some other counties in Missouri parted with their titles; some under duress and compulsion, others voluntarily, and at solicitation, receiving therefor what they could get, or was agreed on. Few probably received a just compensation, and some (very few) never sold at all. But these last failed, when the lapse of time and change of circumstances would have permitted to return and make an effort to recover their lands, as did also those who were compelled to sell; their title has therefore passed away with their right to recover. The public records of some of the counties were burned during the war, and there is not now the ghost of a show for legal recovery of lands so decided away, or abandoned, except in rare cases where the right to recover has been in abeyance by legal disabilities attaching to the persons of the claimants. We are sorry that this is so, but think it a part of the penalty, "Lo your enemies are upon you," &c.

The Prophecy on the Rebellion was published by Franklin D. Richards, in Liverpool, England, in 1851, in a work called the "Pearl of Great Price," and we believe in the Millennial Star also; but we can not give the date, or page of the latter work in which it may be found. It is found on page 35 of the former work. We know of several copies of this work in private hands, but know of none for sale. John Scott, of the Herald Office, Lamoni; W. D. Morton, of Burlington, Iowa, and some others of the Reorganization, whose names we do not recall have each a copy. The preface of the copy now lying before us bears date July 11th, 1851, and is dated at No. 15, Wilton street, Liverpool. The paper cover of the work is gone. The title page of the one Bro. Scott has bears the imprint, "Published by Franklin D. Richards, 15 Wilton Street, Liverpool, England, 1851."

Q.—Was David the father of Christ? and if not by what authority do some preach that "Christ will come to sit on the throne of his Father David?"

A.—The lineage of Jesus is traced to David and Solomon, in the New Testament; and he was as much the son of David by descent as is a man a son of his progenitors a thousand years back. Jesus Christ was not begotten by David as his father direct; but he was "born unto the House of David," as foretold in prophecy. The Scriptures is the authority for preaching the rule of Christ on the throne of David.

Q.—Is it right to preach the whole Bible?

A.—Yes: if any one feels so led to preach it. The only difficulty, is whether the preacher understands the whole book. If he does not it would be better for him to preach only what he clearly understands. It too frequently happens that a preacher mistakes his own ideas and opinions for the teachings of the Bible, and so preaches them instead of the book. If the preacher understands the Bible and preaches it for what it teaches and what it is, in all its parts, he must necessarily be blessed in his ministry.

Q.—Will the Savior come in power and glory when he next makes his advent into this world, and will he remain?
