A.—The New Testament with later revelations seems to warrant the belief that when the Savior comes he will come in power and glory. There are some things, however, that favor the idea that he may be upon earth at various places, and at different times doing work connected with the establishing the reign of righteousness. He is to fight as at Gibeon. He is to descend upon Mount of Olives; he is to appear in the clouds. He is to reward the good, and take vengeance on the wicked. All these are connected with his coming. Which will precede in the order, is not so clear. Whether he will remain, or come and go upon his great work, it is not necessary for us to know; as it is no more positively revealed than is the day and hour of his coming. "Be ye ready;" is the injunction.

Q.—Will the first resurrection take place at the time of His coming, or afterwards?

A.—At the time, or about the time; possibly during the time of his coming, taking place as he directs and controls.

Q.—In the resurrection, will each person be brought forth of the age the earthly life was laid down, children as children, old people as old as when they died, and etc? And are they to be recognized by their friends remaining on the earth?

A.—We do not know. Personally, we believe that they will rise in the type of the highest and best physical and mental development to which they had attained in earth life; or would have done under favoring conditions. This is however, only a personal opinion. We understand that their identity will be preserved; if so, they must necessarily be known.

Q.—Whose welfare, both spiritual and temporal, should the Saints feel the most interest in and for; (the home circle, husband and wife; parent and child only excepted); the ties of the gospel, or those of blood? And why (the latter being not of the gospel)?

A.—The household of faith; and for the reason that there may be a severance of the ties of relationship, because of the reception of Christ; and because, having accepted Christ, creates a new love for man unmeasured by blood, and causes many earthly attachments to fade in importance. "Do good unto all men, but especially the household of faith," is the apostolic injunction.

Q.—Is the keeping of the whole law, a prerequisite to moving to Zion, or not?

A.—Whoever moves to what he believes to be the dwelling place of "the pure in heart," the Zion of the Lord, "must be prepared to keep the whole law as fast as he understands its requirements. The church imposes no restraints upon Saints moving where they may choose to make their homes.

Q.—Can Repentance be acceptable to God without restoration where a person is able to make it.

A.—God has informed us that he will forgive whom he will, but we are commanded to forgive all men. It is conceded, however, that true repentance is not complete where restoration is practicable, until it is made, and we so believe. But we must not be supposed to judge of any given case in the mind of the questioner, by this answer.

Q.—Should a person be received into the church, that can, and does not make restoration?

A.—The circumstances in each case must determine rejection, or reception. It may, or may not be easy to tell how far, or when restoration should be demanded.

Q.—Have the revelations given in Doc. and Cov. with regard to the gathering, ever been revoked by the Lord; or are they in force now?

A.—We know of no revocation. The General Conference has decided that there is no place to which the Saints are now commanded to gather." Anything further must await the action of a General Assembly.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. O. E. Cleaveland, writing from Annex, Va., says:

"Through the instrumentality of Bro. Joseph Flory, of Holt county, Missouri, and sister Andes of Kansas, in a visit to their connections in this region the past winter, we have had one addition to our little branch."

Correspondence.

PLUM HOLLOW, Iowa,

March 19th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We are still doing the best we can in the district. The work is in a healthy condition. The Saints feel well generally. Our conference held on the 8th and 9th of this month went off in good shape. The Good Spirit was with us. Brethren R. J. Anthony and Gordon Deuel did the preaching. All were satisfied, and started to their homes rejoicing in God, thanking him for this glorious hope of eternal life. We have have not baptized many this winter, but there are some who express themselves ready when the weather gets warmer. I have put in full time in preaching the gospel, and have been greatly blessed in all the places and branches throughout the district. Have administered to the sick almost daily, with very good results. I think we enjoy more of the Spirit, and have better meetings than for some time past. This is the expression of the officials of the district. We have an increase of faith and works among the Saints, through which we hope to have an increase of numbers in the near future.

We preached at Plum Hollow in the Brick Church, last Friday and Saturday nights; also on Sunday 14th, Brother Anthony doing the preaching. There are a few believing there. One old gentleman thought that such preaching as Bro. Anthony gave them, would unchristianize the world. We thought that such would make them all Christians, if they would obey it. The brethren of this district are willing to make any reasonable sacrifice for this work. They put themselves to extra trouble in order to attend meetings, thus setting examples worthy of imitation. The Saints have kindly administered to my wants, and done the best they could. May God bless them in all things, with all his faithful ones everywhere.

My heart is in this work. I desire to labor for its interest. I am satisfied it will triumphantly gain the ascendancy over the works of darkness, superstition, and error; and the faithful adherents thereto, will receive all that is promised. May the blessing of God attend the labors of his servants in every place, and help them to work with an eye single to his glory, is my prayer.

Yours in the bonds of peace,

HENRY KEMP.

SUTTON'S BAY, Mich.,

March 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I see the darkness all around me, and feel the need of a life-boat. My faith is growing stronger as I see the day approaching, and the thought comes to me, Who will be able to stand; for it is the day of God's wrath? Are we standing in holy places? Are we his, or are we not? Have we the whole law? Do we keep it? Have we the testimony of Jesus? If so, we shall be able to stand. Have we the seal of the living God? Can we say with Paul, That we know if this house was dissolved, we have a building not made with hands, eternal in the heavens?"

Dear brother, I crave an interest in your prayers, that God in his mercy would shield me from the judgments of his wrath, and give me the testimony of his Holy Spirit to guide me through these dark days. Let us watch for the day when our Savior will come. I want a faith that will stand when Christ shall come; that with joy I may behold his face, and in his kingdom dwell. Please inform your Elders where I live, and have them come and see me. I would be very happy to see them.

Yours in love,

SQUIRE LOOMIS.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas,

March 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Seven eventful years have passed away since I heard and obeyed the gospel. During those years I passed from youth to womanhood, and married an Elder of the church. Of all the joys and sorrows, of those years, I will bear testimony of but one of the gracious and kind dealings of my Heavenly Father. When I was called to part with my only child, which was stricken with diphtheria when about two years old, the members of the branch where we then resided came in one evening, by request, and held a season of prayer in behalf of our darling child. While the brethren were knelt around me in prayer, and I seated in a rocking chair was holding the sick child asleep in my arms, all at once the scene before me changed; and in vision I seemed to be alone in a small room, and before me on the opposite side, lay a little child, apparently on a lounge near a window. Presently the window opened slowly, and through it a personage, looking like the pictures of our Savior in the illustrated Bibles, appeared, having a circle of light around his head. The child then at once put up its little arms to the person in the window, who reached down tenderly to receive it, and the two disappeared from sight. Again I found myself seated, after seeing this, in the prayer meeting, my husband praying at the time, and my child still sleeping in my arms. In a few hours little Emma Ethel, named after the Martyr's wife, was stricken with death. The above experience though given in such a time of affliction, has had the effect, not only of producing an intense desire of meeting my child in immortality; but has given me a brighter hope and faith in that part of the gospel, which promises a blessed, glorious resurrection; until which resurrection, if we depart this life as pure and spotless as this, my beautiful little child, our spirits shall be with Christ our Savior. Please allow your young sister to dedicate the above to the older mothers in Israel, whose wise precepts and examples, whose faith and devotion, and love for God's Kingdom, have cheered and illuminated her path in life, and made it easy to bear this affliction of your sister in Christ; and asking also your prayers that with you I may abide in faithfulness to God.

SANTA ANA, Cal.,

March 17th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Am still storm bound. There is less rain, but the roads are next to impassable, and no way of getting to Los Angeles except by carriage and foot, or by the ocean once in a while. I have had, no mail for over two weeks. I see with joy by Bro. W. L. Ball's letter in Herald of March 1st, that the pot is boiling in and about Manassa, Colorado. Brn. Mills, Geo. Garner, Phenegar C. Butterfield, Geo. Barr and John Garner, Jr., are badly hurt by late storms, especially the first two. The river is still cutting Bro. Mill's farm on the west side. 1884 has opened with terror and ruin thus far in many places. Surely, this is a time of judgment and evil. May God keep and direct us, with all Saints.

Yours, ever,

W. W. BLAIR.

WEST BURROAK, Mich.,

March 15th, 1884.

Brother Joseph.—It has been near four years since I have heard one of our Elders preach. I should be glad if some of them would come and preach here. If any one should come, call at Burroak, and inquire for Dell Crooks, or send a postal, and we will meet you there. There have never been any of our elders here. Some desire to hear. Pray for me, that I may ever be faithful, and enjoy the Spirit.

Your sister in hope of eternal life,

D. CROOKS.

Dear Herald.—We often hear it proclaimed from sectarian pulpits, that the kingdom of heaven was not organized until the day of Pentecost; and it occasionally gets into your columns. I believe it to be otherwise, and will give some of my reasons for so thinking. Not long since a statement was made, or it implied this much at least, that there were no additions to the church until after the day of Pentecost. Jesus says: "And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."—Matt. 11:12. Can any thing suffer that does not exist? Again: "The law and the prophets were until John. Since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."—Luke 16:16. From this we learn that something did exist into which men could enter, and Jesus calls it the Kingdom of God. Just imagine a man trying to enter the republic of America two hundred years ago, or before any such republic existed! That there were additions to the church before Pentecost, I refer to John 4:1, 2: "When, therefore, the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John, (though Jesus himself baptized not but his disciples)." "After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them and baptized."—John 3:22, 23. The above citations show plainly that there were additions by baptism to something. This something I believe to be the kingdom of heaven, which is the Church of Christ. Acts 1:6, 7, is cited to prove that the kingdom was not yet organized. It seems to me that this language implies, that after they had received this power here spoken of, they were to go into all the world, and preach repentance and remission of sins, and build up the kingdom before organized. (Luke 24:46-49). The kingdom referred to in Acts 1:6, 7, I believe to be a temporal one. The Jews at that time were under subjection to the Romans. While they were granted privileges that were not usually granted to subjugated nations, their kingdom had in part, if not altogether, been rent from them. They too looked for Christ to come as a conquerer, to restore their kingdom, and reign as King of Kings and Lord of Lords. This is what they are looking for to-day.

Your brother in Christ,

J. L. GUNSOLLY.

SOUTH RAWDON, N. S.,

January 26th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—One evening last July, as I sat musing, I was filled with sad and repentant feelings, as my thoughts wandered back over the past year. I had not led the devoted life that I had looked forward to. I had allowed my time and thoughts to be drawn too much from the work we came to do, and become too much occupied in the things that perish. I had thought it would be very commendable, if in the two years' traveling about with my husband, I could feel that I had never used a dollar except what I had obtained by my own exertions; and perhaps it would be so if I had not neglected the "weightier matter," frequent prayer. How easy it is to neglect that soul-sustaining duty, and how impossible it is to live the life of a saint without it. This evening I determined if possible to redeem the past, by doing better in the future. That night I had a dream that made me feel both sad and happy. I found myself entering hurriedly into a house, with eager anticipation of seeing Christ; for I heard that he had come. As I entered a large unfurnished room, I saw standing behind a long table or counter, a straight, well dressed, business man, with very dark hair and eyes, and a stern, forbidding countenance. From the moment I entered, he regarded me with a look of displeasure. I supposed it was Christ, for there was no other person present. So without a word, I advanced and extended my hand to him. But instead of taking my hand, he gave me a dark, withering look, and muttered, "I don't know you." Who can imagine the feeling of sorrow and disappointment that filled my heart. In my haste to leave the room I opened the door nearest to me, being at the end of the counter, and entered another room, much the same as the one I had left, only not quite so large, and a little brighter. But my grief and disappointment were so great that I scarcely looked up, only with a sweeping glance. As I turned to close the door, I saw without any particular notice, a man standing in the room. Partly as an apology, and partly because I could not help it, I said, without raising my head, "I heard that Christ had come, and came to see him; but it was not Christ, for he would not shake hands with me. Christ would have known me, for I am bearing his reproach." I was about to give vent to my overwrought feelings in a burst of tears, as I looked up, and O, what a glorious sight greeted my eyes. My homely words will but poorly express it. There, standing in the midst of a circle of light, was he whom I sought. I knew it was Christ by the smile of welcome that was on his face. Such a smile as I had never seen before, so deep, so pure, so full of loving kindness. Yes, I knew him, though his raiment was not shining. It looked to be a simple suit of light gray clothes, and as my eyes rested on him, he leaned towards me, and extended his hand as if pleased with the thought of my delightful surprise. What a reaction! I sprang forward and grasped his hand in both of mine, and even that was not enough. The atmosphere of love that surrounded him, swelled my heart and drew me involuntarily towards him. And without stopping to consider the propriety of the act, I clasped his face in my two hands, and gazed therein for a moment, feasting my soul. Nor did it seem like a first meeting; but like seeing again one whom I had once known, loved and honored, and had long been separated from.

During the few seconds I stood looking into his face, I noticed and thought of many things. I noticed that his beard was not long and flowing, as I had seen it in pictures. It was an ordinary length, and a shade lighter colored than auburn; and some on the front part of the face was short, and looked as though it might have been shaved a week or two previous. His features were plain and regular, and I said within myself, Of a truth there is no beauty to be desired. I thought I had seen many finer looking men in the world, and yet there was none that could be compared with him. What was that nameless attribute, (nameless among the children of men), that so satisfied the life-long cravings of the soul, and causes one to say, It is enough, my wants are all supplied? Is it love? Then how inferior, how cold and indifferent is the love of earthly creatures. His smile seemed to give life and immortality; and as I stood resting my head against his shoulder, I was perfectly happy. Then he spoke in a low, gentle tone, touched with sadness. "Yes," he said, "you are bearing my reproach; but you have never before gone so crookedly, as since you have been promoted." I understood the word to mean since I had been permitted to come with my husband on this mission. How quickly the thoughts of the previous evening rushed through my mind, and I saw my crooked ways more plainly than before. What I had scarcely thought of in my evening meditation, I now saw the most prominently; and I answered sorrowfully, "Yes, I know." Still it did not make me feel condemned, nor separate me from his love. But I was aware I had come short of some blessing that it would have been his good pleasure to give. I almost knew what it was. Yet I was not so sorry because of that, as because my Lord and Master had been disappointed in me, so to speak, and resolved more fully to make better use of my time during the coming year. But now that I was in Jesus' blessed presence, I was too happy to feel it would be improper for me to ask some question very bad about anything. I thought of the disciple who leaned his head on Jesus' breast, and of the question that they asked, and wondered if there were so many things I would like to know about. But I hesitated, fearing it would not be right; and also because I was too happy to speak much. I was thinking of the happy time when he would remain with his people forever in his kingdom on the earth. Then I asked, "In your kingdom can we talk with you this way?" He answered, "No, not this way." Those few words conveyed much meaning. Now he was our friend and mediator. Then he would be our king and law-giver; and the majestic splendor and glory that would surround and attend him while on the throne, would prevent such familiarity. And that his subjects could not speak to him themselves; but there were those in authority, that would take their petitions to him. Then I wondered if I would be there, or would I go so crookedly as to come short of the kingdom. Might I not ask? The words were on my lips; but the second thought showed me what an unwise question that would be. Did I not know already, that if I kept the commandments and endured to the end, I should be there; and if I did not, I would not? He had told us that long ago, and why ask again? When I had gotten that far in my thought, he said, "My time is up;" and was gone. I awoke feeling very, very happy, and yet sad. It was so real I could scarcely believe it a dream; and for two or three days there seemed to be a certain brightness on every thing I saw, as though a blur had been taken from my eyes. I also found within myself a new thought, a new motive. Heretofore my chief aim had been to be saved, or to work out my own salvation. Now my desire was to do that that would be most pleasing to my Lord and Master. If I came short myself, and yet had been the means of saving, say three others, would it not be more pleasing to him than if I had only saved myself, since one soul is as precious in his sight as another? And I felt to thank him, that there was still time to labor for that end.

I could now understand how every knee would bow to him, and every tongue confess; for none could come into his divine presence, without bowing the knee, I believe, in adoration, though they may have spent their lives in rebellion against him whom they have not seen, and in whom they did not believe. Then to know the time allotted them was past, they had not given heed to his word, had slighted his love, and must now be banished from his presence, must indeed cause "weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth." And often now, as I read his sayings, I fancy I hear him speak them in the same low, gentle tone; and they come to me with redoubled force. Truly I can testify to the truth of the promise, "I will manifest myself unto them;" for this is the second time that Christ has manifested himself unto me. The first time I did not see him, for there was a cloth partition between; but I heard the voice; and when I asked "Who art thou, Lord?" the voice said, "I am Christ, and have come to speak with you." But his words filled me with sorrow and remorse; for I had murmured in my heart, and said, Truly the Lord has been slack concerning his promise, or else the Lord has never promised. He told me of the thoughts of my heart, then said, "I will come again." And for four years I have been waiting and watching, but not in vain. He did come, and still had to reprove. O Savior, when will this most imperfect piece of humanity ever become perfected.

SISTER EMMA.

EDENVILLE, IOWA,

March 24th, 1884.

Brother Joseph.—Our district conference convened here March 7th, 8th and 9th. Brn. J. F. McDowell, R. Etzenhouser, J. S. Roth and many others were present. The district was well represented; also quite a number of Saints from the Boonsborough Branch. We had a most excellent time. All went away aglow in the work. May God speed the wheel of Zion. Three were baptized the last day of conference. Bro. McDowell continued service through the week, and two more were baptized on the Sabbath. So he thought best to continue over another week, as the Spirit had signified that there were others almost ready to obey; and on the Monday following, two more were added by baptism. The following Sabbath, two more were baptized, making nine in all. The meeting then closed, with others almost ready for the work. These things, with the election of a Latter Day Saint Mayor, Councilman and Treasurer for the town of Eden, cause the people to gaze and wonder, and say some very hard things against the Saints. We thank God for the truth to make us free; and that will make us better people and better citizens. Bro. McDowell's labors have done us much good, and we shall ever remember him in our prayers, and for the triumph of God's work.

Your brother in Christ,

D. C. WHITE.

SYRACUSE, Ohio, March 15th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—The great flood from the Ohio River last month, has left our place in a sorrowful condition. Both of our coal mines are filled with water, and every man in the place is thrown out of employment. I would have written sooner to the Herald, but during the flood I was chosen one of the Relief Committee of our town, and have had no time to do anything else until now. The majority of the people of this place have been living on charity since the flood. Near three hundred families have been fed from the commissary. We have suffered much as a branch in the way of losing our work. Several of the brethren have gone away to seek for work. None of the Saints lost their houses, but I looked for our church to go. The raging water was beating hard on it. Many a time I prayed that it be spared, and thank God it was. But we lost very nearly all our books, and what are left are spoiled. Hymn books, testaments, stand Bible, and a great number of music books and library. Notwithstanding all of this, we feel that we have a duty to perform. Our loss in books and other things at the church, is from fifty to sixty dollars.

This morning we reorganized our Sunday School, with your writer as superintendent, and as we have no Bible for our stand, and but few testaments that are of worth to our school, I will ask a little aid in this direction; and if some one or more can donate two or three hymn books, we will be very thankful. This appeal we make to the Saints. If you can not send but one of the above books, we will receive it with thanks. The other churches around us are receiving money to repair the loss made by the flood. We saved the floor of our church by rolling rocks upon it, which kept it from bursting up. Our church was built last Fall and Winter, and we were in a good way to finish paying for it. But the flood has blighted all of that, and we have no work. Three hundred dollars would clear it. One hundred and fifty of this is on the outside of the church for work and lumber, and the burden has been on the shoulders of the few. We would say if any of the Saints would aid but a little in this way, that it will be received with thanks. My address is Syracuse, Meigs county, Ohio. I close my letter somewhat in sadness, praying that all will work for the right.

THOMAS MATTHEWS.

CHEYENNE CITY, Wyoming,
March 17th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—It is nearly three months since I was baptized into the true church of God. I wish to bear my testimony that this is the Church of God. When I was a member of the M. E. Church, it was very hard for me to bear my cross; but now I can not get places and opportunities enough to satisfy the longings of my soul to speak for my God. We have a nice little branch here, with bright prospects. The president, Bro. John Eames, is doing all he can to make the branch grow in spirituality and in numbers. We have an Elder, Bro. Richard Starch, a Priest, Hiram Burt, a Teacher, Charles Burt. I have been trying to preach the gospel. In two months I have been called seven times to preach. On last Sabbath, Bro. Burt and myself preached in the forenoon and afternoon; and Bro. Eames preached to a full house in the evening. I have been able to baptize five into the church. There were many spectators. I pray God to guide me in all things. Pray for me, for I need your prayers.

Your brother in bonds,
T. H. BARRETT.

CORNWALLIS, Kings Co., Nov Scotia,
March 2d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—It has been nearly one year since I joined the Latter Day Saints and I can assure you, that I have never repented the step I have taken, although I have difficulties to surmount and oppositions to contend with, much more so than when I was in the Baptist Church, of which I was a member fifteen years. My experience, knowledge and light, that I have received since I joined this church, compensates for all the persecutions and trials we have to endure. When we know that we have the approving smile of our Heavenly Father, we care not for the frowns of the world; its scoffs and jeers are nothing to us.

I would like to relate a dream, or vision, I had some four or five weeks ago. I thought we were in some strange place, my husband, myself and little girl: There seemed to be a large throng of people each side of us, but none very near us; and a sloping hill arose to our view. There were quite a number of trees around it, but the hill was bare, with the exception of one tree which stood in the midst, and that seemed to be white like ice or glass. It resembled the willow tree, only it was white instead of green. I said to my husband, Look, what is that? He did not know.

Then it looked like a fountain rising up in the air. The people all seemed to be gazing at it, but none could tell what it meant; but while we stood gazing and wondering what it was, there came a man up from behind us, and said, "Don't you know what it is?" We said no, we were at a loss to decide which it was, a tree or a fountain. He said, It is neither. He told the name, but I could not remember it. It did not seem to be like our language. Then he saw I did not understand, and said that is what we read of, and what the ministers preach about. I thought it very strange for him to say that, and while we were talking, it disappeared. I said, It is gone, nothing remained of it any more than if it never was there. Then we looked and saw a large white cloud ascending in the sky. He said, "There it is." We thought it very strange that it would turn into a cloud. Then the man said, "As you see it go, it will return again in eight years. Immediately after that appears, there will be darkness on the whole face of the earth for the space of an hour." While I was wondering at the strangeness of what he said, I awoke; but it left an impression on my mind long to be remembered.

I remain your sister in Christ,

MRS. ELIZA J. BEACH.

SANTA ANA, California,
March 11th, 1884

Bro. Joseph:—The past twenty-five days have been fearful and trying to the people living on low and exposed lands in Southern California, by reason of the flooded streams. Great damage has been done already, and it is feared the storms are not yet ended for the season. Bro. D. S. Mills had his barn and much of his lands washed away, and his house was torn down and moved to a place of safety. His loss is heavy. His son-in-law, George Garner, lost house and outbuildings, and forty-seven acres of land. Many others are heavy losers; but no adequate estimate can now be made. The Santa Ana river overflowed, and cut a new channel in a west of south direction, past Bro. Mills' place. All railroad and wagon roads are ruined, and railroad quite impassable.

Yours, ever,
W. W. BLAIR.

NEWPORT, Nova Scotia,
March 15th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The weekly visits of the Herald are very welcome. It is encouraging to hear from other parts of the world, that the Lord is blessing the restored gospel. It is a little over a year since I obeyed as taught by the Reorganized Church; and as time rolls around, my faith grows firmer in the work. We have a great deal of opposition to encounter; but thanks be to the Master, we are trying to be faithful and fearless, and to hold up the truth; and not feeling discouraged are led to say: Lord, hasten the time when truth shall prevail in this land, that the gospel as taught by the apostles, may be obeyed by the children of men, "that we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine, by sleight of men."

We met on the eighth instant in our first conference; but the weather and roads being unfavorable, there was not as many present as might have been expected; but we can testify that the manifestation of the Spirit was enjoyed, and the saints were blessed. As our conference closed, we were made sad by parting with Bro. and Sr.

Burton, who were the means of bringing us to the light of the gospel. O, that the Lord may ever bless them, and comfort them with his Holy Spirit. Ever praying for the progress of the truth, I remain your brother in the gospel of Christ,
J. C. BURGESS.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri,

February 25th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—To charge a man with being a liar is to offer to him the greatest insult, because it brands him with total demoralization. To make the charge is to attempt to do him the greatest injury. It is the most despicable of crimes, because a liar is a coward, a knave and a fool. He is a coward because he dare not face the results of facts of his own creating; he is a knave because he attempts to gain ends by false pretexts; he is a fool because he does not see that if all men were liars, society would be hurled into a hell of anarchy. There is no defense for it. It is not witty, wise, beautiful, nor profitable. Any one can lie. A lie is a moral deformity. It has no counterpart in reality. All nature and all fixed facts conspire to bring a lie up to the surface, and to eject it as a poison too nauseous to be continued with the one receiving it, and they make as great an effort to eject it, as the human stomach does to eject poison. In the long run, truth will become known, and the lie exposed. Therefore the lie is unprofitable.

There are different kinds of liars. There are diplomatic liars, and beggar liars; but the worst of all liars are the ecclesiastical, or long faced liars, the pious deceivers, who ask a blessing upon the lie they are about to tell, and then return thanks upon the success of it. The success seldom reflects honor upon the vender of it; but it usually comes back upon the hypocrite in a curse. God will avenge himself, if any man attempt to make him a party to a falsehood.

Truth is clear. It is easy, it requires no study. It does not have to be watched. Truth triumphs at last. The simplest soul can conquer life to himself by truth; but it is not in the wit of man to bring beauty and good up out of the reeking corruption of lies. Truth should not always be spoken, and a lie never. Silence is far better than to tell the truth, if that truth will injure another, or cause him unnecessary pain for some mistake he may have made. But how much less to charge him falsely, or to speak a lie against him. Has he not already as much as he can do to bear the naked truth, and to solve the plain reality of life's problems. Even if it be an antagonist with whom we have to deal, is it not far better and safer to use truth for our weapon of defense? If we are forced to the wall and use it with care, the edge may not fall upon us. "Thou shalt not bear false witness." Nowhere are we justified in so doing.

Beloved Herald:—I desire through you to thank all, both the Saints and the Hopes of Zion, who have remembered me in their prayers for my recovery, according to my request as published in both the Herald and Hope. Also my gratitude to him who I trust has lent a listening ear to their petitions; that I am still alive and able to pen these lines. I also desire that they shall continue to remember me to the Lord, that I may regain my former health; for although I am very much better than I was three months ago, yet I am still very far from being a well and strong man. I am not able to labor any; and on account of a weakness in my eyes, the result of my sickness, to write but little at a time. I was taken sick about the first of August, and for three months most of the time I had but little hopes or faith that I should ever recover. But still it has seemed good to the kind Father to lengthen out the lease of my life, as I trust for good to me, and that cause that I so dearly love, the gospel of Christ. I have long felt a deep interest in the welfare of our children, the Hopes of Zion. At times it has seemed like a burden was rolled upon my shoulders; that a task has been assigned me that I must perform. That I must write for and to them. That I must plead their cause, and the interest of their little paper, both before the Lord, he that has said, "Except ye teach your children," (at a given age), the gospel of Christ, "the condemnation," should rest upon "the heads of their parents." And to plead the same before, or to the Saints. From whence this burden came, is known unto the Lord. I know that I had the Spirit of the Lord while composing my prayer for health, in Hope of November 15th, 1883. A part of two verses I will here quote:

"Yea let me live that I may show,
By deeds of love, by words of truth;
That I may teach thy little lambs,
To serve thy cause whilst in their youth."
"Thou knowest I love thy little lambs,
To them I write, for them I pray;
Help me to teach the Hopes thy word,
To guide them in the narrow way."

Beloved Saints, are we not living very near the end of time, or rather I should say near the beginning of the millennium, when the cry will be heard, "Lo the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." And shall we, O shall we be found among the foolish virgins, with no oil in our vessels? May the Lord forbid. Yet it is true that there will be foolish virgins, or the parable would not have been uttered; and the great question that concerns you and me, dear Saints, and beloved Hopes, is the same question that was asked the Savior at the last supper by the disciples: "Lord, is it I?" If Joseph the seer and martyr was a true prophet of the Lord, and the "if" is only here to accommodate the doubtful, not me; I say if he was a true prophet, there are many great and important events to occur before the close of the present century. Then, beloved Saints, let us strive to be in readiness for the same.

"Then let us pray for one another."
For aid divine God's law to keep;
That we may be accounted worthy,
With the redeemed on earth to meet;
For Christ will wipe away all tears,
When here he reigns a thousand years.

"Then let us keep our spirits pure,"
Till Jesus comes to earth again;
O may we to the end endure,
That we may live and with him reign;
For he will reign a thousand years,
Will wipe away all sighs and tears.
Yes, in the great millennium,
From north to south, from east to west;
No war nor strife shall ever come,
For God will give his people rest.
For when on earth the Savior reigns,
The dragon shall be bound in chains.

Yours in the hopes of the millenium; and an eternity in the celestial kingdom of God,

W. R. CALHOON.

BELLEVILLE, Kansas,

To the Herald:—I am a firm believer in the gospel as revealed in these last days. I was, on November 22d, 1836, baptized by Elder James Blakeslee, in North Crosby Township, Leeds Co., Canada West. I was happy in the gospel then, and am yet. I am now in my seventy-ninth year, and have never doubted the truth of the gospel one moment. I have seen many happy seasons, and many tried ones. I think the happiest day was one at a General Conference near Quincy, Ill., on the Presbyterian Camp Meeting Ground, where thousands were met, in expectation of seeing our beloved prophet, your father from the Missouri Prison. The time arrived, he did not come. It was voted that Sidney Rigdon should preach. He was an orator, and an eloquent speaker; and kept the people spell-bound, while he related the sorrows and troubles they had gone through. In the midst of the excitement, a tall, straight man walked into the camp, and the sound, "Is that Joseph?" "That is Joseph." "Thank the Lord!" "Praise the Lord," went from every heart, and joy filled every bosom. When Sidney ceased to speak, Joseph took his place, and he told us many things that we had not known before. Sidney was eloquent, but it seemed as if heaven was brought down while Joseph discoursed on the gospel and the glory of the latter days. It was a foretaste of the coming glory. I never think or talk of that day, but the same Spirit animates my frame yet.

I never saw or heard him preach again till in 1844, at the April Conference, when he preached the King Follét sermon. He talked of the resurrection of the dead, eternal judgment, the durability of the spirit, and many things were made plain that day that had been hidden for ages. After meeting we went home. The next thing we heard was that they had slain that man, the prophet of the Lord, and his brother with him. What sorrow filled our hearts no tongue can tell. Aspirant after aspirant thought to fill the place; but they were not called to steady the ark, their voices were not of the Good Shepherd, so the sheep would not follow. Sixteen long years rolled on. There never was a night so dark, but there came a morning. Here came the boy shepherd, and the sheep knew his voice. Now we thank the Lord for the prospect of the spread of the gospel in every land, where it is preached. We think if a man knows he is called to preach the gospel, let him be sure to do it; because it will count the best to him of anything in the world. I close by subscribing myself your sincere friend, and well wisher in the gospel of the Lord, CHRISTIANA LANDERS.

NERVANA, Lake Co. Michigan,

Dear Herald:—We are still in the faith and hope of a Saint. Our two days' meeting last July did a great deal of good in removing prejudice. I can say that this is the true church, and the gifts follow it. I have been instantly healed when afflicted. I have been a witness to the fulfillment of prophecy, and I know the work is of God, and that you, Joseph, are the true successor of your father. I am trying to convince the people by living my religion, and letting them read my Herald and Advocate. The thinking people will understand, but those who do not want the truth will not. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your brother, SAMUEL C. REYNOLDS.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

March 21.—It has been decided by the Turkish Government, after several rebuffs, to leave all negotiations in reference to the Egyptian difficulty to Earl Granville, the British Foreign Minister.

The Christians of Crete, who compose most of the inhabitants of the island, demand that they shall be granted full religious liberty. The present Governor of the island backs up their demands and declares he will not continue in the office unless they are acceded to.

A prospectus of the Parnell Migration Company, which proposes to settle the peasants of the overcrowded districts on some of the waste lands of Ireland, has been issued. Of the capital stock of $1,250,000, $250,000 have been subscribed already. Mr. Parnell is President of the corporation and Prof. Baldwin the Managing Director.

The British Parliament is said to be hopelessly divided on the Egyptian question; some favoring continued fighting, and others contending for peace.

The threat of the French Government to send a military force into the little Republic of Andorra, in the Pyrenees, in case the French demands are rejected, rouses indignation at Madrid. Spain will regard the entry of the French gendarmes into Andorra as a breach of international law.

The troubles in Andorra arise out of an electoral dispute. Last December, during the annual elections for the General and Local Assemblies, the Progressists or adherents of France were known to be in the majority in the Parish of Canillo. The Returning Board who counted the votes belonged to the Spanish or Conservative party. The law requires the votes to be counted in the presence of the Electors, but the members of the Returning Board cleared the hall and declared the Spanish candidates elected. The Bishop of Urgel, in Spain, shares with France the right to nominate a Viguiers, these two Viguiers being, as it were, joint Presidents of Andorra. The defeated party in the election took possession of the Assembly Hall and prevented the installation of the Returning Board candidates. Then the Bishop summoned an "army," conquered the disturbers, and made ten of them prisoners. The tribunal appointed to try such offenses refused to sit, but the Bishop had sentences pronounced varying from five to ten years at hard labor. The prisoners were taken to Seo de Urgel, in Spain and there incarcerated. The French Government protests against the illegality of these acts and threatens to support its demands by force. Andorra is seventeen miles long by fifteen wide.

Gen. Negrier in the recent pursuit defeated the Chinese the 5th inst.

An extraordinary scene is said to have occurred in the roman Catholic parish church at Winnetonne, Wis., Sunday when the Rev. John Honryman, the pastor, not satisfied with denouncing three members of his congregation, left the pulpit with the avowed purpose of chastising one of the obnoxious three who occupied a pew in the church. A spirited tussle followed, during which the priest's garments were somewhat disarranged. Charges against the priest are said to have been presented to Bishop Krautbauer, of Green Bay, the administrator of the diocese.

March 22d.—In view of the likelihood of a joint naval and military expedition up the Nile, the English Admiralty has directed Admiral Hay to survey the upper waters of that stream, so as to learn whether it would be feasible to send gunboats thither. Several naval officers have left Alexandria to carry out the survey.

It is believed from the latest intelligence received from the rebels' position that Osman Digma's forces have almost entirely deserted him.

The calling out of the Irish Militia for drill, is taken as a sign that England considers Ireland in a settled condition.

Premier Gladstone's recovery from his illness is slower than was expected. The machinery of the whole Empire is out of gear if he is off duty but a day; so what its condition is now, after his prolonged illness, can easily be imagined.

The Buddhist craze has spread from London to Paris. There are now 300 Buddhists there, and probably their demand for a temple will be granted.

Advices from Gen. Millot announce that the French forces in Tonquin have captured the citadel of Thai-nguyen.

March 23d.—Gen. Graham will make an advance towards Berber Wednesday, and will seek to surround Osman Digma. The British troops at Suakin are suffering severely from the unhealthy climate.

The Sultan, taking advantage of the embarrassments of the Gladstone Ministry, has telegraphed to his Ambassador at Constantinople to press Earl Granville for a thorough understanding on the Egyptian question.

The President of the Swiss Federal Council today in an interview with the Berne correspondent of the cable news denied that Switzerland had declined the request of Germany and France to join with them and five other of the principal Powers of Europe in a confederation for the suppression of the anarchical forms of socialism. He said that Switzerland had not as yet received an invitation to become a member of such a confederation, and that the Swiss Government had already resolved to take effective measures to prevent the abuse of the right of asylum within Switzerland.

A number of important Nihilist arrests have been made at Kieff, Russia. One gendarme was mortally wounded while assisting in making arrests. It is rumored that Degaieff, leader of the party who murdered Sudeikin, is among the prisoners.

The people of Point Pleasant, W. Va., are violently opposed to the Western Union Telegraph Company stretching wires along the bridge over the Ohio River at that point. Warrants have been issued for the apprehension of the company's workmen. The United States Marshal is protecting the latter, and a collision with the State officers is feared.

March 24.—It is thought that France has aggressive designs with regard to Morocco. Spain has, it is reported, asked England to unite with her in opposing this movement.

A general revolt is reported among the Arab tribes south of Berber. It is believed that the Mahdi's followers have formed a cordon around Khartoum. Gordon's situation is considered alarming.

At Milledgeville, Ga., a few days ago, a colored man addressed an audience composed of his race advising them to try to obtain better wages. The white Sheriff of the county came along with a posse armed with shotguns. The colored orator was ordered to shut up or he would have a bullet put in him. A row ensued, during which the Sheriff used his rifle, killing one of the audience.

The Parliament of Newfoundland has adopted a law imposing a tax of 100 per cent on all packages containing merchandise going into the Province. This is in retaliation, it is said, for the law passed by the Canadian Parliament for the inspection of Newfoundland herring. The action of the Newfoundlanders has greatly excited the Montreal merchants.

George N. Fairchild, the United States Deputy Surveyor of Northwestern Nebraska, in a report to the Secretary of the Interior, makes startling charges against the cattle men of that section. He says they have inclosed thousands of square miles of desirable public lands with wire fences to prevent settlers from occupying them and to form barriers to their cattle. They have, acting as if the lands were legally theirs, warned off intending settlers on pain of death and with opprobrious epithets. They have cut down valuable timber on the public lands and used it for fencing other portions, and for houses and sheds for their cattle. The cattle-raisers are mostly wealthy capitalists, and they warn persons who wish to settle on the lands that they will be frozen out, not given employment, and otherwise boycotted.

March 25th.—The camp of Osman Digma is twenty-five miles from Suakin and thirteen beyond the advance post of the British. Gen. Graham has determined to attack the rebel leader Thursday, and will afterward push on to Sinkat with one brigade if practicable. Gen. Graham has ordered a concentration of the British forces at Handouk and Otad prior to marching out Thursday morning to give Osman Digma battle near Tamanieb. Osman has 4,000 combatants. All the leading Sheiks continue their adherence to him. The report of the scouts that Osman had fled is discredited. Gen. Graham's messenger who was sent to ask the Sheiks to come to the British camp, returned with the reply from Osman that the sword was the only medium of communication between himself and the English.

Cunizi, the English political agent at Berber, has news from Khartoum to March 16, to the effect that Gen. Gordon had repulsed the attack upon the camp at Omdurman. He was surrounded by the rebels, and intended to force his way at the head of the troops along the bank of the Nile to Shendy. He proposed to begin the advance the 18th inst.

The trial of the Jews who were charged with setting fire to the synagogue at Neu Stettin during the fever heat of the anti-Semitic agitation has ended in the acquittal of the accused. The judgment has been promptly reversed by the mob of Neu Stettin, which, lying in wait for the return of the accused Hebrews and of the witnesses for their defense from Konitz, bruised and beat them within an inch of their lives.

the Des Moines, Osceola & Southwestern Road, and some of his associates have been negotiating with St. Joseph, Mo., relative to making that city the southwestern terminus of the road. Last Friday a meeting of business men was called, and Col. Harding stated that he would terminate his road there provided he be given the right of way, depot, round-houses, and machine-shops' grounds, and the citizens take $25,000 worth of stock in the road. The meeting then adjourned until this afternoon. The Mayor called the Council together this morning, and the right of way question was settled and the Mayor ordered to condemn grounds, and this afternoon the citizens met at the Board of Trade, and after a few spirited speeches the stock books were opened and about $15,000 worth of stock taken within half an hour. It will all be taken at once. The road will go there. The survey has been made through Buchanan, Daviess, Gentry, and Harrison counties, to the Iowa line, work to begin at once. The road is now operating the Des Moines to Osceola. St. Joe will be the southwestern terminus of the La Crosse, Iowa & Southwestern, having paid them $20,000. Then the Rock Island will run into the city. The St. Joe and Des Moines Narrow Gage, running from St. Joe to Albany, fifty miles, now the property of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, will be made standard gage this summer. All the railroads of the city have united, and, the city giving some aid, are arranging to erect a $150,000 freight depot.

The yellow fever is frightening many of the European Canal employes from the Isthmus of Darien. One hundred and fifty returned to France by the last two steamers.

March 26.—Gen. Graham has commenced his advance to meet Osman Digma once more. The Soudanese Chief is strongly entrenched near the Village of Tamanieb. Owing to the intense heat and the bad weather the British are suffering severely, and their movements are necessarily slow, so that encounter with the enemy is not expected before to-morrow morning. The cavalry expedition to Berber which was contemplated has been abandoned, probably on account of the hostility of the native tribes. The cavalry had a two hours' skirmish with the rebels near Tamanieb. Several rebels were killed and the enemy retired.

The minor state of siege in Berlin is proving more than ever irksome to civilians in all ranks of life, who are constantly subjected to domiciliary visits and arbitrary arrests on the merest suspicion and without the possibility of redress. The police and military authorities are almost wholly independent of the processes of the ordinary courts, and are accused of exercising their enlarged powers with much unnecessary harshness. The German newspapers daily publish instances of police brutality toward citizens, and the frequency of these reports has aroused a strong sentiment of indignation. The result has been the formation of a large, influential society at Berlin for the prosecution of offending officials and for the protection of civilians generally. Among the members and promoters of the new society are many men who are prominent in social and political circles, and some members of the Diet and Reichstag.

Bills favoring woman suffrage were rejected by the Iowa and Connecticut Legislatures.

Numerous murders of Christians by Moslems and of Moslems by Christians are reported from various parts of Crete. The officials have cut the telegraph wires and are interrupting letters. Election riots are considered imminent.

A fearful cyclone passed over the northern portion of Harrison county, Ky., dealing terrible destruction all around. The town of Colemansville, fifteen miles from Berry's Station, on the Kentucky Central Railroad, was almost entirely destroyed, the cyclone traversing it from east to west. A large number of houses were unroofed and contents exposed to a heavy shower, which immediately passed over. Added to the damage to property comes the story of a large loss of life—ten persons killed and fifteen or twenty injured.

A most destructive cyclone swept over the country in the vicinity of Charlotte, N. C., Tuesday night. Seven persons are known to have been killed. Thirty houses, the Methodist church, and a flouring-mill were demolished in the Village of Newton. At Mecklenburg six residences were blown down. Fruit-trees in the path of the storm were entirely destroyed.

There are now thirteen crevasses in nineteen miles of levee on the lower Mississippi River. Whole counties are under water. There is great distress in Tensas, Madison, and Concordia Parishes, in Louisiana.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

There were 176 business failures in the United States during the week ending March 20, and thirty-seven in Canada. This is a decrease as compared with the previous week.

Commissioner Pink, of the eastern-route-pool, has announced the following freight-rates between New York and Chicago: Grass-seed, 32½ cents per 100 pounds; high-wines, 25 cents. On tobacco the rates from the points named will be as follows per 100 pounds: East St. Louis, 32 cents; Cincinnati, 21 cents; Louisville, 25 cents; Jacksonville, 24 cents; Evansville, 39 cents; Cairo, 32 cents; Indianapolis, 23 cents.

A special committee of the New York Legislature reports that fully 50 per cent of the stuff sold as butter in that State is of the nature of butterine or oleomargarine. The adulterated article disposed of, it is said, amounts to 40,000,000 pounds, and it is claimed its sale inflicts a loss on dairy interests of the State of from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

It is understood that the convention between M. de Lesseps and the English shipowners in reference to the Suez Canal has fallen through in consequence of the opposition of the French stockholders.

The Warwick Iron Company at Pottsdam, Pa., has given notice to their employes of a 10 per cent reduction in wages.

The Mark Lane Express in its review of the British grain trade says: "The mild weather continues. The value of wheat is tending down. The trade is inanimate. Foreign wheat is wretchedly dull. Off coast, one cargo of No. 1 California realized 39 shillings. Seven cargoes have arrived, one was sold, two withdrawn, and two remained, including one of No. 1 California. Cargoes on passage are neglected. Sales of English wheat during the week, 56,682 quarters at 37 shillings 7 pence, against 64,324 quarters at 42 shillings 4 pence, the corresponding period last year.

The French Minister to China has been instructed to claim an indemnity of $32,000,000 from that country on account of the war in Tonquin.

The strike of the Belgian glass-workers continues and after having paralyzed the glass industry of Belgium bids fair to extend all over Europe. The strikers demand an alteration of the methods of work and a reduction of time without a reduction of wages. The employers refuse both demands, alleging that the revival of the glassmaking industry in the United States and the great prosperity and competition of the American trade make it impossible to carry on the business in Belgium upon other basis than that in vogue before the strike. It is rumored that American capital is backing up the strikers. A congress of Belgian, British, French, and American glassworkers has been called to meet in June at Charleroi, Belgium, for the purpose of forming an international confederation for the regulation of the prices of labor in the glass industry. Belgian manufacturers openly assert a suspicion that this congress has been projected and is being "worked" by "Yankees" for the purpose of delaying a settlement of the troubles now ruining the European glass trade until the Americans have secured a permanent control of the business.

The visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada March 22, was 33,883,467 bushels of wheat, 16,554,936 bushels of corn, 4,532,980 bushels of oats, 2,262,216 bushels of rye, and 1,818,606 bushels of barley. During the last week, the supply of wheat decreased 701,579 bushels, of corn increased 731,997 bushels, and of oats decreased 58,960 bushels.

Missouri property is taxed on a total assessment of $719,000,000.

Three thousand miners of the Elizabeth, Pa., coal district at a meeting yesterday decided to accept slightly reduced wages. Laborers and mechanics employed in the iron mills at that point, it is believed, will also yield to a proposed reduction.

The New York Assembly passed a bill requiring vendors of oleomargarine, butterine, etc., to place conspicuous marks on the packages of these articles exposed for sale, plainly indicating the character of the goods.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

March 21.—Loss by fire at Millwaukee, Wis., $25,000. Hot Springs, Ark., hotel, $12,000. Jackson, Mich., $11,500. Dickeyville, Wis., $15,000. Notwithstanding the efforts of the officers of the mining company, the fire at the Pocahontas Mine, in West Virginia, which followed after the disastrous explosion there last week, is still raging.

Three men were instantly killed by an explosion in a sulphur mine near Mt. Carmel, Pa., yesterday.

March 22.—Loss by fire in New York City, candle factory, $300,000, costume store, $10,000. Chatanooga, Tenn., ax-handle factory, $16,000. Galena, Ill. $5,000. Hillsborough, Tex., business block, incendiary, $49,000. Roodhouse, Ill., hotel, $7,000.

March 23.—Sixteen loaded freight cars started from the hill east of Indianapolis, Ind., ran with increasing speed into the depot, crushed in the doors, and piled themselves with several other cars, in a confused mass in the street.

There was a general rise in the Mississippi River from Cairo to New Orleans. It rose twenty-four inches in the last twenty-four hours. Every landing on the Kentucky shore, between Cairo and Paducah, is submerged. The people have gone to higher ground, and last month's waste of waters is revived. There are seven feet of water in the outskirts of Paducah, where the gasworks are situated. All the tobacco warehouses have suspended operations. The waters have reached Front street in Metropolis, Ill., and surrounded Green's Hotel, which was reached through the bayou from the river. Eighteen inches more will entirely overflow Joppa, repeating on a smaller scale the scenes of a month ago. Below Cairo to Memphis the lower landings are gradually being absorbed by the floods. No destitution is thus far reported.

March 24th.—Loss by fire at Dallas, Tex., $14,000. Jacksonville, Fla., $40,000.

A Cyclone swept over the country in the vicinity of Columbia, S. C., this morning, doing great damage to house property and fruit trees in its path. Two persons were very seriously injured by the falling timbers of a house wrecked by the storm.

In consequence of the recent rains, many of the Iowa and Wisconsin rivers have overflowed their banks. A wollen-mill at Mitchell, Ia., on the Cedar River, valued at $75,000, was swept away.

The Mississippi River at New Orleans is one inch higher than ever known before. At one o'clock the water in the river suddenly fell an inch at Baton Rouge, which was a precursor of bad news from above. It had fallen two and one half inches by night. Later it was learned that the levee at Waterloo, in Pointe Coupee, had slid down into the river, causing the water to rush with great force on the dike that commands the mouth of False River, and the stream, 300 feet wide, is now inundating that point. Two young men of the neighborhood were drowned in the pouring torrent. Later advices report the breaking of Lacour Levee, just above Bourgeois. The attempt to close the levee at Mulatto Point, West Baton Rouge, has been abandoned: The gap is now 250 feet wide. The tremendous volume of water pouring through this gap, with that coming through at Morgansea and Waterloo above, have done their work. The parish is now an inland sea, and its promising crop of sugar and cotton is ruined. No one expects to get the water off before July. Appeals are constantly coming into the State Capital for aid.

An explosion of fire damp at Johnstown, Pa., injured four persons. Two men were killed by a fall of coal at Pottsville, Pa.

March 25.—Loss by fire at Danville, Ill., $2,500. Decatur, Ill., $4,000. Lancaster, Pa., $30,000. Nashua, N. H., $35,000.

A cyclone swept through the north-western portion of Indianapolis yesterday, destroying windows, chimneys, and outhouses. Three persons are reported to have been injured, none seriously. A storm of the same nature visited Richmond, Ind., doing considerably more damage than at Indianapolis. Reports from Ohio indicate an extension of the storm in that direction.

Good nature, like a bee, collects honey from every herb. Ill nature, like a spider, sucks poison from the sweetest flowers.

THE PERPETUITY OF CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.

THE period of our Savior's baptism, was when he began to be about thirty years of age; and at the time when he entered upon his public ministry. His circumcision, and the offering of sacrifice for him according to the law of Moses, took place in his infancy. He was born under the law, and came into the world to fulfill it. Baptism was not a rite of the law of Moses, as I have shown, nor a rite to which he was brought by his parents, as expressed in the above case according to that which is written in the law of the Lord. But it was his own voluntary act, when he came to manhood, and connected with his public life and ministry, which was the establishment of the kingdom of heaven, or gospel dispensation.

Christ's submission to baptism as administered by John, see Luke 2:22-24; Gal. 4:4; Luke 3:21-23; Matt. 5:16-20; was a tacit declaration of the divine origin of that rite, as noted before; and then if John's ministry and baptism pertained to the gospel, and not to the law, (which also has been proved), the Savior's submission to this rite, affords a good evidence of his purpose to continue this ordinance, as a Christian ordinance, in his church. When John felt a difficulty in administering the rite to his Savior, and yet the Lord required it, it shows his first purpose to sanction it as a part of the Divine will, and of that practical righteousness which it became him as head of his people, and them as servants of God, to render to divine appointments. This he openly expressed in the memorable words, "Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."—Matt. 3:15. Christ and his disciples practiced the rite of baptism upon those who received his ministry; from which I infer the perpetuity of the rite:

"After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized."—John 3:22.

"When, therefore, the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John, (though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples), he left Judea and departed again into Galilee."—John 4:1-3.

So it is evident from these passages, that it was not the solitary case of one or a few individuals, but of his disciples generally; for it was said "Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John." This included, we should reasonably infer, all who received his ministry, and who had not been baptized by John. We can not find any instance where our Lord treated his disciples differently, or that he required some to be baptized and others not. His terms and modes of discipleship, were the same in all cases. See following passages: Rom.

10:1-4; Matt. 20:25-28; 28:8-13; Luke 14:27; Heb. 8:6. When our Redeemer had finished his work, and sufferings on the cross; and when on the third day he had risen from the dead and appeared to his disciples, he appointed a final meeting upon a mountain of Galilee, when he would give them his last instructions, his commission regarding their future work, and then ascend to his Father. The time is now come. Jesus and his disciples are upon the appointed spot; and the record of his solemn charge is thus given:

"And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."—Matt. 28:18-20. Also Mark 16:15, 16.

This very weighty and solemn charge of our risen Lord, we have our learned Christian friends giving a widely different interpretation from the words of Christ themselves; namely, It is not water baptism that is intended, but the baptism of the Holy Ghost; or according to others, A baptism with the living ministry. Thus we read in tract on baptism by Ellis Pugh, page 6:

"But I would think that, inasmuch as there is no mention of water, (in this commission of Christ), we have room to examine what one did Christ command; was it his own baptism, which was the baptism of the Holy Ghost; or was it the baptism of John, which was water baptism."

He goes on to argue for the former. Joseph John Gurney in a public address, after repeating the above commission of Christ as the theme of his discourse, remarked that he understood our Savior as not alluding to any ceremony; but that the baptizing here intended, was a baptizing with the living ministry. So Elisha Bates: "They (the apostles) are to tarry till they are endued with power from on high. Then, and not till then, are they clothed with a baptizing ministry." See Doctrine of Friends, page 223.

In reply to the first of these notions, it will be quite sufficient to say, that our Lord could not intend the baptism of the Holy Ghost, because in that case he would require his disciples to perform an impossibility. God only has the Spirit to give, God alone can give it, and it never was put into the power of the highest order of created beings, in heaven or on earth, to bestow the Divine Spirit upon their fellow beings. Simon Magus thought that this was possible, and wished to have this power; but the thoughts and desires of his heart were treated by the apostles as blasphemy. The Holy Spirit is always said to be the gift of God. See Acts 8:18-24; and though it was bestowed by the laying on of hands, the Scriptures guardedly assure us that it was not the apostles, but God in the person of the Father or Son, that bestowed the divine communication. "I will pour out of my spirit, saith God;" "He hath shed forth this." (Acts 2:16, 23; 10:44, 48; John 14:16, 26; 16:7, 13). Further, that this can not be the baptizing intended in this commission of Christ is evident, because that sense if expressed would be, "baptizing them with the Holy Ghost in the name of the Holy Ghost," which is absurd. That the second sense, "Baptizing them with the living ministry," can not be the meaning of the Savior, will appear if we translate the word baptize, and try to read it with a translation. The reader is aware that the word is a Greek one, anglicised but not translated, conveying no sense to an English ear; but was a common word in the Greek language, and conveyed a plain idea of a particular action. The meaning of the word baptize, is to dip, or immerse. Some who observe the mode of sprinkling in this ordinance, contend that the word will admit of that sense. When the word is translated, according to Mr. Gurney's interpretation of the Savior's meaning, it would read thus: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, dipping them with the living ministry, in the name of the Father," &c. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is dipped with the living ministry, shall be saved." I ask, can this be the meaning of Christ. The absurdity is so palpable that I need not add another word in refutation. To ascertain our Lord's intention with regard to this word, it is natural to ask three questions. 1. How were the disciples likely to understand their Savior from the sense in which the word had been usually employed by him previous to this time. He had used it in a threefold sense; first, referring to the baptism of water; second, to the baptism of his suffering; third, referring to the baptism of the Holy Ghost. In the last of these we do not read of his using it but once. "Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost, not many days hence." Acts 1:5. In the second sense he employed it on two occasions; see Matt. 20:22, 23; Luke 12:50. But with regard to his first sense, if all who received his ministry were baptized, which may be satisfactorily gathered from the testimony of his apostle which we have just read, namely, "That he made and baptized more disciples than John," and if not by himself, it was by his disciples in his name and by his command; and as often as persons by his ministry were made his disciples, he enjoined upon them the observance of that rite. If, whenever the Savior commanded his disciples to baptize previous to this period, he meant water baptism, were they not likely to understand their Lord in the same sense now. It is certain he never commanded his disciples to baptize but with water before this period. No other baptism to them was possible. The Spirit was not yet given. This (water baptism) he had commanded, and in this sense only they were likely to understand their Master at this time. Most decisive of all, we have the evidence of facts. Third, In what sense did the apostles actually understand their Lord with regard to this command. That they did understand the Savior to mean water baptism is clear; and if any doubts remained, they could not exist after the gift of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost. Acts 2:1, 4. Hence, in obedience to his command, we have a certain interpretation of his will.

Here then abundant evidence is before us in the New Testament. We have not a single passage in the history of the apostles' labors from which it may be certainly inferred that any one person converted by their ministry, was received into the number of the primitive church without receiving this rite; but in numerous cases, and on thousands of persons, we read of its solemn administration. In E. Bates' Doctrine of Friends, p.p. 212, 215, 216, it reads thus: "That water baptism was continued after the resurrection of Christ;" but to destroy the argument from hence for the perpetuity of the rite, he adds: "It was continued in condescension to the weakness of the human mind, which can not bear sudden transitions." Also that the apostles themselves were more or less under the influence of their education. That baptism only remained for the strong attachment which had been formed for it, and to wear this away required time, during which, in condescension, it was borne with. To this is added, that Peter, on the baptism of Cornelius and his friends, queried, and spoke hesitatingly, and not as he did when preaching the doctrine of the gospel. Let my readers remember this apology for the apostles' baptizing, and for Peter's conduct when he queried, and spoke hesitatingly, while we view the following instances of the administration of this ordinance, and hear the apostles upon the subject.

(1). On the day of Pentecost, when the apostles received the promised gifts, and were all filled with the Holy Ghost; and when under Peter's first sermon three thousand persons were converted to God, we find this apostle thus addressing his converts:

"Repent, and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Then they that gladly received the word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls."—Acts 2: 4, 38-41.

(2). When Philip went down to Samaria, and preached Christ unto them, the saving power of the gospel was extensively experienced.

"When they believed Philip, preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."—Acts 8: 5-12.

No hesitancy is here felt by either the apostle or Philip. Their Savior had said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." The people of Samaria believed, and when they believed, the ordinance followed, and no allusion is made to any other baptism as intended by the Lord in the commission.

(3). The baptism of the Ethiopian Eunuch, after he had been instructed by the same individual, comes next in the inspired history. "As they proceeded in the chariot, they came to a certain water, and the Eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized. And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered; I believe that Jesus Christ is the son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still, and they went both down into the water, both Philip and the Eunuch, and he baptized him."—Acts 8: 35-39. Here again no reference is made to any baptism but that of water; and the necessity of attending to this rite in order to obey the commands of Christ, must evidently have been impressed upon the mind of the Eunuch by his inspired instructor, or he never could have put the enquiry above, upon coming to a suitable place. This, then, is the way that Philip understood his Lord, and the approbation of the Holy Spirit with regard to his conduct, is evident; as it was the divine Spirit himself that directed the whole circumstance. For this see Acts 8: 29-40.

(4). The baptism of Paul which comes next, discovers anything rather than hesitancy, either on the part of Ananias or himself. Said Ananias, "The Lord Jesus has sent me that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales, and he received his sight forthwith, and arose and was baptized."—Acts 9: 17, 18; 22: 16. I am unable to find in these passages anything resembling the opinion of the Friends. Does the language evince hesitancy? No; for forthwith the whole instructions of Ananias are fulfilled, and Paul is baptized. The baptism of the Holy Ghost was evidently given him from above. At the same time Christ's commands are obeyed, and his promises fulfilled, both without delay.

"While Peter spake, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. Then answered Peter, can any man forbid water that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we. And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord."—Acts 10: 44-48.

It is fair to conclude from this case, that the apostle understood his Lord as enjoining in the commission the baptism of all that believed, whether Jews or Gentiles.

(6). The next instance of baptizing, is in the case of Lydia and her household. Of her it is said, "Whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended to the things that were spoken of Paul. And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us saying, If ye have judged me faithful to the Lord, enter my house and abide there."—Acts 16: 14-15. If the apostle Peter had an attachment for Jewish rites, and knew not whether baptism was to be continued or not; had not his brother Paul, after eighteen years, "called to be an apostle" by Christ himself, and who "neither received" his knowledge of the gospel system "of man, neither was taught it but by the revelations of Jesus Christ; and who was caught up to the third heaven," had not he come to a decision—not yet seen that this shadow was to be discontinued, now the substance is come? No, he had not yet seen this. This first convert in Europe, Lydia, at Philippi, (where the kingdom of God first entered our quarter of the globe), must be baptized as soon as she received the preaching of Paul, and those of her house. If Paul was right in his conduct in this case, the baptism of this first European convert, it is a divinely authorized pattern for the imitation of Christian Europe down to the end of time.

(7). The baptism of the Philippian jailer immediately follows Lydia's. Paul and Silas are his instructors; the jailer addressed himself to them under divine impressions, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes, and was baptized, he and all his straightway. And he rejoiced, believing in God, with all his house." Acts 16: 30-34. Christ's declaration was, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." The jailer and his house believed, were baptized straightway, and were assured that their faith secured their salvation. Baptism is put in its proper place; it is an act of obedience to Christ, and as such act of obedience it is rendered to the Lord, Straightway.

(8). Paul in a few months after quitting Philippi, is at Corinth, and having here introduced with happy success the gospel of the kingdom, Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house. And many of the Corinthians hearing believed, were baptized. Acts 18: 8. Whatever might be the peculiar case of Crispus, the Corinthians were proverbially wicked, and some of the baptized had been among the vilest. (1 Cor. 6: 10-11).

(9). The last instance of baptizing mentioned in the Acts, is in the case of twelve men at Ephesus. The question whether these were baptized twice, first by John and then by Paul, or by John only, does not affect our present enquiry. They are said to be "certain disciples"—who had not heard "whether there be any Holy Ghost," yet were baptized unto John's baptism, and in the name of the Lord Jesus. And when Paul laid his hands upon them, they spake with tongues and prophesied. Acts 19: 1-7. A period of nearly thirty years had elapsed since their baptism by John, (if he himself baptized them), but no one had ever taught them concerning the baptism of the Holy Ghost. So far from that they knew nothing about the divine gift, and therefore could not know that the external ordinance they had received, referred to him, and was to be discontinued when his influences were enjoyed. Nor does the apostle now tell them so, when on laying on his hands, the Heavenly Gift is conferred upon them. These instances extend over a period of between twenty and thirty years from the time the apostles received the commission of the Lord, and the gift of the Holy Ghost; and in the obedience of the apostles to their Lord's command, I conceive we have the best illustration that could be given of the sense in which the apostles understood their Lord, and continued to understand him to the end of their life and labors. Then I may remark in general terms, that as it is undeniable that the commission of Christ contained the command to baptize, so in their after life we expect to find some attention paid, and obedience rendered to this part of the commission, nor are we disappointed. This obedience we have now fully read. They did baptize, and also required others to administer the rite, and my readers are requested especially to observe that the sacred records describe them as baptizing only in one way, that is by water baptism. We never read of their baptizing by the ministry, and the baptism of the Holy Ghost was not theirs to give, but God's, and hence we find they prayed for it, and were sometimes astonished when it was conferred. Acts 10: 44, 45. I therefore conclude, that Christ intended water baptism in his commission to his apostles. Their Lord would not suffer them to continue in error. He richly shed upon them the gift of the Holy Ghost, whose office was to lead them into all truth; the special direction of the Spirit and of Christ attended baptizing occasions, as in the cases of the Eunuch and Paul. Therefore Christ intended water baptism in his commission. If so, who will reply against God, against the "Judge of all the earth?" "If ye love me, keep my commandments." So the law of baptism is a positive law. We know nothing about this rite but what God is pleased to tell us, and if we alter any essential part of it, it is no longer a divine ordinance. Two things are essential to it, namely: (1). That the person to be baptized should be a believer in Christ. (2). That the baptism should be an immersion in water, in the name of the Most High. The case of the Eunuch exhibits both these. Also it must be administered by one appointed by God. See Heb. 5: 4. The word baptize in the divine law, Matt. 28: 19, means to immerse; and when used without a figure, has never any other signification. It never means to pour or sprinkle. And as immersion is the only plain and proper sense of the word, the selection of this term by divine wisdom to express the ordinance determines the mode. The places at which the ordinance was administered indicate the same. The River Jordan was the place of John's baptism, and there the Lord Jesus, and some, if not all of his disciples, received this ordinance. AEnon is selected by John because there was much water there. John 3: 23.

The Eunuch's baptism is a most convincing example. He and Philip came unto a certain water. They both went down into the water, and they came up out of the water. Acts 8: 38, 39. So of Jesus Christ.—He came to Jordan, when he was baptized he went up straightway out of the water. Matt. 3: 13, 16; Mark 1: 9. The figurative use of the word by our Lord, implies the same sense. Referring to his infinite suffering, he says, "I have a baptism to be baptized with;" which in prophetic language is expressed, "I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me." Luke 12: 50; Psalms 69: 2. Could our Lord be thinking of a sprinkling at this time? The several allusions of the apostles confirm the sense we have given. Christians in baptism are said to be conformed to Christ in a burial, a resurrection, and a planting. Rom. 5: 3, 5; Col. 2: 12; all of which have a reference to baptism by immersion.

In conclusion of this second article, many of our Christian friends say that infant sprinkling must have been done, and quote some of the early Christian fathers and their writings to prove the truth of their words; and by these means endeavor to make havoc with the minds of the people, and lead them further from the God that gave them being. But in searching among these said early writers, I find that they do not go far enough back into history; and also find that they make no mention of those who, in the days of which they speak, wrote against the doctrine of sprinkling and pouring. The first instance of sprinkling which we find, or as Vossius expresses it, beginning with Barnabas, and proceeding to Chrysostom, is at hand to show that immersion was their only established practice, "the commencement of pouring or sprinkling (the latter of which is often called rhanatism, from a Greek word signifying sprinkling) can not be found, according to Dr. Wall, earlier than in the case of Novatian, who in the middle of the third century, being ill, and fearing to die in an unbaptized state, was sprinkled all over in bed."—See Euseb. Eccl. Hist. When this innovation was discovered, all the clergy and many of the laity, disapproved of Novatian's subsequent entrance into the ministry, because of his defective baptism; and the matter was submitted to Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage. Cyprian replied, that the baptism in such a case might be allowed to pass. "Necessitate cogente et deo indulgentiam suam largiente," which Bishop Taylor renders, "In case of necessity, God pardoning, and necessity compelling." See Ductor Dubit, p. 644. From this period and with this authority, the application of water by pouring or sprinkling was allowed in case of sickness, which was hence called clinic baptism; but never allowed as a general practice in health for more than one thousand years after Christ, and not in England till the middle of the sixteenth century. About that period, says Dr. Wall, sprinkling, within the time of a half century, from A. D. 1550 to 1600, prevailed to be the more general." Hist. of Inf. Bap., p. 11, ch. 9: 2. If my readers think that men have power and authority to alter what God ordains, then they may be careless about this change; but to such a sentiment I can not subscribe. I entreat my readers to contemplate this subject with unbiassed minds, and in that simplicity and godly sincerity which everything that appertains to the will of Christ demands from his followers. The maxim of the great apostle of the Gentiles, "Prove all things—hold fast that which is good," is infinitely important and binding unto the end of all time; and the Lord said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." So be it, Lord, thy will be done, amen. In my next, I will endeavor to show the spiritual import and intention of baptism, an argument for its perpetuity.

ELDER WM. KENDRICK.

THE GODHEAD.

DEAR HERALD:—As much has been said and written on this subject, I desire to offer a few thoughts. Not however with a view to be contentious, nor to obtain notoriety, but to carefully examine the matter with others, believing that an interchange of thought and sentiment will be conducive to good. First, then, the doctrine of the Trinity, or the Triune God, is not taught in the Bible, but is a doctrine of the apostate Roman Church, and to my mind should be classed with the equally false doctrine of transubstantiation, and many other absurdities that crept into the old mother Church, and have been adopted by her daughters. To me it is not strange that it should be that like begets like. It is not strange that the sectarian churches should adopt and retain the doctrine of the trinity, as well as the change in the mode and object of baptism, infant baptism, &c. But it is a matter of surprise to me, that saints, especially Elders in the church of Christ, should still continue to wallow in the old sectarian ruts.

I have noticed from time to time, articles written in defense of the idea that Jesus Christ is the very God, the Eternal Father, chiming in with the old tune of "Him three in one, and one in three, Extol to all eternity."

The good old hymn book, and the equally good old Methodist Discipline, together with the Theological Meteors, from the pulpit, have rung in our ears the false and contradictory doctrines relative to God and his Christ, in a manner that clearly manifests their utter ignorance of either. Now I propose to show what the Scriptures teach in regard to the Trinity.

First, it is evident that when Jesus said to Satan, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," he prefaced it with, "It is written." Therefore he did not refer to himself, but conveyed the idea, that the children of God must not tempt providence by running into needless dangers. Again, "I and the Father are one." But in what sense?

"And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are."—John 17: 11.

"I have given them thy word."—John 17: 14.

See whole of the seventeenth chapter. In Col. 1: 16, he, Jesus, is called the "First Born of every creature." But salvation is of God through Jesus Christ. It is said that the word was with God. And to say that God was with himself, would be absurd. If Jesus was God, to whom did he pray, and why did he forsake himself on the cross? In his message to the Churches, Christ speaks of his God, and the city of his God. Rev. 3: 2. "These things are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ," not God. John 20:31. This is eternal life that they should know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

I have before noticed in what sense the Father and Son were one, therefore it would be absurd to say he sent himself, or was praying to himself. We can not say it was his human soul, praying to his divine soul, for he tells his disciples that he will pray the Father for the Comforter, which will come after his ascension. Are the Father and Son the same in power? He says, "The Son can do nothing of himself." "To sit on my right hand and on my left, is not mine to give; but it shall be given them for whom it is prepared by my Father." Are they the same in position? Jesus is represented as having sat down on the right hand of God. What propriety would there be in saying God sat at his own right hand. Are they the same in will? Only as Jesus subordinates his will to the Father's. "I came not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." Remember his prayer in the garden. "Not my will but thine be done." Are they the same in knowledge? "Of that hour knoweth no man, nor the angels in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father only." Are they equal in honor? "My Father is greater than I." "As the Father gave me commandment, so I do." "God shall glorify him." "God hath highly exalted him."

Now, if he is not the same in person, power, will, knowledge, honor, or glory, they are not one in the sense claimed by the jarring sectarians of the day, including a few Latter Day Saints. But says one, Did he not have power to forgive sins and raise the dead? Yes, but did he teach that he was God? No. He says, "As the Father hath sent me into the world, even so send I you." This is strange talk if he was God. These believers in a Triune Deity, claim that Christ rose from the grave, and burst the bands of death by his own power and intrinsic merit. Another blunder. Where do we learn that? I answer, from the sectarian pulpit, and the aforesaid good old hymn book, but not from the Scriptures. It is clearly stated fifty times in the Bible, that God, the Eternal Father, raised Jesus from the dead, but not once that he rose by his own power. Paul says: "Like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of his power," [God's]. Rom. 6:4. Peter says, "You who through him have faith in God, who raised him from the dead and gave him glory, so that your faith and hope are in God;" so that if Peter and Paul were believers in a triune God, they certainly were very clumsy teachers of the doctrine. I understand the Scriptures to teach that there is one living and true God, and one Mediator between God and man. The man Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, who was sent into the world to be a Savior, Redeemer, Restorer, and from the accomplishment of which all the power and glory he had, or will have, were given him of God; and when he shall in the exercise of his kingly prerogative, bring about a consummation of all that God designed in conquering, subduing and destroving all the enemies of the race, then will he deliver up the kingdom to the Father, and he himself become subject to the Father, that God may be all in all. 1 Cor. 15:28. I will close by submitting a question: Can the Elders of Israel claim, or are they entitled to the Spirit of God, to preach the gospel, who have a false conception of Christ, and as a consequence of the character of his mission?

B. V. SPRINGER.

MOBILE, Mo., Dec. 25th, 1883.

ST. ANTHONY'S VISION.

ST. ANTHONY was born in Egypt in A. D. 251. He was extremely pious, and some writers say he was very fanatical. But whether moved by fanaticism or inspiration of the Holy Spirit, the following is a vision of truth.

Anthony had withdrawn himself from society as much as possible, and retired to the desert, that he might give himself up to deep meditation, and prayer and fasting. It was late in the third century that he was shown the destiny of the church; and he cried out to the few that were associated with him:

"O my children, the wrath of God will fall upon the church. We will be delivered over to men like unclean beasts. For I have seen the Holy Table surrounded by mules and asses, which overthrew the altars of Christ by rude kicks, and defiled the sacred body of the Savior; and I heard a voice cry out, Thus my altar shall be profaned by abominable ministers, who shall call themselves the successors of the apostles."

The report of the Michigan Conference published in the True Wesleyan of November 15th, 1851, says:

"The world, commercial, political and ecclesiastical, are alike, and are together going, in the broad way that leads to death. Politics, commerce, and nominal religion, all connive at sin, reciprocally aid each other, and unite to crush the poor. Falseness is unblushingly uttered in the forum and in the pulpit; and sins that would shock the moral sensibilities of the heathen, go unrebuked in all the great denominations of the land. These churches are like the Jewish Church when the Savior exclaimed 'Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites.'"

Robert Atkins, in a sermon delivered in London, says:

"The truly righteous are diminished from the earth, and no man layeth it to heart. The professors of religion of the present day in every church, are lovers of the world, conformers to the world, lovers of creature comforts and aspirers after respectability. They are called to suffer with Christ, but they shrink from even reproach." "Apostasy, apostasy, apostasy is engraven on the very front of every Church; and did they know it or did they feel it, there might be hope; but alas! they cry, 'We are rich and increased in goods, and stand in need of nothing.'"

Alexander Campbell says:

"The worshipping establishments now in operation throughout Christendom, increased and cemented by their respective voluminous confessions of faith, and their ecclesiastical constitutions, are not churches of Jesus Christ, but the legitimate daughters of that Mother of Harlots,—the Church of Rome."

Mr. O. Scott, (Wesleyan Methodist), says:

"The church is as deeply infected with a desire for worldly gain as the world. The churches are making a god of this world; most of the denominations of the present day might be called churches of the world, with more propriety than churches of Christ." "The churches are so far gone from primitive Christianity, that they need a fresh regeneration—a new kind of religion."

The late Dr. Fisher of the M. E. Church, in his catechism on the Lord's Supper, page 205, in answer to the question, (34), "Is it necessary to have an ordination of ministers in regular succession from the apostles?" says:

"It is doubtful whether there is any such thing as an evangelical succession of ministerial ordination from the apostles, either in Europe or America, unless it be that which has come down to us through the Moravian Church. Though it may be said the Methodist Church have, because one of their ministers assisted in the ordination of Bishop Asbury. [A strange boast for this author]."

Dr. Fisher continues:

"As to the succession of the church of Rome, [which is that through which all Protestant churches, both in Europe and America, have received their ordinations], it is very far from evangelical, or apostolical. The whole Protestant world holds the church of Rome to be the Mother of Harlots, spoken of in the Revelation; and the Pope to be Anti-Christ, 'the man of sin, the son of perdition.' To depend on such a source for an ordained ministry, would be to depend on a very corrupt one, which would not reflect much honor upon our Lord Jesus Christ.

To this list we might add the testimony of Arch-Bishop Whately, Norman Fox, Dr. Howard Osgood, Baptists; O. H. Burgess and W. T. Moore, Campbellites; and John Wesley the father of Methodism, and a host of others; and yet when the Elders of Israel show that a restoration could not take place without new revelation, they sing out like the old Episcopal bell, "Apostolic succession, ap—os—tol—ic suc—cession. Ap—os—tol—ic suc—cession. Ap—os—tol—ic suc—cession."

"O, what a tangled web we weave,
When first we practise to deceive."

BURDETTE ON CURRENCY.

Bob Burdette, in speaking of a play which a friend of his wrote, hopes that it may bring to his brow the bays of immortal fame, and to his coffers money, and gold, and silver, and pewter, and scads, and rhino, and spelter, and stamps, and nickels, and thalers, and kopecks, and louis d'ors, and franks, and larghony, and sesterces, and denarii, and talents, and backsheeth, and rubles, and rupees, and coupons, and treasury notes, and shiners, and wealth, and lucre, and sous, and fipun' notes, and tuppence hapenny, and thruppenance, and bobs, and tanners, and doubloons, and ducats, and pesos, and florins, and pistols for three and sov'rins, and piasters, and guineas, and drachmas, and vereinsthalers, and marks, and guildens, and tael, and rigsdelers, and kobangs, and ticals, and doppelthalers, and yens, and lires, and yusilykmedjids, and everything except trade dollars.

A HOT HEREAFTER.

BLASPHEMOUS THREATS OF A CRANK TO PRESIDENT ARTHUR AND THE PRESENT CONGRESS.

[Washington Dispatch].

The following circular has been received by every member of Congress and by the President:

FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL, NEW YORK CITY,
February 26th, 1884.

To the President of the United States, Senators, and Members of the House of Representatives, Washington:

I am directed by the Holy Spirit Mind of Nature Who Dwells in my Bosom, urging Me, as His Instrument of Clay, to publish that no Assemblies of Clay Beings will hereafter be Permitted to enact laws infringing the Divine Prerogative.

I am Directed to Publish that the Long Struggle between the Two Eternal Minds of Nature the Holy Savior, and the Devil-God of Moses, has been won by the Savior, the Holy Mind of Nature, who has Regained His former Almighty Power and Authority.

I am Directed to Publish that Enacting Laws by Nations was Permitted by the Holy Spirit—an Eternal Electric Fluid, the Life of Mind and Matter, pending the issue only of the "War in Heaven."

I am Directed to Publish that the King of Heaven Challenges the President of the United States, Senators, and Members of the House of Representatives to fight.

I am, lastly, Directed to Publish that the President of the United States, Senators, and members of the House of Representatives will, if they persist in Enacting Laws, hereafter be Carried Alive in a Cyclone of Fire to a Hell of Infinite Woe and be Fought by the King of the Boundless Universe through All Eternity.

Behold: The Judgment Day, foretold in the Book of Revelation, published Throughout the United States.

JAMES A. BUCK.

"Learn to be brief. Long visits, long stories, long exhortations, and long prayers seldom profit it those who have to do with them. Life is short. Time is short. Moments are precious. Learn to condense, abridge, and intensify. We can endure many an ache and ill if it is soon over, while even pleasures grow insipid, and pain intolerable, if they are protracted beyond the limits of reason and convenience. Learn to be brief. Lop off branches; stick to the main fact in your case. If you pray, ask for what you would receive, and get through; if you speak, tell your message, and hold your peace; boil down two words into one, and three into two. Always learn to be brief."

It is the temper of a blade that must be the proof of a good sword, and not the gilding of the hilt, or the richness of the scabbard; so it is not his grandeur and possessions that make a man considerable, but his intrinsic merit.

Justice to our neighbor and comfort to ourselves, are one and the same thing.

The date accompanying your name on the small colored label on each paper shows the time to which your subscription has been paid. When payments are made the date is changed, which answers for a receipt.

Miscellaneous.

TO THE GERMAN AND SCANDINAVIAN SAINTS.

To those who were being requested by a committee appointed by General Conference, some time ago, to supervise the matter of tracts for the German and Scandinavian work. I prepared months ago a tract, which could be published as a whole, making a small pamphlet, or published in separate parts. This work has been in the hands of the Board of Publication, and will be turned over to the Germans and Scandinavians, whenever they are ready to translate and publish. The General Conference has appointed a committee of three, consisting of brethren Temme Hinderks, F. W. A. Reidel and Casper Hinderks, to supervise the translating and publishing for the German department of the work. They have printed the tract "One Baptism," and it is for sale by the committee, whose address is Stewartsville, DeKalb county, Missouri. The attention of German reading and speaking brethren is called to this fact; and it is to be hoped that liberal quantities of the tract, which is faithfully translated, will be ordered and circulated among the Germans, who are scattered all over the United States, and found in large numbers in hundreds of towns and villages, and in numerous settlements in the country. The sale of this tract will enable the committee to translate and print others. The work prepared by me will, I have no doubt, be turned over to any one duly authorized by the Scandinavians, to use for translation.

Your brother in Christ,

T. W. SMITH.

THIS IS NO HUMBBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

BENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
GEO. MONTAGUE.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
Yours,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

IS CONSISTENCY A JEWEL?

FROM the Blue Valley Blade, published by Messrs. L. L. Luse and — Meeker at Wilber, Nebraska, for March 20th, 1884, we take the following clipping and editorial article.

"It is a fallacy, a false sense of honor, when any one supposes that he can protect his honor or good name by returning 'evil for evil,' or 'railing for railing.' When any one insults you, or applies vile epithets to you, and you return insult for insult, and epithet for epithet, you lose your dignity as a man, and reduce yourself to the level of your defamer. The young especially, should learn this fact that their own words and actions only, can do them lasting injury. It is 'by thy words thou art justified, and by thy words thou art condemned,' says one wiser than we. Calling a man a thief, does not make him a thief; his actions only can make him one. For another to say that you are a liar, does not make you such; only your words can make you a liar. A man who has governed his actions, and mastered his tongue, is mightier than he who taketh a city."

Whether this bit of good sense followed Mr. Luse's editorial by fortuitous circumstances, or was the result of his direct management, because he thought we were offering him "reviling" for "reviling," or abuse for railing, in the article in the HERALD, from which he quotes, we can not determine; but it seems to be very appropriate to the purpose of our present writing.

A FRIENDLY CHAT WITH PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

"Rev. L. L. Luse, of Wilber, Neb., who visited Kirtland, Ohio, and was there, we suppose during a part of the debate between brother Kelley and Rev. Clark Braden, wrote a letter to his paper in Nebraska, a copy of which Bro. R. M. Elvin sent us, in which letter he stated that Kirtland looked deserted and dilapidated, dull, forsaken, and words to a similar effect; attributing it to the 'influence of Mormonism' that had fallen like a blight on the land, etc., etc., etc.

"If Rev. L. L. Luse will write the name and locality of the county and state or territory, where a colony of Latter Day Saints ever settled, where they did not by their labor, industry and enterprise, cause the land to bring forth its increase; and where they did not build houses good to dwell in, make gardens and plant and cultivate them, and make things flourish generally, (and to make the task easier for him if possible, we will include the Mormons of Utah, for purpose of an example), we will cheerfully publish the item in answer to this inquiry in the Herald.

"Further, we will ask the Rev. L. L. Luse to furnish us the name and locality of any village, town, or city, founded and built up by the Latter Day Saints, and from which they have been driven, in every instance without legal process, or pretext, that has not remained as they left it, or has gone into decay, become 'desolate and deserted looking.'"

"The above are sample quotations from an article which appears in Saints' Herald of March 15th, as editorial, but bearing unmistakable earmarks of one who locked horns with us once before, but finally after a year or more spent in trying to answer our arguments, gave us up as irresponsible. We shall treat the article however, as being the production of Joseph Smith, son of the prophet, editor of the Herald, and President of the Reorganized church.

"The President takes exceptions to some of our statements made in a letter written while at Kirtland, Ohio, and published at the time in the BLADE. He denies with some considerable spirit, our statement to the effect, that the blighting curse now resting on Kirtland, and has rested upon it ever since the departure of the Mormon leaders, is attributable to Mormonism; then he proceeds to state what we do not deny, to prove that our statement was not correct. The President feels keenly the force of our statements, or he would not violate his own edict sent forth for the guidance of his brethren, to wit: that they should no more refer to L. L. Luse in their communications to the Herald. We are sorry to wound the President's feelings so, but truth is dearer to us than Joseph Smith or even our dearest friends. We never denied the temporal prosperity of the Mormons, when they had full possession of a town. But this argues nothing in favor of the genuineness of their religious profession. The most unscrupulous scoundrel out of the penitentiary may have temporal prosperity, so long as he can make purchases on credit, and a credulous populace will take his shin-plasters as money; but his career is of short duration; it soon comes to a culminating point—the crash will inevitably come. Then devastation and ruin spreads its 'blighting curse' as far as the circle of his transactions. In this we both agree, for you say, President Smith, of the departure of Saints from Nauvoo: 'but when they were driven out a curse seemed to be left behind.' This is what I claim as the result of their departure from Kirtland, Ohio.

"The probe we made in our letter, went to a tender spot, which evidently disconcerted the President a little, and in his haste to strike back, made some statements quite paradoxical. To instance: 'furnish us the name and locality of any village, town, or city, founded and built up by Latter Day Saints, and from which they have been driven, in every instance without legal process, or pretext, that has not remained as they left it.' Then further on in his editorial the President says: 'but when they were driven out a curse seemed to be left behind.' Too paradoxical President, altogether too paradoxical.

"The President names Nauvoo as one place which answers our purpose, and we will name Kirtland as another. Kirtland is there, what there is left of it, in all of its faded beauty to speak for itself; living witnesses still remain to tell the sad, sad story; we interviewed them and gave our readers a partial benefit of the result in our letter; we now give more at the challenge of President Smith.

"The great majority of the church are kept in blissful ignorance of the true history and character of Kirtland Mormonism. That is why the leaders of Mormonism have taken such umbrage at our letter. But we can not help this, nor how much they shout, "lie," "persecution," "hypocrite," etc., etc.; we will state the facts as we found them, and as can be attested by scores of living witnesses, Kirtland itself being the most prominent.

"We did not go to Kirtland as a partizan, determined to have matters come out adverse to Mormonism, but with the most kindly feelings toward those of that faith. We did not go to Kirtland, President, as two of your priest-hood went to Palmyra, New York, according to the sworn affidavits of several old citizens of that place, and enter their houses on Sunday morning, refusing to give their names, and by the meanest kind of petty-fogging, try to get these old people to contradict certain published affidavits that were adverse to Mormonism, and detrimental to the character of its leaders. No, nothing of the kind. We went to hear, and see, and investigate, and report as opportunity opened.

"The President asks us to 'name a town,' etc., as we have already quoted. So we proceed, and we name Kirtland first, as an illustration of our claim.

"To get a correct idea of the value of a thing, you must see its ins-and-outs, summer and winter. Kirtland has seen Mormonism in its beginning, in its greatest glory, and in its downfall, when its leaders were 'compelled to flee from justice under the cover of night. What was Kirtland when Mormonism was there in its happiest condition? A city of 2,000 inhabitants. What is it now? A village of less than three hundred inhabitants, with twenty-four children on the school roll. What has wrought this change? Mormonism did it with its little hatchet. The present condition of Kirtland is the result of the unscrupulous career of Mormon leaders, and the 'blighting influence' reaches to the outer circle of their conduct while there. Soon after the Mormons settled at Kirtland, and commenced work, things in general commenced to boom.

"The leaders took with them quite a band when they went to Kirtland, which was soon enlarged to a host. The saints were put to work, and Smith and Rigdon did the bossing. Men in their fanaticism, worked day and night, and deprived themselves of all luxuries and many necessities to do the will of the Lord as revealed (?) to them through Smith. The revelations (?) poured in thick and fast. Kirtland was the mountain on which Zion was to be built—no doubt about that. The Lord must have a temple in which to dwell. It must be of solid cut stone, according to the first revelation. Smith knew more about what could be done than the Lord did, so they compromised on cobble stone and mortar, the outside being marked off to resemble cut stone. Moreover, when a man embraced the 'fulness of the Gospel,' with money or property, a revelation was forthcoming to the effect that his money and property belong to the church, and should be handed over. That meant give it to Smith and Rigdon. And in this connection let me say, Smith sometimes made the demand for money and property of those not saints, and in fact took it under the pretense that it belonged to the Lord, without leave or license, from its owner. This was the practical outcome of Rigdon's community of goods' doctrine. A gentleman gave us the history of two or three such cases, while we were in Kirtland. Smith spent his time mostly in making plans and receiving revelations. Now, next, the Lord reveals to the saints, through Smith, that his servant Joseph must have a 'house good to dwell in.' A big hotel was the result. Then a big tannery was built—Rigdon was a tanner you know. Then a big store was opened. Next a bank was opened with a paid up capital stock of $150,000 in check. Then a printing office was started, and Kirtland bristled and sparkled with prosperity. How was this done? By the hard work of Smith and Rigdon's dupes, and the trickery, fraud, and theft of the manipulators of this then new delusion. The country was flooded with spurious currency called money from the bank. The goods were bought most on time, to fill up the big store, and never paid for.

"The people were humbugged in the temple, robbed in the store, and defrauded in the bank. The leaders became more bold in their trickery and crime. The spiritual wife doctrine was first practiced and then introduced, the truthfulness of which was acknowledged by R. M. Elvin in the Congregational church of this place, last winter. People began to get some glimpses of the true inwardness of Mormonism by this time, and matters were rapidly culminating. The volcano was hastening to a head; it must soon overflow; the leaders could conceal their nefarious work no longer; the cloud that overshadowed them was gathering thickness and blackness and no longer had a silver lining. The day finally came when Smith and Rigdon could no longer conceal their iniquity. The officers of the law came and arrested Smith and Rigdon, and they were fined $1,000 each. A perpetually violated law was fast closing its grip upon them, to stop, if possible, their mad and wild career. But Smith and Rigdon finally slipped its grasp, by slipping out of the country between two days. They suddenly came to the conclusion that Kirtland was not a good place to locate Zion, but by revelation (?) ascertained that Independence, Mo., was the proper place.

"Yes, President Smith, Mormonism made the 'land yield her increase,' and built 'houses good to dwell in,' but how did she do it? We have shown how it was done, and in the how, we find a solution of the question, why the desolation and 'curse', that 'remained when they had departed.' They had big stores, big banks, big tanneries, big hotels, but how did they have them? We have shown the how. Let the departed tannery; the empty hotel; the defunct bank; with its thousands upon thousands of spurious money sent out and never redeemed, but lost to those who held it when the crash came; the "gone up" big store, leaving numerous wholesale dealers to mourn the loss of a departed saint; the dilapidated condition of the temple; and sad winds that sing a mournful requiem around its empty walls, tell the sad, sad story.

"We present to you, Mr. President, Kirtland as it was, Kirtland as it is, as a practical demonstration of our claim.

"Please give the Herald readers the benefit of our reply."

In replying to the HERALD Editorial without correcting our statement of what he affirmed in his letter, and to which we referred, not having the paper at hand, Mr. Luse permits us to conclude that what we wrote as stated by him was substantially correct.

We give Mr. Luse's article as it appears in the Blade, because a few points in it deserve notice.

The statement that Kirtland "looked deserted, dilapidated, dull and forsaken," etc., certainly refers to its physical appearance, its material prosperity, or decadence; and this is by him attributed to the "blighting influence of Mormonism." Curious, really, that a place should flourish under the administration of a people, (however fanatical or untrue their religion might be), and so long as they were left undisturbed in the pursuit of the occupations of peace, that same people should buy land and cultivate it, build houses and inhabit them, erect mills, tanneries, hotels, stores, work shops of various sorts and operate them, erect a costly building in which to worship, set up and run a printing office, not one single one of which things was a crime, or misdemeanor in the United States, or the State of Ohio, when the Saints settled in Kirtland; and is not now, neither in Ohio, nor Nebraska; and then when that same people were forced to leave the place where these things were done, that the emptiness of their vacated dwellings, the weeds growing in their abandoned garden places and on their farms, the mould and blight which loneliness, dampness and decay spread over the streets, paths and tenements, public and private, where these busy people were wont to meet, pass and repass in the pursuit of their daily affairs, should be charged to the "blighting influence" of their presence.

Surely the land that people occupied was left behind them; the houses, stores, hotels, tanneries, shops, and Temple were not burned, nor stolen and carried away by them. All of them were left behind, when that people left the country. Suppose that Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon did get away between two days, and under cover of night. Was it after they had been tried for crime, in an open court, before an honorable judge, by a jury of their peers, chosen as other panels for the trial of accused persons were chosen? Or was it after they had been harassed by petty persecutions, which put them to trouble and costs, without subjecting them to punishment? After having been taken from their beds "between two days," and "under cover of night," beaten, whipped, scratched, tarred and feathered; and that not for any alleged crime, but for the expression and maintenance of religious convictions; and in the midst of a people professing Christianity. Is it a fact, and does Mr. Luse now wish his readers to understand, that the State of Ohio was not able to enforce its civil laws upon a handful of people gathered on Kirtland plains? Is it possible that two men, (and it does not appear from the statement that there were any seriously wicked men there except Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon), could be such desperately bad men as Mr. Luse, and all whom he writes to represent, would seem to believe, and could run such a course and not be made amenable to the law, by proper and lawful means, and not by lawless violence. What of the two thousand dupes? Were there no honest men among them? What of the industrious, the toilers, those who had money, lands and tenements? Did they go with Joseph and Sidney in the night? How many of those people were arrested for crimes against persons and property, and who were they? What is the date, and where is the record on the dockets of the courts, where the suits against them may be found? They did not run the courts, nor keep the records; but these were in the hands of other men, and those men not friendly to the Saints. It can not be possible that Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, alone, of all those hundreds, should have been bad. If others were, and were made the subjects of efforts to punish them by the officers of the law, who were they? What were their offenses? If the only offense the host was guilty of, was that of being duped because of their innocence and ignorance, neither was then punishable by action at law, nor is it now, for there is no statute law preventing a man from believing what he chooses, or being ignorant.

The truthfulness or falsity of the religion of the Saints was not urged in what we wrote in review of Mr. Luse's letter, but the question of prosperity, or decay, as resulting from the influence of the principles taught by the Saints. Kirtland is cited by Mr. Luse as the place asked for by us; yet the rise, progress and prosperity of that town while in the possession and control of the Saints are admitted, while the present distressed and dilapidated condition of the place is cited as the result of their influence. When the gentleman writes about a paradox, here is one: Kirtland rose and flourished while the Saints were in it, but went to decay when they left it; therefore, says this logical Christian teacher, this decay is chargeable to their influence. Other people have occupied the town with all the hotels, tanneries, shops, Temple, houses, and other improvements left by the Saints, for a period of forty years or more, during which time the beneficent influences of the men who forced the Saints to go, and their religious neighbors have been spread over the town, and yet these forty years of occupation by the good, good people who were left after all the bad, "bad Mormons" were gone, have failed to rub off the red rust of decay that was not there when those wicked Mormons were there, but came on after they left.

Mr. Luse essays to give the processes by which the town was built, and does so by statements of the truth of which he can have no knowledge. He gives the building of stores, tanneries, hotels, the Temple, bank, and other things, as the appropriation of moneys and property obtained by Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon. Did these two men get rich personally by the public works, cited by Mr. Luse? The citizens of Kirtland say that everybody worked on the Temple: Joseph, Hyrum, and others of the Smith family, Sidney Rigdon, the Johnsons, Whitners, and everybody; even the women and children did what they could. Whatever labor the people could do among themselves they did, and put the money obtained into material and labor which they had not at command.

It is charged by Mr. Luse that the means by which the money was obtained was by confiscating through revelation that the moneys and property of those who joined the church "belonged to the Lord, and should be handed over." "That," says Mr. Luse, meant give it to Smith and Rigdon." How does Mr. Luse know this? Was he among those upon whom tribute was levied in this fashion? Does he know how much Smith and Rigdon got? Whatever went into the Temple is there yet. Joseph Smith, nor Sidney Rigdon, nor their heirs have ever obtained a dollar for it. It was sold years after the Saints left there, on a judgment against Joseph Smith; but the courts of Ohio have decided that it was not his, but the property of the church—the people. The only person injured in the transaction is a man who was and is to-day a believer in the mission of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, and who was not among those who gathered to Kirtland, nor ever received a revelation devoting his money to the renovating the building through Joseph Smith, but who does not accept the Reorganized Church. The loss to him was one of his own voluntary seeking, and for which neither Joseph Smith nor Sidney Rigdon can ever be held responsible.

But Mr. Luse says that Joseph Smith "made demands for money and property of those not Saints, and in fact took it under the pretense that it belonged to the Lord, without leave or license, from its owner." Upon whose evidence does Mr. Luse allege, as a fact, that Joseph Smith stole moneys and property in, or out of the church? Mr. Luse asserts it. Does he testify of his own knowledge? Was he there and knowing to any such thefts being committed? If he does not know personally, upon what ground does he say "in fact." The article from Mr. Luse's own paper states that "calling a man a thief does not make him a thief; his actions only can make him one." From whom did Joseph Smith steal money, or property, that went into any of the buildings erected at Kirtland, public or private.

Mr. Luse has told us that "truth is dearer to him than Joseph Smith, or even his dearest friends." After such a declaration one would suppose that the one to whom truth was so dear would be careful to state only the truth, though he might be writing about those whom he deemed his enemies, or grossly in error. Does he vouch for the truthfulness of his statements, all of which are made upon hearsay?

He gives his readers to understand that a "big hotel" was the result of a commandment through Joseph Smith that he must have a "house good to dwell in." The house built by Joseph Smith, or for him, in Kirtland, just as one chooses to believe, was a small one, on the left hand side of the wood leading from the Temple down to the hill to Kirtland Flats and the Chagrin River. The big store was a small affair, as compared with even country stores now, and stands yet for any one to see. As to the goods sold in it, how does Mr. Luse know that they were bought on time and never paid for? Upon whose statement does he make this charge? Does he not know that from the date of the departure of the Saints from Kirtland to the death of Joseph Smith, there was ample time for the collection of any debt due from Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, if they had been copartners in the purchase of goods on credit for which they did not pay? How much in the aggregate did the creditors lose by these two debtors? What were their names, and where are the claims now? Was it not just as easy for a creditor to whom moneys were due for goods purchased, to perpetuate his claim by judgment in the courts in Ohio, and recover by revival of his judgment in another State, when his debtor had acquired property sufficient to liquidate the claim, as it was for one to revive the record of a judgment for a fine for an assault by which a levy was made upon the Temple as the property of Joseph Smith and have it sold to satisfy such claim? Does Mr. Luse know whether Joseph Smith ever paid any of the debts so created, either by himself or others, by reason of an action of law against him, or voluntarily. How does he know that the people were robbed in the store; and who were they who were robbed? What were Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon fined $1,000 for? Does Mr. Luse know anything about it? If not, why does he testify as he does?

The first stone of the Temple in Kirtland, called by those then erecting it, the "House of God," the "House of Worship," and the "Stone Meeting House," was laid July 23d, 1833. Nor was there any command given the Saints, real or pretended, that was violated by finishing it in hard cement, or stucco, marked to imitate cut stone. The means to build it,—money, property and labor,—was raised by donation and subscriptions. The amount expended up to July, 1835, aggregated about ten thousand dollars. On the 18th of June of the same year $950 were subscribed by the citizens of Kirtland, and on the 25th of the same month, $6,232, making a total of $7,182. It can not be shown that any other means but that which was cheerfully given for the purpose ever went into that building.

Mr. Luse leaves the impression either purposely, or ignorantly, that it was not until they could not remain in Kirtland longer, that a revelation was given appointing a location in Missouri. The history which Mr. Luse alleges has been kept from the church shows that on April 6th, 1833, three months prior to the laying of the first stone of the Temple in Kirtland seventy ordained members of the church, representing more than five hundred members, met "in the land of Zion," and spent the day from ten till four o'clock, very agreeably. The history of the times shows that while the "House of the Lord" was being built at Kirtland, the Saints were assembling in the west, building up towns, establishing farms, etc.

In July, 1836, the citizens of Clay county, Missouri, pushed a large number of the Saints out of that county, recommending them "to the good treatment of the citizens of the adjoining counties." This was done while yet the people were at Kirtland building the Temple, etc. If Mr. Luse knew these facts, did he write the truth?

The Kirtland Safety Fund Bank. This was another huge crime, as stated by Mr. Luse. Will he please explain how Messrs. Smith and Rigdon succeeded in getting a Bank Charter under the banking law of the State of Ohio, with a "paid up capital of $150,000—in cheek." One would be led to think that Ohio never had a bursted bank, except the Kirtland Bank, by the way such men as Mr. Luse and others write about it. Who knows the facts about that bank so well as some of the unfortunate stockholders who were obliged, and did as far as they could, redeem the broken currency? The Bank of Kirtland money was not "spurious money." The bank was a regularly chartered association, and had as much right to issue its notes, promises to pay, as any other and all other banks in the State; or as Mr. Luse would have to give his note for property bought by him. If the incorporators failed to meet these promises through mismanagement, it was the result of lack of wisdom and financial knowledge; if by reason of misfortune, they were to be pitied, not abused; if by rascality and fraud, they should have been punished, and that by due process of law. Is Mr. Luse prepared to aver that by fraud in imposing "cheek" upon the authorities of the State for cash, or its vouchers, a fraudulent charter was obtained for the purpose to defraud a whole lot of innocent people at home and abroad?

How does Mr. Luse know that "thousands upon thousands" of this money were put into circulation and "never redeemed." Did the persons who told him so have hundreds and hundreds of it? Who are the parties, and where do they live, who hold these "thousands on thousands" of thousands? Were there no other banks of issue in Ohio, at the same time? Was the Kirtland Bank the only one that "busted?" Is it not true that all through the then north and west, there were banks of issue, called individual banks, that set their money afloat, trusting to success in business to keep their notes in circulation, and to redeem them when presented at their own counters. Is it not a "truth," and if so, should not Mr. Luse "love it," that the whole country was filled from Ohio to Texas, New York to Florida, with all sorts of such currency. And is it not also true that hundreds of these banks went down in ruin, and Wild Cat and Red Dog currency, as worthless as the Kirtland Bank Bills could possibly be, were left in the hands of the holders of such scrip.

We do not and will not defend Joseph Smith or Sidney Rigdon from just condemnation; but these unqualified assertions about the Kirtland Bank, and the enormity of the crime committed by those who attempted to operate it, are without proof; and it is time that men who hold up such holy hands in horror, "loving the truth" so dearly, should remember that somebody has said that so and so, therefore it is all true, and Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon were scoundrels, is not proof.

We may admit that the bank was a mistake and a failure; but that does not make it a fraud purposely perpetrated. It was a mistake made possible under the then existing banking system. And even now, with all the experience that men have had, and all the added protection by wiser legislation, banks fail; and many of them innocently too, on the part of their originators.

We do not pretend to say how the matter was, for we do not know. Had that one bank been the only one existing at the time in Ohio, which failed, we might be content to take it for granted that something out of the ordinary line in the business caused its failure. He who charges fraud must show it.

Mr. Luse's statement that Elder Elvin acknowledged the introduction of the spiritual wife doctrine in the Congregational Church at Wilber last winter, is met by Bro. Elvin's letter which we give; and of which Mr. Luse has a copy.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,
March 25th, 1884.

MR. L. L. LUSE, Wilber, Neb.,

Dear Sir:—Accept thanks for copy of Blue Valley Blade, of 20th inst. Inasmuch as you have taken the liberty, without my permission, to use my name in article replying to Elder Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa, in the following paragraph, "The spiritual wife doctrine was first practiced and then introduced, the truthfulness of which was acknowledged by R. M. Elvin in the Congregational Church of this place, last winter."

1st. I have never at any time or place, admitted that Joseph Smith, either "introduced" or "practiced," "the spiritual wife doctrine," but have always most stoutly protested against mixing his name with that heaven condemned abomination and crime.

2d. You were never present at any meeting where I was the speaker, and therefore you are depending upon the "say so," of some person to me unknown.

3d. I did not speak in the Congregational Church "last winter" nor any other "winter."

Please give this a place in your paper, and thereby set me in a proper light before your readers. Hereafter should you desire to use me as a witness, permit me to first examine that which is to be placed before the public, and confirmed by my admissions or statements made during my preaching. Respectfully,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Another point. Mr. Luse congratulates himself that he did not go to Kirtland as a partisan, nor as two of the elders did up about Palmyra, and other places in western New York and northern Ohio, to get men to contradict what they had said about Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon. This is a reference to the trip made by Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley into the places named on an inquiry as to the correctness of certain statements made by certain persons against the Saints, hunted up and gathered by Dr. Hulburt, D. P. Kidder and others, and greedily swallowed by Tom, Dick and Harry, of the so called orthodox pulpits and churches, including Reverends Clark Braden and L. L. Luse, and retailed by them as truth in every place where it was thought any harm could be done the Latter Day Saints.

Those two brethren are sons of an elder of the church who with his wife, bore a part of the brunt of the battle in the days of Joseph and Hyrum. They have a right to know by every means lawful to enquiry to find how true, or false the testimony which has been borne against the early elders of the church and which militates against the faith and honor of their parents and their own is. They had the right to hunt up every witness who had testified concerning Mormonism and the Mormons and catechise him; either without telling who they were, or not, just as they chose. They went for information and they got it. If the witnesses crossed themselves, and nullified their former reputed testimony, it is because they had not been correctly reported by Hulburt and others, or had never testified, or their former testimony was not true. He who testifies truly need have no fear of cross examination, nor exercise much care, or thought as to whether his stories now and then agree. Mr. Luse professes to love the truth; aids and abets Rev. Clark Braden in hunting up evidence to be used against the Reorganized Church, yet publicly condemns the elders of that church for hunting after the truth, or falsity of the same evidence produced against themselves.

We can not close this reply to Rev. Luse more fittingly than by quoting the following correspondence from Kirtland, to the Willoughby Independent, of March 28th, published three miles from Kirtland.

"The merits of the Braden-Kelley discussion and topics out of it are still the subject of much conversation in public and private circles, and in view of the partizan feeling manifested it is hardly safe to say much upon the subject. The Independent is a news journal and not the advocate of any religious sect or party, and in this it has the hearty sympathy of your correspondent; yet one may say without offense, and as a matter of news, that the L. D. Saints have made many friends and sympathizers here as a result of the discussion—thus to some extent fulfilling the predictions of 'M.,' your Illinois correspondent. At no time during the contest was there over one-half dozen 'Saints' in the audience; yet it was evident from the open and decided manifestations of applause, where the sympathies of the majority of those present lay. We desire also, as an act of justice, to vindicate the reputation of the people of Kirtland from the attack upon their intelligence, implied by the sneering remark that their 'brains lay in their heels.' We believe it to be true that in no rural community of equal size anywhere in the U. S. can the superiors of the people of Kirtland in general intelligence be found. Hence, the above utterance of a comparative stranger to our people was, to say the least, in bad taste, and is very justly resented by a large proportion of our population.

"We wish also, as a matter of history, to place on record a refutation of the statement that 'Mormonism left Kirtland a ruin, covered with wrecks in religion and morals, lowered the price of property, and made the very name of Kirtland a hissing and a by-word and a stench in North-Eastern Ohio.' Fifty-two years ago Kirtland was an obscure village, with one store, and scarcely known to the outside world. About this time the new sect of 'Mormons,' so called, began to gather here. Soon a city with 2000 inhabitants sprang up, and though comparatively poor, by their energy and industry erected a Temple at an estimated cost of $40,000. Various branches of industry were instituted; a printing press was set up; a high school was established, and a distinguished Hebrew author and scholar was imported from N. Y. to teach the Hebrew language. Real estate appreciated in value. In 1837-8 the great body of Mormons left, but they left Kirtland far in advance of where they found it. They found it with no school of note; they left it with a high school that a year or two later developed into the 'Western Reserve Teachers' Seminary,' which under the leadership of Dr. Asa D. Lord, year after year, for many years, sent out a class of teachers which gave an impetus to the cause of popular education that has made the State of Ohio one of the first in the Union in this regard. This institution also numbered among its students many who have since become distinguished in the various walks of life. The 'Mormons' found Kirtland with one hotel; they left it with two. They found it with one store; they left it with three, and these stores with two grocers remained here many years, and had a large and flourishing trade. One of them, at the head of which was Isaac Sherman, had a trade not surpassed by any store in Lake or of Geauga county—customers coming from Mentor, Willoughby, Chester and Chardon. In N. E. Kirtland was a small but industrious village known as the Chair Factory, and this factory for many years gave employment to a considerable number of people. For many years subsequent to the departure of the 'Mormons' the Congregational church maintained a prosperous existence. Old residents remember with respect the long and successful pastorate of Rev. Truman Coe over this society. The M. E. Church also, for many years, maintained a flourishing society; and yet Kirtland was, we are told a 'moral ruin.' It was not until the building of the L. S. & M. S. railway that Kirtland began to fall into decadence. Had that great thoroughfare passed through our village, it would have been to-day what Willoughby now is.

"Doubtless the Independent is tired of this whole subject. There is, however, one more subject concerning which we desire to 'make a few remarks,' and then we are done. During the recent debate the charge was repeatedly made that the 'Mormon' church was an infidel organization; and in the last Independent we find the following chaste (?) language. 'In the Mormon champion's infidel attacks upon the Bible the infidel wolf recognized the howl of its brother.' For over fifty years we have known this people called 'Mormons,' and some of this time have been intimately associated with them, and it is our well matured opinion, founded upon this long acquaintance, that there is not a sect in Christendom that believes in, and adheres more closely and tenaciously, and we may add conscientiously, to the Bible than this same sect called 'Mormons.' Indeed, their religious creed is entirely derived from the Bible. The Book of Mormon contains but little 'doctrine,' and this not new. It simply purports to be a history of a people who formerly occupied this continent; and if every copy of the book was burned to-day and its very memory, if possible, obliterated, the Latter Day Saints' Church would still retain its organization, with all its present characteristics. We have no desire to champion this book or this church, but do desire to be brave enough to be just, and honest enough to tell the truth, so far as we know it. Z.

Brn. M. T. Short and H. C. Bronson had baptized eleven at Montrose, Iowa, to March 31st and four were to be baptized April 1st, by Bro. Bronson. Bro. Short had gone to Keokuk, Bro. Bronson remaining at Montrose till after the 3d instant to continue the interest there.

The Delaware county Advocate published at Chester, Pennsylvania, has an excellent article in defense of the Faith written by a friend signing himself Highland Terrace. We suspect it to be the work of Bro. Wm. Street getting it inserted.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—Can a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints be considered in good standing when tending bar in a whisky saloon.

A.—He will not be so considered by the general church, though he may by the branch to which he belongs. Moreover, we doubt whether such a person, however fair his standing in the church below may be, will be considered in "good standing" in the family in heaven, and on the Lamb's Book of Life. If a drunkard can not inherit eternal life, he who helps to make drunkards must take the wages of sin for which he sows, which is death, and be content. A dram selling saint would be a queer thing in heaven.

Correspondence.

PLATTSMOUTH, Nebraska,
March 29th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Since writing last, I have labored much at Fremont, Nebraska, and vicinity. While preaching at Blair, I received a card from Fremont, informing me of some lectures being held on the subject of "Mormonism" by the Baptist minister, and requesting my attendance, as he was misrepresenting us. I was present at his second lecture, which was but a reiteration of the past, abuse, not reason. His announcement at the beginning of the lecture was, that he was only speaking of the "polygamous Mormons;" but through his ignorance, (for he afterward said he did not know anything about the subject, only what he had heard), he fell into the popular error of scandalizing "old Joe Smith," and charging him with the evils in Utah, and tracing the church from 1830 to the Utah faction, saying that they, (the Mormons), had always been disloyal, and treated the laws with contempt.

After he had closed the services, I asked for a few moments to explain. This was granted, and the congregation very quietly seated themselves, and I informed them and him of our position. I then asked for the use of the church; but he did not wish to allow the spirit of controversy to enter in, hence I did not get the church.

I attended his third lecture, which was to conclude the series, and, lo! a change. It seemed as though he could not laud us enough before his congregation, without omitting the subject he was to speak upon—the practice of polygamy in the Old Testament,—which he only noticed a few minutes. He concluded with saying, that he was not responsible for what he had said previously, as he had only quoted from histories he thought to have been reliable. I visited him on the following day, and was requested by him to write some articles representing the views of the Reorganized Church respecting Joseph Smith and his mission, and the introduction of polygamy, and he would publish them. (He is editor of the Saturday Evening Journal in the city). I was very thankful to comply with the request. The articles were published to the removing of much prejudice.

Propositions for discussion were sent me from Blair by a brother, growing out of false statements and assertions made by an Adventist elder. But before I could send them word what arrangements to make, the elder had gone, and the brother has not been privileged to see him since. The people of the Disciple Church, at Blair, sent for a would be champion of their church to meet me, but he did not come, although he had said when he was there, that he would pay his way back to defend what he had said. I found on arriving at Waterloo, that there another "great one" had been making repeated thrusts at the Saints and their belief, and asserting that he could prove the Christian (Campbellite) Church to be the only true church. I published a notice in the paper, inviting him to meet me and prove his assertions, but he has not been heard from.

I begin to think that very few of the present so-called divines, believe their own statements concerning the Latter Day Saints; but having found that such talk tickles the ears of their congregations, use it for that purpose; and to kindle the flames of opposition and prevent investigation. But, thank God, the time is past for such logic (?) to have much force, only with the evil inclined and weaker minded. The more upright and honest hearted resent such argument (?). I have preached at Valley Branch, Plattford Branch, Lake Shore Branch, and in the vicinity of them. I have also been laboring in conjunction with the district president of the Northern Nebraska District, by his request, for some time, trying to strengthen the branches, and regulate them, in which I have been much blessed. I find not only is the opposing power working with those who will to be his servants of the world, but also working to cause division and sub-division within the fold. God has called you to order, O ye Saints, not confusion; he calls, we must obey; he directs, we must be subject. Can you not have faith in his ordering? His perfect order is alone manifested in the church when we are willing to uphold the instructors he has ordained. Humility is the spirit that should govern every member of the church. By it we shall finally overcome. Humble to the order of the church, but firm in opposing, through Christ, all error. Those whom God had called to serve, should do so in simplicity and humility of spirit, and those called to be ministered unto, should receive, but not to doubtful disputations, those whom God has sent. For the many kind words and deeds I have received, dear Saints of the Nebraska Mission, may God reward you. May you cherish the spirit of prayer and confession, and at last gain an eternal abode in the mansions of the blest.

Your brother in bonds,
J. FRANK MINUN.

BARNARD, Nodaway Co., Mo.,
March 31st, 1884.

Brother Joseph Smith.—Last night I closed my series of lectures in this place, twelve in all. Some evenings the house was filled. I received great favor and kindness from the members of the Christian Church here in singing, and Elder John Harland opening by prayer, while Brother Woodhead rang the bell, seated the people, and built fires;—good boy, he did his part. Many are feeling prejudice, not on the account of Brigham Young, but of stories in circulation about the prophet, Joseph Smith. One said to me to-day, that Jesus proved that he was the Son of God, by doing miracles. I asked him to show me where ever Jesus did a miracle to convince any person outside of those that believed. But signs were given to confirm his word to those that obeyed it. I said I had seen more of the signs and miracles, wrought in this church which proved to me, the prophetic calling of Joseph, than I read of in the Bible to prove that Jesus was the Son of God. He said, We have witnesses in the Bible of Jesus being the Son of God, and we don't find any thing in it about Joe Smith. His Elder said, that is true, but they are dead witnesses. I said, that is true, and still he did not know that the apostles, statement was true, unless the word was confirmed to him by the Spirit of God. But to-day there are thousands living that testify that they have received the Spirit of God, and bare witness that Joseph Smith was a prophet; and that I knew that Joseph was a prophet of God. The Elder said after the man left the office, he did not make any thing out of that. I told the Elder never to deny any truth he had, but come and get more.

I should have spoken a few times this week, and had the appointments out; but the Baptists shut me out of the house.

Yours, ever,
J. C. Foss.

Bro. Joseph:—I the president of the Delany Branch, raised what money I could in the branch to send to the relief of the Saints at Wheeling, W. Va., that were distressed by the flood there. I succeeded in raising three dollars, realizing that every little helps in time of need. I sent it to them the tenth of this month. The Saints here are trying to do the best they can, spiritually, with the exception of a few. I find a portion of the Saints that are almost always present at our meetings, and we have good meetings, and the Spirit of the Master seems to meet with us, and we are made to rejoice in the latter day work. My prayer is that the Lord will help the Saints, that they may keep their covenants unbroken, that they may be worthy of the gifts and blessings of the gospel, and be protected from every disease and destruction that is passing through the land. I remain your co-laborer in the cause of Christ,

JAMES DROWN.

PLAINVILLE, Mass.,
March 26th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Two years ago last fall, I first heard the gospel, attending the meeting from curiosity, previously having been told that the Saints believed, and taught, doctrines contrary to the Bible. After listening to an able sermon by Bro. A. W. Glover, of Hyde Park, Mass., they gave me the Epitome of faith, which I carefully read, comparing it with the Bible; and to my surprise I found it taught more of the Bible than I had ever heard before. And so I went to hear them again. But my friends hearing of it, advised me to keep away, telling hard stories of the Saints, and worse ones of the gospel. It was about that time, that the following question was discussed by the Plainville Lyceum, of which I was a member: "Resolved, That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is not a part, and is in no wise connected with the Church in Utah." I was appointed upon the affirmative. Brethren Sheehy and Potter, of Providence, were there, and spoke very well. But the spirit of persecution had begun, people were bound to kill out the gospel; but it was from God, and they were found fighting against God; and the result was, that instead of killing the work, it began to grow. During this time I was still investigating the work, and finding day by day that the statements in opposition to the gospel were fictitious, many of them made of whole cloth. My finding truth where I expected error, led me to continue. And one by one my friends gave me up in despair, saying, that if I was determined to throw myself away, they had done all that they could for me, and they hoped that if I joined them, I would be the means of showing to the world the corruptness of the Church. Upon the tenth day of August, 1882, I was baptized into the Church. Happy day. Shortly after my sister followed, and now we are together, striving to follow the path that the Master has trodden, and are trying to tell others of a restored gospel, of the gifts and blessings, of the love of God, and his mercy in revealing the plan of salvation unto man. In the gospel we find the choicest blessings bestowed upon mankind. We have here in Plainville a nice little chapel where Bro. Coombs expounds the doctrines of Christ. Surely and steadily the work is gaining ground. The seed is planted, and God is giving the increase.

Praying for the advancement of Zion, I am in the gospel, your brother, ULYSSES W. GREEN.

INDEPENDENCE, MO.,

March 31st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We are still in the faith, and feel happy to note the general prosperity of the good work. There has been quite an accession to the church here within the past few months; and by report, many more are coming. We do not feel alarmed, so long as there seems to be the means of an honorable livelihood for all who come. But we give it as an opinion, that the land is the true basis of wealth; and persons having the means to purchase and fit up for living, can here find excellent land, good climate, and one of the best markets in the country. Hitherto there seems to have been a dearth in manufacturing. There is a grand opening for capitalists, who are enterprising enough to invest in active business. It's not speculators that are needed; but active manufacturing,—that which will utilize the wealth of the land, and give employment to labor; and so give permanency to the accumulation of people. Those who think that in Independence they will find perfection, because of the precious memories which cluster in the chosen place, will be doomed to disappointment and pain.

The branch here now numbers three hundred and four, with about thirty Elders included. Our meetings are quite well attended—and our preaching services are quite a success. I think the branch is in good condition, and bids fair for a prosperous future, and that it will compare favorably with any other in the church. Our Elders, as a rule, are quite liberal in their views and general policy; however, there is to much criticising, and throwing of cold water. I know that just criticism tends to good; but mere quibbling is simply against the spiritual interests of all concerned.

Some people seem to think that it is simply wrong to give an utterance to a thought which is not identical with their own past utterances; and should such a thought find expression—it would only be mere "speculation"—and most certainly wrong. But our experience attest the fact, that some times "speculation" is in precise accord with the truths of the matters in hand.

Yesterday was buried, Joseph H. Reynolds—the one who undertook to bring your Father from Illinois, in 1842 or 1843, to Missouri upon a requisition of the Governor of this State. He it was that was so signally defeated in the attempt to turn over the prophet to the tender mercies of the men who had dyed their hands in the blood of the innocent, and perpetrated nameless inhumanity, against the tender and the fair.

His death was a sad commentary upon a life identified with the crimes inflicted upon the Saints who gathered into the regions in those early days. I am informed that he died of delirium tremens. At his funeral, not a word of sympathy was uttered, nor a tear shed. He seemed to have, at least stood alone, without a single relative at hand. Thus, one by one, the despoilers of the innocent pass away, unwept and unloved.

Bro. Heman C. Smith preached for us once yesterday,—he having the day previous arrived here en route for General Conference. That right may prevail, and justice triumph, is the prayer of your brother.

THOS. E. LLOYD.

KEOKUK, IOWA, March 24th, 1884.

To the Readers of the Herald:—I am still battling for the truth. Bro. H. C. Bronson has been laboring in our branch at Keokuk, and his preaching is liked very much. One of his hearers said that if it had not been a Mormon sermon he would say it was the best sermon he ever heard in his life. Bro. Bronson left a good impression in our place. It is said that short accounts make long friends; but I think long stays would make more members, at least that is our experience in this place. I have thought that Elders missed it by leaving a place just as they awakened an interest. There is where the world's preachers beat us. They have the hang on, and stay as long as the interest increases. May the past be a lesson for the future.

I made another trip to Jefferson county, Iowa, and stopped with Bro. Marion Daugherty's family; but the roads were bad, and I only held a few meetings there. There was a Free Methodist preacher there at the same time. He took for his subject, "Man was wonderfully and terribly created;" and when he got through, I thought he was sure. My hope is still in the work, and hope to be faithful and do all the good I can in establishing the gospel of Christ.

Still remain your brother,

B. F. DURFEE.

BOONESBOROUGH, IOWA,

March 23d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—It has been but a short time since I obeyed the gospel, and I do not regret it. I was baptized January 16th. I was convinced of the truth by the plain, earnest preaching of our esteemed brother, R. Etzenhouser. God's Spirit has attended and greatly blessed me since I have been in the work. I find no principles to be ashamed of; and upon those principles I build all my hopes, both for the present and future. I feel pretty well founded in the faith; yet I fully realize the danger of falling by the way. I pray that I may hold out faithful and true to the end of the race. I pray for the church, especially those with whom I have been so pleasantly associated within the past few months. I am interested in the future of Boonesborough, especially the young Saints of this place. I pray that they may conduct themselves to the honor and glory of God, and fit themselves for use in his kingdom. Our trials may be many, our temptations strong, and strength feeble; but we feel sure that the Lord is on our side, and this gives us courage to continue faithful.

I was at conference held at Rhodes, Iowa, March the 7th, and felt greatly blest while there. We have meeting here three times a week. Bro. Etzenhouser has just closed a series of meetings here, which I have every reason to think has been productive of every good. One was baptized, and some were received by letter during his stay, and the Saints were well instructed in regard to their duty, and seemed encouraged and determined to put forth a more united and vigorous effort to live their religion, and glorify the cause of the Master. May God help us all to put our good desires into good deeds. I know since I have turned my attention to the works of God, that I have experienced a change that satisfies me, that it is better to be a Saint, and be laughed at by those who are so stubborn that they will not listen to the word of God. I desire the earnest prayers of all the Saints, that when I depart from this life, I may be ready to meet my Savior, and be worthy of that home that God has promised to those who obey his commands. I trust that the love which I now feel for the work may never diminish, but increase; we may allow the "cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches to enter in and choke the good word;" and if we do this, of course it will become unfruitful. But we must watch and pray; that we enter not into temptation, and live our religion in our daily life. God will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear. When I think of all these glorious promises, I wonder how I can ever doubt, or become discouraged or cast down. We are taught in the word of God, that the "trial of our faith is more precious than gold." My greatest desire is to do something for the Master. I realize there is a work for me to do, as there is for every true and faithful child of God. We need not wait to perform some great act of benevolence, which the world will applaud; for it is not so much what we do as the spirit in which we do it. He says, "if we but give a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple," we shall not be without a reward. With best wishes for the success of the Herald, and its readers. I remain your sister in the latter day work.

FRANCES M. LANE.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,

March 31st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I returned home on the 24th inst. I have been out all winter, trying to present the truth to the people in Nebraska. I have only baptized one, and a great many have told me that they could find no fault with the preaching, and some are almost ready, want to hear more. Some have one excuse and some another. Some may say that the missionary has a good and easy time. But I find it to the contrary. He has no sure abiding place while on his mission, unlike those snug at home, with their wives and and little ones, which should be one of the most happy places on earth. He has to sacrifice those home pleasures of wife and children, and has gone forth, sacrificing his strength and his means, exposing his person night after night, after preaching, to the chilly, damp wind, from which, with the best of care, he will take more or less cold. An Elder when preaching should stop at one place and employ his time in reading and improving his mind, so that he will be more collected upon the subjects or discourses which he is delivering; and farther, his bed is the same while stopping at that one place, and he gets acquainted with the family which he is stopping with, and will feel really at home. I believe the words of the Lord Jesus, which he spoke to his Seventy, whom he had chosen and sent out to preach the gospel. He commanded them, saying, "Go your way; behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse nor scrip, nor shoes, nor salute any man by the way; and into whatever house ye enter first say, Peace to this house; and if the son of Peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it; if not it shall turn to you again. And in whatsoever house they receive you, remain, eating and drinking such things as they give; for the laborer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house."—Luke 10: 3-7.

I have preached in Plattsmouth and Omaha, and other smaller towns in Nebraska. My ministry has been mostly in Southern Nebraska District. I take this method of thanking the Saints and friends for their kindness towards me while I have been preaching. May the blessings of God ever be with them. May the Lord bless the Elders in their deliberations, is my prayer.

Yours in hope,

J. ARMSTRONG.

TABOR, Iowa, April 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just returned from Hamburg. Had a good time in presenting the gospel to the people of that place. Many are believing, and some express themselves ready for the water as soon as the warm weather comes. The Saints in the district feel well, as a general thing; and I think the work will move along faster this next year than it has in the past. We have done the best we know how to do, under the circumstances. We have not baptized as many as we would like to have done; but we don't intend to drag people into the water, unless they know something of the work; enough of that has already been done in this district. Some seek the honor of baptizing many into the Church, and some of these we have had to labor with, and convert to the faith, after some of the Elders have baptized them. Thus we are troubled and perplexed with all kinds of spirits, through not having sufficient wisdom in the beginning. May God bless us with wisdom and the light of the Holy Spirit, is my prayer. Yours in bonds,

HENRY KEMP.

BRIDGPORT, Conn.,

March 20th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Do the signs follow them that believe. By the foolishness of preaching, I was led to believe in the gospel of Jesus Christ, as presented by the Latter Day Saints; and was accordingly baptized by a brother I did not know. I had never seen him before. After baptism, we attended a prayer meeting. When the meeting had been in progress some time, this brother stood up, looking very pale, his eyes fixed on me. He began to speak in an unknown language. When he had done speaking, he walked across the room, laid his hands on my head, and ordained me a Priest. All this time I had not moved or spoken to be heard by any one in the room; but mentally I had answered his call, for I understood him perfectly. He spoke the Greek language, and the accent that I learned thirty-two years ago, and called me by my name, and not the name that I am known by now, but by my middle name that I was known by for four years while I lived in Greece, he speaking the accent so plainly, that had he been there with me, he could not have seemed to be more familiar with me and the language. When he gave the interpretation in the English, I did not understand him any better; he speaking in a language unknown even to himself, and calling me to the ministry, and my answering him mentally, and he, or the Spirit that spoke through him, understood me clearly, yet I did not even look up. I preached last Sunday for the first time, and he that called me was with me. O, my brother, pray for me, that the call may ever ring in my ears, moving to greater activity.

Your brother in Christ,

R. W. W. PREECE.

TEMPLE, Texas,

March 28th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I wrote immediately after the close of debate, and remarked that we should "see the results." We have seen some of them. We have had full houses ever since, and some who had not attended our meetings before, are attending regularly now. There have been three additions to the branch by baptism, and more are nearly persuaded. One of the additions was a young brother, who before had been with us, and wandered away from the fold in a dark day. It was a solemn and affecting scene. As he came out of the water, the audience sang,

"There were ninety and nine that safely lay,
In the shelter of the fold."

Another was an aged sister who had wandered in sectarian darkness, but has found the fold, and came in to rest during the last days of her pilgrimage. The third a young man of steady and moral habits. It does my heart good to see these young men take on the gospel armor, and my soul rejoices to see the aged walk in the paths of peace. Bro. John A. Currie, jun., was ordained an Elder the 15th inst., and declares his intention to give his life to the ministry. I have heard him speak twice, and was well pleased. He is a young man of excellent promise; and if he is faithful, will not be lost sight of in the progress of the latter day work. Ye Saints of Texas, be faithful, and a brighter day is dawning for you.

In bonds,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

MONTROSE, IOWA,

March 28th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. M. T. Short is with me here. Two were baptized here last Sunday, three more on Wednesday, by Bro. Short. Two or more will be baptized here this afternoon. One was also baptized on last Monday, making six in all.

Yours for truth,

H. C. BRONSON.

RICHFIELD, Genesee Co., Mich.,

March 19th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Saints here are very much scattered. But we are getting along as well as can be expected. We have had no preaching here for almost three years. My faith is strong in the work. We once had an organized branch here, but the Saints have moved away, until there is but few left. When we met together in the past, we enjoyed the Spirit of the Master in our midst. I feel to thank God for the blessings of the past, and still trust in him for the future. The Spirit of God was made manifest with us on the thirteenth. My mother was taken very sick about the first of March, with something like lung fever, and severe pain in her head. She trusted in God, and asked him to remove the pain, but did not feel like calling for the Elders. The people of the world wanted her to have the physicians, but she still put her trust in God. Some said she had trusted in God long enough, and thought we should get a physician for her. While she was meditating, she saw Elder E. DeLong enquiring of the Lord if she would get better; she heard the voice to him, If she trusted in the physicians, she would not; if she trusted in the Lord she would. She called for E. DeLong; he came and administered to her, and she got relief right away, and sat up and called for something to eat; and is now well, which caused us all to rejoice in our Heavenly Father. I feel it is a glorious cause to be engaged in. My prayer to God is, that he will ever keep us from all evil.

Your brother in the gospel,

THOMAS HARTNELL.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

March 27.—The decline of Parnellism as a prominent factor in British politics, is said to be now plainly indicated, and if Mr. Gladstone remains incapacitated, it is thought the Irish party will be broken into fragments ere long. The Tories are rapidly discarding their Irish allies, and the Liberals are renouncing their pledges. In Ireland the Liberals are arraying themselves against Parnellism; and the moderate Home-rulers are joining the liberal ranks.

The latest ebullition of Nihilism with which the Russian Capital is frightening itself is a threatened revival of the anti-Semitic riots to take place during the approaching festival of the Passover, which is always observed with great ceremony by the Jews throughout Russia. The official press of St. Petersburg gives warning that the plans for the proposed disorders are known to the Government, and will be met with stern repressive measures. Some of the Vienna papers, in commenting on the announcement, intimate that the danger exists only in the imagination of the police, but is now put forward as a cloak for contemplated measures of severity toward persons whom the Government suspects, but against whom it has no proofs.

The Russian Government has begun a suit against a Roumanian railway company for £2,000, of which it claims to have been defrauded by overcharges for the transportation of troops and supplies during the late war with Turkey. As all the railways in Roumania are really owned by the Government, although nominally controlled by various companies, this suit assumes the importance of an international episode.

It is thought that the next election in Germany will turn on Socialism.

The French Government will in May submit a scheme for the revision of the Constitution.

The Swiss Federal Council has ordered the immediate execution of the order expelling four anarchists.

Gen. Graham telegraphed this morning the following: "The evening and night were cool. The reveille was sounded this morning at 3:30 and as quickly as possible the troops got in readiness to advance on Tarnieb. The cavalry are in front and the infantry follow in echelon of brigade squares, with guns between brigades." The British forces began their advance on Tarnieb at five this morning. The firing opened at half past seven, and was brisk upon both sides

The rebels were in larger numbers than yesterday. The English cavalry and mounted infantry led, and drove the rebels from the rocks, dispersing them among the hills. There were no British casualties. The loss of the rebels is unknown. The rebels fired on the British troopers from the rocks upon the left. The cavalry dislodged them and advanced to within 100 yards of Tamanieb. As soon as Graham came up with the infantry and guns, shells were thrown among the flying Arabs and exploded close to them. On reaching Tamanieb the men and horses made straight for the wells and slaked their thirst. After a brief halt the cavalry moved out to the right and left of the village in pursuit of the retreating foe. The village forthwith was burned to the ground. Gen. Graham will explore the region in the neighborhood of the wells of Tamanieb and then return with his whole force to Suakin. The campaign is at an end. Col. Kitchener and Maj. Rundle have started from Cairo to co-operate with Capt. Chermiside in negotiations for the opening of the road to Berber. Telegraphic communication between Berber and Shendy has been restored. Orders have been sent Gen. Graham to return immediately with his troops.

March 28.—Turkey has protested against the commercial treaties concluded by the Khedive with England and Greece.

Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany, fourth and youngest son of Queen Victoria, died suddenly at 2 o'clock this morning at Cannes. Prince Leopold's death was due to the effects of a fall last evening at the Cerce Nautique. The Queen is very deeply affected by the loss of her favorite son.

In the British Commons tonight Albert Pell, Conservative, moved a resolution in favor of the relief of local taxation. The Government opposed the resolution. It was carried, however, by a vote of 208 to 197. The result was greeted with loud Conservative cheers and cries of "Resign," "Resign."

Rumors are prevalent at Cairo, Egypt, that Khartoum has fallen. It is reported that the prestige of Osman Digma is lost, his power broken, and the Sheiks hitherto faithful to him are returning to their former allegiance.

Eight murderers were hanged.

March 29th.—Mr. Davitt is again at variance with the Parnellites in the matter of the selection of candidates for the general Parliamentary election in Ireland and the scope which the land agitation ought to take. Mr. Davitt is evidently displeased at the general tendency of the Irish constituencies to permit Mr. Parnell to select their future members.

Telegraphic communication between the English lines and Khartoum is entirely interrupted, and grave fears are entertained for the safety of Gen. Gordon. The spirit of revolt against English domination has spread in Upper Egypt. There is relentless hostility to the British and inveterate opposition to their encroachments. The climate in the meantime is playing sad havoc among the English soldiery, and the march to Berber has performed been abandoned. The Gladstone Ministry are much puzzled over the Egyptian situation.

An authentic statement has been made as to the prevalence of trichiniasis in the district of Hesse Cassel, Germany, from which it appears that in 1875 fifty-four cases of it arose from the use of flesh of German swine and only nine from the use of American hog flesh. In the years since then 415 deaths have resulted in Germany from the use of the flesh of domestic hogs, while only 230 cases of disease have resulted from the use of the flesh of the American hogs. In the year 1882 only three well-authenticated cases of disease from eating American pork were reported. German statistics show that five per cent. of all the German hogs slaughtered are affected with trichinæ.

March 30th.—The villages containing the camp and headquarters of Osman Digma have been taken. The rebels have fled into the mountains, whither the British can not follow them, after a very severe fight, lasting from 8:30 a. m. till mid-day. The enemy have left from 2,500 to 3,000 of their number on the field. Five officers and ninety-six men of Gen. Graham's force have been killed, to which must be added nineteen missing—total 120. The wounded number ninety-nine, including ninety-four men.

The British telegram reads: Owing to there being no breeze heavy clouds of smoke hung over the men to their immediate front, entirely obscuring their view of what was going on in front of them. As the first companies reached the edge of the incline the rebels suddenly appeared in great numbers, leaping from behind the rocks, and made a wild charge upon the square. Our men could not see their enemy for the smoke, and so a species of momentary panic arose. The Arabs were quick to profit by the confusion in our ranks. They crawled on their hands and knees beneath the bayonets and beneath the muzzles of the Gardner's and Gatlings, and thus got into the square, when they commenced stabbing and slashing our men, doing terrible execution among them. At close quarters with the cold steel our men were no match for these powerful savages, who dodge the bayonets or catch them on their shields, and deliver two or three spear thrusts before the man armed with the bayonet can recover. The York and Lancaster men fell back in confusion behind the Naval Brigade, thus cutting the latter off from their limbers and ammunition. That the Naval Brigade stuck to their guns to the last is sufficiently testified by the fact that they lost three officers and eleven men before they left their guns, and then only retired when they had no more ammunition. The panic spread rapidly, and in a few moments the whole brigade was in hot retreat, the rebels following them closely, stabbing and hacking the hindmost. It was some moments before the retreat could be checked, and then the check was in a great measure due to the action of the cavalry. When first the infantry were engaged the cavalry withdrew to the rear, where they were hidden from the enemy by a fall in the ground. When the panic occurred the cavalry advanced at a trot, meaning to afford aid to the infantry by a charge. This, happily, was unnecessary. The enemy, seeing a large body of cavalry bearing down upon them, hesitated, and this gave time to the soldiers to listen to their officers and reform. They did not do so a moment too soon, for the rebels, elated by their first success, soon began to come on again, and the men had all their work to do to repulse them by a heavy fire, and so prevent a repetition of the reverse. Here again the cavalry did good service, some of the squadrons dismounting and firing volleys at the rebels, who were collecting in the rear and on the flanks, and advancing, part towards the camp and others towards the rear on the flanks of the Second Brigade. When once the men had halted and turned, they quickly reformed and advanced slowly and in good order towards the abandoned Gatlings. During their retreat the York and Lancaster Regiment suffered heavily, losing two officers and fifty men, while the Black Watch (Royal Highlanders) lost one officer and nearly sixty men. The force generally suffered severely.

The cavalry swept on from the left, approaching the swarming foe upon the right flank. There was not a cloud in the sky, and the sabres, nearly 700 in number, flashed in a line of blinding light. The enemy could be seen pausing and standing singly or in groups, like deer startled by the sportsman. Once, twice, thrice, they looked about them, and stared again, and then the sight became too terrible, and they began to retreat. With admirable judgment Col. Wood interpreted his orders aright. He immediately sounded a halt, dismounted his men, and plied the wavering savages with carbine fire. Gen. Buller's brigade at the same time poured in a hot flanking fire, and then the infantry of the Second Brigade had time to rally, and the fight was practically won. All this was completed a little after nine o'clock. Meanwhile the First Brigade, stationed some quarter of a mile in the rear, and to the right of the Second, had been hotly engaged, the attack being chiefly made by the Arabs on their right flank. The men behaved admirably, and their fire was so well directed that no rebel could live within sixty yards of the line. The mounted battery was also brought into play, making splendid practice among a group of the enemy collected on the opposite side of the valley and along a ridge on the nearer side.

The First Brigade advanced slowly in excellent order, the Arabs falling back before it and leaving numbers lying on the ground. They passed the spot where the guns were left, and advanced to the edge of the ridge commanding the entire breadth of the valley, where they poured a murderous fire into the rebels, who were soon in hot retreat, tumbling down the valley side, scouring across the plain, and hiding here and there behind the bushes and rocks. All chances of success had departed for the enemy, who began to understand that this was the case. Now and then, with wonderful courage, a small group of two or three devoted fanatics charged up the valley side, only to fall after proceeding a few yards, their bodies in some instances rolling and bounding downwards from rock to rock. The Second Brigade had also advanced by this time to the guns, of which the Naval Brigade took possession with a cheer. One Gatling, however, had been run down into the valley by the rebels, and this was not got up till about half an hour later. The enemy were now on the opposite side of the valley, and saluted us with a continual dropping musketry fire, which though not badly directed, did, fortunately, but little harm. After a short halt, but not long enough to give the enemy time to rally, the First Brigade again advanced, taking with them this time the nine-pounder battery. The brigade descending slowly into the valley, and then took the opposite heights at the charge. Clearing the way before them with a steady fire, they then descended the next hill into a small valley, where Osman Digma's camp and the Village of Tamasi lay.

The Arabs made here an attempt to hold their own, but by doing so only lost a few more brave warriors, and then the village was taken.

A riot begun some three days ago in Cincinnati, O., has taken a disastrous course.

The original mass-meeting at the Music-Hall was organized for a legitimate and laudable purpose. It was a gathering of citizens of all classes to express their indignation at the shocking failure of justice, and to demand protection for society at the hands of the executors of the law. The discussions were temperate, the audience was orderly, and the sentiment of the meeting took shape in an appeal to the Legislature for such legislation as should make life more secure and assure the punishment of criminals. When that meeting adjourned the more excitable of the crowd moved as if spontaneously to the jail, where they expected to find the wretch Berner, and to administer to him the penalty which the jury should have pronounced. The resistance which was made to them and their disappointment at not finding Berner, added to their indignation, and they determined to get at the other murderers and mete out justice to them. They were confronted by the police and the local military, and a conflict commenced which ended in much bloodshed. The second night the character of the conflict had changed, as well as the nature of the mob. The original object was lost sight of to a large extent; the mob had swelled to immense proportions, attracting, as a mob always does, the hoodlums and the dangerous lower classes, bent upon violence, pillage, arson, and destruction. Such a result was inevitable after the violent classes had had a taste of blood, and thought themselves superior to the authorities. The cowardly or else sympathetic action of some of the militia and the reckless firing of others added to the fury of the mob, and a carnival of riot began, ending with the loss of many lives, the pillage of many stores, and the burning of the court-house, together with its valuable library and records, which must entail almost irreparable loss upon Hamilton County. So far seventy-five have been killed and one hundred and fifty wounded. All the State militia, seven regiments of infantry and five batteries of artillery, have been ordered to Cincinnati by Gov. Hoadly.

March 31st.—Mr. Gladstone appeared in his usual place in the House of Commons yesterday.

Gen. Millot, the French General in Tonquin, advises his Government that after he has captured Hung Hoa he will retire with his forces and return to France, leaving the auxiliary native regiments to defend the country.

The news of the defeat of Gen. Gordon's force near Khartoum is confirmed. The Egyptian soldiers acted in the usual cowardly manner, and the Bashi-Bazouks scarcely did better. Gordon's loss was quite heavy.

The Turkish Ambassador informed Earl Granville that the Porte has prepared a circular to the Powers asking that the conference at Constantinople on the Egyptian question be resumed. The Porte offers to withhold the circular if England consents to negotiate with the Porte alone for the settlement of the Soudan question.

A revolutionary printing office has been discovered at Kieff, Russia, and seven persons arrested on the charge of being connected with the office.

The changes now being made in the disposition of the German troops show that the Government of Germany intends to enlarge the frontier defenses of the Empire. Twenty-one battalions of infantry, six battalions of horse and two of foot artillery are passing through Berlin to re-enforce the eastern frontier. The forces in Alsace will remain as at present constituted. It has been decided to make at Dantzic the third great fortress on the second line of defense. Dock-yards, arsenals, and a great fortified harbor will be constructed.

Three fugitive Nihilists have crossed the Russo-Austrian frontier and arrived at Lemberg.

April 1.—The Spanish Cortes has been dissolved, elections will be held, and the new Cortes will be assembled May 20.

Osman Digma is again on the offensive. He threatens Suakin, from which the British garrison has been withdrawn.

Austrian police are of the opinion that the recent assassinations in Pesth and Vienna have been plotted in New York by a society of anarchists of which Herr Most is the head.

Gen. Graham, with the English troops under his command, sailed yesterday from Suakin for Suez. This marks another new departure in the British policy as far as the Soudan is concerned, and, taken in connection with the return of Mr. Gladstone to his parliamentary duties, indicates the defeat of the Jingo element in the London Cabinet. It is probable now that Gordon will be left to fight his own battles as best he can. His situation is perilous in the extreme. The Arabs who appeared at first to be friendly to him are now open enemies. The London Times' correspondent at Khartoum telegraphs that Gordon is daily expecting British troops, and that the very existence of the garrison depends on their arrival.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts yesterday decided that taxes upon mortgages of real estate subject to local taxation are illegal. The State Treasurer will be compelled to refund $37,000 to various insurance companies.

The streets of Cincinnati, O., are still barricaded.

Small-pox has broken out at Decatur, Ill.

April 2d.—Michael Davitt has incurred the displeasure of the Irish Land-Leaguers for inviting Henry George to lecture on land nationalization in Dublin. The Parnell League of Ireland has censured him therefor.

It is reported that the British detectives have discovered an invincible society of farmers and mechanics at Tubbercurry, in Sligo, Ireland. One person, named P. Sheridan has been arrested. Tubbercurry was at one time the home of P. J. Sheridan, a noted Irish dynamite orator.

The German Admiralty has urged the construction of 150 torpedo-boats and submarine batteries on the Baltic coast, and a bill for the first installment of them, seventy in number, amounting to over $9,000,000, has been introduced in the Reichstag and meets with favor from all parties. Since 1870 Germany has spent $55,000,000 in the construction of ironclads and other battle-ships, arsenals, etc., besides her current naval outlay.

Osman Digma is actively resuming the offensive. He is attempting to cut off the friendly tribes about Handoub and Tamañeb from water. Sheikh Mahmud Ali is opposing him. A battle is expected. A dispatch from Gen. Gordon March 18th states that El Obeid is poverty-stricken and destitute of trade. A few of El Mahdi's followers are there. There were no signs that El Mahdi is about to advance upon Khartoum. The Kabbobish tribe is in open rebellion against El Mahdi.

The recognition of the German Liberal party as a new and important force in German politics is daily becoming more evident. One of the demands set forth in its published programme is for the creation of a responsible Minister for the Empire. This attracted the attention of the Bundesrath, and almost immediately a delegation from Saxony, seconded by one from Wurtemberg, asked that body to oppose the demand. The discussion of the request was deferred at the time, but it is now occupying the attention of the delegates.

Everything is quiet at Cincinnati, O., now. There were forty-five killed, and one hundred and thirty wounded in all.

The Iowa Legislature adjourned sine die.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade for the last week, says: Colder weather has checked vegetation, and wheat is not too forward. Flour is weaker. Sales of foreign wheat are slow and tedious and generally in favor of buyers. Business in cargoes off coast is restricted. One cargo of about No 1 Californian realized about 38s 6d. Five cargoes of wheat arrived, also one cargo of Oregon flour, which was withdrawn. Two wheat cargoes were sold, one withdrawn, and four remained, including one Californian. At one of the Glasgow, Scotland, steel-works there is in progress an immense anvil block, which will eventually contain about 165 tons of metal, and which is intended for use with twelve ton steam hammers, of which there are several now at work in Scotland. This monster anvil block is designed in two pieces, the larger one being of about 140 tons' weight. It was cast in a mold occupying the position intended for the block itself. The mixture employed in the production of these huge anvil blocks was about one-fourth No. 3 Gartsherrie and three-fourths scrap-iron.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

March 27.—Further reports of the disastrous cyclone of Tuesday continue to be received from Upper South Carolina. After striking near the Village of Piedmont, in Anderson County, the storm traveled in a northeasterly course to Paris Mountain, in Greenville County, the City of Greenville having a narrow escape. Its path covering a belt of country about one-fourth of a mile in width, in which almost everything had been completely leveled to the ground. Giant oaks and great forest pines and smaller growth were alike swept into piles, and the whole forest in the path of the cyclone was an almost impenetrable mass. By dwellers on the mountain-side its coming is described as resembling the angry growl of some great animal. It was seen by them as it crossed the summit of the mountain between seven and eight o'clock, a dense rain-cloud, perfectly red and ablaze with electricity. Descending the mountain, it sped with fearful velocity, spreading destruction alike on the hills and in the ravines of the slope. From the top of the mountain its devastating work extends, so far as has been heard from, to the neighborhood of Sandy Flat, in the upper section of the county, a distance of about ten miles. Within a distance of two miles in the main track of the cyclone at least a dozen farmhouses were destroyed or unroofed. All the buildings of the Buckhorn Tannery were blown down. The residence of George W. Hawkins, near by, was also blown down, Mr. Hawkins and family making a narrow escape. The building soon afterwards took fire and was consumed. In many places the trees torn up by their roots and twisted off above the ground, are piled and crossed in stacks that are almost impenetrable for many hundred yards without a break. In many localities there were heavy hail and rain, totally injuring grain crops. Nine persons were killed, and ten seriously injured.

Later information from the cyclone which swept through the western part of North Carolina, Wednesday reports that the losses have been greatly underestimated both in life and property. At Newton, Catawba County, the loss will be over $100,000. Some of the farmers in that county have lost whole herds of cattle by the destructive elements. Some of these were blown a hundred yards away, and found last evening buried among the debris of the wreck. Over 100 houses were blown down in Catawba County. Eight or ten of the persons wounded will die. Among these are Julius Wilson and Betsy Wilner, a girl 17, whose skull was fractured. Hundreds of women and children escaped by crawling into caves in the mountains, cellars, and underground places. Several women in the upper part of the county climbed up into the tree-tops, where they remained in their night-clothes throughout the fearful storm, and were found by their friends next morning and removed.

The cyclone swept through eight counties. It appears to have had three branches. It went through Mecklenburg, Iredell, Moore, and Caldwell Counties. Many narrow escapes from death are reported. Houses were swept away like chaff. The woods are a wreck of fallen timber.

At Lenoir, Caldwell County, it is reported that the worst damage was done, and that six young ladies were killed in the ruins of houses. In Jones County, in the extreme eastern part of the State, many houses were blown down. Some damage was done to farms and houses in Durham and Orange Counties.

Five lives were lost and much property destroyed, near Denver, Colorado. The loss of property is estimated at $100,000.

Heavy wind and hail prevailed in some parts of Indiana, unroofing houses, and injuring several people.

Sidewalks were torn up, and two building unroofed, at Kansas City, Mo.

The cyclone that destroyed the village of Scipio, O., Tuesday last, killed one person at that place and injured two others. The loss is estimated at $100,000. A great many buildings were blown down near Dayton, O. Colemansville, Ky., was almost entirely wrecked by a cyclone last evening. Three persons were killed and one injured. Loss $18,000.

The E. A Cook publishing company of Chicago were burned out. Loss $15,000. Loss by fire at Waterford, Pa., $25,000. Orange City, Tex., $20,000. New Berlin, N. Y., $20,000. Macon, Ga., $80,000.

Five children died from eating pork, near Savannah, Ga. In a small town of Saxony last year, according to an official statement, sixty persons died and 403 persons became seriously ill from eating raw pork containing trichina. The pork was from native German hogs.

March 28.—The Bracewell mill at Brunley, Lancaster, Eng., has burned.

The machine-shops of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad at Memphis were destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $100,000. About 150 men will be thrown out of employment on account of the blaze, which is said to be the work of an incendiary. Loss by fire at Chattanooga, Tenn., $5,060. Chicago, Ill., $1,400. Sullivan, Ind., $3,000. Fergus Falls, Minn., $10,000.

No new breaks occurred in the levees of the lower Mississippi, and a small fall in the river intimates that the worst is over.

A destructive storm raged at Denver and in the surrounding country yesterday morning. One man is reported to be fatally injured. The damage in Denver alone is estimated at $45,000.

March 29.—Several persons were killed by the explosion of the nitro-glycerine factory at Chester, Pa. The explosion was caused by excessive heat generating nitric acid.

There was an earthquake yesterday morning in the Island of Ischia.

March 30.—Loss by fire at Grand Haven, Mich., $18,000.

A heavy gale prevailed in the Middle Atlantic States. In Brooklyn a four story building was blown down, a river schooner was capsized on the Hudson, and the captain and one of the crew were drowned; at Philadelphia several small vessels were driven ashore, and a schooner was sunk in a collision. The Captain and four of the crew perished.

March 31.—Loss by fire at Medina, N. Y., $6,000.

April 1.—The Village of Oakville, between New Castle and Muncie, Ind., was destroyed by a cyclone. Several lives were lost.

A heavy snow-storm raged in Northwest Nebraska and Dakota yesterday. In some places the snow fell to a depth of six feet.

During the recent Atlantic gale five men of the Gloucester (Mass.) schooner Minnesota were drowned.

A remarkable natural phenomenon is reported from Bonna, in Algeria. An isolated mountain, the Dshebel Naibo, 800 feet high, is sinking into the earth. Round its foot there is a deep hollow, and before long the mountain will disappear. The district of Bona has once before witnessed a similar event; the Lake Fezzara, of more than 12,000 hectares, did not exist at the time of the Romans. St. Augustin, who lived at Bona, described the whole district without once mentioning the lake, and researches in 1870 have resulted in the discovery of the ruins of a Roman town at the bottom of the lake. As in Arabian writings there is nothing to be found concerning the formation of the lake, it is supposed that it has existed only for about a thousand years.

April 2.—Loss by fire at Otterville, Ill., flouring mill, $12,000. Elkhorn, Wis., $3,000. Davport, Ia., $4,000.

Six persons were killed and forty persons wounded by the cyclone at Oakville, Ind., Tuesday evening. Nearly every residence in the village was demolished, and farm-houses for a mile west in the track of the storm were unroofed and badly damaged. Severe storms in Western Ohio, close to the Indiana State line, are also reported. Farmers suffered severely.

Near Reading, Pa., seven men were thrown from a truck, which was attached to a passenger train, and were all badly mangled; some of them are expected to die.

THE MIRACLE.

From a pyramid in the desert's sand
A mummy was brought to Denmark's land—
The hieroglyphic inscription told, [old.
That the body embalmed was three thousand years
It was the corpse of a mighty Queen.
Examining it, they found between
Her closed fingers a corn of wheat:
So well preserved was this little seed,
That, being sown, it put forth its blade,
Its delicate stem of a light green shade,
The ear got filled with ripening corn,
Full-grown through sunshine and light of the morn.
That wonderful power in a corn so small—
It is a lesson to each and all.
Three thousand years did not quench its germ—
It teaches our faith to be strong and firm.
When such a life is laid in a corn,
When out of that husk a new plant could be born
To ripen in sunshine and dew from the sky,
Then, human soul, though spark from on high,
Thou art immortal as thy great sire
Whose praise is sung by angel-choir!
The husk, the body, is buried deep,
And friends will go to the tomb and weep;
But thou shalt move on, on wings so free—
For thine is the life of eternity.
That wonderful power of so small a seed—
The miracle seen in that corn of wheat,
It puzzles the mind; but still it is done
By the Author of Life, the Eternal One.

THE SPIRITUAL IMPORT AND INTENTION OF WATER BAPTISM.

MY DEAR READERS: You need not be told that all the ceremonial and ritual institutions of the Bible were intended by Divine wisdom to teach spiritual things. The ordinances of the Mosaic Law had a powerful bearing upon the great and solemn truths, especially upon man's guilty state, and the work of the Lord Jesus in effecting his salvation. They assisted by the aid of the senses, the thoughts and affections of the heart. The two rites of the New Testament are especially instructive. They are not to be looked at as mere ceremonies; in that case the divine institution in them is lost. The Lord's Supper is a commemoration of the death of Christ. "This do," said our dying Lord, "in remembrance of me;" (Luke 22:15-20); and Paul adds: "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye show the Lord's death till he come.—1 Cor. 11:23-26. Here is its spiritual intention and import; and whether the object is important or not, my readers will please judge.

What, then, is the spiritual design of baptism. We are only safe in answering this question by searching the Scriptures; here I find also that divine wisdom intended important truths to be conveyed to the mind by the use of this rite. Baptism in water was intended to teach the sinfulness of man, and the necessity of purification from sin, and of spiritual regeneration by the Holy Ghost, in order to Eternal Life. Acts 2:38; 22:16. Titus 3:5,6.

Baptism presents a figure of the flood which our Lord had to pass through, to work out our salvation. Of this he speaks in most affecting language: "I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitened till it be accomplished," and in David, his type, "I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me." Luke 12:50; Psalms 69:2.

Baptism is also a figure of a burial of a life of sin, and a resurrection to a life of piety. (See Rom. 6:4; Col. 2:12.) Baptism was intended as an ordinance initiating into the visible church; and hence a "putting on of Christ," as our only spiritual Lord. Gal. 3:27. Without referring to other allusions, I must ask my readers whether there is anything in these designs which is peculiar to the time when our Lord and his disciples were on earth, whether they are not of precisely the same importance now as they were then. Is it not of importance for me to be reminded of the pollution of sin, and of the fountain opened for my purification in the blood of the Lamb, as well as the primitive Christian Church. Should I be less mindful of my Redeemer's baptism of suffering than they? Is it not equally required of me to quit a life of sin, as a buried person quits the world, and to consider myself raised up by the Grace of God, to live to my Savior in newness of life, as it was of believers in the first age; and is it not as important that I should give myself to the Lord, and then to his people—put on my Redeemer as my future Lord and Master, and that as openly and avowedly as did his first disciples. If the answer to these questions be, that the obligation is equal, the importance the same, and the utility as great, then I may reasonably infer that divine wisdom in appointing this rite for the first age of the Christian Church, intended it to be continued and perpetuated with that church upon earth, even unto the end of the world. Matt. 28:20. It is often said, that the baptism of John is quite distinct from the baptism of Christ: the former being with water, the latter with the Holy Ghost. That the former was to decrease, and only continue as a figure of the latter; till the resurrection of Christ, and then to cease. No enlightened Christian should blend these two. They may both be realized in the same person, as in the case of the first disciples of Christ; but one may be without the other, as the baptism of water in the case of Simon Magus, without the baptism of the Spirit. The baptism of the Spirit, when the rite of water baptism had not preceded it, as in the case of Cornelius. But with regard to the decrease of water baptism, and its entire cessation upon the resurrection of Christ, that is a gratuitous and an utterly unfounded assertion. John the Baptist declared of the Savior: "He must increase, but I must decrease." John 3:30. But this neither refers to the baptism of Christ, nor his own, but to the cause, the number of their followers, and the object of their work and mission. John's work, which was "to make ready a people prepared for the Lord," was soon to close; and his disciples so prepared, were soon to be turned over to the Savior, and to become disciples of Christ. Thus he was to decrease, and Christ increase. To the latter the promise is, that to his increase there shall be no end. To infer from the above passage that the rite of baptism is to be done away, is only begging the question. I have already proved that water baptism as a divine ordinance, commenced in the ministry of John, and that John's ministry pertained to the gospel, and not to the law.

The Lord's Supper was unknown till instituted by Christ in the same night in which he was betrayed. Hence it must follow, that though the whole code of Jewish rites is abolished in Christ, but what says the word of God; what position should the people be in to obtain the blessing of the sacrifice of his only begotten son, the shedding of his blood for the sins of the whole world. See 1 John 1:5, 7.

"This then is the message which we have heard of Him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth. But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his son, cleanseth us from all sin. Jesus answered them and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." John 7:16, 17.

The man born blind realized the truth of Christ's words through obedience.

"When Jesus spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay, and said unto him, Go wash in the pool of Siloam. He went his way, washed, and came seeing."—John 9:67.

His testimony given in the 31st verse is as follows:

"Now we know that God heareth not sinners; but if any man be a worshiper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth."

This was walking in the light; hence his testimony showeth that he had realized the Savior's words, "If any man will do the will of God he shall know of the doctrine."

"At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight."—Matt. 11:25, 26.

God spared not his only Begotten Son from this obedience to his will; and did not shed upon him the gift of the Holy Ghost until after his obedience to water baptism in the River of Jordan. See the testimony of Mark, 1:9-11, and the acknowledgment from heaven of his divine authority. I ask my readers to put the words of the Lord Jesus to the proof. Come in the way that he commands, and gain the knowledge that his words are true and everlasting; for he saith, that "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."—Matt. 24: 25. Many ask what are the words of the Lord Jesus:

"Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world, amen."—Matt. 28: 19-20.

Again: "Jesus answered, verily, verily I say unto thee, except a man be born of the water and of the spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."

If these commands were given of God through his beloved son, we should, if we have any hope of a life everlasting, strive to do the will of God by like obedience, and gain the reality by forsaking the types and shadows. "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to that, there is no light in them." Prove your teachers and instructors by the word of God. What is the doctrine of to-day but a denial of the word of God. We are told that there is no need to be obedient to the command, to be "born of the water;" and as for the ministration of angels and divine revelation they are set aside as things not required in these days of great learning and gospel blaze; and the cry is raised, of false prophets. They take no heed that their fathers also raised the same cry against the prophets that God sent unto them from time to time, to make known his will to his people.

From the many arguments brought forth against this doctrine, I often wonder whether some of our Christian friends ever open their Bibles. Some often look to me as if the gilt on the leaves had never been disturbed by turning a leaf therein. Many come up and dare us to prove that Jesus Christ baptized with water, giving for their proof that he did not, the words of John, 4: 2. But does not this same John tell us, that "Jesus came into the land of Judea, and there he tarried and baptized."—John 3: 22. Does the apostle contradict himself? By no means. It may be allowed that Jesus baptized not; but his disciples, i. e., they baptized by his orders; and having this divine authority, John calls it repeatedly the baptizing by Jesus; so the rite was continued in the church from the authority of Jesus. Another impregnable fortress is thought to be in Paul's declaration to the Corinthians: "I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius, lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name. And I also baptized the household of Stephanas. Besides, I know not whether I baptized any others; for Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel." 1 Cor. 1: 14-17.

In reply I would have my readers ask themselves, If baptism was not a command of Christ to Paul, how came he to be baptized at all? That it was necessary, is shown by his baptizing Lydia and the Jailer, with their households, at Philippi; also the persons at Corinth, and those at Ephesus. When we read to find out Paul's reason for thanking God, we find that it was existing disputes there, producing parties, and these rallied under the names of Paul and Apolos and Cephas. If the conduct of his life illustrates his meaning, then the meaning is, Christ sent me into a guilty world, not for the purpose of administering baptism, which cannot save the soul, but for the purpose of preaching the gospel, which is the great, special, and paramount work of my life; for which Christ sent me. Baptism is subordinate; and other disciples may duly discharge that part of the will of my Lord. This was the case with Peter. He was sent to Cornelius to preach Christ to him and his friends. They believed the word, and Peter commanded others to baptize them in the name of the Lord.

With respect to the abrogated rites of the Old Testament, I will deny their authority respecting the New Testament, and by this easy method I shall demonstrate the invalidity of all reasoning in behalf of the observances of baptism and the Lord's Supper. If it were an error to observe the ordinance of baptism, the error does not seem to wholly rest with the apostles and disciples.

Who sent Philip with his views decidedly in favor of water baptism to go and meet the Eunuch? The angel of the Lord. Who said to Philip, "Go, join thyself to that chariot?" It was the Spirit of God. Who sent Ananias to Saul? "The Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto Saul." Who directed Cornelius to send for Peter to instruct him and others? An angel of God, who said, "Send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon. He shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do." So when he arrived, Cornelius addressed him: "Now we are all present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." And at the close of that happy meeting, with the Holy Ghost shed richly upon them, Peter commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. See from hence that the blame of sanctioning the observance of water baptism, (if blame there be), is not to be attributed to the apostles. It is ungenerous to attach it to them, but it reverts from them to the authorities by which they were sent on those solemn occasions. This circumstance alone carries overwhelming conviction to my mind, and contains, in my opinion, an unanswerable reply to every argument against the observance of baptism as a Christian ordinance; and is as necessary today unto all mankind as it was in the day our Lord commanded it.

In conclusion, if baptism does not spiritually profit the receiver, it is not the fault of the ordinance. The frequent allusions of the apostles to the spiritual gifts and blessings associated with baptism, do not prove that the baptism of the Holy Ghost was intended by them; as where they say "buried with Christ," "risen with Christ," "baptized into Christ," "one baptism," "not the putting away the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience towards God." In these cases we are to remember, that God joins the means and the end, as he does in the Scriptures in cases innumerable. Thus the gospel is "the power of God"—"the letter killeth, the Spirit giveth life." Why should our friends be so anxious to put asunder what God has joined together. If this form of doing God's will through obedience unto him be more inconvenient, and a heavier cross, so much the greater is the honor of following the Redeemer in it. The service he will know how to appreciate. "He that is not ashamed of me, him will I not be ashamed of, before my Father's face in heaven," Amen

SPIRITUAL GIFTS AND GOVERNMENTS.

DURING the Jewish dispensation the gift of prophecy was in the church; but on account of the corrupt state of the church, it disappeared for a time, but reappeared at the close of the dispensation to proclaim the coming of the Messiah. Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, being filled with the Holy Ghost, prophesied of Christ. Simeon, a just and devout man, testified that Jesus had come as "a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of Israel." There was no greater prophet than John the Baptist, who was chosen of God to show to Israel that Jesus, the Son of God, had come into the world to wash its sins away.

The Christian Dispensation opened with a great variety of spiritual gifts, and the outpouring of the Spirit. Paul, in the 12th chapter of his first epistle to the Corinthian brethren, gives a description of these spiritual gifts; and says that there are diversities of spiritual gifts. "But it is the same God which worketh all in all." "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal;" and explains that they are as necessary in the Church of Christ as the foot, ear, eye, is to the human body; and that "God set some in the church, first apostles, secondary prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." And in 1st Cor. 14: 1, he says: "Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts; but rather that ye may prophesy." Why should these gifts be so desirable in the church in the days of the apostles (and the gift of prophecy more desirable than all the others), when they had many living witnesses of the life, teachings, death, resurrection and ascension of Christ, when there was but one faith, one Lord and one baptism, and not be at all desirable or needed in this age of doubt, infidelity and many faiths, many lords, and four or five kinds of baptism.

But for many ages these gifts have rarely been manifested, and most Christians believe they were limited to the period of the primitive church. The gifts have ceased on account of the errors and unbelief of the Christian world; and if they wish these gifts, they must return to the primitive faith of Christ and his apostles. Is it reasonable that the Christian Dispensation, which, when compared with the Jewish Dispensation, is as the light of the sun, compared with the feeble rays of the moon—should commence in glory and sink into darkness? If you are candid, you will say no. Since these gifts were needed in the early days of the church, how much more are they needed in these last days; for they were to be perilous beyond all precedent, and false prophets were to have power, so that if it were possible they would deceive the very elect. We read in Mark 16:15-18, Christ's commission to his apostles:

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them. They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

It is here plainly seen, that these miraculous powers shall attend the believers, and were not confined to the apostles; but extended to the believers. There is no limitation to this promise. It runs parallel with the commission to preach the gospel, and reaches the last believer. It is said by some that this promise was only to the apostles and those who believe through their preaching; and that after the gospel was established, the gifts ceased. In Matt. 28:19, 20, we read: "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world."

We can here see that the preaching of the gospel under this commission did not end with the primitive church; for Christ said, "I am with you always, even to the end of the world." He did not say, "I am with you apostles during your life-time." The apostles' commission belonged to the Christian age, and embraces the whole of it. I conclude that if we preach the same gospel that Christ taught, we will have the same spiritual gifts. The gifts were lost through apostasy, and will only be manifested again when the gospel is preached the same as it was in the days of Christ. We read in 1 Cor. 12:28, that God placed certain officers, gifts, and governments in the church, and as we can find no scriptural proof that he has abolished them, we must conclude that they were intended to remain. Where is there any proof in the Bible that they were removed?

But the objectors claim that they have evidence to prove that these gifts were to cease, and quote the following verses to prove they are right:

"Charity never faileth. But whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part, but when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things. For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known."—1 Cor., 13:8-13.

These verses certainly foretell the cessation of spiritual gifts. But the question arises, When are they to cease? The answer is, When that which is perfect is come, which is certainly Jesus Christ; and that is yet in the future. Satan has put it into the hearts of men to say that prophecies, tongues, and healing the sick, are done away; but they forget to notice that it reads, that knowledge shall also vanish from earth at the same time. As knowledge has not vanished from the earth (for all will acknowledge that the people of the earth are more enlightened than in olden times), neither have these spiritual gifts. Some claim that the revelation of St. John on the Isle of Patmos, was the last revelation ever given to man, or that ever will be given; and they quote Rev. 22:18, 19 to prove their point.

"For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book; if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book. And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

But that revelation itself proves the assertion false. In the 4th chapter of this revelation, 1st verse, John says:

"After this I looked, and behold a door was opened in heaven; and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter."

Among the things that he saw, was an angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, "Fear God and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountain of waters."—Rev. 14:6, 7. I would ask, how could this angel bring this gospel, and say with a loud voice, etc., without there being more revelation? It is also recorded by John in the 11th chapter of Revelations, that he saw among the things that were to come to pass after that time, two witnesses that were to prophesy a thousand and two hundred and three score days, and that they were to have power to do many mighty miracles; which proves that the days of miracles and revelations are not yet past. It is claimed by many eminent Bible students, that John wrote his gospel after he wrote the book of Revelations. It is evident that the caution against adding to or taking from, refers not to the Bible, but to the book of Revelations of St. John, separately; as it then existed. The same command is found in Deut. 4:2; and according to that way of reasoning, it would abolish all books written after Deuteronomy. In the Union Bible Dictionary, it says:

The first entire Bible in print, in any language, bearing any date or place of publication, was the Latin Vulgate published in Mentz, Germany, in 1454."

The attempt to prove by Scripture the abolition of spiritual gifts is a failure; for God to-day has a people on the earth who are blessed with these gifts; and this people are called Latter Day Saints. We are warned that there would be false prophets in the last days; and the Bible gives us a test to try them. "To the law and the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Jesus says, "Beware of false prophets." "Ye shall know them by their fruits". Matt. 7:15, 16. The only rule by which to determine whether their fruits are good or bad is the law of God. True prophets will speak according to the word of God, and boldly reprove sin, and warn of wrath. False ones will say, Peace when there is no peace. Prophesyings which contradict the plain and positive declarations of the Bible, are to be rejected. In Eph. 4:11-13, we read.

"And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

These officers were to keep the Saints in unity, love, and at peace with one another. The pastors and teachers of to-day, claim that the apostles and prophets accomplished their work eighteen hundred years ago, and then their office ceased. Why then did not the office of pastor and teacher cease? There is just as much reason for one ceasing as the other. All these officers were placed in the church for a purpose, and that was to keep the Saints united and in the faith," "That they be no more tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine." How much more pleasing it would be to God, if all Christians would consent to be governed in the same way at the present time, so that there would be but the "one faith, one Lord, and one baptism," instead of the multitude of faiths now presented by those who profess to be followers of Christ. If these gifts were necessary in the primitive church, how much more they are needed in the churches to-day, to keep them in the unity of the faith.

We read in 1 Thess. 5:19-21: "Quench not the spirit." "Despise not prophesying." "Prove all things, hold fast to that which is good." In Joel 2:28-32, we read: "And it shall come to pass afterwards, that I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions; and also upon the servants and upon the hand maids in those days will I pour out my Spirit."

Many claim that this prophecy was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost; but certainly that could not be, as Joel says that the Spirit of God shall be poured out "upon all flesh;" and on the day of Pentecost it was only poured out upon a few Jews; besides Joel says, They shall prophesy, dream dreams, and see visions; and we have no record that they either dreamed dreams or saw visions, on that day. Besides, Joel fixed the time that his prophecy should be fulfilled, that is, after the Jews should be gathered back to Jerusalem, no more to be a reproach among the heathen; and since that time the Jews have been scattered and persecuted more than they ever were before, as predicted by the Savior, Luke 21:24. And they are still persecuted to this day, and are yet a reproach among the heathen, which is sufficiently proved by the late persecution heaped upon them in Russia. The true meaning of Acts 2:16, without doubt is, that this is the Spirit that was promised by Joel, that should be poured out upon all flesh in the last days, which has been poured out upon us, which has given us power to speak in other tongues, or in other languages than our own. Besides this, while so wonderfully under the influence of this Spirit, Peter pronounced the same blessings of the Holy Ghost unto all who would believe and obey the gospel of Christ, Acts 2:38, 39, which is sufficient proof that Peter did not understand that Joel's prophecy was that day entirely fulfilled, but only began to be fulfilled.

Let us "search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have everlasting life, and they are they that testify of me," says Christ. And "there is none other name under heaven given among men, but the name of Jesus, by which we must be saved," says Peter, Acts 4:10-12.

"Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any among you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house; neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed, is partaker of his evil deeds." 3 John, 9:12.

"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you, than that we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again; if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

Dear readers, if we embrace any gospel of which the spiritual gifts are not a part, which would include prophets and present revelation, it certainly is not the gospel taught by Christ and his apostles; and if not, will it bring to us blessings or cursings. Let us stop and reflect, and embrace the gospel of Jesus Christ as it was established by Christ and the apostles, with all its officers and ordinances, spiritual gifts and blessings; for we are told by Jesus, that if we seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, all other good things shall be added unto us. Hold out faithful to the end, that you may be entitled to life everlasting in the celestial kingdom of God. This gospel in its fulness can be found with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, commonly called Josephite, or Anti-polygamy Mormons.

OUR DUTY.

'Tis not all in going to meeting,

Nor all in staying away;

'Tis not all in reading the Bible,

Nor yet in learning to pray.

'Tis not all to bear testimony,

And tell what we're willing to do;

'Tis not all to sit idly waiting,

For others our work to do.

We ought to be willing to labor,

As well as to watch and pray;

We ought to be up and doing,

And work while yet 'tis day.

We ought to bear testimony

In work, as well as in word;

That those who slumber in darkness

May hear the good news we have heard.

We ought to awake from our slumbers,

And sow with a liberal hand;

If we keep the whole law as 'tis given,

We'll dwell in the glorified land.

We shall neither grow weary, nor faint;

Shall be blessed in basket and store;

Hidden treasures of wisdom be ours,

As for me, I can not ask more.

A NEW CONGREGATIONAL CREED.

THE SAVOY DECLARATION WITH ITS CALVINISTIC LEANINGS SUPERSEDED.

THE National Congregational Council which met in St. Louis, in 1880, in response to memorials from the Congregational Association of Ohio, the General Congregational Conference of Minnesota, and the Congregational Central South Conference, and a careful paper by the late Hiram Mead, D. D., of Oberlin, appointed a committee of seven to select a commission of twenty-five "men of piety and ability, well-versed in the truths of the Bible and representing different shades of thought among" the Congregational churches, to prepare, "in the form of a creed or catechism, or both, a simple, clear and comprehensive exposition of the truths of the glorious Gospel of the blessed God, for the instruction and edification of our churches." The commission was duly selected, and has completed the work assigned it, and reports a statement of doctrine, and a form for the admission of persons to membership in the churches. The report is addressed, according to the instruction of the Council, "not to this Council, but to the churches and the world through the public press," and it is to "carry such weight among Congregationalists as the character of the commission and the intrinsic merit of their exposition of truth may command." The Council left the commission free to form their own plan, only suggesting the example of the revision of the Bible, and that the general aim be "not to prescribe, but to offer our churches something which may be worthy of their adoption, and which may come, through such free and voluntary action, to stand by a general and common consensus as the exponent of our doctrines, the symbol of our faith." The following is the statement of doctrine with the names of the Commissioners attached:

I. We believe in one God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, and of all things visible and invisible.

And in Jesus Christ, His only Son, our Lord, who is of one substance with the Father; by whom all things were made.

And in the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of life, who is sent from the Father and Son, and who, together with the Father and Son, is worshipped and glorified.

II. We believe that the providence of God, by which He executes His eternal purposes in the government of the world, is in and over all events; yet so that the freedom and responsibility of man are not impaired, and sin is the act of the creature alone.

III. We believe that man was made in the image of God, that he might know, love and obey God, and enjoy Him for ever; that our first parents by disobedience fell under the righteous condemnation of God; and that all men are so alienated from God that there is no salvation from the guilt and power of sin except through God's redeeming grace.

IV. We believe that God would have all men return to Him; that to this end He has made himself known, not only through the works of nature, the course of His providence, and the consciences of men, but also through supernatural revelations made especially to a chosen people, and above all, when the fulness of time was come, through Jesus Christ His Son.

V. We believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are the record of God's revelation of Himself in the work of redemption; that they were written by men under the special guidance of the Holy Spirit; that they are able to make wise unto salvation; and that they constitute the authoritative standard by which religious teaching and human conduct are to be regulated and judged.

VI. We believe that the love of God to sinful men has found its highest expression in the redemptive work of His Son who became man, uniting His divine nature with our human nature in one person; who was tempted like other men, yet without sin; who by His humiliation, His holy obedience, His sufferings, His death on the cross, and His resurrection, became a perfect Redeemer; whose sacrifice of Himself for the sins of the world declares the righteousness of God, and is the sole and sufficient ground of forgiveness and of reconciliation with Him.

VII. We believe that Jesus Christ, after He had risen from the dead, ascended into heaven, where, as the one mediator between God and man, He carries forward His work of saving men; that He sends the Holy Spirit to convict them of sin and to lead them to repentance and faith, and that those who through renewing grace turn to righteousness and trust in Jesus Christ as their Redeemer, receive for His sake the forgiveness of their sins, and are made the children of God.

VIII. We believe that those who are thus regenerated and justified grow in sanctified character through fellowship with Christ, the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and obedience to the truth; that a holy life is the fruit and evidence of saving faith, and that the believer's hope of continuance in such a life is in the preserving grace of God.

IX. We believe that Jesus Christ came to establish among men the kingdom of God, the reign of truth and love, righteousness and peace; that to Jesus Christ, the Head of this kingdom, Christians are directly responsible in faith and conduct, and that to Him all have immediate access without mediatorial or priestly intervention.

X. We believe that the Church of Christ, invisible and spiritual, comprises all true believers, whose duty it is to associate themselves in churches for the maintenance of worship, for the promotion of spiritual growth and fellowship, and for the conversion of men; that these churches, under the guidance of the Holy Scriptures and in fellowship with one another, may determine—each for itself—their organization, statements of belief, and forms of worship; may appoint and set apart their own ministers, and should co-operate in the work which Christ has committed to them for the furtherance of the Gospel throughout the world.

XI. We believe in the observance of the Lord's Day as a day of holy rest and worship, in the ministry of the Word, and in the two sacraments which Christ has appointed for His church. Baptism, to be administered to believers and their children as the sign of cleansing from sin, of union to Christ, and of the impartation of the Holy Spirit, and the Lord's Supper, as a symbol of his atoning death, a seal of its efficacy and a means whereby He confirms and strengthens the spiritual union and communion of believers with Himself.

XII. We believe in the ultimate prevalence of the kingdom of Christ over all the earth, in the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, in the resurrection of the dead, and in a final judgment, the issues of which are everlasting punishment and everlasting life.

A very simple form for receiving persons into the church is also reported. The applicant agrees to accept the system of truth held by the Congregational churches, confesses his faith in the gospel, promises to consecrate his life to God and to God's service, and repeats the Apostles' creed.

The demand for a new creed comes from the general conviction that the Savoy Declaration of 1658, which has been the recognized symbol of the Congregational churches, is outworn and does not express the living faith of the present age. Though it was reaffirmed for substance of doctrine by the National Council of 1865, it is never used, and is "practically unknown." It is essentially an embodiment of the Westminster Confession, between which and the simple creed now recommended to the churches there is a radical difference. There is not a syllable of distinctive Calvinism in the new statement. No Arminian could find fault with it in that respect. The Savoy doctrine of "imputation" of the "Divine decrees," of "effectual calling," of "elect infants," of a "limited atonement," have no echo nor shadow in it. Congregationalists have been asking for a creed couched in the language of to-day, expressing the present faith, directed against the prevailing errors, and emphasizing correct religious belief. They want it to correct opposite tendencies—one toward no creed at all, the other toward nothing but creed. The Twelve Articles are intended as a fulfillment of that demand.

If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883. I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage. Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with. Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

RENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs have given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings. Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, GEO. MONTGOMERY.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884. Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor. Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion. Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883. MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours, W. F. CLARK.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883. BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also, were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well. Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

BRO. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents. (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. We also furnish a Picture Outfit, consisting of a fine Water Color Portrait, (without frame), also small picture from which it was taken, and envelopes and cards, all by mail prepaid for only 98 cents.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE FREE.

In writing, mention this paper. Yours in bonds, JOHNS & ORDWAY.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, April 19th, 1884.

WE have received from the author, James Monroe, No. 1, volume 1, of The Dream Investigator, published at Peoria, Illinois, with a request to "review it." We have read the copy received, and reproduce an extract from the editorial, which we commend to the consideration of those who believe in dreams. The author seems to be a believer that the inspiration of the far past may find a repetition in these days, because that it was so designed. The Investigator is neatly printed and is a thirty-two page journal about the size of the original HERALD.

DREAMS.

THERE are comparatively few persons who do not occasionally awaken from sleep with mental impressions, or recollections of sights, sounds, words, thoughts, or experiences which were impressed upon their minds during their said sleep. Such sights, sounds, words, thoughts, or experiences, are called dreams. Men dream, women and children dream; even very young infants exhibit evidence of dreaming by the dimpling smiles upon their cheeks while sleeping; and at other times the evidence is equally convincing when they awaken in great fright.

Dogs yelp and move their limbs while sleeping, thus giving evidence that they are dreaming.

In accordance with the foregoing observations we must conclude that dreaming is connected with a general law of mind common to the human race, and extending to many of the lower species of animals.

Dreams, like the light of instinct, are the links which connect the material with the spiritual world.

Dreams have attracted much attention amongst mankind through all the ages, but much more in ancient than in modern times. During all the ancient ages all classes of people believed that dreams were prophetic; and of the nations of people who so believed we may name the Egyptians, Chaldeans, Assyrians, Babylonians, Israelites, Jews, Romans, and others. And although it is receiving less attention at the present day among some nations, yet we learn that Parsees, Mussulmen, and large numbers of individuals interspersed through all the nations of the earth (probably a majority of all the living) now entertain a belief in the prophetic nature of dreams. And most assuredly a matter so simple as the observance of the fulfillment of dreams could not have maintained its claim to prophetic truthfulness through all those ages, and until to-day, without a substantial basis of truth to sustain it.

The great mass of persons who claim dreams to be prophetic probably have no well-defined opinion in regard to their inspiring cause; but among authors and writers who have formed and expressed an opinion, we observe a wide diversity, as may be noticed by the following:

Lactantius, Josephus, Bishop Cowper, Dr. Fred. Hoffman, and others, believed dreams to be prophetic and God-inspired.

Jews, and such Christians as Cyprian (or Cyprianus) Augustine, St. Bernard, Peter Martyr, Martin Luther, John Calvin, and a host of others, believed dreams to be prophetic, and both God-inspired and devil-inspired; and most inconsistently claimed the God-inspired ones to be limited to the age of biblical writers.

Bishop Bull, Bishop Ken, and others, believed dreams to be prophetic, and inspired by guardian angels.

Greeks, Romans, and the ancients generally, believed dreams to be inspired by both good and evil demons, and they were often governed in their conduct by them. Distinguished historical characters who held to these opinions are too numerous to mention.

Tertullian and others believed dreams to be prophetic, and inspired by God, devil, and exaltation of the human mind.

Philo Judeus and others believed dreams to be prophetic, and God-inspired and self-inspired (ignoring the devil).

Professor Joseph Haven believed dreams to be prophetic, and sometimes supernaturally inspired, but not necessarily so; but that the impressions of matters and things future may belong to some law governing the brain and nervous system. Others express substantially the same idea, by claiming a certain state of exaltation of the mind, in which it manifests powers superior to those known in its ordinary state, and that it is then enabled to see something of the future. The same opinion was also substantially held by Xenophon, Richard Baxter, Bishop Butler, Bishop Newton, Rev. Thomas Broughton, John Newton, Sir Thomas Browne, Leonard Euler, Dr. Priestley, and others.

Richard Baxter never awoke but from a dream. He believed the soul was ever active, but that a remembrance of its action was not always carried into the waking state. Dr. Watts entertained a similar belief.

Poseidonius, the stoic, believed that the mind, from its likeness to the Deity, looked into futurity while the body reposed in sleep. He also believed the mind to be affected by countless immortal spirits which abound in the air, and which are stamped with certain signs of truth; and also that the gods themselves commune with mortals.

Strabo supposed the human understanding to be more sensitive in dreams than at other times.

Cyrus, the elder, claimed that sleep resembled death: that the soul could foresee and foreknow whilst the body slept.

Plutarch, Galen, Hippocrates, Dion, Cassius, Josephus, and others, attached much importance to dreams, and were guided by them in their conduct.

Aristotle believed that dreams might be supernaturally commissioned. He also believed that the mind possessed superior powers during sleep.

Plato believed dreams to be emanations of the Divinity.

Chaucer believed dreams to be divinely inspired.

Catherine de Medicis and her daughter received revelations through dreams.

Many artists, mathematicians, and others, have performed their greatest intellectual feats during sleep.

Those who deny the prophetic claim for dreams, have also theories for their inspiring cause, such as a gorged stomach, uncomfortable position, suffering from heat or cold while asleep, or from the action of the mind while uncontrolled by the will, and various others, the most plausible of which is, the action of a part of a plurality of faculties of which the mind is supposed to be composed, while the other part is at rest. This is the position taken by Gall, Spurzheim, Fowler, and other phrenologists, and also by Thomas Paine; Paine, however classified the faculties in a manner quite different from that of the other distinguished authors named. * * *

Who are they who so flippantly dispose of this most momentous subject? One class of them consists of Jews and Christians who inconsistently teach, that ancient dreams and visions possessed a prophetic truthfulness, but that none of modern times do. Another class consists of thoughtless persons, whose only desire is to drift on the tide of popularity. And still there is another class, which consists of a few pseudo-scientists, who, without investigation, publish conflicting theories in regard to the producing cause of dreams—the chief one being the gorged stomach theory. But their theories are all based on a soulless, materialistic belief, and have reference only to a certain class of mental irregularities, which no one should deny as being the result of a deranged state of the physical system. A careful observer, however, would never confound such mental irregularities with the class of dreams which are prophetic.

A true friend is one who will tell you of your faults and follies in prosperity, and assist you with his hand and heart in adversity.

We can hardly learn humanity and tenderness enough except by suffering.

WHATEVER may be said of the Utah Mormons the statistics of crime, as given in the Chicago Times of January 30th, 1884, are favorable to their morality, aside from polygamy. We give extracts from these statements as follows: In 1881 there were 18,500 Mormons and 5,500 non-Mormons in Salt Lake City. The convicts in the city prison were 29, in the county prison 6; of these 9 were Mormons. In the Territorial Penitentiary in 1881 there were 51 convicts, five of them Mormons, in for polygamy. Of 125 prisoners 11 were Mormons, some under arrest for polygamy. Arrests in Salt Lake City for the same year footed up 169 Mormons, 851 non-Mormons. For 1882 the arrests for crimes and misdemeanors, including those of all the populous districts were 2,198; of these 300 were Mormons, 1,898 non-Mormon; 78 per cent of the population furnishing the smaller number, and 22 per cent the larger. The following list shows the crimes making up the total.

THE HUMAN EAR.

BRO. GLAUD RODGER sent us a Reno, Nevada, Gazette, for December 27th, 1883, from which we extract the report of a lecture on the ear by Prof. Granville Foster.

Perhaps none of the scientific discoveries which have especially distinguished this century above all that have preceded it, can exceed in the element of the wonderful, such as have been made during the past quarter of a century, in consequence of the patient and thorough study of the complicated structure of the internal ear, and of the respective functions of its several parts. From the successful labors of such eminent anatomists as Corti, Schultze and Kolliker, facts have been recently elicited that almost transcend human belief, and in the presentation of which the writer will rather appear like relating a story from the "Arabian Nights," than dealing with sober realities.

The internal ear is a wonder land, a diminutive one it is true, but really great—astonishingly great in its littleness—a fairy land, full of the realization of dreams, to be found in an Oriental story. In a space of less than one-half of a cubic inch, excavated out of the petrous portion of the temple bone, are to be found curiosities of the strangest and rarest kind. In the vestibule are miniature lakes; here, with pebbly otoconia or otoliths bathed in its depths; there, with whole forests of hair-like rods, looking like a cluster of reeds, growing in the shallow water of some pond, while the whole is almost constantly tremulous with wavelets of sound transmitted from the objective world without to the subjective world within. Here in one place are to be found peculiar winding canals, each swelling at one extremity into strange vase-like dilations or ampullae, while in another hangs a chain of miniature bones, curious caricatures of familiar objects, all united together by the smallest ligament, and moved by muscles so tiny that each will scarcely weigh more than a single grain. Here, in a recess of the bony cave, stands a wonderful snail-shell tower, with several pairs of spiral stairs or scalae, leading from the base, around a modiolus of bone to the helicobrema, at the summit. Nor does this tower lack for rooms, or windows, or door. Here within a peculiar spiral room, with a bony ledge for a floor, the basilar membrane for a carpet and the membrane tectoria for the ceiling, we find the most miniature, and yet one of the most exquisitely formed musical instruments in the world—a veritable harp or piano, with no less than 3,000 strings, so wonderfully formed, so delicately adjusted that it trembles in responsive action to the slightest sound—now vibrating with tremulous delight as the incoming waves of sweet and delicious music float over its strings; then grating with tremulous disgust at the passage of harsh and discordant noise. Ever faithful and true to its trust, it imitates perfectly every sound which comes to it from the outside world. Beneath the sounding-board of this delicate little instrument is a nervous arrangement, which far out-rivals the covers of the celebrated telephone. Here innumerable pearl-white threads or filaments, attached to the harp strings or cortian fibers, bear onward in some mysterious manner, a manner not so much as dreamed of as yet, all the music of the instrument above, in all its original accuracy and distinctness with all its variations in pitch and quality. Right to the foot of the throne of the Ego himself, who sits and rules within the palace of the brain, and here by a process imitated in the phonograph, the music is sealed up and properly labeled and stored away in some one of the secret recesses of the brain, to reappear again, it may be scores of years thereafter. In the structure of the human ear the great anatomists have certainly, by patient toil, discovered the very thoughts of God. Through long years of study and research, they have been led from structure to function and from function to the very audience chamber of the infinite, and here they have learned the conceptions which occupied His mind before they were embodied in actual realities in the creation of man. In this delicate little organ which ministers so much to the pleasures of man, there appears in unmistakable characters the wisdom of God; for here, indeed, is to be found the most beautiful order and harmony, and here is displayed the most perfect and admirable adaptation of means to ends.

MALAD CITY, Idaho Ter.,
March, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I desire to have on record my testimony according to my understanding, of the divine mission of the prophet, Joseph Smith. It is well known among Latter Day Saints, that Joseph Smith taught and restored, under the direction of the Almighty, the ancient order of the Church of Jesus Christ, including Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors and Teachers, with laws and ordinances as found in the New Testament. The first requirement of the law as taught by Joseph Smith, is faith that Jesus Christ is the Son of the Eternal Father, the creator of heaven and earth. Then repentance from sins, and he that believeth and repenteth must be baptized in water, for the remission of sins, and receive the laying on of hands, by those having authority, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. The spiritual gifts that God bestoweth on his church, are named by Paul in first Corinthians, twelfth chapter. "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal; for to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues. But all these worketh, that one and the self same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."

Tens of thousands have been able to testify, that the mission of Joseph Smith did restore the many heavenly gifts that have been described by Paul. No other man among all the reformers since the days of Christ and his Apostles, has been able to accomplish anything like this. It has been a "marvelous work and a wonder." When the wise and the learned of the earth were united in their proclamation, that God did not reveal himself to man in this state of probation in these days. That all the spiritual gifts enjoyed by the ancients, were no longer needed. That all communication between earth and heaven was at an end. In the days of this great poverty of faith, there was one young man that had a different kind of faith, his prayers were answered, the heavens opened, and communication was again established between man and his maker, or creator. The gifts of the Spirit of God were freely given to the faithful. Through the spiritual gifts in the Church of Jesus Christ, is the power of God unto salvation made manifest to men in the flesh.

It may be asked, how did all this come to pass? What manner of doctrine did that man teach? He taught that God is unchangeable, the same in all generations, giving the same general laws to one nation as he does to another; and willing to make himself known to all the nations of the earth, if they have faith in him, and obey his commandments. We believe that God is no respecter of persons; that he desires to bless us in the nineteenth century, just as much as any other people that had passed away before our time. We believe that God created the heavens and the earth, and all the inhabitants thereof; and that by his power he sustains them all. How then could we believe, that the great God of all, would make a difference between one portion of his faithful sons and daughters, and another? Our faith became so strong in God through the teachings of Joseph Smith, the prophet, that the heavenly blessings given to others anciently, could not be withheld from us. If I should pass over this subject, writing nothing of the love that we possessed, I would not do justice to the facts as they were; for as our faith increased, our love increased towards God and men. We did all that we thought that the Lord would have us to do. We kept his commandments according to the utmost of our power; we worked hard in the day, and would at times walk many miles at night to hold meetings for preaching the gospel to our fellow men. We worked all the week, and went around among the people on Sundays to teach them the gospel, by word and conduct, giving them printed tracts containing the pure principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ. I do not believe that it is hardly possible to speak or to write of all our joy, or to give a perfect description of all the blessings that we received from God. We rejoiced exceedingly in a knowledge, direct to ourselves from above. That class of blessings that comes direct to men in the flesh from heaven, is altogether different in nature and power, from the blessings that are commonly enjoyed by human beings. The gifts of the Almighty as we received them, had in them the nature of God and his power. We did willingly receive the conditions that the Lord offered to us through the mission of the prophet Joseph Smith, and we found that the Lord was willing and able to confirm the promises of the prophet, through our faith and obedience to the conditions given by him. Our faith was great, and our knowledge did reach to heaven in spiritual things; we did not have the class or kind of knowledge that is possessed by the wise men of the earth, neither did we care anything about that kind of knowledge, for the value or price set on it, by us at that time, was as much below our class of knowledge, as silver is below gold in quality. This was not taught to us by men, nor according to the power of men; but it was impressed, or engraven on our hearts, yea upon our whole being, by the influence and power of the Spirit of God. Our experience was as Paul's in spiritual things; we did not need to be guided by what Paul said, or what Peter said, for we had the Spirit that inspired Peter and Paul. The same spirit taught us, as them; we had the same kind of experience and power as they had, according to their writings. We had the same gospel restored to us through the mission of Joseph

Smith the prophet. Our love was pure in its nature, because it was consistent with righteousness, it was not partial towards friends or relations, we did justice to all alike. I do not write these things to boast, but with a desire that the truth may be known. I hope many others will write chapters of their experience in the work that was restored to the earth through the mission of the prophet Joseph Smith.

But there has been a great falling away in spiritual power since the happy times that have been named, and many are not satisfied with our present spiritual weakness. While much labor has been done in the way of investigation, searching and studying the scriptures, and some are trying to get a perfect understanding of the law of God; for we believe that his law is perfect, and that all would be well, if we could fully comprehend and practice it. The question may be asked here: Could the mission of Joseph Smith the Prophet be complete, or perfect, unless he had left us instructions, so that we could by observing and obeying them, have secured unto ourselves the perpetual abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit? We believe that his mission was from above, and perfect in its nature, to direct and lead us back to God. Then of necessity there must be a way and means pointed out by him for our safety and protection against the danger of again falling away from the high privileges that have been granted unto us. Joseph Smith wrote as follows: "There are many called, but few chosen; and why are they not chosen? because their hearts are set upon the things of the world, and are aspiring to the honors of men; they do not learn the lesson that the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven; and that the powers of heaven can not be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness. That they may be conferred upon us it is true, but when we undertake to cover our sins, to gratify our pride, vain ambition, or exercise dominion, or compulsion, over the souls of the children of men in any degree of unrighteousness; behold, the heavens withdraw themselves, the Spirit of the Lord is grieved, then amen to the priesthood, or to the authority of that man." The first reason given by Joseph Smith that many do not have the power of the priesthood after being ordained to it, "Because their hearts are set upon the things of the world, and are aspiring to the honors of men." This agrees with the sayings of the Savior, that "Ye can not serve God and mammon." "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal." And the reason why the Savior gave the above direct command against laying up the treasures of the earth, is given by Himself as follows: "For where your treasures are, there will your heart be also." If any man has his heart upon the riches of the earth, he can not serve God; because the Savior said, "Ye can not serve God and mammon." It would be unreasonable to expect that God would respect the authority of such a one, attempting to act upon things where his heart is not interested. This would be a kind of double dealing that the Almighty will not have; for he has plainly declared against it. People seek after earthly riches, because they "Are aspiring to the honors of men." For they know that without riches it is hardly possible to be honored by men. When men strive with all their heart and strength for riches, to get the honors of men, this power works in opposition to the plain commandments of the Almighty, because they do not guard against this power, when it is pressing its way over the bounds of the law of heaven; the only care being taken is to avoid coming against the law of the land. The above evil is in direct opposition to the following commandments of God: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment: And the second is like unto it; Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."—See Matthew 22. When men transgress these commandments, they try to tear down the foundation of all the law and the prophets. If men that do not profess religion venture out to this dangerous ground, in open rebellion against the sacred commands of Jehovah, men professing religion; yea, claiming the name of Christians, should fear and tremble at the thought of reaching forth their corrupt hands over the bounds of these holy laws. The unrighteous use of riches makes men able to "Exercise dominion or compulsion over the souls of the children of men; and when this is done, in any degree of unrighteousness; behold the heavens withdraw themselves, the Spirit of the Lord is grieved, then amen to the priesthood, or authority of that man." The unrighteous use of riches has filled the earth with violence; it has been a power in the hands of men to press the poor classes down to the dust of the earth, according to the will and pleasure of their masters. It appears that the seeking after riches has been and still continues to be, the stronghold of apostasy, to lead people and nations astray from God. Earthly riches are dangerous even to the men that hold them, as shown by the words of Christ in the parable of the sower, "And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprang up, and choked them." "He also that receiveth seed among the thorns, is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful." Men do often excuse themselves, by saying that they have so much to care for, and to look after; their property is so and so, they have no time to look after the things of God. Thus these men do virtually confess themselves, that the thorns have choked the good seed in them. All this on account of the pride and vain ambition of the human heart, craving for the honors of men, instead of respecting the command of God, to love him with all our heart. The love of God, and the honors of men can not be found in one path; we must reject one of these ways, and accept the other. Which is the way that we shall choose? Shall we serve God with all our heart, as he has directed? It is written, "Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind, and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days." These are the words of the Prophet, Joseph Smith. Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 64. In the foregoing there is a perfect agreement between the sayings of the Prophet Joseph and Jesus Christ, on the evil effect of earthly riches.

MANASSA, Conejos Co., Colo.,
March 31st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Arrived here Thursday, February 28th; have held seven meetings in a fair sized room in a private house, which has generally been packed. Bro. Blair's labors were effective. None save those baptized by him have united. Brother Ball is away in Kansas. Many are anxious to get away. Many need help, and doubtless some are suffering, though I think reports have been somewhat exaggerated as to the number that are disaffected and suffering. Brighamism has not lost hold upon all hearts here yet, by any means, though this disaffection is giving it a shaking. It is a shame that poor people should be induced to leave their homes, under promises they were never to realize.

Yours in hope,

JAMES CAFFALL.

FITCHBURG, Mass.,
April 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—We are very glad that we have heard the gospel in its fulness preached in this place for the first time. We left the Boston Branch, and came here just one year ago. We have had much sickness and hard trials, often feeling our weakness; but realizing the loving presence of him who hath said, "I will be with thee," we have tried to do our duty in sowing the seed by the way-side, not knowing whether it fell on good ground, among thorns, or upon rocks. But the good Master has said by his Spirit to us that our labor should not be in vain in this place. That the honest in heart should come forth, and his servants should come here and a branch of his church should be established. That we should remain and bear our testimony in humility, and many should be saved; and though we should not rejoice with them in this life we should hereafter in his kingdom. Blessed be his name we have realized this promise in part, for Elder J. Gilbert came here on Saturday the 22d. Sunday following he preached twice in the Advent Chapel, and again on Monday evening. Tuesday evening our near neighbor, Mr. B. (a strong Adventist), wished Bro. Gilbert to come in and talk with him. During the conversation, Bro. Gilbert so shook his foundation for Adventism, that I think some of the stones began to fall out, and it made him tremble a little for his safety. He asked if Bro. Gilbert, or some one could not come again. I presume he felt as I did when the foundation of Methodism, upon which I had stood for thirty-five years, began to give way and the stones one by one, fell out; no rock was left upon which my feet could stand secure. I cried for help, thought I would write to my brothers and sisters, who were preaching the M. E. faith, and see if they could strengthen my hold; but on second thought I knew they could not; for I knew the ropes as well as they did. I thought of my pastor, but he would give the same advice. Where, O! where could I go for help. The last stone, baptism by sprinkling, had been taken away; I felt that I was lost. A Latter Day Saint brother came in; all he said was, "Take it to the Lord in prayer." I did so, and after being some three hours in earnest prayer and receiving no answer, I cried, "Lord, I will not let thee go until in some way thou answerest my petition." I then waited in silence. Very soon a voice said, "Look up." I looked, and saw a misty cloud just over the bed where I was kneeling. Directly it parted, and a glorious brightness appeared. From it a hand stretched forth toward me. Then a voice from amidst the brightness said, "Clasp thine hand in mine and I will lead thee even into the water of baptism. With me shalt thou be buried, with me shalt thou arise, and thou shalt receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Arise and go in peace." I arose. My soul was filled with joy; no need of any further supplication. I walked the house singing praises to God. All was bright now, my way was clear. I told my husband all when he came home and he rejoiced with me. The following Sabbath we were both baptized by Elder T. W. Smith. From that day to this the promises of the Lord have been verified unto us. We have grown in grace, and in the knowledge of the truth. We will continue to labor in the vineyard, and may the seed here planted spring forth and bear much good fruit, to the glory of the Master. Pray for us that we may be faithful unto the end.

Your brother and sister in the gospel,

J. C. & V. A. HOXIE.

NEWTON, Kansas,
March 30th, 1884.

Dear Bro. Joseph.—I came here about twenty days ago, not knowing there were any Saints here. But upon inquiry, I heard of one, Bro. W. P. Brown, whom I soon made the acquaintance of. He is an Elder, but in poor health; also sister Brown his amiable wife, and two daughters, aged sixteen and eighteen, are members of the church, having been baptized at Wyandotte, Kan., I believe. Also, a son, Wm. Brown, who has almost full charge of Bro. Brown's grocery store. On Sunday the thirteenth, we had prayer and testimony meeting at sister Walton's house, and had a good time, the Spirit being present in power. If some Elder would call here, I think a good branch might be organized. There are seven members here, and some as noble Saints, I think, as I ever met; and they all seem to be zealous, and trying to hold on to the rod of iron. No doubt, if a branch was organized here, with Bro. Brown in charge, that much good would result from it. The sisters meet every Wednesday afternoon for prayer meeting. May God bless such noble efforts as those sisters are making, and crown them with an outpouring of his Spirit; and that it may be the means of bringing many honest souls to the kingdom, is the prayer of your brother in the gospel,

A. P. TREE.

VERMILLION, Oswego Co., N. Y.,
March 31st, 1884.

Dear Brother.—I think it due to you and to the church generally, that I should inform you that I am through the mercy and goodness of God yet alive; and it is also due to the cause that I represent here in the State of New York, that I have abundant reason to state my unshaken confidence in the latter work, as being the work of God; and very sorry that I have not been able to do much more in the cause; for we know it to be the work of God, and hence it calls for all we can do. I can do nothing here; for the churches keep a strong guard over the common people against my influence, and yet I abuse no one, but treat all with respect and endeavor to regard the rights of others. My age and health would not permit me to do much this winter; but I hope to preach some this coming season. I should like very much to have an Elder call on us when passing to or from the Eastern Mission. We are on the direct route, only three miles from the village of Mexico, which is a station on the Rome and Watertown Rail Road, sixteen miles east of Oswego. We should be very glad to have an Elder stay with us a year, and preach; but would try to be thankful for a call, if nothing more.

Yours in hope of Eternal Life,

EZRA T. WHITEHEAD.

SHERIDAN, Douglas Co., Nev.,
April 4th, 1884.

Dear Herald.—You are ever a welcome guest, and I prize you more than gold; for the good instructions and ideas which you convey, are to me like the gentle dew drops to the green herbage; they cheer and comfort me; and as the bee gathers its rich food from the lovely and beautiful flowers, so does my human soul gather spiritual food from the grand, glorious and sanctifying doctrines and principles that are taught in your columns. I love to read the letters from the brethren in the field. They do my soul good, to know that the work of the Lord is onward to victory.

The work in Nevada has been at a very low ebb for a long time; for we have had but very little preaching, or meetings of any kind, until lately. We began to have meetings about three months before Bro. Rodger came. We thank our Heavenly Father and Brother Joseph for sending Bro. Rodger to labor amongst us. We love him, because he is a man of God. Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." He is doing much good among the Saints, by sowing the seeds of love and unity among us. Last Sunday we had sacrament meeting, and the Spirit was with us in power. At night Bro. Rodger preached, and also on Monday night, on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon; and the Spirit of the Lord was with his servant in power, though there were but few came to hear him. We have had such a long, stormy winter, that people would not turn out; but we think that ere long some will come into the fold. We have been for a long time as sheep without a shepherd. We hope that Bro. Rodger will continue with us for a long time; for we believe him to be the right man in the right place. We pray that all things may be ordered for the good of the work of the Lord in all the earth.

In bonds,

M. COOK.

St. LOUIS, Mo., April 8th, 1884.

Dear Herald.—I arrived here safe, on Saturday, the 5th. Found B. V. all alive in his mission. We expect to remain here a week or two, then go to Franklin county. Attended meeting at Cheltenham on Sunday last. B. V. preached. Will attend in the city on Sunday next. Do not know at present when I shall return home. Kindest regards to all.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

April 3.—Holland seriously objects to the Congo treaty between England and Portugal, on the ground that it is framed merely in the interest of the former Power.

No orders have been issued to Gen. Gordon to retire from Khartoum; but he has the consent of the British Government to retire whenever he wishes.

The French, in support of their claim of indemnity, will hold Langson and Caoband passes, and will then enter China from the north side of the Gulf of Tonquin. They can collect an indemnity for a few years from the Canton native customs. Those best informed in Chinese affairs regard the scheme as wholly feasible.

In boring for water near Snake River, about forty-five miles from Dayton, Oreg., recently, a stratum of frozen earth was encountered at a depth of fifty-five feet. Passing through this for five feet numerous cavities were found, from which cold air came in gusts. The escaping air at the bottom of the well can be heard roaring at some distance. It is not possible for any one to hold his hand over the well for any length of time without freezing it, and a bucket of water let down into the well was frozen over in a few minutes. Work on the well has been abandoned on account of the cold.

Some correspondence was recently discovered in the cell of one of the Invincibles, James Mullet, which goes to prove the existence of the conspiracy. The ministers held that the overthrow of the liquor power was to be secured only by constitutional prohibition. They regarded the license system as wrong and an obstacle in the way of temperance reformation, and the high-license project as only calculated to divert attention from the only means of success. The members pledged themselves to support no parties or men who gave aid and comfort to their enemies, or who would not when in power, aid them to "destroy this great curse to American civilization."

According to a manufacturer of dynamite, "you might throw a box of it from the top of the public buildings to the street with no more effect than if you threw down a box of apples. You can burn it, also, with perfect impunity." To prove this the manufacturer took a piece of the brown explosive from a shelf, and, lighting it with a match, held it in his hand while it burned slowly with a dull, yellowish flame. "In fact," he continued, "dynamite is much safer to transport than gunpowder. Many a time I have run over a car-load of it at the works. There is no risk in carrying it about in a satchel. It is a fact not generally known that a car of dynamite was once smashed in a railway collision and no harm was done. How is it made to do its destructive work? Well, it is safe only so long as it is kept separated from the materials used to fire it." The transportation of nitro-glycerine, unlike dynamite, is dangerous. It can be conveniently stored in earthen jars, with a layer of water on top. For transportation it is usually put into strong tin cans holding about forty or fifty pounds, and when possible frozen.

At his late birth-day reception, the Emperor of Germany spoke as follows:—I am very little satisfied with the debate on the law against anarchy. The seriousness of the situation is unmistakable. His Majesty spoke with evident emotion, and even excitement.

A positive proof of the connection existing between the Anarchists of Europe and their confederates in the United States has been obtained by the Swiss authorities. The Prefect of Berne recently opened a letter which had been received at the post office, addressed to the expelled Anarchist, Kennel. It promised to send to Kennel for "the friends of the cause," official and genuine sets of legitimation papers and passports, adding the instruction that it would only be necessary to change the dates of the documents to make them ready for the use for which they were intended, and which was evidently perfectly understood between Kennel and the writer. The latest advices from Hayti state that March 20th the Italian transport Comte de Cavour arrived at Port au Prince, to seek satisfaction for the taking from an Italian bark at Petit Goave of two insurgents and the shooting of them. The American Minister has demanded of the Haytian Government the payment of $400,000 indemnity for American losses on account of the riots in September last and the surrender of the Mole of St. Nicholas as a guarantee that the money will be paid. The German claims amount to $500,000, the French claims equal that sum, and the English claims are $250,000. The number of persons killed during the revolution is officially declared to have been 7,000. The disappearance of persons implicated in the revolution is causing considerable emotion. At Cape Hayti a collision occurred between refugees inside the British Consulate and the guards around the Consulate. Both parties were intoxicated. The demolition of the Consulate was only prevented by the timely

A special from the City of Mexico says the feeling against the recently-enacted stamp tax is still very bitter, and the situation is critical. Business is suspended in many parts of the Republic and merchants generally are assuming a very determined attitude. It is reported that the Government intends to declare the acts of the merchants in closing their stores revolutionary, and that their licenses will be revoked and they be compelled to pay a heavy tax for the privilege of reopening their stores. On the other hand it is stated that the Mexican Senate has passed to second reading a bill repealing the Stamp act, but as the Government is not in sympathy with this move it is very doubtful whether the bill will finally pass. A dispatch from Matamoros says the condition of affairs of the Government are deplorable, charges financial rottenness, and intimates fears of a revolution if a greatly better state of things is not speedily brought about.

The Times' dispatch from Madrid speaks as follows: "The signs of the approach of a serious economical crisis in Cuba are daily increasing. The greatest fire ever known has raged for forty-eight hours in the vast forest of yellow pine which stretch well nigh unbroken from Sanford, fifty miles from Raleigh, to points north-west, and South sixty miles, beyond the South Carolina border. The forests are what are known as Virgin, and from them comes nearly all the turpentine marketed at Wilmington, N. C. The trees are of enormous size, and at points where the turpentine "orchards" are located are blazed for miles. Covered with resin, these hundreds of thousands of trees offered a rare opportunity to four or five fires which broke out yesterday morning. The fires were caused by burning brush. Before noon a storm came up. The wind blew nearly a hurricane. In half an hour after this high wind arose the flames were racing like demons through the woods. Vast masses of fire were actually forced through the air by the sweeping gales. The tops of half-burned pines were thrown great distances and fell in the middle of cleared fields. The fire towered to an amazing height, and so vivid was the glare that it made all objects plain at great distances. People were terribly alarmed. At Blue's Crossing and Keyser they gathered in large numbers and fought the flames with such energy and desperation that these places escaped with little damage. Many dozen turpentine-distilleries are completely destroyed, as well as large quantities of resin, turpentine, and other naval stores. The fire has extended beyond Hamlet into South Carolina. Its full sweep is over a distance of fifty or sixty miles. No news of any loss of life has yet been received. Many persons have lost clothing, and some were badly scorched by the fierce flames. It is by far the most disastrous fire ever known in the North Carolina turpentine forests.

The Raleigh & Augusta Air-Line Railroad runs fifty miles through the burned district. In the afternoon the wind rose yet higher, and at nightfall was blowing a gale. The scene then became awful. The fire extended for an unknown distance on each side of the railroad. The Town of Manly was in imminent danger of total destruction. The railroad warehouse caught on fire several times. The Methodist church, five storage warehouses for guano and cotton, the town guard-house, and the barn and stables of W. C. Petty at Manly were burned. The water tanks of the Raleigh & Augusta Railroad at Hamlet were consumed. At two o'clock this morning Hamlet was surrounded by a cordon of fire, and the lights of the conflagration could be seen for miles in every direction. Many farm houses have been consumed. Mr. Henderson, near Hamlet, lost his residence, together with all the out-houses on the premises. The whole community was busy during the night fighting fire. Hundreds of farmers lost all their fences and out-buildings, forage, etc. At Hamlet and other points the people threw their furniture, bedding, and clothing into the ponds and streams to save them from the flames. The people themselves took refuge in ponds and wells. For ten miles east of Hamlet everything is absolutely destroyed.

Serious trouble is threatened by the striking coal-miners of Park, Clay, and Vigo Counties, in Western Indiana. Some of the men struck about two months ago on account of a reduction in wages. The strikers have been peaceable up to Saturday, when they visited some men at work in Vigo County and induced them to quit work, and threatened with death those who would not. The Sheriff, on being appealed to to protect those at work, said he would not interfere until some one was killed. The mine-owners have sworn out warrants against the ringleaders, and a meeting of the grand jury has been called to investigate the cases. The miners are defiant and threatening, and it is feared there will be bloodshed.

It appears from late reports, that the area of spring wheat, sown in Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin is much less than in previous years, while there is a large increase in the area sown in Minnesota, Dakota, and Nebraska. The decline in prices in the Chicago market recently has not so much influenced the area in Illinois and the adjoining States as the fact that the tillage of other crops has been rewarded with less deviating success. It is the general impression that the total yield will show no falling off from previous years, the decrease in the acreage in the older-settled States being fully compensated by the increase in Dakota, Nebraska, and the extreme Northwest.

GOOD HABITS OF BREATHING.

Good air is one of the first essentials in physical and vocal exertion. No one can keep the body and mind vigorous for any great length of time in impure air. And the most impure air is that which is filled with emanations from the human system. The lungs should be trained to free, full, and vigorous action. They are the very springs of vitality. The immediate importance of the lungs is realized by recollecting that a person may live for days without food, but to deprive him of air, even for a few moments, is to deprive him of life itself. If our breathing is imperfect, all the functions of body and mind are impeded. In fact, the manner of breathing at any particular time is almost as good a test as the pulse itself of the general state of the system, physical and mental. One of the commonest faults in the use of the lungs is the habit of breathing as it were, from their surface, not bringing sufficiently into play the costal and abdominal muscles. By watching the domestic animals—a horse or a cow for instance—we may learn a lesson in breathing. We perceive that there is very little motion near the fore extremities, but the breath is impelled from the flanks. So should we have the main action at the waist. Any form of dress or belt, therefore, which constrains the base of the lungs and presses upon the stomach and intestines must do serious harm.—Educational News.

MIKE AND THE BIBLE

Never was a better answer made than that by a poor Irishman to a Catholic priest, while defending himself for reading the Bible.

"But," said the priest, "the Bible is for the priests and not for the likes o' you."

"Ah! but sir," he answered, "I was reading in my Bible, 'You shall read it to your children,' and sure the priests have got no children."

"But, Michael," says the priest, "you cannot understand the Bible. It is not for you to understand it my man."

"Very well, your riverence; if I can not understand it, it will do me no harm, and what I can understand does me a heap o' good."

"Very well, Mike," said the priest, "you must go the church, and the church will teach you. The church will give you the milk of the Word."

"And where does the church get it from but out of the Bible? Ah! your riverence, I would rather occasionally milk the cow myself."

"Take heed that no man deceive you."—Jesus.

THE GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST.

THE gospel, which Christ sent his Apostles to preach, "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." (Rom. 1: 16); be they Jews or Greeks,—English or French. As it was the power of God in those primitive days, it is the power of God to day. As it is the power of God to-day, it should be the same gospel now as then. To find out what the gospel was in those days, we must look into the Book—Bible.—The Book says, that after the death and resurrection of our Lord, and before his ascension into heaven, he commissioned his apostles "to go into all the world, and preach" his "gospel to ever creature" of the human race. He promised that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—(Mark 16: 15). And that these apostles might be properly qualified, he told them to "tarry at Jerusalem" until they should be qualified, or be "endowed with power from on high."—(Acts 1: 4; Luke 24: 49). Hence the power came to them on the day of Pentecost, which was the Holy Ghost. Under its direction they commenced their ministry. Standing before the people, they bore testimony that Christ Jesus was the Messiah. That he was crucified and risen, and that through his name remission of sins should be preached to "all that are afar off—even to as many as the Lord, our God shall call."—(Acts 2). These extend to earth's remotest bounds, wherever the sound of this gospel should go. The call is to all men every where, "to repent" and turn to the Lord. The testimony borne by the apostles, carried conviction to the hearts of those who listened, and they cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" to which Peter replied: "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you, and unto your children, and all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—(Acts 2).

This was the first gospel sermon to the public, after the Lord's ascension, and was delivered by the power of the Holy Ghost; and it may therefore be relied upon with confidence; for we are informed, that all those who gladly received the word, were baptized. "And the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. Turn to the fourth chapter of Acts, and the 31st verse, where we are informed, that they all received the Holy Ghost, which confirms the promise made by Peter, that they that would obey his direction should receive the gift of the Holy Spirit—confirms this as God's plan of salvation. We now inquire, What are we to understand by the words used by Peter? It will be borne in mind, that the people who heard Peter on the day of Pentecost, had heard his testimony that Jesus, our Lord, was the Christ; and that He was crucified and risen, and were thus induced to make the inquiry, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" If we believe these testimonies, we occupy a similar position; and the same instructions of Peter are as applicable to our case, as they were to those he addressed on that day. Already believing, to repent is our next duty.

Here we ask, what is meant by the word "repent?" The Scripture informs us that a "godly sorrow worketh repentance." That is, it produces it. It is a forsaking of sins, and becoming righteous; turning away from the evil of our way, and learning to do well. We form a resolution that we will no longer pursue a course which we are informed and convinced is wrong; and thence adopt that which we understand to be right. We think this is sufficiently clear. We have an example in the case of Saul, (Paul), when convinced of the error of his way, he was obedient to the instruction given, and became a zealous advocate of the gospel which he had persecuted.

We will now consider the next term of Peter; "And be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins."—The word "remission," would imply a forgiveness; a blotting out, a washing away, a removing—all Scripture terms. The next is:—"And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Says one, "what benefit shall I derive from this promise?" or, "what will the Holy Ghost do for me?" This is an important inquiry, and claims our careful attention. If we ascertain what effect the Holy Ghost produced on those who received it under the direction of the apostles; and if we are so fortunate as to obtain the same blessing which they enjoyed, the same effects will be produced upon us as on them. This plan introduced by Peter was continued, and was preached by others.

We follow Philip down to Samaria, who also preached a crucified and risen Savior.—(Acts 8). "When they believed Philip, preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women. Then Simon himself believed also; and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip and wondering, beholding the miracles and signs which were done. Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John; who, when they were come down, prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost; for as yet he was fallen on none of them; only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." We pass on to the conversion of Saul (Paul) of Tarsus, a zealous Pharisee, who, while traveling from Jerusalem to Damascus, saw a light, and heard a voice saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" He at once enquired, "Who art thou, Lord?" The answer was, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest." He asked again, "What wilt thou have me to do?" He was instructed to go into the city, and it should be told him what he should do; and he was led, blind, into the city, and remained three days without sight. At the end of the three days, Ananias, having been instructed of God, came to him and said, "Brother Saul, why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins." Paul (Saul) arose and was baptized, and was filled with the Holy Ghost; and hence Paul tells us in his letters, that he neither received the gospel of men, nor was he taught by men, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ. Let us see whether it agrees with the plan preached by Peter, Philip, and Ananias. If so, we have found the gospel of salvation. We follow this new convert in his preaching, and find him baptizing Crispus and his household, after the first sermon they heard. Also Lydia and her household, and the jailer and his household. He also baptized some twelve, supposed to be John's disciples, as recorded in the 19th chapter of Acts; and after baptizing them, he laid hands on them and they received the Holy Spirit, and spake in tongues and prophesied. That we can discover but one plan, whether preached by Peter, Philip, Ananias or Paul. All preached a crucified and risen Savior. Faith, repentance, baptism for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of Holy Ghost.—(Acts 16: 15-32; 18: 8; 19: 5, 6).

The Holy Ghost producing its evidences on the possessor. Paul says "If any man preach any other Gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

So then, let those who attempt to preach any other Gospel, take heed, lest that course rest on their heads.

Let us now examine the operation of the Holy Ghost, (Holy Spirit), its fruits. Speaking with new tongues was the first gift, manifested on the day of Pentecost; and the first gift of the gentiles who received the Gospel. Cornelius and those with him, likewise those whom Paul re-baptized. This agrees with the prophecy of Joel, as quoted by Peter (Acts 2:) Also with the promise made by Christ. (John 14:).

In the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians, the subject is made very clear. Paul says: "To one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge by the same spirit; to another, the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues. But all these worketh that one and the selfsame spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."

Paul then compares the church to a body; and shows the importance of each member; and that God hath set members in the body as it hath pleased him. The first officers in the church were apostles, after that prophets, thirdly teachers, then miracles, then gifts of healing, helps, governments, and diversities of tongues." These compared to a perfect body, represent the Church of Christ in the commencement of the apostolic dispensation. And Paul says: "If one member suffer, all suffer with it; and if one be honored, all rejoice with it." As much as to say, If one disappear, all disappear with it.

If you compare the sectarian churches with this order, you will find a great difference. And if you ask the object for which these gifts were given, you will learn from the apostle Paul: "When he (Christ) ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts to men. And he gave some apostles, and some prophets; and some evangelists; and some pastors, and teachers. For the perfection of the Saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body (Church) of Christ, till we all come in the unity of the faith, and to the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ; that we be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive."—Eph. 4: 9-14.

The question is now: If apostles and prophets and spiritual gifts have ceased, what was the cause of the disappearance of these spiritual gifts? Suppose we ask the great apostle of the gentiles, why the church is destitute of these spiritual gifts, and divided into sects and parties. If he were here, he would direct us to his letters written to the various churches, as a reply to that enquiry. Commencing with his second epistle to the Thessalonians, second chapter, in which we read: "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as [if] that day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; So that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God."

Here we have it distinctly stated, that the second coming of Christ shall not take place unless there come a falling away first. And to Timothy, the apostle says: "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears." "And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."—2 Tim. 3: 3, 4.

Read also his words in 2 Tim. 3: 1-5, and in 1 Tim. 4: 1. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, fierce, despisers of those that are good, * * * lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God. Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."

"Now the spirit speaketh expressly, that in the last times [last days] some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils."

I have circumnavigated this world twice, and been in nearly every country called Christian, and in many called heathen; and in every Christian country so called, have I found those who say in their hearts, "There is no God." (Ps. 14.) But I have not found any among the so-called heathens. The heathens may not be as philosophic as the Christians are; yet they know that there is something, that is higher than man. That there is a supreme being. Nor have I ever seen any infidelity among the Heathens, as is among the so-called Christians. They all worship in humility something that they suppose to be their superior. If it is made of wood or stone, or some other substance, they do not believe that God is an immaterial nothingness as some Christians believe. Hence, it is not the heathens which have "defiled the earth," nor "transgressed the laws," nor "changed the ordinance," nor have they "broken the everlasting covenant." (Isa. 24: 5.) As they never have pretended to know the gospel of Jesus, they know nothing about the "law," the "ordinance, or the covenant."

I shall now compare the Gospel of Jesus to a tree which was planted into a good soil by the Master and his servants, (the primitive apostles). The branches of this tree grew and spread all over the earth. Its fruit was good, most excellent, and healthy, for it was "the tree of life." All they who ate of this tree did not die. But as soon as the servants, the first apostles left the earth, or as soon as they fell asleep, the new ones which came in their stead, were not so careful as the first to do their duty. The tree was neglected, so that it began to dry up and bear no more fruit. Its branches also rotted and fell off. They only became the source of manifold wild fruit, (false doctrines). But the root of the tree was planted by the Master so deep in the ground, that the enemy could not uproot it, nor could it rot, as the tree with its branches did.

The question is now: Will not the root of that tree grow any more?

The answer is yes. It is growing now. The root of the Gospel tree was found in the hill Cumorah. Now to prove that the gospel was once preached "to every creature which is under heaven." See Col. 1: 23. Rom. 10: 18. That the enemy cannot uproot this tree. See Mat. 16: 18. That its root was found in Cumorah. See Rev. 14: 6, onward. It is the Book of Mormon. The branches of the gospel are the Branches of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. And as "the root which shall stand for an ensign," (Isa. 11: 10.), has been found in the hill Cumorah, it will never dry up any more; but will grow and spread its branches, until it covers the earth. The root of this gospel tree is the "stone cut out of the mountain without hands," Dan. 2, and "became a great mountain [kingdom] and filled the whole earth." Vs. 34-35. It will therefore never more cease growing and spreading its branches, until it has covered the whole earth. For "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord." Heb. 2: 14. As "the Lord shall be king over all the earth." Zech. 14: 9.

HEALDSBURG, CAL.

J. A. STROMBERG.

RAMBLES IN THE DISTRICT.—No. II.

SUNDAY morning, March 16th, started by team for Little Compton, distance about twenty miles. The morning was cloudy with indications of a storm, and when about half way the snow began to fall in large and heavy flakes. Beautiful, beautiful snow! how pure and white in its appearance. Shall I be as pure, when "the secrets of all hearts are revealed?"

Bro. Algerine O. Tripp, of Westpoint, had previously arranged with me, that when on a visit to Little Compton, he would furnish a relief horse, from his home to the end of the journey and back; but the weather being so threatening, he had despaired of my coming, and had started for the place of meeting, in company with Bro. Andrews. Bro. Tripp's son, a kind and obliging young man, had also gone on a visit; but owing to the storm had returned; and hearing my situation, put his horse in harness, and took me to my journey's end. The saints' meeting was already in progress, and I was received with the same good will which has always characterized the people of this place towards me in my labors in the gospel. I was pleased to meet Bro. Charles A. Coombs, of Plainville, who was laboring there for the Master; and who the day previous had baptized Bro. Grinnelle and his estimable wife. During the progress of the meeting, these two were confirmed, and Bro. A. O. Tripp, who had previously been marked out by the Spirit for work in the ministry, and the Fall River Branch of which he was a member having given consent by vote agreeably to the law, was ordained to the office of a Priest by the Elders present. Good, earnest testimonies of the truth were given, and arrangements were made that in two weeks from the present, the Saints should come together and be organized into a branch. Partook of supper at the hospitable board of Bro. and Sr. Crosby; after which started for home, still willing to labor for the Master, and thankful that I was able to do so. Arrived home safe in the evening, after going over a stretch of forty miles in the day's labor; quite long for a "Sabbath day's journey."

Sunday, March 30th came, and with it the prospect of another journey to Little Compton. When I awoke, the wind was blowing hard, and the snow was falling and drifting, and Mr. Frost made another call upon us. A journey of twenty miles in such a storm seemed gloomy, but there was the promise to meet and do a certain work; so after a season of secret prayer,

I mustered courage, and started. It was bad both for horse and rider; but on we sped; met no harm save a little chill, and reached Bro. Tripp's in safety. Here I met Bro. Gilbert, who had come from Fall River to assist us; also Bro. Andrews, of Westpoint. This being the relief station, changed horses, and again started, the wind still blowing and the snow falling. The time passed pleasantly, as we conversed on the future of the kingdom. Arrived at Bro. Crosby's, where some were in waiting for the meeting. All the Saints were present, except one, who was detained at home by sickness. Meeting was opened, thanks offered to the giver of all good; and while the storm raged without, we felt that peace reigned within. The work was started by choosing the writer to preside, and Bro. Gilbert clerk, and proceeded to organize by naming it the Little Compton Branch. Bro. Smith was requested to exercise supervision over the branch. Bro. A. O. Tripp, who had brought a letter of removal from the Fall River Branch, was appointed Priest. Bro. J. L. Crosby was ordained a Teacher, and appointed to fill said office in the branch. Bro. Joseph Pierce was ordained a Deacon, and appointed to fill said office in the branch; and was also appointed Clerk. Thus was organized a branch of eleven members, after a labor of sixteen years. When the gospel was first preached there, the Lord said that he would establish a branch in that place; and to-day I praise him that he has not forgotten his promise, nor the labors of his servants. I express my gratitude to all the brethren and sisters, who, during these long years of labor, have aided in bringing about this good work in behalf of the Lord, and to the glory of his name. To the friends of the cause in Little Compton, I extend my sincere thanks, for their kindness in ministering to the wants of my brethren, whilst laboring among them; and I pray God that they may be led to understand the truth as it is in Jesus.

The people here are also striving to build a chapel for the Saints, and the writer was permitted to read a deed, wherein, on March 17th, 1884, Rouse Pierce and his generous wife deeded to the church, "for their use and behoof forever," a quarter of an acre of land for the purpose of building a chapel for the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. The site is a corner lot, where two roads meet, and to me appears to be a splendid location; and is certainly a sacrifice on the part of the givers. May God in his mercy multiply unto them blessings. The sister who signed the deed realizes that God's blessing has been upon them ever since she first opened her door for the servants of God. Many friends are aiding by money and labor, and the foundation for the chapel is already laid; and I pray that the favor of the Almighty may follow the undertaking, that it may give the lie to the slanders of our enemies, who say our object is to carry the people to Salt Lake. I now feel amply repaid for all my prayers, tears and labors, through these years of toil, in seeing the work of God firmly planted in this place; and I thank my Heavenly Father for having given me strength and courage to labor to the glory of his name. After meeting partook of supper with Bro. Sowle and his loving wife, who were the first to obey the gospel in this place. Arrived home safe, and met the greetings of a good wife. The wise man said, "He who getteth a good wife, getteth a good thing." I wish every Elder had that good thing.

JOHN SMITH.

THE ATONEMENT.

It is believed by many quite intelligent men, (and some Elders) of the Church of Christ, that Jesus was not slain, or killed, as is generally supposed and taught; but that as an independent act of his own, he laid down his life, without any reference to, and uninfluenced by the act and inflictions commonly known as his crucifixion. The effort to establish this theory, as we believe, originated in a desire to evade the charge, made by opposers of the current theory of Redemption, that murder would under God's economy be a necessity if Christ was really slain, and that thereby also God made it necessary that some men must do that which would damn them, that others might go free. Much confusion has attended the introduction of this theory; for that it is altogether contrary to that which the Saints have always been taught, and understood the Scriptures to teach. Without stating whether the "murder" of Christ was a necessary part of God's plan, we would call attention to the real fact involved; viz., was Jesus slain; and after this is settled, then if Elders or infidels desire to question the justice of God, or the propriety of the plan, we are ready for the issue, believing that whatever God did, or caused to be done, was right, just and good; and that although it may appear otherwise to the superficial observer, yet he who will read carefully the word, being led by the Spirit, will be able to see the wisdom and truth of God, manifested in all his works.

First. Did Jesus himself teach that he must or would suffer death at the hand of man, (see Luke 18: 32, 33). "For he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, * * * and they shall scourge and put him to death."

Is Jesus as a prophet creditable? Was this prediction fulfilled? See Peter's testimony, while "filled with the Holy Ghost," and "speaking as the Spirit gave utterance," Acts 2: 23-36. "Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken and by wicked hands have crucified and slain. * * * That same Jesus, whom ye have crucified." Here Peter unequivocally says, Jesus was slain, was crucified. Are we to believe him? If not, why believe any statement in the inspired volumes as true. No statement ever made or penned has more right to credence than this, since he, (Peter), was confessedly under the influence of the Holy Spirit, and spake by its dictation; and if in this instance the Spirit testified falsely, what assurance have we of the truth of any matter given by it.

If Peter was in an error about the Christ being slain, he may have also been mistaken about the ordinance of baptism for the remission of sins, as also the continued gift of the Spirit to "all that are afar off." If the idea that Jesus was "slain," only came down through the ages by mere tradition, it may be equally urged that all that Peter said in his entire sermon, was of the same nature. It looks to us like unsafe and unreasonable grounds, to assume that just such parts of this noted sermon, (so noted for its convincing power), as suit our notion of things, were inspired, and the remaining ones were not only uninspired, but untrue. How inconsistent for a Latter Day Saint Elder to take the position, that Jesus was not slain (or killed), thus denying the inspiration of Peter on this occasion; and still in preaching a sermon on baptism and the gift of the Spirit, urge that he was "filled" with the "Holy Ghost," and "spake as it gave utterance;" that he was one of those whom Jesus called and sent out, saying, "Whosoever ye bind on earth shall be bound in heaven." O yes, he is now a very good witness; not only qualified by the "Holy Priesthood of Melchisedec," but inspired to the remarkable degree of preaching a sermon "in tongues," with a "cloven tongue of fire!" What eloquence the Elder now uses in eulogizing the "ardent Peter." He is sublimely endowed with wisdom, truth, and light, in those two points; but was a little excited when he said Jesus was "slain." Though the Elder has impeached his witness as being at least ignorant, and therefore incompetent as a witness in so important a matter; yet when it suits his purpose, he introduces him as Simon pure, as well as Simon Peter. "O consistency, thou art a Jewel."

We will now examine the testimony of a glorified host, who had reached that condition in which "we shall know as we are known." John, the beloved, declares that he heard ten thousand times ten thousand, &c., singing "round about the throne." (Rev. 5: 9-12). "And they sang a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hath redeemed us to God by thy blood. * * * And I beheld and heard many angels round about the throne, and the beasts and the Elders, * * * saying, worthy is the lamb that was slain." Surely if angels and redeemed Elders, who worship before the throne are to take up the glad refrain, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain," it is quite strange that we should refuse to do so. Is it not more strange that such perfect beings should make such a mistake in this glorious song of victory, by making use of the sentence, "The Lamb that was slain." Stranger yet, that some of our Elders know more now than they will when glorified, or than the angels will then. Will not those who have learned so rapidly as to get beyond the anticipated knowledge of the two coming states of reward and glory; viz., the "millennium" and the "celestial glory," have some compunctions of conscience in singing the song of victory with the glorified throng, since they have learned more in mortality than all heaven's children know in glory; namely, that "The Lamb was not slain," but only apparently so. That he simply quit breathing when he got ready, without reference to, and altogether independent of, his great suffering on the cross. Query: Will the joys of our redemption, and the establishment of universal peace and praise, cause men and angels to usher in the age of ultimate victory for the Lamb, by chanting an untruth? I am informed that nothing that loveth a lie can enter the holy place, much less those who sing a lie before the throne.

We will now hear Jesus, and see if he feels that he was crucified, killed on the cross. Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 53: 2: "I, the Lord, who was crucified for the sins of the world." Again 45: 9: "I am Jesus Christ, that was crucified." Also 34: 1; 30: 9.

Now, brethren, we are anxious to hear your strong reasoning. We are willing to stand in the gap. We believe Jesus was slain, and his blood atoned for sins, and sanctifies the church. If you are afraid of the theory of atonement by blood, we are not; and if you can crucify our idea herein, we are willing you shall shed its blood to atone for our ignorance, and belief in things that are written. Let the unwary as well as the thinking, hear both sides, that we may see where the truth is. We think you have cried Eureka, Eureka too soon; and that your adherents have cried ex homo before they have weighed the cost of the gloved-fingered compromise with human opinion against the divine word.

T. RUTH.

THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

WAS this kingdom in existence in the days of the personal ministry of the Savior and John the Baptist. We are inclined to think from the following evidences, that the kingdom of heaven exists in a form sufficiently developed in order to salvation, whenever and wherever there is an individual called of God to administer its laws. Hence the position assumed by some, that it was not, is not, and will not be set up until Christ's second coming, to our mind is inconsistent. That the kingdom was in existence prior to Pentecost, and that the Master so understood and taught it to the people, is evident: "From the days of John the Baptist until now, the Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."—Matt. 11: 12. Again: "Verily I say unto you, [the chief priest], that the publicans and harlots go into the Kingdom of God before you."—Matt. 21: 13. Will any one assert that the Master misrepresented the facts to those priests and elders, in telling them that the kingdom was then in existence, and that the publicans and harlots were entering into it. Will some one tell us how those publicans and harlots went into that which was not in existence, and would not be until Pentecost, or his second advent. If either of the above positions is true, then was not Jesus a deceiver by telling the people that the kingdom was there, and individuals were entering into it, at the same time knowing, if the above position be true, that it was not yet set up, and would not be, probably, for eighteen hundred or two thousand years. Jesus said again: "Wo unto you scribes and pharisees, hypocrites, for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men."—Matt. 23: 13. Is it possible that men could shut up that which had never been opened? Again: "The kingdom of heaven is like [not will be like] unto a net that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind, which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away. So shall it be at the end of the world."—Matt. 13: 47.

That the end referred to is at his second coming, is evident from the following: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come."—Matt. 24: 14. Then the net shall have accomplished its work. Drawn to shore, the good will have been put into vessels, and the bad cast away. Jesus having preached the gospel to those spirits who were once disobedient; and his ministry preaches it in all the world for a witness unto all nations, we don't see the necessity for the kingdom to be set up then. But we do see the necessity of its being drawn to shore; for both living and dead having heard its tidings, all nations, (if all means all), there are no other nations to hear. We think the evidence introduced sufficient to show, that the kingdom existed prior to Pentecost; and there is not one word to show, so far as I know, that it was set up then. That the kingdom will exist prior to Christ's advent, is also evident from the following: "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the Bridegroom."—Matt. 25: 1.

"In the days of these kings, [represented by the toes of the metallic image], shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed."—Dan. 2: 44. Says one, That is to be set up at Christ's coming. But unfortunately it don't say so. We find one in existence at his coming; and if he sets up another, he will have two. There is nothing said about Christ's setting up a kingdom at his second coming. And that this same kingdom, which we find existing at his coming, will continue to exist after he does come is evident: "But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom."—Matt. 26: 29. Instead of Christ at his coming introducing a gospel dispensation, it seems from the Scriptures, that he is coming as an executor of a judgment already past. He that believeth not, is condemned, and Christ comes to execute that sentence. "And Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold the Lord cometh, with ten thousand of his Saints, to execute judgment upon all."—Jude 1: 14, 15.

HEATHEN HISTORICAL PROOFS OF CHRIST'S LIFE, DEATH AND RESURRECTION.

EXTRACTS FROM A SERMON DELIVERED BY REV. DR. RYLANCE, RECTOR OF ST. MARK'S CHURCH, NEW YORK.

I. TIMOTHY 1: 15.

In the reign of Augustus Cæsar, about 750 years from the foundation of Rome there appeared in Palestine a wonderful personage, who claimed to have come from God to speak with men about love, righteousness and eternal life. He called God his father, told men they were brethren, and set them an example of a wonderful and many-sided goodness. He called disciples, taught publicly, wrought wonders; but, provoking the wrath of the Jewish authorities, he was put to a shameful and cruel death. The record relates, however, that on the third day he rose again, and ascended into heaven, and that his disciples, inspired with a strange enthusiasm, perpetuated and extended the system overwhelmed by the crucifixion of the founder. The movement rapidly enlarged itself, men of all tribes and grades submitting to it, until social and political influence came under its sway, and the civilized world came to be called after a man who had been put to death on a little hill just outside of Jerusalem. Such is an outline of the story told in the New Testament and handed down through later Scriptures and oral tradition. But the question is: Has Christ any other witnesses than evangelists and apostles? Let me cite certain witnesses, then, in confirmation of the truth of Christ's advent, and of the historical credibility of the Christian faith, and a Jew shall speak first.

Josephus was born about the year A. D. 37, four or five years after our Lord's ascension, and lived until he was twenty-six at Jerusalem, and must have known substantially the whole story of the life and death of Jesus of Nazareth. That he was aware of it is manifest from the little he gives us of it. He sketches the career of John the Baptist; says he was a preacher of virtue; that he baptized his proselytes; that he was imprisoned and put to death by Herod Antipas. He tells us also of James, the brother of him who was called Jesus, and of his being put to death. But the great testimony of Josephus is explicit and full as to Christ himself; and we are now permitted to quote without question, since even Mons. Renan concedes, in his Life of Jesus, that the substance of it at least is genuine.

"At that time," says the author of the Antiquities, "lived Jesus, a wise man—if he may be called a man, for he performed many wonderful works. He was the teacher of such men as received the truth with pleasure. He drew over to him many Jews and Gentiles. This was the Christ. [M. Renan says called eleto Christ]. And when Pilate, at the instigation of the chief men among us, had condemned him to the cross, they who before had conceived an affection for him did not cease to adhere to him, for on the third day he appeared to them alive again. And the sect of Christians subsists to this time." * * *

We have heard the Jew. Let us, in the next place, hear what a Pagan can tell us of these things. Tacitus was born in about the year sixty of our era. He must not only have known of Christianity from the rumors and reports that came to Rome of its doings in the East, but he doubtless knew of it through its presence and growing strength in the metropolis itself. Yet he makes no direct and formal allusion to it. It is merely incidental to the order of his narrative that he condescends to notice at all what he probably esteemed another outburst of Hebrew fanaticism; and therefore his testimony, like that of Josephus, is the more valuable. Let us see how he came to give it.

Twenty-seven years after the crucifixion of Christ, Nero burned Rome in a fit of reckless pleasure. To temper the horrors and hide the guilt of that atrocity he caused to be seized, says Tacitus, "an immense multitude of men." Who were these men? The historian tells us. They were men, says he, "whom the common folks called Christians." Mark what is implied in this: that in less than thirty years after the death of Christ His followers were multitudinous in Rome. But who or what were these Christians, according to Tacitus? "The author of the name," he says, "was Christ, who, in the reign of Tiberius, suffered death by the sentence of the Procurator, Pontius Pilate." * * * "This pernicious superstition," says he, "thus checked for a while, broke out again and spread not only over Judea, where the evil originated, but through Rome also. Accordingly the first who were apprehended confessed, and on their information a vast multitude were convicted. And when they were put to death, mockery was added to their sufferings, for they were either disguised in the skins of wild beasts and worried to death by dogs, or they were crucified, or they were clothed in some inflammable covering, and when the day closed were burned as lights to illuminate the night." It is a fearful, tragic story, which we may read not only in ancient manuscripts, but in monumental evidences, which admit of no interpolation or perversion. As we tread the dark, sepulchral avenues which stretch for hundreds of miles beneath the city and suburbs of Rome, to which the early Christians fled for shelter in times of persecution, and where they buried their dead, there we may read as we walk, by the glimmering torch, the testimonies of martyrs and confessors in multitudes, which the rocks have preserved as a witness for later times. Tombs, tier upon tier, line these gloomy labyrinths, with their inscriptions and symbols of Christian faith and hope going back to the days of primitive simplicity, testifying to the truth as it is in Jesus, affirming, with a pathos and power beyond all other witnesses, "that it is a faithful saying," etc. Here are credentials beyond all possibility of contradiction or suspicion, which the victims of Nero's atrocities or Diocletian's wrath unconsciously left as a legacy for all time, which all who doubt the historical truthfulness of Christianity may read for themselves to-day and doubt no more.

I have said that much of the testimony of antiquity has been devoured by the hungry teeth of time; but in the Roman Catacombs death and the grave are eloquent in their attestation of the gospel which Christ preached, and which apostles proclaimed to the very confines of the then known world. But for the ravages inflicted by the past we might have had to-day an authority more full and emphatic than even the testimony of Tacitus, for we read in early Christian apologists of a state paper then preserved in the archives of Rome, called the "Acts of Pontius Pilate," being a report made by the celebrated Procurator to his imperial master of his administration of affairs in Judea, in which were explicitly mentioned, it would seem, the miracles and crucifixion of our blessed Lord. To this paper Justin Martyr appeals in his apology to Antoninus Pius, about 140, A. D., where he says: "That these things were so done you may know from 'the Acts' made in the time of Pontius Pilate." This document has perished, however, and its direct value to us is lost; but we have such a document in the memorable letter of the younger Pliny, which he addressed while Governor of Pontius and Bithynia to the Emperor Trajan, asking counsel as to how he should deal with those who were charged with neglecting the Pagan temples and gods. "I have never had to deal with cases of this kind before," says he, "and I know not what is the custom to pursue—whether any distinction is to be made in respect of age, or whether those of tender years are to be treated the same as adults; whether pardon is to be granted on repentance, or whether it is useless to cease to be a Christian; whether it is the name that is to be punished, even when exempt from crime, or the crime attached to the name." What a strange question, my friends! A name criminal! Crime attached to a name! How vividly we are reminded of words which the New Testament has made familiar to us: "Ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake." "The guilt of these Christians," Pliny goes on to say, "they confessed to be this: that they were accustomed to meet on a stated day, before light, and to sing in concert a hymn to Christ as God, and to bind themselves by an oath, not for the perpetration of any wickedness, but that they would not commit any theft, robbery or adultery, nor violate their word, nor refuse to restore anything committed to their trust." While such were the numbers of Christians, even in that early age, that, as Pliny complains, the heathen temples were empty and desolate, their sacrifices and solemnities all but ceased. What a marvelous revolution in a brief space of years! Who was its author? In whose name and by whose power was it accomplished? These early Christian believers have told us, through the lips of a Pagan philosopher: "They were accustomed to sing a hymn to Christ as God!"

These are merely specimen citations in proof of the divine reality of the life and work of Christ upon earth; they are familiar and trite to scholars, but they are also unanswerable. I might have marshaled many more into the line of my argument, from Jewish Targums, from Juvenal, Suetonius, Epictetus, and Aurelius, from the early enemies of Christianity: Lucian, Celsus, Porphyry, and the apostate Julian—all of whom are witnesses to the facts of our holy religion; and I have appealed to none but those who were the enemies of or aliens to the cause of Christ. These evidences are gathered from the cold, critical history of the times in which the writers lived, or in which monuments had their origin, or in close chronological proximity; and the testimony is to facts, you will observe, not to legends, or to the reveries of fanaticism, but to facts which involve the whole origin and constitution and history of the gospel, the existence of Christ, with the time, place and characteristics of His ministry and that of His associates; His death: when, why and through whom; His resurrection, affirmed as a fact even by His enemies, and confirmed by the faithfulness of His followers even unto death. There is abundance of other evidence, of course, to the advent and life of our Lord—the literature which Christianity produced, the new life it created, the institutions it built up, the victory it won over hoary superstitions and false philosophy and corrupt system of morals, all the conspiring probabilities of which run together into a perfect conviction.

FROM "THE ROYAL PATH OF LIFE."

(Selected by Joshua Armstrong.)

WHAT a hallowed name! How full of enchantment, and how dear to my heart! Home is the magic circle within which the weary spirit finds refuge. It is the sacred asylum to which the care-worn heart retreats, to find rest from the trials and inquietudes of life. Ask the lone wanderer, as he plods his tedious way, bent with the weight of age, and white with the frost of years. What is home? He will tell you, it is a green spot in memory, an oasis in the desert, a center about which cluster the fondest recollections of his youth's first love. It was once a glorious, a happy reality; but now it remains only as an image of the mind.

Home! That name touches every fiber of the soul, and strikes every chord of the human heart with its angelic fingers. Nothing but death can break its spell. What tender associations are linked with home. What pleasing images and deep emotions it awakens. It calls up the fondest memories of life, and opens in our nature the purest, deepest, richest gush of concealed thought and feeling. Home has an influence which is stronger than death. It is law to our hearts and hands. Its spell neither time nor change can break. The darkest villainies which have disgraced humanity, can not neutralize it. Gray haired and demon Guilt will make his dismal cell the sacred urn of tears, wept over the memories of home; and these will soften and melt into tears of penitence even the heart of adamant.

Ask the little child: What is home? You will find that to it it is the world—he knows no other. The father's love, the mother's smile, the sister's embrace, the brother's welcome, throw about his home a heavenly halo, and make it as attractive to him as the home of the angels. Home is the spot where the child pours out its complaints, and it is the grave of all its sorrows.

Was paradise an abode of purity and peace, or will the New Eden be one of unmingled beatitude? Then, "the Paradise of childhood," the "Eden of home," are names applied to the family abode. In that Paradise all may appear as smiling and serene to childhood, as the untainted garden did to unfallen man. Ever the remembrance of it amid distant scenes of woe, has soothed some of the saddest hours of life, and crowds of mourners have spoken of "A home, that paradise below

Of sunshine and of flowers,
Where hallowed joys perennial flow,
"By calm, sequestered bowers."

Childhood nestles like a bird that has built its abode among roses. There the cares and the coldness of earth are as long as possible evaded.

Flowers there bloom, or fruits invite on every side; and there paradise would indeed be restored, could mortal power ward off the consequences of sin. This new garden of the Lord would then abound in beauty unsullied, and trees of the Lord's planting leaving fruit to his glory, would be found in plenty there. It would be reality and not mere poetry, to speak of "My own dear, quiet home,

The Eden of my heart."

Home of our childhood! What words fall upon the ear with so much of music in their cadence! How fond recollection delights to dwell upon the events which marked our early pathway, when the unbroken home circle presented a scene of loveliness! Intervening years have not dimmed the vivid coloring, with which memory has adorned those joyous hours of youthful innocence. We are again at home on the wings of imagination—to the place made sacred by the remembrance of a father's care, a mother's love, and the cherished associations of brothers and sisters. Home! How often we hear persons speak of the home of their childhood. They seem to delight in dwelling upon the recollections of joyous days spent beneath the parental roof, when their young and happy hearts were as light and free as the birds that made the woods resound with the melody of their cheerful voices. What a blessing it is when weary with care and burdened with sorrow, to have a home to which we can go; and there, in the midst of friends we love, forget our troubles, and dwell in peace and quietude.

Peace at home, that is the boon. "He is happiest, be he king or peasant, who finds peace in his home." Home should be made so truly home, that the weary tempted heart could turn toward it anywhere on the dusty highway of life, and receive light and strength. It should be the sacred refuge of our lives, whether rich or poor. The affections and love of home are graceful things, especially among the poor. The ties that bind the wealthy and the proud to home may be lodged on earth; but those which link the poor to their humble hearths, are of the true metal, and bear the stamp of heaven. These affectionate and loves constitute the poetry of human life; and so far as our present existence is concerned, with all the domestic relations, are worth more than all other social ties. They give the first throb to the heart, and unseal the deep fountains of its love. Home is the chief school of human virtue. Its responsibilities, joys, sorrows, smiles, tears, hopes and solitudes, form the chief interest of human life.

There is nothing in the world which is so venerable as the character of parents. Nothing so intimate and endearing as the relation of husband and wife. Nothing so tender as that of parents and children. The little circle is made one by a singular union of the affections. The only fountain in the wilderness of life, where man drinks of water totally unmingled with little impure ingredients, is that which gushes for him in the calm and shady recess of domestic life.

Pleasure may heat the heart with artificial excitement; war may eradicate its fine fibers and diminish its sensitiveness; but it is only domestic love that can render it truly happy.

Even as the sunbeam is composed of millions of minute rays, the home life must be constituted of little tenderesses, kind looks, sweet laughter, gentle words, loving counsels. It must not be like the torch blaze of natural excitement, which is easily quenched; but like the serene, chastened light which burns as safely in the damp east wind, as in the driest atmosphere.

Let each bear the other's burdens. The while let each cultivate the mutual confidence, which is a gift capable of increase and improvement; and soon it will be found, that kindness will spring up on every side, displacing constitutional unsuitability, want of mutual knowledge, even as we have seen sweet violets and primroses dispelling the gloom of the gray sea rocks. There is nothing on earth so beautiful as the household, on which Christian love forever smiles, and where religion walks a counselor and a friend. No cloud can darken it, for its twin stars are centered in the soul. No power can make it tremble, for it has a heavenly support and a heavenly anchor. Tossed day by day upon the rough and stormy ocean of life, harassed by worldly cares, and perplexed by worldly inquietudes, the weary spirit yearns after repose. It seeks and finds it in the refuge which home supplies. Here the mind is at rest. The heart's turmoil becomes quiet, and the spirit basks in peaceful delights of domestic love.

Yes, home is a place of rest—we feel it so when we seek and enter it after the busy cares and trials of the day are over. We may find joy elsewhere, but it is not the joy, the satisfaction of home. Of the world the heart may soon tire. Of home never. In the former there is much of cold formality, much heartlessness under the garb of friendship; but in the latter it is all heart, all friendship of the purest, truest character. Happy is the man who can find that solace and that poetry at home. Warm greeting from loving hearts, fond glances from bright eyes, the welcome shouts of children, the many thousand little arrangements for comfort and enjoyment, that silently tell of thoughtful and expectant love. The gentle ministrations that disencumber us, and force us into an old and easy seat, before we are aware of it. These and like tokens of affection and sympathy, constitute the poetry which reconcile us to the prose of life. Think of this ye wives and daughters. Think of the toils and anxieties that fathers undergo, to secure for you comfortable homes; and compensate them for their trials by making them happy by their own firesides.

Is it not true, that much of a man's energy and success, as well as happiness, depends upon the character of his home. Secure there, he goes from his home bravely, to encounter the trials of life. It encourages him to think of home. It is his point of rest. The thought of a dear wife shortens the distance of a journey. It is a reserve power to fall back upon. Home and home friends! How dear they are to us all. Well might we love to linger on the picture of home friends. When all other friends prove false, home friends removed from every bias but love, are the steadfast and sure stays of our peace of soul—are best and dearest when the hour is darkest and the danger of evil the greatest. But if none care for him at home, if there be neglect or love of absence, or coldness in our home, then it is dark indeed within. If no wife, or sister, or children care for him who returns from his toils and travel, well may he despair of life's best blessings. Without home friends, home is nothing but a name.

Home in some form is the great object of life. It stands at the end of every day's labor, and beckons us to its bosom. Life would be cheerless and meaningless, did we not discern across the river that divides us from the life beyond, glimpses of the pleasant mansions prepared for us. That land of quiet rest, toward which those who, worn down with the toils of earth, direct their frail barks over the troubled waters of life, and often a long and dangerous passage, find it safe in the haven of eternal bliss. That home beyond the grave—there the friendships formed on earth, and which cruel death has severed, are never more to be broken; and parted friends shall meet again, never more to be separated. It is an inspiring hope, that when we separate here on earth at the summons of death, and when a few more years have rolled over the heads of those remaining, if faithful unto death we shall meet again in that eternal home, there to dwell in the presence of the Father, and be no more separated. At the best estate we are only pilgrims and strangers here. At that eternal home death will never knock. In all that land there will not be a single grave. How brothers and sisters will be glad to meet each other there, never more to separate. Perhaps a score of years or more ago they parted at the tomb; but now we look through a glass darkly, but then face to face. This corruption will put on incorruption. Once there, our home and friends will be eternal. No sorrows, no crying, no tears, no death. But home, sweet home, beautiful home, glorious home, home with each other. Home, home! Through the rich grace of Christ Jesus, may we all reach it.

VERBAL PEDIGREE.

A study of the pedigree of many words which are in daily use would prove more fascinating than any other kind of mental recreation. "Jet" derived its name from the Gagetes, a river of Lycia, where was found the black stones which the French called gagate or jaet, which we abbreviate into jet. Pamphylia, a Greek lady who compiled a history of the world in thirty-five little books, has given her name to the "pamphlet." "Punch and Judy" are the relics of an ancient mystery play, in which the actors were Pontius Pilate and Judas Iscariot. "Dollar" is from the German thaler, which is derived from Thal, the Valley of Joachim, in Bohemia, where the silver works were situated that made this coin. "Humbug" is from Hamburg; "a piece of Hamburg news," was in Germany used as a proverbial expression for false rumors. "Exhort" and "yeast" are from the same root, which signifies something boiling or overflowing. "Gas" and gust have the same parentage. "Blue Jeans Williams" probably does not know that the fabric from which he gets his name was originally made by Moors, at Jean, in Spain. "Gauze" derives its name from Gaza, where it was made. Damask silk was made first at Damascus. The word "panic" has a curious origin. According to Herodotus, the god Pan was supposed to have assisted the Greeks in the battle of Marathon, 490, B. C., striking such a terror into the Persian host that they fled to their ships in perfect dismay. From that time the Greek word panicon was used to describe sudden and overpowering fear. "Tabby cat" is all unconscious that her name is derived from Atab, a famous street in Bagdad, inhabited by the manufacturers of silken stuffs called Atabi our taffety; the wavy markings of the watered silk resembling pussy's coat. "Old Scratch" is the demon Skaratti, who still survives in the superstitions of Northern Europe. "Old Nick" is none other than Nikir, the dangerous water demon of the Scandinavian legend. In the phrase "Deuce take it" the deity continues to be invoked. The lemon takes its name from the city of Lima. Loadstone is a corrupt translation of Lydius lapis, the stone of Lydia. The word money reminds us that the coinage of the Romans was struck at the temple of Juno Moneta, the goddess of counsel.

JONAH AND THE GREAT FISH.

The "great fish," called ketos in the Septuagint and in the Greek of Matt. 12:40, was probably not a whale, as our version renders ketos in Matt. 12:40, for the whale is extremely rare in the Mediterranean, and has too small a throat to swallow a man. The word ketos is a general term for any large fish. It here probably refers to the large white shark, which is found in the Mediterranean, and which has been known to swallow a man whole. Muller, a natural historian of repute, relates that in 1558, a sailor fell from a frigate sailing in that sea. A shark took him into his wide throat so that he disappeared. The captain ordered a gun discharged at the fish, and the ball struck it so that it vomited up the sailor, who was picked up by his comrades alive and very little hurt. The shark was captured and exhibited by the sailor in many cities of Europe. It was twenty feet long, and weighed three thousand nine hundred and twenty-four pounds.—S. S. World.

Owen was sustained as secretary. The official strength of the house was: 2 Seventies, 4 Elders, 1 Teacher. Resolved, That we sustain the spiritual and temporal authorities of the church in righteousness. That the president appoint two days' meetings in this district, and have the privilege of appointing help. That Brn. Salisbury and McKiernan occupy the stand to-night. It was requested that ministerial duties be performed in Van Buren and Jefferson counties. Approved. Bro. Durfee was requested to labor in aforesaid counties.

Bro. M. T. Short preached two stirring discourses on the Sunday, and thus closed a profitable and peaceful conference.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Manufacturers of HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES, 605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully,

N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds,

J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ,

O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

GEO. MONTAGUE.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

Yours,

V. D. BAGGERLY.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds,

WM. AIRD.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds,

E. W. CATO, SEN.

BRO. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, April 26th, 1884.

THE attendance at the Conference at Stewartsville, was all that was anticipated, and better under the circumstances than many thought it could be. The arrangements of the committee were quite perfect, and the members of it were competent and diligent; so that no one was neglected that we heard of, from first to last. The committee did literally keep the old Virginian adage, "welcome the coming; speed the parting guest;" for they waited on those who came and those who went, as the trains arrived and departed.

The assembly was held in Buck's Opera Hall, capable of seating from five to seven hundred persons. It was a reasonably fair hall to speak and be heard in; and was well taken care of by a brother janitor, who took every pains to keep it in good order. Rain and snow made quantities of mud, which was tramped into the stairways and hall making plenty of work, but as no complaint was heard, it was evident that the utmost good nature prevailed with those on whom the burden fell. The hall was well lighted and for the most part well warmed.

The citizens received and entertained a large number of the delegates, hospitably and courteously; the most cordial and friendly feeling seemed to obtain between the entertainers and their guests, as the time of their stay wore away to its close, so that at the parting, good cheer and greeting were exchanged as between those who had sojourned in kindness together. We all left feeling assured of the regard of many of the citizens of Stewartsville; no effort having been spared to make the occasion of the conference a pleasant one.

The morning sessions for prayer and preaching service were well attended by the Saints, and a few of those not of the church; while the evening and Sunday preaching services were fully attended. Those brethren who filled the stand as appointed, from time to time, responded with cheerfulness, and did remarkably well, the exception being against the so called "abler elders," the younger portion of the ministry doing the better service; "old men for counsel, young men for war," proving true again.

Among those present we were pleased to note Brn. John Landers, (in his ninetieth year), Josiah Ells, Ebenezer Robinson and Jason W. Briggs. Bro. Landers occupied the morning hour on Monday, the day of adjournment, with freedom and fervor and with great acceptability to the Saints who heard him. Bro. Ells was able to attend all the business sessions without suffering from it; and Brother Robinson, though feeble from recent illness, did the Saints good by his presence and quiet, serene testimony. Bro. Jason Briggs was in better health than we had seen him for years, and bore the burden of the continued sessions of council and conference business well, bearing his years fairly.

The younger men of the ministry bore themselves with marks of decided improvement and ability. The active work of the field is a wonderful sharpener of the wits; and the constant attitude of defense has given a ready answer for the many objections urged against the work, so that these younger men are getting to be "instant in season." Care and study will aid largely, and these the majority are willing to give.

In one thing there has been a decided advancement. The moral and mental standard has been set high and it is certain that a far better unity of thought and belief has been attained, and the grounds for division are gradually growing less and less, and there is reason to hope that it will not be a great while until there will be a grand seeing "eye to eye" among the travelling ministry.

There was from first to last a very great unanimity of good feeling and pleasantness between all parties present; and this was disturbed on but one or two occasions; and then there was but a transient clouding of the sunny skies which cleared without rain. An impression seemed to be general that a time of good to the church had come. Our own opinion is that a better session of conference has seldom been had.

The singing was under the charge of Bro. John T. Kinnaman, who with his band of Stewartsville singers made melody before the Lord. A strong argument in favor of the publication of the music book now waiting the printer's type and ink was offered, by the manner in which this choir sung the cheering songs of the children of peace. One Elder enthusiastically said: "Is not that singing just heavenly?"

The elders left the conference happy and refreshed: and will enter into the field with renewed energy. Some of the laborers were not reappointed a few for causes not specially necessary to name, and some because the early close of the session, made unavoidable by the impending departure of many of the delegates prevented the reaching of the names by the twelve, who did all they could to give each its proper care and consideration.

Those brethren who can do more or less labor in their respective localities may consult or correspond with the one in charge.

No one who can tell the gospel story, whether "in the field," or "abroad," should let an opportunity slip, to offer the Word of Life to those who would hear. The terms "in the field" and "abroad" are some times used in a manner to draw improper distinctions between those laborers who are appointed by the conferences and those laboring locally as the way opens. The Elder who is doing what work he can consistently with his care of family and self, winning souls to Christ, is as much "in the field," so far as reward is concerned, as is the one who does nothing else, who is by his calling under necessity to travel. The word "abroad" has improperly been made to mean away from the United States, in foreign countries; when the fact is that the Elder who is at work for the Master, away from his home, in the United States, or out of them is "abroad" nor is it essential that he should be in a foreign country to be in the world.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. W. W. BLAIR was at Watsonville, California, April 9th en route for San Francisco after the 14th. He had been in attendance at the conference at San Benito, where the Saints had a pleasant session. He reports crop prospects as fair, though the spring was late and cold. Bro. Blair would hold meetings at Watsonville from the 9th to the 14th. He thinks the prospects are good for church work.

An Elder passing through Everest, Brown county, Kansas; or who may be laboring in that vicinity, will confer a favor on Sister Carrie Dickinson, by calling on herself and her husband. The impression has been created there that the only Latter Day Saints in existence are the Utah Mormon Church; and were an Elder to go there he could correct this impression, if he can get a hearing. Try it, whoever may have a chance, or disposition.

Bro. John H. Hansen, formerly of Crescent City, Iowa, a graduate of the Kentucky School of Medicine, of Louisville, Kentucky, has removed to Lamoni, and is in charge of the drug store of M. Walker & Co.; and will in connection with the business, engage in the practice of medicine. He has been practicing for the last two years.

On page 210 of current volume of Herald, first column, read Gage County, Neb., instead of Osage Co., Kansas.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. H. Peters writes:

I have been lending the Voices of Warning I got of you some time since, and it has caused a terrible ransacking of old Bibles. They also want to see the Book of Mormon. I think there can be a good work done here. I intend to stir them up sufficient to cause them to brush the dust off the Bible, and look inside and see what it contains.

We are glad of this; for if by legitimate means people are incited to search the Scriptures with a view to discover its truths, they will certainly get great good from such search.

Bro. W. W. Thornton writes from Westerville, Nebraska, April 14th, 1884.

If you know of any of the brethren that are in want of cheap lands that can be bought for from two to ten dollars per acre, good for farming or grazing purposes, and they want any information, if they will address me I will send them any news they may ask for.

The following friendly notice we clip from the New Bedford (Mass.), Signal, of April 5th, sent us by Bro. John Smith:

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, of this city, which shows the march of progress on their part, have removed to more spacious and central quarters, having their meetings now in Waite's Hall, William St. Our worthy citizen of the north end, Elder John Smith, is prominently connected with this church, which has no fellowship with Brigham Young's dispensation, and is most assuredly opposed to polygamy. The seats are free, and no collections from the audience.—Like the Quakers they have no salaried ministry or music. Elder Smith is the principal preacher, attending to his avocation as a merchant on secular days of the week. Their form of baptism is by immersion. A prominent feature in their church creed is temperance which they strictly require for membership.

GLEN EASTON, West Va.,

April 14th, 1884.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I love to read the Herald especially the letters, to hear of this good work prospering over the land. I am still trying to keep the faith, and every day the gospel is dearer to me; and the closer I live, the more of God's love is manifested in my behalf. I am thankful the Herald has become a weekly.

We have had no preaching here for some time; and would love to see an Elder. We would like to hear the Gospel again preached by a servant of God. We have our prayer meetings twice a week, and most of the Saints here are trying to be faithful. We have seen the power of God manifested in various ways, and I feel determined by the grace of God, to continue faithful in this good work to the end of my days.

My greatest pleasure in this life is to be with the Saints, and talk of the things of God; and with an eye of faith look down into the future, when the faithful will all be together. I long for that time; for many times I fear for myself, that I won't be able to overcome the trials of this life, which are many that I have to bear; yet I thank the good Father for his grace thus far; I shall try to do my part. It did me good to read the report of the debate at Kirtland. Truth is mighty and must prevail, and ere long the honest in heart that hear will come to a knowledge of this glorious work. May God bless all his Saints, and keep them faithful, is my prayer.

Any Elder passing through this way, will find a home at our house; and we will be glad to see one come. We would all be glad to have Bro. Griffiths pay this branch a visit. Saints pray for me, that I may be gathered with the Saints.

Ever yours for truth,

MRS. CAROLINE WAYT.

LONDON, Ont.,

April 11th, 1884.

Dear Brother:—We are having quite a time here. The Rev. L. W. Wickett, of the B. C. Church, has tried to inform the people about the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith, and Joseph's mother. We tried to get him on the platform with us, so that the same audience might hear both sides of the story. He thought discussion would do no good. I presume he was right there, as the B. C. Church preachers generally come out second best when they have public debate with Latter Day Saints. We have tried to keep time to his music, both in the papers and on the platform. We trust the cause has been advanced by the efforts. I am feeling strong in the work.

Your brother in the bonds of truth,

RICHARD C. EVANS.

PERRY, Dallas Co., Iowa,

April 13th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I have long wished to bear my testimony to this latter day work. I know that it is the work of God; but as it has fallen to my lot to live where there are none of the church. I rejoice to read the Herald, as it brings glad tidings to my heart. I can testify that God is spreading the work in this the last dispensation; and I think it is the last time for the Gentiles to hear the gospel. Pray for me and my household, that we may be found worthy when we shall stand before the great judge.

Your sister in the one faith,

HULDAH BATCHELDOR.

CLARINDA, Iowa,

April 16th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I am thankful that we have an organ like the Herald, through which the Saints can write of the goodness of God, and how the work is progressing in different parts; and also to write their understanding of different parts of the sacred books. All things go to show that we are living in the most momentous age of the world's history. Not only the standard church books, but the Apocryphal books are lined with prophecies concerning the things that shall happen in these days. But the Saints need not fear if prepared, for as the Lord has promised that "All things shall work together for good to them that walk uprightly," so shall it be. Great are the promises which he has made to those that love and serve him. I would like if Brother Springer would tell us how he harmonizes his article on the Godhead with 2 Nephi, 11:12; Mosiah 8, and the first thirteen lines of fifth paragraph; also Ether 1, and the last thirteen lines of the eighth paragraph. If any of the Elders while passing through this place, will come up by the City Schools, and inquire for our place, we will try and make it as comfortable for them as we can, and also do what we can toward getting them a place to preach in. If no one else needs instructions here, we do. Hoping and praying that one or more elders may come soon to our spiritual relief, I remain your brother in the cause of Christ,

B. W. DEMPSTER.

MEDOC, Jasper Co., Mo.,

April 8th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—As I receive the Herald regularly every Saturday, and it is a great pleasure to me. I have very often found a man's name in the Herald, James Prettyman. I have an old acquaintance that married a man by that name, and I wish Mr. Prettyman to have the chance to read this, and answer through the Herald, or by letter. May God help us to be faithful.

Your brother in hope of eternal life,

T. T. GILLMORE.

BON, Richland Co., Wis.,

April 11th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I hold "Mormonism" to be an abbreviative term expressive of that "marvelous work and wonder"—The Kingdom of God, Church of Christ, Zion's latter day work, etc., established according to the predictions of the prophets of old, in these the latter days, by Joseph the Martyr, through the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon, containing the fulness of the everlasting gospel, without which the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints could not have been established, nor exist. The Elders, Priests and teachers, are commanded to teach the principles as contained in the Bible and Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of the gospel. Doctrine and Covenants, 42:5. The Saints are reproved, (by the Lord), for their darkness of mind and unbelief in treating lightly the things received from him; the church therefore being under condemnation, until they repented and remembered the Book of Mormon, even the new Covenant. * * * Doctrine and Covenants, 85:8. Will the Book be remembered and accepted as the new Covenant by those ashamed of its name? Does not the contempt for the name imply the same for the Book also? The very definition of the word Mormon, "more good," and the Book, vindicate themselves by containing all the constituents for the formation of Saints in accordance with the wisdom and economy of God, although contrary to the ethics, or conceited and perverted notions of the world.

If the name of Mormon has to be dropped as a distinction between the Reorganization and the Utah Church, why not discard the name of Saints also, to which, and also the name of Mormon they cling most tenaciously, although condemned by the same for their anti-Mormon practices.

What was the true cause of the persecutions of Joseph the Martyr and the church in its early rise before ever Polygamy or the Utah Church were thought of? Or why were the primitive Saints persecuted, slain and evil spoken against? Not for the name of Mormon, but for the name of Christ; therefore, if the name is to blame, the name of Christ has to be discarded also. But the real cause of persecution is not the name, but the source and doctrine represented by the same, (name), as defined by St. Paul, 1 Timothy 3: 12. "Yea, and all that will live Godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." Christ declares that his servants shall not fare any better than he, their Master, (verified to the very letter); therefore the only sure escape from persecution is: "to reject Christ and the true plan of redemption."

Various plans and means are employed by Satan to deceive the Saints, and destroy the Church of God; therefore the necessity of being on their guard, trying every spirit, whether it be of God or not, so they may not after much patience and long years of suffering, lose their reward. The veracity of God was first brought into question by the devil, in the Garden of Eden, which has ripened into a total rejection of a Supreme Being by many, in these latter days; so likewise the name of Mormon is denounced, to be first followed by the renouncing of the very book bearing that name, to please ethics, etiquette and the devil.

Controversies are well enough, and under certain circumstances, in their proper order; but consistency requires that those preaching a unity of the Spirit, should be in possession of the same for the avoidance of casting stumbling blocks before the unbelievers and those weak in the faith. This union could be obtained, (pre-eminently needed for the growth and strength of the body, Church), by adhering more closely to the written word of God, when a speedy redemption of Zion would be the result, and the Herald cease to be the cudgel to thrash each other with.

I was the first one that presented, (under great obstacles and difficulties), the claim of the Reorganization through San Pete valley, in 1864 or 5, travelling also with Brn. G. M. Rush and A. McCord, north and south in Utah territory; preached some in Montana also. Getting old and broken down (physically), I am only a poor excuse of my former self, which wasn't much at any time; yet I am striving for the crown.

With love and respects to all the Saints, I am their fellow laborer for the cause of truth,

CARL W. LANGE.

CABOOL, Texas Co., Mo.,

April 11th, 1883.

Brother Joseph Smith:—We would be glad to have an Elder come into this part. Bro. Atwell is the first and only one that has ever preached in this part. Ever praying for the prosperity of Zion, with love to all the Saints. May the Lord ever guide you by his Spirit.

Your sister in the gospel,

WINNIE F. CAMPBELL.

SWEET HOME, Missouri,

April 12th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—I love to read the Herald and Hope. I belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I was baptized two years ago last September. There are many temptations in the path, but pray for me that I may overcome them. I wish some Elder would come here and preach, as I believe some good would be done.

Your sister in the gospel bonds,

MATTIE A. POWELL.

MIDDLETOWN, Butler Co., Ohio,

April 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. T. W. Smith was here last fall, and did some good preaching, which I think will result in good to the cause. We would be glad to have him come this way again. We have been called upon to part with a good and faithful member of our branch. Death claimed for his victim Sister Lucy Wren, daughter of Bro. Thos. Wren. She died on the fourth of April, after an illness of nearly a year. She was faithful to the latest hours of her life; bore her testimony to the truthfulness of the gospel of Christ, and departed with a prayer for all, and a smile upon her lips. She did not fear to go, but longed to see the end; for her hope was bright, and her joy in the gospel was constant; and she now awaits the glories of the resurrection of the just, which she expected to share. I preached her funeral sermon to a large crowd of attentive listeners.

In a trip to Missouri last November, I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. B. V. Springer, and hearing him preach. I spoke eight times, and baptized and confirmed two. May gospel truth continue to find its way to the honest in heart.

Yours in hope,

M. B. WILLIAMS.

DENVER, Colorado,

April 12th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—We still rejoice in the work of the Lord, and we hope the time will soon come when we will get back among the Saints, and hear the gospel preached in its purity. The Herald, Hope, and Advocate are all the preaching we have. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your sister in the gospel,

ELLEN PLATT.

SACRAMENTO CITY, Cal.,

April 7th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—I have been in this vicinity since the 21st of March, searching diligently for the "lost sheep of the House of Israel," and endeavoring and greatly desiring to do some good for the cause of the Master. God's precious promise through you to me, "Be thou faithful, * * * and I will stand by thee in thy ministry," has been literally verified. God has given me favor on every hand, both in the eyes of his Saints and those who have not yet obeyed the gospel; so that I have found friends everywhere. And best of all, God has already given me precious souls for my hire. Yesterday I had the great pleasure of inducting two into the fold of Christ, whom I have much reason to believe will make faithful and useful members.

The Sacramento Branch seems to be in a healthy condition. There is a noble band of Saints here, and the president of the branch, (Bro. Parr), is a zealous, wise and good man; and well worthy of their confidence. There is also a fine corps of local officers, among whom is Bro. Geo. H. Harlow, vice president of the district, a worthy man of God. J. R. Cook is also here, a man of good ability, and a very successful missionary in past years, and who has recently been instrumental in bringing into the Church a Campbellite minister, a humble, devout Christian, and a man of no ordinary ability; and is willing and ready, God directing, to devote his time and talents in the ministry, without expense to the Church.

I shall leave here to-morrow, for Stockton, where I intend laboring for a week or ten days, and then on to Oakland, to meet Bro. W. W. Blair. Then if God will and I am sustained by the General Conference, I intend to make a diligent and persistent effort for the work's sake, in Sonoma, Lake, and Mendocino counties. Please do not forget me in your prayers.

Yours in the covenant,

J. B. PRICE.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

April 11th.—James Egan was arrested at Birmingham, England, on the charge of being a dynamite conspirator and having explosives in his house. Another dynamiter named Daly was arrested at Birkenhead. Three explosive bombs were found in his possession.

The latest advices from Shanghai report a Serious political crisis at Peking. The Empress has publicly degraded Prince Kung and four members of the Privy Council. They were stripped of all their honors because of the dilatory manner in which they have dealt with Tonquin affairs.

Serious accounts from the interior of Cuba as to the movements of large parties of bandits and Government troops continue to come in. Yesterday a battalion of regular troops was sent from Havana to Vuelta Arriba, and for a few days the coast in the neighborhood of Havana has been occupied by detachments of troops. The Government is apparently waking up to the situation. Private accounts from St. Domingo say that Cuban refugees there are in possession of large amounts of money and are preparing for a landing in Cuba in combination with parties at Havana. This is probably the cause of the extraordinary movements of troops. The Government, in spite of all these facts, pretends to ridicule all reports of a threatened invasion. The Minister of Colonies has made a new loan of $3,000,000 with the Hispano-Colonial Bank of Barcelona for account of the Cuban Treasury, pledging in return the daily payment of $15,000 from the income of the Cuban custom-houses.

The Cuban Treasury will pay 1 per cent commission on the loan and interest at 9½ per cent per annum. This measure has caused the greatest indignation, and added to the state of profound alarm and general discontent prevailing, as the loan and contract made with the same bank in 1880 was considered one of the calamities which brought about the present state of affairs. By virtue of the former loan, through which the Banco Hispano-Colonial is realizing an immense profit, the burden of which Cuba alone has to bear, the bank is already receiving $33,000 daily from the income of the Cuban custom-houses. A perfect panic is reigning in the markets. Merchants, in order to sell their drafts, have to submit to large loss on current rates of exchange, which are continually declining. Some of the larger houses cannot sell their bills of exchange at any rate.

The trouble between Mexican merchants and the President of the Republic, seems to be over, the Government having agreed to a modification of the act so that only goods actually sold shall be stamped.

Maj. Thomas E. Moore, a leading member of the Salvation Army of America, was arrested in New York on the charge of grand larceny. It appears that he is charged with using the funds of the New Brunswick, N. J., branch of the organization, with which he is connected, for such purposes as he personally thought proper.

Gov. McLane, of Maryland, has appointed Benjamin F. Ulman, a well known Hebrew citizen of Baltimore, an aid on his staff, with the rank of Colonel.

April 12.—Mr. Parnell's proposition that Irish constituencies should subscribe for the payment of salaries to their representatives in Parliament has been received with much favor and will be generally acted on by the people of Ireland.

The London Times and other English newspapers are much angered against America for tolerating alleged dynamite conspirators. They assert that the persons recently arrested at Birmingham and Liverpool, and in whose possession explosives were found, are American citizens of Irish birth.

It is settled that there will be no attempt to relieve Khartoum during the summer months. The climate of the country is too fatal to the British soldiers. An attempt will be made, however, in the autumn, unless the Soudan difficulty is settled before then, to relieve or rescue Gordon. Such an effort will be quite hazardous and expensive even then.

April 13.—The Chinese have abandoned Hong-hoa to the French after setting fire to the town. The victors occupied the town Thursday last.

A Cairo dispatch says that the British communications with Berber by land and water have been cut. The Arabs have raided environs of the town.

The London Observer, the organ of the clubs, says that if American law cannot reach the dynamiters it ought to be altered so that it may. It urges the British Government to make a demand in this direction, and says that Americans should be held to the doctrine urged by them at the time of the Alabama claims—that it is "the duty of every Government to have such municipal law as will prevent injury to citizens of friendly States."

The Paris Liberte publishes the conditions of peace between France and China, which Patenotre, the French Minister, is charged to offer at Peking. It is stipulated that China shall accept a limited French protectorate over Tonquin. No demand for indemnity is mentioned.

Granville has received petitions from the Chamber of Commerce at Hong Kong and Shanghai against the threatened French seizure of Chusan for indemnity. Granville advised the French Minister at London of England's intention to adhere to the Anglo-Chinese treaty of 1846 securing Chusan against occupation.

A dispatch to London from Paris says the belief in the existence of a group of foreign Anarchists, including Germans, connected with the dynamiters in England and Ireland is confirmed.

The Porte having decided to put a new tariff into execution June 6 the Governments of England, France, Germany, Russia, Belgium, and the United States have informed the Porte that they will not consent to the abolition of their commercial rights under the capitulation.

An official dispatch from Cuba reports that a band of forty-two insurgents under Duran, who intended joining Agüero, were attacked by troops and thirty-eight men killed.

The skull and other portions of the skeleton of a mastodon have been discovered near Buchanan, Mich. The skull measures eight feet in length by three and a half in width. Two teeth found weighed five pounds each.

According to the Paris Gaulois, the Pope is preparing an encyclical letter against the Freemasons and other secret societies.

Eight persons confined in the jail at Gainesville, Green County, Ark., escaped Saturday night, having overpowered the jailer. A posse of citizens started in pursuit. One of the prisoners, a burglar, was killed, and three were secured after they had been severely wounded. The jailer was dangerously wounded by his assailants.

Fifteen prisoners in the Milwaukee County Jail attempted to escape this morning while divine services were being conducted. They assaulted Jailer Walsh and tried to overpower him. He managed to get away from them, and his wife, hearing the scuffle, called the police. The prisoners concerned in the attempt are mostly highwaymen and burglars. Walsh received serious injuries.

Fifteen others escaped yesterday from the Des Moines, Iowa, jail.

April 14.—Advices from Berber make no mention of the fall of Khartoum. The Bishareen Arabs are plundering in the vicinity of Berber. The Governor asks that a small detachment of English troops be sent to the assistance of the town. It is stated that England has submitted proposals to the Powers for settling the financial troubles of Egypt. The proposed scheme contemplates the disbanding of Sir Evelyn Wood's Egyptian army.

Col. Majendie, of London, Eng., in his report on the recent dynamite attempts, says the agent used was lignin dynamite, a substance made in America, the manufacture of which is not licensed in England. Slabs of the material were discovered in paper wrappings which were marked "Atlas Powder Company," an American corporation. The clocks in the infernal machines are American, and also the pistols. Lignin dynamite was a component of the infernal machine imported into Malta from Bavaria in 1881, was the agent of the explosions at Possil Park, Glasgow, and the office of the London Times in 1883, and it was a component of the machine found in Liverpool in April, 1883, and of the cartridges found in the Primrose Hill tunnel in January last.

An attempt was made yesterday to assassinate the President of Guatemala. He was slightly wounded.

At Naples yesterday a drunken soldier fired at a number of his comrades rooming in the same dormitory, killing five and wounding three.

A free fight between rival factions of Hungarian miners occurred at a place called Ross Hill, near Wilkesbarre, Pa., during the celebration of Easter festivities. The affair grew out of an attempt at robbery by one Hungarian of another. Stones, knives, and clubs were freely used. Several men were injured, some it is thought, fatally.

Gov. Hoadly has appointed a commission of four to rebuild the Cincinnati court-house. It consists of two Republicans and two Democrats.

The Manitobians are still defiant, and threaten their representative with political death, if he does not make vigorous efforts to secure their rights from the Provincial Government.

April 15th.—Mr. Parnell was presented with the freedom of the City Drogheda. He said that in the prosperity of the town he saw some of the results of the Land-League agitation, expressed himself satisfied with the progress of the nationalistic idea in Ireland, and hoped that the extension of the franchise to that country would eventuate in the return of a sufficiently large number of patriotic members of Parliament to vindicate Ireland's right to self-government.

Several English detectives have arrived in Paris for the purpose of tracing the dynamiters. In spite of Col. Majendie's report it is declared that the dynamite used at Victoria Station was made at a factory between Amiens and Boulogne. A rumor is afloat that an attempt will shortly be made to blow up one of the public buildings in London. The activity of the dynamiters continues unabated. They meet twice every week for the purpose of making plans and preparations for future outrages. It is believed that the English and French police are fully acquainted with their movements, and that every effort will be made to counteract their plots. It is also believed that one of the most trusted dynamite leaders keeps the police fully informed of all their plans. The dynamiters are receiving valuable aid from the French Socialists.

The following dispatch has been received from the French Gen. Millott; "Hung Hoa is ours. The First brigade turned the enemy's position, while the second cannonaded from the front. Our artillery terrified the enemy. A fall of water prevented most of the flotilla giving assistance. Both soldiers and sailors behaved gallantly." The latest advices from Shanghai indicate that the Chinese Government is greatly exercised at the recent French successes in Tonquin. Persons in any way responsible for the reverses are being degraded and punished. Active measures are being taken to prevent further loss of prestige. The Viceroy of Canton has been publicly degraded for failing to obey orders. The officers answerable for the loss of Bacninh have been condemned to be beheaded. The Governor of Yuuman has been summoned to Peking to receive punishment. A general levy of men for the Chinese army has been ordered. Affairs at Peking are represented to be in an extremely critical condition, and administrative changes of great importance are imminent. The Viceroy of Canton has confessed his fault and begged to be punished. The Empress, as an act of grace, has postponed judgment and instructs Prince Li Pu to inquire into the Viceroy's conduct. Meanwhile the Viceroy will retain his office. Prince Chun, the Emperor's father, will regulate important matters in the Grand Council of the Empire until the Emperor assumes the Government.

The French Government is undecided in regard to the amount of indemnity to claim from China. Reports from Shanghai say that in the new Administration the peace party form a strong element, and no decisive steps toward war will be taken until it is known what terms Patenotre the French representative is empowered to offer. It is expected Patenotre will reach Peking about the end of June.

Advices from Havana, Cuba, of the 10th inst. say: The landing of Agüero has caused a feverish state of excitement all over the island. On account of the censorship of dispatches the knowledge of the departure of Agüero from Key West and the landing of the insurgents was withheld from the public for some time. The Government was misled and sadly duped by those sympathizing with Agüero, and sent the bulk of the troops in the wrong direction, and is now hiding from the public the disastrous encounters between Aguero and the few troops he met, and the rapid increase of the number of insurgents. It is said the partisans of those Cubans favoring annexation to the United States are endeavoring to organize a league to work in favor of that idea as a great many Spaniards are becoming converted to it, especially the Catalans, who in intelligence are superior to most of the Spaniards who come here.

Riots between Orangemen and Roman Catholics have occurred at Carbonnear, Newfoundland, growing out of the attack on some Protestants returning from church Sunday night by the Roman Catholics. Several persons on both sides have been seriously injured. One man has been killed. Several arrests have been made. A British gunboat has arrived at the scene of the disturbances.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Irish National League of America, at which thirteen members, barely a quorum, and Mr. Patrick Egan, ex-Treasurer of the Irish Land League, attended, was held in the Palmer House Chicago. It was decided to call the next convention of the League to meet at Boston, Mass., the second Wednesday in August, or such other date as Mr. Parnell, who is expected to attend, should name. A resolution indorsing Mr. Parnell's advice to the Irish farmers to refuse to pay the police tax imposed under the Crimes act was passed.

The Canadian Roman Catholic Bishops have joined in a petition to the British Government to use its influence to protect the property of the Propaganda in Italy.

Yellow-fever is raging in Vera Cruz, Mexico. There were thirteen deaths in one day last week.

April 16.—Patrick Joyce, Secretary of the Fenian Brotherhood, has issued a manifesto addressed to all Irishmen. He says: "The brotherhood has good cause for rejoicing at the discomfiture of John Bull. England has never before felt the vengeance of the expatriated Irish with such crushing force. The honor of inaugurating scientific warfare is due to the brotherhood. We have convincing proof of the efficacy of science when handled by brave and intelligent men. We summon all to help us. We advise our brothers to persevere in the glorious war and we will live to witness a free and regenerated Ireland. We are resolved to push the work with redoubled energy, and we recommend Prof. Mezeroff to all Irishmen as the exponent of the resources of civilization."

At Prague the Socialist Pokorny has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment for belonging to a secret society.

In an encyclical letter of the Pope, which will be published next week, Leo XIII. lays special stress upon Freemasonry and the means to be employed to defend "the City of God" against "the city of Satan." The following is a resume of the letter: The plan of the secret societies is no longer a mystery. It is a struggle against the church, and the various Popes have very properly excommunicated Freemasons. Since one hundred and fifty years the secret societies have increased frightfully. A grave peril thus threatens society. The Socialist has his source of strength in Masonry. The Papacy is placed in an intolerable situation. Masonry does not avow its real object; it deceives the innocent by a varnish of toleration. The press, marriage, education, the sovereignty of the people, the atheism of the State, radicalism, communism, all tend toward a return of Paganism. Masonry flatters princes in the hope of having them for auxiliaries. Governments should choose between Masonry and the church, which sustains authority and inculcates obedience. The Pope thus prescribes to Bishops their duties: First, by pastoral letters unmask secret societies and make people abhor them; second, extend Christian education; third, urge agriculturists and workmen to organize Catholic associations and conferences of St. Vincent de Paul; fourth, watch schools and exhort the youth never to become members of any society without first consulting their priests. The Pope ends his encyclical by imploring the aid of the blessed Virgin.

The Governor-General at Havana telegraphs the Government to-day: "Aguero's band is the only one on the island and numbers eighteen men. Fraccione has escaped. Cienaga is demoralized. The tranquility is perfect. The revenue of Cuba for the month of March was $3,100,000, being the largest since July."

Dispatches of April 8th from Gen. Gordon state that Saleh Pasha, who is coming down the Blue Nile with 500 horsemen and fifty-seven boat-loads of grain, is safe. Internal dissensions at Kardofan have caused the abandonment of the expedition which the Mahdi was preparing against Khartoum. The condition of affairs at Kassola and Sennaar is such that no apprehension is felt for their safety.

Queen Pomare, of the Tahiti Islands, arrived at New York yesterday from Havre. She will proceed immediately to San Francisco, from whence she will sail May 1st for her dominions.

Father Curci's book, in which he sets forth the evils accruing to the church from the non possumus policy of the Vatican, is to be soon translated into English. It advocates the complete abandonment of the temporal-power theory by the Papal Court. Father Curci is under censure for it, but has not been excommunicated as generally believed.

April 17th.—A dispatch to the Times from Khartoum dated April 7th says: The people are heart-sick hoping for English relief. The town is now in the center of an enormous rebel camp. Our Krupp munitions are rather short. The situation is critical. The rebels frustrated an attempt to send a steamer to Berber. Gen. Gordon will probably be driven to retreat by Central Africa. A retreat to Berber is impossible.

The activity of the Irish Anarchists in France continues unabated. Fenian agents in Paris during the last week received $3,000 from America. Small packages of dynamite have been recently forwarded from France to England. Among the members of the Clan-na-Gael are a number of Russian Nihilists and four French Communists.

The City of Junin, South America, was attacked by 1,000 of Cacere's Montoneros. The Prefect of the city with 200 men opposed them and they retired. After their departure the Prefect seized two citizens—Vera and Jurado—whom he accused of intrigues with the rebels and both were shot. Jurado he killed with his own hand. This action of the Prefect causes great excitement in the interior, as both victims were well known and believed to have been innocent of political designs.

The war-ships Alliance and Tennessee, two revenue cutters, and steam-launches form a cordon around the island at Key West, to prevent the departure of any Cuban expedition.

A death from cholera occurred on board the British troop-ship, Crocodile, in the Suez Canal yesterday.

Advices from Jackson, Ky., say that William Strong and a posse of his "gang," some seventy-five in number, are in possession of that town, and says he will hang seventy-five of the best citizens in retaliation for the hanging of Ben Strong and Henry Kilbourne, one of whom was a member of Strong's backers. It is also reported that he refuses to let Judge Riddle hold court there.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

In the United States, during the week ending April 11, there were 175 business failures, and in Canada thirty-nine. In both countries the previous week the failures numbered 212.

About $1,000,000 in gold was shipped from New York to Europe April 12.

Seven hundred and ninety-five reports from 609 townships of Michigan indicate that the winter-wheat crop and the clover crop will be about 97 per cent, apples about 90 per cent, peaches but 50 per cent of an average.

There has been a strike by the miners in the coal districts of France. Violent speeches have been made by the leading strikers and trouble is apprehended.

Advices from the Idaho gold-regions, state that the snow is disappearing along the creeks, but in the side gulches it is deep enough to prevent thorough prospecting. The greatest activity is in the vicinity of Murraysville, where it is claimed that one man washes out $25 worth of gold per day. On another claim there is a yield of $18.55 per man per day. On the celebrated "Widow" claim ten men are washing out a tin-cup full of gold each day. It will be a month yet before active mining will have fairly commenced.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade for the last week, says: The condition of the wheat crops is not changed. Trade in breadstuffs is depressed. Wheat and flour have declined one shilling. Foreign wheat off stands has further declined one shilling on finest and one shilling to two shillings on American grades. Maize has fallen one shilling and barley sixpence. Oats have risen one shilling. Four cargoes of wheat have arrived; withdrawn, four. Cargoes on passage or for shipment are much neglected.

There is a paralysis of the shipping industry of Great Britain. At Shields, in the North of England, 4,000 seamen are out of work, 100 steamers are lying idle on the Tyne side, and 10,000 ship laborers in that region cannot find anything to do. A similar state of things prevails on the Clyde and in other shipbuilding localities.

There are serious strikes in various parts of Germany. In Saxony most of the stone cutters, masons, and glassworkers have struck. There is general dissatisfaction among the carpenters also. The spread of the strike movement seriously alarms the capitalist classes throughout the Empire.

Henry's bank at Mineral Point, Wis., in which the public funds there were deposited, closed its doors April 12. The assets are placed at $100,000 and the liabilities are unknown.

During the month of March $10,458,466 worth of breadstuffs was exported from the United States. The exports for March, 1883, were valued at $17,841,882. During the nine months ending March 31 there has been a falling off as compared with the corresponding nine months of the previous fiscal years amounting to over $48,000,000.

The most important events of a business sort last week involved the insolvency or embarrassment of a number of banks. The suspension of the First National Bank of Monmouth, Ill., and the First National Bank of St. Albans, Vt., and the run on the National Union Bank of Swanton, Vt., were the cases of chief interest.

Representatives of the French miners assembled at St. Etienne yesterday rejected a resolution favoring a strike. It was resolved to ask the Government to alter the laws so as to protect workmen against the exactions and tyrannies of monopolists.

The new Russian gold loan of $1,500,000 will be devoted to railway construction.

The effect of the high prices of grain upon the shipping interests has been most disastrous. The so-called tramp steamers are for the most part laid up in England, and the regular lines between New York and Liverpool are unable to make two ends meet. The Cunard Line last week passed their usual dividend, and the steamers which left New York during the week are all losing a great deal of money. Grain at fivepence freight just pays expenses, and any lower rate is a dead loss to the companies. Yet three of the best and fastest steamers left New York last week, one carrying grain at one penny half-penny, another at three pence three farthings, while the third went in ballast, unable to obtain anything worth carrying.

Exports of cotton goods continue to show a decided increase over all previous periods. During the last week 6,023 packages were sent. The excess of the exports for the first three months of this year over the exports for the corresponding period of last year is 57,000 packages.

April 12 Chicago elevators contained 10,801,558 bushels of wheat, 6,789,592 bushels of corn, 1,072,260 bushels of oats, 1,239,413 bushels of rye, and 189,228 bushels of barley, making a grand total of 20,092,051 bushels, against 20,976,223 bushels a week ago, and 16,241,699 bushels at this period last year. Vessels in the harbor are laden with 1,360,262 bushels of grain. Total stock of grain in store and afloat in Chicago, 21,452,313 bushels, against 22,336,485 bushels a week ago. The visible supply of grain in the United States and Canadas at the same date was 29,215,694 bushels of wheat, 16,449,786 bushels of corn, 3,987,249 bushels of oats, 1,742,353 bushels of rye, and 1,072,265 bushels of barley.

The Mexico & Tuxpan Railway, regarded as one of the most valuable concessions in Mexico, a narrow-gauge line partly built from the Mexican end, has just been sold to English parties, who will make an important port of Tuxpan. After the bar is cut at Tuxpan they will connect with the Telfer Railway from Matamoros along the coast, making the shortest line from New York.

The appropriations for pensions during this fiscal year amounted to $126,000,000. It is believed that not one-half of this sum will be needed to pay the claims. During the first half of the year only $25,673,000 were paid.

What promises to be a valuable tin mine has been discovered about three miles from Glenwood, W. Va. Assays shows 8 to 10 per cent. tin, and $90 silver per ton. A company has been formed to develop the mine.

A special from Silver City, a new mining town in the Rocky Mountains on the Canadian Pacific, says there is great excitement there over the finding of placer diggings two miles from town on Johnson's Creek. Old miners pronounce the find equal to any yet discovered in America. Hundreds are leaving town to stake claims.

The strike of factory operatives at Tetschen, in Bohemia, has ended.

The economic crisis in Cuba is the subject of serious consideration by the Spanish Government.

The situation of the strike on the Toledo, Cincinnati and St. Louis Road hourly grows more complicated. Over 200 men have struck at Toledo, Ohio, and April 17th the firemen left the engines and refused to return until they are paid.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

April 11.—Two men were killed at Pittsburg yesterday by the caving in of a bank over a sand-pit.

A blast in the Calumet & Hecla mine of the Lake Superior (Mich.) region yesterday killed Thomas Trembreth and seriously injured Nicholas Johns.

Mrs. Hannah Dooley and her servant-girl were asphyxiated at Oconomowoc yesterday by the gas which escaped from a leaky stove. Mrs. Dooley may recover; the servant will probably die.

Heavy rains have fallen in California recently. The rivers are swollen and there have been many washouts. It will take four or five days to repair the damages done to the railroads by the floods. At Frisco, Cal., yesterday a cyclone demolished several buildings.

A terrible railroad disaster on the Pan-Handle is reported at Beaver Station, O. The engineer, fireman, baggageman, and others are reported killed and others wounded.

April 13.—A boiler explosion in a flouring-mill at Ford, Iowa, near Des Moines, killed two men.

April 14.—Loss by fire at Salem, N. J., $75,000. Vincennes, Ind., $40,000. Marshall, Mo., $15,000.

Details from Dooley, Taylor, Webster, Sumter, Jefferson, Glasscock, and other sandy counties of Georgia, of recent forest fires, present a harrowing picture of destruction. The path of the fire took in the town of Gibson, and it was only by heroic work that 200 men fought the fire back. The loss is perhaps $20,000. Since the fire has passed over the fact has been discovered that the huge sand-drifts blown about by the winds have covered the ground which had been prepared for planting, rendering a renewal of work necessary.

New Orleans and Shreveport La., and Vicksburg, Miss., were visited by heavy wind and rain storms, doing considerable damage.

The steamer Reliance, of the United States & Brazil Steamship Company, went ashore off Bahia, Brazil, and is a total wreck. The passengers, crew, and mail were saved. The cargo consisted principally of 7,000 bags of coffee and 1,000 hides. The ship was fully covered by insurance.

An explosion of fire-damp in a mine at Elizabeth, Pa., about eighteen miles from Pittsburg, killed two men and severely injured several others.

April 15.—Loss by fire at Newark, N. J., buildings of celluloid brush company, $200,000. Pittsburg Pa., box factory and planing mill, $100,000. Louisville, Ky., paper mill, $26,000.

A cyclone swept over the town of Blackhawk, fifteen miles from Vaiden, Miss., Monday, demolishing several stores and residences and seriously injuring many of the inhabitants. A violent wind and rainstorm visited the country in the vicinity of Columbus, Ga., to-day. The rainfall in three hours was three and one-tenth inches.

April 16th.—At Carlisle, Ky., almost an entire block of buildings was destroyed by fire. Loss $38,300. Loss by fire at Peoria, Ill., plow works $50,000. Kenosha, Wis., Apollo Hall, $5,000. Litchfield, Ill., flouring mill, $10,000. Ludlow, Ky., $6,000. Anamosa, Ia., livery stable and eleven horses, $7,000. Wadsworth, Nev., $85,000.

April 17th.—Advices from from the Far East state that a great fire is raging at Rangoon, the Capital of British Burmah, and that Mandalay, the Capital of Burmah proper, recently half destroyed by a conflagration, has been afflicted with another extensive fire.

All the business places in the Village of Monroe, La., except three were destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $38,000.

At five o'clock this morning the inhabitants of Leon, Iowa, were aroused from sleep by the cry of fire. At 8:30 a. m., the fire was under control, but not until Union Block was mostly in ruins. Francis Varga, losses $3,000; S. P. Nott, $8,000; Stephen Varga, $600; Johnas Hoffhines, $2,000. These, with other minor losses, make a total of about $18,000. This is the most serious fire Leon has experienced for four years.

ELECTRICITY AND STORMS.

AN article printed in the Tribune of May 21st on the storms of the preceding Friday has excited some interest. The conclusion there announced that electricity is an effect of the storm movement in the atmosphere, and not its cause, has induced several correspondents to express a desire for more light on the subject. The idea is not exactly new, but it is strange to a great many, and is especially opposed to certain views that have been industriously circulated during the last few years in connection with weather theories which not only lack demonstration but will not bear the test of intelligent comparison with the observed facts of storm movement in our atmosphere.

Modern scientific research tends irresistibly to the conclusion that light, heat, and electricity are forces, not substances. The most delicate balance fails to detect the slightest change of weight due to variations in luminosity, temperature, or electric excitement. These phenomena are always accompanied by intermovement of the atoms which compose the mass of matter exhibiting those variations, and often there is a transfer of material in the grosser sense of the term "motion." In the latter case one substance may gain or lose in weight; but that is simply because a part of its material has moved, perhaps assuming other forms, and presenting apparently different physical characteristics. Examples of this are found in the familiar phenomena of combustion, as well as in the less commonly understood processes of the laboratory. It is one of the surest of the deductions of modern science that the above noted forces are results of the movements of material atoms or masses, or both.

Conclusive proof of the existence of this law is presented at a glance by all, save one, of the modes by which we can induce manifestations of electrical energy. In the battery, of which the Voltaic pile is the type, we have a change of form and place, in the carrying over, from the negative to the positive pole, of a quantity of material (zinc) which is always proportional to the intensity of the electric current. It may be argued that the chemical change in this case is just as likely to be caused by electricity as the contrary: but certainly not more so. On the other hand, consider the oldest form of machine, in which electricity was accumulated by friction against a glass cylinder; the electro-dynamic machine, in which work is converted into electricity by simply causing relative motion between the inductor and the armature; and the thermo-electric battery, in which a current of electric force is generated by maintaining widely different temperatures at the opposite extremities of a pair of connected elements. In all these cases there is a direct, unequivocal, and overwhelming proof that the manifestation of electric energy results solely from the apposition of material substances under conditions favorable to the evolution of the force. The candid mind can scarcely avoid the inference that the first case exhibits the same law operating under different conditions, certain phenomena being unmasked in the one instance, but concealed in the others.

And these modes of inducing energy are all suggestive of the way in which Nature works on a grander scale than can be reached by the puny efforts of man. The different strata of earth and air have a suggestive analogue in the Voltaic pile. The rapid motion of air and water over stationary objects gives us in a single storm movement a volume of power compared with which the aggregated result of friction against all the glass cylinders in the world would be but microscopic. The whirling motion near the center of a storm presents a mammoth armature, circling in an electromagnetic field so vast that it may waken up more energy in an hour than the most potential of the artificial dynamo-electric machines can evolve in a lifetime. Then, in the differences of temperature in opposing atmospheric currents, we have the conditions of the thermo-electric battery on a scale far more imposing than can be achieved by artificial means, lastly, the distribution of water in the atmosphere appears to furnish the only adequate explanation of accumulation in the skies, similar to that performed by the long line of apparatus which has the Leyden jar at one end and the Faure storage plates at the other. As hinted in our previous article, the electric energy seems to reside on the surface of the unit of water volume. Distributed over the surface of the vapor specks which are suspended numerously in a hot atmosphere, and more sparingly in cold air, it is normal in condition. That vapor is condensed on the mingling of air masses caused by storm movements. The resulting union of vapor specks to form raindrops enormously reduces the combined surface presented by a given quantity of water material. Each forming raindrop is charged with all the energy that had been carried in comminuted form by thousands of vapor particles. One or more lightning flashes restore the equilibrium by effecting a redistribution of the mighty force in precisely the same way that our mimic machines throw off sparks under approprate conditions, and only when those conditions are supplied; or the accumulation may pass off silently from the surcharged clouds if the distribution of energy vary gradually instead of abruptly in the aerial vault.

The parallel is complete—at least so far as a straight line one inch long can be regarded as parallel with the curved line that spans a continent. We cannot doubt that the minor arrangements invented by human skill for obtaining exhibitions of electrical energy from a multum in parvo of the grand operations carried on in the laboratory of earth and skies, as an image of the vast sun can be condensed on a little piece of glass by the skill of the photographer.

Of course this energy, when once collected, is itself capable of doing work; because it is force. It can disintegrate clouds, rive asunder the trees of the park and forest, or strip them of their bark by instantaneously expanding the vegetable juices that circulate within the structure. It can kill the animal unfortunate enough to be in the path of the force current as the store of surcharged energy is flashed out in the efforts to restore an equilibrium. But an attentive consideration of the phenomena will show that, as a causative agent, it is secondary, not primal. It has its origin, as an entity, with the Great First Cause; but as a force recognized by us, in consequence of unequal accumulation and redistribution, it can only be regarded in the light of a product of purely mechanical causes—one of the phenomena of motion.

THE TRAVELER AT SUNSET.

The shadows grow and deepen round me;
I feel the dew fall in the air;
The muezzin of the darkening thicket,
I hear the night-thrush call to prayer.

The evening wind is sad with farewells,
And loving hands unclasp from mine;
Alone I go to meet the darkness
Across an awful boundary-line.

As from the lighted hearths behind me
I pass with slow, reluctant feet,
What waits me in the land of strangeness?
What face shall smile, what voice shall greet?

What space shall awe, what brightness blind me?
What thunder roll of music stun?
What vast processions sweep before me
Of shapes unknown beneath the sun?

I shrink from unaccustomed glory,
I dread the myriad-voiced strain;
Give me the unforgotten faces,
And let my lost ones speak again.

He will not chide my mortal yearning
Who is our Brother and our Friend,
In whose full life divine and human
The heavenly and the earthly blend.

Mine be the joy of soul-communion,
The sense of spiritual strength renewed,
The reverence for the pure and holy,
The dear delight of doing good.

No fitting ear is mine to listen
An endless anthem's rise and fall,
No curious eye is mine to measure
The pearl gate and the jasper wall.

For love must needs be more than knowledge:
What matter if I never know
Why Aldebaran's star is ruddy
Or colder Sirius white as snow.

Forgive my human words, O Father;
I go Thy larger truth to prove,
Thy mercy shall transcend my longing,
I seek but love, and Thou art Love!

I go to find my lost and mourned for Safe in Thy sheltering goodness still.
And all that hope and faith foreshadow Made perfect in Thy holy will!

"HE SENT HIS PRAYERS."

Spurgeon tells the following story: "A poor man, who had a large family, gave them a very comfortable support while he was in health. He broke his leg, and was laid up for some weeks. As he would be for some time destitute of the means of grace, it was proposed to hold a prayer meeting at his house. The meeting was led by Deacon Brown. A loud knock at the door interrupted the service. A tall, lank, blue-frocked youngster stood at the door, with an ox-goad in his hand, and asked to see Deacon Brown. 'Father could not attend this meeting,' he said, 'but he sent his prayers, and they are out in the cart.' They were brought in, in the shape of potatoes, beef, pork, and corn. The meeting broke up without the benediction.

THE GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST.

BY ELDER H. P. BROWN.

"FOR I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith."—Rom. 1: 16, 17.

Much has been written and preached in different ages respecting the gospel of Christ. What I purpose to write on the subject, I trust will be in strict harmony with the teachings of Christ and his apostles, as left of record in the Scriptures of divine truth. It is a subject to which I have given the closest attention for more than forty-one years, and one of great interest to me.

Gospel, in its limited signification, is simply good news, or tidings, without regard to the subject matter. But the gospel of Jesus Christ means something more. It has a more extended signification. So important is it that we have a perfect knowledge of its elements, that we run the risk of coming under the anathema of the apostle Paul, if we should through a lack of knowledge, or design, fail to preach the fulness of the gospel, or should pervert it. Paul says: "But though we or on angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." He also said, that there were in his day, "some that troubled you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ."—Gal. 1: 7-9.

Thus we see, that it is not only possible to "preach another gospel," but also to "pervert the gospel of Christ." And if we do either, then the curse of God follows. Therefore, not to come under said anathema, we will examine the record, and see if there has been enough written to give us to understand what the gospel was anciently; for if we can arrive at a correct conclusion as to what it was then, we may know what it is now; because it is like its author, "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. Paul, to whom a dispensation of the gospel of Christ was committed, and who came not a whit behind the chiefest of the apostles, gives us a definition, the most perfect in the English, or indeed in any other language. He says:

"For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."—1 Thes. 1: 5.

From this statement of fact, we learn that the gospel of Christ consists of four elements, namely: the word, the power, the Holy Ghost, and much assurance.

Take awake either one of these elements, and we have less than the gospel, or a "perverted gospel;" for a part is less than the whole. If a person should present himself to you, and say to you that he was qualified to teach English Grammar to your children by teaching them orthography, or "the nature and power of letters, and the just manner of spelling words," and seek to be employed as a teacher, you would be very apt to say, "My dear teacher, English Grammar is divided into four elements, to wit: orthography, etymology, syntax, and prosody, without a knowledge of all of which, you are incompetent to instruct my children in this important branch of education. Bat how are you in arithmetic? "O, I can teach your children all that is necessary to know, in fact make them good arithmeticians, by teaching them simply to add numbers." What about subtraction, multiplication, and division? "O, those to be sure used to be taught in the old schools; but they are no longer necessary in these enlightened days. We find they are no longer needed, and our modern teachers have entirely done away with those branches. They were taught anciently among the Arabians, Romans, and Greeks; but by means of our educational advantages, and the enlightenment of this age, we find those other elements of arithmetic entirely superfluous, and they are consequently done away.

What would you think of the qualifications of such an applicant for the honorable calling of instructor to your children in the common branches of education? But would such a pretender be a greater imposter, than the man who comes to you, and says the Bible contains the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ? Did God or Christ ever send the Bible to preach the gospel of Christ? If so, when and where is the commission given? Did he not send men? I answer he did, "For the gospel came not in word only, [the only part that was or can be written], but also in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." The word "and" was anciently written "add;" consequently the foregoing text read: "The gospel came not in word only, but also in power, add the Holy Ghost, add in much assurance." These elements are all added together, and in the concrete, they constitute the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ. And as I said before; take one element from this addition, and you have less than a fulness; to wit, a perverted and an imperfect gospel; which, if any man, or angels from heaven preach the anathema of the Apostle Paul will rest upon him or them, and he or they will grope in darkness at noon day, "ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth."

But we are told that the canon of scripture is full, and we need no more revelations. Who canonized the scriptures? The Catholics. The Protestants never. Besides, the Catholics who were the repositories of the divine oracles, for fifteen hundred years before a Protestant Church existed, have several books which the Protestants have rejected, and have not in their pretended canon. Which is the canon? But the Bible does not contain all that God has revealed unto the human family, taking the Bible for the proof. For itself shows that there were between twenty and thirty books, gospels and epistles as much inspired as any which we have, which have been lost and are not in the Bible, either Catholic or Protestant; and therefore, if such a thing could exist, as the full canon of the scriptures, such is not the fact and whoever asserts such thing, asserts that which the Bible, both Catholic and Protestant, flatly contradicts.

The gospel of Jesus Christ was designed in the beginning to be preached by divine revelation, and can not be in its fulness and entirety without it. The very "rock" on which the foundation of the Church of Christ is laid, is direct revelation; or the word of God as given by the Holy Ghost through the servants of God. "For holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." The word of God, therefore, constitutes the first element in the gospel of Christ. The second element of the gospel of Christ, is the "power." This element is contradistinguished from the Holy Ghost, because "our gospel came not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost." "Power" is synonymous with authority, and is contained in the commission of Christ to his apostles, as recorded in the four evangelists. Matthew records that Christ, after he arose from the dead said unto the apostles:

"All power [authority] is given unto me in heaven and in earth; go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name [authority] of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Here is the second element in the gospel. It is the power, or authority, to teach, or preach, and baptize, legally. But this element is not complete merely with the bare words of the commission. There is of necessity an inspiration to be enjoyed by those who legally preach the word; or there must be an "endowment" accompanying the commission, to make it complete and effectual to accomplish the desired end. This "endowment," or the spirit of the priesthood and commission, is brought to light in the testimony of St. Luke, which was omitted in the testimony of Matthew. Luke has it as follows:

"And he said unto them: Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day. * * * "And that repentance and remission of sins, should be preached in his name, [authority, power], among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. * * * And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high."—Luke 24: 46-49.

Here is brought to light the "endowment" of power, as a necessary prerequisite to the apostles going to teach all nations. They had no authority to teach any nation now, until they fulfilled the commandment to "tarry in the city of Jerusalem until they received "the endowment" of power; which fructified, or quickened the said commission, and qualified them then, and not before then, to teach all nations, and to baptize in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Had they presumed to act before their "endowment," they would have violated the commandment of Christ, the great head of the Church, and instead of being Saints, they would have been disobedient sinners; for "sin is the transgression of the law."—1 Jno. 3: 4. "For he that saith I know him and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."—1 Jno. 2: 4. But that the careful enquirer after truth may know the measure of said power, I will quote the testimony of the beloved disciple John upon the subject:

"Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you; as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whosoever sins ye remit they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained."—John 20: 21-23.

Here then is disclosed the measure of power, the second element in the gospel. It is not only to teach and baptize in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, but that repentance and remission of sins in his name were to be preached, beginning at Jerusalem; and they had the power to remit sins in the name of Jesus Christ on earth, with the assurance that they would be remitted in heaven, because they had the power; and while acting within its scope and jurisdiction, it was the same as if Jesus Christ himself, personally, had done the deed on earth; because they acted legally in the name and by the power and authority of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, the Spirit of their calling energizing their work, and making it acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, in whose name and stead they acted.

But it was necessary for them to know that their works were acceptable to God, and that he recognized and confirmed their administrations on earth. Therefore, Mark informs us a little more about the second element of the gospel of Christ: "For it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." He says: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

Why will those who believe and are baptized by these authorized servants, and legally commissioned officers of Christ's Church, be saved? Because the gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth and obeyeth the same. Because they are baptized by those who are duly authorized and empowered to preach and administer the baptism unto repentance, for the remission of sins. Because they have the power to remit sins in that ordinance upon the conditions of faith and repentance. Because they are "endued with power from on high for this express purpose." Because as the Father sent Jesus Christ with power and authority on earth to remit sins, even so he sent them into all the world, with the same power and authority, to do so in his name, he legalizing and ratifying their acts in heaven, according to his promise unto them. But that there should be no mistake about their acceptance, and the legality of the acts of those whom he sent and commissioned, he said:

"These signs shall follow them that believe. In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents: and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover. And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."—Mark 16: 16-20.

Here we see the word confirmed, acknowledged, ratified in heaven, approved by blessing the believer with the signs of the gospel. The first and second elements of the gospel were present, working together. They knew that their works were ratified and approved by the Great Head of the Church. Where was there room for doubt? It had fled. They stood confirmed, approved, and had the witness. Their sins were washed away in the waters of regeneration, and the renewal of the Holy Ghost. Christ had come in the flesh and had lodged his power and authority among men. They were born of the water and the Spirit. They were new creatures in Christ. The body of sin had been destroyed. The old man was crucified with Christ. They were dead unto sin, and alive unto Christ.

"And being then made free from sin, they became the servants of righteousness. * * Buried with Christ by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. * * * For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."—Rom. 6: 4-6.

Christ said to his disciples:

"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain, that whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he may give it you."—John 15: 16.

Unto what power did he ordain them?

"Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick."—Luke 9: 1-2.

"And said unto them, He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me."—Matt. 10: 40.

HOLY GHOST.

We will now pass to notice the third element in the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Holy Ghost. Christ promised the disciples just before his ascension, that they should be "baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence."—Acts 1: 5. He had previously instructed them fully as to the nature and powers of the Holy Ghost, and shown them that its office-work through them would be two fold, or dual. One division of it being unto the world through their preaching; the other among the disciples and Saints, and not unto the world, for the reasons which he gave, and as will hereafter appear. He said:

"Nevertheless, I tell you the truth. It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove [convince] the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment. Of sin, because they believe not on me; of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more; of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged."—John 16: 7-11.

To understand the foregoing, let me call your attention to the distinction Christ makes between himself, his Saints, and the "world." Christ said in his memorable prayer recorded in the 17th chapter of John.

"I pray for them, [the saints], I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine; all mine are thine, and thine are mine, and I am glorified in them. And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee." * * * I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world."

"If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world; therefore the world hateth you."—John 15: 18, 19.

Here is the distinction between the Saints and the world. The comforter was promised to reprove, or convince the world of sin, &c. Consequently the comforter must operate upon the world, and the world must feel its power, in order to be reproved by it, or convinced of sin, and of righteousness and of judgment. It is the world-reprover, sent for the benefit of the world. This principle is illustrated by what occurred on the day of Pentecost. The Holy Ghost came as promised. The disciples were all filled with it. The evidence was at hand. By its power they spoke with new tongues in no less than seventeen different languages, and Peter preached the gospel to the multitude. The Spirit energized the word spoken. The world, or that portion of it who heard his words, felt its power and operation. "They were pricked in the heart, and cried out, Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Here the Spirit through the word convinced the "world" of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment. It showed them they were sinners. But it was not the gift of the Holy Ghost, or the Spirit of truth, which they then had, and which was enjoyed among the Saints; for in answer to their inquiry, "what shall we do," Peter immediately said:

"Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is to you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2.

Here they were pricked in the heart by the energized word of God, or in other words, the Spirit, through the word spoken by the Holy Ghost, convinced those men of "sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." And being thus convinced, they were promised the "gift of the Holy Ghost," by repenting, and being baptized by those who had the word, the power, the Holy Ghost, "and much assurance." Because those were the terms of salvation in the gospel. This is further illustrated by the words of Paul to the Hebrews:

"For the word of God,—[energized by the Spirit], is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."—Heb. 4: 12.

Therefore it showed them that they were sinners, without hope and without God in the world; and that they must leave the "world" and its sinfulness, and take upon themselves the righteousness of Christ, in order that they might in the judgment to come, receive the applaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord."

"And then they that gladly received his word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls."—Acts 2: 41.

Then according to promise, they were entitled to the "gift of the Holy Ghost," which they could not receive while they "were of the world," before they became children of the kingdom, and members of the church, the body of Christ.

I will now introduce more evidence of the dual operation of the Holy Ghost, as it is manifested to the saints and not unto the world, that all may see the distinction Christ has made in its office work among the children of men. Christ said unto the disciples, the saints, members and officers of his church, those who were "chosen out of the world":

"If ye love me, keep my commandments; and I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you, [his Church], forever, even the Spirit of Truth; whom the world can not receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you,—in the person of Christ, and shall be in you—[which was literally fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, for they were all filled with the Holy Ghost]."—Acts 2.

Here is the promise of another Comforter, "which the world could not receive." This Comforter was to abide with God's people, wherever and whenever Christ had a church on the earth, forever. Its office-work was not with the "world;" for the world neither had it, nor did it know anything about it. It was to abide with and in the Church of Christ, in which Church were apostles and prophets, having the authority that Christ conferred upon them, the powers of which I have before shown, for the objects and purposes of "perfecting the Saints, the work of the ministry, and for the edifying the body of Christ, his church, until we all come, in the unity of the faith, and the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man in Christ Jesus."—Eph. 4; 1 Cor. 12: 28.

Its office-work was different from the Comforter, which was to "reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." Let us then enquire, What was the office work of this other Comforter, the Spirit of Truth? Christ said;

"Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will shew you things to come."—John 16: 13.

Now, therefore, as soon as the Saints of God receive this Spirit, it commences work with them. He guides them into all truth. By this Spirit the church is edified, instructed, comforted; and as long as it abides in the church it can not materially err. If it shows its recipients things to come; if it opens up to them the visions of eternity; if it unfolds to them future events, it makes them prophets, or prophetesses. It has manifested itself in this way, in all ages, when it was enjoyed by the Saints of God. Again Christ said:

"He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you. All things that the Father hath are mine; therefore, said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall show it unto you."—John 16: 14, 15.

If it takes of the things of the Father and Son, and shows them unto the Saints; and if the Saints reveal the things shown them by this Spirit, then it makes them revelators in the proportion to the things revealed. Again Christ said:

"But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you."—John 14: 26.

Here we find that the office-work is not only to teach all things pertaining to life and salvation; but it is also the means of strengthening the memory of the Saints, by bringing all things to their remembrance, whatsoever Christ had said unto them, either by his own voice and teaching; and also what he had spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets and apostles, in all ages. It is no wonder then that a man endued with this Spirit, can quote the Scriptures readily, and fortify the doctrines of the gospel by proof texts drawn from the ancient writings. It is the great teacher of the Saints of God. It not only fills the office occupied by the Great Head of the Church, while tabernacled in the flesh, but it does more. It brings to remembrance what God has caused to be written for our edification and comfort, and qualifies his servants for the important duties of their calling; and enables them to take no thought what they should do or say, when brought before kings and rulers; for at the very moment they are filled with "the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Christ."—Eph. 1: 17. Again Christ said:

"But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of Truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me. And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning."—John 15: 26, 27.

Here again we see the office-work of the Spirit of Truth which the Saints enjoy, but which the "world can not receive." It is to be a witness of and for Jesus Christ. The Saints also were witnesses, thus making two distinct classes of testimony to mankind. He shall testify of me. Why was this? Because the world by wisdom knows not God; therefore "it pleased God, that by the foolishness of preaching, [the gospel], to save them that believed."—1 Cor. 1: 21. As the world with all its wisdom could not attain unto a knowledge of God, He has ordained that man can only attain thereto by direct revelation to himself. Therefore Christ said:

"All things are delivered unto me of my Father; and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."—Matt. 11: 27.

Hence it is ordained that the Holy Spirit of Truth, shall testify and bear witness that Jesus is the Christ; and "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy."—Rev. 19: 10.

From the foregoing we learn that the Holy Ghost in one of its office-works, is "to reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." In the second place; that his office-work among the Saints who are chosen out of the world, is to guide them into all truth. Bring to their remembrance all things whatsoever he has said unto them. To take of the things of the Father, and show them unto them. To testify and bear witness of Jesus, and show them things to come; and thus make them, some prophets, some seers, some revelators, and some prophetesses; and give them a knowledge of God, which is Eternal Life. And as the wisdom of man alone is inadequate without revelation to find out God, it would be impossible for man to attain unto Eternal Life without direct revelation. Christ said: "And this is Life Eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou has sent;" which as we before have shown, can only be attained by direct revelation to each individual. (John 17: 3.)

In view of the foregoing, it is no wonder that John, who understood what a great teacher the Holy Ghost was to the saints, wrote unto them:

"But the anointing which ye have received of him, abideth with you; and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie; and even as it has taught you, ye shall abide in him."—1 John 2: 27.

Hence, "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation, unto every one that believes; for therein is the righteousness of God revealed, from faith to faith." Each obedient son and daughter has the promise of the gift of the Holy Ghost, which gives them a knowledge of God and of Christ. Therefore, the apostle Paul says, "that no man can say [knowingly] that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."—1 Cor. 12: 3. It is no wonder that our apostle says: "Our gospel came not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." And it is no wonder that the learned Paul could truthfully say: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." Who would be ashamed of such a gospel. Who would not, like him, count all things but dross, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, revealed in the gospel. Who would not like to hear such a gospel preached by such authority, blessed with such a Spirit and power, and manifesting the gifts and fruits of the Spirit of the gospel of Christ.

We now pass to notice the fourth element of the gospel of Christ, the

"MUCH ASSURANCE."

Webster defines assurance to mean, primarily, "sure, certain, to make firm, to confirm, to verify." One of the elements of the gospel of Christ is, therefore, to make sure, certain, to make firm, "to verify," "to confirm." Hence Christ said to those whom he sent to preach his gospel in all the world:

"These signs shall follow them that believe [the gospel]: In my name they shall cast out devils, they shall speak with new tongues, they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."—Mark 16: 16-18.

These signs were to follow, not go before the believer in the gospel; they were to make sure, certain, to make firm, to verify, to confirm the believer, who should obey the gospel. Therefore, the record adds:

"And they went forth and preached [the gospel] everywhere, the Lord working with them, and CONFIRMING the word with signs following." Amen.—Mark 16: 20.

What assurance, what confirmation it was to the believer, when Peter and John said to the lame man at the beautiful gate of the temple, "Silver and gold have we none, but such as we have freely give we unto thee; in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk; and instantly he was healed; and he, leaping up, stood and walked, and entered into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God." Acts 3: 1-8.

Here was "confirmation stronger than holy writ." Here was the fourth element of the gospel, "much assurance." Here was something "sure, certain, firm," a true verification of the word of the gospel; a confirmation of the truth of Christ's promise. What an assurance that Jesus lived, that he had risen from the dead, when Stephen, "being full of the Holy Ghost, looked steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God; and said, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God."—Acts 7: 55, 56. What assurance, what confirmation it was to the Samaritan brethren, when Peter and John laid their hands upon them after they believed the gospel, and were baptized by Philip, and "they received the Holy Ghost."—Acts 8: 14-20. What an assurance it was to Philip, after he had baptized the Eunuch, when the Spirit of the Lord caught him away and carried him away through the air, and sat him down without injury at Azotus. (Acts 8: 38-40.) With what certainty, what firmness, the apostle Paul was assured that the Lord lived, when smitten to earth with the brightness of his glory, while on his way to Damascus; and what an assurance to him of the gospel preached by Stephen while he held the clothes of the young men who stoned him to death at the time, he testified that he saw Christ at the right hand of God. (Acts 7: 55-56; 9 ch.) With what assurance he received the testimony of Ananias, who came to him in the house of Judas in Damascus, and informed him that the Lord Jesus, who met Paul, on his way there, had sent him unto him, that he might receive his sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost; and when he laid his hands upon him in the name of Jesus Christ, and the scales fell from his eyes, with what assurance did he obey the mandate, "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 9: 22.)

How greatly were the saints confirmed, and assured of the truths of the gospel, when good old Sister Dorcas, had died, and was raised to life again, under the hands of Peter. (Acts 9: 36-41. What a grand confirmation of the "word of the gospel" spoken by Peter, when revealed by the angel to Cornelius, and afterwards made certain and verified by the gift of the Holy Ghost to himself and all in the house, when Peter, who had the "power," preached the word of the gospel, in obedience to the angel-message and the voice of God to him before received at Joppa. How were the Jewish brethren confirmed, that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Gentiles. (Acts 10.) With what assurance, with what verity, with what firmness, those twelve brethren were made certain of the gospel, when they received the word of God by the power and authority of Jesus Christ, which Paul held; and they received the Holy Ghost, under his hands, and they spoke in tongues and prophesied at Ephesus. (Acts 19: 1-7.)

How greatly were the Saints comforted, confirmed, assured, made firm and certain of the truth of the gospel, when, after the young man fell from an upper room where Paul was long preaching, and he went down, and in the power of the gospel restored him to life, and presented him to his rejoicing friends. Was not this much assurance of the truth of the gospel, an evidence which brings confirmation and verity? Did not such manifestations following the promises in the gospel, "confirm," "make firm," and give verity to the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth?

But the time would fail me to enumerate the much assurance, vouchsafed in the gospel of Christ. How Peter was delivered by the angels from the prison. How Agabus foretold the famine which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar. How by the Spirit he foretold the imprisonment of Paul. How Paul was assured by the angel of God of his safety, and his final escape with all on board. How he was bitten by the viper, and received no harm. How Publius was healed under his hand. How he was caught up to the third heavens, and saw and heard unspeakable things. And how he spake with divers kinds of tongues by the Holy Ghost. How he "was filled with the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of God," and by the same spirit foretold future events. I will therefore summarize them in the manifestations of the Spirit given to every man to profit withal, who obeys from the heart that form of doctrine, which Christ has given in the gospel. The office-work of the Spirit given to the Saints, is divided into two classes; viz: The gifts of the Spirit, and the fruit of the Spirit:

"For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith, to another the gifts of healing; to another the working of miracles, to another prophecy; to another the discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues. But all these worketh, that one and the self same spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."—1 Cor. 12: 1-19.

Here is "much assurance," the fourth element of the gospel, and one of the signs and means of knowing that the gospel, preached and received, is the gospel of Jesus Christ. By these "gifts" of the Spirit the Saints may know that Christ dwells richly in them by faith; and that they have the Spirit of Christ, without which they are none of his. By these evidences they know they are "sealed with the seal of their adoption;" which is an "earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory."—Eph. 1: 13, 14; 4: 30.

The other class of "much assurance" in the gospel, is the Fruit of the Spirit.

"But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, against which there is no law. And they that are Christ's, have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit."—Gal. 5: 22-25.

These are the elements of the gospel of Jesus Christ. They are a unity, a perfect whole. As we said before, leave out one element, and we have a perverted gospel. With all the elements in unity, we have the fulness of the blessed gospel of Jesus the Christ, which in deed and in truth, is the "power of God unto salvation to every one that believes," and obeys it from the heart. What sane man would not rejoice in such a gospel? Who would be ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ, thus manifestly set forth?

Who that reads the Bible, is so blind as not to see, that such was the gospel which Christ and the apostles taught. Can any man preach less and claim that he is preaching the fulness of the gospel? Can any man add thereto, or diminish therefrom, and escape the anathema of Paul? Who so bold as to assert any such things.

If such was the gospel which Christ commanded to be taught to all nations as a witness unto them, will anything less amount to a witness for Christ, and condemn the world for rejecting it? If such was the gospel authorized by the Great Head of the Church, to be preached in his name, beginning at Jerusalem over eighteen hundred years ago, has Christ in anywise changed it? Has he revoked the commission? Has he in any revelation given to man since the days of the apostles, abrogated, modified or changed the gospel in any particular? If so, when where, and in what particular? Has he given any man or set of men any authority to preach any other gospel? Is it possible in the nature of things, that the gospel can be changed in any respect, and yet be the gospel of Jesus, the Christ? Must not the gospel today come as it did anciently, "not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance? If it can come with less elements than anciently, what elements have been, or must be, eliminated from it? If none, then how can man be saved by a perverted gospel? How is such a gospel the "power of God unto salvation, to every one who believes" in, and obeys such a perverted gospel? If the Bible was sent to preach the gospel, can it baptize the believers? Can it lay hands on them for the reception of the Holy Ghost, or to heal the sick? Can it administer the Lord's Supper? If it can not do any of these things, then it was never sent to preach the gospel; for those who were sent to preach, had the power and authority, and duty to do all of those things. The Scriptures were given for our comfort and learning; not to preach the gospel, but to give a record of what the gospel was, that the man of God, not the world, may be thoroughly furnished unto every good work. They are the testimonies of those sent to preach the fulness of the gospel, the word of the gospel, one element of the same; and as such are filling the place ordained for them in the economy of heaven; but not to supersede the powers and authority of the man in Christ Jesus, our Lord, whom he has called and ordained, and commanded to preach, teach, baptize, and administer in all the holy ordinances of God's house, the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. Said John:

"Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."—2 Jno. 9 v.

With these reflections we will leave the subject with the reader for further investigation, ever praying that the Father of light may guide you into the "present truth" as it is in Jesus; and that you may walk in the light as he is in the light, and by obedience to the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ, you may learn with the apostle Paul, and all Saints, that the gospel of Jesus Christ, "came not in word only, but also in power, and in much assurance."—Amen.

TEMPERANCE.

BRO. JOSEPH:—I have thought to give a little of my experience as a medical practitioner. When I first began practice, it was customary to prescribe ale for invalids as a tonic, and I had often done this by custom, and frequently without thought, because at heart I was utterly opposed to any alcoholic stimulants whatever. But in those days almost every body drank more or less, and I naturally fell into the habit of prescribing the all-prevailing panacea ale, while with my whole heart I hated the accursed stuff, and knew within my inmost soul, that I was only pandering to their appetite; and finally positively refused to prescribe anything that had the pre-dominant feature of alcohol in it. The consequences were, that I lost my practice and my friends. The druggists thought me a crank. In course of time I came to Chicago, and commenced my present business, dealing in optical goods. Having formed an acquaintance with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, I made an engagement to deliver a course of lectures. It happened that I was sent in the same locality, where I had previously practiced as an M. D. There I was to deliver a lecture. Time arrived, lecture commenced on time, full house. While I was trying to prove that there were no stimulating properties in these so-called stimulants, such as ale, beer, and so-forth, an old patient, or one who had been my patient when I was practicing there, rose up in the audience and yelled out, "How about the ale you used to prescribe for us?" You may imagine my embarrassment. But what could I do under the circumstances, but to yell back in return, Let it alone, as you ought to have done when I prescribed it for you in the first place; and if you had done so, you would have been a well man sooner than you was, and I would not have held your note to-day for thirty-three dollars, and have saved yourself the disgrace you have brought upon yourself to-night, by being publicly known as my debtor to that amount, which I never expect to get. So the temperance lecturer's path also has its thorns, as well as the Mormon preacher's.

Now, brethren, I want to say, that it is in vain every engine is set to work which philanthropy can devise, when those whom we seek to benefit are habitually soaking their brains with ale, whisky, beer, wine, or in some way are influencing themselves with ardent spirits. The struggles of the lecturers with the printing presses and the Church, all uniting against the habit of drunkenness, and the visiting of those places of sin, seems but to heighten the enormity of the increase of opposition. The more we do in this direction, the louder the yells of the imps of hell. I was at one time a temperance man; but I have progressed out of that easy manner of pulling the trigger to shoot asey, and publicly announce myself an uncompromising prohibitionist; and I am sorry to see so many of our brethren, that either tamper with it, or in some way cater more or less to saloon men. This is not what it should be, for the world is watching us, and what one or two does is taken for the consent of the Church at large, and we are charged with being of easy morals when the majority of the Church are total abstainers, in principle at least.

If the rum traffic is not a cause for war equal in importance to slavery, then I have made a mistake in my politics. Is it not sweet and glorious to live for our country, and do some good that will live after we have passed away, that we may be sweetly remembered by those we have sought to benefit while we were in life. I am aware that our best friends may oppose us, but this only tends to hold us steady, and sometimes to cool our heated brain, that has become over zealous in combating error, until warmed into vigorous action against those we love; and for this reason we need to be checked by some seeming opposition from our friends.

What can be said further in remonstrance against the liquor traffic. First it is an unmitigated fraud. It patiently tracks the unthinking youth, until he falls into its hungry maw. It has devastated a larger area than war, famine, or pestilence. It has blasted more homes and broken more hearts than all these combined. It has claimed freedom from regulation, and intrenched itself behind decisions of law. It has increased its force, multiplied its attractions, and widened its avenues of infamy, until they are the unsightly gildings of every street, and the blazing attractions of every corner. Who make up good society. The dram drinker fills the almshouses, the work houses, the prison houses, supplies the victims for the hangman; and at last requires us to put locks upon our doors. Take this one curse from us, and we would be a free people indeed.

Yours in bonds,
CLARENCE STCLAIR.

MEDITATIONS.

THAT prophetic Scripture is given by inspiration of God, is very evident from various reasons, aside from the witness of the Spirit of God, which giveth inspiration to the spirit of man. Different writers living in different ages of the world teach the same, and testify of the same things. Skeptics say the Bible can not be of God, who is perfect and can not err, for it contains contradictions in doctrine, etc. But if one will candidly consider, and admit to aid reason that the original was inspired of God, and in a different language than now; and was translated into the present languages by uninspired men of various understanding, who decided by vote the many sentences of the Old and New Testaments, he will see that man has made the mistakes; for God being perfect never makes any mistakes.

The Bible gives an account of many bad men, but the skeptic can not prove that the writers of the Scriptures were bad men when they wrote the manuscripts from which the Bible is compiled. And if consistent, they must acknowledge that they were good men, and inspired of God, for the following reasons: They taught all that is good, and nothing bad. They declared prophecies as in the stead of God, saying, "thus saith the Lord," &c. Many of these prophecies are known to have had a fulfillment since the Bible was published to the world. They declare in their writings that they were inspired of God to so write and teach. Then as bad men could not, and never have taught such principles, they must be good men, and being good men, they must have been inspired of God to so write, teach, and declare: for if it could be proved that they were not inspired of God, it would prove them to be the worst set of men that ever lived on the earth; and any one to believe that the writers of the Bible, who foretold events at least generations before they transpired, and wrote so many wise sayings, and taught such pure principles, such as the best of all ages since have quoted from, I think any to believe such men to have been the most wicked characters that ever defiled the footstool of God, would be the extreme of absurdity.

It seems to me that when we consider the many proofs there are that there is a God; and that the prophetic and doctrinal testimonies of scripture were given of God for the good of man in all ages to the end of time, notwithstanding contradictions there are by mistakes of erring man, that it is unwise, unsafe and unneedful for us to say, "If there is a God so and so is true," or "if the Bible is true, so and so is correct." But with such a wall of evidence around us, and with such solid reasons to stand upon, we can say that there must be a God, the Bible must be true, it contains truth from heaven, from God to man, and the ifs are altogether needless. And when we so accept, and do as James exhorts, "Ask God for wisdom," battling against fear and doubt; and a ray of light from heaven shines into our minds, and His Spirit of love glows in our hearts, the "inspiration of the Almighty which giveth understanding," then we not only believe but know in part because of the assurance that these things are true and we realize with the poet who wrote, "There is more joy in believing than unbelieving," and the inspired texts "Fear hath torment," "Perfect love casteth out all fear."

INFERIOR.

INFANT RESURRECTION.

AN article appeared in Herald No 46, vol. 30, under the caption of "Infant Resurrection," criticising a letter published in Herald, No 24, vol. 30, written in answer to the questions, "will they be permitted life who never had the privilege of breathing? Shall such children come forth in the resurrection?"

The criticism is worthy of some note, because it shows how easily man is carried to extremes in his zeal, and how eagerly he lays hold of his subject, and draws from his fountain, all the keen, sharp, cutting sayings, he has gathered up during his life, and arranges them as evidence; supposing by mixing in a little sophistry, it will suffice. On the real question at issue, but little is offered as evidence, either in support of his hypothesis, or in refuting what has already been stated. I ask the privilege to state more plainly my views on this subject, and at the same time will endeavor to answer some of the fundamental points, of the brother's non-acceptance. I have claimed that germ-life, composed of spiritual and physical principles, existing in the loins, and from the time the germ assimilates with the ovule, until birth, we term, "life in process." All vegetable as well as animal life, evolves from the germ. When vegetable seed is deposited in the proper element, it germinates, and if possessed of sufficient strength, it reaches the surface and obtains air, and lives; but if it fails, it turns back. So also with animal life. As it is written, "Or as an hidden, untimely birth, I had not been; as infants which never saw light."—Job. 3: 16.

The question inferred in the hypothesis of "life in process," is at what period of development does the immortal spirit take possession of the body. It is written, "For I, the Lord God, created all things of which I have spoken, spiritually, before they were naturally upon the face of the earth."—Gen. 2: 5. What spirit of man was created? If created, what were the conditions of that creation? Was that created spirit a conscious, intelligent entity? If created, it had a beginning and existed independently of the body. Was a puff of breath from the Lord essential to its physical existence? It is written, Times and Seasons, Vol. 5, P. 615.

"I must come to the resurrection of the dead. The soul, the mind of man, the immortal spirit, all men say God created it in the beginning. The very idea lessens man in my estimation; I do not believe the doctrine, I know better. Hear it all ye ends of the world, for God has told me so. The mind of man is as immortal as God himself. I know that my testimony is true. Their spirits existed co-equal with God. Is it logic to say that a spirit is immortal, and yet has a beginning? God never did have power to create the [immortal] spirit of man at all."—Joseph Smith.

Again:

"Man was also in the beginning with God. Intelligence, or the light of truth, was not created or made, neither indeed can be. All truth is independent in that sphere in which God has placed it, to act for itself, as all intelligence also; otherwise there is no existence. And every man whose spirit receives not the light, is under condemnation; for man is spirit. The elements are eternal, and spirit and element, inseparably connected, receiveth a fulness of joy."—Doctrine and Covenants, 90: 5.

Again:

"If there be two spirits, and one shall be more intelligent than the other, yet these two spirits, notwithstanding one is more intelligent than the other, have no beginning; they existed before, they shall have no end, they shall exist after, for they are gnolam, or eternal."—Book of Abraham.

If the spirit of man "which God created" is the immortal spirit, please harmonize these quotations, and render them consistent with the hypothesis of eternal existence. Again it is written:

"And the Gods formed man from the dust of the ground, [an organism consisting of bones, heart, lungs, stomach, kidneys and liver, with all their essential functions complete], and took his spirit [that is, the man's spirit], and put it into him, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

The heaven-created spirit that was put into the earthly-created body, was united as a conscious, intelligent entity, by this special act of God, breathing into his nostrils (through the only channel to the seat of life) the uncreated and eternal principle, by which he became dual, or a living soul.

After this miraculous creating of the spirit of man, and his physical organism after his own likeness, nature's law was enforced, and each specific pair was endowed with the capability of transferring a germ of the spiritual, as well as physical being, to their offspring, by which each descendant became a substantial duplicate of its progenitors, with equal powers of reproduction, with this injunction, "multiply and replenish the earth." No one will question that man possesses the power of transferring a germ of his physical organism to his offspring; but transferring his spiritual organism is what incites criticism. But surely evidence is in abundance, to establish this hypothesis.

Parents are the natural vicegerents and custodians of the Creator for the imparting of these specific and perfect, spiritual germs to their offspring. If the parents have not this power, why the children resembling the father as well as the mother, when not one thousandth part of his nature enters into their organism. If the physical body is the counter-part of the spiritual in form, features, and disposition, how then comes the resemblance of the parents; and how come birthmarks, if not transmitted spiritually. Is it possible for the immortal spirit to bear a family resemblance, unless by kindred ties. The spiritual man is a real entity, and the only unchangeable part of man. Otherwise there is nothing through which character, or disease, or peculiarities, can find conductions from generation to generation.

Dr. Dunglison says, and many eminent writers confirm his sayings:

"The human body, from the moment of its formation to the cessation of existence, is undergoing constant decay and renovation, decomposition and composition,—so that at no two periods can it be said to have exactly the same constituents."—Human Physiology, pp. 73, 450.

As Christ became the prototype of all resurrected beings, by the act of raising his body from the dead; so by a parity of reasoning, he established his duality, and states the time when the immortal spirit took possession of the body. See 3d Nephi 1: 3:

"And it came to pass that he [Nephi] cried mightily unto the Lord, all the day; and behold, the voice of the Lord came unto him, saying, lift up your head and be of good cheer; for behold the time is at hand; on this night shall the sign be given, and on to-morrow come I into the world, to show unto the world that I will fulfill all that which I have caused to be spoken by the mouths of my holy prophets."

Again:

"Wherefore, when he cometh into the world, he saith, sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not, but a body hast thou prepared me."—Heb. 10: 5.

Please tell us what spirit animated the embryo body, while Christ was speaking to the Nephites; as it is written:

"The body without the spirit is dead."—James 2: 25.

From these extracts of history, it is evident that the immortal spirit, united with the spirit entity of man at birth.

"And [God] formeth the spirit of man within him."—Zech. 12: 1.

And Christ, our elder brother, was made like us.

"Wherefore, in all things it behooved him [Jesus] to be made like unto his brethren."—Heb. 2: 17.

Again:

"But there is a spirit in man; and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."—Job. 32: 8.

Does the body form a part of the understanding? The evidence presented at death, confirms the fact, that then it is inert matter, is not susceptible of intelligence, and never was. It was only the machinery through which the spirit operated. Liken it unto the locomotive; the physical body the engine, the spirit of man the steam, and the immortal spirit the engineer.

When this dual principle is more diffused and better understood, the misrepresentations of the brother concerning my advocacy of feticide, infanticide, or abortion, and his scathing rebuke he extends to me, will only stand as evidence of his own puerility.

I believe I have noticed the points of the brother's article briefly, and will conclude by noticing his quotation from Webster, "A rising again, a resumption of vigor." Has a still born ever risen? If not, can it rise again? "The resumption of vigor," (force of body or strength of mind). What strength of mind and force of body can a still born resume? Are these some of the brother's "plain facts?" The principle of the resurrection is a restoring to life, where life left the body. The still born, is born into death, "(Ye must be born again.)" and not unto life; hence has no claims on the resurrection.

I submit these few ideas as explanatory of the private letter that found its way into public, not as axiomatic, but as evidence presented by the written word, in a correlative sense. Hoping for the right, I am as ever, your brother in Christ,

WM. ANDERSON.

DUTIES OF PRIESTS, TEACHERS, AND DEACONS.

NEAR five months ago a brother wrote, requesting me to write for the Herald my views in regard to the duties of the above named officers.

In the first place, it is evident from Doctrine and Covenants 16: 5, and 42: 5, that both Priests and Teachers should preach the gospel. Their duties in this are equal and alike. The Priest "shall travel" and preach, (Doc. and Cov. 83: 22), "but the Deacons and Teachers should be appointed to watch over the church, to be standing ministers unto the church."—Ibid. By the latter quotation, we learn that neither Teachers nor Deacons are traveling ministers. Their duties are limited to their respective churches and localities.

The Priest may also "baptize, and administer the sacrament, and visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties; and he may also ordain other Priests, Teachers, and Deacons."—Doc. & Cov. 17: 10. "But neither Teachers nor Deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands. They are, however, to warn, expound, exhort and teach, and invite all to come to Christ."—Doc. & Cov. 17: 11.

The special duty of the Teacher "is to watch over the church always, and be with them, and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking; and see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty; and he is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the Elder or Priest, [this evidently alludes to "the Elder or Priest" chosen by and for an organized branch], and is to be assisted always, in all his duties in the church, by the Deacons, if occasion requires."

To fulfill this, in all its parts, the Teacher must be familiarly acquainted with each member. And to "see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty," will require his personal visitation to each member. He and the Deacon are preeminently the local "watchmen," and local "shepherds" of the church. The very nature of their ministrations clearly indicate that they must be brought into the closest personal nearness, as ministers, with each and all the members.

While it is expressly declared to be "the Priest's duty * * * to visit the house of each member," the Teachers can not fulfill their appointed duties only by personal visitation. There was no occasion to define this, as it necessarily grows out of the ministrations required of them.

Some have doubted the propriety of the Teacher's accompanying the Priest in his personal visitations. There is no reason why they may not visit together. The church laws are silent on the matter. Inasmuch as the Deacon may assist the Teacher "in all his duties in the church," we see no reason why the Teacher may not assist the Priest in the matter of visiting the members; in looking after their moral conduct and their duties as members.

It has been usual in the branches for them to labor jointly in this manner, the Priest taking the precedence, and the writer heartily endorses such labor. There is no law against their doing so; but many good reasons why they may.

As for the Deacons, we have already seen that they may assist the Teacher "in all his duties in the church, * * if occasion requires." Paul, in 1 Timothy, 3: 8-13, gives the necessary qualifications of Deacons; and it is proper for the church now to pay strict heed to his instructions; for the Doctrine and Covenants requires it in these words:

"Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law to govern my church, and he that doeth according to these shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."—D. & C. 42: 16.

Both Teacher and Deacon may, and should, perform any service for the church not incompatible with their defined duties. This can best be determined by the demands of each branch. They are the servants of the church for Christ's sake.

PROBATION AFTER DEATH.

THE Rev. S. H. Adams, pastor of the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, preached to a large audience last evening a sermon in answer to the question, "is there a state of probation after death?" Mr. Adams read the thirteenth chapter of Luke, beginning at the 23d verse. His text was Hebrews ninth chapter and 27th verse: "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after that, the judgment."

Mr. Adams said he "assumed that all agreed that this life is probationary." He assumed that all present believed in a personal God, who will reward or punish men according to the deeds done in the body. He assumed that there is a day appointed when God will judge the world through Christ, and when all men will stand before God to be judged not only for their actions, but for their thoughts. All men will then be divided into two classes, styled figuratively, the sheep and the goats. To the one He will say, "Come ye blessed," and the other, "Depart ye cursed." Assuming that this judgment does not occur immediately after death, and is perhaps far distant, we ask, What occurs in the interval? Will those who have rejected Christ here have an opportunity to accept Him there? The Bible is silent on the whole question. Some persons assume that this period is one of sleep, a state of reserve for heaven on the one hand, or for hell or annihilation on the other.

In discussing this matter three plans may be adopted. The first is the strictly biblical one, confining ourselves to the word of God, the second is speculation, wholly discarding the Bible, and the third is a union of the two. The last seems to be the proper one to adopt. We assume that the Bible is a revelation, and that there is no authority on these questions outside of it. But God has also given us reason. Whatever is abhorrent to reason we are bound to reject. But we must be sure that it is reason and not our wishes or prejudices that it is abhorrent to. Reason is universal, and what is abhorrent to reason will be abhorred by the entire race and not by an individual here and there. Where the Bible is silent we must use speculation. If it is not just that probation cease with this life we are bound to conclude that there is probation in the next world, for above all things we must remember that God is just. We may say that those who reject Christ have had good opportunities to accept him. We assume that all have the ability to choose between life and death. If for any reason a soul has had no chance or power to choose, and can say when it enters the spirit world, "I never had a chance," he ought not to be punished till he has had a chance. God will not damn a man because he was born in India and China. What could be expected of such a man but that he should be an idolator? Christ may say, "He does not know me, but I know him; if he had known me he would have accepted and loved me."

We must take care not to use the term "accept Christ" in too narrow a sense. We may formally and intellectually accept a creed for which we do not care and which does not enter into our lives. Condemnation is not visited on men for not knowing, but for knowing and not doing the will of God.

The question presents itself, have all the nations sufficient light to answer the demands of a moral government? To this two answers may be made. Paul says that the wrath of God is upon all men for their unrighteousness, for God's power and godhead are revealed in His works to those who have no other revelation of Him. He says all men have a moral sense so that they know themselves to be sinners. His conclusion is that all men have sufficient light and that their punishment is just. The whole Bible harmonizes with this view. You may suppose the case of a man who knows nothing of Christ or duty, but no such persons are referred to in the parables. While the parable of the talents indicates that the opportunities of all are not equal, it also shows that responsibility is proportioned to opportunity. Paul says that those who sin without law, shall be punished without law, and those who sin in the law shall be punished by the law. The Bible contains recognition of unequal opportunities, but nowhere suggests that there are men who have no opportunities at all.

The second answer is that the universal consent of mankind corroborates Paul. There is a general confession of guiltiness on the part of the human race. There is a confession that men know better than they do. God would rather send His Son again into this world to suffer and die than that one human being should go from this world without having had a fair opportunity to love Christ. If there are any human beings who have not had a chance in this world, God will assuredly give them a chance in the next.

Are there any such persons? We examine the Bible and find no reference to any class or individual who had no opportunity to love Christ. The parables teach us of men to whom invitations were given, and who refused them. The conscience of mankind shows that man knows his duty, and though he may plead so for others, he does not plead for himself that he had no light.

We come now to another consideration. While we say that every man must have a chance, we do not say that every man should have another man's chance. The argument offered on this question is that different people have different chances. Justice requires that every man have a chance, but it does not require that all have equal chances. In the nature of the case there can not be an equality. Take the case of the infant and the adult. The former is saved anyway. The atonement alone is enough for it. For the adult the gates are guarded by conditions. The infant can not forfeit Eternal Life, and the adult may. Here is an equality at the very outset.

The influences around different persons are very unlike. One man is born under favorable auspices, and is surrounded by good influences. We prophesy well of him. Another is born and bred in vice, and is almost doomed to go down. Here is another inequality. The question of these men's future, however, depends on their willingness to know their duty and to do it. Take the case of a man murdered suddenly, and while unprepared for death. The murderer is arrested, sentenced, and before he is executed he repents and finds peace. One of these men was hurried into eternity unprepared, and the other after fair warning. Of two men unprepared for death, and alike in all respects, one is struck with a disease that quickens all his mental faculties, and he repents before death. The other is seized with a disease which dulls his perceptions, or necessitates the use of opiates, and he dies unconverted. Here is another inequality. The idea of probation demands that every man have a chance, and a good chance; it does not demand that any man have another man's chance.

At the bar of God every man stands alone, and is judged by himself as if he were the only man in existence. The question will be put to him, "Have you known God? Have you been mindful of your responsibility?" and he is judged for the use he has made of his own opportunities.

Let us suppose for the sake of argument that there is a state of probation. If so, there must be something about it more powerful than this state. It must be able to do what this state of probation has not been able to accomplish. If there is such a state of probation—if there can be—the question must be asked, "Why did not that better state of probation come first?" But, not to follow out this line of thought, it must be evident to all that there can be no greater or better gospel than the one we have. There can be no better atonement than the one now offered. If the gospel is rejected here, it may be rejected in that other state of probation. If you have resisted Christ here, there can be no assurance that you will not do so there. But it may be argued that in that future state of probation we shall be disembodied spirits, and that we shall therefore be less prone to sins there than we are here. This is nothing but the old Gnostic theory that matter is evil and that the less of body a man has the better off he is spiritually.

But it is the soul that is full of sin, and a disembodied spirit may be as wicked as it was while in the flesh. At the creation God looked upon matter and pronounced it very good. Satan is a disembodied spirit, while Christ lived a sinless life in a human body.

Again, you may say, "I am a sceptic. I prefer to live for what I know to exist, and let the future take care of itself. In a future state of probation I shall know whether there is immortality or not, and I can govern myself accordingly." Such was the idea of the rich man in the parable. He had evidently been a sceptic. When he found out that there was not only immortality, but punishment, he wanted Lazarus to go to his brothers, that they might abandon their scepticism and repent. But Abraham told him, that if they did not believe Moses and the prophets, they would not believe one who had gone to them from the dead. There might also be drawbacks as well as advantages in a future state of probation. Men might there be less hopeful, and they might have less faith in goodness.

But it is said God will save all men at last, because He is merciful. If God is going to interfere with human free agency, in order to rescue men from evil, why is there any evil at all? This statement implies that God uses man as a machine, and not as a free agent. Does not God want man to accept Him here. Certainly. If man resist God in this future state of probation, what then? God respects free will, and He will not save a man by violence. If human free will is too sacred a thing to be interfered with here, it would be too sacred to be interfered with in any future state of probation. God respects free will, and will never resort to compulsory power to save man.

If there is a future state of probation there must be more of a separation of good from evil than there is here. The bad will therefore be less under good influences and connected with good associations than they are here. Then there is the power of habit. A bad man takes into the future world a momentum in the direction of evil. In the parable of talents the doctrine of probation is clearly indicated. To those who have is given, and from those who have not is taken away even that which they have. Such is the case in business and in politics. It is the law of life. We become more and more fixed in habits as years advance, our power of choice is reduced till a point is reached at which destiny begins. A future state of probation, then, can not be so good as this one. Such is the law of probation. There may be a chance for man in the next world, but it can not be so good a one as they have here.

Abraham said to the rich man that there was a great gulf fixed between them. The fixedness of the distinction between the good and the bad must increase as time goes on. If there were not this fixedness the good might fall away as well as the bad reform.

DEATH OF JOHN HUSS.

When John Huss the Bohemian martyr was brought out to be burnt, they put on his head a triple crown of paper with painted devils on it. On seeing it he said:

"My Lord Jesus Christ for my sake wore a crown of thorns, why should not I then for his sake wear this light crown, be it ever so ignominious? Truly I will do it and that willingly." When it was set upon his head the Bishop said, "Now, we commend thy soul to the devil."—"But I," said Huss, lifting up his eyes to heaven, "do commit my spirit into thy hands, O Lord Jesus Christ, to thee I commend my spirit which thou hast redeemed."

When the fagots were piled up to his very neck the Duke of Bavaria was officious enough to desire him to abjure—"No," said Huss, "I never preached any doctrine of an evil tendency, and what I have taught with my lips I now seal with my blood."

SLANDERERS.

THERE are many forms of assassination in this world; the pistol, the knife, and poison play their part; but the worst of all is to be as Shakespeare writes it, "Stung to death by slanderous tongues." In this case mentioned by the great poet, the victim only seemed to die that her character might live. It is so in these days so far as slanderous tongues can make it, but the seeming death is not so easily overcome. The assassins of character are bold, unscrupulous and untiring, and no vindictive blood-hound ever pursued a fugitive negro woman in the Florida Everglades with such fierce enjoyment as those high-minded gentlemen follow the slightest trace of a clue that they hope may lead them to some weak spot or blemish in the character of one of their fellow men.

Miscellaneous.

DIED.

PRETTYMAN.—At her residence in Ray county, Missouri, February 9th, 1884, Sister Eliza Prettyman, wife of Bro. James H. Prettyman. She was born March 9th, 1861, in the Shetland Islands, Scotland. Came to this country in 1877. Was baptized by Bro. R. L. Ware, September 28th, 1877. She lived a faithful member until death. She leaves two children, a husband, a mother, and brothers and sisters to mourn, but not without hope. She had many friends, and is deeply regretted by all. Funeral services conducted by Bro. David Powell.

Lord, help our sad and lonely hearts,
To say, Thy will be done;
And while our tears of sorrow fall,
Let sweet thanksgiving swell.

HER SISTER.

JOHNSTON.—Near Santa Ana, California, August 16th, 1883, of dropsy, Sr. Margaret Johnston, aged 63 years, 8 months. She was born in Cornwall, Upper Canada; was baptized by Elder Bates in the first years of the church, and re-baptized at San Bernardino, California, August 28th, 1864, by Elder H. H. Morgan. She was faithful and worthy, and sleeps in Jesus.

THOMAS.—In Rockland, Maine, September 14th, 1883, Sister Elizabeth, wife of Bro. Elison Thomas, aged 66 years, 6 months, 16 days. She was a true believer in the gospel until the last.

SEAVEY.—At St. George, Maine, March 18th, 1883, sister Lucy A., wife of Bro. David S. Seavy. She was baptized by Elder John C. Foss. She never heard but very little preaching, and it is believed was baptized before hearing a Latter Day Saint sermon. She was strong in the faith to the last, falling asleep pointing heavenward, but could not speak; but seemed trying to reveal something. Her body sleepeth, her spirit resteth in Paradise, waiting for her dear relatives and friends to join her. Her life was an example of goodness to all, and both Saints and friends appeared to mourn her loss alike; strong men and women belonging to other churches and to no church, with tears running from their eyes like rain, as they viewed the corpse. May we all, Latter Day Saints, so live.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

Also, prayer meeting each forenoon; prayer meeting to begin at nine o'clock and preaching at half-past ten a. m. 3. That the President appoint the persons to occupy the stand at each service. 4. That the President is requested to occupy the stand at any sessions that he may deem wise to do so.

Respectfully submitted: W. H. Kelley, J. H. Lake and J. F. Burton, committee.

The report was received, and was amended by substituting the word "associate" for "vice president," in regard to Bro. Briggs as assistant of Pres. Smith. Also in place of fixing the hour of adjournment at half-past five, it was left to the discretion of the President, and the report so amended was adopted.

MINISTRY REPORTS.

The following reports were then read by the Secretary:

Elder Josiah Ells of the Quorum of the Twelve, present, reports:

With improved physical condition I have been privileged again to sow the seed of eternal life, sometimes with fair conceptions of thought and liberty of speech, but greatly governed in the case by the conditions incident to age and sequent weakness. The mission field assigned to my lot includes parts of three states, presenting a wide range, some four hundred miles in length and upwards of three hundred miles in width. Of necessity my labor is confined to visiting the branches and their immediate vicinities. Upon new fields, by way of opening the work, I dare not venture; hence confined myself to the confirming of that which by others has been begun, and seeking to lift up the hands that may hang down, and in lifting up those who are bowed. If my conditions are continued, I purpose to resume the efforts of the past and work on to the end. The efforts and labors of the other members of the traveling ministry in that mission have been much blessed. The Pittsburg district earnestly requests the return to them of Bro. G. T. Griffiths, as he has had great success in his labor. Bro. McDowell's and Hiram Robinson's work has also been appreciated. The prospects of the work in those lands are very encouraging and hopeful.

Elder E. C. Briggs, of the Quorum of the Twelve, present, reports:

My labors in the last year have been confined mostly to Western Iowa. My secular business has demanded my attention a part of the time, yet I have done the best I could in the ministry. Have visited and tried to hold up the standard of truth in twenty different towns and neighborhoods. If continued shall endeavor to do more the coming year.

Elder T. W. Smith, of the Quorum of the Twelve, present, reports:

Having been appointed to the oversight of the work in Southern Illinois and Southern Indiana, last Spring, I entered upon the work the latter part of May, and labored among the churches in Southern Illinois till the latter part of August, then returned home for reasons that I considered sufficient. In September I went to Southern Indiana. Stopping at a few places in Southern Illinois, I labored in Southern Indiana till January, 1884, when I went to Illinois and staid till the middle of February, when I left the field for home. I found the cause in a number of places in Illinois to be in quite a healthy condition; in others not so. In Indiana the work was in quite a low state generally. The cause was revived throughout the mission. I was aided to a commendable degree in Illinois, by Bro. G. H. Hilliard, an able defender of the faith, and other "good Elders." There was an addition to the Church in Illinois, of an able man in the person of Bro. J. W. Stone, who had been an Elder in the Disciple Church. The branches in Southern Illinois, are in the hands of faithful Elders and other branch officers. Efficient ministers are found there, in the persons of Elders I. M. Smith, I. N. Morris, T. P. Green, J. F. Thomas, J. W. Stone and others. I baptized nine in Illinois. In Indiana the cause is well represented by such efficient men as Elders Harbert Scott, J. G. Scott, M. R. and J. M. Scott and others. The Elders there are, as in so many other places, hampered by temporal cares. It is really an injury to the cause that Bro. Harbert Scott is hindered from being in the field continually. There are but few if any able men in the latter day work. In Indiana I baptized six, and ordained one Elder, two Priests, one Teacher and two Deacons. I ordained two Elders, two Priests, two Teachers, and a Deacon in Illinois; and with the co-operation of district officers, set some branches in order in both parts of my mission. I believe that there are men in both states fully capable of carrying on the work there, and they ought to receive assistance financially, to put them and keep them in the field. It seems to me that it is not the wisest course to send to and sustain in the various fields of labor Elders from abroad, when living in those fields are men so well qualified as the brethren named, and others, who might be, and would be in the active ministry if they were not compelled to stay at home to support their families. Since I have been at home I have been preaching as usual. I baptized five young persons in the jurisdiction of the home branch recently. I have enjoyed a full measure of the Spirit of God in preaching the word and administering to the sick.

Elder A. H. Smith, of the Quorum of the Twelve, present, reports:

The States of Missouri and Kansas were given me as a missionary charge at your last sitting. On my return home I immediately entered into the work assigned me, and have so continued since, and have learned that my charge is too large for one man to do justice to. In my visit to the Kansas division, I found as good a field for the preaching the word as I ever saw, and I sent Brn. Kinnaman, Hinderks and Bozarth who will report their labors. I visited Goshen with two of the above brethren, and intended to prosecute the mission still farther, but was taken ill and returned home. I soon moved out again, and have labored in the Far West, Independence, the Spring River, the Bevier and St. Louis Districts. My labor in the St. Louis District carried me into Illinois, to Belleville, Alma, Caseyville and Alton. I baptized two in or near Webb City, Missouri, and five in the Independence District. I have solemnized one marriage, and attended confirmation and administration to the sick, etc. The work in the St. Louis District is reviving, and I am pleased to report it. I found a better spirit prevailing there than for years before. Here again I fell sick, and returned home to recruit. Have been hindered considerably in my labor by sickness in my family, and illness of myself.

I can not now itemize all my labors. What I have done I have done with full intent to serve God and build up the Church. My labors have not all been pleasant. I have had many unpleasant things to meet and overcome, among them an undercurrent covertly set against the quorum to which I belong, and this in the Church members. I regret this, it is wrong. There is a good field in Missouri, and my co-laborers assigned by you will so report, for they have not been idle. The prospects of the work are good, I believe never better in this mission. The prejudice once so fierce in Missouri, is a thing of the past; and in Jackson county the present citizens welcome us to their homes, and treat us as kindly as any one else, and favor us. And we have proven God's promise to be true, "Ye shall find favor in the eyes of the people." And now, once more, I am pained to say, my financial circumstances seem to preclude my remaining in the field. I am embarrassed. I can not now help it, but my good name, the good name of the church, demands the release of these embarrassments. The church does not seem able to do it, or willing. There seems to be nothing else for me to do but to make the effort to release myself. I shall do all I can in the work, but my first duty is my family. I can not, I must not neglect that duty. God must judge me. I can not in justice go on as in the past. God help me, I wish to do my duty in all things, but can go no farther unless my way is opened, and a change made. May God bless you and this work. I shall ever pray and labor as my circumstances will admit for the establishment of Zion.

Elder J. H. Lake, of the Quorum of the Twelve, present, reports:

Since the last conference I have labored in the Canada mission, principally among the several branches of the two districts, the London, and the Kent and Elgin; and in new places as time and opportunity permitted, assisted by Brn. E. H. Gurley, Samuel Browne and James A. McIntosh. The local laborers have done some work by preaching and in defending the cause when it was attacked. There has been little sickness among the Saints and but few deaths. The Saints have been greatly favored, considering the death and destruction of life and property among the inhabitants of the earth. Ill health has prevented me from doing as much as I had anticipated doing. Some have thought and so expressed themselves, that I ought not to labor so much with the branches; and others, officers, and members of the branches, seem to think that I have not done my duty in that respect. Rather difficult to please all, therefore I have tried to learn my duty as the law of God directs, remembering that Jesus said "Feed my sheep." With some the food that I presented was not very palatable, from the fact that it reproved, for their acts which were different from those of him whom they profess to love and serve. They forgetting "that the reproof of a friend is better than the kisses of an enemy." I have labored for the good of all, and for the glory of God. I can say that prejudice is in many places giving way; the work is deepening and spreading. I know of no very serious troubles among the Saints, the greatest difficulty is coldness and lethargy. I have preached whenever opportunity offered, administered the sacrament when called upon, have blessed and assisted in blessing a number of children, administered to the sick, in some instances with marked results, baptized five and solemnized three marriages. I have counseled my assistant laborers whenever they have asked it. I have exhorted the Saints to faithfulness, and to purity of life. Have prayed for the weak, and have tried to comfort the sorrowful. In my labors I have doubtless erred, but wherein I have I hope to be forgiven. What I have done in righteousness I hope may be blessed of the Lord, to the salvation of the Saints, and to the glory of God's name. My faith and hope in the ultimate triumph of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, the redemption of the earth and the salvation of the pure and the good, are firm. And I hope ever to be ready and willing to do my duty in the great latter day work, that when this life shall have ended, I may be worthy to meet the sanctified ones in the sweet bye and bye.

Elder Jos. R. Lambert, of the Quorum of the Twelve, present, reports:

Should I report Chicago matters to you as I would like, perhaps it would incite bitter opposition, and necessitate the consumption of time that might be more wisely used. I spent most of the summer and part of the winter in striving to build up the work in Chicago; and when the facts are fully known, it will be no matter of surprise that the work has been hindered. With few exceptions, I felt well in preaching, though many times I went to and from the place of worship with a heavy heart. I baptized one. I still believe the Chicago Mission to be an important one, though it may require a greater expenditure of means, for a time, before it is made a success. It is difficult for those who have not been there, and stood aloof from all party, with their minds free from personal bias, to comprehend the situation.

In addition to my labors at Chicago, I preached at the following named places in Northern Illinois: Plano, Sandwich, Kewanee, near Amboy, and at Coral near Marengo. I am convinced that there are many good opportunities for preaching in Northern Illinois, though three of the four branches which I was permitted to visit, in the Northern Illinois District, were found in a weak and deplorable condition. The weakness is partly owing to removals.

I am still willing and anxious to labor for the advancement of the cause, though poor health and financial matters have taxed my mind severely of late; and if it should be thought best by the church to take me from the field, on the grounds that my financial demands are too large, I hope she will have the courage to say so. So long as I have strength to labor in the field, I do not feel justified in stopping. But all should have the opportunity of assuming the responsibilities of their own belief and teachings; and perhaps I am a good subject for a test case. I have laid my case before the Bishopric of the Church, but as yet have received no word of reply. To them you are referred for information.

May the kind Master, who has given us some significant victories within the past year, watch over his people in love, and bestow wisdom and power upon his servants.

Elder W. H. Kelley, of the Quorum of the Twelve, present, reports:

At your last session I was assigned to Michigan, Northern Indiana, Ohio and New York. In this mission, as in many others, the calls have been many and the laborers few. In view of this it has been my effort to answer the most urgent demands. Indeed this is all that I could do; as there has been but two constant laborers in that field, and one of them disabled a portion of the time, except that Bro. E. L. Kelley has been able to render the cause a good service in and about Kirtland, Ohio.

Events have made it necessary for me to spend considerable time at Kirtland and vicinity, as there are many people in that section who are interested in the examination of the claims of our faith; and they are disposed to treat us fairly. There is a class, however, who are disposed to hedge up the way, and oppose the planting of the work there. This of course called for the presentation of the principles of the faith explanatory and defensive, before individuals and the public. The late discussion held there between Bro. E. L. Kelley, and Mr. Clark Braden of the Campbellite Church, proved to be a turning point, resulting in gaining friends for the cause, so that now there is really a greater demand for a minister there than at any previous time. The fair-minded people are inclined to hear our faith upon its merits. The open enemy has been met in that quarter, and it is not putting it too strongly to say, he was defeated; but a worse, a cowardly and secret enemy, still works in many places, whose tactics are misrepresentation and moving upon the prejudices of the people. This necessitates that a judicious and wise policy should be pursued, and some one kept there in order to stand by the honor of the Church. It will, in my judgment, be to the best interests of the church to continue its work there. Bro. E. L. Kelley has been a great help during the last year, and his services should be continued. The calls for preaching are increasing in all of the states mentioned. Indeed the tide of empire for the cause seems to be east-bound, and if possible a sufficient corps of Elders should be sent to present the faith in that direction.

The saints are improving and the cause gaining. The work is commanding such a consideration, and spreading so widely, that it is said, "They are spreading every where; something must be done." A missionary in charge labors at a very great disadvantage, unless he has with him a sufficient number of associate laborers to meet the urgent calls; for it is expected that he will see that all calls will be responded to; and if there is no one to send but himself, the results to the cause must correspond.

Brn. D. Campbell, C. Scott and Isaac Bogue, have labored acceptably in the mission. Besides, a number of the brethren (in Michigan especially) have labored locally with good results during the winter. They are Brn. Willard J. Smith, A. Barr, E. DeLong, J. J. Cornish, Levi Phelps, J. Carpenter, B. Corless, Jos. Shippy, and perhaps others that I do not now call to mind. The Saints are doing what they can to encourage and help the cause. The outlook is a propitious one. I am still confirmed in the thought that the truth is with us, and am encouraged to help continue the great work.

Elder Charles Derry, president of the High Priests' Quorum, reports from Mag-nolia, Iowa:

Since the last General Conference I have labored to the best of my ability in the field assigned me, but I have not complied with every call, for I was unable to do so. I have tried to preach the truth in plainness, I have administered in all ordinances to which my ordination entitles me. I have been greatly aided by the Holy Spirit. My ministrations have been well received in every place where I have labored. I have tried to comfort the mourner, strengthen the weak, encourage and direct the strong, lead the erring into the path of duty, and to convince the world of the fact that God is doing his great work of preparation for the reign of peace and joy; and I have earnestly invited them to be co-workers with him and us, that they may be heirs to the glorious inheritance. Of my success I have nothing to boast; if I have any sufficiency I know it is of God. My errors are my own, but my heart is set to do God's will. I am on the altar, and I can see no place, no time, no circumstances under which I shall be justified in laying down my armor. I enlisted for life, not a life of ease and luxury, but of labor, and until that life is closed I do not expect to fold my arms. But my services must not and will not be pressed upon the church, and when you feel the necessity of dispensing with them, I will still try to serve God as his Spirit shall direct. I can not say that the work is prospering as I would wish to see it. In many places it languishes for the lack of willing, wise, experienced men, who will preside, not only over conferences, but over districts, visiting, feeding, counseling, and setting in order the branches; and until the church makes provision for this the work will languish. I pray God that his Holy Spirit may direct all your deliberations, and fill your hearts with peace and love. I shall not be with you, but shall earnestly pray that the highest wisdom may characterize your labors, that the cause may be promoted, and God glorified.

Elder E. M. Wildermuth, of the Quorum of Seventy, writes from Oakdale, Nebraska:

As I am one of the minute men of the Church, I suppose you will expect a report from me. During the past year I have done little in the way of preaching. I have endeavored to do what I could, whenever circumstance and opportunity permitted. In the meantime I have been laboring constantly, either wielding hammer and saw, or filling the preceptor's chair, in order to provide the "bread that perisheth," for my family. My faith in the latter day work has not waned, though I am often sad-hearted and weary with the sacred weight of my calling bearing so heavily upon me, all the more as we see the end approaching, and mankind all around us drifting blindly on to destruction. Though their souls be required at our hands, yet we may not leave our own to suffer, while we take up the warning cry of repentance, as commanded unto the elders of the Church. And I still hold myself in readiness to take the field again, whenever the Church thinks it wise to so order, and the Bishop finds sufficient means in his hands to assist in providing the necessities of life for those dependent on me. May the Spirit of our Master prevail in all your deliberations.

Elder B. V. Springer, of the Seventy, writes from Moselle, Missouri:

Since the last Annual Conference, I have tried faithfully to meet your expectations in laboring in the field assigned me, but I found it impracticable to visit Northern Arkansas. The mission is so extensive, that if I had run over the entire field, little or nothing would have been accomplished anywhere. Experience has taught me that a few acres well cultivated will produce better results than to skim over very much ground. This has been my line of policy in Missouri, and I indulge the hope that you will approve the policy. I have baptized six in 1884, making a total in this mission of fifteen. Seven others have given in their names for baptism. I have officiated in ordinations and in blessing children, and have administered to the sick and performed other duties of my office as best I could. As to the future I have only to say that I trust you will not forget this field. It is now a very promising one. The citizens of this county would have petitioned you to continue me here, but I discouraged and prevented it. I am willing to continue if you think best, but will ask that a change be made by striking out Northern Arkansas, and that the field comprise only South-eastern Missouri with that portion of Illinois that belongs to the Saint Louis District. I think that good can be done in Perry and Randolph counties in Illinois. If I am continued I shall try to respond to calls from Washington and Crawford counties in Missouri, and from Randolph county Illinois, as soon as practicable. As to my wants, but little will be required to supply them, but that little will be absolutely necessary. My family now consists of my wife and myself. If you deem it wisdom to send some other man here in my stead, and will release me entirely I will be satisfied. If released the church will be relieved from any obligations to support me. If continued I will do the very best I can to be worthy of your confidence. It is probable that I or my successor will have to meet in public dis-ussion the Rev. Dr. Ray of the Baptist Flag of St. Louis, on "Apostolic Succession." I am your co-laborer for Zion's weal.

Elder E. C. Brand, of the Quorum of Seventy, writes from Salt Lake City, Utah:

I send you a report of my labors since last April Conference, in Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, and Utah. I came here last fall, as provided for in my appointment last April. I shall leave the delegate, Bro. T. N. Hudson, to represent the district and the condition of the branches. I will say this much: I am encouraged in the work of the Reorganized Church here, but if that work was solely the number of persons baptized and the branches organized, I for one would leave the mission in disgust. But a great work has been done and is being effected; the power of the Reorganization is being felt. We are certainly on the sharp edge of a crisis, and if there ever was a time when this mission should be sustained by able men and several of them it is now. There is much need of a Scandinavian Elder. The cause has been nobly aided by Elder Hans N. Hansen who has left this field. He has organized a flourishing branch of twenty-seven members all Swedes and Danes, and has planted the standard in other Danish settlements. Will you permit this work to languish and die out? Or will you send them "re-enforcements?" We have in Utah lost much ground in past years by branches being organized and left for years unvisited and to die out, and then to start the work again in such localities is next to impossible. The weather has been severe and, to some extent, a hinderance. I have visited every branch in the district except the new Scandinavian. I have preached as follows: In Iowa three times, in Nebraska sixty-three times, in Wyoming once, in Utah forty-nine times, in all one hundred and sixteen times. I have traveled four thousand three hundred and twenty-four miles; have baptized thirteen, confirmed ten, blessed seven children, solemnized two marriages, attended three conferences, and two Elders' courts, ordained one Elder, one Priest and one Teacher. I desire to be released in the fall; and, if meeting the will of the church, would like to return to my old field, Iowa and Nebraska. I have sown much seed there, and wish to harvest some of it. I pray that God will help your deliberations.

Elder J. S. Patterson of the Quorum of Seventy, present, reports:

I have spent the whole year in the interests of the Church, without intermission, laboring as much in the field assigned me, (Wisconsin), as circumstances would permit, opening up several new places for preaching, and receiving many encouraging evidences of the approval of our doctrine from those among whom I labored, and pressing invitations to return. For lack of the necessary funds, I was unable to go as far north in the state as I desired, and hence left many places unvisited. I have labored considerably in Northern Illinois, where my residence is, and by request have presided over that district, and have done the best I could to promote its interests, and I believe with some degree of success, and in complete peace and union with those among whom I have labored. There is a request in the hands of the Twelve from the above district, that I be returned there as a laborer, which I hope you will grant, as it is best suited at present to my circumstances and wishes. As the result of our united work, about twenty have been added to our number. Some of whom are above the average intellectually, and they bid fair to be honorable and useful members of the body. In my labors I discover among the masses a growing disregard for things spiritual, and a consequent difficulty in reaching the ears and hearts of the people; yet I have experienced many substantial evidences of God's acceptance and approval of our efforts, for which I have felt very grateful; for with the Master's approval, we have little to fear from the ill will or displeasure of men. I trust that our only object may be the interests of the cause we love and labor for, so that our deliberations may meet the Master's approval and blessing, and I ever desire to labor and pray for Zion's weal.

Elder J. T. Davies, of the Quorum of Seventy, writes from Pittsburg, Kansas:

Since last conference I have labored in Missouri, Kansas and Indian Territory, to the best of my ability. The field is large and promising, and in my judgment the work should be continued. There is a good demand for preaching, and some additions have been made. In many places prejudice has been removed, and the saints have been confirmed. Also, there have been good additions to the ministry by the ordination of several promising young men to the eldership.

Elder Duncan Campbell, of the Quorum of Seventy, writes from Pleasanton, Iowa:

In accordance with the appointment of last General Conference I have labored in the Michigan District. I feel thankful for the uniform courtesy and kindness shown me by Bro. Kelley, the president of the mission, and for the comfort and satisfaction I have felt in the company of the brethren with whom I have labored, as well as for the generous hospitality of the friends of the cause. At times I have enjoyed much liberty and freedom in presenting the truth, at other times it has been rather uphill work, but on the whole I feel much encouraged, also stronger and more desirous of doing something for the enlightenment of the people. I have labored continuously since entering upon the mission last spring. For a considerable time I did preaching in a sitting posture, owing to an affliction in one of my limbs; but having good liberty and attention, I trust as much good was done as if I had been able to present myself before the people in the usual attitude. A large share of my preaching has been in new places, several of which heard the word for the first time. In some there are hopeful signs of a future harvest; in others the prospects are not very bright. During June I labored in Steuben county, Indiana, and was much gratified with the progress the work had made since I had been there. The number of Saints had increased from six to sixty; evidently the brethren who had been there had not been idle. Late in the month I went to Cambria, Hillsdale county, Michigan, but though I preached several times, I did not succeed in arousing much interest. I found more interest and encouragement in the regions round about Reed City, whither I went in the early part of July. Near Nirvana I took part in a two-days' meeting in which much interest was manifest, and several of those who heard for the first time expressed themselves as being very favorably impressed. A few days afterwards I held a meeting at a lumber camp near by; had a good audience and close attention, also excellent liberty. The following Sunday I had an interesting meeting at Orono. Having attended Sunday School in the morning and taken part in the Bible Class, the lesson of the day (which was on the subject of faith and obedience as illustrated in the taking of Jericho) gave me a good text from which to speak. Bro. and Sr. Gilpin, are earnest workers in the cause there, and some are investigating with apparent seriousness. The following week I held several meetings near Hersey, aided by Brn. Shippey, Cleveland, and Emmet, receiving good attention. During August I was in Branch county, Michigan, and Steuben county, Indiana, a part of the time associated with Bro. Columbus Scott. In September I went to North-Eastern Michigan, and up to the time of district conference (13th October) labored in Lapeer, Tuscola and Sanilac counties, associated with Brn. Bogue, Carpenter, DeLong, Phelps and Baily. I found that these brethren had not permitted the people to forget that there were Saints in the land. After conference (with Bro. John Shook) I followed up the impetus given the work by the preaching of Bro. W. H. Kelley, Willard Smith and Andrew Barr, north of Richmondville. The most of the winter was spent in this and surrounding points, at some of which there had been no preaching before. Six were baptized, Bro. Shook officiating. Bro. J. J. Cornish assisted in confirmation. Many others are giving the work that earnest attention and consideration which will doubtless eventuate in obedience. The labors of Bro. Shook were much appreciated by the people. In February I did some labor in the southern part of Sanilac county and the north-eastern part of Lapeer. In March I went to Bay City, an entirely new field, and succeeded in arousing a good interest. At least two were seriously contemplating baptism, when it became necessary for me to come home. Bro. E. DeLong will follow up the work there and attend to the baptisms. I desire to continue in the good work.

Elder J. C. Foss, of the Quorum of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since my assignment to labor in Missouri and Kansas, under Bro. A. H. Smith, I can say that I have striven to promote the cause of Christ. I have preached in sixteen different places, and from three to twelve sermons in each of them with good liberty; have baptized twenty-nine, blessed four children, administered to the sick with good results, presided over the branch at Independence three months, and was district president two months. I have found a good class of people, and have been treated with honor and respect, with little exception. And I must say that I found Bro. Alexander to be worthy of the office he holds, and a good and affectionate servant of God. I hope that I may have the pleasure of laboring under him for the ensuing year. My word is "Onward, onward, brethren, to the kingdom of God." And as I journey through the trials of this life, I wish to sow the seed as I go. I feel, as Paul did, that I wish to be preserved by Christ unto his heavenly kingdom; and like Peter, that I wish an entrance to be ministered unto me abundantly in his everlasting kingdom. The gospel is doing its preparatory work, and I would to God that there were more of the Elders and Priests in the field. Calls are coming from many places for preaching, and few ready to respond. Brethren, the day is fast passing, the night is coming on; shall we as ministers of God sit still? No, but arise in the power of Israel's God, and show to the children of men that the grand object God has in view is to establish his kingdom in these latter days, and save those who will obey his gospel.

Elder Heman C. Smith, of the Quorum of the Seventy, present, reports:

A short time after the Annual Conference of 1883, I entered my field, and for a time labored in Arkansas. I was blessed with the spirit and enjoyed my work very much, notwithstanding many threats were made by the lawless element. I think good could be accomplished there by a resolute and continued effort. Early in August I joined Bro. Montague in Red River county, Texas. There we met in public debate the Rev. Mr. Worley, and though it was generally admitted that our cause was triumphant, yet Mr. Worley by his meanness and rascality succeeded in working up a mob feeling, which resulted in causing us to leave the county. We went to Bell county, where we were met with kindness and hospitality. I was with Bro. Montague for about two months longer, and then he left us to return home. While in Texas I labored in Red River, Bell, Blanco, Robertson, Bastrop, Milam, and Falls counties, sometimes alone, and sometimes associated with either Bro. Montague, Cato, Allen, Waterman, Thompson, or Currie. Early in March I held a four days' debate in Bell county, with a Mr. Wilmeth, of the so-called Christian Church, since which we have had better congregations and a better interest at our meetings. The past year has been one of heavy trial to me, and sometimes my way seemed hedged up, but God has blessed me with greater power in presenting the word than ever before, and for the last month or two the prospects seem brighter, so that my hopes for the South-Western Mission have revived. The mission is a very large one, comprising Texas, Western Louisiana, Arkansas, and Indian Territory, yet a portion of the time there are only two of us to labor, and at most three. Texas is fast settling, and now is the golden opportunity to strike ere the immigrants are swallowed up in sectarianism. Arkansas is a large and inviting field, and we have earnest solicitations to come to Louisiana where the work has never been opened. I hope the conference will see the necessity of prosecuting this mission more vigorously, but I will not name any one here for the field. I have sent some recommendations to the Twelve, which I hope will be favorably considered. I pray God to direct the deliberations of the conference.

Elder J. F. McDowel, of the Quorum of Seventy, present, reports:

During the past year I have labored in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Iowa. In all my labors I have been much blessed by the power of God. I received of his guidance and direction in a manner unprecedented in all my ministerial career, for which I tender him my tribute of thanks in tears of gratitude. I have administered to the sick with blessed results. Have blessed a few children, performed one marriage ceremony, and baptized nine persons. I feel strong in the faith of Christ. Although the Church may seem small, numerically, yet I feel that ere long great power shall be given her, and her faith become brighter, her instrumentality for good be increased, and her ultimate triumph made glorious by the movement of the Infinite Hand.

Elder R. J. Anthony, of the Quorum of Seventy, present, reports:

Since your last session, I have labored in the field you assigned me, until the latter part of October, when I returned home. From the time that I was first appointed to the South-Eastern Mission, I labored in Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida, remaining eleven months in the field. The mission being a large one, and but few laborers, it was impossible to accomplish much. We did the best we could. Bro. F. P. Scarcliff being the only aid sent from your last session. I was ably assisted by local Elders, both in Florida and Alabama. Bro. L. F. West and others in Florida assisted me in their immediate vicinity; and in Alabama I was assisted by brethren Chute, Booker and Scogin, while branch officers and the saints in general, showed a willingness both to say and do. I felt I had the confidence of officers and members, as well as the favor of the Master, in my feeble effort for good; God bearing witness to the labor done, by healing the sick, and other manifestations of his ever blessed Spirit. Bro. Scarcliff did considerable labor last summer and early fall in Kentucky and Tennessee, while my labors were exclusively confined to Alabama and Florida. The south is a great field for mission work, and its wants many; but in my report to the Quorum of the Twelve, I have spoken more fully of the needs of the mission. I earnestly appeal to the conference for more help; the work absolutely demands that more elders be sent to labor in the south. I have not been able to reach all the different places where the work had been opened up, and fairly started, although urgent appeals came to do so. I was requested to go to Georgia, but could neither go nor send.

The Brighamites are operating extensively in Georgia and Tennessee, and I see by the papers they are at work in the Carolinas. I think we ought to meet them in that land, and let the people know we are not of them.

Since your last session I have baptized fifty-one persons, and preached enough to convert many more. I have preached in the Potawattamie and Fremont Districts, in Iowa, and in the Southern Nebraska Districts, since I returned from the south. I trust the conference will favorably consider the recommendation of the Alabama District Conference, in appointing one or more resident Elders in the south to labor in that field. My mind is that we ought to have some representative men in the south. We have talent there, if we can only get them in the field. May the Lord abundantly bless you in all your sessions for good.

Elder D. H. Bays, of the Quorum of Seventy, present, reports:

During the two years last past, I have done what local labor I could, consistent with my circumstances. I am happy to be able to report that my condition is now favorable to my taking the field again. My general health is rather poor, and I desire your prayers for its restoration. I ever pray for the prosperity of the work, and desire to labor for its advancement.

Elder M. T. Short, of the Quorum of Seventy, present, reports:

I have preached all that I well could and have had more openings than I could reach. My health has been excellent, and my spirit has been comforted and refreshed while in the glorious campaign. My desires and aims have been constant, and my integrity secured the co-operation of God's approving Spirit. I have delivered from seven to nine discourses weekly, except when called home on account of sickness. However those domestic sojourns were short, and were in no wise spent in idleness or indifference. I have written up our distinctive plea for several secular papers, and generally find a willingness on the part of editors to give us a fair showing. Ten times more missionaries than we have throughout the whole world could be advantageously employed in the broad, rich field assigned your humble servant, and still the ground would not be thoroughly canvassed, nor the gospel preached "from house to house." Satan, sectarianism and death, are on the alert and ever busy. In heat and cold, through mud or frost, concourses have, with few exceptions, flocked to the places of worship. I have not been insulted nor disturbed since departing from delectable Utah. Open handed generosity, and the teeming comforts of the festal board, the upholstery of the dormitory, the nuts of the kitchen, the apples of the sitting room, the music of the parlor, and the prayers around the hearthstone have gladdened my heart and cheered me on the way. I acknowledge my gratitude in a wholesale manner for all past favors. It does not appear to be just the right thing to mention the name of a good brother, a kind sister, or even a clever friend to this body, nor in the columns of the Herald. All donors find a place in my private journal, and from thence a faithful annual copy is sent to the Bishopric. The Saints in Illinois and Iowa, as well as those not yet with us in church fellowship, are, in the main, kind and free. I have found Bro. Bronson to be a wise counselor, a genial associate, and an able maintainer of the faith. He was not cut out to manipulate great financial schemes, but simply to preach; and as a lucid reasoner, his praises are in the churches. The Macedonian cry comes up for his return, as also for poor, unworthy me. Multitudes are halting in the valley of decision, and God grant that they may speedily decide, and decide rightly too. At Montrose I recently conducted my second series of meetings, and baptized eleven persons just opposite the Nauvoo Mansion. Bro. Bronson came to aid me and push the investigation farther after I was to go elsewhere. Quite a number made a declaration of their intentions to unite, and I presume that he administered the rites of the gospel to them. We can say for the work's sake, and in the absence of self righteousness, that liberty of utterance has been given on occasions too numerous to mention. I feel grateful, very humble, and exceedingly happy. I desire to praise the Giver and to work away.

Elder I. N. Roberts, of the Quorum of Seventy, present, reports:

Since last report I have labored in Kansas and Missouri. Have been blessed with the good Spirit which, has enabled me to present the truth in plainness and simplicity. Have baptized eleven, confirmed eight. My desire is to spend my whole time in the field. I am willing to go wherever I am sent. May God's Spirit direct in all things.

Elder J. F. Mintun, of the Quorum of Seventy, present, reports:

Because of the nature of my last appointment, it was about the 1st of June before a perfect understanding was had between myself and the Bishop, but I continued laboring at Magnolia, Iowa, and vicinity. On the 6th of June I entered upon my appointed field, and with the exception of about six weeks have unceasingly labored there.

With few exceptions the interest for hearing the word is good, and those few places where the interest is not so good are where Saints have by their slothful and iniquitous doings brought reproach upon the cause. In the last year prejudice has fast given way to investigation, and the newspapers have been extremely friendly to the interests of the church. One editor, a Baptist minister, who had delivered some lectures on "Mormonism," gleaning his statements from the popular histories and Encyclopedias, requested me to write some articles favoring the claims of Joseph Smith and the church as held by us as a people, which request I granted him very thankfully, and the articles have been published. The papers of Omaha, Blair and Waterloo, have also been very kind in this direction.

I find some ministers of different persuasions, are beginning to treat us very differently in the last year, some even seeking information concerning the views of the church, and seem so pleased to receive it that they use the ideas they receive, with their congregations to show them that we are a separate religious body from the Brighamite Mormons, and worthy of their respect, but generally add, "You had better keep away from their meetings," &c., &c., an acknowledgement of cowardice on their part.

By request of the president of the Northern Nebraska District, (Bro. W. M. Rumel), I have been assisting in setting in order the various branches of the district, and settling difficulties for most of the time during the last six weeks, passing through the saddest experiences of my life. I have been in the past deserted by friends, and oppressed by foes, endured afflictions, nigh unto death, poverty, and perplexities of many phases, but never have I been called to wage such a continual fierce conflict with evil, under such trying circumstances as I have in this labor. But I thank the Father for the knowledge that duty accomplished in the fear of God is better than the honors of the world. I have attended two hundred and sixty-two meetings since June 6th, I have preached one hundred and fifty-one times, baptized thirteen, assisted in confirming fourteen, assisted in ordaining one Priest, three Teachers, and one Deacon; and attended to all other duties as I was called upon. In administering to the sick, both in and out of the church, I have seen many blessings received, to the joy of the receiver, and the glory of God.

My experience during the last year has only increased my faith in this work, and as the tree which has to endure the strongest winds, and the erect blasts is made strong, so I have been strengthened in this great work by the adverse spiritual winds that I have had to endure, in connection with the blasts of opposition and persecution. My face is Zionward. I am for the victory, and in whatever position I am called to "occupy" I shall act according to my power to act. As a representative of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, I shall ever strive to live an epistle of His righteousness, that no spot nor blemish shall dim the fair name of the church. Still willing to stand in my lot, fighting shoulder to shoulder with God's servants, and whatever duty you may assign me for the coming year, I shall endeavor to fulfill the same according to the talent I have received.

Elder Gomer T. Griffiths, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I have been constantly in the field, and can say that the Lord has blessed my efforts with excellent results. I have been successful through the aid of the Holy Spirit, in raising up three new branches, viz: Benwood, in the suburbs of Wheeling, West Virginia, Byesville and Buchtel, Ohio. The Saints at Benwood have erected a comfortable chapel, which has been the means of removing prejudice, and has brought us more prominently before the people. My time has been confined principally to the Pittsburg District, which extends into the three States that comprise my mission. There have been about fifty baptisms, and the general condition of the church in the above district is much improved, consequently the present outlook indicates a large ingathering during the ensuing year, provided that the work commenced is continued. During last year I have baptized thirty-one, confirmed the same, also blessed seventeen children, ordained five Priests, four Teachers and two Deacons, administered to a number of the sick with some good results. I am still willing to labor for the Master as the wisdom of those in authority may direct.

Elder George Montague, of the Quorum of Seventy, reports from Magnolia, Iowa, as follows:

In pursuance of the appointment of the Conference of April, 1882, I left my home on July 25th, for the field assigned me, and on August 10th joined Brn. H. C. Smith and Joseph Luff in Indian Territory. I remained in that region till November 3d, and then moved on to Red River county, Texas, where I continued to labor until November 23d, when with Bro. T. B. St. John, I visited the Silver Hill Branch, Sevier county, Arkansas. Here we found many that were inquiring the way of life, as also a strong opposition, but appointments previously made rendered it necessary for me to leave that field, much as it was against my feelings, for there was a good interest, as was indicated by the increasing audiences. So we turned our faces towards Texas again, and while on my way to Ellis county, I stayed with the Red River Saints from December 12th to 21st. Arriving in Ellis county I found but little interest manifested, sickness and unfavorable weather preventing the efforts that I wished to make. I remained here preaching as often as health and weather permitted, until January 16th, 1883, and then I returned to Red River county, where I remained, (striving to hold the fort against the bitter persecution that has assailed the work in this place from the beginning), until July 3d. Then I visited Young county, and there preached nineteen discourses, administered the ordinance of baptism, and also of laying on of hands both in confirmation and for the healing of the sick, as duty required, until July 30th, when I returned to Red River to attend the expected debate. There I met with Bro. H. C. Smith, with whom I continued to labor until October 26th. Then I returned home to visit and to look after the interests of my family. In looking back over the past I can see mistakes, and some things to regret, yet feel that I have been blessed with the liberty of the Spirit in presenting and defending the principles of truth. I desire to continue to labor in the cause of the Master while the day lasts, knowing that for me it must soon close. I pray that God's Spirit may preside over you.

Elder George S. Hyde, of the Quorum of the Seventy, present, reports:

At the last conference, Nebraska was assigned me as a mission field. As you may be aware, my labors have been confined to rather small limits since this appointment. However, I have sought to do what I thought at the time to be my duty. I have preached the gospel as circumstances would permit and wisdom seemed to direct, and have been blessed in so doing. Am desirous of continuing and cheerfully submit my case for your disposal. Should you see fit to give me a mission I will gladly accept, and hope to do the best I can for the good of the work. I will endeavor to be subject to the will of the body. Home duties may demand my attention for a few weeks, possibly months, after conference, but I hold myself in readiness to go just where you may deem wise when these are attended to. It may be needless to say that I love the work. Good is being done in these parts, and occasionally some are baptized, and our numbers are increased considerably.

Elder W. T. Bozarth, of the Quorum of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since last Spring I have labored as best I could under the circumstances. After returning from Conference I went into Grundy county, Missouri, where I labored for a time in two different places. At the last place there was quite a good interest, and I think that the labor there removed a great deal of prejudice. I have preached in Caldwell and DeKalb counties, Missouri, and also I went into Kansas with Bro. John Kinnaman, where we labored for a time, in some places with good success. I was taken sick again while out there and had to return home and recruit. I have had attacks of the asthma and sore throat, which have greatly hindered my work in the ministry; but I am feeling a great deal better now. I have baptized two, confirmed five, solemnized one marriage, and have administered to the sick, generally with good results. I have done all that I could, circumstanced as I was. I am willing to continue in the ministry, if you so direct, and where you direct. I pray for Zion's success.

Elder Columbus Scott, of the Quorum of Seventy, writes from Kirtland, Ohio:

I have endeavored to honor the appointment given me one year ago, and have labored very nearly all that I was able to in my calling as a minister. My trials have been more severe during the past year than ever before, but the kind Father above, has brought me through them so far; and for all his mercies I am truly grateful. Sickness and death in my little family usurped a small portion of my time during the year; also on account of personal illness, I was unable to labor, except at intervals a portion of the winter. I labored some at Kirtland and vicinity during May and June, with fair attendance, and good interest manifested.

In July and August, with Bro. Duncan Campbell I visited Galien and Coldwater, Michigan, and Clear Lake, Indiana, and we did what we could in the time allotted to us. After attending the Braden-Kelley discussion, at Wilber, Nebraska, I preached a few times at Wilber and vicinity, and also a number of discourses at Nebraska City, and also met with the brethren of the Fremont District in conference at Shenandoah, and preached twice. And notwithstanding the efforts were made while laboring under afflictions, those efforts were received with due appreciation. Recently I have labored as able at Galien Michigan, and the last two Sabbaths at Kirtland, Ohio. I have baptized seven, confirmed three, blessed some six or eight children, administered to a number of the sick, the Lord blessing perceptibly in most instances. I believe the prospects are good in the mission; but more laborers are greatly needed. I am still desirous of doing all I can for the good work.

Elder Thomas Taylor writes from Birmingham, England:

I feel much pleasure in stating to you that the work in England is in a very fair condition. Every effort is being put forth for the advancement of the cause. New fields are being opened, and all calls are being attended to as far as possible. Much good has been done, and I have no doubt but much more will be done; in fact I may here say that the future is full of promise. I often think that if those brethren who opened this mission could see it as it now stands, they would feel well repaid for the sacrifice they made then. We ask an interest in your prayers for our future success, and pray that the Spirit of the Master may be with you.

Elder Peter N. Brix writes from Aalborg, Denmark:

Since my last report I have baptized nine. I believe the time is coming that the Church will have to do more for the Scandinavian Mission than to sustain me in it. If it should seem to be wisdom to relieve me from the mission, please do so, as I can not labor together with you without unity of the faith; as the Apostle says, "Now I beseech you brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." May the spirit of love be the ruling power throughout the whole conference.

Pres. Smith gave some explanation of what Bro. Brix means where he mentions about laboring together in harmony of faith, meaning some views that he holds, which he has submitted to the Presidency and the Twelve for consideration.

Elder H. N. Hansen reports from Weston, Iowa, as follows:

I very much regret that I have not the privilege of meeting with you in Conference, but I can not. I am happy to say that my efforts in the Utah Mission have been blessed to some extent. I preached in the counties of Utah, Juab, San Pete, Sevier, and Millard, as often as time and circumstances would permit. In some localities the interest was very good, and still on the increase; and I could not fill all the calls. The work of the Reorganization is engaging the attention of many. I had the privilege of baptizing twenty-eight, and assisted in organizing a branch at Richfield, in Sevier Co. I also assisted in the ordination of two Elders, one Priest, one Teacher, and one Deacon, and performed other ministerial work in keeping with my calling and the order of the Church of Christ, and I was blessed with evidences that my labors were acceptable to God. And I am satisfied that God has a people in Utah who shall yet be delivered from the thralldom of Priestcraft and sin. It is my opinion that now is the time to put forth a continued effort among that people, which I think would surely result in good. I left Salt Lake City, March 19th, and arrived at home a few days ago. I am now engaged in looking after my temporal affairs, which will require my attention for some time to come, and for that reason ask the Conference to release me from the mission to Utah, that I may labor as circumstances will permit, in the vicinity of my home. I am requested both by Saints and friends to ask the Conference if possible to send at least one Elder to Utah who can speak the Scandinavian language. Many were sorry to have me leave, but they are in hopes that the Conference will not forget them, but that others may be sent. I trust that God may guide you, and hope that such measures as will prove for the upbuilding of the Church of God may be adopted by you.

Elder Joseph F. Burton, present, reports:

In May, 1882, I landed in Nova Scotia, and left there in March, 1884. During this time I traveled from Yarmouth, on the west, through Nova Scotia to Margaree in Cape Breton, on the east, and across the Province from St. Margaret's Bay on the Atlantic to Woodworth's Bay on the Bay of Fundy,—preaching as opportunity offered; also distributed through the Province by gift and sale about three thousands tracts, fourteen of the Book of Mormon, thirty of the Voice of Warning,—baptized twenty-three persons, and organized them into two branches, being forty miles apart. I also met Bro. & Sr. John Whiston of the former organization, who have united with the Upper Newport Branch. I ordained two Elders, two Priests, and one Teacher, and blessed nineteen children. The Lord of the harvest was pleased to confirm the word spoken by the tokens promised; the sick were healed, the power of darkness rebuked, poison lost its potency to harm, the Saints were blessed by knowledge, by prophecy, by tongues and interpretations, by open vision and by inspired dreams.

Our small number were made sad by the death of two of our number—Elder G. N. Davison and Bro. R. Reid. My labors have been mostly confined to the counties of Hants and Kings, in Nova Scotia, deeming it better to establish the work in a few places than to scatter labor over a large territory, although I endeavored to do both as nearly as possible. I deem it just to state, that whatever good may result to the latter day work, or to the salvation of souls by my labors in this mission, that I have been much assisted by Mrs. Burton through her correspondence and fireside converse with her female acquaintances. Having written to the Herald the events of the mission as they transpired, it is not necessary to state them again here. Only I hope the brethren will consider this mission, and if possible, provide for them an Elder, for I believe that it is a field that will well repay for labor done, in souls saved.

We hereby tender our thanks to the Saints, (especially those of Nova Scotia and California), who have so generously and willingly aided this mission by their prayers, confidence, hospitality and means, praying that as they have blessed so may they be blessed. My services having been accepted, and appointment made to this mission by the conference, I now ask the brethren to accept the result of my endeavors and release me from it.

Elder John Gilbert writes from Little Compton, Rhode Island:

On my return east from Conference a year ago I visited Pittsburg and preached at Philadelphia and Hornerstown, also at Oakdale, L. I., at the latter place baptizing two. From there came directly into the mission, where I have labored constantly in the ministry. Last July with Bro. F. M. Sheehy I visited the two districts in Maine, including Grand Manan, N. B., and labored in them seven weeks. With this exception I have confined my labors to the Massachusetts District, which includes Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Bro. Sheehy returned east and has labored there a good part of the time, consequently is better able to report the present condition of the work there than I am. When we went to Maine we found the work in a low condition, only one of the branches in Western, and not more than two in Eastern Maine holding any regular meetings. However, we were kindly received by the Saints everywhere, and we have every reason to believe that our labors were not in vain, but that good was accomplished. Bro. W. G. Pert, president of Western Maine District, writes: "You and Bro. Frank did a good work here last Summer," and says that the meetings are still being kept up at Green's Landing, and that he was going to organize at Bray's Mountain. He hopes that we will return there. In Eastern Maine, also Grand Manan, I learn there has been great improvement, and that the visit paid them by Brn. Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley has had a good influence upon the Saints and people of that county. The great drawback to the work there is a lack of efficient local laborers. If the branches could be got into a good working condition I am satisfied that good could be done there. I found throughout the Maine districts a good hearted people, as well as a people who love the work and have a great desire for its prosperity. In the Massachusetts District, with but few exceptions, the work is decidedly onward, notwithstanding we have had to contend for every inch of ground we occupy; yet we have held our own, and during the year there has been a goodly increase. Yesterday, in connection with Bro. John Smith, president of the district, we organized a branch of eleven members here, ten of whom have been baptized during the year. A chapel is to be erected, the foundation of which is now laid, and building will commence in a few days. During the year I have baptized seventeen, ordained one Elder and one Deacon, assisted in organizing one branch, and solemnized three marriages. Just the number of miles I have traveled and sermons I have preached I can not tell, but will say that I have preached the gospel to the best of my ability, and otherwise have waited upon my ministry. Sometimes I have found it rough and again smooth. I have occupied the pulpit in the synagogue, the desk in the school house, and at the risk of health, I have stood in the crowded room of a dwelling house and preached over a red hot stove. I have been brought to stand at various times before the (spiritual) rulers of the land (churches), and have answered the grave charge of "making people dissatisfied with their religion, and of baptizing them over again," &c., thus ignoring their baptism. I have always been glad of the privilege of answering for myself, and have held myself in readiness to be on hand when the comparison should be made. The New England States present a great field for missionary labor, and as fast as the church can afford it should be supplied with efficient missionaries. I trust that in the appointing of the Twelve to their various fields for the coming year, this part of the Lord's vineyard will not be overlooked. I am still willing to bear my part in the great work, fully believing it to be of God.

Elder F. M. Shochy writes from Providence, Rhode Island:

Since my appointment by you in April, 1883, I have given my entire time to the ministry, mostly in the New England States. On my way east from conference I stopped at Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Hornerstown and Brooklyn. Have preached and attended to such other duties as belong to a minister. Have been made to realize the kind and provident care of the Master in my ministrations, by seeing the sick healed, and being sustained by the Holy Spirit in presenting the gospel, and by other ways peculiar to the gospel minister, a full appreciation of which I ever hope to entertain. The present prospect for this mission is, in the main, encouraging. The work of the church is fast becoming a recognized fact, rather than a chimera, or an experiment. The press as a rule are favorable towards us, and grow more so as the distinction is made between us and Utah Mormonism. The labors of Brethren Gurley, Blakeslee, Kelley and Bond, have been productive of much good here. The real missionary labors have been somewhat crippled, on account of time being confined to work in branches, which seemingly could not be avoided. The field is entirely too large for the present number of laborers employed. We earnestly look and hope for the conference to increase our staff, the importance of which will probably be presented to you by Bro. Z. H. Gurley.

Elder R. M. Elvin, present, reports:

The summer of 1883 was very unpropitious for holding week-night meetings, on account of frequent rainfalls. During the winter, however, I improved every opportunity, and believe that I have been successful in removing some prejudice and ignorance concerning the doctrine advocated by the church. Held one public discussion of seven sessions with the Rev. N. M. Allen. Also was in attendance at Wilber, at the Kelley-Braden debate, and was not idle while there. Have been kindly favored by five of the secular newspapers, by their publishing articles defensive and explanatory of the Church and the doctrine thereof. Administered baptism to ten, and performed such other work as devolves upon an Elder. It has not been all sunshine and cheering work that has engaged my attention; however I hope that the experience of trial and perplexity will prove the means of causing me to be more steadfast and wise in this great conflict against folly and sin. The outlook in my field is very promising, and should be worked with vigor and by an increased number of laborers.

Elder Joseph Luff, present, reports:

From the date of my report to last conference, until October 9th, 1883, I labored in the Utah Mission, as per former appointment. During that time I made and filled as many appointments as my health would admit of, besides performing various other duties pertaining to the Eldership. Failing health compelled me to act upon the advice of the President of the Church and the President of the Mission, and return home. Since then I have labored some in the Independence District, under local authority. During the year I have preached about eighty-five times, and baptized four persons.

Elder E. H. Gurley writes from Lamoni, Iowa:

Pursuant to my appointment to Canada, I left home May 3d. By arrangement between Brn. Kelley and Lake I labored some seven weeks in Michigan, in the vicinity of Hersey and Chase. I found fair interest and many good Saints. Thence into Tuscola, Lapeer and Sanilac counties, where I found a very inviting field, and I disliked very much to leave it. There were more calls than I could fill, and the interest such that I found it rather easy to take to the people. I could only stop a few days at each point, as Bro. Lake wished me to get into Canada. The contrast between Northeast Michigan and Canada was like warm and cold water, so far as interest was concerned with those not of our faith. A host of kind hands both in Canada and Michigan, administered to my necessities, for which I shall ask and have asked God's blessings to be with them. As per appointment I labored in vicinity of Louisville, Blenheim, and Moretown, then to Oil City and Petrolia, nearly all on old, and some on hard beaten ground. I learned some lessons that I trust will stay with me. I was absent from home just six months, spoke ninety times, baptized three, confirmed six, and blessed seven children. Where I labored in Canada the work moves slowly, yet it is no doubt growing stronger. In some places, especially at Moretown, the few who are left have the work to build up—to regain that which has been lost. I hope they may not get discouraged. I would not close this without referring to Bro. E. DeLong's assistance for a few weeks. I find him a kind hearted companion, and one who evinced a love for the truth. Also had a brief acquaintance with Brn. J. A. Carpenter of Mill Creek Branch, J. J. Bailey of Maple Valley, A. Barr of Forester, and J. J. Cornish of Deckerville, not forgetting old Bro. Hemmingway, who with team carried E. DeLong and myself some fifty miles. The first ones named were also laboring some; A. Leverton, J. N. Simmons and R. C. Evans of Ontario, were anxiously engaged as their circumstances would permit. It seemed to me that Canada's local Elders, with Bro. J. H. Lake, could fill all the calls, unless the Church has money to hire halls or prosecute the work in cities. School houses are closed against us, at least nine times out of ten, if not ninety-nine out of one hundred. I wish to be released, as I have a self-appointed field of labor. I still hope, trust and pray for the progress of heaven's truth unto the salvation of many souls.

Bro. J. H. Lake explained about some of the Canadian fields of labor referred to by Bro. Gurley.

Elder A. J. Cato writes from Paige, Texas:

After my last appointment I was able to do but little because of poor health, until September. Then I began to get well, and since that time have been laboring to the best of my ability, preaching as often as I could get an opportunity. I have baptized six persons during the year and ordained one Teacher. The mission is, I think, in a better condition than it has been before since I came here. In the Church things have not prospered as we would like to see, though at present a brighter day seems to be dawning. I am willing to continue in this mission, if you think best, or I am willing to go to any other place on this continent, or any other, Africa, China and Turkey excepted, for the work is the Lord's and I have nothing else to live for.

Elder Gordon E. Deuel present, reports:

On my return home from the April Conference I went to Omaha on business, and met with the Saints, and by invitation preached. Went to Washington county and preached in the Mill's School-house; left a good feeling among those who heard. On my return to Omaha I was asked to preach and did so. A lady from West Point, Cummings county, was convinced of the truth and desired me to come to West Point and baptize her. Her sister wrote to me and said that she would write to Bro. Joseph. He sent me her letter and a few lines. I went to Fremont, and Bro. Sampson asked me to stay over the Sabbath and preach. I went to see the Saints at Raw Hyde, Bro. S. Ogard asked me to assist in the Sacrament; the Spirit was in our midst. A man and his wife wanted to be baptized; Bro. Ogard asked me to attend to it, also I preached through the week. On Saturday Brn. Andrews and Sinamark conveyed me to Bro. Dan Jones' place, and I preached in the Webster School-house. Bro. Jones brought me to Scribner, and Joseph Backus on the morrow took me to West Point. Preached there in Mr. Knauss' hall three discourses and baptized two and confirmed them. Returned to Omaha, and Bro. Anderson, president of the Scandinavian Branch, asked me to stay and preach at his house. After preaching one arose for baptism and I was asked to officiate. Came home next day and found my family in a condition not to be left; did not go on my mission to Canada as conference appointed. So I have labored in Iowa most of my time. Attended the Reunion and told of my family and asked to be permitted to stay near home and do the best I could. The members present of the Quorum of the Twelve and the Bishop thought best for me to labor in Iowa. So I have preached at Crescent, at Weston, at Wheeler's Grove, at Farm Creek, at Schick's Grove, at Dawsenburg, and many times in Keystone Branch, also in Shenandoah and Elm Creek, and in Des Moines District, and in Fontanelle, and many other places. Have removed much prejudice and made many friends for the cause of truth; have been blessed of the Lord in ministering the word and to the sick. Have baptized twelve and confirmed them. Helped to confirm several others, and blessed seventeen children. Am still striving and willing to work for the cause of truth wherever your wisdom may direct.

Elder Hiram Robinson writes from Elwell, Pennsylvania:

I have labored in Carroll, Belmont, and Athens counties, Ohio; in Marshall, Ritchie and Wayne counties West Virginia, and in Montour, Luzerne, Lackawanna, and Bradford counties, Pennsylvania. In some new places good interest was manifested, and many acknowledged the truth; but found excuses which they thought would justify them in their disobedience. In some places I think much good could have been done if I had had means to continue the work. The lack of united efforts and the manifestations of false spirits have been great hinderances to the progress of the work in this mission. I have baptized two and done all other duties that belong to my calling; labored to the best of my ability, and I am willing to do all I can for the advancement of the work; but judging from the past, I will not be able to spend all of my time in the field.

Elder Thomas Nutt, present, reports:

I have labored in Pottawattamie District some, and since last report have baptized four there. Have also labored in Galland's Grove District, baptizing five, and opening one new place by the name of Portsmouth. Have administered to quite a number of the sick with very good success. Started on a mission to Minnesota on January 24th, arriving at Clitherall on the 26th, and was very kindly received by the citizens. While in Minnesota I preached in all forty discourses, baptized twenty-one, blessed twenty-nine children, and met and refuted objections raised by apostates a number of times. Returned home to Shelby, Iowa, March 27th.

Elder Rudolph Etzenhouser, present, reports:

I have been almost incessantly engaged during the past year. That more might have been done is possible, and much better, yet I have a degree of peace in that done. The first six months were spent in the Des Moines District, the last six in the territory adjacent, all of which is promising territory. Some labor was also done in the Eastern Iowa District. I have tried to labor harmoniously with local officers throughout. Bro. I. N. White has been with me much. Brethren J. S. Roth and J. F. McDowell also worked with me for a time. I have been blessed much in presenting the word, also in officiating in the various ordinances. Have baptized fifteen, confirmed a portion of them, and assisted in confirming others. Administered to sick with good results. Blessed a number of children, and did such other work as was necessary. The last six months were fraught with so much opposition as to be very trying, especially in Viola and vicinity, where at times our personal safety was endangered; but the kind Father overruled all for good, and the work is onward, and we rejoice in it more and more as our knowledge increases. With the inviting field that I have been in so long, as also from Bro. White, who has become a very endeared associate, I am loth to part, yet am willing to go elsewhere if it shall be found wise to continue me in the general ministry. I trust that I shall be placed in that part of God's heritage where I can best serve the work, and that sustaining grace will be given me.

Elder Joshua Armstrong, present, reports:

At your last sitting I was appointed to labor in Nebraska, but up to June 1st I was detained at home on account of sickness in my family, but since the above date I have prosecuted the mission as my circumstances would admit of. Have been blessed in my labors, God bearing witness by his Spirit, giving me liberty to present his truth, although I have not been blessed like some, by inducting a great number into the kingdom. I have baptized but one. I feel to say something like Paul, that my calling is to preach and not to baptize many. I find a great many that say they are ready, but they do not obey. I am satisfied that my preaching is not in vain, for God is with me in the administrations of his word. I have blessed three children, assisted in the ordination of one Priest and one Teacher, and administered a number of times to the sick, with good results. I find Nebraska a good field to labor in, as there is a large immigration to the state. But the laborers are few and very easily counted. The cry is heard from almost every quarter, "Come and preach for us." I love the work and feel at home when in the mission of the Master, and am willing to continue with my whole might, mind and strength. I have sacrificed considerable the last year, but all I ask is that my wife and little ones be cared for, and I am willing to go any where you may direct. My labors have mostly been in the Southern Nebraska District. I have preached in Nebraska City, Plattsmouth, Omaha and Wilber, and in the counties of Douglas, Cass, Otoe, Gage, Lancaster, Saunders, Saline and Webster.

Elder George Hicklin, present, reports:

Since my appointment last April to labor in the Missouri and Kansas Mission, I have been all the time in the North-East Missouri District, and have acted as president thereof. I have labored in Macon, Randolph, Knox, Linn and Marion counties, and made many friends to the cause, and many good openings for preaching. In nearly every place was requested to return. There is good prospect for quite an ingathering before long. While I have had more calls than I could attend to, yet I have done all that I could. I have preached about one hundred and forty-eight times, baptized two, attended three funerals, solemnized one marriage, and administered to a number of sick, to nearly all with marked results, and attended one court of Elders. I have attended four conferences in this district and visited each branch several times. Three of the branches are doing well, but as to Bevier I hardly know what to say about it. The prospect outside the branches is very good. I am, as ever willing to labor any where this conference may deem it wise to appoint me.

Elder T. T. Hinderks, present, reports:

I have labored some in the field assigned to me. In May, 1883, I was called by the president of the mission to go with Bro. J. T. Kinnaman into North-west Kansas District. I preached chiefly among the Germans and with good results. After a stay of five weeks we returned home. My health was poor at that time. After a good rest it improved some. I learned that my mother-in-law in Iowa, was sick, and went to see her; staid about five weeks and preached to the Germans there. Prejudice seems to give way where the people will listen to us. I baptized six, and left others investigating, also distributed a good many German tracts, namely, "One Baptism," and the Epitome." I find that the mission among the Germans is a great one, and few are the laborers. My desire is to do all I can. My health is very poor. So that I was not able to do much preaching the past winter. I desire your faith and prayers, that I may again receive health and strength.

Elder Henry Kemp, present, reports:

I have labored to the best of my ability during the past year. God has blessed me in preaching and in administering the sacred ordinances. In administering to the sick I have been greatly favored; some have been entirely healed and many have received great benefit. I have had charge of the Fremont District, and, generally speaking, the saints feel well. They have also manifested their faith by their works in contributing of their means for its support. I think that I can truthfully state that the work in that part of the Lord's vineyard is in a healthy condition. We have not baptized as many during the last year as we would wish, but many are believing and express themselves satisfied with the gospel as presented by us. Others have declared their intentions to obey soon. I have only baptized five myself, and I think that not more than twenty have been added to the district altogether. We have received help from other Elders for which we feel thankful. Brother Deuel has labored at Key Stone to the satisfaction of that branch. Brother Derry also assisted us greatly at our two days' meeting held at the Key Stone branch, also Bro. R. M. Elvin. Bro. C. St. Clair preached and baptized three in Hamburg. Bro. E. C. Briggs, who has charge of the mission, has bestowed a very liberal share of his labors with us. In Hamburg he nobly defended our glorious cause in debate with Elder Johnson of the Christian Church. Bro. R. J. Anthony also helped us, and much good was done by his labors. The truth must eventually triumph, and those who walk in its glorious light will be crowned in the kingdom of our God. I desire to do the will of God in all things, and am at your disposal.

Elder M. H. Bond, writes from Hornertown, New Jersey:

My time the past year has been spent in the New England states, eastern New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, but mostly in the Massachusetts District. I have been blessed in the presentation of the gospel. God has been merciful, and had I not been aided in a marked manner I should not have continued. I believe the gospel with all my heart, and would like to be able to persuade men to be reconciled to God and his ways by appeal to the evidences which he so abundantly has given. The need of wise, conscientious, God fearing men to preach the gospel in the eastern field is very great. Brethren Gilbert and Sheehy are needed in many places at the same time, and they can not nearly fill the calls made, or stay long enough in one place. The local ministry are laboring with good effect in many places. None so strong, wise, or experienced however that do not perhaps at times give offense, and there are things to regret and improvements to be made. But whoever comes into this field will find as intelligent and God-fearing people as are to be found any where in the Church. I expect to continue in the field if conference so orders.

Elder Moses R. Scott, writes from Scottsville, Indiana:

I have endeavored to magnify my calling to the extent of my ability, and have labored at various points in Floyd county Indiana, and assisted Bro. T. W. Smith in a series of meetings at the Eden Branch in the same county. I visited Jefferson County, both in August and November and spoke at various places. In September I visited Dubois and Crawford counties; spoke at Birdseye, Anderson, and Marietta. In February I visited the same points and also some in Perry county. In company with Bro. H. Scott and W. H. Kelley (of New Albany) I attended the conference at the Pleasant Ridge Branch, which by the kindness of the Christians was held in their church house. I have assisted in confirming some, and in administering to the sick and in blessing some children, and have felt a degree of the Spirit. A goodly number of the points that I have labored at are new ones and I am satisfied that the good seed has been sown, and that the fruit will appear by and by. Prejudice is giving way, and the work is in better condition than at any time in the past. What good I have done the future will develop, and should you continue me I will do the best I can.

Elder J. H. Merriam, present, reports:

Being appointed by your assembly at Kirtland, I have labored in several places in this district, baptized one, assisted in confirming three, blessed two children, and attended to all other duties required of me. I still desire the progress of the work.

Elder Samuel Brown writes from Aldbrough, Ontario:

In the early part of the year I did not do much labor in the Master's vineyard, but later I labored with Bro. J. A. McIntosh in Osborne, Ellis and Ailiston, also in the Kent and Elgin District with Bro. James Robb, at Wilkesport, Petrolia, and assisted at the funeral of Sister Blanchard of St. Clair, Michigan. Also labored in Blenheim, and assisted Bro. Arthur Leverton to organize a branch at Ridgetown. Was at Albrough with Bro. James Tyrell. At that place there is a good interest; one gave name for baptism, and others are investigating. I have enjoyed good liberty in preaching, more of late than previously. Preached twenty-four times, administered to ten sick people with good results, assisted to organize one branch. I am willing to labor wherever you deem it wise to send me, or the Spirit shall direct.

Elder John Landers, of the High Priests' Quorum, present, reports:

May grace, mercy and peace from our heavenly Father and the Lord Jesus Christ dwell in your hearts, inspiring you for the glorious work for which you are assembled, that your acts may prove to the best possible advantage to the extension and building up of the kingdom of God on the earth. It was forty-seven years last October since I was baptized, and it has been the business of my life, and is still, to promote it to the best of my ability. I am at present presiding over this Blue Rapids Branch, which I believe to be in as prosperous condition as most branches are. For sixty-two years I have been a public speaker. The Lord has commanded me to preach repentance all the days of my life, and I have decreed in my heart never to violate that commandment, and so long as the Lord gives me speech, I am bound to preach this gospel of the kingdom.

Elder C. G. Lanphear, of the High Priests' Quorum, writes from Sandwich, Illinois:

May the peace of Christ and the power and blessings of the Holy Spirit be with you in all your meetings. It is my desire and purpose to ever be found as a witness for Christ and his gospel at all times. I am now on a visit to my children and former acquaintances here, but expect to return to Independence ere long.

Elder J. D. Bennett writes from Cuba, Kansas:

My heart is still in the cause, and I have spared no pains to discharge my duty faithfully. I have been prospered temporally and spiritually, and although I have given one third to one half of my time to the work, the Lord has put it into the hearts of all classes, wherever I have labored, to administer to my necessities. During the past two years I have adopted the rule to leave no opening until the testimony of the gospel was fully borne. I have traveled in heat and cold, and at times suffered keenly from the inclemency of the weather, and in some instances been met with the coldest indifference by those whom I so earnestly desired to benefit, yet I have never lacked a friend nor the necessary comforts of life in any locality. I have more calls than I am able to reach.

Elder C. St. Clair, present, reports:

I have preached since last Spring sixty-seven times and baptized nine, also preached two funeral discourses outside of Lord's church. Have distributed about one thousand tracts, epitomes, and others. Would be glad if the Conference will find it advisable to give me a field of labor. Would prefer either North-western Ohio or Astoria, W. T., but do not desire to dictate, but am ready to go wherever directed.

Elder John Eames writes from Cheyenne, Wyoming:

I am pleased to say that we have a branch of the Church in Cheyenne. It was organized March 2d, 1884, with two Elders, two Priests, one Teacher, in all twelve members. Others have promised to join us. I feel that my heavenly Father will bless this branch, though this is almost the last place for a branch of the Lord's Church to be, but I am happy to say that I think this work will roll on in Cheyenne. We also have a Sunday School. Bro. Barrett is the Superintendent.

Letters were also read from Brn. Cyriel E. Brown, Francis-Earl and M. M. Turpen, each breathing an excellent spirit of zeal and devotion for the cause. From Tahiti also came letters, written by Tehopea, Metuore, Torohia and Vaiarea, native ministers on the Society Islands, giving account of the condition of affairs there, and asking the church to send missionaries there. Pres. Smith said that he had answered these letters as best he could, and told them that it rested with the church concerning sending missionaries there.

Appointments were announced for meetings to-morrow morning by the Quorum of Seventy, and the First and Third Quorum of Elders, and of services this evening and to-morrow.

Evening services began by singing "O thou God who hearest prayer." Bro. M. T. Short offered prayer, which was followed by a sermon from Bro. J. F. Burton; the words, "Every one who is of the truth heareth my words," were the basis of the discourse.

TUESDAY, APRIL 8TH.

At nine o'clock the appointed prayer meeting was held, in charge of Brn. John Hawley and J. S. Patterson.

At half-past ten, preaching by Bro. Joshua Armstrong, assisted by Bro. T. N. Hudson.

At half-past one, sang, "In thy name, O, Lord, assembling." Prayer by Pres. Smith.

Committee on credentials made an addition to their report, which will be found with the report.

MINISTRY REPORTS.

The following reports were read by the secretary:

Elder W. W. Blair, of the First Presidency, writes from San Francisco, Cal:

I take pleasure in reporting that the Rocky Mountain Mission is in a fairly healthy and progressive condition. Its numbers are increasing, its influence extending wider and deeper, and its prospects encouraging. Active, intelligent, spiritual ministers are needed to aid those already in the field, and none but able-bodied, vigorous, thorough-going men are or can be acceptable, as there are many hardships, inconveniences, and exposures to encounter, especially in the winter and early Spring. Young, or only middle-aged men, are the ones best fitted, physically. The Brighamite Mormons are likely to be forced to an issue direct, as to whether they will or will not obey the laws of the land and be subject to its rulers. I have never doubted but that civil authority will be clearly asserted, and faithfully executed and maintained in the near future, and that "Brighamism" will lose its very life-power entirely, and in a most signal manner; and present indications strongly confirm this. The thoughtful and liberal minded among the Utah Morimons are hopeful of a radical and favorable change in their Church affairs; but the most of the chief leaders, with their illiberal, un-reasoning, and fanatical devotees, seem to increase in blindness, bigotry, and desperation. The policy and doctrine of the Reorganization are better understood, and more kindly entertained by all who love truth and right, who become acquainted with them, whether Mormon of non-Mormon; and the sharp lines of division and distinction which lie between "Brighamism" and the true faith are more generally seen and noted by those in civil authority, by journalists, book writers, lecturers, and the like; and these are matters of much encouragement.

The genuine doctrines of the Church, those clearly set forth in the sacred records of the Church, should be wisely and diligently taught in order to deliver the captives from the meshes of the blinding, blighting, latter day apostasy, and to inform all who will hear, of God's "marvelous work and a wonder;" and to these ends we ask that suitable ministers be sent to labor in the mission. One or two spiritual and intelligent young Elders would find a most excellent field in Montana. But they should be well instructed in the history and doctrine of the Church, skillful in argument, patient, exemplary, full of charity, and strong, active, and healthy in body, as the country is new, inconveniences for travel many, and the population made up in part of Missouri and Illinois mobocrats, and their sympathisers, and of Morrisites and others who left the Utah Mormons. What is true of Montana is also true of Idaho, and two or more suitable Elders would find an ample field there. The district of Utah needs many Elders, some of whom should be Welsh and Scandinavian. Elders Brand, Hansen, and Hudson will probably report much information from that field, including its needs. Don't fail to send a suitable Scandinavian ministry, as there are in Utah and Southern Idaho many who can understand only the Scandinavian languages. Elder H. N. Hansen can advise wisely in this matter.

Upon the urgent call of dissenting Utah Mormons in Southern Colorado, President Joseph Smith advised, (myself concurring), that I should visit and labor among them; and I therefore went straightway to Antonito, Manassa, and Ephraim in Conejos county, held a series of meetings, baptized eleven, ordained four Elders, one Priest, two Teachers and one Deacon. I also organized them into the "Freedom Branch." By advices lately received I learn two hundred and fifty or three hundred have left the Utah Mormons under the influence of the work planted there, and that likely more will follow.

By request of many persons in California, Pres. Joseph Smith and myself thought it best that I should visit and labor in the Pacific mission for a season. Owing to excessive rains and impassable roads my labors were much hindered in Southern California; yet I trust much good will result from what I could do at San Bernardino, Santa Ana, Los Angeles, and other points. Some additions were made, and a goodly number more expressed their intention to unite with the Church. That district is destined to progress considerably. I find the work in this the Central District promising. The Elders evince greater unity and zeal, and the membership feel much encouraged. Presiding Elder J. B. Price has entered upon his duties with commendable energy and promptitude, and his noble example will no doubt inspire his fellow-laborers to active, persistent efforts. It is probable I shall remain in this state and Nevada for the next few weeks and then return to Utah and the Rocky Mountain Mission. The day you convene will mark the twenty-fifth year of my active and continuous labors in the travelling ministry, days which have been by far the most eventful and happy of my life, during which I have seen the Church increase from about seventy-five souls to near thirty-thousand, and rise from obscurity to honorable prominence. May the dear Lord bless and guide you all in the varied exercises of the session, and through the entire journey of life, that when life's labors are closed, we may joyfully meet in the "General Assembly of the Church of the First Born," in a world redeemed and glorified.

Elder James Caffall, of the Quorum of the Twelve, writes from Manassa, Colorado:

My time since last report has been wholly occupied in parts of the ministerial field assigned me. To my mind there are some important points in Nebraska, and I have been gratified to note some increase of local efficiency and zeal, proving an impetus to the cause where such desirable changes are visible. Would that this improvement was more general; it should be. 'Tis not enough that wrong doing, or immoral conduct be condemned; proof must be given by proper official interference in reproving and bringing back the erring, or disallowing his conduct, as evidence that the church is not a nursery for crime. It is a mistake to suppose that labor which the law of God imposes, when rightly performed, evinces spite, or a desire to trample on the erring. Christ was just as precise and emphatic in teaching his apostles the method of adjudication to be enforced when necessary, as he was in teaching them the laws of adoption. And none have the right to cry halt, when Christ commands a forward movement. The boat that free-thinkers are fitting up may be very enticing, but Latter Day Saints can not ride therein, and be consistent advocates of an exclusive gospel economy. The present age is one of formality. The revelations given through the Seer from 1828 to 1834 contain general laws for quorums and individuals, and their ratification by a solemn assembly of the church made them binding upon said church; which position the Reorganized Church has endorsed, and hence comes under the guidance of said laws. Nor do I think that another solemn, or general assembly is necessary to render those laws, or that discipline plain; or to decide whether we believe them or no, after so many and strenuous efforts have been made to instruct the world therein. The work made legal and binding under general law is ample, and increasing—we should enter in and occupy—leaving special matters or arrangements for the Lord to manage after the counsel of his own will. The road to the unknown is the walking in the known, made plain by heaven's prescribed duties.

I was unexpectedly called from Nebraska to Colorado in January, and through the politeness of Pres. Joseph Smith opened a correspondence with Bro. W. L. Ball, one of the number causing a Mormon revolt in Manassa, of which you have been apprised. At his suggestion I arrived here February 28th, and up to this time have preached thirty-five public discourses, held a number of private discussions, and answered some private inquiries. Eight have been added. Elder W. W. Blair preceded me, whose labors were very effective, eleven during his stay being added; there are others believing our doctrine, and present indications are that more will unite. Much evidence of dissatisfaction exists with the southern people, as they stop to think, study and compare the procedure of the Utah priesthood with the teaching of the books; and in refusing to be longer governed thereby they have but used the right belonging to free men. No society or men, ought to want to hold others contrary to their desires. As to numbers in the revolt, I think there have been some exaggerated reports, though it is pretty certain that a number who claim to be loyal, for some unknown reason, or slow to beloud in complaints, are very much dissatisfied. Few, comparatively, of those in revolt, have as yet united, though many claiming to admit the validity of our position. About seven families, numbering thirty-six souls, have moved to points outside of this (Zion's) limits. Six or eight other families aggregating about sixty souls are now preparing to move off. I am not prepared to give an accurate estimate of the number that have, and will leave between now and Fall. But it is safe to say unless those who have decided to leave shall change, the number will be between one and two hundred. Some who have left, though claiming faith in our doctrine have failed to unite; others who remain say that it is enough for them to have been deceived once; others rest satisfied that they were sincere in what they did, while there is reason to believe others will become reckless. But it is cheering to know that those who have united are contented and happy, with increased faith in the latter day work. Besides the nineteen in Manassa, four have been added in Hutchinson, and three in Sterling, since last report. From a few considerate and kind hearted saints, south and west, I received a response to the appeal for help through the mite method, towards the erection of a church building in Denver. But all earthly prospects having vanished, I have turned said funds, eight dollars, to the Bishop. The few Colorado Saints stood ready to do a good share, but could not bear the whole burden. And had five thousand Saints done what a few did through the mite system; we might to-day have had a respectable church building in the proud city of Denver. But the mite system is too insignificant for many, and so we often fail in the accomplishment of grand results. I am not in favor of special legislation or the granting of special favors, though such a procedure may at times be proper, but think, when a representative pleads for a project which could be consummated with five or ten thousand members giving five cents, some attention ought to be paid thereto. And with such co-operation a representative might sometime meet with success. But deprived of it, a failure ensues, and he perhaps to be charged with incompetency or a lack of enterprise. It often happens that different fields require different aid, or co-operation. Hence a proper and wise discrimination is needed, as well in the appointing of missionaries as in the help for the missionary. While I appreciate the kindness of the body in receiving the statement I offered in my last report, labor demanding my attention in my appointed field has precluded the time and money required; to gather evidence for vindication, so whatever the result may be, the matter rests where it did, and those who want to pass judgment must do so. I have always thought myself amenable to the body for my official acts, and do yet; always willing to submit to every legal examination however scrutinizing, but can not say that I am very deeply in love with any modus operandi in private, or before a council, ultimating in publishing a fellow as a malefactor, before the public bar, without a chance to see how it's done, or say a word in self defense. Present need of the work in this locality, the amount of money needed, are hindering causes in attending your present session. I hope for you and the cause a peaceful and profitable time.

Elder H. C. Bronson, present, reports:

I was by you appointed to Western Illinois and Eastern Iowa. My time has been entirely spent for the last year in said mission. I have labored in Kewanee, Galva, Galesburg, Maroa, Lewis-town, Millersburg, Buffalo Prairie, Brownsville, Andalusia, Rock-Creek and Burnside in Illinois, and Clinton, Buffalo, Burlington, Montrose, and Keokuk, in Iowa. In many of these places I have labored in connection with Bro. M. T. Short. And in many of these places I feel quite sure that good has resulted, and will still result. In all my labors I have been remarkably blessed spiritually and temporally. I have baptized eleven and attended to other duties. In conclusion I ask you not to overlook this field in the consideration of missions. It is a field that should not be forsaken and it is necessary for the good of the work that one or two missionaries should be kept there continually, as there is very little work done by local elders outside of the branches. I am still for the master's work as Conference may in wisdom dictate.

Elder J. T. Kinnaman, present, reports:

Since my last appointment I have labored as follows: At the call of President A. H. Smith I went to Clay County, Kansas, and attended their conference, preaching and taking part in their business. After conference I remained a week and preached. Then in answer to request, went into Republic County where I spoke to the people about a week; baptized and confirmed one. Thence back to Clay county and spoke to them over Sabbath. Then to Blue Rapids and preached a few times; thence to Netawaka and preached over Sunday; thence home, having been gone five weeks. Was compelled to stay at home a while. As district president I visited most of the branches in my district, and as soon as possible was off again to Kansas, this time with W. T. Bozarth as my companion. Preached in the above named places with the addition of Morganville and a place South of Blue Rapids, where we had good congregations. There Bro. W. T. Bozarth became sick and had to go home. I preached a week longer at Blue Rapids, thence to Centralia and Good Intent, thence home, and have precluded the balance of my time in this district. Have labored in the branch principally. Began preaching on Saturday March 10th, in the M. E. Church at Kingston, Missouri. Bro. W. T. Bozarth came on Monday and we held forth until the next Sabbath evening with good liberty. Baptized seven and did what other ministerial work was to be done. I'm still willing to labor for the Master, and am confident that truth will triumph.

Elder J. P. Knox writes from Rockwell City, Iowa:

I left the Conference of 1883 and went directly to Pennsylvania, the field assigned me. My labor was mostly confined to Fayette County, but I did some preaching in Allegheny County. I was there something over two months, and then left on account of sickness. I was sorely afflicted, so much so that I felt alarmed at my condition, hence I came home. I have been laboring with Brother N. Stamm, in Calhoun County, Iowa, this winter. My health is good at present, and if you think me worthy of your confidence and another appointment, I am at your service.

Elder E. L. Kelley, present, reports:

I have been engaged a part of the time traveling in the interest of the temporal affairs of the Church specially, and other parts doing the work of a spiritual laborer as circumstances seemed to demand. Together with the Bishop I visited many places in the East, and for four weeks was in company with a most excellent and worthy representative, Bro. F. M. Sheehy, in Maine. Wherever I have been I have found good and wise representatives and noble Saints, and found a rising impulse in their hearts to do more for the Master's work than they have in the past. In the Fall I was placed under circumstances which required me to visit Nebraska, where with Bro. R. M. Elvin, Columbus Scott and others, I was made to realize the great demands for work in the southern part of that state. From there I returned to Kirtland, after visiting a few points in Iowa, and there devoted my time except a visit to Chicago, Galien, Mich., and to Pittsburg, where I was called to special labors. At Pittsburg where I met with many of the Saints, there seemed to be a special interest manifest for the growth of the work. Brn. Ells, Griffiths, Shinn, Criley and other ministers present were working together harmoniously which was a good omen. The discussion which I was compelled to look after took much of my time from my regular work, which I deeply regretted, besides required the expenditure of some two hundred and fifty dollars to protect the work from subsequent misrepresentation and successful assault. Of much of this however it is thought there may be a return in the future. Since my work at Kirtland closed there is still felt a great desire to hear more of the faith, and since I have arrived at this conference, I have additional requests for W. H. Kelley to preach in Painsville, nine miles away, and for copies of his sermon delivered the 1st of March by him for publication in two papers in North Ohio. I have a hope for the future of the work and its final recognition by the pure and good everywhere, but don't expect it to be brought about unless we all work, every man in his particular place and calling.

Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, present, reports:

Herewith I respectfully submit a full and complete report of the finances and business of the Church for the year ending March 31st, 1884. Notwithstanding the fact that in many parts of the country there has been a scarcity of means from the partial failure of crops and other causes, the receipts of the Church indicate a general awakening and interest on the part of the Saints for the advancement of the work, from every part of the United States, the Canadas and some parts of the British Isles, that must be gratifying to those wishing good to Zion's cause. At the beginning of the fiscal year just past there was a cash balance in the treasury and in the hands of the Agents of $4,046.65, two thousand of which were the proceeds of the sale of Church land; but it was found necessary in the first half of the year to actually supply many districts from the main treasury. Later in the year the demand by my Agents upon me for funds ceased, and many of these same districts have been enabled to place back into the treasury the amount, and more, than they were compelled to call for in the early summer.

The last General Conference of the Church sustained and sent out into the missionary field sixty-five general laborers. Later in the year, where there was an urgent necessity and the requirements from the treasury were not too great, with the advice of the Church authorities where the labor was to be performed, I have supplied to a limited amount nine others who could thereby spend a few months laboring, thus making for the Church a part of the year a total of seventy-four laborers besides the local work. This number, which is much larger than has been maintained heretofore, have been fairly supplied, and with but few exceptions without complaint; and where complaint has been made on the part of the minister, I have not been able to see from a comparison of the supplies and necessities with that of others, that there could possibly exist any good reason therefor.

From the very nature of the work imposed upon me of adjusting the disbursement of the funds to cases in every part of the country where the demands are necessarily different by reason of locality, size of families, and surrounding circumstances, so as to meet and fulfill the demands of the law which holds that the distributing shall be in accordance with the necessities and wants of individuals, as well as the particular duties and work which they are called to, it will require a little patience at times on the part of the minister, and with this all real troubles can be righted; but it ought to be remembered, that in this matter the body have some rights and voice, and that I must render also a true account to the Master, the head of the Church, and such being the case, I ought not to be expected to act except as I can upon the fullest information and knowledge.

The net receipts of tithes and offerings for the year has been, aside from the gifts to Elders, $14,177.87. This doubtless is the largest amount of actual receipts for these purposes that has ever been in the Church since the Reorganization. Of the thirty-four Elders who have reported, there has been added to this the sum of $2,247.23. This shows a state and feeling on the part of the Saints and friends of the work that gives to me much encouragement for the future, and that enables me to make some assurances to the First Presidency and the Twelve, that the families of the laborers for the future whom they may wisely select and place in the fields, shall receive due care as the Lord has provided in his word. Not only this, but that the body has determined to move forward in the matter of publishing the gospel of peace, and sacrifice if need be with the sacrifice of the Elder whom they send forth for the glory of God, and the establishment of his work.

I call attention to the fact that of the whole number of missionaries sent out by the body, only thirty-four have made their reports to me as the law provides, and the rule of Conference also has made binding. This I can not overlook while I am in the position in which you have placed me, and it remains for you to determine whether any who neglects or refuses to comply with the rules governing shall be considered authorized representatives of the body who are entitled to protection from the treasury after they shall have had due notice to comply.

With regard to the funds placed in my hands for the repairing of the Kirtland Temple I have to report a total of $2,738.59 receipts, and $2,209.30 expenditures by the committee, as heretofore reported and published. This leaves a balance in my hands for that purpose of $529.29. There is a great need for the completion of the work on the Temple; and it will greatly help the Church, not only in the immediate vicinity, but by representation and effect through the world's travelers, in every land. There are offerings coming into the treasury for the purpose, and the good work should continue. It will rest with this body to say what shall be done in this regard the coming year.

In my general report I have made also a statement of the present assets and liabilities of the Church not including church buildings and grounds, and some other things which will doubtless turn to the benefit of the Church, but which have not yet fully come into its possession. The total assets at the beginning of the fiscal year are $8,038.60. The only liability a balance to agents of $6.40, which leaves the Church in a good working condition for the coming year.

From the numerous cases of care of the poor falling upon the Church, many aged, and who must have due provision made, it seems necessary that at the earliest time practicable there should be steps taken for the providing of a particular place for this purpose, and I would recommend that the matter be considered by this conference.

On motion the Bishop's report was referred to a committee, and the President appointed Brn. Wm. Leeka, Temme Hinderks and J. F. Burton.

Bro. Henry A. Stebbins, Church Secretary and Recorder, reported:

CHURCH RECORDER'S REPORT.

It is a pleasure to me to say to the General Conference of 1884, and to the church, that the Church Records are more full and complete than at any previous time, the labor of years having brought perfection nearer. The above 486 branches and fragments of branches, as they appear at this time upon the Church Records, aggregate a total of 15,705 members, a net gain of 644 over last year, being 224 more than was the gain of a year ago over the previous year. This excess is chiefly, if not altogether, due to corrections obtained from a number of branches whose records had not been reported for several years.

And I will here say that all regions were pretty generally heard from through the district officers or missionaries, and very good corrections obtained except from Florida, Western Wisconsin, Northern Minnesota and Northern California, from whose district conferences no branch reports are ever forwarded. However, in the latter district the officers of several branches responded to the call by letter, and sent corrections. To some degree this neglect is found in other districts also; but I am pleased to say that several districts have chosen more order-loving, efficient, and energetic district clerks than they have had before: thus progress is being made. And I thank all those, both in districts and branches, who have assisted in the work, both officers and members, both brethren and sisters. Bro. E. C. Brand has corrected every record in Utah, traveling five hundred miles or upwards for the purpose, during the winter.

The following table shows the net loss and gain by countries and states, and the totals in the same in contrast with those of last year. It will be seen that in net gains the following take precedence: Iowa, first; Missouri, second; England, third; Alabama, fourth; Nebraska, fifth; Kansas, sixth.

Subtracting 93 from 737, we have 644 as the net gain over loss.

On March 27th, I finished the final copy of the Index of Names ordered by the General Conference, September 29th, 1882. It covers twenty-four thousand and five hundred and fifty-seven (24,557) entries of names, that is all that are reported to me up to October 1st, 1882. Many persons being found upon different pages of Records B, C, and D. The total number of names is one hundred and eleven (111) less than twenty thousand, or nineteen thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine. The difference between this number and the number now reported is accounted for by deaths, expulsions, and changes of name by marriage; those women married since their baptism being indexed by both names.

The labor of copying upon sheets, and arranging in alphabetical order, all sir names and given names, before any could be copied into the Index Book, was the chief part of the work, and it was no brief task nor holiday employment, particularly where there are so many names that are exactly alike, and where the records sent in years ago were often entirely deficient in items, so that to distinguish between parties of the same name was often difficult.

I present a table, as information to the curious, showing the number of different sir names beginning with each letter of the alphabet, as follows:

Letter	Number of Names	Letter	Number of Names
A	105	K	103
B	387	L	172
C	326	M	306
D	157
E	89
F	133
G	180
H	332
I	16
J	45
K	103
M	306

Thus there are over three thousand five hundred different family or sir names upon the Church Record, and each one had to be placed in its proper order in the Index. Of the names the most common are found as follows: 337 Smiths, 214 Jones, 214 Williams, 196 Davis and Davies, 176 Browns, 163 Johnsons, 146 Thomas, 102 Andersons, 97 Lewis, 94 Evans, 92 Wilsons, 91 Taylors, 87 Thompsons, 85 Millers, 78 Moores, 77 Whites, 77 Clarks, 77 Allens, 74 Cooks, 74 Roberts, 71 Scotts, 71 Youngs, and so on downward. Of names alike there are 24 Mary Jones, 24 Mary Williams, 20 Mary Browns, 20 Mary Smiths, 12 Ann Smiths, 9 John and 7 Joseph Smiths; and other names, particularly the Davids, Williams, Elizabeths, Margarets, Sarahs and Marthas, that occur by the sixes, or tens, or dozens, to the most common sir names, as those mentioned and others not mentioned.

In accordance with the order of the General Conference, I have continued to enroll names for the Fifth Quorum of Elders. Besides those heretofore reported, and list published in the Herald of July 28th, 1883, the following have since made application, namely Elders William Aird, C. E. Aldrich, T. J. Bell, T. N. Fields, H. S. Gill, C. A. Hall, N. N. Hazleton, J. D. Jones (of Kansas), Ekin Lovell, Elisha McEvers, Robert Oehring, Levi Phelps and Thomas Venables, making 77 with those previously enrolled. I will send to the officers of the First Quorum a complete list of the 77, so that an organization of the Fifth Quorum may be effected, if enough of them are present at the conference to so do, or if other Elders are present to be enrolled and be organized with those present already enrolled.

No applications have been made for the organization of another Quorum of Priests, or for quorums of Teachers and Deacons, as provided by the revelation and by resolution of General Conference in September, 1882.

Elsewhere in the minutes will be found a synopsis of the reports of districts, the leading facts being copied by me, as last year district reports did not appear in the published minutes.

Of requests for ministerial labor there has come to hand the following:—One from Bro. Chute in behalf of the saints in Alabama and Florida, asking that Bro. R. J. Anthony be returned to the South Eastern Mission; a resolution from the Pittsburg District, requesting the re-appointment of Bro. G. T. Griffiths to that mission; one from the Northern Minnesota District, asking the appointment of Bro. Thomas Nutt to that field; a letter from Bro. Aldrich, of Oregon, saying that the saints greatly desire that some one be appointed to labor in that land, believing that the Lord has a people there, whom proper labor will gather out; a letter from Bro. Pert, of Western Maine, asking that Brethren Sheehy and Gilbert be continued in the mission that includes that field; also, resolutions of the Massachusetts District, asking that the labors of Bro. Sheehy and Gilbert be confined to that district, and that Bro. M. H. Bond be continued in the east; a petition from the Rocky Mountain Branch for the return of Bro. Caffall to Colorado; a request from the Texas Central District for the continuance of Brethren H. C. Smith, George Montague and A. J. Cato, in that mission, and that Bro. G. S. Hyde be appointed there; also, one from Oak Island Branch for Brethren H. C. Smith and A. J. Cato to be continued, and D. H. Bays to be appointed.

DISTRICT REPORTS.

Welsh Mission: 8 branches, 160 members; 2 baptized, 6 emigrated to America, 7 died and 6 expelled, making a net loss of 17 during the year. T. E. Jenkins, president; Benjamin Davies, clerk. Bro. Jenkins writes: "I am happy to state that there are some very faithful Saints in Wales. Among these are Elders Wm. Morris, D. Davies, J. Lewis and D. Meredith, who, though working in the coal pit six days in the week were out last Summer every Sunday preaching out of doors, from village to village. There is peace and union in every branch, but the energy that ought to characterize Latter Day Saints is wanting, and those not of us are satisfied with what they have. We pray God to revive his people, to soften the hearts of others and to disperse the darkness, that we may yet see the work of the Lord flourish in this country."

Florida District: Has 10 branches that contain about 400 members. The work is in a low condition, though there has been a slight increase in the membership during the past year. Very little local labor has been done, and branch officers have, in general, been inactive, though a few have tried to do something. So writes the president of the district, Bro. Scarelliff, who says that he has labored in the district about four months, the rest of his time being devoted to the other parts of his mission. Bro. R. J. Anthony labored very acceptably and the Saints wish for his return there. Bro. E. W. Cato, of Missouri, also labored there for a few weeks and did good.

Nauvoo and String Prairie District, Illinois and Iowa: 8 branches, (one of them disorganized), containing 321 members. During the year 7 have been added and 5 lost, leaving 2 as net gain. S. J. Salisbury, president; O. Owen, clerk.

South-Eastern District, Illinois: Contains 5 branches, numbering 273 members, besides 7 members not in any branch. I. A. Morris, president; J. W. Stone, clerk. The work is stated to be in good condition, with very many calls for preaching, more than the local ministry can answer. The traveling ministers of the church would be welcomed there.

Decatur District, Iowa: 10 branches and 2 fragments, with 1005 members on record, including officials. Henry A. Stebbins, president; Edwin H. Gurley, clerk. During the past year 54 have been baptized, 63 received from other districts, 26 removed to other districts, 10 died and 6 expelled, leaving 75 as net gain. Several of the Elders have been active, when time and opportunity permitted, and with good success. At present the prospects are good for an ingathering in several localities if the work is prosecuted, and the expectation now is that it will be, the president intending to devote most of the coming season to it, and several other Elders will doubtless labor all they can. Hence good results are hoped for. A number of Elders have kept up regular appointments the past year in school houses outside of the branches.

Des Moines District, Iowa: 5 branches and 26 scattering members, making a total of 302 members. Increase of 25 by baptism and 8 by letter, and a loss of 18 by letter, 2 by death and 2 by expulsion, or a net gain of 11 members. I. N. White, president; John Sayer, clerk. Bro. White says: "I believe the district at large to be in a better working condition than ever before since its organization. Bro. Nirk, Roth and Shimel, local officials, have done good labor. Bro. Ezenhouser under General Conference appointment has been an active laborer, and Bro. McDowell has also done some good work. We are somewhat perplexed with the spirit of jealousy in two of our branches, otherwise they are in good, working condition."

Fremont District, Iowa: Composed of 7 branches having 352 members and 51 scattering ones, in all 403 members. During the year the gains have been 8 by baptism, 18 by letter, and the losses 17 by letter and 3 died, leaving 6 as a net gain. Henry Kemp, president; J. M. Stubbart, clerk. The work in the district is represented as being in a prosperous condition.

Galland's Grove District, Iowa: Has 13 branches,

643 members including officials. During the year 9 have been baptized and 16 received, 13 have removed, 4 died and 4 been expelled, leaving a net gain of 4 for the year. One new branch (the Earling) has been organized. There are also 12 or 15 scattering ones in the district. Eli Clothier, president and John Pett, clerk. Bro. Clothier says: "Some of the branches are weak and require a good deal of attention, others are strong and in fine condition. The officials deserve great credit for the manner in which they have conducted their respective branches. We wish that all of them were so, but we labor and hope for an advancement. The chances for successful preaching in the district were never better."

Little Sioux District, Iowa: Contains 5 branches, 541 members. A gain of 20 by baptism and 50 otherwise during the year, also a loss of 8 by letter, 2 by death, and 36 by disorganization of branches, leaving a net gain of 24 members. James C. Crabb, president; William C. Cadwell, clerk. Bro. Cadwell reports the district as being in fair condition, in some localities considerable interest manifested with prospects of organizing two or three new branches, while in other places, where in times past the work has prospered, there is now indifference, and one of the oldest branches appears to be hardly able to continue its existence. Yet the Saints throughout the district feel well spiritually, including the many scattering ones within its bounds, and most of these hoping for the organization of branches in their neighborhoods.

Pottawattomie District, Iowa: Contains 5 branches, 458 members. During the year 12 have been added by baptism, 8 by letter and vote; 7 have taken letters, 3 have died, and 3 been expelled, leaving 7 as net gain. C. A. Beebe, president; Fred'k Hansen, clerk.

Central Kansas District: Has 4 branches and 112 members. During the year 3 have been baptized, 1 has died. Daniel Munns, clerk.

Massachusetts District: No statistical report received, but the president, Bro. John Smith, reports that there have been many additions during the past year and but few losses. There has been a large amount of labor bestowed by the local ministry, which has resulted in many additions to the Church. The labor of the General Conference missionaries has also been productive of much good, and there is a great desire in the district that they should be reappointed there. Owing to the great depression in trade and manufacturing in the East, finances are at low tide with the Saints as well as with other people, but also many have heartily responded to the calls for help, having learned that "sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven," hence the work goes on still.

North-East Missouri District: Has 4 branches, 177 members. Some of the branches are in a fair condition while some are not. But it is a favorable territory to labor in, and providing every Elder would do a little outside labor in the country, it is thought that many would be added to the Church, so reports Bro. J. T. Williams, district clerk. Bro. George Hicklin is the president.

St. Louis, Missouri, District: Composed of 8 branches and 2 fragments, with 487 total membership. During the year 10 baptized, 7 received, 7 removed, 7 died, 2 expelled, leaving a net gain of one. There is hope of reorganizing the two that, by removal of many, became disorganized. Spiritual condition of the district is fair, the Saints in general being earnestly engaged and doing their duty. Various gifts of the Spirit are enjoyed among them. The local Elders have preached a good deal, and also Bro. A. H. Smith and B. V. Springer have labored with much acceptance, the latter all his time, but mostly outside of the branches in Crawford, Oregon and Franklin counties. John Baird, president, and J. G. Smith, clerk.

Central Nebraska District: Contains 4 branches, 120 members. There has been a gain of 9 by baptism and 5 by letter, and a loss of one removed, leaving 13 as the net gain for the year. Levi Gamet, president; H. J. Hudson, clerk. Various ones of the traveling ministry have labored in the district during the year with good results, both in the branches and outside of them. Bro. Hudson writes that "the prospect throughout the district is one of quickened life and spiritual power."

Southern Nebraska District: Has 7 branches, 329 members. During the year 26 have been baptized and 23 received, 9 have removed, 3 have died, and 8 been expelled, leaving a net gain of 29 members. Besides the labor of local Elders, ten of the brethren—Apostles, Seventies, and others,—have preached in the district, and three public discussions have been held, resulting in good to the cause. In general the prospects are bright. Levi Anthony, president; R. M. Elvin, clerk.

Nevada District: Bro. Glaud Rodger reports 5 branches, 108 members, but many are widely separated from the others. Yet there is a better feeling of interest than there has been for some years past. He has labored there all Winter, and the Saints seem revived and strengthened. Good attendance at Genoa and Empire, but small at Carson and Franktown.

Western District, Wisconsin: Bro. Frank Hackett writes that the prospect there is not very flattering. Meetings are kept up in two or three branches each Sunday, but the attendance is not very large. Yet the few seem to enjoy a good degree of the Holy Spirit. Only the lack of energy and effort prevents the progress that might be made in the work if zeal and means were united. The Elders who will labor have to support their families and do what they can in the work. They wish some one sent to revive the work there, if some one can be sent.

The above report of the Church Secretary and Recorder was referred to a committee, and Brn. I. N. White, M. T. Short and Stephen Maloney, were appointed.

Bro. Joseph Smith, Business Manager of the Herald Office, submitted a report, with certain letters and a telegram, all of which were read, and the following was moved and adopted:

Resolved, That we accept the report of the Business Manager of the Herald Office, and exonerate the Board of Publication from any charges that they did not use all seeming necessary measures to apprehend the absconder, and that the report be submitted without publication.

The President gave notice that no new business should be introduced after to-morrow's session.

On motion the consideration of the revised Articles on Representation was made the special business for Thursday.

The President made a verbal report concerning the publication of the proposed Danish periodical, and Bro. Peter Anderson said that $140 had been subscribed towards the work.

A resolution and petition from the Des Moines District was read.

The Quorum of Seventy, and the Second and Fifth Quorum of Elders, were notified to meet to-morrow morning, the latter with the object of trying to effect an organization at this session.

Announcements were made for meetings this evening and to-morrow.

In the evening, sang "O God! give strength to all thy Saints." Prayer by Bro. J. F. McDowell. Sang "Lift your glad voices in triumph on high." Bro. G. T. Griffiths preached from Matt. 7: 24, on Faith and Works.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9TH.

The Fifth Quorum of Elders met in the morning, and an organization was effected. The other quorums also held meetings as appointed yesterday.

The morning prayer meeting was placed in charge of Brn. J. A. Robinson and John Beard.

At half-past ten o'clock a sermon was delivered by Bro. R. J. Anthony. He was assisted in the services by Bro. J. J. Kaster.

At half-past one, sang "We hear thy voice, our Father." Prayer by Bro. A. H. Smith.

The report of the committee on the report of the Church Secretary and Recorder was read:

We, your committee on the Church Recorder's report, do hereby report that we have examined all documents that fell into our hands and find the work well executed and correct. I. N. White, M. T. Short, S. Maloney, committee.

The report was accepted and the committee was released.

A portion of the Business Manager's report that was received yesterday was, by his wish, taken up and adopted, reading as follows:

In addition to the foregoing report the Business Manager of the Herald Office takes pleasure in reporting that, that the two notes taken by the Board in the prosecution of its business, and which were adversely reported upon by the investigating committee appointed by you, and which reported to the April session of 1880; the one as "worthless" and the other as an "error" of the Board in carrying it as an asset; have both been paid. And I ask you to grant leave that this report be placed on record in the minutes of conference, as an act of justice to the members constituting the Board when these two notes were taken, as well as in vindication of the good faith of the persons who gave the notes.

Respectfully submitted, April 4th, 1884.

JOSEPH SMITH, Business Manager.

A report and resolutions from the Quorum of the Twelve were read:

To the President of the Conference, Elders and Brethren Assembled, Greeting:—The following members of the Quorum have been in council for several days prior to the assembling of the Conference, and since, and have had under consideration various important and vital questions relating to their rights and privileges as a body, and the welfare of the work in general. Some conclusions have been reached, and others are still under consideration, which will be presented in due time. Among the decisions reached are the following, which are presented for your consideration, and your endorsement respectfully asked:

1. WHEREAS, The law appointing the Quorum of the Twelve and their mission among all nations, and their relationship to the Church, having general supervision of the whole; also constituting them a judiciary, thereby authorizing them to regulate all the affairs of the same, seems not to be understood, or at least is misapprehended; and for this and other causes the Council have been repeatedly hindered in the judicial department of their work.

The revelations given for the purpose of organizing the Church of the Living God upon the earth, for the dispensation of the fulness of time, makes known the several departments of subdivisions into which the kingdom shall be organized for the work of the ministry and the administration of the law governing the entire body. And

WHEREAS, In addition to traveling and preaching in common with their fellow servants, it is enjoined that the Traveling High Council shall take the oversight of the entire work.

Also upon the Traveling High Council there is by law enjoined special duties, to carry out which implies extra prerogatives and responsibilities not imposed as pertaining to other quorums. And to these specialties, the character, right and extent of their presidency they insist, in the nature of the case, must be recognized.

The duties assigned by the law are to build up the Church and regulate all the affairs of the same in all nations. In the discharge of these duties, thus prescribed, of necessity is recognized executive authority, both in its quorum and individual capacity. Wherefore the Council reserves to themselves the right to determine their interference, or otherwise as the case may be, for in the nature of things that prerogative exists with them.

We present this declaration, believing it due to ourselves regarding our calling and the duties therein imposed, especially when acting in our individual capacity, because, as an assembled Quorum, its prerogatives and the character of its decisions are by positive enactment made known.

2. Resolved, That by virtue of their office and calling, as declared by the organic law of the Church, the members of the Quorum of the Twelve are the lawful presidents of the Church abroad in all the world, to preside over, regulate and set in order the same, and that in all the Branches of the Church and Districts, this presiding authority should be acknowledged and acquiesced in by the Presidents of its Branches and Districts. And when one of them is present at a District Conference or Branch Meeting, it should be left discretionary with him, as to whether it would best serve the cause by presiding.

3. Resolved, That the Quorum of the Twelve, as a judicial body have the right, collectively or individually, to render decisions involving the law and usages of the Church, in their various fields of labor, and when such decisions are made by individual members of the Quorum, said decisions are binding on the Church, and should be respected until brought before the Quorum and its decision had.

4. Resolved, That it is the decision of this Quorum that the Bishops of the Church have not the right or authority to dispose of, deed and convey to others, the properties of the Church at their option.

5. Resolved, That a committee from our number be appointed for the purpose of comparing the present and Palmyra Edition of the Book of Mormon, with the Manuscript in the hands of David Whitmer, and that Wm. H. Kelley, T. W. Smith, and A. H. Smith compose said committee.

6. Resolved, That it is the sense of this Quorum that the commandments of a local character, given to the First Organization of the Church, are binding on the Reorganization, only so far as they are either reiterated, or referred to as binding by commandment to this church.

It was moved by Brn. Stebbins and Bays that the report be received and be made the special order for Friday afternoon. Brn. Patterson and Pitt moved as an amendment that the consideration of the report be deferred till the April Conference of 1885.

This was discussed by Brn. E. Robinson, E. L. and W. H. Kelley, H. A. Stebbins, F. G. Pitt, Joseph Luff, A. H. Smith and Jason W. Briggs. Then the amendment being put to vote, was declared lost. The original being put upon its passage prevailed, and Friday afternoon thereby made the time for its consideration. Division being called for, resulted in a vote of 47 for and 19 against. It was ordered that the secretary have the report printed and copies furnished the conference, that all may consider it.

By resolution, the Bishop and his counselors were allotted Friday forenoon to teach the temporal law, and to be questioned.

A petition from the Des Moines District, as adopted by the conference of said district, March 8th, 1884, was read, and the petition granted.

Resolved, that we respectfully petition General Conference to be held at Stewartville, Missouri, April 6th, 1884, to grant unto us, the Des Moines District, the following defined territory; and that such be known as the Des Moines (Iowa) District, viz: Beginning at south-west with Madison county, and extending to the east line of Washington county; on the east to along the line of Johnson, Linn, Buchanan and Bremer counties; On the west to along the western line of Wright, Hamilton, Boone, Dallas and Madison counties, to place of commencement.

A petition from members of the Burlington Branch, Iowa, was presented, as also a remonstrance to granting the petition, all from the same place; and on motion, the documents were referred to a committee; the chair appointed Brn. Eli Clothier, John Beaird and J. L. Bear, as said committee.

The following was moved by Brn. A. H. Smith and J. H. Lake:

Whereas, in the past, California was considered as a general mission, and provided for in appointments to such missions; and whereas a change was made a few years ago, and the mission discontinued and divided into districts, each district choosing its presiding officer, and reports therefrom show that the change has not worked advantageously; therefore be it,

Resolved, that California, Nevada and Oregon, be restored to their former condition as a mission, and a missionary be assigned to said mission.

It was spoken to by Brn. A. H. Smith, J. F. Burton and A. Munns, and then it was moved to amend by adding the words, "But this shall not be construed as disorganizing the districts in California as they now are." This was spoken to by Brn. Short, Bronson, Burton, J. W. Briggs, A. H. Smith, Warnky and Blakeslee.

The following was moved as a substitute:

Resolved, that California, Western Nevada and Oregon constitute a mission, the districts therein remaining intact.

This was spoken to by Brn. J. A. Robinson, Short and Burton, and adopted.

Petition of A. B. Kuykendall was, on motion, referred to Brn. Hyde, Etzenhouser and McDowell, as committee to examine and report. Resolutions of Decatur District, on amending Rules of Representation, were read; also, a letter from Bro. Briggs Alden; also, a question and resolution from the Far West District; also, a request from the Northern Illinois District, for the re-appointment of Bro. J. S. Patterson to that field; also, a request from North-East Missouri, for the return of Bro. George Hicklin to that field.

A resolution that only those be sent out as missionaries who can devote their whole time to the work was discussed by Brn. W. H. Kelley, Landers, Mintun and Kemp, and referred to the Twelve as a committee.

The following was moved by brethren Rumel and Mintun:

Resolved, That any member of the church who marries, having been released from a former companion in wedlock by a divorce, shall be held guilty of adultery if their former companion is still living.

It was spoken to by Bro. Mintun, followed by the reading by Bro. Pitt of a resolution of the Twelve in April, 1883, and the motion being put to vote was declared lost. Then the preamble and resolution contained in the report of the Twelve, April 12th, 1883, was moved and adopted, reading as follows:

Whereas, We believe that Marriage is ordained of God, and that the law of God provides for but one companion in wedlock, for either man or woman—except in cases where the contract is broken by death or transgression; therefore

Resolved, That it is our understanding that in case of separation of husband and wife, one of which is guilty of the crime of fornication, or adultery, the other becomes released from the Marriage bond, and if they so desire may obtain a divorce and marry again.

The requests for holding the conference of April, 1885, were read: one from the Decatur District, that it be held at Lamoni; one from the Independence District, that it be held at Independence; one from the Massachusetts District, that it be held at Kirtland; also, a statement from the Pittsburg delegates, that their conference also so requested; one from the Oak Island Branch, Texas, that it be held at San Antonio, Texas. Lamoni, Kirtland, and Independence were put in nomination and a vote taken resulting in 13 votes for Lamoni, 34 for Kirtland, and 39 for Independence. The choice now being between Kirtland and Independence, the vote resulted in 47 for Independence and 35 for Kirtland. The yeas and nays being called for, resulted as follows:

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 3d, 1884.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THOSE having the erection of the cheese factory in hand at Lamoni, are busy, the foundation is down and the frame will be up before this HERALD gets into its readers' hands, nothing preventing.

We chronicle in this issue the following notice of the union in marriage of two of the former Herald Office force, Bro. Henry Stahle and Sr. Annie Crick:

"At the residence of the bride's parents, Plano, Illinois, April 1st, 1884, by Bro. W. Vickery, Bro. Henry Stahle and Sr. Annie Crick. May happiness and peace attend them, and the blessing of the Lord be with them, all through the journey of life. On Wednesday evening, April 2d, the Saints and friends met at the same place and gave them a surprise and a good number of presents."

The notice is sent us by Bro. Wentworth Vickery, pastor of the branch at Plano, and we add a hearty "Amen" to his prayer for the happiness of these young people. Both served well while in the Herald Office, and those who remained in its force and those who succeeded them, together wish them a good voyage over life's rugged seas.

Bro. Richard Allen, of San Bernardino, California, tenders his thanks to the Saints of the district for which he has been acting as Bishop's Agent for many years. He has been warmly sustained by many, but by reason of the indifference of some, and the opposition of others, he contemplates resigning his charge as Bishop's Agent. Should he continue to desire to resign, we presume that he will notify the Bishop to that effect, as he is the proper one to receive the resignation.

By card from Bro. Frederick Sheen, who with others removed to Dakota this Spring, we learn that the weather had been favorable to the getting in of the wheat in the locality of Highmore, where he resided; and they are in hopes of a good season. We are pleased to learn of this.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

April 18.—The Mahdi's proclamations have reached India. The Anglo-Indian police at Simla have seized them.

The cable reports that El Mahdi has been twice defeated recently by hostile tribes and is completely hemmed in. Gordon Pasha is in the same fix, being completely hemmed in at Khartoum. Now, if some of the Arabs would hem Osman Digma in things would be pretty well evened up.

Dynamite continues to be exported from Havre to England, and there is no French or international law to check it.

A telegram from Gen. Millot, commander of the French forces in Tonquin, dated Hanoi, April 6th, says: "The enemy have again been encountered not far from Hung Hoa and completely routed. After the engagement we destroyed the citadels of Phulam Tram, where the leaders of the Black Flags had taken refuge. Our forces are now following the right bank of the River Dai with the object of threatening the enemy in the south and obtaining redress for the massacre of the missionaries. The Black Flags have withdrawn to Northern Tonquin. The remnants of the garrisons of Bacninh and Hung Hoa, Chinese and Annamites, to the number of 5,000, have retreated to Thanh Hoa. Gen. Delisle is going to Ninhbin to observe them. In the capture of Shulam Tram the French lost five soldiers killed."

The cholera at Calcutta is increasing. There were 257 deaths there from the disease last week.

Ten "moonshiners" have been arrested in Casey and Clay counties, Kentucky, by United States officers.

It is reported that 2,000 Indians have surrounded the Village of Battleford, on the Saskatchewan River, in the Northwest Territory. It is feared that they have massacred the inhabitants, numbering 200. The Indians, it is stated, have been half starved during the Winter, and they are desperate.

April 20.—It is reported that the British Government is about to convoke a conference of the European Powers for the purpose of regulating the financial affairs of Egypt.

Nubar Pasha, the Egyptian Premier, says that the Soundan revolt will spread northward. His advices indicate the early surrender of Berber to the Mahdi's followers. Hussein Pasha, the Egyptian Governor there, says he will resign unless reinforcements shall be sent to him. Kassala is surrounded by 6,000 rebels who fire into the town nightly. It is reported that Osman Digma with 2,000 followers again threatens Suakin, and if he attacks the town many neutrals will join him against the hated Egyptians.

April 21.—Gen. Gordon proposes to remain in Khartoum, according to advices from that city April 9th, but is preparing to send Col. Stewart, the commander of the Egyptian garrison, Vice-Consul Power, the London Times correspondent, and such foreigners as will accompany them, to Lower Egypt by way of Abyssinia. According to reports from the Soudan since the 9th it is much safer to stay with Gordon than to attempt the proposed journey with Stewart and Power.

April 22.—Reports from the interior of Egypt have reached Cairo that the cotton-worm has re-appointed there.

Dublin Castle authorities are again alarmed. Rifle cartridges have been found in the Dublin courts; Jurors, Bailiffs, and Judges have received threatening letters, and notices have been posted near the scene of the Phenix Park assassinations declaring that "the Invincibles are indeed invincible."

The news of the massacre of the Egyptian refugees shows that Gen. Gordon is practically cut off from communication with Cairo. Several tribes are said to have risen between Khartoum and Berber and others are said to meditate an attack upon Khartoum itself. Gen. Gordon is probably very well able to take care of himself. He has 5,000 men under his command, and sufficient arms to enroll as many more. The arsenal is well supplied, and his steamers will enable him to clear the river. But the situation is exceedingly critical. Berber, the town now threatened by the rebels, has about 8,000 inhabitants, who live in mud huts which line the banks of the river for the distance of several miles. All the military operations which have been conducted from Suakin have had for their object the opening of the route from that place to Berber. The distance between these two places is 280 miles, which it has been proposed to span with a railway which would open out all of the Soudan country east of the Nile and bring it into direct communication with Egypt and the commerce of the Red Sea. Berber is garrisoned by 1,200 Bashi-Bazouks and 300 Egyptians, with one gun.

April 23.—France, having settled matters in Tonquin and Madagascar, wants to take a hand in Egyptian affairs. The Republique Francaise, which may be taken as reflecting Premier Ferry's views, says that the manner in which England has established herself in Egypt reopens the Egyptian question. In the meantime Austria has acceded to England's proposal for a conference on the Eastern question, and Earl Dufferin has stated that Egypt can enter into commercial treaties without consulting Turkey. The Porte has taken legal advice, and decided not to protest against the treaties which Egypt recently concluded with England and Greece.

The revised Old Testament will be completed in July and published in the autumn.

April 24.—Nubar Pasha, at what is called a meeting of the Egyptian Cabinet, had resolutions adopted favoring the immediate dispatch of troops to Upper Egypt. The resolutions were telegraphed to the English Cabinet.

What Gen. Gordon is doing at and around Khartoum, may be gleaned from the following dispatch: Since the 23d ult, our steamers and a barge bearing a Krupp gun have been daily engaging the rebels below the junction of the two Niles. The steamer Abbas has gone up the Blue Nile each day, shelling the rebels and capturing boats and camels. Our station on the north bank of the Blue Nile nearly opposite the palace consists of two large houses, loopholed, and occupied by 500 Bashi-Bazouks. We have also fortified two houses in the village outside the end of the fortifications. Two hundred and seventy men and officers of the Bashi-Bazouks who refused to occupy this position were promptly disbanded by Gen. Gordon; they were surrounded by Soudani troops and gave up their arms. The 24th we brought over one Krupp to the north bank of the Blue Nile and shelled the rebel camp, killing and wounding 116 men. One shell not bursting, a crowd of Arabs picked it up, and while they were trying to discover the mechanism it exploded, killing sixteen and maiming many. Meanwhile the four steamers and the barge were shelling Halfiyeh and that end of the camp. It is reported that the Mahdi is sending two machine guns to the rebels. It is also reported that the English are advancing to our release. A Sergeant, who was taken prisoner by the rebels, came in the 24th. The rebels wished to send a gun, ammunition, and prisoners to the Mahdi as trophies, but on the way the prisoners defeated the escort, broke the elevating screw of the gun, and escaped here with the greater portion of the ammunition. The Arabs have been able to repair the gun, but their shells are almost exhausted.

The rebels now number 4,000 foot and 500 cavalry. Their camel-men are daily out in the rear, searching for the English. The rebels say they will retreat if the English advance.

Gen. Agüero, the Cuban filibuster, continues to baffle the Spanish Captain-General. The so-called "rebel" force has divided into three parts, and Agüero is in the Cuban swamps.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The note addressed by Earl Granville, English, Foreign Secretary of State, to the Powers concerning financial reform in Egypt proposes a new arrangement on the following basis: (1) The reduction of the rate of interest on the unified debt; (2) the provisional suspension of all amortization; (3) the reduction of the civil and military expenses; (4) the assimilation of the taxation of foreign residents to that of natives. Prince Bismarck, in acknowledging this note through Lord Amthill, the British Ambassador at Berlin, declines to give his consent to the English proposal. He says that England must take the sole responsibility for the condition of Egypt.

There has been no improvement during the last week in the condition of shipping. The depression amounts almost to a paralysis, and the destitution and suffering of unemployed men is on the increase. Public subscriptions are being organized at Newcastle-on-Tyne, at Liverpool, at Shields, and at Sunderland for the men. The engineers who are on a strike at Sunderland issue a protest in which they say that the employers refuse to meet them for a conference, and decline to discuss any basis of settlement of the differences between them. They say that this is an evident attempt to force them into an unconditional surrender, and they appeal to the trades unions of Great Britain to stand by them in this emergency and oppose the arbitrary power of the employers. The boot and shoe trades of London have joined the army of strikers and unemployed, and are making a general demonstration against the system of piece work now prevailing. The prospect is that this strike will involve the entire shoe trade, and will become general throughout England. The London workmen have sent out delegates to the provinces who are trying to induce a general cessation of work.

Advices from Leipzig, Saxony, give the latest news of the masons' and carpenters' strike in that country. While the workmen are firm in their demand and work is at a standstill, the employers seem disposed to offer a small advance in wages if the strikers will return to work. The latter, however, refuse to make any such terms, and appear to consider themselves masters of the situation.

Reports from all parts of the United Kingdom indicate the prospect of a wheat crop this year above the average. The plant has been benefited by recent rains, though somewhat discolored by the east wind that has prevailed the last fortnight. The crops of France and Spain will be above the average. The requirements for consumption in Great Britain for the next three months are 6,000,000 quarters. The prospective receipts from India are quite uncertain; from Russia nearly the whole crop of 1883 is exported; from Australia 2,000,000 quarters; 1,000,000 quarters are now on passage from California. The receipts of wheat and flour at the waterside are 4,000,000 quarters, and on passage 2,000,000, enough to last the country for the next three months. The stock of wheat on hand in Great Britain at the present time is 50 per cent more than in 1883 and double that of 1882.

Since Jan. 1st, $25,000,000 in gold have been exported from the United States. Prominent bankers say this outflow is becoming serious.

During the week ending April 18th there were 155 business failures in the United States, as compared with 195 the preceding week and 160 in the corresponding week of last year. Canada had 22 failures, a decrease of 14 from the previous week.

James Robinson, a dry-goods merchant of Hamilton, Ont., has failed. Liabilities, $40,000.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: "Cold east winds checked wheats, and some are losing color. The wire-worm did damage on lighter soils. The demand during the week was unimproved. Today sellers were unable to obtain higher rates. Maize was in better request and advanced sixpence to one shilling from Wednesday. Oats advanced one shilling. Trade in cargoed off coast is very quiet. Four arrived, three were sold, one was withdrawn, and three remained. Cargoes on passage and for shipment were stronger. Sales of English wheat during the week, 40,951 quarters at 37 shillings threepence per quarter, against 54,556 quarters at 41 shillings eightpence the corresponding week last year.

Reports from all parts of the State of California indicate that the grain and fruit crops are in a healthy and promising condition. The acreage under cereals has been increased about 10 per cent on the average, and the yield from present appearances will be very abundant. The increase will vary from 10 per cent in some counties to 50 per cent in others. Great attention has been paid to the fruit crop, extensive new areas have been planted with grape and raisin vines, and all the foot-hills are covered with orchards. The weather has been favorable, and the farmers are quite happy at the prospect. The yield in both fruit and grain promises to equal if not exceed the bonanza year of 1880.

Frost prevailed all over Northern Texas the night of April 22d, heavy in some sections and slight in others. Corn and late cotton were killed at many points, and fruit generally suffered considerably. Replanting will have to be done by the farmers.

Egypt is in need of a new loan of $40,000,000, and England has summoned a conference of all the Powers represented at the making of the Berlin treaty to meet the financial difficulty.

Miscellaneous.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

At the late General Conference, held at Stewartsville, Missouri, I was appointed in charge of the field comprising Iowa, Missouri, and Kansas. Most of this field is entirely new to me; and although I can not, in the nature of the case, reach many of the fields already open for labor, and many more that should be opened, within the coming year, yet it is necessary that I should become as fully acquainted as possible, with the condition and needs of the work in my field.

Will the presidents of districts and branches, within these three States, write me with reference to the condition, demands, prospects, etc., of the work within their respective charges; also of the amount of local labor being done, and who is doing it. Please be prompt, brethren, as a present knowledge of things as they are may be a benefit to the cause we love.

When my advice and help are needed, in settling difficulties, they may be had, so far as practicable; but you will please remember that the preaching of the gospel and building up the work are the great objects for which we should all labor; and when the time and talent of the missionary are diverted from these purposes, the cause is hindered thereby, and hungering souls, precious in the sight of God, are left destitute of the bread of life.

My health is very poor, especially when away from home, but I am willing and anxious to do what I can for the spread of the truth and the redemption of man. I Trust I shall have the hearty co-operation essential to success by all concerned. May the Lord bless you all. Let every man stand in his own place and labor in his own calling.

Your co-worker for Christ,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Rochester, New York, Union has made a most wonderful discovery. It has found that Mr. J. K. Burke had bought of an old resident of Rochester, a copy of the Palmyra edition of the Book of Mormon, "a rare old book;" and that said Book of Mormon condemns polygamy out and out; but that all other editions of the same good book permit, endorse, or sanction the practice of plural marriage. O, most wise and learned Union. The price fixed by the Union for these rare old books is from fifty to one hundred dollars per copy. Will some one please to tell the Union that we will pay five times that amount for a copy of any regular edition of the Book of Mormon, in the English language, in which the same denunciation of polygamy found in the Palmyra edition is not repeated literally.

The only explanation, aside from Bro. Caffall's letter, that we can offer in regard to the mis-dating of his letter, as he states, is that the letter arrived after our departure for the Conference at Stewartsville, and the brethren not being sure of the figures in the date line, which were not too plainly written, took it for granted that the letter had not been from the 3d of March to the 6th of April on the road from Colorado, and therefore it must be March 31st that was intended. It was a mistake easily made, but we are sorry that it occurred.

The Utah Evangelist for April, contains an objection against a writer on the Book of Mormon, written by Bro. Brand, and the editorial comment on the same. It is the same old story, the Spaulding Romance, and its congeners, against the plain truth.

The editor visited Lucas, Sunday, April 27th, and had good congregations in the Saints' Chapel there, preaching twice, morning and evening.

Bro. Hiram C. Bronson had begun work again at Montrose, Iowa, Sunday, April 27th, preaching twice and baptizing one. He went to String Prairie on the 30th.

WE recommend the following to the readers of the HERALD. It is from the Chicago Tribune to our columns.

ADVANTAGES OF A VEGETABLE DIET.

In a recent issue of the London Times appeared an article which will have some interest for eaters of flesh, as well as those who are occupied in producing meats, since it attempts to show that "if it were not for flesh food physicians would have very little to do." The author, Dr. Allinson, holds that few domestic animals are free from ailments, fat ones particularly being more or less diseased. The liver, kidneys, and lungs of eaters of meats are over-taxed to rid the system of the excess of nitrogen taken in with the meat diet, and disease results. Those who live in towns cannot with safety eat much flesh, because they do not get oxygen and exercise enough to burn the excess of nitrogen. If they eat much flesh then they must suffer from many complaints, such as indigestion, bilious attacks, congested liver, hemorrhoids, gastric catarrh, and other gastric troubles. If the habit be continued, gall stones or urinary calculi may follow, or rheumatism and gout. Then the kidneys become diseased and more work is thrown on the heart, which also becomes diseased; the end is death by one of the lingering diseases, which shows a diseased organ somewhere. Even epilepsy and many nervous diseases are aggravated by flesh. Of course, holding such views, Dr. Allinson is a believer in a diet of a purely vegetable nature, the advantages of such a diet lying in the fact that it can be obtained without cruelty; that it can easily be seen whether it is in a wholesome condition or not; that the human system is formed to assimilate such diet with little expenditure of vital force; it affords abundant nutriment at slight cost; by its use much disease is prevented, while a varied list from which to choose is offered. This list includes, wheat, oats, barley, maize, rice, sago, tapioca, semolina, hominy, peas, beans, lentils, etc., all being concentrated foods, very rich in nutriment. Potatoes, parsnips, beets, carrots, turnips, onions, cabbage, sprouts, etc., give variety, bulk, and flavor; to these may be added the sweet herbs for making savory dishes. Apples, pears, currants, gooseberries, plums, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, and other fruits, with melons, peaches, grapes, etc., are higher-priced but wholesome fruits. Dried fruits, as dates, figs, apple-rings, currants, raisins, etc., are cheap and good. To this rich list may be added eggs, milk, butter, cheese, and honey, without cruelty to animals. That a diet such as is described above may be cheap, nutritious, and palatable cannot be denied. The use of meats is a relic of a savage age, beyond question; but the fact that the most progressive of races have been eaters of meat, while those which subsist on a vegetable diet are, to put it mildly, not the dominant races in art or in science, may be worthy of a moment's consideration.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Illinois,

April 14th, 1884.

Brother Joseph Smith:—We are still trying to do a little to advance the cause of truth. The Elders, most of them, seem to be making an effort to get the truth before the people. I lately visited McLeansborough, the county seat of Hamilton county, Illinois, where I preached four times in the court house. Friday night I had a fair congregation by the effort of Bro. Joseph Rimley. He had two hundred posters printed, and scattered them over the town. Saturday the hiring preachers were in consultation, and succeeded in keeping the people away; so that Saturday night and Sunday morning our congregation was small. In the evening it was better, notwithstanding they had something going on at the churches. It was the first preaching ever done there by our Elders. We generally have fair liberty in preaching. All is not just as good as we would like to see it, some branch officers, not satisfied with giving up their work. Sometimes we think men in their zeal make calls for God, where they think it needed. But we hope to improve; and still work on. Yours,

G. H. HILLIARD.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,

April 28th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Went to Shenandoah, Iowa, March 15th, and talked to the people upon the gospel for eight days. On account of rain and mud, there was not the usual good attendance; however, I baptized one. It is such transactions as this that bring down upon us the anathema of the "white-chokers." This young lady was a professor of religion of the M. E. school. When we are successful in opening the understanding of the honest in heart to the requirements of God's law, and they exercise the moral courage to comply therewith, and thus sever their bonds of religious society, the shepherd of that flock looks with alarm and ill will upon those who are able to invade his parochial territory, and lead away into the glorious light of truth, willing captives. These overseers of the flock of human organization and wisdom become incensed with these losses, and like those whose "craft" was in danger, "some therefore cried one thing, and some another;" and they bring confusion upon themselves. If these unfortunate, self appointed ones, believe that they are the bishops of men's souls, it would certainly grieve them to see people accepting and embracing a doctrine that is everywhere spoken against; and if the doctrine should prove to be really what they say it is, then all those who accept thereof are in danger of eternal punishment. Should it only be a financial object that prompts these to wear the name of minister, then they would surely, like Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen, be upon the war path against all those who would destroy their means of gain. I am not surprised that some of their champions have become so un-Christ-like as to announce "war to the knife, and the knife to the hilt." When men work alone for worldly gain, they somehow succeed in smothering the voice of conscience, and thereafter to them every means available is honorable, to increase their sordid lucre. Truly, "The love of money is the root of all evil," and the canker worm that destroys right judgment, and brings justice 'neath the overflowing tide of crime.

Spent Sabbath, March 30th, at Council Bluffs, and spoke twice in the Saints' Church. Spent a few days with my family among relatives, and arrived at home April 4th. The next day I hied away to Stewartsville, Missouri, to attend the General Conference, and was busy during the whole session. In company with Bro. Heman C. Smith, we tarried until Monday the 21st, and left in a snow storm. Felt well while visiting, and in the attempt to hold meetings, as the rain and mud would permit. We left with pleasant remembrance of the kindness we received at the hands of the people of Stewartsville, both those in the church and many not in such bonds.

Yesterday I spent my first Sabbath at home during 1884, and through the kindness of those in charge, I was permitted to twice occupy the pulpit.

In bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

ELKADER, Iowa,

April 18th, 1884.

Joseph:—I do not write for the sake of confessing my sins to any one whom I have never injured in thought, word or deed. My sins of commission or omission are matters that are daily canceled by him to whom I owe my lifelong experience. I am now seventy-three years of age; and over sixty years of these that are past, what experience I have had. Nearly a life time of labor has been devoted to the work of advocating the doctrine of a restored gospel; nor at any time during these many years, can it be said in truth, either by friend or foe, that I have ever turned my back upon the testimony of him whom God called to lay the foundation of this latter day work.

I notice that some of the writers for the Herald try to make wry faces at the name "Mormon;" and wish to have this name expunged from the records of the Church. The only answer I wish to give to the above is this. Persons objecting to this name Mormon, or Mormonism, should remember that it was the angel's visit to Joseph Smith, in 1827, that first planted the seeds of Mormonism; and so long as Latter Day Saints holds to their faith in the Book of Mormon, and the inspiration of Joseph Smith, just so long will the name of Mormon or Monmonism, follow up that class of people. Nor is the name Mormon, or Mormonism, a slang phrase; but is properly applied to the book, or the doctrine of the book, from which the name Mormon is derived; and what I wish to add further is, what I have said on this Mormon question is God's truth, and no controversy can successfully contradict it. I seriously question the genuine authority of any professed Saint, whether Elder, High Priest, or Apostle, who does not believe in the Book of Mormon, or the divine mission of Joseph Smith.

On the small work entitled "William Smith on Mormonism," no one need fear that Wm. Smith will make himself rich, or amass any great amount of wealth out of this twenty-five cent book. It is but a small reward, after passing through the sad experience of over sixty years in the ups and downs of the church, without fee or reward to the present date. My object in publishing this small tribute on the origin of Mormonism, is that this my testimony may be in the hands of every Latter Day Saint while I am living, thinking that they would prize it more highly, coming directly from my pen, than to read my testimony from the pen of others, after I have passed away.

I shall also bring out to your notice a book which I am preparing as soon as I am able to get it into print concerning the breaking up of the Church at Nauvoo, containing an account of many events which I believe have never been placed before the public. Brethren, your orders for the book now on hand will be promptly attended to. Address Wm. B. Smith, Elkader, Clayton county, Iowa. Much love to all the Saints.

Your uncle,

WM. B. SMITH.

KEIGHLEY, Kas., April 21st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Lord is blessing his work in this part. There is some enquiring after truth. I have been holding meeting in Keighley School-house every two weeks all Winter. Brother Mart Turpen is here to help me now; his heart is in the work. We have our branch organized and in working order. May the Lord prosper his work, is the prayer of your brother,

S. J. MADDEN.

INDIAN RIVER, Washington Co., Me.,
April 19th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I will try and give some of my experience in this great work. The only Church I ever belonged to before I joined the Church of Christ, was the Church of Messiah, so called, G. J. Adams at the head, who proved to be an impostor, a drunkard, and a deceiver. After he proved himself to be a false teacher, brother Josiah Ells came and preached in our place. I went to hear him. After he finished his sermon, I told him, we had had plenty of such preaching in this place, and we had been deceived, not in the principles of the gospel, but in the authority. But there was something in that sermon that I could not get rid of. It gave me a longing to hear more. So when brother J. C. Foss came and held meeting two miles away, I had to go and hear him. Walked there although I was real lame. He preached on the signs following the believer. After he got through, I told him I would like to see him perform some miracle. He said I was a sign seeker, and the Bible said there should be no sign given. But if I would do the will of the Father, I should know of the doctrine. "Now" said he, "If you will go forth in obedience to the law of God, you shall know for yourself that the doctrine is true. I will stake my reputation upon it." Said I, "Mr. Foss, that is a fair offer." I made up my mind at that time I would prove the work to be true or false. I went home, got the Book of Mormon, and read it, and the Book of Covenants, and other books of the Church. After I read them I believed them to be true, but that did not give me a knowledge. So I said to Mr. Foss, that I was ready to prove his words true or false. So we went and cut a hole in the ice, which was three feet thick, myself and wife and two others were buried with Christ in baptism. When he laid his hands on me to confirm me a member of the body of Christ, he said if I was faithful, I should be an instrument in God's hands in doing good.

A short time after this, I had a child taken sick with a fever. She was eight years old. She had been sick six days when Bro. J. C. Foss came to my house. She could not help herself at all, so when J. C. came she says, "Mother, I want Bro. John to administer to me." He did so, and she never saw another sick hour. Got up, dressed herself, and ate her dinner. Thank God there was one testimony. "You shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."—Mark 16:18. After that took place, I was in the woods camping out with a set of men. One Saturday night they said they were coming home. I told them I was not. After I got my supper, I bowed before the Lord. I told him if this was the Church of Christ, I wanted to know it by his using my tongue in speaking in another language; and while on my knees, a power seized me, and I spoke in four different languages, and had the interpretation of one. The Lord told me that if I was faithful, I should be ordained to the priesthood, which I have been since; and the Lord has blessed me many times since in presenting the word. He also told me to go and talk to my father and mother, who were then out of the work, and I should be the means of converting them to the faith. Thank God I had the privilege of baptizing father, who died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Mother went soon after in obedience to the perfect law of liberty, who is yet alive, trying to live a Christian life, and expects to meet her companion in the better world.

I was in the army of the rebellion. Got crippled, have suffered twenty years. This winter I made up my mind I would have my leg amputated. So I left my home the eighteenth day of February, for the general hospital, Portland, Maine. Almost every body thought I would not stand the operation, but I did. I was not sick a day after I had my leg off. God heard my prayers once more.

Dear brothers and sisters, I love the latter day work, because I know it is true; and it will stand when every thing else will be crushed to earth. I do not trust in my past experience for salvation; but in my future life; that my salvation depends on. Let us live every day to the honor and glory of God, that when he comes we can meet him with pleasure and not with grief.

We have no preaching to amount to any thing here. We have local preachers, but they have large families, and have to be away from home most of the time to get something for them to live on; so we have but little or no preaching from them. The members stay at home so much they don't care whether they go to meeting or not, unless there is a new preacher comes along.

We have now and then an Elder from the west. He will preach one or two discourses in a place; get people interested, and clear out. This is the reason in my opinion why the work is in so bad state. In hopes the Saints will rally around the standard once more in Maine,

I remain your brother in the gospel,
A. W. KELLEY.

OENAVILLE, Bell Co., Tex.
April 10th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—The Saints seem to have taken new courage since the discussion, seeing their way more clearly. I never enjoyed any thing so well in my life. There seemed to be so much light and spirituality attending the work of God, when Bro. Smith would be speaking; but on the other side there was nothing but darkness, or some old foolish story. It did a great deal of good here. I think the Campbellites feel ashamed. I don't believe they made any converts. Some say Wilmeth will never be seen here again. We are having good prayer meetings. All seem to enjoy themselves when they meet. I pray that the darkness that once overshadowed this branch, may never find its way into our hearts again. Brighter days have begun to dawn upon us, and I rejoice. The enemy has worked very hard to overthrow the branch, but I think we are getting him very nearly behind us, if we can only keep him so.

Dear Saints, let us all live more humble, pray to our heavenly Father, that his Spirit may ever be our guide; and that all we do may be done with an eye single to the glory of God, and for the building up of his kingdom. Let us try to lead others into the fold. We should work while it is day. Let us keep oil in our lamps, so that when the bridegroom cometh we may be prepared to meet him. If all the Saints could only feel the responsibility that rests upon them, I believe they would work more for the cause. The evil one is always trying to deceive us. We miss Bro. Heman so much. Hope he will be sent back to this mission. Bro. Thompson is off in the district; and we pray that the Lord may bless his labors. Pray for us here in this country of persecution.

We remain your sister and brother in the one covenant,
FLORENCE JENKINS.

DUKEDOM, Weakly Co., Tenn.,
April 19th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—The most of your readers are strangers to me in the flesh, but not in the Spirit; for when I read the letters of the Saints, I feel a sacred nearness to them. I feel the Spirit of Christ binds me closer to them than the ties of nature do to a brother of the flesh. You are a welcome and delightful visitor to us, as you are all the preacher we have. With joy and delight I read your pages. It makes my heart glad to see how the work is progressing, and how God is blessing his Saints every where. O, how it brings tears of joy, to read of the dear ones that are restored to health through the mercies of our Heavenly Father, and tears of sadness to read of the great losses and afflictions of other dear ones. I can sympathize with the sick and afflicted; for I have been a great sufferer all my life with asthma. I embraced the gospel in 1881, January 31st. Was baptized and confirmed by our worthy brother, J. C. Foss, then of Maine. I have experienced many days of happiness and sorrow, and passed through many sore trials. I feel to thank God, that I still have a desire to serve him faithfully to the end.

When in Nebraska I attended conference. When we met for prayer meeting on Sunday night, it seemed to me that a most hallowed Spirit filled the house. After some little business, Bro. Gamet opened the meeting, some one bore testimony. I arose and asked the Saints to pray for me, and when I was gone Brother Ritchie rose by the power of the Spirit, and said angels were hovering over us, and great blessings awaited us, which I realized was so; and Sister Hudson rose and spoke in tongues, and the Spirit and love of God seemed to fill the house and the hearts of all the Saints; and it seemed to me that it was no other than the house of God, and the very gate of heaven. The testimony that I had long prayed for and desired, I there obtained, that I could say I knew this work was of God, for the Holy Spirit confirmed the same to me. I now testify unto all, that I know it is of God.

Dear Saints, pray for me, that I may live faithful, that I may be worthy in the near future, to receive the blessing of health. When I meditate upon that glorious time when the Son of God shall come to reign as King of Righteousness, I feel to say,

"O glorious day, oh blessed hope,
My soul leaps forward at the thought;
When from sin and sorrow free,
We'll reign with Christ eternally."

When I see my true condition, financially; almost helpless, and my wife's health failing, and two helpless children, in a land where there are no Saints, and where we are entirely ostracised from society on account of our faith; and but little means that is visible to supply our natural wants, I am made to feel that ere long, unless greatly blessed by the hand of God, we shall be destitute.

Dear Saints, pray for me, that I may be faithful and resigned to the will of God in all things. With a prayer for the triumphant success of the cause, and for the Saints of the Northern Nebraska District, with whom I have been associated in the happy past,

I am your brother in Christ,
THOMAS H. BLALOCK.

OENAVILLE, Bell Co., Texas,
April 17th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—It has been but a short time since I obeyed the gospel again. I have been in the Church before, but wandered away from the fold. I was baptized March the 25th. God's Spirit has attended me since I have been in the work, and greatly blessed me. I find no principles to be ashamed of. I find the principles to be those which Christ taught his disciples; and upon them I build my hope for the present and future. I feel well in the faith, though I realize the danger of falling by the way. I ask all the Saints to pray for me, that I may hold out faithful and true to the end. I feel interested in the future of the branch at Elmwood, more especially the young. We seem to be more awake to our duty than ever before. May God guide and direct us, that we may be useful in his kingdom, is my prayer. Our trials may be many, and temptations strong; but we feel sure that God is with us. This gives us courage to continue faithful in his work. May God help us all to put our good desires into good deeds. I know since I turned my attention to the word of God, that I have experienced a change that satisfies me, that it is better to be a Saint, and be laughed at by those who will not listen to the word of God. I desire the prayers of all the Saints, that I may have the Spirit to lead me on in the paths of righteousness. I trust that the love I now feel for the work may never diminish, but increase. We may allow the cares of this world to enter in and choke the good seed, but we must watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation. God will not suffer us to be tempted above that which we are able to bear, if we live faithful. I believe there is a work for me to do, as there is for every Saint. Your brother,

E. L. THOMPSON.

JONESBOROUGH, April 22d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—The question is often asked, Can a man become a Christian without baptism. The writer heard a divine preach to a large gathering of people, to get religion and the Holy Ghost before they went out of the house. Jesus' discourse to Nicodemus should forever settle the question; "except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." Paul says, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Neither class is excepted, Jew nor Gentile, male nor female, bond nor free. Men tell us there is no outward form required. If not, why did Jesus go to John to be baptized in Jordan? We think if the Son of God could not fulfill all righteousness, water baptism, divines should be more careful in setting forth what David said was perfect in converting the soul, the testimony sure. "For other foundation can no man lay, than that is laid," and that is Christ.

I ask your prayers, that I may occupy till the Master comes. We had a call from Bro. Sheehy. Hope we shall have him again to feed us with bread of life.

Yours in the conflict,
J. BENNER.

FORT GARLAND, Colorado,
April 21th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—The communication over my signature in your issue for April 19th, on page 244, dated March 31st, is a sad mistake. It should read March 3d. It makes me say from February 28th to date, March 31st, seven meetings were held, and that none had been added, save those baptized by Bro. Blair. Whereas seven were baptized on the 16th of Marth, and one the 30th. Furthermore, I well remember the circumstances under which I held seven meetings, from February 28th to the evening of March 2d; and while it is possible I might have dated 31st instead of 3d, I know I wrote it on Monday, March 3d, I handed it to a friend on the 4th to mail. Whether it was kept too long in the pocket of the friend, delayed on the way, or slept in the Editor's hiding place so as to be forty-seven days from the time it left my hand before it saw daylight, are unsolved problems to the writer.

Since reporting, have preached several times in Manassa. By special request visited and preached six times in Alamosa. Two baptized, others believing but halting. I had intended to have been in San Luis on the 20th, but was hindered. Expect to be at Manassa the 27th.

J. CAFFALL.

GENERAL NEWS.

April 25.—Bismarck proposes a revision of the constitution of the German Empire, which will embrace a classification of voters, a permanent military budget, and a test oath for members of Reichstag tending to exclude Socialists from membership. In case the German Parliament rejects these proposals Bismarck intends to invite a conference of the German Princes, who can, in accordance with the present Constitution of the Empire, give force to his projects.

While Aguero's expedition was in course of preparation certain Spanish Republicans of extreme views sent an agent to America for the purpose of fomenting the movement. Their hope was that the movement could be made to assume such proportions that its reaction would be felt in Madrid. The Republicans promised Cuba self-government, and declared that the relations between Spain and Cuba would be made similar to those between England and Canada.

It is stated that large numbers of emigrants are going to Canada this year from the Continent.

There was a stormy convention of the Irish National League of the County Tipperary at Thurles, Ireland, to-day. Many of the delegates told pitiful stories of the sufferings endured by evicted tenant farmers in the county, and bitter and angry complaints were made at the inefficiency and uselessness of the league if it could do nothing towards diminishing this distress. The chairman of the convention and other officers of the league replied that there were no funds at the disposal of the organization for the relief of the distress complained of and this declaration further excited the wrath of some of the delegates and many of them hotly retorted by attacks on Mr. Parnell's scheme for the collection of £40,000 for the payment of salaries to Irish Home-Rule members of Parliament. The complaining delegates contended that it was not in Irish blood to stand calmly by and see such cruelty and distress when the money that should be used to modify it was being held to support in London a number of men who might as well be at home for all the good they were doing for Ireland. The convention broke up in confusion.

It is reported that all the whites at Mitchell's place, on the San Juan River, in Southern Colorado, have been murdered by the Ute Indians.

A disease strongly resembling pleuro-pneumonia, has made its appearance among the cattle in Indiana.

April 26.—Recently the Khedive of Egypt has received many threatening messages, and he now complains that he is in daily receipt of letters ordering him to abdicate and leave the country under penalty of assassination. Yesterday he received a letter in which he was denounced as "a traitor to Egypt," as "a tool of the infidels," and in which the threat was made that unless he quit the Egyptian throne and left the country immediately he would be poisoned by persons in his closest confidence. He has fallen into a sort of chronic melancholy and conducts himself as one partially demented.

A meeting of the French Ministry had under consideration a proposal for a conference of the Powers on the Egyptian question.

A reply has been received at Cairo to the request sent to the British Government for an expedition to relieve the beleaguered troops at Berber, setting forth that it is impossible at present to send the relief demanded, as a sufficient force could not be dispatched before August. This answer has been forwarded to Hussein Pasha, who is also informed that he may withdraw if the conditions are favorable to such a project. Gen. Gordon's agent at Berber telegraphs that it is impossible to forward either a letter or telegram to Khartoum.

Advices from Abyssinia state that King John has agreed to Admiral Hewett's proposals to invade the Soudan, relieve the Egyptian garrisons, and assist them to withdraw through Abyssinia.

The committee of the German Reichstag to which the bill prolonging the anti-socialist law was referred has adopted the resolution of the new Liberal party to introduce at the present session a bill dealing with the Anarchists and the illegal use of explosives. Von Botticher, the Home Secretary of State, has promised to submit to the Bundesrath a proposal to that effect within three days. The object of the resolution is to give greater stringency to the existing anti-Socialist laws.

The Dutch are growing daily more hostile towards Portugal because of its assumption of control of the Lower Congo coast, on which there are many Dutch settlements. The proposition of Portugal to establish customs houses at the mouths of the Congo and collect duties from the many vessels that trade along that river has been debated with much bitterness during the last week in the Dutch Chambers, and it is believed that Holland will decide to resist these Portuguese pretensions, even to the point of war.

The German police in Alsace during the last week have seized 200-weight of anarchist newspapers, which have been smuggled into the country by women.

Russia is still busily engaged in fomenting trouble in Eastern Roumelia, with a view of promoting the unification of the two Bulgarias under the Russian protegee, Prince Alexander.

The Spanish Government claims to have received further information of a revolutionary movement in the provinces. Several officers and civilians at Barcelona, the centre of the agitation in the South, have been arrested.

A Band of Haytian creoles has landed in Cuba to reinforce Aguero.

Cattle in Northwestern Texas are suffering for want of water and grass. There has been a prolonged drouth in that section. Caterpillars have appeared there also, destroying vegetation.

Gainsworth Pettis, a mill-owner residing in Lockport Township, near Erie, Pa., who has been a Spiritualist for some time, was conveyed to an asylum yesterday. He believed the spirit of Nebuchadnezzar controlled him, and began to feed on herbs and roots.

April 27.—Republican uprisings are threatened in Catalonia, Valencia, and the South of Spain generally.

The Egyptian troops at Berber are fraternizing with the Mahdi's followers. The inhabitants are fleeing and the town will soon be deserted. Grave fears are entertained for the safety of the European inhabitants. Mr. Gladstone's Government has positively refused to send a rescuing expedition to Berber. This action has caused considerable excitement in London, and a coalition between the Jingo Liberals and the Tories is being formed for the purpose of attacking the Government on account of its stand in this matter.

By the Dutch Constitution the parliamentary franchise belongs to those who pay annually 20 florins and upwards in direct taxation. The committee for the revision of the Constitution now proposes to base the electoral franchise on the rentable value of dwellings, the lowest qualifying value being 52 florins. By this reform the number of electors would be increased from 127,500 to 300,000. The number of members of the Second chamber, which is now eighty-six is to be raised to ninety. Another bill will provide for the definition of electoral districts and for the mode of voting. Elections for one-half of the Chamber now take place once in two years; but in the new scheme it is proposed to hold elections once in every four years only, and then for the entire number of seats.

The Russian occupation of Merv is said to be the common topic of discussion in all the bazaars of Afghanistan and Upper India. The Indian Government appears to be at last awakening to the grave importance of the latest Russian advance, and to be quietly pushing on a railway towards Quetta. It is reported, too, that a large contract has been given for the storage of grain and fodder of certain posts in the Bolan, and that orders have been issued to repair the buildings at Sibi and Perchoki in order to render them fit for the occupation of troops. The Anglo-Indian newspapers are all but unanimous in declaring the Central Asian question to be one calling for immediate attention, and in urging that no time should be lost in appointing a Commission to demarcate the northern and western boundaries of Afghanistan.

April 28.—The elections in the provinces of Spain were tranquil. The Conservatives used the whole force of the Government organization to secure the return of their candidates. The opposition sent delegates to watch the procedure in each district, but the delegates were everywhere obstructed by the Government officials. In many districts the Liberal candidates, seeing it impossible to maintain the fight, withdrew from the contest. On the meeting of the Cortes the Republicans will present a protest against the scandalous suppression of electoral rights.

It is stated that Osman Digma has sent a message to King John of Abyssinia, through friendly Sheikhs, threatening to attack Abyssinia unless the Christians of that country become Mussulmans.

Italy agrees to the Egyptian conference. Russia is expected to announce its assent. Austro-Hungary, it is expected, will ask that the conference be limited to the discussion of the financial question. The Porte urges that the conference be held at Constantinople. Prime Minister Depretis and Mancini, the Foreign Minister, favor the proposed conference in regard to Egypt. Signor Minghetti would prefer cooperating with England and would offer an Italian contingent of 20,000 men for an Eastern campaign.

It is proposed to hold a convention at the City of Mexico, to assist Agüero, the Cuban filibuster, as soon as the other Cuban Generals, who are on their way, arrive, to which representatives from the South American and other Republics will be invited. The revolutionists are organizing to have a full force in arms on the island by the 1st of August. Gens. Tomar, Estrada Palma, Maximo Gomez, Viconte Garcia, Roloff, Crombet, Rodriguez, and others are expected at Mexico within a week. When they arrive definite action will be taken to prosecute the war for freedom, if the peace party have not made a proposition that can be accepted before that time.

Hussein Pasha telegraphs that he is still at Berber. It is too late to retreat. The town is completely surrounded. The garrison is utterly demoralized.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

In the British Commons the Chancellor of the Exchequer introduced the budget. The revenue for 1883 amounted to £87,205,184, and the expenditure to $86,990,000. The beer duty alone exceeded the estimate by £200,000, while the spirit duty fell off. The income tax produced £453,000 beyond the estimate. The national debt up to the present time had been reduced by £72,680,000. It is now lower than since 1811, while the interest is lower than since 1805. The national debt was reduced during 1883 by £8,500,000. The estimated expenditure for the current and fiscal year was £85,222,000, against £85,954, 000 the previous year. Childers said it was difficult to forecast the revenue for 1884. Trade and agriculture were unsatisfactory, but the working classes were pretty comfortably off. Pauperism was declining. The revenue was estimated at £85,550,000, against £71,866,000 last year. In connection with the post-office estimates he was sorry to say that, after eight months' experience, the parcel-post had produced only £155,000, against an estimate of £340,000. It was therefore proposed to defer the system of six-penny telegrams until August, 1885. Owing to the smallness of the surplus—£263,000—Childers only proposed to reduce the tax on carriages, which would absorb £20,000. The remaining $243,000 was not too much to keep in hand. It is proposed to coin new half sovereigns containing 10 per cent less gold, thus effecting a net profit of £1,330,000, which sum, put out at interest, will suffice to maintain the gold coinage in the future in a satisfactory condition. It is also proposed to convert the three per cent consols into two and three-fourths per cents.

The last week in general trade circles, of the U. S., as reported by special telegrams from business centers to Bradstreet's, reveals no change from that preceding worth noting. Throughout a good portion of the West storms have prevailed with their customary effect on the distribution of merchandise and early spring farm work. Prices for staples, with one or two exceptions are low, and the demand is light, and there is no prospect of a revival in the near future. Farmers throughout the West and Northwest are well on with planting, and reports as to progress of the winter plant and spring seeding are almost entirely favorable. The most conservative reports place the increased acreage in Dakota at 25 per cent. Pacific coast advices promise an enormous gain in the wheat harvest as compared with 1883. This, however, will be subject to the possible drouths of later months, if not to some doubts based on previous over-estimates from that quarter. There were 164 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the last week, as compared with 155 in the preceding week, and with 186, 105, and 102 respectively in the corresponding weeks of 1883, 1882, and 1881. About 83 per cent were those of small traders whose capital was less than $5,000. Canada had seventeen, a decrease of five.

By a vote of 26 to 10 the Upper House of the Holland States General passed a bill yesterday authorizing the Dutch Government to demonetize silver to the amount of 2,500,000 florins.

According to official reports the value of the merchandise imported into the United States during the twelve months of the year ending March 31, 1884, was $683,258,642, against $742,508,875 for the previous year.

April 26, $1,750,000 in gold (bars and coin) were sent from New York to Europe.

The Governor of New York has signed the bill to "prohibit the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine."

The striking coopers at Minneapolis, Minn., had a meeting April 25, with over 300 present. Since morning a number who were working yesterday have come out. Only five co-operative shops are running, but many of their men not of the co-operatives have joined the strikers. At the afternoon meeting a resolution was adopted that none of the union coopers would go to work till the shops paid the 16½ cents demanded for barrels. The Hall & Dann Barrel Company, employing 160 hands, agree to give the price if the others will, but not all are willing.

The long-continued drouth and the great heat of the weather are beginning seriously to affect the prospects of the crops in the planting districts. With the exception of two or three light and local showers, there has been no rain in Bengal and Behar since Christmas. In Behar the fierce, hot winds are rapidly burning up the indigo crop. A worse district is Chupra, where the indigo will turn out very badly should the present weather continue for a week longer. Things are not quite so bad in the tea and jute districts; but in these, too, rain is much wanted. At Simla the water supply has fallen so short that work on the new Government offices has been suspended, and 5,000 workmen have been sent to their homes. From all parts of the Bengal Presidency there is a cry for rain.

The predictions in regard to the depressed state of trade, and general distrust, made by many people months ago have been fulfilled, and the present aspect of affairs justifies no expectation of immediate improvement. The significance of events has been and still is that everybody is in the main concerned with simply getting a living and saving what he has (though compelled in many cases to see it slowly shrinking in value); that enterprise is of the most conservative sort; and that the future is looked forward to in a spirit of caution not unmixed with distrust.

The Mark Lane Express, in a review of the British grain trade the last week says: The weather was milder, with rain. Native wheat was scarce to-day, and the demand less active. Flour was dull. Maize was 6d to 1s dearer. In the off-coast trade there is rather more demand. There were nineteen arrivals, eight cargoes sold, three withdrawn, and nine remained. The inquiry for cargoes on passage and for shipment has slackened. Sales of English wheat the last week, 52,875 quarters at 37s 2d, against 61,022 quarters at 42s the corresponding period last year.

Steamers took $1,400,000 in gold from New York, April 30th.

The following are the latest utterances of Mr. Thomas A. Edison in regard to his projects for lighting the cities of the world: "We are advancing in other countries in so many and different directions that in some respects we are gaining more than in America. We are making a great deal of ground all our own which it will take years to cover. We have been granted some very valuable franchises. For instance, the concessions made to us by Uruguay and the Argentine Republic are exclusive; and in Chili we shall be able to control probably the whole lighting system. We have made a good beginning by putting in 2,500 lights in Santiago, the Capital; and our agents are making good progress at all the more important points on the west coast of South America. We have a solid hold at most of the important points, in Europe. At Milan we have a large and complete underground system, whose success has been so great that we are now increasing the power 25 per cent. The grand opera house, La Scala, alone contains 2,000 lights; and they tell me that there is a wonderfully brilliant scene when the auditorium is illuminated and filled. The lights are in use in all the principal cafes, theatres, clubs, and stores.

We are putting in large stations in Berlin and Amsterdam; and our lights have been contracted for another year on Holborn viaduct, and all the competing lights at that point have been abandoned."

Advices from points in Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas, and Ohio, indicate that winter wheat is doing well; the farmers are preparing for corn planting; and fruit prospects in Wisconsin are fair. Cotton in some parts of Texas has to be replanted.

The wages of the shipbuilders on the Clyde were reduced April 30th ten per cent. Twelve thousand men are idle.

The event of the day at Berlin, is the new Russian loan of £15,000,000 sterling ($75,000,000), which derives political importance from the fact of the participation in it of the so-called "See-handlung Societat," which is a Royal Prussian institution, and may be briefly described as a department of the Ministry of Finance. The See-handlung's transactions are subject to the control and sanction of the Ministry of Finance; and as no Prussian Chancellor of the Exchequer would move in any matter of this kind without consulting Prince Bismarck, it is naturally and rightly concluded that the Chancellor not only is favorably disposed towards the Russian Government, but also has considerable confidence in its peaceful policy and in the stability of things in general in Russia. As for the loan itself, the amount is £15,000,000 sterling, £10,000,000 of which will be issued at Berlin, at the end of this month, probably the 29th, after the Russian Easter holidays, in 5 per cent (gold) bonds, in pounds, rubles, and marks, as in the Rothschild or Anglo-Russian loans. The other five millions have been reserved for the Imperial Bank at St. Petersburg. The firm of Bleichroder & Co. furnishes the money here (the ten millions) as mandatory of the See-handlung, and for its own account.

The National Bank of Monte de Piedad, the oldest financial institution in Mexico, closed its doors this morning. There has been a run on the bank for several days, owing to the expectation that the Government would demand assistance from it. This morning the Government made a peremptory demand on the bank for a large sum of money. The bank immediately closed its doors in order to protect its legitimate creditors, whose claims it has ample means under ordinary circumstances to meet. There is but little excitement.

In suppressing a riot by striking laborers in the African diamond-fields the police killed and wounded several.

was heard in the distance. The heavens were black and the rain and hail fell in torrents. Soon the awful noise grew nearer and the air was filled with dirt, trees, grass, fence rails, and debris. Ten houses were wrecked, some live stock killed, and much damage done to crops.

One of the heaviest rains known occurred in the region of Dallas, Texas, submerging the country for miles around.

A large section of Western Ohio was swept by a destructive cyclone. Jamestown was almost obliterated, and six people killed. At Alexander-ville, Woodburn and other places, the damage was very great. At these places nine persons were injured, one fatally.

In connection with the forest fires in Michigan, high winds are prevailing, and Cedar Springs threatened with destruction.

April 29.—Fire on a steamer at Portland, Me., caused a loss of $175,000. Three of the crew perished. Loss by fire at Remington, Ind., $5,500. East Saginaw, Mich., $20,000. Forest fires are raging on every hand near Whitchall, Mich.; also on the Blue Mountains, the woods at Lehigh Gap, Penn., Haven, Rockport and back of South Bethlehem, Pa. A vast amount of timber is being destroyed. Buchanan, Mich., furniture factory and sawmill, $12,000. Hawkinsville, Ga., an entire block.

The fishing-schooner Paquebot's crew of twelve men were all drowned yesterday, off St. John's, N. F., in a collision with an unknown craft.

A construction-train on the Mexican Central Railway was wrecked this morning at Otilera. Two American employes were killed and ten wounded.

At Ellettsville, Ind., one man was killed, and four others mortally wounded, by an explosion of giant powder.

April 30.—The Van Buren County Poor-House, three miles east of Hartford, Mich., burned this morning, and fourteen out of the forty-five inmates were burned to death. Loss by fire at Peoria, Ill., by lightning striking a distillery, $5,000. There were several explosions yesterday among the debris of the buildings destroyed by the recent fire at Panama. The ruins cover an area of four acres.

A heavy storm is prevailing near Buenos Ayres, S. A. Thirteen centimetres of rain have fallen, more than has been known for fourteen years. A number of houses and walls have fallen, and four children were killed. The rivers have overflowed their banks, and many villages are inundated. There has been great loss of cattle. The Argentine gunboat Parana has broken from her moorings and is in great danger of being wrecked. A merchantman lost three anchors but was finally saved. It is expected the gunboat Uruguay and the iron-clad Brown will go to Europe for repairs.

The most destructive wind-storm in that vicinity for ten years visited Coffeyville, Kas., this afternoon. The new Christian Church, nearly completed, was entirely demolished. Its roof was carried upon a dwelling-house adjacent, crushing a portion of the building to atoms. Hedden & White's store, Kentner's new house, and Long & Co's. lumber sheds were badly damaged. Four or five dwellings were unroofed and several barns blown down. Rain fell in torrents during the storm.

THE FUTURE STATE.

THERE seems to be a division of sentiment upon this subject among the "household of faith," instead of being of "one mind," and "speaking the same things." One part claims the salvation of all with some sort of salvation, throughout all eternity; while the other part claims that some will be lost throughout all eternity; and each party endeavors to prove its position by the Books. I shall assume neither position in my critique, as that would force a conclusion and prejudice my investigation and search for truth, and probably defeat the end sought; but believing that in a "multitude of counselors there is safety," I purpose to notice the leading arguments presented by both sides, and deduce from such contrast and comparison, "The Truth."

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not [disbelieves] shall be damned."—Mark 16: 16.

It is argued here that one condition is put in opposition to the other; one saved, the other not saved, damned, therefore lost. "And particularly do we understand here," says one writer, "that the unbeliever is damned, not saved." The writer I presume meant to say disbeliever, instead of unbeliever. A disbeliever is one who has the opportunity of hearing and believing, and rejects; while the whole infant world, and all who have not heard the gospel, are unbelievers, but not disbelievers. (See Webster).

It seems that the conclusion of our friends is somewhat forced. Does being damned necessarily force the conclusion lost in the sense there intended? If these conditions are opposites, as I believe, and that saved means "being placed in the condition of a child of God," placed in "The Kingdom," then necessarily its opposite, damned, means no more here than the not being so placed. The hearing, believing and obeying the truth, secures the first condition, and "continuing faithful until death," retains it. The first condition may be termed a present salvation—a deliverance from past sins—a "babe in Christ;" and the retaining that condition, "adding to our faith knowledge, to knowledge temperance, to temperance, Godliness," &c., will make us a "perfect man in Christ Jesus," and secure an eternal heirship in the presence of God and Christ, an eternal salvation. While hearing, disbelieving and consequently disobeying, debar from this blessed condition, this heirship with Christ, this fulness of God's glory, and that eternally, but not necessarily lost to infinite duration. I do not understand the terms saved and damned, to always have reference to the same time in future, or to mean invariably the same thing wherever used. No declaration, utterance, promise or sentence, made either by men or angels, or even by Jesus himself, has any binding force beyond the authority or power of him who utters it; and as God only has all authority and power, men, angels, and the Son also, are limited in this respect, and must deliver all authority and power into the hands of the Father, from whom it was received. 1 Cor. 24: 28.

Christ will judge only those who have heard the gospel, and profess to believe and follow him. Of these there are two classes, those who believe, obey and follow, whom he denominates sheep. These will never be subject to the second death. The other class, is represented by goats. They imitate the sheep in form and appearance. They are separated from the sheep, and God will reward them, or punish them "according to their works."—Matt. 7: 21–29; 25: 32–46; 1 Cor. 15; John 10: 28, 29. We are also informed in Mal. 3: 6, that God is unchangeable. Jesus says, (Matt. 28: 18): "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," and he will retain that power until the time when Paul says (in 1 Cor. 15: 24–28), that Jesus will deliver up the kingdom unto his Father, and he himself become subject. But this will not be done until he shall have conquered all things, and made death subject, which is the last enemy. Hence, I understand the terms saved and damned, as used by Christ and his ambassadors, to be commensurate with their authorities, and not necessarily to extend beyond the resurrection of the unjust. I understand them to refer to the "kingdom," which he came to establish; and being in the kingdom and continuing in, is salvation; and being out of the kingdom (having heard) is condemnation—separation from the presence and glory of God and the Son, until the general judgment, when God shall reward every man "according to his works;" while those who are in the "fold" belong to Christ—come forth to reign with him at his second coming, at the resurrection of the just; and that a thousand years before the general judgment. The mission of Christ to earth was to bring light and knowledge; dispense darkness; conquer death, and bless and save man, and glorify God.

In the beginning man lived nearly one thousand years; now he seldom attains one hundred. Why is this? Was it not a part of this mission to grant this long life to those who would faithfully serve here for a short time? Hence the doctrine of the "Millennium." "The Lord will keep [preserve] the feet [life] of his Saints; but the wicked shall lie silent in darkness."—1 Sam. 2: 9. This can not refer to this life; for here a wicked man lives as long as any other; and hence this language must refer to the "life hid in Christ,"—the Millennium. It has just the same import as Mark 16: 16. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." He that believes and is baptized, is a "Saint;" and the Lord preserving the feet (life) is being "saved;" while "he that believeth not," is equivalent to the phrase, "the wicked;" and "lying silent in darkness," is the condemnation. They are consigned to the tomb, until the "restitution of all things"—the resurrection of the unjust; while the righteous are brought forth to reign with him as they had suffered with him; that which either has sown he now reaps. Then the faithful only shall live the full measure of man's days, as we now understand life, before entering upon that eternal, never-ending state, according to the first, only, and unchangeable purpose of God. For whatever purposes God created man, we see he sinned and came short of that glory; and death (temporal) was the penalty, from which no mortal could extricate himself. God said, "multiply and replenish the earth;" but this death penalty without some provision, would defeat the object of man's creation—thwart the purpose of God. Shall God's purpose be thwarted? No. Shall he inflict the penalty? Yes. God can not lie. "Then," says one, "God made a mistake, and is not all wise." Man was created capable of living forever if obedient; but, unlike the angels, subjected to death if disobedient; and God only gave him warning and notice of this fact when he said, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt die," (the death penalty shall be passed). The highest punishment that could be inflicted on an angel, is banishment; the highest on man, is death. God inflicts the punishment of death, and sends Jesus to break the fetters, and redeem man from the curse; and man having known the bitter, can the better appreciate the sweet; having known misery, can enjoy happiness. Jesus comes, bursts the bars of death, brings life (this thousand-year-life, too), and immortality to light, and offers this millennial life as one great inducement to mankind to be obedient and serve him. Is not this thousand-year blessing worth the little sacrifice he asks us to make here in this winter-day, this moon-shine life? And is not a consignment to the tomb for the same time, of the body of the wicked, while the spirit is bound in prison, and conscious of the glory of the saints, a sufficient damnation for rejecting the gospel of the Son of God? After which God will reward, or punish the latter class, "according to their works;" while Christ and those who are his, (equal heirs) continuing on and on, while endless ages roll. Over these the "second death hath no power." They are "kings and priests unto God," "ministering spirits."

Again, we have presented Matt. 13: 29, 39, 41, Inspired Translation:

"Let both grow together until the harvest, and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together, first the wheat into my barn, and the tares are bound in bundles to be burned. The harvest is the end of the world, or the destruction of the wicked. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world, or the destruction of the wicked."

It is argued from this that we see here no hint of any kind of salvation for the wicked, but they are to be "burned in the fire," "destroyed," "damned or condemned," and that these terms are interchangeable, synonymous. Here again the conclusion is forced, inasmuch as it is intimated that there is no hope for the wicked, and in the statement that the terms "destroyed," "burned in the fire," &c., are synonymous. Certainly no two of them are interchangeable, as our friends assert. (See Webster.) But admitting it for the sake of investigation, what is taught in fact in regard to the wicked? First, they are to be gathered. What, the wicked to be gathered? Yes, and that to be burned. Now, read Mal. 4:3, and Rev. 20:7-9, and learn when, where, and by whom they are to be gathered, and how and by whom burned. When? At the end of the world, the destruction of the wicked, the end of the thousand years, and hence before the second resurrection, or resurrection of the unjust. Where? At Jerusalem, the Holy City. By whom gathered? The angels, (Matt. 13:39). How and by whom burned? "And fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them."—Rev. 20:9. And Mal. 3:1-4, says, "And there shall not be left root nor branch. And ye [the righteous] shall tread down the wicked; they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet." This proves the destruction, the burning of the fire, or the damnation if you please; (and certainly a sufficient one to show the justice and mercy of God); but not necessarily a damnation of infinite duration; for as yet they have not come to the Eternal Judgment. This is a present damnation only; for disobedience to the gospel, and the voice of the Son of God. But again we are presented with Rev. 20:10:

"And the devil that deceived them [the nations] was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night, forever and ever."

It is argued that a prophet, true or false, is a man; and that at least one will be tormented with the beast and the devil "without any cessation;" no let up of punishment," throughout all eternity. The first part of the conclusion is certainly true; but the concluding part is far-fetched. They are to be tormented, "day and night, forever and ever." The term "forever and ever," and also "everlasting," certainly refer to Time and not to Eternity, whatever idea we may have gathered heretofore. Remember, that this is a Calvinistic tenet, taught to us from our infancy, and hence not our own, but another's conclusion; and not a necessary conclusion either. Here the punishment is limited to "day and night;" and if day and night shall cease to succeed each other, then the punishment may cease also. This is not only a rational, but a necessary conclusion. By reading Revelations 21:25, we find that there will be "one eternal day." And in chapter 22:5, we are informed "there shall be no night there." We have also presented to us in support of infinite torment, Revelations 20:13-15:

"And the sea * * * and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged, every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire; this is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."

Also Revelations 21:8:

"But the fearful and unbelieving, [disbelieving], and the abominable, and murderers, and sorcerers, and idolators, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death."

The argument here is, that this is after the general judgment, and they are not saved, hence damned. The conclusion that it means infinitely damned, lost throughout all eternity, I consider arbitrary, forced and unwarranted, because; first: They are to be judged, "every man according to their works," that is, rewarded or punished according to the degree of good or evil they have done. But by such conclusion you destroy the degree of punishment; and whether their sins are few or many, thick or thin, black or white, unto death or otherwise, yea, all that do wickedly and miss being written in the "Book of Life," are plunged into the gulf of deep despair; lost! lost! infinitely lost, all alike, all equally punished, which can not be reconciled with the text, or with our idea of love and justice.

Second: The statement "This is the second death," necessarily presupposes a first death; and when this first death was pronounced upon man, he knew not of the second life; and may we not reasonably conclude, that when the second death penalty is pronounced, that there is a provision of some kind for the redemption of the unfortunate soul? There was a provision in the first death penalty; what Scripture necessarily forbids the idea of a provision for the second death penalty? There is certainly none. The first ended, why not the second?

We have other passages brought also, such as, "They shall be burned with unquenchable fire;" "punished with an everlasting destruction from the presence of God and the glory of his power," "Shall not be forgiven in this world nor in the world to come," &c. But as we have before seen, we need not of necessity conclude that the punishment is final, and of infinite duration, as all these passages refer to a time, or times, before the general judgment.

We will now examine a few texts brought forward by our brethren of the Universalist persuasion. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."—1 Cor. 15:22. "All," say our friends, "means every one; and as every one is lost through the first Adam, so are they saved through Christ, the second Adam. The text will not carry out the conclusion farther than the general judgment. Through the disobedience of Adam the spirit of every one is separated from the body; through the obedience and sacrifice of Christ, the spirit and body are again united; the result from the first, death; the result from the second, life. The duration of the first condition is to the resurrection; of the second, to the general judgment. Hence this text reveals nothing beyond the general judgment; and some of these resurrected ones may die the second death; for there is a second death. Again, this text is quoted: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." "I come not to judge the world, but to save the world." John 12:32, 47. It is here argued, that upon the condition that Christ be lifted up, all men will be saved, because he came to save the world, and not to judge or condemn; and therefore to fulfill that mission would necessarily require universal salvation. Verse 33 reads thus: "This he said, signifying what death he should die." Now what death did he die? We answer, a temporal death. How was he lifted up? We answer, by being resurrected. "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but *quicken*d [brought to life, resurrected] by the Spirit." 1 Peter 3:18. Hence this is the salvation which all shall receive; this is the manner in which he draws all men. This we may call the redemption of the body—salvation from the tomb, which falls short of that salvation intimated by our friends. We also see by the forty-eighth verse that Christ will not judge those who will not receive his words. "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him." Hence the judgment and salvation here spoken of, shall have culminated before God judges the world, "every man according to his works" before the second death has power over any.

Rom. 5:18. "Therefore as by the offense of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." The same argument is used here as in the text before quoted, in 1 Cor. 15:22. By comparison of these texts, we see they are identical in meaning. The offense of one, (Adam's transgression), brought judgment to condemnation (death temporal.) Even so by the righteousness of one, (Christ's obedience) the free gift unto justification of life (resurrected life). Hence this text as before stated, reveals nothing beyond the general judgment, when God shall judge "every man according to his works." 1 Cor. 15:40-42, is another proof text of our friends.

There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory, so also is the resurrection of the dead."

Also Jude 1:3: "Beloved when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation," &c., in connection with 1 Tim. 4:10, where Paul says, that "God is the Savior of all men, especially of those that believe." It is commonly argued from the above, I believe, that there are two salvations here spoken of—the common salvation of Jude, and the special salvation of Paul. The first to receive the terrestrial body, and inherit a lesser glory, that of the moon or stars. Those saved in the second, to receive celestial bodies, and inherit the greater glory of the sun; and therefore, all be saved, with some sort of salvation, and act in their respective spheres, while the ages of Eternity shall roll. The latter part of the conclusion is not a necessary condition. All we know of man, either by revelation or otherwise, is that he is a being capable of endless progression. If the above conclusion in toto be true, there will be an end to his progression; a fixed and bounded sphere, a monotony which, methinks, would pervade the whole universe of God, and destroy the real identity of true happiness—variety, and thirst for further knowledge. But as we have before seen, there is a second death, beyond which our Heavenly Father has not seen fit to reveal unto us a second future; (if you will allow such an expression); into which we are not permitted to look while in this probationary state. For there is a second death; and if there is a salvation beyond, then there is also a future beyond—a second future. See Rev. 20: 14, also 21: 8.

But other passages also are selected to establish the so-called universal-salvation-theory, such as 1 Tim. 2: 3, 4. For this [to live a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and holiness, verse 2] is good and acceptable in the sight of God, our Savior, who will have all men [who so live] to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." The words which I have placed in brackets, show how this text is perverted and strained to prove the tenet of universal salvation. Luke 2: 10, is also quoted for the same purpose. "And the angel said unto them, fear not; for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." It is here argued that to be joy to all, is equivalent to salvation to all. Also Luke 19: 10: "For the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." It is claimed that God's purposes are never thwarted, and hence, as it was his purpose to save the lost, all the lost will be saved. I certainly see nothing in these texts to force such conclusion, without conditions. Jesus says: "He that believeth not [this good news] shall be damned," thereby making the salvation conditional. And again: "This is life eternal, to know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."—John 17: 3. "And no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."—Matt. 11: 27. Here also we see, that a knowledge by revelation is made necessary to life eternal; and this knowledge can only be attained by obedience. Having now contrasted these two opposite theories of man's condition and compared the texts with each other and with other passages in the Bible as impartially as we are able, we conclude, and believe, that neither position can be proven by the Scriptures; that there is a second death, beyond which we have not the light of revelation, and that it is reasonable to believe in a second provision for the second death penalty. We will therefore conclude our article by offering a few reasons for the opinion of the condition of those in the second future state, or state beyond the second death.

"Let love be without dissimulation, Abhor that which is [unnecessary] evil."—Romans 12: 9.

Love is an attribute of God. "God is love." Acts speak louder than words. If I profess to have a character of love, and at the same time practice manifest cruelty, you would well conclude that my love was simulated, and not real. All government, I am willing to admit, is a necessary evil. The object of punishment is the reformation of the offender; for the protection of the innocent, and society. Without these objects in view, or some of them, it is an unnecessary evil, and a cruelty, and God's command is to abhor it. We say God is holy, just, and good; then he can not justify himself in that which he would utterly abhor in us. Suppose God has it in his heart to punish man through infinite duration; it could not be for man's reformation, for the good of society; therefore a cruelty which is virtually saying, that cruelties are holy, just and good, which thus deifies evil, when we are commanded to abhor it.

"Then," says one, "you make nearly the whole [so-called] Christian world deify evil, and make them teach derogatory to the character of God." Can't help what they teach, but so it is. Did you ever read of the apostasy of the church, the falling away, and that the dispensation of the fulness of times," (Eph. 1: 10), "when the times of the restitution of all things" should usher in (Acts 3: 21), would not come "except there be a falling away first?" Has it never occurred to your mind, that heresies, false doctrines and false teachers were prophetically announced in the New Testament, and that men should "heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears," having a "form of godliness, but denying the power thereof? Have you never sang of the "church's desolation," of the pastors who "preach for hire and divine for money," "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," preaching to please the ear rather than to please God? Do you not know that the time was to come, when men would not endure sound doctrine, that the "truth should be evil spoken of;" and that a man "should become an offender for a word? If you are shocked, examine Paul's writings, and the prophecies relating to the latter time, and the gathering of Israel, and satisfy yourself, that the mischief may be with the church, and professed friends of the Bible, and not in the Bible itself. If a man should keep a creature alive for one year for the sole purpose of torturing it, would not every human creature say that he was a cruel monster, and recoil from him as from a serpent? Then, if you so utterly abhor such a principle in imperfect, fallible man, how can you justify it in an infallible, perfect, just and merciful God? If you were under the control of such a man, and served him, would it be from the principle of love? Then if God is such a character, can you worship him because you love him? You might serve him to avert torture, but certainly from no other motive. Hence, I do not believe that God will take even one man, much less a majority, and keep them alive for the sole purpose of torturing them to all infinity, just because you say "he so decreed from all eternity and that it so God."

"Then," says one, "you certainly believe that all men will eventually be saved? Saved from what? From this infinite cruel torture? I do sincerely hope so. If this is what is meant by "Universal Salvation," then I am a brother indeed. But you say, "God gives them over to hardness of heart, and reprobacy of mind," in short they are such bad, cankered, calloused sinners, that they are only fit for the society of the devil and demons; and the devil does the torturing." Oh! is that the way? Well I am indeed happy to state, that I have a better opinion of the character of the devil than that. Would that exalt the character of God any? Will man out-general God, and God all-wise? If God would permit such cruelty, when he has power to prevent it, would that justify him? If I should place a creature in the hands of one of my enemies for torture, instead of inflicting the torture myself, would that better my character as a merciful being? It would add cowardice to cruelty. Then that will not do.

Ever praying for the Spirit to continually lead, guide and comfort, until "that which is perfect is come;" when we shall "all be of the same mind, speaking the same things," and receive an inheritance that is "incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away."

BYER, Ohio, February 25th, 1884.

Conference Minutes.

ANNUAL GENERAL CONFERENCE.

THURSDAY, APRIL 10TH.

The morning prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. I. N. Roberts and Stephen Adams. Morning preaching service was opened by singing, "Great God, as followers of thy Son." Prayer by Bro. F. G. Pitt. Preaching by Bro. J. W. Briggs.

Business was resumed by singing, and prayer was offered by Bro. W. H. Kelley, and the minutes of yesterday were read.

The President ordered the calling of the names of those who were not present yesterday during the vote on the place for adjournment. Bro. E. L. Kelley objected, and the chair overruled the objection. Bro. Kelley asked that his name be recorded as objecting. On calling the names, Brn. Patterson, Babbitt, Loar and H. Hinderks, cast their votes in favor of Independence, and also the 43 votes of Northern Illinois were so cast. Bro. J. M. Terry voted for Kirtland. This makes the total vote: For Independence 439, for Kirtland 268.

Reports of quorums and committees were presented and laid on the table subject to call, and the order of the day taken up. The secretary read the revised Rules on Representation, as contained in the minutes of last conference, and the question was asked if this publication was satisfactory to the body.

The following was moved by Brn. E. L. Kelley and G. Derry:

Resolved, That the publication of the proposed amendments to the Articles on Representation, through the minutes of the last Annual Conference, published in the Herald is in the mind of this body, a compliance with the rule established for the publication of amendments to these articles.

It was spoken to by Brn. Bronson, Short, Bays and W. H. Kelley, and was adopted.

It was then moved by Brn. E. L. Kelley and J. J. Kaster, that the Articles be taken up and considered paragraph by paragraph, which prevailed.

Section one, reading as follows was moved:

Sec. 1. That the general officers of the Church, known as the Presidency, the Twelve, the High Council, the Seventy, and the Bishopric (proper), are ex-officio members of Conference, and entitled to a voice and vote as representatives of the spiritual authorities of the Church at large.

It was put to vote and adopted.

Section two was read as follows:

Sec. 2. That all High Priests and Elders are entitled to voice and vote in General Conference when present.

Brn. E. Robinson and George Derry moved to amend by inserting the word "ex-officio" between the words "are" and "entitled." This was spoken to by Brn. E. Robinson, Short, E. L. Kelley, Bronson and A. H. Smith. Bro. Short asked the right to speak again, but the chair ruled against it, which ruling was sustained by a vote of 27 for and 19 against. The subject was then spoken upon by Brn. Stebbins, Lambert, Durfee, Pitt, Burton, W. H. Kelley, St. Clair and Mintun, and then the following was moved by Brn. E. L. Kelley and E. C. Briggs as a substitute:

Resolved, That all High Priests, Elders and Priests, who are under General Missionary appointment, shall be entitled to seats and all the privileges of the same when present.

This was spoken upon by Brn. Kinnaman, Bronson, E. L. Kelley, Short, Tignor and St. Clair. The previous question being called, the substitute was put to vote and defeated.

The amendment was put upon its passage and decided in the affirmative by a rising vote, 40 for and 22 against.

Section Two, as amended, was adopted.

Sec. 3. That organized districts be authorized to appoint at their last quarterly session of district conference, next preceding the session of General Conference, delegates to said session of General Conference, who shall be entitled to represent said districts; which delegates so appointed shall be declared members of said General Conference, entitled to voice and vote.

Section Three was moved by Brn. Lambert and Patterson and adopted.

Provided 1st. That the choice and appointment by said districts shall be made by a majority of those present and voting in regular or called sessions of district conference, of the holding of which due notice shall have been given as to time and place within the district, together with a statement of any important business or action that is to be presented to, or likely to be had by said General Session, affecting said district, and to which their approval or disapproval is desired; that instructions to said delegates, may be given as to their action:

Provision One of section Three was moved by Brn. Mintun and J. A. Robinson, and adopted.

Provision Two of section Three was moved by Brn. J. A. Robinson and Luff:

Provided 2d. That the only qualification to eligibility to the office of delegate from district to General Conference shall be membership and good standing in the Church.

It was spoken to by Brn. Mintun, Hawley, J. Curtis, St. Clair, Burton, A. White, E. L. Kelley, and the question being called, a vote was taken, the provision was affirmed. The yeas and nays being asked for, the roll was called by the secretary resulting as follows:

Provision Two was thus adopted by a vote of 440½ to 261½.

Provision Three of Section Three was then moved by Brn. E. L. Kelley and Hicklin:

Provided 3d. That each district shall be entitled to one delegate for every twenty-five members of said district, and one vote in Conference for each delegate to which they may be entitled. The delegates present at Conference from any one district shall be entitled to cast the full vote of the district of which they are delegates, unless otherwise instructed by their district conference; provided, that in case of a disagreement of views among the members of said delegation, the full delegation not being present they shall be entitled to cast only their individual votes as said delegates.

It was discussed by Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley, Short, Patterson, Mintun, Kaster and Nutt, and the question being called the motion to adopt prevailed.

Provision Four was moved by Brn. Patterson and Kinnaman:

Provided 4th. That no one delegate shall represent in the same conference more than one district.

It was spoken to by Bro. Short, and being put to vote was declared affirmed:

Division being called for, a rising vote showed 58 for and 9 against.

Section Four was moved by Brn. Kinnaman and Kaster:

Sec. 4. That each regularly organized branch of the Church not included in an organized district, shall be entitled to one delegate, who shall have the same privileges as delegates of districts.

It was discussed by Brn. Mintun, Kaster, and Luff, and being put to vote, prevailed.

Proviso First of Section Four was moved by Brn. Senterlow Butler and J. A. Robinson and adopted:

Provided 1st. That due general notice to the members of branch of the time and place of meeting for the choosing of said delegate be properly given as in case of districts.

Proviso Two was moved by Brn. Senterlow Butler and J. A. Robinson and adopted:

Provided 2. That delegates shall be entitled to act as such as hereinbefore provided, upon presenting certificates of appointment signed by the presidents, or clerks of districts or branches appointing them.

Section Five was moved by Brn. J. A. Robinson and Kinnaman and adopted:

Sec. 5. That in all cases of grave importance, affecting the polity and faith of the Church, districts and branches may instruct delegates to cast a majority and minority vote, for and against; but in no case shall the number of the votes cast by said delegates so instructed exceed the number to which the district appointing shall be entitled as hereinbefore provided; and in case of a tie in districts, or branches, on questions presented to them, certified to said delegates, the votes of said districts or branches, shall be cast in equal numbers by the delegates.

Section Six was moved by Brn. W. H. Kelley and Butler:

Sec. 6. That districts may organize their sessions of conference agreeably to the above rules, by providing for delegate conferences, of which the basis of representation shall be one delegate for each six members in each branch or fraction thereof.

This was spoken upon by Bro. E. L. Kelley, and the following amendment was moved by Brn. Stebbins and Kelley.

And that districts may constitute Priests, Teachers and Deacons as members of their conferences as well as the Elders if they choose.

A motion was made that the farther consideration of this subject be deferred till Saturday, but this was defeated, and the amendment was adopted as also Section Six as amended. Then on motion of Brn. Pitt and E. L. Kelley the revised Rules on Representation as a whole were adopted as amended, to become operative as soon as published in these minutes, and everything heretofore enacted that is in conflict with these is hereby repealed and made null and void.

Several resolutions were read and meetings of quorums announced for this evening and to-morrow.

In the evening, by request of the Society of Good Templars of Stewartville, and with their presiding officer, Mr. E. G. Sheldon, in charge, Bro. Joseph Smith gave a lecture on Temperance. There was a large attendance of citizens, and an old subject receiving a new treatment commanded the attention of the large audience, and gave general satisfaction.

FRIDAY, APRIL 11TH.

At nine o'clock, according to previous announcement, the Saints assembled to hear from Brn. G. A. Blakeslee and E. L. Kelley, of the Bishopric, upon the temporal law of the Church, and to answer questions. The entire forenoon was so occupied.

At half-past one the assembly sang "Redeemer of Israel," and prayer by Bro. J. S. Patterson, opened the business session.

The President presented the order of the day, namely the Report and Resolutions from the Twelve, and it was ordered that the speakers be limited to five minutes each upon this question.

It was resolved to take up and to begin with Section Two, submitted by the Twelve.

It was moved by Brn. Mintun and Kemp, to adopt said resolution reading:

2. Resolved, That by virtue of their office and calling, as declared by the organic law of the Church, the members of the Quorum of the Twelve are the lawful presidents of the Church abroad in all the world, to preside over, regulate and set in order the same, and that in all the Branches of the Church and Districts, this presiding authority should be acknowledged and acquiesced in by the Presidents of its Branches and Districts. And when one of them is present at a District Conference or Branch Meeting, it should be left discretionary with him, as to whether it would best serve the cause by presiding.

It was discussed by Brn. E. L. Kelley, Hicklin, Patterson, Beard, Kinnaman, Armstrong, Beebe, Kaster, R. J. Anthony, Pitt, StClair and Short.

Brethren Luff and Hicklin moved to amend by inserting after the words "Branch Meeting" the words, "where serious difficulties exist."

This and the main question were spoken to by Brn. Burton, Mintun, Lambert, McDowell, Stebbins, Durfee, W. H. Kelley, J. W. Briggs, Warnky, Alex. H. Smith, Luff and E. Curtis; when the previous question was moved, which, prevailing, the amendment was put to vote and declared lost. By invitation Pres. Smith gave his views on this subject, and then the vote was taken upon the resolution, and it was adopted.

Section Three, moved by Brn. Beard and L. Curtis was adopted, reading as follows:

3. Resolved, That the Quorum of the Twelve, as a judicial body have the right, collectively or individually, to render decisions involving the law and usages of the Church, in their various fields of labor, and when such decisions are made by individual members of the Quorum, said decisions are binding on the Church, and should be respected until brought before the Quorum and its decision had.

Section Four was moved by Brn. Hicklin and Griffiths, reading:

4. Resolved, That it is the decision of this Quorum that the Bishop of the Church has not the right or authority to dispose of, deed and convey to others the properties of the Church at his option.

Brn. E. L. Kelley and J. J. Kaster moved that this be referred back to the Quorum for further consideration. This was spoken to by Brn. A. H. Smith and E. L. Kelley. The question being called, the motion to refer prevailed.

Section Five was moved by Brn. Griffiths and Patterson:

5. Resolved, That a committee from our number be appointed for the purpose of comparing the present and Palmyra Edition of the Book of Mormon, with the manuscript in the hands of David Whitmer, and that Wm. H. Kelley, T. W. Smith, and A. H. Smith compose said committee.

Bro. Short asked why so laborious a work was necessary, and Bro. W. H. Kelley gave the reasons; after which the appointment of said committee was sustained.

It was then moved by Brn. Bronson and Foss, that the committee be requested to report the result of their labors through the Herald, which was adopted. Subsequently, Brn. Etzenhouser and W. H. Kelley moved to reconsider, which was spoken to by Brn. J. W. Briggs, Etzenhouser, E. L. Kelley, Kinnaman and Bronson, and the motion to reconsider was defeated.

Section Six was moved and adopted:

6. Resolved, That it is the sense of this Quorum that the commandments of a local character, given to the First Organization of the Church are binding on the Reorganization, only so far as they are either reiterated, or referred to as binding by commandment to this church.

It was then moved to adopt as a whole, all that the Conference acted upon, which was approved by the assembly.

A second report from the Twelve was presented and read as follows:

The following resolutions were passed by the Quorum of the Twelve, and the consideration of the Conference is called to them.

1. Whereas, by joint action of the Quorum of the Twelve and the Bishopric, a resolution was passed, authorizing the publication of the moneys given to the Elders in their various mission fields through the Herald, the same as the means given directly into the hands of the Bishop, and his Agents; and which was endorsed by the Conference; and whereas, the Editor of the Herald, or Board of Publication, refused to publish these statements when submitted to them; therefore, Resolved, That this Assumption of power is without authority of law and usage and dangerous to the liberties of the people.

Resolved, That in the opinion of this council, no person's name should be stricken from the Church Records until specific charges have been preferred against them, and lawful action had in the case, and that the cause or causes of action and expulsion should be stated upon the Church Record.

3. Resolved, That from the meager information that has been presented before us, concerning the publishing of a periodical in the Danish language, we are unable to make any recommendations concerning it.

Bro. E. L. Kelley moved to adopt. Brn. J. A. Robinson and Nutt moved as a substitute that it be laid on the table. By vote of the conference this was refused, and with proviso that the Editor shall attach his reasons for not publishing the things referred to, the motion to adopt prevailed.

The Editor of HERALD states that the fault of refusing to publish the reports referred to was his, and not the Board's. His reasons for refusing are: (1) It was not ordered to be done specifically in the resolution referred to. (2) He did not consider that the order to publish the Bishop's report included the reports of Elders referred to in the resolution. (3)

That the reports which he refused to publish were sent him detached from the Bishop's report, and were not incorporated in it; if they had been, he could not have refused, although he believed then, and believes now that a publication of the totals of the amount each received and reported to the Bishop is all that is necessary.

The following was moved by Brn. E. L. Kelley and Kaster:

Whereas, since the reports of the Elders to the Bishop to this date have been made out and handed to the auditing committee in totals, and not by giving the names of the contributors, by reason of the failure to publish names of the past year; therefore, be it

Resolved, That a publication of the totals only of such reports already made be considered a compliance with the rule.

The following report of the Quorum of High Priests was read by the Secretary, and received:

The High Priests have held one meeting during Conference, on April 10th. In president Charles Derry's absence, Bro. E. Robinson was made temporary chairman; H. A. Stebbins, secretary.

After the usual devotional exercises the minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Letters were read as follows: C. Derry reports his time as being wholly occupied in the work of the ministry, as a traveling Elder in Western Iowa. H. J. Hudson is helping sustain the work in Nebraska in all ways that he can. S. S. Wilcox presides over the Shenandoah Branch, and is actively engaged; has baptized two. Jonas W. Chaburn presides over the Harlan Branch, and does what he can in the district. J. Goodale is in charge of the Pittsfield District, and prosecuting the work there. H. P. Brown has been presiding over the Oakland Branch, and also over the Northern California District, and is still in charge of the former. Joseph Parsons reports labor done in the Pittsburg and Mansfield Valley branches. C. G. Lanphear has recently presided over the Independence District, and while so engaged traveled therein and preached; still does what he can. George Sweet is presiding over the Salem Branch, Iowa, and attending to his duties therein. J. C. Crabb presides over the Little Sioux District, and labors therein. W. D. Morton and O. P. Dunham of Burlington, Iowa, report laboring there and in that district.

Those present and reporting were as follows: J. Landers is president of the Blue Rapids Branch, Kansas, and so far as his age permits, is doing all he can. P. Cadwell presides at Magnolia, Iowa, and also labors at other places in the district; has baptized several. G. A. Blakeslee has been engaged chiefly in his duties as the Bishop of the Church, and in teaching the temporal law. George Derry performs such duty as opportunity presents, and his ability permits. H. A. Stebbins presides over the Lamoni Branch and over the Decatur District, and intends to be in the field all the time that his duties as Church Secretary and Recorder will permit and his means allow; has baptized twenty-five the past year. E. Robinson said that for quite a time he presided over the Davis City Branch, but was quite ill nearly all winter, and had to give up active labor.

The report of committee on form of license was read, the form amended and adopted.

Adjourned with benediction by Father Landers.

The report of the Quorum of Seventy was read and received:

The Quorum of Seventy has held five meetings. The quorum is in very fair working order. There are thirty-six persons whose names stand enrolled upon the present record. Twenty-two of this number are fully engaged in their calling. The remaining fourteen labor only locally, either on account of financial embarrassment or old age, some ranging from sixty-six to seventy-six years of age, but are firm in the faith, and have done much good in earlier years. The names of Nathan Lindsey was dropped from quorum for continued inactivity.

Sister Nancy Andrews was on motion received as a member of the church on her original baptism, Bro. Etzenhouser to obtain and send to the Church Secretary and Recorder the items of her birth and baptism.

A resolution on Church History was presented by Brn. E. L. Kelley and H. C. Bronson:

Whereas, the question has been raised with regard to the publication of the work entitled "The Life of Joseph the Prophet" forestalling the history of the church, as before contemplated by it through its appointed "Historian." And Whereas, it can not be considered that the book entitled "Life of Joseph the Prophet" was intended to forestall, or take the place of the History of the Reorganized Church, which Elder Jason W. Briggs, Church Historian, was appointed and expected to prepare for publication.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That he be hereby requested to proceed to prepare said history, which when completed shall be presented to the next ensuing conference thereafter for examination and approval upon its merits, by a proper committee then to be appointed; and that without regard on his part, or further action by us in reference to what may be contained in the work entitled Life of Joseph the Prophet.

It was spoken to by Brn. Short, J. W. Briggs, and E. L. Kelley, and adopted.

The Church Secretary presented the item of cost for printing the report of the Quorum of the Twelve, $3.50 for two hundred and fifty copies, and its payment by the Bishop was ordered.

Meetings of quorums were announced, and conference adjourned.

Evening preaching service was opened by singing, "We lift our hearts to thee." Prayer by Bro. John Landers. Sermon by Bro. H. C. Bronson.

SATURDAY, APRIL 12TH.

The morning prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. Foss and Mintun, assisted by Bro. Landers.

In the forenoon preaching by Bro. Etzenhouser, assisted by Bro. Foss.

At half-past one, sang "Let Zion in her beauty rise." Prayer by Bro. J. H. Lake.

The committee on the case of A. B. Kuykendall reported:

We, your committee appointed on petition of A. B. Kuykendall, do hereby suggest that the action had in his case be sustained, and any further action, if any may be had, be left in hands of the president of South-Western Mission. G. S. Hyde, R. Etzenhouser, J. F. McDowell, committee.

The report was received and the committee discharged, and after discussion by Brn. McDowell, Heman C. Smith and Lambert, the motion made to adopt prevailed.

Committee on the Burlington Branch case reported, but the President stating that new testimony had come in, it was ordered that the report be re-committed, and a further examination of the case made.

A communication from Bro. Columbus Scott on Sunday School lessons and their publication in the Hope, or otherwise, was read, but no action had.

The committee on the books and report of the Bishop reported:

We, your committee appointed to examine and report upon the Bishop's books and report, submit respectfully that after carefully examining and comparing the said books and report, we find them correct and that they have been kept in a clear and concise manner, and that the books and report agree. Wm. Leeka, J. F. Burton, T. T. Hinderks, committee.

The report was adopted and the committee discharged.

Bro. J. R. Lambert, as delegate from the Chicago Branch presented a report of said branch, and asked that it be received, or rejected, reading as follows:

Report of the Chicago Branch for nearly ten months, ending January 22d, 1884: Members at last report thirty, present number thirty-five, including three Elders, one Priest, one Deacon; four received by vote from First Chicago Branch, one by letter from another branch. J. R. Lambert, president; T. A. Phillips, clerk.

It was spoken upon by Brn. Lambert and Pitt, and it appeared, that two of the thirty-five claimed in the report had been received into the Independence Branch. On the suggestion of President Smith, it was moved to amend by striking out "35" and inserting "33," which was spoken upon by Brn. Lambert and Pitt. It was then moved to refer to a committee of three to examine and report. This was lost and the amendment was also defeated. It was then ordered that the president of the Chicago Branch strike the two names referred to from his record. This was favored by a rising vote of 30 for and 25 against.

The following was received from the Quorum of the Twelve, being upon the matter referred back to them yesterday, Section Four of their report:

Whereas, by inquiry into the rules governing the rights, and privileges of the Bishop, and the restrictions thrown around his powers, we find that sufficient to govern the Bishop's relation to the properties of the Church, is found in the "Articles of Agreement" between the Twelve and Bishopric, published in the Herald of May 1st, 1873; Therefore, be it Resolved, That we as a quorum consider that there is no necessity for further action in the matter.

The Quorum of the Twelve presented the following nominations for missionary appointment, and were adopted as follows:

1. J. W. Briggs: To labor as he shall deem proper, in connection with his duties as Church Historian.
2. Josiah Ells: Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, and to travel further east, as he may have opportunity.
2. Resolved, That we do not consider it expedient to discontinue the Chicago Mission at present, and that Bro. E. C. Briggs take the oversight thereof; as also Northern Illinois, Southern Wisconsin and Minnesota.

In considering the above, Brn. Pitt and Patterson moved the following:

Whereas, As certain legislation was had at the conference held at Independence in April, 1882, affecting the work in Chicago, which legislation was not printed in the published minutes of the Conference, for which cause considerable misunderstanding has obtained; and whereas, the Secretary of the conference now has the original unpublished minutes of said conference in his possession; therefore, Resolved, That they be read.

It was spoken to by Bro. E. L. Kelley, and was then adopted, and the item referred to was read, namely, that when the mission of Bro. W. H. Kelley was proposed in April, 1882, it was sought to attend by "detaching the Chicago Branch from the Northern Illinois District," of which the original minutes, heretofore overlooked, say "Amendment lost." The question being upon the continuance of the Chicago Mission, after speaking by Brn. Patterson, E. L. Kelley, Hawley, Short, Pitt, Lambert, Beaird and Nutt, the resolution of the Twelve was put to vote and declared adopted. The yeas and nays being called, resulted as follows:

Whereas, Bro. D. Maule by reason of location has for several years been unable to meet with us, therefore Resolved that we release him as secretary, with a vote of thanks for his past labors. F. C. Warnky elected as secretary. President Chambers resigned the presidency of the quorum and Bro. I. N. White was chosen as president. We selected Brn. J. S. Roth and B. F. Durfee as his counselors, and the quorum endorsed and hereby present them to the conference for ordination.

Resolved that the president inform the several members of the Quorum through the Herald concerning the resolution that was passed at the informal meeting of the Elders' Quorums held at Independence, April, 1882,—which requires every Elder to report to the president of his quorum all his labors—or the reason of non-labors, and that failing so to do would be prima facie evidence of their standing in the quorum, and Elders failing to comply with the spirit of this resolution action will be immediately commenced against them.

Resolved that the secretary see that the quorum records are always at the quorum meetings. Brn. B. F. Durfee and J. Armstrong are recommended to the Conference for appointment.

The report of Third Quorum of Elders was read:

The quorum has held three meetings, at which reports were heard from Garret Walling, E. W. Cato, Martin Rasmussen, George Kemp, E. H. Gurley, J. W. Waldsmith, Daniel Brown, Wm. Parsons was received into the quorum, and recommended to the Quorum of Twelve as worthy to represent the church as a missionary from General Conference. The field preferred by him is North-west Kansas. Bro. Nephi Yocum was referred to the quorum secretary for a license.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Third Quorum of Elders that the nature of the calling of the first quorums of the church is of such a character as to prohibit them, or any one of them, engaging in secular pursuits, which in their nature demand the time and talent of the same.

The spiritual authorities of the church were sustained, also the quorum officers.

The report of Fifth Quorum of Elders was read:

On April 9th, 1884, Bro. R. M. Elvin, president of First Quorum of Elders, called together the applicants for organization of the Fifth Quorum. L. L. Babbitt was chosen secretary pro tem. The list of (77) names as presented by the Church Secretary was read and other applicants added by vote. R. Etzenhouser was elected president of quorum.

At a subsequent meeting J. A. Robinson was elected secretary. Wm. Rumel and T. N. Hudson were nominated for counselors by the president, which the quorum ratified and hereby ask the conference to ordain Brn. Etzenhouser, Rumel and Hudson.

The name of Wm. Worwood was dropped because of apostasy. The following were added during the several meetings: Peter Anderson, J. A. Currie, Jun., R. Etzenhouser, T. N. Hudson, Wm. Rumel, J. A. R. Etzenhouser and Andrew V. Closson expressed their readiness for the active ministry and were recommended to the Quorum of the Twelve for missions. Peter Anderson would have been if present and not appointed on Scandinavian literature. All present expressed determination to magnify their calling. Ample means was raised for the record and quorum licenses. The quorum is now full. Three meetings were held with peace and God's favor present, the action having been in unanimity.

The report of First Quorum of Priests was read:

All of which we submit for the consideration of this Conference and petition that those who have been chosen as president and counselors be so ordained.

The recommendations from the Second and Fifth quorums of Elders for the ordination of the officers named, were sanctioned, and their ordination ordered.

The resolution contained in the report of the Third Quorum, concerning the leading ministry engaging in secular pursuits was adopted as the belief of the Conference.

The officers chosen by the Priests' Quorum were referred to the Bishop. On this subject Bro. A. H. Smith asked for a harmonizing of Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 104, par. 31, with the idea that the Bishop is to preside over the Quorum of Priests. The President replied by reading paragraph 40.

The Bishop requested all Elders present who wish to enter the missionary field to hand to the Twelve a statement of the probable amount necessary for their families the coming year. Announcements were made for meetings of quorums and committees.

At the evening service, sang "All you that love Immanuel's name." Prayer by Bro. G. S. Hyde. Sang, "Go then ye Elders brave." Bro. John S. Patterson preached from Luke 19: 10.

SUNDAY, APRIL 13TH.

The morning prayer meeting was presided over by Brn. F. G. Pitt and R. M. Elvin.

In the forenoon, Bro. G. E. Deuel offered prayer and Bro. John Landers preached.

The report of the Fourth Quorum of Elders was read:

A meeting was held April 10th, 1884, Temme Hinderks was chosen to preside pro tem, and J. T. Williams as clerk pro tem. Prayer by Bro. Hinderks. Letters were read as follows: The Church Secretary reported the losses from the quorum and the total present membership, also the report of the quorum secretary was read and approved. Elders J. D. Flanders, Henry Green, J. C. Hardman, Wm. Hopkins, J. T. Williams, R. K. Ross and Temme Hinderks reported in person, and H. N. Hanson, J. L. Richey, J. Gallup, E. N. Webster and J. B. Jarvis by letter.

The following Resolutions were adopted: That each member of the quorum who wants a license should make application to A. J. Cato, the secretary of the quorum, and send five cents in postage stamps for the same. That J. T. Williams send for licenses for the following brethren present: J. D. Hardman and Henry Green act as committee to find out the standing of Bro. Waterman in the Church, and report to the quorum at next General Conference.

It was moved that the report of Bro. Z. H. Gurley be taken up and considered, but this was not approved. A motion was then offered that it be referred to his quorum. It was asked if it would be published if so referred. The Chair replied in the negative, unless reported back in time for the minutes. After a few remarks the motion to refer was put to vote and prevailed.

The committee on the Burlington Branch case reported:

We your committee appointed in the case of Bro. and Sr. McFarland beg leave to report, that after examining additional evidence, find that both parties are at fault, and we respectfully recommend that their case be referred to the brother in charge of that field of labor for further investigation.

It was adopted and the committee was discharged.

Following this it was Resolved, That the report on Sunday Schools that was laid on the table in April, 1882, be taken up. Pres. Joseph Smith requested that some one be called to the chair, as he wished to be absent, and on motion Bro. A. H. Smith was called to the chair.

The Secretary then read the report referred to, and it was moved that the furnishing of Lesson Leaves be referred to the Board of Publication, and they to report on the matter at next conference. A substitute was moved as follows:

That the Board of Publication be requested to take such measures as they shall deem proper to furnish for Sabbath Schools suitable lesson papers, and if practicable, reduce the size of the Hope, make it a weekly, and publish through it the lessons, and that W. C. Cadwell, Sr. Alice Cobb and D. F. Lambert, be a committee to prepare and furnish said lessons for publication.

Preamble and resolution on secret societies read, moved and seconded, that we accept of them as a law for this branch. Carried.

ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Preamble: Inasmuch as Jesus and his holy prophets and apostles, have forbidden the servants and the Saints of God to enter into any secret society, or combination; "For the Lord worketh not in secret combinations." "For it hath been made known unto me that they are had among all people, and they are had among the Lamanites and they have caused the destruction of this people," etc.—Book of Ether, Book of Mormon, chapter 3, paragraphs 12 and 13. "And neither shall thou swear by the head, because thou canst not make one hair black or white."—Disciple Nephi, chap. 5, par. 2. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we in the Springville Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will not permit any person to become a member of our branch who belongs, associates, upholds or defends any secret society or combination of whatever name or pretense in general, and Freemasonry in particular. HALL.—At his residence in Shenandoah, Iowa, Friday morning at 4:45 o'clock of congestion of the bowels, Mr. Haven C. Hall, son of H. G. Hall, Sr., aged 34 years, 4 months and 23 days. The deceased was born in Peane, Emmet county, Michigan, and came to Shenandoah ten years ago this spring. He leaves a family—wife and three children—a daughter and two sons, aged about eight, four and two years. He was a devout Christian man, and a member of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints since thirteen years of age. He was a good father and husband, a devout man, and while first attending to spiritual things, he was always attentive to temporal affairs, and the support of his family. At ten o'clock Thursday evening, before he called to his bedside attorney Jas. McCabe to make out his last testament, he felt and knew that his time on earth was short. He was a contractor and builder by trade, and one of the most honest and industrious citizens Shenandoah ever had. His loss will be felt keenly in the circle of our business men, as well as by his doubly afflicted family. At his own request, the remains were kept until the next Sabbath, when he was buried in the Shenandoah cemetery, Rev. Mark Forscutt, formerly of this city, preaching the funeral discourse.

She was the mother of twelve children, seven of whom are still living. Her health had been failing for many years, a general decline and decay, closing with the last two weeks fatal illness. Bro. H. A. Stebbins was telegraphed for and preached her funeral sermon on the 28th. She was baptized into the Church August 5th, 1871.

 Manufacturers of
HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES,
 605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO RUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!
 Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.
 LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.
 I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
 Very respectfully,
 N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, IDAHO, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
 Yours in bonds,
 J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
 Johns & Ordway, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
 Your brother in Christ,
 O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
 GEO. MONTAGUE.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
 Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
 Yours,
 V. D. BAGGELLY.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
 Yours in bonds,

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
 Messrs. Johns & Ordway: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
 W. F. CLARK.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
 Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
 Yours in gospel bonds,
 E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction; and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 77 cents. (Iron Heater included for $1.20) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 17th, 1884.

ONE portion of the business done at the late conference, demands more than a passing notice, and more than a casual consideration. The report of the Quorum of Twelve, in which certain things were set forth as declarative of duties and prerogatives, created some excitement, and a flutter of surprise. But when the report was printed by the order of conference, and placed in the hands of the Elders, whatever fears may have been entertained in regard to it, departed, and when it was finally adopted, it had ceased largely to be objectionable. There is nothing affirmed in the main feature of this report that is not found in the law; and reference to the "organic law" by those chiefly affected by the positions assumed, shows clearly their devotion to the law.

That grave fears are entertained by some that the exercise of prerogatives may be detrimental to the good will and harmony of the body, the church, the people, is quite natural under the circumstances. The encroachments of priestcraft in the dark ages, the abominable, unchristlike practices of the shepherds in the far off past, though matters of remote history, are not forgotten; while the usurpation and despotic rule of the apostasy from the true faith in the latter days are keenly remembered. But the history of the Reorganization shows that there was a wide rebound from the rule of priestcraft to one of entire disregard of all authority. Nor was it until every representative sent out by the church was made to feel how utterly fallacious his efforts to bring to pass unity and respect for the law of the church were, did those representative men feel the importance of the Master's word, "He who heareth you heareth me." There was but little respect shown to the church in the slighting of its servants, nor could there be any settling of difficulties, for the right to decide in questions of controversy rested with no one.

What is affirmed is consonant with what is found in the Doctrine and Covenants; section 104, paragraph 12. "The twelve are a traveling presiding high council, to officiate in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the presidency of the church, agreeably to the institution of heaven, to build up the church and regulate all the affairs of the same, in all nations; first unto the Gentiles, and secondly unto the Jews."

There is no meaning attached to the conferring the calling of an apostle upon a man ordained to the office, and sent out by the voice of the church; unless that man is so invested with the authority of the church that he may speak for the church, and so carry with him the dignity and honor of the body he represents.

The only fear that can reasonably be held in regard to the matter is the possibility that some one or more of the members of the quorum, may exercise the prerogative improperly, and thus outrage the liberties of the people; or that different members may decide similar questions differently one from the other, and thus create confusion. The second possibility exists in no greater force now than before; nor in fact is it near so imminent, for when it is reflected that weight and respect attach to the respective decisions of these men, and that grave consequences to the church and themselves must attend those decisions pending the next session of the quorum for the examination and adjudication of the decisions made in the interim between sessions, it must be seen that far more care will be exercised, and fewer hasty decisions rendered; and none except the one making it is reasonably sure of both law and facts; for he will know that both must come into the light and be considered. Much more pains will be taken to know what the views of the quorum may be, and so a much surer unity be reached. There is less probability that the first possibility will occur, from the fact that until now, a member did not know where the lines of prerogative lay; and hence was liable to overstep, or be called in question improperly, when the step was and could only be constructively a correct, or an incorrect one. Besides this, when the cause for action seems to exist, there is not time for long delays. Time which makes all things even, also sows discord if error be on foot. And much mischief has resulted in the past, and may result again if there be not somewhere the right of immediate and positive decision. Nor is it proper to refuse the exercise of authority upon the possibility of its abuse. If it be right to deny any authority because it may be abused, there is then an end to administration; and to call men to act for any society, or in any name is a farce. The point chiefly in question is the one which presumes, that the members of the quorum in their individual labor, in their respective fields, may improperly interfere in the prerogatives of the presidents of districts and branches, in those fields; or as it might be expressed, "there will be no longer any use for district and branch presidents." If this were true, then by a parity of argument, there could be no use for Priest, Teacher, or Deacon, while there was an Elder present. The Twelve are essentially a traveling ministry, a presiding ministry at that; and are, because of their calling, to travel looking after the spread of the gospel and the interest of the church. This includes the welfare of both the districts and branches in their respective fields; and while no member of the quorum may wantonly enter in upon the privileges of either district, or branch presidents; yet he may, and must by virtue of his calling, and appointment by the church exercise that authority if necessity warrants, and this is because of a two fold reason. First. Because the organic law of the church invests him with such prerogative. Second. Because he is by his appointment a part of each and every organized district and branch in his charge; and has his place at the lead by virtue of such appointment, in his field as an organized field, or mission, as much as do the presidents of districts and branches. He may do what his calling requires, wisdom dictates, or necessity demands. But by reason of his amenity to the church and the law, he must exercise his prerogative, the authority of the church, at his peril.

When it is considered that there are three quorums of the Church recognized in the law, each holding co-equal authority, it must be felt that ample security is guaranteed to the people against the improper use of the prerogatives conceded by the late action of conference. For should it occur to the Presidency that certain action and decision of the Twelve were incorrect it is their privilege to check such dangerous acts. And should the Seventy see that either was wrong that body also has the legal authority to counter check. If Presidency and Seventy are agreed the Twelve are overruled if adverse. If Presidency and Twelve agree, the Seventy must submit. If Twelve and Seventy are agreed the Presidency must submit. Nor can the positions be attacked or ignored by the Church only by the action of a General Assembly, which is the deciding body under the law and the Head, Christ.

Under the action of the late resolution of conference decisions properly made; that is, made in proper form and in process of the prosecution of the legitimate calling of the Twelve, in their respective fields, obtain as the rule of the Church, until the convening of the ensuing session of conference of the Quorum and the Church; when they may be ratified, or denied. These decisions do not become fixed laws, but are like the decisions in the courts below, and obtain until changed by the courts of appeal, or final arbitration. No one need to fear as the late action can not be made to operate on the past, as an ex post facto law; and prevails only from its publication.

IN reply to "Argus;" or rather in explanation of the objectionable feature of our answer to Rev. Luse, referred to by "Argus," we have only this to state: The Kirtland Safety Society, has always been written of by those writing against the Saints as a bank, a banking scheme, conceived in fraud, fraudulently conducted to the serious damage of those not in the church. It was in this light Rev. Luse treated it, and we answered upon the hypothesis that the institution was a bank; and had "Argus" been pleased to have given us the proper credit for candor he would have noticed our statement at the beginning of the last paragraph on page 227 of the HERALD, wherein we say, "We do not pretend to say how the matter was, for we do not know."

We would be glad to give the real history of the affair, if we had it, from first to last; whatever the issue might be. But as we can not, and are dependent upon the same sources from which "Argus" quotes, it may partially serve the purpose to give what appears in the history referred to as a whole.

"And on the 2d of November, (1836), the brethren at Kirtland drew up certain articles of agreement, preparatory to the organization of a banking institution, to be called the "Kirtland Safety Society."

Then follows the statement respecting the sending of Pres. O. Cowdery to secure plates, and O. Hyde to secure a charter, and the failure of the latter, as given by "Argus."

"Argus" gives the preliminary minutes which declare the purposes of the organization, and quotes the 14th article; we give the rest.

Art. 1st. The capital stock of said Society or firm shall not be less than four millions of dollars; to be divided into shares of fifty dollars each; and may be increased to any amount, at the discretion of the managers.

Art. 2nd. The management of said Company shall be under the superintendence of thirty-two managers, to be chosen annually, by, and from among the members of the same; each member being entitled to one vote for each share, which he, she, or they, may hold in said Company; and said votes may be given by proxy, or in propria persona.

Art. 3rd. It shall be the duty of said managers, when chosen, to elect from their number, a Treasurer and Secretary. It shall be the further duty of said managers to meet in the upper room of the office of said Company, on the first Mondays of November and May, of each year, at nine o'clock, a.m., to inspect the books of said Company, and transact such other business as may be deemed necessary.

Art. 4th. It shall be the duty of said managers to choose from among their number, seven men, who shall meet in the upper room of said office on Tuesday of each week, at four o'clock, p.m., to inquire into and assist in all matters pertaining to said Company.

Art. 5th. Each manager shall receive from the Company one dollar per day for his services when called together at the annual and semi-annual meetings. The Treasurer and Secretary and the seven, the Committee of the managers, shall receive a compensation for their services as they shall be agreed by the managers at their semi-annual meetings.

Art. 6th. The first election of managers, as set forth in the 2nd Article, shall take place at the meeting of the members to adopt this agreement, who shall hold their offices until the first Monday of November, 1837, unless removed by death or misdemeanor, and until others are duly elected. Every annual election of managers shall take place on the first Monday of November in each year. It shall be the duty of the Treasurer and Secretary of said Company to receive the votes of the members by ballot, and declare the election.

Art. 7th. The books of the Company shall be always open for the inspection of the members.

Art. 8th. It shall be the duty of the managers of the Company to declare a dividend once in six months; which dividend shall be apportioned among the members, according to the instalments by them paid in.

Art. 9th. All persons subscribing stock in said firm, shall pay their first instalment at the time of subscribing, and other instalments from time to time, as shall be required by the managers.

Art. 10th. The managers shall give thirty days notice in some public paper, printed in this county, previous to an instalment being paid in. All subscribers residing out of the state, shall be required to pay in half the amount of their subscriptions at the time of subscribing; and the remainder, or such part thereof, as shall be required at any time, by the managers, after thirty days notice.

Art. 11th. The Treasurer shall be empowered to call special meetings of the managers whenever he shall deem it necessary, separate and aside from the annual and semi-annual meetings.

Art. 12th. Two-thirds of the managers shall form a quorum to act at the semi-annual meetings, and any number of the seven, the Committee of the managers, with the Treasurer and Secretary, or either of them, may form a quorum to transact business at the weekly meetings, and in case none of the seven are present at the weekly meetings, the Treasurer and Secretary must transact the business.

Art. 13th. The managers shall have power to enact such by-laws as they may deem necessary from time to time, provided they do not infringe upon these articles of agreement.

Art. 14th. The notes given for the benefit of said Society shall be given to the Treasurer in the following form—"Ninety days after date, we jointly, and severally, promise to pay A. B. or order,—dollars and—cents, value received." A record of which shall be made in the books at the time, of the amount, and by whom given, and when due, and deposited with the files and papers of said Society.

Art. 16th. Any article in this agreement may be altered at any time, annulled, added unto, or expunged by the vote of two thirds of the members of said Society, except the 14th article, that shall remain unaltered during the existence of said Company. For the true and faithful fulfillment of the above covenant and agreement, we individually bind ourselves to each other, under the penal sum of one hundred thousand dollars. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals, the day and date first above written.

From this it would appear that an effort had been made to secure a charter from the Legislature, upon the failure of which effort for reasons supposed to be good by the Legislature, the parties met and entered into articles of agreement for the prosecution of business purposes set forth in the Preamble, and provided for in the body of the instrument. This association must have been formed under the statutes, or it could not have done business a day; and, however extravagant the hopes of its members may have been regarding its success, no evidences of fraud appear in the articles.

We have not the statutes of Ohio then in force at hand, and as we stated before do not know in regard to the matter; but draw our conclusions from what appears to which we have access. But from certain provisions found in the articles it seems correct to infer that it was the intention of the parties forming the association to prosecute their affairs in legitimate ways. This is seen: (1) In the declarations of the Preamble. (2) In the choosing their officers and managers from among the stockholders. (3) In the providing that the books should always be open to the inspection of the members. (4) In providing that public notice of the levy for instalments of stock subscribed should be given in a newspaper in the county, where such company existed. (5) In the fact that the members of the company were held pledging themselves individually as copartners for the payment of the notes that might be given by the society in the prosecution of its business. (6) In that there was a provision by which notes given to the society should be drawn payable to the Treasurer and not to any member of the society in his individual name. (7) In that in the clause providing for the amending, or altering the articles of agreement, the 14th by which the individuals became liable for the payment of the debts of the society, was excepted from change and was to remain in force during the existence of the association.

The so-called Kirtland Bank has always been made a crime in the people by the enemies of the Saints, and a bug-a-boo to the lukewarm defenders of the faith; and it was only with the intention of arguing the accuracy of such charge of crime; and the expediency of continuing such bug-a-boo, from the usually accepted idea that it was a bank. If it was a bank of issue it must have been by charter; and that charter could not have been obtained upon an investment of "cheek" for swindling purposes. If it was as a bank thus chartered, it would have had the same right to issue its bills, promises to pay, that any and all other banks similarly chartered did have, liable to the same casualties of business, success or failure, and governed by the same statutory enactments.

If it was not such a bank association, but simply a mercantile and business firm, having existence as other business firms under the statutory enactments obtaining in the State of Ohio, and governing such business association, it had the right to give its notes, to those who would take them, in the transaction of its business, and to take notes from its debtors, who might elect to give them, without subjecting the association to the charge of fraudulent banking. Other business firms have been organized and have done business, both before and after the "Kirtland Safety Society Anti-Banking Company," and have failed in bankruptcy and ruin; and business ventures and firms are failing now in the commercial world at the rate of some two hundred and seventy-two per week.

And because the one at Kirtland established by the "brethren" with Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon among them failed, is it to be concluded that it was originated in fraud for a fraudulent purpose, and carried to a fraudulent end, to the enriching of these two men. We see no reason to accept this conclusion, whether it was a bank, or a business company; for either must have been under the laws of Ohio, the one from statutory provisions providing for such business firms; the other by charter from the legislature. It does not appear that any one grew rich out of the movement that we are aware of. Who were the subscribers to the stock we do not know. How much of the four million dollars were subscribed we do not know. How much of the amount subscribed as capital stock was paid in we do not know? How long the company continued in business we do not know. How many notes, or promises to pay, were issued by either the supposed bank or the company we do not know. How many notes, purporting to be bank notes, were issued by the company, or why, or to whom, or what for they were issued we do not know. Neither do we know, nor does it appear from the proof presented in support of the charge of criminality made, how large an amount of these notes, worthless or valuable, were put in circulation and left unredeemed in the hands of innocent holders. Not much time was granted for the trial of the business experiment: for originating in 1837, it must have ceased its transactions in 1838, under enforced circumstances of distress and difficulty for the existence of which the members of the society were not responsible, however shortsighted and foolish their religious enthusiasm may have made them.

The individuals composing the company were holden for its debts, including of course its notes if any were outstanding. These individuals must some of them had property, personal and real, the realty situated in Kirtland and its vicinity. It was only seven years from 1837, the date of the organization of the company, after the failure to incorporate as a banking institution, to the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, not long enough for the statute of limitations to run against the lawful collection of claims against those property holders, and yet long enough for the effort to have been made to collect by transcribing of judgment claims in the courts of the State of Illinois, against Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, and other members of the company, and all equally liable, and many of whom acquired and held considerable amounts of property in the latter State, which the holders could not have claimed exemption for under a charge of fraud.

As we before stated we do not write to shield Joseph and Hyrum Smith from deserved and just censure for acts which they did; but we and all others have the right to presume innocence in all cases, until fraud and crime are shown; and those who charge criminality must show it. The charge made in reference to this alleged bank lies against many, in defending one we defend all; and it was as much in defense of the weakest and most obscure, as well as the most noted included in the charge that we wrote as we did. We wrote hastily just on the eve of departure to Conference, and without taking time to look up and insert the history at hand.

We do not know that we can give any of the facts of history in this unfortunate affair that will beyond question explain it to our own conscience in the matter; and hence be satisfactory to "Argus" and many whom he undoubtedly represents, who would be glad indeed that all stains of impurity, and all imputations of corrupt motives and criminal acts might be removed from the memories of our predecessors in the work of the gospel of grace. But be the facts what they may, we wish to be understood as presenting these views for the reason that we doubt the propriety of admitting a thing evil to be true, because our enemies charge it.

WE present to the readers of the HERALD the following open letter to the Rev. Pye; and an extract from the Anamosa, Iowa, Journal, for April 24th. It is pleasant to have a friend to fair play to handle the cudgels of defense for the truth.

AN OPEN LETTER—THE OTHER SIDE.

To the Rev. N. Pye:—"Likewise also the chief priests mocking him with the scribes and elders, said, He saved others, himself he can not save. If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross and we will believe on him."—Matt. 27:41, 42.

Therefore the Methodist preacher, Rev. Nathaniel Pye, mocking, said: "Now we will settle this matter, once and for all. I will agree to join the Mormon church if one of her preachers, say Mr. Etzenhouser, will take ten cents' worth of strychnine and live. That's the way to settle these wily deceivers, and I would advise the good people of Viola, whenever the Mormon preachers talk of their power in this respect, to have a good dose of strychnine on hand and demand of them to prove their faith by their works; in other words by taking the strychnine."—New Era, March 26th, 1884. Mr. N. Pye's statement.

"If any man among you seem to be religious and brideth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart; this man's religion is vain."—James 1:26. Yours truly.

Hoping to save you from the error of your way, I am your humble servant,

GEO. B. HART.

AN OPEN LETTER.

VIOLA, Iowa, March 30th, 1884.

"Hear diligently my speech, and let this be your consolation. Suffer me that I may speak and after that I have spoken, mock on. How then comfort ye me in vain seeing in your answers there remaineth falsehood."—Job 21:2, 3 and 34.

REV. N. PYE, Dear Sir:—I would say to you that I do not belong to any church, click nor clan, therefore I can see the good and bad in all of you. But I will in time connect myself with some church, if it so be that I can find one that comes up to the pattern found in the New Testament. Here is the rule by which we must be governed. "For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another, the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another, faith by the same Spirit; to another, the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; . . . And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Cor. 12:8, 9, 28.

Now let us see by what power, and by whom the Bible was written. First we will take Moses, he murdered the Egyptians, and after that, received the commandments from God, the promise was first given to Abraham. He had two wives, then David, who was a murderer and had two wives, Solomon, who had one thousand wives and concubines. Then Paul who persecuted the saints. Now all of these claimed to have seen an angel and to receive their power from God by the Holy Ghost. Now for the reformers: 1st John Calvin he burned Servetus to establish his church, but does not claim to have seen an angel. 2d John Wesley, he had big trouble with his wife and he set up a church, but does not claim to have seen an angel or to have received a command from God. 3d Joseph Smith, he was a sheep thief, and he claimed to have seen an angel, and to have received a command from God, and he set up a church; and he claims all that Paul claimed was in the church. And as the people said when Paul was prisoner, "But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest; for as concerning this sect we know that everywhere it is spoken against."—Acts 18:22. "Go not forth hastily to strife lest thou know not what to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbors have put you to shame."—Prov. 25:8. You bear false witness when you say I wrote for my wife and when you say an Elder wrote it, and when you deny you said it would be more honorable for her to have asked you, if she might go worship God according to the dictates of her conscience. A thing that is granted her, and every man and woman in this "land of the free and the home of the brave," and she only exercised her God given right, and obeyed the command of Christ, "Seek first the kingdom of Heaven." Are you not ashamed to sneer at the scripture wife quotes? And also when you abuse the editor for printing her defense and for abusing a woman as you have wife. But it was just as I expected of you. "For of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Again you bear false witness when you say the Elders did intend preaching more than three or four evenings at the first, another when you say those men stole into the church, that Tithing business makes you feel awful sick: Now I will say for your benefit they will never tithes you or any other man or saloon that does not join their church. Now what does your church do but tithes the whole people. Sir, I heard you pray that if we loved houses and lands more than Christ we were not worthy of him. Now, Sir, it is not that that hurts you, but the fear that your little craft is in danger, "So not only this our craft is in danger to be set at naught; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshipeth."—Acts 19:27.

Oh! yes, that laying on of hands, yes, yes. Did not some of your members act as though they would lay hands on those two Elders at Springville eh! And I am credibly informed of one that believed in the laying on of hands when his son said, "Why pa she did cough." Now, sir, here are your own words. "Now we will settle this matter once and for all. I will agree to join the Mormon church if one of her preachers, say Mr. Etzenhouser, will take ten cents' worth of strychnine and live. This is the way to settle these wily deceivers, and I would advise the good people of Viola, whenever the Mormon preachers talk of their power in this respect, to have a good dose of strychnine on hand and demand of them to prove their faith by their works, in other words by taking the strychnine." "Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partakers of other men's sins, keep thyself pure."—1 Tim. 5:22. Now, sir, I will answer you in Christ's own words to the Devil. "It is also written thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." As to the editor of the New Era not printing that article of my wife's is this. He said "it was well written, but if he was to print it he would lose five hundred dollars for Mr. Pye was a good friend of his, and the business men of Springfield were in favor of Mr. Pye." Hold on I most forgot. Do you call this vile slum you write and preach, the gospel that was to be preached in all the world to every creature for a witness and then shall the end come. Now, sir, I will say to you and all those that heard you preach at Viola last Sunday when you labored so hard to prove the faith once delivered to the saints, (not those Latter Day Saints), from the words found in Jude 3d. "It was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." And you utterly failed to show to a waiting people what that faith was. Now, sir, allow me in behalf of the truth and the people that heard you to refer them to the eleventh chapter of Hebrews inclusive, and also to Gal. 1:8. "But though we, or an angel from Heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

Now, sir, laying all prejudice aside and giving Paul due credit for all the powers, offices, and blessings he claims, was in the church and should continue to the true believer until Christ comes again; therefore, giving many churches due credit for all the powers they claim, they would not be taken for anything but a counterfeit at headquarters.

I will give you a few texts. 2 Peter 1:5-9; Micah 3:11; James 1:25; 2:14; 5:14, 15.

Thine in Truth,

GEO. B. HART.

Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley are at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where Bro. William was to meet Rev. Covert, Winebrennerian, on the issues of difference between the churches represented by the two men. Bro. E. L. has been interviewed, of course; and the result is a showing up on Utah Mormonism in the Leader of May 6th. The same paper contains a brief sketch of the first evening's debate, on the question; "Is the Book of Mormon of Divine origin, and is it entitled to the respect and belief of men?"

THE Christian Standard an English periodical published in its number for April 17th, 1884, the following trade statistics. For the year 1882 from the figures of Mr. Hoyle, for the ten years ending in 1882, average statement.

Liquors, £136,000,000; Bread, £70,000,000; Rent of Houses, £70,000,000; Rent of Farms, £60,000,000; Woolen Goods, £46,000,000; Butter and Cheese, £35,000,000; Milk, £30,000,000; Sugar, £25,000,000; Tea, Coffee and Cocoa, £20,000,000; Cotton Goods, £14,000,000; Education, £11,000,000; Christian Missions, £1,050,000.

From this it will be seen that the liquor bill of the United Kingdom is £66,000,000, or about $330,000,000, more than its bread bill; £6,000,000, or $30,000,000, larger than the rents for both farms and houses; £26,000,000, or $130,000,000 more than the bill for butter, cheese, milk, sugar, tea and coffee; £76,000,000, or $380,000,000 more than the bill for woolen and cotton goods together, and £124,050,000, or $620,250,000 more than is expended for preaching the gospel and the purposes of education. Is it to be wondered at that distress, pauperism and ruin stare the British Empire in the face at every turn, and are not the United States tending toward the same disastrous results.

Correspondence.

KIRTLAND, Ohio,

May 3d, 1884.

Editor Herald:—I arrived here on the 28th of last month from Coldwater, Michigan. Meeting is announced for to-morrow. The citizens are friendly, so far as seen, and express themselves pleased that the effort is to be continued in Kirtland. E. L. and family are well and cheerful. Himself and wife are over at the church practicing with the choir while I jot these lines. It has been quite dry here for a few weeks until the 1st instant, when a refreshing shower came, and vegetation is now growing rapidly, and budding and blooming every where. Every thing is more forward here than at any place I have visited this spring. Some winter wheat that I have seen is as fine as I ever saw at this season, and much taller than any I saw in Missouri or Michigan. Braden and Luse may stand over in Nebraska and spit in their hands, pull their hair and rend their garments, and hiss anathemas and denunciations at this pleasant land; but heaven's smiles continue just the same. Sunshine and healthy air and water abound every where, and the people are light hearted and happy, while land is worth $100 an acre. Two families moved into the village the last week, and Bro. Munn from California stepped into the hotel this afternoon.

Nothing preventing, I start to Pittsburg to-morrow evening to meet Mr. Covert on Monday evening next. I enjoyed the recent conference well; and if Mr. Snow and family, with whom I boarded during the conference, are fair representatives of the citizens of Stewartville, I think that I would like to locate in that community as a permanent home. Michigan Saints are all doing well so far as heard from.

Yours truly,

WM. H. KELLEY.

42 York Street, Cheetham,

MANCHESTER, England,

April 17th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—The annual conference of this district was held at Sheffield, on the 5th and 6th of the present month, and proved a decided success. At our business session on the 5th, we enjoyed a pleasant, peaceable, and profitable time; and on Sunday the 6th we held services in the vestry hall to large and attentive audiences of intelligent and respectable people, Elder Thomas Taylor, of Birmingham, President of the Mission, in the chair. The town had been well placarded with large posters; some thousands of hand bills and cards had also been distributed to the inhabitants, inviting them to attend our meetings, the result being as already stated; viz., large and attentive congregations at each of our services in the after part of the day. The morning service was fairly attended by strangers, and was addressed by Elders Thomas Taylor, C. H. Hassell, John Austin and Henry Greenwood.

The afternoon service was well attended, and was addressed by your correspondent on the subject of the Latter Day Saints versus Polygamy, which was well received by those present. The evening meeting was addressed by Elder James Baty and Henry Greenwood, the question "What shall we do to be saved," being the subject held under consideration, and ably answered by them. Many questions were asked by those present at the close of each service; not in a carping, but rather a friendly spirit, and some of them expressed much pleasure in what they had heard. Taken altogether, I feel justified in saying that our recent conference has been, so far as I can ascertain, the most successful of any of the conferences heretofore held in this country; and this we attribute to the blessing of God upon the labors of the Saints and friends of the Sheffield Branch. Conspicuous among these were Mr. Jell, husband of sister Jell; Mrs. Austin wife of Elder John Austin, president of the Sheffield Branch, and others whose names I can not now remember, but who have endeared themselves to us by the kindness which they manifested; and though they are not members of the church at present, I trust that before long they will be with us in name as well as in deeds.

The work done in connection with the conference, both by the friends named, and the Saints of the Sheffield Branch, was beyond all praise; and with such energy and self-sacrifice the blessing of God will rest upon the labor done; and if continued will undoubtedly contribute in a very large measure to the establishment of the work in Sheffield, upon a broad, firm, and permanent basis.

The representatives of Utah and her polygamous doctrine held their conference upon the same days as ours; but apparently without attracting any attention from the press of Sheffield. In this respect the Reorganized Church was more fortunate; for we were very favorably noticed in both of the Sheffield daily papers; and the distinction between ourselves and the church of Utah was fairly presented to the public. During the discourse on polygamy, before mentioned, a challenge was publicly given to any of the representatives of the Utah Church to come to the front, and discuss the question at issue before the public, upon the basis of the Book of Mormon and "former commandments;" but it met with no response, and therefore goes to prove, that however loud-mouthed and blatant these men may be before others who do not know them, they deem discretion the better part of valor when brought face to face with those who have had their eyes opened to the deceptions practiced by these pious frauds. However the case may stand with them in America, here they are contemptible, their influence has departed; and were it not for the promises held out to the very poor of getting them out to Utah, and presenting every one of them (if obedient) with his own vine and fig tree, their hunting for proselytes would be in vain.

I have just received a letter informing me that the Birmingham District conference was held on Saturday and Sunday last, at Burton upon Trent, with good results; and at the close two more were added to the church by baptism.

I have been much pleased to read in the Herald of the success of the work upon your side of the water; and with God's blessing, we over here do not intend to be much behind you in our efforts to present the pure gospel to the people; for they are famishing for the bread of life; and without it there can not be a living faith, a knowledge of God, whom to know through Jesus Christ, is "life eternal."

Praying and working, and patiently awaiting the triumph of truth, I trust with God's blessing to remain a humble laborer in the Lord's harvest field, with the assurance of eternal life.

JOSEPH DEWSNUP.

GALIEN, Mich.,
May 7th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—Returned yesterday from Coldwater, whither I went last Thursday, the 1st inst, to preach the funeral of Mrs. Catharine Stroh on Friday. On Sunday the 4th, had the pleasure of baptizing father Stroh, his daughter Anna, and Jacob Thomas, his son-in-law. We felt well and the Coldwater Saints are rejoicing over the increase of their numbers. They miss Bro. W. H. Kelley's folks now that they have moved to Kirtland. The sisters of the branch organized a social society last September; and they are proving faithful to their trust, and are doing a good work. May they not grow weary. My health is much improved since your visit to Galien, and I hope to be able to do more for the work in the future, than for some months past. Saints here at Galien are organizing a Sabbath School, which we trust will prove a success.

Your brother in hope,

C. SCOTT.

WEST BELLEVILLE, St. Clair Co., Ill.,
May 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—There was a letter for me when I returned from General Conference, written by Bro. Jasper M. Tously, of Chester, Randolph county, Illinois, wishing me to come to Chester, and preach there. I went at his wish on the 25th of April, and preached there the same night, and twice the next day; and on Sunday morning I baptized five. We organized a branch, with Bro. Jasper M. Tously presiding Elder. Bro. Joseph Tously was elected to the office of presiding Priest, and ordained by myself and J. M. Tously. Bro. Willis Tously was elected to the office of Teacher, and ordained by the same. The branch being organized with ten members, we administered the Lord's Supper, and held a testimony meeting; and after being thus engaged from 9 a. m. until 12:30 p. m., we dismissed our meeting, and in a short time were on the way to a Methodist church about four miles distant, located in what is known as the Herman settlement, to fill an appointment, made for me there at 3:30 p. m., by a Mr. Herman, a leading member of that church, and very influential in that part, who was present at our services, and gave much heed to the things spoken. At the close of our services we returned to a point about three miles from there, to the house of Bro. Joseph Tously, whose wife had been baptized in the morning, and had attended all of the meetings, and traveled with us as above, together with all the Saints; and notwithstanding her friends were much alarmed thinking that she could not possibly stand it, yet she rejoiced all the day long, and was not by any means fatigued. At night I spoke to a full house. Next day Bro. Joseph Tously and myself visited from house to house, and testified boldly that the gospel had been restored again according to the scriptures, and that power and authority was given of God to man, to administer in the ordinances of God's house. At night I preached in a school house.

On the 29th I baptized two more; preached at night. When I left there were two more ready to be baptized. The Lord gave me great freedom and strength to declare his word, and there has been a great awakening of the people. They confess that it is surely the doctrine of Christ, and that it is Scripture; but they never heard it preached before now. I presented the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine Covenants as opposed to polygamy. Great interest was manifested throughout the meetings, and many said that they never heard such preaching before. Bro. Jasper M. Tously and Joseph Tously are good men, who will do all in their power to keep the work alive. Bro. Willis will also do what he can in the branch as teacher. I arrived home last evening. May the Lord bless you at the head of this great latter day work, that it may rush forth in great speed throughout the land, and among the nations of the earth.

Your brother in Christ,

JOHN BEAIRD.

SACRAMENTO, California,
April 28th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Have had an active and profitable time here for the past four days. I find this branch is improving in numbers, spirituality, and goodly influence. Its officers are wise workers, and the fruits of their labors are manifestly good. The Saints have bought a fine lot, and have a chapel 30x40 feet, well under way; and prospects are fair for its completion by June 1st, when it is probable they will have it paid for. The sisters in the branch deserve great credit for their steadfastness, energy and devotion, both in respect to keeping up the meetings, and in helping erect the chapel. "Honor to whom honor is due." The church at Oakland and San Francisco is onward, and the outlook is encouraging. I confidently expect to see the church all through this state make considerable and substantial progress this year and thereafter. I hope to be in Salt Lake City by May 5th.

Yours ever,

W. W. BLAIR.

AUGUSTA, Butler Co., Kansas,
May 2d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have not read the minutes of the late Annual Conference, but a word has been dropped in my ear by an attending brother: "It seemed as though angels were in our midst." This sounds too much like the common language of the so-called orthodox, especially at the annual feast, to come from among the leaders of a people called of God to come out from among the wicked, and be saved from the hand of the destroying angel, that seems to spread his dark mantles of mysticism to some extent over all minds of to-day. This seem-so will not do. See Heb. 12:22-24; and the outpouring of the Spirit on the Twelve in the days of the Martyr at Kirtland, Ohio. And here let me ask you who permit your swords of mental power to be unsheathed in all their glory, and clash one against another, Are you not afraid, or have you not thought of the crossed swords in the door of the Temple of the Living God, as given to us in a dream, or vision of one of the brethren? If you do not walk with God, and have angels as your constant companions, when this immortal is disrobed, are you not afraid that those crossed swords will meet you in the door with a brightness that will cast all your mental brightness into the darkest abyss?

I have been through the waters of baptism; I have had hands laid on my head. If those hands were not holy, it is not mine to judge; but if those hands were laid on with eyes seeing all things as through a clear glass, why are not my stumbling blocks cleared from before me. This seems-so never can give my soul peace. O, you who lift up holy hands and see through the glass of God with the eye of inspiration, tell me, am I deluded? When the destroyer comes right into our flock, and takes the shepherds by surprise, O tell me, am I deluded? I do not say this for my own soul's sake alone; but others are looking to me for a ray of light, and have been so directed by dream, &c. O, that the Lord may soon establish his people like a city on a hill, so that the genial rays may go down into the hearts of the poor, and wayfaring ones, and make them feel safe, and at peace, is my prayer.

Yours in bonds,

M. N. COLE.

OAK ISLAND, Bexar Co., Texas,
April 28th, 1884.

Pres. Joseph Smith:—You will rejoice to hear that the Oak Island Branch is once more in working order; we meet every Sabbath, and have prayer and testimony meetings, where the spirit of joy, love and peace is made manifest. Bro. Waterman, of San Antonio, is our presiding Elder, and meets with us and preaches for us twice a month. He shows a spirit of great love and zeal for the cause of Christ. Sister Waterman came with him yesterday to his appointment, and they both bore a testimony among us to the truth of the Church of Christ, which was cheering and instructing to us. Preaching and prayer meeting were held here in my house. We have no other place to meet, but at Mr. J. P. Neal's, Bro. John Barber's and here. Pray for us, that we may continue to live in the bonds of love and peace.

Your sister in the gospel,

NANNIE A. GIFFORD.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

May 1.—The committee deliberating on the law against the Socialists to-day rejected the measure as proposed by the German Government and the amendments of the Clerical leader, Herr Windthorst. This result creates no prejudice for a definitive vote of the Reichstag, which, however, will be dissolved on the rejection of the bill, as the Emperor lately remarked.

France has agreed to the conference of European powers on the Egyptian question.

The precautions taken by the Government indicate the belief that more serious disturbances are apprehended. The Government has addressed a remonstrance to Minister Ferry in regard to the lax supervision exercised by the French over the Spanish insurgents interned in France. Two bands of insurgents appeared at Lenia and Gerona, and cut the telegraph-wires, and destroyed the railway bridge at Gerona, the troops are pursuing.

May 2.—It is believed by the London police that nitro-glycerine has been conveyed to England from America in spirit-flasks.

The King of Abyssinia refuses to permit Egyptian troops to enter the Soudan from his dominions. This further embarrasses the Anglo-Egyptian authorities.

It appears from evidence offered before a duly-authorized commission that the flour furnished the Egyptian army has been adulterated with plaster of paris, that the hay was rotten, and that two-thirds of the mules furnished for transport were useless.

It is announced that the elections for members of the Spanish Chamber of Deputies have resulted in the success of 344 Conservatives, 42 Liberals, 35 members of the Dynastic Left, 3 Castellarites, and 3 Cuban Autonomists.

Premier Ferry's reply to Lord Granville's note on the subject of an international conference on Egyptian finances, argues that the proposed conference can not be confined to the financial question alone, and implies that England by its course has unjustifiably added to Egyptian burdens, and has embarrassed the Egyptian Treasury Department. The reply has been conveyed to Earl Granville by M. Waddington, the French Ambassador to London.

Subar Pasha, the Egyptian Prime Minister, is becoming hostile to British influence, and welcomes intrigues against the English. There are hints that some foreign Power is giving him support.

The Egyptian correspondence shows that the Government refused to allow Indian troops to relieve Gordon on the ground that India had no direct interest in the Soudan. Among the telegrams included in the correspondence is one from Gordon to Sir Evelyn Baring suggesting that the British troops be dispatched to Wadi-Halfa to support Gordon. To that Baring replied that the military authorities deprecated the movement on account of the climate. April 9th Gordon telegraphed that 300 Turkish infantry and 1,000 cavalry could accomplish the relief of Khartoum and crush the Mahdi in four months. Baring telegraphed to Granville that it would be impossible to organize the Turkish force in time to be of any use, and that to dispatch the troops of the Sultan would involve political difficulties.

A plague is raging in the Province of Bagdad, in Asiatic Turkey. A sanitary cordon has been established.

May 3.—Daly, Egan and MacDonnell, the dynamiters, were arraigned in the Police Court of Birmingham, England, to-day on the charge of treason-felony. Daly was defiant and MacDonnell was dejected.

The proprietor of a ship tavern in the vicinity of the Strand, at London, England, seized the effects of an absconding lodger and discovered a box containing twelve pounds of dynamite cartridges and gun cotton. The lodger is well known. The police are searching for him. The cartridges are such as are used in toy pistols.

It is reported that a revolution has broken out in Malaga, Spain. The insurgents at Figueras have been driven across the frontier. The Government announces that Zorilla has no influence with the army or with public opinion. His partisans have done nothing but cut telegraph wires and post placards about some towns.

It is announced that the British Government has decided to station an ironclad at Suakin permanently for the protection of the city against possible future attacks by Osman Digma.

It is announced from Vienna that the Austrian Government has received an invitation from Russia to join in a proposed confederation of European Governments for the suppression of revolutionism. The confederation is proposed on the same lines as that which it was recently reported Switzerland declined Bismarck's invitation to enter. That bound the confederates to refuse all harbor to social refugees and to surrender suspects to the complaining Powers. It was calculated that if all the European Powers joined in such an association the extreme forms of Socialism, such as anarchism, would soon be crushed out by legal prosecutions and the inability of revolutionists to find harbor or basis of operations. It is stated that Austria will reply favorably to Russia's proposition.

There were thirteen deaths from yellow fever in Havana, Cuba, last week.

The Farmers' Union of High Bluffs, Manitoba, passed resolutions yesterday complaining of the action of the Dominion Government in their behalf, and that "nothing short of free trade or secession will satisfy the people of Manitoba." It is clear that matters are becoming serious.

A large stock raising firm has rented 40,000,000 acres of land from the Pawnee Indians in Indian Territory for five years at three cents per acre per year.

Yesterday the Nourmahal, the largest steam yacht in the world, was launched in the Delaware at Philadelphia. The craft was built for Mr. William Astor, of New York, and is most magnificently appointed. Its deck is 232 feet long and thirty-two feet wide. Mr. Astor proposes to make a cruise around the world in it.

There were somewhat serious riots yesterday at Buffalo growing out of the employment by the boat lines and transportation companies of Italians to do their loading and unloading. The members of the 'Longshoremen's Union were the aggressors. They attacked the Italian quarter of the city and threatened to destroy the buildings of the companies. There were no casualties yesterday, but it is expected that the riots will be renewed. The union men are getting desperate.

May 4.—Fresh reports of the surrender of Berber are in circulation. Majs. Ki'chener and Rundle and Col. Wortley attached to the Egyptian army, have been ordered to ascend the Nile in a steamer the 9th inst. for the purpose of making a reconnoissance.

Pekin advices state that the city is quiet, with a strong force there. Active defensive preparations are making throughout the provinces, especially in Nankin and at the mouth of the Yang-Tse-Kiang.

The anti-Chinese law, as it now stands, has not proven sufficient to prevent considerable immigration of Chinese laborers. From the date of its passage, Aug. 4, 1882, to Jan. 15 last, 3,415 Chinese landed at the port of San Francisco. Of these 2,024 came on return certificates issued under the law, mostly fraudulent, and 621 were admitted on proof of former residence in the United States, and 770 on Chinese passports issued in accordance with the law.

The largest book ever made at the Government Printing-Office in Washington has just been finished. It is bound in sheepskin and Russia leather, is one foot and four inches in breadth, contains 10,000 pages, and weighs 140 pounds.

It is calculated that there are now residing in the United States nearly a thousand Japanese, and of this number it is said that not one has ever been convicted of any criminal offense in an American court.

May 5.—France will enter into arrangements with England with reference to Egypt on condition that a date for the withdrawal of the British troops shall be definitely fixed, and that France and Italy be allowed to participate with England in the management of the financial and judicial affairs of the country. The preliminaries of the Egyptian conference are settled. The conference will meet at London the first week in June, and is expected to last three weeks.

Another informer has turned up in Ireland. Thomas Moran appeared on the witness-stand at Sligo yesterday to testify against P. M. Fitzgerald and ten others alleged to be concerned in invincible murder plots. Moran swore that P. J. Sheridan, now in America, swore him into the society at Tubbercurry. Fitzgerald, he said, was a leader, and went from London to Ireland to settle difficulties between the members of the society. Sheridan used to visit the place where the society met in the garb of a priest. Two of the local leaders, Moran swore, are now in America. They were James Lyons and Pat Reynolds.

A large number of artillery officers and students have been arrested at Moscow and St. Petersburg on a charge of Nihilism. It is thought that some of them were concerned in the assassination of Col. Sudeikin recently. The mistress of a school for women at St. Petersburg and the Secretary of the Board of Justice have also been taken into custody. A Nihilistic paper published by the students of Moscow University has been suppressed.

Two thousand refugees have reached Assouan from Korosko, and more are coming daily. The evacuation of Korosko is proceeding quietly. Refugees from Khartoum are expected there in a few days. Several Bedouin Sheikhs and tribes will escort Col. Nortley, of the Egyptian army, in a reconnoissance along the banks of the Nile to maintain communication between Assouan and Dongola.

The Parliamentary documents just published include the dispatch to the British Minister to Egypt from Gen. Gordon, dated Khartoum, April 16th, in which he says: "So far as I understand the situation you state there is no intention of sending relief here or to Berber. You refuse me Zobeir Pasha. I consider myself free to act according to circumstances. I shall hold on here as long as I can. If I can suppress the rebellion I will do so, otherwise I shall retire to the equator and leave you the indelible disgrace of abandoning the garrisons of Sennaar, Kassala, Berber, and Dongola, with the certainty that you will eventually be forced to smash up the Mahdi under great difficulties if you would retain peace in Egypt."

The friendly relations between France and Morocco are ruptured. The cause is the refusal of the authorities of Morocco to dismiss the Governor of Wazan at the demand of the French representative. The French Legation has hauled down its flag.

The French municipal elections have been held, but there will be no material change in the Paris Council. The large towns gave majorities for the moderate Republicans.

Russia, Germany, and Austria are discussing common measures looking to the supervision, production, and sale of dangerous explosives. England and France are not invited to participate.

The ship Iron Cross, which arrived in Queens-town, Ireland, yesterday, from Java, reports five deaths from cholera during the voyage.

May 6.—The informer Moran continued his testimony in the case of the Invincibles at Sligo, Ireland, yesterday. Two members, he said, undertook for $50 apiece and a free passage to some foreign country to murder an obnoxious parish official. An ex-soldier of the British army named Casey was arrested on the testimony of Moran, who said that Casey was the drillmaster of the Invincibles.

Russia's representatives are already at the Capital of Persia asking permission to run a railroad from the Caspian Sea into that province which will pass directly through her newly-acquired area. This operation also goes to explain her recent negotiation of a fresh loan of $75,000,000 with the German financiers.

Germany intends to raise the question of the Egyptian quarantine system at the conference. Egypt has formally presented a request to be allowed to send a representative to the conference. If the request is granted Nubar Pasha will attend.

Official advices tend to confirm the reports that the garrison and inhabitants of Berber have accepted favorable conditions offered by El Mahdi.

Bismarck has sent a formal protest to London and Lisbon against the ratification of the Congo treaty.

The Prefect of Police has received letters threatening to blow up the Parliament chambers at Berlin with dynamite upon Bismarck's next appearance.

Gen. Aguero has now but forty or fifty followers at his back. These are well mounted and well armed, and being close pressed by the Governor's troops, gained the swamp of Zapata before their capture could be effected, but were compelled to turn their horses loose and flee on foot in small bands to the hills between the railroad and the Rio Guahabo Largo, where they are in hiding. Among the band are several herders, whose familiarity with all the unbeaten paths enables them to avoid capture with comparative ease. Relying on their ability to preserve him his liberty Gen. Aguero expects to remain in hiding until after the crops are harvested, when he counts on inducing the peasantry to join him in large numbers. He will then begin an aggressive campaign.

Charles Ford, whose brother assassinated Jesse James about two years ago, shot himself through the heart at his home near Richmond, Mo.

May 7th.—The latest complication between France and England, has grown out of the French shipment of convicts to her penal colony, New Caledonia. That colony being full, the new scheme is to let them seek their living when, and where, and how they please, and as France is shipping about 10,000 of the most hopeless savages of her slums every year to that colony the Australians have protested vigorously to the Home Government. The colonists have also expressed themselves very strongly in a letter to the London Times, in which they say that the neighboring islands will be the first victims, and that they will be turned into a pandemonium.

The majority of them, however, will seek the Australian Continent, as there is no one to prevent them from going where they please.

Another dispute has been created by America's official indorsement of Wallace's views in the denunciation of the treaty of commerce which the Porte made as invalid. Wallace renewed his protest in regard to the petroleum stores, which is now made more powerful by the stronger protest of Russia.

The Russian commission to prepare a scheme for the government of Turkestan recommends two Governments, with administrative centres at Tashkend and Marghilan.

The British Government has sent an order to Cairo directing that a railway be constructed by the English Government beyond Wady-Halfa. The plans for the road will be sent from Cairo at the earliest practicable moment. The construction of seventy miles of road will be hastened so that it may be made available for the autumn campaign.

The Austrian Socialist Democrats have issued a manifesto at Pesth. Several copies were seized there and many circulated at Vienna. The manifesto asserts that Socialism is meeting with constant development, and counsels adherence thereto; to renounce secret agitation and defend publicly all party reforms. The Socialist Democrats, the manifesto declares, desire the reduction of the hours of daily labor, and universal suffrage, which will prepare the way for an early solution of the social question. It further asserts that an economic crisis is imminent, and America must put a stop to emigration from Europe to that country.

Dissension exists among the Chinese and Black Flags. There has been desperate fighting between them at Lao-Ki.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

May 1.—Twenty-four buildings at Presque Isle, Me., including the hotel and post-office, were burned to the ground yesterday. The loss is estimated at $125,000.

One man was crushed to death in a coal mine at Colchester, Ill. Near Patterson, Iowa, a man seventy years of age, was run over and killed by the cars. A boiler explosion at Crow Island, Mich., badly scalded a cook, killed her child three years old, and caused a loss of $1,000.

May 2.—A severe northerly gale swept the entire chain of North American Lakes, wrecking the schooner A. E. Vickery, and damaging the Higgle's cargo.

Several vessels are in distress on Lake Ontario.

Logansport, Ind., was visited by a severe wind storm last night and this morning. Railroad cars were carried from the track and several houses unroofed. It is stated that several steamers recently placed on Lake Maxinkuckee were destroyed. One of the most severe wind-storms in years visited Lockport, N. Y., this morning, and the damage resultant in this section is great. Signs, furniture, lumber, and bill-boards were blown through the streets, windows were broken, and telegraph wires blown down. Several large trees were broken off short by the wind, and a large manufactory chimney blown down. At Medina the tin roof of the Academy Building was torn off and the steeple of the Methodist Church blown over. At Knowlesville two freight-cars were blown from the Central tracks and the roofs of several buildings blown off. A cyclone struck Del Rio, Tex., last evening. The new Episcopal Church, the Southern Pacific saloon, and a number of small cabins were swept away, and many new buildings were twisted out of shape. Five persons were severely injured, and one killed. The property loss to the town is $10,000. Rain fell in torrents all day yesterday, at Chillicothe, Mo., and Grand River and its tributaries overflowed their banks. Thousands of acres are now inundated. Hundreds of stockmen are out with boats after their stock.

A very heavy rain-storm has prevailed at Rich Hill, Mo., since April 30. The roof of the flax-factory was torn off and the west wall blown in. The colored church was blown from its foundation. The storm was the worst ever known there. A very heavy wind-storm visited Opolia, Kas., a small village on the Girard Branch of the Frisco Road. Many houses were blown down but no one was hurt. The streams are very much swollen. A terrific wind-storm visited Atlanta, Ill., this evening. Both smoke-stacks at the coal shaft were blown down and the building injured.

A man was killed by a runaway team at Stockbridge, Mich. A powder explosion at Scranton, Pa., killed one man, and wounded two others.

May 3.—Forest fires have broken out in the mountain woodland districts of Clearfield, Lycomain, and Tioga Counties, Pennsylvania. Large tracts of valuable timber-land and many saw-mills have been destroyed. The Village of Brisbin has been reduced to ashes. Many valuable herds of cattle have perished. The losses mount up in the millions. Forest fires have also broken out among the Catskill and Shawangunk Mountains in New York State.

A fire in Praire City, Ia., swept all the buildings on one side of the principal street. The loss is estimated at $100,000. Thirty-five buildings in Gainsville, Fla., including three hotels and a depot, were burned; loss $140,000. Loss by fire at Detroit, Mich., $40,000. Bradley's Pond, N. Y., $25,000. Four lives were lost. Near Independence, Ia., one person was burned to death, and four others badly hurt by the flames. Wichita, Kas., $12,000. Portland, Me., $60,000. Pittsburg, Pa., $60,000.

May 4.—Forest fires continue in the mountain regions of New York. The farmers are fighting the flames ineffectually. Between 4,000 and 5,000 acres of timber land have been devastated.

May 5.—A large number of people visited the ruins at Brisbin, Pa., yesterday. The rain has dispelled fears of the renewal of the fire. A strong appeal has been made for immediate aid. Hundreds are compelled to sleep in their clothes, having no bed covering or bedding. Money is needed to provide shanties. The citizens of Houtzdale and the neighboring towns are doing their best, but, with a population suddenly doubled from Brisbin, they are unable to do all that is necessary, and are compelled to appeal to charity. The bridge over the Schuylkill river at Rogers' Ford, Pa., was burned Sunday. Loss $8,000. Ralph Bagaley returned from the scene of the conflagration in Elk county this morning, and reports the destruction great. He estimates the loss in Elk county alone at over a million dollars. The heaviest losers are the mill owners. The mill of William Goetz, at Swiss Mount, was entirely destroyed, together with a number of buildings and a large stock of lumber. Goetz has been missing since Thursday, and it is believed he perished. The last of the Blue Mountain fires, along the northern line of Berks county, was extinguished to-day. Rain extinguished the fires near Shenandoah, Pa. The village of Gilman's Depot, N. Y., is desolate. Nothing remains but the smouldering feed barns. The residents are compelled to sleep in the barns. Many spent the night in the mill, sleeping on the sawdust. The people of the village have lost everything. The fire in the woods at Dartmouth, Mass., is burning from one hundred to two hundred acres. It is estimated that 1,000 acres of woodland were burned near Freehold, N. J. The damage is about $50,000. The forest fires on Long Island have been extinguished by rain. Loss by fire at St. John, Quebec, china factory, $13,000. Honester, Mass., hotel, $10,000. Shelbourne, Ont., $30,000.

Williamstown, N. Y., the post office, several business blocks, a hotel, and a number of residences, $60,000. Thought to be incendiary. A bush fire near Concord, N. H., destroyed several hundred acres of timber-land.

The losses caused by fires in the United States and Canada during the month of April of this year aggregated $10,300,000, against an average for the last nine years during the same month of $7,500,000. Since the 1st of January the losses have amounted to $37,550,000, being $6,000,000 more than for the same period in 1883.

A violent wind and rain storm passed over portions of Iowa and Illinois yesterday morning in a south-eastern direction. At Davenport several houses were unroofed, and two persons are reported to have been killed and many injured. The wires were prostrated in the storm-belt, and it is difficult to obtain details of the destructive effect of the storm.

May 6.—Loss by fire at Detroit, Mich., wood-ware-works, $45,000. Near Muncie, Ind., $4,000. This morning the propeller Alanson Sumner, lying in the harbor at Oswego, N. Y., burned to the water's edge and sunk. Loss, $18,000.

May 8.—Loss by fire at Detroit, Mich., saw mill and lumber yard, $32,500. Florence, Wis., engine house, $10,000. Metamora, Ind., $14,000.

Much damage was done by a violent wind and rain storm in Virginia Tuesday night. In Dinwiddie county there was a heavy fall of hail.

An express train on the Mexican Central Railroad was ditched near Queretaro last night. The mail agent was wounded. The engine and two cars were overturned. A rail was maliciously removed. Five train-wreckers were arrested.

A little after five o'clock this morning two sleepers and a passenger coach of a train on the St. Louis Division of the Wabash Road were thrown from the track near Decatur, Ill. The train at the time was going at the rate of forty miles per hour. Thirty-nine persons were injured, twelve seriously.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The run on the Monte de Piedad Bank that was started last Saturday at the City of Mexico, has created a panic among depositors and a distrust in the financial stability of all the banking firms in that city. As a result runs have been started on all of them. Great crowds surround the Monte de Piedad and the national and mercantile banks anxious to make settlements. The bank of London, Mexico, and South America is the least disturbed, having been quietly withdrawn its notes since the 1st of Jan. in anticipation that a monopoly of the circulation would be given a syndicate. The national and mercantile banks have now about six in silver to one in paper outstanding. The situation has been greatly aggravated by the action of the Government in directing that bank bills be refused at its offices.

The public debt of the United States, less the cash in the Treasury, is $5,232,075 smaller than it was April 1st. The fiscal operations of the Government during the ten months since June 30, 1883, will be most clearly comprehended by a simple comparison of its receipts with its expenditures. In the ten months it received from customs, from internal-revenue taxes, and from miscellaneous sources $289,206,866. In the same time it paid out $203,578,089. The excess being $85,608,777.

It is now definitely announced that the Oriental Bank, of London, Eng., which closed its doors Friday, will not resume. Its affairs are in the most desperate condition. Leading financiers had long considered the concern absolutely rotten. Its £25 shares were worth only £11 last December.

Special telegrams to Bradstreet's from leading trading centres report about the same condition of general trade recorded from week to week for two months past. The movement of merchandise is no larger, and there appears to be no reason for expecting any improvement in this direction in the near future. At a few Western centres and in some portions of the South there is some animation in the movement of merchandise, but only by comparison with the almost sluggish action elsewhere. The dry goods trade in New York is fairly characteristic of that elsewhere. From jobbers there has been a slight gain, but the movement from first hands is as dull as ever. There were 151 failures in the United States during the last week, as compared with 164 in the preceding week, and with 132, 96 and 104 respectively in the corresponding weeks of 1883, 1882, and 1881. About 80 per cent. were those of small traders whose capital was less than $5,000. Canada had twenty-one—an increase of four.

Subscriptions of more than seventeen times the desired sum have been offered in response to the call of the Russian Government for a loan of £15,000,000 to be used in the construction of railways. The Journal de St. Petersburg says this brilliant result is evidence of the immense recovery of Russian credit.

The assets of the Monte de Piedad Bank of the City of Mexico, are over $4,000,000 and the liabilities about $3,000,000. Its failure is due to bad management. Its bills have been selling at 25 per cent discount, but various merchants now advertise that they will take them at par in purchases. The crash, together with the stamp-tax troubles and the financial straits of the Government, have brought about a critical state of affairs, but confidence is now returning. Several persons suspected of revolutionary purposes have been arrested and imprisoned. There is no danger of an outbreak. Strong capitalists stand ready to advance money sufficient to meet the current expenses of the Government, pay the troops, etc., so as to avert all causes of discontent.

In Central Illinois the grain crop is in an unusually healthy condition. Oats look better than for years, and a large acreage has been planted.

In the regions of Fargo, Lisbon, Casselton, Valley City, Oriska, Sheldon, Davenport and Blunt, Dakota, seeding is nearly finished, and a much larger acreage than last year has been sown. The prospect for a crop of small grain is encouraging. In Minnesota, Iowa and Indiana, seeding is about completed, and encouraging prospects are reported.

May 5.—The Mark Lane Express, in a review of the British grain trade the last weeks says: There are prospects of a good wheat crop. The trade in foreign wheat off stands is dull. There is little business in off coast cargoes. There were five arrivals; three cargoes were sold and six withdrawn. There is no demand for cargoes on passage or for shipment. Sales of English wheat the last week, 58,121 quarters at 37 shillings 4 pence, against 66, 336 quarters at 42 shillings 10 pence the corresponding period last year.

The aggregate of clearances in twenty-seven leading cities in the United States during the last week was $1, 146,992,321, being an increase of 4.9 per cent. over the aggregate for the corresponding period of last year. There was a decrease of 8.5 per cent. outside of New York City.

Another heavy failure occurred in London, Eng. The Ceylon Company went under. It owed $2,000,000 to the defunct Oriental Bank.

Dunlop and Twaddell, of Glasgow, Scotland, failed for $450,000.

Chicago elevators contained last Saturday evening 8,882,664 bushels of wheat, 5,767,166 bushels of corn, 906,558 bushels of oats, 801,419 bushels of rye, and 112,580 bushels of barley. Total, 16,470,387 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 14,336,822 bushels a year ago. During last week our stocks decreased 560,123 bushels, of which 318,628 bushels were wheat and 238,102 bushels were corn.

For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canadas at 23,901,133 bushels of wheat, 11,793,443 bushels of corn, 3,617,740 bushels of oats, 1,380,207 bushels of rye, and 668,933 bushels of barley. These figures are less than those of a year ago by 1,620,332 in wheat and 1,495,246 in corn.

Over $6,000,000 worth of produce was exported from the United States last week.

Last week 4,712 packages of domestic cottons were exported from New York. The total exports for the year thus far have been 62,712 packages, against 57,986 during the corresponding period of 1879, when the exports were the largest previously known.

The stove foundries of Troy, N. Y., which shut down some days ago on account of a strike of the mounters employed in them, are resuming work, and are employing non-union members.

Owing to commercial depression in England two railroad companies of that country have discharged 2,500 employes, and have reduced the salaries of clerks 10 per cent.

British imports decreased for April compared with April of last year £8,300,000; and the exports increased £308,000 compared with April of last year.

A general strike of the stove molders in Pittsburg and Allegheny is expected next week. The manufacturers are reported to have made a compact to reduce the wages in all the shops, so as to bring down the cost of production; and the molders, who are well organized, have decided to strike rather than accept the reduction.

No gold was shipped out of the United States this week.

TO LATTER DAY ISRAEL.

THERE are thousands of old Latter Day Saints, and many of the Reorganized Church, who can and do stand up before God, men and angels, and testify of the great and mighty manifestations of God's power to them, in cloven tongues as of fire, in healings, in prophecies, in miracles, visitations of angels, and in preaching the gospel under the power of God, and the testimony of the Spirit in many ways. They can tell of the mighty works they have done in the name of Jesus Christ, and how they loved the work, and what great sacrifices they have made of their means, their homes, their country, and their all; gone barefooted to preach the gospel, had smelt and felt rotten eggs, and been stoned and mocked, and cast out as evil for the word's sake; and that they know that the gospel and the testimonies they received are true. Ask their testimony on these things, and they will tell you that God revealed these truths to them by the power of his Spirit in the divers ways mentioned above. These are the testimonies they bore of the past. But what are their testimonies at the present time? Are they that they have gone on, adding testimony upon testimony, and becoming more fruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? Alas no! a wonderful change has taken place. Their testimony now is, "O, that I had the faith I had when I first obeyed the gospel. Then I loved my brethren and all mankind. I wanted to convert the world, and could make any sacrifice of time and labor to that end. Could wade through mud, snow or rain for miles to go to meeting, or to preach; and when meeting was over, we could hardly separate, our love was so great for one another. O that we could enjoy such blessings from the Lord now. O that we could feel that first love, that joy, that peace. O that we could see and feel the gifts and power of the Holy Ghost, and enjoy them once more as we did then." Brother, sister, what hindered you from "going on to perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works." Has God changed? Have the truths you received changed? Is not the same gospel preached that brought these blessings? Have you not the same loving advocate? Is not the means within your reach that brought these blessings? Can you not humble yourselves before that same God, with the same faith that you then had? Should not these wonderful blessings you testify of strengthen your faith, so that you can go with more confidence? Does not your very condition show you that you are prodigal sons and daughters, that you have spent your time and substance in riotous living? Your trust has been removed from the Lord, who gave you these blessings, and put in man, in the arm of flesh; and you are under the curse that comes on every one "that putteth his trust in man, or maketh flesh his arm." Are you not waiting and looking for something or somebody, to turn up to save you? Are you not looking for the man, "mighty and strong," like unto Moses, "to set in order the house of God, and give the Saints their inheritances by lot?" Are you not looking for the redemption of Zion, and the coming of the Lord to his temple that must be built in this generation? Methinks I hear you say, Yes, we believe all these wonderful things must come to pass, and the signs of the times indicate their near approach; but where is your man like unto Moses, that is to save us, that is to lead us like unto Moses, with an outstretched arm, and with the power of God made manifest in the mighty miracles promised? When we see the man and the power of God, and all these things fulfilling, then we will give of our substance. Then we will be willing to make the same sacrifices that we once made. But we have been fooled once, and will not be fooled again. We put our trust in men once, we loved them as the servants of God; we trusted them, and they proved to be false apostles. They robbed us, and made themselves rich. We have been duped once, our confidence has been shaken in everything and everybody. We will wait until we see greater demonstrations than we see at present in any man, or any organization of the church. Yes brother, sister, you will wait, and many will wait too long. The Lord said he would raise up a man like unto Moses, and redeem Zion after many days, and all these things should come to pass in their time; and that the pure in heart should inherit Zion. That the saints should be scattered. That it was necessary that they should learn obedience by the things they suffered [while in a scattered state], that they might become pure in heart, and worthy to redeem Zion. Now all these things and many more are predicted, and we have the record of them. We profess to believe them, and are looking for their fulfillment. But who of us has a correct understanding of how they are to be fulfilled? Can any man ever get a correct understanding under the conditions above described? I say no, as long as we are watching and fearing we shall be robbed again, waiting for something or somebody to turn up to save us, holding on to every cent, not paying our tithing, doing nothing, standing still, or rather going back, for there is no such thing as standing still; we must either go forward or backward, looking on while the work is done by others. Then we will step in and inherit the fruits of the labor, toil, sweat, trials, sacrifices, and all that it has cost to redeem, purify and build up Zion. The man that is waiting under these or any other like circumstances, with the expectation of an inheritance in Zion, with all the glories, honors and powers, is dishonest, and is deceiving himself, when he expects to enjoy the fruits of the labor and sacrifices of others, without an effort of his own.

Brethren and sisters, let us look this matter squarely in the face, and be sure and not deceive ourselves. All you who believe in the revelations to Joseph Smith must admit this: That Zion never was and never will be located in Utah; neither was Brigham Young, nor is John Taylor the man like unto Moses, nor will any of their children fill the bill, nor is any man or set of men in Utah, making any pretensions to be the man spoken of to redeem Zion according to the predictions. But are, on the other hand, preparing themselves for the bondage spoken of, that the man like unto Moses is to lead them from. Now, if the predictions bear me out in the above statements, we can not look to Utah for Zion, nor for the man like Moses, but for a people in bondage; so we will have to look some other place. No man can look intelligently without he knows what he is looking for. So let us see what we are going to look for. First, the Book of Mormon and the Bible locate the land of Zion in America, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants locates the center in Jackson county, Missouri, with stakes to be appointed by revelation, for the curtaining or strengthening of Zion, when needed. Next these same books predict that there is to be the city of Zion, the New Jerusalem built, beginning at the temple block in Independence, Missouri; and that a temple shall be built unto the Lord in this generation. That this land of Zion is to be redeemed by judgment, purchase, or blood; (and if by blood, there would be trouble), and her converts by righteousness. I call particular attention to this passage, "her converts by righteousness," because it shows that her converts, or those who redeem Zion, will have to become obedient to a celestial law, as Zion can only be redeemed by a strict compliance with the law of righteousness, the celestial law.

"Behold I say unto you, the redemption of Zion must needs come by power; therefore, I will raise up unto my people a man, who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel, for ye are the children of Israel, and must be led out of bondage by power, and with a stretched out arm; and as your fathers were led at the first, even so shall the redemption of Zion be."

Here we have a brief outline of what we are looking for. Who, how, where, and by what means, shall this great work be accomplished, are legitimate questions. That a part of this work is to be done by scattered Israel, is plain. Because of disobedience they were scattered, that they might learn by the things they suffered, obedience to the former commandments and the Book of Mormon, not only to say but to do them. It was disobedience to the former commandments and the Book of Mormon, that drove them out of the land of Zion, and hindered its redemption at that time, and scattered them abroad to suffer affliction, and be brought into bondage.

"This condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation, until they repent and remember the New Covenant."

Here we see what drove them out, and forfeited their right to redeem Zion; for the Lord said there were enough to redeem Zion then, if they would hearken to the former commandments, and send of their substance by wise men, and purchase all the lands that could be purchased; pay their tithing, keep the word of wisdom, preach the gospel, remember the poor to impart of their substance to them, and have but one wife (according to the former commandments) "Wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife." * * For there shall not any man among you have, save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon. Here is a brief outline of some of the former commandments that were disobeyed, and by being disobeyed produced all the trouble that latter day Israel has passed through for the past forty years. They are like Israel of old, under a school-master, that is, driven out of the land because they polluted it, gone forth to learn obedience by the things they suffer in their scattered condition, that they may learn to do, and not to say only. As a failure to do these commands was unrighteousness, and caused all the troubles of Israel; so the doing of the commandments, or the opposite, will be obedience to the law, which is righteousness, Zion's converts are to be redeemed by righteousness. Then here is the key that unlocks the mystery of the redemption of Zion, righteousness, or obedience to the former commands. As soon as scattered latter day Israel, (or the remnant spoken of by Joel), began to do and to remember the former commandments, the Lord was ready to begin to raise up the man like Moses.

The question arises, how and when will the Lord raise up this man like unto Moses? Suppose this Moses man had been raised up forty years ago suddenly, or immediately after the driving out of Zion, with the power of God and an outstretched arm and the presence of the Lord, to go before the people as is predicted; or even now if he should be raised up suddenly, how many of the prophecies would have fallen to the ground unfulfilled, and how many of those that were waiting then, and are waiting for something big to turn suddenly up, holding on to their sins, and their many idols such as whisky, tobacco, beer, tea, coffee, and the other spots of the world too numerous to mention. But I shall be called a fanatic, or a crank, if I do not look out, for having dared to speak of these most sacred things of the world, these things that are worshiped more than God or the former commands. I say how many were ready then, and how many are ready now even of those that are on the land of Zion now, if this Moses man should come suddenly, and according to the prediction, and especially of those described above. Where is there a people that will fill the bill as predicted, a righteous people, that have purchased all the land, and prepared the way for a people that is in bondage, to be led to it? Or where is there a people in bondage, that will fill the bill in the prediction? The facts here pointed out, and the condition of scattered latter day Israel, and the signs of the times that we see around us, should tell every man what his duty is, i. e., to go to with his might, and prepare the way to redeem Zion by righteousness. The Lord is not going to raise up the Moses man suddenly; for he said he would raise up a man to set things in order first, and prepare a people, and a place to which those might flee, who would not take up the sword against their neighbors. Every thing tends to show, that it was to be after many days; and that during this time, the Lord would raise up the remnant of his people, all those that were on the watch tower; and also a man with a scepter of power (or righteousness, which is the scepter of power wielded by the Moses man.)

Now I appeal to all, both new and old Saints, or any others that believe the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, or Bible, to arise, and look around; be honest with yourselves; lay aside your prejudice and your sins, and go to the Lord in the prayer of faith for help. Then go to Utah, or any other faction of scattered latter day Israel, and thoroughly examine all their claims, without prejudice, having the Spirit of Christ, the love of God and your fellow men uppermost, and see whether the people at Utah will fill the bill, or whether they are preparing to fulfill the predictions. Is Utah the land of Zion? Is Salt Lake City the city of Zion? Are the people there Zion, the pure in heart? Are the temples they are building the temple that a cloud and pillar of fire is to rest upon, and that the Lord is coming to? Are they redeeming Zion in Utah? Are they sending up wise men, and buying all the lands as commanded? Are they "obeying the former commandments, and the Book of Mormon, not only to say, but to do" the commands therein contained? Are they gathering in and around the land of Zion, as much as is consistent with the minds of the people, and living their religion in righteousness? Are they redeeming any of the waste places? Are they finding favor with the people, and beginning to possess the land of Zion? Which of all these predictions are the people at Utah fulfilling, if any?

Let us turn and look at the remnant, the Reorganized Church. Here we find a people with Joseph Smith at their head, a scepter of righteousness, the law of the Lord in his hand, i. e., the Book of Mormon, Bible, and Doctrine and Covenants, he wielding them with such power, that false apostles and false teachers begin to tremble for their craft; he pleading the cause of Zion and injured innocence, preaching the gospel in its primitive beauty, and gathering together a people within the borders of Zion, who are beginning to possess the land; sending wise men to purchase the land, finding favor in the eyes of the people, that once drove the Saints out. Beginning to build up the waste places, calling upon scattered latter day Israel, to return to the old paths, and obey "the former commandments, and the Book of Mormon, not only to say but to do them." Is this not a better showing toward fulfilling the predictions and the redemption of Zion than any other faction or organization can make? Has not the remnant fulfilled many of the predictions already? And are they not preparing the way for the fulfillment of all the predictions spoken by all the holy prophets, that have not been fulfilled? If Joseph Smith is not the man that is to be raised up like unto Moses, where is there any other that will come as near as he does to filling the prediction? One thing is sure, the Lord is raising him up, and a people with him. He and they are gaining strength every day. They are prevailing against their enemies, and will continue so to do, as long as they walk humbly and in righteousness. Any man that will humble himself before the Lord, and ask in faith to know whether Joseph Smith is in his place, or whether he is the Moses man or not, can find out as well as many did concerning his father.

Brethren and sisters, let me exhort you all to be diligent in keeping the commands of God; as he will not be mocked. Let us not fail because of unbelief, to improve the offer made to us to enter into his rest; and also of first helping to prepare that rest, that shall be eternal. Let us work while it is day; for the night cometh, when no man can work. Let us make our calling and election sure, by putting away every weight, and the sin that so easily besets us, and running with patience the race that is before us; adding to our faith virtue, patience, temperance, kindness and charity, or love, that we may be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Ever praying for the redemption of Zion,

A. HAWES.

LETTER FROM "ARGUS."

DEAR HERALD:—In your issue of the 12th of April last, page 227, in replying to one L. L. Luse, touching the "Kirtland Bank," you state that "the bank was a regularly chartered association, and had as much right to issue its notes, promises to pay, as any other and all other banks in the State," &c.

Now what I would like, and what I think would be very acceptable to the entire ministry of the church would be the publication of the fact, or facts of history upon which this statement rests, for if correct, it certainly would enable many of us to solve that Banking business, which up to this time has stumbled me, and not only me, but many others not being able to make satisfactory explanation of the matter to our own consciences. The reason for this may be found in "History of Joseph Smith," published in Millennial Star, vol. 15, page 823. I quote: "President O. Cowdery was delegated to Philadelphia to procure plates for the Institution; (the institution referred to is denominated in preceding paragraph, as Kirtland Safety Society), and Elder O. Hyde to repair to Columbus, with a petition to the Legislature of Ohio, for an act of incorporation which was presented at an early period of their session, but because we were 'Mormons' the Legislature raised some frivolous excuse on which they refused to grant us those banking privileges they so freely granted to others. Thus Elder Hyde was compelled to return without accomplishing the object of his mission, while Elder Cowdery succeeded at a great expense in procuring the plates, and bringing them to Kirtland; thus we see from this, that "banking privileges" granted by law to others were positively denied our brethren. The question would now naturally come up, how did they organize? and how proceed to issue money? which questions are entirely answered at page 843, ibid, for there we find the entire "Minutes of a Meeting of the Members of the Kirtland Safety Society, held on the 2d day of January, 1837," from which I quote: "At a special meeting of the Kirtland Safety Society, two-thirds of the members being present, S. Rigdon was called to the chair, and W. Parrish chosen secretary. The house was called to order, and the object of the meeting explained by the Chairman; which was—1st, to annul the old constitution, which was adopted by the society, on the 2d day of November, 1836; which was on motion, by the unanimous voice of the meeting, annulled. 2d, to adopt articles of agreement, by which the 'Kirtland Safety Society' is to be governed. After much discussion and investigation, the following Preamble and Articles of Agreement were adopted by the unanimous voice of the meeting. We, the undersigned subscribers, for the promotion of our temporal interests, and for the better management of our different occupations, which consist in agriculture, mechanical arts, and merchandizing, do hereby form ourselves into a firm or company for the before mentioned objects, by the name of the 'Kirtland Safety Society Anti-Banking Company,' and for the proper management of said firm, we individually and jointly enter into and adopt the following articles of agreement." Then follows sixteen articles, the 14th of which provides, "All notes given by said society, shall be signed by the treasurer and secretary thereof, and we, the individual members of said firm, hereby hold ourselves bound for the redemption of all such notes." Responsible for this paper the same as any person who gives a due bill or note, frequently resorted to by merchants for convenience sake, &c., but how can it be said that this was a lawful bank when the very name of the society adopted by themselves unanimously was "Anti-Banking Company," which simply means against, opposed to banking; and the reason for such organization I had supposed was owing to the before mentioned fact that the Legislature of Ohio would not grant them the right to incorporate as a bank. Herein our opponents allege a wrong was done. I shall not discuss that part of the question at present, but content myself with the hope that the Herald will publish the historical facts upon which its statement was based, for if subsequent to the occurrence of the items herein quoted, another organization was effected, or that by due process of the laws of the State of Ohio this "Kirtland Safety Society Anti-Banking Company" was remodeled and made into a bank, "a regularly chartered association, and had as much right to issue its notes, &c., as any and all other banks in the State," which to the average reader means bank in the absolute sense, legal and otherwise, then in such case if it really exists, the publication of such facts by which suitable and proper apology may be made for said bank, will be hailed with joy by your brother. ARGUS.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ODELL, Neb., Feb'y 8th, 1884.

DEAR BROTHER—Herewith I hand you a number of questions that were submitted to me in writing by Messrs. James F. Raney and John H. Hageman, and my replies thereto, as read to the public. As questions of like character are being presented all the time to the eldership, I submit them for publication, that perhaps they may aid others in their labor, and also, if I am incorrect, that I may be set aright.

Question.—"And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."—Mark 16:20. And why do they not do it now?

Answer.—From the Scripture used, and the form of the question, it would seem that the Apostles are to be credited with an unconditional, or optional proprietorship, entitling them to permission to work signs, without any consideration of the mental or physical condition of the parties, on whom, or in whom, the signs are manifested. Christ to his Apostles granted, "And I will give thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven."—Matt. 16:19. This power and authority, however, was both qualified and limited by the provisions of their calling and commission. "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you," John 15:16, with, "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."—Matt. 28:20. God is in all ages the same, "with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning," Jas. 1:17, committed to man by his Son, the gospel, which "is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth;" Rom. 1:16. Jesus confesses and honors his father, in the plainest manner possible. "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do. The Father himself which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. I am come in my Father's name." John 5:19, 37, 43. And to the above meek and trustworthy testimony, "I can of mine own self do nothing; as I hear I judge; and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." John 5:30. And in strict accordance with Christ's mission from God to man, did he send forth his Apostles. "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." John 17:18. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Heb. 11:6. Again the importance of faith is revealed; "For whatsoever is not of faith, is sin." Rom. 14:23.

In view of the foregoing, did the "lame man," found by Peter and John at the gate Beautiful, have any faith, or was he healed by the faith of the Apostles? Acts 3:5 tells us that the lame man "gave heed unto them," that is to attend to, or to observe that which was told him, namely, "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." Verse 6. In the twelfth verse Peter protests to the people, that it was not "by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk;" and in the sixteenth verse assures the doubting Pharisees, that the man was healed through faith in the name of Jesus. Read the first three words of the sixteenth verse, "And this man," and all the darkness vanishes like mist before the rising sun; otherwise confusion and unbelief will cloud the mind. "Faith" is one of the signs that are to follow the preaching of the gospel, and is therefore one of the spiritual gifts, (1 Cor. 12:9), and is to "follow them that believe," Mark 16:17. It was the faith in the "cripple," that gave Paul and Barnabas the opportunity to manifest the healing power God hath promised. Acts 14:9. That man's agency should not be destroyed, and that faith was necessary, is clearly established by the example of Christ; "And he did not many mighty works there, because of their unbelief," Matt. 13:58. "And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them; and he marvelled because of their unbelief." Mark 6:5, 6.

Thus we are able to conclude, that upon the exercise of faith the promise of the signs is made, and unless the signs now follow the preaching of the gospel, we are without the evidence that there are any "believers," or that the word of Christ is true. But in meekness and in compliance with my duty as a minister, I add my humble, but truthful testimony that God in his mercy and kindness, does confirm the preaching of the word with signs following all those, who in the deep contrition of soul, and purity of heart, enter in faith believing, by the door into the covenant of peace.

"And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophecy a thousand, two hundred and three score days, clothed in sackcloth." Do we not hear them, or shall we listen to hear them in the future?

The two witnesses referred to have not yet made their appearance. We shall therefore be under the necessity of waiting until God shall raise them up, and clothe them with the prophetic power of this special mission to the people, after they return to the city of Jerusalem.

Who was that man that is to rule with a rod of iron, and who is his mother?

In Psalm 2:7-9 it is clearly taught that Christ was to be that man. However, the "rod of iron," is not to be considered as an instrument of cruelty, but to be a signification of the word of God, which shall be strong and durable like iron. The mother of Christ, according to the flesh, I believe to be the Virgin Mary. But the metaphorical language found in Rev. 12:5, I am inclined to believe has a reference to the church as the mother, and the "man-child" to be Christ; and in him the priesthood is included; therefore, at the apostasy of the church, both Christ and his divine authority were taken from the earth; and then was there a fulfillment of the prophecy of Amos 8:12. "And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east; they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it."

"And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness. Where is the wilderness, and who is she to be nourished by?"

The woman was the church, and after the loss of the Holy Spirit and the priesthood, with rapid and radical changes, ceased to be the church of the true God; and in scattering, the church flies into the wilderness, which is the "peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." Rev. 17:15. The wilderness is the party who nourished the church in her apostate condition. Ibid 2:6. The food furnished was unsound doctrine, which has now resulted in confusion, and uncertainty as to the way of life, and the power of God unto salvation.

"And I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, and he is to continue forty and two months." Has he made his appearance, or is he to be?

The majority of Protestant ministers and writers, accept the above as descriptive of what is called the Roman Catholic Church. And I so understand the matter.

"And another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb; as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed." Has he arisen, or shall he make his appearance in the future?

The above question is a condensation of the subject matter described in Rev. 13:11-18. From the description given, no embarrassment need be encountered in concluding that the beast is figurative of an ecclesiastical power; and that the coming up out of the earth would be indicative of slow growth, that the spread of its doctrines would be in a quiet and silent manner, not in any way causing the antagonism of those among whom they work. And in the exercise of the power of the first beast it would appear that they in the gradual metamorphosis only assumed to look like a lamb that is quiet, innocent and peaceful. But this is only a mask, for when it speaks, it is the voice of the dragon. The dragon, or anti-Christ power, has many times in the past made the effort to monopolize the supreme supervision of the whole religious world, as likewise the political and mercantile status. Where resistance was manifested, they made the attempt to establish their supremacy by the force of arms. As the date of the coming of this power, I am not so fixed in my private opinion as to be unwilling to accept of additional light. The church which I represent, has not spoken authoritatively upon this scripture. I would not therefore give a positive and emphatic reply, not wishing in any manner to cripple or compromise my companions in the ministry. My private judgment is, that the beast represents the Romish Church in a mollified condition, and the rapid spread of that church under the new pseudology, which movement at the present is becoming very popular, may yet assume greater proportions than it has heretofore. We can therefore well afford to abide the revelations of time, and trust in the saving power of the gospel, that we may escape the evil of the beasts.

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel." Has any one heard that gospel on the earth?

The definitive expression, "everlasting gospel," furnishes those enquiring after the way of life with a sure and inimitable criterion by which to test all that is presented as "gospel." The Master laid down this safe method of judging, "ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" Matt. 7:16. With this rule in our hand, let us proceed in enquiring after the doctrine of Christ, for "whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." 2 John 9. The cardinal principles of the doctrine of Christ are enumerated by Paul, in Heb. 6:2, 3, as follows: 1. Faith toward God. 2. Repentance from dead works. 3. Doctrine of baptisms. 4. Laying on of hands. 5. Resurrection of the dead. 6. Eternal judgment. That the foregoing should be taught acceptably to all people, "God set in the church, (1) apostles, (2) prophets, (3) evangelists, (4) pastors, (5) teachers, (6) miracles, (7) healings, (8) helps, (9) governments, (10) diversities of tongues, (11) word of wisdom, (12) word of knowledge, (13) faith, (14) prophecy, (15) interpretation of tongues, (16) discerning of spirits. 1 Cor. 12, and Eph. 4. May 15th, 1829, the angel of Rev. 14:6, made a commitment of the everlasting gospel to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. They were baptized and ordained, April 6th, 1830. They with others who had been baptized by the command of God began the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and whenever the eldership of this church is permitted to preach the word of peace and salvation, there and then are the people so blessed with the sound of the everlasting gospel in its primeval simplicity, purity and power; and it will prove to be "the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life." 2 Cor. 2:16. Yes, many have been invited by the preaching to "this gospel," and he will be blessed of God, "who will do the word."

"And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire to come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men." Was this of God or of the devil?

The Scripture used seems to furnish the answer itself, and gives all the honor of doing signs and wonders for the purpose of making men believe to the same individual that was so very anxious to have a stone turned into bread. To escape this evil power God hath so freely and richly provided, "wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. Eph. 6:13-16.

"And I looked, and lo, a lamb stood on the mount Zion." Has he made his appearance, or shall we look for him? And with him forty and four thousand, having his father's name in their foreheads." Have they received that name yet?

The expression, "his father's name" would clearly teach that the Lamb was Christ, and the company with him 144,000, not 44,000, who are to receive a "new name," are those who shall be with him when he will come "without sin unto salvation," and from the want of evidence that an event of such magnitude and importance has taken place, I am constrained to believe that the coming of Christ with that pure and holy company, is one of the unfulfilled prophecies. That I may not be wise above that which is written, I confess and deny not that I have not yet discovered the time (date) that the 144,000 were to receive Christ's Father's name in their foreheads.

DESTRUCTION OF DEATH.

"What man is he that liveth and shall not see death. Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave."—Ps. 89:48.

Death is the barrier to immortality. It hedges the way of life, and circumscribes it within the pale of mutation and decay. None of the voyagers "O'er times tempestuous sea," can escape the certain wreck that awaits them on the shoals of dissolution. No forces exist within the realm of human power, or invention, which can avert the resistless power of time. The hoary monuments of the past, are but witnesses of the mortality of man, and the decay of all that the world calls great. Wealth, position, honor, fame, and tears of love, are powerless in the presence of death. How does this sad picture comport with the aspiration of the soul? O, how we wish to live forever; not for our sakes alone, but to see the golden links of severed affection united in a blessed immortality. To see life re-built out of materials that will be exempt from the blighting power of death, and exalted as it were, to the realization that we shall suffer no more the painful throes of separation, and where no more sickness, nor pain, nor sin, can ever cast a shadow upon that celestial goal. Where life will culminate in freedom from evil desire, and merge into the ineffable fullness of angel-life and perfection.

Life in time is but the childhood of conscious being, and eternity the realm, which will disclose its attainment to manhood. The possibilities within us are not realized if they do not survive the wreck of death, and develop their powers and utility in the great beyond.

"Life is as a speck on the shore of time,
And death as a wreck on the sea;
The beyond is clothed in grandeur sublime,
Where life immortal shall be."

Death is the pronounced enemy of the race. It is true that humanity, freighted with intense physical and mental suffering are relieved in death; but let us not forget, that amidst the crumbling mass of human misery, exist the gems of sundered affection, and the unrequited longings of a disappointed soul, defeated by the unpropitious circumstances of life. And if there is no redemption from death, then is the gold in life consumed with the dross of mortality; for the same authority that tells us we live on in conscious being after the dissolution of this earthly tabernacle, also informs us that the earthly house of the soul will rise again, a temple immortal, the duration of which will span the endless ages of eternity. The destruction of death, and the divinity of Christ, are synonymous in import; for if Jesus arose not from the grave, then there is no resurrection from the dead.

"Then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not." The presumptuous boast of infidelity, "that death is an eternal sleep," would throw its dark mantle of despair over the expiring hope of a world. "But now is Christ risen and become the first fruits of them that slept." Christ grasped the sceptre of empire from the arms of death, and proclaimed himself forever free from the bondage of the tomb; he snatched the keys of power from his hand, by which he (death) had made the earth the great tomb of man, and Jesus, by divine authority, assumed the government of the "silent city," and the consummation of his reign, points to the destruction of death, to its utter abolition in its relationship to the race; for he must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet; the last enemy to be destroyed is death. The elements necessary to the completion of this great work are: (1) the resurrection of the entire race, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive, but every one in his own order." (2) This emancipation from the dominant power of death, will consist in the installment of our race in the inheritance of immortality. "Death reigned from Adam unto Moses, even over them who had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgressions, who is the figure of him that was to come." This proposition solves the problem as to what constitutes the reign of death. All who die, or are subject to death, are members of its universal empire. Jesus Christ was the "first begotten from the dead," the first one of the race who broke away from the dominion of death; his triumph paved the way to the resurrection of all the Saints who had died prior to his day. It placed them on an equality with Christ, as regarded their inheritance of immortality. "Christ dieth no more, death hath no more dominion over him." No, it is now reversed. Christ obtained dominion over death and hell; and death was destroyed in its relationship to Christ, and to all who came forth at his resurrection. "The last enemy to be destroyed is death." The grand method is here revealed. The uplifting of all humanity to a condition exempt from death, points to the consummation of the mission of Christ.

Rewards and punishments may extend beyond the resurrection, "but death his victims must resign," as the grand divisions of the human family come forth, "every one in his own order," to a resurrected condition of life, forever free from the power of death; for death shall be no more. "Then will be brought to pass the saying, "Death is swallowed up in victory; O grave, where is thy victory! O death, where is thy sting!"

Selections.

EAST LONDON LATTER DAY SAINTS.

AT Phoenix Hall, Commercial Road, London, England, Brother Gerrard—of the East London Branch of that body of Christians known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints—delivered a discourse on The Resurrection. "Swedenborg's" tenets were fully discussed, although the Rev. Chauncey Giles states that the whole scope and intent of the Revelation contained in the Word is to teach and prove the Resurrection—the Anastasis—the uninterrupted continuance of life in the spiritual world, after the death of the body, how that life can be made the most blissful and rich in all spiritual blessings.

Brother Gerrard in his remarks corroborated the statements made in the "True Latter Day Saints' Herald" for the New Year. In that paper the almost universal belief is recognized—namely—"that man after he has lived for any allotted time upon the earth and dies will in some way live again." This resurrection seems to be typified by the decay and the renewal of the vegetable world. Man dies, his body goes to decay. If man lives again—what portion lives? In what form? With what kind of body? Is it that portion which gives the peculiar distinctive character as a living, thinking, and reasoning identity—that something which distinguishes him from all other animal organizations? Must not the renewed life of a man—if his identity as part of the human family is preserved—be in connection with the body, or with a body so much like it that it may be said to be a resurrected being. But what does the Bible say?

"As for me I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied, when I awake with thy likeness."—Ps. 17: 15.

"But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave."—Ps. 49: 15.

In the twenty-sixth chapter of Isaiah and nineteenth verse it is thus written: "Thy dead men shall live—together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead."

What is meant by the dead men? God said "Let us make man in our own image!" That image is included in man's identity. The dead men referred to are those who had once lived but have died. In the 21st verse of the same chapter it is written: "The earth shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." What is the slain? It can only apply to those who had once been living—and these were they who, in process of time, were to break the silence of the grave. In the 14th verse of the 13th of Hosea, the Eternal says: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death."

In Daniel 12:2 it is written:—"And many of them that sleep in the dust shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt."

What is the resurrection? Is it that the restoration of all things shall take place? That is portrayed in the Old Testament, but it appears in a clearer light in the New Testament.

Paul taught the doctrine of the resurrection in no uncertain terms, for he wrote—in Hebrews 6:2—"of the doctrine of baptisms, of laying on of hands, and of the resurrection of the dead."

The Essenes and the Swedenborgians look upon it as a spiritual resurrection—although Job in the 19th chapter and 26th verse says:—"Though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

In Acts 24:15 it says "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

The speaker spoke of Jesus, desiring Thomas to touch His pierced side and the hands pierced by the nails of the crucifixion. Was that a spirit? No; "a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." Christ when he rose from the dead was not a spirit—for Mary when she first saw Him after the resurrection, thinking him to be still in Joseph's tomb, thought him to be the gardener, but soon recognized the man, Christ Jesus, who afterwards appeared unto the disciples—the door being shut; yet it must be borne in mind that the houses in the East, in the neighborhood of Jerusalem, were built differently to those now erected in western climes. Doors were at the top of the houses; so that Christ could have appeared amongst his disciples as He did without a miracle being performed or the assumption of spiritual existence; He could have appeared unto them with that body he possessed before the crucifixion. It was with that body he entered heaven concerning which He spoke, saying: "I ascend unto my Father;" yes, Christ has gone into the very heavens with his very body with which he arose from the dead out of Joseph's tomb; so Christ did not dispense with this piece of corruption—the body—which the Swedenborgians say is not fit for the spirit-world. If the Swedenborgians are correct as to the body being a thing of naught after the spirit leaves it at death, why was it necessary for Christ to take up that very body into the heaven of heavens?

If the statements in the New Testament respecting the resurrected Christ be taken as they read, they imply that in the resurrection we shall be so much like what we were before death that until our eyes are opened we can not perceive the difference.

The historian Matthew relates that at the time of the crucifixion "the graves were opened; and many bodies of the Saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after His resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." The Swedenborgians may try and make this a spiritual resurrection as much as they like; but if this had been a spiritual resurrection how could Matthew have written as he did? Can we perceive a spirit rise out of the earth? No; but if the resurrected saints had not bodies like unto those then living in Jerusalem, the historian must have related the difference. Again we are exhorted in our manner towards others to beware as to our rejecting those like unto us—for we may "entertain angels unawares."

When is the resurrection to which all mankind is subject? It is written in 1 Cor. 15:23, "Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at His coming."

"The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first."—1 Thes. 4:16.

According to this verse the resurrection does not take place at once as the Swedenborgians say.

In the Revelations of St. John the Divine it is prophetically written concerning the latter days that "they lived and reigned a thousand years; but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection."

The thousand years represent that period known as the "Millennium" now looked for by many Christians; so the resurrection is to come—for if the resurrection does not take place until Christ comes, then we know it does not take place when the spirit leaves the body. Our resurrection will be when He comes, "when we shall be like Him." Here is a positive declaration that we shall be like Him in that day—and we read of Him after His resurrection that He was not a mere spirit; He even ate fish with His disciples, and after this He departed upon high with his body to prepare a place where there are many mansions.

Seeing that the second and final rising of the dead will be after the rest, and reign over the righteous during the millennium—where is it to be? On this very earth. Daniel foreshadows that the saints shall possess the earth, and Christ says that the meekest shall inherit the earth. Be not deceived. There are false prophets; but there are also true prophets in these latter days; therefore repent and be baptized believing in the resurrection of the body as in Jesus Christ. Amen.

Miscellaneous.

DIED.

COOKE.—At St. Louis Mo., April 20th, 1884, of diphtheria, George Cooke, Son of Noah N. and Marie Cooke, aged 3 years, 11 months, 4 days. Funeral services by Elders Still and Smith. Three jewels now, waiting to welcome papa and mamma home.

"Death came to the earth, by his side was Spring,
They came from God's own bowers;
And the earth was full of their wandering,
For they both were sowing flowers.

"I sow," said Spring, "by the stream and the wood,
And the village children know
The gay glad time of my own sweet prime.
And where my blossoms grow.

"There is not a spot in the quiet wood
But hath heard the sound of my feet,
And the voices come from their solitude
When my tears hath made them sweet."

"I sow," said Death, "where the hamlet stands,
I sow in the churchyard drear:
I drop in the grave with gentle hands,
My flowers from year to year.

"The young and the old go into their rest,
To the sleep that waits them below;
But I clasp the children unto my breast,
And kiss them before I go."

"I sow," said Spring, "but my flowers decay
When the year turns weak and old,
When the breath of the bleak winds wears them away,
And they wither and droop in the mold.

"But they come again when the young earth feels
The new blood leap in her veins,
When the fountain of wonderful life unseals,
And the earth is alive with the rains."

"I sow," said Death, "but my flowers unseen
Pass away from the land of men,
Nor sighs nor tears through the sad long years
Ever bring back their bloom again.

"But I know they are wondrous bright and fair
In the fields of their high abode;
Your flowers are the flowers that a child may wear,
But mine are the blossoms of God."

Death came to the earth, by his side was Spring;
The two came from God's own bowers;
One sow'd in night and the other in light.
Yet they both were sowing flowers."

COBURN.—At Blenheim, Ontario, April 18th, 1884, William Fredrick, son of Richard and Margaret A. Coburn, aged 3 years, 9 months and 4 days. Funeral services on Sunday 20th, by Elder Samuel Brown, in the Saints' Chapel. There was a large attendance of Saints and friends.

Our Freddie dear has gone to rest
His trials on earth are o'er;
His spirit is now among the blest,
Upon that peaceful shore.

But yet we hope to meet him,
When the archangel's trump shall blow,
To resurrect the righteous dead,
And quicken the righteous below.

Oh may we meet him then,
Where parting will be o'er;
And clasp him in our arms again,
Where Jesus reigns forevermore. R. C.

ALDERMAN.—At his residence in Marengo, McHenry county, Illinois, April 25th, 1884, of consumption, Bro. Charles Alderman, aged 59 years, 3 months, 16 days. Was a member of the church 26 years. He leaves a sorrowing wife and family to mourn his departure. Funeral services by Elder John S. Patterson, at the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

HART.—Bro. Thomas H. Hart, son of Bro. Henry and Sr. Sarah Hart, was born near Plano, Illinois, December 6th, 1864, and died near Lamoni, Iowa, May 2d, 1884. For a year and more previous to his death he suffered a steady decay, a consumption of the entire body, but not suffering distress as some do. When his time of departure came he folded his own arms and closed his eyes, as if preparing for the sleep of the night, and thus his spirit passed away without any struggle of the body. He was the third son lost to these bereaved parents, and their last, each being cut down on arriving at the age of manhood. His memory is beloved by parents and sisters because he was ever obedient, dutiful and kind, and he loved not evil society nor mingled with the idle and profane. He was baptized July 19th, 1874, at Plano, Illinois, by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, who also preached his funeral sermon on May 4th, 1884, assisted by Bro. E. H. Gurley. His faith was steadfast towards his Savior and his hope was the first resurrection. May great comfort be administered to those from whom the staff for declining years has been removed.

JOHNS & ORDWAY,
Manufacturers of
HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES,
605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brothers—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
Geo. MONTAGUE.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
Yours,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds,
Wm. AIRP.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
W. F. CLARK.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds,
E. W. CATO, SEN.

The following is clipped from the daily Gate City, of Keokuk, Iowa, of date May 10th:

AUTHORSHIP OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.

The Presbyterian Observer throws a new light on the authorship of the Book of Mormon. The book, it says, has commonly been credited to Rev. Solomon Spaulding, a Presbyterian minister—a romance purporting to give the origin and history of the American Indians. He sought to find a publisher for this story in Pittsburg, but was unsuccessful. The author died a few years later. The manuscript of this story most unaccountably disappeared, though it was generally believed that one Sidney Rigdon, a printer, afterwards a Mormon Bishop, got possession of the same, altered and added to it, and, thus altered and amended, it was sent forth to the world as the Mormon Bible. This point is explained by the following letter from Mr. James Jeffries, of Harford county, Md., whose boyhood was spent a few miles from Pittsburg. He says: "I know more about the Mormons than any man east of the Alleghenies, although I have given the matter no attention for twenty-five years. I did not know I was in possession of any information concerning the Book of Mormon unknown to others. I supposed that as Rigdon was so open with me, he had told others the same things. Forty years ago I was in business in St. Louis. The Mormons then had their temple in Nauvoo, Illinois. I had business transactions with them. Sidney Rigdon I knew very well. He was general manager of the affairs of the Mormons. Rigdon, in hours of conversation, told me a number of times there was in the printing office with which he was connected in Ohio, a manuscript of Rev. Spaulding, tracing the origin of the Indian race from the lost tribes of Israel; that this manuscript was in the office for several years; that he was familiar with it; that Spaulding had wanted it printed, but had not had the money to pay for the printing; that he (Rigdon) and Joe Smith used to look over the manuscript and read it over Sundays. Rigdon and Smith took the manuscript and said: 'I'll print it,' and went off to Palmyra, N. Y. I never knew this information was of any importance. It will not injure Mormonism. That is an 'ism,' and chimes in with the wishes of certain classes of people. Nothing will put it down but the strong arm of the law."

This statement presents the following peculiarities: The witness knows "more about the Mormons than any man east of the Alleghenies," although he has "given the matter no attention for twenty-five years," during which years the claims for and against the Book of Mormon have been more thoroughly presented than ever before. The only source from which he derives this superior knowledge, is private conversation with Sidney Rigdon, which was never given to the world while the said Rigdon was living, and is contradictory of statements made by the said Rigdon and published in his lifetime. It is therefore incompetent and inadmissible. The witness' testimony, being based upon what somebody else told him, is hearsay, and therefore incompetent; so if called to testify in any court of justice in our land, he would not be allowed to make a single statement; because, although he professes to know so much, in the eyes of the law he knows nothing.

The communication bears no date; and the only attempt to fix the time when these statements were made by Rigdon to the writer, is the language, "Forty years ago I was in business in St. Louis." Where the statements were made is not intimated, nor who, if anybody, were present and heard them. At what place in Ohio Sidney Rigdon was connected with a printing office; in what capacity or when he was so connected; who owned and who managed said office; how manuscripts came to lie in the office for "several years" without being printed or returned to the writer; how the proprietors came to allow employees to peruse manuscripts, take them home for perusal on Sundays, and finally carry them entirely away from the office and into another state, are matters at which this lucid witness leaves us to guess.

The statement is made that "Joe Smith" and Sidney Rigdon used to look this manuscript over together; but the historical fact, upon which both friends and enemies of Joseph Smith have hitherto agreed is, that Joseph Smith never had a residence in the State of Ohio, never was in that State, until after the publication of the Book of Mormon; also, that after his residence in Ohio, he never returned to New York; so if this witness' statements are accepted, those of all former witnesses upon the same side of the case must be rejected; and the legal rule that a party is bound by the testimony of the witness introduced by them, will place the advocates of the Spaulding-Romance-origin of the Book of Mormon in an unenviable situation; and compel them to apologize for the lack of truthfulness in former witnesses, or in this one under consideration.

Former witnesses, including the wife and daughter of Rev. Spaulding, have traced the manuscript referred to a printing office in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, if at all, and from that printing office to the State of Massachusetts, not in the possession of either Joseph Smith or Sidney Rigdon, but the family of Spaulding. This chain of evidence, furnished by the testimony of witnesses adduced against the Book of Mormon, has hitherto been an embarrassing obstacle in the way of those who favor the Spaulding-manuscript theory; and it seems that this witness has made the attempt to remove it. But he and his advisers should have remembered that in making this attempt he has squarely contradicted those who have hitherto been the witnesses on his side of the case, and who from the relations they sustained to the writer and his manuscript, are most likely to know the facts. These witnesses are the wife and daughter of Spaulding, and the owner and manager of the printing office in which he lodged his manuscripts. They should have remembered, too, that they have made their case, placed themselves upon record before the world, avowed their willingness and determination to stand by that record; and now when they realize that their case is a hard one, and that they can not justly or reasonably receive a decision in their favor, to change front, and introduce a new witness to overthrow the testimony of those upon whom they have hitherto relied, comes with very bad grace.

This witness however need not feel in any danger of being punished for perjury; for he has been careful to wait until the man who could contradict him was dead, and then to make statements so indefinite, that in a legal sense he swears to nothing, and therefore could not be convicted of swearing to a falsehood. There are two sentences in his statement which we commend: "I never knew this information was of any importance. It will not injure Mormonism."

In the report of the committee on Utah affairs published in last issue of the HERALD, referring to the polygamous families of that territory, the following sentence occurs:

So far as the past is concerned it is a serious question as to what ought to be done. To break up the family ties that have existed so long; to declare the children of plural marriages bastards; to turn women adrift in their old age, who have in good conscience believed themselves to be wives, with all the ties of a life-time broken up and doomed to an existence miserable and comfortless, are consequences to be fully considered before action is taken.

One thing either escaped the notice of these committee men, or was not brought before them; that is, that the men and women who formed those family ties, all knew that they were living within the jurisdiction of the United States, and under the provisions and protection of the laws of those States, when they contracted them. They knew, also, that as members of the church under the religion of which they claim exemption from the operation of laws against plural marriages,—polygamy—bigamy, they had received what they had accepted as the word of God to them, which clearly and positively forbade such marriages. And that the ties, which these committee regard with such a degree of tenderness, have grown up by reason of a wilful disregard of the obligations of citizenship imposed by both conditions of law above stated.

The women referred to can not "in good conscience have believed themselves to be wives." President Brigham Young, when arraigned in the Courts of the United States, stated in his pleadings that he had but "one legal wife." If Pres. Young had but one legal wife, as he made affidavit; as the laws of the United States recognize but one wife, Brigham Young had but one; and the rest were not wives. All the 2,500, or 3,000 men who are by this committee reported as being polygamists, know what Pres. Young testified respecting his own household, whether the women do or not. How then can they assume more for their so-called marriage relations than their leader did for his.

Cases occur every day in which family ties are sundered by the executors of the law, where the ties are just as dear and binding, and so far as the intentions and purposes of the parties in entering into the relationship are concerned, were just as honestly and earnestly assumed as any in Utah could possibly have been. Does this soften the severity of the law; blind the judges and abate the rigors of the prisons and the scaffolds.

Our Utah polygamic friends will cry out about the hardness of the hearts of the Gentiles, and include us in the category of their enemies; but which are better "the rebukes of a friend or the kisses of an enemy?" The one kisses in semblance and covert of friendship, the other presuming upon the integrity of his heart and intentions rebukes that good may ensue.

These 2,500 polygamic husbands of Utah have usurped the family ties and relationships of 2,500 others of their own brethren, and have thus outraged the same tender sympathies, and blessed family associations which should be available for all, because they have made them impossible to these 2,500 of their defrauded brothers.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Opposition, a paper published at Wilber, Nebraska, where the first Braden-Kelley debate took place, who writes from Brush Creek, hits off the Blue Valley Blade, Rev. L. L. Luse's paper, thus:

While we welcome the Opposition as an old friend and read its columns with interest, another paper has dawned upon our vision that threatens to eclipse everything in the newspaper line. When it first made its advent into the township it was young and rosy, throwing smiles and kisses to all; praising all alike, and many of us took it to our heart of hearts, and patiently waited for our turn to come to have the history of our past lives printed to be read by a sympathetic public. But no—the blooming Blade that was such a thing of beauty is growing thin and pale. It looks as though it was consumptive, but some of us think the trouble is an excess of bile. The column once devoted to biography is now devoted to religious matter, and the way the editor pitches into the Saints, and especially that Jo. Smith, is enough to make a preacher—weep. This is right. Give these poor miserable Saints brimstone and fire and send them to —. Don't be afraid, Joseph Smith is dead; he can't hurt you now! The religion of the meek and lowly One is not for all, and true it is, and pitiful too that some of His preachers are very human.

Mr. Editor, I must now conclude, but beg you not to take offense because we think so much of the Blade. It satisfies a long felt want and is something of the style of the combination harvester. It started as a political paper, but is now a Religio Politico journal of the first water. Motto: Jo. Smith, Bob. Elvin and—Selah!

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. W. Blair writes from Salt Lake City, as follows:

Bro. Perry Davis of Long Valley, Cal., would be pleased to have some judicious, able Elder call on Sterling Davis, Eleazer Davis, Corydon Davis, and Burnham, on Silver Creek, Mills Co., Iowa. Sr. Susannah Parris, of San Bernardino, Cal., desires some faithful Elder to call on Samuel S. Reed, and Charles E. Parish, Toledo, Ohio.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE lumber for the frame of the chapel at Lamoni, is ordered, and preparations are on foot to begin the burning of the brick for the encasing. There is a prospect that it may be enclosed before snow flies next Fall. The Saints of the branch need the building sadly. A congregation of nearly five hundred hold meetings in two houses, neither of which will seat comfortably two hundred persons.

The leaders and largely the people of Utah are intensely opposed to the summary settlement of criminal prosecutions by an appeal to Judge Lynch's court. The late case of lynching in Utah in which a Japanese was the victim, is most severely condemned by all from Pres. John Taylor down.

Three were baptized in the neighborhood of Bro. Newton Kent, in Ringgold county, Iowa, Sunday, May 11th, by Bro. O. B. Thomas of Lamoni, assisted by Bro. John Johnston. Three were baptized at Davis City, Iowa, on the same day, by Bro. Z. H. Gurley, where Bro. Joseph R. Lambert was holding a week's services. We are also informed that two others were baptized during the previous week, making five at Davis City.

Bro. James J. Gott, Oskaloosa, Iowa, thinks that an Elder would find an opportunity to labor there, and one coming, or passing and stopping over, would be kindly cared for with him.

Bro. W. H. Kelley officiated at the funeral services of Mr. John White, aged seventy-six, who died at Mantua, Ohio, and was carried to Kirtland for burial. He was one of Kirtland's earliest settlers, and "was noted for his rugged strength and powers of endurance, his skill as a fisherman and hunter, and his love for an out of door life."

The roofs are on the cheese factory buildings at Lamoni, and prospects are good for the manufacture of cheese to speedily begin. The cheese made here the last year was exceptionally good.

THE Pittsburg Leader of May 9th has the following timely and vigorous protest against persecution among its editorials. And although the person sent to prison in Vienna is an elder of the Utah Mormon Church, we heartily endorse the sentiment of the editorial.

PERSECUTION.

A Mormon missionary has just been sent to prison in Vienna for preaching his doctrines. Commenting on this fact the Post this morning says: "The Austrian government at least understands how to deal with the Mormon question." Yes, it understands how to do it in the way the Jews dealt with Christ and his religion; as the Romans dealt with Ignatius, Polycarp, Justin and the other early Christian martyrs; as the Spanish Catholics a few centuries since dealt with their Protestant subjects in Spain and the Netherlands; as the Puritans of New England dealt with the unfortunates who happened to hold a different belief from them; as the Russian government, and Austria, too, of to-day permit Jews to be dealt with by its bigoted citizens. That, however, is not the American way of doing things. While we detest polygamy as much, if not more, than the Austrians, we do not believe in throwing a man into prison because he comes into our midst and preaches doctrines we do not agree with. We Americans are not perfect by any means in our spirit of toleration, but we have, thank Providence, a more truly Christian way of dealing with those who differ with us in belief than the Austrians.

THE brothers at Lucas, Iowa, brethren Adam Fletcher, Isaac Phillips, Thomas R. Allen, John R. Evans, Evan B. Morgan and others, being desirous of utilizing the labor and little capital among them to the best advantage for all, have talked the matter over quite thoroughly and decided to work up and organize a company on co-operative methods. They have, assisted by legal advice, drawn up and adopted the following articles; which seem to be admirably adapted to secure the object of their association, if carried out in good faith, the really essential feature in all enterprises, where money and labor combine.

We publish the articles for the benefit of those of the Saints who may be contemplating entering into similar projects, as a sort of guide to them. Also, to the end that should any of the brethren elsewhere choose to join with them, they may know what the methods of their procedure are to be. We are authorized by the Lucas brethren engaged in the work, to invite all who feel so inclined to join with them. We believe in organized labor, and the employment of capital in co-operative ways.

DETROIT, Minnesota,
May 5th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I have just been talking with a young lady from Furgus Falls. She is much interested in the preaching of two young preachers from Salt Lake, or near there. They made much stir as latter day preachers at Douglas county. They told their hearers they were young, and did not like to baptize yet; but an older man would come and baptize them. They gave their hearers our Herald, Voice of Warning, and other church books. They held a conference in St. Paul. One of these preacher's names is Buchanan, the other name is Reverend. I tell her they are Brighamites, but they appeared so good she don't want to believe it. Please say if they are, in the Herald. If they are, they are deceiving many.

ANDREW TABBUT.

[The persons named above are not known to us. We believe Buchanan to be an Elder of the Utah Mormon Church. They are not of the Reorganized Church].—EDITOR.

LAMONI, Decatur Co., Iowa,
May 15th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—On Monday, April 28th, I was called to Davis City, this county to look after T. B. Scovil, Evangelist (so called) of the (so called) Church of Christ. He had made a voluntary and severe attack upon some parts of our faith, holding them up to ridicule. The brethren of the Davis City Branch challenged him to meet some representative man our faith in public debate, at Davis City, within thirty days. He wished to see the man or hear from him directly. We had a little conversation with him on Monday evening, after his meeting, and agreed to meet at ten a. m. the next day for the purpose of considering the matter. We met according to agreement, and when Elder Scovil discovered that he must do something or back clear out he accepted the challenge, in a general way, but would not come to terms on propositions nor time of holding debate. After arranging for a series of meetings in the Union Church, to begin the next Sunday, I returned home.

Saturday, May 3d, found me in Davis City again; and I remained till yesterday afternoon. During these ten days eleven preaching meetings were held with very good results. Two of these appointments were filled by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, and one by Bro. Z. H. Gurley. On last Sunday, at the close of our afternoon preaching service, three were baptized, (two men and one woman), persons of good repute, and who, as we have good reasons to believe, are in real earnest. Bro. Z. H. Gurley officiated.

Elder Scovil utterly failed to do as he agreed; but whenever there was an opportunity he indulged in a bitter and personal attack. He has made many enemies at Davis City, while, through the blessing of God, we have made many friends. The good seed has found place in many hearts, and the Saints feel encouraged to move on in the divine life. May the follies of the past never more be repeated in Davis City; but love, peace, wisdom and Godly zeal, abide with the household of faith. Branch officers should not allow any false delicacy, or fear, to keep them on back ground, in a state of silence, while the most dangerous elements in the branch take the lead, and work destruction to the cause. Brethren, can you take this course, and at the same time feel that you are striving to please God and promote the best interests of his work committed to your trust? I am sure I felt as well in spirit, while laboring at Davis City, as though I had been a thousand miles from home; and I had what was clear and abundant evidence to me, that God desired that I should tarry there for a season, and cast in my mite. Next Saturday, I go to Creston.

Yours in gospel bonds,
JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

CLINTON, Iowa, May 10th, 1884.

Joseph:—You will see by this that I am at Clinton. Am stopping with Bro. Warren Turner, by whose kindness I am well cared for. I arrived here Wednesday of this week; and in the evening attended prayer meeting, and spoke to the Saints with good liberty, and was much edified in hearing them speak and give in their testimony in confirmation of the great truths revealed in the gospel. From what I learn, the Church here, in charge of Elder Warren Turner, is in a healthy and prosperous condition. Brother Turner is a good laborer in the cause. Two applications are in for baptism for next Sunday, after services at the hall. One of the applicants is the young wife of Bro. Harry Briggs, lately married. The other applicant is a colored brother, who has been attending the Latter Day Saints' meetings at Clinton for some time. I remember him while preaching several discourses last summer in this place, since which time quite a number have been added to the Church. By request of the Saints here I am to occupy next Sunday in the forenoon, and evenings of Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Shall then expect to pursue my journey for River Sioux, by the way of Rock Island and Davenport, hoping to visit Lamoni, Keokuk, and some other places promised, if health is spared, before returning home. Respects to all,

WM. B. SMITH.

CAMERON, Missouri,
April 30th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Whereas several of the brethren when at last conference, Stewartville Mo., desired me to write again for your columns the last testimony of Martin Harris, Sen., respecting the divine origin and coming forth of the Book of Mormon; I now again state: That on the 5th day of July, 1875, I visited him at Clarkston, Cache county, Utah Territory, and as it was expected that he would not recover from his sickness, I asked him several questions concerning the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, &c. 1st. Can you still testify of seeing the angel of God and the plates the Book of Mormon was translated from. His answer was, "Yes, I can; for I saw the angel come down from heaven; and he laid the plates before me, and I saw them; and I also heard the voice of God from heaven, commanding me to bear record of the things that I saw, and what is written of the three witnesses in the fore part of the Book of Mormon is true, and I dare not deny it, lest the power of God should consume me." He also said, "I know not why the Lord has permitted me to live so long, only to testify of the truth of the Book of Mormon; and I now tell you these things, that it might be told to others." He also said, "I was Joseph Smith's scribe, and wrote for him a great deal; for he was such a poor writer, and could not even draw up a note of hand as his education was so limited. I also wrote for him about one third of the first part of the translation of the plates as he interpreted them by the Urim and Thummim. And I paid the printer about three thousand dollars for the first edition of the Book of Mormon."

And whereas some parties have said that the said Martin Harris, Sen., denied his testimony as recorded in the said Book of Mormon, on his death-bed, I felt it a duty when I first heard of the report, on the 13th inst., at Stewartville, Mo., to go before a Justice of the Peace, and make an affidavit to the contrary, which I did on the 14th inst., to confute such a false statement, and defend the man in his dying moments, and in the integrity of his soul, testifying to the last, to what he had seen, heard, and knew to be true.

Now in relation to the nature of the late Martin Harris's talk to me on his death bed, is it presumable that he, prior to that time, ever denied his testimony as recorded? I think not. Mark his language. "I dare not deny it, lest the power of God should consume me." Again: "I do not know why the Lord has permitted me to live so long, only to testify of the truth of the Book of Mormon." I also asked him about the doctrine of polygamy. He said: "Polygamy was not a doctrine of the Church in Joseph Smith's day. It is a doctrine of Brigham young." My reason for speaking to him on this matter was, he had told quite a few who had visited him and talked with him on that doctrine, that it was not a doctrine of the Church; and that it was wrong. Such talk from one who had been so well acquainted with the early history of the church, had caused quite a dispute among the people on that doctrine; hence I concluded I also would have a talk with him on that subject, and the result was as before stated. But I did not at that time, however, believe that he was telling me the truth on that point. But subsequently to my great surprise, through a careful investigation of the law of marriage as ordained by God, I found he told me the truth in that part of his testimony also. Hence, I made an affidavit to that part of his statement to me also, at the same time and place as above written, in order that I might do justice to one of the anointed and chosen of the Lord, who died sealing his testimony with his blood; that he told the truth, and proclaimed also that polygamy was a false and corrupt doctrine.

Yours truly,
SIMON SMITH.

GRIMES, Polk Co., Iowa,
April 30th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I wish to bear my testimony to this latter day work. I know it is the work of God, and I feel so thankful to my heavenly Father that he has spared my life to hear his glorious gospel preached in its purity, and has opened my eyes and heart to receive the truth. It was a year the thirtieth of January since myself and husband were baptized into the Church of Christ. We were baptized by brother W. C. Nirk, and confirmed by Brn. W. C. Nirk and Joseph Knox. I have never regretted it. We would be glad to have some Elder come to see us.

Praying for the children of God, I remain your sister in the one faith, JENNIE DAY.

CAMERON, Mo., May 13th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Sister Flora Abbott, living near Coburg, Montgomery county, Iowa, wishes to know which branch she is the nearest to. She desires some of the Elders of that part, or of the traveling ministry, to visit her. She was baptized here, and has moved into that part of the country since, and desires to meet with the Saints.

I have been preaching all that I could since Conference, and can say that I feel much better than I did; and have had good liberty in declaring the word. I am busily engaged making arrangements to start to Texas as appointed, and will be off in a few days if nothing happens.

Love to all.

W. T. BOZARTH.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri,

May 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish to inform through the Herald, those who have written me, concerning the place advertized in the Herald, that I have disposed of it. I have bought a couple of lots, in the "South Side Addition" in Independence, and purpose to build a house, immediately and desire to rent it, while absent on the mission appointed me: Providing that I can find a small family of careful persons, who will agree to keep it for two or three years. The lots are 60 feet wide, and 288 feet deep each, and will furnish ground enough to raise all the vegetables, &c., that such a family would need. There are a number of lots there for sale, beautifully located, and ranging from 150 to 250 dollars apiece. A number of Saints have purchased lots there. Lots in the center of the city range from 500 to 1000 dollars and more, and most of them much smaller.

I am not pecuniarily interested in the sale of the lots referred to above, but mention the fact for the information of such Saints as may contemplate moving to this vicinity. There is a host of good, faithful Saints here, but no one need expect to find here exemption from trials of faith, patience and confidence; neither that they can live without labor, or get a home without paying for it, and at no very low figures. All who come here will be expected to "paddle their own canoe" in temporal things, and to stand upon their personal knowledge of the work, and to live by faith, and not by sight. This will be Zion to those who are Zion, and to no others. The promise of "escape" to those who "watch and pray always" will apply here as well as elsewhere, and those who do not, will not expect to be delivered from "the hour of temptation (or trial) that is coming upon all them who dwell upon the face of the whole earth." A radical change will need to be wrought in the character of many here and elsewhere, before they can be prepared to dwell in the "New Jerusalem" for according to John the Revelator, "There shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."

I expect that Bro. Kelley will be ready for the work appointed him. Bro. Alexander and myself in a couple of weeks or sooner, and as soon as completed I expect to start on the mission appointed—via Lamoni—and probably Salt Lake City. We will have to go by sailing vessel from San Francisco. The distance to Papiete, Tahiti, is nearly 6000 miles, and but little if any land to be seen on the way. Doubtless it will be a long, wearisome journey. I hope that the Saints will not forget us in their prayers in relation to the mission, and the mission itself. We want to leave San Francisco by 1st of August,—or if we miss the vessel going then, we will have to wait till 1st of September.

Your brother in Christ,

T. W. SMITH.

SARACUSE, Meigs Co., Ohio,

May 7th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—In the Herald of April 5th, 1884, I made an appeal to the Saints for aid to pay off a debt of one hundred and fifty dollars that was hanging on the church. Besides losing all the books that belonged to the branch, we lost the books that belonged to our Sunday School; and worst of all, we lost our work; and since that time we have not had a day's work, and will not until fall, and we had no work for two months before the flood. Churches of other faiths around us have received from one hundred to one thousand dollars from their churches. We ask the branches of the church which can, to help us to pay off this debt. If we had our work we would not ask for this. We do not ask for five or ten dollars from you, but a small collection of five to twenty-five cents in your branches will do the work. We worked hard to build this church, and by to-day if it had not been for the flood we would have every dollar of it paid. This is the first Latter Day Saints' Church built in southern Ohio; and this property is worth near one thousand dollars; and the burden has been on the shoulders of the few in the building of this church.

We return our thanks to the following brethren and sisters for money and books received. Sr. Lydia Jones, of Mansfield Valley, Pa., $2.00. Bro. L. R. Devore, of Limerick, Jackson Co., Ohio, $1.00. Sr. Ella Devore, of Limerick, Jackson Co., Ohio, $1.00. Sr. H. B. Emerson, of New Richmond, Ohio, one Hymn Book. Bro. Abraham Hendrickson, of Calamus, Iowa, for one Voice of Warning, one Doctrine and Covenants, and one Hymn Book. God bless you.

THOMAS MATTHEWS.

CLEAR WATER, Nebraska,

May 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—You requested me to examine the Journal of Lyman Wight, my grand father, and find any testimony I could touching a prediction of Joseph Smith that the church should go to the Rocky Mountains. I have not had much time for examination, but I find a letter written to Wm. Smith from Zodiac, Texas, July 26th, 1849, in which the subject is referred to. I will make extract from it and you can draw your own conclusions. I may find more in the future. This is as follows:

"I ask, Bro. William, what could you and I have done towards building a temple in Jackson county, had we gone to Salt Lake Valley, (the land of heath)? Joseph in his rejoinder to Clay for only wanting them to go there, heaped upon him the denunciations of the most insignificant epithets that could be heaped upon a man's head.

What then might one expect who has carried those anticipations into participation but the most severe anathemas of him who sleeps for a glorious resurrection?

He (Joseph) said that it would cost at least four millions of dollars to transport the church across the mountains. It will then cost four millions to transport them back again. This would be eight millions of dollars.

I ask when will this small valley, with its hot and cold lava boiling up from the bowels of hell, or some more fatal abode of those demon spirits, who have been buried beneath the surface for their damnable practices among the Nephites in early days, and now mingled with the more innocent blood of those who have fallen victims to the damnable inquisition of the Brighamites, whose king and commander is of the pure lineage of Gadianon, who made his abode for himself and followers in places where it might be considered a haven of rest for the abode of this damnable sink of iniquity. When I say will this most damnable of all places be worth eight millions of dollars, and redound to the happiness of the Saints, and minister to the building of the temple of God in Jackson county?"

The foregoing is strong language, but expresses the opinion of Lyman Wight in regard to Salt Lake; also his understanding of Joseph's teaching upon this point.

Yours in haste,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

PLAINVILLE, Massachusetts,

May 7th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—On the first day of February, 1884, seven of the sisters belonging to the Plainville Branch met at my house, and organized a society to be known as the Ladies Sewing Circle. Our object is to obtain money to pay the debt incurred in building our chapel. Sr. Lizzie Glidden was chosen president, Sr. Hattie Staples vice-president, and Sr. Carrie Coombs secretary and treasurer.

We have eleven dollars and sixty-eight cents in the treasury. Have one bed quilt worth five dollars, besides materials for making a number of others. We feel that we have done very well, much better than we expected, as business is very dull and money is scarce; and of course we can not dispose of our quilts as readily as we can when business is brisk. Our desire is that we may work together with our hands as unitedly as we do with our hearts, and that we may ever observe and keep the golden rule.

CARRIE COOMBS.

WAUKON, Allamakee Co., Iowa,

May 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I was baptized in November last, 10th day, by Elder R. Etzenhouser. My wife was also baptized same time. Bro. I N. White came to our place in company with Bro. Etzenhouser. We enjoyed ourselves while they were here. It grieved us very much to part with them, and to think they were not received here, but it appeared that the Lord had work to be done elsewhere. I have ever been happy since I obeyed the gospel. I feel altogether changed. I was since I was old enough to understand what was taught me, trying to find the true Church of God; but ever failed till about two or three years ago. I never made up my mind to unite with the Latter Day Saints until about six months before I was baptized. I wished to see some sign or miracle performed; but I read in the Bible that the signs would follow them that believe. I found it so. I was born with a rupture. I could not do any kind of work that was straining without having a truss on. I was baptized with my truss on. That evening I took it off. I put it on again the next morning and it hurt me so I took it off again. I did not wear it again for about a week, when one day I was going after a load of hay I put it on again, fearing a little to go away without it. But it hurt me all the time I was gone from home. When I came home I took it off again, and have not had it on since. That is about six months ago, and I am working in an elevator where I have to shoulder sacks filled with clover seed, and carry them into another room, and pile them up into piles about seven or eight sacks deep. That is very straining. I also have other kinds of work to do. I never feel any signs of the old complaint. May those who read this letter and testimony, pray for the writer, that he may be ever true and faithful in the cause of Christ. Our love to all the Saints. We remain your brother and sister in the one faith,

W. B. & ABBIE C. FREEMAN.

MUSKOGEE, Indian Territory,
April 12th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I desire to bear my testimony to this work, for I know it is true. I rejoice in this gospel. It makes my heart glad to read in the Herald the letters from the different parts, of the spread of the gospel. My daily prayer is, that this work will roll on, till it fills the whole earth. It is over forty years since I embraced this gospel. I have had many testimonies of the truth of this work. Ever praying for the building up of the kingdom of God; asking the prayers of my brethren and sisters, that I may be faithful to the end.

Your sister in the gospel,
EMILY SHUMWAY.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

May 8th.—The revolutionists have won a brilliant victory, in the late elections at Paris, France. The enormous numerical increase of the Socialists, and their unexpected consistency and solidity and political unity, now constitute a stormy petrel not only for France, but for Europe. The ministerial papers seem to feel that their candle is now burning at both ends; the Bonapartists utter a sort of snarl of discontent like the traditional dog in the manger, the Royalists a "Tout va bien," and the Revolutionists already chant their pean of victory.

Chinese advices state that Li Hung Chang has been invested with full powers on the Annam question. Parliamentary negotiations regarding Tonquin began at Tien Tsin.

A detachment of Egyptian infantry and cavalry will be dispatched immediately to reinforce Korosko and Dongola. The natives there are uneasy at the weakness of the garrisons.

The elections today for Senators, so far as known, resulted in favor of the Conservatives.

The authorities have stopped finally the publication of the Republican paper, El Palenque.

A Mormon missionary has been sentenced to a month's imprisonment at Vienna, Austria.

Judah P. Benjamin, ex confederate secretary of state, died at Paris, France, last Wednesday.

Small-pox has made its appearance at Point Edward, Ont. One man has died, and two others have been attacked.

May 9th.—Gen. Gordon refuses to accept escape from Khartoum through bribery of the Soudanese. Subscriptions for this purpose have therefore been abandoned.

Italy is beginning to assert her right to interfere in the management of Egyptian affairs, and is supposed by Austria and Germany, who think Italy should have an equal influence with France in the affairs of the land of the Pharaohs.

The Governor of Bagdad, in Asiatic, Turkey, opposes a British armed gunboat being sent to the British Consul at that place. The Porte complains that the Sepoy guard at Bagdad is larger than is allowed. Count Corti, the Italian Ambassador, has addressed an energetic note to the Porte concerning the boracite mines. Earl Dufferin supports Count Corti.

The proposition by Prime-Minister Chang to the Chinese Empress, urging peace with France, is condemned by the Council.

May 10th.—It is reported that an Anglo-Egyptian expedition for the relief of Gen. Gordon will start for Khartoum about the middle of July.

Notwithstanding the successes of the Conservative Monarchist party in the recent elections in Spain, it is thought that the revolutionary spirit is spreading. This is particularly the case in Northern Spain, where the conduct of Captain-General Quesada has given great offense to the soldiery and the people, who have much sympathy with each other.

It has been developed in the preliminary examination of Daly and Egan, the alleged dynamiters, at Birmingham, Eng., that they and their friends considered the parliamentary policy of Parnell and Healy entirely too tame, and that Daly, who was a fierce revolutionist, in speech at least, was considered far superior to Parnell as a leader, and was to be set up against him, in the time coming. Daly and Egan were committed for trial.

In the trials of the alleged Invincibles in Sligo, Ireland, the testimony of the informer Moran has completely broken down. It has been proved that Fitzgerald, the principal prisoner, and Sheridan, the alleged "No. 1" of the Invincible organization, have been deadly enemies, so there could have been no community of action between the two.

Serious riots occurred at Quincy, Ill., growing out of the strike of the union stove-molders there and the attempt of the manufacturers to supply their places with non-union men. This morning when the latter were going to work they were attacked by the unionists, who fired revolvers. One of the non-unionists was shot through the hand. The driver of the wagon in which he rode was also wounded by a pistol-ball. The police-force of the city is small—not sufficient for the protection of the foundries, some of which have shut down entirely. The situation is critical.

May 11th.—The Italian Government supports France's demand that, in the forthcoming conference on Egyptian affairs, the question of international control shall be freely discussed.

Fights occur daily in Alexandria and Cairo between English soldiers and the natives. In a fight outside Alexandria Friday between Britishers and Bedonius several Arabs were killed.

Hostilities have been renewed in Tonquin between the French and the Annamite and Chinese pirates. Saturday there was a four hour fight, in which the French were finally the victors. They lost five men, and the commander was wounded.

Schahsewan's band of Persian nomads have plundered several villages on the right bank of the Kurd. Wandering tribes have also attacked the Government surveyors at Maganew Steppe and forced them to stop work. The nomads have also been bold enough to attack Cossack pickets. The Russian Commissary Department seem powerless to prevent these occasional raids.

Castro has positively left Key West, Fla., probably for Nassau, where he will be joined by the rest of the fillibusters now at Key West. This party include all that are at present ready to leave.

May 12.—A treaty of peace between France and China has been agreed on. The Pall Mall Gazette says the treaty cedes France more territory than she claimed, and that it will greatly strengthen Prime Minister Ferry's position in France, and in consequence he will be able to regain for France the position she once held in Egypt. It is stipulated that China will at once withdraw her troops from Tonquin.

Mr. Gladstone made one of his characteristically eloquent speeches in the British Parliament yesterday, opposing Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's proposition for a vote of censure on the Government on account of the Soudan policy. He denied that the Government had abandoned Gordon; every step taken had for one of its objects the safety of that gallant soldier. But Mr. Gladstone said the Opposition could not drive the Liberals to sanction a war of conquest in the Soudan. "The war which the Mahdi is waging," said Mr. Gladstone, "is a war for freedom." This statement was greeted with loud Liberal cheers. He denounced the Tory and Jingo charges against the Government as absurd and made in ignorance of the facts.

The inquiry in the case of P. N. Fitzgerald and eleven others charged with being Invincibles and with the murder of landlords and others, was resumed to-day at Tubbercurry, County Sligo, Ireland. Casey, who was arrested Tuesday last on the strength of the testimony of the informer Moran, was identified as acting drillmaster of the Fenian Society. Moran was again examined.

The Mudir of Dongola telegraphs that the situation is alarming; the inhabitants are in a panic; there are only four companies of Egyptian regulars and two hundred Bazouks are in the city. The wires beyond Korosko are cut. No more fugitives will be able to cross the desert. It is reported that the African expedition under Joseph Thompson has reached Uganda, in the region ruled by King Mtesa. It is believed Thompson's presence at Uganda will increase Gen. Gordon's chances for safety in case he shall be compelled to try to escape from Khartoum by going to the southward.

In the Commons yesterday George Anderson, an advanced Liberal, gave notice that he should shortly make a motion to condemn the existence of the House of Lords. The announcement was received with great hilarity.

May 14th.—In the attack upon the friendly tribes near Tamaneib, Osman Digma and men killed twenty-one of the friendly Arabs, took four women prisoners, and captured many cattle. Of the rebels only five were killed. The tribes are able to muster 6,000 men. They are determined to avenge the death of their comrades and recover the women. England has forbidden the sending of Egyptian troops only to Wady Halfa. The Mudir of Dongola continues to ask for reinforcements. The telegraph line is cut beyond Debbah, a short distance south of Dongola.

In the preliminary trial of the Invincible prisoners at Sligo, Ireland, policemen gave evidence corroborating the testimony of the informer.

A war of passenger rates has begun, affecting all roads between Denver and New York and intermediate points. Railway tickets from Denver to Chicago were selling in the streets of the former city yesterday at $7, to St. Louis at $5, and to New York at $25.

Mrs. Cynthia Francis, of Blooming Grove, Wis., died today, the 101st anniversary of her birth. Her mental faculties remained unimpaired to the last, and a year ago today she walked several miles. She was born in Massachusetts, and had been a widow for seventy years.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

A vein of good coal, thirty-seven inches thick, at a depth of six hundred and eighty-five feet from the surface, has been discovered at Pana, Illinois.

John F. Smyth, of Albany, N. Y., has failed. His liabilities are placed at $50,000.

Reports of the wheat crop from various parts of Michigan indicate that in the northern counties it will be 87 per cent of an average and in the southern tier about 97 per cent. Clover is rather backward, and will average 90 per cent. Apples will be about the same, while peaches will scarcely exceed half of a full crop.

Reports from various parts of Dakota and Minnesota regarding the condition of the spring-wheat crop are very encouraging. There is an increased acreage, and from present appearances there will be a very abundant harvest. The oat crop is also looking well.

The official estimate of the Illinois winter wheat crop, is that it will fall below the average.

Leitch, Patten & Co., sugar brokers at Greenock, Scotland, have suspended. The liabilities are £70,000

The Northwestern Manufacturing & Car Company, of Stillwater, Minn., of which United States Senator D. M. Sabin is President, has suspended and a Receiver has been appointed. The capital stock of the company is $5,000,000, of which $4,000,000 have been paid in. Nine hundred men, of whom 300 were convicts, were employed by the concern. The cause of the suspension, it is said, was the loss of a large amount in Wall street (New York) speculation.

Grant and Ward, stock brokers of New York City, and the Marine National Bank of the same place, have failed. The liabilities of the bank are stated at $6,594,000. Grant & Ward's liabilities are uncertain, but are up in the millions.

The wheat in Kansas is reported as looking exceptionally well, and promising a large yield. They had had but one day up to April 11th, warm enough to sprout corn. Planting corn in many sections of the country has been greatly retarded by rains; but the general situation is fairly good.

The Mark Lane Express in its review of the British grain trade for the week, says: Trade weakened under the influence of sunshine. Wheat was dull, owing to the heavy foreign supply. Values are against sellers. Flour is weaker. Maize is 6 pence and 1 shilling dearer and scarce. The off-coast market is dull and supplies are liberal. There were twenty arrivals, five cargoes sold, six withdrawn, six remained. For cargoes on passage and for shipment values are nominal. Sales of English wheat the last week, 70,588 quarters, at 38 shillings 2 pence, against 67,430 quarters at 43 shillings the corresponding period last year.

The aggregate of the clearances of the twenty-seven leading clearing-houses of the United States last week showed an increase of 89 per cent over the corresponding week of last year. The increase outside of New York aggregated 49 per cent.

Two more concerns at Stillwater, Minn., were placed in the hands of Receivers May 13: The Union Transfer Company, owing $192,000; and Seymour, Sabin & Co., liabilities not known. These suspensions are caused by the failure of the car company.

Reports promise a large fruit yield in Illinois; cereals are also doing well. Small grain in Iowa promises well, and a large acreage of oats has been sown.

The estimated exportation of wheat from South Australia for 1884 will be 11,000,000 bushels. There have been splendid rains throughout the country.

The total exports of gold from the United States since January have amounted to $35,925,497.

The lumber laborers in two of the principal mills at Grand Haven, Mich., have struck for an advance in wages from $1.50 to $1.75 per day. One of the mills shut down, but the proprietors of the other refused to do so, and found plenty of men at $1.50. They refused to be intimidated. A third mill was closed by the strikers. An attempt was made to burn the lumber-yard connected with Culler and Savidge's mill, which first shut down.

Matters on 'Change in New York City, April 14th, were thoroughly upset. Bank and stock failures were announced, and most of the board members, who from their newness had never seen anything of the kind before, were under the impression that the financial world had come to an end. Stock-house failures were first in order, and next came the suspension of the Metropolitan Bank and the run upon the Phoenix. Early in the day the failure of O. M. Bogart & Co., Hatch & Foote, J. C. Williams, Goff & Randall, and Nelson Robertson. Stock Exchange houses were announced, and later on that of Hotchkiss & Burnham and Donnell, Lawson & Simpson, the latter an important concern that largely represents Western and South-western banking interests. The Nelson Robertson failure is directly attributable to the collapse of the Metropolitan Bank, the house being more or less mixed up with the ragtag-and-bobtail speculations in the Seney South-western system of railroads. The Bogart suspension was a veritable surprise, the house being considered highly conservative and not likely to get entangled in speculative ventures. The clearing house bank of the City have suspended legal tender payments; but they continue to pay in a circulating medium invented for the occasion, that is, the certificates of deposit are endorsed when presented, and will be taken by merchants in lieu of legal-tender notes. Stocks fluctuated greatly during the day, and closed three and a half to four per cent lower than they were in the morning.

The Atlantic Bank of Brooklyn closed its doors on account of the panic, and the suspension of the Metropolitan of New York.

At Baltimore, Md., there was intense excitement on account of the New York panic. Local interests were entirely neglected.

At Boston, Mass., much excitement prevailed, but no failures occurred.

The State Savings Bank, of St. Joseph, Mo., closed its doors, with $1,900,000 in deposits on hands.

Rice & Whiting, bankers and brokers, of Worcester, Mass., failed on account of the suspension of the Northwestern Manufacturing and Car Company.

Gee, Wah & Co., of Portland, Oregon, a Chinese firm, failed for $50,000. Quite a panic ensued, as quite a number of other important Chinese firms are involved in this failure.

A clothing merchant, of Mattoon, Ill., failed for $13,000.

E. W. Traver & Co., manufacturers of operating mills at St. Louis and Ithaca, Mich., failed for $15,000. A St. Louis, Mo., firm of auctioneers failed for $20,500.

In reference to the condition of the banks of the country at large, the Controller at Washington says that they seem to be in an exceptionally strong condition, most of them carrying unusually large reserves. The condition of affairs is entirely different from that of 1873; he does not think a general panic possible.

There was one small failure upon the Stock Exchange of London, Eng., April 14. The panic in New York caused much excitement on the street after the exchange closed. Louisville & Nashville securities have fallen 9 points. Other leading American railway stocks have fallen from 2 to 5 points.

The stock market at Montreal is steady.

The New York panic has created dismay at Austin, Texas.

May 15.—Two additional failures were announced in Wall street, New York, to-day. One produced but little disturbing effect, while the other aroused an extraordinary commotion. Until the unexpected suspension of Fisk & Hatch at 2:35 o'clock p. m. the situation in the street was encouraging. The stock market opened with a general advance on Wednesday's prices, and remained fairly steady throughout the day. The resumption of business at noon by the Metropolitan Bank helped to restore confidence, and the practical guarantee by the Clearing-House Association of the stability of all banks, exercised a very reassuring influence. The first exciting event in the Stock Exchange was the remarkable tumble in the price of the Bankers' & Merchants' Telegraph Company. Then the suspension of A. W. Dimock, President of the company, was announced.

At forty minutes past two o'clock, just as confidence was being entirely restored in the Stock Exchange, the president announced the failure of Fisk and Hatch, the most active member of which was the president of the Exchange. Consternation seized the brokers at once; and the confidence which seemed a few minutes before to be entirely restored, melted instantly away. The prices of stocks at the close of the day were perceptibly depreciated. The oil exchanges were also greatly affected. The produce market suffered a feverish depression also.

Depositors of savings banks are becoming alarmed, and runs upon those banks are beginning to be made.

The Tuna Valley Bank of Bradford, Pa., suspended on account of the failure of the Metropolitan of New York.

The Union Bank of Quincy, Ill., closed its doors this morning, posting a notice that "this bank will not open until further notice. Suspended on account of the failure of correspondents in New York."

The liabilities of Grant & Ward, according to a statement just completed by Receiver Davies, are $14,501,531, and the collateral held by creditors about $10,000,000.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

May 8th.—Loss by fire at Norwalk, Conn., $70,000.

Survivors of the State of Florida, wrecked by collision with the Ponema last week, thus relate their experience and sufferings.

James D. Bennett, of Lonton, Ont., said that at the time of the disaster he was in the surgeon's cabin, and had a very narrow escape from being crushed to death when the Ponema came crashing into the State of Florida amid ships with an awful crash. One of the crew of the Ponema went mad from exposure and want of water and died in the boat before the Captain and two others were picked up. The Captain awakened the passengers and told them they must take to the boats instantly, but it appears made no effort to devise a plan by which the passengers could get into the boats. At the time of the collision the Captain was in his cabin. He rushed on deck in his night-dress and assumed command. When the boats pushed away from the ship and the lunges preparatory to sinking took place the most heart-rending cries and appeals for help were heard until the final plunge. Mr. Bennett saw one boat hanging by one davit. He heard that it was not considered a safe boat, and the ropes were cut to hinder any one using it. Walter King, of Toronto, occupied the same cabin as Bennett, and when the ship was about going, down came to him and said: 'For God's sake, Bennett, stay by me, I am not able to swim.' Bennet and King got into one of the boats the lashings of which were cut at one end throwing the inmates into the sea. Thirty might have been saved but for this mishap. Only seven were picked up. All night long they could hear people groaning and struggling underneath the boat, and as many of those on top had lost friends, and one a brother, their feelings can be better imagined than described. Toward morning the noise ceased—the strugglers had succumbed. Those rescued broke through the bottom of the boat with oars and a horrible sight met their eyes. Eight bodies were floating there, while a man named Donaldson was still alive, although unconscious from the effects of the long imprisonment. Bennet says the conduct of the Captain of the City of Rome was shameful, as the steamer passed not more than half a mile from them, and might have easily hove to for a short time, and taken them all off the bark. Being asked to explain why so few passengers were saved, he said it was all their own fault. When it is remembered that within fifteen minutes of the vessel's collision the steamer went down it will be seen that the suddenness of the catastrophe prevented any being saved except those who kept their wits about them and leaped into the boats. He also says the Captain blew three whistles when the vessel was sinking, and, upon being asked the reason for this, said he was bidding those in the boats farewell, and that he wanted to show he was sticking to his vessel until the last. The boat capsized containing three Canadians—Edington, Bennett, and Bethune. Bennett was the only one saved. The crew cannot give any information beyond that already reported. Andrew N. Steele, surgeon, of Montreal, has made a statement similar to that of Bennett. He says King got back to the steamer and went down with her. The Stewart family, seven in number, lost on the State of Florida, were from Colchester, Ill. After several years' residence there they were returning to their old home in England.

Ten women were blown to pieces and two others wounded by an explosion of dynamite at Noble's factory in Ayrshire, Scotland.

A panic occurred in a chapel in Trieste, Aus., this morning, caused by an altar catching fire. Many people were injured.

May 9th.—More than half of Madison and Tensas Parishes, in Louisiana, are under water, and cattle are dying in great numbers from starvation and the stings of buffalo-gnats. Negroes are fleeing from the flooded regions.

About one o'clock today the boiler of engine No. 43 of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway exploded in the roundhouse of the Missouri Pacific, at Parsons, Kan., killing two men outright, wounding several others, and completely demolishing four sections of the roundhouse.

May 10th.—Loss by fire at Cleveland, O., paint works, $80,000. Chicago, Ill., $2,000. A man lit his pipe near a leak in a gasoline tube at Baltimore, Mass., the result was an explosion, and a $15,000 fire. Boston, Mass., $16,000. A ball of fire apparently eight inches in diameter issued from the switch-board in the Western Union office in Bangor, Me., and was followed by a low explosion. The brass plates, wires, cables, condensers, and wood-work were burned. All telegraphic communication was interrupted for two hours. The brass on the switch-board melted like wax, and the wood-work was burned. Loss by fire at Willingford, Conn., manufacturing works, $40,000. Ashland, Wis., Hotel depot, and other buildings. Moberly, Mo., rake and broom factory, $30,000.

May 11th.—Loss by fire at Breedsville, Mich., $12,000. Oconomowoc, Wis., $8,000. Near East Saginaw, Mich., $8,000.

For several miles at either side of Shreveport, La., the Red River has overflowed its banks, inundating plantations on both banks of the river. Several houses have been swept away. The damage done is very great. There was a rise of seven inches in the river last night.

May 12.—Loss by fire near Hedge's Station, Ky., tobacco barn, $12,000. Williamsburg, Ky., lumber mills, $60,000. New Orleans, La., $20,000.

The coal-laden barge Emma A. Mayes, of Bay City, Mich., foundered in Lake Superior last Saturday. She lies in about 300 feet of water. Loss, $15,000.

The most remarkable railway accident of the age happened near Paris, France. A freight train on an elevated track went off its rails and fell on a passenger train which was running on a lower level. The engineer of the latter train was killed and thirty-one passengers were wounded.

Near Connelisville, Pa., a freight train collided with a gravel train, killing fifteen men, and wounding eleven others. Several of the victims were not instantly killed, but being fastened under timbers of the wrecked cars, which were set on fire by the overturning of the stove, were burned to death before they could be rescued.

The southwestern portion of Jackson County, W. Va., was visited by a severe tornado and rain storm yesterday, which inflicted heavy damage to property of farmers living along the creek bottoms. Several dwellings and bridges and numerous barns are reported washed away and considerable injury done orchards and newly-planted fields. "ALL SPEAK THE SAME THING."

DEAR HERALD:—As one whose duty it is to preach the gospel to his fellow man, and to exhort or rebuke (as the case may call for) both saint and sinner, I am anxious to advocate that only which is in harmony with the word of God, and at the same time be as liberal as the teachings of Christ will permit; for while I believe that every man must give an account of himself, and must work out his own salvation, I still find that notice is taken, and certainly should be taken, of the views and teachings of those whose duty it is to teach sound and wholesome doctrine; and such views and theories as they present, will be more or less relied upon. I see nothing strange in this; for if what we profess is true, that God has set in the church these men in their respective places, for the work of the ministry, and for the edifying of the Body of Christ, until we all come in the unity of the faith, and to prevent the Saints from being carried hither and thither by every wind of doctrine, it is natural that the church should look to these men as set to feed the flock, (as Paul says), and expect them to be in possession of wisdom and knowledge from above to teach sound doctrine that can not be gainsaid.

The promise of being taught from above, as the Book of Doctrine and Covenants states, would seem to be good reason for such an expectation. Therefore, when it is found that the Elders differ, and sometimes widely, in their views and theories, so much so that it leads to warm arguments, which at times end with unpleasant feelings, it leads generally to a loss of confidence in some of those brethren; and the church, like the Elders, becomes divided, just like other denominations, and unbelief and littleness of faith creep in.

Right here it will be said, no one should build his faith upon any man. This is true in one sense; we must not go it blind, or advocate the doctrine of the Brighamites: "Do what the priesthood tells you, they are responsible, not you." That would be running to the extreme, and man would be a mere tool in the hands of another. But shall we go to the other extreme, with the claim we hold, and say we have Apostles and Prophets, and Elders in the church, but we have no particular confidence in them. We accept whatever meets our views, nothing further. They are liable to err as much as any one else. Would not a very proper answer be, "How much better off are you than other churches?" and we in making an honest reply would have to say, "Not any." I have heard this assertion made time and again, in regard to men holding even the most responsible offices in the church: "They are just as liable to be mistaken as you or I."

My brethren, I differ from you on that point. I believe when God calls any one to a certain position in his church that he gives that man wisdom and knowledge according to his calling, so long as he remains faithful in that calling. It does not necessarily follow that one not occupying such a position will be in possession of the same degree of knowledge and wisdom, because it is not required of him. If all members of the body possessed the same gifts, where would be a well organized body. My understanding in regard to the officiating members of the church is this: He who is called to preach would need to be in possession of, and should be expected to have a greater gift, more of the power of the Spirit to quicken his memory, and present the word to his mind at the right time and place, than the one who is not called to preach; not that he is any better, but because he is called to perform that which the other is not, and more is expected and demanded of him. Again, he who is called to preside, (if the will of the Lord has been sought for, and it should be), if the Holy Ghost has made him an overseer, it would reasonably be expected that he would be able to take the lead in counsel and advice among the Saints over whom he is presiding, not because he is any better than any of his brethren, but because there is a responsibility resting upon him which is not placed on them, which calls for a greater degree of wisdom.

The twelve special witnesses, although Elders, and called to preach like other Elders in the church, have a responsibility and duty resting upon them, which the other Elders have not; and it would reasonably be expected that a greater power of the Spirit would be given them to enable them to be pillars in the church, (so to speak), by watching and guarding against strange and erroneous doctrines and theories; which occasionally will creep into the church, and it would not be improper for the Saints to expect that the Lord would work with them, confirming the words with signs following as of old, to a greater degree than other Elders in the church. I fully believe that the Twelve and the Presidency should be looked to as having wisdom and knowledge to guide the ship, and keep it from running against snags; that their voices may be heard frequently and kindly, but firmly proclaiming against men's theories, whenever they conflict with the word of God, without fear of influencing any one's mind; a danger, (so called), which I have frequently heard brethren allude to. I wonder if the Apostles of old had any fear of influencing the minds of the Saints. So far as I am able to judge, they sought to do so. Just fancy a congregation of saints in Paul's day, debating some question, or some point of doctrine with Paul in their midst, and refusing to hear his views in the matter, for fear that he might influence some one. Do you think Paul would have held his peace? From what I can learn from his epistles, I believe he would have boldly spoken, either his mind or the mind of the Lord, as he found it presented to him. But some will say Paul was not perfect, but liable to err as well as others. True, but however that may have been, there were perhaps few, if any, in his day, and the same is true now, who were favored of God with visions and revelations as was Paul, which certainly proves that God was pleased with his labors.

I am familiar with the broad claim of every man having a right to his own views and to speak them. While I believe in that to a certain degree, I can not help thinking that their right to differ, is more a thing to be lamented than boasted of. I suppose I would have a right to advance some theory of my own, and stick to it, whether it was strictly in harmony with the word of God or not, and take the consequences. But while I fully believe in the freedom of thought, it can not be denied, that the Scriptures teach unity of faith as something highly essential; and when these various views spring up among us, and are heard and read by both members and outsiders, it is seen plainly that we are led and guided much in the same way, and by the same spirit, as other religious bodies. The words of our Savior are: "Except ye are one ye are not mine." Shall we take the responsibility of saying that only means in certain things? Paul did not so understand it, when he urged the brethren to speak all the same thing, and to have no divisions among them; but to be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment. If two differ in opinion on any point, is there not a division? If one argues against another, are they both of the same mind? If we vary in our judgment on certain matters, can it be said that we are of the same judgment, and can we be considered one as the Savior commands?

But some will say, We may be one on all essential points. What are those points, please? If two men were engaged in a hot argument, having worked themselves up to fever heat, especially the one who was losing ground, the most essential thing, in order to their peace and friendship, would be oneness of mind on that subject. Even if it is possible for men to keep cool in an argument, the force and influence of such an argument is bound to have a damaging effect upon those who hear or read it, and it leads to unfriendly feelings and division in the church, as well as proving at the same time, the absence of the Spirit of God in at least one of them. Its mission being to guide into all truth, it could not guide two in opposite directions. For instance, it would not guide one brother to believe that God sends every calamity, and another that the devil sends every calamity. These two theories are too opposite, to claim that the Spirit teaches both of them; and I am sorry to say that I find others just as opposite, and which I believe need to be spoken for or against, in good clear language, sound words that can not be gainsaid, and as I have already stated my belief that those who are placed in the most responsible places, are the ones first expected to notice these things, I would very much like to hear their opinion in a good, forcible way, such as might be expected the Spirit of God would dictate.

The thoughts that seem to occupy many minds at the present time, are how few of the things of this world a saint need deny himself of, or how much he may indulge in, and still claim his citizenship in the kingdom of God. Some think self-denials should be made; and if they are evils which they never indulged in, they are willing they should be put down as things not commendable in a saint; but if they chance to be things that they themselves hanker after, then they are apt to think they are harmless, and things that should not be spoken against. For instance: A man has been in the habit of using coffee and tea all his life; but has not, for some reason or other, got into the habit of using tobacco; he is apt to think that weed a most filthy and hurtful article, (in which he is right), but on the other hand he thinks coffee and tea harmless beverages, no matter if he takes his as strong as poison. So on according to the habits men have formed in regard to the pleasures and amusements of the world. The saints differ widely, and this is a subject I wish to touch upon.

Some think there is no harm in visiting what they call a good, moral play on the stage, or even a circus, or it is only the wild beasts they care about seeing. Others will go a little further, and think a good minstrel troop well worth seeing, so they can get a good chance to laugh. Others a social dance, especially if it is coupled to a church festival, that has been opened with prayer. There could not be any harm in it. But some even go further, and think there is no harm in going to a public ball occasionally. Of course all kinds of characters go to these places, from the professors of religion down to the blasphemer and infidel; and so they do to church festivals. But he need have nothing to do with them. He can just mind his own little business, and let them do the same. So we might go on, for it is hard to tell where to stop, or draw a line, if we first step over. The plea that is advanced to justify these things is, that the mind needs a change, needs a rest from constant religious thought, (so to speak), and must have something to recuperate upon; and as we live in a pleasure-loving age, a time when everything is studied up that can please, and satisfy the craving of the natural man, our attention is called thereto; and when this worldly pressure is brought to bear upon us, we then begin to reason from a natural standpoint, and consider ourselves justified in taking what we call a little rest, in order to enable us to pursue our Christian duties more vigorously afterwards, you know.

I must say right here, however, that it does sound a little strange to advocate the necessity of the church seeking relief when weary, among the world. If it was the reverse, it would sound better.

It is thought by many that almost any kind of reading matter is not only harmless; but instructive; and the much abused portion of scripture in Doctrine and Covenants is quoted in defense. "We are commanded to read all good books;" and as we differ in judgment about good books, or reading matter, so we differ in selection, consequently we find in some of the Saints' houses all kinds of reading matter, from the dime novel, up to what is called a first class novel, (whatever that is). This brings to my mind an article in the Hope, headed, "Make your own sunshine." I do not know who is the author of it; but frankly acknowledge my surprise in hearing recommended by Saints, that in the hour of gloom, or depression of spirit, to seek refuge in novel reading. It is strange that we do not find one instance in the New Testament scriptures, nor in latter day scriptures where such means are recommended. James says, "Is any one afflicted, let him pray." But perhaps there were no novels in his day. But what could be more consistent, or reasonable for a saint, (with the faith we profess to have in God), than to adopt that plan, as the surest and most effectual cure for despondency and depression of spirit. A novel, I understand is fiction, mostly so at least. The production of some one's mind. Who is that somebody? One that is born again, upon whom the the Holy Spirit has been sealed, to guide his thoughts, and bring matter to his mind fit for the instruction of a child of God? Not by any means. They are mostly, if not all, individuals who would reject the gospel, perhaps ridicule you for obeying it. Yet it is thought commendable for the child of God, when the cross seems heavy, and gloom overshadows him, to come to these men and women of the world, and cast his burden at their feet, (as it were), and seek relief. It seems to me I can imagine how these celebrated persons would chuckle to themselves, if they stopped to think of it, and say, "You Mormons make loud professions about your heavenly gifts and blessings, and power of prayer, but you have to come to me once in awhile, when you are worn out, to get resuscitated. Ridiculous as this sounds, it is about the truth.

But it is claimed by some, that it is next to impossible for the (especially the young) Saints, to live entirely cut off from the world and its pleasures; and there seems to be a certain pity reaching out for them. There may have been a mistake in the teachings of the gospel, or a portion left out, which would make some exception; but there certainly seems to be no provision made for this. It may have been overlooked. If not, then it was evidently intended that the blessings obtainable by obedience to the gospel, would repay for all self-denial and sacrifice, and that the Savior meant what he said, when he declared, "If any one will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross, and follow me." He makes no distinction between young and old, evidently thinking, that he who enters into the work with his whole soul, as long as he remains in that condition will find the yoke easy, and the burden light. I fail to find any thing in the teachings of Christ that will sustain the view, that a saint of God may take part in any of the amusements, or so called recreations of this world. He is expected to have no craving for them.

In every instance where the world and the people of God are spoken of, we find the warning both of former and latter days in the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, to be a separate people. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate," &c. "What communion hath light with darkness?" "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." "If any one love the world, the love of the Father is not in him," and so on. All this seems to call for a dividing line between the world and the church. And is it not a necessity for a child of God, in order to preserve the Spirit of God within him? If that which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God; if the carnal mind is enmity toward God; and if the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, but they are foolishness to him, then it would seem reasonable, too, that he who is spiritual, could not take part in the things which the natural man indulges in, and which are established to satisfy the cravings of a pleasure-loving world, without some loss to himself. When we consider that the difference between the things of God and the things of the world, is so great that friendship with the world is enmity with God, it does not seem possible to me, that a child of God and a child of the world, could seek the same enjoyments as food for the mind. I can see no reason, if the same means is required to make them both happy in their life, why they should not share with each other in the joys or sorrows in the hereafter. The fruits seem to show plainly, so far as I have observed. The brother or sister who devotes his time and mind to the work of God, and abstains from the amusements of the world, is the one that is found to be the most sound in faith, and is less overcome by trials and vexations. Such saints are the ones too, upon whom the Spirit seems to rest, and who show forth its fruits,—meekness, love, brotherly kindness, charity. They are seldom found to be burdened with others' faults, and are not continually in a stumbling condition, and seldom feel that it is much of a sacrifice to give up the world. On the other hand, when I have found one who advocates and takes part in the amusements and recreations of the world, I have found one who is generally tempted and tried. He sees wrong amongst his brethren nearly always. Is almost tempted to stay away from meetings altogether. Is weak in the faith, and has to be carried along, and kept up by cheering words, and encouragements of the firmer ones, or else he has gone so far as to have his mind entirely occupied with the things of this world, and does not care enough about the church to observe anything. Having once obtained a membership therein, he don't know but what he is just as good as any one. The fact that he should have been an earnest worker for it, and with it, in order to be recognized of God, does not present itself to his mind. If any one of the saints knows of a brother or sister who advocates or indulges in novel reading, theatre going, circuses, dances, or any other of the so-called harmless amusements of the world—and who at the same time is blessed with gifts of the gospel, and bears the fruits which the apostle of old calls the fruits of the Spirit, I want him to point such a saint out to me. It is the kind I have never met with yet, and would like to make his or her acquaintance.

Some, in fact many, admit that for some reason or other, the spiritual gifts are not so frequently enjoyed in the church now as in the early times of the church. There is a reason for this. Shall we say like the world, there is no longer need for them. Some brethren, perhaps, are somewhat of that opinion when they argue the shaky condition of members who have been converted under the influence of spiritual gifts. That is virtually saying that there is more harm than good coming from them, which in my mind is an insult to God, and a thought I would not harbor for a moment. Perhaps the fact that spiritual gifts are not appreciated, may be one reason why they are not in the church so fully as in earlier days. There is also every kind of disease entering in among us, and the gift of healing less frequently bestowed. We are visited with these evils and ills, like the world; and why should we not be, if we unite with them. There is evidently something needed. A return to our first love, when all that occupied our minds (aside from our daily labor) was the latter day work, might prove to be the most effectual means to bring the blessings of God among us in power again, in the way of strengthening the feeble-minded and weak, healing the sick, enabling the ministry to speak the word of God with power, and that God may confirm the word with signs following as of old. It would be then that the Elder could stand up before a congregation, and testify that he knows whereof he speaks, and need not use the embarrassing words, "These blessings should be in the Church of Christ," but seldom be able to point out any.

A medium or middle way in these things will not do. I never knew any one who had become deeply interested in a novel, but what had a craving to read another at the very first opportunity. Nor one who ever went to a theatre or circus, but what would like to go to the next one that came along; or to a dance but what had a longing for another. The desire is there, whether it is yielded to or not; and nothing but total abstinence, and the mind fixed on other things, will kill that desire. The writer has had some experience in that line himself.

But some say the mind must rest, or have a change occasionally, and a good novel once in a while will hurt no one. Very well. That is to say, if that person's mind could feel interested in a novel. But as every one is not given to novel reading, or perhaps not much to reading of any kind, some must have a change at something else. Of course he is in as much need of it as the lover of reading. Now let us see where we will land when we go into the world's storehouse for something to recuperate upon.

You brother or sister who find any interest in novels, may devote a part of your time in resting and feeding your mind in that way, whenever you feel weary, and find that you need a change. Here is another brother whose mind also needs something new for a change; but reading has never been interesting to him, and it would be more of a burden for him to settle down and read a long story, than any thing else. A good play on the stage is something he would enjoy more than anything in the way of recreation. Very well, brother, go to the theatre. But here is still another, for we are brought up differently, and indulged in different habits; he wouldn't give aught for the foolish nonsense of either a novel or a theatre. A good circus, or minstrel show, something to produce a good laugh would suit him, and is considered to be very healthful, too. We will have to let the brother go, no partiality. But here is a young brother or sister, who used to figure largely in dances and balls while yet in the world, and he too puts in his claims for a share of this world's good things, and can not see why there is any more harm in dancing than in going to a theatre and circus. You mingle with the world just as much in the one as in the other. I rather think he has got the best of the argument. I really think he should be allowed the harmless amusement, for the same reason as before stated. But last of all we find a brother advanced in years, who perhaps joined the church after having experienced all these things, and found them to be vanity and vexation of spirit. He has perhaps formed one strong habit, which he had intended to lay aside; but finding that others may seek comfort, and recuperate on the things outside of the church, he, too, feels that a change is necessary, and for his part he don't know of any thing that will more effectually produce a change, both on the mind and nerves, than a good square drink of the real stuff; he has tried it before, when burdened with care and trouble, and it had the desired effect, at least for the time being. Of course we all object to that, that is to say, we will not recommend it. We believe in total abstinence when it comes to liquor. Would not total abstinence in these other things be just as desirable? If not, where shall the line be drawn, to do justice to all?

Read these words of the Lord, that seem to come in pleading tones to the Saints, as well now as in the past ages: "Come out from among them, O my people, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." Shall we teach it as we read it? Or shall we modify it? Which ever is right. Let us all "speak the same thing," that there be no division among us," but that we be "perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment."

FRED. JOHNSON.

THE NOBLER THOUGHT.

"A mighty hand, from an exhaustless urn,
Pours forth the never-ending flood of years,
Among the nations"

YEAR after year hath flown, and centuries filed into the fathomless past, since Christ, the Prince of Glory, died. Upon the atonement hath been piled the dust of superstition, and its intrinsic worth has been hidden in the shroud of mysticism. While he hung upon the cross,

"The air was dark with cloud on cloud,
And through the leaden colored mass,
With thunder crashes quick and loud,
A thousand shafts of lightning passed."

Old dogmas must be exchanged for new ones, when we perceive in the latter a superiority over the former. And no injustice can possibly accrue by the acceptance of nobler thought than that which we formerly held. Tradition, if erroneous, must vanish in the approach of light. Darkness can not exist where there is light. Error gives way to the onward march of truth.

Upon the subject of the atonement we have bestowed some thought, and while reading its peculiar history, we have endeavored to do a little thinking. The old idea of the atonement seems to present the would-be fact that Christ was murdered. The thought of murder in connection with God's economy is simply repulsive, and inconsistent. It seems to me that the Scripture bearing on the subject, when rightly divided, throws much light on the question, and utterly divests it of all objectionable features; and does no injustice to the record. We shall make the scripture by simple quotation do its own work.

The language of Christ relative to Judas has puzzled many brains. "It were better that man had never been born." Says one, Supposing Judas had not been born? Again Paul's language, "Had they known this, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." The question arises, was the manner of Christ's death an actual necessity? I believe it was foreknown—therefore predicted by prophets—but the foreknowledge did not pre-determine the matter. One little verse, overlooked by all writers on this question, so far as I have read, throws a flood of light on the matter, and reveals the real meaning of passages of Scripture that otherwise must remain unexplained. I make the statement that Christ was not killed, notwithstanding Acts 3:15, 5:30. If Christ was actually murdered, if death was the result of the piercing, if he was actually killed, then his own language falls to the ground worthless, meaningless! And Paul's statements are incomprehensible. This may seem dogmatic, but let us examine.

When Christ was brought before Pilate, Pilate said, "Knowest thou not I have power to deliver thee up?" Jesus said, "Thou hast no power at all." Again Christ said, "I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me; I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up again. This have I received of my Father." John 10:17, 18. Death was not the result of the piercing, as see: "And when they came to him, they found he was dead already, so they brake not his bones, but one of the soldiers pierced his side with a spear." "Jesus, when he cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost." John 19: 33. This verse totally destroys the "murder theory" of the atonement. Had his death been resultant upon the piercing, it would have been an act, not of himself, as declared by him in John 10: 18, but of natural consequence. It surely must be conceded by every thinking mind, that the manner of his death was not a necessity, nor predetermined; but upon the other hand, the voluntary "yielding up" of the life was foreknown, and also pre-determined! Here is the light, "he was dead already," ere the blood had left him on the cross. The real offering or "shedding of blood" by himself was evidently done in the garden. Let us read:

"And being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly, and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood, falling down to the ground."—Luke 22: 44.

"Ye have not resisted unto blood, striving against sin."—Heb. 12: 4.

"How much more shall the blood [life] of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot unto God."—Heb. 9: 14.

Some have asked, who officiated as priest in the sacrifice of Christ, and answer has been, Caiaphas. Christ himself did it. "He offered himself without spot to God." "To minister, and give his life a ransom for many."—Matt. 20: 28. "Who gave himself a ransom for all."—1 Tim. 2: 6.

It is evident from these quotations, that had not Judas been born; had they known the Prince of Glory, and not crucified—the "offering of himself to God"—would and could have been done under diverse circumstances. But he shunned not even to permit his expiration to occur on a cross. Although the manner of the matter was not of vital consequence—but that "he lay down his life, and take it up again," was the great leading act. Had the expiration of Christ's life been the result of the ebbing out of his blood on the cross, then it would have been a murder; and murder is a crime—and the thought that the atonement necessitated crime—or that "butchery" was a part of the divine work, shows a great deficiency in God's wisdom—a lack in the redemptory plan.

The fact that the Jewish people had become so inured to actual blood spilling in their sacrifices—the very appearance of blood on Christ's body—the hole—the gore-stained earth about the cross, were incontrovertible evidence that "the man Christ" was dead. It, of course, gave force to the after-doctrine of the resurrected Christ—an obviating of accusation of fraudulent practice, an absence of deceptive work by apostles and Christian ministers generally. Furthermore, the Jews were taught, as is also true, that "the blood is the life"—physical—hence when we read texts wherein "blood" is mentioned, we can properly use the word "life." As instance:

"In whom we have redemption through his blood" [life].

"Feed the church of God which he hath purchased with his own blood" [life].

"But with the precious blood [or life] of Christ."—1 John 1: 7. Acts 20: 28.

"Much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life."—Rom. 5: 10.

Paul used the words interchangeably in writing to both Jews and Gentiles.

The whole thing was voluntary—an act of mercy, love and virtue. God accepted the sufferings and life of Christ, and all who believe, repent, and are baptized—promising God to lead good lives by his aid, he will accept Christ's offering as proxy—free them from paying penalty otherwise to be endured. It is mercy and love with God to make this "way of escape." It is mercy and love in Christ to have endured as a "ransom for us."

There is no premium placed on crime in the Christian doctrine of forgiveness. It matters not what "dogmas" say, or so-called orthodoxy; genuine Christianity says: "Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God," etc. Heb. 10: 29. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, * * * to renew them again unto repentance."—Heb. 6: 4-6. To renew unto repentance, implies a re-forgiveness—and this implies a re-baptism—and Paul—Christianity's leading apostle, said: "There remaineth for that man no more sacrifice for sin." No man can be a Christian—sin at will—be forgiven at his pleasure. Wilful sin is unpardonable, after profession of Christianity has once been made! Is there any "premium on crime" in such doctrine? The pure Christian way is the nobler thought of this matter. Infidelity places not only "premium on crime," but offers no means of restriction, gives the broadest possible scope for its commission. Christianity teaches that all crime shall be punished by inexorable justice according to its enormity—and to endure until justice is satisfied. To ask a man to repent of an evil life, and promise to and live a better life—and forgiveness granted, upon these terms can do no injustice to society at large—but is an inducement to better its condition by bettering individuals therein. Infidelity in all its crafty phases improves not society—threatens punishment upon no crime hereafter, and little on it here—where shining silver, and the "golden calf" exist and ask for "more rope"—not to hang, but to extend the field's proportions! Christianity offers no inducement but to holiness of life, uprightness and honesty of act.

"No trumpet—blast profaned
The hour in which the Prince of Peace was born;
No bloody streamlet stained
Earth's silver rivers on that sacred morn;
But, o'er the peaceful plain,
The war-horse drew the peasant's loaded wain.

"Oh when the day shall break
O'er realms un'earned in warfare's cruel arts,
And all their millions wake
To peaceful tasks performed with loving hearts,
On such a blessed morn,
Well may the nations say that Christ is born."

MARRIAGES IN THE TERRITORY OF UTAH.

IN the House of Representatives, April 24th, 1884, Mr. Alexander, from the Committee on the Territories, submitted the following report, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

[To accompany bill H. R. 6765].

The Committee on the Territories, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 946) to provide for the governing of Utah by a commission, submit the following:

That the object of the bill is to govern Utah by a commission for the purpose of preventing the crime of polygamy or bigamy in that Territory; that in their investigation of the condition of Utah your committee find the people to be industrious, law-abiding people, except as to polygamy or bigamy, and that prior to the enactment of the law of March 22d, 1882 (known as the Edmunds law), that a large portion of the people lived and acted in open defiance of the law of congress forbidding polygamy and bigamy: that there were in the Territory of Utah in 1880, 143,000 inhabitants about four-fifths being Mormons and one-fifth non-Mormons, or Gentiles, as they are called in Utah.

With the religion of the Mormons or non-Mormons Congress has nothing to do. "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." It is the right of every citizen to be protected in his or her religious worship, but this is a duty the Government owes to the citizen, and not to his religion, for without any reference to what his religion may be every citizen has the right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and has a right to be protected by the Government in so doing. The Christian who teaches that Jesus was the Christ has the same right, and none other, to be protected in his worship as the Jew who teaches that his same Christ was an impostor; neither can claim of the Government any protection or recognition of his religion, but both being citizens may claim to be protected in their religious worship. With the teaching or tenets of any religion Congress has nothing to do. It is equally clear that no religion can trench upon the powers of the Government. The domain of government can no more be invaded by religion than the domain of the church can be invaded by government.

No one under the guise of religion can be permitted, in safety, to violate the laws of Congress. This has been expressly decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Reynolds vs United States, 98 Otto, 161. In this case, Reynolds, who had been indicted for the crime of bigamy, set up the defense that to have more than one wife was the teaching of the Mormon Church of which he was a member, and that it was a part of his faith and religion; but the court held the defense to be bad, and decided that Congress had the power to pass a law for Utah making polygamy or bigamy a crime, and that no one could interpose his religious belief as a defense to an indictment for a violation of the law.

The Mormon church teaches plural marriages to be the duty of its faithful members. Whenever a man of its faith has obtained sufficient property to support more than his first wife and her children, for him to marry another woman, is a duty commanded by the Mormon church. Here, the Government of the United States and the Mormon church are in conflict, for by the law of Congress plural marriages are prohibited. And no inch of ground should be yielded by the government of the United States in this contest for the supremacy of law; and, to put down an institution both barbarous and demoralizing, members of the Mormon church must be made to know that they can not violate the laws of Congress with safety; that the people of the United States are united in the determination that every citizen in Utah, Mormon or non-Mormon, must obey the law.

The matter of plural marriages has for a long time been a cause of trouble and irritation in Utah. There are in the Territory now between 2,500 and 3,000 men living in polygamy. Congress neglected to make proper laws and to take measures necessary to prevent this pernicious practice in its beginning. The consequence of this failure and neglect on the part of Congress is that there is in Utah to-day at least 100,000 persons, members of the Mormon church, who believe plural marriages to be right. This hideous wrong has grown with their growth and is so intermingled with their social institutions and the affairs of every-day life that its correction is exceedingly difficult. That plural marriages ought to be stopped all outside of the Mormons admit, that it must be stopped is the voice of the people of all the States. How to accomplish this end is a problem in the solution of which the aid of reason should be invoked and not the aid of passion. So far as the past is concerned it is a serious question as to what ought to be done. To break up the family ties that have existed so long; to declare the children of plural marriages bastards; to turn women adrift in their old age, who have in good conscience believed themselves to be wives, with all the ties of a life-time broken up and doomed to an existence miserable and comfortless, are consequences to be fully considered before action is taken. If by legal enactment plural marriages in the future can be prevented and the institution of polygamy put in a condition of gradual extinction we think all reasonable expectation would be accomplished.

In later years there has been legislation by Congress looking to the prevention of plural marriages. In 1862 a law was enacted by Congress making plural marriages criminal, and the constitutionality of this law has been affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case above cited, Reynolds vs United States. The success attained by this law in accomplishing its object was not what its friends hoped for or expected. There were some cases prosecuted under the law, but it had little or no effect in preventing plural marriages. The hostility of the Mormon people to the law prevented its execution. They were so large a part of the people of Utah that the law could not be enforced in opposition to the public sentiment created by them.

Ten years afterwards by act of 22d March, 1882, entitled an act to amend section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in reference to bigamy and for other purposes, and known as the Edmunds law, Congress enacted a very strict and rigid law to prevent plural marriages in the Territories. By this law, among other things, it was provided, that no polygamist, bigamist, or any person cohabiting with more than one woman and no woman cohabiting with a man, who has a living wife in any Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, shall be entitled to vote at any election held in any such Territory or other place, or be eligible for election or appointment to or be entitled to hold office or place of trust, honor, or emolument in, under, or for any such Territory or place, or under the United States.

In said law it is also provided for an appointment by the President of the United States of a board of five persons, who shall have full power to perform each and every duty relating to registration of votes, the conduct of elections, the receiving of registration of votes, and the canvassing and returning of the same, and the issuing of certificates or other evidence of election in said Territory. That said board was appointed by the President; that they entered upon the discharge of their duties as such and refused to enter on the register as voters all the men and women who had entered into polygamy, and that all such persons, both men and women, were disfranchised to the number of about twelve thousand. That no person living in polygamy was elected to any office in the Territory of Utah at the election held under the law above mentioned. From which it will be seen that every man and woman living in polygamy can neither vote nor hold office in the Territory of Utah.

It is claimed by some persons that there have been plural marriages in Utah since the passage of the Edmunds law, contracted and solemnized in secret, but we can not report any well authenticated case of plural marriage that has taken place since the passage of the Edmunds law. We think the Edmunds law has had a tendency to prevent plural marriages, and that from the reports of the commissioners appointed by the President under and by virtue of the law of March 22d, 1882, we think the effect of the law has been reasonably satisfactory.

We do not think that sufficient time has elapsed to test fully the advantages and disadvantages of the Edmunds law. We think the policy should be to give it trial for a length of time sufficient to give it a fair test, and in the mean time to pass such amendments to it, or laws in aid thereof, as experience may suggest rather than to now repeal the law and pass some radical measure in its stead that would in turn have to be tested by experience.

In House bill 946 it is proposed to provide for the governing of the people of Utah, now about 160,000 people, by a commission of fifteen persons to be appointed by the President of the United States. It is proposed in said bill virtually to repeal the organic act of Utah Territory, to disfranchise every voter in the Territory, whether Mormon or not; to place 160,000 people, with all of their property and every interest, under the legislative control of fifteen persons, in whose selection the people will have no voice. This for a republican government is a very high-handed measure, and should not be resorted to as long as there is reasonable hope that other means may be employed that will gradually extinguish polygamy.

We think that a law to provide that all marriages in Utah Territory shall be solemnized before some person whose duty it shall be to file a certificate of the fact in the office of the county recorder or person whose duty it shall be to record land titles in Utah, will have a tendency to prevent secret marriages, and will bring to public notice all the marriages that take place in the Territory.

Your committee therefore report in lieu of House bill 946, and as a substitute therefor, the accompanying bill, being a bill to provide for the solemnizing of marriages in Utah Territory and requiring certificates of all marriages to be recorded and for other purposes, and recommend that the same do pass.

HOW RUSSIA IS GOVERNED.

THE RUSSIAN POLICE—BEATING AND KILLING OF DR. DEDULINE'S WIFE.

BY STEPNIAK: The District Judge of the Thirteenth Circle of St. Petersburg had lately before him a case which made some little stir. The facts were reported by the journals of the Capital, but as the Russian press is debarred from making either note or comment thereon, some account of the matter may serve a useful purpose. It illustrates the fashion in which the most loyal of the Czar's subjects are liable to be treated by the agents of the police. The case in question arose, in the first instance, out of a complaint made by Dr. Deduline, Councilor of State and physician, against City-Sergeant No. 593, Police Commissioner Gussaroff, and the dvorniks (house-porters, who are almost all in the pay of the police) Taroff, Elinoff, and Kokireff, for having brutally assaulted him and his wife the 30th of August, 1883. At 9:30 p. m. the day mentioned, Dr. Deduline and his wife got out of a tramway carriage near the angle formed by the Nevsky Prospect and Vladimirskaia street. As they alighted from the carriage Mme. Deduline, who was enciente, was insulted by a group of men hard by. They tried to hustle her, and assailed her with indecent epithets. On this the Councilor appealed for protection to City-Sergeant 593, who was standing near. But, without taking the trouble to understand the request or the circumstances, the latter threw himself on Mme. Deduline, seized her hands, and flung her on the ground. An Englishman in such circumstances would probably have knocked the policeman down; Dr. Deduline contented himself with raising his wife from the ground. While he was doing this the gendarme called to his help the dvornik Taroff, pushed Dr. Deduline aside, and, seizing the lady by the hair of her head, dragged her to a droshky and threw her brutally into the bottom of it. The husband was then forced by the dvornik into the back seat, and the Sergeant, placing himself beside the driver with his feet on the prostrate woman, ordered the droshky to be driven to Police Station No. 19. On the way thither the policeman and his aide amused themselves by occasionally striking their prisoners with their fists and feet. At the station they were joined by two other dvorniks belonging to the house, who, as they accompanied the party through the court, repeatedly slapped the faces of Dr. and Mme. Deduline. When they were brought before the Commissioner the victims gave their names and complained bitterly of the treatment they had received. But the man in authority, without paying the slightest heed to their remonstrances, ordered them to be locked up in a police cell. While the order was being executed the prisoners were again severely beaten by the City Sergeant and his companions. In reply to their request that the Police Director of the district should be called in, the Commissioner sent them word that the Director said they might "go to the devil," and that he could not attend to their business before the next morning. Shortly afterwards the dvornik of the house in which the Dedulines lived arrived at the police station. He had got wind of the affair, and confirmed the prisoners' statements as to their names and position. On this the Commissioner, who began to see that he had gone somewhat too far, "invited" the Doctor and his wife to leave the station, and explained that their arrest "had been caused by a misunderstanding." Their request for a protocol, or official report of the incident, was peremptorily refused, the Commissioner even declining to give his name.

After leaving the police station Dr. Deduline and his wife went just as they were to the Governor of the city, Gen. Gresser, before whom they laid the whole matter, showing him their bruises and their disordered clothing. He promised them a strict inquiry and speedy redress, and two days later a certain Dr. Hering was deputed to examine their hurts and make a report. In his reports, Nos. 1,353,

1,354, he described the bruises and lesions which he found on their bodies, and stated further that Dr. Deduline had been robbed of his watch and chain, that one of Mme. Deduline's earrings had been torn off and the other broken, that her hat was lost, one of her bracelets missing, and that her mantle and dress were torn in various places. On the strength of this report and his own testimony Dr. and Councilor Deduline demanded that City-Sergeant 593, Commissioner-of-Police Gussaroff, and the three dvorniks might be punished according to Article 1,483 of the code. After repeated delays the matter was brought before the District Court of the Thirteenth Arrondissement, but the accused denied everything, and the Judge, not being able to come to a decision, adjourned the case, as would appear, indefinitely. The chances are that the Commissioner and his accomplices, who are shielded by their superiors, will get off scot-free. Before the proceedings began poor Mme. Deduline, who, as I have said, was about to become a mother, died of the injuries she had received.

These are the facts, in all their crudity, taken from the official reports printed in the papers at St. Petersburg. Comment is unnecessary. Cases like that of the Dedulines happen every day and nothing more is heard of them; but this time, as it happened, the policeman made a mistake. The man he maltreated was a "swell," a physician, and a State Councilor—a dignitary who ranked as a "civil general"—who could make a noise and complain in person to the Governor of the city. If he had been an ordinary mortal—a tradesman, a student, or a stranger—he would not have dared to say a word; if he had, he would have been promptly exiled by administrative order—or worse. It is a curious feature of the case that when the Police Commissioner heard that Dr. Deduline had lodged a complaint against him, he proceeded against the Doctor as "a disturber of public order." Deduline, it appears, called out when the City Sergeant and the dvornik were beating him, and calling out when you are arrested and maltreated might possibly lead to a breach of the peace. It is true the Commissioner afterwards saw fit to withdraw the accusation, but if instead of a Councillor he had had to do with a student it would have served his purpose admirably. The Commissioner would have been praised for his zeal, the student punished for his contumacy.

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES,
 605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
 I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor.
 The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
 Very respectfully,
 N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
 Yours in bonds,
 J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 21st, 1883.
 Johns & Ordway, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
 Your brother in Christ,
 O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
 GEO. MONTAGUE.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
 Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction.
 Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs.
 Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
 Yours,
 V. D. BAGGERLY.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway; Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
 Yours in bonds,
 WM. AULD.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
 Messrs. Johns & Ordway; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
 W. F. CLARK.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
 Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
 Yours in gospel bonds,
 E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. Cole of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE brethren of Reese's Creek, Montana, have undertaken to build a meeting house. A notice of the effort appeared in the Bozeman Avant Courier, for March 27th, which some one sent us. Eight hundred dollars had then been subscribed, and it was intended to build a house 20x30 feet or larger, as the means might permit.

Bro. Joseph Lambert returned home from Davis City, Iowa, on the 14th, and reports a most excellent feeling and prospect for gospel work there. On Sunday, the 11th, three were baptized, Bro. Z. H. Gurley officiating, under circumstances very gratifying to both laborers. Bro. Gurley has preached in Davis City for years, and is now gratified in seeing the harvest. Bro. Lambert opens his labors in his new field auspiciously in the meetings at Davis City. Bro. Gurley speaks there on the 17th, and Bro. Lambert goes to Creston, Iowa.

Bro. C. A. Beebe wrote from Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 13th. "We have had Bro. Josiah Ells with us for a few days. We enjoyed his stay among us. He left for the east well-pleased with his visit to conference and the west."

Brn. O. B. Thomas and John Johnson returned the 12th from a few days' labor in Ringgold county, Iowa, and report good success. Bro. O. B. goes to the Morris Chapel for Sunday the 18th May.

Brn. A. White and C. St. Clair were at Elderado Springs, Cedar county, Missouri on the 12th of May. On the evening of the 13th they held service. On the evening of the 15th they held meeting at Clintonville, Cedar county. Two had presented for baptism which it was thought would be attended to on the 18th, but of which we have not heard.

Bro. Henry A. Stebbins was at Lone Rock on the 11th, and would be at Allendale, Missouri, on the 18th. He aided Bro. J. R. Lambert at Davis City the week ending the 11th.

Bro. John Smith, of New Bedford, and the Saints of Fall River, Massachusetts, and Providence, Rhode Island, request Bro. J. W. Briggs to make them a visit during his stay in New York and the east.

Bro. E. Banta left Lamoni on the 15th for Des Moines, Iowa, where he expects to fill appointments till the 19th.

Bro. Zenas H. Gurley and William Anderson, of Pleasanton, paid the office a visit on the 19th of May.

Rev. Coovert, with whom Bro. W. H. Kelley was debating at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, publicly refused to discuss the proposition which he was to affirm, the second one of the agreement. It seems to be no hard thing for a reverend gentleman to withdraw from his promised word in debate.

Bro. George S. Hyde writes from Bennett, Nebraska, May 11th, 1884: "The work here is onward, some to be baptized to-day."

Bro. James A. McIntosh, of Alliston, Ontario has baptized fourteen since January 1st.

Rev. P. C. Hogle, of Winterset, Iowa, colporter for the American Bible Society, is canvassing Fayette and adjoining townships of Decatur county, Iowa, soliciting aid for said Society. The object being to furnish the bible, without comment to those not able to purchase. Give him a lift who can.

THE Board of Publication have decided to issue the Zion's Hope weekly at the expiration of the present volume which will be June, present year. It will be small in size; and, if the committee appointed by the late Annual Conference, furnish the copy for Lesson Leaves, there will be printed in each current number the lesson for the week; or as they may be furnished to us.

There has been a great deal of talk, a great many letters written and doubtless a great many prayers offered that the Hope might be made a weekly issue; but with all this, there are nearly five hundred delinquent subscribers on the Hope list, nearly one fourth of the entire number; these will be stricken from the list at the end of the volume unless renewed, at which no one must feel offended. No notice of the expiration of subscription will be given beyond the printed label on the mailing list, from and after this issue.

The Board also decided to put the subscription down to fifty cents per copy per year to single subscribers. In clubs of ten, or more, to one address, Sunday Schools, or otherwise, twenty-five cents per copy per year, in advance. Now let those who have been so anxious that the Hope should be weekly see what they can do (besides talking and praying) to keep the Hope going.

"APOSTLE George Teasdale delivered a discourse upon the celestial order of marriage. He read the revelation contained in the Book of Covenants, and commented upon it, and showed that it is not only a part of our faith, but indispensably necessary to practice, in order to exalt any one in the presence of God, the Father."

The foregoing utterance was made at a conference of the Utah Mormon Church, at a stake in the territory. There are two significant points. One is the necessity for men to practice plural marriage in order to be exalted in the presence of God the Father. This leaves out all the men of Utah except about 2,500. It leaves out Isaac, Joseph, the apostles in Jesus' time, at Jerusalem; the apostles of the Lamb on this land, Book of Mormon time; it leaves out D. W. Patten, Bishop Edward Partridge, R. B. Thompson, Joseph Smith, Senior, and his sons Samuel and Don Carlos; and it leaves Jesus himself lacking an exaltation. The other point is this, Apostle Teasdale reads from the Book of Covenants the "revelation on plural marriage," when he knew as did all the elders present who heard him, and all the readers of the Deseret News, from the columns of which we clip the extract, that no such revelation is to be found in the Book of Covenants prior to the Salt Lake edition of 1876. Now will the Apostle Teasdale, or the Editor of the News please tell the readers of that journal when, where, and by what authority that revelation was put into the book, from which the preacher quoted?

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. W. Blair wrote from San Francisco, April 28th:

This branch, and Oakland, and San Francisco, are being cleaned up and got in better order. I have held councils here and at Oakland, with excellent success. The work is reviving, and the outlook excellent. May go north to Montana by June first.

John B. Alden, 18 Vesey street, New York, is engaged in the book making and book selling business; including the reprinting of miscellaneous works in cheap form. Bro. C. W. Lamb, of Magnolia, Iowa, suggested that we notice the business of said Alden, and of it himself says:

Inform the saints, for their benefit, where they can get many of the miscellaneous books now offered in the Herald, for less than half the Herald price; printed on cheap but good paper, with good type, and well bound,—good enough for rich or poor. I have many of Alden's books, and have dealt with him for years, and always find him fair, square and honest. He has the Koran of Mahomet for forty cents, instead of $2.00, as now offered in the Herald. Gibbon's Rome and Milman's Notes, in three volumes, for $2.40, instead of $4.00. Rollin's Ancient History for $2.70, instead of $4.00. Josephus for $1.40, instead of $3.50, as offered in the Herald, from the old-line publishers, who put the price of books so high that the masses can not reach them.

Bro. James Caffall wrote from Manassas, Colorado, May 12th:

We are getting along slowly here. But the Brighamites are being worried—Teachers very busy. I preached five times last week, three miles from here. I had thought to leave here this week, but Bro. Moyer wished me to tarry longer, and having a better attendance on Sunday night last, I decided to stay. We count forty, besides those who have gone away, and those baptized—who believe our doctrine.

Bro. Caffall is requested by the Presidency to remain in Colorado until he deems that the work there may be left in safety.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Are there other Gods (possessing analogous power with them) besides the "Father and the Son?"

Ans.—No, we understand not. "For, though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many), but to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." "There are two personages who constitute the great, matchless, governing and supreme power over all things—by whom all things were created and made, whether visible, or invisible—whether in heaven, on earth, or in the earth, under the earth, or throughout the immensity of space. They are the Father and the Son."

Q.—Did Joseph the martyr teach, authoritatively, that we would "become gods and create worlds;" or that we should ever become beings of worship, viz: beings receiving adoration, &c.?

A.—We know of no such authoritative teaching. If he did teach such a theory the warrant for it does not appear in the New Testament, Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, the doctrinal standards acknowledged by the church since its organization.

Q.—Is the "King Follett Sermon," as published and circulated after Brigham Young obtained control (presidency) of the church, a genuine report of the same?

A.—It is stated to us by many of those who heard the King Follett sermon, that two hours and fifteen minutes were occupied in its delivery; but the part published may be read in fifteen minutes. Personally, we have never regarded the article purporting to be the King Follett sermon as anything more than isolated extracts from the sermon, caught by a listener and and penned in long hand. And while some sentences may possibly be as spoken, the whole is too fragmentary, and of such a character that we can not accept it as a true report of the sermon. Without the qualifying portions that must have been left out, no one is warranted in taking the part published and using it as authoritative expression of the faith of the church. But allowing it to have been correctly reported, partial as it is, it can not be taken as establishing any doctrine or theory denied by the books.

Q.—Are we not (as the sons of God) the legitimate aspirants to a joint heirship with Christ, as colaborers together with him to rule the nations "with faith and equity" as the delegated representatives of God, this being a reward of obedience and faith? In this condition will we not be forever required to worship the "Father and Son?"

A.—We are co-heirs with Jesus Christ of a kingdom that perisheth not and fadeth not away, in a reign of the Son as Lord of lords, and King of kings; and may hold places of renown, rule and trust in that kingdom; but we gather no promise that any shall rule with supreme sovereignty except God and Christ; though as subjects to them saints may be and are promised to be made "Kings and Priests unto our God and his Christ; and shall reign with him on the earth." There may possibly be those who may rule over subjects as kingly officers, but this is clearly to be understood as exercising such right under Christ and God, who are and ever will be supreme over all.

Q.—Will not those who obtain this exalted position and title "gods" ("I said ye are gods") be dependent on "God Almighty" for the continuation of their exaltation?

A.—Most certainly. Such dignity if held, will be conferred and continued at the will of the Supreme and during the good behavior of the incumbent, and not as an inherent right.

Q.—Can there be more than one Infinite God? If so in what would the "Eternal Father's" supremacy consist?

A.—No more than are found in the expression, The Father and the Son. If there were others as supreme as himself, the Father would not be the Infinite One.

Q.—Is it wisdom for an Elder to teach the Saints that we will become gods, &c., &c., without informing them of their eternal subjugation to the "Father," as well as the nature of that Godhood (or government)?

A.—Wisdom is to be justified of her children (results). We presume the results of such teaching referred to above would be productive of undue assumption upon the part of some who might be over weak in ambition; and would lead to useless disputation among others.

[Owing to an error in the name in the notice previously sent us, the following corrected notice is published.]—ED.

OWEN.—At Burlington, Iowa, April 26th, 1884, Sister Ellen Owen, wife of Bro. Owen Owen, aged 67 years, 10 months, and 19 days. She was born in Liverpool, England, June 7th, 1816, and with her husband and children came to America in 1866, settling in Burlington the same year. She was the mother of twelve children, seven of whom are yet living. Her health had been failing for many years, a general decline and decay, closing with the last two weeks of fatal illness. Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached her funeral sermon on the 28th. She was baptized August 5th, 1871.

Correspondence.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.,

May 14th, 1884.

Editor Herald.—In company with W. H. Kelley, I arrived here the 5th inst., to attend upon the discussion to take place between him and the Rev. Covert, of the so called Church of God, in this city. Seven evenings have passed upon the first proposition, and one more is to come. The proposition reads: "Is the Book of Mormon of Divine origin, and its teachings entitled to the respect and belief of mankind?"

The affirmative advanced his proofs in the following order:—(1.) That the book bears evidence of its divinity, in that its teachings are all in harmony with the doctrine of Christ as set out in the Bible, and unites as another witness to mankind, that Jesus of Nazareth was the Christ. (2.) The many prophetic statements set out in the book, which could not have been known at the time of making, and the publication otherwise than by inspiration; but which have been clearly fulfilled since, prove the book of Divine authenticity. (3.) The new light reflected upon the world by the book as to the settlement, civilization, religion, and pursuits of the people of Ancient America, and which has been corroborated since by scientific research and archeological discovery, is evidence of the work's divinity. (4.) The chain of evidence by reason of the application of many prophecies, both in the Old and New Testaments, and which have no other reasonable solution, is such as to show unmistakably, that the book is from none other than the Divine mind.

The negative at first attempted to meet the issue by entering into a criticism of the Bible texts. (2.) By showing that there were contradictions between the book and the Bible. (3.) That there was a fatal error in the book in stating that the people here kept the law of Moses, and yet they had priests not of the tribe of Levi. Failing to make his objections stand, as has usually been found the case, he brought out his great weapon and began on "Character."

When his attention was called to the fact that he expressly stated that he would not do this before entering the discussion, he said: "I said I would not unless it was necessary." Since this time we have had nothing but the lowest and most filthy mess of the hatched falsehoods to listen to; the Rev. (?) Covert descending to a much littler kind of meanness than it has been my lot to listen to before. However, last night he squealed, and without a word of warning, announced that since the affirmative had not done a thing in support of the Divine origin of the Book of Mormon, he would not go on and debate the other propositions, and that one more night would close the thing entirely. W. H. reminded him of the contract, and told him that he would like it carried out, so that he might examine the claims to "this so-called Church of God," but to no purpose. The Rev. gentleman refused to go on, because his opponent had made no argument. We shall see farther to-night as to the outcome. So far we are satisfied.

Sabbath last, met with the saints here in preaching and social meeting. The afternoon social meeting was quite spiritual and encouraging. Bro. John H. Lake was present, and presided with W. H. The saints were encouraged, and we all felt that we were not tired of bearing the Master's name.

Since arriving in the city, I have had the pleasure of an interview with Mrs. Nancy (Rigdon) Ellis. She talked freely, and the visit was pleasant, at least to W. H. and myself. The interview we will furnish for the press hereafter particularly. She says she was eight years of age at the time that the preachers of the Latter Day Saints first came to her father's in Mentor, Ohio; and has a full remembrance of it because of the contest which soon arose between her father and Pratt and Cowdery, over the Book of Mormon. She says: "I saw them hand him the book, and I am as positive as can be, that he never saw it before. He read it and examined it for about an hour and then threw it down, and said he did not believe a word in it." She further stated that her father in the last years of his life, called his family together and told them, "That as sure as there was a God in heaven, he never had anything to do in getting up the Book of Mormon. And never saw any such thing as a manuscript written by Solomon Spaulding." On being questioned with reference to her knowledge of "sealing" and "polygamy," she said that she lived with her father in Kirtland till the year 1838, when they went to the State of Missouri. That she never heard tell of such a thing as sealing, or polygamy, in Kirtland. We called her attention to the fact that one William Smith, a Campbellite Exhorter, stated to us in Kirtland, that he heard, he thought, that she was sealed to Joseph Smith in Kirtland. She says, "It is absolutely false; I never heard of such a thing while in Kirtland as sealing." We asked, Were you ever at any time or place sealed to Joseph Smith? Answer: "I was never at any time." She then said her father went from Missouri to Nauvoo, arriving in Nauvoo in the year 1840. They lived there till the 18th of June, 1844, when her father started with his family to this city, and they arrived here the same day Joseph Smith was killed in Illinois, June 27th, 1844. We then asked her: When did you first hear of polygamy in Nauvoo? She said she never heard of it while they lived in Nauvoo. Did you know any person while you lived in Nauvoo who was married to more than one wife, or had more than one wife at the same time. Answer: "I did not."

When did you first hear of the so-called revelation on polygamy? Answer: "I never heard of it until after we came to Pittsburg, and some time after; I could not say just how long." Did you not hear talk that there was such a thing while you lived in Nauvoo? "I never did." When did you first hear about sealing? "I heard about this first about the year 1842. I believe it was in this year." How old were you at this time? "I was born in the year 1822." What was this sealing, and what was the object of it? "I can not say that I ever understood it fully. Can not give the object." Was it a state of marriage and did it contemplate living together as husband and wife? "I never so understood it." She then stated that she thought Joseph Smith was quite a different man in spirit and manner the last year or two that she knew him from what he was in the other time she had known him, from 1831 to 1842. In her language she said: "He seemed entirely different; but I never knew or even heard that he had more than one wife."

I give this testimony because it is from a lady who was in Nauvoo all the time Joseph Smith lived there, except about ten days before his death. She was the daughter of one of his counselors, and in some respects he was the ablest man in the church. She was twenty-two years of age when they left there, and in a position to know what was going on, and is an intelligent lady. We asked to ascertain the truth of the matter, not minding who it might strike; and in this spirit it is given to the readers of the Herald. During my visit to Pittsburg this time I made the acquaintance of many good and noble-minded Saints. May the kind Master ever guard and direct them, and give to them the reward of the righteous.

Kirtland, Ohio, May 16th, 1884.—Have just arrived home from the scene of contest between Rev. W. R. Coovert and W. H. Kelley. Only the first question was discussed which they had agreed upon, Mr. Coovert publicly refusing to go on according to the agreement. Every means was taken he and his friends could think of, to hold out on one question. I have only to notice a few such choice expressions as, "We are the sheep, they are goats;" "The Book of Mormon says the one who should bring it forth should live; but we killed him;" "All the Mormons this side of hell;" &c., in order that your readers may see how a Rev. gentleman of the so-called Church of God will act after he has given his word and signature that he would not try to attack character, and would debate honorably. W. H. was quite moderate for him, but gradually followed up these slurs mildly, till in his own language his opponent abandoned altogether God's methods of work and the gospel spirit. Then in his own language, "Since my opponent has thrown off the mask; shown he has no disposition to meet this issue fairly and in accordance with Christian rules and principles of warfare, but has gone over on the devil's hillside and begun squirting dirt, I shall now follow him to his stronghold." He followed him just lively enough for Mr. Coovert to strike his colors and run.

Thus the gospel of Jesus has again proven that it can not be successfully assailed by false and scandalous stories and dishonorable ways, and the right is triumphant. William remains in Pittsburg over the Sabbath, preaching.

Hastily, as ever in love of the truth,

E. L. KELLEY.

Bro. Joseph.—I was baptized April 25th, 1882, by Bro. W. T. Bozarth. I believed the gospel two years before I was baptized. The first sermon I heard preached was by Bro. J. M. Terry, in 1880. I doubt not the work, but love it, and love to hear of its progression; and I know it will prevail; for it is truth. I believe Joseph Smith was a prophet beloved of God and the Saints, and hated of Satan and his followers; but he lived to be an instrument in the hand of God in restoring the gospel, and setting up the kingdom of God. I know the gospel is true. I love to read the Book of Mormon and the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures. I love to read the letters in the Herald. How true the apostle's words, "When one member is honored, they all rejoice together." As in the case of Bro. E. L. Kelley, when he triumphed over his opponent in the debate; thanks be to God. We would love to see Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths again. May the Lord bless his people and the honest in heart. Dear Saints, remember the little branch in Grundy county in your prayers.

Ever praying for the triumph of Zion, I remain your sister in Christ, Laura D. Morrison.

Bro. Joseph.—Inasmuch as there are in the church many that can not comprehend the true attitude of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on the earth before the Lord's second coming, will you, therefore, through the Herald, answer, what the church is? That is, is it a literal kingdom of God, or a spiritual?

I understand, and teach, that the church is a spiritual and not a literal kingdom; and when Christ comes, then the literal kingdom will be on the earth. For proof, I give the following texts from the Scriptures. Luke 19:11.—The Lord "spake a parable because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear." See also verses 13 and 15. Paul says that "flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 15:50).

The Lord said, that "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."—Matt. 19:24. Compare Acts 14:22; 1 Cor. 6:9; Luke 21:31; 1 Cor. 2:9; Matt. 25:14, 34; 16:19; Rev. 2:26; 11:15; 20:4; Doctrine and Covenants 26:(50) 1; 32:(55) 2; 34:(11) 4; 41:(61) 2; 42:(13) 2; 58:(18) 1, 2, 5.

But for those who may be too slow to investigate the texts by reference to the Scriptures, I will here give the meaning of some of them. Paul saith that "We must through much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of God."—Acts 14:22. If that "entering was when we enter into the church, we have not gone through any tribulations; but, as soon as we enter into the church by baptism, then the tribulations and persecutions begin to cleanse and purify us for the Kingdom of God. For "no unclean thing shall inherit the Kingdom of God."—1 Cor. 6:9. And the words of the Lord in Luke 21:31, are another proof, as all Latter Day Saints know, as well as the Adventists, that this text refers to the signs which are to go before his second coming. So that we may understand that his literal kingdom has not yet existed on the earth, but the spiritual kingdom, which is the church, a congregation.

Five things are necessary for a literal kingdom: Territory; a king; officers; subjects; laws. The church has no territory as yet, nor a king. Jesus is only a prince. But when he comes, he will be a "King of Kings" "over all the earth." Then will be fulfilled what is recorded in Rev. 20:4, "Reigned with Christ [their King] a thousand years." Rev. 11:15, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and forever."

There must be officers in the Kingdom of God, or of Christ, but no apostles, as no one is to be sent on a mission to preach a gospel. There will be none called prophets, as all will have the same Spirit. There will be no teachers, for no one will be ignorant; nor will there be any one to do miracles, nor a necessity for being healed, as no body will be sick; for all will be perfect in the literal Kingdom of Christ.

But here one hands me the tract No. 24, "The Kingdom of God;" and says, "Is not this tract the teaching, or the doctrine of the church?" I answer yes. But that tract does not say that the church is the literal kingdom, but a spiritual: See page three.

I remain your humble brother in the gospel,

PLATTSMOUTH, Nebraska,

Brother Joseph:—I have been a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints almost one year. The first time I heard this gospel preached was in Bro. Cazier's house by Bro. Elvin and Bro. Brand. I believe it is the only gospel preached that will bring salvation. I received it at once, and was baptized by Bro. Brand, also my companion. We have had many blessings bestowed upon us since then. Our little girl was very sick in the winter, and was healed through the power of God; and to him we give the honor and praise; and it is our desire to live as Latter Day Saints, and with the help of God we will; "For it is impossible for those who were enlightened and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance, seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." "For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh off upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessings from God; for God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love, which ye have shewed towards his name," in that ye have minister to the Saints and do minister; and we desire that every one of the Saints do show the same love towards each other to the full assurance of hope, unto the end through faith and patience to inherit the promises. We hope to live watchful and prayerful to the end.

Your brother in bonds of love,

HARRY DICKINSON.

CLINTON, Iowa, May 18th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Bro. Wm. B. Smith has been with us for a few days. He came here on the 8th, and stopped with us until the 15th. He delivered a fine discourse on Sunday the 11th, and at three o'clock we went to the river, and Bro. Wm. Smith baptized two. We have had a good time, and have been strengthened, and good has been done by his visit. Some have been convinced of the truth of the work, and all will be happy to see Bro. Wm. again. He went from here to Rock Island. As a branch we are prospering, and although we do not increase in numbers as fast as we wish, yet we are very thankful that the cause is on the advanc. We expect Bro. Bronson soon; and should be glad to have any of the elders that pass this way to stop and see us. Our district conference will meet the first Saturday and Sunday in June; and we would be happy to see all that can visit us at that time.

Yours in the faith,

WARREN TURNER.

FORKSTON, Wyoming Co., Pa.,

Brother Joseph:—I am still battling for the truth. Since I left Ohio, I have visited the most of the saints in this district, and done what I could towards the advancement of the great work. I found some trying to walk in the narrow path, and some in the broad road to their own shame and disgrace, besides bringing reproach upon the cause they profess to love. I have not forgotten the kindness of many warm-hearted saints that have cared for me in my travels; and I am sure the Lord has not.

I came to father's in March, staid a short time, preached once in his house, then came here. By request of the community here, I commenced preaching five or six weeks ago, continued every night for fourteen nights. Have spoken twice every Sabbath ever since. The news of our efforts is spreading, and the interest is increasing. I intend to continue as long as wisdom directs. My address is as above.

Yours truly,

HIRAM ROBINSON.

Box 240, PITTSBURGH, Kan.,

May 15th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I arrived home yesterday from our conference, which was held with the Mound Valley Branch, on the 9th, 10th and 11th, inst. A good time was had, and judging from what I heard and felt, I think the prospects are fair for the future of the work. The representation was fair, considering the distance; business past off harmoniously, and I think to the benefit of the cause. The preaching was good by both young and Old. Three were baptized during conference by R. H. Davis; the writer baptized one in that branch a few weeks ago; and also eighteen in the Pleasant View Branch on the 6th, inst. E. A. Davis baptized one at the same place a week or two before; and there are more who say they will soon follow. May the Lord prosper his work everywhere.

Your brother,

J. T. DAVIS.

Dow CITY, Iowa, May 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I discover what I consider an error in the statements of some of my brethren published in our works, which I wish to correct, that is, making your Father to be the man referred to in his letter to W. W. Phelps, that "put forth his hand to steady the ark of God." This I think is a mistake, and should be corrected by some one; and as it is so easy to correct, I think I shall try.

When we take the ground that Joseph was the man that was appointed that put forth his hand to steady the ark, and for this fell, we must admit he was smitten for transgression; but all that have written upon the subject that I have discovered, do not want to be understood as saying that he died for sin. But if he was that man, he was the same as Uzziah was, putting forth his hand without authority to steady the ark; and as it was contrary to law for him to touch the ark, only the priests having this right, he was smitten for violation of law. But Joseph did have the right to steady the ark, or church, he being the priest chosen for that purpose. Who was the man that put forth his hand to steady the church without authority from God, that was appointed? Brigham Young; for he was appointed of God to preside over the Twelve. This was his calling; and when he left his calling for the purpose of directing the ark, or church, he then did as Uzziah, not having the authority. But, says the objector, he was not smitten down like a tree struck by lightning. We admit he was not in this life, but would say God's ways are not like man's ways. He smites when he thinks proper, either in life or death, and we must abide his time. I suppose Abraham, when God led him out of the land of his enemies, and promised to give him Canaan, thought that the blessing would have come in a day or two; but it is yet in the future, because of the Lord's time. I hope my brethren will correct their mistakes when they see them.

JOHN HAWLEY.

SONORA, Iowa,

Dear Brother:—When I was on my way home from conference, I got to Grinnell on the 17th, and seeing quite a group of men together I stopped to see what was the matter. A man had been digging a cellar; and when he got four feet below the surface, he struck something hard. He uncovered it and called the professors to examine it, and they pronounced it the tusk of a Mastodon. I saw it measured. It was seven feet long, and eight inches through at the larger end. It was a monster; but in lifting it broke into two. The skull bone was found while digging another cellar about twenty-eight feet from this one several years ago. These bones are at Grinnell, Iowa.

I remain yours,

J. S. ROTH.

To Joseph Smith, Lamoni, Iowa:—I feel the the greatest gratitude to you, and thanks to A. P. Cantrell, of Colorado, for giving you the required information of my troubles, through which I received a bundle of documents. It was the best treat I ever had at such a time. I was in considerable trouble about the way I was led, and was caused to lead others in the same way, being ordained an Elder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, without the knowledge of there being two parties claiming Joseph Smith, Jun., as the prophet and seer of said church. I was in deep thought about the Book of Jacob, about polygamy, and the revelation of the 12th of July, 1843, with a great many other things which I could not come out of previous to Cantrell's information, which unraveled the whole thing; and if you want to use this letter, or any part with my name you can do so.

My dear friend, I want to hear from you often; therefore, you will please send me a good, cheap paper, once a week, if you have such in your concern, or such a one as you think I need; and I will send the money. I am ready to embrace the ordinances of the Reorganized Primitive Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the first opportunity. I scattered those papers among the Brighamites. I have not had time to hear their conclusion. I guess they are like myself, and I want to change my name from a Brighamite to a Josephite; that is all. I want instructions what to do. I thought I was right, but now I know I am wrong, and how to get right is the present study. I have stopped preaching and keeping church records, and make no more reports to the Brighamites. Accept my thanks and best love to you, for that bundle of rich documents. My address is Clemeth P. O., Union Co., Georgia, which is one and a half miles from my house.

With my best wishes to you and all the honest in heart that embrace the truth,

JOHNSON BROWN.

Dear Herald:—Though we are comparatively young in years, and still younger in the gospel, only a child nine months old, yet we have gained considerable experience in that short time, and must say we feel greatly encouraged to press onward, ever feeling thankful to God that he removed the veil. We can now behold things coming to pass which have been foretold by the prophets of Israel. We have had considerable opposition to contend with, and that we do not object to; for it has a tendency to sharpen the intellect. Elder Stamm has been with us a short time; preached three public discourses, and several private ones, and we call it sound and strong doctrine. His fatherly counsel was acceptable, and we hope will prove beneficial to your brother in the gospel,

EDMUND FORD.

JONESPORT, Washington Co., Maine,
May 8th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—You are a very welcome visitor in our home, and your pages are perused with interest and delight, mingled at times with sadness, especially so while reading the reports of different missions in the minutes of last conference; so many calls for laborers and so few who labor. I know there are many who would respond willingly if their families could be provided for; and how easily this could be done if each member of the church would comply with the requirements of the laws of tithing which have, and are being taught by our beloved brother, E. L. Kelley, of the Bishopric; I can never be too thankful for his visit here; because I never understood fully the law of the Church concerning this matter, but do now; and my desire and prayer is, that I and every Saint may act upon it, and the blessings surely will follow; and the people who now sit in darkness will hear the blessed tidings of salvation, which, thank God, is free. During the past year we have been favored with the labor of able representatives of the faith, with good results.

It has been hinted that Brother Joseph Smith thought of coming east this summer. We were glad to hear it, and we say, Come, you will receive a hearty welcome from Saints and friends.

A word of encouragement to my sisters throughout the land, who are desirous of doing good, and helping the cause of Christ: There are various ways in which we can help to unloose the hands of those who are called to preach. The one that we have adopted and can recommend, is the sewing circle. Ours was organized almost eleven years ago, with fifteen members, now increased to thirty-three. We make quilts, puffs, and garments that are always salable, but never sell anything by lottery. We have earned many dollars, which have been given for the good of the cause, and to the poor. We have had to work our way up, but the outlook to-day is more prosperous than ever before; and while God gives us strength to labor, I trust we shall all be willing to devote a portion of our time to his service.

We are working for the salvation of souls, and when the harvest is over, and the sheaves are gathered in, may it be said of each one of us, "She hath done what she could." In conclusion I will quote a poem of David H. Smith, which will incite to greater and nobler deeds:

"Let us each be faithful day by day,
Never let our patient love decay;
God is ever just and true,
He will surely aid us to get through

"Never say 'tis little we can do,
That our opportunities are few;
If we have improved before,
Heaven will intrust us soon with more.

"Do not think our humble songs are vain,
Join with hearty zest the simple strain;
If God's love inspire the heart,
Better they, than empty works of art.

"Higher hills are barren, bleak and cold,
Chilling snows the mountain slopes enfold;
In the lovely vale below,
More abundant fruits and harvests grow.

"Jesus was himself the low and meek,
In humility his lessons did he speak;
By the angels next the throne,
Is the greater meekness ever shown."

Yours for truth,

SISTER E. M. WALKER.

DECOTO, Cal., April 24th, 1884.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I am still in the faith. I thank God for the day that I heard the true gospel preached. Though I am old and feeble, and I stand alone here, I thank God that I have my papers. I have not seen any of the brethren for about a year. But when my papers come, they give me great comfort; but it is not like hearing a good sermon. I am very lame, I can not walk but a few yards from the door; but I know that God has been good to me, and I have no reason to complain.

With best wishes for the success of your papers and their readers. I wish in your prayers you would remember us.

Your sister in the latter day work,

ELIZABETH LOWRIE.

PARRSBOROUGH, Cumberland Co.,
Nova Scotia,
May 1st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I have been a reader of your pages but a short time. I like what they contain very much; am more especially interested in the letters. We seem almost acquainted with some whose names appear frequently. We will read with particular interest now, letters from Elder F. Sheehy, for we hear he has been appointed missionary for Nova Scotia. I am glad we are to have an Elder come among us so soon. I feel safe in saying he will receive a warm welcome by the Saints here; for the cause for which he labors is dear to us.

It has been about eight months since my husband and myself were baptized by Bro. Joseph Burton; and we have never regretted it, although we are living apart from the rest of the Saints, and have to stand alone; yet we are not alone, for we have one on our side that is greater than them all. We seem to have but little chance to spread the truth, and this we regret. We are very inactive, but are trying to gain strength and knowledge, so that when the right time comes we may be able clearly and with knowledge to explain the truths contained in the Bible. We wish people would talk to us more about what we believe, instead of talking to somebody else behind our backs, when they don't know, nor want to know, what they are talking about. There are a great many false reports circulated about our church and faith. Some things that are hard to bear, coming as many of them do, from professed Christians and friends, from whom we would "expect better things." I desire above all things to have the Spirit of Christ, who when he was reviled, reviled not again, that I may guard against thinking or speaking evil of any one. Hoping the time will soon come, when truth will be spoken by all,

I am your sister in the faith,

IDA A. LAYTON.

FITCHBURG, Mass.,

May 9th, 1884.

Dear Bro. Joseph and Saints:—A few weeks after I became a member of the church, I was in my room, earnestly asking of the Lord what he would have me to do. I did not wish to be an idler, for surely the fields were white and ready for the harvest, or, it may be that in some places good seed should be sown. Therefore my heart went out in the cry. "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do." The answer came in the form of a vision, while I was still upon my knees, waiting to know the will of the Master. The voice of the Spirit said, "Look up." I looked and saw a long straight road, houses on either side. In the center of the road I saw a woman walking, in plain apparel turning not to the right or left, but keeping straight forward. A voice to me said: "Thus shalt thou walk, and I will be with thee." The scene in part changed. I saw myself starting in the same road, the Savior by my side. He had a loaf of bread in his hand. He broke a piece off and gave me, saying, "Go, feed my sheep, feed my lambs. As ye have freely received, so freely give, go and I will lead and be with thee even unto the end." I started and the Lord bade me enter the first house. Therein I found a woman weeping and mourning the loss of friends. Breaking a piece of the bread, I went and gave it to her. She ate it, and directly looked up with joy. Wiping away her tears, she began to praise God. I quickly went on my way entering the next house. There was an old man bowed with age, and suffering, pacing the floor, leaning heavily upon crutch or cane. I gave to him also of the bread, and immediately he dropt his cane, stood erect, and began to give God the glory. I entered the next house, and found a young mother weeping over her dying child, wringing her hands in grief. I went to the babe, and put a small crumb of the bread in its mouth, an then gave a piece to the mother. Directly her tears were dried, she rejoiced, her child was restored, and they were happy. As I went on my way, and thinking of these things, I saw before me a poorly clad old man, with white hair, and bent with age. I gave to him also. He instantly stood erect, began to praise God, and went on his way. I next saw two little children coming with tears upon their faces, seemingly heart-broken. I paused and placed my hand on their heads, and gave them of the bread. They went from me smiling and happy.

The vision passed. Again I was in my room kneeling, when the voice of the Lord said unto me: "Thus shalt thou walk, and go from house to house, comforting the weary ones, I will be with thee, fear not, tremble not at the face of man; for I am the Lord thy God, and I will uphold thee." I said, "Lord, wheresoever thou leadeth, I will go." Immediately my soul was filled with great joy. Words can hardly express the light and glory all around. I felt that I could walk and not faint, could run and not be weary.

The next morning I went out as the Spirit directed. The Lord blessed me, and many were comforted.

Since I came to Fitchburg, the Lord by his Spirit again told me to go from house to house, and he would be with me. Since the first of April I have done so, and find many dear ones, hungering and thirsting for the pure word, even the bread of life. The cry of the honest heart is, "Where, O where, is the gospel of Christ preached to-day." Thank God, even as I have received, so I give. As I strive to walk in the light, I am able, by the help of God, to lead them to the light of the pure gospel of the kingdom. Yesterday, while speaking to a Methodist gentleman, in my house, the Lord blessed me as I held the three books in my hand, and fearlessly declared their truth, and spoke of the restoration of the gospel. I talked with liberty for over three hours. I ask you to pray that God may water the seed sown. I feel that at the longest my time is short. Every day must be devoted to the Master's work.

The voice of the people here is, let your elders come and preach, and we will gladly come to hear them. Bro. Gilbert has been here once, but we would like to have them oftener. May the Saints pray for us in Fitchburg, for the Lord has promised that a branch shall be raised up in this place, and as yet we are the only family, four in number. With my heart and hand in the work of the Master, I am your sister in the bonds of the gospel,

A. V. HOXIE.

OENAVILLE, Tex., April 30th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I was baptized March 9th, 1881. I was convinced of the truth by the plain, earnest preaching of our esteemed Bro. H. C. Smith. God's Spirit has attended and greatly blessed me since I have been in the work. I find no principles to be ashamed of, and upon principles I build all my hopes for the present and future. I feel pretty well founded in the faith; yet I realize the danger of falling by the way. We feel sure that the Lord is on our side, and this gives us courage to continue faithful. When I think of all these glorious promises, I wonder how I can ever doubt or become discouraged. My greatest desire is to do something for the Master. We need not wait to perform some great act of benevolence, which the world will applaud; for it is not so much what we do as the spirit in which we do it. He says if we but give a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple, we shall not be without a reward. With best wishes for the success of the Herald and its readers, I remain your sister in the latter day work,

MARGARET A. NORWOTH.

SANDWICH, De Kalb Co., Illinois,
May 13th, 1884.

Brother Joseph Smith:—The Saints here I think are mostly in health about as usual. Sister Patterson is very sick, and her recovery has been thought to be quite doubtful. She was thought to be a very little better yesterday morning. I met with Bro. Ells at Bro. Rogers' yesterday. He was looking quite well, and feeling well. He is expected to preach in Plano next Sabbath. I was with the brethren at Mission Sunday before last, and preached in the forenoon. The Sacrament was administered after preaching. I was at the meeting of the church in Plano the Sabbath previous, and preached. Also attended the funeral service of an infant child of brother and sister Smith, the 24th of April. I had thought to return to Independence, Mo., this week; but I received a letter last Saturday from one of the members of the Church in Steuben Co., New York, that I baptized a few years ago, who is quite desirous that an Elder should come there and preach, and proposed to send me means to bear my expenses if I would come. I have concluded to go. I baptized several in Stuben county, in former days; but they have mostly moved away since, and some of them died; so there are only two or three members left there now.

Yours in bonds, with regards to all Saints,
C. G. LANPHEAR.

PINCKNEYVILLE, Perry Co., Ill.,
May 4th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—You are a most welcome visitor. You bring me good news of how the gospel is winning its way. It causes my heart to rejoice when I read the letters from the Elders in the field, and the success they have. Yet I am sorry when I hear of branches going down. This ought not to be. If we are to be lights, we ought to let our light shine, that the world may know we are the children of God. Dear Saints, keep up your prayer and testimony meetings. It is by meeting often that we are strengthened. I have been here over ten years, and have not had the chance very often to meet with the Saints of God; and I know it is meat and drink to the soul to meet often together. I long for the time when I can be near a branch of the church.

My husband has been a cripple nearly ten years, confined to his bed; and I ask the Saints to pray for us, that we may be faithful to the end. God has blessed me with comforting dreams; yet trials come that are hard to bear. I have seen the friend that is ever near, but I must put my hand in his. That God will bless his people everywhere, is my prayer.

ANNIE FLOWER.

No. 413 North Leona St.,
SAN ANTONIO, Tex.,

May 7th, 1884.

Dear Brother:—I enjoy the letters of my brethren and sisters in the Herald very much. They confirm my faith in this work, and strengthen my determination to go on. The meditations, sermons and essays, written by the brethren, are invaluable; and the saints that have only the Herald for their preacher, in my opinion have not a mean one. My services in the vineyard of the Lord up to the present have not been great; but I trust not altogether worthless. At present my duties are to care for nineteen souls, members of the Oak Island Branch; endeavor to win others into the fold, provide for my family, and keep myself unspotted from the vices of the world. Hitherto I have only been able to meet with the saints at Oak Island twice a month; but the brethren and sisters desire me to go weekly, believing it would benefit the cause. I am undecided at present for various reasons, namely; I must give up all idea of preaching in this city, sacrifice more business time, and rest from the cares of this life. I feel willing to give up a great deal for the cause of Christ, but I desire to know the Lord's will concerning the matter, or the sacrifice may not be wise.

For the want of divine wisdom in days gone by, I forsook wife, children and home, to preach the same principles we now preach, a little adulterated. Lost one child and home by so doing and learnt a life long lesson thereby. I feel much encouraged in the work of God. The saints desire to get nearer to God by keeping his commandments; are more united and are anxious for the work to spread. They intend, God willing, to build a Church for the worship of God and the preaching of the gospel. The brethren have sacrificed a great deal of time to take me to Oak Island and bring me back to San Antonio. Our generous friend, Mr. Polk Neal, has now loaned me a horse and sold me a buggy, so that I can go there and back without so much sacrifice. All these things are encouraging to me; for I love those that love the work of God. Please pray for me, that I may never be a workman that needeth to be ashamed.

I remain yours in gospel bonds,
WM. WATERMAN.

The British Government has sent orders to Cairo directing that efforts be made to communicate with Gen. Gordon by other routes, than Berber. Secret emissaries will be sent by the way of Kassala, also by the caravan routes, from Dongola and Merawen, to Khartoum.

A cavern has been discovered on the farm of David Smith, near Richmond, W. Va., which promises to rival in extent and beauty the famous Luray Cavern in Old Virginia. The discovery was made through the caving of soil loosened by recent rain. The cavern has been explored for upwards of a mile in one direction and three-fourths of a mile in another without reaching its limits. There is much magnificent underground scenery, one chamber being ninety feet high. The vaulted roof is supported by finely-proportioned columns. Further explorations will be made at once.

A select committee of the British House of Commons has been investigating charges made against the Transportation and Commissariat Department of the British military service during the Anglo-Egyptian campaign of 1872. The revelations are astounding, and have created a great sensation in England. The evidence produced before the committee shows that rascality unparalleled since the days of Marlborough has been practiced. The hay sent out from England for forage was moldy, almost rotten. Stones and bricks were put in the bales to add to the weight; cattle for meat purposes, purchased at exorbitant prices in England, when landed in Egypt, were permitted to stray into the enemy's lines, in order to necessitate the purchase of more; transportships were overloaded with provisions for which extravagant prices had been paid, and some of the cargoes had to be thrown overboard; hundreds of mules for which treble their value was paid were marked with brands as large as frying-pans, and disabled, and others had to be purchased to take their places. While this outrageous jobbery was being practiced, and in consequence of it, some of the British detachments in outlying Egyptian ports were starving. The blame for these systematized frauds is divided between the War and Foreign Offices. The cable agent is good enough to say that the evidence "exhibits a condition of affairs more shameful than any ever displayed even in American politics."

May 18th.—It is reported that preparations are in progress for an expedition to Khartoum for the relief of Gen. Gordon. The expedition it is thought, will consist of 12,000 men, forty steam launches, 400 shallow-draught boats, and several thousand camels. It is thought that the expedition will not be ready to start before the end of August.

A Paris dispatch says the demands of England for equal terms in regard to commerce in China, as embodied in the commercial treaty between the French and Chinese Governments, caused much irritation among the members of the French Ministry and in commercial circles throughout France. The terms of the treaty, as reported, give France a monopoly of trade in the Provinces of Quang Tung and Yunan. It is stated M. Jules Ferry, the French Premier, claims that the provisions of the treaty are just. He regards them in the light of an indemnity for the losses incurred by the French in Tonquin and Annam. It is reported in diplomatic circles that France will oppose the demand of Earl Granville for equal rights with France to trade with these provinces, and that M. Ferry so instructed Admiral Leppes, who is expected at Tientsin today to conclude the treaty of commerce between France and China.

The Mexican Chamber of Deputies has authorized President Gonzales to negotiate a loan of $30,000,000. The loan will probably be effected in Paris.

John L. Sullivan, not the pugilist of that name has been arrested for being concerned in a plot to blow up the jail at Indianapolis, Ind. He introduced explosive substances concealed in a loaf of bread. The plot was exposed by a prisoner named Harrington.

May 19.—The efforts of the officials to induce the hostile Indians now roaming over Manitoba and striking terror to the hearts of isolated settlers have been unsuccessful. Piapat and Yellow Calf, whose followers number about 1,000, flatly refuse to occupy their reserves, which they say are swarming with snakes and lizards and are not healthy. They also complain bitterly of the treatment they have received from the Government, whose object they believe is to accomplish their extermination by semi-starvation. The rancid bacon which has been supplied to them produced scurvy, causing innumerable deaths. These two Chiefs with their warriors treated the officers at Indian Head with contempt and moved on westward to Quappelle. The inhabitants were thrown into great excitement by the approach of such a large body of savages. A large force of mounted police were ordered from Regina with three seven-pound field-guns to keep the Indians in check. It is feared that the presence of police will exasperate the warriors, whose numbers are being hourly augmented by the arrival of bands of discontented Indians from other reserves. Discontent has broken out among nearly all the bands in the Territory, and so thorough has been Chief Piapat's system of organization that he was advised of the departure of a detachment of police from Regina a few hours after they had started. He accordingly avoided the fort, which is strong and well guarded.

J. Sheridan, one of the reputed "No. 1's" of the Irish Invincibles, who has figured in America to some extent as an Irish dynamite orator, and Mr. Patrick Ford, editor of the dynamite organ in New York, have begun to quarrel, about the "funds" as a matter of course. Ford in a three-column article in his paper implies that the failure of the dynamite or "emergency" fund which he started some months ago is due to the contrivances and whispered inuendoes of Sheridan. The latter retorts that he has no confidence in Ford, and insinuates that the fund is not being used to meet Irish but private and personal emergencies.

May 20.—The French Ministry has decided to introduce a bill in the Chamber of deputies providing for a tariff on cereals and cattle imported into France.

The rebels have captured the magazine at Abuhamed and virtually possessed the town. The rebels are advancing upon Korosko and general alarm is created. El Mahdi's emissaries are welcomed everywhere. Admiral Hewett arrived at Adowa April 26. The inhabitants refused to supply provisions owing, it is believed, to the intrigues of the French and Greek Consuls. King John sent an envoy to Hewett and promised to visit him soon. Two hundred rebels bombarded Suakin to-day one hour. Two of the inhabitants were wounded. The rebels carried off 1,000 sheep. The British troops landed and the rebels were forced to retire. A French man-of-war has arrived at Suez with presents for King John of Abyssinia. Strong drafts of marines will be sent to Egypt.

Eight hundred Federal cavalry are scouring the country along the line of the Mexican Central Railroad in the States of Queretaro and Guonajuato, where the recent train-wrecking attempt occurred, and protecting the railroad line. The local authorities were found to be lukewarm in their cooperation, therefore the Federal Government has taken the matter in hand alone, and is proceeding in an arbitrary manner. Gen. Peron is in command, and he is determined not to rest until the infested country is rid not only of the gang recently implicated in the attacks on trains, but also of all suspicious characters. Seven of the train-wrecking gang were caught Sunday last and seven yesterday, including the chief of the party, who was found wounded in the leg, probably by a shot from the train. The vigorous action of the Government is having a wholesome effect. The evil-doers are becoming terrified, and the district is getting more orderly than it has been for many months. Travel on the Mexican Central Road is now considered thoroughly safe.

Reports reached Matamoras to-day that serious trouble broke out yesterday between the people and the Government troops and officials about 200 miles from Matamoras. No particulars could be learned. Telegrams have been sent asking particulars. Fears are entertained here by both citizens and officers that a revolution has started which will spread over the entire Republic. Quite a number of prominent parties here seem not to be surprised at the reported revolt. It is not unwelcome news to many. They say the Government as now administered is so corrupt that the people are anxious for a change.

May 21st.—Lieut.-Gen. Adye will command the British expedition to Khartoum. The naval expedition starts immediately for Assouan. The Pall Mall Gazette says Gen. Wolseley will command the expedition in the autumn which will land at Suakin and march to Berber. A military railroad across the desert will be built in June. The Governor of Dongola has been ordered to withdraw the garrison. Zebehr Pasha has sent messengers by three distinct routes to Khartoum to discover Gen. Gordon's fate. It is expected the messengers will return in August.

The French Madagascar Credit bill provides for the increase of the number of men-of-war at the Indian Station from three to eleven, and fixes the total number of the forces there at 4,666. The duty on cattle and sheep has been doubled.

Bills for the erection of public buildings at Portland, Oregon, to cost $250,000, at Sacramento, Cal., to cost $100,000, at Dayton, O., to cost $150,000, were passed by the Senate, and also bills for public buildings at Washington, D. C., and Opelousas, La.

May 22d.—Egyptian steamers, manned by British sailors, will soon patrol the Nile as far as Wady-halfa.

Mr. Gladstone states in the British Commons yesterday that England had no intention of consenting to a revival of the dual control of England and France over Egyptian affairs. Egyptian finances would form the basis of discussion of the forthcoming European conference.

"The following manifesto, just issued in French, has been sent by Mr. G. W. Leybourne, a civil engineer resident in Corfu, to a prominent Irish revolutionist in Paris. It was accompanied by a letter, in which it is predicted that the coming summer will see the Albanian people up in arms, and that the Turkish yoke will be thrown off before 1885. The letter bears the official seal of 'The Bag and Baggage Central Committee' at Corfu, with the words 'Albania, Epirus, and Macedonia.'

"The Albanians, the Epirotes, and the Macedonians to the peoples of Europe.

"Among the countries conquered by Turkey in Europe, ours was the last to submit to the barbarian yoke, and it is the last which remains under an execrable domination. Nevertheless, there are in our mountains certain tribes which are almost independent, and which treat the Turk as their equal. During more than 400 years we have suffered on account of the intrigues and dissensions sown among us by the great landlords and public functionaries, and many of our people have gone over to Islamism. To-day that dissension no longer exists.

"Having the same object, and putting aside all religious differences, we are all brothers, of like origin, and sworn enemies of the Turks and their barbarous laws. From the frontiers of Montenegro to Servia, we all, Mussulmans, Christians and Jews, ask to be free. For the Servians, Bulgarians, Roumanians, and Roumelians are free. Why should we be slaves, and be more harshly treated than ever by the barbarian Turk, who has already devoured our flesh and now gnaws our bones?

"Our wives and children go hungry and naked that concubines may be nourished, and a retinue of bestial Turks enriched, who are sent to us as Valis, Mutessarifs, etc., and who rob us daily. Hundreds of people are beaten, chained, and thrown into dungeons, where they lie until ransom is paid. Hundreds of our wives and daughters are violated by the Turkish soldiers under the very walls of Scutari, Monastir, etc., but they are never able to obtain justice. Such is our present position. Art. 23 of the Berlin Treaty is but a dead letter for us, even as for the unfortunate Armenians. The Sultan and his followers defy the European Powers.

"We have asked the crowned heads of Europe for relief. Now we appeal to such of her peoples as have liberty to espouse our cause and to compel the Turk to let us decide our destiny by plebiscite, that so we may obtain our liberty without the aid of fire and sword. But if we can not obtain this, then we must by a vigorous attack expel the barbarian, bag and baggage.

THE ALBANIANS.

"For the Central Committee at Corfu, May, 1884."

No confirmation can be had of the reported revolutionary outbreak at Linares, Mexico, which is about forty miles southeast of Monterey. The only report that has reached Texas is to the effect that a great conflagration has prevailed at Linares. The Monterey Revista, an influential journal, in an editorial upon the present state of affairs in Mexico, closes with this significant sentence: "It is the functional law of nationalities that excessive tyranny will sooner or later produce liberty. Do you understand our final destiny is to become Yankees?"

Secretary Folger has issued a call for the redemption of $10,000,000 of 3 per cent bonds maturing the 30th of June.

The American Iron & Steel Association reports that the production of pig-iron in 1883 amounted to 5,146,972 tons, showing a decrease of 31,150 tons in comparison with the previous year's figures. The production of Bessemer steel rails amounted to 1,286,554 tons, the decrease being 152,601 tons; 7,762,737 tons of nails and spikes were made, and 1,615,640 tons of keys, both items showing an increase. The prices of pig-iron decreased by about 16 per cent during the year. At the close of the year 307 protected furnaces were working, and 376 were idle.

Never in the history of lake navigation have grain freights been so completely prostrated as at the present time. There were no charters made April 22d at Chicago, Ill. Vessel-owners are blue.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

May 15th.—S. W. Talmadge received official reports of the condition of the wheat crop in Nebraska, Maryland, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Illinois, Ohio, and Michigan.

Michigan reports wheat on sandy soil as looking fairly well, but on clay land and on hills, especially the northern slopes, the crop is badly injured. Two per cent of the acreage seeded to wheat will be plowed up, being winter killed or otherwise destroyed. A considerable area injured beyond recovery will not be plowed up because the ground has been seeded to clover or grass.

Ohio reports the season backward, with considerable damage to winter wheat by frost and wet weather. Some correspondents say that unless there is soon some dry, growing weather the crop will be a poor one.

Illinois reports damage by winter-killing and floods in many parts, and some complaint is heard of the Hessian fly doing serious damage in some sections. The spring has been very backward, and the plant does not show its usual vigorous growth at this season.

West Virginia reports say: The wheat in the Shenandoah Valley is reported as looking very bad, and the color poor. Many old farmers say the promise is not good for more than half a crop.

Maryland reports the wheat as looking reasonably well, except in the eastern portion of the State, where it looks poor and promises a light yield.

Tennessee reports the crop as looking quite well but backward, with damages by fly of 10 per cent, by floods 14 per cent, and by winter-killing 13 per cent.

Nebraska reports the condition of the crop as fair and the spring very backward. The acreage sown to wheat is fully 20 per cent less than last year. The acreage of oats is increased 30 per cent, barley 20 per cent, corn 30 per cent.

A report from Virginia, states that the wheat blades are turning yellow at the ground, a bad indication, although very favorable weather may enable the plant to throw this off. On the whole the wheat crop of Virginia is looking quite favorable considering the incessant rains they had in early spring.

Sixty-four heavy failures have occurred in the last two weeks in consequence of the panic and failures in New York. The liabilities of none of these firms are less than $5,000, while most of them have an indebtedness of hundreds of thousands, and some of several millions of dollars. Confidence, however, is being restored, and no specially disastrous failures occurred in New York May 16.

Reports of the condition of the corn and grain crops from various sections of Iowa and Illinois, indicate that the corn area planted in both States is about 10 per cent less than last year. The present conditions point to a large yield. The grain crops are in a healthy condition, and the farmers seem confident of a bountiful harvest. From the fruit-growing district of both States satisfactory reports have been sent. Pasturelands are looking well, and the hay crop will be abundant.

Petroleum-oil of rich quality has been discovered in the Prussian Province of Pomerania. The discovery was made near the Baltic Sea, in a locality which renders the cost of transportation very moderate. The Pomeranians flatter themselves that they are now independent of America and Russia as far as the mineral oil supply is concerned.

The Mark Lane express, in its review of the British grain trade the last week, says: Sunshine improved the condition of wheat. Trade was slow, with values in favor of buyers. Maize was scarce, but three pence to six pence cheaper. The coast market was quiet. There were twelve arrivals. Five cargoes were sold, five withdrawn, and six remained. There was no inquiry for cargoes on passage. Quotations were nominal. Sales of English wheat the last week, 58,872 quarters, at 37 shillings 10 pence, against 71,758 quarters at 43 shillings four pence the corresponding week last year.

The stream-tin, which can be obtained by sluicing in the Black Hills, will yield about 75 per cent of pure tin, and of this, Prof. Bailey says: The stream-tin alone is so abundant that all the companies that could possibly work it could go on for twenty years without exhausting it. Yet this is but the waste, you might say, of the main deposit—the mere scraps that water and frost have detached, a little bit at a time, from the great mass and source of the ore, which is Harney Peak itself, more than a mile high, and the surrounding tin-bearing rock which, as I have already said, extends for miles. It is impossible to imagine this great body of ore ever being exhausted. As to profit, the richness of the ore, compared with that of any other tin-bearing district of the world, settles that question conclusively.

Chicago elevators cotained May 17th, 7,626,637 bushels of wheat, 4,402,587 bushels of corn, 347,678 bushels of oats, 522,066 bushels of rye, and 81,525 bushels of barley. Total, 12,980,493 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 11,675,113 bushels a year ago. During last week our stocks decreased 2,233,581 bushels, of which 1,105,008 bushels was wheat and 577,840 bushels was corn.

For the same date the secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canadas as 21,987,705 bushels of wheat, 10,011,777 bushels of corn, 2,619,745 bushels of oats, 1,250,309 bushels of rye, and 653,697 bushels of barley. These figures are less than those of a week ago by 1,046,888 in wheat and 284,027 in corn.

The Pennsylvania iron manufacturers have deemed it inadvisable to force an issue in the matter of 10 per cent reduction in the wages of their employees. It is probable, therefore, that the mills will be run at the present rate of wages.

Trouble is being had at Buffalo, N. Y., between the regular dock laborers and the Italians employed since the strike. Stones and brick bats were thrown at the Italians, who responded with a volley of bullets. All of the Italians carry revolvers or dirk knives.

Crop reports from various points in Dakota indicate a very encouraging condition of things for the farmers. The seeding-time was most favorable and was largely availed of. A large acreage has been seeded, and all the conditions so far are favorable to a bountiful harvest.

Reports from seven counties in Nebraska indicate that small grain is doing unusually well, and promising a bountiful harvest.

Around Macomb, Ill., crop prospects are better than for years. Near Greenville, Ill., it has just been discovered that the most promising fields of wheat are almost wholly cheat, and it is supposed that the later fields of wheat will prove a failure also.

Secretary Folger will soon call in $10,000,000 worth of the 3 per cent bonds.

Reports from Tyler, Marlin, Navasota, Crockett, Waverly, and other points in Northeastern Texas, report another very heavy rainfall to-day, continuing to-night. This makes the fourth unusually heavy rainfall in that section since May 1st. Immense tracts of country are flooded. Such tremendous rains have not been known in Texas, for many years. Great damage to crops has already resulted. In some sections the crops had been planted twice, and must now be planted again. At Weatherford the rainfall during the last twenty-four hours was over eight inches; at Corsicana five inches; at Dallas, Palestine, Tyler, and other points, four inches.

While a regiment of infantry were marching across a bridge just completed at Berlin Prussia, to-day, for the purpose of testing its strength, a portion of the structure gave way, precipitating many of the soldiers and bystanders to the ground and into the river. Twenty persons were injured, some of them mortally.

The suspension bridge across the Scioto River at Portsmouth, O., gave way this morning while some cattle were crossing. Two children who were on the bridge at the time were precipitated into the river and drowned.

A mixed passenger and freight-train on the Pan Handle route collided with a freight train at Wheeling Junction, forty miles from Pittsburgh, Pa., this morning. D. Bartholomew, of East Dubuque, Ill., was instantly killed. Five employees of the road were seriously injured.

May 22.—The British ship Syria was wrecked on the Fiji Islands and seventy passengers were drowned. All were coolies. The steamer Castilia, from Palermo for New York, is grounded off Dema, Spain. She has jettisoned part of her cargo. Rough weather prevents assistance being sent to her.

A freight-train on the Parker & Karns City Railroad went through a trestle near Karns City, Pa., this morning and was badly wrecked. Two men named Thompson and Cook were fatally injured.

Recent rain storms have caused a great rise in the Red River, at Shreveport, La. The whole city and surrounding country were deluged, and the storm is reported to have been general.

The Cypress River at Jefferson, Tex., rose four feet.

THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

"The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."—Luke 16:16.

THE subject of the Kingdom of God, or the Kingdom of Heaven is, and always has been, one of superlative importance to the children of God. Inspired men in ages past, as well as those of the present, have delighted to contemplate its nature and glories. This, like most other subjects that relate to religion, has become a matter of warm controversy. Not for the sake of debate do we essay to write; but to present a few thoughts as they have occurred to us on this most interesting theme. We have thought that the kingdom of God as a whole, comprehends all that relates to the redemption and salvation of the human race, both here and hereafter. That "the kingdom of heaven is an order of government established by Divine authority," is, we believe, unquestionable. The phrase "Kingdom of Heaven," indicates its origin, as being from heaven and not of men. "My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world then would my servants fight."—John 18:36. The purpose of the kingdom is to elevate and transform mortals into such a condition as will enable them to occupy in the future, the sphere and the glories now enjoyed by the heavenly hosts; and thus to perpetuate their existence in never ending happiness; being begotten to the hope of living again, through the resurrection of Christ, "to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." (1 Peter 1:3-5). It has generally been accepted as a fact, by Latter Day Saints that in many places in the New Testament the terms "Kingdom of Heaven," "Kingdom of God" "Church of Christ," "My Church," "The Church," "Body of Christ," "House of God," "Temple of God," and "Holy nation," &c., were by the inspired writers used synonymously; and that the same institution of things is referred to by the use of these phrases by the New Testament writers frequently, and that therefore, the church, or kingdom of heaven, was the divine institution established and organized through the ministrations of Christ and the Apostles, to that extent at least, and of that form, in which it is designed of God to exist among mortal men. This is what might be termed the present state of the kingdom of heaven. This idea seems to find support in our text. Also in the language of Christ, as found in Matthew 11:12:

"And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."

See also verse eleven. The Savior seems to have used the terms "church" and "kingdom of heaven" inter-changeably in Matt. 16:18, 19:

"And I say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

The time when, and the circumstances under which these keys are to be exercised, are indicated as follows:

"And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church; but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican. Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."—Matt. 18:17, 18.

We are hence led to conclude, that the time when these keys so given to Peter, and to others similarly authorized, are to be exercised, is during their mortal life, as well as in the life to come. It appears to us in reason, that it is all essential that some at least of the elements that constitute the future state and condition of man, should be brought in contact with us here in mortality, that with their heaven-like influence, and by operating on us, they may change or convert us, elevate, transform, and so prepare and adapt us to the higher state that we are designed to occupy hereafter. The primary elements of the education of the advanced professional, were the preparatory fundamentals of his youthful, or childhood beginnings. As this principle holds good in natural things, so we believe it does in spiritual; and from this we may safely conclude, that the kingdom of heaven was caused to exist, at least in its elementary state, in the days of Christ and the Apostles; and as existing in this condition, was styled "the church," "Church of Christ," "body of Christ," &c. Hence the appropriateness of John, Christ, the Apostles and Seventy, saying, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 3:2; Mark 1:14; Luke 9:2; 10:9). Also the language:

"And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, the kingdom of God cometh not with observation: Neither shall they say, Lo here! or lo there! for behold, the kingdom of God is within [among, margin] you."—Luke 17:20, 21.

Allowing that the kingdom of God does thus exist in its elementary state, we might inquire with profit as to what the elements of the kingdom are. We have already seen that in Peter's case, as a minister of the kingdom, it was essential that he should be placed in possession of certain "keys" or authority, in order that his ministrations might be valid, and ratified by the head of the kingdom. And from this it would appear that the great, all essential foundation principle of the kingdom of God on the earth, is Divine authority. The phrase, "my kingdom," as used by Christ himself, in John 19:36, indicates very plainly that Christ is recognized as the king. Paul represented the subject in this light also, as follows:

"Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light; who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear son."—Col. 1:12, 13.

Christ is "the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all." (Eph. 1:22, 23). Christ is the "high priest of our profession," "after the order of Melchisedec," who "first being by interpretation King of Righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of Peace." (Heb. 7:2). The Savior is "a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope, firm unto the end." (Heb. 3:6). He is the "one Lord" over the "one body," being so appointed by his Father. "God hath made that same Jesus * * * both Lord and Christ." (See Eph. 4; Acts 2:36). These statements of Holy Writ as applied to the Savior, teach us plainly the exalted position of Christ, as exercising: 1st, dominion; 2d, the right to give laws to his dominion; 3d, to minister the laws so provided, also to appoint other suitable ministers of the legal code. One text from his own language, will justify the three appointments above mentioned.

"And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, [1] All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. [2] Go ye [ministers] therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; [3] teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."—Matt. 2:18-20.

We therefore look upon Christ as being the King, by appointment of the Father, of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth; and as being invested with the administrative authority as its chief; and by him, together with other officers, as appointed by him, the laws, rites and ceremonies are administered in his dominion and kingdom. See Matt 13:3; 4:37; 1 Cor. 3:9; 2 Cor. 6:1; 5:20; Rev. 17:14.

Those who are "called" and associated with him in the administration of the affairs of the kingdom, officially named, are by the Bible indicated as follows:

"For as we have many members in one body and all members have not the same office; so we being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another. Having then gifts, differing according to the grace that is given unto us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth on teaching; or he that exhorteth on exhortation; he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulness."—Rom. 12:4-8.

Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Cor. 12:27, 28.

"Wherefore, he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. * * * And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."—Eph. 4:7, 8, 11-13.

"Paul and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the Saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons."—Phil. 1:1.

The summary of officers here given by the Apostle Paul, representing to a degree, also, their grade or standing, shows the organic structure of the Church of Christ on earth, and displays the form of the spiritual house, when it exists on earth, built in accordance with the pleasure of the Lord. (1 Cor. 12:18). These are, with Christ, the holy, the royal priesthood of the Kingdom of Heaven. And the priesthood, or divine authority, is the foundation element of the kingdom in its present, as well as its future state.

The relation of the system of laws that are given to, and administered in the Kingdom of God, is very plainly set forth in the revelations of the heavenly Father, by the title applied to them therein. They are styled, "The gospel of the kingdom."

"And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of diseases among the people."

The laws are also called "this gospel of the kingdom," "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Matt. 4:23; 9:35; 24:14; Acts 8:12). By this last citation we are informed, that "the things concerning the Kingdom of God" include belief, baptism, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Paul, to whom was committed a dispensation of the gospel, directly from Christ himself, (Gal. 1:11, 12), recognized the gospel as being so prominent an element of the Kingdom of heaven, that he, very near the close of his ministry, declared:

I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the Kingdom of God, shall see my face no more."—Acts 20:25.

When the authorized ambassadors of the kingdom go forth to the nations of the earth, and are accepted by them in all sincerity of heart, or we should say the first principles of the law are by the children of men received, by going forth obedient thereto, they perform that act called entering into the Kingdom of Heaven. Having thus obeyed the first, or foundation principles of the law; that is, believed with all the heart on the name of the King, that he is the Savior of men, (John 1:12; Acts 8:37), and repented of all sin, (Acts 17:30; 2 Cor. 7:9, 11), and have thus become dead to the world and to sin, we then submit to a burial with Christ in baptism, (Rom. 6:1-6; Col. 2:11, 12; Gal. 3:26, 27; John 3:3, 5). Now having risen after the manner of Christ's resurrection, to walk in newness of life, (Rom. 6:4; Eph. 2:1-10), then follows the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, or the birth of the Spirit. The laying on of hands is one of the "all things" that Jesus commanded the apostles to "teach all nations," after having first taught and baptized them. (Matt. 28:19, 20; Acts 8:14-18).

The fact that the baptized, believing Samaritans did not receive the Holy Ghost as an abiding comforter, till after they had yielded obedience to the ordinance of laying on of hands; and the further fact that God did bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost upon them after their obedience to this rite, thus ratifying in heaven, and openly acknowledging the act of laying on of hands by Peter and John, demonstrates it to be a gospel ordinance, one of the ceremonies of the gospel law, wherein "the keys of the kingdom of heaven" are by the gospel ministry exercised.

Timothy received the gift of the Holy Spirit by "the laying on of the hands of the presbytery," or the elders, (1 Tim. 4:14); and Paul, after having been so miraculously converted; and after having been baptized was "filled with the Holy Ghost," having been confirmed by laying on of hands by the "Disciple of Damascus," named Ananias. (Acts 9:10-18). Thus we see that those who in ancient times were converted in the most wonderful manner, were no exceptions to the rule. All were under obligation to be baptized and obey the laying on of hands alike. We are to be saved by the rule, the law, not excusing ourselves from obedience to the law, by inferring that some supposed exception to the rule, or law, will save us, such as the thief on the cross, or the household of Cornelius, &c. These cases, when closely and impartially considered, are no exceptions to the rule, or law; for the gospel "is the power of God unto salvation." "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he can not enter the kingdom of God." (Rom. 1:17; John 3:5). Why is it that we are rendered so short sighted by the religious teachings and traditions of men, as to be made to believe that the son of God would say to the race of mankind: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God;" and when the learned teacher, Nicodemus, asked the Savior, "How can a man be born again when he is old?" "Jesus answered, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he can not enter the kingdom of God;" and then in a short time after using this strong, positive language, while on the cross, take it all back, in telling the thief, Yes, you can be saved; go to the paradise of God, without being born of the water. How is it we can be persuaded that the Savior was so inconsistent as this belief represents him to be. Again, we read that Paul said:

"But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ."—Gal. 1:11, 12.

And toward the close of his ministerial career, when giving the elders of Ephesus his last and solemn charge, he says:

"I kept nothing back that was profitable unto you; but have shewed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house, testifying to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ."—Acts 20:20, 21.

And in the nineteenth chapter of Acts, verses five and six we also read that Paul had taught these same Ephesians so that,

"When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them, and they spake with tongues and prophesied." He further says:

"Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the council of God."—Acts 20:26, 27.

Timothy, it will be remembered was the Evangelist of the church at Ephesus, and to him Paul wrote. "And the things thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also."—2 Tim. 2:2.

By carefully considering the foregoing texts of Scripture, we learn that the laying on of hands was one of the principles of the gospel, that Paul received by direct revelation from Jesus Christ. That along with faith, repentance and baptism, the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, was a part of "the whole council of God." That this principle is one of "the same" things that Timothy had heard of Paul "among many witnesses;" and that was to be taught by faithful men, to whom it should be committed. Why need we wonder then, that Paul, in writing to the Hebrews, informs them that the doctrine "of laying on of hands" is the doctrine of Christ, as much so as faith, repentance, baptism, or the eternal judgment; and is equally essential with them. (Heb. 6:1, 3). It was by continuing in these principles of doctrine that Timothy was to be saved, with those that heard him. (1 Tim. 4:16). The Apostle John considered a belief in this doctrine of laying on of hands as essential to Christian character, both as relates to the lay member and the minister:

"Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, [as a public teacher], neither bid him God speed."—2 John 8:9.

Our reason for dwelling so long on the doctrine of laying on of hands, is, it is generally so rigidly objected to. We will now conclude this point by referring to Paul's statement to the Galatians:

"As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1:8, 9.

Those who embrace these principles of the doctrine of Christ, become children of God, members of the body of Christ. (Rom. 8:16; Gal. 3:26, 27). Such persons constitute one of the elements of the kingdom. Jesus so recognized:

"Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist, notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he."—Matt. 11:11.

"The good seed are the children of the kingdom."—Matt. 13:38.

Likewise Paul:

"Let not then your good be evil spoken of; for the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."—Rom. 14:16, 17.

"But I will come to you shortly, if the Lord will, and will know, not the speech of them which are puffed up, but the power. For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power." 1 Cor. 4:19, 20.

"Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son?"—Col. 1:13.

"I, John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ."—Rev. 1:9.

The above testimonies are sufficient to show that the saints themselves are the citizenship of the kingdom,—represent one of the elements thereof. The Holy Ghost is the all powerful element of the kingdom, sent of the king as the living agent, in advocacy of the claims of the kingdom in this world. The medium through which the will of the King is revealed to the ministry and subjects of the kingdom on earth, directing the ministry in their ministering; together with the revealed law, and also sanctifying, purifying, and enlightening, and revealing the acceptability and heirship of the children of the kingdom of heaven. Through its instrumentality, or rather agency, Christ is in his ministry sowing the good seed of the kingdom. By it the earnest seeker after the truth is enlightened as to his duty. It aids him to repent. It permeates the entire process of regeneration; and after the birth "of water and the Spirit," the Holy Spirit comes to the regenerated one to remain as an abiding comforter, guiding him into the truth, testifying of his sonship,—adoption, and revealing to him the Father and the Son; and is the power by which he is to be raised from the dead, changed, immortalized, and forever glorified. (See Luke 24:49; Matt. 13:3, 37; John 14:26, 27; 15:26; 3:3, 8; Rom. 8:13, 15; Eph. 1:16, 17; Matt. 11:25, 27, with John 17:3; 1 Cor. 2:9, 12, and Rom. 8:10, 11, with 1 Cor. 15:41-58), as to the above described office work of the Holy Spirit.

Having referred to the more prominent elements of the kingdom in its present state; we would observe that we do not assume the extreme position that the kingdom was established in its power and glory, as is yet to be accomplished, as foretold in prophetic vision; nor yet that other extreme view, that Christ has not, nor will he have the kingdom, in any sense of the word, till after the resurrection of the dead in Christ.

The terms "Church" and "Kingdom" are, or may be, used interchangeably, when used with reference to the Divine institution as an entirety. A local branch or congregation of the Church, may not be so used with good sense, any more than a "man" and "arm" may be so used. Yet the "arm" is a member of the "man." "The church" when glorified, is to exist "throughout all ages," and when perfected is to continue "worlds without end," (Eph. 3:21).

In harmony with the foregoing ideas concerning the Kingdom of God, we can understand how it was that during the great war that ensued between light and darkness, during the incipency of the dark ages, when overwhelming persecutions were being waged against the church, she "brought forth the Kingdom of God and his Christ." Was she not during the days of apostasy, stripped of the holy priesthood, administrative authority, the official organization, the Holy Ghost, with all its gifts and glory? Were not the Divine laws suppressed and changed? These all going back to their native heaven, were in this way preserved, "caught up to God and to his throne." (See Rev. 12, Inspired Translation). When the ancient Jews exercised their popular influence in opposition to the claims of the gospel, Jesus said:

"Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for you shut up the Kingdom of Heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in."—Matt. 23:13.

Again:

"Wherefore, seek not the things of this world; but seek ye first to build up the Kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33, Inspired Translation.

The foregoing seems to be amply sufficient to render our ideas of this all important subject intelligible; also the amount, and character of evidence appears ample; and of sufficient authority to substantiate beyond successful controversy, the truthfulness of the position herein set forth. That the Kingdom of God, in this same sense exists now, by virtue of a reinstatement, or restoration thereof, through the Divine interposition, will surely be accepted as truth by all who are conversant with the latter day purposes of God, as pointed out in his revelations. On this point see Matt. 24:14; Rev. 14:6-9; 19:7-9; Eph. 1:8, 9; Acts 3:19-21; Dan. 2:44. Just before the second advent of Christ, the gospel message is to be sent again, (Mal. 3:1), to prepare a people for his reception. The gospel in its ancient purity is to be granted, that a people be made ready to receive Christ, and to gather the obedient ones on earth, into one, (Christ), into the kingdom, (Eph. 1:8, 9; Matt. 13:47-49), "at the end of the world." "Lift up your hearts and rejoice, for unto you the kingdom, or in other words the keys of the Church, have been given. Even so. Amen."—Doctrine and Covenants 42:18. "I will be merciful unto you; for I have given unto you the kingdom; and the keys of the mysteries of the kingdom shall not be taken from my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., through the means I have appointed while he liveth, inasmuch as he obeyeth mine ordinances."—Doctrine and Covenants 64:2.

"Hearken, and lo, a voice as of one from on high, who is mighty and powerful, whose going forth is unto the end of the earth; yea, whose voice is unto men, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth; yea, a voice crying, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, prepare ye the supper of the Lamb, make ready for the bridegroom; pray unto the Lord; call upon his holy name; make known his wonderful works among the people; call upon the Lord, that his kingdom may go forth upon the earth; that the inhabitants thereof may receive it, and be prepared for the days to come, in the which the Son of Man shall come down in heaven, clothed in the brightness of his glory, to meet the Kingdom of God, which is set up on the earth; wherefore, may the Kingdom of God go forth, that the Kingdom of Heaven may come, that thou, O God, may be glorified in heaven, so on earth, that thy enemies may be subdued; for thine is the honor, power, and glory, forever and ever. Amen."—Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 65.

GALLEN, Michigan,

FACT VERSUS THEORY.

IN an article entitled "The Great Physician", published in the Herald of December 29th, we find the following expression:

"The command, 'increase and multiply,' being given to the first pair, when they were sinless and consequently free from the power of death; it follows that their children and their children's children would also have been free from it."

While this looks well as a theory on paper, yet it seems to me to be a dangerous doctrine to believe, from the fact that it is not in harmony with the written word so far as I have been able to understand it. In the Inspired Translation of the Scriptures, Genesis 4:11, we read:

"And Eve his wife heard all these things, and was glad, saying, Were it not for our transgression we never should have had seed, and never should have known good and evil, and the joy of our redemption, and the eternal life which God giveth to all the obedient."

This is a plain statement of the case, and can not be set aside without doing violence to the Scriptures of divine truth. The argument may be advanced, that these are the words of Mother Eve, and as such are not of weight in the matter; that as she was deceived touching the fruit, so she was in the above quoted utterance. In answer to such an argument, I would cite the fact that Moses did not write from tradition concerning the creation, but from revelation. See Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 22, par. 6 to 9, especially the last:

"And now, Moses, my son, I will speak unto you concerning this earth, upon which thou standest. And thou shalt write these things, which I shall speak."

God was giving Moses an outline of the creation, and the events immediately following it, for the enlightenment of Moses and the world relative to the plan of life and salvation. The manner in which the words of Mother Eve are introduced, goes to show that the Lord does not reveal them to Moses as the words of a deluded woman, but as words revealed unto her by the Holy Ghost; for in the preceding verses we are shown that Adam and Eve had been calling upon the Lord, and had heard his voice speaking to them, and giving them commandments. Also they had been observing those commandments, and had been offering sacrifices, and had received the visitation of an angel. "And in that day the Holy Ghost fell upon Adam," and Adam blessed God and declared: "For because of my transgression my eyes are opened, and in this life I shall have joy, and again in the flesh I shall see God." Then follow the words of Eve quoted, from all of which I conclude, that the words of Mother Eve should be taken as the word of the Lord.

The Book of Mormon furnishes us testimony on the point in question. In the 2d book of Nephi 1:8, we read:

"And now, if Adam had not transgressed, he would not have fallen; but he would have remained in the garden of Eden, and all things which were created must have remained in the same state which they were after they were created. And they must have remained forever, and had no end. And they would have had no children; wherefore they would have remained in a state of innocence, having no joy, for they knew no misery; doing no good, for they knew no sin. * * * Adam fell that man might be. And men are that they might have joy."

It would seem that these extracts from the words of Lehi need no comment. But we are reminded that Adam and Eve had received a command to multiply, while as yet they were sinless. Let us see if this is really the case. By examination, we find in the first chapter of Genesis the creation spoken of in order, together with the command, "increase and multiply, and replenish the earth." But in the second chapter, fourth verse, we read:

"These are the generations of the heaven and of the earth, when they were created, in the day that the Lord God made the earth and the heavens, and every plant of the field before it grew; for the Lord God had not caused it to rain upon the earth. And there was not a man to till the ground."

By reference again to the Inspired Translation, Genesis 2:3, the mystery is explained thus:

"For I, the Lord God, created all things of which I have spoken spiritually before they were naturally upon the face of the earth."

In the succeeding verses is narrated the formation of man from the dust, his being placed in the garden with the command to dress and keep it, and also the injunction to abstain from the forbidden fruit. But no command to "multiply" was communicated to Adam, so far as I can learn, previous to the transgression. For as we have already seen, the words, "Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth," were addressed to a spiritual creation in heaven, and not to man in the flesh. Yet it was undoubtedly the purpose of the Almighty that there should be increase; as it was also his purpose that the sons of men should be placed upon their agency, that this life might become a probation; that man might taste of misery in order to appreciate happiness, to behold the sinfulness of sin, in order to rejoice in the righteousness of God. It was a part of the plan of salvation, that those who should be accounted worthy to have place in the celestial kingdom must come up through tribulation; and as the "Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering," (Heb. 2:10), we may expect to become perfect in like manner. I submit this criticism in the hope that we may draw nearer to a correct understanding of the truth.

TESTIMONY OF SR. ROHRER.

SR. SARAH ROHRER, widow of the late Peter Rohrer, united with the Latter Day Saints in Fredonia, New York, February, 1838. Her maiden name was Groesbeck, sister of Nicholas Groesbeck, now of Salt Lake City, Utah.

She says that prior to her uniting with the Church, she was very anxious to know whether Joseph Smith the Seer was a prophet of God, and whether the Book of Mormon was of divine origin. She had been believing the gospel as preached by the elders, but the prophetic claims of Joseph and the Book of Mormon were great stumbling blocks to her, and she prayed fervently for evidence from God, that she might know in regard to these matters. One night, after herself and husband, (her then husband was Peter Vandalstine), had retired, a vision was given her while yet awake, and a voice said to her distinctly,—“Fear not; doubt no longer; for Joseph Smith is a true prophet of God; and the Book of Mormon is a true record which was kept by the inhabitants who once inhabited this continent. The Mormon Church is the only true church on the earth. If thou believest and art baptized, thou shalt be saved in the kingdom of God. If thou believest not, and unitest with any other, thou wilt be eternally condemned.”

She united with the Saints soon afterwards. When the Church was rejected and scattered, she did not unite with any of the factions, but retained unshaken faith in the gospel she had embraced.

In 1847, when a widow, she removed to Kaneshville, (now Council Bluffs), and when Ezra T. Benson was gathering the widows away to Utah in 1852, she was warned by a voice from heaven to not gather to Salt Lake. This occurred as she was walking down Hyde street, near mid-day. The voice said to her three several times, “Don’t you go to Salt Lake.”

This relieved her mind, and she thenceforth looked with repugnance upon polygamy and the peculiar teachings and doings of the Brighamites. Nothing could have induced her to cast her lot with that people, though she knew there were many most excellent, self-sacrificing saints among them. In 1854 she emigrated to California; and when passing through Salt Lake some of the Mormons wished her to locate there; and when she declined they said if they knew which were her stock in the train they would steal them out, and thus compel her to stay. To this she replied, that if they did she would sit by the roadside till some train would take her through. After reaching California she was frequently solicited to unite with some of the Protestant churches; but she always declined, and when she would have spiritual consolation would read the sacred books of the church. She continued in this way till in 1864, when she united with the Reorganized Church, with whom she has worshipped and rejoiced, and with whom she intends to remain till she joins the General Assembly and Church of the First Born in heaven. Her faith is now, at the great age of seventy-five years, as unwavering as at any time, and it proves a constant source of joy and rejoicing; and her mind is as clear, and bright and strong, as it was thirteen years ago. And now, when reviewing the past, her soul is filled with gladness in the fact that she saved herself and three daughters from the crime and cruelties of polygamy and kindred evils.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 26th, 1884.

A VISION.

Dear Herald:—Tell it to whom it may concern: One evening in the month of January, 1884, after having retired to bed, sleep having fled for the time, I lay contemplating on this glorious latter day work, when suddenly a map of America was shown to me, (not a miniature), but one as large as the continent north and south, with the Pacific Ocean west, Atlantic east, the outlines being as bold as if viewing the very coast lines by the eye. A stone wall next appeared, running down about directly through the centers of Dakota, Nebraska, western Kansas, just bordering on Colorado, thence south through Texas, terminating just beyond the south boundary of Texas, in Mexico. The wall began about the middle of Manitoba, a perfect, straight line from north to south. The wall was four feet high, four feet thick, running to nothing in height at either end. Next appeared a very large number of men, divided into unequal groups, scattered through Iowa, Missouri and Illinois, particularly a large gathering in west Illinois. Each group seemed to be conversing on the same thing, some subject of great note, but which did not appear plain to any. They were constantly looking toward the north-east, and upwards to heaven. I seemed to be standing in the air about four to six feet above the earth in middle of Illinois, commanding a good view of all what was going on, when a death-like calm came over the whole universe. It was almost painful during the silence; for no one knew what was to follow, nor what to expect next. When suddenly as a flash of lightning, a streak or seam opened in the heaven, (about where the boundary line between the United States and British America is), beginning directly over the stone wall, and running west to the ocean. Then a voice spoke loud enough to be heard to the utmost bounds of space, yet a soft gentle voice, at which the earth shook, and said, “Behold the power of God.” All looked up to this open seam. It appeared to be about one inch wide; and as all looked up into it, there seemed to be walls to either side, reaching for an immense distance, when beyond there appeared a vast universe of rich, deep, golden light, exceeding the sun light by many times. Then one or two flashes of vivid lightning appeared from the seam, directed in a south-west direction. Then all seemed silent again for a short time, when as suddenly just such another seam opened about in a vertical line over the north boundary of Mexico, beginning directly over the wall, running west to the Pacific Ocean; but nothing transpired at the opening of this one. A short time again elapsed, during which the same painful silence ensued as before the opening of the first, when as suddenly a third seam opened midway between the other two. Then thunders, lightnings, great clouds of dark, heavy mist, rolled down over Arizona, Utah, Nevada and southern California. Then again a voice spoke somewhat sharper than the first voice, yet I knew it was the same voice. It did not speak loud nor harsh; yet the heavens, the earth, sea, in fact it seemed that the whole creation shook. The voice said this time, "Behold the wrath of God." Indeed pen can not write, tongue can not tell; for it was wrath in very deed. The Saints, (for such they were), who had been assembled in groups on the east side of the wall saw all of these things, yet no one had a single fear. But when the dreadful clouds of dark mist and thunders, lightnings and terrible noises began at the opening of the third seam, then immense crowds of men began to run, as I never saw men run before, for their dear lives, particularly from Arizona, southern Nevada and Utah, south towards the stone wall, some had reached it, others near, many just behind them far as the eye could see, all running it seemed as fast as our cars generally run. I was so overcome at the sight that I exclaimed aloud, Well! what does this mean? The same gentle voice again spoke, all heard, "This is Utah and the Reorganized Church."

POWER OF DIVINE TRUTH.

"Wide as the world is thy command;
Vast as eternity thy love;
Firm as a rock thy truth shall stand,
When rolling years shall cease to move."

How fitting for training were the rugged rocks and glories of Mount Gilead to the prophet who should descend as a thunder bolt upon the guilty land of Ahab. John the Baptist came and preached repentance from the sublimities of the wilderness of Judea. Moses had to learn the lessons of righteousness which should condemn the world while in the boundless desert and rocky wilds of Midian, and the awful splendors of Mount Sinai, where heaven's artillery rolled as it has never rolled since with one exception. Joseph Smith learned on the hill Cumorah in the state of New York in the nineteenth century, that God was the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. That in Him there was no changing, or even a shadow of a turning. O the difference between an inspired and un-inspired preacher and writer. May that all enlightened Spirit give us the full vision of Him who is "Just," and the justifier of every one that believeth and has faith in Jesus Christ. The word of God shall stand forever. God's word is God's will, expressed in whatever way, and conveyed by whatever means he pleases. St. Paul says, "That the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." God sends his messengers to proclaim his word, not to alter it. Like himself it needs no changing. Let no man put forth his hand to try, as Uzziah did, to steady the Ark. God is able and willing to do his own work, and he can do it well. God sent his words by prophets, by apostles, he sent Micaiah to Ahab. Sometimes, by Sometimes by the voice of a prophet as tles, seventies, teachers, and deacons. voice, as Samuel heard it in the temple; but it will reach Eli. Sometimes in visions, as to Daniel, John and Peter. They may be put in lions' dens, put in prisons, put in exile, But God's truth, which God's servants alone can preach, will stand forever. No living person can bind it in chains. Revealed by the Holy Spirit, the power of God, who can destroy it? In direct communication with the soul, who can escape its power? All other creeds and doctrines, however attractive, fade like the grass on a summer's day. Think of our Savior's life from Bethlehem to Golgotha. The lake of Genesareth, the hills of Judah, the stable of Bethlehem, its pastures, and its herds. The loveliness of his character, his meekness, and the lowliness of his heart, his gentleness, and forbearing mercy; his patience under severe suffering, his forgiving spirit under very heavy trials, injuries, temptations and wrongs. A perfect model for us.

Selections.

A CURIOUS SECT.

A SKETCH OF THE CHICAGO EUTHUSIASTS WHO WENT TO PALESTINE TO AWAIT CHRIST'S COMING.

CHICAGO people have almost forgotten the commotion caused some years ago by an evangelist of the Moody type who suddenly abandoned the orthodox theories of a Heaven of gold and sapphire and began to preach Christ's reign upon earth. This man, Mr. H. G. Spafford, who lived at Lake View, and who had been a lawyer of some standing, gathered about him a congregation of theorists amounting to perhaps forty or fifty, who subscribed to his strange belief. In accordance with their theory, Christ was to appear for His final residence upon Mt. Calvary, and in order to be there on hand at the time of His second coming Mr. Spafford and his little band converted all their property into cash and sailed for the Promised Land. A traveler who recently visited Jerusalem in the interest of one of the missionary societies of the East states that she visited the house in which the Lake View community lived, and that she found them in good health and spirits, still firm in belief, and waiting with hope and resignation for the Judgment Day. This young woman, sent out from Boston, returned to that city a few weeks ago, and has written letters to friends in Chicago describing the way in which she was received, having been sick for several weeks at the house in which these people lived. Their dwelling is described as large and commodious—a neatly but not elegantly furnished house —and fitted out with all the conveniences which the best civilization of the country can furnish. She says that about twenty persons are living under the same roof, and that all property is held in common. The house itself is perched upon the side of the mountain, just without the walls of the Holy City, and presents a most strikingly picturesque appearance. Mr. Spafford, the leader of the community, is nearly sixty years of age, but is still hale, hearty, and happy.

The history of this strange belief, as far as this immediate colony is concerned, dates from the wreck of the steamer Ville du Havre in the ocean with a large number of Lake View people, including all of Mr. Spafford's children. Up to the time of this calamity Spafford had been regarded as an evangelist of the orthodox order, but very soon after he became the author of a pamphlet on the subject of the millennium, which was freely circulated about the city, and even handed out at the door of the Young Men's Christian Association. By leading men in the latter society it was pronounced the work of an infidel, but it was, nevertheless, read with great interest, and threatened for a time to create a wide rupture within the association. Only a few, however, accepted Mr. Spafford's theories, and these subsequently formed a congregation holding regular meetings in Lake View. A few of these believers are still to be found in the city.

Mr. C. H. Adams, a real-estate agent of Lake View, living at No. 1316 Wellington avenue, who has devoted much time to the study of the Bible, is one of these. Last evening, sitting in the midst of his family, book in hand, he outlined the whole theory upheld by this class of thinkers, whose interests were represented by two Western journals, The Rest, of Chicago, edited by the Rev. Thomas Wilson, and The Restitution, of Plymouth, Ind. Mr. Adams holds that when men die their spirits will return to the winds and their bodies to the sands, and the dust there to abide the time of the resurrection. But before the trumpet shall sound for the grand reunion of the blessed, a battle shall be waged in the Vale of Estralon, between the Euphrates and the Nile, for the mastery of the world. This battle, it is held, is to be waged by England against the Catholic Church. The latter will be backed by the Great Bear, or the Russian Empire, whose bride she shall be and the Russians will send down into the contest a numberless horde of warriors armed with shield and buckler. As all other warriors shall have long discarded these implements of battle it is maintained that reference is had to the Tartars, who refuse to lay aside their barbaric arms. After Christ's coming, labor and death, the two curses of man, are to be abolished and the favored of men shall live, and love, and abide in peace through all time.

Using the symbols of the Bible the believers of this class pretend to be able to trace within the prophecies all the events that have since become a part of the history of the world. The present troubles in Egypt are regarded as a fulfillment of prophecy and as preparatory to the final epoch of the world. But the event which needs most to be watched is a war which Russia is to wage for the possession of India. Then all the good people must of a surety buy through tickets for the Holy Land, for soon thereafter comes the struggle near the two great African rivers, which will decide the fate of mankind and abolish sin and suffering forever.

BOYCOTTING THE POPE.

THE matter of boycotting the Pope seems to be growing serious; at least the Vatican views it in that light, for his Holiness, in view of the small returns coming in from the contribution of Peter's pence, has addressed a letter to the Bishops urging the necessity of taking some measure to increase the amount, in order that the expenses of the Holy See may be met, and that the establishment at Rome may be kept up to its customary standard.

As the world progresses in light and liberty, as thought grows more liberal and education more general, it is likely that the contributions of Peter's pence will not be as lavish as they have been, and the area of contribution will also grow smaller. It has already taken place in a considerable degree, for France, Spain, and Italy do not furnish funds with the enthusiasm and generosity they did when the temporal power of the Papacy was undisputed. Ireland and America are now the main reliance of the Vatican, the former because it is most spiritually devoted to the church, and the latter because as a rule the adherents of the church in this country are better off than in other countries. As the deficiency is mainly found in Ireland and the United States, it follows that there must be some special cause for it, and that cause cannot be any other than the recent action of the Pope with reference to political matters. His course towards the Irish agitation would not have any effect in any other countries, and there is no spiritual controversy or disagreement either here or in Ireland to diminish the contributions.

We must assume, therefore, that the Catholics of Ireland and the United States, or a considerable part of them, have determined that they will not allow the Pope to interfere with their political beliefs and actions, and that inasmuch as he has insisted upon that right and has instructed his clergy and Bishops to warn the laity that they must not engage in any political conspiracies against England under the penalties of the church, they will resent his dictation by reducing his allowances and sending him Peter's farthings in place of pence for a while. How long the strike will continue and which side will be victorious remains to be seen. Outside observers will not be slow in deciding that the church will prevail, and that it will not be long before Peter's pence will be showering down upon the Vatican in their customary abundance, but that there is any strike at all, that members of the laity have the courage to boycott the Vatican even for a time, is a hopeful sign that the great struggle for independence of Rome in secular concerns is gaining ground steadily, and that the day is not far distant when the Pope must cease to exercise any but spiritual functions.

Miscellaneous.

THE SAINTS' ADVOCATE.

With this number we close the sixth volume of the Advocate. Of its merits in the past, its readers must judge. One thing we can say, it has been fairly well sustained, for which our patrons have our sincerest thanks. Many have sent us words of encouragement and cheer, and many express the desire that we continue it longer. In view of its aid to the Rocky Mountain Mission, and of its filling a peculiar and valuable place in the needs of the latter day work, we have determined to issue another volume, beginning with July, 1884, and therefore respectfully ask former subscribers to support it, and all to get for it what support they can, and remit subscriptions to Joseph Smith, box 82, Lamoni, Decatur Co., Iowa, and oblige,

Very truly,

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs have given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, IOWA, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE branch near Lebeck, Cedar county, Missouri, where Brn. Lloyd and Schroder live, is reported to be quite alive, and considerable interest manifested, two were baptized there May 25th, Elder C. StClair officiating.

Bro. Heman C. Smith wrote from Norfolk, Nebraska, May 21st that he would start for the south on the 23d. He anticipated that Brn. Bays and Bozarth were already en route.

Bro. Glaud Rodger wrote from Genoa, Nevada, May 19th, was preaching in places in the state, but was not favorably impressed with the outlook.

Brn. Hiram P. Brown and Albert Haws were on the 22d of May holding meetings in Alameda City, California, attendance not large, but interest fair. Bro. Brown is an effective preacher, and Bro. Haws a good assistant laborer, full of work and push when opportunity is afforded; his health was improving when he wrote on the 23d May.

Bro. R. M. Elvin baptized two at Wilber, Nebraska, May 18th.

Any Elder passing through Dewitt, Ark county, Arkansas, calling at Thomas Black's five and one half miles south-east of Dewitt will be kindly received. Some there want to hear the word.

Three were baptized at Lamoni Branch, May 25th. Brn. O. B. Thomas, John Johnston, J. W. Gillen, Joseph Snively, Nephi Snively, S. V. Bailey, E. H. Gurley, H. A. Stebbins, John H. Hansen, E. Banta, and Joseph Smith, of the branch are filling appointments away from the precincts of the branch in various localities nearly every Sunday.

Brn. J. C. Clapp baptized two at Moscow, Nez Perces Co., Idaho, May 11th.

The name of the Utah Mormon Elder, imprisoned in Bohemia, for "preaching Mormonism" is Thomas Besinger. He was arrested and imprisoned at Prague on the charge of preaching Mormonism against the law; but the charge also is, endeavoring to get persons to emigrate to Utah, contrary to the laws of Bohemia forbidding such propagandizing. He has lain in jail a month without trial, and will likely be subjected to a fine and imprisonment for four to six months longer.

IN pursuance of a resolution authorizing the further arranging of, and providing for several of the missions heretofore appointed and not reached at last session of Conference owing to earlier adjournment than was at first contemplated, the following have been arranged for, as stated,

Bro. James Caffall, to prolong present stay in Colorado, while the work may demand.

Bro. Wm. B. Smith, Iowa and Illinois, as per former appointment.

Bro. B. V. Springer, to prolong present stay at Moselle, Missouri, and its vicinity, in view of the need of the work there already begun by him.

Bro. A. J. Cato, to labor in present openings in the South, till fall, proceeding towards his home, as arranged with Bishop Blakeslee, subject to the President of South-West Mission.

Bro. W. O. Owen, to labor in the Eastern Missions, according to arrangements heretofore made by concurrence of Bro. Z. H. Gurley, and Bishop Blakeslee, and as the work may require or wisdom direct.

Others will be given notice of as they occur.

BRO. THOMAS W. CHATBURN has opened the work in his town, Hastings, Nebraska, and vicinity. He writes, May 19th as follows:

You will see by the inclosed slip that I am not idle. I continued my meetings yesterday morning and evening, the house was full and good interest was manifested. I think good will result in the shape of additions to the Church before long. I have preached six discourses to date at Fairfield.

The slip referred to, we give below:

Elder T. W. Chatburn, of Hastings, of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, preached a good sermon to a small audience, at Hopper's Hall last Sunday. The exercises were made especially interesting by the fine singing of Mr. Chatburn's two daughters and son. It is expected that Elder Chatburn will hereafter preach in the hall every alternate Sunday.—Fairfield News.

It is evident that Rev. Clark Braden proposes to spread his late effort to demolish Mormonism, root and branch. Of this effort the Salt Lake Deseret News says:

THE BRADEN-KELLY DEBATE.

We have received from Mr. Clark Braden, of Wilber, Nebraska, what purports to be the prospectus of the "Braden-Kelly debate (about to be published) on Mormonism," which is said to have taken place in Kirtland, Ohio, in February and March, 1884, between the sender, Mr. Braden, who claims to be "a well-known author, lecturer and debater," and E. L. Kelly, selected by the Josephite Mormons to represent them in the discussion. The writer boasts of having utterly demolished the position of his Josephite opponent, and proved all sorts of things to the detriment of "Mormonism" and its founders.

We are sorry to call in question the word of so redoubtable an authority as this "well-known author, lecturer and debater" (whose name and fame we never heard of before) but we must candidly confess that we have serious doubts that he did anything of the kind which he claims to have done. We have not the time or space to point out the many glaring inconsistencies in his list of claims, which have been annihilated over and over again, but will say that we do not believe that he or any other individual of his ilk has it in his power to gain any such "glorious victory." Next to a genuine "Mormon," a Josephite debater, of any intelligence at all, as long as he confines himself to truth, is invulnerable against any of the pointless sophistries of apostate "Christianity."

THE following from the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania Leader for May 18th, seems to be quite opportune in view of the unusual activity of the venders of the Spaulding story origin of the Book of Mormon; and the recent attack on that book by Clark Braden, of the Disciple Church. It is a proverb that "a lie will travel from Maine to Georgia while Truth is pulling on her boots;" but it appears that Truth has her buskins on at last, and the Rev. Solomon Spaulding—story-lie about Sidney Rigdon's connection with the Book of Mormon is overtaken and must go down under the vigorous heel taps of their indignant wearer.

WHAT SIDNEY RIGDON'S DAUGHTER, NOW A RESIDENT OF PITTSBURG, SAYS OF THE MORMON BIBLE.

It will be remembered by our readers that just previous to the commencement of the debate with Rev. Kelley on the Mormon question, Rev. W. R. Coovert stated to a Leader reporter that Sidney Rigdon, a former resident of Pittsburg, had stolen the manuscript of the Mormon bible, which had been written by a Doctor Spaulding, of Ohio, as a romance and which the latter had left with a publisher named Patterson, father of the editor of the Presbyterian Banner; that after stealing it he submitted it to Joseph Smith, of Palmyra, N. Y., who, in connection with Rigdon, published it and palmed it off as a revelation from God.

Learning that a daughter of Rigdon was living in Pittsburg a reporter called on her yesterday, and at first she declined to say anything at all on the subject, but finally, on the scribe promising not to use her name—she is married—she said: "I have never had the honor of seeing this so-called Rev. Coovert, who of late has been so free in his use of dead men's names, but I understand he parts his hair in the middle of his head, a fact which, from what I have heard and read of him, is no surprise to me. Now, while I most emphatically decline to be drawn into any controversy over that story of Coovert, which, if there was any foundation for it, I can not, for the life of me, see why it was allowed to remain quiet for years after all the actors are laid in their graves. Yet I will say this, that my father, who had the respect of all who knew him, and at a time when he had but little hope of living from one day to another, said to the clergymen around him, of which there was a number belonging to various denominations. These were his words: 'As I expect to die and meet my Maker, I know nothing about where the manuscript of the Mormon Bible came from.'

The lady said further that she believed as firmly as she believed anything, that Joseph Smith (who was, she believed, at one time a good man) had a revelation, and that the Mormon Bible was founded on that revelation. But she was satisfied the Rev. Coovert had never seen a copy of it and consequently did not know what he was talking and writing about.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. John Gilbert writes from No. 387, Pleasant street, Fall River, Massachusetts, late date:

"I preached here in Advent Chapel yesterday, and am to do so again to-night. There appears one or two interested and may possibly unite with the church soon. With the limited means at our command it is slow work to introduce the gospel in cities. Our Little Compton, Rhode Island, Branch, recently organized, now numbers twenty-three, with good prospect of more additions. We are expecting a good time at our conference at New Bedford. Return tickets over the Old Colony Railroad have been secured. Also an excursion train from Fall River is to be run the Sunday of conference for our accommodation. Music Hall has been hired for the occasion, one of the finest halls in the city. Thus if the conference is not a success it will not be the fault of those who are making the preparations. We have written Bro. J. W. Briggs asking and urging him to attend."

We give below, a notice of warning to the Saints every where against a brother who has shamefully betrayed his trust, even in Utah. It does not seem possible that men can do such things, but they do. This man should certainly be delivered over to the law of the land.

NOTICE TO THE "HERALD."

The Saints are hereby warned and cautioned that Rudolph Lathrop Lukes has deserted his wife and children in a shameful manner and by his own confession married another woman.

By order of

E. C. BRAND, Pres. of Utah Dist.

Correspondence.

THE following letter direct from the Holy Land, will doubtless be read with interest by the Saints. Bro. Tabbut is well known, and of the authenticity and genuineness of the letter there can be no question. Thus every day and upon every hand, is the mass of evidence supportive of the latter day work enlarging, and pointing with more and more certainty to "the way and the life."

JAFFA, Syria, Palestine,
March 9th, 1884.

MR. ANDREW TABBUT, Dear Cousin:—We received your letter with pleasure; we hope you are all as well as this leaves us. I was not aware that any one disliked you, I heard quite the contrary. I tell you don't look back to them sorrowful days; but forward to the glorious future. Thanks to God that you are living and well, my brother, for I had almost given you up as dead, not having heard about you but once, that was when your son, God bless him, got to Jonesport on the boat. Elizabeth Kelley, my sister, wrote to me about him; she knew him as soon as she saw him, although she had not seen him before that time. My son and self are living alone amongst the Arabs, and respected by them more than the Americans respect us, for we are poor, that is our fault. You can tell travelers who are coming here for pleasure, to take Willie, my son, for their dragoman through the Holy Land. He has traveled through from Dan to Beersheba several times; is perfect in the Arabic Language, can also speak German quite fluently. He could take them through cheaper than they can get by those large companies who charge travelers an enormous price; and it would give him a start in life. The travelers are always delighted with him, and you can help him by writing to him to let him know about any one who wishes to travel here. I am looking Zionward; for what am I here for, but because I still believe that the restitution had already commenced when we came here. It has since made rapid strides. The old waste places are all being built up. Do you remember where the wheat and barley were planted? That is all covered with grape vineyards and fruit trees of different kinds; and a large and thriving town, all built by the Germans, who say that the Jews are finished, and they are in their stead. There is also a colony on the hills or mountains of Judah, outside of Jerusalem; making the mountains "blossom like the rose," and run down sweet wine. But they build up, and another people shall inhabit. They have a company in Germany who send all things needful to them. They are not as we were, but we must walk by faith and not by sight as they do. They are great drunkards. They have two grave yards full of graves, and are filling the third one; they plant and sow and reap abundantly. The rains are better every year. As fast as the trees are planted, the rain comes plentifully. There has been no lack of rain in all the years since you went from here. Jaffa and the suburbs are so changed that you would scarcely know them. Beautiful houses have been built where it looked like an old sand hill or rock heap when you was here. The colony is all built full of houses, and partly filled with Jews. There is a flour mill there, run by steam; and Mrs. Abitha Leighton owns the Adam's House and all the land belonging to it with the store; but our old church was sold before to a German, who rebuilt it and made a dwelling house of it. Willie and I live outside near the colony in a new house built by Arabs, and belonging to them. The railroad is not started yet. There has been three or four trials to get the Firman from the Turkish Government, but they have not got it yet. Orland Tibbet's son Charles is trying now. He is a lawyer in Farmington. The French, also the English have tried, and a company from Germany, but have not accomplished anything. Yet they will get it, and that before long.

The Jews are gathering in as fast as the land will hold them, forming colonies. They are trying to buy more land just above where we live. It is high and sightly, and the price is also high. The owner wants a thousand Napoleons for it, which the Jews will not give; but they get it for less. There is a colony also near Ramley, at a place called The house of Dagon. They have been there one year and a half. They have farming utensils and a steam mill to grind wheat, and are doing well; in fact the Jews are gathering fast, and the land is being built up as fast as it can be; even the Arabs say it is the last of the world. About one year ago there was a company of about fifty families came from the frozen regions. They said they heard that the Messiah was expected soon. They were six months coming, the way was so long. They lost all their goods, and had to be helped here. They went to Jerusalem, and are being helped by the mission that helps the Jews. They are small of size, as if they had always been half frozen. The Russian Jews are the best of all; they are more civilized. Many of them are being converted in Jerusalem to Christ. Outside of Jerusalem the Jews have built a large colony just outside the Jaffa gates. One year ago this Spring I went to Jerusalem for the first time. I went to the Passover among the Jews and ate with them, and drank of the cup which our Lord said he would drink again in the kingdom anew. There is also a colony of Jews in Gaza, that are doing well. They have bought land there near the city, and have a steam mill; so you can judge whether the wheat grows well or not. On the Oggee Stream there are four mills full all the time. At Sarona, the German Colony where our wheat fields used to be, they have wind mills to grind the wheat. On the mountains of Judea they have also wind mills, and the land is filled with improvements. Every new well furnishes sweeter water than the last one. We have a new one where we live; draws up by a rope and bucket and block. There is another one called the Netter Colony, formed ten years ago to learn orphan children how to farm; also Jews. I lived four months amongst them. They are located where Samson tied the foxes' tails together and burned the Philistines' wheat fields. The golden glow that you speak of is here also. The Arabs do not know what to make of it.

From your affectionate cousin,

ABIGAIL T. ALLEY.

DETROIT, Minn.,

May 12th, 1884.

Brother Smith:—I enclose a letter from my cousin in Palestine, who went there with G. J. Adams in 1866, and has been there ever since. There was no wheat raised there when I was there fourteen year ago.

A. TABBUT.

WILBER, Nebraska,

May 2d, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—When I sit to read our beloved Herald, I am always drawn first to the column given to the traveling ministry. I am interested in tracing their labors in the field; feel glad when our Elders are well treated, and grieved when they are reviled and spoken against. My earnest prayer is, that they may bear these light afflictions patiently, always bearing about in their bodies the marks of the Lord Jesus.

I noticed in a late issue of the Blade, published at Wilber and partly edited by one L. L. Luse, that he had sent one hundred and fifty papers to the Mormon Elders. I feel sorry that so much attention has been given L. L. Luse; for I do not consider him responsible for all he says or does, and his influence is small where he is best known. I saw him at the debate in Wilber in November last, and marked his nervous, restless manner, the uncertain light of his eye that is a true index of the mind, and honestly think him "non compos mentis." Some might say a religious crank, but I do not think so. I have charity for human weakness, and the mistakes and follies of poor erring humanity should call forth our forbearance and pity. But there is "a power behind the throne," and that is Clark Braden, the mighty man of "war to the knife" upon the martyred dead, and relentless hate towards the living, who venture to differ from him in religious lore. Judas had his price; does money tempt the Rev. Clark Braden to make this onslaught upon the Latter Day Saints? It may be literary fame, and a desire to ventilate his Greek and Hebrew before an admiring public that make him pose so often as a debater. That is well enough if he is ambitious, and a little airing will do him no harm; but I would quietly suggest to his reverence, that he be careful and not make the mistake that Don Quixote did, when in his chivalrous zeal he fought a windmill.

In regard to the name Mormon, it does not trouble me. If I do not live the life of a Christian, if my neighbors do not love and respect me, my baptism has been in vain.

Bro. Robert M. Elvin was with us last Sabbath. Several of our Dunker friends as well as others were much interested. Our number is increasing here, and the interest deepens. I am not waiting for the Savior, but working.

LOVE S. THOMPSON.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,
May 21st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—All is moving along to the encouragement of those engaged in contending for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. On the 3d inst., in company with Brn. J. W. Waldsmith, Joshua Armstrong and J. B. Gouldsmith, took a ride over the country in a spring wagon to attend our quarterly conference, with the Saints of the Palmyra Branch. The preaching was done by Brn. R. J. Anthony, now a resident at Wilber, J. Armstrong, and the undersigned; an interest upon the part of several was manifest, and the next morning after the close of the conference, I was permitted to administer baptism to Mr. James E. Malcom, and I believe that he will be a great auxiliary to the cause in that vicinity, should he become familiar with the written word, and abide in the Spirit that was present at the confirmation. On the 6th inst., returned home, and contracted a severe cold in a forty mile ride, which caused me to feel indisposed for several days. On the 13th inst. I went to Wilber to look after the work in general and the Kelley-Braden debate in particular. I spent a week there, and as everybody seemed too busy for the holding of week night meetings, I had to be satisfied in whiling away the time, while waiting upon the motion of Messrs. Luse and Braden, preparing their bond on the debate; and while thus loitering around, I undertook to solve the following problem, whether Rev. L. L. Luse, pastor of the M. E. Church at Wilber, is a stool-pigeon for Elder Clark Braden of the Christian Church, or whether the redoubtable Clark Braden was a cat in the monkey's paw to draw chestnuts (shekels) out of the fire. I have not yet ruminated the matter sufficiently to be able to decide. The case seems to be so equal as to "eternal fitness" on both sides, that rather than make a mistake or do either an injustice, seeing that it is "nip and tuck," I would conclude that it was "which or t'other," or BOTH. Some three or four months ago a Mr. C. W. Meeker and L. L. Luse, started a paper at Wilber, Nebraska, entitled the Blue Valley Blade. A short time since the paper was transferred to A. N. Luse, a boy of L. L. Luse, and D. G. Hines, a typo in the office, Rev. L. L. Luse continuing in charge as editor. May 15th, the regular issue was run off, and the regular composition was removed, and a separate edition was struck, containing on first page an article by Clark Braden, that was refused by the Willoughby (O.) Independent, and the fourth page contains an article by Clark Braden, and headed "Falsehoods Told by E. L. Kelley." As the regular subscribers did not, and will not see this ignominious, bombastic virus, sent throughout the country to delude those not informed of the mask of deception, I respectfully ask that you place in the hands of our scattered eldership the following facts through the pages of the Herald. Here is Mr. Braden's ninth charge against E. L. Kelley:

"IX. Mr. Braden was hardly out of Kirtland, before Kelley was busy telling that Braden could not make out his bond, in Ohio; and when he (Kelley) pressed Braden to do so, Braden postponed the matter till he (Braden) should return to Nebraska, as he could not make out his bond in Ohio. The facts are that Messrs. Braden and Luse signed the contract and bond in Kirtland, and obtained one security; and the day Mr. Luse left for Nebraska, he handed to Kelley a copy of the bond—told him what Braden and himself had done—stated that they would add two more securities to it in Lake county; and asked Kelley to make out his bond that day, before he (Luse) left for Nebraska. Mr. Kelley refused to make out his bond in Ohio and postponed it until he could return to Iowa.

"Since the debate, Mormons have been boasting incessantly of the victory they have won. They have constantly lied, asserting that the delay in publication is due to Mr. Braden. Mr. Braden's speeches were written and read in the debate. He could have furnished his speeches to the printer as fast as he read them. His speeches have been ready for the printer for three months. His bond has been made out and signed for weeks. He has the money for publishing the book. Mr. Kelley promised Mr. Luse to send some of his speeches to him in February. He sent two in April with the preposterous demand that Braden and Luse deliver their bond to him before these speeches were handed to them by the one to whom he had sent them, although his bond was not made out. It is now May 12th, and E. L. Kelley has neither presented his bond, to Braden and Luse and asked for their bond, nor has he furnished to them a speech for publication. Mr. Braden has been compelled to write to Kelley, threatening a suit for damages, on the contract. At this writing Kelley has not complied with a single stipulation of the contract after the debate closed."

In refutation of the above I submit the following facts and dates: Bro. E. L. Kelley was at the General Conference at Stewartsville, Missouri, from April 6th to 14th inclusive. April 15th, Bro. E. L. Kelley made out his bond at Logan, Harrison county, Iowa, and sent to his brother, James M. Kelley of Macedonia, Iowa, and he sent to me April 18th. I arrived at home from Stewartsville, April 22d, and found the bond and letter from Bro. E. L. Kelley, asking me to sign with his brother. As I had had a long experience in the examination and the approval of bonds, I returned the bond to James M. Kelley, that he might qualify thereto, which he did before Ohio Knox, Notary Public, at Macedonia, Iowa, April 30th; and I made oath to the same May 2d, before J. T. Greenwood, at Nebraska City, and immediately informed Braden and Luse, through Bro. L. Anthony, that the bond was ready. Mr. Luse sent back word through Bro. L. Anthony that there was no particular hurry, and they could wait until after our quarterly conference. As I was expecting instructions from Bro. E. L. Kelley, and had some personal business to attend to, I returned home from conference May 6th, and May 8th I received a letter from L. L. Luse, that they had just completed arrangements with a St. Louis firm to publish the debate, and wanted to rush the matter through. I wrote him at once that the bond was ready, and that I would be at Wilber the first part of the next week, to exchange bonds. On Tuesday afternoon, May 13th, I reported at the office of the Blue Valley Blade, and there and then presented Bro. E. L. Kelley's bond, signed, sealed, and ready for delivery. Now for the other bond. The debate began at Kirtland, Ohio, February 12th, and closed March 7th. The bond of Braden and Luse, shows that it was made out January 28th, and when I arrived at Wilber, May the 13th, but one surety had signed, and no person had qualified. May 15th, Mr. J. H. Hardy signed as a surety, they having abandoned their Ohio surety. May 16th, I wrote with my own hand, in the office of the Blue Valley Blade, the jurat upon the bond of Braden and Luse, and May 19th, the sureties upon their bond qualified before George H. Tracy, a Justice of the Peace, and the same date we made the change of bonds. Mr. Braden knew when he wrote, May 12th, that E. L. Kelley's bond was ready, and that I would be at Wilber that day, or soon thereafter; and further I was present and in the Blue Valley Blade office May 13th, and let both Mr. Luse and Mr. Braden read the bond of E. L. Kelley. The regular issue of the Blade was May 15th, and May 17th the extra edition of the Blade was run off, or in other words, four days after Mr. Braden had positive knowledge that E. L. Kelley's bond was ready and acceptable, he published his false statements concerning these bonds. If he wrote to E. L. Kelley, "threatening a suit for damages," it was but for the purpose of making capital thereof. And the reason it was not practicable to publish a book of the size (8 by 11 inches) that the debate will be upon a hand press, and the arrangements were not made with the St. Louis publishing house till after E. L. Kelley's bond was completed. I believe these facts should be in the possession of every member and friend of this church; and the Herald is the only channel by which all may be reached. This is my only excuse for writing so explicitly. It seems to me that these men have turned themselves into scavengers, and dredged the very cesspool of vituperation, calumny and falsehood; and made sewer-pipes of themselves to exude by the public print their filthy accumulations. I feel inadequate to do justice to these cavilers. Surely Paul made a center shot when he wrote, "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ."

Ever since the first sermon was preached at Wilber, there has been kept up an inordinate opposition to our work; but we are willing to let the results of the conflict go to the world in their truthfulness. Six years ago there was but eleven members in the Blue River Branch, and all these resided from eight to twelve miles away from Wilber. In the past six years there have been baptized at Wilber and adjacent thereto, some sixty persons, and only a few have been received by letter. The branch is in a flourishing condition with a bright prospect before it. Rev. L. L. Luse, in his paper of the 15th inst., sends forth a most inglorious wail of the deplorable, low condition of his church. Thus the inexorable leverage of time extorts from our most inveterate enemies confessions confirmatory of truth, and well can we afford to abide the arbitrament of time; and if we but increase in all good works, complying with Peter's admonition and instruction, "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity; for if these things be in you, ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." There is surely in the future for us a most glorious triumph; and the reward promised is worthy all we are called upon to endure, for we have the two-fold evidence confirming us in our faith and work: First the identity of opposition made against Christ and his companions in missionary labor, with what we have to meet, and strange coincident, the opposers then and now, are the popular, enthusiastic, zealous, dogmatic religionists. But it hath been written for our encouragement and comfort, "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for their's is the Kingdom of Heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." Many of the representatives of this church can honestly lay claim to the Father's blessings under these provisions. Second, best and grandest of all, we have the Holy Spirit, bearing witness with our spirits, filling us with hope, peace and love, that is unspeakable and full of joy, giving aid and ability to endure every feature of opposition, making brighter the hope set before us, and giving strength day by day to run and not be weary.

Nearly all those at Wilber are passing through their first experience for the work's sake, and the fight made upon them is but the incentive to them to read up and know for themselves; and I can truthfully say, that I most heartily wish that every Saint throughout the world, was thus put to the test and kept busy. Then would the gospel spread more rapidly. God in his own ways proves himself a friend in every hour of need, and fulfills his every promise. My humble prayer is unto God, that while the storms rage without, we may have peace within; then all will be well with Zion's hopeful and trusting children.

Yours upon the watch tower,
ROBT. M. ELVIN.

SANTA ROSA, Cal.,
May 18th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I feel encouraged and rejoiced in spirit; for God has been mindful of us here, and has heard and answered our prayers. We have again gotten our branch into an organized and working condition, and by God's help we expect to keep it so. Bro. J. B. Price, president of the district has been with us, and has done a great deal of good in removing prejudice from the minds of the people, and also in strengthening the Saints. During his stay here we held five meetings in the court house with very good attendance, and the last night the house was crowded. The subject that night was Thirty-six years among the Mormons, or what I know of Mormonism, including a review of the polygamic question. Bro. Price is a man of God, of great faith and full of the love and Spirit of the Master. A man that will do good wherever he goes. May God bless him and prosper him in his work for the Master, and open up the way before him, that he may bring many more souls into the kingdom. He left here last Tuesday on his way up the country but will stop here again on his return. The most of the Saints here are trying to live faithful. I have been called and ordained an Elder by Bro. J. B. Price, and elected president of the branch here. It is my desire to do the will of my Master, and all that I can in the upbuilding of the kingdom of God. Please remember us all in your prayers. Ever praying for the redemption of Zion,

I remain your brother in bonds,
C. W. HAWKINS.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

May 23d.—Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice, the English Under-Secretary for foreign affairs, stated in the House of Commons yesterday that no communication from Gen. Gordon had been received since April 10th. The Mudir of Dongola, who is supposed to be friendly to the English, says that messengers who have recently entered Khartoum have been unable to return. Mr. Gladstone, on being questioned as to the alleged treachery of the Mudir, refused to make any statement.

The French transports are conveying several battalions of marines from Tonquin to Madagascar.

The results of the commercial and political crisis through which the island of Cuba is passing, without any hope of a near improvement, are daily becoming more patent. From the province of Matanzas thirty families have emigrated to Mexico, and the machinery of six abandoned plantations has been shipped to Vera Cruz to be used in Mexico on sugar plantations. An engineer has gone to Vera Cruz with a list of machinery and apparatus belonging to thirty plantations with the object of offering them to persons in Mexico. Many families are preparing to leave Havana for settlement in Caracas. The sugar-crop is very nearly all disposed of, the the greater part of the plantations having ceased to grind. Planters find themselves in a very precarious position, as nobody is able or willing to advance any money for the raising of the next crop. Many planters will be obliged to abandon their plantations. A great drought prevails over a vast region of the island, and is doing especial damage to the tobacco crop and the cattle-raising interest. In Havana and the neighborhood it has not rained for five months, except a few occasional showers of short duration. The political situation remains unaltered.

The steamer Castalia is still aground at Denia, on the coast of Spain, and is full of water. It is believed she will be a total wreck. The passengers and crew were saved.

In consequence of the Porte absolutely insisting on the abolition of the "Favored Nation" clause, the commercial negotiations between the Powers have reached a deadlock. Russia and England especially insist that the clause be inserted in the convention.

The Invincible informer who testified at the inquiry yesterday at Sligo, Ireland, is an accessory to the Phoenix Park murders. Patrick Delaney testified that Fitzgerald attended the Fenian meetings at Dublin in 1880 as a delegate to the Supreme Council of the Brotherhood.

Charles B. Clarke was hanged at Little Valley, N. Y., for the murder of his wife. Laban Stevens was hanged for murder and robbery at Waverly, O. Leonidas Johnson was hanged at McDonough, Ga., and Lloyd L. Majors at Oakland, Cal. Sixteen persons have been legally executed in Georgia the last year.

Daniel McCamley, an 18-year-old youth who was born in Rhode Island, was a witness in a Justice court at Dubuque, Ia. In reply to questions he said he did not know the nature of an oath, had never been to a Sunday-school, could not read or write, had never heard of God, and believed that Andrew Jackson was President of the United States.

An exciting election took place in Rapides Parish, Louisiana, lately, turning on the question of license or no license. The no-license forces were marshaled by the women of the Christian Temperance Union, who distributed tickets at the polls, pleaded with the voters, and prayed for victory. The result was a victory for the no-license party.

May 24th.—It is reported on what seems to be reliable authority, that the Mahdi's emissaries have been working actively among the Egyptian soldiers now garrisoning the Soudan, and that an early revolt against the Khedive's authority may be expected. The British officers in command of the garrison, it is feared, will be massacred. This intelligence creates great alarm in English official circles.

Smallpox is alarmingly prevalent in several of the metropolitan districts of London, Eng., and is spreading from the city to the adjoining provinces, several of which are already badly infected. Some idea of the present prevalence of the plague may be formed from the magnitude of the efforts which have already been forced upon the authorities to combat the disease. The City of London alone, since the start of the plague last November, has expended $250,000 for additional accommodations for the constantly increasing number of the afflicted. It is now proposed to erect new metropolitan small-pox hospitals at a cost of $750,000, making a total of $1,000,000 added to the public expense by the persistent ravages of this malady alone.

Maj. Kitchener started from Korosko across the desert for Abu Hamid with 1,200 Arabs. Maj. Wortley, at Assioui, is making preparations for a twenty days' desert march with 500 Bedouins.

The Admiralty has ordered the torpedo flotilla at Chatham and Portsmouth to be prepared for active services.

and rifles have been sent to the Governor of Dongola, whose loyalty is established.

Thirteen deaths from yellow fever occurred at Havana, Cuba, last week.

The recent burning of the court house at Elizabethtown, Hardin county, Ill., has caused considerable excitement in that section. There is no doubt that it was the work of incendiaries. Two persons, relatives, are suspected of the crime, and detectives are working up the case against them.

The Rev. Joseph Cook, of Boston, preached at the First Congregational Church of Chicago, on the best means to be taken to suppress Mormonism in Utah. He said that the Territory should be temporarily governed by a commission; that the Mormon immigrants should be sent back as prospective violators of the law; and that information concerning the true character of Mormonism should be scattered in those districts of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark where most of the recruits are obtained. The Rev. Mr. Cook looks upon polygamy as practiced in Utah as a serious danger to the country. It should be promptly dealt with. He hoped that whoever would be nominated at the forthcoming convention would enforce the laws thoroughly all over the Nation.

Eighty of the leading members of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church at Dixon, Ill., have signed a declaration stating that they will not attend the church, hear mass, or contribute towards the support of the church as long as the Rev. Mr. Gray is retained as pastor. A petition was presented to Archbishop Fehan some time ago for the removal of the reverend gentleman. The petition was ignored.

Reports have reached Korosko that Berber has not surrendered, but hostilities have been suspended, as the Governor of Berber agrees to surrender the town when Khartoum surrenders.

The cession of Sarakhs to Russia, although its authenticity is doubted, has increased the uneasiness which has been felt in India since the annexation of Merv. Another rumor, which is also pronounced to be doubtful, is that the Russians have advanced beyond Sarakhs.

Two men were arrested last night at Charing Cross Station, London, England, with dynamite and infernal machines in their possession. The prisoners, who are Frenchmen, were charged with illegally having explosives in their possession. They asserted that they intended to use the explosives for experiments in blasting rocks and mines. They were remanded to jail to await examination.

In England the first four Free-Mason Lodges were established June 24th, 1717, the leading spirits being Desaguliers, a French Huguenot, and James Anderson, a Scotch Presbyterian, who compiled the "Book of Constitutions." There are now sixty provincial grand lodges and 1,200 lodges in England, besides a Grand Chapter for the Royal Arch degree, a Grand Lodge for the work Masons, a Grand Conclave of Knights Templar, and a Supreme Grand Council of the Ancient and Accepted Rite of the Thirty-three Degrees. In Ireland the first lodge was founded in 1730 at Dublin, and there are now 350 of them; in Scotland the first lodge was opened in 1736, and there are now 400.

The present month bids fair to become a famous one in the criminal annals of this country, as it has witnessed the execution of sixteen criminals and the lynching of sixteen others, the largest number which has been reported in a single month for many years. As usual, the South leads, claiming nine of the sixteen who were hanged, and ten of the sixteen who were lynched.

A dynamite catridge was discovered in the basement of the building at Edina, Ind., in which the Journal of that place is printed. The discovery, as a matter of course, caused "intense excitement."

A mysterious disease has made its appearance among the valuable Jersey cattle comprising Dr. Miller's herd at Abingdon, Ill., and no little excitement prevails in consequence. The animals are first attacked with a dizzy and a fainting spell, after which they sink into a kind of stupor, dying within forty-eight hours. Four animals have thus died within the last forty-eight hours. They were valued at $600. Black spots were found under their skins. It looks as if the Doctor might lose his whole herd, which is conceded to be the finest in that country. Much fear prevails lest it will turn out to be the dreaded black-leg.

May 28.—The Governor of Dongola visited the disturbed districts and persuaded the people to remain quiet. The tribes have consented to pay their taxes. The Governor engages to pacify the Soudan if several thousand troops are sent him. The Governor of Darfour says: "After resisting the rebels for two years and awaiting oft-solicited assistance I finally surrendered to avoid further bloodshed." Later advices from the Governor of Dongola show that he compelled peace by a total defeat of the rebels in the disturbed districts who were completely overawed by the power of the Government. Zebehr Pasha, at the request of England, has sent a servant to Khartoum with letters insisting upon Gen. Gordon's return. The messenger will return in fifty days.

The House of Lords has adjourned to the 9th of June and the Commons to the 5th.

A number of wheat-growers from all parts of North Dakota were at Fargo to-day to witness an experiment in plowing by steam, and express themselves enthusiastic over the result. A traction engine drew eight plows, turning the sod four inches thick as evenly and well as could be done by horse-power, and at the rate of over twenty-five acres a day. It will mark a new era in wheat-growing, as it will enable farmers to plow at a cost of not more than $1 an acre.

May 29.—The conference of the European Powers on Egyptian affairs will be held the 23d of June.

The waters of the Nile are rising, and it is hoped that in consequence Gen. Gordon will be able to open communication with Berber and Cairo by means of armed boats.

Dr. Nachtigal, the German explorer, and several military officers of his nation sailed from Gibraltar for the west coast of Africa to take formal possession of the bay and harbor of Angra, Pequenna, and the surrounding district in the name of the German nation.

Zebehr Pasha, better known as the King of the African Slave-Dealers, has issued a proclamation urging the rebel chief of the Soudan to facilitate the progress of messengers from Cairo and the Red Sea coast to Gen. Gordon, and recommending them to escort Gordon from Khartoum to Koroska. Three of the messengers are sons of Gordon.

The new Mahdi of Egypt, claims the power of becoming invisible. Kassala dates are to April 12. That town is completely isolated. The 3,000 Egyptian troops of the garrison have no difficulty in keeping Hakendos away. Ammunition is plentiful, but food is running out. Maj. Von Seckendorf, who was with Hicks Pasha, is still a prisoner at El Obeid, suffering terrible privation.

A foreigner was arrested at Dover, England, with a revolver in his possession. It is believed that he designed shooting the Duke of Cambridge when landing last evening.

There is feverish excitement and terror in the Hackney district of London, England. Small-pox of the most virulent type has suddenly broken out in that district—an eastern suburb—and 1,000 cases have, within the last few days, been reported to the sanitary authorities. All the people who can afford to leave the infected district are deserting it, as the disease is rapidly on the increase. The locality is crowded with tenement-houses and the population is dense. The poor are numerous. Last night the people who could not get away became terror-stricken. The wagons which were to convey the dead away horrified the people with the frequency of their visits. Their rumbling was heard all through the night. An immense crowd collected and threatened violence, and if it had not been for the presence of an escort of police the frantic people might have gone to excess. The district has, according to law, been black-flagged. A cordon has been drawn around it and it is isolated. The excitement is spreading to other parts of the city.

In the Manitoba Legislature yesterday Mr. Greenway, one of the leaders of the "Farmers' party," gave notice of a motion to reject without consideration the insolent reply of the Dominion Government to the demands of the people of the North-west Provinces. Letters recently received from Havana by a well-known Cuban of New Orleans, La., bring encouraging news of the progress of the revolution. A new expedition which left Nassau recently has arrived at Nuevitas on board the English yacht Lord Warden. The new uprising of the people at Santa Clara is headed by Verona. In Saqua a great many planters have left the place and joined Aguero. Many plantations have been destroyed in the neighborhood of Matanzas. It is stated that $8,000,000 in gold was sent by the Bank of Montreal, Canada, to New York during the recent financial troubles.

H. C. Blanchard, of Richmond, Va., a coffee-merchant has failed. The failure is due to heavy dealings in futures. The liabilities are placed at $223,000.

Ferdinand Ward of the firm of Grant and Ward, has been arrested, and taken to Ludlow street jail, in New York City.

Intense excitement has been occasioned by the discovery of very rich silver-ore in the Rabbit Mountain Mine, north of Lake Superior. From time to time rich strikes have been reported, and there is no doubt that these mines are the richest in the world. Ten tons of quartz were shipped to a mill at Newark, N. J., and yielded $5,000 per ton. The shaft is down thirty feet, and the Superintendent says they have struck almost solid silver.

The project for the establishment of a central colonial bank at Berlin, Russia, progresses favorably. It has been decided to fix the capital at 50,000 marks ($11,900), and it is expected that the new bank will be ready to begin business on or about June 1st.

A syndicate of capitalists at Hamburg has purchased from Messrs. Baring Bros., of London, a controlling interest in the German and Samoa Commercial & Plantation Company. The par value of the shares is 2,000,000 marks and they were purchased for 55 per cent of their face value.

The recent failures in New York have not materially interfered with the sale of American securities in London. Investors do not believe that good dividend-paying stocks can be affected by the exposure of rogues and the weeding out of bogus rich men.

Warrants for the arrest of John C. Eno and James D. Fish were issued May 24th, by United States Commissioner Shields, on the application of United States District-Attorney Elihu Root, in a criminal prosecution for the misappropriation, respectively, of the funds of the Second National Bank, and of the Marine National Bank of New York City. But when the officers went in search of them, it was discovered that they were gone.

The West Side of New York, failed May 24th.

Reuben Pettit, cashier of the defunct Erie Saving Bank, of Erie, Pa., was arrested this evening and held to answer on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses. The information was made by Commissioner Leibel. The Receiver finds that nearly all the deposits taken in Monday morning were pocketed, Pettit drawing checks for himself, family, and clerks, and cashing them as fast as the money came in. Brabender, the president of this bank, having been in hiding for sometime, returned home May 24th, and his house was surrounded by a mob of one hundred men, who were prevented from doing him violence by a special police force.

The surplus in the U. S. Treasury now is about $155,000,000. Of this sum about $20,000,000 will be needed to meet bond calls, but it is expected that at the end of the fiscal year, June 30th, the surplus will be at least equal to what it is at present. The receipts at the Treasury Department exceed the expenditures of the Government, now by an average, $1,000,000 daily.

The exports of specie from New York during the week ending May 24th, amounted to but $186,697. The total for the fiscal year thus far is $41,993,752, against $6,121,810 for the same time in 1883.

Fish of the Marine Bank of New York City, was arrested May 25th,

The bank statement of May 24th, in New York, was a highly disagreeable surprise to everybody in any way concerned with Wall street. It was not a blow to the bulls only, but to the bears as well, for it was a clear indication of the general distrust existing among moneyed men and institutions. Although the banks contracted their loans during the week to the amount of over $13,000,000, they sustained an immense loss both in reserve and deposits. The reserve is now some $6,500,000 below the 25 per cent limit and over $15,000,000 below the reserves at this time last year. The decrease of $20,000,000 in deposits is a clear indication that country banks, savings banks, and private individuals have been at work withdrawing their money, and, as there is not the slightest indication that the capital so withdrawn went into new legitimate investment, it becomes evident that it has been taken out for the sole purpose of being put in some safer place than the majority of the banks are just now considered to be.

Adam Bravender, the President of the suspended Erie Savings Bank of Erie, Pa., is now an inmate of the county jail. An angry mob surrounded Bravender's house Saturday night, May 24th, and threatened to lynch him. As a measure of safety he requested the authorities to put him in jail.

The reports from Europe about the crop prospects are very encouraging. Some time ago it was feared that in Great Britain, at least, owing to the remarkably fine winter and early spring, the wheat was too forward; but it turned out that the mild weather did not force the plant, nor have there been any early rust or worms to injure it, and according to the best English authorities the wheat crop has seldom looked so well at this time of the year. The barley and oats also look well everywhere.

The Green Bay Bank, of Green Bay, Wis., failed May 26th. The Penn., Bank of Pittsburg, Pa., is again closed.

The cashier of the Union Market National Bank, at Watertown, Mass., was indicted for forgery and embezzlement, May 26th.

Outside of New York last week there was an increase of bank clearances amounting to 2.3 per cent over the corresponding period of last year.

The Mark Lane Express in a review of the British grain trade the last week says: The blazing sunshine suited wheats, which are growing fast. A warm rainfall is desired. The prices of breadstuffs are drooping, except the finest white wheats. Today the market was slow. Maize is scarce and one shilling dearer. Oats are one shilling dearer. But little is doing in the off-coast market. There were two arrivals, and three cargoes were sold, two withdrawn, and three remain. The values for forward are nominal. Sales of English wheat the last week, 58,057 quarters, at 88 shillings seven pence the corresponding week last year.

The potato crop of the United States was 190,000,000 bushels in 1883, against 268,000,000 bushels the previous year.

The striking cotton-spinners at Fall River, Mass., have decided to resume work at the old prices. They have been idle for several weeks.

The striking coal miners at Indianapolis Ind., will return to work.

Brick layers and stone masons, at Buffalo, N. Y., have struck.

The area of the recent rains extended over a large portion of the farming districts of Dakota, as well as over Minnesota. In some sections of both the State and the Territory the crops were beginning to feel the need of moisture, and everywhere the crops were benefitted by the rain. From no section have there been any returns of injury to the growing grains. In the Red River Valley and Northern Dakota there are fields of wheat above ground four or five inches, and all looking fine. There has been some warm weather in the Red River district. The weather in the Cheyenne Valley, Dakota, is cool, and could not be more favorable for the wheat. At Howard both wheat and corn average about four inches in height. Corn-planting is generally finished there, except on ground that is newly broken, and in some fields the grain is already sprouting. A large amount of flax is grown in Miner County on "new breaking." At Ashton wheat is up about four inches, and the prospects for a large yield have not been better at this time of the year for several seasons. Corn is nearly all planted in Southern Minnesota. The last dry weather gave the early stand a good start, and rain came at a favorable time. The crops look brighter everywhere throughout the State where rain has fallen. For eight years there has not been in Iowa so promising an outlook for a good crop of grain, grass, and fruit as there is now. Corn is coming forward with luxuriant growth, and with the favorable weather farmers are still planting and will take the chances. In some localities farmers are already cultivating their corn. Oats, of which there is a large increase of acreage, are making prodigious growth, and grass is all that could be desired.

The striking spinners at Fall River, Mass., lost sixteen weeks' wages, spent from ten to fifteen thousand dollars, the accumulations of four years, and ten thousand dollars more contributed by sympathizers.

The Mexican Government has received as a loan $3,000,000 in monthly installments from the National Bank. As soon as Congress approves the new statutes of the combined banks the bank is to negotiate a $20,000,000 loan for the Government in Europe. This agreement was made a month ago, was subsequently said to have been abandoned, and is now renewed. The Chamber of Deputies has passed a constitutional amendment definitely abolishing the interior custom-houses the 1st of December, 1886.

Losses in the Netherlands on American securities, principally the bonds of finished or partly-finished railroads, are reported to have reached the enormous total of $600,000,000. There is talk among the security-holders, their friends and countrymen, of a petition to the American Congress in favor of laws which shall afford better protection against railway mismanagement.

Five powder companies and six acid works in California have combined to make the manufacture of powder on the Pacific Coast a monopoly. Prices are to be advanced 50 to 75 per cent June 1st. The danger and cost of transportation are relied upon to sustain the combination.

May 29th.—$500,000 in bullion was withdrawn from the London (Eng.) banks for shipment to New York. This is a reversal of the usual order of things.

A heavy frost in Southern Wisconsin, Northern Illinois, Northern Ohio, and portions of Pennsylvania and Michigan seriously injured fruit-buds in those sections Wednesday night.

Thirty-eight million barrels of petroleum are stored in tanks in the Pennsylvania oil region—enough to make a lake one mile square and ten feet deep.

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of the officials of the Penn Bank at Pittsburg, Pa., on a charge of conspiracy to defraud.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

May 23.—Nicholas Pauley's frame house in Clyde, near Port Huron, Mich., was destroyed by fire. Two children, aged eleven and eight, perished in the flames.

Murcia is the principal city damaged by the floods in the southeastern part of Spain. The roads are impassable and the bridges destroyed. Travel on the railroads is suspended. Twenty persons are missing.

The Red River at Shreveport, La., has fallen thirteen inches in the last twenty-four hours. Reports from Fulton show a rise of four feet there in the same time. At Denison the water is slowly receding. The levees on Thomas C. Johnson's place, a few miles below Shreveport gave way last night, doing much damage. News has reached Shreveport that Wednesday night's storm carried away the bridges over Cypress and Boggy Bayous. The former, known as Emery Bridge, was carried away by a dwelling house being swept by the flood against it.

Railroad traffic throughout the flooded district of Texas generally suspended. There have been no mails from the North for two days. No accurate estimate of the damage to the various railroad lines is yet obtainable, but well-informed gentlemen of Galveston, Tex., place the damage to railroad property as high as $5,000,000. This, however, includes loss by delay and the probable decrease in agricultural products. The actual immediate damage is placed at $2,000,000, besides several hundred miles of submerged tracks, in spots, which require repairing. Hundreds of culverts, small bridges, and trestle-work have been carried away or loosened. Large quantities of freight are accumulating.

At half-past eleven o'clock this morning a terrific, rattling crash startled the west end of Portsmouth, O. The large suspension bridge over the Scioto had fallen, hurling its passengers and freight down fifty-five feet to the water below. A four-ox team drawing a five-ton block of stone was midway of the bridge when the upper wire cable parted. Mrs. Charles Fulwiler and three little children were walking behind the team. They were all hurled from the wreck. The lady was swept under the bridge and shot up on the other side like a stick, unhurt, but had lost her two-months-old baby, whose body has not yet been recovered. The little boy, six years old, came up on the upper side, scrambled upon the wreck and caught the inanimate body of his little sister, whose neck was broken, by the dress and held to her until rescue came. He was seen also to wave his arm to drive off an ox that was swimming towards them. The driver, Charles Barr, and the oxen fell unhurt. The fall freed the latter, and they swam ashore. The end of the cable struck a lad named Tom Walker and knocked him senseless, but his skull was not fractured. The bridge was 638 feet in length, and valued at $35,000. It is the fourth bridge that has gone down at the site. The first two were blown over. The third, a wire bridge like the present, fell in 1859, killing two men.

May 24.—Lightning struck and fired a large oil tank at Philadelphia, Pa., about half-past eight last night. The fire at mid-night had spread to twenty-two adjoining tanks, and had not been gotten under control. The fire has spread over an area of five acres. At Cleveland, O., an oil tank was fired by lightning. Loss $15,000. Loss by fire at Toronto, Ont., printing office, $100,000. New York City, preserving factory, $118,000. Janesville, Wis., $4,000. Stonebridge, Rhode Island, $25,000. By a fire in a coal-pit at Porto Bello, on the Firth of Forth, Scotland, nine men were suffocated.

Floods in the eastern provinces of Spain are especially severe in the towns of Orpuelo, Alguerías, and Alcira. Provisions are being sent to the sufferers.

May 25.—Hiram Sibley & Co.'s extensive warehouse at the foot of Dearborn street, in Chicago, was entirely destroyed by fire. The building was used as a seed storehouse by the firm. The flames spread with extraordinary rapidity, and the efforts of the firemen to save the building were utterly unavailing. The loss is estimated at about $175,000.

Yesterday a very heavy cyclone passed over a portion of Azotin county, Washington Territory. The general course of the storm was eastward. When first seen it looked like a cloud-burst. It was funnel-shaped. Much damage was done to property. Fences were lifted and carried long distances, trees were uprooted, gardens and crops are destroyed, and huge rocks scattered on the prairie were moved from their lodgments by the force of the wind. Stock suffered much from the cyclone. It was the first cyclone that ever visited the Territory.

Heavy rains in the river districts of Louisiana during the last ten days have badly damaged the crops. The rivers are rising and low grounds were flooded. Planters and business men are much discouraged.

At Savannah, N. Y., this morning an express and a passenger train came into collision on the New York, West Shore & Buffalo Railroad, killing four men outright and seriously injuring nine others. The accident was caused by the carelessness of the engineer of the express train, it is thought. One of the injured will probably die of his wounds.

May 26.—It is estimated that the losses caused by the Pennsylvania oil fires will exceed $600,000. Loss by fire at Carroll, Iowa, $10,000. Sheboygan, Wis., $4,000. Oshkosh, Wis., shingle mill, $8,000.

During the holiday games at Chatham, Ont., the grand stand collapsed and 150 people were injured, several seriously. The injuries consisted of broken arms, legs, and ribs. Some were injured internally. At Utica N. Y., three persons were drowned by the capsizing of a raft.

Heavy rains have caused floods in the Spanish provinces of Nuncia and Alicante. Many towns are inundated. The Government is supplying the sufferers with food and clothing.

May 27.—Loss by fire at Charleston, S. C., $100,000.

A bleacher in a straw board mill at Westerford, N. Y., exploded, killing five men, totally demolishing the building, and damaging an adjoining one.

May 28.—Loss by fire at Grand Haven, Mich., $40,000. Northern Pacific Junction, Minn., $30,000. Cherry Creek, Neb., store and post office, $3,500. Kankakee, Ill., ice houses, $6,000.

The vineyards in the district of Carthage, Spain, have been ravaged by hurricanes and many families ruined. In the District of Orniuela the houses are inundated. The village of Molins was submerged and the people compelled to take refuge on the roofs of the houses and in boats. The frigate Saragossa has gone to the relief of Larca and Burgos, which are flooded.

The steamers Anita and Princess collided Tuesday night north of Palatka, Florida. The Princess was disabled. One passenger was drowned.

May 29.—The work-shops of the Swan Electric Light Company at Lille, the Capital of the Department du Nord, France, burned yesterday. Four persons were injured by a falling floor.

Several inebriated men at Sharpsburg, Kentucky, amused themselves Wednesday night by shooting at lighted lamps in a grocery store. One of the lamps exploded and set fire to the building. The flames spread rapidly, and nearly all the principal business places of the town were destroyed. The total loss is placed at $40,000.

MATTHEW THE TWENTIETH CHAPTER.

"FOR the Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a man that is a householder, which went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard;" and he called laborers into his vineyard in the first, third, sixth, and ninth, and eleventh hours.

The pay here spoken of is the day of man's probation, from early morning, which was in the beginning, or Adam's day, until evening which is the coming of Christ, and resurrection, or the time of reckoning with his servants. Each of these calls is a dispensation, and a dispensation is when God makes or renews his covenant with the children of men, and when the great God condescends to make a covenant with men, and reveal a plan of salvation, or laws, that by obedience unto them they may become his people, and authorizes men, or gives men the authority to labor therein. It is the kingdom of heaven on earth; and when men break that covenant, and wholly depart from the Lord, it is taken from the earth unto heaven. And we see by this parable how many times it has been made and broken, thus showing that his "loving kindness endureth forever." God created Adam and Eve, and placed them in the Garden of Eden, and made them responsible beings, or free moral agents, to act for themselves." For in the midst of the garden was the tree of life, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. "Of all the fruit of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou mayest not eat; for in the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." Remember that by eating this fruit, they came to a knowledge of good as well as a knowledge of evil. They could freely partake of all the rest of the fruit. Now, if they had partaken of the fruit of the tree of life, would it not have been that they would have been immortal beings, and become as the angels; and there would have been no more than Adam and Eve. But "Adam fell that we might be, and we are, that we might have joy." On the other hand, if they had not partaken of the fruit of the knowledge of good and evil, they would have always remained in their innocence, and had no knowledge of evil, nor its effects, nor a realizing sense of good; not having tasted of the bitterness of sin, they could not realize the blessedness of innocence; for it is by contrast we come to a realizing sense of happiness, or misery. Now, God is not the author of sin and evil; but having made man a free agent to act for himself, and given him a law, and as a natural consequence, sin is the breaking of the law, and evil will follow. If there is a height, there must be a depth; if there is light, take it away, and there will be darkness. Now, when Adam and Eve had partaken of the forbidden fruit, and their eyes were opened to know good from evil, the first effect was fear, whereas before they loved the presence of their Creator, and walked and communed with him, they now ran, and tried to hide from his presence. The next effect of sin was shame; for they knew they were naked. And they were cast out from the Garden of Eden, and cut off from the tree of life, and received the sentence, that while they lived they should earn their bread by the sweat of their brow; and they were cut off from the presence of God, but having walked and communed with God, they had a knowledge of him; and knowing his great love, their knowledge brought faith in him. And now having tasted of the bitterness of sin, they felt to repent of their folly, and their repentance brought God to manifest his mercy to them, and to make a covenant with them; for the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. And he gave unto them the right of offering up sacrifices, which is a type of Christ; for "there is none other name given under heaven whereby man can be saved." And Adam could be saved in no other way, than through his name. Now it was that men were called to labor in the vineyard, and then began men to call upon the name of the Lord. From Adam to Noah there were ten that were preachers of righteousness, and if so, they must have preached Christ; for how can a man be a preacher of righteousness, and not preach Christ; for he is our righteousness. I hold that in every dispensation of God's mercy to man, or in every covenant he has made with them, the gospel of Christ has been plainly shown, or else made manifest by types and shadows; so that man, if they would but exercise their faith, might understand it. Nor do I believe he would destroy men from off the earth, as he did in the flood, without giving them first a chance to understand the gospel; for Noah was a preacher of righteousness, and showed unto the people then, by precept and example, precept by the word he preached unto them; example in his building of the ark, which was for their salvation, if they would have believed. No doubt the words of Noah were but as idle tales to them; yet were they truth; and God renewed his covenant, or established it with Noah, which was the second call; and the third hour dispensation of God's mercy and justice, his mercy as shown unto them that believed and entered the ark. His just vengeance upon all the world besides.

And Noah and they that were with him in the ark, were carried from the old world into the new, and God gave unto him the same commandment that he gave unto Adam, to multiply and replenish the earth, and subdue it, and have dominion. Noah, when he came forth from the ark, built an altar, and offered burnt offerings thereon; and it is said that God smelt a sweet savor. Was it merely the smell of the flesh burning that was pleasing unto God, or was it that it was offered up in a true knowledge of Christ, a sweet savor of the Only Begotten Son of God. It was by this same knowledge that Abel's offering was more acceptable unto God than Cain's, being offered up by faith in Christ, with a willing heart, which was acceptable unto the Creator.

Now, a knowledge of God was first given unto Adam, and transmitted by tradition from father to son, or from parents to children, down to Noah, and he went out with his children to spread abroad over the earth. Knowledge of God bringeth faith in him, and faith repentance, and repentance obedience. Had they always held on to these things, they would not have broken the covenant. But how soon do the children of men forget, although the great God had covenanted with Noah and his children that when they saw the bow in the cloud, they might remember he would no more drown all flesh with a flood of waters upon the earth; yet while the evidence of the flood was still upon the earth; while Noah was still alive, did men forget that covenant, and attempted to build a tower that would reach up to heaven; thus trusting more in the work of their own hands than in the word or covenant of God; for it is plainly to be seen, that the idea of the people then was to build a tower of great height, as a place of safety in case there came another flood; and another idea is seen, they were trying by the work of their own hands to climb up to heaven. But God confounded their language, that they could not understand one another, and it was called Babel, because it was confusion. Here we have the beginning of that power which has ever been the oppressor of God's people, who, whether she is called old Babylon, Egypt, or Medo-Persia, Grecia or Rome, she has the same Mystery Babylon, inscribed on her front. I said it was the beginning of that power. I was mistaken, it was the beginning of the name of that power; for it was first seen, or made manifest, in the serpent who beguiled Eve; and again in Cain, who slew his brother Abel, who was the first martyr; for in her, Babylon, was found the blood of prophets and Saints, and all that have been slain from the foundation of the world. And God called Abraham and made his covenant with him, and said unto him, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blest; and unto Abraham was Isaac born, when Abraham was a hundred years old and Sarah ninety. It was the fulfillment of the promise long made to them, that they should have an heir; yet when Isaac had become quite a lad, God commanded Abraham to take him and go to the land of Moriah, and offer him up for a burnt sacrifice; and Abraham was obedient; for he relied upon the power of God, that he could raise him, even from the dead. And as they went, Isaac said unto his father, Here is the fire, and the wood, but where is the lamb? Abraham answered and said, God will provide a lamb, my son. Was it not truly a type and prophecy of Christ? They had come to the land of Moriah, where afterwards was built Jerusalem; where indeed was offered up the Lamb of God, not only for Abraham's sins, but for all men's. And unto Abraham was given the right of circumcision, which was a sign of a national consecration unto God, until the righteous seed should come. And with Abraham commenced the third call, or the sixth hour dispensation, and it was renewed with Isaac and Jacob, and again with Moses, for in Exodus second chapter, twenty-fourth verse it says: "And God heard their groanings, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and with Jacob." And God spake unto Moses out of the burning bush, and renewed his covenant with him, and revealed himself unto him by his name, "I Am That I Am," and gave unto Moses authority and power to lead forth the children of Israel out of bondage, that they might be a peculiar people unto him; for in every dispensation he will have a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Paul says in third chapter of Galatians, nineteenth verse, that the law was added because of transgressions, and now what was it added to? Was not a true knowledge of Christ, or the gospel, given unto Moses, and would have been given unto Israel, but because of their stiffneckedness and hardness of heart they would not receive it; therefore the law was given for a schoolmaster, to bring them to Christ. The most of the rites and ceremonies of the law were types, which had their antetypes in the gospel; for instance the paschal lamb, and the sprinkling of blood. They were strictly forbidden to use strange fire in the tabernacle, or temple service, only that fire which came down from heaven, which typifies the Holy Spirit, it being the gift of God. And again, only those that are appointed of God could officiate in the ordinances of God's house, not even the King of Israel. Every one out of the nations of the Gentiles, that became a proselyte to Israel, had to go through a form of baptism, as well as obedience to the rite of circumcision, in order to be numbered in Israel, and as we look into this covenant that God made with Moses, called the law, we find it shadowing forth the gospel, and also the prophets which God gave unto Israel, how plainly they have spoken of Christ; Moses, and David the sweet psalmist of Israel, Isaiah, Daniel, and all the prophets, for the spirit of prophecy is the testimony of Christ.

In the parable of which we are writing Jesus has divided the day into four equal parts. The Jews reckoned twelve hours for the day, and the same for the night; consequently their first hour would be from six till seven, and their twelfth hour from five to six, our time. The first call was in the first hour, the second call in the third hour, or nine o'clock, third call in sixth hour, or twelve, noon. It is supposed there are to be six thousand years from Adam's day until the coming of Christ, and the commencement of his millennial reign; consequently the third hour dispensation came in Noah's day, and the sixth hour, or noon, came in Solomon's day, when Israel was at the height of his glory, as a kingdom, and this was the dispensation of the law; and the ninth hour comes in the gospel dispensation, when the fulness of the gospel was given unto man. In the eighteenth chapter of first Kings, we read of King Ahab gathering to Mount Carmel all Israel, with four hundred and fifty of the prophets of Baalam at the call of Elijah the prophet, that he might there meet them, and in a fair trial shew unto Israel who the one true God was, whether it was Baalam, or the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Now Elijah the prophet lived at a time when Israel had forgotten the Lord their God, and turned unto idolatry; and there at Mount Carmel he alone met the prophets of Baalam, and they there built an altar to Baal, and Elijah repaired the altar of God, and they each laid his sacrifice upon the altar, and Elijah said: "The God that answereth by fire, let him be God." Baal was the God of fire, and his prophets cried unto him, and cut themselves, but there was no answer. "And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near and said, Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word. Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their hearts back again. And fire fell from heaven and consumed the sacrifice, and all the people cried out, The Lord he is God, the Lord is God." We understand, then, by this, that Elijah was a restorer, one who restored his people to the true worship of God.

Now I wish to speak of John the Baptist, whose coming and preaching opened up the ninth hour dispensation. The angel, when he announced unto the father of John that he should have a son, as recorded in first chapter of Luke, said "he should go before him [Christ] in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, to make ready a people, prepared for the Lord." In fact he was a restorer; for at the time John came the Jews understood not the law of Moses, for they held the traditions of the fathers, or the oral law of greater moment than the written, or the law of Moses, or yet greater than the prophets, which were read every Sabbath in their synagogues; therefore was John sent unto them, to announce the coming of Christ, to bring in the fourth call for laborers into the vineyard, and restore Israel to the true worship of God. It was the voice of one crying in the wilderness, repent ye, and be baptized, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. The Scribes and Pharisees rejected the counsel of God against themselves, in refusing the baptism of John; for they said, we are the free born children of Abraham, and why should we be baptized, and in their pride of heart refused the covenant that was now offered to them. Jesus said unto them, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." In the twenty-first chapter of Matthew, twenty-third verse, the chief priests and elders ask Christ this question: "By what authority doest thou these things, and who gave thee this authority?" Jesus answered their question by asking another: "The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?" and they could not answer him, or would not. That question is just as potent in its meaning to the religious world of to-day as it was then to the Jews. The baptism of John was the baptism of repentance, and was it from heaven? If Jesus received his authority from heaven, then was the baptism of John from heaven; for says John, "He that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost." As John's baptism was the water baptism, and was the beginning of the gospel, so must every one be obedient unto it, in order to receive the baptism of the Spirit. For Jesus said unto Nicodemus, third chapter of John, "Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." Some might object to calling the water baptism John's, or the baptism of repentance, and say John's baptism was not valid, referring to nineteenth chapter of Acts, where Paul came to Ephesus, and finding certain disciples who had been baptized unto John's baptism, but had not received the Holy Ghost, he baptized them, and laid his hands upon them, and they received the Holy Spirit. Now it was not the baptism of John that Paul objected to; for, said he, "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying they should believe on him that should come after;" but because whoever officiated, supposed to be Apollos, had not authority to baptize, and this is why in this case it was not valid. In the tenth chapter of Romans, fourteenth verse, it says: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach without they be sent? So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. Exactly as it was taught in Adam's day, it is now taught in the fulness of the gospel, by our Savior and his apostles. First knowledge, and knowledge bringeth faith, and faith repentance, and repentance obedience, and the first act of obedience we find is baptism.

By the Saints, it is plainly understood, as we read in the Inspired Translation, that Adam was baptized; for the Spirit of God took him, and laid him beneath the water, and the rite of baptism was given in those days. So then we find the restorer has restored the primitive order of the plan of redemption. Unto Adam was only given a knowledge of the Father, until after he was obedient; then was given him the knowledge of the Son through the preachers that are sent. In the fulness of the gospel, or the ninth hour dispensation, is given, or preached, the Father and Son. No man can say that Jesus is the the Christ, but by the Spirit of God, and the Spirit of prophecy is the testimony of Jesus; therefore we can not know that Jesus was the Christ, until after we, through obedience, have received the Spirit; for "if any man will do the will of the Father, he shall know of the doctrine."

And so we understand that in the first hour call into the vineyard, the laborers understood the plan of adoption as it is given in the ninth hour dispensation; for the same plan that would save Adam in the celestial kingdom of God, will save us in the eleventh hour dispensation, or in any other.

And now a few more words on baptism. But why, says one, are you Saints so particular on baptism? Because it is one of the first principles of the gospel, and for the remission of sins, and the sign of a new birth. When the earth rolled forth from the hand of God, it was covered with water, and at the command of God the waters were gathered to one place, and the dry land appeared. Thus the earth was born out of the waters; and when the earth became polluted with the sins of man, and the Lord God could no longer bear it in his sight, he washed away its sins in the waters of baptism, and it is now reserved, says Peter, unto its baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost. And so also Israel under the law, received the same sign, as a nation, in the Red Sea; and also after being forty years in the wilderness, in Jordan, as they crossed into the promised land, "and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea. In seventeenth chapter of Luke, twenty-first verse, the Elders of the Jews ask Jesus "when the kingdom of God should come?" He answered them, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation, neither shall they say lo here, or lo there; for the kingdom of God is within you," or when rightly interpreted, "In your midst." Jesus set a little child in their midst, and said, "Except ye be converted, and become as this little child, ye can not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Not that it should enter into them. And again, "How hardly shall they that be rich enter into the kingdom of heaven." "Except ye be born of the water and of the Spirit, ye can not enter into the kingdom of God." Then instead of its being within our hearts, as some believe, we find it is a perfect organization upon the earth, and by obeying its laws of adoption, we may enter into his kingdom, and receive of that Spirit in our hearts, that makes us one in that kingdom. "It cometh not with observation, neither shall they say lo here, or lo there." Not like the kingdoms of this world which come with pomp and glory, and waving of banners. It comes like its king, meek and lowly, yet with the power of God. And in its mustard-seed-state, not observed of men. It was the Church of the living God, with its apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, and spiritual gifts, which gifts, Christ the King gave for the guidance of his people; and those gifts would have been in the Church to-day, the same as they were in the days of the apostles, if they had not dwindled away, and broken the covenant again; for there is to be a dispensation of the fulness of times, and the eleventh hour, or fifth call for laborers into the vineyard. What shall bring in that dispensation? Will it be done by the wisdom and power of man. If men have broken the covenant which God has made with them, can they of themselves renew that covenant? It takes two parties to make a covenant. Shall puny man make the conditions of that covenant to their Creator, and fix the plan of salvation to suit themselves? or will they take the New Testament which is the record of the covenant that God made with man in the ninth hour dispensation, which man has broken, and take to themselves the authority given to his servants then. If Christ said unto his apostles, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," does that authority given to the apostles, apply to men living under a broken covenant. No, it must be done by present revelation. The authority given to the apostles was passed down and conferred by the laying on of hands, until the church apostatized, or dwindled away from the truth, and the covenant was broken.

Can we not judge something by the past, how the dispensation of the fulness of times will be brought in? When God made his covenant with Adam, he spake with him, and gave him the promise. Also with Noah, and gave him authority to build the ark, and the pattern by which to build it for the salvation of all who would believe. And also, did he not speak unto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and Moses? Did he not give unto them the ministry of angels? And how was it in the coming forth of the gospel? Was not the birth of John and of our Savior announced by angels? And did not the voice of God attest to the work? This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased. Will it be any different when the dispensation of the fulness of times shall open, and the times of the restitution of all things, or restoration of all things, shall come? "For the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants, the prophets," says Amos. We know as we read the history of those times since the days of the apostles, how that after the Church became the Roman Church, the dark ages came on, and the minds of men were kept down by Monkish superstition, despotism and ignorance, until the time of the reformers, since which time the light of the written word has been given to the world, and great discoveries made. Knowledge has been spread abroad in every department of science and mechanics; and the chariots of Nahum "run like the lightnings, and jostle in the streets:" for it is the day of his preparation. And said Daniel, "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall increase." The day of preparation for what? For the coming forth of the gospel, or the renewal of the covenant with the children of men. In the fourteenth chapter of Revelations, sixth verse, John saw an angel flying in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, saying with a loud voice, Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment has come." The gospel in its fulness was on the earth in John's day, and if it had not been lost to the earth, what need would there be of restoring it by an angel? And what is the message the angel brings? It is the hour of his judgment has come. And the command to worship him who made heaven and earth, and the sea and fountains of waters." What was to be restored in this time of the restoration of all things? First, the gospel, for the gathering of all God's people into the one fold, to make ready a people for the coming of the Lord; for the bride, or the Church, must make herself ready for the coming of the bridegroom. Second, the Jews must be restored to their inheritance according to the promise of God, and third, the earth must be restored to its Edenic beauty, as the promised inheritance of all of God's people, and the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world for them.

And now comes up the question, in what manner would the angel come? Would he fly through the air, and preach these things to the people on the earth? or would he, judging from the past, come unto one or more men, that were appointed of God to receive these things, that the authority may be again given to many men to preach the gospel, and to baptize and to lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit, that men may stand again upon the firm foundation of "Apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone."

As we look abroad among the religious world of to-day, and hear the confused cry of its teachers, are we not led to say, Is it not time that the restorer again be sent, and the voice of Elijah again be heard, crying unto the children of men, "Repent ye and be baptized, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand?" As we look abroad among the nations, we see that the spirit of the time says, reform, reform, and revolution is the order of the day. And well will it be for the world, if anarchy and ruin do not follow. We also perceive that the "hearts of men are failing them for fear of the things that are coming on the earth; for they are seeing fearful signs and floods, and pestilence, earthquakes, and fearful destructions, which bring it home to our hearts, that the "hour of his judgment has come."

O ye people, will ye hear the voice of the restorer, and enter in at the door? for it is now open, and the "Spirit and the Bride say come." For the Master of the house will soon come and reckon with his servants, and every man shall receive his penny.

MARRIAGE.

"THEREFORE shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife." Marriage is ordained of God, and answers a special end in human existence. Primarily, "it was not good that man should be alone." In his dual nature he possessed faculties and social qualities to which none could so well respond as this God-given companion in life. The strength of his manhood is developed in the thought of the relative dependence upon him of a tender, loving, affectionate wife. It lends significance to his mortal existence, it gives an impetus to life, and enables him more firmly and definitely to determine the object and final import of his earthly career. The relation is one of mutual blessing and benefit. Entered into with any other view than this, it will prove a failure. "To give is more blessed than to receive," is as true of this association as of any other. Each has the power to bestow unlimited blessings, and like the peculiar action of the boomerang, that bestowed upon the other is apt to return to the giver with increased volume. "With what measure ye mete, the same shall be measured to you again." Solomon said, "Whoso findeth a good wife hath obtained favor of the Lord." Sound rules are reversible; so with equal propriety we may say, "Whoso findeth a good husband hath obtained favor of the Lord." Love is of God, marriage is ordained, and a good companion is the gift of God; so for the institution itself and the means and privileges of carrying it into effect, we are indebted to our Law Giver.

All the evils incident to this relation are the result of perversion, or direct violation of the sacred rite. Actual ills and real evils can not flow from a pure fountain. As well charge the refractions of Satan upon the economy and order of heaven. As it is the germinal fountain of physical life, so it was designed to be the source of unlimited joys to all in it concerned. The man that can not find peace and happiness at home can not reasonably expect to find them elsewhere. If the means ordained of God for his continued comfort are perverted and corrupted, the natural and necessary issue is that of a blighted life. Confidence destroyed, hope is attenuated, and the very foundations of his manhood are gone. Everything with which he has to deal is clothed upon with suspicious uncertainty. If there is one pillar stronger than another in the economy of life, national, religious or domestic, it is the God-given institution of marriage. In the reverse, if there is one yawning abyss deeper than another, it is that created by a willful violation of the marriage vow. If there is any hell on earth it is found in the unhappy condition of those so dishonoring themselves and the one they have sworn to love, cherish and protect. What an example of love, hope, confidence, and true fidelity is exhibited in the act of voluntary union for life! It is virtually a commitment of the keys of our individual happiness into the care of each other; and woe unto him or her that maliciously betrays such a confidence. How beautiful is the picture presented in the union and walk of two congenial spirits down the pathway of life. It is a distinctive and pleasing feature in the economy of God, and heaven rejoices in the carrying out of the original design.

Right and wrong are principles eternal in character and diametrically opposed. The former finds its embodiment and expression in the form of various commands expressive of the Divine will, the latter in certain interdicts adapted to our understanding, and meeting the direct demands of human nature. The requirements of right and the results of wrong are susceptible of so many shades, and in their application to the rules of human life are so diversified in their distinctive teaching and experience, that written commands and interdicts are and can only be general in their character and application. In this is to be seen the excellency of the gospel compared with the Mosaic code of ten commands. "The law of the Spirit of life" is perfect and entirely comprehensive in its research for and punishment of evil; upholding, cherishing, encouraging all that bears the impress of honesty, justice and right, while the latter is subject to many evasions on the grounds of non-commitment. Those who become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ, have the promise of and are subject to the Spirit that knows all things right or wrong. This is the law not written on tables of stone, but upon the fleshly tablets of the heart, and to the faithful and obedient should be sufficient; hence the reiteration in latter day revelation of parts of the old code, such as "Thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not lie, thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not commit adultery," &c., evidences that modern as well as ancient Israel were dull of hearing, and slow to understand.

One militation against domestic felicity is a depreciation of those simple yet expressive tokens of regard shown for one another, ere the certainty of choice was ratified by the marriage bond. For example: John and Mary prior to their union in marriage are responsive to the slightest wish of each other. The purity of their love finds expression in the gentlest of words; tenderest regard is shown in the glance of the eye, the gentle pressure of the hand, and the purer qualities of the soul are brought to subserve this one great end—the mutual winning of confidence and love. In the blending of these two souls by nuptial ties they are made one. Their identity and individuality are not lost; but in hope, desire, ambition, purpose, and endeavor they are to be one. The mistake is to suppose that those tokens of regard that before marriage were so agreeable and so freely bestowed, are no longer necessary nor profitable. Is not love as needful now as then? If so, must it not find expression in as tangible a form? John, what made the dream of life so pleasant to you? What stirred to the depths the tenderest and sweetest emotions of your soul? What vibrated with such dulcet cadence upon the vital tension of your being? Ah, 'twas the potent influence of the angelic messenger—love. Was not the dream of love and happiness real?

If so, are its joys to cease just where you thought they were to begin? Why not let death and death only separate you from the object of your choice. Whether soon or late 'tis soon enough. Life is not a dream, but a stern reality. Love is not a fancy, but a condition of God-like, intelligent affection for that which is worthy of admiration. Without it there is no joy, there can be no happiness, and heaven could not exist. From the dark regions of despair would only be heard the moan and echo of the wailing cry born of sorrow and deep despair, O love, let us dwell beneath the sunbeam of thy golden wing, let us drink the crystal waters from thy flowing stream; may thy thrilling influence permeate our souls from day to day, and thou shalt have the tribute of our grateful hearts.

From the bright regions of the celestial world, we hear the glad refrain that "God is love." O the joy, the exquisite rapture of the inspiring thought, that there is a realm of peace and perfect bliss, where purity and righteousness reign supreme. It may be here, it may be there. God will honor and bless his own, whether in the heavens above, or on the earth beneath. Love, clear, pure, bright as the noonday sun, is queen of the supernal realm. In life we are laden with care. Anxiety and toil are the common lot of mankind.

"Clouds and conflicts round us press,
Yet would we have one sorrow less?
All the sharpness of the cross,
Simply tells the world is dross."

All the world and its advantages are good for, is to aid us in securing ourselves and others the great boon of happiness and eternal life.

It is the privilege of those joined in holy matrimony to enjoy the fruits of such a union; but it should be remembered that the blessings and benefits of this life are necessarily reciprocal; and if there is a lack in the effort of either one to bestow such acts of kindness and loving regard as are necessary, the result is damaging to both, and the fault lies with the one so failing to perform his part. Each should carefully and persistently guard the rights of the other. The prestige of husbandry and fatherhood must not be ignored. The wife and mother is to be honored in the duties and privileges of her high and noble sphere; and even children have their rights which must not be trampled upon. Life as it should be, even though a scene of care, may be a picture of pleasantness, and a shadow of good things to come.

He that is unfaithful in that which is least, will be the same in that which is most; so the Scriptures say. If we prove untrue to our trust here is it likely that greater riches will be given us in the future distribution to every man "according to his works?" If we can not shoulder and bear up under the burden said to be "light," imposed in this life, how can we reasonably expect to assume the responsibility of presiding over and taking care of "many things?" In either case we have the promise of all needful aid. We err sometimes by imposing upon ourselves burdens which become grievous, irksome and heavy to bear, when if we would exchange them for the real burden of Christ, anxiety, toil, and the necessary cares of life would be easily weighed and carried by the adjusted "yoke." The cause of much sorrow in the world is the attempted evasion of the legitimate issues of married life. Crime is as sure of punishment as virtue is of reward; and they are equally just. To Cain it was said, "If thou doest well, shalt not thou be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door." The vengeance of the Eternal God is set against murder in any degree or form, and secrecy does not guarantee escape. Accountability enters as conspicuously into the marital relation as any other; and its claims will be as justly held and its rights as surely executed.

Nature, the great expounder of God's will and the executive of his laws, deals a just retribution to those who viciously violate her mandates. Upon whose cheek is found the bloom of manhood or womanhood? Those who best subserve nature's requirements. What a piteous representation of human existence is one whose married life has been spent in thwarting one of the purposes of physical creation. To such life is a dreary waste, and death a release from physical torture. The purest impulses of the heart have been smothered, never, never to be realized; the joys of fond motherhood are forever unknown to her; the bright germ of womanhood has been forever destroyed. There are no loving arms clasping the mother's form; no rosy lips to press her worthy brow; no tiny feet making music with their tread; no laughing eyes to mirror all before; no silvery tongue to tell the sweet story of filial love. Where joy and sunshine should have cast their golden rays, shadow and gloom have spread their sable pall. O dread destruction, thou hast done thy fearful work, and angels set to guard the righteous in their way, look with pity and dismay upon the scene of degradation and woe.

Little children, emblems of purity and innocence, are given as one of the richest blessings of life. Looking upon them the parents behold the impress of their own beings. Paternal and maternal blood flows and mingles in their veins. What a tie is this! A bond, a pledge of fidelity and love. How wonderful is the mission of these tender germs of humanity. Living examples of dependence and trust. Who can gaze into the crystal fountain of juvenile eyes, and not be touched with the tenderest emotions! How the heart goes out in sweet effusion, as we look upon their lovely forms. Their very helplessness binds them closer in the deepest affections of the soul. Their physical weakness is to us a world of moral and intellectual strength; and by their influence are the higher and better faculties of the mind and heart developed.

When the messenger of death comes, and from us takes the little one of two, three, or five years of age, we mourn, and yet 'tis best. If their mission on earth was not done, Providence would bid them longer stay. Departing ere the darkening shades of sin have marred the fair work of the Creator's hand, bright angels bear them gently to the land of bliss, there beyond the reach of cloud or tempest, to enjoy the grand, eternal sunshine of supernal day. Is this world of care, anxiety, turmoil, strife, temptation and disappointment so desirable that we could wish to call them thence? It is written, "There remaineth, therefore, a rest to the people of God." The people of God are those who faithfully perform the work that God has assigned them. Infants who come into the world, suffer in the flesh, and like the lily of the valley, bloom, then fade away, have done a work, and are worthy and are justly entitled to a commensurate reward in the mansions above.

There is but one thing in life over which we really need to mourn, that is a failure to do the work assigned us. Joy, inconceivable to us now, awaits the true and faithful ones. God has pledged his word to give the riches of his grace to any and all who can and will receive. Dear reader, shall we not bear cheerfully the burdens of life, adjust the yoke that will fully enable us to do our part in the drama of human existence, finally to reap the rich reward guaranteed by our arduous and faithful toil?

"Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it. * * * So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. * * * Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord, * * * and the wife see that she reverence her husband. * * * And ye fathers provoke not your children to wrath; but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." (Eph. 5th and 6th chapters).

In bonds of gratitude and love I hope to remain.

BAPTISM BY FIRE.

DEAR HERALD:—John says: "He that cometh after me, * * * shall baptize with the Holy Ghost, and with fire."—Matt. 3: 11.

The fiery baptism is what will cleanse us from our sins and corruptions. We might be baptized by water and the Holy Ghost, and yet not be saved, because we have let that Spirit, (Holy Ghost), slip from us; or because of our corrupt acts, the Holy Ghost could not stay within us. For "the Holy Ghost can not dwell in unholy temples.

He that loves the world more than God, can not please God. Therefore the Lord chastiseth us like a father, that we may not forget the covenant we made with him in baptism by water. And as Jesus himself "was made perfect by suffering, (Heb. 2: 10). And "He learned obedience by the things he suffered." And Paul says in Heb. 12: 5, 8, 11.

"Ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children. My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him. For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons. * * * But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all [members of his church] are partakers, then are ye bastards and not sons. Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous, nevertheless afterwards it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness, unto them which are exercised thereby."

Hence, to endure suffering, is the baptism by fire, whereby we are cleansed for the kingdom of God. For "every one shall be salted by fire." Like as sacrifice, or food, is good for nothing without salt. (Mark 9: 42). Peter says in 1 Peter 1: 7:

"That the trial of your faith being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, that it might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ."

James says:

"Blessed are the men that endureth temptation, for when he [they] are tried, they [or he] shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."—James 1: 12.

Our Lord was baptized by fire. He asked some of his apostles:

"Are ye able [are ye willing] to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with, and drink the cup that I am to drink?"—Matt. 20: 22.

His fiery baptism began when he was led into the wilderness to fast, to prepare himself for his ministry, when he also was tempted by the devil; and its end was when he cried out, "It is finished."—John 19: 30. Paul says to the Philippians:

"For unto you it is given in behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake."—Phil. 1: 29.

And to Timothy he says in 2 Tim. 3: 12:

"All that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution."

In Zech. 13: 8, 9 it is said:

"And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off, and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried. They shall call on my name, [Jesus], and I will hear them, I will say it [they] is my people, and they shall say the Lord is our God."

May we all be able to stand the fiery baptism, is the prayer of

WHAT I DO NOT LIKE TO SEE.

1. I abhor a disposition which desires to be dictator for others.
2. I hate to see men or women, who think they are more important than almost any others in the Church.
3. I do not like to see a brother so full of conceit, that were his talents praised by others, he would conclude he was wise enough to sit in "Moses' seat."
4. I do not like to hear an Elder boasting of the great things he has done here and there.
5. I do not like to see those who hold priesthood, and yet not branch officers, belittle, berate, and ridicule the branch officers in their course of governing, and exhibit a spirit of unwillingness to be governed by the "powers that be."
6. I do not like to see Elders treat with contempt the resolutions passed by the District Conference, requiring them to report to that body either in person or by letter.
7. I do not like to see such Elders refuse to forward their licenses to the authorities of the district, when requested by conference to do so.

8. I do not like to acknowledge such Elders as true servants of God, and worthy to present "law and order" to saints or sinners.

9. I do not like to see a district conference exhibit a fear of such men.

10. I do not like to see a district conference continue to keep one man in the presidency from year to year against his will, and thus continue to "whip Charlie" because they might think he was more supple than others in the team.

11. I do not like to see subordinates try to kick out of the traces, because the leaders do not take exactly the track they would suggest.

12. I do not like to see saints (?) taking a novel paper from year to year, and hear them say, "I can't afford to take the Herald, Hope and Advocate, because they are too high."

13. I do not like to see the Heralds, Hopes, and Advocates used for lamp, pipe and cigar lighters, wrapping paper and patterns.

14. I do not like to hear a saint (?) speaking of the "abominable heresies in the Reorganization."

15. I hate to hear from the lips of those who hold priesthood (or any other hood), phrases overflowing with vulgarity, loathsome in their meaning, without any provocation for such utterances, and these in the presence of married and unmarried ladies. I could not help thinking "From the abundance of the heart, &c."

16. I do not like to see "too much familiarity" which breeds contempt."

17. I do not like to hear saints speaking evil of each other.

"That abominable tittle tattle,
The cud e-chew'd by human cattle."

"If Christianity has not cut off the claws, we incline to scratch somebody. If Christ possesses us wholly, and we have been transformed by his Spirit, there is no disposition to stone our brother or sister, even if at fault. It is not in the genius of Christianity to do it. It is a cancer in the soul that must be cut out, or burned out, or purged out of the blood, or it will kill us."

"If wisdom's ways you would pursue,
Ob-serve five things with care;
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak;
And how, and when, and where."

18. I do not like to see so many saints (?) so busily engaged in manufacturing "stools-of-do-nothing" to be always on hand, and in position, and occupied in the saints' meetings. God never made any, neither gave commandment to any one else to make them. But a great many Saints (?) possess one apiece, and would consider it a great sacrifice to part with it. Some would rather leave the church than to forsake the "stool-of-do-nothing." I should be glad to gather them all up if the owners could be convinced they were useless to them. I should like to send the whole "lot" back to the original inventor, (the devil), with word that the people of God had no room in their houses of worship for them; and that henceforth his ingenious patent would receive no notice from the faithful disciples of Jesus.

19. I do not like to see Saints take offense especially when none was intended. "Suspicion is the poison of true friendship, and overthrows the judgment of some."

20. I do not like to see saints get "awful" mad when they are offered a "shoe that fits;" for that is the "shoe" they should wear. "I think it meet (necessary) as long as I am in this tabernacle to stir up the saints by putting them in remembrance of these things."

A. N. I. WITNESS.

FORGIVENESS.

I HOPE to be understood this time concerning my belief in relation to forgiveness by, or through, the act of repentance; and that only true repentance can be shown either to man on earth or God in heaven, by not only turning from sin, but in making a faithful restitution, so far as it is possible to make to earthly creatures, but this will not grant them any reprieve for the offenses committed that are not already in some way atoned for, either before or after baptism, as the act of baptism only brings us into a condition where we can become the sons of God by adoption into the kingdom. But this does not make us sons. It places us in a position to become such; but as before, it is left with us, or in other words, it is optional whether we grasp the opportunity to become the sons of God. Our sorrow for sin cuts no figure in the case, if we do not continue it through life, and with a purpose to make restitution, not only to man, but to God, to whom we now rightly belong, on account of the covenant we have made with him. Here let me explain. If I have committed a crime against the laws of my country, and have not satisfied the demands of the law or laws; and then I shall enlist as a soldier in the army, and serve either for a term of years, or during life, in either case am I free from the law? Then can I expect an equal inheritance with those that have satisfied every demand of the law? Although I have done my duty as a soldier faithfully and well, yet will it not, or can it not justly be said to him or me by the Almighty, "I have somewhat against thee." But while I believe that God will deal with us according to the intent of our hearts, in a measure, we should not be too sanguine, but rather fearful and watchful, that we may improve every opportunity to do good; that by so doing we create within us a godly nature; and as Paul has it, we make a living sacrifice daily, our reasonable service. As an illustration: A is sent to prison for a term of years, say twenty, and B is also sent for the same number. A commences his term upon the same day as B, but by his faithfulness and over time, which he has made by sacrificing his hours of rest; and by perseverance and industry adds daily two hours of actual service to his credit, which would be two twelfths of his time, which would shorten his time just in proportion to the overtime he had worked. But B was only faithful to perform the task which was set for him. Is it not good logic, that the willing sacrifices that A has made should be rewarded sooner than B, who has only done his duty as demanded of him, and has kept his talent wrapped up in a napkin; while A has paid, not only the interest, but has added to the principal continually, and by this means has been constantly making restitution for offenses committed before he had this opportunity offered to him, that he might become a son of God. If B's position is as safe, and he is sure of an equal reward with A, and the Elders so understand it, how many willing, sore feet and weary limbs, would be forcing their way through tangled forests, or climbing the rough mountain sides, to carry the glad tidings of great joy to the nations of the earth? If I believed that B was, or would be equal with A, I would do nothing except what I could not avoid doing. I should count it folly in any who would. "But thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory," there are some who believe as I do, and are acting upon their earnest convictions, and are subsisting upon that which pleases God to provide for them, and are not trying to fare more sumptuously than their Master, or to make this life their only hope. Paul seems to have understood what was required of him, as he arose and went to work with a purpose, and so continued up to the time of his death. So far as we know, all the disciples of Christ were not terrified by coming face to face with death itself.

Our Elders have in some instances been sorely tried; but as yet have not, at least of late years, resisted unto death. My prayer to God is, that they may never have this trial to endure.

If I can lay my sin down at the water's edge, and have no more remembrance of it, this is the place to come just before our final departure. But to my mind, a faithful repentance must not wait, but must be full of good works. I have no faith in repentance as a last resort to shun the consequences of an ill spent life; but in an early turning from sin, that we may have the more time to make our election sure. We need have no fear about becoming too perfect. Every moment of time, or talent so spent, will be set to our credit; and we will be rewarded accordingly. If we desire an abundant crop, we should not sow sparingly; but by constant toil and labor, we are rewarded in due season, if we faint not. But suppose we do faint, what is the consequence. A failure of course. Then a repentance is not once for all, but a constant work of love and restitution, both to God and man; first to God for times past of our life, that we owe to him, and for the grace allotted us, and to man, as we can only approach unto God as free men and women. If we are in debt, either to God or our fellow creatures, we can not justly be free; and we must look to God for an extension of time, that we may pay the uttermost farthing; and the more we pay in this life, the less time we shall have to endure the society of the prison house. I believe that God will grant us sufficient time, either in this life, or in the prison house, or paradise, provided by the Father. We can not repent from or by dead works; but the lively working of the Spirit, the Spirit of restitution, a continual and perpetual restoring of good things, that our treasure may be full.

The more I study and thoughtfully dwell upon the word repent or repentance, the more convinced I become, that it implies a doing again, or re-doing that which the candidate has determined to do. If it means, that a person should sorrow for sin, it would also imply that they should sorrow again, or continue to do over that which they had done before. If it required them to do something different from that which they had previously done, then is it not necessary that they continue to do good; or if they were required to do penance, or do good, is it not reasonable that they re-do repentance or good; and by doing good every day of their lives, do they not re-do their first good works; and if the first act of a christian's life is to repent and turn from evil and do good, shall he stop doing good? God forbid; but continue, or re-do that which was first required of him. The same may be said of faith. We must admit that we must continue in faith and good works. Jesus said to the Jews, how oft would I have gathered you, but ye would not. "Again I say, not unto you seven times, but seventy times seven." A continuing to re-do, and take for instance the acts of the Father himself. He first sent the old scriptures, and then his Son, and then the New Testament scriptures. Again in these the last days, he sent a Joseph Smith, with the Book of Mormon, as being the new and everlasting covenant, to be delivered to man in the last days. Again, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; and he has promised to continue to speak to us, until time shall end, if we will live worthy before him. He is continually re-doing for us. He is revealing himself to us by his word. While he may not speak the same thing, yet in the same manner, so that after all, it is a repetition of himself. Consequently he is re-doing that which he has before done; and as we believe he will continue so to do, until the end of time. If God, the Eternal Father, will turn and over-turn, and continue so to do, for us his handy-work, what may reasonably be expected of us. Can we do more than to try to do over and over, again and again, every good deed that we can do? Do we not day after day, and night after night, go to him in prayer, with thankful hearts? What are we doing but repenting or sorrowing for sin, and also showing by our works, that we are sincere in our determination to continue steadfast unto the end; and unless we do so continue, our labor will be in vain. May he ever aid us so to do is my prayer in Jesus name.

THE NEGRO RACE.

MR. THOMAS FORTUNE, the editor and owner of the New York Globe, a newspaper devoted to the interests of the colored population, is, perhaps, the best authority on the present condition of the colored race. In a recent statement before the Senate Labor Committee he sketched the condition of the colored people, and in the course of his statement said:

According to the census of 1880 there were in the country 6,580,793 people of African ancestry. In 1790, according to the first census, there were only 757,208. The increase of population from 1850 to 1860, under the slave regime, was 22.1 per cent; from 1870 to 1880, 34.8 per cent. The increase is and will continue to be healthy in the state of freedom, since human effort and propagation have their greatest expansion in a state of freedom from all tyranny and narrowness. If we were freer our growth and propagation would be vastly greater. As it is, we are fettered by the State and repressed by individuals and corporations. We are not free as other men to come and go, to make and spend, to enjoy the protection of the laws equally, or to share as other men the rights and immunities of Government. Like the Irish subjects of Great Britain, we have received everything from our Government except justice in equal degree with others of our fellow-citizens. This she has always denied and still denies to us.

The greatest misfortune which the Government inflicted upon us up to the close of the war was the almost universal illiteracy of the masses—illiteracy which was designed and made irrevocable by the most stringent of statutory enactments. Our intellectual and material poverty, absolute bankruptcy, was caused by the Government, which closed the book of knowledge to us and denied us the common right to accumulate. We are not responsible even to-day for the widespread poverty which obtains among us. We have not the facilities and aptitude to amass large fortunes by speculation and speculation, but we are learning to emulate the virtuous example of our white fellow-citizens in this regard.

Considering honestly our lowly beginning, the following facts are of interest. From the Bureau of Statistics we find:

Enrollment of colored youths, as far as reported by the State school officers for the year 1880, 784,709; per cent of colored youth of school age enrolled, about 48.

Colored school-teachers in the United States: males, 10,520; females, 5,314; total, 15,834.

Normal schools for colored youth, 44; teachers, 227; pupils, 7,408.

High schools, or academic, 36; teachers, 120; pupils, 5,327.

Universities and colleges, 15; teachers, 119; students, 1,717.

Schools of theology, 22; teachers, 65; pupils reported, 880.

Schools of law, 3; teachers, 10; pupils, 33.

Schools of medicine, 2; with 17 teachers and 87 pupils.

According to the census of 1880 there is in the South a total school population of 5,426,890—3,758,480 being white and 1,668,410 being colored; enrolled, white, 2,013,684; colored, 685,942. The total appropriation for school purposes by these States is set down at $12,181,602, being the beggarly pittance of $2.26 per capita. Only 31 per cent of the white and 26 per cent of the colored children of Louisiana availed themselves of the advantages of the public schools, while the State appropriates the munificent sum of $529,065 for educational purposes, being $1.94 per capita; while the City of New York alone expends more than $3,000,000 per annum for the education of her youth. Four and two-tenths per cent of the school population of New York State can not read, and 5.5 can not write, while in Louisiana 45.8 can not read, and 49.1 can not write. Florida, with a school population of 82,606, appropriates only $134,880 for school purposes, being $1.63 per capita. The District of Columbia, with a school population of 38,800, appropriates $368,343, and 61 per cent of the white and 73 per cent of the colored school population are enrolled, the per capita being $9.49. In the District of Columbia 5.7 per cent of the school population can not read and 18.8 per cent can not write, while in Florida 38 per cent can not read and 43.4 per cent can not write. These facts are suggestive.

Mr. Fortune gave the following additional facts:

"There are in this country 7,646 colored ministers, and a church membership of 2,000,000. The negroes of Georgia own 680,000 acres, cut up into small farms, and in the cotton States they own and cultivate 2,680,000 acres. The Freedman's Bank had 61,000 black depositors, the aggregate of whose deposits was $56,000,000. From 1857 to 1861, under slave labor, there was produced 18,230,738 bales of cotton; from 1878 to 1882, under free labor, 27,667,367 bales, being a balance in favor of free labor of 9,436,639 bales. South Carolina raised within comparatively the same periods 498,993 more bales under the system of free labor. This ought to be sufficient answer to the charge that negroes are lazy. The average daily rate of wages of farm labor in the South is nearer 50 than 75 cents, out of which the laborer must feed and clothe his family. He seldom pays rent and seldom sees a cent of currency. He is paid in store orders which can not be negotiated, and takes his farm on shares. One of the greatest hardships of the colored farm laborer in the South is the system of store orders and of share labor. The penitentiary system of the South, with its infamous chain gang and convict features, is not equaled in inhumanity and cruelty outside of Russian Siberia. There are some rich farmers among colored men, but they are few. There are several in Florida who own farms worth $5,000. A colored man in Charleston not long since bought a farm for $20,000. Another colored man in Gadsden county, Florida, employs about 200 men a year and runs farms in several counties. Probably in the South one colored man in twenty only owns the piece of land he lives on."

THE NEGRO VOTE.

In 1880 the negro vote in the Northern States was as follows:

Connecticut	11,547
Illinois	46,368
Indiana	39,228
Kansas	43,107
Massachusetts	18,697
Michigan	15,100
New Jersey	65,104
New York	531,277
Ohio	79,900
Pennsylvania	85,535
Total	935,843

Conference Minutes.

LITTLE SIOUX DISTRICT.

Met at the Saints' Meeting House in Little Sioux, Harrison county, Iowa, at 11 o'clock a. m., Saturday, March 8th, 1884, J. C. Crabb president, Phineas Cadwell, assistant president, and E. F. Shupe secretary.

Branch reports.—Magnolia 204, 1 baptized, 9 received by letter. Little Sioux 170, last report should have been 169, 2 received by letter. Spring Creek 47, 1 received by letter. Union Center 97, 1 received by letter, four removed by letter. P. Cadwell reported the spiritual condition of Magnolia Branch as about the same as at last report. J. Gunsolly reported Little Sioux as fair, and J. M. Putney reported Union Center as somewhat slack, but he hoped for the better in the future. Official reports.—Charles Derry, Phineas Cadwell (baptized 4), and J. C. Crabb, High Priests; J. F. Mintun (by letter), George Montague, and J. B. Lytle of the Seventy; Elders E. McEvers, Wm. Chambers, Richard Farmer, David Chambers, J. W. Wight, Wm. C. Cadwell, by letter, Henry Garner, J. M. Putney and Donald Maule in person; Priests B. M. Green, Wm. T. Fallon, and Wm. H. Bradford; Teachers Wm. R. Davison, J. Gunsolly, E. F. Shupe and Homer Lytle, reported. Presidents Crabb and Cadwell reported having assisted at the disorganization of Union Grove Branch, and on motion the same was accepted.

A two days' meeting was appointed at Six Mile Grove, commencing the second Saturday in May, J. C. Crabb in charge, and one at the O'Banion School-house, commencing the third Saturday in April, D. Maule in charge.

The committee on district rules of order was granted further time.

A communication was read from Bro. Yarrington, with reference to organizing a branch at Beebetown, and on motion the matter was left to the judgment of Bro. David Chambers. A communication was read from Spring Creek Branch, asking for the reasons for the findings of committee appointed at last conference on the appeal of J. Chapman from the decision of Court of Elders in case of officers of Spring Creek Branch vs. J. Chapman. The matter was referred to the brethren constituting said committee, who submitted their reasons in writing, and the secretary was instructed to spread the same on the minutes and send a copy to Bro. David Chambers, clerk of Spring Creek Branch.

A resolution with reference to the indebtedness incurred in building the Little Sioux meeting house was taken up, and referred to a committee, consisting of Brn. H. Garner, W. R. Davison and John Conyers, who reported as follows: "That Bro. Gamet as one of a committee of three, known as 'The building committee,' advanced some $400 for labor and material, with the understanding that it was to be collected and paid back to him by the branch. That only about $170 had been so collected and paid back, leaving a balance of about $230 still due Bro. Gamet. He now says that he would like the matter settled; and if the brethren see fit to pay him $200 he will be satisfied." The report was accepted, the committee discharged, and a new committee consisting of Bro. Wm. R. Davison, Wm. T. Fallon, J. M. Putney, Wm. H. Bradford and Wm. Stuart, appointed to solicit and receive moneys from the different branches and members of the district, for the purpose of liquidating the above indebtedness.

George Montague, P. Cadwell, and Wm. C. Cadwell were elected as delegates to Annual Conference, and any one or more of them in attendance at said Annual Conference, was empowered to cast the full vote of the district.

Resolved, That where any are baptized under branch authority, they shall be considered as members of said branch without a vote to receive them. That this conference can not approbate the practice of drunkenness, nor of attending balls and dances, such practices being opposed to the letter and spirit of the gospel; and further be it resolved, That we hereby notify all members of this district that all parties belonging to this district hereafter found guilty of the aforesaid evils, shall be dealt with according to the law of God as touching all crime against said law.

David Chambers and Nephi Yocum were sustained in their former mission; George Montague was sustained in his former mission as circumstances would permit; E. R. Lanphear was appointed to a mission at Twelve Mile and Six Mile Groves; Wm. C. Cadwell and Charles Derry were continued in Correctionville mission; D. Maule was associated with H. Garner in western part of Harrison county; J. B. Lytle and J. M. Putney were continued in former mission; B. M. Green and Isaac Shupe were released from laboring under direction of district president; and Sioux City was included in Correctionville mission of Brn. Derry and W. C. Cadwell, in answer to request of Bro. John Conyers, who resides at Sioux City.

J. C. Crabb was sustained as president, Phineas Cadwell as assistant, Wm. C. Cadwell as secretary; and it was further decided to sustain Bro. Crabb in the labors he could perform.

Bro. Charles Derry preached Sunday morning and afternoon; the latter being the occasion of the funeral of Bro. Rowland Cobb and his wife Sr. Eliza Cobb.

Adjourned to meet at Magnolia, Iowa, on Saturday, June 14th, 1884, at 10 o'clock a. m.

A few hours before he passed away, he sang distinctly one of his favorite hymns, and manifested his resignation. Had been a resident of Davenport 42 years. Was widely known, beloved and esteemed; a good citizen. His family, consisting of his wife, one daughter and two sons, with several grand children, with two brothers with families, deeply mourn his loss. He was a good and affectionate husband and father. He died in the faith of the righteous, whose hope is glorious. Funeral services by Elder W. B. Smith.

JOHNS & ORDWAY,
Manufacturers of
HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES,
605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

RENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

Messrs. Johns & Ordway, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

BRO. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents. (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. We also furnish a Picture Outfit, consisting of a fine Water Color Portrait, (without frame), also small picture from which it was taken, and envelopes and cards, all by mail prepaid for only 98 cents.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Saints' Meeting House at Lamoni, is being advanced as rapidly as practicable; work on the frame began on the 26th of May. At present writing, June 4th, the body frame is up and nearly ready for the rafters. The brick are being made under the management and direction of Brn. D. Dancer and S. V. Bailey, with a working force consisting of Brn. Horace Church, hauling water; George Braby and I. P. Baggerly, pitmen; George Harger, moulder; David Walker and George Foreman, carriers; and Arthur Judson, in care of yard. Between five and six thousand brick were moulded yesterday, June 3d. The Building Committee have reopened the books of subscription, and made a report of progress to the business meeting of the Lamoni Branch, held May 31st, and asked that the members of the branch subscribe with such renewed determination that means shall be supplied to finish the enclosure for use this fall. It will require a great effort, but it must be made. The branch owe it as a duty to themselves and the community around them to build their house, and large enough to accommodate a large congregation.

Quite a number of brethren, especially Elders, have borrowed books from the Church Library which they have failed to return. In conversation with Bro. Scott, the Librarian, we learn that some Elders have kept the books they have borrowed five years and over. This is wrong. The purpose of the Library is to serve the interest of all, not a few; and if a few thus borrow and do not return, how can the next comer be served. The books should be kept at the Library for reference; and not be scattered from Dan to Beersheba in private libraries. We hope that those brethren having books from the Church Library will have their feelings hurt by this request enough to return the books at once; unless the date of their having taken them out is so recent that they have not had a reasonable time to peruse them. Personally, we appeal to those who borrowed of us copies of the Times and Seasons, Fabiola, or the Church of the Catacombs, The Gentle Skeptic, and The Desert of the Exodus, to return these books to us; either by mail at their expense, or by express at ours, just as they choose. It is very forgetful and careless to borrow and keep articles so long.

By letter from Sr. Matilda Howell, of Boonsborough, Iowa, dated June 2d, we learn that five were lately baptized there by Bro. J. S. Roth; four heads of families, the other a student for ordination in the Christian Church, who preferred the truth. His pastor felt considerably aggrieved, and gave the Latter Day Saints a terrible scathing in his Sunday morning, June 1st, services. One of our sisters from Boone was present and heard him. Sr. Howell reports having been healed of sickness by the laying on of hands.

Sr. J. M. Fletcher, of Oxford, Sumner county, Kansas, is desirous that some Elder shall visit their town. Whoever comes will meet opposition from some, but so it is everywhere.

Bro. Joel Allen, of Cove, Jackson county, Ohio, wrote us May 18th, that he had seen a regathering of the Saints in Kirtland; that these Saints, men and women, were clad in plain black clothes, moved with ease and power, and were filled with peace and love. He saw the figures 1886, in gold, in the temple.

Two were baptized at Lamoni, Sunday, June 1st, by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

The New Bedford, Massachusetts, Evening Standard for May 21st, 1884, contains a reply to Miss Sybil Carter, who has been descanting upon the Mormons of Utah, and Mormonism in general, in rather an improper way. The reply is by Bro. John Smith, of New Bedford, and is quite fair.

At the invitation of Leon Post, No. 251, of the Grand Army of the Republic, headquarters at Leon, Decatur county, Iowa, Bro. Zenas H. Gurley delivered the oration at the memorial services held at Leon, on Decoration Day, May 30th. The day was splendid, the attendance large, the services impressive, and the oration good. We obtained the privilege of giving the Saints the oration in the HERALD, which we do with pleasure.

June 2d, the editor of the HERALD visited the Lamoni Cheese Factory, and witnessed the turning of 1,750 pounds of milk into cheese. There are two vats, one capable of holding 2,000 pounds of milk, and the other some 4,000 or more; and it is expected that these "vats will overflow" soon with the abundance of supply. We have never seen any country where the cattle recuperate from the long winter's confinement on dry feed so rapidly on being turned "out to grass" as they do in Decatur county.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. James Caffall wrote from Manassa, Colorado, May 26th.

"I baptized three yesterday, (Sunday). A very large attendance of Brighamites to witness the ceremony. One of the three was a sister, whom one of their Elders said two weeks ago, they would not allow the Josephites to have. She is a noble woman. The pot has been boiling furiously these last two weeks. Teachers very busy; as soon as they hear of any member coming to our meetings, they go for them. The total number now baptized is twenty-four. Seventeen men, women and children moved out last Friday."

Bro. E. Penrod wrote from Elko, Nevada, May 28th.

My family are with me at the mines, except one daughter in charge of our house in Elko. Bro. Gland Rodger will find a home with us when he comes here. A brother to Miss Cora Johnson, while riding horseback, was killed by lightning here a few days ago. The same stroke also killed the mare he was riding and its foal trotting by its side; an unusual thing for Nevada.

Bro. J. W. Dimock, of Newport, Hants county, Nova Scotia, May 17th, writes that he has received a copy of the Blue Valley Blade, L. L. Luse's paper. Of it he writes:

I would ask the editor of the Blade, to explain whether he sent this paper as a sample for me to canvass by, that he might add to his list of subscribers; or did he send it to unvail Mormonism. If to gain subscribers, he has sent the wrong number, as the honorable people of Nova Scotia do not wish to help flood the Province with slander and falsehoods. If to unvail Mormonism, he is some years too late; as we have had some in our own Province who, like the writer in the Blade, in the bonds of darkness, have sought as they call it to unvail Mormonism, and in every instance, as far as I know, have been the means of setting people to reading the Bible, and investigating for themselves.

"WHY do you seek to cover up the things of the past? Why do you distort history?"

This question is put by a writer who is of the opinion that the leading Elders of the Reorganization, including the Editor of the HERALD, have been busy trying to keep facts in the history of the church, that would be damaging to the reputation of those who were most prominently engaged in the church work in its beginnings, or that were not in accordance with truth, right and justice, from coming to the knowledge of the present members of the church, and the world.

We believe this charge to be without foundation in truth. No such disposition has been manifested among the general leading eldership. And for them, and in their behalf we declare such charge untrue. As for the Editor of the HERALD, he has repeatedly shown that whatever was done, or said by those early elders, he was quite willing should be told when required. But the Editor has always been unwilling, and is now, that whatever any one, friend or foe to the work, especially the latter, may believe, or assert as history, should be received as facts. Facts are facts, whether any choose to believe their existence or not; but the beliefs of what has transpired that men have formed from imperfect knowledge and partial information, are not facts; no matter who may assert them. Nor does the second or third telling of what was at first only rumor, make it a fact of history. A late writer for a county newspaper states that Joseph Smith found his plates while hunting for gold. He cites it as history. Is it true? The Elders of the church including the Editor of HERALD say No. And because they thus say No, are they striving to cover up a fact in history.

A constant effort has been made to blacken the character of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and Sidney Rigdon, in connection with the rise of Mormonism, so-called. The Editor of the HERALD has steadily refused to countenance these efforts, whether made by the opposers of the work, and Joseph Smith as a consequence, or the friends of the work without reference to Joseph Smith. In pursuance of this refusal the editor, both as an officer of the church and as an individual, has declined to accept hearsay evidence, and to give credit to assertion as fact. The Spaulding story origin of the Book of Mormon; the collusion between Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, charged by those who tell it, are now quoted as facts of history. The Editor, as others have done, investigated the alleged facts, and became satisfied that they were not facts of history, but statements of conjectures as to the origin of the Book of Mormon. Those who believe this Spaulding story now charge that the Reorganization is trying to cover up history.

Other writers believe that the exodus of the church from Nauvoo, was in pursuance of a design entertained by Joseph Smith before his death; and that he contemplated just such an establishment as is now found in Utah. The Editor has not believed this, and has declined to accept assertions made to prove it; and now he is, with others, charged with endeavoring to keep from sight the facts of history in the case. It is charged by the enemies of the work that Joseph Smith was a very bad man; and with them it is stated that if it can be proved that he was such a bad man, the fabric which he and others, his co-workers and successors have reared, must fall to the ground, and the faith taught by him and them be proved to be fallacious and a fraud. It is then stated that Tom, and Dick, and Harry; this, that, and the other body have all said that he was a bad man, therefore it is historical, etc. The Editor denies the correctness of the statements, specific acts of badness not being specified and proved; and because of this denial, he and those who think as he does, are charged with keeping back the facts of history.

The Editor believes that there is much that is evil stated of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, that their enemies believed and told without foundation in truth. These tales have passed into current gossip, and are now quoted as history; and even friends to the gospel as preached by Joseph and Hyrum, believe them. How will those who vended these stories at the start, and those who have since retailed them fare, when in the final arbitrament the stories are found to be false. "Thou shalt not bear false witness," obtains as a command in the Gentile world, as well as in Israel. And how will the Saints, Christians as they should be, fare, when at the same final arbitrament the question is asked, Did you have charity while on the earth? Charity thinketh no evil, and Saints should refuse the consent of their minds to evil tales of either the dead or living, unless the specific acts charged as evil, are supported by unmistakable proofs. Nor should any one be charged with seeking to cover up history who refused to dignify rumors as facts of history.

Let it be supposed that Joseph Smith was a "money digger," that he was "a dreamer," "thrifless," "lazy," a "wrestler," "jumper," and "foot racer," that he was in his youth "reckless" and a "ne'er do well," and in his later years, a "bold" "presumptuous pretender;" that as a boy and man he was "drunk" once, or a hundred times; that he even had "many wives," does all that disprove the fundamental truth of the gospel as stated by him, his co-workers and successors, that "Jesus is the Christ?" Do those things disqualify the New Testament theory of salvation, believed in, accepted and taught by the elders, both of the old and new organizations?

We hold that those things if they were abundantly proved against Joseph Smith do not disprove that "Jesus is the Christ; or disqualify the doctrine of salvation. If they do not, then it is not necessary that the Editor of the HERALD, or any body else should gather up and publish abroad all the abominable details with which those things are said to be surrounded as facts in history.

If to prove Joseph Smith was a bad man, by popular rumor, defeats the claim of validity for the gospel as he and others taught it; then by parity of reasoning, Moses being a murderer, and as some charge a polygamist, there was no exodus, no tables of stone, no commandments, no tabernacle and no Pentateuch; Jephthah being a murderer there was no Israel to be judged by him; David being a man of blood, there was no deliverance of Israel from the Philistine yoke. But it is needless to urge further instances. The argument is bad and should never be employed by any one. The work must stand on its merits, not on the easily broken reputation of its human defenders.

There is no disposition on our part, nor on the part of any of the Elders, to cover up any facts in history; but it is neither politic, nor in accord with common sense to open the columns of the HERALD to the repetition of unsavory statements and assertions, for fear some may charge upon us that we are trying to cover up history.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it necessarily a compromise with error for Saints to partake of bread and wine when offered to them by other churches?

Ans.—If the church is the Lord's body, and he who partakes of bread and wine worthily "discerning the Lord's body, till he come," then to partake with other than the church is a compromise with error. We do not choose nor dare to so partake.

THIS from the Blue Valley Blade, L. L. Luse.

A gentleman writes asking us what we think now about our declaration, when President Smith took exception to our statement that the results of Mormonism in any community was demoralizing, that we could "snow him under" on that subject. If the President is not snowed under, where is he? We have not heard a word from the President since we poured upon him that inundation of facts, except in an indirect way we heard, that just before the President went out of sight he sent word to the Blade editor that he (the President) was mistaken about the Kirtland Safety Bank having a charter; and thus does it appear that that sacred institution, under the direct supervision of that latter day prophet of God, was doing a banking business for the church, in open violation of the statute laws of the State of Ohio. If the President is not snowed under, why does he not come out in the Herald, like an honorable disputant and own the fact, and not keep in ignorance, though in their ignorance there may be bliss, to his many readers and followers; but no, he does not do this, but he steps from under, and commands poor Elvin to get up on the altar, and become the slaughtered lamb. President, "where art thou?"

We have wondered why Rev. L. L. Luse should have reiterated his charge against Pres. Smith, that he was covering things up, trying to hold them from the Saints and the readers of the HERALD. Surely the editor of the Blade has not read HERALD for May 17th, pages 306-7, or he would not so grossly misrepresent us.

Correspondence.

THE following letters and extract from the Model Christian sufficiently explain themselves:

Bro. Joseph.—I seldom ask a place in the Herald, as I always thought there were abler writers; but I have been trying for about a year to get a correspondence with my Brothers on religion, and have at last succeeded, after having written about one hundred pages of note paper to them. The oldest, Samuel R., having been preaching about twenty years for the Christians, (which church I came out from,) and is considered a big gun; is also editing the Model Christian. Is evidently a man of considerable influence, who resides at Greenville, Texas, who offers to debate with any Christian man, the different subjects in this printed slip. Now I would be glad if some of our Elders in Texas could learn of him, and give him a chance to show up his claims against ours. I send you his letter to me, with my reply, hoping you will give them place in the Herald. I do all my writing after my day's work is over, except sometimes I write a little on Sunday, or on a rainy day. I preach every chance. Love the cause, hope to be blessed to do more.

In hope,

L. H. EZZELL.

INVITATION.

Purely for the sake of eliciting truth the popular religious parties, claiming to be Christians, are hereby courteously requested to select their representative and properly endorsed man to preach alternately with either one of the editors of The Model Christian, on the Gospel Plan of Salvation, as the GRAND THEME, which shall be delineated by alternate preaching, by the two persons chosen, in the following order, viz:

1st. The time when, and the place where the Church or Kingdom of Christ was really and actually established. Two discourses.

2d. The Great Commission: Matt. 28: 18-20; Mark 16: 15, 16; Luke 24: 46, 47. One discourse.

3d. What must the Alien Sinners do to be saved? Delineated by three cases, viz: 1st—The Jailor, Acts 17; 2d—The Pentecostians, Acts 2: 3d—Saul of Tarsus, Acts 9: 22, and 26 chapters. Two discourses; the Jailor and Pentecostians first discourse, and Saul of Tarsus second.

4th. The Salvation of Cornelius and house, Acts 10 and 11 chapters. One discourse.

5th. The Salvation of Five Thousand. Acts 3. One discourse.

6th. The Salvation of 1st—Lydia, Acts 17, 2d, The Samaritans, Acts 8; 3d—The Eunuch, Acts 8; 4th—The Corinthians, Acts 18. One discourse.

7th. The Baptism, Work, Gift and Witness of the Holy Spirit. Two discourses.

These special topics, as well as the grand theme are all purely scriptural, and hence are equally fair for both parties, who shall have the privilege of not more than one hour each on each discourse, and shall precede each other alternately in the introductory discourse of each special topic. The parties shall obligate themselves to conduct the exercises in a strictly courteous and Christian-like manner. If accepted, the preliminaries can be arranged.

Respectfully,

S. R. E. & J. R. J.

GREENVILLE, Texas, May 2d, 1884.

Dear Bro. Levi:—You say: "I love the religion of Jesus, and would be glad if all men would accept the Christianity of the New Testament, believe, teach, practice, receive and enjoy the same practical gospel that Paul and his co-workers preached. In so doing we would have the same gospel that the angel had to preach, that John saw. Rev. 14:6." If you are correct, and I grant you are, then I "have the same gospel that the angel had to preach;" for I do heartily "accept the Christianity of the New Testament, believe, teach, practice, receive and enjoy the same practical gospel that Paul and his co-workers preached. The same gospel that "Paul and his co-workers preached" is designated, described, defined and limited as follows:—Mark 16: 15, 16; Rom. 1: 16; 1 Cor. 15: 1-4; Gal. 1: 6-9. Besides, see numerous examples of the preaching of the "same practical gospel" in Acts. From these examples and the various allusions to this same gospel—the gospel of Christ, the power of God unto salvation—I conclude that men were saved by this same gospel in the days when "Paul and his co-workers preached it," and that it is still adequate—God's power—to the same end, salvation; and for these reasons, especially Gal. 1: 6-9. I am satisfied with this same old gospel that "Paul and his co-workers preached;" and I think I would not accept another, or even a perversion of this "same gospel," though preached by "Paul and his co-workers" "or an angel from heaven."

I fear that you are not satisfied with the "Christianity of the New Testament" and the "same, practical gospel that Paul and his co-workers preached." For I am sure that many things peculiar to Mormonism, which Mormons consider essential to salvation are no part of the Christianity of the New Testament, nor of the gospel, "that Paul and his co-workers preached." The Book of Mormon, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, special revelations, (falsely so called), working miracles, (falsely pretended), etc., etc., with all their deceptive and pernicious tendencies and atrocious outrages of civilized society and burlesques on Christianity, are no akin to the "Christianity of the New Testament," nor the "same practical gospel that Paul and his co-workers preached."

My dear brother in the flesh, let me admonish you as a brother, to come out from among that justly contemptible people, and cease to countenance their abominations lest you be partaker of their plagues; and accept and be content with only the "Christianity of the New Testament," and the "same practical gospel that Paul and his co-workers preached."

In brotherly love, and with kindest regards to you and yours, I subscribe myself as ever, your brother,

SAM.

MARMATON, Bourbon Co., Kansas,
May 11th, 1884.

Dear Bro. Sam:—Yours of 2d inst., received and read with pleasure. I preached to-day to some of my neighbors who gave me a hearing at a school-house near by, giving a discourse on the impossibility of adding to, or taking from the New Covenant, given by Christ, without bringing the curse spoken by Paul, Gal. 1: 6-9. In speaking of the organization of the church, I referred to 1 Cor. 3: 10; also 1 Cor. 12: 27, 28; then 15: 1-4; Eph. 2: 18-22, and 4: 11. After I got the primitive organization before the people, then I asked: How did they get into the church anciently? Then referred to Rom. 6: 17, 18. Then asked: What was the form of doctrine? Referred to Mark 16: 15, 16; Rom. 1: 16; 1 Cor. 15: 1-4. Insisted that any other form than that found in the word of God, though obeyed from the heart and preached, has not the promise of the blessing of God, but of a curse. Gal. 1: 6-9. Then I asked: What was the form of doctrine. Referred to Acts 2: 38; 8: 5-12; 36: 39; Acts 16: 30-34; 19: 1-6. Then why were they baptized? Answered from Matt. 3: 15, and stated that it preceded remission of sins. Fellowship with the Father and the Son, brought us to the blood of Jesus. Put on Christ, and became members of the church. Then spoke as to how they were baptized. Referred to John baptizing in Jordan, then the baptism of Jesus, the Pentecostians, the Samaritans, the twelve at Ephesus, the jailor, the Eunuch; but could not learn anything about the how. I found that those that were to be baptized went down into the water and were baptized, and came up again out of the water. Then referred to Rom. 6: 3-5, and found the how. Now as this was as much as I had time to get into one discourse without becoming wearisome, I gave them Paul to Gal. 1: 6-9; also Paul's charge to Timothy, 2 Tim. 4: 2; also Jude 3d verse. Then read a clipping from the Willoughby Independent, containing a little advice to the Disciples, who expected to have Mormonism, as they call it, exposed by one of their champion debaters, Clark Braden, who made a failure; and it seemed to turn out just as this writer told them; viz: "That the Bible was a poor club to knock a Mormon down with;" "for," said he, "when you come at him with it you will always find him in the middle of the ring, ready to give a reason for his hope; and the only way to beat them is to stay away from their meetings, and thereby you can freeze them out."

Now, Sam, if this discourse that I have given a synopsis of, should be preached by one of your brethren, it would be counted a good Christian discourse. Add 2 Peter 1: 3-11; Heb. 2: 1-4; Eph. 4: 1-8; 6: 14-17; 4: 24 to end of chapter. When you follow us through all these quotations, you begin to think there is not so much difference after all; but alas! when we present Heb. 6: 1, 2, and contend for the principles of the gospel in their order, then turn to James 1: 5; also 5: 13-18; Rom. 10: 15, concerning calling the ministers to preach the gospel. Paul in speaking of it says: "No man taketh this honor to himself, except he be called of God as was Aaron."—Heb. 5: 4. Then I introduce Mal. 2: 18, 19; Mark 16: 15-20. Then add Luke 8: 17; Mal. 2: 31; Rev. 14: 6; John 16: 13. We say the Spirit will guide us: John 15: 7; 14: 14; 17: 20, 21; Eph. 4: 11. This order can not be changed without perverting God's word. The thirteenth verse shows that as long as there is a man in the church not in the unity of the faith, this order should exist to perfect him. Fourteenth verse shows that they are necessary to keep the members, and help them become perfected; and keep them from being deceived by the systems of men. Acts 2: 17; 1 Cor. 14: 1. Then Acts 2: 38, 39. Any thing short of a full surrender to the primitive faith and doctrine, meets the saying of Jesus, Matt. 15: 9; and inasmuch as the humble followers of Jesus are as willing to receive the sincere milk of the word now as then, the language of Jesus is very acceptable. Matt. 11: 25-27; John 17: 3; 1 Cor. 1: 4-7, 25-29; 1 Cor. 2: 1-5, 7, 8, 10-14; 1 Cor. 3: 18-21; also 1 Cor. 12: 1-28. When we contend for these facts, commands and promises, they are calculated to strengthen and confirm our hope unto the end. Matt. 5: 11, 12; also 44, is brought to bear in our lives. Then we should try to attain to the 48th verse. Then we should be careful how we carry out Matt. 6: 1, 2, 5-16, 7: 7-29, 19: 21.

Dear brother, will you read and examine the many scriptures that I refer you to, and then say, "I fear that you are not satisfied with the doctrine of the New Testament," and the "same practical gospel that Paul and his co-workers preached?" "For" says you, "I am sure that many things peculiar to Mormonism which Mormons consider essential to salvation, are no part of the Christianity of the New Testament, nor of the gospel that Paul and his co-workers preached." If you fired this shot at the Mormorns and Mormonism, as taught by Brigham Young, and supported from 1852 by many who went with him to the Salt Land, and supported yet by them there, John Taylor being their president, I say if you aimed that shot for that phaze of Mormonism, I am glad to let you know you overshot me entirely, therefore I felt no shock from the discharge; but when I turn to fourth page of your letter, I discover you have discharged another terribly heavily loaded piece, and you seem to take a broadside with grape and canister, aiming to demolish Mormonism rank and file, and say: "The Book of Mormon, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, special revelations, (falsely so called), working of miracles, (falsely pretended), &c., &c." This part of the discharge I will look after a little. Inasmuch as you have assailed, or insinuated against the Book of Mormon, let me ask, Can you, or will you undertake to prove from the Bible, that no such a book was to come forth? or that no book of any kind described is to be expected? If so, I shall expect another shot, and will try to be prepared for the contents; I shall not say much about the Book of Doctrine and Covenants at this time lest you load so heavy that you impair the strength of your gun. If you have one of the books at your command, read sec. 1, third European Edition; and if you have none you had better save your ammunition, lest you waste it by random shots. But when you say, "&c., &c., with all their deceptive and pernicious tendencies, and atrocious outrages of civilized society and burlesques on Christianity," none of which I know anything about in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as reorganized in 1860, with Joseph Smith as president, with which organization I am identified. Therefore, when these grape and canister were so profusely thrown, charging Mormonism so heavily, you entirely overshot me again. So I fall into rank with you and say yes, such "deceptive and pernicious tendencies," as that except a man subscribe to and practice polygamy, he can not inherit a celestial glory; and "The atrocious outrages," such as the Mountain Meadow Massacre, the Adam-God theory, and Blood Atonement, are in fact "no akin to the Christianity of the New Testament." But if you wish to fire into Mormonism, you will have to hunt those of the salt land who believe these notorious innovations, and practice them under the name of religion. Then you kindly "admonish me to come out from among that justly contemptible people, and cease to countenance their abominations, lest you be partaker of their plagues." Here again you wasted another shot.

Now, Sam, if you had taken time and read the tracts I sent you, it would have saved you making these notoriously blind shots; moreover, you would have known, or learned many Bible truths that were practical in the Apostolic Church, which truths are granted to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, (Reorganized), in which I live and rejoice, in hope of the glory of God. Which truths many of which you deny, and confess that they are not in your church now, nor ever was since it was organized in the days of B. W. Stone, A. Campbell, Walter Scott, Bently, Sidney Rigdon and others, from 1813 to 1824. So your admonition continues, "And accept and be content with only the Christianity of the New Testament, and the same practical gospel that Paul and his co-workers preached."

I am willing to compare the tenets of each, or the doctrines of each, pertaining to man's duty to God and God's promises to his children in every precept, principle and example in each one's church, as taught by us as given in the Bible, pertaining to the Church of Christ in all its parts; and then we can see which side the word of the Lord sustains. Will you do this, and say as you did once,

"Truth is truth where'er 'tis found,
On Christian or on heathen ground."

Let me have truth. If it makes me a Catholic, let me be one; if it makes me a Mahometan, let me be one; if it makes me a Mormon, let me be a Mormon." O will you? "Quench not the Spirit, despise not prophesyings." "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thess. 5: 16-21. My dear brother, will you practice now what you always preach; viz, honest investigation, aside from prejudice and tradition, is proper in order for any one to be benefitted; and let me add, and receive and enjoy, practically the Christianity of the Bible. I shall be always pleased to hear from you on this subject.

CAWKER CITY, Mitchell Co., Kansas,

Dear Herald:—I am laboring in the mission assigned me, Kansas. Have preached twelve times to an interested assembly. Have baptized five, been blessed in my efforts. Have been able to present the word by the power of the Lord's Spirit. The Saints in the west are generally poor in this world's goods, but their souls are in the work of God. I thank God for the privilege of meeting such. It does me good, for that will help in presenting the word. I have talked to those who have not been taking the Herald, and have encouraged them to put forth an effort to secure it as a companion. It is food to the hungry soul. May the Lord bless his Saints in all their avocations.

Yours in gospel bonds,

A. H. PARSONS.

CUBA, Kansas, May 13th, 1884.

Yesterday about 3 p. m., a terrific storm of rain and hail passed over the northern part of Republic county, driven by a fierce wind. We have not as yet had any reports of damage being done further than to crops, fruit and stock. One cow was killed by lightning. Rye, which was heading, is literally mowed, and the entire crop supposed to be lost. Wheat would probably have suffered the same fate had the crop not been limited to a very small acreage, and less advanced. Oats which were looking very fine, look now as though no seed had ever been put on the ground. Horses in the stables were terrified at the roaring turmoil of the elements. Small pigs that were exposed are now missing. Windows were broken, school children terrified. Drifts of hail measured eight to fourteen inches, and in some instances the depth of these drifts is reported to have exceeded two feet. The hailstones were quite uniform in size, and did not exceed, if they reached the size of partridge eggs. Fruit trees, many of which were heavily freighted with foliage and bloom, and prospective fruit, are now as nude as the forest in January. The storm track did not exceed two miles in width, and evidently spent its force, dissolving into water fall, within twenty-five miles after passing us.

PERSIA, Iowa, May 29th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Lord's work in this locality is progressing. The Spirit of the Master is felt and enjoyed, especially with those that are striving to serve God. Last Sabbath six were added to the church by baptism, and some of them will make noble workers for the Master's cause. The spirit was present with us at the baptism and confirmation. Our church building is progressing nicely, here in the town of Persia, and we will soon have it enclosed so that we can hold meetings in it. It is thirty feet wide, fifty feet long, fourteen feet high. The Saints and friends have contributed to the same, so far, cheerfully. God bless them.

Yours in hope,

D. CHAMBERS.

WHEELING, W. Va.,

May 27th, 1884.

Brother Joseph Smith:—On the day that conference at Stewartville closed, I received a dispatch from Bro. Thomas Rees, of Bevier, Mo., requesting me to come immediately and preach his wife's funeral sermon. Sr. Rees was a noble woman, and a true Latter Day Saint. She bore a strong testimony to truthfulness of the gospel just before she expired. We staid at Bevier until the 27th of April, enjoying our visit among our relatives very much. We arrived in Wheeling safe on the 29th of April, found the Saints all enjoying the blessing of health, except sister Ebeling's oldest boy, who died on the 10th inst.; he was not a member of the church, but a strong believer in the doctrine, and a good, kind boy to his mother. Sr. Ebeling is having her share of troubles. It has not been much over a year since her husband was killed, and she was left with eight children to care for. We feel very grateful to the saints, who have aided us with means to assist her in her present distress. On the 5th inst., I left for Pittsburg to attend the discussion between Rev. W. R. Coovert and W. H. Kelley. The former's weapons of warfare were Tucker, Howe and Grimes. The latter clung tenaciously to the Word of God, thereby proving himself to be the David as the great Goliath fell the eighth night, leaving two propositions still undiscussed.

Bro. Kelley subsequently paid us a short visit; his labors in this place were productive of much good, as the saints were encouraged and cheered to press on toward the prize of eternal life, by the wholesome counsel that fell from his lips. This branch is in a prosperous condition at present. The spirit of peace and quietude predominates, and we are having excellent meetings. Not quite a year since the branch was organized, and we have now a chapel which has cost about thirteen hundred dollars clear of debt, about fifty dollars of which we have received from the saints in the district outside of this branch. Bro. L. D. Ullom has paid over six hundred dollars of his own free will toward it. I recently visited Bro. and Sr. Sheldon of Warnock, Ohio. The latter has been very sick; but our heavenly Father has heard our prayers in her behalf, as she is improving in health daily. The above Bro. and Sr. have kept a home for the servants of God ever since they united with the church, and I sincerely believe that the Lord will prolong their lives for many days to come. There is great need of more laborers in this mission as the calls for preaching are coming in continually from all parts of Ohio, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia.

I wish it was possible for me to obey all the calls. But as I can not visit but one place at a time, it is necessary that those who have written me exercise much patience. I shall labor as the way opens up. I leave on the 29th for Glen Easton, W. Va. My Post Office address is No. 4,729, Jacob Street, Wheeling, W. Va.

Yours in the one faith,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

PANAMA, Iowa,

May 22d, 1884.

Joseph:—I am here, stopping with Bro. J. J. Tuck, an old time Saint. This town is now in its infancy, numbering not over two hundred inhabitants. Last evening I spoke to quite a respectable congregation in the hall of this place. It was said to be a good turn out for this season of the year. Subject was the gospel as taught by Christ and his apostles. I was listened to with good attention. I am to be interviewed again this evening on the great question of Mormonism. Have promised to give the people here a history of my early experience and the knowledge I have on the Mormon question, and the founding of the Church of Christ by Joseph Smith. It is seldom I can avoid answering these inquiries, as these matters when answered as they should be, go far to establish one of the most important points in connection with the origin of this latter day work. I find that it is not difficult to get people to believe the gospel as taught by Peter, Paul and Jesus; but the honest founding of the church we represent, is the great question of the times. It has been some time since the story of the golden plates was talked of by men who claim to have seen them; and angels' visits to men on earth for the last eighteen hundred years have been so very few and far between, that it requires quite a stretch of faith to believe in these covered up mysteries of ages that are past, without testimony that will strike upon the sense of men, who judge every thing by the good sense and the sound logic by which it should be tested, whether of truth or falsehood. The evidence that Moses saw the Lord in the burning bush, does not strike me very favorably when I reflect upon the length of time that all these great and marvelous views and transactions have been absent from the earth so many hundred years. A renewal of these things by a new dispensation is the only hope of a sound faith in those unseen mysteries which God alone can reveal by sending his angel-messengers to man, to remove doubts and fears as to that which is divine. If the story of the golden plates is all a humbug, then there must be a solid mass of perjured witnesses, whose names have been given to the public in attestation to this story of the plates, from which it is said the Book of Mormon was translated; witnesses who claim to have seen with their eyes and handled with their hands these things. However much the antiquities of the country corroborate the history given in the Book of Mormon, translated from plates found by Joseph Smith, still the angel part of the story is not explained by any of these things. It is evident that a belief in angels' visits is hazardous; while the things of earth that are seen with the natural eye, are explained of themselves, not being clothed with mystery. It is while men are living who claim to have seen angels, that their testimony is of value to unbelieving men; not after they have past away. Two of the men whose testimony is given in the Book of Mormon, who claim that an angel brought and showed them the record and plates, of which the world so much doubts, are now dead; and the only one of the three witnesses in this all important testimony, now living, is David Whitmer, who resides in Richmond, Mo. While this man is living, why do not the skeptics on angels' visits to man on earth, gather up their wise men, and institute an examination of the organic system of this man of strange visions, David Whitmer, and let science once in its useful days, detect this monster humbug of sight-seeing angels where there are none, by a rule or law that can not be controverted. Now is the time for the master spirits of the age, (and especially the ministers), to clothe themselves with immortal honors, by giving to the world a lesson on visionary frauds, that might prove lasting, when stereotyped in the minds of the people (whether it is true or false) as that world-renowned, humbug—story of the Spaulding Romance being remodeled into a positive revelation from God.

My efforts while at Clinton to give new life to the cause, I think were productive of good. Elder Warren Turner, who presides in that district, gave every aid that heart could wish to keep up the meetings. While there a Brother Johnson, who is also an Elder of the Church, contributed his influence and presence in the work, adding a word, aiding the truth to triumph over the many errors that keep the world in ignorance of the true doctrines. From Clinton, after preaching seven discourses, I came to Rock Island. Called on Bro. Dungee. Saw also a Bro. Harrison living in that city, whose faith remains unshaken in this latter day work. At Davenport I was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. James Houghton, who died of paralysis. I am booked for River Sioux as soon as I can get to my appointment. I am thinking of visiting Galland's Grove Branch.

Your brother and fellow laborer in the gospel,
WILLIAM B. SMITH.

AUGUSTA, Butler Co., Kan.,

May 22d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I would like to know how many there are that are now ready to join the association, and what is the prospect of organizing soon. How many Saints will put the money they pay for fire and life insurance, into increasing the happiness of the Saints, and agree to help one another in time of need. By doing this the Lord has promised our light to break forth as the morning. Is not this what we need? And is it not better to trust the Lord, in doing good at every opportunity, than to build up worldly organizations, that will rob us at every opportunity we give them. They will take our life and light at every breath we draw in co-working with them, except we obey the Lord and convert them to his ways. Let us hold fast all the blessings of the Lord, both financial and spiritual, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and comfort those who mourn, and lead them unto Christ. The Lord is breaking the hearts of the worldly schemers; and if we do not hold fast the blessing, so as to bind up the broken hearted are we worthy of him?

O Saints, let us give of those things that are so liable to be swept away by the flood, and the whirlwind; and see if we can't build our house on the rock, and gain great peace to the soul, and a goodly assurance that our house shall stand when the winds blow and the floods beat against it. Yea, let the rich humble themselves, that the poor may be exalted, or rather that they may be blessed with a humble spirit, so as to look for rain in proper time and quantity; and the bountiful harvests of the Lord in every sense of the word. Let us hold fast the blessing so as to rejoice with the Jew, ere it is taken from us and given to them. O Lord, remember thy people in much mercy, and bring them from whence thou hast scattered them, and permit them to work the wonderful works for thine own name's glory, according to thy promises. Amen.

Yours in bonds,

M. N. COLE.

LOCKSPRINGS, Davis Co., Missouri,

Bro. Joseph:—I want a partner in the bee business. Any one wanting a business that will pay in a good location, address me at once. I am in the business, and need a partner. Can give good references.

J. W. JOHNSON.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas,

May 29th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I am now seated under the hospitable roof of Bro. Mahlon Smith, about five miles south-west of Blue Rapids. Am here in consequence of taking a mission as a protegee of Bro. J. R. Lambert. Father and Mother Landers are here, and are with us en route to the quarterly conference to be held at Goshen Branch. In company with my traveling companion, Bro. I. N. Roberts, we have spent one week in Blue Rapids with good results. The Saints whom we found not in a most lively condition spiritually, have been encouraged. Blue Rapids and surrounding country are quite beautiful. The vast water power, the gypsum beds—the abundance of fine building stone, together with the rich fertile soil, all combine to form the possibility of this becoming a notable manufacturing point. The Woolen Mills here are of some interest, which with the flouring and plaster paris mills give employment to quite a number of men, boys, and girls. We held six preaching meetings and two social meetings while here, with good liberty. We were very kindly cared for while there by the Saints, which has found its proper place on the tablets of our memory.

We have often heard our father talk about "bobbing for eels"—in his early days, but we never saw one until Bro. John Scott here caught one. It looked much like a snake. If you want to know how it tasted ask Bro. I. N. Roberts who did (in) justice to it when nicely cooked and on the table.

From where I sit the vision extends for miles in either direction over the vast prairies. It looks very strange to a sucker who lives in Missouri, to view the country here which is all out doors, there being no fences of any consequence.

The mission has not sufficiently opened up to know what good may be done in its prosecution. I find in Bro. I. N. Roberts a pleasing and agreeable companion to be with, and whether our courses may lay together or not I shall pray God to bless him. I love this precious gospel of Christ, and for it I desire to labor with all my ability. The sentiment of the 631 hymn I can appropriate to myself.

I have listened with interest to the premonitions of Bro. Mahlon Smith concerning the Tahitian mission. He expresses a willingness to labor for the cause, but his caution is such that he does not wish to "leap in the dark." The sacrifice of absenting myself from the wife of my bosom, and son Moroni, is no small matter to me, but by so doing I hope to "lay up treasures in heaven." If there are any fields known to the Saints of this region or further west, where a good work may be done for the work, please apprise us. Letters addressed to Stewartsville, Dekalb Co., Mo., will reach me until further notice.

Yours for truth,
J. M. TERRY.

CAMERON, Mo., May 31st, 1884.

Editor Saints' Herald:—My letter to the Herald of 30th ult., and published on 24th inst., reads, "on the 13th inst.," which should read, "on the 12th inst.," when I first heard the report that Martin Harris, the senior, denied his testimony as recorded in the said Book of Mormon.

Your brother in Christ,
SIMON SMITH.

LOWER GROVE, June 3d, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I joined the Latter Day Saints about a year ago, and I thank the production of the Book of Mormon as being the main cause. I have been quite a traveler, commencing very early in life, and in Peru the most of my adventures took place. Nine or ten years ago I left there, and have been traveling considerably since, and relating my adventures at different times to those whom I have come in contact with, until I came here. I told my experiences while here to some Latter Day Saints, who listened very attentively, and I was told they had a book giving the history of those people, and their destruction, and the manner of its coming forth to earth again, which caused me to smile. That seemed to settle it in my mind, but I was satisfied to investigate before I would condemn; so I was requested to read the book without prejudice, which I promised to do. I did not get very far, when I became convinced that it gave as true an account of the people and the manner of their destruction to me as the history of the United States, and without the strong testimony of the witnesses of the Book of Mormon I am forced to believe it to be a true history of a once populous and enlightened people.

I have been on the Andes Mountains, and being a builder, I studied ruins more perhaps than I otherwise would have done. I have seen traces in those now barren places, where it was once under cultivation, and human bones are scattered very thickly all over the country along the river Santa. On very high places the ruins of large mansions can be seen, where now there is no water nor vegetation for miles around. I have seen a very large dry river, whose bed looked as though the water had suddenly dried up and left the line on its banks and the smooth boulders and pebbles in the bed. Wherever I have traveled, I have seen the lava strewn on the mountains, and came to the conclusion while there, that there was once a great earthquake, which destroyed the people, and caused the land to be broken in the manner it now is. The Book of Mormon was published long before there ever was a white man in those places; and I doubt whether there has been one since in places where I have traveled; so taking all things into consideration, a man could never give so accurate an account of the destruction of the country and people, and their enlightenment, unless he was inspired of God. I am also satisfied that the people were very much enlightened, as I have found a copper chisel, which was tempered to cut stone, which is a lost art to-day. I gave the chisel to an engineer there, who is now in Troy, N. Y. His name is John Norton. I have also seen a great deal of the Incas' coins, but there is a history of them in Peru, but none beyond there, and I was always in the dark about their history until I came here, which I thank God for, and my desire is to be faithful in the gospel of Jesus Christ unto the end. May the Lord prosper his work throughout the universe. Your brother,

DANIEL DONORS.

ROCK ISLAND, Illinois,

May 21st, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—The loss of Bro. James Houghton we all seriously feel. We feel he has gone to the peaceful abode to await the resurrection of the just. He was chiefly the instrument in continuing the meetings held at our homes for the benefit of the Saints scattered in Rock Island and Davenport, numbering about twenty-five. Very slightly have those meetings been attended; but those who have attended have realized the blessing of obeying the command, "The Saints shall meet together often." His prayers were, previous to February last, that the Saints of Davenport would unite and organize as a branch. His desire was realized February 2d, when six members were prevailed upon to come together, and chose Priest D. W. Clow president, and Bro. James Houghton Teacher; district president, Warren Turner, assisted by Elder C. C. Reynolds, officiating. Around the nucleus of this branch may the Saints of this neighborhood rally, and awaken to their duties, and lay hold on the blessings that are held out to them. To that end may God grant us wisdom is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

F. G. DUNGEE.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

May 30th.—Nubar Pasha, the Egyptian Premier, in a statement to European Powers asserts that Egypt is not able to support the present rates of taxation. The land-tax, he says, exceeds the value of the crops.

May 31st.—Herr Liebknecht, a Socialist of Saxony, has issued an address, which is printed in the Paris revolutionary papers, in which he says the time is ripe for an appeal "to those hidden weapons of destruction which modern science has furnished to the oppressed." This is supposed to refer to dynamite. The Parisian Socialists, it is reported, approve of Herr Liebknecht's "advanced" ideas, and a congress to perfect plans to carry them out is being arranged for, which it is said, will be held at Antwerp.

The present dynamite scare is beyond comparison the greatest London has ever had. Yesterday's explosions occurred in the aristocratic-club district. No purpose was apparently sought beyond producing generally terror. Many wild theories are advanced by badly-frightened persons, some of whom affected to believe that the dynamiters chose that particular locality in the hope of killing some of the Tory members of Parliament, and perhaps some of the obnoxious members of the present Government, who it was calculated might be in some of the club-rooms at the time. The police are completely baffled, and, for the first time in the history of great crimes in London, have not even a theory to offer. In fact, the police find themselves to be a laughing-stock. They have all along made great pretense of especially guarding the attacked district, and find themselves utterly unable to explain how the conspirators managed to introduce explosives into the neighborhood at all. The public are becoming hourly more restive and agitated over the apparent incompetence of the police, and the wildest schemes of reprisals against Irish agitators are mooted. The appointment of local Vigilance committees on the American Western plan is seriously discussed in some hitherto very conservative quarters. Extra guards have been placed around the residence of Mr. Gladstone at Hawarden.

Daylight showed that the damage by the dynamite explosions in London last night was fully equal to the worst anticipations. Crowds of excited people are visiting the scenes. Policemen are drawn up in line across the streets in the vicinity to prevent access of the multitudes. Orders have been given to leave the wreckage untouched until examinations are made by Inspector Majendie. At St. James' Theatre, 100 yards distant, the explosions sounded like two claps of thunder. The audience was alarmed, and there was nearly a panic. Several ladies fainted and men started to stamp, but were reassured by shouts bidding every one to sit still, as no harm was done. The second bomb in St. James' Square exploded against the residence of Sir Watkin Wynn, and produced a fracture four feet in height and three in breadth. The windows were smashed and the furniture damaged. The explosion created a great havoc in the Junior Carlton Club-House. Numerous cases of wine were destroyed. The club will remain closed several days. The dynamite was carried down the iron steps leading to the kitchens and cellars, and placed in the cellar under the pathway, with a lighted fuse. The upward force of the explosion broke a large hole in the pavement, and also wrecked the basement apartments of the club. The explosion was most destructive on the west side of St. James' Square. The windows in the Duke of Cleveland's house and in the War Office in Pall Mall were shattered. At Sir Watkin Wynn's residence a bomb was thrown over the railings by a pedestrian. It lodged upon a stone sill a foot below the dining-room. An hour before the explosions there was an outbreak of fire at the War Office, which was speedily extinguished. It is not known whether it was incendiary or not. So far as known up to noon, thirteen persons were injured, including five women. All the wounded are in the hospital. Five, including the policemen, are in a precarious condition.

June 1.—There are symptoms of a break-up of the triple alliance. Since the interviews between M. de Giers and Bismarck at Friedrichsruie the mutual confidences of the courts of Berlin and Vienna are ceasing. The indications of a secret entente cordiale between Russia and Germany are found in the brilliant style in which Prince William went to St. Petersburg, in the constant exchange of court courtesies, and in the warmth of the welcome the Emperor gave to the Czarina when passing through Berlin.

The Rev. James E. Latimer, D. D., Dean of the Boston University, preached the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of the university to-day. His sermon was an argument to show that history, science, and philosophy, so far from tending to demolish the Christian scheme, when interpreted with true logic actually established the truth of that scheme. The central proposition of the whole argument was that in the Christian scheme the factors are God, and man, and Nature, and that Christianity furnishes the most complete adjustment of each of these factors to the others. Starting with a self-existent God, it traced existence from its start up to the highest spiritual phenomena, which pointed to God as the end, all the steps forming a rational sequence. The rationality of the scheme, the preacher argued with much clearness and eloquence, was to be discerned, whether examined by the light of science, history, or philosophy.

June 2.—John Creed, a farmer, was shot near Millstreek, in the county of Cork, Ireland, Sunday night by moonlighters. Two other persons were wounded at the same time.

The Paris Republique condemns the United States for allowing the dynamiters to plan outrages. The Intransigeant says the explosion in London is the result of 600 years of misery.

The Berlin newspapers are indignant over the London explosions, and counsel reprisals.

The Telegraph urges an appeal to the American Government against harboring assassins.

The results of to-day's investigations by the London police have made it almost certain that the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square was not the main objective point of the miscreants who planned the dynamite explosions of last Friday night. The police theory is that the dynamiters aimed to concentrate public excitement about the square in order to obtain a clear field for operations elsewhere. The conspirators hoped to cause an immense rush of people from St. James Park, Spring Garden, and the other resorts of that vicinity, and calculated that the explosion in Scotland Yard would still further distract the attention of the police and the public, increase the panic, and leave the way clear for attacks on Government offices and the Houses of Parliament. The general feeling of the public is no longer so much one of alarm as irritation and disgust. On every side to-day are heard the most emphatic denunciations of the American authorities for allowing the dynamite propaganda to be so openly preached in New York and other cities. Hearty anthems are heaped upon the head of O'Donovan-Rossa, who is believed here to be an active dynamite conspirator, and not the self-seeking, harmless braggart which the United States officials describe him to be. A portion of the London press mean to insist upon Rossa's arrest by the American Government.

There was a serious election riot in Clausenburg, Austria, yesterday. Sixty persons were injured.

Five Mexican States have revolted against the rule of Gonzales on account of the revenue-stamp tax. Troops are being concentrated in the interior for the suppression of the rebellion.

Yellow fever has broken out at Guaymas, Mexico.

June 3.—The Manitoba Legislature has passed resolutions rejecting the Dominion Government's terms, and has passed a measure providing for direct taxation for Government purposes. Lieut-Gov. Norquay in proroguing the Legislature said that the action of the Legislature in reference to the Dominion Government's terms was unpleasant but unavoidable.

The high-license ordinance passed by the Municipal Council of Minneapolis, Minn., has been pronounced valid by the Supreme Court of Minnesota, as far as the fee and the hours of closing are concerned. The court decrees that the Council, not the Mayor, must designate the patrol districts within which license is to be granted. The Council will amend the ordinance in accordance with the decision.

June 4th.—In future the Government authorities will protect Nationalist meetings in Ireland which the Orangemen may threaten to break up. After a Nationalist meeting has been announced it will not be lawful for Orangemen to hold a meeting in the same place. The Orangemen are not well pleased at the decision. Their organ, the Dublin Express, says the Government has surrendered to the party of treason. The Freeman, the Nationalist organ, commends the Government.

The chief dynamiters at Paris, France, declare that the authors of the London explosions have escaped and are now safe, and that another outrage is being planned.

Earl Granville is preparing a note to Washington in relation to collecting conspiracy funds within the jurisdiction of the United States.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

John C. Eno, the missing New York bank defaulter, was arrested May 31st, on board the steamship Vancouver, at Quebec, just as the steamer was about to leave for Liverpool. Eno was dressed as a priest. He has been taken to Montreal for examination.

D. C. O. Hubbard, who is charged with using $115,000 of the funds of the National Bank of Monmouth, Ill., for his own purposes, was arrested at Waukesha, Wis., May 31.

Long-continued drouths have had a damaging effect on the crops in England. The farmers anxiously hope for rain.

A heavy frost in Northern New England Friday night did very great damage to the corn and bean crops, also to fruit trees, injuring most of the apple and peach buds in some sections. The loss to farmers and gardeners is the greatest for many years.

Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British grain trade says: Despite the dry weather and cold east and north winds last week the wheat crop is more than usually promising. The plant is excellent and would soon respond to suitable weather. If the season is favorable there is the making of more than an average crop. The outlook for barley and oats causes anxiety. The wire-worm is busy. In the off-coast market there is little scope for business. There were three arrivals, three cargoes sold, two withdrawn, and one remains. Sales of English wheat the last week 50,351 quarters at 37 shillings 7 pence, against 58,893 quarters at 43 shillings 5 pence the corresponding week last year.

The crops in the vicinity of Odessa are suffering seriously from continued drowth.

Careful inquiry reveals the fact that crops have not suffered material damage near Galena, Ill., from late frosts. The injury to corn was confined to the low lands, and about one field in five suffered, some more and some less. Small grain was uninjured, so say many farmers, while reports to the contrary come from some quarters. Fruit suffered considerably, large numbers of berry-vines being nipped and their buds blighted. The present weather is favorable to growing, and everything in the line of crops and garden produce is rapidly advancing. Corn is especially fine, and is fairly leaping skyward. The hay crop this season will be the largest and best ever known in this section. The meadows are rich with grass, and pasturage unlimited. The outlook in Jo Daviess county for an abundant yield of everything the farmer can produce is most flattering.

Having interviewed many farmers from different directions around Holland, Mich., they all report that the frost of last week had done no damage whatever, except in a few low places in the northern tier of towns in Allegan county, and that but very slight. But the cold weather caused more trouble to the corn by the cutworm, injuring it considerably in some places; otherwise all the growing crops are doing well enough for the present. Warm rains are needed again very much. Apples promise a large crop, but peaches will be very scarce.

All grain is doing finely near West Point, Neb. Corn that is up is looking well. Many farmers have commenced cultivating. There is some complaint of poor seed, and a few farmers are obliged to replant.

Last week 2,899 packages of domestic cottons were exported, making the export for the year so far 74,972 packages, which is 5,000 greater than for the corresponding portion of last year.

The value of the produce exported from New York last week was $5,254,000.

The straw-paper manufacturers in order to keep up prices have agreed to suspend work for two months. Already 60 per cent of the manufacturers have signed the agreement. When 75 per cent of them have signed the mills will be closed.

Half a million dollars in gold was drawn from the Bank of England yesterday for shipment to New York.

Considerable of the wheat in the vicinity of Charleston, Illinois, is heading out in cheat, so that but little over a half crop can be counted on. Owing to a splendid and copious warm rain the grass, which was already good, will be heavy, and the corn, which was also vigorous, is growing fast. Oats have been sown in larger acreage and are doing extraordinarily well. The apple crop will be only medium and no peaches at all.

Corn and potatoes show the effects of frost, near Whitehall, Mich., and what the frost left of potatoes is furnishing a "picnic" for the bugs, which are swarming by the million. Sheep-shearing is progressing rapidly on every hand. The clip, from present indications, will be fully up to the average, both in quantity and quality.

Corn under the influence of a hot sun and warm rains near Elkhart, Ind., is beginning to have a better look, although a great deal of it is being destroyed by the cutworm. Wheat is heading and bids fair now to be an average crop.

The weather is growing warmer in Minnesota. All kinds of small grain look very promising. Corn is somewhat backward, owing to the cool damp weather in the middle and latter part of May.

The reduction in the debt, less cash in the Treasury for the month of May was four and three-quarter millions ($4,763,241.20). This brings the total reduction for eleven months up to nearly ninety-two millions ($91,823,715). The average monthly reduction has therefore been about eight and one-third millions and should the reduction for June be equal to the average the total reduction for the fiscal year would be $100,000,000.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

May 30th.—A serious fire has occurred at Phumpank, the Capital of Cambodia. The whole quarter outside the French concession is destroyed. Among the buildings burned were 105 houses belonging to the King. Three persons perished.

A fire in J. W. Reedy's elevator works in Chicago, Ill., caused damage estimated at from $15,000 to $18,000.

Loss by fire at Akron, O., $13,000.

May 31st.—The county jail was burned at Del Rio, Tex. Loss by fire at Dakotatown, Ill., $10,000. Cleveland O., $15,000. Detroit, Mich., 11,000.

June 1.—Information is received from Shackelford County that Friday night last a huge water-spout fell, covering several hundred acres and doing serious damage. One ranchman lost 860 sheep out of a flock of 900. The same day a water-spout burst near Cisco, at the head of Battle Creek, and caused the creek to overflow in a few minutes, covering the bottom lands, drowning some cattle and washing everything before it. Several farms were ruined. No lives were lost.

June 2.—During the races at the Town of Lillie, France, to-day an aeronautic speculator, who had brought thither a captive balloon, advertised a number of ascensions to allow each event on the program to be witnessed by a fresh car-load. The car was so badly balanced and overloaded that when the balloon had risen to a height of 140 feet the passengers, twenty in number, became scared and changed their places. The car was overtured and the entire number of passengers hurled to the ground. It was a most horrifying spectacle as body after body struck the earth. The shrieks of the spectators were terrifying; men turned away and women fainted. Three of the balloon's passengers were killed outright, and all the rest are frightfully injured.

June 4.—The Aquarium at Bishop's Gate, London, burned with several lions, bears, etc. Also a cotton-warehouse at Liverpool, 3,000 bales of cotton being destroyed.

The milling-room of Frederic Stearns & Co., pharmaceutical laboratory at Detroit, Mich., was destroyed by fire yesterday. It was with difficulty that the fire was prevented from extending to the entire establishment. Two employes were seriously but not fatally injured by the flames.

Intemperance deprives men of prudence the greatest of virtues, and precipitates them into the midst of disorders.

Providence has hidden a charm in difficult undertakings which is appreciated only by those who dare grapple with them.

Let him who regrets the loss of time make a proper use of that which is to come.

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

The following is going the rounds of the Press, and as an item of astronomy, it has a peculiar interest for those who are watching the signs of the times:—"In 1887 the 'Star of Bethlehem' will be once more seen in 'Cleopatra's Chair, and will be accompanied by a total eclipse of the sun and moon. The star only makes its appearance every 315 years. It will appear and illuminate the heavens, and exceed in brilliancy even Jupiter when in opposition to the sun, and therefore, nearer to the sun and brightest. The marvellous brilliancy of the 'Star of Bethlehem,' in 1887 will surpass any of its previous visitations. It will be seen even by noonday, shining with a quick, flashing light the entire year, after which it will gradually decrease in brightness and finally disappear, not to return to our heavens until 2,202 or 315 years after 1887. The star first attracted the attention of modern astronomers in the year 1,575. It was then called a new star. It was no new star, however, for this was the star which shone so brightly four years before Christ, and was the star that illuminated the heavens at the nativity of Christ."

HOW HE CAME TO SWEAR OFF.

"No, I won't drink with you to-day, boys," said a drummer to several companions, as they settled down in the smoking car and passed the bottle. "The fact is, boys, I've quit drinking—I've sworn off."

He was greeted with shouts of laughter by the happy crowd around him; they put the bottle under his nose and indulged in many jokes at his expense, but he refused to drink, and was rather serious about it.

"What is the matter, old boy?" sang out one. "If you've quit drinking, something's up; tell us what it is."

"Well, boys, I will, though I know you'll laugh at me. But I'll tell you, all the same. I have been a drinking man all my life, ever since I married. As you all know, I love whisky—it's as sweet in my mouth as sugar—and God only knows how I will quit it. For seven years not a day passed over my head that I did not have at least one drink. But I am done. Yesterday I was in Chicago. Down on South Clark street a customer of mine keeps a pawn shop in connection with his other business. I called on him, and while I was there a young man of not more than twenty-five wearing threadbare clothes, and looking as if he hadn't seen a sober day for a month, came in with a package in his hand. Tremblingly he unwrapped it, and handed the article to the pawn-broker saying, 'Give me ten cents.' And boys, what do you suppose it was? A pair of baby shoes, little things with the bottoms only a trifle soiled, as if they had been worn only once or twice."

"Where did you get these?" asked the pawn-broker.

"Got them at home," replied the man, who had an intelligent face and the manner of a gentleman despite his sad condition. "My—my wife bought them for our baby. Give me ten cents for them—I want a drink."

"You had better take the shoes back to your wife; the baby will need them," said the pawn-broker.

"No she don't because—because she's dead. She is laying at home now—died last night."

As he said this, the poor fellow broke down, bowed his head on the showcase, and cried like a child.

"Boys," said the drummer, "you can laugh if you please, but I—I have a baby of my own at home, and I swear I'll never drink another drop."

Then he got up and went into another car. His companions glanced at each other in silence; no one laughed; the bottle disappeared; and soon each one was sitting in a seat by himself reading a newspaper.—Chicago Herald.

TAR-SMOKE FOR DIPHTHERIA.

New York Sun: Ruth Lockwood, the nine year old child of Thomas Lockwood, a compositor in the Times office, became violently ill with diphtheria Tuesday night. She was so weak that it was deemed dangerous to try tracheotomy, or cutting open the windpipe. Thursday Dr. Nichols, of No. 117 West Washington place, who was attending her, received a copy of the Paris Figaro, which contained a report made to the French Academy of Medicine by Dr. Delthil. Dr. Delthil said that the vapors of liquid tar and turpentine would dissolve the fibrinous exudations which choke up the throat in croup and diphtheria.

Dr. Delthil's process was described. He pours equal parts of turpentine and liquid tar into a tin pan or cup and sets fire to the mixture. A dense resinous smoke arises, which obscures the air of the room.

"The patient," Dr. Delthil says, "immediately seems to experience relief; the choking and rattle stop; the patient falls into a slumber, and seems to inhale the smoke with pleasure. The fibrinous membrane soon becomes detached, and the patient coughs up microbicides. These, when caught in a glass, may be seen to dissolve in the smoke. In the course of three days afterward the patient entirely recovers."

Dr. Nichols tried this treatment yesterday with little Ruth Lockwood. She was lying gasping for breath when he visited her. First pouring about two tablespoonfuls of liquefied tar on an iron pan, he poured as much turpentine over it and sets it on fire. The rich resinous smoke which rose to the ceiling was by no means unpleasant. As it filled the room the child's breathing became natural, and as the smoke grew dense she fell asleep.

A QUESTION.

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why doth the Spring return
To scatter flowers beneath our feet,
And the wastes of winter spurn?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why doth the buried grain
Send forth new harvests for men to reap,
And whiten the spreading plain?

If death be an eternal sleep
Why the ocean's ceaseless flow,
When the planets all their journeys keep
And never weary grow?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why do we hope for heaven,
When we approach the mercy seat
And ask to be forgiven?

If death be an eternal sleep,
When will justice come,
To those who toil for other's meat,
And receive but scanty crumbs?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why did the angels go
The poor man to bear to Abraham's seat,
While the rich man was in woe?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why was man e'er born,
And why should he his vigils keep,
If there is no coming morn?

THE STICK OF EPHRAIM.

DEAR HERALD:—It is understood that one of the objects of your publication is the promulgation of truthful principles and doctrine. When I essayed some remarks, as I thought corrective, upon the communication of E. H. Gurley, I did not anticipate that it would involve me in a controversy. In replying to his second I do not intend to follow in all his vagaries, or reply to items he has introduced from others, but sum up what I have to say upon the subject. His last is a very wordy article; an attempt to play upon words, rather than grapple with and discuss the subjects he at first proposed. In the upper part of the third column, after quoting my definition of the "great things of the law," as being that which would produce the highest standard of moral excellence; viz., knowledge and perfection in the things of God, (this he tacitly admits), he then states, "In conjunction with this you cite section 108, paragraph 6, Doctrine and Covenants, showing the servants or Eldership are Ephraim," and then observes what a peculiar lot of servants they are; whereas I make no such a quotation, or in any way refer to it. The words "Ephraim my servants," are garbled out of the seventh paragraph of my letter. Neither do I use those words only as found, as stated. Therefore the conjunction as attributed to me is a misrepresentation, my letter being witness. Again, after quoting Hosea 8: 12, he comments: These two facts are inseparably connected; hence if the first implies a standard of moral excellence, the second applies to that identical people. A strange thing, as couched in the spirit of Hosea's expression; a pretty severe criticism on the moral standard of those servants." Unfortunately for E. H., in his presentation of the case, it is not true. It is denied that at the time the great things of the law were written to Ephraim, that he stood in the relationship of a servant of God. His servants are characterized as keeping the commandments of God, and having the testimony of Jesus Christ. Rev. 12:17; also 19:10. "His servants ye are, whom ye obey." Rom. 6:16. His garbling interpretation and comments therefrom are cunningly devised, but his facts, which he asserts are inseparably connected, never existed only as fabled by himself. Truth don't recognize the fable, and charity refuses its mantle for a covering. Let it perish. Had it not been that he attempts to fasten upon me the paternity of his dark visaged product, I don't know that I should have written again, as there is nothing else in his second letter that particularly requires a reply from me. But while writing, I will notice some two or three of his other assumings, for he proves nothing. First he says, Shalmanezzer, King of Assyria, led away captive the ten tribes of Israel, including the half tribe of Manasseh, which thing he did not. See 15th and 17th chapters, 2d King; also 1st Chron., 5th chap. It is probable that most of those tribes were finally led into the north country; but that Ephraim constituted one of them, we emphatically deny. For according to the Book, Ephraim went south. Hosea ninth chapter says: "Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and they shall eat unclean things in Assyria; they shall not offer wine unto the Lord, neither shall they be pleasing unto him. Their sacrifices shall be unto them as the bread of mourners. All that eat thereof shall be polluted for their bread; for their soul shall not come into the house of the Lord * * * Egypt shall gather them up, Memphis shall bury them, * * * my God shall cast them away, because they did not hearken unto him; and they shall be wanderers among the nations." "Ephraim hath mixed himself among the people," and thereby lost his identity. Isa. 7 says, "He shall cease to be a people."

In my former letter, speaking regarding the return of the tribes, I observed: "But before they are brought forth out of the thickets, Ephraim will have accomplished the work assigned him in having built Zion; and be prepared to receive the outcasts and bless them upon their return from their exile," and quoted 6th paragraph of 108th section of Doctrine and Covenants as proof, conclusive, Ephraim went not with the tribes north.

Regarding the term, "The great things of the law." When I stated that the Bible and Book of Mormon contained them. It was urged that the idea was new, and at variance with the Elders also. Certain it is, that those books contain the perfect law, the fullness of the everlasting gospel. A perfect law can not be amended, neither can more than a fullness according to man's capacity be entertained by man. All of this as a moral code is possessed by the church in our own day. The idea that something superior to perfection can and is included in the term "great things of my law," is simply absurd. This is further proved by the answer of Jesus Christ in his reply to a crafty lawyer:

"Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment, and the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments, hang all the law and the prophets."—Matt. 22:36.

Talk about keys, here is the grand master key given by the Master himself, defining the purport and intention of all moral law given to man.

"The Elders, Priests and Teachers of this church, shall teach the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in which is the fulness of my gospel. These shall be their teachings."—Doctrine and Covenants 42:5. "And they who are not sanctified through the law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ, must inherit another kingdom, even that of a terrestrial kingdom, or that of a telestial kingdom; for he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom can not abide a celestial glory; and he who can not abide the law of a terrestrial kingdom, can not abide a terrestrial glory; and he who can not abide the law of a telestial kingdom, can not abide a telestial glory; therefore he is not meet for a kingdom of glory, therefore he must abide a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory."—Doctrine and Covenants 85:5.

The above is conclusive, that the great things of the law are contained in the Bible and Book of Mormon. Through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the church having these laws in her possession, need not wait the return of Ephraim from the north, especially as they did not venture in that direction.

Another idea presented by E. H. is, that the Book of Mormon is not, nor can not be the Stick of Ephraim, as designated by the Prophet Ezekiel, in 37 chapter, because for that to be the fact, it must come from or be concerning them in chief. Now, if this construction of that scripture is admitted, by a parity of reasoning, the Stick written upon for Judah, has never yet been possessed by any party. Judah never wrote his own history, and those of his companions any more than did Ephraim write his. Neither of them possesses any distinctive history alone as a tribe, neither ever existed as a nation only in conjunction with other tribes. The Manassehites had no companions in their national capacity, at least their records are silent upon that subject. Therefore the 37 of Ezekiel will not apply to them. Moses, a Levite, wrote the early history of the entire family; in fact the entire race of man, and gave law for the government of the Hebrew Nation. The prophets and many of their historians, were of different tribes, and they wrote generally of the entire family. The Jews themselves, and the entire world, believe the Bible to be the sacred history of the Jews; and we accept it as such, and as identical with the Stick of Judah. Ezekiel 37. The same rule of evidence will apply, but with additional force, to the Stick of Ephraim, by us known as the Book of Mormon. It was foretold that a record was to be written for Joseph, and designated the Stick of Ephraim; yet from the time of its compilation, for generations and centuries, its contents, yea, even its existence, was unknown to the world, either by Jew or Gentile, until revealed, translated and published by an Ephraimite, the first born son of the restitution of Israel; the Elias of the dispensation of the fulness of times. As evidence of his God-given authority to act in his calling and mission, in which he would use the records of the entire household; and although their parties were neither of them the original authors of those books, nor men of their tribes named; yet the prophet was instructed to thus designate them, the Stick of Judah, and of Joseph the Stick of Ephraim.

In view of these scriptural statements of the case, E. H.'s opinion as to what should characterize the subject matter of the books, to entitle them to the names given, is left out of consideration by the inspired writer.

But we will now for a moment consider the comparative claims to authorship by the two men, who were the agents in the production of the book, by the standard of human judgment. Both men acted under the inspiration and direction of the Almighty; both retained their faith unto the end; both fell in death by the hand of violence, because of the truth. The Book of Mormon, according to the statement therein, is an abbreviated history of one already possessed in the archives of the Nephite nation, the principal branch of the Lehi colony, which came from Jerusalem in Asia. The record by Mormon gives their tribal descent in language they had formed after they left Asia, together with a sketch of his life and times, which was finished by his son, and by him hid up after the destruction of his people, the Nephites, in their last and final battle for existence, as a branch of the original colony. The Nephite record, after being hid up from the eye or knowledge of man for fourteen hundred years, was by an Ephraimite exhumed from its place of concealment and preservation, and in the language of the Prophet Isaiah made to "speak from the ground, and whisper low out of the dust, as one that hath a familiar spirit out of the ground," 29 chapter; and although written in a language now entirely unknown, it was deciphered and printed in one of the most popular and wide spread languages upon the face of the earth; and orally proclaimed abroad, so that thousands and hundreds of thousands have received it as restoring and making known the everlasting covenant of God to man; restoring the old paths to walk in; and thereby preparing the world for the greatest, grandest, and most glorious event the earth, or the race of man has ever known, in the second advent of the Messiah in the glory of his Father, and the resurrection and crowning with glory, the righteous dead who died in the Lord. Hence, so far as human judgment can determine, the Ephraimite achieved the greatest work, or in the language of scripture,

"a marvelous work and a wonder," before which "the wisdom of the wise perish, and the understanding of the prudent is hid."

In view of these facts, foreknown in the heavens, the prophet was directed to designate the record written for Joseph, the Stick of Ephraim, as the Lord's title given to the book. Amen.

JOSIAH ELLS.

THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS.

BROTHER JOSEPH:—As many of the saints have an idea that the natives of Tahiti—or Tah-hete, and other islands of the South Sea—are an inferior race physically and mentally; and that missionary effort there would be a waste of time and talent. I will make a few extracts from "Ellis Polynesian Researches." Mr. Ellis spent many years in that land as a Missionary of the London Missionary Society. He says:

"The historical songs of their bards—the beautiful, figurative, and impassioned eloquence sometimes displayed in their national assemblies—above all the copiousness, variety, precision, and purity of their language, with their extensive use of numbers, warrant the conclusion, that they possess no contemptible mental powers."

Again:

"That their mental powers are not inferior to those of the generality of mankind, has been more fully shown since the establishment of schools, and the introduction of letters. Not only have the children and young persons learned to read, write, cipher, and commit their lessons to memory with a facility and quickness not exceeded by individuals of the same age in any country; but the education of adults, and even persons advanced in years, which in England, with every advantage, is so difficult an undertaking, that nothing but the best means and untiring application ever accomplished it—has been effected here with comparative ease. Multitudes who were upwards of thirty or forty years of age when they commenced with the alphabet, have in the course of twelve months learned to read distinctly in the New Testament, large portions, and even whole books of which, some of them have in a short period committed to memory. They acquired the first rules of arithmetic with equal facility, and have readily received the different kinds of instruction hitherto furnished, as fast as their teachers could prepare lessons in the native language. It is probable that no less than ten thousand persons have learned to read the Scriptures, and that nearly an equal number are either capable of writing or are under instruction."

This was written over fifty years ago. After giving an illustration or two of their keenness of intellect and depth of thought which I have not space to repeat, he says:

"The above will show that the inhabitants of these distant isles, though shut out for ages from intercourse with every other part of the world, and deprived of every channel of knowledge, are notwithstanding, by no means inferior in intellect, or capacity to the more favored inhabitants of other parts of the globe. These statements also warrant the anticipation, that they will attain an elevation equal to that of the most cultivated and enlarged intellect, whenever they shall secure the requisite advantages."

Again:

"The precision, regularity, and extent of their numbers have often astonished me; and how a people having comparatively speaking, but little necessity to use calculation, and being destitute of the knowledge of figures, should have originated and matured such a system [which he had been describing] is still more wonderful, and appears, more than any other fact, to favor the opinion that these islands were peopled from a country whose inhabitants were highly civilized."

In form, he says that "They are above the medium size, well formed limbs, shapely heads, and of an open and prepossessing countenance. Aquiline noses, well formed mouths, black or dark hair, long and wavy, black eyes, round and oval faces, and skin of an olive or bronze color, and in their movements generally active, graceful and stately in their gait, and perfectly unembarrassed in their address."

Of the moral status of the people, Mr. Ellis writes thus:

"No change in their customs, or usages has taken place, in connection with the introduction of the religion of the Bible, more extensive or beneficial in its influence on every class in society, than the institution of Christian marriage. Instances of unfaithfulness are not indeed unknown; but considering their former habits of life, the partial influence in regard to character, and the slight inconvenience in reference to the means of support, by which they would probably be followed, they have but seldom occurred. The solemn and indissoluble obligations of the marriage vow, are recognized by all who profess to be Christians; and the domestic, social, and elevated happiness it has imparted, is readily acknowledged. It has entirely altered the tone of feelings, and imparted new principles of conduct in regard to the conjugal relation."

"Every household virtue adorns their families; the children grow up the objects of their mutual affection, and call into existence new solitudes and unwonted emotions of delight. Often they appear sitting together, reading the Scriptures, walking in company to the house of God, or surrounding, not indeed the family hearth, or the domestic fireside, which in their warm climate would be no addition to their comfort; but the family board, spread with the liberal gifts of divine bounty. The father at times may also be seen nursing his little child at the door of his cottage, and the mother sitting at needle work at his side, or engaged in other domestic employments. These are the delights it has imparted to the present race, while the rising generation is trained under the influence of the principles of Christianity and these examples of social and domestic virtue."

"The female converts to Christianity are all neatly and modestly attired."

"Both sexes readily and cheerfully adopt the European style of clothing."

Bro. Glaud Rodger told me that our sisters' dress in neat and modest apparel. I do not see why that most attractive, and in my mind very important field, should not be at once occupied. I do not see why the Saints there do not need and deserve the watchful oversight of those whose mission is to all the world, and who are to "regulate the affairs of the Church in all the world." I hope they may no longer be neglected. The revelation of 1882 does not say that no foreign missions can be prosecuted, but can not "in many foreign lands."

Fraternally,

T. W. SMITH.

MEDITATIONS.

IN the Scriptures there are some statements about the whole world lying in wickedness. Darkness to cover the earth, and gross darkness the people. This world is at enmity against God. Etc. I have had thoughts given me at times, that have convinced me that these are facts, and that we live in the age of the world, when these facts are fully demonstrated by the people of the world. They are lifted up in pride, and boast of their enlightenments. They give not God the praise. They deny revelation, and despise prophesying. They love fables better than truth. Their customs are all vanity in the sight of God. Their churches and religions are all priestcrafts and speculations. They teach for doctrine the precepts of men, who say that inspiration is done away and that spiritual gifts are no longer needed. The preachers depend on their own wisdom, which is foolishness in the sight of God. The people depend on the preachers. 'Blind leaders of the blind.' The God of Heaven in his great condescending compassion for the race, saw fit to choose a humble man who was seeking wisdom from above, to tell the religious world that they were all wrong. That they were in darkness, and that none had authority to administer sacred ordinances. Therefore He revealed the plan of Redemption as it was before. The gospel was restored. The church established. Satan made a charge. Men became agents to do the will of the devil. The people of God were scattered, the prophet was killed. Some of the people were led off by apostates, and some remained steadfast. The remnant was called, and the instruction is as formerly 'They who do the will of God shall know of the doctrine.' The promise is the same as of yore. 'The signs shall follow them who believe.' All who believe repent and are baptized in the name of Christ shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and 'Whoso,' says Christ 'treasureth up my words shall not be deceived.'

The world to-day has the blessed privilege offered them of light instead of darkness, of a thousand years of happiness on the earth, when Christ the Lord shall be the king of all the earth, and of eternal life in the celestial kingdom of God. By obedience to the gospel and by endurance to the end of mortal life. We are agents to choose or refuse. If we choose right and practice right we will please God and do his will. If we choose wrong and practice wrong we will please the world and do the will of the devil. Hence, lose much and gain nothing. Let us who are on the Lord's side, hence, not at enmity to God, do all we can to spread and publish truth for righteousness sake.

INFERIOR.

THE RESURRECTION.

THE word resurrection is derived from the Latin re and surgere, meaning to rise. We have many instances of resurrection around us, but the word is generally applied to the rising of Christ on Easter Day, and also the revival of the dead of the human race, or their return from the grave, particularly at the day of reckoning.

Is there any need for a resurrection? Yes, there is, for without it the hope of all Christians would be vain. "For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ risen."—1 Cor. 15: 16. To them, life would present a blank; there would be nothing to live for. Can we imagine life without that hope. Society would have no check upon it. The evil passions of man would not be curbed. Crime would stalk abroad. Persons and property would not be safe, for the evil part of man's nature, which is of the earth "earthly," would reign predominant. Conscience would be set aside, wanting the fear of him whom all should fear. In short it would be as near an approach to the place of torment, set apart for the ungodly, as humanity could get. Even supposing that the hope of a resurrection was not to be realized, how much happier are the lives of those who entertain it. They are filled with more ennobling aims, and peace and contentment seem to pervade their very atmosphere. Their households are orderly and happy, for without an orderly head, nothing will prosper. We are told that "order is heaven's first law," therefore it should be ours.

The Bible teaching points directly to a resurrection of the body, and in John eleventh chapter we have the Savior's words spoken to Martha, the sister of Lazarus, on the subject. "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die." Of course the words "never die," imply the death of the spirit, the bodily death being looked upon as sleep by the Savior, and was evidently a trivial matter when compared with the death of the soul. We have also the evidence of the Old Testament with regard to the resurrection, in Job. 19: 25, 27:

I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

Through the death of Christ the original sin of Adam is removed, and we are thus made heirs to life eternal, providing we make our calling and election sure. There would have been no resurrection but for the death of the Savior. John 11: 25, 26. "I am the resurrection and the life," saith the Lord. "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Again in 1 Cor. 15: 21, 22: "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

When the Savior was upon the earth, and preached directly on this subject, there were those among the Jews who would not believe in it. They were called Sadducees, and maintained, that there was no future state of rewards and punishments, no resurrection from the dead, neither angels nor spirits. The Messiah they expected was a temporal prince, and their views were only limited to the enjoyment of the present life. They took their name from Sadoc, a follower of Antigonus Sochoeus, who was president of the Sanhedrim B. C. 250.

The general idea of the Jewish nation is, that the Messiah has yet to come, when at the trumpet's blast all their nation will be changed into angels, and will be gathered from the four winds of heaven to Jerusalem and the dead wherever they are, will like moles travel by underground passages to Jerusalem, where they will all ascend at the spot where the temple was of old, to meet their Lord.

We have yearly evidence of resurrection around us, which leads us to think of the higher one. The most common is that of the vegetable kingdom, which may be seen in the spring time, when the trees and plants awake from their winter-sleep to newness of life, by the aid of that dispenser of life, the sun, just as we shall be enabled to awake by the action of the Savior to a new life at the last day. Another instance is that of the caterpillar changing into a chrysalis, and thence into the beautiful butterfly which presents a very good type of our own resurrection. The first stage of its existence as the caterpillar, represents our earthly life. After a period—as far as we can discern—it dies, and assumes that form known as the chrysalis. This represents our death and consignment to the grave. The third change is from the chrysalis into the beautiful butterfly, which, with its dazzling colors flitting about in the sunshine, represents the sanctified form of our bodies after they enter that heaven set apart for the righteous, and clad in robes of dazzling brilliancy, move about in the light of him whose brightness darkens even the sun at noon. We are like the seed which is sown in the ground, it decays and springs forth anew; so do we decay and spring forth with purified bodies to another life. The poet has beautifully shown this sowing of the seed in the following:

"For what are graves but gardens that are sown;
And gardens graves, that into bloom have grown.
And all graves yet are destined to become Gardens, more beautiful than man's first home."

The question may be asked, when will the resurrection be? If we refer to Mark 13: 32, we shall there receive the Savior's answer to the question:

"But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father."

But he gave us some signs by which we should know it was at hand. Matt. 24.

Here a little may be said about certain people who have stated that they knew when the end would be, and professing Christians have been of the number who credited such statements; but it must be attributed to a lack of the Spirit, or ignorance of the outline facts of Scripture history, as we have seen in Mark 13: 32, that it is only known to God, therefore it is impossible for a mortal to know that which the Savior (in his earthly probation) did not know.

What form will the body take at the resurrection? This question is answered in Ezek. 37, and also on page 320 par. 7, chap. 19 of Alma, Book of Mormon, the latter reads as follows:

"Behold it is requisite and just, according to the power of the resurrection of Christ, that the soul of man should be restored to its body, and that every part of the body should be restored to itself."

We read that Abraham walked and talked with angels, and it was only by divine interposition that he discovered them to be such. We do not hear of his finding out that they had wings, and so recognizing them as divine beings. God made man in his own image. Did he then create the angels on a different plan!

The time when we are led to think specially of the resurrection, is at Easter day, at which time we commemorate the rising of the Redeemer from the grave. Three days previous to that, Good Friday, he was crucified by the order of Pilate, at the instigation of the Jews. This should be a time of reflection, instead of one of pleasure and rioting, which is usually the case in this land, which is basking in the light of professed Christianity, and where the people suppose that they are so influenced by God's Spirit, that they exclaim, "We have no need for revelation;" "What a contrast there is between the way in which Russia commemorates this great event and our own enlightened Great Britain. In the former the peasantry universally greet one another with the cry, "The Lord is risen," and the answer they receive is, "He is risen indeed!" No matter who is addressed, be it the nobles or the Czar himself, an answer is always joyfully given. In the latter the season seems to be a signal for all kinds of devilry and "Bacchanalian riot," even the anniversary of the Lord's death is not excepted. It is a universal holiday with the people, and vicious and intemperate pleasures are the order of the day. Instead of reflecting on the priceless boon conferred on the human race, they are led deeper into the by and forbidden paths of degradation and crime. How can we who have been favored with the "light" be too thankful that we have been snatched as it were from the irresistible flood of confusion and atheism which is carrying thousands of frail human barks away on its turbulent bosom, towards destruction, wrecking many, and stranding them in eternity. Nothing but the beacon light of the gospel, with its sturdy pilots, clad in the life saving dress—the "armour of righteousness," can rescue them, and bring them to the haven of rest and peace. First Tim. 3: 1-4, comes forcibly to our minds when thinking of these things. The vast army of so-called Christian shepherds have utterly failed, and the religious drama is coming to an end. The paint is coming off their faces, the tinsel and borrowed robes shining with an artificial brilliancy are fading, and the priestly mummeries which have prevailed for ages are gradually unfolding to view, showing the base deception which has been palmed upon the people as the religion of Christ; and the hubbub and uproar, which will soon arise, can only be quelled by the administration of the gospel, with the Spirit's power as of old, and as we have received it. But we must expect that the hirelings will make an effort to save the falling image, and that a convulsive one; for they will be assisted by the powers of darkness in frustrating the power of God's true servants, but to no purpose; and they cry in substance, though not in words, like unto them of old, "Our craft is in danger, great is Diana of the Ephesians."

Luke 17: 20-37 also speaks of the resurrection, so that we must be fully prepared, and be forever on our watch towers, or like the five foolish virgins at the marriage feast, we may be short of oil when we need light to guide our feet at his coming. As that time draws nigh, many false teachers will arise, who will say, "Lo here is Christ, and there is Christ," but we must beware of them. When the resurrection day comes, the dead will rise out of their graves at the sound of the archangel's trumpet, and the elect will be gathered from the four winds of heaven, and his saints will be caught up in the air to meet him, and the Lord will descend upon the earth. All nations will be judged in order before him, from Adam down to the present generation. The Jews will not be excepted as Ezek. 37 shows, although they crucified the Master. The earth presents a good type of the resurrection. In its original state it brought forth abundantly. After the fall thorns and thistles grew upon it. The flood may be called its baptism, and the fire which will pass over it represents the confirmation, and also the death, before it is fit to be a dwelling place for Christ and his angels. There will be a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth will have passed away. And he will judge all nations. The good he will place on his right hand, and the wicked on his left. The former to inherit eternal life, and the latter their well merited deserts. All men being judged according to their works, if they are just and good in this life, they will be restored to that which is good at the resurrection day. "Everything will be restored to its proper order, mortality raised to immortality, corruption raised to incorruption,—raised to endless happiness, to inherit the kingdom of God, or to endless misery to inherit the kingdom of the devil."—Book of Mormon, Alma, page 3. The resurrection is the grand superstructure by which man is raised from the ruin of the fall to be "one with God, when he is all in all." May we all be of that number who, with loins girt and lamps trimmed, will gladly say at his coming, "Rejoice, for the Lord is at hand!" In the words of St. Paul, let us ever say, "I protest unto you the resurrection of the dead. And in this is my rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, daily, though I die."

ORATION

DELIVERED BY ELDER ZENAS H. GURLEY,
At Leon, Iowa, Decoration Day, May 30th, 1884,
By Invitation of Post 251, G. A. R.

MR. PRESIDENT;

Ladies and Gentlemen:—The brave soldiers, whose graves we have come to decorate, are not dead but sleeping. Lives that have been given for so great and noble a purpose as theirs have been will never die; and I trust there are none too poor to do them homage, or none so lost to the love of humanity and the establishment of eternal right, but what feel with signal pride this opportunity to pay tribute of respect to those loved boys that went down in the death of battle; and to the loved boys, their surviving comrades, with whom we surround these graves to-day.

It is a maxim with us as a nation that "governments are instituted of God for man's benefit; and derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." Hence when the administration of government becomes or is abortive of these principles, it is no longer the government of the citizen of America, for the support of which his patriot fathers pledged their lives and sacred honor. And, whatever may be our personal feelings or prejudices as regards the causes which led to the late Rebellion, one thing I think we may safely premise here, that this great government of ours in her nobler and grander intent did not fully reach the line of her development until the beginning of the year 1863, Anno Domini, when the Proclamation went out from our noble President, the ever loved and lamented Lincoln, declaring that even the "slaves" should be free. This document, in deed and in truth, "proclaimed liberty to the captives." It dispensed with chains, with whipping posts and auction blocks declaring in unmistakable accents that the mighty should not oppress the helpless; that the mother should be robbed of her child no more; and that human slavery, the destroyer of all that is sacred among men, that searing blight which had cursed this land for so many years, should be blotted out of existence. The last argument of kings was resorted to by both parties, and that mighty Tribunal of War from which there is no appeal, has settled the matter beyond all controversy,—as witness these graves covered with flowers to-day.

I know that in the estimate of many, the leaders of the anti-slavery movement in the North were considered reckless and crazed. But, whatever may have been our feelings and judgments then, the facts of history to-day guarantee and indemnify the conclusion, that the conflict was that of ages and irrepressible, and that which moved the leaders at the outset was but the inspiration of liberty in her great work of race progress, using such men as she found ready to serve her purpose. And here upon this point allow me a quotation from the pen of the Honorable Senator Ingalls, in his masterly paper—wherein he gives "John Brown's place in history."

"Out of the portentous and menacing cloud of anti-slavery sentiment that had long brooded with sullen discontent, a baleful meteor above the North, he sprang like a terrific thunderbolt, whose lurid glare illuminated the continent with devastating flame, and whose reverberations among the splintered crags of Harper's Ferry were repeated on a thousand battlefields from Gettysburg to the Gulf. From the instant that shot was fired, the discussion and debate of centuries was at an end. He who was not for slavery was against it. The North became vertebrated, and the age of cartilage and compromise was at an end. The nation seized the standard of universal emancipation which dropped from his dying hand on the scaffold at Charleston, and bore it in triumph to Appomattox."

Well might Mr. Collier say, "glorious national life born of such noble deaths."

It is not for the purpose of reviving any personal prejudice that these facts are here recited, but for the purpose of doing honor to the dead and honor to the living; men who bore in triumph to successful victory the old stars and stripes, our nation's flag and emblem of God's universal government; and to urge upon my fellow-citizen, so far as I may be able, the necessity of discharging our whole duty in caring for the living who belonged to the dead. The father, the mother, the wife, or child of these men who gave their lives in defense of our country's cause ought, by every sense of right, be honestly and properly cared for by us. The child held high in air by its mother, as a last farewell to the father as he disappeared going to the war, has grown to manhood, or womanhood, and being here to-day brings flowers for the graves of the loved ones gone;—days, months, and years have passed, but no father has yet come back to it, and I repeat that we are bound by every sense of honor and sacred duty to do all within our power as citizens and as a nation to make good this loss to them, and help them bear their burden as best we may. And, to every woman who in any sense administered to the wants of those dying braves, seeking and hunting them out on battle-fields, in hospital, in camp, by the roadside and in hedges, wherever the "boys" fell, these angels of mercy coming to look after and to stand by them until the death angel said it was enough; women of courage, of noble hearts and minds, to all for these acts, and for every and all other acts kindly bestowed upon these or their children, true daughters of America, receive my heartfelt gratitude and thanks, and be assured that history will forever record the fact, that during the giant and momentous struggle through which the nation has passed, you in your sphere have discharged your whole and true duty in the spirit of gratitude and love; and in this I believe I voice the sentiment not only of the living, but also the living dead—(for to me they are not dead but only sleeping).

This nation has grown from three millions to upwards of fifty millions inhabitants, the immigration during the decade of 1,790 to 1,800 reaching 58,000 people, while in the last decade of 1870 to 1880 it reached the immense sum of 2,700,000 souls. Now with this tide of human life pouring in upon us year by year, it is impossible to conjecture with certainty the destiny of so great a nation and the immensity of the power it is destined to wield; for, think of it as we may, America is known to-day as the asylum, the home for the downtrodden millions of the earth. And because of this she wields a greater power with the people than any other nation of to-day; and she is destined to go on, and on, in the great and good work. And why? Because, at the point of the bayonet she hath forever settled the question and declared in burning words of fire that "all her citizens shall be free and enjoy equal rights before the law." And of all these noble dead we may safely assert that they "died for a cause," and not merely to pay the debt of nature, and like the perfume of sweet smelling flowers, so will the memory of these gallant soldiers ever be to us; and I for one propose to be of that number who will not allow political party, or state lines to shut them out from my esteem and affection.

Governor Andrews said, "the men we offer can do anything from the digging of clams to the making of pianos." And so it was. The rank and file of our army were the flower of our land. Men of nerve and men of intellects second to none, who, comprehending the rightfulness of their cause and insisting upon its establishment, proved themselves invincible to the forces against them. And here to-day in the face of the dead—over these graves, I ask you my countrymen to join me in the sentiment expressed by Mr. Lincoln at Gettysburg, "We hereby highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain; that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth." Like pillars in the great vault of heaven, these principles being right, will remain throughout all ages to come. And if we in the enjoyment and application thereof shall do our whole duty to God and the race, we will see to it that they are kindly but positively administered throughout the entire Union of States, by the administration of which the citizen will be led to discharge his duty to his government cheerfully, and in return receive ample and complete protection therefrom. I know it requires time to cure the wounds of the late war, and time for all parties to adjust themselves to the administration of freedom upon this new basis. But, be that as it may, while time is being granted and patience employed to effect the desired end; we as citizens of one common country are bound by the sacred ties of humanity, which we owe to the race and to one another, by the ties of a common cause for which as a nation we have all suffered; by the well springs of life which lead us to revere the God of liberty and humanity; by every sense of honor and justice, to declare again and again, with renewed zeal and increasing confidence; with determination and resolution that our dead "shall not have died in vain;" and the doctrine that "all men are equal under the law" shall be firmly and lastingly established in our land, by which the guilty shall be punished and the innocent protected. In the administration of these principles we should know no North, no South, no East, no West, but one government, one interest, one nation. To effect this, public sentiment must be healthy, and upon the side of law and order in every State. So healthy and vigorous ought it to be that pusillanimous sentimentalism which is always ready to rob justice at the expense of the innocent, would be barred from a hearing farther than to condemn and prevent its nefarious operation as against law and the interest of the majority. Whatever tends to rob the law of its sublime power, tends to corrupt the administration of it; and whatever seeks to destroy the law or prevent its operation, seeks to destroy the liberty of the citizen; for all our liberties are found in law by which we are governed; and the citizen who lives nearest in harmony with the laws of his country is the one who enjoys the greatest liberty. And if such life be as I would infer, prompted because of love for that country, he feels the least arbitrary power of the law, his duty being discharged, not because he fears the law, but because he loves the law. Therefore, the principles of right which we have here to-day re-affirmed as for our general government, let us each and all for ourselves individually and collectively affirm for the great commonwealth of Iowa, by application of which she shall be known as the best governed State in the great Union. I know that the cry is often made of "corruption, corruption, too much corruption to enforce the law." But while I admit this statement in some particular instances, yet as a whole I deny the plea. Wherever it does exist, however, blight and ruin are the result, and we ought by right to hide our heads in shame because of such things, knowing as we all must know that anarchy if tolerated would overthrow the institutions of liberty and that venality in the administration of jurisprudence must tend to sap the very foundation of our government.

Ladies and gentleman,—it will not do. Criminals must not be allowed to go unpunished. The laws of our country must be righteously administered. They are the bulwark of our safety. By them our liberties are maintained, and by them we hope to perpetuate in this land the principles of human liberty, until "time shall be no more." I repeat, it will not do. We have pledged ourselves anew, this day, between the living and the dead, that our dead "shall not have died in vain." Let us be honest then, with ourselves and with our dead. To do this I maintain that the laws of the country and rights of all citizens must be administered and protected in every part and parcel of American soil, impartially, and without fear or favor. This nation has been baptized in the blood of its own children, and I for one, sincerely trust that every member of this government accepting the new birth of freedom will seek to walk in newness of life; which can not be, except by enactment and enforcement of good and wholesome laws everywhere,—by which these rights are established. Some things are self evident, and the part that our forefathers pledged their lives and sacred honor in defense of certain principles of liberty and justice, is mutually shared by us, as witness these graves and these surviving soldiers. And shall we, as a nation, in any sense barter away these rights? Shall we allow the maladministration of justice to become paramount, by which red handed criminals shall be turned loose upon a great and good people! Shall we allow an Esau, either here or there, to sell our birth right for a "mess of pottage." No! God forbid. Let criminals feel the sublime and majestic power of the law. Make crime odious. Let every aider and abettor of criminals be made to feel the ban of ostracism which they justly deserve for such conduct. Make every man feel that there is power in the law by which he is held responsible for his acts. Let every man, woman and child, so far as within their power lies, contribute to this end, and then when justice reigns, peace and security will be felt, and we as a nation advancing the line of our march in the world's great drama of race progress, by which we demonstrate to our fellowmen the heaven born mission assigned us, that of free men to govern themselves. Upon this altar the lives of our patriot dead have been offered; and upon this altar we are willing to be offered whenever emergency demands. But while it may never be required of us to give our lives as these brave comrades have done, yet I insist that we are called on each day we live to see to it that these principles of right for which they died, shall live untarnished and undefiled; and that they who seek to prevent this by preventing the complete operation of good and wholesome laws are traitors to our country, and by right should receive the punishment which such conduct deserves.

When Trajan was about to take the imperial chair at Rome, Plutarch wrote him, "Let your government commence in your breast; and lay the foundation of it in command of your passions." Which instruction, if we but accept and apply, making virtue the rule of our conduct, will of necessity compel all our interests to proceed in harmony with the doctrines of liberty held sacred by us as a nation, and which must eventually make to the good and progress of all nations. For possessing within itself the greatest good to the greatest number, being "fittest" for all, it ought and must by the law of necessity survive all others; for so firmly fixed are my hopes in the doctrine of self government, and so deep are my convictions touching its permanence among men, that I can only see a glorious future for it; a future wherein this doctrine or principle shall have filled the whole earth; and upon which an universal brotherhood shall be builded among all nations of men; when the rights of humanity everywhere will be recognized and maintained not by "might," but by operation of law made in harmony with liberty, justice and truth. The higher and better we comprehend these facts, the purer and greater will be our conception of the inspiration which moved a Jefferson to write, "we hold certain truths to be self-evident." And as we ascend the scale of knowledge in this direction, the better prepared are we to work and develop in harmony with the genius and spirit of this great government "whose motto is freedom and peace to the world," and which means protection to each citizen no matter how despised he may have been.

I said at the outset that these soldiers whose graves we decorate "are not dead but sleeping;" being weary and worn they have laid down to rest. The cause for which they laid down the mortal life, however still lives; and because it lives, they live also; and being a part of the great work of destiny among men, will continue to live throughout the ages yet to come. These mortal lives which formed warp and woof of the conflict, are thus made sacredly dear to us, being cemented by their own blood.

Surviving comrades of our soldier dead—thanking Divine Providence that we are permitted to meet here to-day and revive the hopes which led our brave soldiers to death and to victory, I ask you with us, and that we all, do now silently, soberly, and understandingly, in the fear of God and with due consideration of the rights of all men, solemnly declare that for these principles of self-government and liberty, for which these have died, we do now again pledge in their defense our "lives and sacred honor." And that in so far as we may have power, we will see to it that the rights of our soldiers, and their surviving fathers, mothers, wives, or children, are properly and righteously cared for.

Men of valor and of might—I thank you all, both the living and the dead, for defending so nobly and successfully the cause of human liberty the eternal right. Generations yet to come will do you homage and render fealty to the principles for which you fought. For, however the tide in human affairs may ebb and flow; however dark and baleful the clouds which may appear against us as a nation, see to it that ye have no fears, for the God of liberty has ordained that this government should live; and the doctrine of human liberty being born of Him, shall live and continue to live though heaven and earth pass away. Or as Mr. Longfellow so beautifully expressed it:

"Thou too, sail on, O Ship of state!
Sail on, oh Union, strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate.
We know what Master laid thy keel,
What workmen wrought thy ribs of steel,
Who made each mast, and sail, and rope,
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge, and what a heat,
Were shaped the anchors of thy hope.

Fear not each sudden sound and shock;
'Tis of the wave, and not the rock;
'Tis but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale.
In spite of rock and tempest roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea:
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee—are all with thee."

Miscellaneous.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES.

By an oversight the minutes concerning the report of the Chicago Branch do not show that said report was accepted by the conference. A motion was made that it be received, and after the motion to amend and also the motion to refer were both lost, the one to receive was adopted as the minutes should have shown.

I am also requested by a brother to insert the reason why the Chicago Branch still retained the two names spoken of after they had been received into the Independence Branch, which was because the parties had received no Letters of Removal from the Chicago authorities, who therefore considered that their reception at Independence was illegal. It is thought that some might not understand the reason, and would suppose that the Chicago Branch was doing a real injustice to the brother and sister after having already given them Letters, while the facts were as above stated.

It is also said that after the motion to receive the report was adopted, and before the subsequent action, it was asked as to what the Independence Branch should do regarding the two names they had received and recorded. In reply President Smith suggested that the president of the Chicago Branch be ordered to strike these names from the Chicago record. A motion to this effect was made and adopted by the conference.

HENRY A. STEBBINS,
Church Secretary and Recorder.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

Whereas, Through causes better known to Almighty God than to us poor, frail creatures, our dear sister Patterson has departed this life, to mingle as we conscientiously suppose with the spirits of the righteous in Paradise until the morn of the first resurrection,

Therefore, be it resolved, That we as a branch of the Kewanee District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, among whom she first united with the Church and became a child of God, and an inheritor of our Father's kingdom, do indeed feel to sympathize with brother John, and her son Henry and family, in their bereavement, and that we pray God to have mercy upon them in their sad trial, to still trust in him, that all may terminate to their good and the glory of his holy name.

Resolved, That a copy of the same be sent to the Herald for publication.

JOHN D. JONES,
Secretary of Branch.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

It will also be the saving of a great deal of soap. It is not costly. One dollar will make ten gallons, and it takes one pint to an ordinary washing. If directions are followed, I will return the money if it does not do as recommended. Send money in registered letter to Graham, Young county, Texas, or to Temple, Bell county, Texas. She was the devoted wife of Bro. William Anderson. She leaves a little daughter eight years old, and a step son about eleven years past, with her husband, father, mother, and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. She sleeps sweetly in the arms of Jesus. She was born at Doncaster, England; and at her death was 34 years, 11 months, and 8 days old. She was educated at San Bernardino, Cal. Was the daughter of Richard Varley. She embraced the gospel in early life, and was always a devoted and sincere follower of the meek and lowly Savior; always exemplifying her faith by a godly walk and conversation; and was one of the most exemplary of wives, mothers, and Christians the world has ever witnessed.

Just previous to her death she said to me, "Bro. Brown, I want you to preach my funeral sermon. Will you? Tell the Saints to ever remember me while at the sacramental board, partaking of the emblems of the body and blood of Christ. Will you? Tell them this, and publish it in the Herald, will you, that my testimony in this work now is as it ever has been since I engaged in it, that this work is true? I have had many, many testimonies of its truthfulness. You will remember I now know what I am saying; my mind is as clear as it ever was. I should have liked to have stayed with you, but can not. Bro. Brown, why can not I stay to enjoy the society of my children and dear husband and friends?" Then addressing her husband she said: "You have always been so good and kind to me. No tongue can tell the deep, deep love I have always had for you. Our lives have been one unbroken chain of affection, joy, love and peace. I want you to continue faithful, and engage in the ministry as much as you can consistent with your duties to the children. Keep them together as much as you can, and teach them to be good, and to remember their mother. You have a greater work to do. Give my love to all the Saints; wont you?"

"I thank you, Bro. Brown, for what you have done for me. I soon shall be on the other side, of 'the sweet bye and bye.' I am happy now; good bye." Just as she was closing her eyes in death she said: "I see Jimmy (Bro. Anderson's eldest son, who died a few years ago) and Aunt, coming to meet me; and angels. Oh, how beautiful, how grand! Don't keep me; let me go; good bye." Thus closed the life career of one of the best, noblest, and sweetest Saints, that ever left this wicked world. "Death loves a shining mark." It has done so in this case. Bro. Anderson has lost a dear companion; the Church has lost one of her brightest jewels, society an excellent Christian member. But the Church triumphant has added one more to that happy throng of the redeemed of earth, to swell the chorus "Thou art worthy, * * * for thou hast redeemed us by thy blood, and hast made us kings and priests unto God, and we shall reign on the earth."

May 30th, at 10 a.m., the funeral services of Sr. Anderson were held at their residence, 619 Center street. A large concourse of Saints, relatives and friends attended. By her request I conducted the services at the house, and at the grave. Sang, "Asleep in Jesus," which was followed with appropriate remarks and benediction. At the grave, it being Decoration Day, thousands were in and coming to the cemetery. Sang, "Sister, thou wast mild and lovely," and read the hymn, "She is gone;" with benediction. It was a beautiful day; and everything conspired to make the services appropriate to the occasion. She was deposited in a beautiful place in the cemetery, in a beautiful and splendid casket; and her grave literally covered with beautiful and tastefully designed floral offerings. Thus sleeps in Jesus one of the choice ones of earth. Her life was a standing testimony to the divine work of the Lord on the human heart. It brought forth fruit worthy of him who "so loved the world, that he gave his Only Begotten Son" for the life of the world; and that through him the world might have life, and that abundantly. Her work was well done; she was well prepared, she was willing to say, "Thy will, O Lord, be done." We would not recall her, for she will awake in the likeness of her dear Redeemer.

H. P. BROWN.

DIED.

WHITESIDES.—At his residence near the city of Los Angeles, California, May 17th, 1884, of rheumatism of the heart, Alexander Whitesides. Bro. Whitesides was born May 19th, 1812, in Canada; united with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at an early day; was one of the first Seventies; went up to Missouri with the camp; was with the church in all of its troubles; went to Utah; was disgusted with the proceedings of B. Young and party; removed with his family to California, near thirty years ago; made a visit to Shenandoah, Iowa, in the Summer of 1882, to see relatives there, and for the first time understood the position of the Reorganized Church, and expressed his faith and belief in the same. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder Colter of the Christian Church. He was a good man, and firm in the faith of the latter day work.

MILLIKIN.—Charles Arthur Millikin was born in Colchester, Illinois, August 31st, 1858, and was in his 26th year when he died on the 12th of May, 1884, from a pistol shot fired by his own hand, the result of dejection caused by trouble and sorrow at the death of his wife. Buried from the Christian Church at Colchester, May 14th. Funeral services by Rev. A. Newland of the Methodist Church. He was a nephew of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and a son of Lucy their youngest sister.

GEORGE.—At his home near Monticello, Iowa, February 5th, 1884, of old age, Bro. George George, aged 76 years and four months. He was born in Herfordshire, England, September 11th, 1807, and emigrated to America 35 years thereafter. At Galena, Illinois, in 1842, he married his estimable wife, who survives him. In 1853, after Bro. George had made a trip to California, they settled upon a farm near Monticello, on which they resided till Bro. George's death. Having struggled with poverty in his youthful days, he realized the importance of saving something to avoid his children having to do the same.

To this end he bent his energies and succeeded well. He leaves a wife and three children, one daughter and two sons, who mourn the loss of a loving husband and faithful father. Funeral services from the Congregational Church, conducted by Rev. E. P. Kimball. The funeral cortege was a very large one, and the remains were interred in the Monticello Cemetery.

BOYCE.—At Provo, Utah, May, 14th, 1884, by drowning, Violet Emily Boyce. Born December 3d, 1882. Funeral services on the 15th, by Elder E. C. Brand.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings. Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY; Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

LEARNING THEIR DUTY.

"Therefore, let every man learn his own duty."

DUTY is the obligation to do. Where there is nothing to do, or suffer, there is, can be no duty—obligation to do.

It is quite a usual thing to hear Saints, including all grades of officers, assert that they are willing and anxious to learn their duty, that is the nature of what they are under obligation to do. Are all of them sincere when they make the assertion? We shall see.

That there are duties devolving upon an Elder is apparent from the fact of his having been called. What are these duties? He is to "preach, teach, expound the Scriptures, exhort all to come to Christ, and ordain to other offices in the church." This is from the law, and clear as to the obligation to do certain things—but how shall he do them—the law is silent. Why, every body knows how to preach, exhort and expound Scripture. Well, really, does every one know that? Why then are we so incessantly besought to send good Elders, here, there and everywhere?

The fact is not every Elder does know how to preach, &c., let alone every body. Only those who "study to make themselves workmen" that need not be ashamed, nor have others ashamed for them. These do not take the revelation commanding them to do as indicating how they are to do the things commanded. They are satisfied to exercise the faculty given them to discover the way to do when not specifically given; and in doing this derive information and instruction from the experience, observation and methods of other men, both those who have lived and those who are now living, engaged in similar pursuits. In this they are not only right, but are successful according to the fidelity of their researches, and the application of what they learn to their own work. From these researches and observation we have the methods of conducting meetings; for preaching, prayer and sacramental services; for the laying on of hands in prayer for ordination, confirmation, healing, blessing of children and conferring spiritual blessings for special purposes, &c. Those Elders most conspicuous for success and address in the discharge of these various duties, are notably those who have made themselves ready and familiar with the methods of doing those things among men of their class. There is great unanimity and uniformity among the Elders in this, and as to these duties, but this uniformity of performance does not come from specifications in the law.

It is a very great pity for the efficacy of the Deacon's office, and the efficiency of the Deacons of the church that these officers do not exercise the same common sense in learning their duties, and in performing them that the Elders have used.

We have repeatedly been asked what are the duties of a Deacon. We have answered them, from our understanding. But in reply to our answer, we have been met with the statement that there is nothing in the law which says that a Deacon is to open the meeting house doors, build fires, trim lamps and light them, sweep floors, and various other things which the assembling of the Saints makes necessary. No. Neither are the how, when, where and under what conditions the Elders shall preach, teach, &c., found in the law. Are the latter not found declared in the command to do. It is a well known principle in law that anything commanded to be done carries the authority to do with the command, both as to the fact and the method by which it is done.

Wherever the church has a meeting room where the Saints meet for worship and church ordinances and business, and a Deacon, there is a sphere for the standing minister, the Deacon, who should have charge of the room, house, or church; and should take pleasure in so keeping it that it would reflect pleasure and comfort on the Saints, credit to himself, and honor to God.

"We have elsewhere written that every branch must have a place of meeting. This place of meeting, if a public building, hall, or meeting house, or church, must be in the actual possession of the association of church members worshipping there, at least during its occupancy while worshipping; and if the property is owned by the church, some one must have constructive possession at all times. What particular officer of the church has precedence of right to this constructive possession? The right to carry the keys; open the doors; conduct visitors, either those belonging or not belonging to the church; to see that the floors, doors, windows, pulpit or stand, seats, table or stand, lamps, and other fixtures are clean and in good order; to open the doors at the hours of gathering for preaching, fellowship, prayer or business meetings; to see that the lamps or candles are trimmed, lighted, and burning, in time for all evening meetings; to see that the members coming in find seats; to keep watch over the saints during the meetings, repressing loud talking, whispering and laughing; reproving the thoughtless, and rebuking the giddy; putting a prompt stop to rude, indecent and boisterous acts, by which the propriety, solemnity and peace of the meetings may be disturbed; to exercise kind and diligent supervision over the health and comfort of the saints while in meeting, by securing a proper ventilation of the room; to light and keep burning the fires by which the room is kept warm; to have charge of the treasury; to receive, disburse, and account for the contributions of the saints, intended for the necessary and incidental expenses of the association of members; to keep, preserve from damage, and account for all personal effects of the association; to visit the poor, ascertain their needs, and report the same to the church; and in fact, to perform any and all of those necessary duties by which the welfare of the saints is secured through a careful administration of the outward ordinances, a faithful employment of the talents entrusted to that man? We repeat the question, whose prerogative, privilege, right, duty is it, by reason of official standing, to do all these things?

"It is not the Elder, for his is the duty to administer in word, in doctrine and in spirit; to preach, expound and exhort in spiritual things.

"It is not the Priest, for to him pertains a duty to visit the members at their houses; to exhort them to attend to spiritual duties.

"It is not the Teacher, for it is made his prerogative to act as a sort of spiritual constable, a kind of general conservator of the peace among the saints.

"It follows then of a necessity that the right, the duty of performing these acts,—these unwritten but essential things of the law, devolves upon the office of Deacon.

"Some portions of the law which may be cited in support of the opinions expressed in this article have been already given; to wit. The general understanding long since obtaining concerning the institution of the office of Deacon, and the duties of that office, as cited at the beginning of this article.

"The acquiescence of the church, by its constant practice, hitherto, in that construction of the duties of a Deacon.

"The actual necessity for the performance of those duties.

"The positive declaration that the Deacon should be a standing minister to the church; and the fair presumption as to what some of the absolute requirements from a standing ministry would be.

"The specific appointment of other duties to other officers, and these unprovided for."—Saints' Herald, vol. 18, p. 372-3.

Presidents of districts and branches are attending to all the duties contemplated above; nor is there an Elder so proud and haughty that he will not, when necessity requires, at once proceed to do all things recited above; and do them with not a thought of its being derogatory to either manhood, or official calling; whence then comes the hesitancy and reluctance amounting to downright refusal of some holding the office of Deacon to perform them because they are not specifically pointed out in the law. Will such men always wait till God serves a writ of mandamus upon them personally, detailing each act and the way it is to be done, before they will "magnify their calling." A saint, whoever he is, or wherever he may be, who is ashamed, or too proud to perform any duty which the preaching of the word, the building up of Zion, or the care of the churches of God makes necessary, ought never to enter the assembly of the saints, or sit at ease before the Lord of Hosts, who "became the servant of all."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. Henry Whittaker, now of Nevada City, California, would like a situation in some family on a farm, to work for his board, and make one of the family. He is fifty-seven years old, a machinist by trade, can repair all sorts of farm machinery, and keep them in repair, including pumps of all sorts; and is also handy with stock, either horses or cattle; is not of robust health, and not able to work at his trade continuously.

By card we learn that Bro. W. W. Blair reached Bozeman, Montana, May 30th, would go to Reese Creek, twelve miles away at four of the same day.

Crops about Lamoni are looking well.

Rev. P. C. Hogle, colporteur for the American Bible Society, and resident at Winterset, Iowa, preached in the Saints' Chapel, Sunday evening, June 1st, 1884.

A late issue of the Daily Mercury, published at New Bedford, Mass., contains the "epitome" of our faith, published in consequence of an interview of Elder John Smith, by a reporter of that journal.

BRO. M. T. SHORT has sent us a copy of the Nauvoo, Illinois, Independent, for April 18th, which contains a column article in fine print explanatory and defensive of the church, written by Bro. Short during the efforts of Bro. H. C. Bronson, and himself at Montrose, Iowa. It is an excellent and very readable article, and was very opportune.

Mr. William Hibbard, the editor and publisher of the Independent, is a grandson of Mr. Davidson Hibbard, a farmer, who settled a mile below the old town of Commerce, some years before the Saints reached the place, probably between 1830 and 35, and contemporaneously with Hugh White and Dr. Galland. The Saints bought the two latter out, but Mr. Hibbard never sold, but lived on his farm till he died. His son William married the daughter of C. E. Yates, a new citizen, so called, the product of their union being Mr. William Hibbard the editor. The young man fitted himself for the study of the law, was successful and was admitted to the bar of Hancock county; but finding the law too slow in the old town, married Miss Mittie Whitfield and joined the fortunes of the Independent as its editor and part owner. He is essentially a Nauvoo boy, sharp, able, and witty; and is a friend to the right and fair play,—hence the article in our defense found a welcome to his columns. We exchange with the Independent, and greet its pleasant face with a welcome each Saturday night—may it continue to shine.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Charlotte Stewart wrote us June 10th, that she is keeping a boarding house in Ravenna, Ohio, and will be glad to receive and care for any Latter Day Saint Elder as long as he will labor for the cause. She says:

The churches are in a miserable condition, as far as I can learn, and I believe a live minister will set them humming.

By letter from Sr. Lizzie Bootman to Sr. Eliza Bentley of Lamoni, we learn that the following persons were baptized: Chauncey Goodenough, Mary E., Katie and Grace Goodenough, father, mother and two daughters, in Cass county, Michigan. Of this the Marcellus, Michigan, paper says:

Elder C. M. Bootman baptized four candidates last Sunday at Fish Lake, according to the faith once delivered unto the Saints.

Pretty good in this paper to so publicly admit that the Latter Day Saints now hold to the faith delivered to the Saints aforetime.

THE New Bedford, Massachusetts, Evening Standard for June 2d, contains an epitomized statement of the conference proceedings of the Saints, at their session held May 31st and June 1st. From it we extract the following:

This is the first time the conference has been held in New Bedford, where the church has been organized about a year. It has twenty-seven members, who, with their friends have entertained about two hundred and fifty visitors at this session, half of them being from Fall River. The total membership in the churches of this district is six hundred and thirty. The churches are located at Boston, Fall River, New Bedford, Brockton, North Plymouth, Dennisport, Plainville and Douglas, Mass., and Providence and Little Compton, R. I., and there are missionary stations at Attleborough, Hebronville and Fitchburg, Mass., and Watchemoket, Hill's Grove, Georgiaville, Scituate and Simmonsville, R. I. The churches at Fall River, Dennisport and Plainville own houses of worship, one is being built in Little Compton, and preparations are being made for building in Providence.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—I wish to ask, Why was "John baptizing in Enon near to Salim?" By whom was Adam baptized? Where do you find it?

Ans.—"Because there was much water there." "By the Spirit of the Lord."—Genesis 6: 67. Inspired Translation.

SACRAMENTO CITY, California,
June 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We are doing the best we can. We were made to rejoice by the visit of our beloved district president, J. B. Price, and also that of Bro. Blair; and through the continued efforts of Bro. Thomas Daly and the goodness of God, we have added to the Church thirteen new members by baptism and two more by re-baptism, in all fifteen. We have preaching every Sabbath, and also Sabbath School and sacrament and testimony meeting. Nearly every Sabbath some of the gifts that are promised the believers in Mark 16: 17-20; and always that childlike Spirit of Christ, which is made manifest and confirmed by the gentle tear running down the cheeks of the Saints. How it makes my heart rejoice, when I sit under that hallowed influence of God's power. May the Lord bless us all with that Spirit is my prayer.

We have built a nice little chapel on the corner of 24th and K streets, and have it nearly all finished. Think it will be dedicated the last week in this month. The building is 30x40, with sixteen feet ceiling. The carpenter work was done under the superintendency of Bro. John M. Harlow, the son of Bro. George W. Harlow. The building of this chapel is quite a cause for comment in the minds of the people. I would like the prayers of the Saints, that we may live and act according to the will of our Heavenly Father, that the many that are searching after truth may find it.

Yours in the gospel of Christ,
JAMES H. PARR.

Dear Herald:—Was in attendance at the quarterly conference of the Pottawattamie District, held at Crescent City. While the Saints as a rule abide in the faith, they need more active work to hold their own in the progressive march. It looks to me that the traveling ministry are neglecting the old strongholds that at one time were the mother and support of the weaker branches; that through death and removal of active Elders, places that were once the bulwarks of the cause, are now absolutely famishing for the word of God. I am of the opinion that it is not only an erroneous, as well as a hurtful view that the active traveling ministry should avoid laboring in organized branches, and it appears to me that the warrant and importance is sufficiently clear in the commandment of Christ, "feed my sheep." How can we comply with this command, unless we go where the sheep are? And the responsibility and great importance of building up, teaching and comforting those in the fold, certainly have equal weight with the work of proselyting. Then, leaving these new members, as soon as organized without the help of an experienced Elder to break unto them the bread of heaven, the result of such work has been made manifest, first in the neglect of duties, and ending with disorganization.

Spoke several times after the conference, with a large attendance, and thence to Downsville. Here the busy season and heavy rains hindered. While there I was the happy recipient from Bro. Fred Hansen of the fourth and fifth volumes of the Times and Seasons. As Bro. Jason W. Briggs was requested to complete the history of the church, the same to be submitted to a committee for examination, suppose as many of the eldership as possibly can, read up the fragmentary history of the work, and then if the lot by accident should fall upon them to have a place upon that committee, the task would be better and more easily performed. In any event such reading, and the knowledge gained thereby, will not hurt them.

Last Sabbath was with the Fremont Saints, in their conference at the Keystone Branch; God blessed the meetings. One man said if he could only hear the Saints speak in tongues, he would believe the work. During the meetings there were four tongues, given by three different persons, and this man said, "You don't know what strange feelings I had while those people were talking in tongues. I don't know what to think about it." Well might he be confused and puzzled, for it is the same now as when Jesus said, "whom the world can not receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him." There are many who have not been able to understand these gifts; reject them rather than do the will of the Father, that they might know of the doctrine. Bro. G. E. Deuel was present and started direct for his field of labor.

Nearly all the orchards in this vicinity were either killed or badly damaged by the severe hail storm of last July.

MANCHESTER, England,

Dear Brother Joseph Smith:—I had the pleasure on Saturday last of visiting Leeds, Yorkshire; and baptizing four persons; viz., brother and sister Warren, their son Samuel Henry, and Bro. Joseph Naylor, all residents of Leeds, and the result of the labors of Bro. Martin Haywood, son of the late Bro. John Haywood, of the Hanley Branch, Staffordshire. Bro. and sister Warren have been members of the Utah Church for a short time; but were unable to bring themselves into harmony with her teachings; but have gladly received the message of the Reorganization, and identified themselves with the church as the true exponent of the doctrine of Christ. Bro. J. Naylor has been a local preacher of the Methodist persuasion, and was very happy until from investigation he was forced to the conclusion that they were not preaching the fullness of the gospel of Christ. He enquired into the claims of our church, and the more he investigated the more self-evident became the consistency of our position, as the representatives of the Church of Christ, until at last the conviction became overwhelming, and he was forced to surrender, and through baptism become reconciled to God; and with the others before named, he now testifies of the saving powers of that ordinance, through the answer of a good conscience before God.

On Sunday the 25th, I attended to the confirmation of those that had been baptized, blessed three children, and administered to one that was sick; preached the gospel to those present, and had altogether a pleasant though a busy time, on this my first visit to Leeds. During my short stay I was very kindly treated both by the saints and friends, and made acquaintances that I pray may yet be drawn closer by gospel bonds. Many of them are, I believe, earnestly seeking for the truth, and when convinced of our message, will gladly obey the same, and strive to live to the honor and glory of God.

Dear President, the Macedonian cry is heard from many parts of this mission. The spirit of deep, earnest and honest enquiry is working amongst the people. The harvest is ripening, but the reapers are few and weak. Then pray for us, dear brother, that the Lord of the harvest will qualify us and others yet to come, for the great harvest of souls soon to be gathered into his kingdom. The English mission conference convenes here on Saturday next. We have advertised our Sunday services largely, and expect a fair gathering both of saints, and others who are desirous of learning of the truth. We look forward in hope to a good meeting; and feel assured that results will be favorable to the cause. Praying that you may be long spared to lead the church in righteousness, I remain your brother in the covenant of peace,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am still inclined to confess and acknowledge what I have long known to be true, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God; and that there is no other way for me nor for you and all mankind to get eternal life, but to believe, confess and acknowledge him to be all he claims to be by the prophets of the Most High; who as God manifest in the flesh, as shown to us in the New Testament by his own teaching, and the testimony of those he, (Christ) chose to be his disciples; which is easily proved to all men who love justice and truth better than fiction, by reading their sayings and their doings, as seen in the book of Acts, and their epistles to the different churches as they grew up under the influence and power of the Holy Ghost, which was manifest in them on all suitable occasions. And though these principles of salvation did pass away, and become very dim, hardly visible by the wisest of men of this generation, the Lord, yes, the Great Jehovah has seen fit to restore the gospel to the earth by bringing into light a record that was kept on this continent by the lineage of Joseph, as can be seen by all inspired men of God, as seen by Jacob, when he blessed Manasseh and Ephraim. Though Joseph preferred, or wanted his father to put the greatest blessing on his Son Manasseh; yet the old patriarch preferred not to do so; but said, "Manasseh shall be great, but truly his brother shall be greater than he." So we see this American land was given as predicted to Ephraim; and what is best of all, it is for an everlasting inheritance. America is, properly speaking, Ephraim's. This stick of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim is to be put with the stick of Judah and with them, the Lord, this Great Jehovah, says he will gather the whole house of Israel. This I consider a decree from the Most High God, that these two sticks or books, namely, Bible, Book of Mormon, are to be put into use together; and when this takes place, the whole house of Israel, or all the tribes of the Jews, will be redeemed from the curse that fell upon them for rejecting Christ and this gospel as presented to them by the apostles of the New Testament.

Bro. Joseph, show me a man on earth learned or unlearned, that can give a correct interpretation of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the 31st of Ezekiel, or the 5th of Micah, without the Book of Mormon. Where is the remnant of Jacob without the Book of Mormon? Where are other sheep not of this fold; 10 of John? Who can tell correctly what our Lord meant to convey to his hearers when he said, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them must I also gather; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd," yes, one great and glorious Shepherd? Blessed are all who confess and acknowledge this great Shepherd, by the Bible, the Book of Mormon, which came into our sight by the ministering of angels to Joseph Smith, by which we have given to us the fulness of the gospel, as restored to us, the Gentile world, as seen in Romans 11. A deliverer has, or will come out of Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob. That is a day I would like to see. The God of Jacob will go with the faithful of his Saints, and see that all who fight against him and his servants are justly rewarded for their wicked acts; so be gentle, kind, and loving to the end.

BRIGGS ALDEN.

YORK, Nebraska,
May 31st, 1884.

To the Readers of the Saints' Herald:—As there seems to be a disposition on the part of some contributors to the Herald to throw a veil of darkness and doubt over the history of Joseph Smith and Mormonism, I have deemed it a duty to address you concerning recent statements made in it by Heman C. Smith, to be found on page 325 of Herald of May 24th. Mr. Smith there gives a writing of Lyman Wight's to show that the teachings of Joseph Smith were not Salt Lake ward. I have a paper that published the same letter in March, 1849.

In 1848 and 1849 Lyman Wight, together with "the only surviving," were jointly engaged in endeavoring to colonize whoever would believe in them in Texas, and it was pretended that Lyman had been commissioned by "the Seer" to do so, and the efforts of Lyman and "Bill" were to make believe that Texas was the place and not Salt Lake. From a letter in my possession, (in manuscript and in print) dated Zodiac Mills, August, 1848, and signed "Lyman Wight by Jno. Young, (as scribe). I will quote as follows:

"Where did we next see Orson Hyde? In the city of Washington, where he was sent by Bro. Joseph to obtain, if possible, a charter for Bro. Joseph to get 250,000 men to secure our rights and privileges upon the confines of Mexico, and in the Cordilleras mountains in the state of Texas. He wrote back to Bro. Joseph that his name was unpopular and would fain have put his little pusillanimous name in his stead, for which Bro. Joseph sharply rebuked him in a letter, which I carried to him with my own hands."

Lyman "the Wild Ram of the Mountains," must have been a "little off" when he made the above statement, as the number of men petitioned for are multiplied by him and the locality somewhat changed, for I have in my possession a Mormon paper, published in Joseph's life-time, which contains a petition made to Congress by Joseph Smith, that appears to be the foundation of the above statement of Lyman Wight's. Texas is not mentioned in it—but another locality, notwithstanding the strong language used by Joseph in reply to Henry Clay. This petition can easily be proven genuine. Was introduced in Congress by a Congressman who still lives and is not a Brighamite, and who informed me in 1880 that he presented said petition to Congress while a member of that body. It was a funny day in Congress, and the petition was laughed down and found shelter "under the table."

Believing that the foot-prints of time should not be mystically obliterated, and that a paper devoted to religion, flaunting a banner upon which is blazened in bold relief—"investigate," will willingly let light shine where it has made darkness in historical facts, I have addressed the above to the readers of the Herald.

J. K. SHEEN.

[It would be much more satisfactory to Bro. Heman C. Smith, the Editor of the HERALD, and others, doubtless, if this writer had given the extract referred to, and given the title of the paper, where and when published. It is just as reprehensible to manufacture history, as to suppress it. Ed.]

JAMESTOWN, Nebraska,

June 6th, 1884.

Dear Readers of the Herald:—After leaving the conference at Stewartville, I visited Plattsmouth, where I had baptized three young ladies, who manifested great faith in God, and a true, repentant spirit. The spirit bore witness of their acceptance, as I have seldom experienced. May God grant them grace to endure. April 19th and 20th, I assisted Brn. Maule and Montague to conduct a two days' meeting near Magnolia, but on account of rain, the prejudice of the people, and carelessness of the saints, not many were in attendance. After returning home on Monday I was confined to the house nearly all the time for about eight or ten days, after which I labored as best I could, repairing and arranging for the mission assigned me until the 25th of May, preaching and assisting in exercises of worship in the Magnolia Branch in the meantime.

On the 25th of May, I was taken to Missouri Valley by Bro. James Emerson, who had secured the Christian Hall at that place for use that evening. This was the first gospel sermon preached at that place by the Church, and if the same spirit of interest continues, there will be many led into the fold. I then went to Modale, where I visited with friends and old acquaintances, some of whom I had not seen since my boyhood days, although so near my home, and there I was granted the use of the church, and the privilege of speaking to a fair audience on the 28th. I then returned to Missouri Valley and had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Bays who was started on his mission, and Bro. Derry who was to speak at Christian Hall, for the following three nights. A fair attendance and good attention that evening while Bro. Charles spoke of the blessed privilege man has of receiving communication from the Father.

From the brethren I separated on the 30th; Bro. Bays to Texas via Little Sioux; Bro. Derry to remain at Missouri Valley to give light, that others might see their way to God, and the writer to Minnesota via the Northern Nebraska District, where we came by advice from Bro. E. C. Briggs. Since coming here we attended a two-days meeting held at the Pleasant Grove Branch, where was enjoyed a feast of good things, both of that which sustains the body and also the soul. At this place we have held two meetings with an increasing audience and interest. I speak again Saturday and Sunday nights. One man found objection to our preaching, and as it was a new one to me I pen it. He said he did not like the preaching because it was too much like the preaching of "Joe Smith," meaning the martyred prophet. This man was very young when he heard brother Joseph, as he is but a middle aged man now. Pray for me, dear saints, that I in my youth may be wise in the service of the Lord.

Your brother in the everlasting covenant,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—On April 25th, with Bro. R. Etzenhouser in company, I called upon David Whitmer, which I had longed to do for years. We were very hospitably entertained, and enjoyed the interview much. The following are some of the facts as stated to us:

Oliver Cowdery's name being mentioned we asked as to his last statement. In response we were told, that it was re-affirmed, accompanied with a solemn charge to keep the manuscript as he had.

"Would you like to see them?"

I replied that we would. He stepped into an adjoining room and in a few moments brought them to us. They were large sheets of foolscap paper, were rather brown, or yellow colored, not so clear and white as the paper of now a days; written closely in a fine hand, with capital letters in all proper places, and well preserved. He then remarked:

"I was present when Joseph gave these manuscripts to Oliver, O, it was such a solemn charge. He (Joseph) said, I feel it in my bones that there will be a division in the church, like it was with the Nephites and Lamanites, and if these manuscripts are not preserved, I fear that the church may be injured, and when you deliver them up to others, be sure they are left in good hands. I now see why they should be preserved. A delegation once waited on me from Utah, Orson Pratt headed it, to secure them. And he said:

"Set your own price on them. There is millions in the treasury and we are authorized to draw any amount for them, so you may not be particular, ask any price."

"I replied, They are not for sale. He said:

"Why not?"

"I answered, I know, and that is enough. There is not enough gold in the world to purchase them. Pratt urged the matter saying:

"You are not very well off, and it will do your children good."

"I then told him, You have not got money enough in Utah to purchase them."

O, brethren, the above sentences were spoken by the good old man in such accents and tone, it fairly gave life to his sterling worth, as the man more precious than fine gold, even a man worth more than the golden wedge of Ophir. (Isaiah 13:12). His integrity is above suspicion. God bless his memory and his heart, ever more; amen.

This brings to my mind a statement of the Elect Lady, Emma, in the winter of 1856. She said to me, "When you see David Whitmer you will see an honest man." And in the same conversation, she remarked of her husband Joseph's limited education while he was translating the Book of Mormon, and she was scribe at the time, "He could not pronounce the word Sariah." And one time while translating, where it speaks of the walls of Jerusalem, he stopped and said, "Emma, did Jerusalem have walls surrounding it." When I informed him it had, he replied, "O, I thought I was deceived."

Bro. Whitmer added that since Oliver's death it was alleged that they both had denied their testimony. He said that preachers and others got this up and heralded it about.

NARRATIVE OF SEEING THE ANGEL.

"In June, 1829, I saw the angel by the power of God, Joseph, Oliver and I were alone, and a light from heaven shone round us, and solemnity pervaded our minds. The angel appeared in the light, as near as that young man. [Within five or six feet]. Between us and the angel there appeared a table, and there lay upon it the sword of Laban, the Ball of Directors, the Record, and Interpreters. The angel took the Record, and turned the leaves, and showed it to us by the power of God. They were taken away by the angel to a cave, which we saw by the power of God while we were yet in the Spirit. My testimony in the Book of Mormon is true; I can't deviate from it. I was troubled with so many by letter and otherwise, all over the United States, and some from Europe, that I made my proclamation of March 19th, 1881. In this way thousands read it, who would never have done so otherwise. I have the original manuscripts. They have the printer's marks. The printers here have examined them, and say they are genuine. When being printed, Oliver Cowdery would take about a dozen pages of them at a time, and remain and proof read and see that the work was done properly, and continued his vigil to the end."

Brother in Christ, after a visit with Bro. David Whitmer, one of the chosen witnesses of the Book of Mormon, I want to say that I felt to admire the man; his humble, meek manner is wonderful to behold, in comparison with the self-called ministry of the present age. He is a devout Christian, and speaks of Bro. Joseph, and the rise of the latter day work with endearing words of love. As he said:

"The boys, Joseph and Oliver, worked hard, early and late, while translating the plates. It was slow work, and they could write only a few pages a day."

"He could not do a thing except he was humble, and just right before the Lord."

I said, "Why not?"

He replied:

"The Urim and Thummim would look dark; he could not see a thing in them."

"How did it appear in them?" we asked.

His answer was:

"The letters appeared on them in light, and would not go off until they were written correctly by Oliver. When Joseph could not pronounce the words he spelled them out letter by letter. Ah! Joseph was a good man, but he had a hard task to manage with the people in the early days of the church. They were sectarian (Brigham Young was only a sectarian) and came in with all of their own views, and were hard to manage. In fact, they sought office in the church, and when they were ordained it was only putting new wine into old bottles in many cases."

I asked him why he did not go with the church.

He replied:

"I had good reasons, but do not wish to speak of them now. I was directed to remain here in Richmond."

He gave me his statement entitled "Proclamation," of March 19th, 1881, saying:

"I have but a few left."

I remarked that more should be published. He answered:

"You may tell Joseph he may print them, and send them broadcast, if he will not change them; print them just as they are."

Bro. David is a bright looking man, nearly eighty years old. Firm as a rock in Christ, and in his testimony of seeing the angel of God, as he descended from heaven in a halo of light, and turned over the leaves of the plates just as a man would the leaves of a book. His family, wife, son and daughter, who were present, are of a quiet, meek spirit. All seem to dwell in love, and are firm in Christ, and love to bear their testimony in the gospel, and hear the aged witness talk, just as though they had never heard it before, though it has been their theme all these days.

I arrived in this city on the 1st inst. Took charge of the prayer meeting at Bro. Goode's on Sor Madison street, in the afternoon, and have another appointment this evening. Am hopeful; and once more I am enlisted for the right, and am the freest from bondage to the world I ever was, and rejoicing more in the gospel of Christ than I ever did before.

Yours in bonds of truth and love,

E. C. BRIGGS.

GUERNEVILLE, SONOMA CO., Cal.,

Brother Smith:—I left my old place, and as I came to Windsor, I went to see Bro. H. Bell, who told me that he has been to hear Bro. Price, at Santa Rosa. He told me that the court-house, in which Bro. Price was preaching at Santa Rosa, was so full that it could hold no more! The posters which they had put out to call the people, were of this kind: "Elder J. B. Price of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, will deliver three lectures in the court-house, Sunday, May 11th. Forenoon lecture 10:30. Subject, the Universal Kingdom of God on the Earth. Dan. 2d chapter." "The afternoon lecture at two o'clock. Subject, The Discovery of the Golden Plates and Origin of the Book of Mormon. The evening lecture at 7:30 o'clock. Subject, Thirty-six years among the Mormons, or what I have seen and known of Mormonism, including a review of the polygamous question."

All the lectures were well received by the Santa Rosians. While Bro. Price was lecturing in Santa Rosa, an Adventist was lecturing at Windsor, on the "Unconsciousness of the Spirit between Death and the Resurrection." Bro. Bell could not stand that, so he got Bro. Price to prove the contrary, after he was done at Santa Rosa. Bro. Price came and his lecture came off on the 14th of May. Windsor is a town with one hundred inhabitants, so that not many could be expected to attend the lecture, yet there was all that could be expected. The next evening (on the 15th) he preached a good gospel sermon. Bro. Price was to go to Healdsburg, where some of the Saints would be ready to receive him.

Bro. H. Bell was baptized by Bro. G. Rodger, but none of his house are members of the church yet. His wife is deaf, and innocent and harmless, nor can she read, as I was told. The Saints should pray for her that the Lord may give her her hearing. Bro. Bell is a man who understands many kinds of mechanical trades, such as carpentering, and a black-smith, painter, wagon-maker. He is also a farmer, and a merchant, &c. Such a man would get along in Lamoni to build up the town, as he can do anything.

I should not forget to tell that when Bro. Price went in the hall to preach there was a most beautiful bunch of roses on the table before him, which Bro. Bell's youngest daughter had made and brought with her to the hall, "For the preacher." May she become a rose in the garden of Zion.

I left for this town on the 16th, and got here on the 17th, which is situated in the great red woods, in the forest between the mountains. The town, Guerneville, which was reported by the Herald, some months ago, as "burnt down," but is now re-built up again. Here are five saw-mill's. They saw lumber, and wood-choppers, post-makers, railroad ties, and other things. These are the branches of business that support this town of the forest. It has a population of about one thousand. A Methodist Church is here. They had a Presbyterian preacher here, but, "as they did not pay his salary, he left." The Salvation Army is here, and the "sanctified" are here also. I also expected to see a Latter Day Saint here, as there was a letter in the Herald of March 15th, last, as from "Greenville, Sonoma Co., California;" and as there is no Greenville in this Sonoma county, I expected it was from Guerneville; and when I got here I inquired if there was any by the name "Case." I was told that he was now four miles off. I therefore wrote a letter to him, and got the answer, that a sister by the name of "Tryphena Case," the same whose letter was in the Saints' Herald, March 15th, lives near here. She tells me in her letter that her father's name is Lemuel Davis, and that her parents both belong to the Latter Day Saints, but her husband does not belong to any church; but he believes in the Saints, although he has never heard any preaching. Hence I must go to see her, and if I can do something for her and her husband, or any of her friends, I am ready always to do so, i. e., to give the light of the gospel of Jesus Christ to those that are ready to receive it. It is a marvel that I have received so much strength and health, that I am able to chop cord-wood, a cord every day, while I have been so low in health that I had no hope of being able to do anything of what is called hard work. The doctors also told me that they were not able to cure me, and that there was no doctor that could. Yet in all my suffering and trials I had faith that I would once more be able to do something for my temporal needs; and to-day I feel as if I have been resuscitated from the dead. Hence may the Saints remember me in their prayers, that the Lord may bless me with ability to do my duty temporally and spiritually while here, and there have life in the kingdom of Christ.

J. A. STROMBERG.

REESE CREEK, Montana,

June 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Our conference here May 31st and June 1st, passed off profitably. We assisted in dedicating the Saints' Chapel, a neat frame structure, at 2:30 p.m., Sunday the 1st inst. There was a large and very attentive congregation in attendance, as also at 10:30 a.m., and 8 p.m. The saints and their neighbors seemed well pleased. As an evidence of the good standing of the branch here with their neighbors, I may mention the fact that the latter have aided liberally in building the Chapel, which costs, altogether, about $1,000.

Prospects for the spread of truth and righteousness in this vicinity are encouraging. But business affairs are dull. Markets, except for cattle and sheep, are poor and unpromising. Perhaps hard times may work best for the moral and spiritual welfare of the people. Temporal prosperity frequently blinds and hardens, while adversity and affliction purifies and benefits.

Yours,

W. W. BLAIR.

Dear Herald:—On Sunday, May 25th, we were visited very unexpectedly by our aged brother, William B. Smith, brother to Joseph the martyr. He preached to us in the forenoon on the light of the gospel, taking for his text Matt. 4:15. In the afternoon he gave us a brief account of what he knew in regard to this latter day work, bearing a strong testimony thereto. I am glad I have been privileged to see the brother, also to hear his testimony. May he remain faithful to the end, is my prayer. On Sunday, June 1st, Bro. Heman C. Smith gave us a call, preached four times, twice on Sunday, again on Monday and Tuesday nights. He gave us good instructions. The Saints all enjoyed the visits of these brethren. We would like to have had them stay longer, but their mission is elsewhere. May God prosper them in their fields of labor.

JAMES PEARSALL.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

June 6th.—The Chicago Republican convention nominated James G. Blaine, of Maine, for President of the United States, and John A. Logan, of Ill., for Vice-president.

Three emissaries sent by Zebehr Pasha, professedly in order to obtain information concerning Gen. Gordon, went on board the postal steamer immediately on their arrival at Assiout and started for Assouan. The news from Girgeh is bad. The inhabitants, previously ripe for revolt, have been further excited by a disciple of the Mahdi, who, coming from Cairo, where he has obtained the adhesion of many important persons, has visited all the villages on the Nile thus far and made proselytes in each town. In Assiout he obtained the adhesion and signatures of seven of the Notables, and then proceeded to Girgeh, where he soon set the town in a ferment. The feeling at Girgeh against the Christians has been pronounced for some time past. A week ago a meeting was held in the house of a Notable named Mohammed Fatawi, at which it was decided to invite the Mahdi to send them an emissary like Osman Digma, who would be cordially received.

June 7.—A report which has been gaining currency the last few days that preparations for the military expedition to Khartoum had ceased has been semi-officially denied. The expedition will be routed by the 28th to July. A committee composed of Maj.-Gen. Fielding, Quartermaster-General Harrison, Col. Hamilton, and Commissary-General Young has been ordered to meet at Aldershot to report upon schemes for providing a water-supply for the army while operating in the desert. Orders have been sent to Cairo to echelon the whole Egyptian army under Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood between Assouan and Wady Halfa. Late bills drawn by Gen. Gordon on the Government have reached Cairo, but no letters. It is suspected they have been intercepted by men in the pay of certain officials at Cairo, who are secretly trying to thwart the action of the English. The Government has decided against the employment of Turkish troops in the Soudan. Another battalion of Egyptian troops is ordered to Suakin. The remainder of the marines at Port Said start immediately.

Much uneasiness has been caused among Government officials in London by the latest Imperial utterance from St. Petersburg. This is attributed to a growing belief in Russia that England is gradually retiring from its former policy of empire extension. Russia has formally announced that it has decided to abandon its recent intention of evacuating Central Asia, and has proclaimed a determination to extend her Asiatic frontiers.

Bismarck has made overtures to Granville, the British Foreign Secretary, regarding the cession of Walfish Bay, on the west coast of Africa, to Germany. The reason he urges is that German settlers occupy the district about the bay and that a German company is constructing a rail way from the seashore to the mines, which are some distance inland.

At Havana there were twenty deaths from yellow fever for the week ended yesterday.

June 8th.—Granville and Waddington have agreed upon a basis for a conference on Egyptian affairs. The terms of agreement have been imparted to the Powers. They affirm the principle of the temporary occupation of Egypt by England, to which no limit is fixed, and propose an international control of the Powers to audit the whole system of revenue and expenses of Egypt. England recognizes the suzerain right of the Porte throughout Egypt, including the Soudan. France formally abandons her claim to dual control.

An Orange meeting at London to-day protested against the proclamation of Earl Spencer directed against the meeting of their brethren, which was announced for to-day at Newry. They expressed their sympathy for the royalists of Ireland, and resolved to give them every assistance. Shortly before the meeting separated telegrams were received stating that 850 Orangemen started for Newry by the Shanraer route, 630 more sailed from Fleetwood, and 1,200 from Barrow-in-Furness for the same destination.

June 9.—A cable from Newry, Ireland, says: This town has to-day been the scene of disorder and riot, resulting in bloodshed and terror. Every railroad train that arrived here this morning brought large numbers of Nationalists, and by noon the streets were alive with people. At three o'clock a procession was formed, which marched to the place appointed for the meeting, where an immense concourse was assembled. Addresses were delivered by P. O'Brien, M. P.; Timothy Sullivan, M. P.; and others. Resolutions denouncing the Government and advocating freedom for Ireland were presented and adopted amid great enthusiasm. At the close of the meeting the procession was reformed, and while it was returning to the place of starting, stones were thrown into the Protestant quarter by some disorderly person of the crowd. Prompt retaliation was made by the Protestants, whereupon the police made a charge to quell the disturbance, but a riot ensued, nevertheless, lasting for some time, and during which several shots were fired. Six persons were severely wounded. Finally the military dispersed the rioters and succeeded in making a number of arrests on both sides. Shortly after nine o'clock this evening information was received of rioting in Bessbrook, a suburb of Newry, and a detachment of Lancers, accompanied by a body of police, proceeded to the scene of disturbance with orders to quell it without delay. The troops found the greatest excitement and disorder prevailing, and as they approached the Nationalists fired a number of shots into a hall occupied by Orangemen, who returned the fire from the windows. At this moment the police charged on the mob and arrested sixty persons. This for a time ended the riotous demonstration, and the prisoners were forthwith taken before a magistrate and arraigned. Bail for the prisoners to a large amount was offered by Henry Thomson, member of Parliament from Newry, but this was refused by the local magistrate. During the fracas a constable made a lunge at Mr. Thomson with a bayonet. The weapon barely missed its mark and was imbedded to the depth of three inches in a door behind the intended victim. A Protestant who was caught in the hall by a constable received a terrible beating, and a deputy who attempted to rescue the men was arrested. Rioting had nearly ceased at a late hour. The Lancers and police returned to Newry to find the people laboring under intense excitement. The post-office will be kept open all night for the transmission of messages by which the Government will be apprised of the condition of affairs. It is feared that this is but the beginning of a series of riots. An inquiry was held at midnight. After hearing testimony the magistrate held two of the prisoners. The others were discharged.

The populace in Upper Egypt refuse to pay taxes in money or kind. Their attitude in some districts is so menacing that Europeans are sending their families to Cairo. The Government has decided to construct a railway from Suakin to Berber.

Newry, Ireland, is in the hands of the rioters. The Nationalists are present in large numbers, and are overpowering the Orangemen, who have barricaded themselves in their hall. The officials present seem powerless to quell the disturbance. People hardly dare to enter the streets, and if they do are pursued with frantic cries by the mob.

The police are on the track of the miscreants who caused the recent explosion. A man has been arrested at Jarrow who is reported to be connected with the explosions. Troops have been placed around Birmingham Jail to prevent the rescue of the dynamiters Daly, Egan, and McDonnell.

The Belgian Clerical party had a sweeping victory in the elections for members of the Chamber of Representatives to-day. This result is attributed to dissensions in the Liberal party and to dissatisfaction with the Government on account of increased taxation and the secularization of public education. The Clericals became alarmed at the withdrawal of priestly influences from the rising generation, and in population numbering 5,000,000 Catholics to 15,000 Protestants, it was not difficult to raise a popular cry against school secularization. The Clericals elected every one of their Brussels candidates, the Liberals losing in the Kingdom twenty-six representatives. The Clericals of Brussels sent a long dispatch to the Pope giving particulars of the victory. His Holiness replied this evening with a congratulatory telegram.

They will hold a secret congress next week, it is said, when they will discuss methods to bring about a fusion of all the factions of the Irish extremists. It is said that they will next try their hand at blowing up bridges and wharves by torpedoes.

Earl Granville, in the note to the Powers giving the programme of the Egyptian Conference, entirely ignores the agreement with France. The note is limited to the general statement of the financial condition of Egypt. It requires a revision of the law of liquidation and reiterates the desire of England to withdraw her troops from Egypt when order has been restored. The note avoids making definite proposals to the Powers.

Twenty-three Anarchists were placed on trial to-day at Gratz, Austria, charged with collecting money to procure explosives and arms for Anarchist purposes. It was shown by the evidence that they held a meeting in April, 1883, and discussed attempts upon the Emperor Francis Joseph's life by using dynamite sent from America to Fiume. Three men were arrested at the Russo-Polish frontier having in their possession explosive materials and Socialist books. Three dynamite cartridges exploded to-day at Genoa, Italy, two in front of the Church of the Conception, the other in close proximity to the Church of San Lorenzo.

Points along the Allegheny Valley were visited yesterday by one of the heaviest rain-storms known for many years, causing the most destructive flood since 1865. At Brookville, Pa., a cloud burst, and in less than two hours the creek rose ten feet, transforming it into a seething, foaming torrent. The rapid rise gave the mill men no chance whatever to save their stock. The dams at the North Fork Mills, and at Briant & Wainwright's and the Litch mills, gave way, carrying with them lumber valued at $70,000. Two bridges were washed away, many small buildings demolished, and a number of families were driven from their homes and compelled to seek shelter elsewhere for the night. In Pittsburg the rise in the Allegheny River last night was very rapid, and a number of coal barges were swept from their moorings, but were caught by tow-boats uninjured. The flood at Brookville, brought down about 50,000 pieces of lumber, and almost every owner of a skiff was busy to-day catching driftwood. The water is now subsiding, and no further damage is anticipated.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Mr. Thomas Burt, who represents Morpeth in the House of Commons and who is perhaps the only true exponent of labor in that body, expressed himself very freely today regarding the present great depression in the shipping industry in the North of England. "The shipbuilding trade in the North is practically at a standstill," said Mr. Burt, "and there probably never has been a time in its history when the outlook for an improvement was so indefinite and uncomfoting as it is at present. Whole fleets of large steamers are lying idle in the Tyne and on the Wear. Shipbuilding in the old sense, has almost ceased to be an industry. Thousands of persons are unemployed, and the distress, actual want of food and shelter I mean, is fearful in the extreme. The labor organizations, unusually strong as a rule, in the North are wholly unable to answer the calls upon them for relief, those few members who have managed to retain work being unable to meet the demands which are made upon them. The distress in Sunderland is particularly marked. Many hitherto well-to-do families have had to apply to the authorities for relief."

England is said to have advanced to the Egyptian Government $8,000,000 to balance the budget.

The Director of the U. S. Mint in his annual report on the production of the precious metals places the total production during the calendar year 1883 at: Gold, $30,000,000; silver at its coinage rate, $46,200,000: Arizona produced $950,000 gold and $5,200,000 silver; California, $14,120,000 gold and $1,460,000 silver; Colorado, $4,100,000 gold and $17,370,000 silver; Dakota, $3,200,000 gold and $150,000 silver; Idaho, $1,400,000 gold and $2,100,000 silver; Montana, $1,800,000 gold and $6,000,000 silver; Nevada, $2,520,000 gold and $5,430,000 silver; New Mexico $280,000 gold, and $2,845,000. Utah, $140,000 gold and $5,620,000 silver. The remainder was produced principally in Alaska, Oregon, Georgia, and North Carolina. This is a reduction of $2,500,000 gold and $600,000 silver from the yield of 1882.

The deposits in the savings banks of New Hampshire, exclusive of $2,000,000 invested in real estate, aggregate $41,000,000.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade says: Welcome and timely rains have ended the drouth. The condition of all spring-sown grain is materially improved. The breadstuffs market is languid, but the demand good. Native oats are strong and higher. Maize steady. Cargoes off coast in large supply. The only demand comes from the Continent. There were nineteen arrivals. Three cargoes were sold, three withdrawn, and seven remain, including two of California wheat. Cargoes on passage and for shipment fail to attract attention. Sales of English wheat the last week, 46,562 quarters at 37 shillings, against 55,186 quarters at 43 shillings 4 pence during the corresponding week last year.

Reports from twenty-five leading clearing-houses outside of New York show a decrease last week of 8.5 per cent in the aggregate clearances as compared with the figures for the corresponding week of last year. The decrease at New York is 17 per cent.

The exports for produce during the last week reached the unusual figure of $8,435,000.

The June crop reports received at the Agricultural Department at Washington show an increase of 4 per cent in the area under cotton, and a general average of 87, as against 86 at this period last year. There is an increase of 9 per cent in the area under spring wheat, and the condition is placed at 101. The winter-wheat crop continues to show a high average, as well as oats and barley.

Heavy rains lasting from June 9 until 10, in the vicinity of Springfield, Vt., near the Massachusetts line, caused floods in the Black River, which overflowed, causing great damage to property. The grass crop of the valley is nearly ruined, and the other field crops are almost a total loss. Hundreds of people had to abandon their houses under the pelting rain to seek refuge on the neighboring hills.

During the last week 4,003 packages of domestic cottons were exported, making 78,978 packages for the year thus far, against 73,339 during the corresponding period of last year.

The Western Nail Association has reduced the card price of nails from $2.60 to $2.40 per keg. Nails at $2.25 per keg have been sold by the car-load at Pittsburg for some time.

Recent rains in Minnesota have greatly benefited the crops in that State. Reports from various points indicate that the farmers are well satisfied at the outlook. Grain and corn are doing splendidly, the grass crop is good, and fruit trees promise an abundant yield.

Yesterday morning the State Bank of West Virginia, at Charleston, W. Va., suspended payments. The liabilities are placed at $119,000 and the nominal assets are $115,000. The depositors are mostly poor people. The suspension has caused much excitement. Deposits were received up to three o'clock Wednesday. The managers say the bank will pay 50 per cent on the dollar, but it is not generally believed that more than 20 cents on the dollar will be paid.

HEBREWS IN BUSINESS.

A RACE WHICH DOES A LARGE PORTION OF NEW YORK'S TRADE.

CONSIDERING the small number of Jews in New York—only 60,000—in comparison with the number of Christians, their success in the business world is simply phenomenal. There are millions upon millions of Jewish capital invested here in the wholesale trade. In fact, the business in many lines of trade is nearly monopolized by Jewish firms. I started from Union Square the other morning and walked down Broadway to Wall street, following the interesting occupation of some of my fellow-beings from the country—namely: of reading signs. I counted no less than 650 upon which Jewish names were painted. These names represented almost every kind of wholesale and jobbing trade located on the great artery. The millinery, clothing, hat, cap, and fur trades predominated. I also found many retailers of Jewish nationality. In one block I found only one Christian firm.

Turning Wall street, I found the same evidences of Jewish prosperity, only in a lesser degree, among bankers and brokers. Two of the largest banking-houses in the country—J. & J. W. Seligman, and Kuhn, Loeb & Co.—are distinctively Jewish. In the Stock Exchange are the Henriques Bros., Wormser Marx, and a host of others, all of whom stand high, and wield an influence among their fellow-members, and carry large accounts for their customers. In Maiden lane and John street, the center of the wholesale and retail jobbing jewelry trade of the country, the name of the Hebrew is found right and left, above and below. A round $5,000,000 of capital is employed by the Jews in this trade alone, and with it they transact fully 33 per cent of the business done in it.

West of Broadway, in Broome, Mercer, White, Leonard, Greene, Grand, and other streets comprising the great dry goods and clothing districts, is a modern Jerusalem. Seventy per cent. of the entire wholesale clothing trade is done by Jews, who employ a capital of $25,000,000. In clothiers' trimmings the Jews have $10,000,000 invested.

Ninety-five per cent. of the ladies' cloaks and suits sold throughout the country come from New York Hebrew houses, who annually turn and return $50,000,000 of capital. In the fur trade 50 per cent of the firms are Jewish, and the capital invested is $15,000,000. The Hebrew controls exclusively the manufacture of caps, and on about 40 per cent of the hats made he figures his profits. In the manufacture of silks and ribbons the Jew is at home. His capital here amounts to $25,000,000, and of the business in this line of feminine apparel he transacts 60 per cent. He is also active in the tobacco, sugar, and wholesale liquor traffic, holding large interests in each. Strange to say, the Jew is never found in the retail liquor business. "Gin-mills" and "gin-slinging" he gives the grand go-by. There is not a bar, I am told, in Gotham presided over by a Hebrew.

WHAT IS VULGARITY.

Is it wearing shabby clothes, and not understanding the rules of etiquette, and forgetting that "two negatives in the same sentence constitute an affirmative," and eating peas with your knife, and pudding also? These, surely, are inelégancies, but we have seen people who were guilty of all of them who were not vulgar in the worst sense of the word. And we have seen others, also, who never erred in any of these things, who were vulgar to a degree that made us long to leave any room made disagreeable by their presence.

To be vulgar, one only needs to forget that other people have feelings that may be wounded, or, remembering it, to wound them maliciously; to boast of one's own possessions, or of one's own prowess, or of one's own beauty; to flaunt and brag in the presence of the poor and humble, and to condescend and attempt to be affable to those we deem our superiors. It is only a vulgar person who will address any one, however poor and lowly, in a tone differing in any way from that which should be used to an equal or superior. The true lady can bestow alms upon a beggar in such a manner that no one watching her would know that it was an alms.

In fact, in our present social use of the word "vulgarity"—for, actually, vulgar only means common, as we all know—you may take it for granted that a true Christian—by which we mean one who obeys the mandates of our Savior, and not merely a member of Dr. Someone's church—is never even apparently vulgar; and that one who has hate, and pride, and scorn of his fellow-men in his heart will be assuredly vulgar, though his clothes are of the finest, his habitation a palace, and his "family" ever so "high" and "good." Nevertheless, assumption and impertinence will continue to be considered a proof of gentility by many poor, silly creatures, until the end of time, as we all very well know.

The despised of some people are the looked-up, to of others. Were it not so, the little ones of the earth would not be able to hold up their heads under the contumely of the great ones.

If we would have powerful minds, we must think; if we would have faithful hearts, we must love; if we would have strong muscles, we must labor. These include all that is valuable in life.

If all those who obtain not their desires should die of disappointment, who would be living upon the earth?

OBJECTIONS TO BOOK OF MORMON.

It is said that the name Jesus Christ, was not known among men until it was made known to Mary the mother of Jesus. But Mosiah, one of the writers of the Book of Mormon, wrote the name Jesus Christ many years before the angel made it known to Mary; this it is said is a manifestation of the ignorance of the translator. To me it is the reverse. The fact that the ancient worthies worshipped God in faith of the atonement to be made by Jesus Christ, tends to prove that the object of their faith and worship was fully made known to them from heaven, and the name, character, and mode of life of the being through whom the atonement would be made. We discover that sacrifices of the first fruits of man's increase were of very ancient date; and I think it is reasonable to believe, that when Adam offered sacrifices to God he was instructed fully as to the reasons of his sacrifices. When Cain and Abel offered sacrifices, it is reasonable to believe that they were informed as to why they were commanded to offer sacrifice. It is reasonable to believe that Moses was informed of the name Jesus Christ, judging by what is written in the eleventh chapter of Paul's epistle to the Hebrews:

"By faith Moses, when he was come to the years of discretion, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt."

The offering of sacrifices is said to be a type of the gift of God, i. e., his Son Jesus Christ. From the foregoing it will be seen that the people of God suffered reproach for the cause of Christ; and it would be strange to believe that a people would suffer reproach for one whom they had not been fully informed about, both as to name and character. And if Jesus Christ was described to the ancient people of God by some other name, when Joseph Smith translated it into English he would have to render it Jesus Christ, so that the reader of the English language could understand it. It should be remembered that Lehi obtained the records of Moses from Jerusalem, and carried them to the land of promise. If Lehi and his posterity had the writings of Moses and the prophets, it is evident that they would know about Christ from the records. We are told by St. Luke, in the twenty-fourth chapter of his testimony, that Christ immediately after his resurrection, chided some with being slow to believe, because they doubted the testimony of the women that saw him at the sepulcher after he arose; and he said unto the doubting ones, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter his glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself." Again it is written that Christ said unto them that professed to have Moses for their prophet and Abraham for their father, that if they believed Moses, they would believe on him, for Moses wrote of him. It is also written that Christ said, "I go as it is written of me." Peter writes, saying, "The prophets who prophesied of the grace bestowed upon you, inquired and searched diligently, searching what time, and what manner of salvation the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory which should follow. It is said by some eminent writers, that the altar bearing the inscription, "To the unknown God," which Paul saw at Athens, was an image of the cross with a man on it. And if so, it is a tradition which had been handed down from the devout men of the remote ages that held communication with Jehovah; and that the fathers of the race had as full knowledge and comprehension of the work to be wrought by the son of God as we have. The foregoing shows that the translator of the Book of Mormon was aided by divine power.

Some object to the Book of Mormon, because it is claimed that it was hidden, and found after being in the ground so many years. I am inclined to think that they who object on this ground have not seriously thought upon the commandments of the Lord given to some ancient prophets and seems to hide up testimonies and records to come forth in the latter days for the benefit of latter day Israel. I think the Book of Mormon is one of the precious records styled by the prophet Ezekiel, "Stick of Ephraim," which was so commanded to be hidden, and has come forth in fulfillment of an important prophecy of Christ. See Matthew 10:26. "For there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, and hidden that shall not be known." The testimony which the Lord gave unto Moses to put into the ark, was kept sacred, and not seen by all the people; and afterwards was used in the hands of the priests to serve as a medium of temporary salvation to Israel. See Joshua 3:13-17. We read in the 32d chapter of Jeremiah, "Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days." We read in Deuteronomy 29:1, of a covenant which the Lord made with Moses for the Children of Israel in the land of Moab, besides the covenant which he made with them in Horeb. We also read that Moses took the Book of the Covenant, and read it in the audience of the people; and they said, "All that the Lord hath said will we do, and be obedient." The fact of the laws of Moses called the Decalogue, having to be added to the previous covenant, to which they promised to be obedient, which I believe was the gospel covenant, preached to Abraham, and continued to his posterity through the prophet Moses, is evidence that they became transgressors. The additions are termed laws that were not good, and could not make the comers thereunto perfect; but were to serve as a chastizing rod to bring them to Christ, the personage of holiness, who would make the perfect sacrifice, the atonement satisfactory to the requirements of God, to expiate the indebtedness of our race entailed upon us through transgression. The benefits of such an atonement were and are conditional. The conditions are found in the gospel. In it is set forth life and death. See Deuteronomy 30:15, 19. The same chapter tells us that Israel would corrupt the ways of the Lord, and be left to the ill usages and captivity of Gentile or proud nations. It tells us, too, that when their children should consider and comply with what Moses taught them that day, that the Lord would turn back their captivity. If we ask a Christian in this day what the unbelieving Israelites must do to regain the favor of God, the answer would be, and truthfully, Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and obey the gospel. Then if those are the terms, they are the terms which Moses read to them out of his Book of Covenants, and taught them that day, (the time of Moses' ministration), and from the delineations of holy writ, we have reason to believe that the sacred records which contained the particular account of that covenant were hid up.

"Be strong and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them; for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee, he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."—Deut. 31:6.

Seeing that so much was made known to the prophets of Israel concerning the atonement to be made by Jesus Christ, is it unreasonable to find his name in a correctly translated copy of the old Testament, or any other volume written by inspiration? The Book of Mormon being hidden in the ground is as reasonable to my mind as some other scriptures that I read; for instance, it is written in Jeremiah 32:4, "Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days." And in one of the Apocryphal books, 2 Macabees 2:1, 4-8.

"It is also found in the records, that Jeremy the prophet commanded them that were carried away to take of the fire, as it hath been signified. * * It was also contained in the same writing, that the prophet being warned of God, commanded the tabernacle and the ark to go with him, as he went forth into the mountain, where Moses climbed up and saw the heritage of God. And when Jeremy came thither, he found a hollow cave, wherein he laid the tabernacle, and the ark, and the altar of incense, and so stopped the door. And some of those that followed him came to mark the way, but they could not find it, which when Jeremy perceived, he blamed them, saying, as for that place, it shall be unknown until the time that God gather his people again together, and receive them unto mercy. Then shall the Lord shew them these things, and the glory of the Lord shall appear, and the cloud also, as it was shewed unto Moses, and as when Solomon desired that the place might be honorably sanctified."

The idea so prevalent among Christian people, that we are not to admit of any more books or revelations than what we have in the Old and New Testaments, which they base upon Rev. 22:18, is an erroneous one. This passage only prohibits man to add. A believer in what God has caused to be written of himself, will see that God is unchangeable, and will not diminish aught of what he has said. And if he adds aught, in book form or revelation, it will be sure to harmonize with what he has given aforetime.

I was talking to a Christian neighbor a short time ago, and I told him that the Book of Mormon was the same in doctrine as the New Testament. And he asked me what use we have for it, if it was the same. I answered that it is going hand in hand with the New Testament, to show to the nations of the earth that Jesus Christ was really the God given Savior of mankind; and as every word and work of Christ must be established by two or three witnesses, we have two nations testifying to the fact of the resurrection of Christ and his doctrine; and it is God more especially that has use for them; and if he chooses to give us some of the other lost or hidden sacred records mentioned in the Bible, I feel willing to accept them. We see there has been the Book of the Wars of the Lord, Numbers 21:14, and Book of Joshua. Joshua 10:13; 2 Samuel 1:18; Book of Nathan the Prophet, and Gad the Seer, Chronicles 29:29; Paul's epistle to the Colossians, written from Laodicea, Colossians 4:16. The many different authors upon the biography of Christ written before the gospel of St. Luke, see Luke 1:1; and about a dozen or thirteen more we could point out. If God has any use for any of the above writings, and thinks it fitting to restore them to man, who has a right to say it would be wrong and useless.

THOMAS R. ALLEN.

THE GOD HEAD.

DEAR SAINTS:—Bro. Malmstrom has again come before us in the Herald of December 8th, on the subject of the True God. He objects to the word organize, which I used in an article on the God head. I used it once in a quotation from O. Pratt. But I never used the word organize to convey the impression that man will ever create or beget a spirit. I know that Brigham Young and O. Pratt taught that spirits have a beginning, that they were created and made, generated, formed, &c. And that the Saints will generate or create spirits in the future life. This all has its beginning in polygamy and the doctrine of devils. Thank God I never believed in any of their teachings after 1852, when they made public that doctrine of salvation by marriage, which has been a curse to them, and a stumbling block to all right minded people. They flatly contradict the inspired teachings of Joseph Smith. He declares that spirits are eternal, without beginning or end, that they never were made nor created; that they existed co-equal in point of time with God, and says, "I know my testimony is true, for God has told me so." That the spirit is a substance, that it is material; but that it is more pure, elastic and refined matter, than the body; that it existed before the body, can exist in the body, and will exist separate from the body, when the body will be mouldering in the dust; and will in the resurrection be again united with the body. Bro. Malmstrom says that some of the Saints teach that the Father and the Son have bodies of flesh and bones. I have been a disciple of the Latter Day Saints' faith for thirty-six years, and I have found none who taught that the God-head, or any one of its members, had a body of flesh and bones. But that they had spiritual bodies until Immanuel, (God with us), became the son of David, and the second Adam, being born of Mary, but begotten by the Holy Ghost.

"He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Then said Mary unto the angel, how shall this be, seeing I know not man. And the angel answered and said unto her. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing [body] which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God."—Luke 1:32.

Abinadi says:

"I would that ye should understand that God himself shall come down among the children of men, and shall redeem his people; and because he dwelleth in flesh, he shall be called the Son of God; and having subjected the flesh to the will of the Father, being the Father and the Son; the Father because he was conceived by the power of God; and the Son because of the flesh."—Mos. 8:4.

"For behold the kingdom of heaven is at hand, and the Son of God cometh upon the face of the earth. And behold he shall be born of Mary, at Jerusalem, which is the land of our fathers, she being a virgin, a precious and chosen vessel, who shall be overshadowed, and conceive by the power of the Holy Ghost, and bring forth a Son, even the Son of God."—Alma 5:2.

In the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, Christ is called the Only Begotten of the Father. John 1:14:18.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his Only Begotten Son.—John 3:16.

In what sense is Christ the Savior, the Son of God, the Only Begotten of the Father? Evidently in that he was miraculously conceived in the womb of Mary by the Holy Ghost, which is the power of the Father, and the only one that was conceived or begotten in that manner; hence he is the Only Begotten of the Father, and the only one having life in and of himself:

"For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself."—John 5:26.

"For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the God-head bodily." Col. 2:9; John 1:14; Rom. 9:5; 1 Tim. 3:16; Heb. 1:6-8.

Joseph Smith preached in Washington, D. C., February 5th, 1840, as follows: "He said I believe that God is eternal; that he had no beginning, and can have no end. Eternity means that which had no beginning, and can have no end. Eternity means that which had no beginning or end. I believe the soul is eternal. It had no beginning, it can have no end.

"I am in the Father and the Father in me, and the Father and I are one. The Father because he gave me of his fulness, and the Son because I was in the world, and made flesh my tabernacle, and dwelt amongst the sons of men. Ye were also in the beginning with the Father."

"That which is spirit, even the Spirit of Truth. The Spirit of truth is of God. I am the Spirit of truth. Man was in the beginning with God. Intelligence or the light of truth was not created or made, neither indeed can be. The elements are eternal, and spirit and element inseparably connected, receiveth a fulness of joy. The elements are the tabernacle of God. Man is the tabernacle of God, even temple; and whatsoever temple is defiled, God shall destroy that temple. The glory of God is intelligence, or in other words, light and truth. Light and truth forsaketh that evil one."—Doctrine and Covenants, Sec. 90.

The teachings of the Latter Day Saints are plain and easily understood, as to who God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost are; and that they have bodily form, like unto men, but of spiritual essence. That the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost are one in essence, one in power and glory, without beginning or end; were never created nor made, but are self-existent from all eternity to all eternity.

"Behold I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God. I created the heavens and the earth, and all things that in them are. I was with the Father from the beginning. I am in the Father, and the Father in me, and in me hath the Father glorified his name.—Nephi 4:8.

"Christ the Son, and God the Father, and the Holy Ghost, which are one eternal God."—Alma 8:10.

"The Holy Ghost beareth record of the Father and of the Son, which Father, Son and Holy Ghost, are one God, infinite and eternal, without end, Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 17:42.

Our faith is not Unitarian, Transcendental, nor Pantheistic. There is no truth more prominently taught unto men by Jesus Christ while he was in our world, than that God was the Father. He uses the expression to the Nephites one hundred and thirty or forty times; and that he, the Father, is an individual, located in a certain place called heaven. God is omnipresent by the Holy Ghost. By the Spirit all things are governed in the most perfect order, and wisdom according to the will of the Father and the Son.

Our brother certainly misunderstood Bro. Gurley and me; for there was nothing said by either of us to convey the idea, that the Godhead had bodies of flesh and bones; or that they were ever created or made. But that they had spiritual bodies, such as Jared's brother saw; that they had bodies in the form of man from all eternity; that their form is as unchangeable as their nature; and that man has known the Godhead as plural, from the beginning of time.

"Let us make man in our [plural] own image." And the Book of Abraham calls them the Gods. The Hebrew word Adonai plural, as a name given to God, occurs more than a hundred and fifty times in the Bible. When the three men came to Abraham, he ran to meet them, bowed himself, and said to them, Adonai. He used this name for the three; and so it stood for a holy triad. It could not be a plural in majesty, it was an actual plural, as a Divine name. "Hear, O Israel, Jehovah, our God, is one Jehovah." This is the ineffable name, the most holy name, that has ever been given to men. Jehovah is the proper name for the eternal ones. It represents the past, the present and the future. John unfolds its true meaning, when he pronounces the blessing of "grace and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come." The Unitarians, and some of the Jews, claim this name, Jehovah, to be in the singular; and can not be used in the plural. But we find that Joshua gives the name a plural form.

"And Joshua said unto the people, Ye can not serve Jehovah, for he is a Holy God."—Josh. 24: 19.

Here the phrase, "Holy God," appears to be the singular number in our translation; but the original Hebrew has both the noun God and the plural number, and the adjective holy; agreeing with it in the plural number. The Holy Name stands here as being defined, the Gods, the Holy Ones, the Holy Persons. A personal Trinity lies in the name Jehovah. The trinity of Divine and eternal life. It expands into the form of three personal, living names; and these three are equally holy, equally divine, equally impossible to be transferred; so that no one can take the place of another. They are three in one. They are clearly separated, yet they unite in the one great name. Then the name Elohim, (the persons in covenant). But Elohim stood also for heathen deities sometimes. But the great name, Jehovah, wherever it stood, represented two or more persons.

It is important to remember that the persons must have been eternal and divine, because this name never could receive any meaning, carrying it outside of the eternal circle of Deity. Even after man went into devil-worship, so that they accepted the lying seraph, (serpent, or Satan transformed into an angel of light), as a more truthful counselor and warmer friend than God, they formed the serpent with three heads, to represent the past, the present, and the future, as seen on the silver belt of the shield of Agamemnon. It was worshipped in Greece, Egypt, India, and in America; for the dragon, the neck of which supported three heads, is found in the mythology of all these nations, and sculptured, or painted on their ancient buildings. But all through the dark ages of mythology, God's name as heaven-Father, has been known to man. M. Muller, in his study of ancient language, finds the names heaven, Father, prayer, sacrifice, altar, spirit, law and faith, are words used in the Aryan language, before their separation, that is, before the time when Sanskrit was spoken in India, or Greek in Asia Minor and Europe. Thousands of years have passed since the Aryan nations separated to travel to the north and the south, the west and the east. They have each founded empires and philosophies. They have each built temples, and razed them to the ground. They have all grown older, and it may be wiser and better; but when they search for a name for what is most exalted, and yet most dear to every one of us; when we wish to express both awe and love, the infinite and the finite, we can but do what our old fathers did, when gazing up to heaven and feeling the presence of a being, as far as far, and as near as near can be—we can but combine the self same words, and utter once more the primeval, Aryan prayer, Heaven-Father, in that form which will endure for ever, "Our Father, which art in heaven." May we all come unto him in faith, and purify ourselves as he is pure, until he be pleased to return unto us a pure language. Then we will understand each other, "when we see as we are seen, and know as we are known."

Your brother in Christ,

JOHN MCKENZIE.

HOW TO GET GAIN.

A VERY important question, one which thousands are asking. There are many fields open to the seeker of wealth, but they are thronged already. If we could find one in which there is a certainty of success, and in which few were seeking, that would be the one to search in.

The gospel offers it. Is it possible, says one, that the gospel of Christ offers advantages for making money. It does, as surely as it offers eternal life, or the remission of sins through baptism. Hear the Lord's promise:

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground, neither shall your vines cast their fruit before their time; and all nations shall call you blessed, for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of hosts."

What a wonderful promise. I sometimes hear Saints say, "I am too poor to pay tithing." Is it possible there are Saints whose poverty prevents them from keeping the law of God? I am aware there are some who have nothing. They should receive, and in receiving they keep the law. There are but two classes, one to give, the other to receive. If I should hear the rich declining to pay tithing upon the grounds that riches were burdensome, that they already had sufficient, that this law would increase their wealth, I should think such an argument had a seeming degree of consistency; but for the poor to refuse upon the plea of poverty, is right the reverse.

Brethren, are not all of God's laws to us to benefit our condition here? Every commandment that he has given is to promote our happiness here, as well as hereafter. When a man is already poor, that which would have a tendency to make him more so would be no blessing, but the reverse. The law of tithing, viewed in the light of God's promises, is not to impoverish his people, but a means by which they may be made prosperous; we should always bear that in mind. If I am poor, or in debt, the more need of obeying this law. If God's promises are good in one instance, they are in another. This is a law by which we can test him, and know for ourselves. We need not wait to pass behind the veil. This is just what he asks us to do. "Prove me now, herewith," says the Lord." We sometimes hear it said that poverty is a blessing. It is one which I don't desire. The Master does not consider it such, or he never would have given a law by which we could rise above it. The question is often asked, When shall I commence to obey this law? I ask, When should you obey the gospel? When you understand it, and feel the need of it. So with this. When you understand it and need its blessings. As to the amount and manner of paying, that is easily ascertained from the Bishop when you really want to pay it.

The law of tithing presents to us one of the best financial systems that was ever had among men, a perfect system; it is God-given, reaching as far back as we can trace God's dealings with his people. A law that will reach all the varied conditions of his people, from the poor widow to the apostle. When the Saints learn to regard it in its true light, we will have no need of district fund, or any other man-made scheme. As the Mosaic law had to give way before the perfect law of liberty, so they will have to give way before the perfect law of tithing.

Says a brother, If I do good in a general way, can not I obtain my inheritance? You will get whatever blessings are promised for your work. If you want temporal prosperity, you must keep the law governing that; for God has nowhere promised it through any other. As well think of receiving a remission of sins through the law of repentance, or the Holy Ghost by the act of baptism. Special blessings are given through special laws. We see some of the Saints rapidly accumulating wealth who have not kept this financial law. The reason of this is, their natural appetites, and their advantageous surroundings. In this respect they stand the same as though they never had embraced the gospel. A Saint ought to have a special advantage in this respect; for he is not on equal footing with other men. As a Saint he can not resort to the ways and means to make money, that the world does. So unless specially blessed of the Lord, he must suffer loss. Therefore these conditions are held out to him, and he is commanded to observe them. If a man is what is known in the world as fortunate, he soon amasses wealth. This is what God proposes, to make "his crops to grow, to rebuke the devourer." Why will he do this? Because he has been baptized? No, because he has kept the law.

In looking at this law, we are made to see the beauty and excellency in two ways:

As we have endeavored to show, the giver is blessed. Then what a grand purpose it is used for, to bear the glad news of the gospel and to help the poor. This is the law by which the land of Zion will be blessed. While the destroyer is abroad making waste, sending famine through the land, the Saints will be safe. Their land will be yielding its increase, her people all having obeyed this law. In this we see the reason why none will find an inheritance there, only those whose names are found enrolled in the law. One shall not eat the fruit of another's labors. Those who have absolutely nothing, are entitled to receive, hence their names will be there as receivers. May the Saints arise and work.

HIRAM HOLT.

IF THE COAT FITS YOU WEAR IT.

THIS is an old saying, and a very good one if properly applied; and more especially, if the coat is given to us and made in the latest fashion, and of good material, either of cloth or of christian duties taken from the scriptures, cut and made in the latest fashion. Which of these coats should the disciples of Christ prefer. I am afraid the finely fitting cloth coats that set off our outside appearance to such good advantage, and makes such a lasting impression on their disciple friends from their looks when they go to the house of prayer, would be preferred most and worn with thankful hearts to the giver, and no fault found nor question asked as to the propriety of accepting them, or whether they were all wool, or a little mixed with other materials. These coats would be taken good care of, put into the best trunks, and the charity and goodness of the giver would be lauded and talked of every time they met; while on the other hand, if some good, charitable disciple of Christ, that was not able to purchase cloth coats to give away, should prepare a lot of Christian-duty coats, made up from the Scriptures, and fitted to every disciple's daily wearing, and more especially to wear when they go to the house of prayer, (I am willing to admit that Christian-duty coats will not be seen nor spoken of so much nor probably make such a lasting impression because they are worn on the inside, and only seen by those that are looking for that kind of coats), where the true disciples of Christ, wearing these Christian duty coats, shine in the sight of the giver, and they realize that their coats will not wear out, neither will the cloth they are made of fade away. They can take them with them. These coats will clothe them in the great hereafter, while the others made of the most lasting materials, will have to be left behind, and in the great hereafter, they are left naked.

Disciples of Christ, choose your coats, and be careful how you wear them; they both have their reward. The finely-fitting cloth have their reward here; but the Christian-duty coats have a double reward, here and hereafter. I have known professed disciples of Christ to get very angry, because some other charitable disciple gave out some christian duty coats that fit them very closely, and question the propriety of accepting them, although the materials were all wool, taken from the scriptures, (and given with spirit), or in the spirit of love and meakness; and with a desire that the coats should be worn in the same spirit, that all might be profited together. But I have felt to pity the good, charitable disciple in many instances, who prepared the coats; for the tighter and better the coats fit the disciples, the less praise they give; and his charity and goodness got but very little lauding when the disciples met, and he was thought to be a little cranky.

With my eyes open to all these conditions, I propose to prepare a few Christian-duty coats, without any malice aforethought, or design to hit any particular person, or give offense to any. I want my coats worn, and the tighter they fit the better it will suit me. I say to all, if the coats fit you, take them and wear them in a proper Christ-like spirit. They will outlast the other coats. I will commence by selecting a few for those holding office in the church.

"Wherefore, now, let every man learn his [this is one of the coats, to learn his duty] and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence, [another coat]. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand; and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand."—Book of Covenants.

After the Lord had given all necessary instructions that every officer might be left without excuse, then he requires every officer to learn his duty, and show by his works that he is approved; or there will be a time that he will not be counted worthy to stand in the office that he was appointed to; and this instruction would apply to all kinds of governments and orders, where men are appointed to office; if they did not show themselves approved, and do the work of the office, having learned its duties, would they not be impeached, court-marshaled, or put out of their office according to the law of the government, or order they represented. In fact the office should always trust the officer because it had work for him to do; and every elder, priest, teacher or deacon, is to be ordained "according to the gifts and callings of God unto him;" and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost, which is in the one who ordains him.—Book of Covenants.

Here is the order of calling, or appointing officers in the church, or kingdom of God. Here is the key to every office, as well as to every officer in the church. I want all officers and members to put this coat on, and be careful how they wear it. "Be ye very careful; for many elders, [priests, teachers, and deacons included] have been ordained unto me," not according to the gifts and callings of God unto them, but according to their own or somebody else's zeal, desire to make a show on paper, or something else of the same stamp, "and are come under my condemnation, by reason of neglecting to lift up their voices in my cause." How could many lift up their voices when it was not their gift nor their calling of God so to do. This coat fits both parties very tight, the one being ordained, and the one ordaining; because "he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him." "And for such there is tribulation and anguish; happily they themselves may be saved, (if doing no evil)." (But they have already done a great evil, and come under condemnation in ordaining and being ordained contrary to the command of God; so their coats will be tried by fire). "Their works are burned not being profitable unto me." And further; I do not believe the Holy Ghost ever made a mistake and ordained contrary to the gifts and callings of God. Therefore the many mistakes that have been made in this respect, must be traced to some other source. They might be traceable to other coats, such as zeal, pride, self-exaltation, and other natural outgrowths of holding office, and a desire to hold office. Then you know the responsibility of an office almost always elevates a man and in many instances this elevation, or zeal, causes hasty work with the bad results seen in many instances. Now for a coat to remedy this evil that has brought so many under condemnation, and the church into disgrace and disrepute in so many instances:

"Behold, he who has repented of his sins, the same is forgiven, and I, the Lord, remembereth them no more. By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins. Behold, he will confess them and forsake them."—Doc. and Cov.

Here is the remedial coat, and I hope for the good of the church, and also for the good of all those who are under this condemnation, that is, who have failed to lift up their voices, and failed to learn their duty, and show themselves approved; and that have ordained or been ordained contrary to the commands of God, will put on this redemptive coat, and repenting (Paul says this is repentance, to cease "to do evil and learn to do well") from their sins, come forward and confess them, and forsake them; and show themselves approved by learning their duty, and, by lifting up their voices, or by giving up their offices and stepping back into the ranks, and endeavoring to learn their duty, and their gifts and callings as members, and show themselves approved, that they may be counted worthy to stand, when all men's works will be tried by fire.

"Brethren, examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves."—2 Cor. 13:5. Stand yourselves up in this coat; draw the line and the plummet on your own selves. Do you not know the gifts and callings of God unto yourselves, and whether the Holy Ghost has ever confirmed your ordinations or not? If not, would you not be better off in the ranks as a private? You certainly would not be under as great condemnation. Above all things, let honesty with ourselves and God be uppermost; and then if we err through ignorance, the Lord will forgive us.

I will now point out some of the coats that the whole church has been obliged to wear in the past, and are obliged to wear now; and will have to wear in the future if the remedial coats are not applied. First, the act of seeking office contrary to the law ("the gifts and callings of God to him"), is self-exaltation, "and he that exalteth himself shall be abased." So we see a foundation laid to abase the whole church; "for we are all members of the one body, and where one member suffers, all the members suffer with him;" and where one member is abased, all the members are abased with him. So if many of the officers are abased and under condemnation for self-exaltation, does not the whole church feel the effects? "And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent, and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon, and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say but to do according to that which I have written."—Book of Covenants.

Among the former commandments is, "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron," (Heb. 5:4), and "according to the gifts and callings of God unto him," and "by the power of the Holy Ghost in the one ordaining him."

As a people we are very strenuous, (and especially the officers), in requiring other denominations to fulfill literally the law of baptism by immersion, and the laying on of hands; and you must be called as was Aaron. The organization of the church with all its primitive officers is also urged. These are strong points well taken, and should be applied at home and to ourselves, although they may fit very tightly. The fact of having gone through the ceremony of ordination, being called by ourselves or by some one else, by conference or by vote of the branch, or any other way except that provided in the law of calling to office, is null and void; as much so as in any other denomination. In fact, these things have become coats out of season, and are sweating and reducing the body more than wisdom would dictate; and will have to be laid aside whenever "Zion puts on her beautiful garments and arises in her majesty." Then woe to him that has not applied the remedy, because it will be said to him, "Depart, ye never knew me." (Christ). Where is your wedding garment? Where is your one talent? Why did you not learn your duty, and show yourselves approved? Burn his works, but save him. Give him according to his works.

Now for some prayer meeting coats. It is very fashionable for disciples to wear their best coats to meeting and what would the good brethren and sisters say, if we came to meeting looking shabby in our dress, not having done our duty to our outward appearance? Would they not criticise our coats? I take the liberty to answer yes. So with our Christian-duty coats. And what will the good sisters and brethren say about us, if we are shabby about our Christian duty coats. How I wish we were all as much concerned about what they will say about our Christian duties, as we are about what they will say about our other coats; and that before we left home, we would go into our closets and shut the door, and there put on our duty-coat, and take the brush of self-examination and resolution to do our whole duty, and brush ourselves with it and a contrite spirit, in secret prayer, that we may be rewarded openly, i. e., that the man-fearing spirit of what will they say, may be taken from us, and our mouths opened; that we may not be afraid to kneel, or rise and speak and do our duty; for if we are afraid to acknowledge our Lord before men, we have no claim on his acknowledging us before his Heavenly Father.

"Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another. And the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts; in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.—Mal. 3: 16, 17.

Here are duty-coats that I wish to call particular attention to. "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another." When and where did they speak to one another? Was it in private? Was it when they were visiting one another at their homes? I answer no; because it is no cross to confess the Lord and speak often one to another at home; for it is often the case that there is too much said about others and other things, and that fear of what they will say, seems to let us loose, and we say what others have said and done, and what they have not done, with great liberty. The cross that our Lord spoke about, seems to have very little cross about it, when we are visiting, or in our private communications with our brethren and sisters. Then this speaking often one to another, must be in public, where it is a cross to confess the Lord before men, and bear our testimonies; for it is by our testimonies that we are to overcome. "And the Lord hearkened and heard it; and a book of remembrance was kept." And if what we have said in private is to be accounted for; and we are to overcome by our testimonies; and a book of remembrance is to be kept; and we are to be judged out of what is written in the book of remembrance; and we have never spoken or borne a testimony, what will be written there for us? Will our presence and silence be taken as testimony, and written in the book of remembrance for us? Will it be written, They were afraid to testify of me before men, I can not testify of them before my Father in Heaven.

There are many people in our day, that assume a religious coat, and wear it on the outside because it is fashionable and popular, or for some mercenary purpose; but it is not so with many of the Latter Day Saints. The doctrine they profess is so unpopular, that they put their worldly, fashionable coats on the outside, to cover up their religious coats, for fear their neighbors will know that they are Latter Day Saints. Moses esteemed the cross of Christ of greater value than all the honors of Egypt. Paul thought the reproach of Christ of greater value than all other things; and put Christ on the outside, that he might be seen and read of all men. A real old fashioned working coat, speaks louder than a Sunday coat; and as no man is dressed without an overcoat, let us put on the overcoat of charity, not like the world that makes a great outside showing, but that which comes from the heart, and wells up and flows out like a well of living water, and waters all around, and makes grass to grow in barren and desert places; and thus cover up the barrenness of sin. This overcoat will wear long and not get threadbare; neither will it "vaunt itself, is not puffed up." A real coat of charity never faileth; has not the shining, brassy shade, nor the tinkling of a cymbal, but endures to the end, and prevents a multitude of sins. "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I unto thee." (these coats). A. HAWS.

APOLOGY FOR THE BOOK OF MORMON.

THIS book condemns polygamy. It is not a travesty, as is proved by its collateral works, "Doctrine and Covenants," which contains revelations made to Americans by one claiming to be Jesus Christ of the New Testament. It is attested to by miraculous occurrences. It is in no single instance discordant with the teachings of the Bible. It is opposed to the idea that miracles have ceased, or that the canon of scripture was ever closed. Its diction is thorough, pure, extremely penetrating and deeply solemn. It fulfills, no doubt, the cleansing of the sanctuary foretold by Daniel. As the seventy weeks meant 490 years, so it is 2,300 years from the death of Zachariah the son of Barachias, who fell between the temple and the altar, to the showing forth of this book, the stick of Ephraim, the stone literally cut out of the mountain without human hands. The Church of Latter Day Saints was re-established in 1830. Christ sums up the Jewish ceremonial economy with the death of Zachariah; that economy was given because of transgression. The plan of salvation has always been the same and covers the three heavens in its allotments. The fall of angels from one of these heavens is the corner stone of the whole plan. The daily sacrifice was taken away at the death of Zachariah, for Malachi says it was not acceptable to God in his day. There is reason to believe that the Bible and Swedenborg's writings are both alluded to in this book. This book is both Catholic and Protestant, Baptist and Seventh Day as well as Lord's Day. It is essentially Methodist in its spirit and is thoroughly opposed to the spirit of supereminence in national rulership. It relates the ancient history of this continent from a religious stand point and is perfectly correct in chronology. It shows the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecies and the words of Christ; "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold." The use of the word senine (not in Webster) is remarkable, as the original plates were written in Egyptian characters. It predicts the near restoration of the Jews and a literal resurrection. There was a deuteronomy, why should there not be a deuter-evangel? Its predictions are deeply affecting. Paul's words: "Thou sowest not that body that shall be," explains any apparent contradiction without Swedenborg and the Book of Mormon. Swedenborg wrote from the stand-point of the third heaven, to which Paul was caught up; he denies that one devil rules all hell but not the imputation of Christ's goodness. The Book of Mormon relates exclusively to this planet. The capabilities of the resurrected will be all-embracing. Spiritualism followed the martyrdom of the Smiths. There is reason to believe that the last days will include a century; sol justitue et occidentem illustra.

AMERICAN KITCHENS.

WASTE OF FOOD BY LACK OF KNOWLEDGE ON THE PART OF OUR COOKS.

SAID a French restaurant-keeper of Boston the other day: "Your waste in the kitchen is great, inexcusable. In the average American household there is more meat, for example, used and wasted than would supply three ordinary French families of the same size. Why is this? Your cooks, as a rule, are not cooks at all. Where do they come from? From the poorer classes of your people, who do not know how to live, and have never learned the art of cooking. In France it is a part—and a very important part—of the education of every girl that she be taught the art of cooking; for it is an art in which the learner must gather her knowledge from the experience of others as much as in any branch taught in schools. Inspiration in making new and acceptable dishes never comes to the novice, but only to the accomplished cook. Therefore, from the highest to the lowest, every Frenchwoman is supposed to be either proficient in the art of cooking or to have enough knowledge of it to direct the work of her kitchen. Here, how few know anything about cooking. How many even know how to cook potatoes? The French cook their meats and vegetables thoroughly, and waste nothing. They make them palatable by appetizing sauces and gravies, and more easily digestible by the manner in which they cook and manipulate them.

Take the article of beef, for example. I can cook it in a hundred different ways—yes, more than a hundred. The dishes I could make of it would make one-half the amount of meat satisfy the appetite and leave no dyspeptic symptoms to contend with. Dyspepsia—that is an American disease, which comes from eating too much heavy, indigestible food. In France we have no dyspeptics. Sometimes great eaters have had indigestion, but it is only a temporary trouble which can be remedied by abstinence, not a disease like dyspepsia. Well, you can boil, broil, stew, roast, and in fact cook beef in a variety of ways that would take a long time to describe. When beef is cooked it is usually combined with things that will give it a favor—boiled, for example, with onions, a stick of cinnamon, thyme, laurel leaves, eschalot, a clove, etc., etc.—Not all of these but such things as are needed for what is designed. The meat, after boiling, is taken out and prepared in various ways, which I need not name. The water is made into soup. If the beef is roasted it is served with an appetizing sauce, as roast beef, cold roast beef, etc. Then what remains is stewed with vegetables of various kinds. Then the cold roast or boiled beef may be made into a salad. What remains can be hashed and the bones used for making soup along with soup stock. Even the meat taken from the soup stock can be served up with a sauce which contains enough of stock to supply the food substances which have been extracted from it. In France the substance in the bones is largely extracted by boiling, and even the marrow is saved and sold at a comparatively high price in that country to be used as a toast dressing. Then there are beef a la mode, a la Provençal, a la trianon, miranton, gratin, etc., all being the result of peculiar ways of cooking, and all having distinctive characteristics; but all palatable, and all nutritious, and none that will distress the stomach after eating. For soups we have them in all variety—their name is legion. Our cooks even make most palatable and very nutritious soup out of vegetables, with only a little fat added. Pea-soup, bean-soup, lentil-soup, and soup with onions, carrot, etc., are wholesome and nourishing.

"And, by the way, let me tell you that in France when meat is served it is accompanied with only one kind of vegetables. Here you lose the distinctive flavor of any one by having a number. The fact is, in France we attach more importance to what we eat than you do in this country, and yet we do not consume as much good meat as you do, and waste nothing that can be eaten. But we put our art into making it palatable and digestible; we put work and skill into our cooking. Did you ever eat Hamburg steak? No? Well, you take a piece of good lean beef, grind it up fine, put in salt, pepper, and onions chopped fine; then break in eggs sufficient and mix the whole up together. Flatten into a cakelike mass and fry it until done in sweet butter. In making other dishes each has its peculiarity, but all are made, first, to be palatable; second, to be satisfying to the appetite; and third, to be easily digestible. Then, we study economy. We waste nothing that can be used for food. The result is, that we can live much cheaper than Americans do, and much better. Your people waste because they do not know how to cook. If you have a roast turkey—after a meal or two from it, what remains is thrown away. We would then make a fricassee, or a stew, or a soup of it, and in this way waste none of it. The same is true of most other meats, and especially true of vegetables which have been left over. The cooking in France, except, of course, in hotels and restaurants, is done mostly by women. Male cooks are what may be called professionals in France. They study cookery and practice it as a doctor would study and practice medicine. There is no way that I can see that the waste in American kitchens can be stopped but to teach your American girls, your cooks, how to cook properly and administer the affairs of the kitchen economically, and to accomplish this they must have the right kind of training by teachers who know and practice what they teach."—Boston Herald.

SKELETONS OF GIANTS.

REMARKABLE RELICS OF AN EXTINCT
RACE EXCAVATED IN GEORGIA.

MR. J. B. TOOMER recently received a letter from Mr. Hazleton, who is on a visit to Gatesville. The letter contained several beads made of bone, and gave an interesting account of the opening of a large Indian mound near that town by a committee of scientists from the Smithsonian Institute. After removing the dirt for some distance, a layer of large flag-stones was found, which had evidently been dressed by hand and showed that the men who quarried this rock understood their business. These stones were removed, when in a kind of vault beneath them, the skeleton of a giant seven feet two inches was found. His hair was coarse and jet black and hung to the waist, the brow being ornamented with a copper crown. The skeleton was remarkably well preserved and taken from the vault intact. Near this skeleton were found the bodies of several children of various sizes. The remains of the latter were covered with beads, made of bone of some kind. Upon removing these, the bodies were found to be inclosed in a net work made of straw and reeds, and beneath this was a covering of the skin of some animal. In fact, the bodies had been prepared somewhat after the manner of mummies, and will doubtless throw new light on the history of a people who reared these mounds. Upon the stones that covered the vault were carved inscriptions, and if deciphered will probably lift the veil that has enshrouded the history of the race of giants that undoubtedly at one time inhabited this continent. All the relics were carefully packed and forwarded to the Smithsonian Institute, and are said to be the most interesting collection ever found in America. The explorers are now at work on another mound in Bartow county, and before their return home will visit various sections of Georgia, where antiquities are found. On the Oconee river, in Greene county, just above Powell's Mills, are several large mounds, one of them very tall and precipitous.—Athens, Georgia, Banner.

HASTE IN EATING.

WHATEVER is of sufficient importance to be done has a claim to be done well. This principle is generally acknowledged in mechanics, in farming, in all branches of industries. I know of no act of any especial importance that, by the vast majority of people, is performed with so much haphazard as taking our meals.

A large number of persons, apparently regard the time spent in this as nearly wasted, only so far as a little cursory pleasure is concerned. Hot haste seems to be the prevailing idea, securing our food in the most available form for swallowing, semi-liquids, to be forced down with the aid of hot drinks. The natural and legitimate results of such an unwise course are dyspepsia more prevalent in this country than in any part of the civilized world with kindred diseases and a practical loss of at least one-half of the nourishment which might be afforded by the same articles. A very important consideration in connection with this matter is the fact that the saliva is not combined with the food, as a necessary solvent, in the absence of which starch foods, in particular, can not become parts of the body, to the extent which is natural. To illustrate the relative importance of the insalivation of the starchy and the flesh foods, we have simply to note the habits of the carnivorous and the vegetable eating animals, the one swallowing smaller animals whole, remaining in a torpid state for a longer or shorter period, days or week, while the "patient ox" and this family, carefully "chew the cud" thoroughly appropriating the natural nourishment of the grasses, &c. By this chewing the starch is actually changed to sugar, as illustrated by the peculiar sweetness of the well-chewed crust of brown bread.

In the general absence of reasonably thorough and decent chewing, at all comparing with that of the higher order of brutes, it is not surprising that so many of us are suffering with indigestion actually starving, from the fact that so little of the food consumed is appropriated, really nourishing the body. It is probable that one-half of the time lost in sickness by the average in any community, if devoted to decent habits of eating would sensibly improve the general health.—Selected.

Came to America same year, and joined the Reorganization on her former baptism, December 1872. Funeral sermon by J. M. Terry and Temme Hinderks.

"She's gone! her work on earth is done,
Her battle's fought, her race is run;
Blest is the path she trod;
For she espoused the glorious cause,
In prompt obedience to the laws
Of the Eternal God.
She sleeps, her troubles here are o'er;
She sleeps where earthly ills no more
Will break the slumberer's rest.
Her dust will rest beneath the sod,
Her spirit has returned to God,
To mingle with the dust."

yet living. Two died in infancy. The other seven all obeyed the gospel. Sr. Cole and her husband, Bro. John Cole, heard the truth and were obedient about forty years ago. He died in 1850, hence for thirty-four years she was a widow. Her faith in the gospel was unwavering, and her life was one of uprightness and integrity. She was one "who did good" and her reward is sure. Besides her own nine children she had charge of another from infancy who mourns her as her own do. Funeral sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins assisted by Bro. Joseph Smith.

THIS IS NO HUMBUB, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, IDAHO, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

MAGNOLIA, IOWA, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

Geo. MONTAGUE.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. M. H. Bond wrote from Providence, Rhode Island, June 16th, as follows:

Was at Scituate, yesterday, and baptized four—the fruit of others' labors. The manifestations of the Spirit at the water and confirmation, were very marked; the day and scenery were beautiful, the assembly large, good liberty in preaching, more investigating. The work is decidedly onward, but a great scarcity and need of laborers; interest all over the district on the increase; baptisms numerous, and with the marked assistance of the Spirit, the outlook seems favorable. The gospel is indeed God's power—and not the power or wisdom of men unto salvation. Obedience to the Divine law brings the evidence. This church must grow, so long as she abides in the truth. People won't give up religion at the say of Ingersoll; because God has written it in the nature of man, and created a want which a worship, conducted by the Spirit and in truth, can alone satisfy. We have the best gospel exegesis the world has to-day; and it only needs men with hearts and minds consecrated to the love of God's truth, and being assured by the revelations of God to them personally of the high and stable character of the reward before them, to preach and convince others also.

Bro. W. W. Blair writes from Reese Creek, Montana, June 9th, 1884,

Owing to high waters and to the fact that some of the Willow Creek members are likely to be detained as witnesses at court in Bozeman for a week longer, I have concluded to remain here another week and then go to Willow Creek by the 22d inst. Our meetings here are largely attended with attentive listeners.

Bro. Nicholas Stamm wrote card from Des Moines, Iowa, June 16th:

"I spoke here twice yesterday, with good liberty, and fair attendance. The Saints felt well. I will speak here again on the 6th of July. I go from here to the Valley Branch; and may go from there to Pleasantville, and may go to Newton."

Of the preaching of Bro. Stebbins, and the late conference at Lucas, Bro. Thomas R. Allen writes:

"In my judgment and from passing rumor it gave satisfaction throughout. On Sunday morning, June 15th, Bro. Stebbins baptized three. While I speak commendatory of Bro. Stebbins, I ought to say that the presence and instruction given by Brn. J. W. Gillen, O. B. Thomas, and others who were with us added much to facilitate the needed conference business. Altogether to me it was a joyful success."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In stating the invitation to visit Everest, Kansas, we misunderstood the writer. She did not intend to invite an Elder to visit them personally, for this she is not at liberty to do. She desired that events might so transpire that the vicinity where she lived would be visited by the Missionaries, that the prejudice existing in the minds of many, her husband included, might be removed, it being the case that her husband does not regard the faith favorably; probably from want of opportunity for examining it. We beg the sister's pardon for so misunderstanding her former letter. We do not specially blame her husband, or any one else for holding the people in disfavor; if what he knows of them is derived from the popular cry against them.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins returned from attending conference of the Decatur District at Lucas, Iowa, and reports an excellent session. He baptized three while there. Brn. E. Robinson, E. Lovell and J. Gillen confirm Bro. Stebbins' report concerning the session of conference being a good one.

At last advices Brn. D. H. Bays and Heman C. Smith were at Good Intent, Kansas, on their way south, anxious to reach their appointed field of labor and begin work.

Errata.—In the Bishop's report of the Agent's accounts for the Pottawattamie District the names of "Kennedy Hansen" and "Christiny Byan" occur; these should be Christiny Ryan and Hemming Hansen, respectively. Correction made by request of A. Hall, Agent, and order of the Bishop.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it right for Latter Day Saints to partake of bread and wine when presented to them by other creeds?

Ans.—We think not.

Q.—Will you kindly say what position the church takes on capital punishment, and oblige many readers.

A.—The church has not passed upon the subject that we are aware of. It has never been raised in the Reorganization for the consideration of the Elders at conference; that we have any knowledge of.

Q.—Is it known on what day of the week the day of Pentecost came on as recorded in Acts.

A.—Smith's Bible Dictionary states: "If it was the legal paschal supper, on the 14th of Nisan, and the Sabbath during which our Lord lay in the grave was the day of the Omer, Pentecost must have followed on the Sabbath. But if the supper was eaten on the 13th, and He was crucified on the 14th, the Sunday of the resurrection must have been the day of the Omer, and Pentecost must have occurred on the first day of the week."

THE Editor of the HERALD was lately invited to visit the Iowa State Agricultural College, at Ames, Story county, Iowa, to preach in the College Chapel. This invitation was given by Prof. S. A. Knapp, President, through Bro. George R. Chatburn, son of Bro. Jonas W. Chatburn, of Shelby county, Iowa, a student in the senior class, in Civil Engineering. The Editor accepted the invitation, appointing Sunday, June 15th as the time.

Leaving Lamoni, on the morning of the 13th the Editor reached Ames, by the way of Chariton, and Osceola, on the main line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railway; thence to Des Moines over the Des Moines, Osceola and Southern; thence over the North-western, at near eleven o'clock at night. At a little before noon of the 14th the Editor was met by Bro. G. R. Chatburn and went out to the College grounds by "bus" in company with several students; and was kindly received by Prof. Knapp and his most excellent wife and co-worker in college labor, at the Farm House, occupied by Pres. Knapp as Professor of Agriculture, where he was made welcome by the household during his stay at Ames.

Arrangements had been made for a lecture on Education by Prof. Foster, of Chicago, for Saturday evening; but a telegram received by the Lecture Association in the afternoon, announced that the lecturer could not come. An invitation to occupy the hour was extended to the Editor, who tried, short as the notice was, less than two hours, to give a brief sketch of the history of Mormonism. The invitation was given by Mr. W. H. Wier, chairman of the Corresponding Committee of the Lecture Association.

On Sunday morning the Editor walked to Ames village, one and a half miles east of the college, and attended worship in the Methodist Episcopal Church, listening to a quite able discourse by Prof. Knapp, from the text: "And when ye stand praying, forgive; if ye have aught against any; that your Father also which is in heaven, may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses."

The preacher gave an earnest and thoughtful exposition of the text, assuming that as broadly and freely as men permitted their forgiveness to extend to the sins committed against them by their fellow-men, so broadly might they expect God to forgive and wipe away their own trespasses through the Son.

At 2:30 in the afternoon, service was held in the chapel at the college, the President, several of the faculty and the students being in attendance. The service was opened by an anthem by the Student Choir, the preacher then read the 8th chapter of Hebrews; a hymn was then sung, prayer was offered, another hymn was sung and the Editor preached from the 15th chapter of 1st Corinthians:

"Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain."

The best of order prevailed, fair attention was paid, and at the close of the service the preacher was invited to eat with Bro. Chatburn and mess, at their table in the large dining room in the college building. There were twelve at the table, all students; except the preacher. The meal was an excellent one, and was enlivened by pleasant conversation; the preacher almost wished himself young again that he might become a student too.

In the evening at seven there was a prayer meeting in the chapel led by a lady student, in which several took a part, singing, speaking and praying.

From the moment of reaching the village of Ames until the final departure from it, the Editor made it his business to hear and see, as much as might be seen and heard in proper ways. It is not needful that he write, or tell all that he saw and heard; but some things may be written with profit to him that writes and those who read.

Ames Agricultural College is an institution fostered by the care of the state, and intended to afford to the young men and women who choose to make the effort, an opportunity for an education fitting them for actual life in this workaday world of ours. It is so endowed that by wise legislation and management, there is no young man in the state so poor that he can not here get an education; and none so rich but what if he chooses, may here find the benefit of contact with education and labor combined. The Farm contains something over eight hundred acres and is well appointed in fences, wells, buildings and machinery for the purpose designed, that of teaching the science of agriculture with practice. Cattle breeding, hog raising, sheep husbandry and dairying are all taught, including the kinds, care and methods of keeping of the stock required; the different sorts of foods required by each, and the most economical methods of producing; and the quality and disposition of the product.

The college buildings are beautifully and healthfully located; the main line of the North-western railway running through the grounds, less than a quarter of a mile from the farm house. The College is one and a half miles west of the village of Ames, a place of about sixteen hundred inhabitants. And it is possible that some part of the efficiency of the school is attributable to the absence of the attractions of city life upon the students drawing their attention from the matters of studying in hand.

Pres. Knapp is a man of broad and liberal views, strongly democratic in his consideration of the equality of the privileges which should be accorded to the average American citizen in his pursuit of knowledge. It is eminently proper that in a state like Iowa, or any other of the American states, that institutions maintained by the care of the general public should be open to all alike; and that no caste, class or conditions of wealth, or social, political or religious standing should be either favored, or ignored, so far as the privileges of that institution go.

The Editor looked into the barns, sheds, some of the workshops, and the library; but Saturday being a holiday there was not opportunity to see all. He took several walks through the grounds, inspected the dairy, and so far as casual glances permitted formed conclusions in regard to the chances a student would have to gain the knowledge of "how to do things," from the methods taught in the College.

The rules are fair, though strict; the methods of instruction seem to have been well adapted to the ends sought, and the conclusions of the Editor were favorable to the institution under its present management. A change in its president is thought to be impending, but with the causes which are conspiring to that end the Editor has nothing to do as a visitor. The President and Faculty treated the Editor pleasantly and cordially, the students were respectful, polite and cheerful. The hospitality of the Farm-house was cordially extended by Prof. Knapp and his wife, and was accepted and enjoyed by the Editor.

The Editor met Hon. S. R. Willard of Fort Madison, Iowa, one of the Board of Directors, who was present on some committee work preparatory to a meeting of the Board to be held Tuesday, June 17th. An hour's chat with Mr. Willard and Prof. Knapp in the office and library of the latter gave an added zest to the visit.

It is possible that the Editor in his sermon Sunday afternoon may have infringed one of the rules of the institution. This rule states in substance that, as the object of the sermons to be delivered in the chapel of the College is for the purpose of leading the minds of the students to the claims and necessity of religion, it should be improper for any to either attack, or advocate and defend sectarian principles, or dogmas. The Editor had not read this rule, not having an opportunity, when the sermon was delivered; but made the gospel of Christ, as laid down in the New Testament, in its unchanging nature and unchanging principles and requirements a necessity to the proper development and growth of man's spiritual nature, to fit and prepare him for a home in the heavenly land; as were the rules and requirements of the sciences taught in the College in their completeness necessary to properly fit and prepare the student for his active life in the busy world. If it should so be that in his zeal for Christ as he understands him the Editor did transcend the bounds of the rule referred to, he desires to hereby make amends. He heard no word among students, or Professors disrespectful of either class; and was pleased, very much pleased with his visit to Ames.

With a pleasant "Good-by" from the Professor and his wife, a cordial "I wish you excellent success" to the Professor, the Editor left the College grounds for home the morning of the 16th, reaching home by the way of Des Moines, Osceola and Leon, stopping over at Davis City for four hours, in a pleasant visit with Bro. Ebenezer Robinson, and others, reaching home at eight o'clock, Tuesday evening, June 17th.

Correspondence.

MAGNOLIA PLANTATION,
Baldwin Co., Ala.,
June 12th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Since about the first of April, I have been laboring in Baldwin county. Brother Cato has been with me part of the time. Our labors have been blessed by the addition of four to the church in the immediate neighborhood of my home. An interest has been awakened in this neighborhood, which we hope will lead several more to obey the truth. The little handful of Saints, (only seven) are about to build a nice little church, and have promise of considerable help from friends and members of other churches. Any of the brethren who may feel like assisting us can send their mites to the treasurer of the building committee, Sr. Mary Leavens or F. P. Scarcliff, Lamberta, Baldwin Co., Alabama. I think the prospects for the work are brightening in this mission; but where is our beloved brother in charge, Bro. Montague? His associates, Bro. Cato and myself, would like to hear from him. His coming south is anxiously awaited by many who would love to see the dear old soldier once more. In hope,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

ELKHART, Anderson Co., Tex.,
June 11th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived here last Friday, and found all well and preparing for the conference which commenced the 7th. The conference passed off pleasantly and all seemed satisfied, though there was but a small attendance. I found old Bro. H. L. Thompson here, hale and hearty and ready for duty. He is president of the district, and although about sixty years of age, was just returning from an eight weeks' tour through the district, looking after its interest, and also to open up new places to declare the word. I began preaching the evening I arrived, and preached Saturday night, also twice on Sunday with good liberty, and I think with good effect upon some. When we came to the hall on Sunday morning where we were holding our meetings, there was a strange sight presented to our view. About two hundred yards from the hall, there was the body of a man hanging to a tree. He had been arrested the day before for attempting to commit a certain crime; and while in the hands of the officers was taken by about seventy-five men and hanged to a limb and left there until eleven o'clock on Sunday. It seemed a little strange to me, to be standing there preaching and at the same time could look out of the window and see the body of a man swinging to a limb.

I understand that Bro. H. C. Smith and Bays are on the road here. Hope to meet them soon. I expect to go south of here to preach on Saturday and Sunday and then east for a time. Then work my way west in time to meet the other brethren in Bell county by the 20th of July. There have been great floods here in this part of the state, which make the crops late. Some fear great sickness this summer and fall here. I ask the kind remembrance of all for us in the sunny south.

Yours in hope,
W. T. BOZARTH.

ADRIAN, Hancock Co., Ill.,
June 17th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—After my return home from Davis City, I was busy at manual labor for a little more than two days, when on the morning of May 17th, I left for Creston, Union county, Iowa. I had visited this region of country last March, preaching six times in the Center School-house, four and a half miles south-east of Creston, and three times in the city. Two of these three discourses were delivered in the Christian Church, and one in the M. E. Church. So far as I know, this was the first preaching done by our people in Creston, and I trust the time will soon come when the people of that town will be made more fully acquainted with the gospel of Christ. On my last visit I remained in Union county from May 17th till June 2d. Spoke eight times in the Center Schoolhouse, and four times in the Oak Dale, seven miles north-east of Creston. Baptized two, and left others believing. There is a large uncultivated field in Union county, and, as in other places, courage, fortitude, care, patience, and sacrifice, all of which are results of faith in God, will be required in order to properly do the work.

On June 2d, I went to Prescott, Adams county, Iowa, a new place, and for the first time met Bro. James M. Duncan and family. Bro. Duncan lives three and a half miles west of Prescott and four and a half miles north-east of Corning, same county. Corning is his post office address. I spoke Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in a school-house near Bro. Duncan's, with good liberty, and to fair sized congregations. Preaching is needed in that region, and Bro. and Sr. Duncan will make any Elder welcome at their comfortable home, who will go there and do the Master's work.

June 5th, I left Prescott to attend the Nauvoo and String Prairie Conference, to be held at Rock Creek, Ill.; do necessary labor in Burlington and elsewhere, &c., &c. The conference was held on June 7th and 8th; and had it not been for the rain, and some other things, far more destructive than rain, it would have been a very pleasant affair. It is a fearful thing to lose, even in a degree, the true Spirit of the work. Darkness, doubts, unfounded suspicions, envy, malice and strife are sure to take its place. "How can ye believe who seek honor one of another, and seek not that honor which comes from God?"

The preaching was done, at the conference, by Bro. James McKiernan and the writer. Bro. McKiernan spoke on Saturday evening, and the spirit and sentiment of his discourse were excellent. Yesterday I returned here (the home of my father) from Burnside, where I preached on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, in the Christian Church. The attendance was very fair. I expect to be at Burlington next Sunday, if the Lord will; but for the past two weeks my health has been on the decline, and at present, I am suffering from a heavy cold in addition to my other troubles. Should there be no change for the better, I will be compelled to return home in a short time.

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

DELOIT, Iowa,
June 10th, 1884.

Joseph:—There is quite a pressure for mission work in this part of northern Iowa. It will, therefore, make it slow work in my getting to Lamoni; I hope you will not be gone from home when I do come. The anxiety of the Saints to see and hear what I have to say on the early rise of Mormonism, keeps me tolerably busy at work. The conference in the Galland's Grove district, has just closed. A great gathering of the people in attendance. I leave here to-morrow for River Sioux; and thence to the Magnolia conference, commencing next Saturday. The Saints at Sioux River and River Sioux are unwilling that I should leave them soon.

WILLIAM B. SMITH.

DES MOINES, Iowa,
June, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Much has been said on the Kingdom of God, and a good article has been written by Bro. Scott; but there seems to be some that differ upon some points. They say there is no king, and therefore can be no kingdom. Malachi says, in 1:14 "For I am a great king, saith the Lord of Hosts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen." Then read Psalms 97 and see if God is not the king of all the earth. The Lord God changes not; and the "God of heaven" was to "set up a kingdom," in "the days of these kings." Has that kingdom been set up? I say that it has, and that all that hear the gospel of the kingdom are called to repent and believe the same; and if they give heed, obey it by being baptized into Christ, put him on, and by this become "Heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ."

If we are not in the kingdom, then from this same standpoint, God and Christ are not in the kingdom. This proves too much. Paul says, "Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet"—the word meet means worthy to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light; and when we obey the gospel, we then receive the promise of eternal inheritance, which is the Holy Ghost, which is the "Earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession." What is the purchased possession? I say it is the earth. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." "But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." "The Lord knoweth the days of the upright, and their inheritance shall be forever." Matt. 5:5; Ps. 37:11-18.

But we can not inherit the earth now, for it is yet to be redeemed from the possession of the wicked or the children of the wicked one, as he is the prince of the air; and although it has been purchased for us, and cost Christ's blood, and we that are called of God are now lifting up an "ensign on the mountains," and are blowing the gospel trumpet of the kingdom of God; yet we can not inherit that kingdom. But does that prove that we are not in the kingdom? It says, "flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God," but does that mean that flesh and blood can not enter into the kingdom of God? I think that by living in harmony with nature and the Spirit, we can have our names recorded in the Church Recorder's books, and in this way our names will be written in heaven; hence the kingdom of God can be upon the earth, and the people not see it; for "Except a man is born again, he can not see the kingdom of God." Can not understand what it is like, although it may be made plain by comparing the word of God. The law is the gospel of that kingdom, which is the "law of the Spirit of life," which makes us free from the law of sin and of death, and in obedience we are delivered from the power of darkness, and are translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son. (Col. 1:13).

"This day the voice of battle,
The next the victor's song."

But we must first prove faithful; and by this prove ourselves, as his works are before him, but his reward is with him. The "righteous shall never be removed, but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth." "As the whirlwind passeth, so is the wicked no more; but the righteous is an everlasting foundation." (Prov. 25:30). The Lord says to Job, "Hast thou counted the mornings since thy days, and caused the day spring to know his place; that it might take hold of the ends of the earth, that the wicked might be taken out of it?" "When the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it." "When the Lord shall be revealed from heaven, with flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God." Who are they that deny the gospel to be the power of God. "Let him that reads understand, and count the number of his name; for it is the name of a man, and his number is six hundred three score and six."

GRAHAM, Young Co., Tex.,
June 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—There is a better prospect for a good work to be done in this part of the country than I have ever seen, since I became acquainted with the latter day work. I have been here one week and have invitations to six or eight new places; besides three places where there has been preaching by others that have been here before me. Notwithstanding all this, I will wait until I see them baptized before I count the members.

Yours in Christ,
A. J. CATO.

WINAMAC, Indiana,
June 14th, 1884.

Editor Herald:—I am still striving to spread the gospel. There are calls in all directions for preaching. I am holding meetings every four weeks. We are going to have a two days' meeting in our school-house, (which is called the Hiland School-house), beginning on the 28th of June. Brother Earl will assist me.

Yours in gospel bonds,
L. B. SCOTT.

DOW CITY, Iowa, June 12th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—As I often hear my brethren say that the endowments and garments introduced by Lyman Wight were the same as those introduced by Brigham Young, I wish to state that they were not. And, as I was considered worthy by both these men to receive my endowments, I consider myself a competent witness, and will proceed to tell the difference as I understand it. Both claimed authority to seal men and women together for time and eternity; in this they were alike. Lyman Wight gave no endowments of secresy. The washing of feet, anointing with oil, ordaining kings, queens, and priests, are the sum and substance of Lyman's endowments. The garment and robe he introduced, was a loose frock, made according to the pattern of one worn by Moroni when he first appeared to Joseph Smith, as given in his history. This was not worn only on certain occasions. No marks indicating the priesthood were on this garment. Brigham's garment was a tight garment, made like drawers with sleeves and body connected, with marks on the knee and breast. This was to be worn always. Our instructions were even in washing of the body to keep one leg in the garment. In Brigham's endowments both feet and body were washed and anointed with oil; but he did not ordain kings and priests and queens, as did Lyman. He brought all under oath and covenant to avenge the blood of the prophets, and gave us a name we would be called forth from the grave by. This is about the extent of his endowment, with the addition of a second endowment, and I am a witness of this also; which was an anointing and setting apart for the resurrection and power conferred to rise from the dead, and to raise others. Saints, you see no similarity between the endowments of these men. The robe that Lyman introduced was an entire covering of linen, with the exception of head, hands and feet; added to this he had an apron, imitating the one made by Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden; but no mark. This we were to be laid away in after death, and be worn when sealed for eternity. Brigham's robe was the same as Lyman's with the exception of the marks of the priesthood, and used for the same purpose, hence we see some similarity in the robes of these two men—allike only the marks. This ends the history I set out to make.

Now let me place myself on record concerning the Mountain Meadow Massacre. I have been asked the question a number of times, "Were you in that massacre?" Those asking the question, seeing the name of John Hawley in John D. Lee's History, thinking that he made a mistake when he said, "This John Hawley went to Indian Territory, and died there." And, as I lived in southern Utah at the time of this massacre, they have thought that I must be the man. Now, let me say to all, I was not the John Hawley that Lee speaks of; neither was I there, nor do I know any thing of how it was conducted only from hearsay. Let me relate a few things that took place at the time, or after the massacre. Those that went to the Mountain Meadows, and as I suppose took part in the killing, (this is supposition only upon my part), on their return, three of the men spoke with a great deal of zeal, and declared to us that the dividing line was then drawn between Jew and Gentile, and all must die that passed through the Territory who were not of our faith. The work of death they applauded very much. As I had just returned from Salt Lake City with my family, they called upon me to talk; and I continued the subject of death; and proclaimed with as much zeal against the work of death (done by them as I then supposed) as they did for it. For this they took me to task, but all in secret; but as I had a balance of power in their meeting, the vote stood in favor of my living. However, they sent a delegate to inform me that I must be more on my guard in what I said, and the man interrogated me thus: "Bro. John, you came very near losing your life for what you said yesterday; and I have been sent to tell you to be more on your guard." I remember very well the answer I gave him, and that was this: "Bro. Young, (Wm. Young was the man), I don't know but I am as well prepared to die now as ever I will be; and if you take my life for proclaiming against that deed of murder, you will kill an innocent man; but you may tell your brethren that I still stand on what I said." That day brought Brigham's message to the people, concerning the company just killed; but too late to do them any good. It read as follows: "Let them pass, and treat them as you would like to be treated were you passing through their own land." When this was read, I had friends. This testimony I must meet some time.

JOHN HAWLEY.

CHESTER, Illinois, June 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Here in the old Chester Branch we are rejoicing very much since Bro. Beaird of St. Louis came down among us and baptized seven, and organized us into a branch of twelve members. We hold our meetings regularly, and enjoy the Spirit. The outsiders pay but little attention to us, and we realize that "a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country." If any want a "good Elder," let them send for Bro. Beaird. He is an earnest faithful worker. May the Lord bless him, and crown him with many sheaves is the prayer of each member of this branch.

Yours in bonds,

JASPER M. TOUSLEY.

ATLANTIC, Iowa, June 17th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We came to Atlantic last October, and are the only Latter Day Saints living in or any where near the town. There are plenty of churches some of which I have attended pretty regularly, and often hear good latter day sermons preached—but I guess it would not do to let them know it. I attended the M. E. Church all winter. Some of the sisters came to us wanting us to unite with their church; but I told them I did not see as it would make us any better; for I considered myself and family, children of God. We had obeyed the gospel, and felt ourselves brothers and sisters to every child of God; for we were all striving to enter into the one rest. A few days ago I was present at a funeral sermon preached by one of the M. E. brethren, and after the sermon was over and we were on the road to the cemetery, it so happened that it was my lot to be placed in the carriage that contained the preacher, and some of his members. The preacher imagined that I was a sister in their church, so he asked me if I was. I told him that I was a Latter Day Saint. He seemed wonder struck for a few moments and then he began to ask questions about our belief, and what the difference was between the Mormons at Salt Lake and those in this part of the world. I said to him: "Brother, is it possible you do not know the difference between them, when just a short time ago those brethren from our church went to Washington City and there it was made known which was the true church." He studied a few moments and then said: "O, yes, I do remember about it." And then he mentioned one or two of their names. He then said he would like to know what their belief was; and in my poor way I told him as well as I could. Then he said to me: "Why in the name of the world don't you join our church." I told him about the same that I told the first sister a short time before, so our conversation was brought to a close, for we were nearing the cemetery, where we were to plant the little bud that had been taken away from parents so soon. So it is, our faith is not hard to look into, or our doctrine rather, if one is but honest in heart, and is a seeker after God's truths, for he will lay hold of the eternal truth for it is mighty and will prevail.

My husband and myself would be glad indeed if there could be a good Elder sent to our town; for if an able speaker could come here and preach for a week or two, and open up the way, we think there might be a great deal of good done here. But it must be a man that knows how to approach the people, and thoroughly understands the doctrine. We will hope on, and pray on that there may a man of God be sent to this town, to bring this people to an understanding of the word of the living and true God. Pray for us brother, for we are alone in our faith, but God is with us, so we need not fear what man can do to us. Praying for the welfare of Zion, your sister in the one hope,

HARRIET HUDSPETH.

CLINTON, IOWA,

June 13th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I came here on the 5th, and attended the conference at this place, which passed off Saturday and Sunday. We had a very enjoyable time. Business was transacted with a good spirit, while a good degree of the divine unction was with us during all of our spiritual exercises. I had the pleasure of baptizing two on Tuesday the 10th, two daughters of Bro. and Sr. Russel of Inland, Iowa. I continued services here until last night. I think more here will obey soon. I return home from here.

Yours in Christ,

H. C. BRONSON.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

June 13th.—Prince Hohenlohe, the German Ambassador at Paris, declares that public feeling in Germany continues to be envenomed against France by constant provocation by the French press.

A new Belgian Ministry has been formed under Jules Malon as Minister of foreign affairs.

Gen. Booth, the head of the Salvation Army, is treating for the purchase of Palf's castle and estate in Wales for a family residence. Gen. Booth is said to be making large profits as leader of the Salvation Army.

The Cabinets at Vienna and St Petersburg have joined the Berlin Cabinet for the purpose of intervening between Serbia and Bulgaria on a definite settlement of the frontier difficulties. Orders have been sent to Sophia and Belgrade to disarm their frontier posts.

In the British House of Commons last evening Woodall's amendment to the franchise bill in favor of female suffrage was rejected by a vote of 271 to 135. Gladstone stated, during the course of the debate, that if the amendment was adopted the Government would not be answerable for the passage of the bill.

June 14th.—English public opinion is opposed to permitting France having control with England over Egyptian affairs. French public opinion, on the contrary, is dissatisfied that France has not greater influence in these matters. Gladstone's supremacy is menaced on account of his concessions, Ferry's on account of his lack of aggressiveness.

There seems to be no doubt that Berber has been captured by the Mahdi's followers, and that the garrison and the male able bodied citizens who were opposed to the Mahdi have been put to the sword. The Pall Mall Gazette, the Radical Jingo organ, commenting on the affair, says: "We must now add 3,500 more to the thousands already butchered to make a holiday for Gladstonian principles. Humanity," it adds, "revolts at such a state of things. Somehow or other a stop should be put to it."

The following act is now in force: "Be it enacted by the Senates and House of representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the rate of postage on newspaper and periodical publications of the second class when sent by others than the publisher or news agent, shall be one cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, and shall be fully prepaid by postage stamps affixed to said matter. Approved June 9th, 1884. Hereafter Postmasters will receive for mailing newspapers and periodical publications of the second class, when sent by other than the publisher or news agent, at the rate of one cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof.

June 15th.—A large meeting of Orangemen was held at Belfast, Ireland. Resolutions were adopted denouncing Earl Spencer and warning him not to attempt to carry out his intention of visiting Ulster.

Agents of the Spanish and Italian Government have advised the sultan of Morocco to refuse to grant the concessions demanded by France, and are urging him not to sign the treaty making these concessions.

Much attention is attracted by the reception of the Boer delegates at Berlin. The German Emperor was gracious, Bismarck talked Plattdeutsch with them, and wherever they go the sentries present arms. England is annoyed because the delegates have been openly complimented on defeating her, and Holland is rendered still more uneasy. The African Dutch were styled "people of the same race as the German," and the interpretation is that Bismarck was hinting designs against the independence of the Dutch in Europe. Such threats are the more formidable at a time when the last male heir of the Dutch throne is supposed to be dying.

Seven men were executed Saturday at Jerez, Mexico, for a black Hand Socialist outrage. Five others were committed to imprisonment for life.

June 16th.—Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice, Under Foreign Secretary, stated in the British Commons yesterday that correspondence has been going on since May, 1882, between the British and United States Government in relation to the dynamite plots.

An explosion occurred in South London this morning which was at first attributed to dynamite fiends, but which is said to have been the result of experiments made by an electrician for scientific purposes in his private house. The electrician has been arrested, and will be held until the matter is fully investigated.

The International African Association, which has formally placed itself at the disposal of the German Government, has received the following reply from Prince Bismarck: "The German Government is by no means disinclined to enter into permanent treaty relations with the association, but must first be exactly informed concerning the legal and financial status of the association."

The Mahdi has written a letter in which he appoints his Ameer as Governor of Dongola. He threatens to annihilate any Turkish force that is sent to the Soudan. The Governor of Dongola has sent the letter to Nubar Pasha, the Egyptian Premier. Admiral Hewett has arrived from his mission to the King of Abyssinia. Two companies of engineers will leave Chatham immediately for Egypt. The Governor of Massawat telegraphs that the result of Admiral Hewett's mission to the Abyssinian King John has been that the latter has undertaken to relieve Kassala and that the Gallabas tribe has assembled at Adowa for that purpose. Orders have been given to facilitate the retreat of the Dongola garrison. The fall of Berber caused great excitement at Assouan, but the patrolling of the gunboats tends to reassure the natives. It is believed in official circles that Khartoum is safe. Advices from Berber state that Hussion Pasha Kalifa, Governor of Berber, fell wounded, and would have been killed had not a son of Hassan Pasha, a brother of Mohammed, rushed to the rescue, and held a rebel flag over him until the fight was finished. Hassan and Mohammed had been in the rebel camp some time, dressed as dervishers. The rebels are within a week's march of Dongola and Korosko. The feast of Ramadan gives a month's delay, after which nothing can prevent the rebels seizing any point south of Assiout, which is within twelve hours' march of Cairo.

A party of engineers is ordered from England to Egypt at once to survey the desert between Saukin and Berber, with a view of the construction of a railway.

In consequence of the threats of the dynamiters a cordon of armed watchmen has been placed around Eaton Hall, the Duke of Westminster's residence in Chester. Between 6 o'clock in the evening, and six in the morning hereafter only the main entrance to the police station will be used. A constable will be kept on special duty all the time at the entrance.

Emigrant passenger rates have been reduced on all the German and English transatlantic steamship lines to $15. The National Line, it is reported, is selling tickets for $14.

Gerald Thomas Tulley, an absconding cashier of a Preston (England) bank, has been arrested in New York City, and is held for extradition on a charge of forgery.

In Southern New Jersey this morning the thermometer fell to 38°. There were frosts in some places, and considerable damage was done to tender crops.

June 17.—Through the efforts of Russia, Austria, and Germany peace has been restored between Bulgaria and Servia.

Earl Spencer, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, has started for Belfast. A meeting has been called by the Orangemen to protest against the order regarding public demonstrations. There is great excitement in Belfast. The absence of decorations is generally remarked. On one building is a union jack half-masted; another is suspended across the street through which Earl Spencer must pass, with the following words upon it: "Remember Newry and Rossmore." Four hundred extra police and a troop of lancers have arrived. Earl Spencer arrived this evening. There is great enthusiasm.

The Orangemen held a mass meeting at Belfast, Ireland, and bitterly protested against the late proclamation of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, forbidding Orange demonstrations, and favoring those of the Nationalists.

A railway is to be built from Suakin, Egypt, five miles inland.

A meeting to promulgate the doctrines of dynamite was held at No. 208 Blue Island avenue Chicago, Ill., last night. About one-third of those present were young women and another third were beardless youths, who went into paroxysms of applause whenever some particularly blood-thirsty statement was indulged in by the speakers. Mrs. O'Grady, who presided, presented a petition, or, as she called it, a demand upon President Arthur to release Dr. Gallagher, a convicted dynamiter now serving his sentence in an English prison, although the means to that end were not clear. M. N. O'Connor sang a dynamite song, in which the refrain was the killing of Englishmen by the wearers of the shamrock. He was followed by Mr. Crow, who was introduced as a man who had subscribed $50 to the cause. He said the excitement in England now showed what could be done with a few thousand dollars. Only six men employed by Patrick Ford were engaged in London now. The speaker criticised the rashness of the dynamiters in destroying police stations when it would be much safer to blow up factories. With $100,000, said he, London could be burned to its suburbs. He also advocated the destruction of merchant vessels containing a large number of women and children, instead of men-of-war, as being safer and just as efficacious. Capt. Casey held that Lord Coleridge ought to have been shot while in this country. He was in favor of killing eminent Englishmen who came over. These are fair specimens of three hours' incessant talk.

Ben Butler has accepted the nomination of the National Greenback Convention which met in Indianapolis recently. He indorses the purposes of the Greenbackers.

Considerable alarm exists on the Pacific Slope over the increased immigration from China. Last Sunday the steamer Tokio brought 1,092 Celestials to San Francisco. Of these 200 were ticketed for Victoria but it is altogether probable that they will remain in the United States. The Chinese immigration so far this year exceeds by 400 the total immigration for the whole year of 1883. It is believed that a very large number have been admitted on fraudulent certificates, while many afflicted with the smallpox and other diseases have been allowed, to land through lack of vigilance on the part of the custom-house officers. The Tokio, for instance, had landed 500 immigrants when a child suffering from small-pox was found hidden away in the vessel.

June 18.—At the election just held in Bulgaria the Radical-Liberals were everywhere victorious. There was some rioting.

Several factories at Warsaw and other manufacturing centres of Poland have been searched, and many workmen have been arrested on the charge of being Anarchists.

An English artillery regiment mutinied at Glin, near Limerick, Ireland, yesterday, and made a savage attack on the townspeople injuring several of them. Some arrests were made.

The Belgian Senate has been dissolved. It had a Liberal majority. The recent elections for members of the constituent Assembly resulted in a victory for the Clericals. It is probable that the Senatorial elections, which will take place July 8, will also result in a Clerical triumph.

Frederick William, the Crown Prince of Germany, has been appointed President, and Bismarck Vice-President, of the new Prussian Council of State, consisting of seventy-one members, including forty-two State officials, three professional men, six clergymen, ten landlords, and six merchants.

It is stated in Berlin that Russia has decided to appoint a special military council, to be presided over by the Grand Duke Nicholas, heir-apparent to the throne, who recently became of age, to take measures to prevent the spread of Socialism in the Russian army, but that the Grand Duke proposed such rigorous measures that even the Chief of Police deprecated the adoption thereof.

The steamship America made the trip from New York to Queenstown, Eng., in six days and fourteen hours, beating the best previous record by two hours.

Bishop Simpson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at Philadelphia yesterday, after a lingering illness. He would have completed his 73d year Saturday.

The Utah bill, in a slightly amended form, passed the Senate yesterday by a vote of 23 to 15. The fifteen negative votes were all cast by Democrats.

Philip Emery, a member of the Salvation Army who became crazed through religious excitement, drowned himself at Guelph, Ont., yesterday.

A large force is now at work pushing up the Washington monument to completion. A correspondent says that it is now higher than the Church of St. Peter's at Rome and before Christmas it will be forty feet nearer the clouds than any known structure. The marble blocks of which it is constructed, which cost about $40 each as they come from the quarries, "rough ashlers," and $20 more when dressed, are brought from the stonecutters' shops on trucks into the elevator, which occupies the interior of the monument. Each stone weighs about three tons, and the elevator can easily accommodate two of them. "The man at the wheel" consumes seven or eight minutes in hoisting them. On reaching the top, the crane, an arm of the derrick, takes hold of each stone, and, by a little guiding, the immense weight is as easily placed in position as if it were a brick. The corner-stones, are always set first. The two stonemasons have each four masons waiting on them and one cement man for the two. These eleven men make up the complement working each day on the top, and who, if seen at all by people below them, look about the size of infants.

June 19th.—Lord Hartington stated in the British Commons that the Government of which he is a member was convinced that the force of British and Egyptian soldiers in Upper Egypt was capable of withstanding any invading force that the Mahdi could send against them. He said the Egyptian soldiers and the British were not under the same command and there was no concert of action between them.

The King of Cambodia has transferred the administration of his Kingdom to the French Governors of Saigon. The Departments of Justice, Finance, Customs, Public Works, and the Army have been placed under French control. The abolition of slavery follows. A provisional civil list of 300,000 piastres has been granted the King, and ample allowances to the other members of the royal family. A treaty embodying the foregoing has been concluded, subject to the ratification of President Grevy.

The Porte is not reconciled to the outlook of affairs in Egypt. It has addressed a circular to the Powers insisting that England's self-imposed task of restoring order in Egypt is so far completed that the army of occupation ought to be withdrawn. The moral authority and prestige of the Sultan is amply sufficient, it says, to insure internal tranquillity. If, however, the Powers are of the opinion that an extraneous military force is necessary, such force might be supplied by the Sultan alone, or in conjunction with England, France, Italy, and Spain.

There was an exchange of shots to-day at Suakin. The Governor of Dongola asks reinforcements. He states that he will not evacuate Dongola before the feast of Ramadan. The report that Kassala has fallen is doubted in military circles. Col. Wood has been instructed to echelon the whole Egyptian army between Assouan and Wada-Halfa by the end of the present month. Several battalions of English infantry will proceed to Assouan, where an entrenched camp is being constructed.

There was a riot at Krivoroge, Russia, yesterday, in which the houses of many Jews were severely wrecked. The riots were suppressed by the military.

The Governor of Berber had in his possession $80,000 of Government money. It is rumored the Governor was neither wounded nor taken prisoner. Rebels have captured the Town of Ghia, near the Abyssinian frontier. They also captured six guns, 300 of the garrison, and 700 camels.

Heavy rains in Northern Mexico have interrupted railroad travel. At the same time there are complaints of drouth around the Mexican Capital.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

June 13th.—A water-spout occurred in Akulrig, Russian Turkestan, June 2d. The river was overflowed, seventy houses were destroyed, and forty persons drowned.

The lake steamer Pearl ran on the rocks at White Rock, on Lake Huron, Thursday night. The cargo has been thrown overboard. It is feared the vessel will prove a total loss.

Near Camden, Pa., an excursion train ran into an accommodation train, killing seven men immediately, and injuring a score of others.

June 14th.—Two tanks of the oil works of Love & Fleming, at Green Point, N. Y., were burned yesterday; also the sheds and docks of the company. The loss is placed at $50,000.

A heavy gale on Lake Erie caused great damage to shipping, and much delay also.

June 16th.—Loss by fire at Allegheny City, Pa., $7,000. Tell City, Ind., $60,000. Luther, Mich., $10,000. Sioux City, Ia., $38,500. Plaquemine, La., $20,000.

Advices from Greenland state that the brig Elesia was crushed by ice in the vicinity of that island recently, and ten men perished.

Two persons were killed and considerable property destroyed at Butler, Pa., by the explosion of a boiler used in pumping an oil well.

June 17th.—The entire business part of the town of Pinos Altos, Mexico, was destroyed by fire May 29th. The loss is stated to be $300,000, and no insurance. Considerable distress existed among the inhabitants for want of food.

Mrs. John Roth escaped from a burning building at Erie, Pa., yesterday morning. She rushed back to get her clothing and was burned to death. Loss by fire at Lafayette, Ind., Hominy Mills, $45,000. Galveston, Tex., $10,000. Athens, Pa., $102,000. Vevay, Ind., $10,000. Charlevoix, Mich., $5,000.

By the premature explosion of a blast two Americans and twelve Mexican laborers were killed on the Tampico Branch of the Mexican Central Railroad recently.

June 18.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., yesterday, $30,000.

While the whaler Chieftain was fishing off the coast of Greenland four boats were dispatched in pursuit of a school of whales. A dense fog arose and the crew were unable to find the ship. They were only supplied with two days' provisions and water. They endeavored to reach Iceland, 200 miles distant. A tempest arose and the boats were separated. The cold was intense. One boat reached land after eight days at sea. The men were in an emaciated and thoroughly exhausted condition, their only nourishment being from sucking ice. It is feared the other three boats, containing fifteen men, are lost. Only seven men were left on board the Chieftain, and great anxiety is felt for her fate.

A passenger train on the New Brunswick Railroad was thrown off the track near St. John's, N. B., this morning. The engineer and fireman were badly scalded and a number of passengers were slightly injured. Seven cars were wrecked.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Two of the leading London banking-houses have issued a new Canadian loan of $25,000,000 at 3½ per cent. The minimum price is 91.

Of clearing-house certificates aggregating $24,000,000 issued during the recent financial flurry in New York $12,000,000 have been already canceled.

The Vulcan Powder Manufacturing Company of Calasqua, Pa., has accepted $75,000 from the Dupont Powder Company for suspending work for one year. There appears to be a monopoly in the powder manufacturing business.

At Connellsville, Pa., 150 English and Irish miners employed by a coal-mining firm refused to work because the firm had decided to employ Hungarian miners.

Official reports of the crops in Michigan indicate that the harvest will be nearly up to the average as far as wheat, corn, clover, and grass are concerned.

Heavy rains are doing immense damage to crops in California.

Near Portland, Oregon, cut-worms are destroying the crops.

Three thousand employees of the worsted mills at Bradford, England, struck for higher wages. There is great disorder, and the windows of the mills were smashed. The stonemasons of Bradford also struck.

The Indian Government has decided to procure boring-machinery, owing to the discovery of oil-bearing strata in Sibi, and to develop the resources of that region. The discovery took place at Sibi, near Quetta, in the extreme north-west of India. It will have an important bearing, it is thought, on the industrial development of India and in the solution of the Central Asian question. The discovery of a store of mineral wealth along the line of the railways which the Indian Government has decided to construct toward Candahar will cause an influx of labor from India into Southern Afghanistan and foster intercourse between the two countries, the political importance of which it will be difficult to overrate.

These new discoveries will open up a lively opposition to the Russian wells at Baku. On the shores of the Caspian Sea there are vast deposits of petroleum, and these, though they have scarcely yet been opened, already amount to one-sixth of the American production. The oil-bearing strata stretch from Baku, past the Island of Tchelikien, 300 miles across the Caspian, through the great steppes of Turkestan, until they are lost close to the Himalayas. The accounts of this district given by the late Mr. O'Donovan in his wonderful ride to Merv, by Mr. Marvin, Col. Stewart, Mr. Arthur Arnold, and others, have made the district famous. There are 400 wells of oil in the small explored area. Around it the hamlet of Baku has become a city of 30,000 inhabitants. The price of petroleum at these wells is less than that of water. The crude oil has been selling at eight cents per barrel of forty gallons. Still all this resource of petroleum is worth little if it cannot be purified cheaply and be transported economically. This difficulty has been solved by the ability and energy of Mr. Ludwig Nobel, a practical engineer. He is of Swedish extraction, and has become the Russian oil king. Mr. Nobel has built steam fleets entirely for the quick transport of the finished oil, and these steamers are propelled by the refuse of the distillation. The refined oils pass by pipes to the end of a jetty, and are pumped directly into the holds. These ships when they reach harbor pump the petroleum into specially-constructed railway vans or reservoirs, twenty-five of which form a train. When this arrives at its destination the petroleum is again pumped out into distributing tanks, of which there are many of varying capacity throughout Russia.

In this way American petroleum has been almost driven out of Russia, while Caucasian petroleum has to a great extent taken its place. This would not affect the rest of Europe greatly were it not that the Russian oil king is already pouring petroleum through the Baltic into Germany, and he is preparing to flood the Mediterranean and India through the Black Sea by the railway connecting Baku with Batoum, or to speak more generally, the Caspian with the Black Sea. If these ventures have a commercial success there is undoubtedly petroleum in the Caucasian lands sufficient to supply the world with that commodity for a prolonged period of its history.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade says: 'There have been scanty offerings of English wheat. The trade in foreign wheat offstands is not improved. Values are against sellers. At Liverpool American red wheats have receded one penny. Maize is cheaper at London and dearer at Liverpool. Wheat cargoes off coast again received some attention from continental buyers. There were two arrivals and six sales. Four cargoes were withdrawn. The trade in wheat cargoes on passage and for shipment is against sellers with the advent of fine weather. Sales of English wheat during the week, 46,600 quarters at 37 shillings and 4 pence, against 44,364 quarters at 42 shillings and 9 pence the corresponding week last year.

The decrease in the aggregate clearances of the twenty-five leading clearing-houses of the United States in the last week, as compared with the aggregate for the corresponding week last year, was 23.1 per cent. Outside of New York the decrease was 10.9.

C Tully & Co., shipowners, of Newcastle, England, have failed for £55,609.

June 17th.—The manufacturer's Bank of Milwaukee suspended payment. The liabilities are placed at $400,000.

Nearly 125 miles of railroad were constructed in the United States last week, making the mileage completed so far this year 1,032.

The wheat crop in the vicinity of Nashville, Ind., is rapidly approaching maturity, and so far advanced is it that little danger is apprehended of the ravages of the Hessian fly. The heads are large and filling quite satisfactorily, and from present indications the harvest will begin there about July 1st. Corn is doing nicely, and reports of damage inflicted by the cut-worm and bad weather have been exaggerated. Large quantities of wool have been marketed this month, and the crop in Wabash County is heavier than for several years.

The reports from the wheat and corn fields near Lafayette, Ind., are such as to justify the belief that Tippecanoe County will this year have a very large yield. Here and there are reports that the fly is stinging the wheat and doing some damage, but the general report is that everything is most encouraging. Harvesting will begin in some parts of the county by the 28th or 30th of June.

On the whole the prospects for crops near Watertown, Wis., are not as flattering as appearances indicated ten days ago. The red winter wheat is heading out and stands well, while the white winter seems quite backward. Spring wheat generally, as well as most of the barley, is doing poorly at present, although there are some excellent pieces of both, but the fields are suffering for want of rain. Corn started well, and for years there has not been a season when so little of the seed missed coming up, but the crop is growing scarcely any just now on account of the continued dry weather and cold nights. Oats look well and give promise of an abundant crop. Clover is short and unusually late about blossoming. Meadows and marshes indicate a very heavy yield of grass. Fruit of all kinds continues promising, the late frosts apparently doing no damage therabouts.

Our wheat harvest is ready and waiting on the binders, says a dispatch from Nashville Tenn., but incessant rains for the last two weeks have seriously interfered with all farm work stopping the cultivation of corn just at a time that it needed work most, and now weedy fields and harvest are both pressing our farmers, and still it rains, with no immediate prospect of holding up. Much of the wheat on strong land has fallen, and during the two weeks we have not had enough sunshine to raise it up, and the result must be much mildewed and damaged grain. Our prospect was flattering, and with dry weather would still be good, but another week's rain will seriously injure everything.

The farmers are all haying near Holland, Mich., and never had finer weather for it than at present. Since last week Monday no rains have fallen, with hot weather during the day and cold nights without any dew, so that it is not called very favorable corn weather; still corn is doing very well where the cut-worm has not injured it. Wheat reports are all favorable so far. Oats promise to be very heavy. The apple crop promises an abundance. Potatoes are growing fast, and some of the early varieties are in blossom. Strawberries are in the market and sell at from 10 to 12 cents per quart.

Reports from a dozen points near Hot Springs, Ark., represent a gratifying condition of cotton and the cereals. One or two localities complain of the insufficiency of rain, but otherwise the prospects are very good. The yield of wheat promises to be large and satisfactory. Harvesting will begin in a few days. The great fruit interests along the Iron Mountain route were never in a better way, and the exportation of peaches is very heavy. In the event of no drouth, which is greatly apprehended in some localities, this year's crop will be unusually abundant.

The weather has been dry and hot for the last week at Hennepin, Ill., and the cornfields seem to look healthy and the growth almost phenomenal. Rain is needed to add to the already rapid growth, as the ground in some localities is getting very hard. Much cultivating has been done during the last week, and weedy corn is a thing of the past.

The crop reports from all sections of Canada, promise an abundant harvest.

BOOK OF MORMON.

FOR more than fifty years, the Elders of latter day Israel have been preaching a restored gospel, and the divinity of the Book of Mormon; and from the beginning until now, men have opposed them. Many objections have been urged against the Book of Mormon, and many times the question has been asked, What use is it. We have no need for it. We have a Bible, and that is sufficient; and if it is true, where is your evidence in favor of it.

To the first I would answer, there is great need of the Book of Mormon. It supplies a want long felt. It gives a true, and the only correct history of the settlement of this continent, and origin of the American Indians. It contains the fulness of the gospel of Christ. It condemns polygamy and its kindred evils, and other false and corrupt teachings of the nineteenth century, and makes plain the way of salvation.

To the second question I answer: There is a cloud of witnesses in favor of the book's being divine. Peter speaks of the restoration of all things, "Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began."—Acts 3: 19-21. John saw an angel flying in the midst of heaven, that was to restore the gospel to the earth. The testimony of Joseph Smith and others is, that the angel did come and show them the plates containing the record of Joseph, from which the Book of Mormon was translated; and the church has all along, and does now bear witness, that the messenger did come, and that God has confirmed it by his Spirit revealing the truth to his Saints, and literally confirming the book by fulfilling the prophecies concerning it. The Prophet Amos says in 3: 7: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets." John while in vision on the Island of Patmos, saw the gospel restored to the earth. In 14: 6, he says: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people." The Book of Mormon contains the gospel, and when it came forth, was to be preached in all the world. The testimony of Joseph Smith, Martin Harris, David Whitmer, and others now is, that the angel did come, and with the gospel. The Psalmist speaks of a restoration, and truth springing out of the earth. The Book of Mormon was taken out of the earth. The angel spoken of above revealing it, and giving Joseph the Seer possession of it. In Ezekiel 37: 16-20, we read of two Sticks, or two books. "Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one Stick, and write upon it for Judah, and all the children of Israel his companions: then take another Stick, and write upon it for Joseph, the Stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions; And join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these? Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the Stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the Stick of Judah, and make them one Stick, and they shall be one in mine hand. And the Sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land."

The two Sticks referred to by Ezekiel literally mean books. In 2: 9, 10, he speaks of a roll of a book, written within and without. In the 37th he says Stick. The Book of Judah and the Book of Joseph were to be put in the hand of Ephraim. We have always understood the Bible was the Book of Judah, and the Book of Mormon claims to be the record of Joseph, and Ezekiel says the one he refers to was the Stick of Joseph, in the hand of Ephraim. Hosea said the "law written to Ephraim was accounted a strange thing." The Bible has never been counted a strange thing, but the Book of Mormon has been, from the time it came forth until now. In the 17th verse of the 37th chapter of Ezekiel, he says they were to be joined one to another, "and they shall become one in thine hand." And when the people should ask what was meant by, that Ephraim was to say, "for they were to be in his hand." Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land. And will make then one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel."—Ezek. 37: 21, 22. In this the Lord is to prove the divinity of the two books by gathering Israel; and he offers this as positive proof that the record of Joseph was in the hand of Ephraim.

I believe it always has been admitted by the church that Joseph the seer was of the lineage of Joseph, through the blood of Ephraim, and in searching the prophecies concerning the Book of Mormon and restoration of the gospel and Israel, we find the scepter was to be in the hand of Ephraim. In a revelation given to Joseph Smith as found in the appendix in the Doctrine and Covenants there is great light upon this subject, clearly showing the authority that was to gather Israel. I quote from the Revelation:

"And they who are in the north countries shall come in remembrance before the Lord, and their prophets shall hear his voice, and shall no longer stay themselves, and they shall smite the rocks, and the ice shall flow down at their presence. * * *

And they shall bring forth their rich treasures unto the children of Ephraim, my servants. * * * And there shall they fall down and be crowned with glory, even in Zion, by the hands of the servants of the Lord, even the children of Ephraim; * * * Behold, this is the blessing of the everlasting God upon the tribes of Israel, and the richer blessing upon the head of Ephraim and his fellows."

With this agrees the blessing put upon the head of Joseph, Deut. 33: 17. "His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns; with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth; and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh." Ephraim stands clearly revealed as God's chosen messenger, with the Stick of Judah and Joseph in his hand. He was authorized to say: "Thus saith the Lord, I will take the children of Israel from the nations whither they be gone," &c. And again: "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God, Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished." From the time the church was organized in 1830, until now, Joseph Smith and his co-laborers have been proclaiming the gathering of Israel to the land of Zion, "America," and Jerusalem. Joseph Smith, the great Seer, was the first man from the time the fathers fell asleep and the church went into the wilderness, to speak comfortable words to Jerusalem, and say Israel should be redeemed and gathered from the north countries and the islands of the sea. Joseph boldly proclaimed the restoration of the land of Palestine and of Israel, because the Lord had promised to confirm the word of his servant, and perform the counsel of his messengers. In the 85th Psalm, from the 8th verse to the last, we read of the promise in favor of the land of Palestine. We have intimations that the Lord was going to begin to gather Israel after the Book of Mormon was published.

"I will hear what God the Lord will speak, for he will speak peace unto his people and to his saints; but let them not turn again to folly. Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him; that glory may dwell in our land. Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other. Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven. Yea, the Lord shall give that which is good; and our land shall yield her increase. Righteousness shall go before him, and set us in the way of his steps." Here the Lord was going to speak to his people and to his saints. "But let them not turn to folly again," showed conclusively that his saints had once turned away, and after "truth shall spring out of the earth." Then the Psalmist says, the "Lord shall give that which is good, and our land shall yield her increase." Truth is the word of God. Jesus said, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth." The truth was to come out of the ground. The revealed will of God was to come down from heaven, and then the land was to yield its increase. In the 29th of Isaiah, the same identical thought is presented in connection with the sealed book, which was to come forth when the people were in a deep sleep, and when prophets and seers would be looked upon as something that had been, but would never be again. I quote from the 11th and 12th verses: "And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I can not, for it is sealed. And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this I pray thee; and he saith, I am not learned." The words of the book were presented to Professor Anthon, of New York, a very learned man, by Martin Harris, and Mr. Anthon answered as the prophet said he would do. The book was put into the hands of Joseph Smith, and he was asked to read it. The words of the book had been sent to one of the most profound linguists of the age, and he said he could not read a sealed book. What could the youthful, inexperienced Joseph do? Standing in the presence of that majestic and heavenly being, he, in the simplicity of his soul, pleaded ignorance, and could only say, I am unlearned. Then the Lord says in verse 14, "Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent men shall be hid."

Yes, but say the objectors to the Book of Mormon, Joseph Smith could easily have said all that, and yet nothing of the kind occur in fact.

The objector claims that Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, one or both, stole poor old Parson Spaulding's romance, and fixed it up to their notion, and made the Book of Mormon out of it. If they did they were a different class of thieves from any the world had ever known; for they came directly out before the world, and demanded a crucial examination of their work, by the law and the prophets. These men were not thieves. They were chosen messengers of God. Thieves don't challenge investigations. Honorable, fair dealing men do. Joseph Smith, from the time the Book of Mormon was published, until cruel and cowardly assassins slew him, proclaimed the book divine, and appealed to the prophets and Jehovah to confirm it.

After declaring that the sealed book was to come forth, in the 29th chapter, in the 17th verse Isaiah says: "Is it not yet a very little while and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest." The Lord said he would proceed to do a work in connection with this book, that would cause the wisdom of the wise men to perish. Ezekiel proclaimed a gathering immediately after the Sticks of Judah and Joseph were put into the hand of Ephraim. The Psalmist and Isaiah declare that God shall, after the book comes forth, turn the land of Palestine into a fruitful field. The Psalmist says: "And our land shall yield her increase." Isaiah says, "Lebanon shall be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest." Well might Joseph's work stand the test; for God was pledged, and Joseph knew that as God had promised, so would he fulfill. In the 23d chapter of Isaiah, the Lord tells of the despoiling of the land, and how long it should remain. "Until the spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest."

The unlearned boy had been made sufficiently wise to translate the Book of Mormon from the golden plates by the Spirit of the Lord being poured upon him from on high. The Lord has done that; Joseph Smith confidently believed God would send the early and the latter rains upon that parched land, and cause pools of living waters to spring forth in the parched and thirsty land, all of which has been done. Celebrated travelers and tourists have supplied the world with much valuable information concerning the Holy Land in the last fifty years. They tell us that first the dews began to fall along the foot hills of Judeah, causing vegetation to spring up; then came the early rain moderately, as foretold by Joel the prophet. Then the latter rain, until now "Lebanon is esteemed as a forest." The lovely valleys waving with golden grain, and here hills and mounds covered with the vine and olive. I here give an extract from the New York Sun of June 13th, 1883. The sketch is from Dr. Thomas' description of the Plain of Esdralion, written twenty three years ago.

"The Bedouins resort here with their flocks and camels, and the whole of Esdralion will be shortly abandoned to them. Their system of desolation is worked out in this fashion; they pitch their tents in the vicinity of a village, and in such numbers as to bid defiance to the inhabitants. Of course their camels and flocks roam over the unfenced plain, and devour a large part of the grain while growing; and when it is ripe they either steal it, or compel the farmers to present them with a heavy percentage, as the price of their protection. From the village itself chickens, eggs, sheep, cows, and even horses disappear, and can never be recovered. Many of the inhabitants soon move off to escape from their annoyances, and the village being thereby weakened, the Arabs provoke a quarrel, some one is wounded or killed, and the place is sacked and burned. The end aimed at is now reached, and the land belongs henceforth to the lawless Ishmaelite. In ten years there will not be an inhabited village in Esdralion, unless this wretched work is checked; and even now it is unsafe to traverse this noble plain in any direction, and every body goes armed and prepared to repel force by force. But a small portion of the plain is under cultivation. The lower end is not more than six miles wide, and most of it is too wet and flat for cultivation; but the Arabs delight in it, particularly in winter, and it is even now dotted over with their black tabernacles. Overgrown with thistles and long grass, it is the favorite haunt of the gazelle."

This was the condition of things on the beautiful Plain of Esdralion, twenty-three years ago. We look at the picture then and now.

"Your readers will be surprised to learn in the face of this description, that almost every acre of the plain of Esdralion is at this moment in the highest state of cultivation; that it is perfectly safe to ride across it unarmed, in any direction, as I can testify; that, so far from plundering and despoiling villages, the few Bedouins whose "black tabernacles" are now confined to the southern margin of the plain, have, in their turn, become the plundered and despoiled; for they are all reduced to the position of being subject to inexorable landlords, who charge them exorbitantly for the land which they occupy, and for which they pay in hard cash, under penalty of instant ejection, which is instantly enforced; so that the inhabitants of the villages with which the plain is now dotted, live in perfect security, though more than twenty years have elapsed since it was predicted that in ten years more there would not be an inhabited village in Esdralion. It looks to-day like a huge, green lake of waving wheat, with its village crowned mounds, rising from it like islands; and it presents one of the most striking pictures of luxuriant fertility, which it is possible to conceive."

When the Book of Mormon came to light, it was a parched and thirsty land. Now it is a fruitful field. It is now said by many that Jerusalem alone now contains over 40,000 Jews. Rev. Dr. Parker Camp, published an article in the M. E. Christian Advocate, in 1876, and then estimated the Jews in Jerusalem alone at between 30,000 and 40,000 to say nothing of the thousands in other parts of the Holy Land, that are building up the waste and decayed places. The Sun article I have quoted from, says in Galilee there are over one thousand Jews engaged in agricultural pursuits. Yet in the face of all these facts, we find divines on every hand, croaking away over the Spaulding story. Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon could have stolen the Spaulding story, and claimed, too, that it was the book the prophets had said should come; but they never could have forced the Almighty to open the windows of heaven, and send the early and latter rains upon the land of Palestine. Neither could they have caused the nations to cause Turkey to permit the Jews to return, and build Jerusalem. If these men were thieves, I claim God was in the conspiracy; for what the prophets declared should come to pass has been sufficiently fulfilled to confirm the Book of Mormon, and that Joseph Smith was ordained a prophet of God, to restore the gospel in this the "dispensation of the fulness of times," to bring forth the Stick of Joseph, and put it with the Stick of Judah, whether it was written on parchments or plates. The work was to be in the hand of Ephraim. He was to say that God would turn Lebanon into a fruitful field, and gather the outcasts of Israel, and the dispersed of Judah; and Ephraim was not to envy Judah; and Judah was not to vex Ephraim.

In face of all the stories afloat against the latter day work, Israel is gathering to Zion and Jerusalem, God's people have turned their faces to the goodly land, and the Lord is fulfilling his promise to his chosen servant. The Lord says: "I am the Lord, that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself. That frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad. That turneth wise men backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish. That confirmeth the word of his servant, and performeth the counsel of his messengers. That saith to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be inhabited, and to the cities of Judah, ye shall be built, and I will raise up the decayed places."—Isa. 44: 25, 26. God has surely frustrated the tokens of the liars in regard to the Spaulding story, and made their wisdom perish. Their seeming knowledge has made them appear as Gods. Divines have raged and the people have imagined a vain thing. But the glorious work moves on. Jacob's face no longer waxes pale, and all Israel is glad, and returning to Zion and Jerusalem with songs of everlasting joy.

HELP THE CHURCH.

How often the expression is made, "O how I wish I was able to do more for the church." There is a way to help the church, the cause and the Elders which can be done by the poorest in this world's goods, and yet it is one of the greatest helps there is. In branches let every member live in a way to make each other happy. Speak the truth. Live in peace with your neighbors. Set an example for the world, and be sure that example is in accordance with the law of righteousness. Every Elder knows how hard it is to go into a strange place to preach, and find that the few or many of the Saints in such place have been hunting or fishing on Sunday; and perhaps some have maimed or hurt some of his neighbor's cattle or hogs, or been guilty of creating hard feelings with his neighbor. Then for an Elder to go to a branch, or a fraction of a branch, or a neighborhood where one of the members lives, and ask that member to open meeting by prayer, and get refused. That is a bad showing for our good brother. It shows that he has not lived and walked before his neighbor in such a way as he ought, and is ashamed to play the hypocrite. Such things do neither help the cause nor the Elder that is to preach; but it brings a dark cloud over the Elder's mind, and intimates that he is about to preach what his disciples do not practice. To preach in such a neighborhood, is like swimming against a current. The way to help the cause, is to live in harmony with your unbelieving neighbors; when you call at the next door to our good brother, and inquire the way to John Doe's house, have our neighbor say, "Are you a friend to our neighbor John." "I am an Elder in the Reorganized Church of Christ." Yes, I see. I will go and show you over to his house. Our John is a splendid man, and a good neighbor. If all you Latter Day Saints were like him, the world would be better off than it is." That is the way to help the cause and the Elders. If our John has been prospered by the Lord in granary and flocks, and with plenty of cash, let him impart enough to take him (the Elder) to his next stopping place.

I was at Coalville on New Year's, and I did not do much good on account of bad weather; but when I left there, Sr. Allen, Sr. Teasdil, Bro. James Allen, Sen., Bro. James Jr., and Sr. James Allen, Jr., administered to not only my wants and necessities of the temporal kind; but also sent to my companion such things as made the heart glad. Such little kindnesses are encouraging to an Elders wife, while her husband is away preaching, and the woman at home doing the chores in the storms. The wife of an Elder can help the cause by a little exertion on her part.

Ten days yesterday, I have been at Lone Rock Branch, doing what I could for the cause; while my good wife stayed at home, keeping every thing about home in running order, doing chores and milking two cows. Such a woman can help the cause. I found some noble people up there. Bro. and Sr. Hayes and household help the cause, by precept and example, and by their means. With love to all that love the truth,

E. C. BROWN.

TO PROPHECY.

ALL are aware that a prophet is one who foretells future events, and that there are two classes, the true and the false. If there were no true there could be no false. If we had no legal coin we could have no spurious. The children of God had the gift of prophecy as early as the days of Moses, Abraham and Job, and if we carefully notice, we shall perceive a prophecy referring to Christ's bruising the serpent's head; which established the fact that Adam had the precious gift. There was only one way for the early father to know God's will and that was by direct inspiration, or revelation—no second hand work about it. Probably they were thus blessed when they offered their sacrifices. We readily understand by the scriptures that the leaders of God's chosen people were guided, all through their wanderings in the wilderness, the days of the judges, the days of the kings, the captivity, their returning and rebuilding Jerusalem by the spirit of prophecy, and when they did not follow this guide they fell into condemnation. After their return however, we do not see such prominent manifestations of the Spirit as before, and suppose as many of the choice blessings were withheld from their worship that this was not given in its fulness. The ark of the covenant was not in the second temple, the Urim and Thummin, the cloud of God's presence, neither was his voice heard there. But as prophecy had said, "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a law giver from between his feet till Shiloh come." we must believe that God had prophets on the earth up to the time that Jesus officiated as the Christ, or the Great High Priest. Thirty was the age at which they entered the priesthood, and although Jesus was God in man he subjected himself to the laws of his nation. Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist was endowed with the gift of prophecy, so was Elizabeth his wife, and Mary, the mother of Jesus; and still later we read of Philip's four daughters who prophesied. Many other cases might be mentioned if space would admit. Say many, "I know we read of such things in olden times but they were not intended for us—such things were to cease."

Yes we read in 1 Cor. 13-8: "Charity (the love of Christ) never faileth, but whether there be prophecies they shall fail, whether there be tongues they shall cease, whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away." We understand by this text that prophecy, tongues and knowledge were all destined to cease. But when? When he that is perfect is come. Not his first coming for he had come and gone before the Apostle wrote this scripture, so we must necessarily understand that they were designed to exist in the Church till the angel should declare that time should be no more, and Christ should come to claim his own. And they always would, had it not been for man's indulgence in sin and unbelief.

"Why don't they now?" asks the faint-hearted knowledge seeker. We will answer such by asking why were the above named blessings withheld from the ancient worship? They reply: "Because their obedience to the laws of worship had become a mere form, and God is a spirit, and must be worshipped in spirit and in truth." We agree with the fact that God must be worshipped in spirit and in truth and we also believe that our form of worship must be according to the pattern that was introduced by Christ and the apostles. All things being thus completed on our part the fire of God's love will come down into our hearts as it did into the hearts of the primitive Christians and like them we shall speak the words of God.

"We do not need such things now," says nearly the whole world. So said many in the early age, and stoutly fought against those glorious things without which the world would be in heathen darkness till God withheld them from the earth. That was the fulfillment of the prophecy of Amos concerning the spiritual famine. But, thank God, the famine is over and there is bread enough for all who will accept it.

Prophecy came not in olden time by the will of men, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. True prophecy can come in no other way; then if a man utters such a prophecy we must know without a doubt that he is a servant of the unchangeable God. Those who prophesy do not realize the fulness of their prophecies, more than other people who are equally humble. They are only the mouth-piece through which God delivers his messages to the children of men. If they could have revealed all the particulars concerning the advent of the Messiah many might have believed from observation, but as his was a spiritual kingdom, there were only a few temporal events revealed, which served ed as guide boards to travelers bound to that kingdom. It was only the faithful, such as Simeon and Anna, that were benefited by them. So to-day it is only those who have obeyed the ordinances of the gospel and are faithful, that can receive and understand the fulness of those blessed, gifts. We need to be guided by the Spirit to-day just as much as the ancients did, if we wish to be led by the Spirit. Many of the ancient prophecies extend down to this age, but God forbid that we like the unbelieving Jew, should stumble over them instead of receiving them to our soul's salvation.

RAMBLES IN THE DISTRICT, No. 3.

SATURDAY, April 5th, took train at New Bedford for Boston, with a view to carrying out the request of our last district conference, that the "Bishop's Agent visit the branches, and give a discourse on finance. After a ride of two hours, reached the Athens of America, and found Bro. A. W. Glover in waiting for me at the depot. By a short walk across the city, took a train on the New England Line for Hyde Park, the home of my worthy escort, where I was received pleasantly by his genial wife. After a pleasant season, music by the worthy lady of the house and her sister, and thanks were offered to the Giver of all good, I sought that "balmy sleep," which is so invigorating to weary man.

Sunday, April 6th, opened cloudy and dull; yet I was reminded that it was the anniversary of the organization of the church of God in the last days. In the forenoon reached Boston by train, and found the home of Bro. Webster. Had a friendly chat on the gospel of the kingdom, and afterwards had an interview with Bro. Hoxie. In the afternoon gathered with the Saints in an "upper room," and tried to reason according to the things which are written, on our duty in relation to finance. Enjoyed good liberty. After this the sacrament was administered, and we felt that it was good to serve the Lord. I was pleased to meet Sisters Bartholomew and Lincoln, of California, at this meeting. Evening met again with the Saints, when it fell to the lot of the writer to speak upon the gospel, aided by the Spirit. The Lord touched the hearts of some; for one sister gave fifty dollars, and another five, and several more made up another five, for the work of the Lord. I was truly pleased to receive these offerings, because the treasury was low and it came in due season. The Saints extended to me a kind and cordial reception for which I desire to thank them.

Monday, April 7th, found me again homeward bound, ready for the battle of life for the "bread which perisheth." The next day Bro. Tripp of Westport, waited upon me, and informed me that I was wanted at Little Compton the coming Sabbath, as some of the Methodist friends who were troubled about the gifts of the gospel, desired a discourse on this subject. Sunday, April 13th, found me on my way to the place of service; halted at Bro. Tripp's and changed horses, and with him and Bro. Andrews reached Little Compton, while the meeting was in progress, with Bro. Charles A. Coombs present, who had been laboring there for several days. The writer was called upon to give the expected discourse, and the Lord was with us; for I never remember having greater liberty than at this time. At the close of preaching, we adjourned to the sea shore, and Bro. Coombs baptized five. Afternoon met for confirmation, at the close of which I started for home, which I reached in safety. Sunday, April 20th, found me in the city Providence, to elucidate the law of finance. Met with the Saints in the afternoon, and by the aid of the Spirit I tried to explain what God required of us for the support of his work. I received many kindly greetings from the brethren and sisters; also some promised aid, and some bestowed it then and there; for which I pray the blessing of heaven to attend them. At the close partook of the sacrament with the branch. Evening I was called upon again, to be the "Aaron," because it was said "A prophet hath honor save in his own country." During this visit I enjoyed the comforts furnished in the home of Bro. and Sr. Blood. Monday, April 21st, by the light of the morn, I was reminded of the duties of life; and after partaking of an early breakfast, I took the "chariot" of prophecy, and reached home in safety, satisfied that the Lord looked with pleasure upon my feeble efforts for his cause. I still desire strength to continue the battle, until the victory is won, and peace like a river shall cover the earth.

JOHN SMITH.

IS THERE HOPE FOR ME BEYOND "THE VALE."

THE first time that I had any serious thoughts on this subject, was while I was walking alone along a lonely road, when suddenly there was a peculiar sensation came over me, and everything around me seemed to be more lovely than I had ever seen, yea and more than I ever expect to see again, (unless under the same circumstances), until the earth and all things therein are made new; and my soul was filled with joy indescribable. This occurred when I was about twenty-two years old. Shortly after this glorious manifestation, I attended a protracted meeting of the Missionary Baptists. I had not attended this meeting very long, when I began to have some serious thoughts; for hell was pictured out in such a way that the sinners began to think, (some of them), that they could feel a little warmth from the nearness of the sulphuric flames of his satanic majesty. So we were a little (?) scared, and began to think we had better get religion. So we went at it in earnest. We went to the Mourners' Bench every opportunity, and there prayed and cried for religion, until my fellow sinners all got it, and I began to think that I was not one of "the called;" for I could not get religion, i. e., I could not say that I knew that God for Christ's sake had forgiven my sins, and I was afraid to join without that knowledge; for I heard all them that did join say they knew it. I at last concluded to try to join without any religion, (but not without a resolution to try do better than I had been doing), and when I did so I was not asked as many questions as some others were; hence was received. The right hand of fellowship was extended to me, and shortly afterwards I was baptized. Then I thought I was a member of the Church of Christ, and he as a loving Savior would in some way give me a knowledge of my acceptance with him. The meeting closed, and I went home and continued to do the best I could, though I could not do much, for I had not been taught what the duties of members were. I went on this way for something over a year, and instead of knowing more than I did before I joined the church, my mind became more darkened; and I finally concluded that there was no religion; if there was, there was none for me. So I went back to the world, and was worse than ever. Then the question arose in my mind, Can I be saved? In the Bible I read the words of him who "spake as never man spake," "The son of man came not into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved." Is the foregoing true? Tradition answers, yes; then is it sufficient for me to trust my soul upon? If that was all, I could not; but I find another promise, which, connected with the foregoing, makes it stronger: "He that will do the will of the Father which is in heaven, shall know of the doctrine." Thus my faith was strengthened; for the promise was, "he that will do the will of the Father shall know." What I then wanted to know was, What is the will of the Father? This same teacher says, "Follow me, for I am the way." As he did "nothing but what the Father commanded him," it will certainly be doing the "will of the Father to follow him. Then can faith alone save us? I think not, for we can have faith(?) and sit still; but we can not sit still and follow him. By considering the foregoing carefully, I found nothing upon which I could predicate a doubt in regard to his power to save.

I will examine and see where he went, that I may follow him. It will here be necessary to examine the two primary principles; viz., faith and repentance. There is a saying somewhere, "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Hence the propriety of the saying, "Whosoever cometh unto the Lord must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." I do not understand by the foregoing that any kind of faith will do, or that faith in something(?) that fills the immensity of space; and yet has "neither body, parts nor passions" will do; but we must have a live, active, and intelligent faith, and that faith must be in the God of Abraham; he could walk, talk, and eat with Abraham; could reveal his will to Isaac. He could talk and wrestle with Jacob. He could, and did reveal his will to the ancient Saints concerning many things, many times reproofing them for commission of crime or for neglect of duty; also speaking words of cheer and comfort to the weary and brokenhearted.- It must also be a kind of faith that will cause me to want to do what he has commanded, otherwise it would be a dead faith. I must also believe in the power, love, justice, mercy and truth of God. When we have that kind of faith, it will not be a hard task for us to turn away from our sins, to repent.

Now we must not forget the words, "follow me." How can I follow him, when it has been so long since he left here? When John was baptizing in Jordan, Christ came to him and demanded baptism. But John refused, saying, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?" But "the Lamb" insists on being baptized. Here we notice that Jesus went to one that was sent of God, not to the popular Pharisees or Sadducees. In this the "Son" recognized the authority of his Father, by going to those that the Father had sent to baptize; and was baptized in order to "fulfill all righteousness." (Not that all righteousness was embodied in this act, but "all righteousness could not be fulfilled without it), and when he came up out of the water and prayed the Holy Ghost came on him, and the voice from heaven declared that he was the Son of God, and with him the Father was well pleased, something that had not been done before. Had he not been baptized, he could not have fulfilled all righteousness. Could not have done the "will of the Father." If we follow him, we too, must be baptized. But how are we to know the proper mode, says one. There are four ways taught now, and all by smart men. When we began, we wanted to know what the Savior did, that we might follow him, our faith being predicated on the promise, that "he that will do the will of the Father, shall know of the doctrine." In order to find out what he did, we have only to turn to the 1st chapter of Mark, 9, 10 verses. "And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan, [not on the bank or just close to]. And straightway coming up out of the water, [not coming up from the edge of the water], he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him."

To follow him, we too must go into the water and be baptized. We could not come up out of the water like Christ did, unless we were in it.

In Rom. 6th chap., we find the following: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."

In order to satisfy our minds in regard to the mode, we have only to learn how Jesus was raised from the dead. In Matt. 27: 59, 60, it is said: "And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth. And laid it in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock; and he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed." In Matt. 28: 2: "And behold there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it."

From the foregoing we learn, first, that Jesus' body (not a part of it only) was placed in the sepulchre. 2d, that at the resurrection of Christ, his body came out of the sepulchre. 3d, That baptism must be, (or was), in the "likeness of his resurrection," and this can not be without being placed in the water and being brought up out of the water. This in connection with the teaching of the Savior to Nicodemus, (Jno. 3d ch.,) ought to be sufficient to satisfy the most incredulous. I will refer to two other passages; viz, Acts 8: 38, and Col. 2: 12, and leave them, without comment. When we are born into this world, we are pure, sinless; hence children of God. We grow to the years of accountability, and being surrounded by sin, we partake of the evils that surround us, some to a greater, and some to a less extent. And as God can not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance, we must by some means be cleansed from our sins. When we are born into this natural world pure, and lose this purity by sin, it becomes necessary that we be born again; and as there is but one way of being born into this world, there can be but one way to be "born again," to become pure, to have our sins remitted; and as the spirit of man dwells in us at the first birth, and gives us a knowledge of the things of this world; so we are entitled to, yea, have the promise of another Spirit, to give us a knowledge of the things of the kingdom of God, which we have entered into, by the second birth.

Suppose the mode and object of baptism as stated in the foregoing, are conceded, is that all that is necessary? I do not think that it is. I will give my reasons for so thinking. 1st, I lost my childish innocence in the first place because I had nothing but the spirit of man to sustain me; hence could not have the power to resist evil. 2d, There could be no propriety in teaching a second birth, unless it be attended with superior advantages. I think this position is sustained by Peter in his memorable sermon on the day of Pentecost. He there promised the believers, if they would obey, "Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." This Holy Ghost, says Christ, is to take the things of the Father and show them unto those that received it. It would guide them into all truth. It would show them things to come. The Holy Ghost was to be given by the laying on of hands of those that God had sent to administer the ordinances of his kingdom, (church), which any one may learn by reading Acts 8th and 19th chapters, and Heb. 6th chapter.

I have given in brief the doctrine that was preached to me by an Elder of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and notwithstanding I was merging into infidelity, I could not doubt it for the reasons stated at the beginning, that Christ had the power to save, and he had promised if I would do his will, I should "know of the doctrine."

In conclusion I will state, that if a belief in, and obedience to any law, and realization of the promises made in that law, are any evidence of its truthfulness, I know that the doctrine taught by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is true.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

Yes, Christ again to earth is coming,
Coming to reign as King of Saints;
But how look we for His returning?
Are we indeed, in truth His Saints?

Yes, beloved in the gospel, are we in very deed, in truth, His Saints, or only such in name? If indeed we are what we profess to be, then we can and will look forth with joyful anticipations to that event, and not with shame and dread. Then we will love to search for, and meditate on those Scriptures foreshadowing that event, some of which are referred to in the following poem, or verses. May this be our happy lot.

Come thou our king, and bless thy people, (a)
Protect them with thy loving power; (b)
We look to one we know is able, (c)
To save them in each trying hour. (d)

That we may keep all thy commandments, (e)
Wilt thou, O Lord, thy Spirit give; (f)
That we may be accounted worthy, (g)
With the redeemed on earth to live. (g)

For Christ will come, as he has told us, (h)
To reign on earth a thousand years; (i)
O, who would not in the millennium, (i)
Desire to dwell where Jesus is? (i)

When Satan shall be bound in fetters, (j)
No more to tempt the sons of men; (j)
When Gabriel's trump shall wake the righteous, (j)
That they on earth may live again. (j)

While those who heed not Christ's command- (k)
ment, (k)
Beneath the grave must slumber on; (k)
For all who slight the great atonement, (k)
Must wait till the last trump doth sound. (m)

We know the day is fast approaching, (n)
When Christ will come to earth again; (n)
With joy we hail the second coming, (n)
Of Him who was for sinners slain. (o)

Yes, yes, He'll come to bleeding Zion, (b)
That He may give his people rest; (p)
Then may your lamps be trimmed and burning, (p)
Have Jesus' love within your breast. (e)

When He had made the great atonement, (r)
While parting from his weeping friends; (r)
A cloud received him up to glory, (r)
And angels bright appeared to men. (r)

Who said, Why gaze ye up to heaven, (r)
This same Jesus will come again; (r)
As ye behold him now ascending, (r)
In latter days he will descend. (r)

The Savior said to doubting Thomas, (s)
Behold, I have both flesh and bones; (s)
Then let us cease our fears and doubtings, (s)
And faithful live till he returns. (e)

This, this the language of the Scriptures, (h)
That Christ will surely come again; (h)
Then may we look for His appearing, (a)
And faithful to our trust remain. (e)

Did He not say to His disciples, (h)
I will for you a place prepare? (h)
That where I am, ye may be also, (h)
My glory you shall with me share. (e)

Then let our lamps be trimmed and burning, (q)
With a supply of oil on hand; (q)
That when the midnight cry is sounded, (q)
We may go forth to meet the groom. (q)

With patience then we'll wait his coming, (a) Wait for our King, Jesus by name; (a)
For he will come as he has told us,— (b)
—Yes; Jesus Christ will come again. (h)

Always write the Business portion of your Letter on a separate piece of paper, and let it be brief and explicit.

If you have anything to say to the Editor, or something you wish published, do not write it on the back of a business letter. Business is Business, and must be done in a business-like manner.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SACRED PROPHECY.

THE prophets were chosen of God, and their writings were inspired by him. Speaking as they were moved to speak by the Holy Spirit, they became the mouth-pieces of Deity, and we are solemnly warned by the great apostle not to despise their utterances. The prophecies constitute a very important part of the sacred Scriptures. Omit from the canon the sublime books of Isaiah, and Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, and Daniel and John, and what a blank and loss! Were not all the main events that transpired among men when our Lord came on earth in the accomplishment of his mission of love, subjects of prophecy? We know his birth, the place of his birth, the manner of his death, his rising again, and a hundred other things were long before foretold by the Hebrew seers.

Prophecy is history in advance. It is the church's chart on her travel through this wilderness. It points her onward to the eternal home. It is the window through which she gazes into the Holy City. It is also her weapon of defense against the sceptic and the Jew. The Lamp of Prophecy! how dark is time's path without it! How scanty indeed our knowledge of the grand mysterious future, unaided by the prophetic word. Are not Christ's coming again, with the resurrection, the translation, the judgment, and all concomitants and after-scenes, matters not only of promise but of prediction? Thus while nature's lamp burns dim and science and philosophy seek in vain to penetrate the veil that hides the future from our yearning vision, prophecy is a "light" in man's dark world—a light that shines until the day shall dawn.—2 Pet. 1:19. And just as a lantern lights all our way, so does prophecy illuminate our place, showing us where we are in the great chain of human events, telling the church about how far she has journeyed, and enabling her to know something of the length of the remaining path, and the nearness of the end.

It is not to their credit that in so many pulpits and religious papers prophetic expositions find no place, it having become a fashion to despise them. Everything else in the Bible is talked of and written about save those portions that are prophetic. All other matters engage the pen of the popular writer, all subjects are discussed by the denominational Editor, all texts chosen by the preacher save the prophetic. Prophecy's strict fulfillment to the letter, is our Gibraltar against rampant infidelity, yet how seldom do Christians enter into this fortress of strength. Why should editors, preachers, teachers neglect the old prophecies? Was not Jesus a prophet indeed?—Matt. 24. Did he not for our information foretell the course of this age even to its end?

The soundest, best men of the church in the past loved the sacred prophecies. Wickliff explained and applied them; Luther and Melancthon studied Daniel and John; John Knox used to preach on the book of Daniel. So intensely earnest would he get, we are told by his biographer, that it seemed as if he would pound his pulpit to pieces and fly out of it. Sir Isaac Newton spent two whole years in close study of the prophecies of Daniel and of John. Bishop Newton was a standard sober expositor of the great prophecies. The brightest lights in England and on the Continent have delighted to read and explain them. One of Mr. Moody's best discourses is on Daniel, and includes an exposition of the prophecy in the second chapter. Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, called some years ago to give an address before a learned literary society, gave an exposition of the five universal monarchies of the earth from the second and seventh chapters of Daniel. Bishop Henshaw did not despise them, but wrote a book on the sacred prophecies. We could name hundreds of others who have had interest in this mighty theme.

Brethren suppose you try your hand a little at expository studies, and preach the prophecies. You need not be fanatical, nor dispute over dates, nor presume to know all times and seasons, whether hidden or revealed. But trim your lamp betimes, O, preacher of God's word. "All scripture is profitable." Prophecy is not a dark lantern. It is a light that shines. Let it shine. "Light is sown for the righteous."—Psa. 117:11. Does it illumine your path touching the nearing marvels of the august day of the resurrection from the dead, and the solemn judgment to come?

At present prophecy seems rapidly and wonderfully fulfilling before our eyes. It seems to be almost becoming exhausted. Close students of the Bible and human events see and feel this. Would it not stir the church to greater zeal, larger benevolence, and intenser activity to make more and better use of this God-given light? She is walking in the "dark place," and certainly needs it. It is "night,"—yea more, it is "midnight."—Rom. 13:12; Matt. 25:6. Who knows but there may be a mine of joy, a vein of knowledge, a tower of strength, and a new spur of consecration for the preacher in the direction I am inviting? Could you be made to see that the day of wrath for sinners impends, and the era of jubilee for saints draweth nigh, it might prove a fresh and mighty motive to holy action, and impart to your ministry a greater earnestness than you ever previously exhibited. I confess I never rise from a perusal of the sublime predictions of Daniel and John without a feeling of awe. It seems as if I had been in contact with eternal verities. The great day looms up in faith's vision, and my spirit thrills with expectation and admiration. We are none of us more than half awake, and surely wisdom invites the use of every lawful method by which our watchfulness may be increased, our pace quickened, our love and zeal made stronger, and our courage more unflinching in the service of the good Master. "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets," (Amos 3:7), while in every generation he has had his chosen ones who cried in the ears of an evil and unbelieving world, "This is that which was spoken by the prophet." Acts 2:16. To be such an one is a high honor. To begin at Moses and all the prophets and expound them, is to be like the great Teacher.—Luke 24:27, 44.

THE COLORED RACE.

HOW IT WAS REPRESENTED AT THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

THE representation in the recent National Republican Convention of colored men from the South shows the wonderful progress that race has made since the war. There were seventy-five colored men who sat on the floor of the convention as duly accredited delegates, having come from nearly all the Southern States, and they were thoroughly representative men—not of their race alone, but of the wealth and intelligence of their section. They were not carpet-baggers, nor were they men who depend upon Government pay for their sustenance. There were officeholders among them, but there was hardly one of that number who had not some mercantile or agricultural interest. To show what class of men they were the following facts concerning the majority of them have been gathered:

George Turner, of Alabama, who headed the delegation, is an ex-Congressman from the First District and at present holds a position in the Revenue Department. He is a farmer, a man of considerable wealth and standing in his State. James E. Slaughter is a Revenue Collector near-Huntsville and publishes a newspaper. Intellectually he has no superior among his race in the State. George Washington has been sent three consecutive times to National Republican Conventions from the Second District.

M. W. Gibbs, of Arkansas, who was one of the delegates-at-large, is Register of the Land-Office at Little Rock, and is a man of influence above the average. Fred Havis, from the Second District, is Circuit Clerk for Jefferson County at Pine Bluff. He owns considerable property. S. H. Holland was a delegate to the previous National Convention and is a planter of means. John H. Johnson is the Assistant Collector of Internal Revenue at Augusta.

W. M. Pledger, of Georgia, was one of the delegates-at-large. He is in the Revenue Department and deals in butter and eggs near Atlanta. He is highly thought of both among white and colored men. Elbert Head is a member of the Georgia Senate and probably the wealthiest colored man in the State. He is a thorough-going business-man and ranks among the foremost. L. M. Pleasants is in the employ of the Post-Office Department and is a farmer.

P. B. S. Pinchback, of Louisiana, was formerly Lieutenant-Governor of the State, and is a man of wealth. L. S. Martinet is a large sugar planter. Henry Demars is a member of the State Senate, has previously been a delegate to National Conventions, and is a wealthy man. Andrew J. Dumont is in the Custom-house at New Orleans, and is a thoroughly intelligent man.

Blanche K. Bruce, of Mississippi, is an ex-United States Senator, the present Register of the United States Treasury, a man with large property interests, and of marked intelligence and character. James Hill is the Collector of Internal Revenue at Jackson. Congressman Lynch is a large farmer, and has much wealth. His ability was recognized by the late convention, which made him its Temporary Chairman. Wesley Crayton is a farmer and a man of influence, and so is Thomas Richardson.

Congressman O'Hara, of North Carolina, is probably the leading man of his race in the State. He is a lawyer by profession, and his home is at Raleigh. John S. Leary has been a member of previous National Conventions, and is highly respected. J. B. Eavis, from the Ninth District, is another representative man of his State.

Robert Smalls, of South Carolina, is a member of Congress, and a large farmer. He is a leader of his race in the State. Samuel Lee is a lawyer with an excellent practice. E. H. Dibble is the Postmaster at Blackville. S. E. Smith was a member of the preceding National Convention, and is a very intelligent man.

J. C. Napier of Tennessee, is a Postmaster and very intelligent. He was one of the delegates-at-large. T. F. Cassells, another delegate-at-large, was a member of the Legislature. S. A. McElwes is a farmer as is also Carter Harris.

M. W. Curry, of Texas, is one of the largest stevedores in Galveston and one of the leading men in the delegation.

J. C. Akers is a ranchman and lawyer, possessing large property interests. M.

R. Ferguson is a County Assessor and owns considerable property. W. H. Blount and J. R. Carter are also men of influence in their respective sections.

William H. Pleasants, of Virginia, is a large tobacco manufacturer in Richmond and was considered one of the brightest men in the delegation. J. A. Taylor, from the Third District, is a merchant in Richmond. A. W. Harris is a lawyer in the same city. William E. Sims is in the Internal-Revenue service, as are also Robert L. Mitchell and A. A. Dodson.

TELLING EACH OTHERS' FAULTS.

AFTER having been married some weeks it came into the head of a young husband one Sunday, when he had but little to occupy his mind, to suggest to his wife that they should plainly and honestly state the faults that each had discovered in the other since they had been man and wife. After some hesitation the wife agreed to the proposition, but stipulated that the rehearsal should be made in all sincerity, and with an honest view to the bettering of each other, or otherwise it would be of no use to speak of the faults to which marriage had opened their eyes. The husband was of the same mind and his wife asked him to begin. He was somewhat reluctant, but his wife insisted that he was first to propose the matter, and, as he was the head of the house, it was his place to take the lead. Thus urged, he began the recital.

He said:

"My dear, one of the first faults that I observed in you after we began keeping house was that you a good deal neglected the tinware. My mother always took great pride in her tinware, and kept it as bright as a dollar."

"I am glad you have mentioned it, dear," said his wife, blushing a little; "hereafter you shall see no spot on cup or pan. Pray proceed."

"I have also observed that you use your dishrags a long time without washing them, and finally throw them away. Now, when at home, I remember that my mother always used to wash out her dishrags when she was done using them, and then hung them up where they could dry, ready for the next time she would need them."

Blushing, as before, the young wife promised to amend the fault.

The husband continued with a most formidable list of similar faults, many more than we have space to enumerate, when he declared that he could think of nothing more worthy of mention.

"Now, my dear," said he, "you begin and tell me all the faults you have discovered in me since we have been married."

The wife sat in silence. Her face flushed to the temples and a great lump came in her throat, which she seemed to be striving hard to swallow.

"Proceed my dear; tell me all the faults you have discovered in me; spare none."

Arising suddenly from her seat the little wife burst into tears, and throwing both arms about her husband's neck, cried:

"My dear husband, you have not a fault in the world. If you have one my eyes have been so blinded by my love for you that so long as we have been married I never once observed it. In my eyes you are perfect, and all that you do seems to be done in the best manner and just what should be done."

"But, my dear," said the husband, his face reddening and his voice growing husky with emotion, "just think, I have gone and found all manner of fault with you. Now do tell me some of my faults; I know I have many—ten times as many as you ever had or will have. Let me hear them."

"Indeed, husband it is as I tell you; you have not a single fault that I can see. Whatever you do seems right in my eyes, and now that I know what a good-for-nothing little wretch I am, I shall at once begin the work of reform and try to make myself worthy of you."

"Nonsense, my dear; you know that sometimes I go away and leave you without any wood cut, I stay down town when I ought to be at home, I spend money for drink and cigars when I ought to bring it home to you, I——"

"No, you don't," cried his wife; "you do nothing of the kind. I like to see you enjoy yourself; I should be unhappy were you to do otherwise than just exactly as you do."

"God bless you, little wife," cried the now subjugated husband, "from this moment you have no faults in the world. Indeed, you never had a fault; I was joking; don't remember a word I said!" And he kissed away the tears that trembled in the little woman's eyes.

Never again did the husband scrutinize the tinware nor examine the dishrag—never so much as mention one of the faults he had enumerated—but soon after the neighbor women were wont to say:

"It is wonderful how neat Mrs. — keeps everything about her house. Her tinware is as bright as a new dollar, and I do believe she not only washes but irons her dishrags." And the neighbor men were heard to say: "What a steady fellow — has got to be of late; he don't spend a dime where he used to spend dollars, and can never be kept from home half an hour when he is not at work. He seems to worship that wife of his."

INWARD PEACE.

Many say they have no peace, nor rest, but so many crosses, and trials, afflictions and sorrows that they know not how they shall ever get through them. Now he who in truth will perceive and take note, perceiveth clearly that true peace and rest lie not in outward things; for if it were so the evil spirit also would have peace when things go according to his will, which is nowise the case. Therefore we must consider and see what is that peace which Christ left to his disciples when he said, "My peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." Christ meant that inward peace which can break through all assaults and crosses of oppression, suffering, misery, humiliation, and what more there may be of the like, so that a man may be joyful and patient therein; and what was bitter to him before shall become sweet, and his heart shall remain unmoved under all changes, at all times.

EVERY DAY A LITTLE.

Every day a little knowledge. One fact in a day. How small is one fact! Only one! Ten years pass by. Three thousand six hundred and fifty facts are not a small thing.

Every day a little self-denial. The thing that is difficult to do to-day will be an easy thing to do three hundred and sixty days hence, if each day it shall have been repeated. What power of self-mastery shall he enjoy who, looking to God for grace, seeks every day to practice the grace he prays for.

Every day a little helpfulness. We live for the good of others, if our living be in any sense true living. It is not in great deeds of kindness only that the blessing is found. In "little deeds of kindness," repeated every day, we find true happiness. At home, at school, in the street, in the neighbor's house, we shall find opportunity every day for usefulness.

Scarcliff missionaries, and resolved, that when this conference adjourns it does so to meet in Santa Rosa Branch, September 6th and 7th, 1884.

Elder W. W. Squires and Priest J. E. Walter requested to labor in connection with the officers of Eureka Branch, and report the results at next conference.

Resolved, That the Bishop's Agent be requested to obtain a deed to the church building at Blackwater, Florida, and whereas information has reached us that a claim is held and has been for several years by J. J. Cooper for the sum of twenty-four dollars against said building, and that there is no probability of the claim being paid; and that Eureka Branch being in a badly scattered and disorganized condition the house is not being used and has not been for several years, no one exercising any charge of the house and it is rapidly decaying and being mutilated; therefore the Bishop's Agent to represent these facts to the First Presidency and Bishop, and endeavor to obtain from them a deed to sell the property and devote the proceeds or so much thereof as may be necessary, to satisfy the above claim.

Whereas, information has reached us that the branches situated in Baldwin county, Alabama, and Mississippi desire to be organized into a separate district, the above branches are requested to represent this matter by petition to the next conference; and if these branches desire a division, that it be then effected, and that the district president be requested to attend to this matter, and advise the Saints concerning the same.

Bro. Cato preached Saturday evening. Prayer meeting Sunday morning in charge of J. N. Hawkins. Bro. Cato preached Sunday forenoon, J. N. Hawkins in the afternoon. Thus ended a lovely session of conference.

Miscellaneous.

BORN.

SCARCLIFF.—At Lamberta, Baldwin county, Alabama, May 6th, 1884, to Bro. Frank P. and Sr. Mary E. Scarcliff, a daughter; blessed May 26th, 1884, by Elder E. W. Cato, and named Mary.

MARRIED.

CROUCH—TAYLOR.—At the house of Bro. George Derry, in Lamoni, Iowa, on the 18th of June, Mr. John Crouch and Mrs. Sarah Taylor. Bro. Henry A. Stebbins performed the ceremony. May their union be a happy one.

DIED.

MCINTYRE.—At Logan Center, Kansas, December 29th, 1883, of diphtheria, George Tracy. Born November 12th, 1876. Blessed by Bro. Roberts and Bro. Noble. Funeral sermon preached on the 15th of June, by Brother H. Noble.

We had a precious household flower,
So pure and fair and bright;
It seemed that every passing hour,
He gave our home its light.

But O, there came a day of gloom
When sorrow held its sway;
For in a quiet, darkened room,
Our flower was laid away.

His dimpled hands were folded white,
Across his silent breast,
His lips had kissed a last good night
Before he went to rest.

But Jesus whispered sweet and low,
Peace, troubled hearts, be still,
And now our hearts have learned to know
'Twas but the Master's will.

With humble trusting hearts, we'll love
And listen to his word,
We know our flower will bloom within
The garden of the Lord.

STAWPERT.—At Chicago, Illinois, May 20th, 1884, of consumption, Bro. George Stawpert, father of Sr. Margaret Mooney, aged 57 years and 4 months. Born in Manchester, England. Emigrated after uniting with the church to Salt Lake, in 1849. He never united with the Reorganization.

"Dear father, thou art gone to rest,
We will not weep for thee;
Thou art now where oft' on earth,
Thy spirit longed to be."

From Sr. Margaret Mooney.

MILLS.—At his residence in Pittsfield, Illinois, June 11th, 1884, Bro. Cornelius Mills. Bro. Mills had been very lame for weeks, and on Saturday, December 30th, 1882, while exercising on his crutches, the bone of his left leg broke above the knee. Everything that skill and kindness could do was done for him; but the bone refused to unite. It was cancer of the bone, and finally reached the vitals, and after nearly seventeen months and a half of suffering, he went to sleep without a struggle. Had lived in Pike county for more than thirty years. Was well known and much esteemed for his many virtues. He united with the church of Latter Day Saints in 1837; and when the apostasy set in under B. Young, he refused to follow any of the factions; but united with the Reorganized Church in 1863, and as an Elder has been most exemplary and faithful. His wife died nearly thirty years ago, and it is said by his neighbors that he was both father and mother to his children, seven of whom survive him, five sons and two daughters, all having families, and all being with him for a week before his death, and most carefully and tenderly caring for him through all this affliction. I was there a few days before his death, and he seemed to be a little restless. One of his sons said, "Father, what can we do for you? What do you want?" He replied, "I want to go home." He was 71 years and 6 months old. Funeral was held at the Saints' Chapel in Pittsfield, on the 12th of June, and the house was crowded with many of the best citizens of the town. Services conducted by the writer, Elder J. Goodale.

EPISTOLARY.

To the Saints of South Western Mission, Greeting.—Having by action of the Annual Conference of 1884, been continued in charge of the Mission, I deem it to be a duty to occasionally communicate my thoughts to you by way of suggestion and encouragement. I am glad to say that I think our prospects for success are brighter now than heretofore; while the whisperings of the Spirit to me are that glorious times are awaiting us in the near future. Our triumph however is not insured; much depends upon our faithfulness and diligence. The General Conference has given us an increase of laborers for the present summer at least, and now let us rally to their support, not only in a financial sense, which is necessary, but in a spiritual sense by sustaining them by our faith, confidence and prayers. I hope, too, that the local priesthood will not rest secure in the thought that the missionary force is sufficient; but remember we shall need your hearty co-operation. The field is large and many are crying for the bread of life. Shall we use the means and ability God has given us in supplying their demands? If we do not, I fear we will be found unprofitable servants. We are entering the field with a renewed determination to prosecute the work vigorously, and call upon you in behalf of the work we love, to help us. We can not succeed without you; but should we work faithfully together, God will crown our labors with success.

Let the Elders and Priests seek openings to present the word, and if secular duties demand their attention during the week, tell the story of the gospel in the vicinity of their homes upon the Sabbath day, and God will bless them freely in their efforts. The teachers and deacons should strive to approve themselves as standing ministers to the branches, and never let the interest of their meetings decrease in the absence of their superior officers. "Let every man learn his duty, and act in the office in which he is appointed in all diligence," and we will see a grandeur and completeness in the organization which will fill us with admiration and peace; while the Saints will rejoice, the honest in heart be converted, and God's Spirit will reign in our hearts, imparting light and truth, grander, sweeter, purer than we have yet experienced.

After consultation with others of the missionary force, I have concluded to request those appointed to missionary work in the South Western Mission, to meet in council on Monday,

August 11th, 1884, at Elmwood, Bell Co., Texas, for the purpose of agreeing upon the best course of procedure in the future, and coming to an understanding, so that we may be in unity in our future counsel and advice upon matters regarding the good of the mission, and the welfare of the saints. We also earnestly invite all the local authorities who can, to meet with us. We should be glad if it were practicable to meet and counsel with you all; but can not expect all to be able to come; however, all come who can, and come praying that God will meet with us, and give us an endowment of his Holy Spirit. By appointing this time those who wish to can also attend the debate previously alluded to in the Herald, which commences Aug. 5th at the same place, and closes on the 9th. Praying that God's Spirit may be with you in all your duties, cares and trials, I have the pleasure of subscribing myself your co-laborer for Christ,

HEMAN C. SMITH, Pres. of Miss.

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES,
605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully,

N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds,

J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brothers—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,

GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, W. M. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLESBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

BRO. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ONE baptized at Plano, Illinois, June 15th, and two on the 22d; "one of a household, two of a city," and "of such are the kingdom of God," if they "abide in Christ."

Bro. Daniel Jones sends us a North Bend, Nebraska, Flail, of June 19th, in which there is a column of gospel teaching, in answer to the question, "What shall I do to be saved?" asked by some one in a former issue.

Bro. I. N. White sends us copies of the Des Moines, Iowa, Register, containing the letter from Edenville, Iowa, and a good reply from Bro. J. F. McDowell.

The fund from which some of the elders in the field have been supplied with tracts for the past three years is exhausted, completely "tired out," and dreadfully emaciated, and incapable of answering any further demands upon it, until renewed. We have done the best we could, supplying those that we knew to be active and diligent as liberally as the fund would permit. We would be glad to do more but can not. We trust elders who have lately written us for tracts will not feel hurt by our neglect to send them, as we can not.

Bro. E. C. Brand baptized seven at Elsinore, Sevier county, Utah, lately, and more were expected.

Bro. A. J. Kennison writes that in the portion of Kansas where he lives, springs and creeks supplying water are much better and more numerous than formerly. Bro. Kennison thinks it to be in fulfillment of the prophecy: "Deserts shall rejoice and blossom as the rose; for in the wilderness shall waters break forth, and streams in the deserts; and the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water."

Bro. George S. Hyde and R. H. Wight, a grandson of Lyman Wight, are laboring together; have been at Columbus, and were on June 17th, at David City, Nebraska. Sister Jennie Krahl has been maintaining the cause there against the attack of Rev. Brown, of the Holiness People, for some time now; and doing it well. Bro. Hyde and Wight were there to take the gage of battle, and would stay and take hold as the way opens.

The matter elsewhere presented by Bro. S. G. Mayo, is worthy of consideration. There is no good reason why the west should be dependent on the east for canned fruits, or vegetables. The facilities for raising fruit, the excellent climate of portions of the west, notably Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, and the necessity for something to do, all point to the feasibility of carrying on business of the sort named by Bro. Mayo. We know of no one acquainted with the business, but would think "what man has done man can do." Think of it some of you, and answer Bro. Mayo.

Erratum. In the Bishop's Report, as published, the name of Annie Penrod appears credited with $1 only; it should be $10. Correction by order of Bishop Blakeslee.

The receipts of milk at the Lamoni Cheese Factory, for the week ending June 21st were 21,113 pounds. The receipts for Monday, June 23d, were 4,200 lbs. The land flows with milk, and will roll with cheese. The quality of the cheese is quite good.

The meeting house at Lamoni, is being pushed forward. The rafters are all up, the sheeting and shingles will go on either in part, or wholly next week, and the building will soon be ready for the casing of brick. The brick making is progressing satisfactorily.

Bro. E. L. Kelley is at St. Louis looking after his part of the Braden-Kelley Debate, now being published by the Christian Press in that city. Bro. N. N. Cook wrote us that Bro. E. L. had spoken for them two or three times to good effect.

The Lamoni Brass Band will play at the Davis City Fourth of July celebration.

Bro. Bass, father and son, are building each a dwelling house in Lamoni, just south and across the street from the meeting house.

Cheese Factory Corners, Lamoni, is a busy place from seven to eight o'clock in the morning. Over forty names on the roll of those furnishing the milk supply, E. J. Robinson leading the list at 315 to 350 pounds. The average per cow daily is about 25 lbs. This is probably very much lower than it should be, and lower than it will be in a year or two, as there will be an effort made to improve in this direction. Bro. George A. Blakeslee of Galien, Michigan, milks one cow whose average for the milking season must be between fifty and sixty pounds, one day's milk only having been weighed gave sixty-five pounds. It does not pay to keep poor cows, either for the home dairy, the creamery, the cheese factory or for stock—improve—improve.

ALL Saints are interested in the HERALD and its prospects for continued success. The following items in regard to it will be suggestive. We doubt if there is another paper of such limited list of subscribers in the United States whose circulation covers so wide an area, which includes all the States and Territories except the Carolinas. The HERALD is put up into packages, properly stamped and labeled as follows:

To facilitate the delivery and to save labor to the route agents, on the lines of railway, these packages are divided into parts and put into eighteen sacks furnished by the Post Office Department, and weighed at the Post Office in Lamoni, and weighed for the issue of June 28th, three hundred and sixty-eight pounds. On the 14th of June, the week we issued the HERALD supplement, the weight of the mail was 502 pounds.

OF the visit and effort of Uncle William Smith, of Deloit, Iowa, the local paper speaks thus:

"Elder Smith is nearly seventy-four years of age, and is remarkably vigorous for one so old. No one could doubt his sincerity when he said he was too old—too near the grave—to impose upon the people and tell them that which was not true. Every word he uttered came from the heart. He said all the Smith family had gained in this world as the result of the angel's visitation were persecution and calumny. He denied the various charges made against his family record, and said his mother, sister and a brother were devout Presbyterians until they embraced the new faith. He vehemently denied the story of the Spaulding romance. The first conference of the Mormon Church was held in April, 1830. No class of people have done more against polygamy than the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, and in whatever light their doctrine may be viewed, they are certainly an honest, earnest, prayerful people, whose hospitality is unbounded and whose devotion can not be questioned."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. C. Brand wrote from Richfield, Sevier county, Utah, June 21st.

I have just returned from Elsinore, have baptized four more there; eleven in all; and organized the Elsinore Branch of seventeen members; and am going to baptize four or five more here this evening. I do most fervently pray that you may send out a Danish Elder; he could do a great work with God helping him, if he was a "good Elder."

Bro. Thomas Taylor, writes from Birmingham, England:

You will be pleased to learn that the work in this mission is moving along very satisfactorily. We held our Mission Conference on Saturday, Sunday and Monday last, June 1st, 2d and 3d, at Manchester, had an excellent time; good attendance, and oneness of feeling to the one great end, the interest and progress of the work of God. With respects to yourself and the brethren."

THE following is a plank in the platform of the Republican party, as adopted by the late National Convention at Chicago, in early June. Whether such laws will be enacted or enforced after enactment, remains to be seen:

"Resolved, That it is the duty of Congress to enact such laws as shall promptly and effectually suppress the system of polygamy within our Territories [applause] and divorce the political from the ecclesiastical power of the so-called Mormon Church, and that the law so enacted should be rigidly enforced by the civil authorities, if possible, and by the military, if need be."

THE following is taken from the Iowa State Register, published at Des Moines, for June 17th. We quote it to show the peculiar spirit that seems to pervade some of the people. Let it serve to stir the Saints every where to virtuous, and honorable lives; that, as at Edenville, those who write of them may write, and truly, they "are good citizens."

This is a pretty town on the Milwaukee railroad, with about five hundred inhabitants, doing a good business in its shops and stores, considering the times and the pressure before harvest.

A handsome M. E. Church and a new school building, to cost $7,000, and a large elevator, with a capacity of 15,000 bushels, are among the attractions of the place.

The Methodists hold their quarterly meeting on Saturday and Sunday, and Elder Bowman, of Cedar Falls, is expected to take up the Mormon Bible for discussion, and as the "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ numbers in this village a hundred members, there will be a hot discussion in parlor and store. Mr. McDowell said in his sermon last night that there were 20,000 of their number in Iowa, and that they were rapidly growing. If they are a part of the Utah branch of the Latter Day Saints their missionaries sustained by the Salt Lake Church, the Elder's visit is not too soon. The Mormons deny that polygamy is their faith here, but if both use the same Bible to the utter seclusion of the Bible of our fathers, where is the difference? At Salt Lake all Mormons are not polygamists.

The Methodists refuse their edifice to the admission of the Mormon missionaries, and in consequence the village is divided, school children wrangle over theology, boys of sixteen are discussing the dangerous doctrines of this church, and public sentiment is wrought up to the bitterest fights in the history of the race, a war of conscience and religion. No one knows where it will end, and several people have declared their intentions to leave the town if the Mormons continue their aggressions. It is not in my province to decide these questions, but to give facts to Register readers. The Mormons here are good citizens, this can not be denied, but if behind them is the Mormon Church of Utah, let the people of Iowa know it. There are three missionaries or preachers who have a salary of a thousand dollars, that live in this city, as the Mayor of Edenville is Curtis White, Esq., a brother of the Rev. Isaac White, Mormon missionary.

In Utah and Idaho the Mormons are Democrats. Here some vote the Greenback, a few have been good Republicans and probably will be this year. Blaine and Logan will hold all stragglers to its standard.

There will be a rousing Fourth of July celebration—good speakers, fireworks, a basket dinner, etc. H. M. S.

Correspondence.

SCOTTSVILLE, Ind.,

June 21st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just returned from a trip in Jefferson county and Ripley, in which our labors have been blessed greatly in ministering to the sick and blessing two children. Attended conference, went to Ripley county and preached seven times there, and the result was that we baptized three, and set the branch more fully in order. Ordained one teacher in the branch in which the saints were greatly blessed. There can be great good done in that part of the district. Brother William Kelley, the Priest of Edon Branch, was with me; a good speaker for his practice. He helped me very much. We had a good conference at Hall's Ridge, in Jefferson county, at which time we settled a long standing difficulty; so in the main there was good done. The Lord was present.

Yours in the faith,

JAMES G. SCOTT.

ELKOE, Nevada,

June 20th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I am on my way to Ruby Valley where I labored some last fall. I have been laboring in the Carson District the last four months; have done what I could considering the severe winter; preaching at Dayton, Empire, Franktown, Carson City, Genoa and Mottsville. Tried with our excellent Bro. Levi Atkinson to get an opening in Virginia City and Gold Hill, but were unsuccessful. What the result of my feeble efforts may be, the future must reveal. I baptized one at Franktown; at other places a few were near the door, but did not make the venture, but I expect will at some future day. The Saints in the district are few and scattered, but are firm in faith and more determined to aid in the spread of the work. The people around generally care for little beyond the pleasure of this life. I look for no great increase in Nevada though we may gather a few here and there. At the request of Bro. Blair I will continue my labors in this state this summer and fall, and will try and hunt up the scattered sheep. The field is large and settlements far apart—hard to get around—and expensive traveling. The Saints have cheerfully administered to my every want, for which they have my most sincere thanks, and my prayers that the good things of earth may not be their only portion. But also a rich reward in the mansions of the just. I am at the house of Bro. E. Penrod, where I have a welcome by him and Sr. Smith, his daughter. Bro. and Sr. Staats are also here, excellent members. These are the only ones now in Elko. North Ruby is fifty miles from here. There I expect to meet Bro. and Sr. Hays, the only members there, though quite a number are friendly, whom I hope to see in the Church before I leave them again. May the Lord help the honest to understand the times and the great Latter Day Dispensation; and may we so live that we may deliver the word and warning in the Spirit which alone is the power of God and the wisdom of God unto salvation.
