Dear Brother Joseph:—I see in Herald of the 13th inst., a question from Bro. V. D. Baggerley, as to what has become of our missionaries, for he had not seen or heard from them for six months. Well the reason is you have not been around where we are, and if you will come to Union schoolhouse, Jefferson Co., it is more than likely you will both see and hear from us. I left home on the 12th in company with my son and Bro. Kelley, for Ripley county, to meet some appointments he had sent to that place, and to see whether Mr. Owens would come to time; and we went by the way of North Vernon, at which place we met Rev. Missey, a Catholic Priest, who has charge at that place. As we were raised up boys in the same neighborhood, our greeting was pleasant. We also met Hon. J. G. Howard, of Jeffersonville, who is a candidate for Congress in the third district of Indiana, who was canvassing, and as we were acquainted we spent some time pleasantly, as we had to stop over from nine a. m. until five p. m. for the train to Holton, and then to walk some eight miles to the Olive Branch through the heat and dust as there had not been any rain there since the third of July. Dust, dust, dust! We got lost in Tangle wood. You know where that is, Brn. Kelley, H. C. Smith, and M. T. Short. It's a little south of where those people brought such wonderfully heavy argument against the truth, in the shape of beech trees and fence rails across the road. We were led right through. We did not know it at the time. We arrived at Bro. Flint's at eleven o'clock at night, who was glad to see us. And next morning who should put in an appearance, but Rev. Owens on his way to New Marion to church the Rev. Mr. Steavison's discourse. Bro. Kelley and I accompanied him. After church Mr. Owens came to Bro. Flint's for dinner, and it was not long before he revealed the object he had in view in meeting what he called Mormonism. Not that he might receive any additional light or truth, but that he might build up a reputation on the downfall of Mormonism. And my opinion is that Bro. Kelley, thinking that he was seeking truth, informed him too well before hand to get a discussion out of him. He made a great many excuses as to why he could not come to time. Dry weather, scarcity of water. In his conversation with Bro. Kelley, he was quite personal, and said here are you and some of your brethren that believe. Now let me see a sign. I had only been introduced to him. I thought it very ungentlemanly on his part to say nothing about Christianity. And when he went to start home he reached me his hand. I thought it a good time to drop a bug in his ear, and said, Mr. Owens, if you are seeking truth, you would not evade the force of reasoning. I'll tell you one thing, take it as a sign if you wish. You will never gain popularity by the downfall of what you call Mormonism. So we parted, kindly inviting him to attend our meetings. We held seven meetings at the Olive Branch, and can say that the Saints are alive to the work. The interest was never greater than now they say. One good mark I observed, was an increase of the audience all the time during our meetings; several being in attendance that never had heard our faith before. One Methodist friend, Mr. McCoy, a local preacher, was in attendance, and an opportunity being given for remarks, arose and said it was his first time to hear our faith. And if that was it, he bid us God speed. I kindly thanked him. The Saints and friends insisted we should stay longer; but at present we could not. As my wife has been confined to her bed for near three months, and my family has to be cared for, I could not consistently stay longer at one place. Through the kindness of Bro. Flint and Sr. Jolley, we were brought near to this place, and expect to stay here until over Sunday. The Union Saints are building a neat, substantial church-house. That reflects much to their credit. I will close this by one word of exhortation for myself and all Saints; Lord, more of thee, and less of self.

Yours in bonds,

M. R. SCOTT.

GLENALPINE, Antelope Co., Neb.,

September 16th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—It is the duty of those bound by the common ties of the gospel to tender to all who are prepared to receive, the benefit of every useful experience of life through which they have passed. One benefit of association is that we may learn from one another, and not always by the things we suffer. The experience through which I have passed during the last twelve months, and especially the six months of the recent past, has been the most eventful of my life; and the lessons learned I deem to be of great worth to myself and others. That all may know the loving kindness of God as manifest to the Saints here in our temporal and spiritual preservation, I wish to relate some of the more important events that have transpired in our midst. First a case of healing an affliction of my own body, which to me is a testimony of worth. About nine months ago, a frog felon came on my hand, and was deeply seated between the joints of the index and middle fingers. I was administered to for this affliction which portended to be very serious and disastrous to the form and usefulness of this member. I was delivered from the intense suffering that otherwise would have ensued, and no injury resulted by the maiming of my hand, for not the vestige of a scar is visible.

For some years past my scalp has been affected and threatened with baldness; for this disease I was anointed with oil, and the laying on of hands and prayer were administered by the servants of God as in the case before mentioned, with results satisfactory and pleasing to me; as I feel that my scalp is much freer from disease, and luxuriance is taking the place of baldness. And, believing in the promise made by the Spirit of God, I am confident that upon conditions of faithfulness and diligence in keeping the commands of God, my hair and scalp will be restored to the fulness of their vigor.

A daughter of Bro. and Sr. Willoughby, only eight or nine years of age, while staying at our house, was administered to three times, twice for the toothache and once for headache, caused by physical derangement; and in every instance immediate and seemingly perfect relief was given. Irene (for this is her name) is not a member of the church, but will be I trust ere long. A brother long addicted to the use of tobacco, was by the prayer of faith of himself and brethren, relieved of all desire for its use. I have beheld the power of God manifested in its superiority over the power of darkness in various ways, notable among which was that of a brother seeking to discharge his duty, being stricken to the floor, and immediately restored to the vigor of his manhood by the power of God. I have also seen others operated upon in a similar manner. A brother who to all human appearances and according to the decision of an old and experienced physician, who is a member of the church, was within a week of his grave, by the saving power of the gospel was raised from his bed of affliction, and now enjoys the buoyancy of health and physical activity, of which he was deprived for years. I have beheld the power of God manifest in the gifts of prophecy, tongues and interpretation; also of wisdom, knowledge, faith, discernment with the fruits of love, peace, joy, patience, reverence, hope, charity, brotherly kindness and every Christian virtue. A young brother from the southern climes, W. H. Payne by name, arose in social meeting and enunciated truths of sublime worth and marked adaptation in words of burning eloquence. Several have sung in tongues. Five of the Saints to my knowledge have heard the heavenly music of angelic hosts, wafted from instruments touched with the deft fingers of the ideal band. Last but not least of the Spirit's manifestation, has been and is that of the exquisite thrill of rapture permeating the beings of those seeking and journeying onward to the better land:

I should not omit to mention the promise made to the Saints here, that our land should yield her increase; and even this season the improvement in the growth of corn, potatoes, melons and other vegetables, is to my mind very marked.

What I have written has been with the view to benefit my brethren and to encourage all men who may read, to make and keep the covenant of the gospel which constitutes the only means of faith and action by which men can be saved. I wish to add my testimony, that I know the gospel to be true; and the medium of communication from God; and its practice the only mode of life that secures happiness in the present sphere, or guarantees of joy in the world to come.

The Lord grant that the Saints of God, far and near, may arouse to a true sense of the duties and responsibilities imposed upon them by virtue of their sacred trust, and that all the pure in heart may continue to traverse the pathway of life in pilgrimage to the golden city. In sincerity and truth I hope to remain steadfastly to the end,

GEO. S. HYDE.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

September 18th.—Mr. Solomon, a member of the Legislature of the Island of Jamaica, had an interview with Sir John A Macdonald, the Canadian Premier, to urge the admission of the island into the Canadian Confederation. Sir John was non-committal, and Mr. Solomon seemed to be somewhat disappointed at the reception which his proposal met.

Henry M. Stanley delivered a lecture in London on the Congo country. He held that that region presented a wide field for commerce, and that the natives are willing to co-operate in its development with Europeans if fairly dealt with. He severely criticised the conduct of the Portuguese towards the natives, who, he said, are friendly towards the English and the Protestant missionaries.

The Pall Mall Gazette says; The fighting near the Kin-Pai forts, below Foo Chow yesterday was greatly exaggerated. Only 200 French troops were landed, and those defeated the villagers.

A dispatch from Hong Kong to the Times says: The French man-of-war Atalante boarded a regular Hong Kong trading junk and threw its cannon, guns, and ammuniton overboard. The merchants of Hong Kong are greatly irritated at the action of the french.

Bands of citizens paraded the principal quarters of the city of Brussels, Belgium, last evening. The royal palace was the center of attraction, and before it multitudes gathered. The King was hooted and the cry "Vive la Republique" was frequently heard. The liberal papers appeal to the people to remain calm and use only lawful means to combat the new Education bill.

Sir Evelyn Baring and Nubar Pasha have received an identical cipher telegram from Gen. Gordon, dated Khartoum, Aug., 26th. He is waiting for the British forces in order to evacuate the Egyptian garrisons. The telegram reads: "Send me Zebehr Pasha. Pay him a yearly salary of £8,000. I shall surrender the Soudan to the Sultan directly 200,000 Turkish troops arrive. If the rebels kill the Egyptians you are answerable for the blood-shed. I require £300,000 to pay my soldiers, my daily expenses being £1,500. Within a few days I shall take Berber, where I have sent Col. Stewart, Consul Power, and the French Consul with troops and Bashi Bazouks, who, after stopping there for afortnight, will burn the town and return to Khartoum. Col. Stewart will go to the Equator, via Dongola, to bring the garrison from there. I do not believe the report that El Mahdi is coming hither. I hope the Soudanese will kill him. If the Turkish troops arrive they should come by way of Dongola and Kassala. You should give them £300,000.

There was an election riot yesterday at Jaska, Croatia. Two persons were killed, and many arrests were made.

Advices from the North state that a Russian corvet at Vladivostok seized the American schooner Eliza for having contraband goods on board, and the English schooner Helena for illegal hunting.

The delegates to the International Copyright Congress at Berne have signed the draft of a treaty for the protection of literary and artistic copyright, the adoption of which will be recommended to the various Powers.

The Canadian passenger propeller Quebec is two days overdue at Port Arthin, Ont. She is reported to have been wrecked on the north shore of Lake Superior.

September 19th.—The Prussian police believe that America is harboring at this moment a wholesale murderer whose many crimes have just been brought to light. His name is Sievert, and he was until recently the proprietor of a public house known as the Cruche Hotel, at Rurzig, in Pomerania. He is a shoemaker by trade, and is a tall, muscular man, with florid complexion and yellow hair. A few weeks ago Sievert sold out his hotel and left Pomerania. The new landlord took possession recently, and on searching the premises was horrified at finding six corpses, in various stages of decomposition, concealed in a cellar. The bodies were all of men, and all had evidently been murdered at different times. They have all been identified as the remains of traveling merchants who had been temporary lodgers in Sievert's tavern, and who had mysteriously disappeared.

It is alleged that the "Molly Maguire" organization is showing signs of activity in the coal regions of Pennsylvania.

A swine plague has broken out in Macon Co., Ill., and a case of pleuro pneumonia has been discovered in a large Kentucky herd of cattle.

Violent shocks of earthquake were felt throughout Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and some other states. The vibrations in many places were accompanied by a sound resembling distant thunder. Tall buildings trembled, articles were shaken from shelves, and plastering thrown down.

September 20th.—The Catholic churches in the Province of Canton, China, have been destroyed. Most of the pastors have been French Missionaries.

The German Ultramontanes have issued an address in view of the approaching elections for the Reichstag. The address insists on the abrogation of the culturkampf, protests against State socialism, and proposes direct universal suffrage.

A commissioner of the United States, fully instructed by the state department, is about to visit the Congo country, in Western Africa, the importance of which as a trading country, has attracted the attention of European nations, and caused an unfriendly rivalry between them.

Conflicting rumors reach Cairo of the progress of events in the Soudan. According to the latest, which is brought from Dongola this morning by messenger, Gen. Gordon, within the last few days, has gained two victories, and the siege of Khartoum has been raised. The Nudir of Dongola telegraphs the authorities that messengers from Gen. Gordon have brought eighteen dispatches. Two of them were for the Sheik of the Kabbabish tribe, which were delivered. Two other dispatches are directed to the son-in-law of the Sheik, who, however, had been previously publicly executed by order of the Mahdi's Ameer in order to overawe the people and compel them to join the Mahdi. The Ameer, with many chiefs, was afterward killed in battle. The messenger who brought the dispatches reports that the 24th of July Gen. Gordon's troops slaughtered the rebel army which had been sent against him from Kordofan. Another battle was fought the 30th of August, which resulted in Gen. Gordon's forcing the rebels to raise the siege of Khartoum, and during which Sheik Sidi, his son, and their followers were killed. The above reports are confirmed by Khatem Elmoos Bey, who is holding Halfiyeh with Egyptian soldiers. The Shaggieh and other tribes have come in and tendered their submission. Sennaar is now in perfect security. The population of Berber has recovered from its fright over the anticipated descent by Gen. Gordon. The whole Shaggieh country is now tranquil. The Chiefs are now imploring for mercy, and have made a compact upon the Koran to abandon the Mahdi. The compact has so far been observed.

This report of Admiral Courbet's 'great victory over the Chinese at the Kinpai Pass, on the Min River, below Foo Chow, has practically been disproved.

The French have added to their previous complications by destroying the police junks in the Minn River which acted for the suppression of piracy. The neutral fleet are now compelled to suppress the pirates.

A correspondent of the London Times at Foo Chow gives the following account of the events immediately preceding the bombardment of the arsenal: On the 1st Admiral Courbet received a telegram from M. Patenotre. The gallant officer was furious—"jumping mad" I was told. He stamped his foot and said, "If I only had the dispatch I expected there would be no sign of the Chinese fleet in half an hour." Admiral Courbet has been persistently uncivil to the Chinese officials, subjecting them to every possible humiliation. He hardly allowed them speech. The only argument, he says, is "un parfait coup de canon." The commanders of the Chinese gunboats before the 31st were frequently told by him that acts of their usual duty, such as getting ready to move their anchors, amounted to direct menace, and that he would fire if they were continued. Meanwhile the french torpedo-boats cruised round the Chinese gunboats, making a feint of laying torpedoes under them. Both fleets have been under steam night and day, cleared for action, the French guns being loaded, the torpedoes on the booms, and the crews sleeping by their guns, half a ships crew doing duty by turns. These facts show the truth of my telegram stating that Admiral Ceurbet had done his best to provoke hostilities. The French crews were also greatly excited and in a state of incipient mutiny owing to the enforced delays and the prospect of peace.

It is estimated that, in addition to the direct cost of the cholera in Europe, it has caused a loss to France, Spain and Italy of not less than $20,000,000, which would otherwise have been spent by tourists in the districts which are now under the ban. There were no deaths from cholera at Marseilles yesterday, but three fresh cases developed on board the ship Le Resolu from Martinique. Four deaths from cholera are reported in the Pyrenees-Orientales today. Two deaths occurred at Toulon from cholera yesterday.

September 21st.—Election riots have occurred in Austro-Hungary. At Agram the military have been called out to suppress the rioters. An editor has been arrested and the Mayor of the place suspended.

Michael Davitt and Mr. O'Brien of United Ireland addressed a large meeting at Castle Wellan in the North of Ireland. Mr. Davitt's speech created a sensation. He announced that he was second in command of the Irish National League, which is fighting the battle Irish liberty, and he appealed to his hearers, mostly Catholics, to lay aside their religious prejudices and to unite with their Protestant fellow-countrymen in the struggle for National self-government. It is understood that Mr. Parnell and Mr. Davitt have settled all their differences, and that Davitt's statement that he is second in command is the public announcement of that fact.

When, at their last meeting, the Czar, Kaiser, and Emperor stood together, the Czarina said to Prince Bismarck: "Could we always be so, would it not bring happiness to the world?" Prince Bismarck replied: "As long as I am Chancellor it will remain so, and when it cannot be so it will be my time for giving in."

The great Powers are now all united again in a policy of resisting Turkey's efforts to emancipate herself from international control. The British Government, which has heretofore been holding aloof from the quarantine dispute, piqued at the attitude of the Powers at the recent conference, has instructed its Chargé d' Affaires to follow the same line of action precisely as the other embassies in that matter. The Porte, which desires to conceal its apprehension with respect to the disturbance in Albania, taking advantage of the absence of quarantined precautions in Montenegro to establish strong cordons along the frontier, ostensibly to control the communications, and thus giving the appearance of an administrative measure to what is in reality a strategical movement. Furthermore, its political object is the transfer of the ceded districts of Montenegro without fighting between the Albanians and the Montenegrins.

There were four deaths from cholera today in the eastern Pyrenees. No fresh cases are reported in the district. There were five deaths today at Marseilles and three at Toulon. There were six new cases of cholera and four deaths at Alicante today, and nine new cases and five deaths at Tarragona. Bulletins of the progress of cholera in Italy the last twenty-four hours:

At a general meeting of the German Colonial Union, yesterday, Prince Hohenlohe presided. Resolutions were adopted approving the recent action of Germany on the west coast of Africa, and declaring the Government might rely upon the full support of the nation in the event of further action.

It is claimed that 500 Chinamen have made their way into Oregon from British territory, within the last three months, on the false pretense that they lived in America before the Chinese Restriction law was passed.

Sept. 22.—The Clerical Education Act continues to excite dissension in Belgium. The Liberals seem determined to oppose its operation at all hazards.

It is reported that El Mahdi intends to reinforce his troops operating before Khartoum. The friendly Amharas have again defeated the Hadendowas, and the latter have appealed to Osman Digma for assistance. The Amharas lost thirty killed in the encounter.

A Shanghai dispatch to the London Times says: A new complication has arisen in the French-Chinese difficulty. The blocking of the bar at the mouth of the Woosung river has been ordered by the Chinese authorities, although a passage for the ships of neutrals is to be left. This action is due to the Chinese disbelief in the promises of the French. A veritable panic prevails at Shanghai, and the merchants of the neutral Powers have asked the naval commanders of the Powers to take some action. The British Consul has advised the Chinese authorities to obtain skilled foreign assistance, and keep the traffic open. The Russian Consuls have been ordered to protect the French interests wherever the French Consuls leave. The Russian fleet in Chinese waters comprises one ironclad, three cruisers, two corvets, and six gunboats. Three other ironclads are expected to arrive. This strength, in view of the smallness of the Russian interests in China, is considered significant.

Since last accounts eleven fresh cases of cholera have developed at Alicante and six at Tarragona

Spain, and three deaths have occurred at the latter and five at the former place. Six deaths from cholera occurred to-day in the Department of the Eastern Pyrenees, France, and one at Toulouse. At Toulon none.

The Liberals of Belgium are sharply criticised by all the Liberal papers in Europe for their refusal to accept the results of constitutional government when the results are against them. Having outbidden in bigotry and dogmatism the most illiberal and fanatical party in Europe they now have recourse to violence. The alarmists look for nothing short of a civil war. The King is hooted daily. The Radical papers speak of him as Mr. Leopold Cobourg, and the street-crowds shout for the Republic. But the gravest danger in it all is that the disorders may provoke foreign intervention.

French advices confirm the English reports that the siege of Khartoum has been raised, and that the Mahdi's followers have left the surrounding country.

A new and fatal cattle disease has made its appearance in the vicinity of Leavenworth, Kas. The State Veterinarian is investigating.

September 23.—The Mahdi's force is estimated at 25,000 men, of whom 10,000 are armed with Remington rifles. He has twenty Krupp guns.

The British gunboat Wasp was wrecked off Tory Island, on the northwest coast of Ireland. Only six of those who were on board were saved. Fifty-two, including all the officers were drowned.

The National Gazette of Berlin in its issue of today, makes the extraordinary declaration that Germany, Austria, and Russia will support any step taken by France in regard to the Egyptian financial question. This is most significant in view of the recent agreement of the three Emperors.

To-day was the anniversary of the revolution which, in 1830, resulted in the independence of Belgium. The Liberals made it the occasion of a demonstration against the present Ministry. At Brussels a veteran, addressing an assembled multitude, said: "Our ancestors fought to make Belgium free. She is no longer so. Belgians will never be Romanists." The crowd sang the "Marseillaise" and other revolutionary songs. Two Republican editors have been arrested and the police have seized a number of Republican and Socialistic pamphlets. Matters are becoming quite exciting in the little Kingdom.

Eight fresh cases of cholera developed to-day in the Province of Alicante, and one in Tarragona, Spain. In the latter province there were four deaths; in the former ten. The infected towns in the Province of Alicante are completely cordoned. The reports from different parts of Italy for the last twenty-four hours give a total of 435 fresh cases and 265 deaths. Naples continues to be the centre most seriously afflicted. There were 251 fresh cases and 152 deaths there. There were two deaths of workmen by cholera at Toulon, France, to-day.

Twenty-one persons have been arrested at Vienna, Aus., charged with complicity in Buchmann's Anarchist schemes. The gunpowder and dynamite stores in Wiener-Neustadt and Neunkirchen were entered last night and their contents stolen. A mine was exploded under the steeple at Neustadt.

Thomas S. Judah, a Montreal Justice of the Peace, has been arrested on the charge of obtaining $25,000 from G. A. Barland under false pretenses—giving a mortgage on property he did not own. Burland and Judah were friends and belonged to the "first families" of the Canadian city.

Sep. 24.—London Truth, which is usually well informed as to what in America is called the "inside of politics," says that, in case the Franchise bill is rejected at the extra session of Parliament by a small majority in the House of Lords, as many new Peers favorable to the measure will be created as may be necessary to pass it over the obstructers. The same journal says that this policy has the approval of the Queen, and that Royal Dukes will vote with the Liberals in favor of the bill. Should the majority be of large proportions, however, the House of Commons will be asked to express its opinion on the constitutional position of the Lords by means of an address to the Queen, or some such way. A dissolution will then take place, and the Liberals will appeal to the constituencies on the issue of the reform or abolition of the Upper House. This is a bold and startling programme—one which will move England to the depths.

The Mudir of Dongola telegraphed yesterday from Debbeh, as follows: "Thank God, good news. I have to-day met the rebel hosts from Kordofan and Berber, and obtained a complete victory over them at Kosti, near Ambukoi. After the fight we found among the dead the bodies of Achmet Hiai, chief of the rebels, Mahmoud, called Emir of Dongola, and the Emirs appointed to Tripoli, Cairo, Keneh, Esneh, and Assouan. I need not mention that the rebels were in vast numbers, whereas the soldiers of the Mudiriah were few, but although our numbers are small, we have slain great numbers of the enemy. The province, and for some distance south, is now safe and tranquil, for which thanks be to God. As I have told your Excellency, Maj. Kitchener wished greatly to be present at the fight, but fate did not permit it. I hope to return to Oordeh in a few days."

There were 441 new cases of cholera in Italy, and 205 deaths. In the city of Naples there were 264 new cases and 75 deaths. This is a large falling off in the death rate at Naples. There were fifteen deaths from cholera to-day in the Eastern Pyrenees, including eight at Perpignan. There was one death at Toulon.

Captain Hines, of the whaling schooner Byron, which has just returned to Gloucester, Mass., from the Greenland coast, reports poor fishing in that region this year, on account of the icebergs, and the exceptionally severe weather. He reports the Greenlanders in a pitiable state of servitude to the Danes, who pretend to Christianize them. The Danes will not even allow them to work for Americans, and two whom he employed were taken off by a Danish man-of-war.

Two girls, Carrie and Bessie Waterman, killed their little brother, aged six, near Ottawa, Kan., Monday. They have been arrested and held for murder.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

September 19.—Loss by fire at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, $50,000. Berlin, Wis., $20,000. Milton, Ind., $20,000. East Tawas, Mich., is surrounded by forest fires, and the air is hot and suffocating. A brisk wind is spreading the flames rapidly. The Michigan Central Railroad bridge at White Feather was burned in the forest fires. Workmen are now rebuilding it. Loss by fire at Canandaigua, N. Y., $5,000. Near Kankakee, Ill., $3,500. Elsie, Iowa, $10,000.

September 20.—The Golden Eagle clothing house of St. Louis, Mo., was totally destroyed by fire; loss $125,000. Three steamboats were burned at Cincinnati, O., loss $64,000. At Chester, Pa., a tug boat was burned, and one life lost. Loss by fire at Dedham, Mass., woolen mill, $75,000. Vincennes, Ind., $10,000. McDonald Station Pa., $15,000.

The Grand Trunk car-works at London, Ont., burned to-night. Perhaps 400 men will be thrown out of employment. Most of the men lost their tools. The loss is estimated at $400,000.

Loss by fire at Terrell, Tex., cotton seed oil mills, $50,000.

A forest fire is raging two miles from Chardon, O. Thousands of dollars of damage have already been done.

September 21.—Fire broke out in the lumberyards of Monroe Bros. on Jefferson street Cleveland, O., on the flats at 11 o'clock to-day, a mile distant from the scene of the conflagration of two weeks ago. The dry condition of the material lent the flames encouragement, and before engines could reach the spot several piles were ablaze, and the storehouse was beyond control. Fortunately the wind drove the flames toward one side, and after four hours' hard work the engines had control of the fire in this yard. At 2:50 o'clock, when the crowd had dispersed and the engines were ready to return, flames were discovered in a narrow opening in the thickest part of the lumber-piles in the yards of Browne, Strong & Co., a thousand feet away. Immediately the attention of the department was turned to the new discovery. In vain did the hose play upon it. The lumber was as dry as shavings and the flames leaped and spread rapidly beyond the control of the fifteen engines. The fire was in the midst of nine acres of lumber, and Chief Dickenson saw that the task before him was more than the Cleveland department could handle and word was sent to adjoining cities for assistance, and their engines are now at work. Both fires were clearly incendiary and the greatest excitement prevails over this third attempt to destroy the industries of the flats. At the first fire it would have been unpleasant for any incendiary or even a suspicious person discovered, for the crowd was thirsty for just such a victim. The Fifth Regiment, O. N. G., and the Cleveland Greys were ordered on duty at the scene of the conflagration. The flames spread throughout the yards. It was impossible for the department to do effective work on the fire, so intense was the heat and so rapidly did the flames leap over the passage-ways between the piles. When the first fire in Monroe Bros.' had been gotten under control a second blaze was discovered in a storehouse 300 feet away. The watchman, breaking in the door, found the floor covered with oil. Prompt action soon extinguished the flames, and part of the engines had gone home when the flames were discovered in the yards of Strong, Browne & Co. It was impossible for sparks to reach this location from the first fire, and the manner in which the flames started showed it to be incendiary. One man was arrested and locked up for making incendiary remarks at the fire. At 11 o'clock to-night the fire is under control. Monroe Brothers' loss on lumber is not less than $60,000, which is covered fully by insurance. Two years ago the same firm suffered a clear loss of $86,000 by the floods. Browne, Strong & Co., is one of the largest firms in the city. They own extensive pineries in Michigan. Their premises cover an area of nine acres, with 600 feet of dockage. They have storage capacity for 25,000,000 feet, and had on hand 10,000,000. They estimate their loss at between $100,000 and $150,000, only partially insured.

Sep. 22.—Loss by fire near Boston, Mass., $200,000. Sand Lake, Mich., $20,000. Lonoke, Ark., $12,000. Portland, Oregon, $190,000. Eureka, Nev., $70,000.

A few weeks ago the Town of Ainsworth, W. T., was visited by a heavy fire, destroying about $60,000 worth of Northern Pacific Railway property. Beyond all doubt the fire was the work of an incendiary. Since then four bold but unsuccessful attempts have been made to burn up the place, and the citizens have been kept in a constant state of alarm. They have organized a vigilance committee and officers patrol the town day and night. All roughs have been notified to leave the place. Any incendiary caught will be lynched on the spot.

A very destructive tornado and hail-storm, accompanied by the peculiar buzz of a cyclone, visited the northern and eastern part of Macon county, Illinois, this morning, blowing down corn, wrecking numerous outbuildings, turning over cribs, tearing down rail and board fences, and injuring some stock. There were three inches of hail on the ground at 6 o'clock this morning. Along the track of the storm chimneys were blown off several farm-houses. The hail broke hundreds of window-panes, and rain fell in torrents. Along the Illinois Midland Road cattle-chutes were blown down, and at Lovington a dwelling was torn from its foundations. There was a good fall of rain about Decatur, the first for two weeks. This morning at 3 o'clock a tornado also passed through Whitman and Oakley Townships and along the Midland Road south, blowing down corn-cribs, shaking houses, and turning over fences in its path. Four inches of hail fell near Argenta, breaking all the window-panes in several farm-houses.

There was a serious railway accident yesterday near Locle, Switzerland, caused by a collision of two passenger trains. One lady was killed outright and sixteen others seriously injured.

Sep. 23.—Between Pontiac and New Lexington, Ill., the night express train was telescoped by a freight train. Two sleepers, the freight engine, and six freight cars were burned up, and the escape from instant death of a score of passengers was most miraculous.

A disastrous wreck occurred on the bridge approach directly above Brooklyn street, East St. Louis, about 6:40 o'clock this morning, which resulted in the demolition of two engines, thirteen freight cars, and the killing of eight head of stock, besides the maiming of twenty cattle. The engineers and firemen jumped before the collision, and so escaped without injury.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

It is reported that England is going to loan the Egyptian Government $40,000,000 to pay floating debts, the Alexandria indemnity, and the cost of works for the more extensive irrigation of the Nile Valley.

During the week ending September 19, there were 218 failures in the United States and Canada, against 220 during the previous week.

Rindakopf Bros., clothiers, of New York, failed

September 19. The liabilities are estimated at $900,000. It is claimed that the assets are $1,100,000.

September corn sold in the Chicago market September 20, at 70 cents per 56 pounds, which is equal to 75 cents for 60 pounds. At the same time September wheat sold at 75 cents for the bushel of 60 pounds. Only once before this in the history of the Chicago market has corn risen to an equal price with wheat, and that was "long, long ago."

At a conference of the lumber-dealers of the East Saginaw (Mich.) district Saturday September 19, it was determined to shut down the saw-mills about the 10th of October and thus curtail production.

Burdett & Pond of New York, engaged in the South American trade, failed September 24th. The liabilities are placed at $250,000. Value of assets not known. The house was established in 1869. The failure is attributed to injudicious investments in real estate.

During the last month 2,700 tons of flour and large quantities of other provisions were shipped from San Francisco to China in anticipation of a prolonged war with France. The Pacific steamer San Pablo which sails to-day for China will carry 1,000 tons of flour alone.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the corn trade, says: Fine, hot weather causes very favorable conditions for the next year's crops. Values have declined. Sales of English wheat the last week were 74,135 quarters at 33 shillings 10 pence, against 60,444 quarters at 41 shillings 9 pence, the corresponding week last year. In the foreign trade there has been a further decline, and values are only nominal. The off-cost trade is confined to a few Australian cargoes and one American, which sold at 32 shillings 3 pence. There were ten arrivals during the week and seven sales. Two cargoes were withdrawn and five remained. Eighteen cargoes are now due. In London the trade is much depressed. Flour is sixpence lower and maize very quiet. Barley is sixpence lower and oats quiet. Beans and peas are unchanged; business in them is steady.

The gold reserve in the United States Treasury is $129,000,000, or about $15,000,000 more than it was two weeks ago.

The aggregate clearances in the principal clearing-houses of the United States for the last week show a decrease of 26.2 per cent as compared with the corresponding week last year.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

Conference of the above district will convene at Vassar, Tuscola county, Michigan, October 18th, 1884, at ten o'clock a.m. Vassar is on the Saginaw Narrow Gauge Railroad. Visiting brethren will enquire for Thomas Hunt or James Barnes. A full report from all branches is solicited. Hope to see W. H. Kelley and other leading officials, to cheer the saints by their presence and instruction. Come one, come all, bringing the spirit of peace with you, that we may have a time of rejoicing long to be remembered.

Selected Poetry.

"HEIMGANG."

"Heimgang!" So the German people
Whisper when they hear the bell
Tolling from some gray old steeple,
Death's familiar tale to tell;
When they hear the organ dirges
Swelling out from chapel dome,
And the singer's chanting surges,
"Heimgang!" Always going home.

"Heimgang!" Quaint and tender saying,
In the grand old German tongue,
That hath shaped Melancthon's praying,
And the hymns that Luther sung,
Blessed be our loving Maker,
That, where'er our feet shall roam,
Still we journey towards "God's Acre,"
"Heimgang!" Always going home!

THE UNIVERSE.

BROAD, high and grand, are terms meager in their significance when used to express thoughts upon a subject of such infinite and incomprehensible magnitude. What is it, where are its bounds, and what does it contain, are matters of thought to many. Algebra is a perfect enigma to those who have not learned it. The simplest reading is a blank with no intelligence to a child before letters are known to his mind. Wedges are driven in solid timber by inserting the apex where the slightest incision has been made. "Hold fast all I give you," is as practical in mental research as in youthful recreation. Bro. Jason W. Briggs remarked at Conference that people might be born suddenly, but nobody grows suddenly. The thought is a good one, and tends to encourage. Gen. Washington was given to the world in embryo. His ability and success as general, statesman and president, were matters of development rather than free, instantaneous gift. This development was due to diligent application, temperate living, free thought and a philanthropic mind. Loosing his ship from monarchical harbors, we see him with others sailing amid the free waters of republicanism or democracy, which really mean the same thing. Because his forefathers lived under a king was to him not sufficient reason why he, his associates and countrymen should remain the subjects of despotism. To such men we are indebted for our national and domestic privileges and security; and the general advancement of knowledge in the world.

Three prime, distinctive, essential features compose the great universe—space, matter and intelligence, being cognate, coeval and coeternal. Solomon said, whether wisely or not we do not know, "There is nothing new under the sun." So far as relates to matter without reference to organization, we doubt whether there ever was or ever will be "anything new." The blood performing its function for the body presents a miniature exhibition of the principle of God's "one eternal round." Intelligence is superior to matter and space, just as the inmates of a dwelling are superior to the place of their occupation and the material objects that surround them. All are equally needful to the useful occupation of the other. The fact that matter and intellect occupy space, proves the latter to be essential to their existence. Matter may and does exist independently of intelligence; but is inert and without the operation of spiritual power never would move, eternities unceasing.

Suspend or remove for a time the propellant power, and the machinery of the universe would expend its momentum and settle to a state of quiescence very much as a thresher runs down when the power ceases its application. Tracing from effect to cause, we search for the motor power by which the thresher is run, and find it in the spirit of the animals thus employed. If engine and steam are the medium of power, their impetus originates in the spirit of the engineer, who by his wisdom and will power sets these forces to work, thus exemplifying the power of mind over matter. The reason perpetual motion as sought for has not been accomplished is, effects are not produced without cause. That which is inanimate, be it ever so well organized, can neither originate nor maintain its own state of action. A watch when wound only runs until the force intelligently applied is exhausted. The first work in the utilization of matter is a proper organization of its parts. This system is obtained, and action may be created by applied and wisely directed force. The human body affords a perfect exhibition of the principle by which element is made to assume symmetrical form and continue in a state of action. Imbued with the spirit, it is subject to its control—it breathes, walks, talks, laughs according to the will of the intellect. Deprive it of this spirit essence, and it is dead, and moves only as propelled by other force than its own.

By what rule of reasoning have men been led to believe and advocate that the wonderful works of the universe came by chance? By analogy? There is no parallel, no example to which we may refer, nor an exemplification of the magic power of "chance." The issue is in a correct answer to this question, "Is chance intelligent?" If so, better give it form and feature, and call it God. As an illustration of what chance may do, (admitting for argument that the principle of fortuity exists), we will take team, wagon, cash and our brains, and go to the nearest town, there to purchase material of which to erect a house; lumber, doors, windows, nails, locks and all complete. On the way home by accident, chance, foolhardiness or excessive blundering, the entire load is precipitated down a steep descent. Cap is lifted and we scratch our head in surprise and dismay, when something suggests, "Perhaps chance has made you a house." With faint hope we go to the site fortuitously selected, and behold chaos. Let the accident be repeated a thousand times, and the result will be substantially the same.

The incredulous have sported in high glee over the inconsistency of God's making the world "out of nothing;" but how much better or more reasonable is it to suppose that the continual action of blind, inanimate, unintelligent material, has somehow given birth to organized intelligence? Can a single instance be shown where butter beans have germinated on a gourd vine? Yet the disparity of the former is much greater than that of the latter. When nature establishes the precedent of sour kroust growing on a sweet apple tree, it may be in order to look for life and intelligence to emanate from that which has none.

In the vast universe there are innumerable multitudes of intelligences of various forms, characters and degrees, with one infinitely superior and entirely supreme, standing at the head, presiding over all. It is as easily proven that God exists as that man exists as an intelligent entity. Neither is visible to the natural eye. The existence of the spiritual man is known by the operation of its power in the physical being, and his works appear as the evidence of his intellectual identity. The personality of God is not visible to every one; he exists however, as his works abundantly attest in the world's creation, and the adaptation of its parts. It is agreed that nature surpasses art in the formation of the useful and the beautiful; is it rational then to believe the one to be the work of intelligence, and the other the work of chance? Is the supervision the result of fortuity, and the inferior the result of design? The modest violet is clothed upon with meaning, and tells in the simplicity of its language that in its creation there was the execution of design. Unbiased observation shows everything to have been made for a purpose, and purpose does not originate in chance, any more than the world was made out of nothing.

There are some who doubt the existence of a literal devil, and attribute the evils of the world to certain inherent qualities of mankind. The physical maladies, mental impairments and spiritual phenomena, resident in the world can not well be accounted for upon any other hypothesis than that there are satanic entities in the spirit realm. No man when left without the interference of other agencies, is divided against himself; but human experience verifies the statement that men often fail to do the good they desire by reason of an element, not imaginary but real, resisting their best impulses and purest desires. If there is no devil, there is no God; for the existence of both is proven by a like process of reasoning; and if this rule is incorrect, everything that we esteem to be real and true is clothed with mischievous uncertainty. We are in the midst of a sea of intelligence. Vegetation had a spiritual before a natural creation. Its life power is organized intelligence, else its identity could not be accounted for nor preserved. Each plant, tree and flower, holds its distinctive individuality the same as the animal creation. After maturer deliberation, I have become satisfied that the entire being of man and beast is diffused with intelligence. When any part of the body receives an injury, the pain ensues in the part thus affected. If the finger is not a conscious entity, how can it know when it is hurt. Does the brain communicate the information? Even if this should be the case, the finger must be intelligent, or it could not receive the knowledge. The fact is, man in his spiritual formation is not a single entity of spirit, but an organization of intelligent faculties. The senses of seeing, hearing, tasting, smelling and feeling, are equally intelligent and useful, though differing in character.

The brain is called the "seat of intellect." To my mind it stands related to the body very much as the Capital is related to the State, or the county seat to the county. It is the place where delegates meet, court sits, decisions are rendered, and directions for the general government of the body are given. The various members of this wonderful organization would not be susceptible of direction were they wholly devoid of understanding. The stomach is not a mere tool for the body. Having its individuality, it has its preferences, and is capable of making them known. When the eye rests upon an article of food, the stomach is immediately informed of its existence and appearance. The sense of smell imparts the knowledge of its flavor; and thus it is enabled to know and tell whether it wants it or not.

There is a strong affinity existing between matter and spirit. One is as material as the other. If elementary clothing was not beneficial to intelligence, it would not have assumed this garb. To Adam was given a physical body that his spirit might be clothed. The essence of life needed a house in which to dwell. He lost this tenement by transgression, but regained it through the resurrection and the "spirit and element thus connected received a fulness." When that which is perfect has come, the earth will be clothed with the effulgence of God's glory, and thus purified and celestialized, will become the dwelling place of "the spirits of just men made perfect." Evil, as a principle, always did and always will exist; but as an entity it is simply the disarrangement or perversion of that which in itself is good—something out of place. Every one has a calling, a mission to fulfill in life by reason of appointment and mutual consent. If he becomes impatient, dissatisfied with his lot and unappreciative of the results to follow his labors and seeks to do the work of another by reason of envy—this is evil. The prince of evil when acting as an angel of light and authority, was no more evil than any other man; but an undue desire to become the savior of the world by a plan of his own choosing, caused himself and his followers to be cast out as evil from the presence of God. He aspired to do something beyond his ability to perform, and to receive a reward and responsibility he was unable to bear or appreciate. Unwise zeal led him astray; and as repentance seemed to be no part of his nature, his only course was downward—a rapid descent to perdition and woe. His condition, desires and ways in general are faintly outlined in the sad career of some beings called human. One prominent feature of his character is extravagance. He would freely sacrifice all the virtue in the universe for the gratification of one fiendish desire. He would destroy the very power of God, turn the entire system of worlds into chaos, and laugh to see the terrible work of destruction. He would bind every soul in existence in chains of everlasting misery and despair, and rejoice in the awful agony of their wretched doom. Such are the depths of moral depravity. Whims, traditions and "old wives' fables," have anathematized many acts as sinful, that really in their intent and import are harmless. The problem "What is sin," is one involving the careful, unbiased consideration of many things. "Sin is the transgression of law," and law is a creature of necessity and design, not arbitrary, but the embodiment of principles necessary and right. Circumstances of time and place often determine whether an action is sinful. To-day we need a certain quality and quantity of food; tomorrow the same might be an injury to us by reason of physical change or impairment. A game indulged in under favorable conditions, may be harmless, while under other and dissimilar conditions would be exceedingly sinful. To chop wood when a bucket of water should by you be drawn, is out of order, hence wrong; yet the principle of wood cutting is praiseworthy. Temperance signifies eating, drinking, talking, laughing, playing or working as wisdom may dictate and circumstances may justify. Wisdom will justify her children, but caprice and folly stand tremblingly by or flee in sorrow away when the offspring of their union is discovered.

To the minds of some, music from the organ, melodeon or dulcimer, is permissible, but the fiddle is a pandemonium of evil spirits, and manipulators thereof the unhappy children of limbo. "Ring around the rosy," and even checkers are innocent recreations; but the indulgence of some other games in themselves equally harmless, is an indication of total depravity, and an omen of endless ruin, according to the fastidious conception of peculiar minds. There is nothing in the great realm of God's universe, spirit or matter, so far as relates to the existence of its integral parts, that is evil. This does not resolve itself into the proposition that "whatever is, is right." Discord and inharmony are ever wrong in principle and result. Sin has its origin in the improper relation of existent principles and elements, which of themselves are good, and can not be destroyed. There is no relation incident to human life more sacred than that of marital communion; pervert this association of the sexes, and crime of the deepest cast appears. Merit and demerit are traceable to a common source—the agency of spirit intelligence. The basis of reward is voluntary choice and action. The more potency there is in a principle in its ability to exalt, the lower it will degrade when improperly exercised. Satan is totally depraved, because his sin is that of wilful disobedience, an actual turning away from what he knew to be right. Total depravity is a condition of the moral and affectionate nature when the last vestige of purity and good desire is gone. A commensurate responsibility is always associated with the acquired knowledge of God. Our knowledge, responsibilities, duties and privileges are equal.

The strong tie existing between the great realm of matter and spirit will never be severed, save by willful disobedience and rejection of that known to be right and just. The physical man is of the earth, earthy; and in its relation to the spiritual being constitutes a link of affection by which our sympathies and desires are drawn toward mother earth with a fondness strong and deep. As are the feelings of a child to a parent, so are ours toward her. She gave us physical being and still supports us in her daily ministration. Her pleasant scenery we admire, and love to gaze upon the profusion of her magic touch. Clothed upon with light and beauty, upon the smooth or rugged surface of her bosom our spirits find a congenial home. Variety and profuse blending render her adaptation suited to our many wants. The flowing fountain and purling stream, the wooded landscape and prairie sheen, the rocky mountains and quiet shore, present a contrast forever new and delightful. I fail to see why materialism should be considered as dangerous in its tendency, or degrading in its character and purpose. If it is, pray tell why intelligence has seen fit to house itself in material forms. If the physical serves to magnify the powers of being now, why should it not continue to do so in the ages to come. It is a scientific deduction, that "like causes produce like effects;" and time does not pervert nor disannul the rule.

As I have eyes to see and a soul to appreciate, give me heaven where there are green trees, waving grain and lovely flowers, else I shall mourn for "paradise lost" in the disappearance of earthly beauty. I have ears to hear, so let the birds of song chant their melodies in joyful lays, and angel voices transport my being with harmonious sound. Taste and appetite have I. Then let adaptation prepare the luscious fruits and choice viands suited to my digestive powers. May odors divine laden every breeze with sweetest aroma, touching the nasal sense with exquisite thrill. The adage that "anticipation is greater than participation," is only the result of selfish disappointment. Pleasure promised and lawfully sought for, will be fully realized and truly appreciated "in the sweet by and by." By close analysis it will be seen that enjoyment is a true appreciation of that which is good, whether physical or spiritual. The true basis of hope and encouragement is this: spirit and element are eternal, having no beginning and no end. Time is measured to mortals, but really it is not susceptible of diminution. The ages past do not detract from the number of years to come. To become consonant with nature's harmony will secure the rich fruit of abundant joy.

GEORGE S. HYDE.

POWER OF MUSIC.

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS:

I have often felt impressed to write some true instances of the power of music. Seeing the account in the Herald of the sweet singing at the late Stewartsville Conference, brings back those impressions. I am thankful that we have many sweet singers in modern Israel; for there is great power in music, and it is a very beautiful way to praise with heartfelt praise and sweet melody our Lord. It often is more powerful than prayer, to soothe the feelings of those who have wandered from God and his precepts pure, and have grown hardened and scarred in the dark valley of sin. I will give one instance, said to be true, in the writer's own words:

"It was at the close of an almost perfect day in October, a few years ago, that I started on my first trip over the Union Pacific Road, in company with a young editor from New Hampshire, who was on his way out to Colorado to take charge of a newspaper, just started in Gunnison City. Towards morning we went forward to the smoking car, and there found a coachful of passengers who seemed to neither know nor care for what night or sleep was intended. There had been a foot race and a lynching down at North Platte, and the greater part of these "Boys," as they called each other, had been down to see the fun as they called it. As we entered the car, two of the crowd arose, bowed low, waved their arms, and said: "Welcome to the dandy twins, in this wild and ragged country of the cowboy." Laughingly shaking their extended hands, we quickly dropped into the seats they vacated for us, while one of them took a seat on the coal box; the other seated himself on the floor, amid the good natured jeerings of their companions. As time for day light was nearing, a jug of whisky was passed on its last round among these passengers, and a general calm had fallen over the noisy crew; when for our own individual entertainment, we commenced to sing some of our old time college songs. All the crowd listened quietly, until we grew weary and stopped singing. Suddenly a great burly cow boy, clad in naught but a woolen shirt, corduroy pants, tucked into high top boots, on which spurs were jingling, arose in his seat, threw his hat to the farther end of the car, gave a wild yell, and drawing his revolver screamed, "Sing again. Sing you twins, or else I'll shoot out all them ere lights," and demonstrated his ability to do so by extinguishing one at the far end of the car, by a shot from his revolver. The boys began to laugh, shout and swear; young New Hampshire began to tremble, while we dropped down behind the seat in front, and concluded we would sing. Whether or not it was the revolver waving as a signal in the air, or the thought of how boldly we were holding to the seat, we can not tell; but the song "selected for the occasion" was "Hold the fort." The crowd joined in heartily, and the cow boy dropped into his seat again, muttering, "It's all I wanted." After singing a piece or two more, a great burly, black whiskered man across the aisle, who had been listening, turned to us and said, "Strangers, look a here! I guess you're my kind of folks after all. I'm sheriff up at Sidney, and I sing in the Methodist choir, and if you'll sing again I'll sing bass." We sang again, and the sheriff joined in with a strong, rich, clear, melodious bass voice. Others also joined in. Some of the champions of the recent foot race came down the aisle and said, "Say, ye fellars, can't—can't ye sing a song called, "Nearer my God to thee?" We sang it, and after that no more swearing was heard. Then followed, "Just as I am, without one plea." There were strong voices trembled, before that piece was finished. I thought, strange that these rough men could remember these songs. But it was made plain to me when a richly dressed gambler came up from the other end of the car and said in a husky voice, "My mother used to sing 'There is rest for the weary.' Can't you chaps sing it?" It was sung, and just then across the aisle and one seat forward, was sitting a powerfully built man, who wore a belt of cartridges outside of his shirt, supporting two navy revolvers, while just over the top of his boot leg peeped the handle of a dirk knife. His head and face were covered with a shock of black hair, completely hiding his sloping forehead and thick neck. His eyes small and black, were deep set, and nearly covered by shaggy eyebrows, while clear across his forehead and down one cheek, was an ugly scar; and as we studied him before the singing, we came to the conclusion that he was a desperately bad man. He appeared totally indifferent to the singing and the other passengers, until we grew tired, and could recall nothing more to sing, when suddenly he turned and said: "You've forgotten, and I'll sing it." He commenced with the beautiful words:

"I'll sing you a song of that beautiful land,
T'is the far away home of the soul;
Where no grief ever comes, and no sin ever's knowu,
While the years of eternity roll."

CHORUS.—

"O, how sweet it will be, in that beautiful land,
So far from all sorrow and pain;
With crowns on our heads and harps in our hands,
There to meet one another again."

His voice was pure, rich, strong and melodious; gave evidence of culture at some time. As he sang, he seemed to become more and more interested in the song. He leaned over the seat, and closed his eyes, and sang as though from the very depths of his heart; and when near its close, with uplifted hands and tears streaming down over that ugly scar, while he sang as one unconscious of his surroundings:

"I fancy but dimly the veil intervenes, Between that fair city and me."

When he sang the last lines, there were but few, if any, dry eyes in that car; and as the grey light of morning came in through the windows, and the bright sun's rays arose over the prairie, the hearts of those rough looking, sin-stained men were softer, and their thoughts purer, than they had been perhaps for many a day; all because they had remembered the sweet songs about God and heaven, that their mothers and loved ones taught them in their days of childhood and purity."

Dear Saints, truly God has bestowed a great blessing on all who have a talent for music; and I hope all Latter Day Saints will cultivate in themselves and their children (the Hopes) this power of music. Music has power to soothe the savage, melt and soften sin-hardened hearts; comfort the weary, revive the dying; and I bear testimony that I have felt its power, known instances of its power, and seen its power. I hope all Saints will take note of its great power for good. God speed the new music book. Latter Day Saints have always been noted for their singing, (even by our enemies). Saints, arouse! Our beautiful inspired songs of Zion were given of God for a wise purpose. Improve your talents, that these sweet songs, sung by the spirit and understanding, may have power to gather into the fold of the true shepherd many straying, wondering children. May the sweet power of their melody accomplish all God designed.

Your sister in Christ,

SARAH A. ROSE.

THE OLD SOLDIER'S TESTIMONY.

Sermon preached by Bro. William B. Smith, in the Saints' Chapel, Deloit, Iowa, June 8th, 1884. Reported by C. E. Butterworth.

BRO. SMITH arose and said: Ladies, gentlemen, brothers, sisters and friends:—The subject I have under contemplation is the presentation of some particulars of history concerning the rise of Mormonism. While traveling among the Latter Day Saints, and others who are not of our faith, I am subjected to a great deal of criticism, or am asked a great many questions in regard to the opening of this new dispensation. I am glad to find so many of my brethren among the people. I thought to preach two discourses, or rather, let the Bible preach one, and I the other. That the Bible may preach one, I will read 2 Timothy 3:1-5:

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."

This is what we have been trying to do. This is the Bible sermon. I hold in my hand the Book of Mormon. In the past I have had some experience and personally know something about this matter. The world has been filled with articles for the purpose of making it appear a falsehood; and they have gathered these articles and statements together and printed them in books, in order that they might show to the world that it was not true, or worthy of their credit. I have examined these books, and have found that they have been pleased to have their assertions circulated far and near. The great effort of the Christians to advance science and increase knowledge, is commendable; but the great effort put forth in this direction is for the purpose of keeping the people in ignorance.

One of the great hobbies raised upon which to fight is the angel's visit to Joseph Smith. They do not undertake to show that it is not the way God has dealt with his people from the beginning. God has always communed with his people, by dreams, visions, revelations, and the administering of angels. They have never undertaken to show that there are no such beings as angels, or that angels can not be seen by men. Is it impossible for God to send them? "Angels are ministering spirits." God sent his angels at the birth of Christ. One appeared to Zachariah, to Elizabeth, and to Mary. Joseph was warned when to flee into Egypt, and was told when to return. This work came forth in fulfillment of the predictions made by the holy prophets.

Ministers take a great deal of pains to make it appear that this book was compiled from a manuscript written by one Solomon Spaulding. Many statements have been made and circulated far and wide, even printing some of them in books to be used in our schools. It has been printed and placed between the lids of the Bible, in order that in time it might become sanctified. They could not tell bigger lies. Ministers of old called Christ a wine bibber. I know that this Spaulding story is a falsehood. I remember when Joseph called his father's family together, and told them that he had seen an angel, and what this angel had told him. When Joseph received the plates, he did not say they were the Spaulding manuscript.

It will be remembered that just before the angel appeared to Joseph, there was an unusual revival in the neighborhood. It spread from town to town, from city to city, from county to county, and from state to state. My mother attended those meetings, and being much concerned about the spiritual welfare of the family, she persuaded them to attend the meetings. Finally my mother, one sister, my brothers Samuel and Hyrum became Presbyterians. Joseph and myself did not join; I had not sown all my wild oats. At the close of these meetings the different ministers began to beat around to see how many converts they could get to join their respective churches. All said, Come and join us, we are right. Where is the gospel of Christ? Where is the church of Christ? There is a lost gospel. There is a lost church. And here let me say, that it was at the suggestion of the Rev. M——, that my brother asked of God. He said, "Ask of God." It was the church of Christ he was seeking for, what all should seek. God promised to give knowledge to all who lacked, if they would ask. Accordingly he went and bowed in prayer to God. While he was engaged in prayer, he saw a pillar of fire descending. Saw it reach the top of the trees. He was overcome, became unconscious, did not know how long he remained in this condition, but when he came to himself, the great light was about him, and he was told by the personage whom he saw descend with the light, not to join any of the churches. That he should be instrumental in the hands of God in establishing the true church of Christ. That there was a record hidden in the hill Cumorah which contained the fulness of the gospel. You should remember Joseph was but about eighteen years old at this time, too young to be a deceiver.

I well remember the effect produced upon my father's family, when he told them he was to receive the plates; how they looked forward with joy, and waited until the time should come. The circumstances that occurred, and the impressions made on my mind at that time, I can remember better than those which occurred two years ago. We were all looking forward for the time to come, father, mother, brothers and sisters. He did not receive the plates at the time he expected, but some four years afterward. He had not lived as directed. When he went to get the plates he found them as he was told he should. He took them from the stone box in which they were found, and placed them on the ground behind him, when the thought came into his mind that there might be a treasure hidden with them. While stooping forward to see, he was overpowered, so that he could not look farther. Turning to get the plates, he found they had gone; and on looking around found that they were in the box again; but he could not get them, and he cried out, "Why can't I get the plates as Moroni told me I could?" The angel then appeared to him, and told him it was because he had not done as directed. That the plates could not be had for the purpose of making money. That he could not have them for four years.

I remember how the family wept when they found Joseph could not get the plates at that time. It has generally been stated that my father's family were lazy, shiftless and poor; but this was never said by their neighbors, or until after the angel appeared and the story of the golden Bible was told.

After my father's family moved to New York State, in about five years they cleared sixty acres of land, and fenced it. The timber on this land was very heavy. Some of the elms were so large that we had to nigger them off. They were too large to be cut with a cross-cut saw. We built a frame dwelling house and out buildings. My brothers Joseph and Hyrum had to work. Joseph did not have time to make gold plates.

The time to receive the plates came at last. When Joseph received them, he came in and said: "Father, I have got the plates." All believed it was true, father, mother, brothers and sisters. You can tell what a child is. Parents know whether their children are truthful or not. The proof of the pudding is not in chewing the string, but in eating the pudding. Father knew his child was telling the truth. When the plates were brought in they were wrapped up in a tow frock. My father then put them into a pillow case. Father said, "What, Joseph, can we not see them?" "No. I was disobedient the first time, but I intend to be faithful this time; for I was forbidden to show them until they are translated, but you can feel them." We handled them and could tell what they were. They were not quite as large as this Bible. Could tell whether they were round or square. Could raise the leaves this way (raising a few leaves of the Bible before him). One could easily tell that they were not a stone, hewn out to deceive, or even a block of wood. Being a mixture of gold and copper, they were much heavier than stone, and very much heavier than wood.

Where is the Spaulding Story? I am a little too old a man to be telling stories. There is no money in telling this story. I expect to stand before angels and archangels and be judged for how I have told it. When Joseph received the plates he also received the Urim and Thummim, which he would place in a hat to exclude all light, and with the plates by his side he translated the characters, which were cut into the plates with some sharp instrument, into English. And thus, letter by letter, word by word, sentence by sentence, the whole book was translated. It was not written from the Spaulding Romance. That story is false. Some say this romance was stolen by Sidney Rigdon while at Pittsburgh. This is false. Sidney Rigdon knew nothing about it. He never saw or heard tell of the Book of Mormon until it was presented to him by P. P. Pratt and others. He was never at my father's house to see my brother until after the book was published. If he had wanted to see Joseph at that time and remained very long, he would have had to be in the field rolling logs or carrying brush.

I was too young to be as much concerned about this matter as the others, but all were anxious that I should obey the gospel. I have seen the three witnesses, and have questioned them closely. They all tell the same story. They are all dead but one. David Whitmer, the only living witness, still lives and may be found at Richmond, Missouri. Now is the time to go and see him and make a scientific examination of his physiognomy and see if he can see angels where there are none.

Why did all those who first believed this story continue to do so until they past into the other world?

I am satisfied that all who have believed in this work and continue to the end, will have no cause to regret it. I am glad for the privilege I have in telling these things. Glad to find so many who believe with this people. May God bless you all. Amen.

A gentleman in the congregation asked, "Where are these plates?"

Ans.—"They were delivered to the angel again."

Ques.—"How much did they weigh?"

Ans.—"As near as I could tell, about sixty pounds."

When you retire to bed think over what you have been doing during the day.

Never be idle; if your hands can't be employed usefully, attend to the cultivation of your mind.

"MEN'S HEARTS FAILING THEM FOR FEAR."

EDITOR HERALD:—I see in Herald of June 16, 1883, an article headed, "Men's Hearts Failing Them For Fear." I wish to write a few thoughts on the subject, and as I have not had very many years of experience in this work, I trust if I get wrong that some one will give me an eye-opener.

I would first ask, Who was it that gave man his free agency, and gave him a commandment, and attached the penalty of death if man broke the commandment, "For in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die?" It appears to the writer, that Satan's object at that time was to deceive, or at least to devise a plan to induce man to break the command God had given. After man had broken the command of God, who was it that cursed the earth? Was it the devil, or was it God? Who was it that had the authority to say, "For dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return? We make the argument that as God had the power in the beginning, and had not man broken the law, there would not have been any death and suffering of man. By sin death entered the world. Here we see the justice of God, that when his law is broken, justice and judgment must have their demand.

We ask, How was the destruction of Sodom brought about? Hear the words of the angel: "The Lord hath sent us to destroy it." (Genesis 19:13). The Lord promised if there were ten righteous persons in the city that he would not destroy it; but there were not. Was this the devil's work, or was it the justice of God, punishing them because they had become so corrupt? We answer then, that God had the power, the overruling power at that time.

I will try to bring a parallel case with the destruction of Jerusalem. I call the reader's attention to Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 4, par. 3:

"And you must wait yet a little while, for ye are not yet ordained; and their testimony shall also go forth unto the condemnation of this generation, if they harden their hearts against them; for a desolating scourge shall continue to be poured out from time to time, if they repent not until the earth is empty, and the inhabitants thereof are consumed away, and utterly destroyed by the brightness of my coming. Behold I tell you these things, even as I also told the people of the destruction of Jerusalem, and my word shall be verified at this time, as it hath hitherto been verified."

As I am a firm believer in the prophecies of this book I will quote again:

"After your testimony cometh wrath and indignation upon the people; for after your testimony, cometh the testimony of earthquakes that shall cause groaning in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground and shall not be able to stand; and also cometh the testimony of the voice of thundering, and the voice of lightning, and the voice of tempests."

Is this being fulfilled? I leave it for the reader to judge. Has not Christ said, "All flesh is in mine hand?" I would prefer to be in the hands of the Lord. And did not Christ say, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." Matt. 28:18.

The sentence of death was passed on man by God; Christ says all power is given him; he says his word shall be verified. If this be so, is it the devil that is causing all this destruction on earth, or is it because we are living in a day when the world is ripening for destruction because of the wickedness of man. You may say the devil works with man to accomplish his ends. Suppose he does, does man have to be obedient to the devil? I think not. I may go contrary to law, and take the life of my fellow man, and because I allow the evil passion to fill my mind, and cause me to commit the horrible deed, how would I look before the judgment seat of God, pleading for mercy, and saying the devil overcame me, when I had my free agency, to do good or evil. Methinks I hear the sentence pronounced, "Depart from me, ye cursed." Adam did not make such a plea, "The woman gave me and I did eat." The woman said, "The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat." But were these proper excuses for them to make? The command had gone forth, the penalty attached, and man had to suffer.

We are told Christ commanded the tempest to cease while he was with his disciples on the water; if so, why does he not come out and do so to-day? Has he not the power? He says he has all power, and if it be contrary to his will, why does he not stop all this trouble? Or has the command gone forth because of disobedience? Then if Christ has all power, the devil's power must be limited at least. If the old fellow has the power some say he has, and can send forth the wind hither and thither, as he wishes, it seems to me he would concentrate all his forces at once on the Saints of God, and sweep them off the face of the earth. This would be the first thing he would think of doing; but it is not so. We stand as good a show as the world, and my faith reaches still further. Says one, the righteous suffer with the wicked. Sometimes they do, and sometimes they suffer when the wicked do not, and there have been ways of escape for God's people in times gone by, when the wicked have suffered. Sometimes the wicked are allowed to kill the Saints of God. It was so in the days of Christ, and it has been so in our days. Who was it that shed the blood of our prophet? Was it the devil, or was it a wicked mob that violated the laws of the land, and put to death our beloved brethren. Who was it that crucified our Lord and Master? It appears to me it was man. Christ says, "I lay it down of myself."

The Devil had no power over Christ. How was it with the destruction of Jerusalem. Here we see the prophecies of our Savior fulfilled. He could see the wickedness of that people, and he knew destruction awaited them. They were shut up in Jerusalem, and it appears to the writer, that it was the wicked slaying the wicked. Christ had prepared a way of escape for his people, and they were left to be destroyed; and when Titus went around, and saw them in that condition, and the deep gore flowing around the putrid bodies, he groaned heavily, and raising his hands, called God to witness, that it was none of his work. They had become so corrupt that they would soon have put an end to themselves. We talk about cyclones, and the destruction of the wind. I for one would rather be in the whirlwind than to be in such a place as that must have been at Jerusalem; and I don't think I would shake any worse if I should see a cyclone coming, and knew that sudden death would come, than I would if I had been at Jerusalem. I believe the Lord will do just what he has promised to do, and a place of safety will be prepared for his people.

I am not prepared to say that I will escape these destructions, but I believe the church at large will escape, if we live in accordance with the commandments of God. I shall trust in the Lord and if it is my lot to be carried away by the wind, I trust I may not murmur. I prefer to be in the hands of the Lord, and may we have full confidence in him that stands at the helm; for he is able to do his work, and let the devil flutter his wings in the air, if he has the power to do so. He who preserves this vast creation round us, and the laws by which it exists, is able to accomplish his work, and in this day of trial and tribulation, I trust that God will bless us, and that we may abide the day of his coming, in life or death, it matters not which.

A. J. MOORE.

LAMONT, July 12, 1883.

Selections.

FROM the Burlington, Iowa, Hawkeye, of September 7th, 1884, we clip the following letter to that paper, which we commend most cordially to the readers of the HERALD. It is pithy and readable, to us, and we think will be to others.

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS' FAITH.

THE qualifying terms "latter" and "day," as used in the caption, have reference to time, but not change in "the faith once delivered to the saints." "The perfect law of liberty," or the pure gospel of Christ can not be retrenched, enlarged or reconstructed by man or angel; and a sacrilegious attempt to steady the ark of salvation would damage one's prospects for eternal life, and bring them under the wrath and curse of a merciful, yet offended God. The true science of life, even everlasting life, is as perfect and immutable as the adorable author and Jesus the living head.

Our blessed Lord's enemies regarded his conception and birth with strange misgivings. They furthermore claimed that his associates were vile, his disregard to traditions was incongruous, his teachings were at variance with orthodoxy, that he was a "wine bibber and glutton," that he would suffer his followers to purloin corn, and that too, on the holy Sabbath, that he was a blasphemer, and finally that he was not fit to live.

Cruel bias and malicious calumny spread, like the deadly simoon, before and on all sides of the dear Redeemer's pilgrimage. His disciples have ever been misunderstood, misrepresented and maligned. They have a heritage of shame, sorrow and suffering, akin to their Master's.

Let us look at a very few citations from the evangelistic scribes:

"Then answered the Jews and said unto him: Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil?" Now we know thou art a devil."

"It is enough that the disciple be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?"

"Remember the word that I said unto you. The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me they will persecute you."

The Hebrews condemned "the man of sorrow," but the Gentiles dispatched him, all according to a mock trial and perverted justice, as viewed from a friendly standpoint.

The so-called evangelical world, Herod and Pilate like, united to condemn Joseph Smith, the greatest prophet of this last dispensation, while craven leeches sought after his blood. I will condemn, to diabolical infamy, that cold-blooded murder, but devoutly pray the Father's forgiving care, if so be that ignorance was the principal factor in that misguided mob. We will give them the advantage of the doubt, but pray and hope for better things in the future. Does it invalidate a man's divine calling because he perishes from violent hands? Jesus himself testified that a prophet hath no honor in his own country.

"Verily I say unto you, no prophet is accepted in his own country."

"A prophet is not without honor, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house."

"Wherefore, behold, I send unto prophets, and some of them ye shall kill."

In Amos 3:7, surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets to his servants, the prophets. Also in Luke 11:49: "Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I will send them apostles and prophets, and some of them they shall slay and persecute. Again in 1 Cor. 12:28: "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."

Where the streams of divine inspiration flow, and the power of God is present to heal, and signs, miracles and wonders are wrought in the name of the sweet child of Mary, there, and there only, is the bride in readiness for her returning Lord. An invisible church is a misnomer or no church, and the one that flourished cotemporary with Christ and Paul was warred against, wasted away, incorporated pagan rites, was transformed, popularized and ultimately apostatized from its original purity, power and heaven ordained authority. This soul-destroying heresy became universal, as evinced more especially in the dark ages; and the famous John Wesley wisely observed that they had only a "dead form left."

Where there are no signs there are no believers, and where there are no apostles and prophets there the church is not; hence the various sects in Christendom would not compose an approximate counterfeit, because they have only "A form of godliness, but deny the power thereof."

God Almighty did not ordain that the church should go into the wilderness, or wholly apostatize, but he evidently foreknew it. We do not say that any one must steal or murder in order that our penitentiaries may be filled; but we foreknow, from the great depravity of man, that criminals will abound; therefore these huge, dark, damp prison walls are for the double purpose of protecting the innocent and punishing the guilty.

We are frank and free to admit that great and lasting good was evolved from the prayers, vehement struggles, bitter persecutions and dying groans of the reformers of modern times.

The unlawful wedlock of church and state has been severed as the outgrowth and freedom of thought and action, have been bequeathed to the civilized world, to a goodly degree, and to this the best of all earthly governments in a grand and almost unlimited measure.

May the march of liberty and the freedom of the conscience roll forth with refined dignity and accelerated strength.

Political preferment should never be in behalf of any creed, but the right to worship ought to be guaranteed to all orderly and law-abiding institutions. In this family quarrel between the mother church and the harlot daughters, spiritually speaking, the temporal power of the clergy lost its grip.

All these multifarious agencies were precursors of better times, or forerunners of the "everlasting gospel." The ancient order of things was to be revealed or restored, by angel hands, in the latter days.

The work thus inaugurated was to stand forever. It was to broaden and deepen, and sweep outward and onward, till the final consummation, or until the prince of the house of David would sway an imperial scepter over a redeemed and glorified world.

This latter day kingdom will stand the assaults of wicked men and devils. It will flourish amid the ravages of time and the dissolution of nature. Joseph, the martyr, was called, qualified and ordained to usher in "the dispensation of the fulness of times."

He was authorized, empowered and commanded to translate the Book of Mormon, by the gift and power of God. He was further instructed to immerse penitent believers for remission of past sins; administer all the ordinances of divine service, organize and build up the church, according to the pattern laid down in the New Testament, and translate and correct the Bible, by the spirit of revelation. He lived for glory and sealed his testimony in a premature death at the very zenith of life.

Loyalty to the powers that be, and fidelity at the shrine of virtue, have ever been the key note and watchword of the true saint, and must continue down the "corridor of time." This Utah concern is at variance with the laws of God and man, corroded in villainy, dead in transgression, and rotten in apostasy. Their judgment is corrupted, their taste vitiated, their doctrine is revolting, and their practice is filthy beyond measure, and absolutely infernal. I speak advisedly, for I have read them up and labored there recently as a missionary,

They hate the Josephites worse than words can tell, for we are at war with their claims, and are spreading the contagion in their ranks.

The eldest son of the fallen prophet is our presiding elder, and editor-in-chief of our books, tracts, pamphlets, periodicals, etc. Our business headquarters are at Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, where there is a colony. There are more members in this state than any other; but they are scattered throughout the union, in Canada, Great Britain, continental Europe, Australia and the islands of the Pacific. Wherever they sojourn they are to pray for kings, rulers, and governors. They are to avoid sedition, seek peace, promote the general welfare, foster education, encourage industry, deal honestly, act charitably, and lead pious and devout lives. When people embrace the truth and then turn back to the elements of sin it causes the way of truth to be regarded below par.

Mr. Smith prophesied of "a dreadful scourge" a short time before the first advent of the Asiatic cholera. He foretold the great rebellion in 1832. He predicted that great electric storms would sweep the land, that the "sea waves would heave themselves beyond their bounds," the rise of modern spiritualism, his own tragic death, the great latter day apostasy, the present peace of the true fold, and other things too numerous and various to mention. Signs, miracles and wonders followed his ministrations and that of his collaborators. "The blood of the martyr is the seed of the church," hence the good work begun is on the earth and on the move. The jarring of the mustard stock will scatter broadcast the seed.

It must not be supposed that we can give a minute history of this organization, or analyze and prove the various points of our holy religion through the secular press. We hold ourselves in complete readiness to maintain and defend our system of faith and works wherever it is assailed, or when prudent opportunity is offered. Our adversaries or those misinformed can not judge us at all fairly. The bee extracts good from every flower of the field. Christ came out of Nazareth, and who knows but the truth rests with the Latter Day Saints? Those that have not done God's will are ignorant of this doctrine and vice versa.

God bless and save the people on the easy terms of the gospel, I pray.

Respectfully,

ELDER M. T. SHORT.

MILLERSBURG, ILL.

THOSE "ELOQUENT PRAYERS."

ON his way home after the conclusion of the services, a friend who accompanied him, said, "Well, Judge, how did you like the sermon?" "Well, I rather think Mr.—considers himself exactly qualified to blow the silver trumpet on the walls of Zion; but which sermon do you allude to?" "Why, we didn't have but one sermon, did we? We had a very able and eloquent prayer, but only one sermon." "Yes, I think we had two sermons. The first one was delivered immediately after Mr.— said, 'Let us pray.' He did not do anything in the way of praying, as I understand the office of prayer. He never supplicated nor petitioned, but he told God what great things had been done for the spread of the gospel, for the cause of Temperance, for the suppression of the rebellion, the protection of the negro. He went on and informed and gave Deity a general history of the great events that had happened, and then told the people what their duty was. After that he commenced telling God the best way to manage matters he had referred to. I thought for a common man to stand there and inform the King of earth and heaven, who sees all things and knows all things, what had been going on in the world for a space of time, was a piece of impertinence that amounted to sublimity; but when he presumed to direct that Almighty Being how to manage His own affairs it was absolutely sacrilege."

DIED.

CHESTER.—At the residence of Philip Hefner, Central House, near Gridley, Butte county, California, September 10th, 1884, of heart-disease, Sr. Sarah Chester, in the 65th year of her age. Funeral services September 14th, at the residence of P. Hefner, conducted by Elder H. P. Brown, of Oakland. Sr. Chester joined the Church about ten or eleven years ago; and lived a devoted Saint, and died strong in the faith. A large and sympathising concourse was in attendance, and some fifteen carriages escorted the remains to the grave, some seven miles away, where her body rests in a beautiful casket in a beautiful cemetery, in the midst of the gold fields of Oroville, while her spirit has gone home to one of the mansions in our Father's house, to await the resurrection of the just, and the advent of our dear Lord, who will come to give rewards to all who have slept in Jesus. Sister Chester was not only beloved by her family and the Saints, but by all neighbors and acquaintances. She died very suddenly, but she was well prepared. She leaves four children and a step-daughter; and many dear friends to mourn her loss. Her grandchildren were inconsolable and greatly grieved at her loss. They greatly loved her, and it seemed very hard indeed to part with one who had so long loved and sympathized with them in their childhood. May they emulate her virtues, and obey her religion, is the prayer of her late pastor, H. P. BROWN.

CLAY.—At St. Joseph, Missouri, September 10th, 1884, of cholera infantum, Emma Naomi, infant daughter of Bro. William and Sr. Jennet Clay, aged 8 months and 16 days. Funeral service by Elder George C. Smith, September 11th, 1884.

WILSON.—Near Cisne, Wayne county, Illinois, August 7th, 1884, of lung disease, John Wilson, son of John and Hannah Wilson. He was born September 20th, 1859.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.
 LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
 I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
 Very respectfully,
 N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
 Yours in bonds,
 J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
 GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
 Johns & Ordway, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
 Your brother in Christ,
 O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
 Johns & Ordway; Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
 Yours in bonds,
 WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
 Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
 Yours,
 V. D. BAGGELLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
 Messrs. Johns & Ordway; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours.
 W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
 Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
 Yours in gospel bonds,
 E. W. CARO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

RATES FOR THE REUNION.

ONE and one third fares have been secured over the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and the Chicago and North-Western Railways. Whoever attends the Camp Meeting at Raglan, from points on these roads will pay full fare one way; when they will receive a certificate signed by the secretary of the meeting, which when presented at the office of the road named in the certificate will entitle them to a return ticket for one third the full fare, one way. This arrangement was made with these roads too late for the HERALD of October 4th, advices only coming to hand late in the evening of the 1st. We look for like rates on other roads, but may be disappointed.

LOYALTY OF SAINTS.

MUCH is being said and written as to the loyalty of the Mormon citizen, and, as is usual certain classes of men are busily engaged in attributing disloyalty to the Latter Day Saints of the Reorganized Church, and disseminating that idea among the people in various localities where the Saints are dwelling and teaching.

No more hurtful and abominable charge against the citizen churchman can be made. And in the case of Latter Day Saints, whose every tenet requires fidelity to their God and their country no falser statement could be preferred. Fidelity to the government of America; which to the Saint is the land of Joseph, the promised land; is absolutely essential unto the character of a perfect life in the Church of Christ. And one of the damaging signs of an age of apostasy and perversion of the truth was stated to be that men would be "traitors, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God."

In the capacity of teacher the Saint who is an Elder, is by virtue of his ordination under obligation to commend himself to his hearers both in and out of the fold as an honest, virtuous citizen, one who loves his fellow man and lives to do good to them. Rebellion is to such a teacher "as the crime of witchcraft;" and sedition is the precursor of rebellion. He can not afford to risk his usefulness in his ministerial career by being a covert enemy of his government; and no matter how industriously the enemies of his work may circulate the charge that he is disloyal, he must teach and live in such relation to society that his peers will exonerate him from such charge.

There are in the ranks of the Reorganized Church men of all political complexions, as the politics of the country now stand; yet not one is an enemy to his country. Many fancy that any political creed is unbecoming; that evil and corruption are working the ruin of all parties, and that disruption awaits the corrupt nations; but these are found everywhere and in all churches; their views are individual, while the voice of the collective body, is unmistakable; "Men should sustain the constitutional law of the land." Nor does the church, assume to usurp the functions of the Supreme Court of the United States and pronounce what laws are, and what are not constitutional. Nor is any such right given to the member of the church by any rule, tenet, or enactment of the body, or revelation from God, fully and properly accredited to the church as such.

Under this condition of things it is tantalizingly hard that men who claim to love the truth, and to accord to other men the meed of honest conviction, should persistently continue to charge a people like those of the Reorganization with disloyalty. It is astonishingly strange, too, that many, (nearly all), of these false accusers should wear the garb of "ministers of the gospel," who claim to be informed in the matter. Forgetting the fate of those who accuse their neighbors falsely, these men of clerical character profusely allege that the statements which are made in the church organ, and by the leading authorities of the church in their instructions, and by the missionaries are all deceptions practiced with the intent to cover nefarious designs against the liberties and property of dupes. That this is done to blind the eyes of the people, and permit secret planning against the authorities of the state and nation. Men who have been good men while belonging to Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, and other denominations, and upon these rested no breath of evil suspicion, but who were rated as reliable, truthful, upright citizens, loyal alike to God and the state, are suddenly transformed in spirit and practice, according to their accusers, by an acceptance of our view of the Scriptures in their literal sense; all of which creates a new character for those men and makes them enemies to the good of society.

It is outrageously unfair to so misconstrue the statements of men against whom no charge of criminality can be maintained. It is not only unfair, but it is cruel in every sense of the word; and when it is reflected that such charges emanate from those who make profession to be followers of Jesus, it is doubly worse.

The Saints of the Reorganization are loyal to the Government, jealous for its welfare and desirous that the good of its institutions shall survive the wear of time.

It may be considered not apropos to the subject; but we suggest that Saints living in the regions round about be very careful and wise in their speech and conduct, observing those rules of honest life that commend to the favor of good men everywhere. And to those who may be contemplating removing into those regions, that they observe the voice of the revelation which enjoins that they have all things prepared before them; and respect the feelings of the people. Prejudices are not easily got rid of, confidence must be won by upright lives and can not be forced by rough speech, or rash self defense. Upright conversation and fair dealing are make weights for peace difficult to estimate; and every follower of Jesus is enjoined to love peace and ensure it.

Finally, brethren, permit us to enjoin it upon you all, and in all places, be sober and self sustaining. Teach obedience to the laws of the country and state by precept and example; help enforce them, by aiding in the suppression of crime, the capture and punishment of criminals and disturbers of the peace. Strive to put good men into office, and when conservators of the public good are chosen and make efforts to secure obedience to the law, give them your hearty moral support and co-operation.

A REPORTER for the St. Louis Globe Democrat, from Lexington, Missouri, under date of September 26th, and published in that paper Sunday, September 28th, reports Mr. Braden thusly:

"Is the manuscript now in Whitmer's possession the original manuscript of the Book of Mormon?"

"That depends on what you mean by the expression, 'original manuscript.' Solomon Spaulding wrote at least four different manuscripts of his romance, the 'Manuscript Found.' Doubtless these are all destroyed. The one that he prepared for the printer and Rigdon stole from Patterson's office, was doubtless destroyed by Rigdon when he had copied from it what he used in getting up the Book of Mormon. The manuscript that Rigdon furnished to Smith was what Smith kept in a pillow case, and what his wife's cousins weighed and what he called 'the plates.' That manuscript Smith placed under the corner stone of the Mansion House in Nauvoo. Smith allowed Martin Harris to take one hundred and sixteen pages of this manuscript to show to his friends. Harris' wife stole them. The Mormon Deity, alias Rigdon, replaced the lost pages, and to guard against similar accidents, commanded Cowdery to make a copy of this manuscript of Rigdon. This copy made by Cowdery is what Gilbert used in setting the type. I think Whitmer has the manuscript that Gilbert used."

We have now, by a clever stroke of Rev. Clark Braden's pen, the ghosts of four Solomon Spaulding's romance, the "Manuscript Found," to fight instead of one.

Mrs. Matilda Spaulding, wife and widow of Mr. Spaulding, and afterwards wife of Dr. Davison, of Monson, Massachusetts, testifies of only one copy of Manuscript Found; Mrs. McKinstry, daughter of Solomon Spaulding, testifies of only one; Jerome Clark with whom was left the trunk in which it was kept tells of only one; but when Mr. Braden essays to give Mormonism the coup de grace he creates four, a most astonishing work for a man who ridicules the idea of miracles.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Danish periodical, Truth's Banner, will be out about the third week in October, and thence regularly, if no hitch occurs. Let every body remember that Bro. Peter Anderson is a young man, and undertakes the editing of the paper at the request of the brethren. He makes no claim to excellence and wishes to do the best he can. We do not expect that the paper will be free from errors in grammar and in type setting; but hope the Saints will help rather than condemn by unkind criticism. Help all engaged in it by advice and writing for it in Danish. Address Peter Anderson as in the HERALD and Banner.

One was baptized at Bändera, Texas, September 15th. So writes Bro. D. H. Bays, on the 23d. Bro. Bays' health was quite poor. After October 1st his address will be Temple, Bell county, Texas.

Mr. Robert Black, of Friendville, Nebraska, husband to Sr. Janet Black of Lamoni, visited us from the 23d to 25th of September. He is now in his eightieth year, but hale and hearty; states that he has scarcely ever been sick, and has always been at work. He is an intelligent Scotchman, thoroughly Americanized; and a keen and shrewd observer of men and things. He likes America far better than Scotland, and says that the average lands of Wisconsin, Iowa and Nebraska are as good, if not better than the best of Scotland's cultivated land. He represents the crops in Nebraska as excellent.

We clip from the Stewartville Independent, the following: "Elder W. W. Blair, of the L. D. S. church, lectured at the Opera House, Friday night of last week, his subject being a reply to Clark Braden. There was a large attendance."

We are instructed by Bro. E. L. Kelley to state that the paper cover edition of the Braden and Kelley Debate is exhausted. There will be no more until another supply is printed, which will be some weeks yet. Those who have ordered the paper binding will have to wait or take the cloth binding. Those who have ordered the cloth binding from us will be supplied as far as we have the books to fill the orders. We received a hundred on September 30th.

One was baptized by Bro. Willard J. Smith, at Holstein, Ontario, August 20th. Prejudice was being displaced by a better feeling when Bro. Smith wrote us, September 19th.

The Saints should remember an injunction found in the rules and covenants of the church, that makes it the duty of the members to deliver transgressors against the laws of the land, in cases where the offenses are out of church jurisdiction, over to the law to be dealt with. It is contrary to good fellowship and good citizenship alike to shield criminals, or to hide their crimes. If a man kills, robs, steals, or does things of that sort against the law, let the justice of the courts administer upon his crime—"render unto Cæsar the things that be Cæsar's."

Bro. D. McPherson, of Bensonville, Alabama, wishes the prayers of the Saints in his behalf. Sr. Ray, of Des Moines, Iowa, also desires to be remembered in prayer by the people of God.

Bro. Noah N. Cooke writes from St. Louis, Missouri, and sends us a Globe Democrat for the 28th of August, containing the interview of a correspondent with Rev. Clark Braden. Bro. Cooke says: "I know one thing, the more they (Braden) stir us up, the better we feel. Conference next Sunday. Brn. Bronson, Short and Foss will be with us."

THE brick work on the church at Lamoni is progressing at a good rate; a few days more and it will be closing in. That on the towers is nearly done. The tin work on the towers and vestibule is about all done.

It is certainly badly needed by the Saints at Lamoni, and those who visit the place. Only a part of the large branch can gain a seat in the small building now occupied. It seems also that many of the neighbors of the Saints are patiently waiting to "come to meeting" when the church is finished. It is time now that those who will be benefitted by the erection of the building should lay to their might and help the committee. We write this with a view to those who have decided to help themselves by helping to build the meeting house. It will certainly give much pleasure to the Saints of the branch at Lamoni and the Decatur District to have such a commodious place of worship.

THE Texas Christian for September 4th has the following in its editorial columns; the Rev. Wilmeth who met Bro. H. C. Smith in debate, being the editor.

"A debate with the Mormons is expected at Graham. A representative man is wanted to meet them. Surely the fool killer must be dead and the assylums all full where Mormons in this enlightened age can find adherents to their cause."

The same paper contains a letter from Bro. Smith and the editor's remarks on the same.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. David McGoon, writing from Waukon, Iowa, under date of September 27th, says:

We are all strong in the faith, but not without our trials and persecutions, but we are striving to hold on to the rod of iron which leads to the tree of life. We have a few Seventh Day Adventists here. They expect the Lord to come next month. I am sorry for them; another disappointment. Let us walk in the Spirit, and we shall not be deceived. We will try to have oil in our vessels.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard writes from Jeffersonville, Wayne county, Illinois:

I am nearly through the Braden and Kelley Debate. I think our side of the work fairly represented and the weakness of the other clearly manifest.

Correspondence.

ANTWERP, Ohio,

Sept. 27th, 1884.

Bro. J. Smith.—I have held meetings here and six miles away in the country, every night this week, with good audiences and interest. People are growing into the spirit of investigation. Have been using Dr. B. W. Woodcock's Hall in this place, and last evening it was well filled with respectable listeners—mostly ladies. A lady circulated when I first arrived, that she knew me in Utah, and that I had seven wives, but she fails to support her side of the story, hence has blown by. Shall continue the work here shortly. Dr. Woodcock lived near Palmyra, New York, and was acquainted with your grandfather and father, Sidney Rigdon, &c. Says they were nice men. He is a man of learning and thought, and gave us the use of the hall the same as he would to others, and over the protest of some of the narrow, contracted bigots.

Hopefully,

WM. H. KELLEY.

Dear Herald:—Before the recent debate I went in company with other brethren to fill an appointment for Bro. Land, (who was afflicted) on Little Elm, in Bell county. I preached at a school house on Saturday night, and we met there on Sunday morning, when some of the "Disciples" who owned a church building near by, came over and kindly invited us to occupy, which we did on two occasions during the day. We were kindly treated by them, and with their consent left an appointment for Bro. Land for the third Sunday in August. During the interval, the debate came off, and when Bro. Land went to his appointment, he was forbidden the use of the house. Not only did they lose their liberality during the debate, but, for some cause, concluded to forfeit their word. Can any body tell why? I have a theory which I will not now express.

Bro. J. C. Wilson and I then went to the neighborhood, and procured the Methodist Church, and on the night of August 30th, we commenced a series of meetings. The interest was very good, and the attendance fair for the busy time. I preached eleven discourses, Bro. W. acting as the Sanky of the occasion. Several insisted that we should return. We promised to begin there again the night of October 2d, and continue over the following Sunday. I believe a good impression was made and hope to see some in that place yield obedience to the gospel.

On the 12th inst., Bro. Storm met us at Copperas Cove, and conveyed us to his place near here. We began meeting the 14th, and preached nine discourses. The audiences were small, but very attentive and orderly. The neighborhood is mostly Methodist, but I never met a better natured set of folks. They seemed to realize the fact that others had rights as well as themselves, and they respected those rights. One night after speaking as plainly but kindly as we could on laying on of hands, and the gifts of the Spirit, the class leader warmly endorsed my remarks, which was encouraging to us. We had some opposition, however, from a Reformed Lutheran. He began by asking questions; but when he had worked himself up to the right pitch, he came armed and equipped, and after the sermon took the stand with two Bibles, a large and a small one, also a book published against immersion, and proceeded to demolish us without mercy. We briefly replied, and gave way, when he said it was late, and he would not add more that night. The next night he came, but did not come into the house, and so we were spared.

On the 21st we came here about three or four miles from our other place of meeting, and at night heard Mr. Collins the Methodist circuit rider. The discourse was a very fair one from their stand-point.

The night of the 22d we began, and after the discourse, were taken to task by a Mr. Matthews, a Methodist minister. Of course we each claimed the victory; but he has changed his tactics, and yesterday was advising the people not to go and "hear such stuff." When urged by some to meet the issues in debate, he said he would not, for if he was to prove to this people all he knew, I would never get out of the country. So compassionate and full of mercy is Bro. Matthews that we still live, and will continue our meetings for a time! Last night we had a good attendance, and I like the appearance of the people very well. I do not think they are disposed to injure any one. We feel encouraged with the prospects generally. Bro. Bays at last report was at San Antonio en route for Bandera. Had been doing some acceptable work at Oak Island. Bro. Cato is doing a good work in Jack and Young counties.

My late opponent, Elder Wilmeth, accepted my challenge to discuss the issues in San Antonio provided the people desired the debate, but I met him on the 11th inst. and he informed me that Elder Pennington had notified him that the people of San Antonio did not wish the debate. We finally agreed, however, to meet somewhere in the western part of the state, beginning December 9th, and discuss the same issues as before. We left the settling of the place to Elders Bays and Pennington. I have not heard whether they have agreed or not. If Matthews does not sign my death warrant, and nothing else happens to prevent, I will be there.

I have carefully read the "Braden and Kelley Debate," and am satisfied with our part of it. I think quite an interesting article could be written from it entitled "Braden Versus Braden," showing up his contradictions. It must be quite humiliating to the advocates of the Spaulding story, to read that their great champion—Braden has entirely given it up, and stated that "From the Tower of Babel to 1830, not a human being knew of the book, or knew a single particle of its pretended history." See Debate page 171. In connection with this are other statements to the same effect.

I see in a recent issue of the Herald, that I have been appointed by the Bishop his agent for Texas Central District. I would hereby notify the several branches, that I expect to visit them as soon as possible after the November conference, and speak upon the law as contained in the books; and hope at that time all will be prepared to help the cause by tithes and offerings. In the mean time, should any desire to send, they can address me at Oenaville, Bell county, Texas.

In bonds of peace,

INDEPENDENCE MO.,
September 22d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—While our hearts are glad, and we rejoice, we like to have others rejoice with us. On the 12th of August, I entered into a discussion with Rev. J. Hacker of the Baptist Church, at Webb City, Mo. The questions for debate were: "Resolved, That the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the only true church of Christ on earth; That the church known as the Baptist Church is the only true church of Christ on earth; the Bible to be the standard of evidence." We occupied six nights of two hours each for the first question. I feel safe in saying, that it was one of the pleasantest discussions that was ever held in the church. The congregations were large, and an excellent interest was manifested. What made it especially pleasant to me was, that my opponent was fair, he seemed to be a perfect gentleman, something that is so rare among those who oppose the truth; and I could but breathe a prayer in my heart for God to bless him with light and love for the truth, (which prayer I expect in the future to be answered). He made quite an effort to show that the Apostolic Organization of the church, also miraculous power of the Holy Ghost, were only to establish Christianity, and then were no longer needed; but we were thankful to ascertain the fact, that some of his own members were able to see the inconsistency of his position when we showed how Paul in 1 Cor. 12, explained the matter, and compared the church to the form of a man; how the organization of the body was perfected by all its members being in the body, as it pleased God. So with the church. God set in the church, first apostles, secondly prophets," &c., and that the members should have the same care one for the other, and one member should never say to another, we have no need of thee. When I showed what the church that I represented was, how it was restored through the ministrations of holy angels, according to prophetic promises, and that it was identical with the church established by the Savior in its organization, laws of adoption, and blessings enjoyed by its members, with the knowledge of the truth of the doctrine; and that our names are recorded in the Lamb's Book of Life, this seemed to discourage him for the second proposition, because his church would not make a shadow in the light of the Bible, as he claimed that his church was the bride, the Lamb's wife. By our letting the Bible light reflect on her, it was clearly seen by the congregations, that she was deformed in her body, many of her features lacking, such as the mouth, (apostles), through which she receives her nourishment; also eyes, (prophets), that she was also destitute of the wedding ring, (Holy Ghost), and where are her jewels, (signs to follow). Why, she does not resemble the bride, the Lamb's wife; but she looks more like a deformed and rejected, unfortunate woman. Besides we learn that she acknowledges as her head, one without body, parts or passions; so we see that she is not a virgin.

This created a laugh, and it was more than he could well stand; so of course he had to make a little trip out west, bring polygamy and the Mountain Meadow massacre into the scene, and here we get something new; that there were persons here in this city that would make oath that it was true. A man by the name of Smith got a man by the name of Angel to climb up a tree. Then he got two men by the name of Hindman and Page, while Smith and his two witnesses stood there, the angel came down, and these two witnesses testify under oath that they saw the angel come down, and deliver a message to him. After he had delivered this silly stuff, he seemed to feel better, and we closed the discussion, feeling satisfied and leaving the result in the hands of God. Some of his members privately presented me with the necessaries to pay my way, with a God bless you, come and see us again. The members stood by me, and with joy supplied all the demands, for which I ask God's choicest blessings upon them. Besides the twelve nights in the debate, I preached three times.

From there I went to Mound Valley, Kansas; preached there six times to small but good congregations. From there to near Columbus, where I used to live, where Bro. W. S. Taylor and others had appointments out for me. Preached a number of times to good congregations. Met near there with the Spring River District in conference. Preached once after conference. Then in company with the district president Bro. E. Davis, we went to Pleasant View Branch, where we held two meetings. My vocal organs being somewhat wearied, I thought best to go home and rest awhile. When I returned home I found everything lovely in Zion. Yesterday I preached in Kansas City, reestablished my appointment, and made arrangements for a basket meeting in a grove near the city limits. We need an energetic Elder in Kansas City, one that could put in all his time. I think his labors would prove a success. Last night our hearts were cheered by an excellent sermon on the judgment by Bro. D. S. Crawley. Our quire under the instruction of Brn. Barbee and Pitt, to say the least, is grand.

Dear Herald:—Since my last report to you, I have endeavored to unfurl the flag of truth to the breeze in every place that I have been. Have had good congregations and enjoyed the Good Spirit in all my administrations, for which I feel truly thankful to God. The last Sunday we spent in Hamburg we baptized two, and assisted Elder Taylor in blessing ten children. We thought the increase good. At Mill Creek we baptized the eldest son of Bro. Donelson, a promising young man, whom we trust will be useful to the church. May God bless him with all others that embark in so glorious a cause. In Shenandoah we had very good meetings. Was met there by Bro. Geo. Kemp and William Gaylord, who greatly assisted in carrying on the meetings, by singing the sweet songs of Zion. Here we truly felt that we are small indeed, in endeavoring to follow up in the trail of one like Bro. Mark. We had a good time. We preached, and sang with the brethren and sisters, until all began to feel it was good to be a saint in latter days.

Our conference was held on the 6th and 7th of September. We had a very pleasant time, a very fair representation from the branches. All seemed to enjoy themselves. The business of the conference was, I think, transacted satisfactorily to all present; no jars or contentions marred our peace. In our preaching and social meetings the spirit was copiously effused. The hearts of all were made to rejoice in the hope of their high and holy calling. Six were confirmed members of the church, whom we baptized on the Thursday prior to the conference. Bro. James Kemp was with us, and helped us in preaching the word. The Saints here did nobly in taking care of the friends and Saints that attended. We were honored with some of the old veterans of the cross, who gave us their experience, and testified to the truth of the work, such as old Father and Mother Leeka, Goode and Mortimore, and others. May we have many such seasons of peace and joy is our prayer.

Some of those baptized of late are children, and some we are most happy to state are good, substantial, solid members, who have duly considered the importance of such a step.

Last week we preached some at the Gaylord School-house, and this week at Ross, assisted at both places by Bro. James Kemp. I think I am safe in stating, that the work is improving in this district. Saints are generally feeling well. Many are believing, and a few obeying the gospel. May God bless us all with inflexibility of mind, and that determined purpose, that will enable us to endure all things patiently, and help us to labor effectually for good, and eventually obtain the prize, is my prayer. Bro. Joseph Smith:—I was yesterday, Sabbath, favored with the privilege of baptizing four in Lake Ontario. They were all members of the family of Bro. Ezra T. Whitehead, who resides here, and where I have been stopping for some little time. Those baptized were Sister Whitehead, Bro. Whitehead's wife, their two daughters and oldest son. Bro. Whitehead is one of those who was baptized in the early days of the church, and while your father was living; and he has been mainly instrumental in teaching and bringing his family to the knowledge of the true gospel of Christ. He has one son, a noble young man, who resides at home, who is not yet persuaded of the necessity of coming within the provisions of the gospel, but whom he very much desires may be gathered into the fold of the Shepherd in the near future. All the rest of his family are now with him in the church. There is a brother, William Cutler, one of the early day members of the church, who lives about six miles away. He says he once called on you at Plano, Illinois, and ate dinner with you at your house. He is zealous for the truth and the latter day work. Bro. Whitehead and I made him a visit the other day, and we had a pleasant time. I preached once since here on one Tuesday night, in a school house near here. There was a tolerable number present, and mostly good attention and interest manifested by those present. It is hard getting suitable places here on Sabbath days for holding meetings on account of the places being mostly taken up by the appointments of those of other faiths. I have had correspondence lately with Bro. Isom L. Thompson. He lives about thirty-nine miles north of this in Jefferson county. Bro. Whitehead and I think to go up in a buggy and visit him and his folks this week. I expect to return when leaving this part of the country by way of Bro. Seeley's, at Savannah, and probably from there to Greenwood again. Yours in bonds,

Dear Herald:—Bro. Holt and myself have just returned from a trip in San Diego County, where we have been preaching the gospel. We were well received, and they desired that we should come again. Some will be baptized. The house was well filled each night; and the last night we spoke, the house was crowded. We have been invited to open up other new places. We found an old-time Saint by the name of Roberts. Her father was Beebe, one of Joseph Smith's Counselors. She is strong in the faith—likes to talk over the good times they used to have when the church was in its bloom. Her husband, Mr. Roberts, is not a member of the church, but we found a good home there, and Mr. Roberts used us as well as was possible for one man to use another. There are plenty of chances for preaching here; and where our faith is not known; there should be more workers. Bro. Holt is the only one now that is in the field all the time. The balance of us preach as opportunity presents itself; but it is hard for us to take care of our families, help the brethren in the east, and fill the many calls for us to preach the gospel.

May God bless our labors, is the prayer of your servant.

A. W. THOMPSON.

HASTINGS, Nebraska,

September 20th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—To read in your columns the progress of the Church through her representatives, is very cheering indeed; yet there are some who toil without much apparent progress. The writer is one of the latter. Since coming to this place I have preached eighteen discourses in Fairfield to fair audiences. I labored hard, long and loud, and only succeeded in baptizing one. However, I am consoled with the thought that we as a church stand in a far different light with the people than before the effort. Another consolation is, that we did not preach ourselves out of a congregation, as the last meeting we held was the largest, and a good feeling prevailed, many anxious to hear further of our doctrine; with the hearty shake and good bye it was said, "May God and his angels go with you." We think a continued effort there by a good Elder, would result in establishing a branch. Bro. Hopper and family would entertain him in fair style, and fully appreciate his labors. Bro. Hopper is a latter day saint indeed, and is doing a work of good in his isolated condition, by living as becometh a saint of God. We do not feel to complain, but pride ourself in the thought, that Noah preached one hundred and twenty years to convert his own household; and if we could have held out so long at Fairfield, we are fully persuaded we could have baptized a like number at least. We have concluded to move our effects to Independence, Mo., and with Bro. Wm. Goreham as a partner, will endeavor to make material for bread that perishes, on the Spring St. Mill.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Our debate with the Disciple closed Saturday last, after continuing six days. J. M. Barns did not put in an appearance for causes best known to himself. S. I. S. Cawthorn took his place. I must say to his credit that he did not resort to the usual slang about Joseph Smith and the Mormons. In his last speech he referred to that people, upon which I called his attention to the fact that I had stated in the very outset of the discussion, that we held no affiliation with the Salt Lake Mormons. After a few remarks he left that part of the subject. In this discussion the Saints gained a glorious victory. Our position is better understood than ever before in this country. Some of the brethren have stated to me since the discussion, that they now have a better understanding of the doctrine than they ever had. What we need now is encouragement and assistance from the general Church, and this part of the South Eastern Mission, would soon become self-sustaining, and something to spare. The brethren here feel and have felt for some time past, that the Church would do well to place some one resident here under General Conference appointment, to labor in this part of the South Eastern Mission. We expect to do what we can, in the interest of the great latter day work.

Yours very respectfully,

G. T. CHUTE.

REEDER'S MILLS, Iowa,

September, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish to bear my testimony to the truth of this work. I have often had strong evidence of its truth since I united with the church, and even before, July 27th, 1871. But on February 22d, 1880, I had a revelation from God, that was so plain an evidence that I believe it to be my duty to make it known to others. There was an elder preaching in our neighborhood till the interest had become great; but he told us in his private conversation that our church was divided, and that there were many things in it that were unholy, that we knew nothing about; and that we ought to inform ourselves of the evils that were in it. This was hard for me to believe, for I had always believed our church to be pure, holy, and honorable in the sight of God; and that it was just what it represented itself to be, the Church of Christ. Now my soul was deeply grieved, and I commenced to fast and pray, and ask God to show me if the church was divided, which side was right. One side believed in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Mormon; the other would stand on the Bible alone. Now I felt I must know which was right, and God told me. On February 22d, 1880, at two o'clock in the morning, as I was wrestling in prayer to God, as I had not closed my eyes in sleep that night; and I vowed unto the Lord that I would neither eat nor sleep until he did show me the right way. All at once a voice spoke to me, so clearly and plainly, that I turned my head to see, and I saw the Lord Jesus Christ sitting in an elevated position above me, and a large half circle or body of men, or elders. He said to me, you were born into the kingdom. My first thought was, I was not born a Latter Day Saint. The Savior said to come forth from darkness into light. I knew when I came into the Church of Christ, it was to come from darkness to light. He said, Behold the harvest is truly plenteous, and laborers are few. He said to me, Go out into the highways and hedges, and tell them to come in; for Christ is in the kingdom. As he spoke he raised his eyes, and looked off in another direction; and I turned my head and looked where he looked, and there I saw a great multitude of people, standing on the outside of an inclosed place; and I saw at and near the gate, many loved ones whom I had not invited directly to come in; and the Savior said to me, The second time, go out and compel them to come in, for Christ is in the kingdom. Since that time, I do not only believe our church to be right, but I know it is right.

FRANCES I. SMITH.

TEMPLE, TEXAS,

Sept. 15th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Since the debate between Bro. Smith and the Campbellite Evangelist, who made himself so notorious among the good citizens of Big Spring some time ago, and my dealing since the debate and former association with that sect, induce me to pen a few lines for your columns. I became a member of the Campbellite Church in the year 1872, and remained with them until the summer of 1877. During my sojourn with this sect I was a strong believer in the Bible, and would “earnestly contend for” what we called, “the faith once” for all, “delivered to the Saints.” Strange as it may seem, I never heard the Campbellites, only when mentioned myself, say anything about the gifts and blessings of the gospel of Christ. I was, in fact and in name, a Campbellite of strong faith in God, although I had never heard what the so-called Mormons believed and taught. What! Did I say I was a Campbellite? Yes, I was a Campbellite in fact and in name. What, says one, were you baptized in the name of Alexander Campbell? Yes, as strange as it may seem, I was baptized in the name of Alexander Campbell. The Campbellites may be willing to admit that I was baptized in his name, but they are loth to acknowledge the truth of being baptized in his name themselves. Here I will introduce proof from their own standpoint to sustain the affirmation that I was baptized in the name of Alexander Campbell; and if I was, then all are; for they are all baptized in the same way, and by the same authority that I was. Ask their ministers, What do the words, “baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost,” mean, and they tell you, “by the authority of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, they were to baptize them. Then, in the name of, means, by the authority of. Ask them, did Alexander Campbell have authority from the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost to baptize? We think they claim no such thing; for when in counsel about the time the church was organized, the question arose, “Have we authority to baptize?” And the question was settled in this way.

“If we have authority to preach, we have authority to baptize.” We see by this they did not claim to have authority to do either, but hang the whole thing upon an “if.” When Campbell left the Baptist Church, he did so leaving all the authority he had, if any, behind him; for surely the Baptist Church took back or retained all the authority she had bestowed upon him while in her communion; and hence he was left blank, so far as authority is concerned, from that source. And as Campbell did not claim to have a revelation from God, authorizing him to baptize, he must have assumed authority, or baptized by his own authority; and it follows that all the commission or authority he had, was from and of himself, and hence he baptized by his own authority. And if “in the name of” means, by the authority of, then it follows that by the authority of Alexander Campbell means, in the name of Alexander Campbell; hence baptized in the name of Alexander Campbell. Therefore I suggest that it would be more proper, in the place of saying Campbellites, that we say, Alexander Campbellites.

EX-ALEXANDER CAMPBELLITE.

TERRA COTTA, KANSAS,

September 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—Friday afternoon, August the 29th, my husband and myself started for conference, which was to convene at Almira, Mitchell county the 30th inst. We arrived at Bro. Seers' about eight o'clock in the evening. They had all gone to prayer meeting; knew the place by the buggies that were there, and by Bro. A. Kent's team. We took what care we could of the team, partook of a lunch from our lunch basket, house being locked. Some after the hour of ten, Bro. and Sr. Seers, and a number of others came. We were invited into the house, and made welcome.

Sunday went to a grove about six miles distant. Heard a splendid discourse from Bro. A. Kent. After the sermon partook of the necessities of life brought by the sisters of the Almira Branch. Afternoon had sacrament and testimony meeting. Evening went to a school house near, and listened to an able sermon from Bro. J. H. Parsons. Monday held business meeting in a sod school house with hard benches and no desks. I thought we could realize to some extent our forefathers' school days. Went to Bro. Andes to dinner, and stayed all night. Tuesday morning started home. The next Sunday went to see and take care of one of my neighbors that was very sick, Mrs. Wilson. Tuesday attended her funeral; so I hope the Saints of Almira and others, whom I ought to have written to before, will accept this as my excuse, as I have been very busy since, and will forgive me.

I remain as ever yours in bonds,

MRS. EMELINE J. DAVIDSON.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

September 25th.—England is threatened with serious complications growing out of her efforts to readjust the finances of Egypt. The representatives of Germany, Russia, Austria, and France called on Nubar Pasha, the Egyptian Premier, to make formal protests against diverting the money set apart for the sinking fund to general Egyptian purposes. The Journal de St. Petersburg says that Russia has expressed to England her regret that the latter did not consult the other European Powers before deciding to authorize the suspension of the sinking fund. The Gaulois says that the Powers have notified the Khedive that the stability of his throne will be endangered if he continues to indorse England's financial acts. Threats of the restoration of Ismail Pasha have been made.

Advices from Pekin state that China is utilizing the inaction of Admiral Courbet and Gen Briere de Lisle by strengthening all the points along the coast and the southern frontier which are menaced by the French. The Chinese merchants are also preparing for what may prove to be a protracted war by importing large stocks of goods of every description, but especially of breadstuffs, on which they expect to make a handsome profit in the event of a French blockade of the ports of entry.

The encyclical letter of the Pope, which is soon to appear, denounces liberalism, but the Pope carefully explains that what is meant by “liberalism” is that political system where the civil and social elements rest exclusively upon human agency, having no connection whatever with the supernatural; in other words, the Holy Father means by “Liberalism” all systems where religion is not a prime factor in the practical politics of the State. The encyclical, however, warmly defends the principles enunciated by Mgr. Dupanloup, Pere Lacordaire, M. de Falloux, M. deBroglie, and M. de Montalembert from the attacks of overrigid Catholics, while it most vigorously denounces Liberalism in Italy, Belgium, and Switzerland. The encyclical is intended to draw together and consolidate Catholics all over the world, while strictly adhering to all time-honored traditions and principles and maintaining them in their full integrity.

A placard, signed “Committee of the Liberal Association,” posted in all parts of the city of Belgium, declares that, inasmuch as the new Education Bill has been officially promulgated as the law of the land, it ought to be respected and obeyed by all. The Liberals, by so acting, will prove to the Catholics that they will not imitate the factious opposition displayed by the Romanists toward the Education Bill of 1879. The Placard continues: “We repudiate all community with those who profit by the ferment of popular feeling to attack the bases of our national institutions with the cry, ‘Vive la Republique.’ We indignantly repel the calumnious assertions of the Catholic press, which professes to hold the Liberal Party responsible for those acts.”

The report of the ravages of cholera throughout Italy for the last twenty-four hours gives a total of 428 fresh cases and 198 deaths. At Naples there were 242 fresh cases and 121 deaths, against 264 cases and 75 deaths for the preceding twenty-four hours. In the Department of the Eastern Pyrenees there were five deaths from cholera today. Temps reports two cases of cholera at Clichy. Typhoid-fever is raging at St. Ouen, a Paris suburb. The Prefect of Police has visited the infected districts. The last twenty-four hours nine cases of cholera have developed in the Province of Alicante; in Tarragona three. In the latter province during the same time there were two deaths and in the former seven.

Russia is about to build two ironclads at Sevastopol. These will serve as a nucleus for a future fleet in the Black Sea.

Judge Gresham has been appointed Secretary of the treasury in the place of Judge Folger deceased.

A standard weekly newspaper has been substituted in the public schools of Anita, Iowa, for the ordinary Fifth Reader. The experiment, if it works well, will be tried in other places.

September 26th.—Two corvets built for the Chinese Government at Kiel have been prevented from leaving that place under the German flag.

There is a notable revival of activity among the Carlist leaders throughout Spain, and especially in the Provinces of Catalonia and Valencia. This fact is attracting serious attention at Madrid, where the demands of the Carlists and other extreme Catholics are daily becoming more imperative and arrogant. The Government of Premier Canovas has hitherto chiefly feared the Liberals and the extreme Republicans of the Vorilla school. In order to curb the growing power of these parties the Government has in many cases thrown the weight of its support on the side of the Carlists. The latter have thus become convinced that they will hold the balance of power in the Cortes, and are pursuing an aggressive policy for the first time since 1876 on the strength of that belief. It is now said that the Ministers sorely repent having interfered in the elections in behalf of the Carlists, and find that, instead of being merely tools to be used for a purpose and then thrown aside, they are likely to prove inconveniently powerful, either as allies or opponents.

Messengers from the friendly tribe of Amarars came into Suakin today. They ask for a supply of food and arms to enable them to continue their successful campaign against the Hadendowas. The messengers declare that the rebels are unable to move on account of many of their number who are suffering from wounds. The great leader, Osman Digma, has only 200 followers at Tamai. The rest of his adherents have been dispersed through want of supplies. Handoob is unoccupied and the road to Berber is clear of the enemy for many miles.

Reports of the ravages of cholera throughout Italy during the last twenty-four hours give a total of 452 fresh cases and 212 deaths. At Naples there were 20 fresh cases and 95 deaths, as against 242 cases and 105 deaths the preceding twenty-four hours. At Genoa there were five fresh cases and twenty deaths.

During the last twenty-four hours there has been a total of eight fresh cases of cholera and seven deaths in the provinces of Barcelona and Alicante.

The great question at present in Chili, South America, is the definition of the relations between Church and State. There has been a good deal of discussion on the subject in Congress, but liberal ideas seem to prevail. Complete separation of the Government and the Church seems probable.

Leavenworth, Kan., has been selected as the location of the new Western Branch of the National Soldiers' Home.

Pleuro pneumonia is spreading rapidly among the Frisbie and Lake herd in Kentucky.

September 27th.—In Egypt Gordon continues to bewilder everybody. Wolseley's expedition is gradually dwindling, until audacious speculators declare that he will arrive in Khartoum at the head of a cavalry escort. Then it is further prophesied that Gordon will stick to his craze of smashing the Mahdi. Bismarck is ostentatiously siding with Ferry. The circle of protests against the suspension of the law of liquidation is complete and staid, and semi-official German journalists rail against the violence of English action and the pretense of the pious Gladstone, as they sarcastically style the Premier, as loudly as the most irresponsible of the journalists of the Paris boulevards. Even the most faithful Gladstonian organs hardly attempt to deny that the Boers have flagrantly broken their treaties, insulted the British flag, killed English officers, enslaved English allies, and the Pall Mall Gazette welcomes to its columns the letters of a Cape Colonist, who describes the word of England to her African allies as having proved a fraud and a lie.

The Copyright Congress at Berne, resolved that authors belonging to the union shall enjoy equal rights with natives of all contracting countries, subject to the laws of the country where the work originated, or in case of unpublished manuscript to the laws of the author's country. These rules are to apply to authors publishing their works in a country belonging to the union of which they are not natives. The authors are to enjoy ten years' exclusive right to translation in all countries belonging to the union. The publication of extracts or entire pieces of scientific works or works of instruction will be permitted, provided the author's name is given. The musical works to be protected include arrangements or compositions based on themes from original works. A permanent international protection bureau is established.

The French operations against Phuny and Myluong have been successful. The French are now entirely masters of the situation along the River Day.

Reports from the cholera-infected districts of Italy for the last twenty-four hours give a total of 360 fresh cases and one hundred and ninety-three deaths in the City of Naples. Number of cases of cholera at Genoa in Twenty-four hours, thirty-eight: deaths, twenty-two. Sixteen deaths from cholera reported today in the South of France. The official reports of the Health Department show that the health of Paris is excellent. There were six deaths by cholera at Marseilles today.

September 28th.—The German Government is pushing with great zeal the construction of the torpedo boats for which appropriations were made at the last meeting of the Reichstag. Some of the boats that have been completed were tested recently and gave satisfaction.

The police authorities of Vienna are greatly pleased with the haul that they have lately made of Anarchistical plotters. They believe that in the wholesale arrests which have taken place during the last few weeks every member of Johann Most's revolutionary committee in Austria has been captured.

The old saying that greed prompts conquest is again illustrated in French financial circles. There are many people throughout France who look upon the conquest and permanent occupation of Tonquin by French troops as a certainty. This belief has been utilized by a party of financiers in Paris, who have organized a syndicate to develop the mines of Tonquin. The syndicate has issued a most attractive prospectus and its stock is being eagerly purchased.

A fresh case of cholera was reported today at Rome, Italy, the patient being a soldier. In the Kingdom of Italy the last twenty-four hours there have been reported 408 new cases and 222 deaths, including 116 cases and 74 deaths at Naples and 39 cases and 25 deaths at Genoa. Since the outbreak of the disease in Italy 13,220 persons have been attacked and 9,480 have died. During the last twenty-four hours throughout the cholera-infected districts there have been eight new cases and six deaths. There were three deaths from cholera in Southern France today. Of the six suspected cases reported at Oran, five have proved fatal.

A letter from Berlin to a prominent gentleman of New York city contains a very interesting communication concerning the alleged discoveries by Dr. Blendmann, a professor in the Royal Academy in Berlin, of evidence that the moon is inhabited. Dr. Blendmann professes to have discovered that the telescopic observations made up to the present time have given a negative result on account of the excessive light that irradiates from the lunar disk which prevents an exact examination of the surface. Dr. Blendmann softened the light by using the condensed smoke of camphor. He had to make hundreds of trials before finding the exact measure of softening required to obtain a perfect image of the moon. He then took with a reflecting telescope a very detailed and correct photographic view of the disk of the moon, which he afterward exposed under a powerful solar microscope. The circle obtained in the photograph had in the microscope a diameter of over thirty-three feet. In this way, the story is, he was able to perceive that what have been believed to be seas are really regions covered with rich vegetation, and what have always been taken for mountainous regions are deserts and seas. One can see, the letter says, with striking distinctness, cities, towns, and villages, and there are strong indications of industry and commerce. With a full moon Dr. Blendmann has obtained photographic views so distinct that they indicate that if larger telescopes could be used the discovery would be still more completely confirmed.

September 29th.—It is reported that the Empress of China has concluded to make a treaty of peace with France.

One of the British dynamite companies, replying to Sir William Harcourt's suggestion that its factories be guarded night and day, says that it would involve an expense of $625,000 per annum. It is also urged by the company that all the dynamite used in recent outrages was of American manufacture. In order to protect the British manufacturers it is suggested that a duty be levied on all imported dynamite.

The report of the cholera in Italy for the last twenty-four hours gives a total of 355 fresh cases and 212 deaths, including 171 cases and 100 deaths at Naples and 95 cases and 55 deaths at Genoa.

There were eleven deaths from cholera in the southern provinces of France, including the Vicar-General of Nimes. Four cholera patients are still under treatment at the Bon Rencontre Hospital and one at the St. Mandrier, where there has been one death today. Six French passengers from Cochin China on the steamer Abdel Ker, which put in at Bona, Algiers, for quarantine, died of cholera after having been landed and placed in a hospital. There were five deaths from cholera at Marseilles to-day.

The London Times' Hong Kong dispatch says the French stopped and searched English regular trading steamers at Frehkien and Hai Loong, in the Channel of Formosa. There is great irritation in consequence of this high-handed proceeding. Neutral steamers conveying soldiers and munitions of war to various quarters in this section of the world are alarmed at their prospects if this shall not be resented, and it is regarded as likely to be a source of probable complication with foreign Powers.

Sept. 30.—The Cholera Commission appointed to examine the epidemic at Marseilles, France, have submitted a report. They state that they followed the progress of the disease by hourly examining the blood of persons stricken. They found that in each case at first a few of the globules presented an unhealthy appearance; then a third were affected; then one-half, then two-thirds, and finally death resulted. An important fact was developed that all the globules were not simultaneously affected. Six deaths from cholera are reported in different parts of France to-day.

Reports of the cholera epidemic during the last twenty-four hours show a total of 421 fresh cases and 229 deaths, including 122 cases and fifty-one deaths in Naples, and sixty-six cases and sixty-seven deaths in Genoa. The steamer Entella, arrived from Genoa at Cardiff, Wales, has several of the crew sick with cholera. The vessel is in close quarantine.

Oct. 1.—There were 433 new cases of cholera and 197 deaths in Italy. There were 57 deaths at Naples and 52 at Genoa. Six new cases of cholera and two deaths were reported in Spain.

It is proposed by some English engineers and capitalists to connect the Baltic and Black Seas by means of a canal from the Danube near Vienna to the Oder near Breslau. The distance is about 200 miles.

Oct. 2.—The total number of deaths from cholera in France, last week was 177, against 210 for the preceding week. There were five deaths from cholera in France to-day, including two at Toulon. The Bon Rencontre Hospital at Toulon is closed, and there is only one patient in St. Maudrier. The reports of cholera in Italy the last twenty-four hours show a total of 321 fresh cases and 194 deaths, including eighty-two cases and fifty deaths at Naples and forty-five cases and nineteen deaths in Genoa.

In consequence of the protest, Italian Consul the Sultan of Morocco has dismissed from office and imprisoned the Governor of Demnah, who is charged with having tortured Jews.

Advices from South Australia state that the Assembly has passed a law abolishing judicial oaths.

Dynamite outrages have been perpetrated at Cirvy Le Noble, near Macon, France, causing great damage. The inhabitants of the town are greatly alarmed.

Advices from South Africa state that Herr Luderitz, the founder of the German settlement in Angra Pequena, has warned off Capt. Spence, the lessee of the Imperial and Colonial Government, from the Guano Islands, in the vicinity of Angra Pequena.

The Berlin Kreuz Zeitung states that several prominent English Conservatives intend to visit Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg, and Paris, to confer with the conservatives at those cities with regard to the adoption of anti-Anarchist measures by the various Governments.

Advices from Adelaide, South Australia, state that the Duke of Manchester has started upon his return to England. During the travel of his party in the northern territory they were attacked by blacks, and some of the party were killed. The Duke himself narrowly escaped with his life. Parties have started in pursuit of the blacks to revenge the lives of the killed in the encounter.

The Castle Island branch of the Irish National League, by a vote of 70 to 3, has finally expelled Kinney, the President, because he shook hands with Earl Spencer, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Gov. Glick, of Kansas, has proclaimed a quarantine of sixty days against cattle from the States of Kentucky, Iowa, Nebraska, and Missouri. The importation of Jersey cattle from any State is prohibited.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The exports of wheat for the week ended September 6 were 2,226,768 bushels, against only 1,433,775 in the corresponding week of last year. For the fortnight from August 25 to September 6 the exports were 4,992,673 bushels this year, against 2,771,317 last year, an increase for this year of 2,221,356, which the increase in the exports of flour would swell by nearly another half-million bushels. Hence it appears that so far from there being no foreign demand, or less than there was, there is a market abroad for our surplus which takes almost two bushels this year for one taken last year.

The imports of dry goods at New York for the week ending September 26, aggregated $2,063,600, against $2,264,000 during the corresponding week of last year.

The cotton trade in England is in a bad way, and never were there more determined efforts to check production than within the last month. Fifty companies with 6,000,000 spindles work only four days a week, and suspended all operations for a whole week while the artisans were enjoying an annual holiday. "Production has surpassed demand, and 40,000,000 spindles," sighs a Manchester journal, "are now turning their produce into an overweighted market." The shipping trade, on the other hand, is working up, the scare about the navy inducing the hope of large orders on the Tyne.

Ninety-two firms in America engaged in the iron trade are in favor of restricting the production of pig-iron, while but thirteen firms are opposed to such a course.

During the week ending September 27, $6,889,728 worth of merchandise was received at the Port of New York from foreign countries.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the corn trade says: "The autumnal weather was intermittent with rainfalls, which have been unfavorable for threshing. Deliveries have consequently been of a restricted nature. Sales of English wheat the last week 77,639 quarters at 33 shillings per quarter, against 72,844 quarters at 41 shillings per quarter the corresponding week last year. Barley is tending downwards, and the crop of 1884 is below mediocrity. Beans and peas are tending in favor of buyers. The markets for foreign wheats is unimproved, and the supply is oppressively large. The market for flour is against sellers. Maize is weaker throughout the country. Barley is selling at very low prices. Oats dull; off coast cargoes quiet. There were eight arrivals this week and seven sales. Six cargoes were withdrawn, one remains, and sixteen cargoes are due the ensuing week."

The clearing-house statement for last week shows a falling off of 30.1 per cent in the aggregate clearances of twenty-six leading cities as compared with the corresponding week last year. The decrease in New York was 35.7 per cent; in Chicago 7.4 per cent; outside of New York 13.1 per cent. Milwaukee and Kansas City are the only points where there was an increase.

A new gas well has been established at Pittsburg, Pa. The vein was struck at the distance of 1,200 feet below the surface.

Heavy rains and floods and the maintenance of cholera cordons and lazarettos are paralyzing trade throughout Spain. The working classes are suffering greatly, and it is expected that their distress will increase during the coming winter.

The hosiery manufactures of Nottingham, England, have given notice to their employees of a reduction of wages, owing to the dullness of trade and foreign competition.

It may be doubted if there ever was a time when the mills of Minneapolis, Minn., turned out as much flour as they are doing now. Every mill is being called upon for the last barrel that it can produce, and the totals are attaining a lofty height. It is a period of big runs, and as the new crop comes into more general use the mills promise to show even more astonishing results. The total flour production last week amounted to 139,626 barrels, against 119,285 the previous week and 82,000 barrels in 1883. This is an average of 23,271 barrels daily, or within about 3,000 barrels of what the maximum capacity of the city is rated at. When it is considered that one mill of 600 barrels capacity is not being operated at all, although rumors are current that it will now soon be started up, while two or three others lost one to two days' time by accidents, this output of flour is something wonderful. The present week, however, gives promise of piling up even a larger amount. Twenty-one mills are being worked to their greatest capacity, and having all the power they need, are not unlikely to approach close to a daily production of 26,000 barrels—their maximum rated capacity.

Three or four mills are running on new wheat exclusively, the others using from one-third to one-half, and millers speak very highly of its fine milling qualities. It is conceded to be superior to last year's crop, and flours "like chalk," as one miller puts it. It is comparatively dry, has a greater amount of gluten, and consequently gives the flour greater strength, makes a flour of fine color, and has a very thin bran. Those mills that have so far run on it entirely have been able to make a greater amount of flour in a given time, and it finds high favor among the operative millers.

The following were the receipts and shipments from Minneapolis for the weeks ending the dates given:—

Under ordinary circumstances the heavy receipts of wheat the last week would have greatly depressed prices, but the week has been noted for steadiness, with occasional advances, the close showing a firm market at an advance of one-half to one cent all around. The purchases by millers on 'Change and an increased demand from outside contributed to hold up the market. The weather has been very wet and cold, and the general feeling is bullish. Reports indicate that there is still considerable old wheat at country points, but it does not come in very fast.

Following were the highest and lowest new wheat prices by grade on 'Change during the week ending to-day, together with to-day's closing prices and the prices one year ago:

	Highest.	Lowest.	Closing.	Oct. 1, 1883.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Sept. 25.—Loss by fire at Neponset, Mass., $240,000. Memphis, Tenn., box factory, $15,000. Pittsburg Pa., $180,000. St. Ann, Ont. $15,000. Monroe, La. steamer, $15,000. Syracuse, N. Y., $20,000.

Sept. 27.—The Rockingham House at Portsmouth, N. H., was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is estimated at $75,000. All the guests escaped, but most of them lost considerable jewelry and other property.

The reign of terror inaugurated at Cleveland, O., three weeks ago by fire-bugs is at its climax, and not a citizen of Cleveland is to-night free of apprehension for the safety of his property. Everywhere the utmost anxiety prevails, and extra precautions are being taken for the protection of property. "What is the city coming to?" is the question asked by anxious citizens to-night. Threats of lynching are freely indulged, and it would go hard with the incendiaries if they were caught committing an act of arson. There is talk of organizing vigilance committees to take matters into their own hands, but there is little likelihood that such extreme steps will be taken. No arrests have been made yet, and there are no clues by which to trace the criminals. At two o'clock this afternoon occurred one of the most destructive fires since that of last Sunday night. It was started in the lumber yard of the Cleveland Sawmill & Lumber Company, and was only controlled after burning through the long trestle of the Connotton Valley Railway, fifty feet of which were burned away, cutting off the trains of the road from access to the depot. The loss was $8,000. Shortly after 4 o'clock, while the entire fire department of the city was engaged at the lumber fire, a small boy standing near the Connotton depot observed a man steal his way to a pair of passenger-coaches standing on a side-track. In a few moments flames began to issue from one of the coaches, and the cars were soon wrapped in flames. An engine ran up and pulled them to a vacant space below, where they were completely gutted before the fire was extinguished. The cars when fired were standing very near the depot and in the midst of a dense mass of wooden buildings. The Greene Block, No. 134 St. Clair street, was set on fire about five o'clock. Two packing boxes soaked in oil were the kindlings used. Prompt action prevented much damage. Purdy & McNeil, one of the largest lumber firms in the city, to-day received a letter from Chicago warning them that their vast stocks would be in ashes before Monday. The letter was without signature and was neatly and correctly written. The Thomas (Manning) machine-shops have also received an anonymous warning that their works will also be destroyed in the near future. These notes are probably intended to divert attention from the real field of proposed incendiary operations.

Loss by fire at Williamsburg, L. I., $75,000. Madison, Wisconsin, $3,000. Pleasantville, Iowa, $6,000.

Sept. 29.—Three more fires supposed to be of incendiary origin were discovered at Cleveland, O., early this morning, but the flames were subdued before they had caused much damage. Two men were arrested on the charge of having started one of the fires.

Another attempt was made to-day to fire a stable by incendiaries at Allentown, Pa. Excitement runs high to-night. Mayor Shimes called a meeting of citizens, at which the strongest measures were adopted to apprehend the firebugs. Last night the city was patrolled by twenty-three extra policemen. The force will be strengthened if necessary. Loss by fire at Warsaw, Wisconsin, $8,000. Omaha, Neb., $20,000.

A cloud-burst at Pachuca, Mexico, the afternoon of the 27th caused a terrible inundation. The amalgamating-works were destroyed, and considerable silver under treatment was lost. It is estimated that thirty persons were killed. A great deal of property was destroyed and many cattle drowned.

Two trains collided near Farmington, W. Va., killing three men, and injuring four others.

Sept. 30.—The Pennsylvania Salt Company's acid manufactory at Natrona, near Pittsburg, was destroyed by fire. The loss is about $100,000.

An incendiary attempted to burn the Nickel Plate freight depot, at Cleveland, O., but was frustrated by an employee. Loss by fire at Lachine, Quebec, $25,000. Louisville, Quebec, $25,000. A destructive forest fire is raging in Dinwiddie county, Virginia. Loss by fire at Goshen, Ind., $3,000. Wheatland, Ind., $3,000.

The cyclone which passed over Bradford, Pa., Sunday, grew in power as it passed over the New York State line. The Village of Shongo, eight miles south of Wellsville, is to-day a scene of death, ruin, and desolation. Two persons were killed outright, about twenty were badly injured, and thirty buildings in the business portion of the town were destroyed. The cyclone came from the south-west and was evidently at its highest when it struck Shongo. Horses, pigs, cattle, and poultry were killed, and orchards destroyed. The cyclone belt was narrow, and its duration only for a moment or two, but there was a terrific and destructive force wrapped up in it. After plowing a narrow area of wreck among the forest trees over the hill to the south-west to the doomed village the current settled down, and, crossing the valley at a wild speed, struck the quiet Village of Shongo, more than two-thirds of which is a ruin to-day.

A destructive cyclone passed over the Lehigh Valley Road, about six miles beyond Towanda, Pa., Sunday night. The width of the cyclone was about a quarter of a mile. It came from the west, and everything in its course was damaged or wrecked. Some of the stoutest trees were uprooted and carried away; buildings were overturned, and many of them shattered to pieces. In one place cattle were killed and five persons injured.

October 1st.—A destructive fire has broken out in the woods near Disputanta Station, Prince George County, Va., thirteen miles from Petersburg, on the Norfolk & Western Railroad, and a large quantity of cord-wood belonging to the company has been burned. The forest fire in Dinwiddie County is still burning, but hands are at work fighting the flames.

The famous Glen House at the White Mountains was burnt to-night. The wood caught fire from the burning buildings and present a grand spectacle. It is impossible to obtain particulars to-night. The house was closed to-day for the season. Loss by fire at Boston, Mass., $20,000. Near Manteno, Ill., creamery, $10,000. Alexandria, Va., $10,000.

Oct. 2.—The shops of the Alabama & Great Southern Railway at Meridian, Miss., were destroyed by fire. Loss $250,000.

Advices from India, Asia, state that a collision occurred on the Eastern Bengal Railway in which sixty persons were killed and injured.

Last evening some miners at a saloon at Excelsior, Iowa, got to drinking, and one William Harrison took up a can containing ten pounds of sporting powder. From a lighted pipe in his mouth fire dropped into the powder. The explosion killed Harrison. William and Walter Patterson were seriously injured. John Carr was fatally wounded. Six others were badly injured. The saloon was destroyed.

Prosperity is not without many fears and distastes; and adversity is not without comfort and hopes.

Selected Poetry.

IT IS NOT IN VAIN.

Selected and Revised by Bro. Joseph Devosnap.

"I have labored in vain," a Teacher said,
And his brow was marked with care;
"I have labored in vain," he bowed his head,
And bitter and sad were the tears he shed,
In that moment of dark despair.

"I am weary and worn, and my hands are weak,
And my courage is well nigh gone;
For none give heed to the words I speak,
And in vain for a promise of fruit I seek,
Where the seed of the word is sown."

And again with a sorrowful heart he wept,
For his spirit with grief was stirred;
Till the night grew dark, and at last he slept;
And a silent calm o'er his spirit crept,
And a whisper of peace was heard.

And he thought in his dreams that his soul took
To a blessed and bright abode; [flight,
Where he saw a throne of dazzling light,
And harps were ringing, and robes were white,
Made white with a Savior's blood.

And he saw such a countless throng around,
As he never had seen before;
Their brows with jewels of light were crowned,
And sorrow and sighing no place had found;
For the troubles of time were o'er.

Then a white-robed minstrel came forth and said,
"Joy, joy, for thy trials are past;
I am one that thy precious words have led
In the narrow pathway of life to tread,
I welcome thee home at last."

And the Teacher gazed on the speaker's face;
He had seen that face on earth,
Where, in accents mild, in his wonted place,
He had told his charge of a Savior's grace,
And the need of the water birth.

Then the Teacher smiled, and an Angel said:
"Go forth to thy work again;
It is not in vain that the seed is shed;
If only one soul to Christ is led,
Thy labor is not in vain."

Then the dreamer woke, and his knee he bent,
In grateful, child-like prayer;
And he prayed till an answer of peace was sent,
And faith and hope, as a rainbow blent,
O'er the clouds of his earthly care.

And he rose in joy, and his face was bright,
His sorrow and grief had fled.
And his soul was calm, and his heart was light;
For his hands were strong in his Savior's might,
As forth to his work he sped.

Then rise, fellow Teachers, to labor go;
Wide scatter the precious grain;
Though the fruit may never be seen below,
Be sure that the seed of the word will grow,
Toil on in faith and thou soon shall know,
Thy labor is not in vain.

BRADEN'S DOINGS.

BRO JOSEPH:—On coming to this place the 18th inst., as I alighted from the train, Elder Clark Braden, Campbellite, entered the cars for St. Louis, leaving a proposition, in writing, to discuss the questions,—Did the world need further revelation than the Bible when Joseph Smith claimed to receive revelation from God; and, was Joseph Smith a prophet of God as claimed for him in Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Book of Abraham and other professed revelations.

The branch here, the evening of the same day, took action on the matter, accepted the challenge, and wrote to Elder E. L. Kelley to come and affirm the propositions at his earliest convenience. It was thought best to call Bro. Kelley, (1), because he so signally "vanquished" the Campbellite Champion at Kirtland, and Wilber; and (2), because Braden falsely stated here in his lecture on Mormonism, Monday night, the 15th inst., that the Reorganized Church had "gone back" on Bro. Kelley, admitting that he was defeated in the late discussion at Kirtland; and, (3), for the reason that Mr. Braden stated divers things in respect to that discussion, and the book containing it, which Bro. Kelley, better than any one else, is prepared to refute; and, lastly, because Bro. Kelley is, by experience, thoroughly acquainted with the tricky, and dishonest methods of said Mr. Braden, and is therefore prepared to detect and expose them. Mr. Braden lectured here on Mormonism for the manifest purpose of creating prejudice against the Saints, against Bro. Kelley's work in their late discussion, and to enlist popular sentiment in favor of himself and his efforts in said discussion.

He does not seem willing to let the discussion go to the public on its inherent merits, but he would rather go to the people first and fix it up, and so create favorable impressions with them, so far as he can, in behalf of himself, and bad impressions against Elder Kelley's work and against the Saints. But he will finally fail in this; for no person of good sense and the love of truth and right who carefully reads that discussion, but what will decide, as did the citizens of Kirtland who heard it, that Elder Kelley "vanquished" Mr. Braden on every issue, and maintained the dignity and honor of a true minister of Christ; and that Mr. Braden did his work chiefly by constantly pouring forth a flood of filthy falsehood, slimy slander, and unsupported statements. His speeches leave no doubt but that he is well worthy of the charges made against him for perversion made by A. Wilford Hall as found on p. 90, and by the editors of the Fall City Journal, and Table Rock Argus, p. 353, of the Debate. On reading the sworn evidence on pages 382 to 396, the reader can see the malignant, desperate, and futile efforts of the man who proclaimed "war to the knife, and the knife to the hilt," against Mormonism. Under Appendix A, p. 382, he introduces the evidence of a man who for more than fifty years has, confessedly, done all he could against Mormonism, and in this evidence he contradicts the testimony of David Whitmer, the examining committee, and all those who have examined the original manuscript. Besides this, the original manuscript of itself shows, when compared with the first edition of the Book of Mormon, that said manuscript was punctuated and capitalized at the time it was first written, except in a few instances. Braden introduces a fellow minister, Mr. Moss, whose testimony, when analyzed, is most damaging to himself, but falls harmless at the feet of the Saints; for this, Mr. Braden's chief witness, on oath confesses he would have stolen the sacramental wine from a sacrament service (a penitentiary offense) if he had had his cloak on! (See pages 384-5). He also confesses to have purloined a revelation from Martin Harris' hat. He confesses to having played the hypocrite, and to perpetrating some shameful trick on a young married lady during service. Braden seeks to make him say bad things about the Saints and the chief men of the Church, but in this he signally fails, and only makes the poor old dolt expose his own depravity.

Another of Mr. Braden's strong(?) witnesses succeeds in showing how he imposed on the hospitality of the Saints, in early times, how he, too, played the hypocrite in sacred matters; and further, that he knew nothing bad about the reputation of Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, Martin Harris, Oliver Cowdery and others, and lastly; that he did not believe in the spiritual blessings claimed by the Saints. If this witness had lived in the days of the early Christians, undoubtedly his unbelief in such things would then have been equally as great. The sworn testimony of Harmon, Sanborn, Plaisted, Bond, and Rich, (non-Mormons), will stand and be received as authentic and reliable testimony in favor of the general good character of Joseph Smith, his fellow-witnesses, and the Saints, while the bare charges, slanderous statements, and manufactured testimonies of Howe and Co., Clark Braden and his like, will perish in their own rot, and be abhorred by all righteous people.

But, I must not close until I notice the fact, that when Mr. Braden's witnesses don't testify to suit his theories, he says they don't remember correctly! or they are mistaken! or, they lie! (see pp. 44, 64, 65, etc.) For Mr. Braden to use the persons so long as he can make their testimony suit his plot, and then when their testimony is flatly and squarely against his theories, to kick them aside and insult their character is enough to make them cry out from their graves and rebuke his folly and meanness.

We hear Mr. Braden intends to write a supplement to his efforts in the debate. This can only mean he is not satisfied with them, and knows they are faulty. His "knife" is now bound to him, with the keen weapon of Elder Kelley just in proper place, and the more Mr. Braden struggles the deeper will be his hurt, and the more apparent his utter defeat.

Before closing permit me to say that Mr. Braden's statements that Elders Marks and Gurley were ever editors of the Herald, (see p. 377), are not true; also his statement on p. 356, that I was the editor of Mother Smith's History, and that I admit that Joseph the Seer "began his course by witching for water with a witch hazel rod, and peeping for stolen articles and lost articles," or that he dug for money, and superintended a gang of knaves and dupes in such work, is false in fact, malicious in spirit, and just in keeping with the innumerable false and vicious statements as I have read them in said debate. I am confirmed in the fact that the Nebraska Editors page 353, are entirely correct.

WHEN WILL THE SAINTS FIND REST?

BELOVED HERALD:—In treating this subject and endeavoring to answer this question according to the revelations of God's word, I desire that I may be aided by his Spirit. In canvassing this subject, I shall be under the necessity of setting certain stakes; but I shall endeavor to so place them, that if they are not set in truth, and well tamped down with the word of God, that other writers can pull them up, and place them where they belong.

The rest referred to, is the great Sabbatical year of peace and rest that awaits the Saints of God; not the Millennium, but that which is to commence at the end of the Millennium, or soon thereafter; perhaps immediately after the "little season," referred to in Revelations 20: 3. That the Millennium may be called a day of rest, a rest from persecutions, and from the besetments of sin and the temptations of Satan, I do not deny. But that it is not the great Sabbatical year, (thousand years), or day of rest, of glory and exaltation that awaits the Saints of God, we will try to prove; and in so doing take from the infidel one of his weapons against the Bible; viz., That Adam did not die in the day that he ate of the forbidden fruit.

Webster defines rest: "To cease from labor; as God in the beginning, after creating or making the earth and all that is therein." He rested from all his works. Is the Millennium a day of rest? (I have and shall continue to use the term day, when applied to rest, or ceasing from labor, be the length of that time what it may; that can be determined by the context. Such a day as God hallowed when he rested from all his works. Does it come in the proper period or time? "Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work; but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." Are we not here as much commanded to labor six days, as we are to cease to labor, or work on the seventh day? Now if we can prove that the six days in which God created the heavens and the earth, Gen. 1: 1, and the seventh day on which he rested from all his works, Gen. 2: 2, were each one a thousand years of our time; and that he hallowed, consecrated, set apart, the seventh day as a day of rest, as an example for us to follow; that he has given no laws to us to be binding on us, that he has not himself honored by first setting us the example, as Jesus did in the waters of baptism; if so, is not the example as continuous and lasting as is the command? This granted, then as God after the creation of this world and all its belongings rested from all his works; then does he not continue to observe every seventh day, or period of time that to him is a day?

It is said that Joseph the Seer taught that God was a personage, and had a home, a planet on which he dwelt, as we do on this planet or earth; that this planet, (called Kolobe), revolved on its axes once in a thousand years of our time. But though I be not able to give book, chapter and verse, is it not in harmony (so far as the time is concerned), with Peter; 2 Peter 3: 8, who says that "One day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." If this be true, that God was six thousand years in creating the heavens and the earth, for yonder bright luminary was not made till the fourth day, nor man till the sixth day; then the evening and the morning of the first, second, third and fourth days were not measured by our time-piece, the sun; and if they were not, why need we suppose the fifth, sixth and seventh days were? Hence, if the creation was performed by the diurnal rotations of the planet Kolobe, in six revolutions of the same, are we not forced to the conclusion that the seventh day, in which God rested, was measured by the same time piece? If this is so, does it not help us out of the dilemma that the infidel urges, when he says that God told Adam that in the day he ate thereof, (the forbidden fruit), he should surely die; and then tells us that he lived to be nearly a thousand years old. In what day did Adam eat of the forbidden fruit? Was it not the seventh day? The Sabbath of the Lord? Yes, mark the expression, the Sabbath of the Lord. It was the day in which God rested from his labor. If as Peter has said, that "One day with the Lord is as a thousand years," then Adam became subject to death on the very day that God rested from his work, and died the natural death of the body before the close of that day; and God's words have proved true. I thought it necessary to come to some correct division of time, before I could successfully and truthfully answer my question. I have asked two questions: Is the Millennium that day of rest? Does it come in the right period of time?

In answering the first question turn to the sixty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, seventeenth verse:

"For behold I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind."

This is to be in the millennium, is it not? Twentieth verse:

"In those days there shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days; for the child shall not die, but shall live to be an hundred years old; but the sinner living to be an hundred years old shall be accursed."

Yes, this certainly must be in the Millennium. Twenty-first:

"And they shall build houses and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them."

Then they are to toil and labor with their hands, are they not? Twenty-second:

"They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat; for as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands."

Notice, "The work of their hands."

This does not look much like a day (period of time) of rest; a day in which there is to be no manual labor, or work done, any more than it does in verse 23, "They shall not labor in vain." Inspired Translation. Hence we can see that the Millennium does not answer the question, "When will the Saints find rest?" Nor does it come in the right period of time. If as I have said, that God has given no laws to be binding upon his children by adoption, that he has not himself honored, even the similitude of the tabernacle, and the ark of the covenant was had in heaven; for Moses was commanded to make everything according to the pattern shown him in the mount. Then if God rested only the seventh day, or seventh thousand years, and then went to work again; for we read that there is no end to his works, will he not at the expiration of his next week of six days, six thousand years, commence another Sabbath of rest? Will there not be the same necessity for him to keep that day as there was for him to keep a day of rest six thousand years ago? As he is without variableness or shadow of turning, and his course is one eternal round, then the day of his resting from the creation of this world and its belongings, was during Adam's lifetime, and seventy years longer. That is, if "one day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." (See Job 10: 4, 5; Psalms 9: 4; 2 Peter 3: 8). It is said to be four thousand years from Adam (his birth or creation) till Christ; it now (at Christ's birth) lacks two thousand years of being six thousand years from the creation. When the seventh thousand years will begin, the Millennial reign of peace will be ushered in. But if the Lord's Sabbath of rest lasted a thousand years, then his next seventh day, or thousand years of rest, will begin at the end, (or soon after), of the Millennium. This will be as I have said, a glorious reign of peace and rest for the Saints of God; a rest from the temptations of sin and Satan, and from persecutions; but not from toil and labor, as I have proven from Isaiah 65: 17-23. Satan is to be bound during this thousand years, and then he is to be loosed for a little season. Rev. 20: 1-3. This little season is an indefinite length of time. He (Satan) is to be loosed for a certain purpose; but that he may not encroach upon the time (one thousand years) of the Millennium; nor yet upon the great Sabbatic day of rest, we will suppose that little season to be an hundred years. To do this, the Millennium must commence at or before the year nineteen hundred of the Christian era. This will be in harmony with the teachings of Jesus, where he says: "Except those days be shortened, [hastened], no flesh should be saved." It is said that it was made known unto the martyr, that if he was faithful and lived to a certain age, eighty-five or ninety years, (am not positive which), that he should live to see the second coming of the Son of Man. Either of these figures would bring his second advent before the close of the present century. The writer, with many others, heard one of our elders, Bro. Jackson Goodale, say at a General Conference held in Plano, Illinois, that he heard Joseph Smith say on the stand, at a General Conference, held at Nauvoo, just prior to his death, in treating upon Christ's second advent, and in referring to the teachings of William Miller on that subject, he told the Saints not to be alarmed about Miller's set time. He then spoke as if by the spirit of prophecy; and asked these questions:

"Will he come in twenty years? No, he'll not come in twenty years. Will he come in thirty years? No, he'll not come in thirty years. Will he come in forty years? No, he'll not come in forty years. Will he come in fifty years? Yes, he will come inside of fifty years."

This will bring the second coming of Christ within the present century. It will give him and his saints one thousand years Millennial reign on the earth; also one hundred years for the little season, that Satan is to be loosed, that he may do the work that he has to do. May not this (one hundred years) also be a sufficient time for the fulfillment of Rev. 20:7-15; also the fulfillment of 1st Cor. 15:24-28, for Christ to subdue every foe, to conquer his last enemy. "Then will he [Christ] deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father, that God may be all in all." Surely this fighting battles, subduing enemies, taking kingdoms and delivering up the same, is not a day of rest; is not ceasing from labor and toil, any more than planting vineyards, building houses and sowing grain; (that the lion may have straw to eat;) in the Millennium is. If this one hundred years is sufficient to bridge over this little season, and to accomplish the work that Christ has to do before he delivers up the kingdom to the Father; if one day with the Lord is as a thousand years; if it was by this (his own) time, that he created the heavens and the earth in six days, (six thousand years), then if he rested on the seventh day, or one seventh part of his time; then his second Sabbath (beginning to count from the creation of the world) will commence immediately after Christ delivers up the kingdom to the Father.

When we bear in mind the fact that Sunday, or the Sabbath, is not a day to lounge about, to sleep and snore; nor yet to sit with folded hands, and idle away our time; but that it is a day to cease from manual labor, and from intellectual or brain labor, so far as temporal things are concerned. But it is a time to improve the spiritual, the intellectual and the moral part of our being, or that of those with whom and for whom we are called to labor, and teach. Does this not harmonize with the example of God in the beginning, (allowing that his day of rest was one thousand years), was he not, (prior to the fall), walking with, talking to, and instructing Adam and Eve? Was he not after the fall, instructing them either by his voice, his Spirit, or his angels; in his gospel, the plan of salvation; and administering the ordinances of the same to them? If this is so, will he not during the next seventh day of his rest, after the kingdom has been delivered up to him, at the end of the Millennium; (for remember that during the Millennium Christ is to be our King and not the Father); I say will he not then instruct his Saints in the great and glorious things of eternity? If Saints here, under all the disadvantageous conditions under which they labor, can make such advancements in a few years, as some have made in the things of God; what can we not there learn during that great Sabbatical day of rest, with the Father and the Son, together with such as they shall appoint to be our teachers and instructors, in one thousand years? No wonder that Enoch's bosom swelled broad as eternity, (Gen. 7 Inspired Translation), when contemplating what was in store for the faithful Saints of God, if we, when we catch the slightest twinkling of light that points in that direction, feel such aspirations of soul as does the writer, which almost involuntarily cause him to shout, "Glory to God in the highest." Even though he should be lost, he can not help praising God for the great and glorious things that are in store for all who are faithful to the end of life's journey. There is another point in connection with this Sabbath question that I wish to notice, for this reason: In the Jewish Sabbath, so strict were they, that a man was not allowed to gather sticks (fuel) on that day to kindle his fire; and even in gathering their manna, they had to gather enough on the sixth day for two days.

"And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as a crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, on either side of the river, was the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruit, and yielded her fruit every month; and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him; and they shall see his face and his name shall be in their foreheads. And there shall be no night there and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord giveth them light; and they shall reign forever and ever."—Rev. 22: 1-5.

In the third verse, "And there shall be no more curse." There is no greater curse than sin and death. "The wages of sin is death." Why no more curse or death? Has man now become immortal? (for this is after the final resurrection); if so, why the tree of life on either side of the river of life, with its twelve varieties of fruit, and they produced monthly, so that they can be had in their most fresh and perfect state. Again, if there is no more curse, no sickness nor death; why are the leaves of the tree of life for the healing of the nations? Does the tree of life grow spontaneously there, with its twelve varieties of fruits; so that those who are accounted worthy to see his (God's) face, and have his name written in their foreheads, to enjoy that thousand years' Sabbath; that they may there attain unto all the knowledge and power, (for knowledge is power), that God shall place within their reach, without having to plant vineyards, or sow grain, that they may enjoy the fruit of their labor, when the law of the Sabbath is "Thou shalt rest from all thy labors?" If this is the case; if this brings us down to the time that the angel shall stand upon the sea, and the earth, and swear by him who liveth forever and ever, that time shall be no longer.—Rev. 10: 5, 6. If this is the case, then it helps us out of another difficulty; and knocks another infidel prop from under them.

"And now, behold I say unto you, This is the plan of salvation unto all men, through the blood of mine Only Begotten, who shall come in the meridian of time."—Gen. 6: 65; also verse 60, Inspired Translation.

Did he come in the meridian of time, (the middle of time, the noon of time? Webster). Yes, if he was six thousand years in creating the heavens and the earth; if he rested one seventh part of his time; if Adam died on, or during the day that his Creator and law-giver was resting from his works; if he (God) will rest again at the end of another six days (of his time) labor. If the close of this second Sabbath will bring us to the time that the angel standing on the sea and land shall proclaim time to be no longer; as that will be just eight thousand years from the creation. It being four thousand years, (or near that), from Adam till Christ; that would be the meridian, the middle, the noon of time. In this way and in no other can we reconcile the Scriptures, concerning the penalty attached to Adam's sin; for that penalty "(Thou shalt surely die)," was a temporal death, the death of the body, as we can prove by the Scriptures, and good logic. Nor in any other way can we make it appear that Christ came in the meridian of time.

One word regarding the sun and moon being created on the fourth day of the creation. It is claimed by scientists and infidels, that the sun, the center of the solar system, around which this orb and all others of the solar system revolve, must have been created before the earth was, instead of on the fourth day of the creation. Granted, it may have been eternal, for aught we care touching this question. As far as the earth is concerned, the sun, moon nor stars were made, nor created, until the earth was in a condition to receive their rays, to abide and be governed by their laws, their influences. If on the fourth day of the creation, the earth was far enough advanced to receive and be governed by the influence and laws of the sun and moon, then and not till then, so far as the earth is concerned, was the sun and moon created. Gen. 1: 19, Inspired Translation.

It is believed and taught by many, that God was six thousand years, (of our time) in the creation of this world and its belongings; and some that so believe and teach, seem to think that when he rested the seventh day, he only rested twenty-four hours. Now there are, if our figuring be correct, 2,191,500 days in six thousand years; while there is but 86,400 seconds in 24 hours of our time; so that if 24 hours, or 86,400 seconds were all the time that he rested, against 2,191,500 days, it was a very small proportion of his time to say the least. All can see the absurdity of that view. Praying that God by his Spirit will lead us to search the Scriptures, and seek him for wisdom, I will close.

VISIONS OF MRS. WHITE.

HAVING had an opportunity during the last few months to investigate the claims of the Seventh Day Adventists, I feel like penning a few thoughts concerning their peculiar faith. Generally speaking they are, or seem to be, an honest, sincere people. They claim to believe in all the spiritual gifts promised to believers and relate many miraculous cases of healing. But, as we can not regard them as an infallible proof of their mission, we will look at, and compare some points of their doctrine with the Bible, and see if they will stand the test. To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isaiah 8:20. From the best information I can get, both from their representatives and their publications, it seems that they receive their revelations, by which the church is governed, through Mrs. Ellen G. White, Battle Creek, Michigan. Having through the kindness of a friend, who desired me to investigate, had the privilege of examining a work written by Mrs. White, entitled, "Spiritual Gifts," in which she describes some of her manifestations, or visions, I will make a few extracts therefrom:

"I saw that Moses passed through death, but Michael came down and gave him life, before he saw corruption; Satan claimed the body as his, but Michael resurrected Moses, and took him to heaven."—S. G., vol. 1, page 43.

Could we believe that Moses was resurrected before he saw corruption, we could easily account for his appearance on the mount, without its coming in contact with the soul sleeping theory; but if it can be determined that Moses was not resurrected until after his appearance on the mount, it will militate forcibly against the theory of the unconsciousness of the dead. Paul says:

"Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing to both small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead."—Acts 26:22, 23.

This not only strikes a blow at the visions of Mrs. White but strikes with equal force at the soul sleeping theory; as it is positively stated, that Moses died and was buried; (Deut. 34:5, 6); and was not resurrected until after his appearance on the mount, and after the resurrection of Christ.

We are told by some of these good people that it is in the belief that the dead are unconscious, that they "have more comfort than any other doctrine they ever heard." To us it would destroy all hope.

Let us see: We are composed of this mortal body and breath; the breath leaves the body, the body returns to dust. Unless the same particles that compose this body are resurrected, that will be the end of us forever.

"But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die; and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be," etc.—1 Cor. 15:35-37.

If the same body is not raised, and we have no immortal part to take its place in the body which God gives us, what part of us will be present at the resurrection? Could we believe this, we would be "of all men most miserable;" because "in this life only would we have hope."

Mrs. White says further:

"I saw that God had forsaken the Jews as a nation. * * * Individuals among the Jews will be converted, but as a nation they are forever forsaken of God."—S. G. vol. 1, p. 107.

Therefore fear thou not, O, my servant Jacob, saith the Lord, neither be dismayed, O Israel; for lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity, and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid. For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee, though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee."—Jer. 30:10, 11.

Much more might be quoted upon this point, if necessary; but the discrepancy between the vision of Mrs. White and the plain statement of Jeremiah is so apparent that none will fail to see it.

Speaking of the times after church and state were united, she says, "He (Satan) led on his representatives to change the Sabbath." (Spiritual Gifts, vol. 1, p. 111). If it can be shown that the day was changed long before that period of time, it will be conclusive evidence that she did not see aright; and we will be forced to the conclusion that the vision was not of God.

About the year A. D. 150, Justin Martyr, in his Apology, explaining the Christian doctrine, says:

"But we meet together on Sunday * * * because on this day Jesus Christ our Savior rose from the dead. For he was crucified on the day before that of Saturn, which is the day of the Sun, having appeared to the apostles, and disciples, he taught them the things which we now submit to your consideration."—See History of Early Church, Sewell, p. 170.

Here is positive proof that the day was changed long before the time designated by Mrs. White's vision. Furthermore, Moshem says that during the first century,

"All Christians were unanimous in setting apart the first day of the week, on which the triumphant Savior rose, for the solemn celebration of public worship. This pious custom, which was derived from the example of the Church of Jerusalem, was founded upon the express appointment of the apostles, who consecrated that day to the same sacred purpose, and was observed universally throughout the Christian Church, as appears from the united testimony of the most credible writers."—Mosheim Church History 4:4.

This to our mind is conclusive evidence that Mrs. White (although she may have been sincere) made a mistake concerning her manifestations being from God. He surely would not represent to her that the day was changed from Saturday to Sunday, so many years after Sunday was set apart and sanctified by his apostles according to his own directions. Mrs. White says:

"I saw that God was in the proclamation of the time in 1843."—Vol. 1, p. 133. "I saw the people of God joyful in expectation, looking for their Lord. * * * God designed that his people should meet with disappointment."—Vol. 1, p. 137.

O, what a picture is here presented to our view; God calls and chooses a man to declare to his people that he will come at a certain time; many honest, humble souls believe and accept the message, and with perfect trust and confidence await his coming; but lo, his design was only to disappoint them. My mind refuses to receive this.

Could I believe that God had sent one message to deceive his people, what assurance would I have that he would not deceive them again, and all those precious promises so beautifully portrayed in his word prove to be a farce. Oh, shut the scene from my view and let me rather think that Wm. Miller wrecked the faith of his followers by his blind zeal; that man may deceive, but God, never. No, no! I can not accept the vision, it would blast my hopes, wreck my faith, and destroy my trust, confidence, and reliance in the promises of God, and drive me down, down to despair. But though all is darkness and gloom when we look at that movement, yet God has not forsaken us. The angel bringing the message that Mr. Miller claimed to receive had come previous to that time, and he brought no uncertain sound; no deception; but the result of his visit has been to bring peace, joy, comfort, and consolation to all who receive the message with honest hearts. "The meek are increasing their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men are rejoicing in the Holy One of Israel."

The Church (kingdom) is organized in its ancient beauty and grandeur. Apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers have been called and have taken their respective places. The gifts and blessings follow. The work of God moves gloriously onward, preparing men to hear the welcome cry "Behold the Bridegroom cometh! Go ye out to meet him." Peace flows like a river, and all are invited to come and partake of the waters of life freely.

Many more points might be noticed, but let this suffice for the present occasion. Although the individual who loaned me the book was undoubtedly interested in my welfare, and thought I would be benefited by its perusal; yet I must again assert that I can not receive the visions; for God has never yet deceived me; but every promise he has made, he has faithfully fulfilled when I have complied with the conditions.

I hope I will not be blamed for believing that he never will deceive me; and with the best of feelings toward my friends of that faith I close with a fervent prayer that they may yet see, and embrace the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

ANGELS.

A SECTION of the Syrian army was sent to arrest Elisha. (2 Kings 6). He lived in Dothan among the mountains. They came secretly, in the night, and surrounded the prophet's home. His servant went out early and was excited with fear, seeing no way of escape. He turned to the prophet saying, "Alas, my master, how shall we do." The man of God replied, "Fear not, for they that be with us are more than than they that be with them." In pity to the trembling young man, the prophet prayed, saying, "Lord, open his eyes, that he may see." The Lord answered instantly, and behold the mountains were full of horses and chariots of fire, round about Elisha. They took away all fear of harm.

Would to God that some of the stronger ones in the latter day work would help the timid ones, cheer the good and faithful, in the dark hours of despondency. How often do I see, "Please, Bro. Joseph, pray for us." But do we all pray for one another, and like Aaron and Hur, try and do our best to uphold the prophet's arms? Don't Bro. Joseph need help as well as ourselves? Certainly.

Elijah once became so despondent that he besought the Lord to take away his life. (1 Kings 19). But God cheered him by saying, "I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed to Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." Then God informed him that his work was not yet done. He then told him where to go, and what to do to finish his work on earth. Then God also answered his prayers in a way and manner he perhaps had not thought of. He took him up in a chariot of fire, after appointing another one in his place.

Most of the sorrows of good men and women arise in similar ways. I have seen trials and troubles; and had the cold charity of a non-sympathizing world. If all the troubled and sorrowing ones in Zion could see that they are surrounded by a mighty host, prepared by God for their protection and safety, we should hear of no more sorrow. All would be praise and joy and gladness.

But was that guard that attended Elisha a special favor, granted to him because he was God's chosen servant? Was he thus honored then, or all the time? Are the pious and faithful in all the world protected in a similar way? Why not? Are not the angels of God many, and is not their chief business to wait upon the heirs of salvation? Jacob calls them "God's host." (Genesis 32:2). Micaiah calls them the "host of heaven." (1 Kings 22:19). St. Luke calls them the "heavenly host." (Luke 2:13.) David in his Psalms says: "The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels." (Psalms 68:17). Paul informs us, when exhorting the brethren to be faithful, "But ye are come to Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem; and to an innumerable number of angels." (Heb. 12:22, 23). And the Great Teacher informs us also, "I could pray the Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels." The Roman legion is supposed to be six thousand, so that our blessed Lord could have had to defend him, if needed, seventy-two thousands of angels.

Saint Paul says: "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation." This is the Divine purpose in the administration of his church and kingdom, and in the affairs of the world. Oh, how I feel like shouting the well known words, "Fear not little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Your meeting room may be up some three or four story building, in some city, unnoticed by the proud, great, and gay. Or it may be in some lonely, out of the way spot in some valley, and on some prairie, or near the woods. Nevertheless, angels notice you, and are ready to protect and defend you from all harm. Daniel was cast into a den of lions. After a sleepless night, the king was early at the den, crying, "Is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?" And the reply comes, "My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they dare not hurt me." Peter lies in prison. Prayer is offered up in his behalf by the church. He is sound asleep between two soldiers. The angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shone in the prison; and as he smote Peter on the side, saying, "Arise up quickly," his chains fell from his hands. He followed him out into the city, and went directly into the house of Mary, the mother of John and Mark. An angel rolled the stone from the door of the sepulcher. An angel appeared to Paul, directing him to go over to Macedonia, and when on the ship, in a terrible storm, an angel came to him to comfort him, and to strengthen him, and gave him success in winning to Christ all who were on the ship. Angels have been in private and social worship. The great and good are cared for by them. The widows and orphans are not forgotten by them. Ye fearful, doubting Saints, dry up your tears. Well may Charles Wesley set the whole church singing in his day:

"Which of the monarchs of the earth,
Can boast a guard like ours;
Encircled from our second birth,
With all the heavenly powers."

SABBATH SCHOOL WORK.

I HAVE always felt impressed with the great importance of Sabbath School work. The great secret of the firm hold that the Catholic Church has taken on the minds of the people of the world, can be traced, I apprehend, directly to the care and diligence shown by them in looking after and properly training the minds of the young, whom providence or circumstances has thrown in their way. One of our greatest failings as a church is not, as many suppose, a lack of foreign missionary labor, so much as neglect of the young by whom we are surrounded. Even the children of the Saints are many times, not only not found numbered among the membership of the Church after arriving at mature years, but actually ignorant of many truths, a knowledge of which should be expected from every well informed person. It is under the weight of these circumstances, that I have been induced to undertake with others the preparation of "Lesson Leaves" for the Hope, and have likewise been prompted to offer herewith a few suggestions.

My idea of a Sabbath School is a school under the direction of recognized servants of God, where the attendants are met for such instruction, mutual or otherwise, in church history and doctrine, as shall fit those who are profited by it for representatives of the work; or at least intelligent and exemplary members of the Church. In their broadest sense "history" and "doctrine" comprise the whole field of Sabbath School work; and both are necessary to a well organized school. I know there are some who contend that "doctrine," and narrow doctrine at that, which only comprises a compliance with the letter of the first principles of the gospel, is all that is necessary, and all that is more than this is more or less a species of aping after the customs of the world. I undertake to say that there is no teaching of scripture that can be perverted into any such interpretation; but on the other hand, that many of the finest efforts of God's servants in every age of the world, are in direct conflict with this idea. On the other hand there are those (few I know, but who exist, nevertheless) who by former education or long-continued connection with "union" schools, have formed an idea that no doctrine, strictly speaking, should be taught; but that a proper study of history and a judicious inter-mixture of a "healthy moral sentiment," is all that is required, and that any thing that is more than this is calculated to repel attendance and retard final investigation.

There is some reason for both of these positions; but I think there is a middle ground upon which all can unite, if they will, which has advantages from which the greatest amount of good must be expected.

With the limited opportunities afforded the committee for conference, all these points have been discussed as well as could be, and an endeavor made, which it is promised shall be continued, to arrive at the golden mean in relation to them. We only hope that our friends will bear with us as patiently as possible during the trial of what can only as yet be considered as an experiment, assist by such council and Christian criticisms as shall be the means in the end of making the experiment of to-day the assured and happy consummation of the future.

Another thought here. Some have desired the committee to so map out each lesson, that all the teachers, or the persons in charge would have to do, would be to lead the classes, or the school in conformity with a certain set of questions and answers, comprising, with the selected verses from the Bible, the "lesson" of each day. There are several objections to this. In the first place, the committee do not consider themselves infallible, and have no desire to assume a position before the young of the church, that might by reason of their fallibility place them in the unpleasant attitude in the future of "false teachers." In the second place, we believe fully in the principle of individual, intelligent inquiry; and that the reason and judgment of the pupil should be developed and to a certain extent held responsible; while those who have the work in charge, aided by such a measure of divine inspiration as God may be pleased to give, are trying by means of His truth to lead them to him. In the third place, it is notorious, (and we are glad it is so), that Latter Day Saint Elders are the severest critics in the world, and we fear would be ill prepared to accept as "law and gospel" many ideas that would necessarily be embodied in such a system of "cut and dried" lessons. We beg therefore to submit the lessons with as much scripture light by way of "references," &c., as our limited time and space will allow, and as much as possible devoid of "comment" that must of necessity in many cases be imperfect, and let the inspiration of God's Spirit, acting upon the teacher, or at least the ingenuity of the school officer, supply the balance. Such at least has been the design of the committee so far, and it is hoped all interested will take due notice and be governed in accordance.

We are constantly getting "suggestions" that will probably have the effect of changing from time to time the form of the lessons; and we hope eventually to make them as near perfect as time and circumstances will permit. We cordially invite criticism and advice, which we promise shall receive our prayerful attention, and we feel assured will assist materially in arriving at ultimate perfection. We hope, however, that should any one find that his suggestions are not adopted, that no offense will be taken; but that such will give us credit for the exercise of the same desire for truth as actuates the mind of the critic. Above all we are firm believers in the efficacy of prayer, and in our little experience in the church, have always found that we could be materially assisted by looking to God for guidance; we would therefore ask that the Saints every-where remember us to the throne of grace, that God may grant such a portion of his Spirit as shall strengthen and direct us in effecting a happy consummation of this enterprise.

Selections.

FOUND WANTING.

THERE are in the histories of men, moments of supreme opportunity, hours upon which hinge a lifetime's glory, or a lifetime's shame. Said Mordecai to Esther, at the time when the Jewish nation was involved in mortal peril, "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" (Esther 4:14). That was her opportunity. Had she failed to embrace it, had she shrunk from its responsibility, had she abandoned the sacred trust which was confided to her, her name might have been covered with confusion; and her memory might have perished from the earth. She met the exigency in the spirit of heroic fidelity, and through all the ages since, her name has been clothed with imperishable lustre.

Many others in the moment of their supreme opportunity have failed, and faltered, and gone down to forgetfulness. They have been tried and cast aside; they have been weighed in the balances and found wanting.

So also, nations have perished from the face of the earth. Their kings have failed to do justice; their princes have departed from righteousness; truth has fallen in the street, and judgment has been turned away backward; and, when national crimes filled up the cup of iniquity, and national transgressions provoked the wrath of God, at last the sword of justice was unsheathed, and with swift and terrible stroke cut down the haughty cumberers of the ground, and their fair inheritance was given into the hands of the spoilers and destroyers.

So also, there have been bodies of men associated for purposes of devotion and reformation; churches, and religious communities, which, based upon some fundamental principle, or inspired by some grand idea, have gone forth to do battle for God in the world, and have been made a power in all the earth; but when the choice spirits that led them forth, and the martyrs who sealed their testimony with their blood have passed away, then such bodies have often become sluggish, dormant, indifferent and effete. They have lost the power and sweetness of the truths which they proclaimed; they have faltered in their steadfastness to God, in their adherence to righteousness, in their devotion to the interests of humanity, and in their efforts to redeem the lost; and as a result they have been vilely cast away, as unworthy of the sacred trust which God committed to them.

Many a body of professors of Christianity has been found wanting. They may, by the force of wealth and social prestige, maintain their existence after the life of God has gone out from within them; they may stand, having a name to live while they are dead; and with music and splendor, with architecture and ornament, adorn and gild and whiten the sepulchre in which the dry bones are laid; or, lacking social and pecuniary strength, they may sink down into forgetfulness, their candlestick being removed out of its place. Or by strife and disputations, by contentions and wranglings, by biting and devouring each other they may be consumed one of another, until at last their glory is departed and their place shall know them no more. Or they may maintain a struggling existence, when they have by their sectarianism, their misdeeds, their worldliness, and their forgetfulness of the principles of righteousness, lost the respect of the community, and censed to be a living power among the sons of men.

How many such bodies there are, which have been found wanting. They were the custodians of important and precious truths, but they have been recreant to their trust; they were called forth to sound in the ears of a perishing world the solemn messages of God's grace and goodness of his mercy and his judgment, yet have failed to fulfill the high commands of heaven; they have forfeited their right to existence; they have no excuse for living on earth, they are hastening to decay.

Let the sons of men take heed to their opportunities and their responsibilities; let them be faithful to God and to the truth which he entrusts to them. Let them see to it that in heart and life, as well as in word and in tongue, they are valiant for the truth of Christ. Let them remember that they are called into this world to act as representatives of the Son of God; that as he is, so are they in this world;—that they are members of his body, and his flesh and his bones; living epistles, known and read of all men; and that in the sight of God, and in the sight of men, the strictest fidelity to truth and duty, to conscience and conviction, is required at their hands.

It is a fearful thing to be found wanting in the day of trial. It is sad to live in this world a poor and worthless thing, instead of being in God's hand a mighty instrument of good to men. It will be yet more sad to be found wanting in the Great Day, when He shall sit in judgment upon the souls of men, whose eyes shall behold, and whose eyelids shall try all hearts,—to be cast off in that day, rejected and spurned, as unfit for the presence of the King of Kings, is the doom of those found wanting then.

OLD TESTAMENT REVISION.

THE Rev. Dr. Philip Schaff, speaking of the completion of the revision of the Old Testament, says:

"It is not probable that the new work will be published before spring. The English company has finished its labors and our company will only need to meet once or twice more to complete the appendix, but it will take several months for the presses to furnish a supply at all ample to meet the demand. As in the case of the New Testament, the only authorized editions will be published by the University presses of Cambridge and Oxford, but, in the absence of an international copyright, I presume this country will have many editions of the Old Testament soon after the first copy is put on sale. It is astonishing to watch the interest displayed as the book nears publication. All over Europe where I have traveled this summer scholars are patiently waiting for it. An enterprising man tried to obtain my copy of the New Testament a few weeks before the market was supplied with the stock sent from Europe. He sent a letter from a prominent hotel by a messenger, stating that he was the agent of the London publishing house, whom I knew very well, and asked me to loan my copy for a few hours until his luggage had come from the steamer."

"What reply did you make?"

"I sent him a cordial invitation inviting him to dine with me that evening. You can imagine my disappointment at the absence of my guest when dinner-time came."

"What can be said of the character of the revision of the Old Testament?"

"Nothing specific. The work has all been done at secret sessions, and the correspondence has been conducted under the seal of secrecy. The universities of Cambridge and Oxford have been at great expense in defraying the cost of the revision, and it is not right to anticipate their publications."

"Have as many changes been made in the Old Testament as were made in the New?"

"By no means, for no new Hebrew manuscripts have been discovered since the authorized, or King James' version was published, while many new and important Greek manuscripts were used in the New Testament revisions."

"How will the book be printed?"

"In many editions, of various prices. There will be one edition which will not be placed in the market. It will consist of four large volumes, printed on heavy paper, corresponding to the presentation copies of the New Testament, a copy being sent to every person contributing $25 or more toward the expense of publication."

"Will there be as much opposition to the reception of the Old as there was to the New Testament?"

"Not nearly so much, for many of the changes are those already used by leading scholars in the pulpit and in commentaries. Especially is that the case with Lange's commentary. But there will be this important difference in explaining a new reading: If a preacher wishes to give the true reading of a word or a passage, instead of saying, 'This has the sanction of such and such a commentator,' he can say, 'This is the reading of the revised version.'"

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES,

605 ILLINOIS AVE., PEORIA, ILL.

THIS IS NO HUMBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor.
The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this country, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
Geo. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds,
WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction.
Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs.
Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
Yours,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLENSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly
Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

BRO. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds,
E. W. CATO, SEN.

BRO. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Elder William H. Kelley was advertised in the Willoughby, Ohio, Independent, to speak in the Methodist Church in Kirtland, Sunday, October 5th, morning and evening.

Latest advices from the Reunion report a large attendance, rainy weather the forepart of the week, clear and cool weather the latter part, and fourteen baptized.

We have received a pair of the rubber husking gloves manufactured by the Rubber Husking Glove Company, Chicago, Illinois, which from a hasty examination we conclude are as recommended. The manufacturers recommend them as cheap and durable, outwearing buckskin; as water-proof in front, an item of value on frosty mornings. They believe agents can make good wages selling them to farmers and other workmen. See advertisement on another page.

We clip the following from the Texas Christian, of October first.

"Heman C. Smith, of the Latter Day Saints, and the editor of the Texas Christian, will hold another debate, commencing December 9th. It will be held at San Antonio, or some place in that vicinity."

IN THE Adrian Guardian of September 27th, a paper published at Adrian, Nobles county, Minnesota, Bro. Frank Mintun has a well written article, in which he gets before the readers of that paper the epitome of our faith, and our position on polygamy. Of his effort the editor says:

"Elder Mintun, who has preached here on several occasions recently, and who is an earnest christian and a fluent talker, felt that the church he represented was misunderstood and misrepresented, and asked for space in the Guardian for a brief defense, which we cheerfully accorded him. It appears on the first page, and you who are seeking light may find that in it that will interest and instruct. It certainly places the "Latter Day Saints" in a different light before the world than is generally understood by the term. Read his defense."

Bro. Mintun has also the following in the same paper:

"ADRIAN, Sept. 24, 1884.

"To Rev. J. H. Buttelman: I by this means challenge you to meet me upon the following propositions:

"Resolved, That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is in fact the true Church of Jesus Christ in faith and doctrine.

"Resolved, That the M. E. Church is in fact the true Church of Jesus Christ in faith and doctrine.

"I will affirm the first proposition and deny the last. King James' translation of the Bible to be used as the standard of evidence. I am called upon to thus act from what I learn was said in review of what was said by me in my discourses at this place, in which review I have been, and the church of which I am a representative has been, misrepresented."

FROM the Every Evening of Wilmington, Delaware, we clip the following, dated at Salt Lake City, Oct. 4th:

The gist of Judge Lane's opinion rendered in the case of Clawson indicted for polygamy is in these words: "That a man who believes it right to commit a crime which he is called upon to try can not be an impartial juror, though he should not be influenced by such a motive; that if a man for instance, who is called as a juror to try a man for murder believes a man has the right of committing murder, he is not competent as a juror because he will be influenced by the belief; or, in the case of a man charged with robbery, if a juror who tries him believes it right to commit robbery he is not a fit man to try the prisoner. Also in a case of bigamy, if a man believes it right to practice polygamy, in a polygamy case he can not be impartial. A juror according to all human experience can not possibly be impartial in a trial of that kind if he believes in the right of practicing polygamy, notwithstanding the human laws to the contrary. If he believes polygamy to be a command, a law proclaimed by the Almighty, it makes no difference how many human laws are passed, he will still believe polygamy right because he thinks a higher law is governing him. Now Congress intended to exclude this class of men from participating in the duties of jurors, from acting either as grand or petit jurors. This is based on the principle stated. This is the reason, I suppose why this law is passed now. To make this law simply to apply to the petit jury and not to the grand jury would certainly defeat the purpose of the law, and in my judgment would be contrary to the letter as well. I am of the opinion that the letter and spirit of this law agree, and am therefore of the opinion that these jurors by their answers were properly excluded and could not have been otherwise under this law without disregarding it."

John W. Young, son of Brigham Young, yesterday demurred to the indictment against him for polygamy. The jury charged him with more than one offense, the marriage of two polygamist wives.

The demurrer was sustained upon the technical ground that more than one crime was charged in one indictment.

THE fact recited below will be of interest to all lovers of improvement and progress.

"The International Prime Meridian Conference began its session at Washington, D. C., October 1st. Forty-two delegates were present, representing twenty-two countries. Secretary Frelinghuysen welcomed the delegates, and suggested that Count Lewenhaupt, the Swedish Minister and Dean of the diplomatic corps, be made Temporary Chairman.

"On taking the chair Count Lewenhaupt suggested that Admiral C. R. P. Rodgers, Chairman of the American delegation, be made permanent Chairman. Admiral Rodgers on assuming the chair defined the object of the conference, and expressed the hope that a prime meridian would be agreed upon.

"The election of Vice-Presidents was dispensed with, and the election of Secretaries postponed until tomorrow.

"In order to give the delegates an opportunity to consult as to the number of Secretaries, and as to the language in which the proceedings should be printed, an adjournment was taken until tomorrow.

"The following countries are represented: Austria, Hungary, Brazil, Columbia, Costa Rica, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Guatemala, Japan, Mexico, the Netherlands, Paraguay, Russia, San Domingo, San Salvador, Spain, Sweden, and Norway, Switzerland, Turkey, Venezuela, and the United States. Among the prominent scientists from abroad are: Janssen, France; Hicckeldeyn, Germany; Capt. Sir F. G. O. Evans and Prof. Y. C. Adams, Great Britain; J. F. Echeverria, Costa Rica; Miles Roch, Guatemala; Maj. Gen. Stebnutzki, Russia; and Prof. Hirsch, Switzerland. The American delegation is favorably disposed towards the adoption by the conference of the longitude of Greenwich."

THE KENTUCKY MARRIAGE.

THE following excellent article we reproduce from the Chicago Tribune of October 2d, and commend it because of the truth it contains in regard to the general principles governing the marriage contract.

"So much has been said by the Democratic press of the country in relation to the marriage of Mr. Blaine, and the effort to show that it was illegal has been so persistent I have thought that it would perhaps be well to show that these misrepresentations and these charges had no foundation whatever to rest upon. Mr. Blaine has published to the world the time and place of his marriage and given the names of the witnesses who were present when it occurred.

What constitutes a legal marriage? This is a question that has often arisen in this country, and the decided weight of authority is, that although the statute of a particular State may require that certain prescribed forms shall be complied with, yet that such statute in no way affects the legality of the marriage. And this is so even where such statute imposes severe penalties upon officers for issuing licenses without complying with the requirements of the statute, and where like penalties are imposed upon ministers and magistrates for uniting persons in marriage without a license. The only exception to this rule is where the statute not only prescribes certain forms as necessary preliminaries to marriage, but also declares that a failure to comply with such forms shall render the marriage void.

Marriage in this country, as in England, is a civil contract. To enter into such a contract requires, as in other cases of contract, an agreement of the parties. To constitute a legal marriage it is only necessary that the parties should agree to live together as man and wife, and that they live together in pursuance of such agreement.

It is not necessary to constitute a legal marriage that a minister or magistrate should be present. It being but a civil contract, the presence of a minister or magistrate is not essential to its validity, any more than in the case of any other contract.

This is the general rule as recognized in most of the States of this Union where the question has arisen.

It was the law in the State of Kentucky as long ago as 1821, as then declared by the Court of Appeals, the highest court in the State, in the case of Dumaresly vs. Fishly, 3 A. K., Marshall, p. 368. It was there held that a marriage entered into without regard to and in violation of the statute was, nevertheless, a valid marriage; and this the court held to be true, notwithstanding the fact that the parties never lived together after such marriage. In that case the woman married resided in Indiana. The license was procured in Kentucky and the marriage took place in Indiana. Of course the license, being so issued would have no force whatever in the latter State. The court, in discussing the question, say the statutes of the two States were substantially the same. The court further say:

"It is obvious that the marriage between the parties in this case was not celebrated according to the provisions of the statute of either country. It was not done according to the provisions of the statute of this country, because the female party did not reside in the county from the Clerk's office of which the license was issued; and it was not done according to the statute of Indiana, because the license was not issued by the proper officer of that State. But neither the statute of Indiana, nor that of this State voids a marriage not celebrated according to its provisions. The object of the Legislature of both States was manifestly not to declare what should be requisite to the validity of a marriage, but to provide a legitimate mode of solemnizing it; for the Legislature speaks not of the validity of the marriage, but of the celebration of its rite and addresses itself not to the parties themselves, but to the functionaries whom it authorizes to perform the requisite ceremonies in solemnizing the marriage. . . . The effect, therefore, of the statutory mode of solemnizing matrimony must be precisely the same with respect to the validity of a marriage in this country as the common-law mode with respect to the validity of a marriage in England. We are then led to inquire what the doctrine of the common law is upon this subject. Marriage is nothing but a contract; and to render it valid it is only necessary, upon the principles of natural law, that the parties should be able to contract, willing to contract, and should actually contract."

To show the reason and necessity for the rule as thus laid down the court further say:

"The statute prescribing the mode of celebrating the rites of matrimony requires that when either party is under the age of twenty-one the consent of the parent or guardian shall be given in person or in writing; that bond and security shall be given before license can be issued; that license shall be issued only by the Clerk of the county where the female party resides; and that no clergyman who has not previously obtained testimonials for that purpose from the County Court shall celebrate the rites of matrimony. A compliance with the whole of these particulars is necessary to render the marriage conformable to the statute; and a failure to comply with any one of them would render it but a marriage in fact; and if a marriage in fact be void, many of the marriages of the country would be so, for there are many in which there has been some failure, either intentionally or otherwise, to comply with some one or more of the formalities presented by the statute. A doctrine which would thus tend to vitiate a great proportion of the marriages of the country would result in incalculable evils and can not be admitted to be correct."

The court held the marriage valid, though there was no pretense of compliance with the statute, and though the parties never lived together as husband and wife.

I have quoted thus at large from the opinion of the Court of Appeals for the purpose of clearly presenting the point involved and showing that it has been fully met and decided in the very State where the marriage took place.

The above case was affirmed by the same court in 1847 in the case of Donnelly vs. Donnelly's Heirs (8 B. Monroe p. 113), wherein it is said that "Marriage in Kentucky is deemed a civil contract merely and resting upon the principles of the common law. (Kent's Commentaries 2d vol., 87); Dumaresly vs. Fishly (3 Marshall, 369). This question has been passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States. In the case of Meister vs. Moore (96 U. S. p. 76), that court in 1877 passed upon the Michigan statute. The court below had instructed the jury that the marriage was invalid under the statute of that State if neither a minister nor a magistrate was present. The Supreme Court held the instruction was wrong and should not have been given. The Supreme Court, in speaking of the instruction said:

"It certainly withdrew from the jury all evidence, if any there was, of informal marriage by contract per verba de presenti. That such a contract constitutes a marriage at common law there can be no doubt in view of the adjudications made in this country from its earliest settlement to the present day. Marriage is everywhere regarded as a civil contract. Statutes in many of the States, it is true, regulate the mode of entering into the contract, but they do not confer the right."

Speaking of the regulations provided by statute the court say:

"Whatever directions they may give respecting its formation or solemnization, courts have usually held a marriage good at common law—good notwithstanding the statutes, unless they contain express words of nullity. . . . As before remarked, the statutes are held merely directory; because marriage is a thing of common right, because it is the policy of the State to encourage it, and because, as has sometimes been said, any other construction would compel holding illegitimate the offspring of many parents conscious of no violation of law."

The court quote with approval from the opinion of Judge Cooley in the case of Hutchins vs. Kimmell, 31 Mich., 126, wherein the learned jurist said:

"Whatever the form of ceremony, or even if all ceremony was dispensed with, if the parties agreed presently to take each other for husband and wife, and from that time lived together professedly in that relation, proof of these facts would be sufficient to constitute proof of a marriage binding upon the parties and which would subject them and others to legal penalties for a disregard of its obligations. This has become the settled doctrine of the American courts, the few cases of dissent or apparent dissent being borne down by a great weight of authority in favor of the rule as we have stated it."

The Supreme Court of the United States, in concluding its opinion upon this point said:

'There was error in charging the jury that if they found neither a minister nor a magistrate was present at the alleged marriage, such marriage was invalid.'

Perhaps the latest and certainly one of the most instructive cases upon this question is that of Mathewson vs. Phoenix Iron Foundry, decided by the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Rhode Island in May last, and reported in Vol. 20 of the Federal Reporter, p. 281.

In that case the marriage was in Rhode Island, and took place in the presence of two witnesses, before whom the contracting parties acknowledged themselves to be husband and wife. No ceremony whatever took place.

The court held that, though the statute of the State was in no way complied with, the marriage was valid.

Mr. Blaine's marriage took place in the State of Kentucky in the presence of two witnesses, whose names he has given to the public.

From then until now, a period of thirty-four years, he has lived with the wife whom he then married, and as the result of that union sons and daughters have been born to them, and have grown to manhood and womanhood. That the marriage was in all respects legal in the State of Kentucky where it was contracted, and that such a marriage would be legal in most of the States of this Union there can be no possible question."

Correspondence.

SAN BENITO, California,
 September 26th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We enjoy the Hope's being a weekly. It is a nice little paper, but it hardly seems like the Hope we are accustomed to, but a younger member of the family, that has not yet gotten its growth. I for one would rather pay more and have it as large as it used to be; but I do not wish to find fault with it in its present size, for it is better than once in two weeks. The Herald looked lonely without it each alternate week; and the children thought it a long time to wait. I do not think we could get along without the Herald. I hope we never may have to; for we are like many others—it is almost all the preacher we have. Our beloved Bro. Carmichael, is very slowly recovering his health; is not able to go from home yet. His mind seems as weak as his body; he says he will never be well again. I hope Bro. Alexander will visit us when he comes to California. We have good crops of grain this year, but the price being so low, makes money scarce and times hard here.

From your sister in the gospel,

Dear Herald Readers:—Since the last writing I have been made to rejoice in the saving power of God, as contained in his word; for by the word of the Lord I have seen the sick relieved, the sinner in Zion bowed low in godly sorrow and led to repentance, faith begotten in the heart of the altogether ungodly, causing them to seek an entrance into the fold, and place themselves under the care of the Good Shepherd; the bowed down and oppressed arise in godly fear, and cast off the shackles that bound them; and rejoice in the Holy One of Israel; and I have grown in the knowledge of God and his work. I found that the same God had been and was still ministering the gifts of the spirit as he willed, to his people in Minnesota. While I have been treated with hatred and contempt by some, I have been kindly received and my needs supplied by others. I have lacked for nothing, save an increase of faith. I have been made to cry unto the Lord more fervently, "Lord increase my faith," in the last two months than ever before. When I have stood in the congregation of the faithless, and heard the elements begin to roar; seen their faces blanch with fear of what was coming, women and children crying for protection, and fleeing here and there without any clear conception of where would be safety; how my heart has been burdened for them. When the voice of warning has been uttered, their ears heard not, their eyes saw not, but still they had followed each his own way, not paying heed to the counsel of God in the erection of an ark of safety to protect them from that which was feared. Much property has been destroyed by winds, floods and fires in the State of Minnesota the past summer. "Never were storms known in this part of the country till this year," is the expression I heard from those who pioneered that country. But during this summer, many have been relieved of all they had, in almost an instant, and been consigned to mother earth; others only remaining to suffer from the loss occasioned by the devouring cyclone. The people know not what it means, neither will they believe when it is told them. But to the children evidences are thus received which encourages them that their redemption draweth nigh. We can "lift up" our heads, and should never consent to bow to the mandates of any, contrary to the righteousness of heaven; but assist in declaring the eternal truths of redemption, that Zion may arise in her glory, and the arm of the Lord "rule for him." I have been made to bow my head in praise to God for the complete vindication of his work as found in the Braden-Kelley Debate, and of the two debaters I can hardly tell which has convinced me most of the truth. Although my head was bowed in shame that one of my fellow creatures would stoop to such a level, and use those sacred powers of mind and body, dealing with such filth and claiming it his own; yet such doings only confirm the position occupied by us to be true, in the minds of those who wish to establish their faith by truth, and not by the use of ridicule, sarcasm, intellectual filth, and the upholding of crime, as is done by "I, Clark Braden." May the Lord reward him according to his deeds; and while doing so, I shall be sad, and pray, Lord, forgive him, for he knows not what he has done, although a man has declared it unto him. Bro. Kelley's clear, and comprehensive mode of reasoning, shows thought, and that his heart was abundantly supplied; his mouth having uttered knowledge, unsupplied save from the fountain source of all truth.

May the Lord bless his people, and abundantly supply them with the all-essential gift of patience, that they may endure all the scourges, and persecution through which they must pass ere they are purified from the dross of self, and become a people thoroughly furnished unto every good work.

FITCHBURG, Massachusetts,

September 29th, 1884.

Dear Sisters in the Faith:—"Work while the day lasts, for the night cometh when no man can work." Have we then any time to spend idly? Seeking our own pleasure, and fulfilling the lusts of the flesh? No: for our Master says, "Why stand ye here idle all the day long?" Let us look around and see what we can find to do. Here and there are friends, and neighbors who have been rocked so soundly asleep in the cradle of the churches, that unless some one awakes them they are in danger of not hearing the sound of the last trumpet; and even now when the glare of the gospel light shines forth in all its beauty, they see it not. Is there not then work for us to do? We that have heard the pure ring of the gospel sound, and seen the light—even felt the quickening power of God upon our bodies—can we rest in our homes, reading, it may be, some foolish romance, or fictitious story; or, perhaps, adorning our persons to please the eye of the frivolous world; surely forgetting that we, Saints of God, are not children of the world, but have been chosen by the Master and bid to come out from it? Oh! how many of us realize our position? How many would be ready to give a daily account every night to our Master, of the work we have done for him? Could we tell how many seeds we have sown, and where? and with how many prayers and tears we have watered them? Sisters, are we not apt to leave the labor for our brethren, thinking we are too feeble, or not fitted to do any thing; or if we should do a little it would not amount to much, and so we keep still and do nothing? Oh! let us arise and shake off our sloth. Let us seek to put on anew the armour; see that every buckle is firm. Let us get nearer, still nearer the Master, that we may walk in his light; and when we feel weak, just touch the hem of his garment, that virtue may come out of him; and we be made strong. May be we can feast on the crumbs that fall from our Master's table. I, for one, have asked many times, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" Now I am going to seek more diligently than ever for some thing to do. I will go to my neighbor, my friend, write to my sister, and my brother; and try to wake them to a knowledge of the truth. To-night three ladies came in, who had heard of my being healed, and asked me to tell them of the faith of our people; of the origin and foundation of the church, &c. Oh, how my heart did rejoice! I was glad that with boldness and yet in meekness, I could tell them of the restored gospel, of our bright hope, and strong faith. They were ladies of education and good understanding, and acknowledged plainly that the churches were divided, and they could not tell which was right. They went away well pleased, thanking me for the explanation given. I lent them the book of tracts to read and promised to call and see them.

Saints pray for us in Fitchburg. There are only two of us, but the Lord is on our side; may the little seed we sow by the wayside, be watered from on high, that it may bring forth an hundred fold to the glory of the Master.

From your sister in the gospel,

ATLANTIC, Iowa,
September 22d, 1884.

Brother Joseph.—I have just been reading our old home paper, which is published by W. F. Davidson, of Lewistown, Illinois, in which he speaks of a little jaunt he took over to Carthage, Ill., and also speaks of visiting the old jail, in which the prophet was slain. We are still living in Atlantic, but do not know how long we shall remain here. We have no preaching in this town, that is of our faith. The Herald is our preacher, and a very good one it is; for we are made to rejoice often when we read of the good work that is being done at other places; but we will not despair; for we expect to see a good brother sent here to wake up those slumbering souls to a realization of their standing. We are still battling for the right. I give here the quotation from the paper referred to.

Your sister in Christ,
HARRIET HUDSPETH.

MORGANVILLE, Kansas,
September 28th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph and Herald Readers.—While spending the Sabbath in reading and talking amongst ourselves on different topics, my mind has been called to review the past year's experience here in this town. We have lived here one year. We have represented here the Methodist faith in its stringent form. It has denounced us, and placed us with Utah Mormons. It has made bold assertions both public and private. We took it at first like a lamb, and watched for a chance to round up on them in some way, that they might know better. There had been preaching here before we moved here, and two had been baptized who lived here then, and do yet, who were faithful saints, who had been honored in the Methodist Church; but when they left they were black sheep. After the minister had insulted us in public till we thought forbearance had ceased to be a virtue, we sought a chat with him; but no, he would not talk to Mormons. (So he told Bro. McKnight). Would not notice us when we would meet him if he could help it. I wrote him a letter, sent him the Epitome of Faith, and Voice of the Good Shepherd. He had prejudiced the minds of the people till we could not get a hearing, so we worked away here as we could, in our business as a firm—McKnight & Parsons—dealing in grain. Bro. Lambert came here; we thought from past experience it was useless to try to get a hearing for him, but we thought of the old adage, "Try again; if first you do not succeed, try again;" so we did, and were surprised. Although we had prayed God to draw the people to come, yet we were not looking for so many as we beheld, forty faces before us when we opened and closed the meeting for him; so we felt thankful to God for the privilege of having our faith set forth to such a large congregation, and by such a noble representative of God's kingdom. We had an excellent discourse, and good attention; so by living and letting live, we have seen some prejudice removed. A miracle I will relate for the benefit of all who may read. Bro. and Sr. McKnight had taught the gospel to neighbors, who had a boy seven years old, who had not walked since he was two years old. He had had a fever which had left him with great sores that had eaten into the bone leaving it bare; and had no use of himself. He would lie on the floor or wherever he was laid. They had doctored him till they thought there was no use, and doctors had given him up; so by the instruction they had received, they called for the Elders to administer to him; Elder Kent officiated in June. In July I was at home; Bro. Kent came over. The boy had improved so much they wanted him administered to again; we administered. I saw the boy walk out to the wagon, about one rod, the 29th day of September. Talk about "no miracles;" tell us the sun does not shine; tell us the moon does not give forth her light by night; tell us there are no stars in the heavens; tell us there is no water running down the Missouri River. And when you get a true Latter Day Saint to believe these things, there might be some prospect of making him believe God is changeable.

Yours in gospel bonds,
A. H. PARSONS.

ELWELL, Pennsylvania,
September 28th, 1884.

Dear Herald Readers.—It is nearly one year since I have written for the columns of this much loved paper. It is nearly four years since I accepted and obeyed the gospel in its fulness; and I rejoice to-day that I have received evidence that this latter day work is true. And as I have before testified, that Jesus of Nazareth hath restored me to health from fits, which the skill of physicians could not manage; and through faith in prayer I have been healed of broken bones and severe bruises, insomuch that I could arise and walk about the house; and to-day I enjoy good health, for which may all praise, and honor, be given to my Heavenly Master, for all blessings extended unto me. The rest of the Saints here are well now, but some have been very much afflicted. The Sunday School here, of which I being chosen and elected, am superintendent, has just closed for this year; and I can say it was crowned with success. A gentleman who is not of our faith made some remarks at the close of the school, as follows:

"Dear friends and children, I am pleased to see so many of you to-day, and to see the interest that you all have. I have attended this school in times past, and this summer I have visited a number of Sunday Schools in different places, and I must confess,—for it is true,—that this school is the most orderly, quiet, and interesting, that I have ever attended before; and I am thankful that you have been blessed in unity, love and peace," &c.

In the afternoon I attended the Methodist Sunday School, and was urgently requested to take charge of the Bible class, which I did. A man was there who was well read in the Scripture who gave me a question, thinking that I could not give the answer; but I prayed for the answer, and it was given me, and all seemed surprised that I answered so readily. But I know from whence my help cometh, and inasmuch as we are trusting in righteousness the Lord will bless. Thanks be to his great and holy name, for all I am, and all I hope for.

Desiring an interest in your prayers, that I may live as becomes a saint, in this life, and may be gathered with all the faithful ones, at the resurrection morn, and with kind regards to the Saints I am your unworthy sister in Christ,

CARRIE E. SWEET.

DELSLE, Mississippi,
September 29th, 1884.

President Joseph Smith.—I have just finished reading the Braden-Kelley Debate, in which Rev. Braden made a poor out and spent his time in mere fables. Instead of trying to show something from the scriptures to prove what he was at work at, he proved his side to be in darkness, according to the Bible. Great light is shown to us on Bro. Kelley's side. He dug deep and founded it on a rock which will not wash away when great rains fall and beat upon it. Let all read and be convinced that Braden's speeches are founded upon sand; and all his time spent in telling big yarns; that some body told Dick and Dick told Harry what Tom said. All of us in this part who have seen and read the book have had our faith made stronger in the blessed Savior's words. Let us not be like the foolish virgins: let us be prepared to meet the Savior when he comes. Ever praying for the upbuilding of Zion.

Your brother in the faith,
J. W. F. LIVINGS.

DALLAS, Polk Co., Oregon,
September 28th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Knowing it would interest many of the Saints to hear from me, I take this opportunity to inform them through the Herald. We came here last spring, mainly to improve our health, and we have not been disappointed, for we have indeed enjoyed the best of health ever since we came here. We think a better climate can not be found anywhere in the world; but for all of that, we are not contented, nor satisfied, for sin and wickedness predominate all around us; no comfort or consolation from any brother or sister in our faith. We have not seen, to our knowledge, a Latter Day Saint since we left Syracuse, Nebraska. The Herald (for which we are very thankful) is the only thing, of all our mail, that makes its appearance sure once a week. Asking to be remembered in prayers of the Saints I remain, Your brother in the covenant,

H. H. JASPERSON.

FALL RIVER, Massachusetts,
October 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—Conference convened here on Saturday, p. m., 27th, ult. I was away, but the Monday following was a success in every sense, so far as I could judge. Our district president knows his place, and the presiding elder of the Fall River Branch is deep enough to take care of himself, and is a good man; Brn. Gilbert, Coombs, and many other good elders, including Bro. Webster, and members from different branches were present. Business occupied not only part of Saturday, but a good part of Monday following. My business prevented me from being present on Monday also, but Sunday 28th was "a feast of fat things" for me. I like such times. Bro. Thompson is alive yet and says he is yet a young man. He has the Spirit.

Yours in the faith,

NON PLUS.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

October 3d.—Great activity is manifested by the naval officials of Germany. All the dockyards of that country are now fully manned, and the work of building new war vessels and repairing and reconstructing others is being pushed with energy.

Algernon Charles Swinburne, the poet, has joined the People's League of England, an organization which has for its purpose the abolition of the House of Lords. He has given a number of manuscript poems, to be published and sold for the benefit of the organization, which has recently made considerable headway in Britain.

Sir Evelyn Baring has sent a dispatch to the Government stating that Gen. Gordon, after having bombarded Berber for some time, effected his entry into the place and recaptured it. The rebels and hostile inhabitants fled when the bombardment ceased. A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Cairo says: "The reported recall of Gen. Wolseley is denied by official authority." The dispatch also states that the Khedive has received a telegram informing him that Berber has been recaptured from the rebels, who, upon their evacuation, succeeded in removing the treasure. The fall of Berber will enable Col. Kitchener to reach Gen. Gordon from Dongola and ascertain his wishes regarding the Nile expedition and as to the necessity of the expedition going to Khar-toum.

Viceroy Fuh Kien has sent 15,000 men to reinforce the Chinese troops now holding Kelung and Tamani.

October 4th.—It is reported that Gladstone is about to compromise with the House of Lords.

Gen. Delisle sends a dispatch stating that upon hearing that Chinese troops between Bacle and Lang Sou were moving forward he took measures necessary to drive them back to their gunboats. A brilliant engagement ensued, 4,000 Chinese troops being pitted against him. Commander Chalie of the Massue was killed in the fight. When the dispatch was sent the Chinese were steadily being driven back, having lost heavily. Advices from Hanoi today state that the gunboats Mousqueton, Massue, and Hache, while cruising in advance of the party which was reconnoitering in the valley of the Lachan, were attacked by Chinese regulars. One french officer was killed and thirty men wounded. Reinforcements have already arrived at the scene of the encounter, and others under the command of Gen. Negrier have left Hanoi.

Admiral Courbet has telegraphed from Kelung under date of yesterday as follows: "I commenced operations against Kelung Wednesday by occupying the Hight of St. Clement. The Chinese forces, after a fairly warm engagement Wednesday night evacuated two of their works westward of the hight, which we afterward occupied. I am now fortifying them, and shall operate Saturday night against their works eastward of the hight. Our loss was four killed, one missing, and thirteen wounded. The Chinese loss is estimated at from eighty to one hundred killed and from 200 to 300 wounded. Admiral Lespes commenced the attack on Tamsui Thursday, and will occupy that port if possible."

William Hazenclever, the Socialistic Deputy to the Imperial Reichstag from Breslau, in Prussia, has been expelled by the authorities from Berlin. All of the great German political parties are becoming exceedingly alarmed at the possible success of the Socialists in the coming general elections, and the subtle means by which they have pushed their candidates into prominence in nearly all election districts in the Empire form a fruitful subject of discussion in nearly all the leading Liberal and Conservative journals. The consensus of opinion appears to be that they will at least carry twenty-five seats, which, if the parties are as evenly balanced as they have hitherto been, will virtually give them the controlling vote in the Reichstag in a division on any important question. Prince Bismarck, to whose attention this serious possibility has been called, expresses a total indifference to the situation and intimates that no matter how many they may send to Berlin the law will be potent enough to keep them within proper bounds.

The activity of the German Government for colonizing the west coast of Africa is exciting grave alarm among English merchants. Several influential Chambers of Commerce have sent strongly-worded petitions to Lord Granville, the Foreign Secretary, declaring that the interests of British shippers and traders doing business in Africa are seriously menaced by the German invasion, and praying the Government to take energetic measures to protect this important trade.

Many complaints of distress have been received from Spezia, Italy, because of the cholera cordon which caused the town to fill with paupers. The town will require relief from the National Government. Forty-seven fresh cases of cholera have been reported during the last twenty-four hours in the City of Naples and twenty-eight deaths. In Genoa there were twenty-two fresh cases and twenty-eight deaths.

Three deaths from cholera are reported today in the Eastern Pyrenees and one in Toulon. Two deaths from cholera occurred at Marseilles today.

October 5th.—The Italian Government has spent the sum of $6,250,000 trying to check the spread of cholera.

Mr. Henry George is about to begin a series of lectures in Northern England and Scotland on the nationalization of land.

Investigations in Naples and Genoa indicate that the deaths from cholera in both cities have resulted from lack of pure water.

Emigration from the British Islands during the last six months has been directed towards Australia. America has not received its average number of emigrants.

What is claimed to be the fastest time ever made by an ocean steamer was made yesterday at Glasgow on the trial trip of the Umbria, which was recently built for the Cunard Line by John Elder & Co., at Fairfield. The Umbria is a sister ship to the Etruria, and is a steel steamer, 520 feet long over all, and with an extreme breadth of 57¼ feet.

Courbet telegraphs: "We completed the occupation of Kelung without resistance. The batteries at Tamsui were dismantled. It will be necessary before proceeding to the coal-mines to fortify the principal positions so as to enable a small force to hold them. Sunken junks and torpedoes in the river are being removed." Col. Negrier is massing his troops to march against the Chinese in Tonquin. An engagement is soon expected. Courbet has ordered Lespes to act very cautiously at Tamsui, and not to land forces unless able to hold his position. In an interview with M. Frandin, interpreter of the French Legation at Pekin, Li Hung Chang violently attacked France. Frandin believes, however, that Li Hung favors peace.

Nubar Pasha, in his reply to the protest of the Consuls against the suspension of the sinking fund, states the course taken was absolutely necessary in view of the condition of the Egyptian treasury.

There were 270 fresh cases and 126 deaths from cholera reported in Italy the last twenty-four hours, including forty-nine cases and thirty-three deaths at Naples, and twenty cases and twenty deaths at Genoa. There were two deaths at Marseilles today, but no fresh cases. There were four deaths in the Eastern Pyrenees, and no new cases. There were three new cases and two deaths reported at Alicante, Spain.

Oct. 6th.—The recently-laid Mackay-Bennett cable has been broken—by ice-bergs, it is thought.

A French man-of-war has been directed to occupy a seaport on the Gulf of Aden. It is thought Egypt will object, and that serious complications may follow.

A reign of terror has prevailed at Nueva Laredo, Mex., for the last twenty-four hours, and hundreds of persons have fled the city. The excitement and alarm grew out of the report brought by a courier, who has just arrived from the southern section of the Republic, that the desperate and bloody brigand El Coyote (the Wolf) has gathered 106 of his followers together from mountain fastnesses, and armed, equipped, and mounted them for the express purpose of sacking this city and rescuing from prison about a dozen of his fellow-murderers who are under arrest here. Appreciating thoroughly the desperate and reckless character of El Coyote, and understanding from his recent bloody work that the threat was not an idle one, a perfect panic seized the populace. All who could do so sought safety by fleeing to the American side. The authorities took steps immediately to resist the marauders, and hurried preparations are being made to meet them. Citizens generally are arming themselves, and an armed force of militia is enrolled, the men doubly armed and provided with full supplies of ammunition. The courier who brought the alarming news also reported that El Coyote had reached Baranco, about forty miles from this city. That was the point agreed upon as a rendezvous, and where they were to await the arrival of the main force, and then move directly to their work of pillage and murder in Nueva Laredo.

During the last twenty-four hours there were thirty-six fresh cases of cholera and twelve deaths in Naples. In Genoa there were twenty-seven fresh cases and twenty-two deaths. There have been no deaths or fresh cases of cholera reported in Spain during the last twenty-four hours. There were eight deaths from cholera at Marseilles today and one at Toulon.

October 7th.—Dr. George August Schweinfurth, the famous African explorer and author of "In the Heart of Africa," has started on a new tour of exploration at the head of a scientific party fitted out by the Berlin Academy of Science. Unlike recent German explorations, which have been confined to the western coast of Africa, Dr. Schweinfurth has chosen Nubia and the White Nile as the field of his operations. Just before his departure Dr. Schweinfurth had a long conference with Prince Bismarck, after which both were given an audience by the Emperor. This is regarded as somewhat significant, as Dr. Schweinfurth is going to the seat of war in Upper Egypt, and he has hitherto been very outspoken in criticizing the acts of the English in the Soudan.

During the last twenty-four hours four fresh cases of cholera and one death have been reported in Spain. Several suspicious cases have appeared at Barcelona, and it is feared they are cholera. During the last twenty-four hours there were forty-three fresh cases of cholera and twenty-seven deaths in the City of Naples, Italy, and twenty-one fresh cases and seven deaths in Genoa. It is evident the cholera epidemic in France is rapidly subsiding, the total deaths from the disease in the whole country today only reaching eight.

M. Barrere, the French diplomatic agent, has received a telegram saying that M. Herbin, the French Consul at Khartoum, was killed at the same time that Col. Stewart and his party were massacred by the Arabs.

An imposing Jesuit shrine will soon be erected near Tribes' Hill, Montgomery County, New York, where two missionaries—Father Isaac Jacques and Rene Goupier—were massacred by the Mohawk Indians over a century ago.

October 8th.—England is threatened with serious complications in South Africa on account of alleged encroachments by the Boers in the countries adjoining the Transvaal and the restiveness of the native tribes.

An official dispatch received at Paris from Hanoi reports that Col. Dennier at the head of two battalions of the French foreign legion inflicted severe loss on the Chinese at the Lou Chvan River. Four gunboats assisted the French, who are advancing after the Celestials.

The Paris Temps says that in the latter part of November there will be an International Conference at Berlin on the West African question, at which the United States, England, Germany, France, Spain, Holland, Portugal, and Belgium will be represented. It is said that France and Germany have agreed to submit proposals to this conference securing freedom of commerce to all nations in the Congo country and upon the River Niger.

Advices from Dongola state that the Mudir is sending out spies to assist the Nile expedition. Sheiks from the Khartoum-Sheady district, with 1,500 followers, have submitted to the Mudir. Sheik Keir advises that a depot be established at Debbeh, and undertakes to procure camels and cattle therefor. Reports are current at Dongola that the Mahdi is quelling a rebellion at Jeb el Dair. The news of the Mudir's victory at Korti had reached Khartoum and generally encouraged the garrison at that place.

Four fresh cases of cholera and four deaths have been reported from the Province of Alicante, Spain, during the last twenty-four hours. The reports of the cholera in Italy during the last twenty-four hours gave a total of 197 fresh cases and ninety-seven deaths. Only one death is reported in the Eastern Pyrenees, and two in Toulon. There were five deaths by cholera at Marseilles today.

The Indiana Supreme Court decided yesterday that it has no power to respite or grant pardon to convicted criminals. The law conferring that power on any other person than the Governor is unconstitutional.

Burglars raided the town of Perry, N. Y., securing about $8,000 worth of plunder.

Oct. 9.—English vessels plying between the Island of Formosa, off the Chinese coast, and Amoy are being searched by French cruisers.

One hundred and sixty-eight students of the University of Kieff have been arrested by the Russian authorities on the charge of Nihilism. The university has been closed by the authorities and will not reopen until January.

The publication in to-day's Standard of the Government scheme for the redistribution of seats in the House of Commons has caused the greatest political sensation that London has experienced since the rising of Parliament. Mr. Gladstone is furious at the betrayal of Government secrets, and Cabinet Ministers, Under-Secretaries, and officials of all grades have been rigidly examined in an attempt to ascertain how the intelligence leaked out. Thus far the search has been unavailing, but excuses have been found for discharging several subordinates who are suspected of having friendly relations with the Standard editorial staff. The Government tries to minimize the effect of the publication by saying that the scheme of redistribution as published in the Standard is only one of various schemes submitted. All of these plans, the Government organs say, have been referred without comment to the Ministry, but none of them have yet been even discussed in Cabinet council. All these protestations, however, are looked upon as an official admission of the importance of the Standard's publication. The Tories are already denouncing the scheme as an attempt to swamp the Tory counties with Liberal boroughs, and to play into the hands of the Parnellites. The latter seem to be perfectly satisfied, for if a few Irish boroughs are disfranchised the strength of the Home-Rule delegation in Parliament will be enormously increased by the proposed addition of new members in towns and counties where the Home-Rulers are sure of returning their men. By the scheme of redistribution as published in the Standard the representation of England in Parliament is increased sixteen and of Scotland ten, while Ireland's representation remains unchanged as to number, but Tralee, Clonmel, Dungarvan, Carlow, Athlone, Coleraine, New Ross, Ennis, Kinsale, Bandon, Youghal, Enniskillen, Mallow, Dungannon, Downpatrick, and Port Arlington are disfranchised. The County of Cork gains four members. Mayo, Down, Galway, and Antrim gain two each. Donegal, Kerry, Tyrone, and Tipperary gain one each, and the City of Dublin gains two.

Gen. Wolseley reviewed the troops who are to take part in the Nile expedition to-day. The mounted infantry managed their camels perfectly. The first batch of rowboats of the expedition passed the first cataract easily against a strong current. The heavy division of the camels corps will encamp at the Pyramids until ordered to advance. Advices from Dongola state that the Mudir of that place has received confirmation of the report that a steamer from Khartoum was wrecked after leaving Abu Hamed. All on board the vessel landed to try and hire camels. They gave the natives presents. The natives invited them to their dwellings, where they massacred them. It is unknown whether there were any Europeans among the victims.

The Phare d'Alexandre newspaper has been suspended by the authorities for three months for advocating the restoration to power of the Khedive Ismail Pasha.

During the last twenty-four hours there have been two deaths from cholera reported in the Province of Alicante, Spain. The newspaper Imparcial states that it is informed on good authority that there have been seventeen cases of cholera and fourteen deaths in Barcelona since September 14. The Barcelona papers deny the truth of the statement. Reports of the cholera in Italy during the last twenty-four hours show 145 fresh cases and 77 deaths, against 197 cases and 97 deaths the preceding twenty-four hours.

Gen. Beriere de L'Isle has telegraphed the French Government confirming the report announced from Hanoi yesterday of an engagement between the French and the Chinese in the Valley of the Loo Chuan River in Tonson. The encounter took place Monday. The Chinese were attempting to execute an offensive movement on the Upper Loo Chuan River. They lost 1,000 men. Capt. Deynet of the French Foreign Legion was killed and Lieut. Bartelle wounded. Gen. Negaier's column has gone up the Phulang River to cut off the retreat of the Chinese. A dispatch from Hanoi states that Gen. Negrier's column had an engagement at the Village of Kep with 6,000 Chinese regulars, who occupied intrenchments round a central redoubt.—The Chinese commenced the attack at 9 a. m. by trying to surround the French. The fighting lasted until two p. m., when the retreat of the Chinese toward the frontier of China was cut off. The Chinese troops then filed in the direction of Daoguan, pursued by the French. The Kep garrison defended their position bravely, compelling the French to surround the redoubt and carry it at the point of the bayonet. The Chinese loss in the village alone was 600 killed. The French troops fought with spirit and decision. They captured all the enemy's war material, mules, and horses. A French Captain and twenty men were killed and two officers and fifty men wounded. Gen. Negrier was slightly wounded. Gen. Briere de L'Isle has started for Kep to assist Negrier's forces.

"The situation of the Cuban army, owing to the suspension of its monthly pay, is really pitiable, and must have an early solution. Six months have passed since they received any money. Some of them have had none for a much longer time. The officers have been at the mercy of the usurers in obtaining the necessities of life. In several interior towns the troops are said to have taken food by force."

In Austria fourteen children were drowned while playing in a boat which capsized.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The imports of dry goods at New York during the week ending Oct. 3d, were $2,324,000.

The last month's reduction in the public debt was over $12,000,000.

Mr. Nimmo's forthcoming statistical report on foreign commerce will show that the entire exports of manufactured products from England to all other countries do not equal the internal commerce of the United States in like products.

There is in one respect a visible gain in the condition of business—the people have generally waked up from the delusions that led to the excessive expansion of trade from 1878 to 1881 and are correcting their thinking and their acting. There has not been a time in the last three years, until quite recently, when the people have not considered the business depression a temporary thing and have not hailed every little period of activity as the beginning of a "revival" that would restore affairs almost to the highest plane we have ever reached. The great majority would have resented the prediction that any such panic as we had last May was coming, and a forecast of the terrible bankruptcy record we are making this year would have been received as the vaporing of a madman. But repeated disappointments and losses have sobered the sanguine American, and he is beginning to adapt himself to his environment. Expectations are now moderate. Very few people anticipate any considerable increase in the volume of trade before spring, and will regard themselves as fortunate if it comes even then. Better than that, a retrenchment of expenses and curtailment of business operations are in progress.

A party of union molders went to the rear of Cribben & Sexton's foundry in Chicago, Ill., October 5th, and fired a volley of bricks and stones through the windows, severely injuring some of the non-unionists employed there. The party attacked returned the fire, using their revolvers. Henry Coon, a union man, was severely wounded. Two of the non-union men were arrested.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of corn trade, says: The autumnal weather the last week has been accompanied by but little rain, consequently good progress has been made in fall cultivation. Sales of English wheat 78,940 quarters at 32s. 4d., against 80,109 quarters at 30s. 4d., the corresponding week a year ago. In the foreign wheat trade sellers have been firmer, although arrivals continue on a heavy scale. The off-coast cargo trade has been confined to the sale of one cargo from Australia. There were eight arrivals during the week, of which two were withdrawn and five remain. Twelve cargoes are due. The market is slow and dragging in the foreign wheat trade, with rates unchanged. Flour is difficult to move at late rates. Nothing is doing in Barley, and prices are unchanged. Mediterranean is quoted a shilling dearer. Oats are sixpence dearer for foreign. Beans are in large supply and 1s. 6d. lower. Peas are unchanged.

The aggregate clearances of the leading clearing-houses of the United States last week showed a falling off of 23.7 per cent as compared with the clearances for the corresponding week of last year. The decrease in New York was 27 per cent, in Chicago 14.3 per cent. Kansas City showed an increase of 35.3 per cent and Milwaukee 3.1 per cent. Outside of New York City the aggregate decrease was 15.1 per cent.

The exports of produce from New York during the week ending October 7th, aggregated $7,110,000, against $5,999,000 the previous week and $6,599,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

The Fort Pitt Iron and Steel Works at Pittsburg, Pa., which have been closed down for nearly three months, have resumed, giving employment to several hundred men.

President Grevy has issued a decree granting 50,000 francs for the relief of the unemployed workmen of Lyons, France.

Spain has granted France, under the most favored nation clause, the same trade privileges in the West Indies as are enjoyed by the United States.

Advices from Hong Kong, China, state that business is at a complete standstill. Commerce is paralyzed.

The wholesale and retail dry-goods firm of Day Bros & Co. of Peoria, Ill., made an assignment October 9. The liabilities are placed at $122,000 and the assets at $86,000.

Work will be resumed at Oliver Bros. & Phillips' rolling-mills at Pittsburg, Pa., at the old rate of wages. The proprietors will not insist on the 12½ per cent reduction proposed by them some time ago.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Oct. 2.—The charcoal sheds attached to Geo. P. Whittaker's iron works at Principio, Md., took fire. About 100,000 tons of charcoal were consumed.

Intelligence has been received of a terribly disastrous hurricane in Iceland the 11th of September. The accounts thus far received show that nineteen trading vessels and sixty fishing boats were lost and thirty-two other vessels disabled. The most appalling feature of the hurricane was the loss of life. The exact number of those who perished has not yet been ascertained, but it is known to be very great.

Details of the accident on the Omaha Road last evening are all in. The local working train belonging to the Ashland, Washburn & Bayfield Division, in charge of conductor John McCoy, with twenty men, started from Washburn to repair a washout reported near Bayfield. The train consisted of an engine and three cars loaded with logs. The engine passed over the Pike Creek bridge safely, but the northern approach gave way under the weight of the engine and a rail ran through the fire-box into the boiler. Fourteen men were scalded and mangled, seven of whom are dead and three more will die. The men were all riding on the engine and tender. Two on the cowcatcher escaped with slight bruises.

Three people were seriously hurt by a railroad collision near Clayton, Delaware. A threshing machine boiler exploded near Lake Elmo, Minn., killing two men, and badly injuring a number of others.

Oct. 5.—A fire at the royal palace at Copenhagen, Denmark, destroyed a large amount of property. Ten soldiers are reported to have been burned to death.

Vesselmen are beginning to feel the effects of fall gales. Early this morning the schooner Arabia, bound from Chicago for a Canadian port with a cargo of corn, foundered in a hundred feet of water at the entrance of Georgian Bay. The crew escaped. Both vessel and cargo are a total loss.

Near Fon du Lac, Minn., an embankment gave way under a freight train, resulting in the death of three men.

Near Emporia, Junction, Kansas, a freight train was thrown from the track by an obstruction like a cross-tie, killing one man.

Oct. 6.—The Calumet & Hecla copper mine in Upper Michigan, one of the largest in the world, took fire. Two men are reported to have perished in the flames. Other losses of life are feared. Loss by fire near Shelbyville, Indiana, $3,500. Kingston, Ontario, $40,000. Bay Shore, L. I., $30,000.

Oct. 7.—The opera house at South Bethlehem, Pa., and four adjoining buildings were destroyed by fire. The loss is about $100,000.

The fire in the Calumet and Hecla Mine near Houghton, Michigan, is thought to be under control. Two lives are known to have been lost.

Oct. 8.—Intelligence has been received of a cyclone at Catania, on the Island of Sicily. Trees were uprooted and houses destroyed, and twenty persons killed and fifty injured. Owing to the severity of the cyclone it was impossible to render assistance to the sufferers during its prevalence.

A terrible disaster occurred south of Chicago, Ill., in Lake Michigan, just opposite the Hyde Park Water-works, by which ten men lost their lives. Fifteen men were employed by the contractors in constructing an inlet tunnel to the water-works. They lodged in a shanty constructed on piles at the crib about a mile from shore. When the storm came up the shanty was washed off, and with it three men. One of the three drifted ashore on a plank and was saved. Of those who clung to the piles eight were subsequently swept off by the waves and drowned. The four who managed to cling to their places were rescued by the life-boat, which braved a very dangerous sea in order to rescue them.

At Harrisburg, Pa., the most disastrous storm this season struck the city at dusk this evening. It came from the north-west, and was not more than half a mile wide. It swept down trees, unroofed several houses, and carried away the roof and loose frame-work of a section of a carriage bridge across the Susquehanna. The storm was ten minutes in duration.

Oct. 9.—Harrowing details of the cyclone which prevailed in Catania, on the Island of Sicily, yesterday have been received. Twenty-seven persons were killed. There is great distress among the poor. Hundreds of houses were demolished in the Congo, Tondo, and Givani quarters, and at Ciball and Ognina, suburbs of the city. Many summer mansions are in ruins. Four hundred persons were injured by the cyclone, and the damage will amount to 4,000,000 lire.

Four men were killed and two injured by the blowing up of the Hamilton Powder Mills at Cumminsville, Ont.

By an explosion of fire-damp in a mine in Moravia, Austria, twenty persons were killed.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, replying to his many distinguished friends, who, on the occasion of his seventy-fifth birthday, sent him letters of congratulation through the Critic, said among other happy things: "Even the shriveled centenarian loves a word of praise—it is the sweetmeat of his second infancy."

Selected Poetry.

THE MILLS OF THE GODS.

Hark! How the Mills are grinding,
How the busy burrs go round,
With a low and harmonic humming,
Where the harvest grain is ground.

See! how the chaff is winnowed,
How the millstone's wondrous might Sends forth the flour before us,
The wheat in its robe of white.

So the powers of Fate are grinding,
With a motion and plan sublime,
Our mortal acts and motives
In the wonderful mills of time.

The mills of the gods are grinding—
Steadily, surely and slow—
The wheat and the chaff dividing
To the place where each should go.

And the helpless chaff is winnowed;
But lives that are lived aright,
Like the grain on the floor before us,
Come forth all pure and white.

So the rolling hours are grinding,
And the pitiless years go round,
With a slow and solemn motion,
Where the mortal grain is ground.

BRADEN ON PUNCTUATION, ETC.

READING Mr. Braden's speeches in the Braden-Kelley Debate, it is seen that one of the main objections he persistently urges against the divinity of the Book of Mormon is its crudity in style, its want of literary exactness and finish in respect to grammatical structure, including punctuation, capitalizing and spelling. He uses every possible opportunity to "hit it a dig" on any and all these points, thinking, no doubt, that if he proves the work wanting in all or either of these respects, he proves the book a delusion, and a humbug. Mr. Braden claims, in substance, that the Book of Mormon, if an inspired record, would have been written in such manner as to be entirely free from error and imperfection in its grammar, including its punctuation, spelling, capitalizing, and style of composition, as measured and determined by modern standards; and, that because it is not so written, it is false, and not divine. If he was the scholar and the learned controversialist he would have us think he is, he would know that the inspired Hebrew record, the Old Testament, had no punctuation at all, no capitals, and that its grammatical structure was as much and more at variance with modern rules in these matters than is the Book of Mormon. In proof we cite Hitchcock's Analysis of the Bible, page 1130. He says that before the time of Christ, "and long after the time of Christ, the 'book' was a parchment roll, such as is now kept in the Jewish synagogues, made of skins fastened together, and shaped like one width of stair carpet; the text was written upon it in narrow columns from top to bottom without any break between word, sentence, verse or chapter; and the direction of its writing and reading was exactly the reverse of ours. This order, from right to left, is still used in the Hebrew language." He tells us on page 1150, that the gospel of Matthew was written in "the familiar speech of the Jews of his day." And of the gospels collectively, page 1151, he further says, "The four evangelists, of whom Matthew and John were Apostles, and Mark and Luke were companions and disciples of Apostles, each portrayed the life and character of Christ in the manner natural to himself." To this we may add what Smith says in his Bible Dictionary, Article New Testament, page 615: "But though no fragment of the New Testament of the first century still remains, the Italian and Egyptian papyri, which are of that date give a clear notion of the calligraphy [elegant penmanship] of the period. In these the text is written in columns, rudely divided, in somewhat awkward capital letters, (uncials), without any punctuation or division of words." On page 624, same article, he says of the language in which the New Testament was written:

"3. The Greek of the LXX., like the English of the A. V. or the German of Luther, naturally determined the Greek dialect of the mass of the Jews. It is more correct to call the N. T. dialect Hellenistic than Alexandrine, though the form by which it is characterized may have been peculiarly Alexandrine at first.—4. The position of Palestine was peculiar. The Aramaic (Syro-Chaldaic), which was the national dialect after the Return, existed side by side with the Greek. Both languages seem to have been generally understood, though, if we may judge from other instances of bilingual countries, the Aramaic would be the chosen language for the common intercourse of Jews (2 Macc. 7:8, 21, 27). It was in this language, we may believe, that our Lord was accustomed to teach the people; and it appears that he used the same in the more private acts of his life (Mark 3:17, 5:41, 7:34; Matt. 27:46; John 1:43; cf. John 20:16). But the habitual use of the LXX. is a sufficient proof of the familiarity of Palestinian Jews with the Greek dialect; and the judicial proceedings before Pilate must have been conducted in Greek.—5. The Roman occupation of Syria was not altogether without influence upon the language. A considerable number of Latin words, chiefly referring to acts of governments, occur in the N. T., and they are probably only a sample of larger innovations. Other words in common use were of Shemitic, Persian, or Egyptian origin.

"6. The language which was moulded under these various influences presents many peculiarities, both philological and exegetical, which have not yet been placed in a clear light. For a long time it has been most strangely assumed that the linguistic forms preserved in the oldest MSS. are Alexandrine, and not in the widest sense Hellenistic, and on the other hand that the Aramaic modifications of the N. T. phraseology remove it from the sphere of strict grammatical analysis. These errors are necessarily fatal to all real advance in the accurate study of the words or sense of the apostolic writings. In detail, comparatively little remains to be done; but a philosophical view of the N. T. language as a whole is yet to be desired.—7. The formal differences of the Greek of the N. T. from classical Greek are partly differences of vocabulary and partly differences of construction. Old words are changed in orthography or in inflection, new words and rare or novel constructions are introduced.—8. The peculiarities of the N. T. language which have been hitherto mentioned have only a rare and remote connection with interpretation. They illustrate more or less the general history of the decay of a language. Other peculiarities have a more important bearing on the sense. These are in part Hebraisms (Aramaisms) in (1) expression or (2) construction, and in part (3) modifications of language resulting from the substance of the Christian revelation. (1) The general characteristic of Hebraic expression is vividness, as simplicity is of Hebraic syntax. Hence there is found constantly in the N. T. a personality of language (if the phrase may be used) which is foreign to classical Greek. At one time, this occurs in the substitution of a pregnant metaphor for a simple word; at another time in the use of prepositions in place of cases; at another in the use of a vivid phrase for a preposition; and sometimes the one personal act is used to describe the whole spirit and temper.

"(2) The chief peculiarities of the syntax of the N. T. lie in the reproduction of Hebrew forms. Two great features by which it is distinguished from classical syntax may be specially singled out. It is markedly deficient in the use of particles and of oblique and participial constructions. Sentences are more frequently co-ordinated than subordinated. One clause follows another rather in the way of constructive parallelism than by distinct logical sequence. Only the simplest words of connection are used in place of the subtle varieties of expression by which Attic writers exhibit the interdependence of numerous ideas."

Now, from all these quotations we gather the fact, that the inspired writers of both the Old and New Testaments wrote the subject matter given them by the Spirit of God in such style and manner of language as they themselves were familiar with, and that the punctuation, spelling, capitalizing, phraseology, grammatical structure, and general literary style were seldom, if ever, dictated by the Holy Spirit, but left mainly to the choice of the writers. This agrees with what is said of the inspired teachers, Peter and John, when they taught the learned Jews, (Acts 4:5-13), who "perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men." And this accounts for the great diversity of style and culture seen in the writings of the various Bible writers. The manuscript of the Book of Mormon was written in an unlearned, uncultured style; therefore the learned, highly cultured Rev. Solomon Spaulding never wrote it, nor a manuscript from which it was copied; and for similar reasons Sidney Rigdon could not have written it, for he was an educated man and fairly well instructed in literary customs and usages of his time. Inspired men who were known to the learned Jews by their rude, uncultivated speech to be "unlearned and ignorant," were nevertheless the chosen messengers of God; and why may not those of similar ignorance and illiteracy be chosen of God to write and speak for him in this age? If illiteracy in the writings of Joseph Smith is proof that he was not inspired of God, will not illiteracy in the writings and teachings of prophets and apostles of Bible times prove that they too were not inspired of God? However well Mr. Braden and his like succeed in proving that Joseph Smith and his assistants in bringing forth the Book of Mormon and organizing the church were ignorant and unlearned men, they but increase the marvelousness of their work, and make it more evident that the wisdom and inspiration of God directed and qualified them for their work.

It is a well established fact, we see, that inspiration is not dependent upon the learned or unlearned condition of the medium, or agent, through which or whom God would have it come. With few exceptions only (as in tongues, visions, dreams, etc.), the Holy Spirit reveals the will of God in accordance with the understanding, and in the language, of the agent and those addressed, if in their language there are words, phrases, and figures through which the ideas, facts, and principles, sought to be communicated can be made clear and plain. In further proof of this position we quote what the eminent Bishop Horne in his Introduction, says of the language in which the Testaments were written. He says,—“The language and style of writing, both in the Old and New Testaments, are such as prove them to have been composed at the time and by the persons to whom they are ascribed, and consequently that they are both genuine and authentic.”—Vol. 1, p. 503.

On page 515 he says:

“Inspiration, in the highest sense, is the immediate communication of knowledge to the human mind by the Spirit of God: but, as we have already observed, it is commonly used by divines, in a less strict and proper sense, to denote such a degree of divine influence, assistance or guidance, as enabled the authors of the Scriptures to communicate religious knowledge to others, without error or mistake, whether the subjects of such communication were things then immediately revealed to those who declared them, or things with which they were before acquainted. When it is said, that Scripture is divinely inspired, we are not to understand that God suggested every word, or dictated every expression. From the different styles in which the books are written, and from the different manner in which the same events are related and predicted by different authors, it appears that the sacred penmen were permitted to write as their several tempers, understandings, and habits of life, directed: and that the knowledge communicated to them by inspiration on the subject of their writings, was applied in the same manner as any knowledge acquired by ordinary means. Nor is it to be supposed that they were even thus inspired in every fact which they related, or in every precept which they delivered. They were left to the common use of their faculties, and did not, upon every occasion, stand in need of supernatural communication; but whenever, and as far as divine assistance was necessary, it was always afforded. In different parts of Scripture we perceive, that there were different sorts and degrees of inspiration.

Of the coarse and unscholarly language of the New Testament writers he says, page 22, vol. 2:

“Very many of the Greek words, found in the New Testament, are not such as were adopted by men of education, and the higher and more polished ranks of life, but such as were in use with the common people. Now this shows that the writers became acquainted with the language, in consequence of an actual intercourse with those who spoke it, rather than from any study of books, and that intercourse must have been very much confined to the middling or even lower classes; since the words and phrases, most frequently used by them, passed current only among the vulgar. There are undoubtedly many plain intimations given throughout these books, that their writers were of this lower class, and that their associates were frequently of the same description; but the character of the style is the strongest confirmation possible that their conditions, were not higher than what they have ascribed to themselves. In fact, the vulgarisms, foreign idioms, and other disadvantages and defects, which some critics imagine that they have discovered in the Hebraic Greek of the New Testament, are assigned by the inspired writers as the reasons of God's preference of it, whose thoughts are not our thoughts, nor his ways our ways. Paul argues, that the success of the preachers of the gospel, in spite of the absence of those accomplishments in language, then so highly valued, was an evidence of the divine power and energy with which their ministry was accompanied. He did not address them, he tells us (1 Cor. 1: 17) with the wisdom of words—with artificial periods and a studied elocution—lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect; lest to human eloquence that success should be ascribed which ought to be attributed to the divinity of the doctrine and the agency of the Spirit, in the miracles wrought in support of it. There is hardly any sentiment which he is at greater pains to enforce. He used none of the enticing or persuasive words of man's wisdom. Wherefore?—That their faith might not stand in the wisdom of man, but in the power of God. (1 Cor. 2: 4, 5). Should I ask, what was the reason why our Lord Jesus Christ chose for the instruments of that most amazing revolution in the religious systems of mankind, men perfectly illiterate and taken out of the lowest class of the people? Your answer to this will serve equally for an answer to that other question,—Why did the Holy Spirit choose to deliver such important truths in the barbarous idiom of a few obscure Galileans, and not in the politer and more harmonious strains of Grecian eloquence?—I repeat it, the answer to both questions is the same.—That it might appear, beyond contradiction, that the excellency of the power was of God, and not of man.”

Of the new Testament writings he further says, vol. 2, p. 151:

“Whether any points for marking the sense were used by the apostles, is a question that has been greatly agitated; * * * Ernesti, and a host of other critics, maintain that the use of points is posterior to the time of the apostles. The numerous mistakes of the fathers, or their uncertainty how particular passages were to be read and understood, clearly prove that there was no regular or accustomed system of punctuation in use, in the fourth century. The majority of the points or stops now in use are unquestionably of modern date.”

Stowe, in his history of the Bible, confirms what we have hitherto shown concerning the want of punctuation in the original manuscript of the Bible. Of the New Testament he says, page 61-2, “The most ancient are written in large, square capital letters, without any division into sentence, or even words.”

Of the the alleged defectiveness of the language, style, and logic of the Bible he says, pages 17-19.

“Here comes in the objection that the Bible can be made to mean everything and anything, all sects build upon it, the most diverse doctrines are derived from it. This infelicity it shares with everything else that has to be expressed in human language. This is owing to the imperfection, the necessary imperfection of human language, and to the infirmity and the perverse ingenuity also of the human mind. It is not anything peculiar to the Bible. Hear two opposing lawyers argue a point of statute law in its application to a particular case. Hear two opposing politicians make their diverse arguments in reference to the true intent and force of a particular clause in the United States Constitution. Is there not here as wide room for diversity of opinion and opposition of reasoning, as in regard to the meaning of any text of Scripture, or the correctness of any point of theology? Yet these laws and constitutions are made in our own language, and our own time, while the Bible comes to us from a remote age and in foreign tongues. Enough, that the Bible can be understood, if honestly studied, as well as any constitution or any body of statutes can be understood. This much is sufficient for all practical purposes, and it is for practical purposes only that the Bible was given. Yet prepossessions, prejudices and passions come in so plentifully to darken and confuse men's minds, when they are reading the Bible. He opened their understandings that they might understand the Scrip- tures. Men in these times need to have their understandings both opened and straightened out, that they may understand the Scriptures. The Bible is not a specimen of God's skill as a writer, showing us God's mode of thought, giving us God's logic, and God's rhetoric, and God's style of historic narration. How often do we see men seeking out isolated passages of Scripture, and triumphantly saying that such expressions are unworthy of God, and could not have proceeded from Him. They are unskillful; the mode of thought is faulty, they are illogical, in bad taste, the reasoning is not conclusive, the narrative is liable to exception. God has not put himself on trial before us in that way in the Bible, any more than He has in the creation—any more than He has promised that the Bible shall always be printed for us on the best of paper, with the best of type, and perfect freedom from typographical errors, and that after it is printed, it shall never be torn, nor soiled, nor any leaf lost: or that apostles and preachers shall be regularly handsome, men of fine forms and beautiful faces, and faultless elocution. It is always to be remembered that the writers of the Bible were ‘God's penmen, and not God's pens.’ It is not the words of the Bible that were inspired, it is not the thoughts of the Bible that were inspired; it is the men who wrote the Bible that were inspired. Inspiration acts not on the man's words, not on the man's thoughts, but on the man himself; so that he, by his own spontaneity, under the impulse of the Holy Ghost conceives certain thoughts and gives utterance to them in certain words, both the words and the thoughts receiving the peculiar impress of the mind which conceived and uttered them, and being in fact just as really his own, as they could have been if there had been no inspiration at all in the case.”

In conclusion we say that, however faulty the language, style, and composition of the Book of Mormon is proved to be, that, of itself, is no proof of its human origin. Its morals, its doctrines, its history, its prophecies, and its revelations being found good and true, the fact of its having been written and given to the world by unlearned and ignorant men is a conclusive and irresistible proof that it is of divine origin. Its contents are gold, silver, and precious stones, though found in simple, humble, unpolished settings. Jesus came of humble parentage, was associated with the lowly and uncultured, dressed in poor and unfashionable apparel, taught with words of simplicity and plainness, yet was he, in the midst of all these unattractive, unpopular surroundings, the very and glorious Son of God!

Mr. Braden in the debate from first to last, asserts that the antiquities of America were commonly known to scholars in America before the publication of the Book of Mormon, (1830), and before the writing of the purported “Manuscript Found” by the learned Rev. Spaulding, (1809-14). Elder Kelley fully exposed this error, and very neatly unmasked his deceptive citations to the early writings of Josiah Priest, and we now offer in support of the claim that the antiquities of America were not commonly known to the learned, either in Europe or America, prior to 1830, or even before 1841, the testimony of Mr. Stephens, one of the most celebrated among archæologists of this or any preceding age. The reader should note carefully what this most competent witness says, and then see how erroneous and unwarrantable are the assertions of Mr. Braden.

“Dr. Robertson, in his History of America, lays it down as a ‘certain principle, that America was not peopled by any nation of the ancient continent which had made considerable progress in civilization.' 'The inhabitants of the New World,' he says, 'were in a state of society so extremely rude as to be unacquainted with those arts which are the first essays of human ingenuity in its advance toward improvement.' Discrediting the glowing accounts of Cortez and his companions, of soldiers, priests, and civilians, all concurring in representations of the splendor exhibited in the buildings of Mexico, he says that the "houses of the people were mere huts, built with turf, or mud, or the branches of trees, like those of the rudest Indians." The temple of Cholula was nothing more than "a mound of earth, without any steps or any facing of stone, covered with grass and shrubs;" and, on the authority of persons long resident in New Spain, and who professed to have visited every part of it, he says that there is not, in all the extent of that vast empire, a single monument or vestige of any building more ancient than the conquest.' At that time, distrust was perhaps the safer side for the historian; but since Dr. Robertson wrote a new flood of light has poured upon the world, and the field of American antiquities has been opened.

"The ignorance, carelessness, and indifference of the inhabitants of Spanish America on this subject are matter of wonder. In our own country, the opening of forests and the discovery of tumuli or mounds and fortifications, extending in ranges from the lakes through the valleys of the Ohio and Mississippi, mummies in a cave in Kentucky, the inscription on the rock at Dighton, supposed to be in Phœnician characters, and the ruins of walls and a great city in Arkansas and Wisconsin Territory, had suggested wild and wandering ideas in regard to the first peopling of this country, and the strong belief that powerful and populous nations had occupied it and had passed away, whose histories are entirely unknown. The same evidences continue in Texas, and in Mexico they assume a still more definite form.

"The first new light thrown upon this subject as regards Mexico was by the great Humboldt, who visited that country at a time when, by the jealous policy of the government, it was almost as much closed against strangers as China is now. No man could have better deserved such fortune. At that time the monuments of the country were not a leading object of research; but Humboldt collected from various sources information and drawings, particularly of Mitla, or the Vale of the Dead; Xochicalco, a mountain hewed down and terraced, and called the Hill of Flowers; and the great pyramid or Temple of Cholula he visited himself, of all which his own eloquent account is within reach of the reader. Unfortunately, of the great cities beyond the Vale of Mexico, buried in forests, ruined, desolate, and without a name, Humboldt never heard, or, at least, he never visited them. It is but lately that accounts of their existence reached Europe and our own country. These accounts, however vague and unsatisfactory, had roused our curiosity; though I ought perhaps to say that both Mr. Catherwood and I were somewhat skeptical, and when we arrived at Copan, it was with the hope, rather than the expectation, of finding wonders.

"Since the discovery of these ruined cities the prevailing theory has been, that they belonged to a race long anterior to that which inhabited the country at the time of the Spanish conquest."—Travels in Central America, Chiapas, and Yucatan, vol. 1, pp. 97-99.

Mr. Stephens now gives a graphic description of the ruins of the ancient city Copan, beginning on p. 101:

"The wall was of cut stone, well laid, and in a good state of preservation. We ascended by large stone steps, in some places perfect, and in others thrown down by trees which had grown up between the crevices, and reached a terrace, the form of which it was impossible to make out, from the density of the forest in which it was enveloped. Our guide cleared a way with his machete, and we passed, as it lay half buried in the earth, a large fragment of stone elaborately sculptured, and came to the angle of a structure with steps on the sides, in form and appearance, so far as the trees would enable us to make it out, like the sides of a pyramid. Diverging from the base, and working our way through the thick woods, we came upon a square stone column, about fourteen feet high and three feet on each side, sculptured in very bold relief, and on all four of the sides, from the base to the top. The front was the figure of a man curiously and richly dressed, and the face, evidently a portrait, solemn, stern, and well fitted to excite terror. The back was of a different design, unlike anything we had ever seen before, and the sides were covered with hieroglyphics. This our guide called an 'Idol;' and before it, at a distance of three feet, was a large block of stone, also sculptured with figures and emblematical devices, which he called an altar. The sight of this unexpected monument put at rest at once and forever, in our minds, all uncertainty in regard to the character of American antiquities, and gave us the assurance that the objects we were in search of were interesting, not only as the remains of an unknown people, but as works of art, proving, like newly-discovered historical records, that the people who once occupied the Continent of America were not savages. With an interest perhaps stronger than we had ever felt in wandering among the ruins of Egypt, we followed our guide, who, sometimes missing his way, with a constant and vigorous use of his machete, conducted us through the thick forest, among half-buried fragments, to fourteen monuments of the same character and appearance, some with more elegant designs, and some in workmanship equal to the finest monuments of the Egyptians; one displaced from its pedestal by enormous roots; another locked in the close embrace of branches of trees, and almost lifted out of the earth; another hurled to the ground, and bound down by huge vines and creepers; and one standing, with its altar before it, in a grove of trees which grew around it, seemingly to shade and shroud it as a sacred thing; in the solemn stillness of the woods, it seemed a divinity mourning over a fallen people. The only sounds that disturbed the quiet of this buried city were the noise of monkeys moving among the tops of the trees, and the cracking of dry branches broken by their weight. They moved over our heads in long and swift processions, forty or fifty at a time, some with little ones wound in their long arms, walking out to the end of boughs, and holding on with their hind feet or a curl of the tail, sprang to a branch of the next tree, and, with a noise like a current of wind, passed on into the depths of the forest. It was the first time we had seen these mockeries of humanity, and, with the strange monuments around us, they seemed like wandering spirits of the departed race guarding the ruins of their former habitations.

"We returned to the base of the pyramidal structure, and ascended by regular stone steps, in some places forced apart by bushes and saplings, and in others thrown down by the growth of large trees, while some remained entire. In parts they were ornamented with sculptured figures and rows of death's heads. Climbing over the ruined top, we reached a terrace overgrown with trees, and, crossing it, descended by stone steps into an area so covered with trees that at first we could not make out its form, but which, on clearing the way with the machete, we ascertained to be a square, and with steps on all the sides almost as perfect as those of the Roman amphitheatre. The steps were ornamented with sculpture, and on the south side, about half way up, forced out of its place by roots, was a colossal head, evidently a portrait. We ascended these steps, and reached a broad terrace a hundred feet high, overlooking the river, and supported by the wall which we had seen from the opposite bank. The whole terrace was covered with trees, and even at this height from the ground were two gigantic Ceibas, or wild cotton-trees of India, above twenty feet in circumference, extending their half-naked roots fifty or a hundred feet around, binding down the ruins, and shading them with their wide-spreading branches. We sat down on the very edge of the wall, and strove in vain to penetrate the mystery by which we were surrounded. Who were the people that built this city? In the ruined cities of Egypt, even in the long-lost Petra, the stranger knows the story of the people whose vestiges are around him. America, say historians, was peopled by savages; but savages never reared these structures, savages never carved these stones. We asked the Indians who made them, and their dull answer was 'Quien sabe?' 'who knows?'

"There were no associations connected with the place; none of those stirring recollections which hallow Rome, Athens, and

"The world's great mistress on the Egyptian plain;" but architecture, sculpture, and painting, all the arts which embellish life, had flourished in this overgrown forest; orators; warriors, and statesmen, beauty, ambition, and glory, had lived and passed away, and none knew that such things had been, or could tell of their past existence. Books, the records of knowledge, are silent on this theme. The city was desolate. No remnant of this race hangs round the ruins, with traditions handed down from father to son, and from generation to generation. It lay before us like a shattered bark in the midst of the ocean, her masts gone, her name effaced, her crew perished, and none to tell whence she came, to whom she belonged, how long on her voyage, or what caused her destruction; her lost people to be traced only by some fancied resemblance in the construction of the vessel, and, perhaps, never to be known at all. The place where we sat, was it a citadel from which an unknown people had sounded the trumpet of war? or a temple for the worship of the God of peace? or did the inhabitants worship the idols made with their own hands, and offer sacrifices on the stones before them? All was mystery, dark, impenetrable mystery, and every circumstance increased it. In Egypt the colossal skeletons of gigantic temples stand in the unwatered sands in all the nakedness of desolation; here an immense forest shrouded the ruins, hiding them from sight, heightening the impression and moral effect, and giving an intensity and almost wildness to the interest."

From this it is clear that but little was known of the antiquities of America, (especially those in Central America, the region of which the Book of Mormon speaks more particularly), until after the discoveries made by Stephens and Catherwood in 1839-40; and that up to this time there was much "uncertainty" relative to the matter.

Mr. Bancroft in his "Native Races of the Pacific States, completely overturns Braden's false assumptions and assertions. On pages 143 and 144 of his fourth volume we find the following:

"Yucatan presents a rich field for antiquarian exploration, furnishing perhaps finer, and certainly more numerous specimens of ancient aboriginal architecture, sculpture, and painting than have been discovered in any other section of America. The state is literally dotted, at least in the northern central, or best known, portions with ruined edifices and cities. I shall have occasion to mention and describe more or less fully, in this chapter such ruins in between fifty and sixty different localities. While these monuments, however, are the most extensive and among the best preserved within the limits of the Pacific States, they were yet among the last to be brought to the knowledge of the modern world. In the voyages made early in the sixteenth century, which immediately preceded the conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards, Cordova, Grijalva, and Cortes touched at various points along the Yucatan coast, and were amazed to find there on the borders of a new world which they had supposed to be occupied exclusively by barbarians, a civilized people who served their gods, and kept their idols in lofty stone temples. But their stay was brief and they pursued their way northward, bent on the conquest of the richer realms of Montezuma. The excitement of the conquest, and the new wonders beheld in Anahuac blotted practically from the popular mind all memory of the southern tower temples, although their discovery was recorded in the diaries of the expeditions, from which and from verbal descriptions accounts were inserted in the works of the standard historians of the Indies. Later in the middle of the century, when the turn came for Yucatan to be overrun with soldiers, stone temples had become too familiar sights to excite much attention: yet the chroniclers of the times included in their annals some brief descriptions of the Heathen temples destroyed for the glory of the white man's god; and the Yucatan historians of the following century, Landa, Cogolludo, and Villagutierre Sotomayor, described and personally visited some of the ruins. These earlier accounts have been utilized in delineating the state of architectural art among the Mayas in a preceding volume, and they will also be used somewhat extensively as illustrative material in the following pages. Since these early times the ruins, shrouded by a dense tropical vegetation, have lain untenanted and unknown, save to the peaceful inhabitants of the northern and more thickly settled portions of the state, who have from time to time become aware of their existence accidentally while in search of water or a favorable locality for a milpa, or cornfield. Only a few of the forty-four ruined towns explored by Mr. Stephens were known to exist by the people of Merida, the state capital.

Since 1830 the veil has been lifted from the principal ruins of ancient Maya works by the researches of Zavala, Waldeck, Stephens, Catherwood, Norman, Friederichsthal, and Charnay. A general account of the antiquarian explorations and writings of these gentlemen is given in the appended note, details and notices of additional visitors to particular localities being reserved until I come to speak of those localities. It will be noticed that all the authors mentioned who write from actual observation, have confined their observations to from one to four of the principal ruins whose existence was known previous to their visits, excepting Messrs. Stephens and Catherwood. These gentlemen boldly left the beaten track and brought to the knowledge of the world about forty ruined cities whose very existence had been previously unknown even to the residents of the larger cities of the very state in whose territory they lie."

We have given the foregoing lengthy quotation, in order that the simple truth may appear in regard to the claim that early Spanish historians and voyagers furnished the world with information with regard to the archaeological remains of Central America and Yucatan, and that from such information Solomon Spaulding was enabled to compile his work descriptive of such remains. The following facts appear from Mr. Bancroft's statements:

1. Yucatan furnishes the most numerous specimens of ancient American archaeology of any part of America.
2. That a mere glimpse of these ruins was taken by the early Spanish discoverers and conquerors, and that the information they imparted, found its way into some of the writings of the historians of the times.
3. That "since these early times the ruins, shrouded by a dense tropical vegetation, have lain untenanted and unknown, save to the peaceful inhabitants of the northern and more thickly settled portions of the state, who have from time to time become aware of their existence accidentally while in search of water or a favorable locality for a milpa, or cornfield."
4. "Since 1830 the veil has been lifted from the principal ruins of ancient Maya works by the researches of Zavala, Waldeck, Stephens, Catherwood, Norman, Friederichsthal, and Charnay."

In this connection let it be noted, that

Bancroft in the preparation of his work consulted over thirteen hundred authors, some of whose writings comprise many volumes, and is thus prepared to state facts from which there can be no appeal.

In Prof. J. D. Baldwin's work entitled, Ancient America, speaking of the ruins of Mexico and Central America, he says:

"Captain Dupaix's folios, in French, with the drawing of Castenada, contain the first really important memoir on these ruins. It was prepared in 1807, detained in Mexico during the Mexican Revolution, and finally published at Paris in 1834-5."

Mr. Baldwin says in his preface to Ancient America, that "the purpose of this volume is to give a summary of what is known of American antiquities, with some thoughts and suggestions relative to their significance." The statement given then carries with it the force of a thorough investigation of the whole subject, and should be regarded as final.

In a work published by Nott and Gliddon in 1857, occurs the following:

"The time has not yet arrived for writing the history of the indigenous art of the Red-race. The monuments of the ante-Columbian civilization of America, but little regarded in their country, are excessively rare in Europe."

"Even Chinese art has a greater chance of becoming the object of study, than the monuments of the mound builders, of the Toltecs and Aztecs of Mexico and Central America."

"Many American antiquities were published in the extensive, and more or less costly works of Kingsborough, Humboldt, Lenoir, Warden Tschudi, Rivero, Waldeck, Catherwood, d'Orbigny, Stephens, Norman, Brantz, Mayer, Bartlett, and Squier; but failing to interest the public in the same way as Asiatic and European antiquities, they remained unknown beyond the circle of some ethnological scholars, so that few persons are aware of the extent and the artistical importance of the Monuments of America."—Pages 179, 181.

It will be noticed that the enumeration of authorities touching the archaeological remains of America, begins with Kingsborough, whose work was first published in London, England, in 1831-1838. See American Encyclopedia, article Kingsborough.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Bro. Joseph:—I believe that when I wrote the last notes I was in Salt Lake City. Bro. Alexander H. arrived on Sunday night, just as we were about to begin services, and came quite unexpectedly. I notice that he thinks that my effort was rather mild for the hearing of a people who were used to strong meat. Yes, I know they are used to strong meat, and it has been so tough, that their teeth have been worn nearly to the gums; so that by insufficient mastication they have become dyspeptic, and need now the sincere milk of the word, and to be nourished with mild food, if not with herbs. But I believed that Aleck would be led to handle Polygamy, etc., as it ought to be done, and I felt to teach on other subjects, although I did not fear to refer to the "new covenant" when it came in my way. Bro. Alexander was taken sick, and could not preach any while I remained; so I had to do it all; but I left enough for him to say.

He remained and preached a number of discourses with good effect; so I have learned. I sincerely believe that Alexander could do a great amount of good in Utah, and hope that he may return there ere long, and spend several months in that field. We reached Sacramento early in the morning of Friday the 11th, after calling for a few minutes in Ogden, at the house of Bro. Hart. At Sacramento we met Bro. Parr, the president of the branch, and stopped at his house till Sunday; and then spoke in the neat chapel of the Saints, twice, to rather small audiences. We visited the State Fair, which was in session, and witnessed some of the wonderful productions of California in the fruit and vegetable line. The climate around Sacramento is somewhat subject to malarial influences, at least there is considerable ague around; otherwise it would be a delightful place to live in. It might appear like extravagance of speech to say that we saw a squash in the Fair that weighed 186 lbs., a number that weighed from 140 to 160 lbs., and a watermelon that weighed 92 lbs., and such beets, cabbages, onions, etc.; well, I would better not say anything about them, or else I will be accused of using figurative language, if I say anything relative to their size and weight. While at Sacramento we spent a day with Bro. George Harlow, formerly of Iowa; and we had such a grand feast of grapes, figs, plums, pears, melons, etc., and such a variety of grapes. Why in the world can't we have several Zions, and have one of them out here in California? We found a nice little branch in Sacramento, and they have a pretty chapel to meet in. We enjoyed our visit very much there.

I forgot to say that we had a very enjoyable visit in Salt Lake City. Bro. Warnock kindly took us around in his carriage pulled by as fine a horse as I ever rode behind. Bro. Warnock knows all that any one needs to know about horse flesh. We had a most excellent home with Sister Blair, and indeed we were overwhelmed with kindnesses by the Saints there, and everywhere on our journey. Well, where are there any better people than the Saints? We went to hear Bishop Whitney in the Tabernacle Sunday afternoon; and with exception of the same remark about "Our Father and Mother in Heaven," made in the beginning of his discourse; and his testimony at the close, that he knew that Brigham Young was the legal successor of Joseph Smith, and that John Taylor is a prophet, seer, revelator, and president of the Church,—with these exceptions he preached a first rate gospel sermon. They are building a magnificent temple at Salt Lake. The Gentiles say it will make a splendid union depot some time, and the Tabernacle a first class round house. I have no doubt they would be glad to see the Mormon property fall into their hands, at least some would. Many of the Mormons are very boastful, and take great pride in their beautiful city, with its costly edifices, and many attractions. They feel and say that they are "rich and increased in goods and have need of nothing;" but some of us think that, like the Laodiceans, they need the "eye salve" the law can provide, that they may see their true condition, that spiritually they are "poor and blind and naked."

One night while riding about a dozen blocks in a horse car, one of the "lights" of the church introduced himself, (having heard me preach a few evenings before) and commenced an attack on the sons and the wife of "Joseph the Martyr," and on the Reorganization. He talked loud enough to be heard a block away, and every few seconds he would look round the car to see if any were smiling their approbation; at least he acted as if he thought, Well, don't they think I can handle my case well. I attempted to get in a word, and once, after demanding full six times in succession to have a chance to reply, he graciously permitted me to speak about a half minute, and then went on as boisterously as before. I have no doubt that he reported that he had silenced the "Josephite Apostle," and that he could make no reply. Yet I tried my best to get a chance to reply, but he was determined that I should have none. There were two or three young men on board, who seemed to be making fun of him, but he doubtless thought that they were laughing at his smartness.

I learned enough of the "institution" while there, but about two weeks, to disgust me, ten fold more than ever with the actions of men, who, at one time, were servants of God, and who enjoyed his Spirit. I was simply horrified at the recital of experiences on the part of some who were once members of the "institution," and of some who yet belong. I had occasion to meet several women who were polygamous wives, (?) who were working in different ways to support themselves, and their children in some cases. Perhaps they are fulfilling the prophecy of seven women taking hold of one man, who are willing to earn their own bread and apparel, if they can only be called by his name. But there can hardly be danger of reproach on account of being unmarried, where there is a fair chance to have a whole husband to one's self.

Well, to our narrative. After spending about five days in Sacramento, we came on here, and have spent part of our time in San Francisco and part here in Oakland. I preached here last Sunday morning and night, in the hall occupied by the Saints. The congregation at night was larger than ever seen there, so Bro. Anderson says, except at conference times. I spoke on the "Signs of the Times," and paid our respects to Spiritualism and Utahism. Sunday night before I spoke in San Francisco, to a house full. I had good liberty both there and here. Bro. Lincoln and wife (who may soon unite with us) took us to see many places of interest in San Francisco, as did also Dr. Wasson, a brother who has belonged only about a year, and who seems to be quite an intelligent man. We had several pleasant interviews with Bro. and Sr. Andrews. There are good branches in both places, and there are brethren here who ought to be out in the field, for they are as capable as any who can be sent here, to present the faith of the church, and to defend it when assailed. On Friday last we went to see, with Bro. Andrews, the vessel we are to sail in, the Tropic Bird, Captain Burns. She is a barkentine, of about three hundred and thirty-two tons. She is very comfortably fitted up for passengers. The state rooms are about seven feet square, and the berths are fully four feet wide. She is quite a fast sailer, and the Captain thinks he can make Tahiti in about twenty-six days, including a day and a half at the Marquesas Islands. Now if I only had some tracts in the Tahitian tongue I could distribute some there. I hope the good Lord will put it into the hearts of some who can, that they may help us in that work; for I hope to be able soon to translate some of our best tracts, or at least to have it done. The Captain's wife says that the language is easily learned, and if we are divinely assisted we will soon master it. We expect to leave to-morrow at ten a. m. We go, but not altogether cheerfully. Sister Smith is rather more willing than I am; and had I not known for years that I would have to take this mission, I would decline the trip. I feel that whether now is the set time or not, yet I will have to visit that field some time, and I do see any reason for not going now. We not will leave many kind friends here. We have had a very pleasant home with Sr. Forest, Bro. Joseph C. Clapp's sister, and with her mother and pleasant family. Bro. George Lincoln is in charge of the work in San Francisco and Bro. Wm. Anderson here in Oakland.

GOD'S POLYGLOT BIBLES.

"Who can paint like nature? Can imagination boast, amid its gay creation, hues like hers?" Look out and view her boundless landscape, and then, if you can, describe her ever varying scenes. From her folio volumes, with our finite minds, we can read but little; but ever and anon she teaches the lessons of love, beauty and truth. In the dainty leaf, the graceful foliage, the perfect blade of grass, we cannot fail to read God's goodness. The sun rides forth in his stately magnificence, the king of the glorious heavens, scaling the azure vault, mounting higher and higher until his zenith of glory is reached, then gradually and gracefully he descends, until at the horizon, when he stops for a moment ere sinking out of sight, tinging the whole heavens with his radiant beams, until they seem to have "Snatched a grace beyond the reach of art."

Night comes! the stars rush forth to wage war with darkness! The moon, the sun's shadowy self, comes tripping up the stairs of heaven's highway, a royal queen, shedding her soft, silvery rays o'er all. Look above at the gorgeous arch with its myriads of golden worlds inlaid, and then to your studios, ye artists, and paint a scene like that.

Henry Ward Beecher has said; "Flowers have an expression of countenance such as men or animals; some seem to smile, some have a sad expression, some are pensive and diffident; others plain, honest and upright."

Flowers are love's truest language. They are words which the simplest may read and understand. What hopes, what aspirations, what deep thought in these "children of summer!" There is not a flower that blooms, but shows some touch in freckle, in streak, or strain, of God's unrivalled pencil, for in the words of the poet,—

"The flowers so blue and golden,
Are stars that in earth's firmament do shine."

God speaks to us in a various language. "The whole universe is the autograph of God Almighty." Earth, sea and sky alike proclaim with ten thousand tongues the power that moves the universe. The bud that blossoms in the spring, the waves that wash the ocean shore, and the cloud that floats along the "starry heavens," all tell of Him. In every wind that is wafted o'er us, there is a voice. On the face of every high hill there is written a meaning. In the deepest desert and on the tallest mount, there are wondrous beauties. In the heaven's matchless hues there is magnificence. In the ocean's roar there is sublimity. Beauty was given to nature, as a prototype of heaven's joy. Go, read beauty every where! In the hoary mount, the lofty pine, the towering cedar, the ocean's depths. In the grand cataract thundering down the deep ravine, see beauty blend; power and loveliness are written there. Would man in his "gayer moods" read gladness, let him turn to the pages of budding spring, and then let him peruse and ponder upon the wealth and beauty of her storehouse.

For his hours of sadness, lead him forth, "under the open sky," upon a grand autumnal scene. Here "summer gathers up her robes of glory, and like a dream of beauty glides away." Here you will find, "sorrow and the scarlet leaf," here "shadowless, like silence listening unto silence, the brown autumn stands in the misty morn."

"The good, great man," how many unwritten pages speak of him. Man, how low, yet how high; man, how weak, yet how strong; man, how ignoble, yet how noble. Man is a polyglot, that men have studied but never learned. Literature, science, art, inventions, are only legacies left us by the mind of man. What limit can be fixed to its power? What a book for our leisure hours is the study of man. Here is a man "with empires in his brains." There another, with the wealth of the argosies. Here one with the fate of nations entrusted to his keeping. There one whose sudden visitation dazed the world, but who left behind him a voice, that in the distance far away, wakens the slumbering ages.

"Man is his own star, and the soul that can Render an honest and a perfect man,
Commands all light, all influence, all fate,
Nothing to him falls early, or too late."

"Man, what a mysterious being, formed for deeds of high resolve." Man's destiny is written in burning letters on his own brow. Around, above, beneath, God's polyglots are open. Go, read of his power in Nature's convulsive throes, of his gentleness in the cooling zephyr and the babbling brooklet. Of his infinite patience, his unbounded love. Go, read in the whole universe this truth, "A God alone can comprehend a God."

ANCIENT RUINS IN MEXICO.

Ancient ruins have recently been discovered in Sonora, Mex., which, if reports are true, surpass anything of the kind found on this continent, says the Chihuahua Enterprise. The ruins are about four leagues south of Magdalena. There is one pyramid which has a base of 1,350 feet, and rises to the height of 750 feet. There is a winding roadway from the bottom, leading up an easy grade to the top, wide enough for carriages to pass over, said to be twenty-three miles in length. The outer walls of the roadway are laid in solid masonry, huge blocks of granite in rubble work, and the circles are as uniform and the grade as regular as they could be made at this day by our best engineers. The wall is only occasionally exposed, being covered over with debris and earth, and in many places the sahuaro and other indigenous plants and trees have grown up, giving the pyramid the appearance of a mountain. To the east of the pyramid a short distance is a small mountain about the same size, which rises about the same height, and, if reports are true, it will prove more interesting to the archaeologist than the pyramid.

There seems to be a heavy layer of a species of gypsum about half way up the mountain, which is as white as snow, and may be cut into any conceivable shape, yet sufficiently hard to retain its shape after being cut. In this layer of stone a people of an unknown age have cut hundreds upon hundreds of rooms from 6x10 to 16x18 feet square. These rooms are cut out of the solid stone, and so even and true are the walls, floor and ceiling, so plumb and level, as to defy variation. There are no windows in the rooms, and but one entrance, which is always from the top. The rooms are but eight feet high from floor to ceiling, the stone is so white that it seems almost transparent, and the rooms are not at all dark.

On the walls of these rooms are numerous hieroglyphics and representations of human beings cut in the stone in different places. But, strange to say, all the hands have five fingers and thumb, and the feet have six toes. Charcoal is found on the floors of many of the rooms, which would indicate that they built fires in their houses. Some implements of every description are to be found in and about the rooms. The house or rooms are one above the other to three or more stories high, but between each story there is a jog or recess the full width of the room below so that they present the appearance of large steps leading up the mountain.

Who these people were, what age they lived in, must be answered, if answered at all, "by the wise men of the east." Some say they were ancestors of the Mayas, a race of Indians who still inhabit southern Sonora, who have blue eyes, fair skin and light hair, and are said to be a moral, industrious and frugal race of people, who have a written language and know something of mathematics.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

THE history of Newfoundland is a very curious one. It was discovered by John Cabot and a crew of Bristol men in 1497, only five years after Columbus had made his first landing at San Salvador; but though from that time nominally an English possession, it was left to the adventurous fishermen of other nations until the summer of 1583, when Sir Humphrey Gilbert arrived in the harbor of St. Johns, furnished with the Queen's patent creating him Governor of a territory far larger than the whole of the British Isles. There must have been something fascinating in that power of giving away a whole empire with a stroke of the pen, and especially when that empire was wrapped in mystery and believed to be in some way a stepping-stone to the golden regions of Cathay. But Sir Humphrey was not destined to reap either profit or glory from his new domains. He and his half-brother, Sir Walter Raleigh, had planned the colonization of Newfoundland; but Sir Walter's ship was driven back to England by sickness among the crew, and Sir Humphrey perished at sea in the following autumn. In 1610, Lord Bacon, the Earl of Southampton, and other famous persons were concerned in a second and equally abortive attempt to colonize; a third was made in 1623, under Lord Baltimore, afterward Governor of Maryland. Lord Baltimore remained some years on the island, but at last returned home, and in 1638 Sir David Kirke took his place. It is at about this time that the peculiarity in the treatment of Newfoundland which has, as it were, thrown back its history for a hundred years, begins to show itself. The earliest visitors to the island had described it as having pure air and splendid rivers, "fruitful and enticing hills, and delightful valleys," producing abundant food both for man and beast. And the first intention was to plant a settlement—a real colony—in the island.

But already there was in the field an interest hostile to colonization. The merchants who sent out ships and men each summer to the cod and herring fishery desired to be left in undisturbed possession of the coasts and adjacent forests, and so well did they succeed in their object that till more than seventy years after Kirke's death Newfoundland presented the curious spectacle of a large country entirely sacrificed to the fishermen who yearly visited its shores. Emigrants had come, how or whence it is difficult to say, and in 1655 there were 350 families living on sufferance; but after Kirke there was not even a nominal Governor, there was not a single resident magistrate, nor any person whatever possessing legal authority. No one could own the smallest piece of land, and if any one built a house, or so much as a fence, his neighbors were free to pull it down again. The master of whatever fishing vessel happened to arrive first in any port became the Admiral of that port for the season; and his authority extended over the few settlers (or rather squatters) in the neighborhood, but when he left in autumn all authority went with him, and indeed it may easily be supposed that during his stay he was nothing better than a King Stork. Even when at last, in 1728, a permanent Governor was appointed, he spent his winters in England, and was forbidden to make any grant or sale of land, or to permit a house, or even a shed, to be built without express leave obtained. This state of things lasted until after 1798, yet in spite of it settlers would not be altogether frightened away, and in 1802 the population of St. John amounted to 3,420. From about this date a better system began to prevail; in 1813 the Governor was authorized "to make grants of small portions of land to industrious persons," and in 1825 the first road was made in the island.

This story would read like a clumsy invention if there were any possibility of doubting its truth, and it does not become more vraisemblable when we know that the country so treated contains within the circuit of its rocky coasts close upon 5,000,000 acres of land well fitted for agricultural and grazing purposes, besides extensive savannas; that since 1854, when the mines were first worked, it has exported copper and nickel to the value of more than £1,000,000, and that it possesses 1,000 square miles of pine forest, chiefly of the white pine, admirably adapted for ship-building.—London Spectator.

THE PRAYER CURE.

THE Congregationalist ministers held their usual Monday meeting this morning in the gentleman's parlor of the Grand Pacific, Chicago, Rev. Mr. Williams in the chair. The subject of the discussion was the "Prayer Cure." It was opened by Rev. Dr. Jeremiah Porter, who, after reading and expounding several passages of Scripture bearing on the subject, related some instances of prayer cure that came under his notice. He gave a brief account of the case of the somewhat celebrated Miss Carrie Judd, of Buffalo, who, he said was of the Episcopal persuasion, and was educated at the well known school of Dr. Chesney, in that city. Several years ago, when returning from school she had a fall, and received a severe spinal injury. After being bed-ridden for a long time, she entered into correspondence with some people in Connecticut who believed in prayer-cure, and who agreed to pray for her recovery on a certain Thursday. On that day she was able to walk, and improved gradually until perfectly restored. Once afterward her pains returned, but she interpreted it as a temptation of the devil, and then they left her again. Miss Judd has opened a prayer-cure in her father's house which has been in operation now for four years, with wonderful effect. She has a faith-cure prayer meeting every Thursday evening. Another case that Dr. Porter spoke of was a young man named Pardington, the son of an English Methodist minister. Young Pardington received an accidental injury from the hands of a French teacher, which brought on spinal troubles, and made him for years such a pitiable object that he earnestly desired that he might die. At the age of thirteen his father took him on a visit to Dr. Porter's son in Detroit, when Miss Carrie Judd's book was given him to read. It made such a deep impression on his mind that he instantly announced his belief that he could be healed in the same way. He lost no time in visiting Miss Judd, who prayed for his cure, and he was greatly benefited at once, and gradually regained perfect health. He is now a student for the ministry. Dr. Porter also spoke of a case of a gentleman in Detroit named Allen, who was supposed to be dying with consumption. Mr. Allen was poor, but wrote to a Christian man in Springfield, Mass., who possessed the gift of healing, to come to Detroit and pray for him. The man came at his own expense; but when he saw Mr. Allen, told him that "this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting," and thereupon began a three-days' fast. At the end of the three days he prayed for Allen, who was cured, but by a remarkable process. He was seized with a terrible fit of bilious vomiting, after which he rapidly recovered his health, and is a well man to-day.

The next speaker was a North Side minister, who had known of several cures by faith and prayer. One was the case of Dr. Goodell, which he said would be published in the Advance of this week. Dr. Goodell said that in his illness, which occurred not a great while ago, he reached a point where he felt that he was rapidly sinking. But within a day or two he suddenly felt a strange sensation creeping through his body, after which he rapidly recovered. Subsequently he discovered that the strange sensation occurred at the very moment that earnest prayer for his recovery was being offered in the Pilgrim Church in St. Louis. The speaker also related several cures that had occurred among the people of his own congregation.

The next speaker was Rev. Robert Nourse, La Crosse, Wis., who related similar cases that had come under his observation. One was the case of a lady whose sister was a prominent Cincinnati physician. This lady labored under some disorder which had made her a confirmed invalid. Her family had spent $7,000 on physicians, in trying to effect a cure, although the physicians, for her sister's sake, charged only half-price, for their services. From what she had heard, the invalid desired to try the virtue of prayer, and had herself removed to the Walnut Hill Prayer Cure, in that city, where her sister expected that she would die. She took her usual assortment of anodynes to induce sleep, but the first prescription given her by Miss Millard, the lady who presided over the cure, was to throw them all away. She did so, and was prayed for, but her first night there was an unusually wretched one. The next day, however, Miss Millard prayed for her again, and then she immediately got up and went down stairs. In less than a week she was perfectly cured, as her medical sister willingly testifies. Mr. Nourse said that he then returned to La Crosse, where he anointed with oil and prayed for a young lady who was an invalid, and the next day her health was restored. Her physician said it was unaccountable; that she had a good color, whereas the day before her blood was all water. Subsequently he prayed for his own daughter, who was at the point of death, and she was at once delivered from the peril, and has gradually grown better ever since. In closing, he said that the prayer-cure people believed that teaching and healing went together. For his part, he learned from the Bible that they were once united, and he had been unable to learn when they were separated.

The subject was discussed briefly by several of the ministers, some of whom were not such strong believers in prayer cure, and then the meeting adjourned.

THE following is of great interest to all interested in food growing; and those who are asking, How shall earth's millions be fed?

"The monthly report from the Department of Agriculture contains a chapter on wheat in India, which is of particular interest to the wheat growers of the north-west. The report says: The increase of exports from India from a few hundred thousand bushels per annum ten to twenty years ago to 37,148,543 bushels in 1881-'82, and 39,127,977 bushels of 60 pounds for 1883-'84 (year ended March 31st), has excited the attention of the wheat-growing countries. It is known that India comes near to France and Russia in the volume of wheat production, and that these countries have only one outranking competitor—the United States of America. Conditions have not been favorable in former years for large India exports, mainly from lack of transportation facilities, the country having only one mile of railroad for 2,500 people, while this country has a mile for less than 500 inhabitants. The careless cleaning of the grain and the mixing of the different kinds, diverse in quality, have also tended to keep a price too low for active supply for exportation. It is now proposed to increase India railway facilities, and the home Government is asked to assist in the extension. Mr. W. W. Hunter of the Viceroy's Legislative Council laid before the committee of the British Parliament in June last a plan for building 7,328 miles, of which 3,896 are deemed indispensable for providing relief in case of threatened famine, while the remaining 2,432 are held to be desirable if individuals are willing to build with the aid of a proffered right of way and land for stations. Five years are allowed for the completion of the 3,896 miles, at a cost of £28,250,000 requiring an expenditure of over £5,500,000 sterling per annum. Mr. Hunter also stated before the committee that as a result of a series of experiments and investigations in India wheat could be produced, with hired labor under good supervision, at about 12s a quarter, or 1s 6d (about 36½c) per imperial bushel. The imperial bushel is very slightly larger than our Winchester bushel. He declared the wheat had certainly been sold at a profit at 16s to 18s per quarter (48½ cents to 54¾ cents per bushel). There are in India millions of acres of productive soil capable of yielding enormous crops of wheat, and as the country is brought into communication with the markets by the construction of new railroads the yield of wheat will doubtless increase to an enormous extent. All the authorities say, however, that it will require a great deal of money and much time before India can be depended upon to harvest enough of this grain to seriously affect the American export. The natives cultivate extremely small farms with the most primitive implements, and they are too poor to purchase modern farming tools, even if they were sufficiently advanced in civilization to understand the advantage of them."

Miscellaneous.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

The conference of this district will be held at Nebraska City, on the 26th of October, 1884. Let all come who can bring the spirit of the work with them; and I hope all the ministry will have a report to make, and remember the advice of our president to have it in writing. Address all communications and reports to J. B. Gouldsmith, secretary, Nebraska City, Neb.

BORN.

BLALOCK.—At Dukedom, Tennessee, September 24th, 1884, to Bro. Thomas H. and Sr. Minerva Blalock, a son; named George Edward.

MARRIED.

MCKINNEY—ELVIN.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Nebraska City, Nebraska, September 16th, 1884, at 8 p. m., by Elder R. C. Elvin, Mr. Will. F. McKinney to Sister Elizabeth J. Elvin.

BOSTROM—ELVIN.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Nebraska City, Nebraska, September 16th, 1884, at 8 p. m., by Elder R. C. Elvin, Mr. Fred. W. Bostrom to Sister Martha Elvin. At this double wedding there was a pleasant gathering of relatives and friends, who sat down at two large tables loaded with good things to eat. Both couples were remembered by their many friends by many costly and useful presents. May their voyage down the stream of time be peaceful, and finally launch them safe in the haven of eternal peace and rest.

HOWLAND—BURTON.—At the Saints' Chapel in New Port, Los Angeles county, California, October 2d, 1884, Bro. Joseph G. Howland and Sr. Dora I. Burton, by Elder J. F. Burton, assisted by Elder D. S. Mills.

DIED.

BETZER.—In York township, Steuben county, Indiana, June 23d, 1884, Catherine Betzer. She was born in Northampton county, Pennsylvania, her age 62 years, four months and five days.

JONES.—On the 13th of September, 1884, at his residence on Welsh Hill, Plymouth, Pa., of flux, Brother William W. Jones; aged 70 years and 7 months. The deceased was born in Glyneath South Wales, where he joined the Latter Day Saints, and was baptized by brother Jacob Davies on the 6th day of October, 1849. From this time he was a very faithful member of the church there until the year 1855, when he and his family immigrated to this country: landing here in April, he settled down in Plymouth in 1856. Our brother was always a great opposer of polygamy, and in August, 1866, he and his whole family were baptized, by Bro. W. W. Blair, into the Reorganized church: of which he was a very faithful member until his departure from this world to a better and heavenly home. In May, 1878, he was made Bishop's Agent. His funeral took place on September 16th, and was largely attended by his friends and neighbors of Scranton. Rev. T. C. Edwards of Kingston, preached a very appropriate sermon, from the words, "If a man die, will he live again?" He also spoke very sympathizingly and encouragingly at the grave, where our brother was laid along side of his son and two daughters—the last of whom, Jennie, being buried only ten days before him. H. S. GILL.

WILSEY.—At the residence of her daughter, Sr. Williams, at Plano, Illinois, Sr. Elizabeth B. Wilsey, relict of the late Bro. Archibald Wilsey, of old age, on September 29th, 1884. Sister Wilsey was born at Bradford county, Pennsylvania, October 5th, 1794, and at her death was aged 89 years, 11 months, and 24 days. She united with the church at Kirtland, Ohio, in the days of the first Joseph. She followed the fortunes of the church through the persecutions in Missouri and Illinois. At the death of the martyrs, she with her husband, refused to follow any of the aspirants to the leadership of the church, but calmly awaited the time when the Lord raised his standard against the iniquity that came in like a flood; when she united with the Reorganized Church, and has since led a faithful and consistent Christian life, beloved by all who knew her. She passed away peaceably in the faith she had so long loved and suffered for, leaving a large family of children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren to mourn her departure. She went to her rest as a shock of corn fully ripe. May her rest be glorious. Funeral services September 30th, by Elder J. S. Patterson.

FISHER.—Near Palouse City, Whitmer county, W. T., September 12th, 1884, Oran Deane, son of Mr. Isaac and Sr. Lizzie Fisher, aged one year, one month and twenty-seven days. The loss of this sweet little boy very deeply afflicts the fond parents. Sister Fisher is a sister of our beloved brother and ever zealous worker, C. Scott. Funeral services by J. C. Clapp.

BALLY.—In York township, Steuben county, Indiana, June 4th, 1884, Peter Bally; he was born at Samback, Europe, June 26th, 1817.

SLAYTON.—At Sheridan, Nevada, September 21st, 1884, of inflammation of the bowels, Sister Elizabeth Slayton. She was born in Woodstock, Oxfordshire, England, November 5th, 1815; joined the church in London, in 1849, and emigrated to Utah in 1853. Dissatisfied there, she went, with a number of others, to Carson Valley, Nevada, in 1860. She joined the Reorganized Church on the 28th of September, 1873. She was firm in faith till the last. Her sufferings were great till within half an hour of her departure, when her pain ceased and she passed away in peace. Funeral service by Bro. David E. Jones. Thou art gone to the grave, but we will not deplore thee; For now all thy pain and afflictions are o'er. Ere long the archangel's trump shall awake thee, To dwell in the mansions of bliss evermore.

"Carthage is known in all civilized lands as the town in which Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, was cowardly slain while under the official and moral protection of officers of the law. The event grows year by year into larger and more distinct proportions as a deliberate, cowardly and uncalled for assassination of an unarmed and helpless man by a large mob of men who pretended that their mission was to defend him. The old stone jail, looking precisely as it did forty years ago, when Joseph Smith fell mortally wounded from one of its upper windows, is now, with a slightly addition, the comfortable residence of one of this city's best families."

TESTIMONIALS.
LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
Geo. MONTAGUE.

ERNO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds,
WM. ARND.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in bonds,
E. W. CARO, SEN.

REUNION MEETING.

THE Reunion lately held in Raglan township, Harrison county, Iowa, from October 4th to 12th inclusive, was in many respects the best meeting ever held by the Saints in the west. The only draw back in the matter was that a long season of rainy weather had soaked the roads to mud, submerged the hay lands of the Saints, and stopped many from reaching the grounds. Bro. J. C. Crabb, one of the committee assured us that the rains were beyond precedent. It rained up till Saturday the 4th. We succeeded in getting wet on the way from Mondamin to the ground, with others, on Saturday afternoon. We found several tents already up; and before night the square around the stand was enclosed with a cordon of canvass houses.

The grounds were commodious and pleasantly located. A running spring stream encircled the north side of the encampment with an excellent large spring at the east, and a well with pump at the west. Wood was plenty; hay scarce, owing to the difficulty of cutting and curing because of the rain. There was enough however when the abating rain suffered it to be hauled.

Although it was cool and chilly preaching was had at the stand on the evening of the 4th, and on Sunday the 5th the sun shone warm and pleasant. A fair attendance was had. It rained slightly during the night, but no session was lost on Monday.

Only one session was lost, Tuesday morning. It rained Monday night, but clouds passed off, the weather settled and from Wednesday morning till the close it could not have been finer.

The preaching was excellent in its way, fifty were baptized during the session; brethren Phineas Cadwell and J. S. Roth, performing that rite; a very good baptizing place having been provided near the grounds.

Among those baptized, thus confessing Christ as he is shown in the Scriptures were two of Bishop D. M. Gamet's sons, David and Solomon, men of good repute in their neighborhood: Daniel T. Shirk and M. F. Frick and wife, formerly Dunkards, also of excellent reputation where they lived; Charles Harding of Omaha, and several others including five of Bro. Henry Garner's family, all accessions of exemplary force in the regions where they live. Bro. Daniel Shirk was a preacher of some note among the Dunkards, and resides at Maple River Junction, Iowa. He was by direction of the Spirit set apart to the ministry, being ordained to the eldership. He is a man most cordially endorsed by all who know him, an earnest and honest seeker after the truths of God.

The moral tone of the meeting was most excellent; peace and her votaries were friends, and all vied in good humor to observe the proprieties of the meeting. The committees on ground, singing and police all did their work well, and left nothing that they could do, or get done, undone to make the occasion a success.

There were three or four cases of sickness in the camp, three of which were sick when brought there. Of these two died, one a child two years old, the other Sr. Dorothy Fry, aged eighty-four years and two months; who came, as she said, preferring to die among the Saints, if so be the good Lord pleased to take her.

There were one hundred and twenty-four tents in the camp, at noon on Saturday the 11th, and at noon on Sunday there were in addition five hundred and fifty-seven teams, representing an aggregate of over three thousand people, who were more than ordinarily quiet and orderly. Bro. Jairus Putney and James Emerson, of the police force, reported that they found no one captious, or inclined to show disrespect to the rules of the camp when spoken to.

The preaching on Sunday the 12th was done by Elder Joseph F. McDowell, for the forenoon service. His subject was "Our Theology." He presented his thoughts under the following heads: Our theology is theistical, a duality in the Godhead, but not a trinity or a unity, as usually stated. Our theology is Christian, in that it teaches Christ, and his doctrines. Our theology is moral, apostolic, spiritual, universal, dispensationally representative, patriarchal and monogamic. Bro. McDowell did well making his points clearly. The afternoon service was funeral in memory of a deceased child of Bro. Isaac and Sr. Elizabeth Shupe, of Magnolia, aged eleven years; services by Elder Joseph Smith. The evening service was by Bro. Charles Derry in a forceful presentation of the claims of the Reorganization to present its own faith and doctrines, and these to be judged on their merits, by the word of God.

The Chicago and Northwestern, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and the Council Bluffs and Sioux City Railways all gave us rates; one and one third fares; the fault of lateness of notice being the fault of the Saints and not that of the officers of these several roads. The officers of these roads when approached on the matter were courteous and kind, and at once made the necessary arrangements. The error was like that which occurs many times, we were too late starting about the business.

We are impressed that this Reunion has been productive of much good, and will be followed by good results everywhere its influence reached. All went home cheered, except those bereaved by the deaths that occurred, and these were comforted. Bro. Benjamin Homer of Galland's Grove had a daughter who was sick when he camped on the ground, and who had not recovered when taken thence; and of whom we have not heard since.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE are permitted to publish a copy of the minutes of a conference of the Church of Christ, the body of Saints who have existed at Independence, Missouri, under the leadership of Elder Granville Hedrick, and his successors. Bro. Stephen Maloney, Frederick C. Warnky and others have been trying to secure a friendly interchange of views on the topics upon which these Saints and the Reorganization disagree; which effort has been partially successful, as the minutes will show.

We give as a supplement this week four pages of the Danish paper Truth's Banner, Bro. Peter Andersen, Editor. It will be good if brethren will subscribe for it for themselves and for friends in Utah, or Denmark, Sweden and Norway. Terms are found in the paper.

By card from Bro. T. W. Smith dated September 28th, 1884, we learn that he would start for the Islands on October first, on the Tropic Bird, a vessel making periodical trips to the Society Islands and other parts. From others we learn that he sailed as stated. Bro. Burton is not yet able to get away; but we are informed by Bishop Blakeslee that he thinks he will soon be able to send him on his mission rejoicing. Funds come in slowly says the good bishop. "Times are hard" say the Saints.

Bro. Gordon E. Deuel baptized two at Webberville, Michigan, Bro. J. J. Cornish eight.

Bro. J. J. Cornish baptized six during the week ending October 8th.

On page 676 of present volume of Herald, second column and thirty-second line from the top, the word not should be at the beginning instead of at the end of line.

WE desire to call the attention of our readers to a valuable publication entitled "THE IOWA ROAD MANUAL, a digest of the Road Laws of Iowa," by John Scott, President of the Iowa State Road Improvement Association, an organization that has done excellent service in the cause of better highways in Iowa. The officers of this Association are:

President—John Scott, Nevada, Story County. Vice-Presidents—Jed Lake, Independence; Justus Clark, Red Oak; P. W. McManus, Davenport. Secretary and treasurer—Herbert S. Fairall, Iowa City. Assistant Secretary—J. J. Hamilton, Des Moines.

The MANUAL is a very valuable compendium and should be in the hands of every citizen of the State. The author himself says of it: "This Manual is for the information of officers and all who are interested in the construction and maintaining of the public highways. It is published at this time to afford the public easy access to the laws on this subject enacted by the Nineteenth General Assembly. The Iowa State Road Improvement Association, a voluntary organization of citizens in the interest of road reform, asked the General Assembly to pass an act which would encourage the adoption of larger road districts than were usual under the law heretofore in force, and to enable the Boards of County Supervisors to control a portion of the road funds for the betterment of leading highways. Some of the ideas of the Association were embodied in an act passed by the Nineteenth General Assembly, entitled "An Act to promote the Improvement of Highways," and published entire in this Manual. It is believed that the provisions of the act will enable the townships to provide a system of maintaining the highways with greatly increased efficiency, if it shall be adopted by them. As may be seen by inspection, it is to be left to the sense of the Township Trustees to "adopt the one highway district plan," or to proceed under the law heretofore in force."

The MANUAL is a handsomely printed book of seventy-six pages, and can be secured, free of cost, by enclosing two two-cent postage stamps to the author, Col. John Scott, Nevada, Iowa.

Correspondence.

SACRAMENTO, California,

October 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived here on the morning of the 30th ult., in good health, save a disagreeable headache, which a long ride in the cars invariably brings on. But I soon recovered from that. I found Bro. James Parr, who soon located me in very comfortable quarters, at his mother-in-law's, Sr. Millard's. On Sunday I met the Saints of the Sacramento Branch in their new chapel, and was most agreeably surprised at the enterprise and union of the few noble souls who have so bravely wrought, in rearing so commodious and comfortable a house in which to worship our God. They are deserving of much praise, and the very best of all praise has been given them, in that God meets with them and does bless them with his Spirit in the gifts of the gospel. I was blessed in preaching, and in the afternoon we had a blessed good time in prayer and testimony meeting. God's Holy Spirit was with us. Every heart was softened, every eye was moist, and the thrilling influence ran from soul to soul and all were made to rejoice. I spoke to the Saints again in the evening, and all felt it was "good to be a saint of latter days." My reception, Bro. Joseph, was all I could ask for, in kindness and love. May God's choicest blessings rest upon those loving hearts who so nobly welcomed me to my field of labor. I find the warm place I held in the hearts of the Saints when here before has never grown cold, and I thank the good Master, and shall try hard to still merit a warm corner in the hearts of all God's blessed people.

The conference of the Northern District of California convened last Friday morning at 10 o'clock, and lasted over Saturday and Sunday. All during the several sessions and preaching meetings, harmony and love prevailed; and in our prayer and testimony meetings the Spirit's sure testimony filled every one full of joy; and heartfelt prayers were constantly offered for the recovery of the sick and afflicted of God's people. It was a time I shall not soon forget; and when we came to separate, the firm clasp of the hand and moisture in the eye, told of hearts filled with the love of God toward each other.

Children of God, of the household of the blessed Jesus, may the bond become stronger, and ever hold the loving and faithful true to their covenant, that they may enter into the joy of our Lord, and be filled forevermore; abiding with God and his Christ; dwelling in the glorious light of their presence for ever and ever. Amen.

I remain as ever, your co-laborer, and brother in a two fold sense,

ALEX. H. SMITH.

EGREMONT, Ontario,

October 4th, 1884.

Dear Readers of the Herald:—This is a glorious work in which we are engaged, and how thankful we ought to be to our Heavenly Father for his kindness to us in bringing us out of darkness into the glorious light of the truth. And how we ought to strive and pray, that we may be enabled to keep our covenant that we have made with God,—striving to live at peace one with another; ever keeping the words of our Lord in mind, Watch and pray; for we have great need to do both, for the subtle tempter is ever on the watch to try and lead us off the straight road; and the nearer we keep to God, and the more we are united in spirit, the more his power is weakened. We will be tried, for the Lord will have a tried people, and it is through much tribulation we are to enter the kingdom. But God's grace will be sufficient for us if we trust in him, and strive to do those things that will be pleasing in his sight. If we have erred in the past, let us try and take a lesson from the past, and do better in the future; for, as I heard a good brother say once, it is human to err, but Godlike to forgive. We can try and bear with one another as God for Christ's sake bears with us; and when we meet together we can try and show that we do love one another by being kind one to another—sharing each other's joys and sorrows: for every heart has its care, and it seems to lighten the burden when we feel that we have the love and sympathy of our brethren and sisters. Let us pray for one another, that we may all be upheld, that we may be enabled to live our religion, that we may show our love to our Lord and Master by striving to do his will. Then we wont need to say to the world we are God's people, for we will be as a light set on a hill that can not be hid—they will know by our holy lives that we are. And when those called of God to preach the gospel come among us, they will be cheered and encouraged to go on and battle with the world. There are great inducements held out to us; many blessings here and a great reward hereafter.

Dear Saints, we know this work is true. Then let us improve the time, so that when the Master comes we may hail his coming with joy and not with fear and shame.

ELSIE McLAREN.

LONDON EAST, Ontario,

October 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I have just come to this place from Alliston, where the conference of this London District was held on the 4th and 5th. We had a pleasant session. Peace and good will prevailed. Brn. J. Luff and W. J. Smith met with us, both feeling well. Bro. Luff is to remain at Alliston and continue meetings for the week each evening, and over one Sabbath. Bro. W. J. Smith goes to River View and to Proten. Bro. McIntosh is to remain at home for a short time, then to return to the Cameron Branch, in Victoria county. I organized it September 8th, with twenty-nine members, four have been baptized since, making thirty-three in all. Two of the last baptized were my brother Amos H. Lake and his wife. He has been a Methodist local preacher for thirty-five years. He has been called to the office of Elder and so ordained; and Sunday, the 28th of September, my health being such that I could not fill my appointments, he filled it with liberty of the Spirit, which was satisfactory to all in waiting. Quite a change in that town and vicinity since the 20th of July. That evening the first gospel sermon was preached in the town in the Methodist church, by Bro. McIntosh, and on Monday evening I preached, and at the close of that meeting the warfare commenced. The weapons used by the enemy were, first turning us out of their church, and circulating all manner of lies and falsehoods that were possible to circulate; second to write slanderous pieces to the papers printed in Lindsey; and to cap the climax, a drop letter was handed me by the post master, purporting to be the expression of the people of Cameron, which is as follows:

CAMERON, August 10th, 1884.

To John Lake & McIntosh Sirs, take notice that the people of this vicinity have firmly resolved to tolerate your presence here no longer nor your accursed doctrine! we despise Brigam Young and all his followers we only want one lawful wife, go back to Uta as fast as you can on receipt of this or there is tar and feathers enough ready for ye—ye have duped a few poor ignorant creatures that know no better whose former lives well corresponds with mormonism—let this suffice pollute no longer our country nor our waters by your accursed presence, nor let any more mormons show their face here again we wish not to defile our hands with your polluted carcasses unless ye persist in staying longer than ye read this epistle remember ye have defiled our water enough. But all the water in Sturgeon Lake would not cleanse the set you got there.

CAMERONEANS.

But we afterwards learned it was not the voice of a large majority of the citizens, but a few of the church members, who feared their craft was in danger, "and the great goddess Diana was going to be spoken against." But we remained and endeavored to fight out the battle in a lawful manner, using the word of God as the weapon of our warfare, and when the time came for me to leave there, I was led to exclaim with the poet, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow;" for his word had been blessed and some of the fruits had been gathered, and more are believing, and I trust will be gathered ere long.

I am on my way to the Blenheim conference to be held on the 11th and 12th instant, and then on as wisdom directs. Will close for this time. Love to you and all friends.

Yours in the one faith,

JOHN H. LAKE.

BARTON, Labette Co., Kansas.

October, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I have been here seven days; have preached six times, and we can say of a truth that God has been with us. To-day I go to Cherry Creek, Cherokee county; preach there to-night, where I intend to preach for a week after our conference. I used to preach there many years ago. I have had an excellent time on this trip. It will be four weeks to-morrow since I left home.

Yours in Christ,

F. C. WARNKY.

HAMBURG, Missouri,

September 8th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—Well you see by this that I am out again and that I am not idle. I have preached here three times, and yesterday I baptized one man, a Mr. Joshua Ward. The Saints here are all trying, as I believe, to do their duty, and to live their religion as far as they can. Bro. Nicholas Taylor is untiring in his efforts to build up this branch of the church, as also are others of the officers of the branch. I shall preach here to-night and then shall go elsewhere. My faith in the ultimate triumph of truth over error is increasing day by day.

Your brother in the faith,

C. STCLAIR.

FALKS STORE, Idaho,

October 3d, 1884.

Editor Herald:—There are but few Saints here; what few there are, are Danish, and are good faithful members. They belong to the Malad Valley Branch, and their president is in Nevada, so that chances for meetings are rather slim. There is, however, one old brother who preaches to them once in a while; he is quite old and his English is very broken, but I think the Lord will bless him for the effort he makes.

Perhaps some of the members of the Union Center Branch would like to know how their stray member is getting along. As far as worldly goods are concerned we fare rather poorly, as we had nearly all our household goods burned up. I fare about as poorly in the way of spiritual food, as I do not have any chance to attend meeting. I stand nearly alone, and in a wild country; it is hard to retain any faith with such surroundings, and sometimes I think the Lord has deserted me entirely, but the fault I suppose is in myself; if I would try harder the Lord would bless me more. He has blessed me abundantly in the way of health. I have had no sickness to speak of, in my family since I have been in this State.

I ask an interest in your prayers, that I may not fall by the way, and that my husband may in some future day walk beside me in this the path of righteousness. I remain as ever your sister in Christ,

CELIA PADEN.

PROVO CITY, Utah, Sept. 28th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—We are getting along as well as we can in Provo, considering the silent opposition we have; for they will not come out openly and discuss with us, but will bring every influence, aside from discussion, to bear upon us. I think that our cause is gaining in the hearts of the people, for they think for themselves to-day; and I hope to see the time shortly, that they will act for themselves; then good bye to Brighamism with all its attendant evils. I feel myself getting pretty feeble, but hope to continue to defend the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, even if it is called apostasy. The watchword of to-day here is: "More wives; without them no salvation."

Believe me to remain your brother in the gospel,

JAMES GOFF.

316 Capital Avenue,

LANSING, Michigan,

October 14th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—Bro. Gordon Deuel has been preaching here some three weeks, and has baptized, up to this date, some seven persons. He leaves this week for the conference at Vassar next Saturday and Sunday. I should very much like to attend the conference in the southern part of this state, if I can find out when and where it is to be. What the Lord will accomplish in this part of the state remains to be seen. The instructions of Jesus, "Be ye therefore wise as serpents and as harmless as doves," if strictly observed in the name and Spirit of Jesus, may, and doubtless will, accomplish a great deal.

Yours in the love of Christ,

HIRAM RATHBUN.

DETROIT CITY, Minnesota,

Oct. 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Saints here are all alive in the work. We had a good meeting here last Sunday; a good degree of the Holy Spirit being with us. Bro. Nutt has just returned from Clitheral, where he left the saints all feeling well. He baptized two while there, and is going to visit some of the new places that he opened up this summer. Our quarterly conference is to be held on the second and third of November, at Oak Grove school house, Girard Township, Otter Tail Co. Minn; which we are all looking forward to with good intent. Hope to see all the saints there that can possibly come. With love to all, I remain your sister in the gospel,

E. J. PARR.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

October 10th.—There were 121 new cases of cholera and seventy deaths in Italy yesterday.

Only four deaths from cholera occurred in Spain yesterday.

A dispatch from Gen. Briere de l'Isle, under date of Oct., 8th, says: "Gen. Negrier is pursuing the Chinese toward the Village of Yentke. I have ordered that Kep, the town where Gen. Negrier's forces had an engagement with the Chinese, be strongly occupied and the Loo Chuan River and other outlets closed. Western and Southern Tonquin are tranquil. The Chinese bands have been driven off and their chief killed. Our fleet is closely watching the coast. I will assume immediate command of the troops. I am about to leave Hanoi."

Three Russian frigates will sail for China Saturday.

It is quite probable that the Tories will compromise with the Gladstone party in England on the Franchise Bill.

During the year ending July 30th, 1884, the sales, entries, and selections of public lands aggregated 26,531,170 acres, an increase over the previous year of 8,101,137 acres. The total receipts from the disposal of the public and Indian lands last year were $12,779,130, an increase of $4,392,750 as compared with 1882-'83.

October 11th.—The British Government proposes to establish a protectorate over Southern New Guinea and some of the adjacent islands.

There were 252 new cases of cholera and 117 deaths in Italy, against 121 new cases and seventy deaths the previous day. In the City of Naples there were forty-two deaths.

The low price of wheat and farm produce in Great Britain and Ireland threatens the ruin of the landowners, as rents must certainly be further lowered, and land can hardly be sold at any price. This is especially true of England.

Lord Salisbury delivered an impassioned speech at Kelso, attacking the Liberal scheme for the redistribution of Parliamentary seats. He said that it disclosed the purpose of the Liberals to increase the representation of their borough strongholds at the expense of the rural Tory constituencies. The scheme, he said, would not be acceptable to his party. It is more obnoxious even than the Franchise Bill. The speech of the Tory leader is interpreted as indicating a determination on the part of the Tories of the House of Lords not to compromise with the Liberals.

A messenger from Ambukol reports that, after Gen. Gordon returned to Khartoum, a boat with forty Europeans and Egyptians accompanied by five negroes and three servants, grounded at Salamat. The Sheiks offered hospitality to the party, and enticed them to their houses, when they massacred all but fourteen, who are now prisoners. It is unknown whether any Europeans are among the survivors. A messenger sent out by Col. Kitchener has returned. He confirms the report of Stewart's murder, and says that the only survivors are four black slaves. All the Europeans, including M. Nicolai, the Greek Consul, were killed.

The ultimatum has been sent to the Transvaal Government by Great Britain. It recalls the repeated violations of the treaty and acts of violence committed by the Boers beyond the boundary lines of the Transvaal country. It demands of the Transvaal Government due satisfaction for these acts, the repression of the Boer filibusters, and the thorough observance of the articles of the last convention entered into by both countries. It is reported that the British War Office is already preparing an expedition of 8,000 men to proceed to South Africa, a portion of which will be drawn from the East India army. The withdrawal of the proclamation annexing the Montcias territory is not expected to alter the position of affairs, as the Boers continue to hold their grip upon the lands.

Admiral Courbet telegraphs from Kelung as follows: I am erecting defences for the troops to occupy at the port and mines. They will take several days to complete. Landing parties from Admiral Lespes' squadron at Tamsui reconnoitered the posts from which Chinese torpedoes were fired. They found the posts defended by a large number of infantry ambushed in dense thickets. An engagement took place. Six members of the reconnoitering parties were killed, including a naval Lieutenant. The harbor is defended by a line of torpedoes only. The shallowness of the water prevents the approach of large vessels. The torpedoes are close to shore, and this renders dragging for them dangerous. I am making an effective blockade at Tamsui. I am also blockading Fai-wau-foo and Ja-kan-kan on the west coast of Formosa, the only points available on the island for landing reinforcements."

Several members of the British Association who have returned from their visit to Canada and the United States complain of the niggardly conduct of the Philadelphians into whose hands they fell while visiting the American scientists. They say that publicans, cab-drivers, and others took outrageous advantage of their innocence and swindled them unmercifully in hotel and other charges. On the other hand, Prof. Goldwin Smith writes indignantly to a Toronto newspaper regarding the personnel of the British scientific excursion party. He alleges that it was composed largely of Manchester "bagmen," who came to America to sell goods for the firms they represent, and that they were really conducting trade under cover of philosophy.

The Utah Anti-Mormon Territorial Convention was held at Salt Lake City Thursday. Capt. Ransford Smith of Ogden, who was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention, and whose anti-polygamy resolution was smothered in that body, was nominated for Delegate to Congress.

Between twelve and one o'clock to-day a terrific explosion took place in that portion of the new Parliament buildings now being erected adjoining the corner of the department buildings on the Grande Allee, Quebec, Ontario. Those in the vicinity saw a shower of stones and timber flying around in a lively manner. Large blocks of cut stone were hurled about to a distance of hundreds of feet. Fortunately, the explosion occurred when the men were away to dinner, or a frightful loss of life would have resulted. The only parties near the building were one Martel, who was seriously injured, and Charlebois, the contractor. A piece of stone a quarter of an inch thick struck Martel on the neck, and imbedded itself in his flesh. This piece has since been abstracted, but other fragments still remain. Charlebois was thrown to the ground by the force of the shock, but, with the exception of a few bruises, he was uninjured. Great excitement prevailed, and all persons in the neighborhood were panic stricken. The explosion shook the whole city. Soon after investigations began another explosion occurred, which caused a hasty stampede from the place. The damage done is considerable.

According to the most recent statistics the population of Mexico is now 10,000,000 and there are 146 cities, 372 towns, 4,186 villages, 5 missions, 5,689 haciendas, and 14,605 ranches, besides 2,213 collections or groups of houses, tabulated as congregations, barrios, rancherias, etc. The value of private real estate, rural, is $773,000,000; private real estate in cities, $2,568,036,000; cattle of all kinds belonging to individuals, $126,000,000; property belonging to the nation, $240,000,000; the total real estate not including mines, coasts, bays, lakes, rivers, etc., being $3,549,060,000. The agricultural products are valued at $177,451,086, and the industrial products at $14,009,000.

October 12th.—Gen. Wolseley has sent dispatches to the War Office in London complaining that his advance has been paralyzed by the failure of the commissariat and transport service. The railways have broken down, the camel corps has been without camels, the equipments are rotten, and the stores utterly inadequate.

The election agitation is increasing. A meeting to have been addressed by Prof. Virchow was dissolved by the authorities on account of an error in the formal notice of the meeting sent to the police. Influential Conservative groups are agitating against Sloecker and Wagner, anti-Jewish leaders. During Socialist riots at Brandenburg the mob tore up a pavement and attacked the police. The military was called out. Several persons were wounded on both sides. Many arrests have been made.

October 13th.—A mob at Senzeilles, Belgium, in retaliation for the closing of the girls' public school attacked the Communal Council and wrecked the priest's house.

In the engagement between the Chinese and French at Kep, in Tonquin, the Celestials lost 1,000 men, including three Generals. The French troops behaved gallantly. Their loss was slight.

England protests against the searching of English vessels by French cruisers off the Chinese coast, but the French do not seem disposed to give much satisfaction. The relations between the two nations over the matter are by no means friendly.

The St. James Gazette, an English Tory organ, announces editorially that a grave crisis is threatened in India which may result in the overthrow of British supremacy in that country. Through the nepotism, favoritism, and chicanery of English officials the natives have been driven almost into revolt. The condition of affairs is as bad as in the time of Warren Hastings, and Russia is taking advantage of the natives' discontent.

A new religious revolution is threatened in Russia. The Czar has for many generations been recognized as the religious as well as the political head of the State. In the autonomy of Russia he is the Pope of Popes as well as the King of Kings. No Pope or metropolitan can hold his office without the seal of the Czar, and the Czarina at a coronation ceremony kneels to the Czar, not in his capacity as an Emperor, but as the Vicegerent of God. Now, however, a sect of dissenters have risen which threatens to overthrow this belief in divine selection. The dissenters have their headquarters in Moscow, and they have thousands of adherents throughout the Empire. They are not Nihilists, and they do not seek to subvert the existing Government. They simply discard the religious ritual used by the loyalists, and they deny the religious supremacy of the Czar.

Gerrati, President of the Tribunal of Commerce, at Naples Italy, died to-day of cholera. The Cardinal of San Felice has sent a gold cross presented him by the Pope to assist the sufferers in Catania. Reports to-day from the cholera-infected district of Italy, show 239 fresh cases and 137 deaths, including 115 fresh cases and 51 deaths at Naples. The Official Gazette announces the cholera epidemic ended. The Queen of Portugal sent $2,000 to Naples and Humbert $4,000 to Genoa for the relief of sufferers.

Native merchants at Dongola state that Gen. Gordon, Mr. Power, and Col. Stewart are still at Khartoum, and that provisions are plentiful.

The Egyptian Government has officially prohibited the sale of slaves.

The North German Gazette says the idea of a Congo Congress in Berlin is warmly approved by the Governments of France, Belgium, Spain, Holland, Austria, and Russia. The Gazette also states that Germany recently took steps in London to obtain security for German commercial interests in Africa in the event of British annexation of what is now unoccupied territory. A friendly exchange of views has thus far resulted in the decision that Great Britain shall only place the southern coast of New Guinea and adjacent islands under British protection, and that entente cordiale may be hoped in regard to any rival interests of both England and Germany elsewhere.

The correspondent of the Times telegraphs that the news of the defeat of Admiral Lespes and the French fleet at Tamsui is confirmed. The Chinese, by hiding in brushwood, suffered some 600 of the French forces to land and come within easy range of their guns before they appeared. The Chinese General Tso then led the attack upon the rear of the French, and the troops became panic-stricken. The Chinese killed seventy men and captured one gun. They also beheaded twenty-two French corpses, but desisted from that horrible work upon the protest of the British Consul. The Chinese loss was 200 killed and wounded. The fighting lasted five hours, at the end of which time the French retired to their ships.

The closing of the university at Kieff, Russia, greatly incenses the educated classes of Russia. The excitement among the students in that country is increasing. It is reported that the University at Charkoff has been closed. The Russian Government has resolved to proceed against the rebellion of the students with the utmost vigor.

A caravan from Kordofan confirms the report that El Mahdi, hearing that the provisions at Khartoum are giving out, is gathering a strong force to invest the place and starve the garrison into submission. During the last twenty-four hours 140 fresh cases of cholera and 104 deaths were reported in Italy, including 57 cases and 43 deaths at Naples.

The State of Guatemala, in Central America, was recently invaded by a small party, consisting chiefly of political refugees, who crossed the Mexican frontier and advanced a short distance in the country. The attempt was frustrated, and peace now reigns. The Legislative Assembly of Panama met Friday, the 3d inst. Dr. Cervera, the President of the State, presented his resignation. Although a revolution is going on, the people in the city don't seem to trouble themselves about it. At Farfan, three miles from Panama, 300 men are assembled in arms under command of Ruiz, the late pretender to the Presidency. As yet he has not molested any one. There seems to be a prospect that the State Convention will effect an understanding between the opposing parties.

The largest exploring party now in Africa is that of Maj. Carvalho, who was finely equipped by the Portuguese Government last June, and dispatched from Angola, with a force of 400 native carriers, to visit the dominions of the Muata-Yanvo, about 500 miles south of the Congo. He is the bearer of splendid presents to that Central African potentate, and hopes to open up his country, which is said to be as large as Germany, to travelers and traders. Only two educated Europeans, Drs. Pogge and Buchner, have succeeded in reaching Kawende, the capital of the Muata-Yanvo, who would not permit them to pass through his country, but compelled them to retrace their steps. Three hundred Chiefs owe him allegiance. In territorial extent his Empire is the largest in Central Africa, but it is not so densely populated as Mtesa's Uganda, and is supposed to have only 2,000,000 inhabitants.

Oct. 15.—Reports from the electoral districts to Windhorst, leader of the Centre, state that the organization has secured a complete and certain hold upon all its present seats in the German Parliament, and expects to make gains.

Ruiz, the revolutionist, of Panama, S. A., hoisted the Colombian flag over the steamer Alajueta after capturing the vessel. He coaled the steamer from an American launch and then steamed up the coast. The Alajueta is filled with soldiers. The State Government officers seized the Morrow after Ruiz had released her, and, putting on board 150 men and two Gatling-guns, have gone in pursuit of Ruiz. The Colombian Government has ordered the recapture of the Alajueta at all hazards.

The Government of Peru has a dispatch announcing the taking of Trujillo from Cacerists after heavy fighting.

After receiving a threatening and offensive letter from the Papal delegate, at Buenos Ayres, the Government ordered him to leave the country within twenty-four hours.

A number of revolutionists seized the British tug Morro last night at Panama, and compelled the Captain to take them to Costa Rica. The steamer Alajueta was also captured by revolutionists. The tug Morro was subsequently released. The steamer Alajueta is well armed. The local Government made no resistance to the rebels.

Gen. De Lisle telegraphs from Chu On, Upper Loochuan, as follows: "Col. Donnier, after a brilliant engagement Friday, carried the heights commanding the fortress of Chu, formerly the location of a large intrenched Chinese camp, which was defended by casemated forts. The Chinese forces were very large, and their losses during the engagement heavy. Saturday they attempted to assume the offensive, but our artillery strewed the ground with Chinese bodies. After losing all their positions the Chinese fled toward Lang Sou, halting near Phutruong and Khauh. The French loss is twenty killed, including one officer, and ninety wounded. Two officers were wounded. Our troops were animated with the greatest ardor. The Chinese engaged were part of the best troops of the Empire, perfectly armed, and maneuvered in the European style. The Chinese losses are 3,000 killed, including their chief commander. The Chinese invasion of Tonquin has been arrested in the direction of Lang Sou." Official advices of the French Government state the losses of the French in the recent defeat at Tamsui, in the Island of Formosa, were sixteen killed and forty-nine wounded. Admiral Courbet is reinforcing the French squadron before Tamsui, Formosa, and preparing to renew the attack upon that town. He has sent Admiral Lespes back to Kelung. Gen. Briere de l'Isle advises the Government that any further advance in Tonquin will be imprudent until the French troops are heavily reinforced.

During the twenty-four hours there were 235 new cases and 110 deaths from cholera in Italy. Naples had ninety-five new cases and forty-nine deaths.

Oct. 16.—It is announced that Bismarck has acceded to the demands of Granville that the business of the Congo Conference be limited to the regulation of commerce of nations with the Congo country. The French Government insists that the trade of the Niger River country be also considered by the conference.

During the twenty-four hours there were 235 new cases and 110 deaths from cholera in Italy. Naples had ninety-five new cases and forty-nine deaths.

Oct. 11.—A fire which broke out in a gristmill at Fairbury, Ill., at an early hour this morning spread rapidly, destroying several business blocks and houses. The total loss is estimated at $150,000. Walton Bros., mill-owners and general merchants, suffered heavily. Their loss is estimated at $125,000. sunk almost immediately after. Her Captain, engineer, and four men were drowned.

October 12th.—All the syndicate mines are on fire at Nelsonville Ohio, with the exception of Nos. 3 and 7. Special efforts are being made to extinguish the fire. W. A. Shoemaker & Co.'s hoppers burned last night. The two mines of the Columbus & Hocking Coal & Iron Company at Straitsville, set on fire last night, have been burning all day. It is impossible to get to where the fires are to put them out. Loss by fire at Baraboo, Wis., $3,000. Liberty, W. Va., $150,000.

Near Hunker's Station, Pa., two trains collided, killing one man and injuring three others.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Four thousand unemployed men held a meeting at Glasgow, Scotland, October 10th, and passed resolutions demanding assistance from the local authorities.

The stove manufacturers of Peoria, Ill., have compromised with the molders and a strike has been averted.

Dilworth, Porter & Co., spike manufacturers of Pittsburg, Pa., will not insist on the reduction of employees' wages proposed some time ago.

According to the agricultural reports for October the condition of the corn crop throughout the United States is better than it has been for five years.

The aggregate of clearances for the twenty-six leading clearing-houses of the United States during the week ending Saturday shows a decrease, compared with the figures for the corresponding week of last year, of 33.2 per cent. The decrease outside New York was 13.2 per cent. In Chicago the decrease was 11.8 per cent.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British corn trade says: The weather has been stormy and unusually cold. The rainfall improved the seed-beds for the crop of 1885, but has prevented thrashing, thus lessening farmers' deliveries and enabling sellers to maintain their rates. Sales of English wheat the last week, 73,368 quarters at 32s 2d, against 71,060 quarters at 40s 8d the corresponding week last year. Trade in foreign wheat is slow. Waterside stocks have increased, compared with 1883, but the floating bulk is decreasing, owing to the action of American and Russian exporters. Cargoes off coast have not improved. There were seven arrivals. Three cargoes were withdrawn, three sold (including one of No. 1 California at 35 shillings), and four remained, including two American. Fifteen cargoes are overdue. Wheat on passage is dull. Prices are above buyers' views. Flour is quiet and steady. The increase in imports checks trade. Maize is scarce and higher. Oats are firm and three pence higher.

IS THE ORDINANCE OF BAPTISM OF DIVINE APPOINTMENT.

BY ELDER CHARLES DERRY.

THAT the ordinance of baptism is taught in the Scriptures none will deny. The forerunner of Christ received the appellation of "John the Baptist," from the fact that he did baptize with water. It is declared of him, "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." John 1:6. Again, "In those days came John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness of Judea, saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. * * * Then went out to him Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him, confessing their sins." Matt. 3:1-6. Again, "John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." Mark 1:4. Luke says, "The word of God came unto John, the son of Zachariah, in the wilderness, and he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins."

From the foregoing scriptures we learn that John was sent by God to preach repentance and baptism for the remission of sins. Hence the word he preached and the ordinance he administered were of divine appointment. Christ acknowledged their divinity when he said, "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness," and was baptized of him in Jordan. Matt. 3:13, 17. He further testifies to the divinity of John's baptism when he says: "All they that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John; but the Pharisees and Lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him." Luke 7:29, 30. Many contend that baptism was a Jewish ordinance, and that John taught it as such. We answer, John did not administer it because it was a Jewish rite, but because it was a divine rite commanded him of God. Moreover, it was not the Jewish Church he was sent to prepare them for; but for the kingdom of God, as witness his cry, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

Having proved that John's baptism was divine, we will now consider the teaching and practice of the Great Teacher on this subject. We have already seen his endorsement of John's baptism, and his humble submission thereto, and we may now consider also, how his Heavenly Father endorsed him by baptizing him with the Holy Ghost saying, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." It is not likely that this acknowledgement would have been made, if Christ had rejected this ordinance, as taught and practiced by the man whom God had sent to prepare his way; because he would by that rejection have treated with contempt the order of him who sent him. Here he set an example for the children of men to follow, and as he is the Great Teacher, we may expect his precepts and example to harmonize with each other. For he alone is a true teacher, whose example illustrates his teaching.

When Nicodemus came to be instructed, Jesus addressed him in the most emphatic language, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God." It is evident from the answer of Nicodemus, that he did not understand the nature of the new birth, and he asks how it can be. "Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the Kingdom of God." John 3:1-6. In Jesus' own baptism we find an illustration of this birth of water and of the Spirit. He was born of water, or baptized, i. e., buried in water, and came up straightway out of the water, which constituted the birth of water; and immediately afterwards was overshadowed by the Holy Ghost. Matt. 3:16. Thus we find the Son of God teaches the baptism of water and of the Spirit. John further declares, that Christ baptized. John 3:22, 23, 26. Is it reasonable to suppose that the Son of God would administer an ordinance not divinely appointed. Remember, that his mission as the Great High Priest was to minister in divine things only; hence we may safely consider every act of his as being in accordance with divine rules. But we will listen to his own words on the subject:

"I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."—John 6:38. "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." John 7:6. "I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me commandment what I should say and what I should speak."—John 12:49.

Here then, is Christ's authority for all he said and did, from which it is evident that the ordinances he instituted, as well as his teachings, are divine. Hence baptism was indeed from heaven, and of divine appointment; for he not only taught and practiced it himself, but he commissioned his disciples to teach and practice it after he was risen from the dead. Matthew says:

"Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."—Matt. 28:18, 19.

Mark says:

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16:15, 16.

Will any one doubt the divinity of the ordinance of baptism, and yet claim to believe in the Holy Scriptures? If such an one can be found, his blindness is wilful, and he is under condemnation for not believing the word of God.

We will now consider the second question, What is baptism for? John's cry was, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand;" hence, his duty was to prepare the people to receive that kingdom. The means of preparation were, "Repentance and baptism for remission of sins." When he whose way John came to prepare, commenced his teaching, he said, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the Kingdom of God;" thus showing that he like John, understood baptism as one of the preparatory means for citizenship in that kingdom; hence one of its purposes is to effect adoption into the kingdom of God. This will be better understood when we assert, what all professing Christians admit, namely, that by means of the fall, mankind became aliens from the family, or kingdom of God; and that Christ, through the gospel, proposes to restore man into that kingdom, and thus deliver them from the thralldom of Satan, and enable them to become the children of God, and heirs of life and immortality. And baptism being an ordinance of the gospel, was the rite by which they were to be adopted into the kingdom. Hence the force of the words of Jesus, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." The baptism of water, and of the Spirit, is the means of entrance; but before a man can enter in, his sins must be forgiven. Therefore, "John preached the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." Couple this with the above saying of the Son of God and we find that by the same means that man's sins are remitted, he is made a citizen of that glorious kingdom. This truth is recognized by the beloved apostle when he says:

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not appear what we shall be."—1 John 3:2.

The Apostle Peter understood baptism in this sense when he said:

"Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

The Holy Ghost is the "spirit of adoption,"—the seal of adoption,—and "the earnest" of the children's inheritance, (Rom. 8:14-16; Eph. 1:13, 14), which is given only to those who thus obey the law of adoption. Ananias understood it in this way when he commanded Saul:

"And now, why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."—Acts 22:16.

These instances are in perfect accord with the divine commission and promise, as found in the last chapter of Mark, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." No man is in a saved condition as long as he is out of the kingdom of God; nor can any man be in a saved condition whose sins are not forgiven. Hence, we repeat, that the same act that makes him a child of God, washes away his sins, sets him free from the law of sin and death, and gives him "the answer of a good conscience toward God." (1 Pet. 3: 21.)

For he is "saved by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost. (Titus 3: 5.)

Thus the scriptures abundantly teach that baptism is for the remission of sins, and adoption into the kingdom of God.

We will now answer the third question, What is the mode of baptism as taught in the Scriptures? I might present an array of testimony from the most learned men of the last seventeen centuries, including the greatest minds of our century, and that, too, from men whose practice is opposed to our view of baptism, that would astonish those who have never examined the question, showing that the primary and general meaning of the word baptize, is to dip, plunge, or immerse. But as I am writing for plain men and women, I shall content myself with bringing forth the word of the Lord, and leave every one to draw his own conclusions from the word. The first fact we shall notice is, that John the Baptist baptized in the River Jordan. In view of this fact I submit, that had sprinkling or pouring been the mode, there would have been no necessity for baptizing in Jordan, or any other river; for a very little water would serve for sprinkling or pouring on the heads of the multitude who were baptized; nor would there be any display of superior wisdom in going into the river in order to have a little water sprinkled or poured upon them. The second fact I shall notice is, that John also baptized in Aenon, near to Salim, because there was much water there.—John 3: 23. Much water could not be needed for sprinkling or pouring. Third. "Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water."—Matt. 3: 16. This is evidence that he went down into the water, which he certainly would not have done had sprinkling or pouring been the mode. Fourth. When Jesus taught Nicodemus the necessity of being born again, he said, "Except a man be born of water," etc. It is well known that before a birth there must be a concealment; but there can be no concealment in water only by burial. Jesus was buried in water and brought forth out of it; and the Apostle Paul, speaking of baptism says:

"Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also [being raised up] should walk in newness of life."—Rom. 6: 4.

He tells the Colossians they were "buried with Christ in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him."—Col. 2: 12. Now this could not have been true if Christ was sprinkled, or if a little water was poured upon him. Therefore, water baptism consists in being buried in water, and rising out of the water. Paul, in further speaking of baptism, says: "If we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."—Rom. 6: 5. Now, what resemblance does sprinkling or pouring bear to planting? If we plant anything, we bury it; but it would be absurd to say anything was planted when only a little water is sprinkled or poured upon it. But Paul says, "If we have been planted together in the likeness of his death," how is that figure carried out in baptism? We answer, that as Christ was dead prior to burial, so we must also be dead to sin, "Our old man is crucified with him." Sin is no longer operative in us. We are dead to its influence; but when Christ was dead, he was buried; and to carry out the figure, we must be buried too. Sprinkling or pouring a few drops of water on us, does not bury or plant us, but laying us beneath the watery element as Christ was laid, does bury us; and if we are truly dead unto sin when baptized, we are planted in the likeness of Christ's death,—buried with him in baptism,—then we have the assurance that we shall also arise in the likeness of his resurrection. From this teaching of Paul, I learn that baptism was intended to remind us of the death and resurrection of Christ, that by his death we are set free from sin, if we obey his gospel, and through his resurrection we are to be filled with life and immortality, if we continue to walk in newness of life. By the act of burial in baptism, we signify that we are dead unto sin; and our rising again, signifies our new life in Christ. Sprinkling or pouring bears no resemblance to Christ's death, burial, or resurrection; hence is not the baptism referred to by Paul; but immersion bears an exact resemblance to all these when the candidate is truly dead in sin. And then, and then only, are we "planted in the likeness of his death." And then, and then only, have we an assurance of coming forth in the likeness of his resurrection.

Some urge that baptism was substituted for circumcision, and that as infants were circumcised, so children should be sprinkled. Listen to Paul: "In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision, made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ; buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."—Col. 2: 11, 12. The assertion that baptism was substituted in the place of circumcision is groundless. Circumcision was instituted for the Jewish Church; but Jesus came to usher in the Kingdom of God; and all its ordinances are peculiar to itself. Baptism was the law of adoption into the Kingdom of God, and not into the Jewish Church; hence not a substitute for anything in the Jewish Church; but Paul is pleased to call it circumcision; because as in circumcision the foreskin was taken away, so in baptism we put away the sins of the flesh. But he calls it "The circumcision of Christ; buried with him in baptism," thus showing that the circumcision of Christ was the putting away of the sins of the flesh, being buried with Christ (as Christ was buried) in baptism. Surely neither sprinkling nor pouring is burying with Christ in baptism. But Paul shows in this passage, that being buried with him in baptism, is the circumcision of Christ; because in that circumcision they put away their sins and became new creatures in Christ Jesus. And this truth is certainly confirmed by the teaching and practices of Christ and all his apostles. When Philip baptized the eunuch, they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch, and he baptized him. The inspired historian is very particular in his description of this baptism, as though he foresaw that men would quibble about the mode. Not only did the eunuch go down into the water, but Philip also. Had sprinkling, or pouring been the mode, would they have gone down into it? Does not common sense revolt at the idea? But in order to destroy the effect of this statement, some sneeringly assert that if going down into the water proves that the eunuch was immersed, Philip also was immersed because he went down also. Such miserable shifts show to what inconsistencies men are driven who fight against the plain word of God. Baptism must be administered to the candidate, and since it is immersion, or burial in water, it can not be administered out of the water; hence the administrator and the candidate must of necessity go down into the water; just as Philip and the eunuch did, and as John and Jesus did. But another silly quibble here meets us—that the word "into" does not necessarily mean into, but at, or close to the water. The ground for this quibble is this. Jesus is said to have gone at various times "into a mountain." They urge it would be impossible to go into a mountain; hence it is not to be understood as "Jesus going into a mountain" but to it, or close by; therefore we are not to understand that Philip and the eunuch went into the water, but to it, close by. They forget that there are caves often found in mountains into which not only Jesus, but hundreds, could go. Elijah went and dwelt in a cave in Mount Horeb, 1 Kings 19: 8, 9, and undoubtedly there are caves in the mountains round about Jerusalem, since it is distinctly said Jesus went up into a mountain. This subterfuge of men who deny God's truth would not be worthy of notice but for the fact that it falls in pious tones from the lips of men who are looked up to for light and truth, while others hang upon their sayings as upon the veritable word of God. The Dutchman's criticism of one of these sprinkling divines is in point. If the word into does not mean into but "close to, or by, then the terrors of hell are taken away, for the wicked will not be turned into hell, but close to or near by;" but the same meaning must also be taken when we are told the righteous will be received into glory. It must signify that they will be received or enter close to, or by the glory that is prepared. But such wrestings of the word of God could only be practiced by men who are afraid of the truth, and who see their craft is in danger. "The word of the Lord endureth forever."

His Prophetic Mission Vindicated, and the Divine Origin of the Book of Mormon Defended and Maintained. Paper covers, 200 pages. 35
 This is a reply by Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Adventist Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, especially; and it is a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon.

REUNION SERVICES.

OCT. 4TH TO 12TH, 1884.

ACCORDING to previous appointment the Church held a camp meeting on the land of Bro. Henry Garner, in Raglan Township, Harrison county, Iowa, beginning on Saturday, October 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith was chosen to preside, and Bro. J. C. Jensen to act as Secretary.

On Saturday, October 4th, owing to the bad weather and the unsettled condition of affairs in the camp, there were no services till evening, and then President Smith delivered the opening address, followed by Brn. R. Etzenhouser and J. F. Mintun.

Sunday, October 5th.—At nine a. m. a prayer meeting was held, Bro. Joseph Smith in charge. The other services of the day were as follows: At eleven a. m. preaching by Bro. Charles Derry; at half-past two p. m. by Bro. W. W. Blair, and at half-past seven p. m. by Bro. E. C. Briggs. Two were baptized by Bro. P. Cadwell and confirmed by Brn. P. Cadwell and Levi Gamet. The weather was quite fair and the attendance increasing.

Monday, October 6th.—The morning prayer meeting was in charge of Bro. Joseph Smith, and lasted all the forenoon. In the afternoon there was preaching by Bro. E. Banta, and in the evening by Bro. B. V. Springer. The weather was good during the day, but at evening and in the night there were heavy rains, making the roads bad again, and the camp somewhat uncomfortable; but not discouraging the Saints.

Tuesday, Oct. 7th.—The prayer meeting was in charge of Bro. E. C. Briggs, and the morning sermon was by Bro. Joseph Smith. Afternoon twelve persons were baptized by Bro. J. S. Roth. These were confirmed at the beginning of the afternoon meeting under the hands of Brn. W. W. Blair, Charles Derry, P. Cadwell, and H. A. Stebbins. Bro. James Caffall preached the afternoon discourse. The day was a cold and rainy one, and in the evening there was no service because of the rain.

Wednesday, Oct. 8th.—At ten a. m. Bro. G. S. Hyde preached, which was followed by a prayer meeting, Bro. W. W. Blair being in charge. Bro. J. F. McDowell preached in the afternoon and Bro. Joseph Smith in the evening.

The sun came up clear and, though the morning was cold in the camp, still there was no complaining and a good feeling prevailed everywhere. The day proved fine and the weather became warmer and comfortable once more.

Thursday, October 9th.—From ten o'clock till noon the time was occupied in prayer and testimony, Bro. Joseph Smith presiding. An excellent season was enjoyed. At two p. m. Bro. W. W. Blair preached, and in the evening Bro. H. A. Stebbins.

The weather fine and clear both day and night, and becoming warmer each day.

Friday, October 10th.—The Saints met and occupied the forenoon in discussing the time and place of holding the Reunion next year, having first decided to hold one in the Fall of 1885. The following places were proposed: Wheeler's Grove, Pottawattamie county; Bigler's Grove and Raglan, both in Harrison county; Galland's Grove, Shelby county; Riverton, Fremont county; Council Bluffs; North Coon, Carroll county; seven places between which to make choice. The advantages possessed by these places were set forth, Brn. E. C. Briggs, Charles Derry and Lot Smith speaking for Wheeler's Grove; Bro. J. W. Chatburn favoring Bigler's Grove; Brn. A. W. Locking and Henry Garner speaking for Raglan (the present location); Bro. L. C. Donaldson for Riverton; Bro. W. W. Whiting for Galland's Grove; Brn. W. W. Blair, E. Banta, E. C. Brand and Robert McKenzie for Council Bluffs, and Brn. John Rounds and W. A. Carroll for North Coon.

On a rising vote being called for, the following result was obtained: For Wheeler's Grove 106; Bigler's Grove 82; Raglan 65; Riverton 3; Galland's Grove 94; Council Bluffs 11; North Coon 8. The two receiving the highest were presented and the final vote stood: For Galland's Grove 245 and Wheeler's Grove 151 votes, and the former place announced as the choice.

As to the time for convening, one motion was for October 6th, another for October 10th, another for the Saturday before full moon in September, and another for the Saturday before full moon in October. Being put to vote, 70 favored the first date named, 3 the second date, 170 the third, and 136 the fourth. The last two being presented there resulted a vote of 250 for the Saturday before full moon in October, and 180 for the Saturday before full moon in September, the former being the choice.

Brn. John Hawley, John Pett and Gideon Hawley were chosen as a committee to select and prepare the grounds for the meeting.

The Presidency, the Bishop and the Secretary of the Church were chosen as a committee to arrange with the railroad companies for special rates of fare to those who may attend.

During the noon intermission there were fourteen persons baptized by Bro. J. S. Roth, which were confirmed during the afternoon meeting by Brn. Charles Derry, J. C. Crabb, H. A. Stebbins and J. W. Chatburn. Following this Bro. J. F. Mintun preached. The evening discourse was by Bro. J. S. Roth. The weather was very fine and warm all through the day.

Saturday, October 11th.—The morning prayer meeting was in charge of Bro. H. A. Stebbins. At eleven a. m. Bro. Joseph Smith preached, and in the afternoon Bro. W. W. Whiting, followed by Bro. J. C. Crabb. Afterwards ten persons were baptized by Bro. J. S. Roth. These were confirmed in the evening by Brn. E. C. Briggs, S. S. Wilcox, H. A. Stebbins, John Hawley and Henry Kemp. The evening sermon was by Bro. E. C. Brand.

The early morning was cloudy, but it soon cleared, and the day was delightful in its clearness and warmth.

Sunday, October 12th.—The morning prayer meeting was in charge of Bro. John Pett.

At eleven a. m. preaching by Bro. J. F. McDowell. During the noon recess twelve persons were baptized by Bro. Phineas Cadwell, making fifty in all during the meeting. At half-past two p. m. President Smith preached the funeral sermon of a daughter of Bro. Isaac and Sr. Elizabeth M. Shupe. After this the twelve baptized were confirmed by Brn. Charles Derry, H. A. Stebbins, Alfred White and R. Etzenhouser. In the evening Bro. Charles Derry preached. After which an adjournment was had to meet again on the Saturday before full moon in October, 1885, at Galland's Grove, Iowa.

During the sessions of the Reunion there was preaching each night at Mondamin, as follows: On Sunday evening, October 5th, by Bro. Henry Kemp; Monday by Bro. R. Etzenhouser; Tuesday by Bro. H. A. Stebbins; Wednesday by Bro. Wm. Rumel; Thursday by Bro. R. Etzenhouser; Friday by Bro. Joseph Smith; Saturday by Bro. J. F. McDowell; Sunday by Bro. E. C. Briggs.

Above minutes noted by Henry A. Stebbins, Church Secretary. Closed October 12th, 1884.

TATTLING.

DEAR HERALD:—Once in a great while I read a very short piece written in a very mild and carefully-worded manner, as though the writer was afraid to acknowledge there were such things as tattlers; but it is no use to deny it. There are plenty of them out of the Church, and I am sorry that I am compelled to say there are plenty in the Church. In my opinion there is but very little difference between a tattler and a saloon keeper. One gives the poison to be taken in the stomach, the other to be received through the ear. If you will allow yourself to sit and drink in the poison that flows from a tattler's tongue, you will see snakes in other people's boots, in a great deal shorter time than it would take a drunkard to see them in his own. There are different grades of tattlers. One is very prominent, (and the most to be feared), where the bearer carries a little bag of poison seeds concealed in a bottle of oil. If the bottle is turned bottom side up, of course the oil will run out first, but the seeds are sure to follow. I will leave you to study out my meaning when you come across those that are given to finding fault with their neighbors, occasionally wounding their most sensitive feelings, in a mild, smooth way giving them a send off, when circumstances will permit, as, for instance, "Yes, I guess she is a good woman. I never hear her talk disrespectfully of any one. She is generous and kind, and her intimate friends always speak well of her; but I'll tell you just one thing about her, if you will never tell any one; now be sure and do not let it get out, because I would not injure her for the world." A confidential rehearsal follows. This is not merely imagination, it is only one of hundreds of cases. Do you suppose for an instant, that it did not get out. We will all agree, that if a tattler's secret was put in an iron box, that took ten men to weld it together, and it was completely covered with padlocks, it would get out in spite of fate in twenty-four hours. Just that one thing spoken of confidentially, would destroy every particle of good feeling that the first part of the conversation would naturally create, and an innocent person would have enemies where she deserved friends. When you meet, or are compelled to live in a neighborhood where such individuals reside, beware, after you have tried by your patience, forbearance, kindness, prayers and example, to show the difference between those who mind their own business, and those who mind their neighbor's, if they will not see, but are determined to continue their practice of tattling, shun them as we are commanded to shun the appearance of all evil, and as we would the deadly poison that fills the drunkard's grave. Some will cry out, "Charity, charity; you must not be so ungenerous; keep quiet; it will be all right sometime. A falsehood is a falsehood; it matters not from what source it may come, it will in time come to the surface, and evaporate; but the truth will stand forever." That is very true, and we must have charity one for another. That also is very true; but it is very trying, and mortifying in the extreme, for an innocent person to be constantly bearing, overcoming, and clearing her pathway from the thorns, briars, and poisonous matter which obstruct the way, placed by the wagging of a tattler's tongue. I do not believe we are expected to cover up such an abominable sin as tattling with charity. It is unreasonable and unjust, and differs very materially from Christ's teaching. The Bible says, (King James Translation), "And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves, for charity shall cover a multitude of sins." The later part of this verse I do not believe; but instead, will take it from the Inspired Translation just as it reads. The former looks dark and gloomy, the end is very uncertain; the latter looks bright and peaceful, the way straight and smooth, dotted with flowers all along on either side, the end eternal life. Charity is a grand principle, and if seen in its true light, and practiced by all, we would never have occasion to accuse any one of tattling. Those who do not know the difference in the reading of the books concerning the verse quoted, (and I am confident there are many who do not), please search the scriptures; "for in them ye think ye have eternal life." To those who are in the habit of tattling, let me whisper a few words with all kindness, and in the spirit of the gospel, which if received in that light, will never do harm, but always good. If the thought comes into your mind to say a word in any shape that would arouse suspicious feelings, or cast reflection in any way on the morality of your friend or neighbor, think twice before you speak once; be sure that what you would say will do no harm; pray to your God night and day if necessary, for wisdom and power to overcome entirely that most abominable neighborhood destroyer, tattling. Spurn it as you would the most poisonous snake. Scorn it as being unworthy to be connected in any sense whatever with a Latter Day Saint. If you can not say a good word, I implore you in the name of Christ do not say a bad one. Leave it to the great judge. When the right time comes he will judge in the right way—and I hope to see the time when every one of the class here named, will sing for joy on account of the great evil that has been overcome; and that I may hear them say, We have prayed, we have fought, we have conquered, praise the Lord forever; also that I may have the privilege of meeting them all in the great resurrection.

I wish to say this to mothers, just to give them something to study on till I make you another visit. Have you ever thought or allowed your minds to reflect on the great responsibility resting on you? If you have not, do so now. Let us all see if we can not remedy some of the great evils that our children are being influenced by, and by which they are led to some degree from the straight and narrow way. Let us hope that the minds of mothers may be imbued with a healthy, cheerful sense of the responsibility and high honor of their holy calling, to break the bonds of their selfishness, to open their eyes to true wisdom, and so to give a mighty impetus to the millennial glory.

SPIRITUAL GIFTS—THEIR PERPETUITY.

It sometimes does people good to see their own belief and faith clothed in somebody else's language. We reproduce from the Chicago Times of December 24th, 1883, the sermon of W. H. Littlejohn of Battle Creek, Michigan, as having been sent us by Bro. J. S. Patterson. It is a fair exposition on the subject treated—spiritual gifts and their perpetuity.

"The following sermon on "The Perpetuity of Spiritual Gifts" was preached in Battle Creek, Michigan, by W. H. Littlejohn. In it he argues that the gifts of the Spirit of God should be manifested in the Church of Christ at the present time.

"Where there is no vision, the people perish; but he that keepeth the law, happy is he."—Prov. 29: 18.

We are to consider at this time the question of the perpetuity of spiritual gifts. By spiritual gifts, I mean those supernatural capabilities with which men are endowed by the Spirit of God, and through which they are enabled to prophesy, work miracles, heal, etc. In 1 Cor. 12: 1-11, the apostle, in speaking upon this subject, shows that these gifts, while proceeding from the same spirit, are diversified in their character and distributed in their various operations among many, instead of being bestowed in their fullness upon any one in particular. The precise manner in which the power of God is thus imparted to mortal man so as to enable him to exercise for the time being, in a limited degree, the attributes of Jehovah, it is impossible to explain. It is undeniably true, however, that such a capability was imparted to the early Christians, and that it was very largely employed in the work of the ministry and the propagation of the gospel truth generally. In fact, it may well be doubted whether the gospel could have arrested the attention of the people at all had it not been for the miraculous powers which accompanied its proclamation in the first centuries. When it is perceived that ordinary mortals possessed the ability to heal the sick, restore the sight to the blind, give hearing to the deaf, and raise the dead to life, it was at once felt that the seal of God was thus placed upon the work in which the early Christians were engaged,—(See Acts 14: 8-11),—and a hearing was thereby secured for the preacher of the new faith.

In view of the foregoing facts, the query naturally arises in the mind, Why is it that the gifts, which were found so useful and played so important a part in the work of founding the Christian religion, should cease to be an element in the work of its extension and preservation? Why, we involuntarily ask, would not these supernatural demonstrations be of incalculable value to the church at the present time, in the terrible struggle now going on between her and her infidel and atheistic foes? In a contest which turns upon logical deductions and philosophical distinctions the world has long since learned that certainty is not at all times attainable. That which has appeared to be very plausible and, indeed, irrefutable, has been so frequently overturned by the subsequent development of facts that we are inclined to receive with trembling the theories of even the most astute. So true is this that it is manifest that one of the felt needs of this age is a clear and unmistakable manifestation of the supernatural. With longing eyes, men gaze up into the heavens and pray for a revelation of the divine power, which shall at once shiver the conflicting systems of modern philosophers, and dispel forever all doubt respecting the authenticity of a religion whose foundations were laid eighteen centuries ago in a most marvelous display of the miraculous power of God. Why, say they, will not our God reveal himself through some of his chosen instruments, and thus dispel forever all doubt concerning the historic verity of the New Testament record, and the soundness of its most wonderful doctrines and inculcations?

Feeling that such a desire on the part of men generally could not be displeasing to God, as it is based upon an acknowledgment of his existence, and recognizing the fact as clearly proved by sacred history that God has frequently made such a universal prayer for the realization of a particular good, the occasion of the bestowment of the good itself, we inquire whether it is not possible that God is willing to do for men the very thing which they desire? Nay, whether he has not already answered a petition which has found utterance on the part of so many.

Reasoning from general principles, we can not see why it may not fairly be inferred that God is as willing to reveal himself to his church at the present time as he was in former ages. As there may be others, however, who have a question upon this point, we propose to offer a few considerations favoring our view of the subject.

In the first place, we suggest that, God being the same as formerly, and man the same, there is no insuperable natural obstacle in the way of the manifestation of spiritual gifts at the present time. In the early history of the race God made just such men as we are the mediums through which he revealed himself. It follows therefore, that through the operations of His Holy Spirit, the men of this generation could be employed in the development of the miraculous as fully as they have been at any former time.

In the second place, it is fairly to be presumed that if we can show that the same necessity which called the gifts into being still exists, the gifts themselves will be continued, in order to meet that necessity. To do so, however, is comparatively an easy task. We have already called attention to the circumstance that there is just as much necessity at the present time, for the miraculous manifestation of God's power for the removal of all uncertainty in regard to the authenticity of the gospel work as there was at the close of the first century. We now wish to prove that the ordinary work of the Christian ministry in the conversion of men and the edification of the church of Christ, can only be prosecuted to the best advantage when we recognize the necessity of special divine interposition and aid through the gifts of His spirit. In other words, that the very design in giving these miraculous powers, was to qualify men to teach the truth and to perfect men through the same. That we are correct in this may be easily demonstrated from a single passage of scripture. In Eph. 4:8-13, we learn: First, that when Christ ascended up on high, he "gave gifts unto men;" secondly, that these gifts were for the work of the ministry and for the perfecting of saints; thirdly, that they were to continue "till we all come into unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ;" fourthly, that these gifts were those of apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers. Now we submit that there is just as much need of all these gifts in the Christian church at the present time as there was on the day that Christ arose.

(1.) Because the work of preaching and evangelizing is just as necessary now as it was then. (2.) Because there is greater uncertainty among Christians at the present time, in regard to what is correct doctrine, than there was at that time. (3.) Because the standard of piety among Christians in our day is very low, and therefore that they need spiritual gifts to bring them up to the measure of the fullness of the stature of Christ. That which is a little remarkable is found in the fact that our opponents admit the perpetuity of pastors, evangelists and teachers, while they deny that of apostles and prophets. Such a position, however, is untenable, since all these gifts were given at the same time and for the same purpose, and consequently must continue until the object designed to be accomplished by them is realized. But we have seen that this has not yet taken place. There is therefore a necessity for these gifts, and the presumption is that they will not be withdrawn until that necessity is met. Should it be objected that our logic is unsound since the gift of apostles ceased confessedly in the days of Christ, we reply that such is not the case in the fullest sense of the word. It may be true that the original twelve had no successors in their particular line, save Paul and Matthias, but it is nevertheless demonstrable that apostles in one sense of the word did continue in the church outside of the original twelve. In proof of this we cite 2 Cor. 8:23, and Phil. 2:25, in which Luke and Apollos and Epaphroditus, were so called in the original, though they never were numbered with those whom the Lord first selected. The whole difficulty is removed when we recollect that the term apostle, in a general sense, signifies, "one who is sent." The original twelve, among other things, were to witness to the death and resurrection of Christ. This could not have been done by men of succeeding generations, yet they might have filled the position of apostles in the secondary sense of that term, since it is no doubt true that many men during the past eighteen hundred years have been especially commissioned of God to do a particular work for his church. In this sense, therefore, we understand that the word is employed in Ephesians 4:11.

Now that we have said all which we desire to say from the general standpoint, we turn to consider certain objections to the views we have advanced. (1.) It is urged that our theory can not be correct, as observation teaches that the gifts have dropped out of the church altogether. The basis of the logic here employed is the assumption that "whatever is, is right," or, to phrase it differently, that the non-existence of spiritual gifts is proof that God is not willing that they should be exercised in the church. But is this logic exactly sound? Would it not at other periods of the world's history have led men astray had they followed it implicitly? Is it not true that the existence of spiritual gifts in all ages has depended upon certain conditions to be supplied by men themselves? Was it not true in the old dispensation that God revealed himself unto His people only so long as they sought Him, and lived in obedience to His commands? In the days of Christ, when the very gifts in question were fully exercised in certain places, He instructed those of other localities that not many mighty works could be done for them, because of their unbelief. (Matt. 13:58.) From this it appears that the exercise of faith is necessary to the possession of the gifts of the spirit. Applying this principle it is rendered quite probable, to say the least, that the absence of miraculous powers and gifts in the church in our time should be attributed to their own unbelief, rather than to the unwillingness of God, to manifest himself as He did to those formerly. (2.) Again, it is urged, that the bible alone is a sufficient rule of faith, and in proof of this reference is made to 2 Tim. 3:16-17. The weakness of this objection will be manifest at a glance. In the first place, the text quoted alludes exclusively to the Old Testament, and therefore, if it was designed to teach what our friends claim, it would have precluded the possibility or necessity for further revelations, and thus cut off all need of a New Testament. In the second place, were we to admit that it covered the canons of both the Old and New Testaments, since spiritual gifts have an office work entirely independent of, or rather subordinate to, the written word, their existence would not be incompatible with the idea of the completeness of that word in and of itself. It has already been demonstrated that the gifts are for the work of the ministry and for the edifying of the body of Christ. Not infrequently in the book of Acts we read that even the apostles were guided in the details of their work by dreams, visions, and prophecies, which related exclusively to their special labors. Now as the office work of the Christian minister at the present time is similar in character to that of the apostles, and as contingencies are continually arising and questions presenting themselves in his personal work, which could not have been provided for and explained in the bible as we have it, it is fair to infer that it is legitimate for God to employ the same instrumentality for their relief that he did formerly for that of the early preachers of the dispensation. In the selection of places of labor it is just as necessary that the evangelist should be guided now as it was that Paul should be told when he should go to Macedonia. (Acts 16:8-10.)

Again, in the interpretation of scripture itself, the special help of the Holy Spirit is, at times, indispensable; but such help must come through the gifts of the Spirit, and therefore proves their existence. (3.) Our views are objected to on the ground that we are forbidden to add to the Bible. In support of this objection Rev. 22:18, 19, is quoted. To this we reply that the objection is unfounded: (a) Because the text quoted does not relate to the Bible as a whole, but simply to the book of Revelation. (b) Because John, the author of the text quoted, wrote his own gospel two years after he penned the text cited, which he never would have done had the Holy Spirit meant to teach that nothing was to be revealed through the spirit of inspiration after the completion of the last book of the New Testament as we have it arranged.

But enough of general principles and objections. It is now time to turn to the positive scripture argument. As we do so we are confronted with two facts. (1.) The gifts were once set in the church 1 Cor. 12: 28, 29.) (2.) It is nowhere stated in so many words that they have ever been withdrawn from the church. These propositions being admitted the presumption is altogether in favor of the continuance of that which it is admitted existed in the outset. The burden of proof, therefore, rests not upon us but upon our opponents. Notwithstanding this circumstance, however, we enter now upon a proof of the correctness of our position, as drawn from positive scripture declarations. The texts to be employed are the following, which, you will observe, are presented in chronological order:

John 14: 12-14—From this passage it will be seen that, contrary to the prevailing opinion, this dispensation, instead of being behind the former one, in the matter of miraculous powers, was even to surpass the days of Christ in this particular. Observe the point in the text. I, says Christ in substance, am about to go to the Father, and because of the fact that I shall be in His presence, he that believeth on me shall be able to perform even greater works than I have performed. There is no limitation here in respect to time, after He has reached the Father. The only conditions are belief in Him and His presence with God. Do we not believe in Christ? Is he not still with the Father? Does it not follow, therefore, that the promise is ours if we will only grasp it?—i. e., is it not possible for us to perform even greater works than Christ performed provided we accept His words in all their fullness? He that shall say that such is not the case must repudiate the obvious meaning of the passage, and deny even the logical sequence of its declarations.

Mark 16: 15-18—In the above text is found the original commission to the apostles of Christ. From it all of the Christian ministry of the present time derive the authority by which they offer salvation to men. If they are not correct in regarding it as the credential of their authority, then they are making a very serious mistake. That it was not limited, however, to the apostles, may be demonstrated by two considerations. First, those commissioned were instructed to go to every creature in the world to preach the word; secondly, in the same commission, as narrated in Matt. 28: 19, 20, the Savior adds the words: "And lo! I am with you always, to the end of the world." The word employed is not "kosmos," but "aion"—i. e., the "age" or "dispensation," thus showing that the commission runs through all ages and furnishes the authority to the Christian ministry to speak for Christ to the end of time. Thus much for the commission itself. We call attention now to the declaration of Christ concerning the signs that should follow those who should believe on His name. Reference to them shows that they cover the casting out of devils, the speaking with tongues, the handling of serpents, protection from deadly poisons, and the healing of the sick; in other words, that they should be clothed with miraculous powers. Those powers, also, are not limited to the apostles or to the ministry, but they are promised to all who shall believe in Him through their word. Are we of that number? Then is not the promise ours? Should it be replied that it can not be, since we have never enjoyed it, I answer, as heretofore, that the promises of God are conditional, and that in this case our failure to realize is not found in the unwillingness of Christ to fulfill, but in our failure to ask for that which properly belongs to us, provided that we can exercise the faith to claim it.

Acts 2: 14-21.—In the former text, Christ was the speaker, in the latter, Peter is holding forth to the assembled multitude on the day of Pentecost. Christ spoke before his ascension; Peter after that event. Thus it will appear that we have advanced chronologically somewhat. As the Holy Ghost was poured out in great measure upon the disciples causing them to speak with tongues, it was alleged by some that they were intoxicated. Peter repudiates the charge, and explains the situation. This, said he, is the fulfillment of the prophecy of Joel concerning the last days, in which he declares that God will pour out his spirit upon all flesh, etc. Is there any doubt that Peter made a correct application of this prophecy? You answer, no. Then I inquire again, what are its limitations? Certainly it is not restricted to a few individuals; for Joel positively declares that the spirit of God which produces the phenomena in question, is to be poured out upon all flesh. Again, it can not be restricted in point of time: First, because it relates to the last days, and therefore must cover the last day of this dispensation; secondly, because it reaches to the day of God, which is the boundary of this dispensation and is still future. Again, therefore, we have found in sacred writ the most positive assurance on the part of God that he designed to make the Christian age, from first to last, distinguished above the former one by the circumstance that it should be a period more marked than any other by the gifts of His spirit.

Acts 2: 37-40. In the preceding passage we have an account of the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, in fulfillment of the prediction of Joel. In the passage before us, taken from a subsequent portion of the same address, we find the men of Israel convicted in their hearts because of their great sin and crying out for mercy. "Repent," says Peter, "every one of you, and be baptized, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, for the promise is to you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." The gift of the Holy Ghost here alluded to was the one the effects of which they had been witnessing all around them in the exercise of miraculous powers by its recipients. It is Christ, says Peter, that has shed forth that which ye now see and hear. If ye repent, and are baptized, therefore you shall receive this evidence of your divine acceptance in the bestowment of the ability to do what these are doing around you. Be of good courage; the promise is not limited to a select few, but it is to you and to your children, and to all them that are afar off, even all them whom the Lord our God shall call. Be it remembered now that Peter was speaking by direct inspiration. Let it be borne in mind, also, that he is talking about the gift of God's spirit, in the form and manner in which it was bestowed on the day of Pentecost. This done, we inquire, Did he confine its gracious operations to the periods covered by the past? The reply must be in the negative. The gifts there bestowed, according to his statement belonged to the men of that day, to their children, and to all who are afar off, whom the Lord shall call. The classes covered by the men and their children constituted at least two generations. Some of them beyond question were living in the commencement of the second century. But, be it observed, Peter does not confine the promise even to them. Those that are afar off, even all whom the Lord should call, in his view, were included in the promise of the gifts of the Spirit. According to the declarations of this, one of the mightiest of apostles, it is the heritage of the very last saint of the last generation of Christians whom God shall save from this wicked world.

I. Thess. 5: 19-21.—A.D. 54.—Twenty-four years have elapsed, and this great apostle to the gentiles, who was converted several years subsequently to the day of Pentecost, is addressing an epistle to the church at Thessalonica. This church was, no doubt, largely made up of gentiles, and was, geographically speaking, "afar off" from Jerusalem; they were, however, among those whom the Lord had called, and we look with interest to see how the apostle will address them on the subject of spiritual gifts. Fortunately, he speaks with no uncertain voice. With him the day of Pentecost, though the commencement, was not the end of miraculous powers in this dispensation. "Quench not the Spirit," he writes. "Despise not prophesyings;" "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." From these words it appears that the danger even then, was that men would resist the spirit of God in its operations. That spirit is symbolized by a flame, which always springs up and burns with ever-increasing power, if left to take its own course. The Thessalonians, however, like the men of our time, were disposed to quench it before it could accomplish its office work. They, too, like the men of our day, were disposed to despise, or hold in contempt, prophesyings. By the word prophesying is meant the exercise of the gift of prophecy. The apostle, therefore, instead of encouraging the thought, in A. D. 54, that the spirit of prophecy was a dangerous thing, which ought to be discountenanced under all circumstances, instructs the men to whom he is writing that they should hold on to it as something which was good in itself. How could he do otherwise? Is it not to the spirit of prophecy that we are very largely indebted for our Bible and all the knowledge which we possess concerning God? Is it safe for men to insult God to his face by treating as dangerous and unnecessary any one of the gifts, which he may vouchsafe to give us for the perfection of our knowledge and the increase of our Christian graces? Paul did not so understand the matter. With all the learning which he possessed, with all the experience which he had enjoyed, the full benefit of which the Thessalonians had shared, he felt that there was a higher teacher than himself, and that teacher was God, speaking through the spirit of prophecy.

I. Cor. 12.—A. D. 59—In A. D. 59, or five years subsequently to the writing of the epistle to the Thessalonians, Paul addressed a letter to the church of Corinth. Verse 1, chapter 12 of that epistle commences with the words, "Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant." In verse 7 he declares that the manifestation of the spirit is given to every man to profit withal. In verses 8-11, he defined the gifts of the spirit as "the word of wisdom," "the word of knowledge," "faith," "the gifts of healing," "the working of miracles," "prophecy," "discerning of spirits," "divers tongues," "the interpretation of tongues." In verses 12-27 he presents the figure of the human body and its members for the purpose of showing the intimate relation in the Christian church between all of its members. If one suffers, he says, they all suffer alike; each has his office work to perform, and that work is determined by the gift of the spirit which he may receive. In verse 28 he determines the relative honor of those who enjoy an endowment of one or other of the gifts. He arranges them as follows: First, apostles; secondly, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that miracles, then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues. In the last verse he closes with the general exhortation: "Covet earnestly the best gifts." Bringing all of these points together, we find the apostle teaching these six things: First, he did not wish the Gentile Christians of Corinth to be ignorant of spiritual gifts; secondly, the reason why he desired them not to be ignorant upon this subject was found in the fact that those gifts were given to every man to profit withal; thirdly, that those gifts, whether small or great, were as indispensable to the Church of Christ as are the members of the body to the man; fourthly, each should be content with the gift granted to him by the Holy Spirit, and each should remember that no gift however small, was to be despised; fifthly, in order, however, that they might look intelligently upon the subject and thus contention be avoided, he makes mention of the gifts in the order of their respective excellence, thus settling the question authoritatively; sixthly, he closes the chapter with the exhortation to covet earnestly the best gifts, thereby proving that as late as A. D. 59 the gifts of the spirit were so important to the church that every individual member was not to be content with simply tolerating them in the body, or merely desiring them for himself, but he was to covet them earnestly. The expression is a very strong one, and furnishes a most emphatic testimony to the high estimate which the apostle placed upon the office-work of the spirit of God in its miraculous manifestation in the church.

I Corinthians 14:1-3, 39—A. D. 59—The thirteenth chapter of I Corinthians contains a high encomium upon the grace of charity, or love. From this circumstance some have concluded that where charity was indulged the gifts of the spirit were not necessary. In other words, they have fancied that the two could not exist together. Such a conclusion is most erroneous, as proved by the text under consideration. In it the apostle says, in so many words, that we are to follow after charity and at the same time desire spiritual gifts, thus showing that they are compatible one with the other. Again in verse 39 he emphasizes the exhortation. "Covet to prophesy," he says, "and forbid not to speak with tongues."

The fourteenth chapter, as a whole, is devoted to the control and regulation of the exercise of the gifts, and to an effort to induce the Corinthian Church to covet prophesying as the most desirable gift. Its teachings are especially important in several particulars: (1) It recognizes the existence and propriety of the gifts by regulating them instead of forbidding the exercise of the same. (2) It furnishes proof that the individual, under certain circumstances can obtain the gifts even by desiring—i. e., praying for them, as illustrated by the fact that they are instructed to desire the gift of prophecy, rather than that of tongues. (3) Like the 12th chapter, it closes with a strong confirmation of the perpetuity and desirableness of the gifts by instructing the Corinthian brethren to covet the gift of prophecy, and not to forbid to speak with tongues.

I Cor. 13:8-12.—A. D. 59—In the foregoing, it is thought by some, is found evidence that the existence of spiritual gifts is limited to the apostolic age. But let us consider the passage carefully before hastily adopting such a view, inasmuch as such a construction would conflict with the utterances of the apostle considered hitherto. Two things are manifest on the first reading: First, the subject under consideration is spiritual gifts; second, it is declared that they will cease at some time. The question pertinent to this discussion is, therefore, the exact point of time when they will disappear. Mark you, it is not stated in so many words, that the event was to transpire in Paul's day. Neither is it said that it would take place in the next century, or in the century following that. In fine, the duration of the gifts is not measured by time at all, but by an event, which is to take place. What is that event? we inquire. We answer that it is the introduction of that which is perfect. Whether, says the apostle, there be prophecies they shall fail, whether there shall be tongues they shall cease, whether there shall be knowledge it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. Now, we ask, where is the perfect state here alluded to located? Before replying, please remember that when it is reached all knowledge which is in part is to give place to that knowledge which is complete. Remember, too, that it was not simply the knowledge of the apostle but of those whom the apostle calls "we"—i. e., the church, which is to be wanting in nothing before the gifts should cease. But will any one insist that either Paul or the church of Corinth, or, indeed, any church since that time, has ever reached to the full use of knowledge? Is it to be presumed that in his natural life Paul ever attained to the perfection of spiritual knowledge? Were not many things revealed to the Christian Church even after his death? was he not compelled on one occasion to say: "I speak as a man, and not by the commandment of the Lord?" If so, then his knowledge was limited, as is everything which is merely human. Again, does he not declare in so many words that he simply knew in part, but that the time would come when he should know even as he was known? Is it to be presumed that Paul attained in his natural life the position of one who knew as he was known—i. e., that his knowledge was as absolute as God's knowledge was for him? I think you will answer in the negative. If so, let us make the language apply to the future state, and then all will be clear and satisfactory. Says Paul: When I was a child, I spoke as a child, when I became a man I put away childish things. Now make the application suggested. We are all children in the school of Christ, and spiritual gifts, though they do not bring to us the fullness of knowledge upon all points, still they are adapted to the present circumstance. But when we enter the eternal state, the sources of our knowledge will be so much superior to what they are now that we shall not need the imperfect medium of tongues, prophecies, etc. Where then is the boundary line? We answer, the period where the saints are to be perfected. But where is that period? We reply, the second coming of Christ. (See 2 Tim., 4:6-8). But if we are right in this, as certainly we are, then the spiritual gifts were to continue until the perfect state is reached, and as that is not to be reached until the coming of the Savior, they will not cease until that event transpires.

I Cor., 1:4-8—A. D. 59.—The above text hardly needs a comment. The apostle states therein that he continually thanked God on the behalf of the Corinthians, because they were enriched in all knowledge and in all utterance, to the extent that they came behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of the Lord. Take notice now, that the special occasion of this gratitude originated in his knowledge of the fact that the Corinthian church was in possession of all the gifts. The satisfaction thus expressed demonstrates again the great importance and value which Paul attached to the possession, on the part of the church, of the manifestation of the spirit in all of its various forms. Such possession on the part of the church at Corinth was to him a source of uninterrupted joy—i. e., his mind was continually full of praise to God when he thought how much he had done to secure the salvation and prosperity of the church at Corinth, which he loved so much, by confirming in them the testimony of Jesus Christ, or the gifts of prophecy, tongues, knowledge, healing, etc. Such ecstasy of delight would surely have been extravagant had the benefit conferred been anything less than one of the most desirable of blessings.

James 5: 14-18—A. D. 60.—In the foregoing is found the statement of a general principle which, we think, applies unmistakably to the church of Christ from the commencement to the close of its history. In it is clearly set forth the doctrine that faith, when exercised in behalf of the sick, whether in the first or the nineteenth century, will insure their recovery. Do we believe this? How can we doubt it? The doctrine is not only set forth in the divine word, but its soundness has been verified by ocular demonstrations before the eyes of many of us. But to accept the doctrine and to acknowledge the practical fulfillment of the promise is to admit the perpetuity of at least one of the gifts. In the original commission, the healing of the sick upon the laying on of hands was constituted one of the signs which should follow the believers in Christ. That such healing, however, is produced by the miraculous energy of the divine spirit will, we think, not be disputed. The circumstance that it is to be secured by prayer at the present time by no means proves that the process in anywise differs from what it was formerly, inasmuch as prayer unquestionably accompanied the laying on of hands in the first century.

Rev. 1: 1—A. D. 96.—In A. D. 96, or about sixty-five years after the death of Christ, and four years before the close of the first century, the beloved apostle John continued the canon of the New Testament by writing the book of Revelation. That this book was given through the spirit of prophecy can not be disputed by any one familiar with the text before us, as in that text it is positively stated that John wrote those things alone which were signified to him by the angel of God. In verse 10 he positively declares that he was in the spirit on the Lord's day, and that he was instructed to write in a book things that were shown to him, and to send them unto the seven churches. Here, then, we have an undoubted manifestation of the spirit of prophecy as late as the close of the life of John. Thus it is made to appear that we find the gifts in the possession of the church clear down to the latest point which they had reached at the close of the New Testament record. As already remarked, since they were still in the imperfect stage, and since contingencies were liable to arise at every turn in their history where they would need supernatural help, it is to be inferred that such help would continue with them so long as a necessity continued, or until the close of time. But let us make certain—doubly certain—by appealing to another text.

Rev. 12: 17.—From the death of John we have no inspired record to which to appeal for a historic verification of the theory in regard to the perpetuity of spiritual gifts. In the Apocalypse written by him, however, we have the more sure word of prophecy whereunto we shall do well to take heed. 2 Peter 1: 19—Step by step we have examined the evidences that miraculous powers were in the early church through the first century, and we have proved by the application of general principles to the subject that it was the original design that they should continue to bless the church of God so long as it should remain the church militant. It has been said that "prophecy is history in advance." Accepting this statement as sound, we call especial attention to Rev. 12: 17. In this passage it will be generally admitted that the dragon represents Satan working through the Roman power. In the preceding portion of the chapter the history of the church is described as it passed through the terrific sufferings inflicted upon it during the 1,260 years of the great Romish persecution, which terminated virtually in 1798. Subsequently to that period it is related that the remnant of the seed of the woman is again to be subjected to the vengeful power of the great dragon, or Satan. Now the remnant of the church must include the last of its members, or those who live at the time of the coming of Christ. Of them it is said that they kept the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ. In Rev. 19, 10, it is stated that the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. In 1 Cor. 1: 4-8, we have already seen that the testimony of Jesus, when confirmed in the Corinthian Church, brought them to a point where they came behind in no gift. Putting this and that together, we learn that the last church is to have the testimony of Jesus, which is the spirit of prophecy, or the gifts of the spirit.

Conclusion—We have shown that the gifts were in full exercise in the first century and, by fair inductions from statements made, that they were placed in the church to continue for all time. Finally we have confirmed the soundness of our logic by bringing to our aid the sure words of prophecy, in which it is taught that the last church is to be characterized by the possession of the same gifts which were bestowed upon the disciples by Him who ascended up on high. (Eph. 4: 8.) If any one shall still deny that if the gifts have disappeared at any time in the history of the church, the church itself is alone to blame for such disappearance, he must prove himself able to overthrow all the reasoning from general principles and positive scriptures which we have advanced upon the subject. Again, even though he were able to prove that the lapse in the manifestation of the gifts hitherto was by divine appointment, such proof would not demonstrate that they might not be revived at the present time, unless they can set aside the positive statement of John, that the last generation of Christians is to have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

But this they can never do. The language is explicit. Furthermore, it is in harmony with the historic facts. We are now living in the period spoken of by the prophet—i. e. the last days. Seventh day

Adventists arose in 1846. They keep God's commandments, observing the fourth literally in common with the remaining nine. Since their rise there has been among them one who has had visions from the Lord. These visions they have tested by the Scriptures, as well as by the numerous predictions which have been made by the humble instrument whom God employs, and they have borne both of these tests in a manner such as to prove beyond dispute that they are a genuine manifestation of the spirit of God. Not only so, but that denomination is so largely indebted for their present unity and prosperity to this "gift," that as they recall the numerous errors and calamities from which it has saved them, they can indeed say, in the language of my text: "Where there is no vision the people perish; but he that keepeth the law, happy is he."

Miscellaneous.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

To the Saints comprising the Northern Illinois District.—I send greeting; having been chosen by you to act as Bishop's Agent for this district, I conceive it to be my duty to inform you of the fact that the treasury is in much need of funds. We have had frequent calls of late for aid, from the deserving poor among us; and as you are doubtless aware the traveling ministry need support, and means to bear their traveling expenses; and inasmuch as the Lord has given us instructions in the law of tithing, and free-will offerings, how these demands on us may be met, I hope that each branch in the district will give this appeal I make its serious consideration.

After so many lengthy articles written by the Bishopric on the law of tithing, it would be superfluous in me to undertake the task; and believing, with the Apostle James, that the love of God dwelleth not in the bosoms of those that shut up their bowels of compassion against their brethren, (this I believe applies to rich and poor alike), I appeal to your generosity, and also to your sense of duty, to assist me to meet the legitimate calls made upon me as your agent. Lest there should be any doubt or misunderstanding with any, as to where you shall forward your donations, I will state that the following named branches comprise the district, and should remit to me:—In Illinois: Plano, Kendall county; Sandwich, DeKalb county; Leland, Mission, and Streator, LaSalle county; Braidwood, Will county; Piper City, Ford county; Amboy, Lee county; Marengo, McHenry county; Pecatonica, Winnebago county; Burlington, Racine county, Wis.; Janesville, Wis. My post office address is Norway, LaSalle county, Ill. Money orders of all kinds must be sent on Seneca, LaSalle county, Ill., for the reason that Norway is not a money order office. Write this down in your pocket memoranda for future reference, and let me hear from you soon. Small sums will answer as well as large ones when it is the best you can do. Let us try the Lord and see if he will not open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing.

Anxiously awaiting a reply, and hoping that the various branch officers will assist me by placing the above appeal before the members, I subscribe myself your fellow laborer in the Master's cause,

THOMAS HOUGAS.

NORWAY, LaSalle County, Illinois.

INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION.

To the People of Iowa:

The second World's Exposition in the United States opens at New Orleans, December 1st, and will continue for six months, under the auspices of the National Government, the National Cotton Planters' Association and the City of New Orleans. From all indications it promises to surpass all former Inter-National exhibitions. Last February, under direction of an act of Congress, I recommended to the President of the United States for Commissioner for the State of Iowa for said Exposition, Mr. Herbert S. Fairall, of Iowa City, and for alternate Commissioner, Mr. John S. Ely, of Cedar Rapids, and their appointments were promptly confirmed. These Commissioners and others interested in the project, asked of the last General Assembly an appropriation to defray the expenses of an exhibit from Iowa, but owing largely to the fact that the full scope and possible magnitude of the Exposition were not realized, and to the pressure of business before the General Assembly, the bill was not reached at all in the Senate, and was only partly considered in the House. Since the adjournment, the loan of One Million Dollars to the Exposition, and the appropriation of $300,000 by Congress for a Federal exhibit, and the acceptance by all of the leading nations of the invitation of the Government to participate, has made the enterprise truly a National and Inter-National one, and insure its success. That Iowa should participate in such a World's Exposition needs no argument. Every public spirited citizen desires to see that our particular part of the old Louisiana purchase should be represented at the great gathering of the States and Territories of the Union and of Foreign Governments, dressed in her fairest garments, the brightest, handsomest, richest daughter of the old mother territory that now invites her children to visit her. The immense benefit that will accrue to the State by a proper exhibit of her resources and products need not here be enlarged upon. With the gift of $5,000, from the Congressional loan, Commissioner Fairall, his alternate, Commissioner Ely, and the Governor of the State, have succeeded in perfecting an organization for the work of preparing an exhibit. Over the several departments have been placed Superintendents who are thoroughly competent to discharge the important duties imposed upon them. In each County an assistant Commissioner has been appointed, and the co-operation of agricultural and kindred societies of the State has been secured. No better compliment to the plan of organization in Iowa can be paid than the adoption of it by other States of the Union. Once thoroughly organized, at a meeting of the Commission and Superintendents, an estimate as to the amount of money required to go on and complete the work, showed that at least thirty thousand dollars would be needed, and a very judicious plan has been devised by the Commission, and which I heartily endorse, to secure it. This is, for each County to raise its pro-rata of the sum by the assistance of public spirited citizens who will lend their credit for this worthy purpose, until the next General Assembly can defray the expenses of the exhibit. Within the two weeks since the plan was proposed, a large number of the Counties have raised their quota and are actively at work preparing their County exhibits. I earnestly urge the people of the State to assist in this commendable movement. All money so raised will be placed in the hands of the Treasurer of the Commission, Hon. John S. Ely, who will qualify in $50,000 bonds, and will be economically and carefully disbursed by the Commission.

In this connection and in order to leave no question as to the Commission being entirely within State authority, I hereby designate the United States Commissioners, Messrs. Fairall and Ely, as State Commissioners, and also appoint by Congressional Districts as Honorary Commissioners for the State the following gentlemen:

1st District—Col. G. B. Brackett, Denmark. 2d District—Hon. N. Merrell, Clinton. 3d District—Hon. J. K. Graves, Dubuque. 4th District—Hon. S. A. Converse, Cresco. 5th District—Hon. H. W. Lathrop, Iowa City. 6th District—Hon. W. T. Smith, Oskaloosa. 7th District—Hon. C. L. Watrous, Des Moines. 8th District—Col. H. H. Wright, Centerville. 9th District—Hon. B. F. Clayton, Macedonia. 10th District—Hon. D. D. Chase, Webster City. 11th District—Hon. H. C. Wheeler, Odebolt.

With assurances of very low rates of transportation, and the desire of our people to visit the South during the winter, there will certainly be a very large attendance of Iowa people at the World's Exposition. That the exhibit the Commission can make may be a credit to the State and a satisfaction to all Iowa visitors, I again urge the citizens of each County to see to it that the necessary funds are promptly raised, in order that there may be no delay in the work.

Again the hand of death has come,
And made an inroad in our home;
Our little girl, our joy and pride,
Must now lay by dear Willie's side.
How can I labor, day by day,
Without her smiles to cheer my way;
Her arms around my neck to twine,
And dear lips pressed in love to mine.
Oh! how my aching heart will miss
Her waking hour, her nightly kiss;
Her hands oft filled with flowers bright,
When following me from noon till night.
Oh God in heaven! grant me faith,
That I may bear this stroke of death;
And help me, through thine only son,
To say, thy Holy will be done.

Her mother, E. M. S.

SCOTT.—At Galena, Indiana, October 9th, 1884, of lung disease, Sr. M. R. Scott. She leaves a husband and five children. She endured a long illness without murmuring, and said she was willing to go and meet her loved ones who had gone before her.

PETERSON.—In Santa Rosa county, Florida, October 4th, 1884, of congestion of the brain, Cornelia Isabella, daughter of Bro. Joseph and Sr. Queen C. Peterson: born May 17th, 1881.

PURPOSE and effort are essential to success in every department in life. A man without a fixed purpose—a definite object before his mind, can not succeed, because he can not employ suitable means to secure an end, without having that end in view. If he has no clearly defined idea of what he wishes to accomplish, he can not select and employ suitable means for its promotion. Hence, as a general thing, a man who aims at nothing in particular, never accomplishes anything of importance. An aimless life is always a worthless life. Resolve to live for something, and for something worth living for.

A PROMISE should be given with caution, and kept with care. A promise should be made with the heart, and remembered by the head. A promise is the offspring of the intention; and should be nurtured by recollection. A promise and its performance should, like a true balance, always present a mutual adjustment. A promise delayed is justice deferred. A promise neglected is an untruth told. A promise attended to is a debt settled.

THE INCREASE OF CRIME.

An exchange commenting on the increase of crime says: "The country is overrun with fiends in human form, and there is not a spot outside the thoroughly policed districts where any man, woman or child can be considered absolutely safe from robbery, assault or murder. Something must be done to stem the tide of horrible crimes, and that right soon."

The paramount question is, What is the cause? Philanthropists differ on the subject, and also as to the remedy to be applied to check the evil. The increase of population and pauperism undoubtedly plays a leading part, but we believe more blame may be truly attached to the non-enforcement of the laws. Our law officers do not discharge their duties as they should. Criminals should be made to feel the strong arm of the law. Whatever the cause of crime this is the only cure.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, GEO. MONTAGUE.

GENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, Wm. ARND.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents. (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. We also furnish a Picture Outfit, consisting of a fine Water Color Portrait, (without frame), also small picture from which it was taken, and envelopes and cards, all by mail prepaid for only 98 cents.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Nov. 1st, 1884.

PRESIDENT JOHN TAYLOR.

JOHN TAYLOR, president of the Utah Mormon Church, and George Q. Cannon, one of the chief apostles, testified in the trial of Ruderger Clawson, before the United States Court, for the District of Utah, Judge Zane, presiding, that they did not know whether a record of the marriages celebrated in the Endowment House was kept, or not. Each testified to having celebrated marriages there but kept no minutes, and did not know if any were kept.

In one of our replies to Elder L. O. Littlefield, we charged that the system of polygamic marriages avowed and practiced in Utah involved such duplicity in the celebration of them that the persons engaging in those rites, both those married and those who administered in the rite, dare not tell the truth concerning those marriages; and also involved the necessity of keeping records that they dare not produce in court. To this charge no denial, or explanation was made. And now two of the highest officers in the church; whose position demands that they should know whether so important rites as it is claimed these plural marriages are, are properly recorded or not; men whose position also warrants all the adherents to the faith and all inquirers and lookers on in believing that they do know, and testify that they do not know if any such records are kept. This testimony, so given in the court in a trial where the fact of a second and polygamous marriage is in issue, is excellent proof to substantiate that the statement made by us in reply to Mr. Littlefield was correct.

What is the moral attitude of these men as leaders. They are called into court and there take oath that they will "testify, and the truth tell;" and when asked respecting the rites of marriage which it is notorious both believe and practice, both testify that they do not know. One outside can draw only one of two inferences; one is, that both do know but testify to the contrary; the other that the men are incompetent from ignorance for the high position that they hold. Men who hold so important an organization as the "patriarchal order" of "plural marriage" is stated to be; and who assert that they practice it because it was revealed from heaven, must know that if it came from God there would not be so loose provisions in it that those empowered to officiate in its ordinances should be ignorant of its every working characteristic and detail of operation. Either there are records kept in the endowment house in Salt Lake City, the temples at St. George and Logan, or there are not; and it would seem like folly for Pres. John Taylor and Apostle George Q. Cannon to say that they do not know whether there is, or not.

Again, when it is remembered that the revelation forming the base on which the polygamic superstructure rests, states that there is "never but one on the earth at a time holding this authority," (the right to seal in plural marriage), and that if in the restoration of it Joseph Smith was the first one, after him Brigham Young, and after him John Taylor, how is it possible that the only one now on earth holding that authority does not know whether Ruderger Clawson was, or was not so married by his authority, and whether such marriage was, or was not recorded.

Mrs. PADDOCK's letter to Joseph Cook, published in the New York Sun, thence in the Manchester, England, News; and from there reproduced in HERALD for October 4th, present year, has excited the ire of the Editor of the Deseret News. Forgetful of the lesson in journalism which the Editor attempted to teach us not many issues ago, he launches out thus, in the News for October 17th.

FOR SHAME!

The "Josephite" organ published at Lamoni, Iowa, has quit for a time making personal allusions to the editor of the Deseret News, and has taken to the reproduction of slanderous press dispatches and rank newspaper scandals about alleged affairs in Utah. The salacious stories written for a sensational press by a disreputable novelist, are nice things for a professedly "Mormon" paper to catch up with glee, are they not? Is not Joseph Smith ashamed to see the pages of the paper he edits defiled with the fishy stories that appear in his issue of October 4th? Does he not know that they are of the same character as the libels that his father had to meet all his ministerial life? Are these baseless diatribes sanctified because they are concocted against the Saints in Utah, and do not reflect upon the "Josephites?" What would he think if the Deseret News were we to pick up and print the nasty stories told about certain "Josephites," of the truth of which we have no more evidence than he has about the rubbish he reproduces?

We are of course opposed to the movement he represents, on principle and for good and sufficient reasons. And we freely accord him the right to oppose our views if he feels justified in so doing. But we did not expect to see him retailing groundless slanders and the puerile gossip of a female without character, simply because they are hostile to the Church in Utah. If he will ask his own soul whether he credits those stories, he will see how much he has lowered himself by copying them into a paper with the title of "The Saints' Herald."

If the Editor had been as astute as he should be, he would have seen that the letter of Mrs. Paddock was not published because there was anything "salacious," or "fishy" in it; but because the News as well as the elders of the Utah Church industriously endeavor to enforce the idea that no one, man or woman, is forced into polygamy. If Mrs. Paddock tells the truth in her letter; some, whose names she gives, have been as actually compelled to enter into the practice of plural marriage, as they would be if Pres. John Taylor had issued the edict and an High Priest had carried it into effect.

We are opposed to the system that the News represents. We have given due notice, years ago, that we should urge that opposition. We have insisted that God did not authorize the plural marriage dogma; and that circumstances of the nature stated by Mrs. Paddock if transpiring went far to show that our position was correct. We do not know whether the statements are true, or false. We give our authority for them; that authority mentions names and circumstances and place, all of which have the coloring of facts. In opposing the system which the News represents, an opposition, the right to which is conceded, we have believed that the practice was productive of evil, more evil than good. That the leaders in Utah sought to compel all over whom they could exercise the authority, to become involved with themselves in polygamic practices. That means was adopted that would compel prominent men useful to the powers that were to take more than one wife. That first wives, if they objected to their husbands taking others were disregarded, and their objections set aside and ignored. That women, young, or otherwise, were beset by enticements, pleadings and sometimes threats of various sorts, including "eternal damnation," to induce them to stifle the promptings of their hearts and accept polygamic wifehood. That if they persisted in opposing the principle, that they were denounced as apostate and were disdainfully treated by husbands and elders and those in polygamy. We have had some reasons for believing this. Mrs. Stenhouse relates such instances, Mrs. Waite also. Pres. John Taylor says, "We have authority to show that those who do not accept this doctrine shall be damned." Helen Mar Whitney wrote in review of a letter by us: "The Prophet said this order (plural marriage) would damn more than it would save, because it was a holy principle that could not be trifled with." The statement of Mrs. Paddock if true confirms what we have believed. We do not assert their truth, as we know nothing of them.

SOME exceptions have been taken to the article on the marriage law lately appearing in the HERALD; those exceptions being based upon the fact that the article was taken from the Chicago Tribune, a Republican partisan paper, in the midst of a hot political campaign, and because those making the exception, believe that the tendency of the article is to cheapen the law and decry the sacredness of the marriage contract. Of these two bases for objection we dispose of the first at once, by stating that its political bias, if it had any, was not thought of in its insertion by us. It was not for any political purpose that we called the attention of the Saints to it. Of the other objection we have this to say. To us, the statement of the laws of the different States affecting the marriage relation, for the purposes of information to the people who read the HERALD, is clearly within the province of that paper; nor do we see how that a knowledge of those laws, and the holding of the courts respecting them, can affect the Saints disastrously. The knowledge of the law of the land, however faulty or bad that law may be, ought not to work mischievously upon the understanding of those who accept God's rule regulating the marital relation, and declaring its sanctity. If the law is bad, the ruling of the courts upon it faulty, then there is need for a reformation in both; and there is no arena where the matter ought to be more safely and surely agitated for good than the church. Especially is this true in regard to Latter Day Saints. For the church originated in States where the institution of marriage was monogamic. Not one of all the States in which the church flourished until 1844 had other rule. The church in its declaration of principles avows recognition of this fact; and does so because the law of God given soon after its organization clearly stated that such monogamic rule was the one designed from the beginning. We have controversy on this point with a religious body claiming to be the church of Christ, but which has set aside both the law of 1831 and the laws of the land. A just argument in the premises is based on these laws of the State, these renditions of the courts, hence, we think it well that the people know of them.

Again, to us the enactments of the several States, together with the decisions of the courts on those enactments and the conclusions established by those decisions, are indicative of the respect in which the original institution of marriage is held among all men to whom the framing of the edicts of society has been trusted. They found the rule to be monogamic. They had regard to the sacredness of the contract made between two, one of either sex. The courts deemed it improper to vitiate that contract when once made, and so hold that evasions of the absolute letter of the law though perhaps punishable, do not destroy the contract between the two who made it.

But it is said that if marriage is only a civil contract, and that no ceremony is absolutely necessary to its legality, then persons who so choose may contract with one, or more, breaking off the first and all others at will. Not so; the contract like any other, entered into between parties is valid and binding between the parties making it, until the object for which it was made is accomplished, and for the term of time for which it was to run. The courts hold that marriage is for the life of the parties married; that the purposes for which it was instituted contemplate the life of the contracting parties for their proper fulfillment, hence allow of no interference by which this purpose may be defeated, not even permitting the law itself to vitiate this contract. It is of the gravest and highest conception of the marriage relation that the courts are dealing, and how any one can misunderstand the meaning of the law, and the rendering of the courts, we do not understand.

In a sermon delivered by President John Taylor, in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, October 5th, 1884, and reported in the Salt Lake Herald, of October 7th, occurs the following significant passage having reference to the so-called revelation on plural marriage: "We are told that we must change and make the revelation pliable to suit the demands of the day. I'll see them damned first, and then I won't. (Voices, "Amen.") We have authority to show that those who do not accept this doctrine will be damned."

The Weekly Star, a literary paper published at Plymouth, Pennsylvania, reaches us, containing a very eulogistic obituary of Bro. W. W. Jones, of whose death we published a notice in a late HERALD.

Bro. Syrenus Reed, formerly of Manassas, Colorado, now of Lone Elm, Tennessee, writes October 5th, that there has been no elder in there yet, but hopes that one may come. He thinks a good work might be done if the right man could come.

We learn from a notice in the Stewartsville, Missouri, Independent, that the Saints there have contracted for the building of their meeting house. No particulars given, except that the building is to be 36x60 feet in size.

Brethren Stuart and Jensen, of Mondamin, Harrison county, Iowa, have on hand twenty-five copies of the Des Moines, Iowa, State Register, for October 11th, fifty of the 14th, and twenty-five of the 15th, containing reports of the Reunion meeting, with sketches of sermons by Brn. E. Banta, J. Caffall, J. S. Roth, W. Whiting, E. C. Brand, H. A. Stebbins, J. F. McDowell, C. Derry, Joseph Smith and others, delivered during the session. Those who may desire these papers can secure them by sending 15cts in postage stamps to Stuart and Jensen, who will mail them one copy each of the three issues, or five cents per copy for any one of the three.

A discussion between Bro. I. N. White and Rev. J. Scull, is going on at Rhodes, Iowa, or was in progress on October 18th; so writes White Brothers, on that date.

Bro. J. F. McDowell filled an appointment for us at Mondamin, in the church there, on Monday evening, October 13th, and also one to lecture before Crescent Lodge No 118, Good Templars, at Crescent City, Iowa, under an invitation given by O. H. Barrett, secretary. For these kindnesses of Bro. McDowell in filling these appointments for us, from which we were called at the beck of the pale reaper, we are grateful. We are more grateful, because in filling them had good liberty, being blessed in his ministry at Mondamin, and helped at Crescent.

Bro. J. H. Hopkins, of Princeville, Peoria county, Illinois, has sent us a copy of music composed by himself, to our 4th hymn, "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah." It is very good. It may be had of Lyon & Healy, Chicago; A. B. Benjamin, Danville, Illinois, or J. H. Hopkins, Princeville, Illinois. Lovers of music, send for it.

Bro. W. W. Blair, wife, and sons William and Frederick arrived at Lamoni, October 14th, where their home will be for the future. The above named and David, constitute the family of Bro. Blair at the present, Frederick, the youngest, being fifteen years of age.

A sister living in the neighborhood of Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, has four children, which she would be glad to find homes for among the Saints. A second marriage makes it advisable for her to secure homes for these children if she can. The oldest, a boy, sixteen; the second, a daughter, fourteen; the other two, boys, one about eleven, the other nine. Permanent homes are desired. The mother is willing to apprentice these children, if those wishing to take them into their homes so desire. Correspondence may be had with Bro. D. D. Babcock, Nauvoo, Hancock county, Illinois, in regard to the matter. He is authorized to act for the mother in securing homes for the children.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Jobe Brown writes from LaCrosse, Wisconsin, October 19th, 1884, that on Thursday evening, 16th inst, while the Saints of LaCrosse, himself presiding, were holding a prayer meeting, Mr. Frank Burton was shot to death by Mr. Mitchell in the street near by; and that after the arrest of Mitchell and his lodgment in jail, a mob gathered, broke open the jail and lynched him by hanging. Of the prayer meeting Bro. Brown says:

"The Spirit's power was present to give light and peace, while this moral cyclone was raging without. We were glad to be thus in the line of duty and devotion, delivered from the raging and surging elements of commotion and destruction. Our advice to all the Saints is to escape out of the breakers of the last day. We are nearing the shore."

THE Harrison County, Iowa, News, of October 18th, in the Magnolia Department, has the following, which enables the Saints interested in the late Reunion meeting to "see themselves as others see them."

The camp meeting closed Sunday night, though a good many remained in camp until Monday morning. On Sunday the attendance was the largest. Some claimed there were five thousand people on the grounds. Taken as a whole it was a success. Good order prevailed all through the session. We have attended a great many meetings of this kind, but never saw such perfect order manifested day and night. Representatives from several states and territories were present. During the meeting fifty persons were baptized. The weather was all that could be desired, with the exception of a day or two. Among the notable men of that faith from abroad we noticed Pres. Joseph Smith and H. A. Stebbins, of the Saints' Herald; Elders W. W. Blair, E. Banta, of Lamoni, Iowa; Elders Brand and Kemp of Tabor; Elder A. White of Independence, Mo.; James Caffall of Council Bluffs; Edmund Briggs of Wheeler's Grove; B. V. Springer of Davis City, Iowa, and many others whose names your reporter failed to get. At a census taken during the week one thousand persons were permanently camped on the grounds. At the adjournment Sunday a vote of thanks was tendered the executive committee, also to the police for their efficiency in maintaining order. The next meeting will be held at Galland's Grove, Iowa, in one year.

THE Alliston, Ontario, Herald, for Thursday, October 9th, 1884, reaches us, by kindness of Bro. Thomas Morisy, from which we clip the following:

On Tuesday evening the Town Hall was again opened, and a meeting held by the supporters of the Act. Rev. Mr. Sibbald, of Belleville, was expected to be present, but through some unavoidable cause failed. Rev. Mr. Webber (Methodist) and Elder Joseph Luff, of Independence, Missouri, (Latter Day Saint) took up the cudgels of the temperance party against the liquor traffic. The former spoke for a couple of hours quoting statistics and reciting many anecdotes, and wound up by telling the people that it was their duty to go out to the polls on the 9th and vote for God's cause. Elder Luff made a thrilling and intelligent address, full of temperance ideas and suggestions for the carrying on of the temperance cause, and he left a very favorable impression upon the audience when resuming his seat.

The Scott Act, is an act of the Provincial Parliament restricting the liquor traffic. We can readily imagine the effect of the fiery declamation of Bro. Joseph Luff, when sprung upon an audience unexpectedly. Even at this distance we can almost feel the thrill of his utterances.

THE musical house of R. A. Saalfeld, 12th Bible House, New York, N. Y., have sent us copies of the following pieces of music:

With Cleveland we shall win the day, a veritable "Tippecanoe and Tyler Too" melody, by J. P. Skelly, which should carry the New York Governor to the White house. Cleveland and Hendricks' Grand Vivtory March by J. J. Freeman. Whether this March carries the Democratic Candidates to victory or not, the music is very pleasing and taking, You Ask Me To Forgive The Past, by Ed. Green,—a very taking little sentimental ballad, full of melody, which will surely find its way to the hearts of all. Better Luck To-morrow, by Henry Martyn. A new motto song; full of hope, good cheer and downright sensible thought. Music very good. Words excellent. Amatori Waltzes, by Frank Conway. The above pieces retail at Music Stores for from 30 to 50 cts. each. The five would cost $2.10. The publisher however offers to send the lot post free on receipt of $1.00.

Correspondence.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,

October 15th, 1884.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I left home on the 17th ult. for the Rocky Mountain Mission; stopped over night with brother Joseph Dove, in Omaha; and on the 18th I left there for the West. At twelve o'clock of the 19th I arrived at Cheyenne. I stopped over with brother John Eames until Sunday evening, when I left for Ogden. I thought to hold a few meetings at Cheyenne, but the branch was scattered and Bro. Eames thought the interest at that time would not warrant the undertaking. I thank brother and sister Eames for their kindness to me. From Cheyenne we passed over the Rocky Mountains' "Main Divide" in the night. Next morning stopped at Grand River City for breakfast. I there stopped over with brother Mitchell Stephens until the 26th. I tried to hold some meetings there, but failed to get an audience. I spoke to a few persons on two evenings. A theatrical troupe were there the three evenings I remained, and the hall occupied by them was the center of attraction. I presume the people enjoyed the music and the performances as many attended.

I enjoyed my visit with brother and sister Stephens; and also both their sons-in-law and families. These too have my thanks for favors conferred. I left them all feeling well and glad they had been visited. They were expecting a visit from Bro. E. C. Brand on his way East; they felt a little disappointed when they learned he had gone home. On the evening of the 26th I arrived in Ogden; called on brother and sister Hart a few moments; then walked out to Bro. Wells Chase's; remained over night with them, and I will only say I had a good time. Next morning I rode into Salt Lake City, over the Denver and Rio Grande R. R. I went immediately to Joseph Wilson's in the Fifteenth Ward, where I received a hearty welcome and a home—yes, to me a God-blessed home. After shaking the dust from my skirts, I took a bee-line for brother Robert Warnock's, where I received a hearty welcome by him and sister W., brother Weston and others. On Sunday I met with the Saints in the Chapel, where I was met by many old friends, and some new ones, with joy. They are a warm hearted people; may the Lord ever bless them for their kind deeds and steadfastness. They were feeling well; Bro. A. H. Smith had just left them; T. W. and sister S. had left before. The Saints were still rejoicing in the labor done, and the bright prospects revealed from above.

I was billed to speak to the people at half-past two, and half-past seven p.m. I felt entirely unfitted for the work. My desire and prayers were that I might fairly acquit myself, but for some reason I could not do what I wanted to do. I did the best I could and the Saints did not manifest any degree of disappointment; all of which made me feel well, and I consoled myself with the thought that all was well. There seems to be some interest in Salt Lake City. The Saints are feeling well, and the meetings are spiritual and cheering. How the prospects are in the county, I am not prepared to say. Reports are favorable for great good to be done among the Danish people, if we only had elders to do the work. Bro. Ekmark is now on his way South, to labor amongst that people; we need two or three more. Now is a good time to strike. The Mission needs a good able man in the city all the time. The branches need visiting also, and much preaching done. If there can be no help sent here, the work will languish in many places. From advices from different parts I learn there is great need of labor. I will do all I can and that will be but little. The work is the Lord's; we will try to do what we can with the means at hand, and trust in God.

Your brother in Christ,

R. J. ANTHONY.

LELAND, Ill., October 16th, 1884.

Dear Brother:—It was very interesting for me to see what I did out in Utah. I have seen ten different ones from there that I was acquainted with. There were some that were not very strong in the faith. I saw all I could; I saw with much wonderment that Brigham's grave had no monument, no inscription. We at Leland are very few, but are trying to hold to the faith. I hope we may gain strength.

From your brother,

ODIN JACOBS.

SACO, Maine,

October 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I trust that the word of the Lord shall yet go forth in these places about here. There are some that are beginning to listen that have always been very indifferent; and one woman of good understanding says "I never thought that I should be ready to fight for Mormon Doctrine, but I am." She is one that I have known for the past ten years, and I have great respect for her. I carry the Herald to her every week. She believes you to be an honest man; and you have been a great help to me, brother Joseph. I can easily believe this latter day work; it is what I wanted to know for years; it meets every want of the soul. I am somewhat past middle life, but this good news of the gospel makes me laugh at old age. Why, it is the fountain of eternal youth. It is my wish to obey the Lord in all things. May the Lord bless and keep you, brother Joseph, is my prayer.

Yours in love of the truth,

SARAH M. SULLIVAN.

BEATRICE, Nebraska,

October 15th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I remained at Xenia for about a week, and the Father was kind in bestowing the light of the Holy Spirit, to guide the tongue in telling the good tidings. Some few seemed to be truly and deeply concerned in the examination of the doctrine as by us presented. We were a little disappointed in the object of our visit there, but not in the least discouraged; and will try to believe that when the clouds blow past, and the light of truth is understood, that all will be right. Comfort comes to us by cheerfully submitting to the happenings constantly occurring. Went home on the 16th, to be present at the marriage of my two sisters, and before I got ready to leave home my two little girls were taken sick, and I was detained a week caring for them. And at the earnest request of our worthy branch president, I remained a few days to assist in his business. On the 4th I went to Wilber, and the next day began meetings at the school-house, two miles south of town. The interest was so intense that I continued for ten days, and I think that at no time has there appeared such a golden opportunity as now, to accomplish good for the cause. The last two added has created a new feeling against us; one was from the Christian and the other from the United Brethren Church, and the minister of this last body, was considerably chagrined at the loss of a good member; and therefore he could not forbear making some very harsh expressions, and submitted for discussion the following propositions:

1. Resolved, That the Book of Mormon is not in harmony with the teachings of the Bible.
2. That the Mormon church is the only true church according to the Bible.

I addressed the Rev. Austin upon the question of debate, expressing a willingness to negate the first question, and instead of his second resolution I offered to affirm this:

Resolved, That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, teaches the same organization, principles of doctrine, and spiritual blessings, as set forth in the Scriptures.

I also asked that he affirm a like resolution for his church. After preaching a sermon, lashing us over the back of Spiritualism, he made reply from the stand "That after awhile, when there was no presidential election, when the nights are longer, the people have nothing else to interest them, and I am forced into a corner, I might discuss. I am no coward, and if I have to fight, somebody may get hurt." As for my substitute, would not discuss that, because he had no time to run all over the United States to find out what we did teach. And in reply to my request that he affirm for his church the same as I was willing to for mine, his reply was, "I am old, but not such a fool as to affirm a doubtful question." I took a careful notice of the man's ability, and charity prompted me to let him escape "scott free." I am inclined to think that he and his people have learned a lesson not to be soon forgotten.

I was greatly disappointed in not being privileged to attend the Reunion. The want of those "sinews of war" as mentioned by the committee, caused me to forego that spiritual feast that I so much desired to enjoy. But let me bear witness that God has been very kind, and richly blessed me with his Spirit, while I have faithfully labored to set before the people the requirements of God, and the duty of man to obtain the crown of eternal life. The crops of this state were never better than this year, and up to date only one light frost. Hoping and praying for the spread and establishment of the gospel.

As ever,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

PITTSBURG, Pennsylvania,

October 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Will you please as early as convenient through the Herald answer the following questions.

1st. If a district president appoints a court of Elders by request of a branch president, who is prosecutor in the case, and he (the district president appoints and sits upon the case) and said court finds against the defendant, and recommends to the branch that he (the defendant) make public acknowledgement to the branch, and the branch by vote accepts its decision; is it proper for that branch by motion to set a time say three months for the defendant to fulfill the requirements of the branch through courts decision or receive at the end of that time the penalty following such failure (that penalty of course to be in accordance with law relating to said case)? Yes.

If a Priest having been elected to the office of president of a branch, shall while acting in said office be ordained to the office of an Elder, does said ordination in any way affect his standing as president of the branch, or make his re-election necessary? No.

PARIS LANDING, Henry Co., Tenn.,

October 15th, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—After writing you from Fulton, Kentucky, I came with Bro. Turnbow to his place near Farmington. I preached seven discourses at the chapel to fair audiences, and baptized one. From there came to Foundry Hill, where I held some meetings and was blessed with good liberty. Bro. Peter Seaton brought me to Eagle Creek Branch; two more were baptized here by Bro. W. H. Griffin, on the 18th of September. I called a meeting of the Saints to convene on the fourth and fifth of October, at Foundry Hill, to consider the matter of a district organization. The meeting was not as well attended as we wished, but enough were present to do business and we proceeded to organize a district, to be known as the Western District of Tennessee and Kentucky. Bro. Peter B. Seaton was called to preside, and Bro. W. H. Griffin chosen assistant, and both were ordained Elders. The Spirit was present to witness to the acceptance of the call of these brethren to the ministry, giving comfort and joy. Prospects are not flattering in this part of the mission; but I feel that a brighter day is dawning. I have not been able to do as much preaching as I desired to do, but have labored as health and circumstances permitted. I desire the prayers of the Saints that I may have health to labor, and wisdom to direct my labors for the greatest good of the cause.

I have just finished reading the Braden-Kelley Debate. I think Braden is entitled to be called the prince of vilifiers. To say that I am pleased with Bro. Kelley's able and manly defense, would but poorly express my appreciation of its merit. I expect to go on south in time to attend the Florida conference in December. With love to the Saints, I remain your brother in hope of final triumph,

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

No. 4729 Jacob St.,

WHEELING, W. Va.,

October 14th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The last time I wrote the Herald I was at Graysville, Ohio. Delivered twenty-four sermons without intermission, to a large audience, and enjoyed excellent liberty. Baptized two; a Mr. Thomas Hubbard, who had been a member of the M. E. Church for sixty years, and has been one of the persecutors of the Saints in that part of the country for many years. The other, Mrs. Ann Farra, in her eightieth year. She had been a Campbellite for upwards of fifty years. I left about twenty-five persons who were much interested in the doctrine, but would not unite with the Church on account of the despicable actions of some of the Saints in days gone by. The Church has never suffered more reproach in any part of the world than in Monroe county, Ohio. And it was all brought on by some Elders and a few Saints. It seems that much good can not be done there, unless the parties who did the wrong make public restitution to the people there. To make restitution to a few Saints seventy-five miles or more away, will never remove the reproach where the evil was done.

Our conference, which convened on the 4th and 5th inst., passed off pleasantly. Measures were adopted which will, I believe, be conducive of much good to the district. The preaching was excellent; the Spirit which giveth liberty attended the same. Bro. Ells and I started the 9th inst. for Clarksburg and Cabin Run. Our aged brother is enjoying very good health at present. He will soon go into winter quarters at Pittsburg, Pa. I feel well spiritually and physically.

Yours for truth,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.,

October 13th, 1884.

Bro. Jos. Smith:—Our conference has closed. Our brethren gave some good instruction. Our aged brother, James Whitehead of Alton, was present, and tried to cheer on the Saints. Bro. Bronson has returned home. (He is a noble soul—works hard for Zion's cause.) Bro. J. C. Foss is still with us, doing what he can. You will see by the little book I sent you, that the Rev. Clark Braden (wolf in sheep's clothing) is still doing all he can to injure the work of God; but the tide will turn against him. He is a great advertising agent to sell the Kelley and Braden Debate. He is trying to make money out of the speculation. I hope and pray that all people will read and learn which is the gospel of Jesus Christ. We have no need to fear: the sheep will know the Shepherd's voice; and for all that Mr. Braden or any other man can do, the work of God will still go on; and the Book of Mormon still lives to comfort Latter Day Israel. The Lord says in the Doctrine and Covenants he will hasten his work in its time: the more these fellows stir up the Latter Day Saints, the sooner that time will come. I shall do all I can to hold up the Banner. The St. Louis Saints have not gone back on Bro. Kelley, and will not so long as he keeps in the right track, that is defends the Book of Mormon. He has our faith and prayers.

NOAH NEPHI COOKE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.,

October 12th, 1884.

Dear Brother Joseph:—We were made glad a few days since by the arrival of Apostle T. W. Smith; and we were much pleased to sit within the sound of his voice, and listen to his wise teaching and instruction; and to be confirmed in the fact that whoever preaches the gospel of Jesus Christ will present the same truths that Christ and the apostles taught eighteen hundred years ago. Bro. Smith preached in this city and at Oakland to good audiences. On each occasion I had the pleasure of being present. He and wife also attended our prayer meetings in each city, where we had a good portion of the Spirit, prophecy and tongues being given in both instances, and the sweet hallowed influence of the Holy Ghost certified unto us of the divine origin of what was the truth of the great latter day work. Wednesday, October 1st, at 10 a. m., Bro. and Sr. Smith sailed on the Tropic Bird, for Tahiti. A little party of us, eleven in number, accompanied them to the boat, and saw them off, on their long voyage, and wished them God-speed. Their vessel was a barkentine, with four natives of Tahiti among the crew; the captain seemed to be a very pleasant man. There was only two or three other passengers, so they will have every attention and liberty. Now they are far out on the rolling deep.

All goes nicely with us here in our city; and we hope that a new era has opened for us, as some few are giving heed to the gospel call, and uniting with us; and we are in hope that more will soon follow, as many have been listening and enquiring for some time. Our meetings are quite well attended, and we are doing our best to keep the truth before the people; and if the honest are not warned in San Francisco, it will not be our fault. May God bless our efforts, as well as those put forth by the Saints everywhere, is the prayer of yours in the faith,

GEO. S. LINCOLN.

DES MOINES, IOWA,

September 24th, 1884.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—I love to read the Herald; many good lessons we get in it, and we ought to practice what we learn. I went to testimony meeting last Sunday. I arose and told my desires; but I was left alone without the gentle, yet burning influence of the Holy Spirit; and I felt sad. I besought the Lord to give it unto me, and shortly after, when Bro. Ray was speaking, it was given me abundantly. He was saying how strange it was, that while we have so many privileges, we do not do better than we do. We meet together, and yet do not prize it enough to do our part towards having a good meeting often times. As he said, we have the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and hymn book; we ought to live right. Besides this, we have Jesus the Mediator, who was in all points tempted like as we are; so he is able to succor them that are tempted. I wonder he has borne with me as long as he has, so small a return has my life been; but I feel to praise him, that he has, and that my heart is growing to love this latter day work better the stronger my knowledge becomes. I feel to say to all, I have the satisfaction of knowing this is the Lord's work, or it is not to be found on earth at all. I ever pray that we all, as brothers and sisters, may try to step in the footsteps of our dear Savior, who I know will lend a helping hand, whenever we are likely to step wrong, if we ask him. Let us learn to trust him.

"When darkness veils His glorious face,
I trust in His unchanging grace."

I pray the Lord to help us to keep faithful to the end. Your sister in the gospel, SARAH H. WYMAN.

WHEATVILLE, Wis.,

October 17th, 1884.

I would say our conference is over. We had a good time. I think it was the best one we ever had in this district. I think I am safe in saying the district is improving. I, with the rest of the Saints here, ask the prayers of the Saints everywhere, for this district.

As ever, in gospel bonds,

A. L. WHITEAKER.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

October 17th.—Fresh forces of Chinese are invading Tonquin. Gen. Briere de Lisle, the French commander, telegraphs that many European officers are in the Chinese army. Five French men-of-war are stationed before Kelung and eight before Tamsui. The Chinese are fortifying the heights and refuse to surrender their positions. The natives in Southern Formosa are harassing the Chinese troops, who are asking for reinforcements. Admiral Courbet has decided to blockade the northern coast of Formosa before he orders a renewal of the attack upon Tamsui. The Admiral telegraphed his Government that he expects to resume offensive operations on land and sea next week.

It is believed that Osman Digma, the rebel leader, will succeed in massing his forces at Tamai. The English have lost their chance of crushing him for the present. Both the weather and the crops favor him. The special messenger has returned from Wady Garna. He reports the inhabitants there declare the steamer which ran aground some days ago had a quantity of money on board which belonged to the Greek Consul. There were forty Europeans and natives on the steamer. The steamer was armed and carried the booty which had been captured by the party in fights with the rebels. It had also on board the heads of the rebels who were killed at Khartoum. When the steamer ran aground at Salammat the inhabitants were terrified. The messenger repeats the story of treachery and massacre to which the people on the steamer were subjected. He says there were no whites among the prisoners.

The steamer Ferry, with forty rowboats on board, has arrived at Dongola. Osman Narredin, an inhabitant of Korte, has arrived at Wady Halfa, from Khartoum, having been fourteen days on the way. He was present at Khartoum during the whole siege. He saw Gordon capture a number of guns and rifles from the rebels. He says the road from Khartoum to Sennaar is free of rebels. Gordon's steamers, after bombarding Berber, Djelyeelyeen, and Mimneh returned in safety to Khartoum. Kashmil Pasha has undertaken to occupy Berber with a force which Gordon was getting in readiness at the time Narredin left. The Mahdi came to Shatt, only six days' journey from Khartoum, but, on hearing of the insurrection at Gab-el-Deir, was forced to turn back. Before starting, he summoned the tribesmen and villagers to accompany him, but very few obeyed. The Mahdi had left Mahmoud Abdel Kadir in command at El Obeid, with only 5,000 troops. The Bakkara tribesmen and the inhabitants of Geb-el-Deir, joined by 100 Egyptian troops, made an attack on El Obeid and captured a number of slaves and cattle. The attacking party was so much encouraged by their success that they threatened to renew the assault.

The origin of the rupture between the Government at Buenos Ayres, S. A., and the Papal Nuncio was the proposal of the latter to the Government not to allow the propagation of Protestant doctrines, and to recognize the right of the Bishop to interfere in schools. The Government refusing acquiescence, the Nuncio sent a letter couched in what was regarded as very violent terms and citing articles in the Tribuna National which he erroneously claimed bears an official character.

Serious riots are reported at the mouth of the Michipicoten River, on the north shore of Lake Superior, growing out of sales of illicit whiskey. The liquor-dealers openly defy the law.

From many sections of Upper South Carolina come reports of an unprecedented drouth, in consequence of which water-courses are failing, and the effects on vegetation are being seriously felt. In many localities no rain has fallen in eight weeks, and the prospect of an early rain is as remote today as it was one month ago. The temperature is remarkably warm for the season, in consequence of which cotton is opening more rapidly than the planters can have it gathered. Several large streams have dried up, and a large number of mills have been forced to stop for want of water. In several sections peach and apple trees are in bloom again. An apple orchard in Lancaster County has produced three crops of fruit this year. Altogether, the season is one of the most remarkable ever known in South Carolina. The drouth is now nearly eleven weeks old, and there are no indications of rain. There is much inconvenience and some suffering all over the South. Springs, wells, and branches are dried up, and long drives to rivers have to be made to water cattle. The rivers themselves are very low, and gradually reaching the point in 1836, when the Alabama could be waded at Montgomery. The cotton crop was burned out more than three weeks ago, and very little top crop can be made, and this little only in the lowlands. The turnip crop, also much relied upon for stock feed, is a failure completely. Meantime no seed can come up, and the farmers are continually re-sowing in the hope that rain may come. This is particularly true of winter cabbage. Fortunately this drouth began two weeks later than the drouth last year, and cotton had a better chance to mature.

Oct. 18.—The result of the coming struggle in the British Parliament, is awaited with great interest.

In France politics are in a condition of panic, and mixed protection is now the universal gospel, owing to the bad prices of wheat and cattle, and no financier can see any way for filling up the awful chasm of national debt. Ferry is supposed to have a good chance of staying in power because of the closeness of the general election and the hold he has over the future fortunes of existing Deputies by his control of the office holding and other administrative machinery of the country.

During the last twenty-four hours there were sixty-four fresh cases of cholera at Naples and thirty-seven deaths. At Genoa no fresh cases were reported, but there were six deaths. In Italy during the last twenty-four hours there have been 166 fresh cases of cholera and 102 deaths.

After all delays, the new Bennett-Mackay ocean cable found a safe resting-place for its American end at 12:30 o'clock to-day in the pretty little cottage prepared for its reception on Manhattan Beach, just east of the Oriental Hotel, New York.

The Clawson polygamy trial at Salt Lake City, Utah, was finished to-day. A verdict has not been rendered yet. The mother of the alleged second wife swore that though she visited her daughter living with Clawson, she never inquired whether she married him or not. The father of the accused testified that he never talked with his son about the matter till after the indictment was out. Other relatives swore similarly. President Taylor said there could be no marriages at the Endowment House unless authorized by him or those he gave authority. He had authorized probably one hundred, but could not recollect the names of them. George Q. Cannon swore that he didn't know about the records of the Endowment House. James E. Caine, a son of Delegate Caine, was again on the stand to-day. He reaffirmed his former testimony of the admissions of the accused. He said Clawson talked to him about his evidence, and expressed doubt about the accuracy of the language. He said he had no doubt that he told Clawson that he didn't give a —; that he would tell the truth. The testimony of the defense was mainly impeaching the witnesses of the prosecution. After it was through the lawyers said the case was far stronger than before the defense offered any testimony. The jury finally disagreed.

October 20th.—The Belgian Liberals were generally successful in the municipal elections Sunday. They urge a dissolution of Parliament, now controlled by the Clericals. The latter are not disposed to surrender their advantage.

A Chinese pamphlet against Europeans has been published in Hong Kong. It asserts that the Europeans are not human beings at all, but wild animals descended from monkeys. They worship neither the heavens nor the earth. They do not honor their parents nor ancients. They come into China pretending to preach a religion which they do not practice themselves, and forcibly introduce vice and crime into that country.

It is reported that the Chinese have made an attack on Thai Ngyen, in Upper Tonquin, and been repulsed with heavy loss. Gen. Briere de l'Isle telegraphs from Hai Phong, under date to-day, that large masses of the enemy appeared in the Red River region the 13th inst, and made an attack on Tugen Kwang. They were defeated with great loss.

It is reported that the Chinese are fleeing from Shanghi in fear that the city will be bombarded by the French. A dispatch has been received at the Chinese Embassy at Berlin, confirming the statement that the Chinese under Lin Mingschuan defeated 1,800 French at Tamsui the 15th inst. The French operations there were frustrated by torpedoes.

Further reinforcements are going from Constantinople to Yemen, in West Arabia, where the revolt against the Turkish Government still continues.

October 21st.—In the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday M. Louriquis placed upon the table an amendment to the Cattle Customs bill, which proposes to fix a duty of five francs per 100 kilograms on foreign corn. The amendment also proposes that the municipal authorities in the provinces be empowered to fix the price of bread and meat. The increase of the municipal budget by 3,500,000 francs for the assistance of the poor shows clearly that destitution is extending in Paris.

The High Commissioner of Canada has obtained assurances that England will confirm the commercial treaty between the Dominion and Spain. If this treaty is concluded negotiations will be commenced to include Cuba and Porto Rico in the terms of the treaty.

Chinese troops continue to pour into Tonquin. Great uneasiness is felt in Paris on this account. The Cabinet is divided as to what measures should be adopted to provide reinforcements. Gen. Camponon, Minister of War, declines to mobilize the corps d'armé without the authority of the Chambers. Chinese advices state a French corvet has been exchanging shots with the Tai-Wan forts on the west coast of Formosa. The corvet subjects all approaching steamers to search. Gen. de l'Isle has not asked for reinforcements for Tonquin. If they are needed they will be drawn from the army in Africa, without mobilizing the corps d'armé.

Gen. de l'Isle advises the Government that an effective force of 20,000 is necessary to continue offensive operations and repel invasion in Tonquin. Figaro says the plan of the campaign of Gen. de l'Isle, as presented to the Government, provides for the formation of two columns of 10,000 men each. The first column is to oppose the coming of Chinese from Kwang-Si. The base of operations of this column will be Phulang, and its objective points Bacle and Lang-Sou. The second column is to operate against the Chinese from Yun-Nan, having Hong-Hoa as a base and Lao-Koi and Caobang as objective points.

The Times' Hong Kong dispatch says: Official notification was made to-day to the Powers that the French have blockaded the Formosan coast.

During the last twenty-four hours there were ninety-six fresh cases of cholera in Italy and forty-five deaths. Quarantine against Spain has been discontinued.

The famous Contentin butter of Normandy, which sells in Paris at $1.25 per pound, is stated to be very pure, says the Philadelphia Record. The cows are brushed and kept very clean, the udders are carefully washed and dried, and the attendants and milkers keep themselves clean. The milk is doubly strained and set in a cool and neat room, and extra care is exercised in skimming it, while the churning is conducted on the best principles regarding temperature, and throughout the whole operation—from the milking to the delivery to the customer—the most rigid rule of observance is cleanliness. No odors are allowed to come in contact with the milk at any time, and even the food and water of the cows are carefully inspected.

Oct. 22.—Great excitement prevails in Belgium over the collisions between the Clericals and Liberals. Riots have been frequent.

George Otto Trevelyan has resigned his position as Chief Secretary for Ireland. Henry Campbell Bannerman, member of Parliament for Stirling, has been appointed his successor.

The police of St. Petersburg, Russia, seized a secret press the 19th inst. They discovered documents with the press which showed arrangements were being perfected to make an attempt on the Czar's life. There have been many arrests. The court-martial in the case of the prisoners who took part in the anti-Jewish riots at Kunarvin in June has sentenced eleven to periods varying from twelve to twenty years at hard labor for man-slaughter; twenty-seven to periods varying from one to three years for robbery; and sixteen to shorter periods. One prisoner was banished to Siberia, and eleven were acquitted.

During the last twenty-four hours twenty-three fresh cases of cholera and four deaths occurred at Naples. There were two deaths at Genoa. During the last twenty-four hours there were 110 fresh cases of cholera and thirty-one deaths throughout Italy.

The United States census for 1880 shows that there were then 886,659 white males of 21 years and upward who could not write, out of a total 11,343,005; and 2,149,900 colored males of 21 years old and upward who could not write, out of a total of 2,937,235.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

October 17th.—At noon Wednesday a fire broke out in the hold of the steamer Nevada of the Guion Line, from New York for Queenstown. By the exertions of the crew, aided by the passengers, the fire was subdued, though not quite extinguished. A portion of the cargo had to be thrown overboard. The steamer arrived at Queensrown to-day and shipped a fresh crew, the old one being quite exhausted. The fire resulted from spontaneous combustion. One of the officers was disabled. Some of the sailors were seriously injured. Loss by fire at Montague, Mich., $100,000. The fire was incendiary. Minneapolis, Minn., $8,000. Near Ann Arbor, Mich., woolen mills, $45,000.

The forest-fires in Atlantic County, New Jersey, are raging with unabated fury. Much valuable timber has been destroyed. Wednesday the fire swept with resistless fury through nine miles of woodland in two hours, but fortunately burned away from inhabited places. The smoke was almost suffocating last night. Among the losses reported are $15,000 by the Atlantic Cranberry Company, 275 acres of their bog being burned over. The Lake cranberry bog is also burned.

October 18th.—Loss by fire at Edgefield, S. C., $100,000. Morris, Ill., $10,000. Cochran, Ga., $25,000. Barnsville, Ga., four fifths of the business part of the town, $175,000. Chicago, Ill., $1,450. New Haven, Conn., $20,000. Easton, Pa., incendiary, $18,000. New York City, $37,000.

An express-train on the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago Railroad was wrecked near Greencastle, Ind., early this morning. All the cars and the engine were burned. The accident was caused by a switch being misplaced by some miscreant. The passengers were badly scared and bruised. Some of the train-hands were seriously hurt, none fatally. The damage is placed at $75,000.

An express-train on the Boston & Albany Road was wrecked near Kinderhook, N. Y., Friday night. Rails were placed across the track at this point, and the train was moving at the rate of forty miles per hour at the time of the accident. The engineer and fireman were badly injured, and three other train hands sustained injuries. The damage is estimated at $30,000. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the discovery of the train-wreckers.

October 19th.—A fire which broke out in Plymouth street, Brooklyn, N. Y., destroyed property worth $100,000.

Forest fires broke out today back of Tawas City and to the north of East Tawas, Mich., at head of Tawas Lake, and are spreading rapidly. Everything is dry. The flames are driven by a furious gale. The winds today and yesterday fanned the forest fires in New Jersey. Last night six fires could be seen from Waterford, on the Camden & Atlantic Railroad, and the people of that village were nearly smoked out. Hundreds of men are fighting the flames. Fires are burning in Prince George County, extending a short distance from this city to Disputanta, on the Norfolk & Western Railroad. Loss by fire at Minneapolis, Minn., $2,000. Logansport, Ind., $7,000. Mackinaw, Ill., $5,000. Long Island City, L. I., $20,000. Farmville, Va., $10,000.

Near Exeter, Pa., Saturday afternoon, an engine ran into a train, killing one man, and injuring several others.

October 20th.—At West Carthage, N. Y., two hundred houses were destroyed by fire. Loss by fire at New York City, $100,000. In the Hocking Valley, Ohio, four mines are on fire, and burning fiercely. Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $10,000. Huron, Dak., $2,500.

Heavy rains are reported in Jamaica. The rainfall the evening of the 7th was six and three-quarters inches. Railway bridges were flooded to a depth of two feet. Telegraphic communication was interrupted throughout the island. A vessel arrived reported that it passed a large quantity of trees and vegetable matter, evidently washed from off the different West India Islands through the heavy rains. By the explosion of a thrashing machine boiler, near Crookston, Minn., five men were killed.

Oct. 21.—A German theatre and seventy-six shops were destroyed by fire here. The damage is estimated at 3,000,000 rubles. The fire at Carthage, N. Y., Monday, destroyed $500,000 worth of property. Loss by fire at Pawtucket, R. I., $100,000. Grand Marais, Mich., a hotel, one man perished in the flames. Chicago, Ill., $1,000. Winamac, Ind., $4,000. Atlanta, Ga., $15,000. Belfield, Va., $10,000.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

There were 192 business failures in the United States and twenty-six in Canada during the week ending October 17, against an aggregate of 220 the previous week. Failures were numerous in Texas and the South generally.

The terrible and universal depression of trade in England, threatens to drive every other question into the background. Things have gone so far that the newspapers have now sent special correspondents to the distressed towns in the north of England, and they fill their journals with tales of dreadful destitution caused by the almost complete standstill of the shipbuilding trade. The other trades of the country are making the same complaints. No mine is worked at full time. Wheat-growers declare that the crop does not pay for the wages, to say nothing of rent. The tea merchants assert that each pound sold wholesale brings a penny less than was given at the China port; and so on. Under these circumstances the cry for a return to protection was inevitable, and the tory leaders are seriously flirting with the question. Churchill has, of course, gone further than any body else, and has provoked the decorous Spectator to the remark that he is the one real demagogue in England, and that he is capable, if he can so charm the masses, to vote down not only the Ten Commandments, but the multiplication table. The distress at shipbuilding centers in the north is increasing. Trade on the Tyne and adjacent districts, is paralyzed. Forty ocean steamers are lying idle in the docks at Sunderland, most of the shipyards being closed. Public subscriptions are making for laborers out of employment.

The attempt of the New England branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph Company to get the right of way for its poles on the railroad land already occupied by the Western Union Company is resisted by the latter on the ground of its contracts with the railroads, which give it the right exclusively to place poles by the side of their tracks. But in Texas, where the same question has been contested by the same companies, the courts have permitted the Baltimore & Ohio, as is told in our dispatches, to put its poles on the lands of the Texas Pacific, which, with the telegraph line already in operation, is controlled by Mr. Gould. In consequence of this decision the Baltimore & Ohio is pressing forward the work of construction to a connection with all the important points. The decisions of the Texas courts appear to rest on the statutes of Texas, which are peculiarly favorable to telegraph competition.

The balance of the miners in the Ohio Central and Buckeye Creek regions have struck for an advance in the rate of mining to 80 cents per ton. These include the mines of W. P. Rend, the Sandy Creek Coal Company, and the Columbus & Eastern Railway Company. The operators have refused to accede to the demand, and the miners will not resume work to-morrow morning. This action will cut off the heavy contributions from the Ohio Central which have been made to the striking miners in the Hocking Valley.

The Enterprise Factory, shut down six weeks, commences to run on full time to-morrow. The Augusta and King Mills are running on full time. The wages have been reduced 25 per cent. The three mills employ 1,800 hands. The Sibley Mill, which employs 600 hands, is putting in additional machinery. The Algernon Mill is also running. Some other small mills, shut down for several weeks, will soon commence running at reduced wages.

The clearing-house receipts of the leading cities of the United States last week show a decrease as compared with the corresponding week of last year of 36.5 per cent. The decrease in New York is 43.6 per cent. In Chicago the decrease has been 14.5 per cent.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the English corn trade says: "The weather last week was fine and warm. English wheat was in little demand, except for fine parcels. Sales of the week were 73,412 quarters at 32s. 4d., against 65,388 quarters at 42s. 6d., for the corresponding week last year. Trade in foreign wheat was completely demoralized. Waterside stocks and visible supply are increasing. Business in cargoes off coast is unchanged. There were five arrivals. Three cargoes were sold, three were withdrawn, and one remained. Sixteen cargoes are now due. Flour is neglected. Maize is scarce and firm. Barley is very dull. Old oats are 3s. 6d. dearer. New foreign 'oat's are weaker.

The excitement on the London, Eng., Stock Exchange, Oct. 20., over American and Canadian securities amounted to a small panic. The depression at the opening was so marked and sudden that even consols as well as English railway shares showed a sympathetic weakness. The fall in the latter is, however, attributed by some large dealers to the recent successes of American manufacturers of steel rails, who have secured favorable contracts in Canada and elsewhere, notwithstanding the sharp competition of English producers. In this connection the contract of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company with a Pennsylvania firm is prominently mentioned.

The cotton-mills at Fall River, Mass., shut down October 20. It is reported that 10,000 people are out of employment there.

Crawshaw Brothers, extensive iron manufacturers of Merthyr-Tydvil, Wales have failed. Other disasters in the same trade in Great Britain are anticipated. The business situation generally is alarming.

The exports of manufactured goods and product from the port of New York last week were $6,403,000, against $5,651,000 for the previous week.

Chicago elevators contained October 19th, 5,052,450 bushels of wheat, 3,335,982 bushels of corn, 579,298 bushels of oats, 164,207 bushels of rye, and 136,165 bushels of barley. Total 9,268,102 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 10,633,828 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock increased 849,822 bushels, including an increase of 719,413 bushels of wheat and a decrease of 174,428 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 32,594,691 bushels of wheat, 6,339,487 bushels of corn, 4,124,666 bushels of oats, 809,490 bushels of rye, and 1,423,658 bushels of barley. These figures are larger than a week ago by 2,480,651 in wheat and smaller by 410,985 in corn.

There was an oil panic at Pittsburg, Pa., last week, and several operators failed.

A servant's portion in the millennium, and final salvation in the celestial glory, though it be the least that all true believers are privileged to, yet such will surpass all, even the greatest now.

Therefore it is worth while for all baptized believers in Christ to make it a daily rule to practice meekness and humility; for it is a safeguard to insure a portion with the redeemed in the life to come.

If we are only willing to try, to trust, and to pray; to seek, and to ask, for what we most need, we can obtain supernatural aid, and thus endure, to conquer evil, to eternal gain.

SECRECY.

MR. EDITOR.—I am not a little surprised at the contents of "Secret Combinations" in Herald of September 13th. I think there has been a great deal of "over-shooting" done by many on that question. The secret combinations denounced by Book of Mormon writers, were of a thieving, murderous kind, established for that avowed purpose. They were not really beneficiary orders. They disturbed the peace, violated law by destroying property, life, &c. All these things were what God denounced, and had his servants proclaim against. It can not be shown that Masonry, Odd Fellowship, Knights of Pythias, Ancient Order of United Workmen, Independent Order of Good Templars, or other societies fostered under the laws of our common country, are of any such character as Gadianon's, or any of his clique. The Socialists, Nihilists, and Communists, come nearer the Book of Mormon named "secret orders" by far, than any others extant. The church can not make herself a judge of what she is ignorant of. She proclaims against polygamy, because it is in open violation of the laws of the land, destructive of the moral and social status of society, and an intruder into the marital relationship of the sexes. Masonry, &c., is not so. With all good feeling toward the writers, I must say the tone of the article savors strongly of the inquisitorial inclemency of Catholicism in her vile onslaughts on Masonry for the past six hundred years. Read of the torture of P. C. Bliss, in 1868, in Paraguay, with many others, "under the pretext that they were plotting against the government."

During the reign of King Philip IV, Grand Master, de Molai, and Guy, the Preceptor, were taken under guard to the place of execution, and de Molai addressed the assemblage prophetically, as follows:—"France will remember our last moments. We die innocent. The decree that condemns us is an unjust decree; but in heaven there is an august tribunal, to which the weak never appeal in vain. To that tribunal within forty days, I summon the Roman Pontiff. Oh! Philip, my King, I pardon thee in vain, for thy life is condemned at the tribunal of God. Within a year I await thee." The Grand Master's prophecy was fulfilled. Very soon a sickness seized the Pope, and he died, and in a year Philip died after a painful and lingering illness.

I quote the above to show that the accusations made in the article named, are but the dying echoes resounding from the walls of the vast chamber of Time of voices past! We can not afford to fan the flames of inquisition fires; the fumes from the smoldering embers of suspicion and darkened enmity are distasteful. If the lives of the vast majority of the members of any society are debased and injurious to public interest; destructive of morals, and such be the practice of the theory or theories entertained, then may the society be looked upon as resting on wrong principles, and worthy just condemnation—but not otherwise!

There are persons belonging to all societies, that may do wrong, but to charge such wrong upon the body, or as an outgrowth of principles not vile, is unfair. It seems strange that any one should be identified with any society, and receive of its benefits, and know they were not made bad members of society in general, and then turn from it and denounce it, and proclaim against it as terrible, a "wickedness," "down-right wickedness," "profound foolishness." There are many of our brethren belonging to the various beneficiary secret orders; and they are good citizens, loyal members of the church. God has called them to responsible positions in the church, and they minister acceptably. Does the Lord know anything about the principles of the orders? Let me give an item from the archives of Masonry. From Antiquities of Free Masonry, P. 173, on secrecy, I quote:

"Of all arts which Masons profess, the art of secrecy particularly distinguishes them. * * The best writers have declared it to be an art of inestimable value; and that it is agreeable to the Deity himself may be easily conceived, from the glorious example which he gives in concealing from mankind the secrets of his providence. The wisest of men can not penetrate into the arcana of heaven, nor can they divine to-day what to-morrow may bring forth."

On the design and genius of Free Masonry, P. 8, Dis. 1, we read:

"Inasmuch as Masonry is professed in those nations which have not yet been converted to the Christian faith, and as it enkindles benevolence, and excites virtue so accordant with the genius of the gospel, it may eventually have no inconsiderable tendency towards introducing and propagating among them that most glorious system of revealed truth."

The anti-article said that Christ was antagonized, let us see; on p. 126, on Faith, Hope and Charity, we read:

"Faith is a firm and sincere assent to the fundamental truths of religion, the being of God, the divinity of Christ, the Savior and Judge of mankind, a state of future rewards and punishments, and the means and conditions of avoiding the one and securing the other. This faith, as the true basis of all religion is the first incentive to holiness; and through its medium, we are justified, accepted and finally received."

Page 55, vol. 4, ch. 4, we read:

"Religion was the only foundation on which our order could be securely placed; for no institution can be firm or permanent which is not supported by the favor and protection of the Deity. Everything merely human must inevitably decay and crumble before the devouring hand of Time. But the word of God, and everything founded on that basis shall never fail. * * The great and prominent truth to be illustrated in these views of ancient Masonry is, that religion, or the genuine worship of God, was the chief object of masonic practice in the primitive ages of the world. And this may be deduced from the existence of pure masonry at the present day. * * Had it been instituted solely to exalt human wisdom, or promote human greatness, it would have been as a flitting sunbeam."

The Lord has "secrets" as we read in

Amos 3: 7, "He revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." That the Lord is careful to whom he reveals them, and that everybody is not informed of them, we read: Ps. 25: 14. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he will show them his covenant." Jesus said to the man he healed, "See thou tell no man." Again, "Father, I thank thee that thou hast hid these things from the wise, and revealed them unto babes." "Unto you is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom." Kept secret from others you perceive. "It is not meet to cast your pearls before swine," or those who would illy use your benefits and privileges. "His secret is with the righteous."

Of Adam I quote, p. 56:

"Adam was yet living, and his authority was sufficient to restrain the race over which he possessed the supreme government, as king, priest, and prophet, from those rash and violent deeds, which, after his death, deformed the face of nature."

Masonic writings claim Enoch as one of the masons of early times, and among other things about him we read as follows, in speakig of the degeneracy of mankind:

"Enoch exhorted them (the people) to turn from their unrighteous ways, and imitate the purity of their forefathers. He therefore called a special assembly of masons in whom he could confide, and in the presence of Adam, Seth, Jared his father, and Methusaleh his son, he enumerated the accumulating wickedness of man, and the enormous evils which were desolating the earth; * * * it was here that Adam communicated that terrible prophecy, that all mankind, except a few just persons, should so far swerve from their allegiance to God, as to cause the destruction of all created things by water and fire." —page 57.

Here is something of prophecy found in the archives of Masonry, found nowhere else save a similarity of expression in Inspired Translation of the Bible. Gen. 6: 29; 4: 10.

Concerning prayer, masonry teaches: "Prayer is a duty of such paramount importance, as to involve consequences the most awful and tremendous: if rightly performed, it conveys a blessing; if wholly neglected it elicits a curse."

It should be borne in mind that the good, or the evil of a thing does not lie in it being a thing of secrecy. The war made against the prevailing beneficiary societies, seems to be from the fact of their having secrets! Secrecy to the "orders" is a barrier against imposture, and infringement on others' rights and privileges extended by the "orders" to their respective members. I have given the above quotations to show that Masonry embraces the expressions of good thought, and contains in its archives important items of doctrine and prophecy. As benevolent institutions, the prevailing orderly, and law abiding societies are well known. Their kindness to the afflicted, distressed, sick and dying; their vigils, and their aid are well known, and oftentime in example surpasses the acts of some professed Christians toward the respective members of their religious societies. Of course, I believe that true Christian principle exemplified is not excelled any where. I believe no code contains purer moral injunctions than those enjoined by Christianity proper. That Christian profession should excite the practice of the highest virtues of which human nature is susceptible. That honesty, sobriety, charity, etc., all belong to Christianity, and are not to be denied all codes for benevolent, charitable or humane purposes. These beneficiary orders are of course earthly; but not of vile intention, nor prejudicial motive. They may not open the "pearly gates," unlock the doors of heaven, nor rattle the chains of hell; but that burning brows and aching hearts have been stroked and soothed; hard times at home relieved; vigils kept with sick and dying can not be denied them.

Mistake not where to place your denunciations, and upon whom you pronounce your anathemas. Let them come upon the communist, who seeks to level all human interests to his avaricious principles. Upon the nihilist of Russia; the socialist of Germany, who seek to dethrone rulers, depose loyalty, make insurrections, etc., all these are "secret orders, for murder, theft, anarchy;" such were those of Book of Mormon times; and any one that can't see both the distinction and the difference must be short-sighted. To denounce the others is but shooting peas at Gibraltar, the impression is made mostly on the peas!

J. FRANK McDOWELL.

LIFE AND DEATH.

WHAT was the state, or condition of man, after the transgression? He was in a dying state having become subject to death, like the germinating grain, only fit to be cast from the bin to dissolution, in order to the production and preservation of life in the earth. If the seed of life which is in the grain begins to germinate in order to multiply, decay and dissolution inevitably follow. The decay of the live grain takes place in consequence of absorption from the germ of life in the first, in order to the growth of the second. Subdivision in any thing tends to weakness, and weakness to dissolution. So if the germ of life in the original had not been multiplied, (or rather divided), death would not have ensued. But the greater the division, the shorter the natural life upon the earth. The decrease is large, from nine hundred and sixty nine, to less than one hundred years. "Dying thou shalt die," (marginal reading of King James' translation), "Death passed upon all, for that all have sinned."—Paul. It passed upon all that sinned unto death. Sin is transgression, is death when it is finished. But some remained innocent of the great transgression, did not die spiritually, (in sin), neither temporally. Hence, there being no cause for separation and dissolution, they were gathered home to the garner without either. The life of Adam did not cease the very day that he partook of the fruit; but he afterward received commandments of God, and obeyed them. He multiplied his seed, replenished the earth with his body, and returned to dust. When the seeds of life were sown, the seeds of death were sown also. And as there was a degeneration, so there were the generations following. The man was shut out of Eden, degeneration ensued, and the generations alienated and estranged away from God in transgression,—the separation becoming more and more widespread, until we hear one praying, "Cleanse thou me from secret faults, keep back thy servant from presumptuous sins. Then shall I be innocent from the great transgression." And another, whose vision had been opened to see a time when the transgression would be finished, when that dying state would be complete, is informed, (Dan. 9: 24), that "Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy Holy City, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy." And finally the Most Holy makes his appearance to this people—the transgression is finished. He finds them dead in spirit, in trespass and sin. Says to them, "Except the days be shortened, no flesh could be saved. But for the elect's sake, the days shall be shortened." And now, having appeared to them in the express image and likeness of the Father, in his loving and merciful Spirit among them. He did the will of the Father, and as he said, it was his meat and drink so to do. We therefore understand, that it was his will also, and that he and the Father are one in these particulars. It follows, that out of those whom his forerunner was "preparing" or "making ready" for the approaching kingdom, he chooses certain twelve; makes known to them his will, makes them executors of it; but seals it up, tells them that they shall tell it to no man, till he is risen from the dead—that they shall be witnesses for him in Jerusalem, &c. That "thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem." These and many other things pertaining to his approaching kingdom he taught them daily, even minutely how to deal with an offending member, and promises them the Holy Spirit, and that it shall bring all things to their remembrance, even whatsoever he had said to them. But the time for them to tell these things, and the time of their receiving the Spirit to aid them in so doing was yet in the future. We find from the history found in Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, that he taught them much privately, and in parables when the multitude was present, relative to the mysteries of the approaching kingdom. And He gives a reason that to them it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom but to the world it is not. The fundamental principles of the message called gospel, that were to remain with them a secret for a time, and then to be published to all the world, for obedience of faith, were as simple then as they are now; viz, faith in the death of the Son of God for our sins, and in his burial and resurrection for our justification. Paul, who tells us that he received the gospel, not through man, neither by man, says that it is the "power of God to salvation to every one that believeth." This is not saying that God's power is the gospel; but that the gospel is his salvation power. It is that which begets, or stimulates the believer of it to, action. Certainly it is the power of God unto salvation to the believer of it, but not so to those who believe it not; in other words Paul might have as truly said—this system, as we present it, is God's only lawful means of saving men; for so it was, but in no sense, is God's power the gospel. But we will further inquire what it is. For having learned that it was God's power to save with, and that he received it, not by man, does not tell us what it is. He tells us that his message was "to the Greeks foolishness, to the Jews a stumbling block, but to them who were saved, the power of God and the wisdom of God." Experience brings knowledge. This was certainly the gospel, that was all this to them. He says, "We preach Christ crucified," &c. How does this agree with that which moved Paul to accept of salvation. When he heard the voice he said, "Who art thou Lord?" And the voice answered, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest." From this he is convinced that Jesus was the Christ. It is enough, and he is not disobedient to the heavenly message. It is not strange then, that he says he received it not from man. This is simple, but plain, and is the same in substance that the twelve were commanded, "See thou tell it to no man, till the Son of Man be raised from the dead." Jesus had just told them of that which would take place at Jerusalem; how he must suffer; and that he would rise from the dead the third day.

This gospel, or good news of a coming seed was that which stimulated Abraham, and moved him to action in the promise, "I will raise up kings unto you, I will raise up a Lord unto you. He shall save his people from their sins"—"shall bless all nations." This was prophetic gospel, in that it was in the future, was to come, and only the promise of a Redeemer; while the preaching of the gospel in fact, includes the death, burial and resurrection, and the things connected for obedience in proof of our faith. The death, burial and resurrection, are calculated to bring life and immortality to light, and we are told, that such were brought to light through the gospel. They preached through Jesus the resurrection. Paul determined to know nothing but Christ and him crucified. This is the good news, glad tidings, the gospel. Paul says so—"Moreover brethren, I declare unto you the gospel, wherein you stand, by which also you are saved, if you keep in memory what I preach unto you; for I delivered unto you first of all, that which I also received myself, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the scriptures." This is the same story in its simplicity. But is there not more than just a belief of these things, connected with the new covenant? Yes, the law of adoption into it stands: 1. In facts to be believed. 2. In commands to be obeyed. 3. In promises to be received. A man can not obey facts, but he can believe facts, obey commands, and receive promises.

Hence Paul says, "I thank God, that you were the servants of sin, but have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine first delivered you; being then made free from sin, you become the servants of righteousness." He has told us what he delivered unto them, first of all, and they have obeyed the form of that doctrine; viz., died to sin, were buried in water, and rose in the likeness of Christ's resurrection. Notwithstanding we have seen that there were those, in the age or state which tended unto death, that knew something of a coming Redeemer; yet we have not a hint from Genesis to Revelation, that the New Covenant, with its terms of reconciliation, was ever published prior to the death of the testator, prior to its publication by the twelve executors of the will. But when Jesus, the Shiloh came, "the scepter, (priesthood, power), soon departed from Judah." There was a change of the law, change of the priesthood, and a change of the covenant. Christ "was the end of the (old) law, to them that believed" that he was the promised seed; for "the law was" added because of transgression, [only] till the seed should come to whom the promise was made." He came not to destroy the law, but to fulfill it. He took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross. See Matt. 5: 17-20; Acts 15: 24-29; Eph. 2: 15; Col. 2: 14; Heb. 7: 12; Rom. 8: 1, 2; Gal. 3: 24, 25; 5: 1-18; 10: 1-10; Rom. 7: 6.

After this special messenger (John) and those who labored with him, had done the work of preparing, or making ready a people for the Lord to make a kingdom out of; after Jesus had chosen twelve men, and committed unto them his will, or terms of reconciliation; after he had fulfilled the law, and through suffering took it out of the way, after, as it is said, "through suffering he was made perfect, and became the author of eternal redemption to all them that obey him," it was thus that he became king; for while he was yet on the earth, journeying toward Jerusalem with his disciples, and for the reason that they were nearing Jerusalem, and thought that the kingdom of God would suddenly appear, he therefore spake unto them a parable of a certain nobleman journeying into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom; thus giving them to understand, that he must do this before the kingdom would appear. So he went away to receive these rights; and when he had so done, he sent upon his disciples the Spirit baptism, in fulfillment of the promise through John, that he would thus do; and of which he taught that no one could enter the kingdom without it; and in agreement with Paul, relative to their being translated into the kingdom by his Spirit. "For by one spirit are you all baptized into one body." Thus they became united into an organized body, with the twelve in the lead, holding the terms of reconciliation, endowed with power of the Spirit, beseeching men in Christ's stead to become reconciled to God. And thus they found the inheritance that had been looked for, and inquired after, even hundreds of years prior to this; of whom it is said, "they died in faith, not having received the promise." The apostle says "It was not to them, but to us who have received the gospel, preached (not in Abraham's or John's day) but with the Holy Ghost, sent down from heaven." After they had thus been translated, or baptized into an organized body or kingdom, they then had authority to go to all nations according to promised terms in the new covenant; but not so prior to this. It is perceivable now how a little remnant (see 2 Kings 20: 30, 31) of the house of Judah, would take root downward, and bear fruit upwards, and go out of Jerusalem in righteousness." Or, in other words, how a little stone would be cut out of a mountain without hands, being poured from the heavens. Now as the world was dead spiritually, life and immortality were brought to light, and offered to them on the conditions, that as they had degenerated, they must be regenerated. As they were broken off, they could have access to a system of religion—meaning to bind back or fast. As by the transgression and fall of one, and hence the loss of the estate, so by the obedience and exaltation of one, provisions are made to regain it, by adhering to the requirements of the will. By being "begotten by the word of truth," and being "born again, not of blood, nor of the will of man; but by the word or will of God, which liveth and abideth forever;" viz: the divine or spiritual nature of Christ, as was so declared by his resurrection, and witnessed by the executors of his will, who were eye witnesses in the matter. (See Isa. 28: 16; Rom. 15: 20; 1 Cor. 3: 10-12; Eph. 2: 20; 2 Tim. 2: 19; Heb. 11: 10; Rev. 21: 14; Acts 4: 11). This stone spoken of in Isaiah 28: 16: "Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a corner stone, a sure foundation; he that believeth on him shall not make haste," is the same that Paul refers to—says, "This is the stone which you builders rejected [addressing the Jews] which has become the head of the corner." Paul was endeavoring to build other lively stones upon this divine stone. He says, "Other foundation can no man lay, save that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ." It is this divinity upon which our hope of a resurrection to immortality rests securely. Who is there that would attempt building upon any other? Surely he may be "likened unto a foolish man, building his house upon the sand." But on the other hand, he that is wisely builded upon the stone which was so vindicated, may rest secure, in that he has the hope, "which is an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, for it reaches to that within the veil, whither the forerunner hath entered for us." This stone is the strength of the whole building. The motive or moving power of God for the salvation of his fallen creatures. It is the prime essence of the gospel. And he who is stimulated, or moved, by any other power, does not come to Christ, does not put him on; and hence does not bear his fruit. It is evident to my mind, that this stone was cut out of that mountain-like house of Israel; and that it was done by the Spirit being poured from the heavens, and hence is said to be "cut out without hands." And it being understood that it was by the power of the Spirit-baptism, that this translating from the powers of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son was to be done, this being taught by John, Jesus, and afterwards testified of by Paul, we can see, that as this stone began to roll from the mountain, or make preparations to go out, it began to gather to it in fulfillment of the prophecy, that when the Shiloh would come, unto him shall the gathering of the people be. Even before it left the mountain there were some clinging to it, in fulfillment of the prophecy, that "yet a little remnant of the house of Judah should take root downward, and bear fruit upward; and go out of Jerusalem in righteousness." And also in fulfillment of the prophecy of Jeremiah (Jer. 18: 1-6) that "God would make another vessel out of the same clay of that old marred vessel," or house of Israel. Paul says there is a remnant to this day, according to the election of grace—that God had not cast away his people whom he foreknew, (or knew before); for he says, "I also am an Israelite of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin."

Yes, when those whom John, Jesus, the twelve and the seventy had prepared, were gathered together, according to commandment, they received the Spirit baptism, and were thus translated (by the Spirit without hands) into the new organization. Hence it was, that Zechariah (Luke 1) prophesied and said, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, who hath visited and redeemed his people; and hath raised up a horn of salvation in the house of his servant David." And hence Jesus said to that people who were of the House of Israel, "the Kingdom of God is within you." For the material of the new vessel was in and a part of that mountain, or Kingdom of Israel, according to Jeremiah, Zechariah, Paul and others. I believe with Paul, that the potter had power over the clay of the same lump; and that he did make another vessel to honor him, though the first had dishonored him.

Finally, it is thus, we have the fullness of time, (an age full), when God sent forth his Son, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law. Who was the Shiloh, the Shepherd, the Foundation Stone, cut out of the mountain; the one like unto Moses, who was the end of the law, (Eph. 2: 15; Cor. 2: 14; Heb. 7: 18), of the covenant of a seed, speaking in the last days of that age, (Heb. 1: 2), and in the end of that age, or world (King James' Translation), took away sin by the sacrifice of himself. (Heb. 9: 25, 26). Who was the Lamb of God to take away the sins of the world, the first born from the dead, to bring life and immortality to light; who through suffering was made perfect, and became the author of eternal redemption, the High Priest over his own house. The head of the body, the church. Who introduced and became the foundation of a new age, dispensation or world, having previously taught them that the end of all things was at hand; "Behold, old things are done away, and all things become new;" and illustrates by an old garment and a new garment; by an old bottle and a new bottle; and after having become the testator of the will or new covenant, established it through his executors, upon better promises. A law of life, perfect in its application for the cleansing from sin, and the saving from its consequences. And thus he effected a new creation, of new creatures, by a new and living way, with new life, under the new covenant, of the new kingdom, in the new age, dispensation or world. Thus he fills the place of a second Adam, so that what was lost in the first, may be regained in the second.

May the God of peace help each one belonging to the new vessel, to carefully study his word, with an honest heart and a free mind, and thus honor him is the prayer of your brother in the hope of the gospel,

J. V. L. SHERWOOD.

IS THE ORDINANCE OF BAPTISM OF DIVINE APPOINTMENT.—No. 2.

BY ELDER CHARLES DERRY.

LET us now consider the fourth question. Is baptism essential to salvation. Webster gives as the secondary meaning of the word essential, "Important in the highest sense; indispensable to the attainment of an object." The grand object of Christ's life here, his teaching, death and resurrection, was to give salvation to man. This was the grand purpose for which God sent his Son into the world, "That the world through him might have everlasting life." We have seen that Jesus declares he "came to do the will of his Father." From this we learn that Jesus is carrying out the purpose determined by his Father. Hence, human salvation is the design and purpose of God. As nothing can be done without means, either by God or man, so means had to be adopted in order to accomplish this greatly to be desired result. We cheerfully recognize the great fact that Jesus is the grand personal means by which salvation is given; but we also recognize another fact, that he acted for us according to the plan devised in the bosom of the Father—"Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me), to do thy will, O God."—Heb. 10:7. Man in the beginning, was a free, intelligent being, capable of receiving a law and acting upon it, or of rejecting it. His will was unfettered. He stood in all the dignity of manhood; and as long as he chose to listen to his Creator's voice, he was entitled to his favor; but when he rejected that voice, and thereby yielded to the persuasions of another, he forfeited his right to the favors of God, and became the slave of the evil one, whom he chose to obey; and the consequences of his voluntary disobedience rested upon him. He had chosen the way of sin, and death had claim upon him; for "death came by sin." Since "sin is the transgression of law," and as it must be an intelligent, voluntary act that constitutes sin, it follows that the sin by which death entered into the world, was an intelligent, voluntary act of our first parents. And every sin that has been committed from that hour, has been of that nature; for it is evident that if man had not possessed the power to keep or break the law, there could have been no breakage. In fact, without this power the creature would not have been a man, but a thing; for the term man, implies intellectual power as well as physical conformation. The whole word of God establishes the fact, that sin always was, and will be, as long as it continues, voluntary on the part of the transgressor. Hence, if man is to be delivered from its consequences it must be in part by a voluntary act on his part; viz: a voluntary forsaking of sin, which of necessity implies a voluntary obedience to God's laws, whatever they may be. The nature of sin, and its hold upon humanity is such that it would be impossible for God to save that man from the consequences of his sins, who continues in sin. To do so, he would have to destroy man's agency, rob him of his intellectual powers, and reduce him to a mere machine, not a man, but a thing without any power to act only as acted upon. This God has never proposed to do. He does not propose to reign over a kingdom of slaves; but of free, intelligent beings. Hence it is said of Jesus, "He shall save his people from their sins." It is nowhere said, He will save his people in their sins. This same Jesus was the Great Teacher, "The Messenger of the New Covenant," (Mal. 3); "The Mediator of the New Covenant," (Heb. 12:24).

In every covenant there are conditions; for a covenant is an agreement between two parties. And it was part of the office-work of Jesus to declare this covenant embracing these conditions, these terms upon which salvation was to be obtained; and, as we have seen, he solemnly assures us—"My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me." "The Father which sent me, he gave me commandment what I should say." It will be proper therefore for us to enquire into the character of this divine being who devised the plan of our redemption. As he is the greatest of all beings, and as the lesser can not comprehend the greater without help from him, it follows that he must be the revealer of his own character. He has given us a revelation of himself, and that revelation is in our hands. In this he is declared as being the embodiment of all wisdom, all knowledge, all truth, goodness, power, justice, and love. And, to cap the climax, he is declared as being unchangeable. Hence there is no fear of his character being anything else than as he now stands revealed in his word. Can it be supposed for one moment, that such a being would devise and reveal a plan for the salvation of humanity, containing in it commandments, ordinances, or promises, that did not pertain to our salvation, or that was not essential to that object? If in possession of infinite wisdom and knowledge, he would certainly comprehend all the circumstances of our condition. He would understand what would be just and what unjust. There could be no danger of, and no cause for any mistake. Infinite wisdom sees the end from the beginning; therefore his plan would be like himself, perfect, every part adapted to the great end in view—nothing lacking and none too much. His infinite justice would be as much in favor of the creature as of the creator. Justice exists, not for one party alone, but alike for all. Hence he could impose nothing upon mankind that was unjust. Love, like justice, is universal in its yearnings; it exists not for self, but for universal good. His nature being love, whatever he may devise will be, must be, for the greatest good of those for whose benefit it is devised. If this were not so, his plans would contradict his own character, as revealed in his word, he would not be God; for God is not only the embodiment of all power, but of every other excellence with which intelligence can be clothed,—everything that can render him lovable, adorable, and worthy of all honor from the lowest and highest intelligences alike.

Would it not be an insult to our common sense, to tell us that such a glorious being would give useless ordinances, and commandments that were of no binding force? But how much greater an insult it would be to the infinitely wise and just God, to charge him with having revealed a code of laws for the government of man, professedly intended to save him if he obeyed them, and those laws and ordinances, not binding upon man—not essential for his salvation! Again: Jesus was confessedly sent of God to make known to man the terms by which mankind are to be saved. Would he, the Son, "The brightness of his Father's glory," "The express image of his person," have left the realms of glory, taken upon him our nature in order to illustrate the beauty and power of the covenant he came to reveal, if that covenant, or any part of it was useless, and had no relation to our eternal welfare—was not necessary—was non-essential? Would he who loved the world so as to give himself a ransom for the same, tantalize that world, already sunk in woe, with providing vain and empty things—ordinances and laws of no value? Yet if the ordinances of the gospel, or any part of them are non-essential, he has done this. He has perplexed and confused the human mind, and opened the breach for the deadliest strife and confusion to enter. Can this be possible? yet it must be if the general cry from the pulpit is correct, that baptism is non-essential. Thank God, "we have not so learned Christ." Like his divine Father, he is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind. "He spake as never man spake." "He was without guile." "Deceit was not found in his mouth." Is it essential for us to enter into the kingdom of God? Is there any salvation outside of it? Can we become children of God without being born of God? Can we have inheritance with them if we are "bastards and not sons?" Do you ask How can we be born again? Jesus answers: "Verily, verily I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he can not enter into the Kingdom of God." Is there any ambiguity in this language? Bear in mind, He is declaring his Father's commandments, and he assures us, "I know that this commandment is life everlasting."—John 12: 50. Did he not also authorize his disciples to go and preach the gospel, telling them, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved?"—Mark 16: 16. Is it not evident from this, that baptism is connected with our salvation? and that it could not be if it was "non-essential?" Bear in mind, that Christ had lived, taught and illustrated the beauty and power of the gospel,—had been crucified, and is now risen from the dead, and is now conferring upon his disciples the solemn and all-important charge, to preach the gospel that he had already taught them. Can he be trifling when he says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." If he is not, baptism is essential to our salvation. If it is not, then his words only tend to confuse. This latter you dare not admit? then accept his terms, and receive the proffered grace.

There can be no question but that the apostles understood his teaching, and the nature of their commission. Let us follow them. Here they are on the day of Pentecost—the Holy Ghost rests upon them—their very souls are filled with its divine influence! surely, they will speak the words of God, for the "Holy Ghost will guide them into all truth," "Bring all things to their remembrance whatsoever he hath said unto them." Three thousand souls are convicted of sin; they see their danger; they have heard of Jesus, his office, his life, his love, his work of redemption; and that "God hath made him both Lord and Christ."

"Men and brethren, what shall we do?" is the heart broken cry. What a momentous question! Who shall answer? No time for idle words! vain traditions; man-made creeds or human ordinances; no non-essential commands or precepts are in order now. Surely, they will not be mocked. A right answer will be given. Listen! The Holy Ghost is speaking through Peter. No mistake will now be made!

"Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2: 38.

Is it essential that your sins should be forgiven? Can you have that forgiveness in any way but in accordance with God's Covenant? Was not this his covenant, devised in heaven, declared by Jesus, testified of by the Holy Ghost, preached by the apostles, and obeyed by all the Saints of God, and sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise? Can you safely reject it?

Yonder is Saul on his way to Damascus, to persecute the Saints. A light shines round about him from the heavens; he is stricken down; he hears a voice! and now he inquires,—"What wilt thou have me to do Lord?" "Go into the city and it shall be told thee what thou must do."—Acts 9: 1-6. A vision appears to Ananias, a man clothed with authority to administer gospel ordinances. He is told that Saul prayeth. The man of God obeys the summons, finds Saul in deep distress, and commands him to "arise and be baptized and wash away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord." This is what he must do to have his sins "washed away;" Ananias and Peter agree with respect to this ordinance, and its essentiality. Both teach the same thing. See Acts 9th and 22d chapter.

There is a very pious man named Cornelius, pouring out his soul before the Lord. His prayer is heard. An angel from the courts of glory comes and tells him to send for Peter; "He shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do." Peter is commanded in vision to visit this man, he obeys, hears the story of Cornelius, preaches Jesus to him, when, lo! the Holy Ghost descends upon Cornelius and his household. Peter was astonished; but he remembered his mission—remembered the word of the Lord—and commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Why all this if baptism was non-essential? Why trouble about baptism, seeing they had received the Holy Ghost? Professors today tell us, that all that is wanted is the baptism of the Holy Ghost. But here are persons that already have it, and yet are commanded to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. See Acts 10th and 11th chapters. Was Peter trifling with these persons? yet if baptism was non-essential he must have been. Ah no! Peter remembered that the Lord had said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the Kingdom of God." These persons were only born of the Spirit, and the fiat of the eternal had gone forth, and Peter must declare the whole counsel of God. Men in this day claim to have the Holy Spirit, but they deny the birth of water. "Holy Men of God wrote and spake as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost." God does not contradict himself. "The Father, Son, and Holy Ghost agree, says John. "There are three that bear witness in earth, The Spirit, the water, and the blood: and these agree in one."—1st John 5. If these persons were born of the Spirit, it would teach them the necessity of being born of water. For "the Spirit, the water, and the blood, agree in one." The Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, are in harmony with the Spirit, the water and the blood. Hence, if any person is born of the Spirit of God, he must be in harmony with the word of God—must teach and practice the things of God as he has been pleased to reveal them. The fact that professors deny the plain word of God, is evidence that they have not the Spirit of God. "He that saith, I know God, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."—1 John 2: 4. From this we learn that it is impossible to know God unless we keep his commandments; and as that knowledge can only come by the Holy Ghost, (1 Cor. 12), it is evident that instruction is only given to such as do the will of the Father. Hence, those who deny the baptism of water can not be in possession of that glorious guide. Moreover, the Holy Spirit is given as the "seal of adoption."—Rom. 8: 14-17; Eph. 1st 13: 14; but as those men deny the only law of adoption that God has given, it can not be that they have received the Spirit, the seal, and earnest, of the adoption of the sons of God. The Holy Ghost dwelleth not in unholy temples, and those who have not been adopted into the Kingdom of God, are yet in their sins. Again: Jesus commanded his apostles to administer the ordinance of baptism, in the most solemn and reverent manner. "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."—Matt. 28: 19. The names of Deity are holy, and God has forbidden any vain, or irreverent use of them. There is a halo of sanctity around them that must not be profaned; for God will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." If he intends his name to be revered by his creatures, he certainly will not dishonor it himself—but if the ordinance of baptism may be obeyed or disobeyed, just as man pleases, without a penalty being incurred, then the name of the three sacred persons of the Trinity have been lent to a vain thing; a thing which has not the merit even of being useful; but a void, useless, empty form; an incumbrance which benefits none. Such a course is contrary to the nature and character of God. His self-respect would forbid it. It would belie his character, destroy his claim to infinite wisdom, and make him appear in the eye of reason as a trifler, a tantalizer, instead of the all-glorious God. The Legislature that spent its time in making laws that had no meaning, no binding force, and no relation to the welfare of those to be governed, would be hooted down,—despised as an effete, useless body. Shall we say that God is less wise than man? Yet, if he has given to us any laws or ordinances that may be broken with impunity, or that have not the power to bless the obedient, he would be less wise than man. The very fact that the all-wise God has not only lent his glorious name to the ordinance of baptism, but has commanded that it shall be administered in that name, is undeniable evidence of its sacredness, and also of its absolute necessity to the salvation of man. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16. "Jesus became the author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him."—Heb. 5: 9. Salvation is promised to none else. The true believer accepts all his teachings, his ordinances, and his promises; and makes the latter his own by obedience to the former. Faith and works always agree. "As a man thinketh, so is he." A true, saving faith, embraces all that God has given. A false faith picks and culls such laws and ordinances as appear pleasing, and expects eternal life without submitting, as Jesus did. He was obedient in all things." Persons having false faith study to avoid all the duties they can, while the true believer is ever enquiring with Saul, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" To conclude this topic, if adoption into the Kingdom of God, as shown by Jesus, remission of sins as declared by Peter, eternal salvation as promised by Jesus, and confirmed by the Holy Ghost through Paul, in John 3d, Acts 2d, Heb. 5th, and many other places; if these are the promised results of being "born of water, and of the Spirit," who shall dare to say that baptism is non-essential, "Surely, the strength of Israel can not lie." And as he has declared that baptism is for these purposes, his promise of salvation will be fulfilled to the obedient, while "He that believeth not shall be damned."

Miscellaneous.

NAUVOO AND STRING PRAIRIE.

*To those of like precious faith throughout the Nauvoo and String Prairie district greeting:—*Your humble servant was duly selected by a respectable majority, at our last conference, to take the presidency of this district. I felt a delicacy in the new charge; because there are numbers that have age and experience in advance of myself; and, hence, other things being equal, they would be more suitable for the position. My membership is elsewhere, and more, my office and calling are not to preside, but rather to preach the gospel. The church at large might feel like I ought to take a broader range over my appointed field, and prepare to report accordingly. I would observe however, that a dozen or a score of live elders might work advantageously, in this section, to a good advantage. I beg of the eldership, hold your ground, and push out and make new openings. Please do not wait for an angel to say go here or there, but march forth to any point of the compass, and cry repentance to this untoward generation. Radiate around quite a distance, for a divinely inspired instructor is not regarded fairly at home. Space gives enchantment to view, and a new utensil does good work. Many of you are more familiar with the needs and demands of the work than a comparative stranger like me; therefore do not let the golden opportunities go to waste all unoccupied. The sheathed sword will rest and decay in an old military armory, but the field of conquest will burnish, temper and preserve the martial instrument. Let an ardent zeal nerve your arm for battles of life; and let the broad sword of truth leap from the scabbard of inactivity, and flash terror into the hearts of hypocrites. As divine wrestlers, the meekness and gentleness of Christ should not only stimulate you to a healthy action, but to sit in judgment over a well equipped mind. Private experiences will do well enough in social worship, but the speaker should judiciously remain in the back ground while preaching Christ and him crucified, as the hope of bright glory.

What I have seen and felt is a personal affair, and while a relation of blessings would cheer a confiding saint, it would hardly convert the incorrigible sinner; for "The law is perfect converting the soul." Priestly jealousies whenever and wherever indulged in, are a cruel clog to progress. It is the enemy of righteousness, the murderer of hope, the engenderer of dark and bitter strife, the bane of life and the adversary's right bower. Its first cousin is a busy backbiter with a tattling tongue. The above named evils are few and rare in this district; but a spoon full of turpentine would spoil a barrel of sugar, howbeit, it might cure a boil. Confidential whispers cure nothing; while evil surmising is the industrious negative of heaven's ordained order, saintly peace, Christ-like charity, and, in short, every good and perfect gift. I battle single handed with the tide of evil so far as a constant laborer is concerned. The local laborers are surely acting well their part, in and around their homes; but I wish to see the work broaden and deepen, as also to gain new and permanent footing. This can be effected by a long, strong, united pull.

Let every son and daughter of faithful Abraham feel his individual responsibility; and may they act in perfect keeping with these pious emotions, and then the cause of Zion will move.

I have been here three Sundays and am constrained to remain over the coming one. In addition to Sabbath services I have spoken in the evenings of the weeks; and while the audiences might have been larger, the attention and interest are all we could well ask. Four have already passed through the flood of regeneration and others are near the door. Ill feelings have fled away; and trivial difficulties have been adjusted—in the main. Bro. J. R. Lambert or B. V. Springer or any other representative man that can and will preach all the while, will be welcomed in our midst. In conclusion let me beg of the local talent to be up and a-doing. In the gospel of love and peace, I remain your co-laborer for Christ's cause,

M. T. SHORT

Sr. Ann E. Corless was chosen president, Sr. Charlotte Whaley vice president, Sr. Ellen N. Kelley secretary. April 24th, Sr. Kelley resigned her office as secretary and Sr. Altha L. Stroh was chosen to fill vacancy. The object of this society is to cultivate social relations among its members, and by industry and economy create a fund to aid in furnishing a church, when built; and in case a church should not be built, said accumulated fund shall be used in support of the gospel in the way that may be determined by a majority vote of the Society.

DIED.

TRUMAN.—At Lucas, Iowa, September 27th, 1884, of cholera infantum, Thomas, child of John and Jane Truman, and grandchild of Thomas Loach, aged 1 year, 6 months and 23 days. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

Sister Griffith was born in the city of Albany, New York, May 6th, 1813. She was an old time Saint, and was taken into the Reorganization on her former baptism, September 7th, 1879. She leaves one son and four daughters; her only regret was leaving her children behind.

DODSON.—At Council Bluffs, Iowa, on May 15th, 1884, Charles Worrell, son of Bro. D. K. and Sr. E. C. Dodson, of Council Bluffs, aged nine years. Charles was beloved for that exhibition of sympathy for, and respects to, parents, which many, further advanced in years than he fail to show; which makes the grief created by his loss more acute; which grief is more intolerable from the fact of his death being caused by one of those unlooked for, and almost unaccountable accidents, viz: He was precipitated from a wagon, loaded with fence posts, which his father was hauling a distance from home. He was carried to his mother so bruised through some posts falling on him, that she could hardly recognize her boy, who, but a few hours before, she saw bounding from the house, the very picture of health. J. C.

We find ourselves extremely weak and naturally sinful; but if we can please the Lord by making a good selection of principle to prayerfully practice on, as day follows on day, we can steer our barks safely, keep them in the channel, and have heavenly breezes to aid us up the stream against adverse winds and flowing tides, to anchor by and by in the harbor of rest, to land in peace on the blissful shore "over there."

Whatsoever is wise is also profitable.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
Bro. JOHNS & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expense, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents. (Iron Heater included for $1.00) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. We also furnish a Picture Outfit, consisting of a fine Water Color Portrait, (without frame), also small picture from which it was taken, and envelopes and cards, all by mail prepaid for only 98 cents.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Joseph Gilbert of Omaha, Nebraska, has recently returned from a visit to England, his native land. He sums up the apparent condition of affairs there in this fashion:

The mission in England is good and bids fair to continue so. Branches are good, take one with the other, London might be better. Manchester District is on the increase, if I may be a judge. Sheffield, I believe is doing honest, simple gospel work; also Leeds. I may add the English Mission has done good work. Bro. Thomas Taylor still holds his own, expresses himself that he would like to have the burden lighter; all generally speak well of him. There are men there that can represent the work; the young men are not behind by any means. I have listened to some fine discourses from some of the young Elders. Let it go along and gather up as it travels; plenty to be done there yet."

Bro. W. T. Craig writing from Mill Creek, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory, October 17th says:

I can not do without the Herald. It is all the preacher we have. There are a few isms here, but that is no food for me. Religion is at a low ebb. If any of the Elders are passing through these parts, I would like them to call on me. Ever praying for the redemption of Zion, I remain yours in the one faith.

The Alvord Messenger, published at Alvord, Wise county, Texas, in its issue for August 15th notices the HERALD thus:

"We have for several weeks past been in weekly receipt of The Saints' Herald, a neatly published and ably edited journal issued in the advocacy of the Book of Mormon and the Church of the Latter Day Saints. It hails from the town of Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, and reminds us that we taught the young idea how to shoot in that immediate vicinity several years ago. We don't know whether any of these same "ideas" ever shot in the direction of Mormonism or not. Joe Smith, Sr., lives at Lamoni and edits this journal, which we will praise for its neatness and chasteness, though we do not indorse its doctrine."

Not knowing who the "ideas" hereabouts are that the Editor taught "how to shoot," we can not say whether any of them ever "shot in the direction of Mormonism" or not, but as there are over five hundred of the people who publish the HERALD in and around Lamoni, many of whom have united from among the settlers there, it is possible that some of them may have sat under birchen rule of "ye editor" of the Alvord Messenger in times gone by. We thank the Messenger for its kindly praise.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The foundation of a meeting house thirty-six by sixty feet in size is laid in Stewartville, DeKalb county, Missouri. It is expected to cost two thousand dollars, without seats.

Bro. E. M. Beach wishes that an Elder may visit them, post office address, Aztec New Mexico.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway proposes an Excursion to the West, an advertisement of which appears elsewhere. Those of the readers of the HERALD who may wish to make the trip with comfort and cheaply, will do well to avail themselves of this opportunity. The road is reliable and its officers courteous.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it proper to give the bread and wine to children under eight years old, when partaking of the Lord's Supper?

Ans.—No, children are not baptized believers; nor do they "discern the Lord's body."

Q.—Is it right for the Priest and Teacher to visit the Saints on Sunday?

A.—Yes, if they wish to.

By mistake the following addition to the Reunion minutes were left out when the others were inserted. We add with pleasure:

On separate motions thanks were voted: To Bro. Henry Garner for the use of the ground; to the committee of arrangements for their labors; to the brethren who acted as a police force, and to the presiding officer and secretary of the meeting.

As before noted the last five days were clear and bright, and the closing Sunday was all that could be desired, the air being warm and delightrul for out-of-door services. From the neighboring villages and the surrounding country there was a large gathering of people and five hundred and sixty-five vehicles of all kinds are said to have been counted that day. About one hundred and fifty tents were erected during the camp meeting. From two thousand to three thousand people were on the ground on the closing day, probably not over twenty-five hundred, though as is usually the case some overestimated by guessing at it that there were more than there were. The situation of the camp could not have been better, being high and dry, even a heavy rain not affecting it except for the time being.

The large number baptized, fifty persons, was an agreeable surprise to every one, and the unanimous verdict was that these meetings are productive of great good and should be continued. It was announced that those from the Wheeler's Grove region had decided also to hold a camp meeting at that place some time in September, 1885, the time, place and particulars of which will be made known through the HERALD hereafter.

By the time this issue of the HERALD reaches its patrons, the questions at issue between the political parties in the Presidential campaign, will have been decided at the polls for the ensuing four years. In the heat of the canvass, Saints who differ from their fellow Saints as to the policies to be pursued for the good of the country, locally and the nation, will do well to remember that provocation given in discussion and retorts in retaliation, should alike be forgiven, and forgotten.

The field of politics is so wide, its store of subjects so varied, its claims upon attention so diverse and so multiplied; those subjects so strangely enlarged or diminished in importance, and interest therein intensified or abated by location, circumstance, training and personal bias that it can not be said that wisdom in her highest attractiveness has her seat with any one party, or attends in the footsteps of any man in either of the parties. The wisest politicians know but little of the whole field, and scarcely know thoroughly any one branch of the most important and absorbing subjects held in dispute.

That Saints should differ on political topics is thought by some to be very strange; nor is this feeling that it is strange, confined to those of one view, but is had by those of the several schools of political ethics. Did these agree in toto upon the more important questions of spiritual thought and life and the means to attain unto happiness and glory, there would be far more reason to deplore disagreement upon the questions of governmental policy; because being in unity upon the one would tend to perfect unity in the other. Divergencies of thought among men of like faith are not dangerous, either to those who hold them, or to others; provided that those who thus differ have such a degree of grace that neither quarreling, nor bitterness of feeling results.

It may be said that there can be no such differences without bitterness of feeling. That one is as sure as the other. That men who differ must know whether they are right, or wrong; and if wrong, and they know that they are wrong and they then persist in that wrong, they are not honest in heart; and only the honest in heart shall see God. To this the reply may be: differences in judgment do not rise from dishonest hearts, as a rule. Goodness of heart and uprightness of purpose are not incompatible with error in judgment, in spiritual things; and hence should not be in things political. Nor do men always know whether they are right or wrong. Human faculties can not always discern between error and truth; and in matters where such wide extremes in opinion as to what are good measures and what bad in a nation's polity are possible with patriotism, as in the United States, no one should expect perfectness from human counsels.

The divine injunction, "be ye wise as serpents, yet harmless as doves," better rendered "be ye wise servants, yet harmless as doves," makes many things possible for the Saint. To live "in the world" and not "be of it," is to do the world great good. To "render unto Cæsar the things that be Cæsar's; and unto God the things that be God's," is to learn what things are Cæsar's before we can render them to Cæsar. To learn what those things are that belong to Cæsar, man must learn the origin, history and polity of Cæsar's dispensation. And this must be done while the man remains a disciple of Christ, for he must render unto God the things of God. These can not be discerned except a man have the Spirit of God. If a man study the things pertaining to Cæsar's government, retaining the Spirit of God, he may reach different conclusions than if he studied in Cæsar's spirit only. This, according to Paul was possible in his day, and by parity of reasoning may be in the present time; else that apostle would not have stated it to be a duty to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, until we all come to a unity of the faith." Saints have not all "come to a unity of the faith" in spiritual things, as yet; but are very largely keeping the unity of the Spirit. If then Saints can keep in the bond of peace, while serving their spiritual aspirations and desires for happiness here and for the world to come, why may not the same men keep the bonds of peace in the things pertaining to Cæsar?

This is not written to endorse, or to defend the bitter, acrimonious, partizan denunciation of the men and measures of either party by those of the other; nor to defend the intensely partizan zeal with which denunciation is met by retort and retaliation. Men are to seek for good men for office; and when the majority of those engaged in making the choice have elected whom they prefer to have as their representative servants, it becomes all lovers of peace, quiet and good order of society to cease captious obstruction to the carrying out of the principles and fulfilling the functions conferred by such choice; and to maintain with voice and hand the supremacy of the laws. Whatever may have been the differences of sentiment expressed or held by Saints during the campaign now past let them be sunk out of sight in the better rendering "to God the things that be God's."

Correspondence.

ELKADER, Iowa, Oct, 7th, 1884.

Joseph:—Your order for those pamphlets will be filled. I have a few more on hand—those books, so called, "William Smith on Mormonism." These books should be had in the house of every Latter Day Saint, as they are a confirmatory work of the faith and doctrine so much opposed by the haters of Mormonism and the enemies of Joseph Smith. This book, containing a graphic account of the experience and personal knowledge of William Smith in the early history of the founding of the church organized by Joseph Smith, can be had by any one desiring it, by addressing William B. Smith, Elkader, Clayton county, Iowa: Single copy twenty-five cents, and in lots, five for one dollar. Brethren and Saints, send in your orders for this work; there are left, a few on hand yet.

I have been thinking about writing for some time. I have not yet done justice with the pen in review of my labors this last summer out among the Saints, at River Sioux and other portions of north-western Iowa. The kindness and generosity of the friends I met with while on my mission among them, create a strong desire to live, and spend the balance of my days with such a class of people. My visit to Lamoni was attended with some little drawback on account of poor health; still I found some old friends there that revived, somewhat, a remembrance of by-gone years. I was much pleased with the people and the Saints I met with in that place, the country and landscape of Lamoni are beautiful to look upon. I saw many locations, both of farms and town lots, that at once caused a covetous desire to possess; but for want of the wherewithal to purchase, I was obliged to come away, and leave the chances to other and more able hands to inherit. En route for home having been on a mission in the field since the first of May, I ought to mention my visit at Lucas, and labor among the Saints in that place of only a few days: held service in their nice chapel: spoke five times with good liberty of the Spirit. I was much pleased with these Saints; their hearts and hands were filled with love and kindness, as their deeds did prove; and I wish here to make special mention of a nice present by the sisters of the Cleveland and Lucas Branches of the church, who presented me with the means for the purchase of a coat. The coat I now have, and I think it would be an ornament or an honor if worn by any stately prince, and no less an ornament to be worn by one who claims to be a minister of the gospel of Christ. All honor is due to these generous Saints who bestowed the kindly gift. May God reward them four fold in spiritual blessings, and in temporal prosperity, is my earnest prayer. On coming home I found some correspondence not answered. My absence from home on missions will explain to my friends the cause of this delay. I will mention also, that I am not expecting to remain long away from my mission work; as I have engagements to fill on promises that honor and truthfulness demand should be promptly attended to. My mission, as appointed by legal authority of the church, extends into Illinois, as well as in Iowa; and as the friends at Keokuk have a claim on me, from previous arrangements, it is my purpose, no preventing providence, to visit them next in my mission work; and also to visit parts of Illinois among relatives there, who are of the faith, and who need a word of consolation after having passed through seas of affliction in defense of this latter day work. At Colchester, Illinois, there is a branch of the church that should be looked after; and messages have been sent for help. After visiting these places east, I expect to return to River Sioux, if permitted so to do. I have been fixing up family matters in view of all this mission work—no providence preventing, health spared, and the Lord willing.

I have not yet seen E. L. Kelley's book. I presume that Braden's talk is the same old talk that has been had in newspapers for years. It is like the resurrecting of some old dead carcass; the kind of food that is best suited to the taste of such men, who worship God only for filthy lucre's sake. Mormonism has lived long since many of these fabulous stories have been told, and will still live, after the said Mr. Braden has passed away with his refuge of lies. No doubt Elder Kelley sustained the cause of the church with honor. Bro. E. L. Kelley is a gentleman and a scholar, in whose hands the cause of truth could not be made to suffer much by the filthy trash gathered up by lying priests and penny scribblers. All honor to the man who battles for the right.

That article written by T. W. Smith, published in the Herald not long since, on the rule and tithing law, was a charm. Bro. Smith hit the nail on the head. We ought to have many more just such articles published in the Herald on the law of tithing.

Well Joseph, my health has improved some since coming home; family well; hope yours the same. If then you see anything in this letter that is not gospel, you need not publish it; but for the sake of friends abroad I would be pleased to see it in the Herald.

It is not improper to mention that after your leaving Persia, at the close of the dedication services, I remained over Monday, and spoke to Saints in the evening, but left on Tuesday for the route home. Much interest was manifest among the people and the Saints at Persia, to hear more on the subject of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. The new church was occupied with a goodly number of hearers the evening I spoke there; and some promises made of a return visit. This promise however depends upon other parties fulfilling what was promised and agreed upon before my leaving there.

Not wishing to make this communication too lengthy, I still wish to mention the call I made among the Saints at Clinton, occupying on Sunday and Sunday evening. Here I found a happy greeting among kind hearted Saints, who are striving with generous hearts to gather up means to erect a worshiping place of their own. May God bless and prosper them in their zealous efforts to build a house in which to offer their prayers and religious devotions.

Home again, and glad for a season of rest. N. B.—Quite an excitement in this vicinity over a faith cure of a lady that has been bed-ridden for seven years, with spinal complaint—prayer by an elder of the United Brethren order. The lady was immediately healed, so report says, and went to church the same evening she got off her bed. Some people who heretofore have made wry faces at the doctrine of angel's visits and the miracle power, begin to believe that there is something of a reality after all in these things.

WILLIAM B. SMITH.

PROTON TOWNSHIP, Grey Co., Ontario,
October 18th, 1884.

PRES. JOSEPH SMITH, Dear Brother.—I left home at 4 p. m. September 8th, for my field of labor. My intention was to go first into Michigan and Indiana, and there act under Bro. W. H. Kelley's direction for a few months, thence to Canada for the remainder of the time before General Conference; but after taking the train for Chicago, I was impressed to go at once to Canada, and upon this impression I acted, taking ticket for Toronto.

While waiting for train connection in Chicago, not knowing the address of any Saint, I visited an old chum of my Methodist days, who had since united with the Presbyterians and is now the pastor of one of the churches of that body, in Chicago. I was welcomed and hospitably treated for the sake of "auld lang syne," introduced to another parson of the same faith, and drawn into a pleasant conversation upon the merits, &c., of "our religion." After an hour had passed this way, I was compelled to leave, and run for the depot, just reaching it in time to board the moving train. Before leaving the study of said Reverend gentlemen, however, I enjoyed the satisfaction of hearing them both admit that "the Latter Day Saints' religion, in theory, was scriptural, and originally divine, but the only question remaining was, is it practical." I intimated that I would leave them to solve the problem as to whether a theory confessedly of divine origin was impracticable. Of one thing, at least, they became certain, viz: that we were proud of our distinction, and our honor was not sought after on account of the dimes it accumulated. Expect to hear from that source again in God's good time.

Stopped over at Chatham and visited Bro. G. W. Shaw and family, enjoyed a brief chat with them on general topics, then made for the depot to catch the "mixed." At Bothwell stopped over and visited Brn. Leverton and Porter and their families. Had a pleasant time. They are all firm in the faith; and who could help enjoying himself there?

Thence to London, where things were found to be in rather a shattered condition, as relates to branch matters; but the majority were intently awaiting Bro. Lake's return from the East to restore order. Heard Bro. Richard Howlett preach on Sunday morning, with considerable liberty, and enjoyed his discourse very much. Wish more had been there to hear it. Being called upon to preach at night, I did so with excellent liberty. Visited a little among the Saints, and tried to talk encouragingly regarding the future, avoiding any committal of myself concerning local affairs. Left London, on the afternoon of the 17th for Toronto, reaching there at night, and just in time to witness the wedding ceremony that united my youngest sister to Mr. Thomas Smellie for life.

Here, in Toronto, I found that my impression, received west of Chicago, was not ill-timed. A circumstance occurred which, had I not been present, would in all probability have left me motherless to-day. However, I found no place in which to preach, but visited many old acquaintances both in the city and in Scarboro, eight miles away. The last time I saw most of them, was when I "cried quits" with Methodism. It is generally conceded among them now that "Mormonism" (as they delighted to term it) has not hurt me very badly, and that their eight-year-old predictions of my return to Methodism are likely to spoil on their hands. There is no market for them. "Beware of false prophets." Upon my withdrawal from business here, eight years ago, my partner took in another Methodist preacher, and they have since wrought quite a reform in the city, having purchased a Methodist church, and "converted" it into a printing office. Thus another penitent "form" has been knocked into "pie," for the "devil" to reconstruct.

On the 3d of the present month I left Toronto for Alliston, having been so advised by Bro. Lake, to attend the conference convening on the following day. The session was pleasant and profitable to all. It was decided to leave me there for a week, and services were announced accordingly, beginning on Tuesday evening. The "Scott Prohibitory Act" was to be submitted to the voters of the county in a couple of days. Its object was to close all the saloons in the county, and make the sale of intoxicants illegal, except when compounded as a medicine by a druggist, upon the presentation of a regular practicing physician's prescription and certificate. The champion of the liquor dealers' interests came along from Toronto and addressed a mass meeting on Monday night. A mass meeting of the citizens was announced for the next night, in the town hall, and I was invited to participate in the platform work. Bro. Thomas Stuart and myself had bills printed, announcing the postponement of our meetings for one night, and I addressed the mass meeting on Tuesday evening, after the Methodist preacher had made a telling speech. Well, there is only one thing left for me to state in regard to it, and that is, that when the Act was submitted to the voters, it was carried by a majority of twelve hundred and three, throughout the county; and in the town of Alliston, where a safe majority was reckoned against it, the Act was carried by a majority of six.

Since then meetings were held each night in the church, and three times on Sunday. Two of them were for prayer service and the remainder for preaching. I enjoyed good liberty on nearly every occasion. During my stay I was the guest of Bro. and Sr. J. A. McIntosh, and the treatment I received at their hands, as also from Brn. Stuart, Mooney, McMulkin and their wives and connections (all members of the church) was such as to endear them to me through life. My wants were more than supplied in every way. May the Good Master preserve them in the spirit they exhibited while I was with them, and protect them from the evils that may threaten their individual safety in time to come.

From Alliston, on the 13th I came to Egremont. Was met by Bro. Willard J. Smith and wife, who conducted me to the residence of Bro. John Kennedy. Appointments were out ahead of me, and I preached in the church there on that and the following evening. Wednesday night Bro. Willard and myself acted as Elders' Court on a case there presented. Next morning I was brought to this place, where an appointment was out for me at the school house. Filled it and commenced further meetings—seconding the efforts of Brn. McIntosh, C. Scott and W. J. Smith in this locality. All are well spoken of by many here; but what the harvest will be, doth not yet appear. Tell Bro. W. H. Kelley that I'm coming. He has said that I am a slippery customer, but let him sand his fingers, and take a firm grip when I do "get there." To the several persons in Indiana and Michigan who have written to me to visit them and labor in their localities, I offer the foregoing explanation of my non-appearance, and will try to respond shortly. Tell Bro. W. H. Kelley I'm willing to be forgiven. My address will be, care of Wm. H. Hunt, 580 Princess Avenue, London, Ontario.

As ever, in bonds,

JOSEPH LUFF.

THREE RIVERS, Jackson Co., Miss.,
October 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph.—I have thought that 1st Peter, 3d chapter, 21st verse, where it says "not the putting away of the filth of the flesh," would be used by the opposers of baptism for the remission of sins; and I was asked by one of the elders (while studying his lesson one day), how to harmonize this passage with other passages. I did not know then, but afterwards while trying to preach, (not on this subject either), the following was made clear to my mind. When man was cursed in Eden he became dead to God, both soul and body, and baptism remits the curse from the soul, but leaves the flesh under the curse; hence Peter says not the putting away the filth of the flesh. If the filth (sins) of the flesh was put away (remitted) by baptism, then the spirit and flesh would be both free, and we would not have Paul saying "the whole world groaneth and travaileth in pain (sin) until now; and not only they, but we ourselves, groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit; the redemption of our bodies." I am a firm believer in baptism for the remission of the sins (curse) of the soul, but not the putting away (remission) the filth of the flesh. For if the filth of the flesh was put away, then the flesh and spirit would be in harmony (not at war) with each other.

Here is another subject that I have thought on some. There is a rest promised to the people of God; but when shall this rest take place, is a question of importance; for if we have proper ideas, there will be proper efforts made. When we take this subject into consideration we should remember that Israel was in bondage to sin. Sin was their master, and they had to obey him (sin) until a certain day that was limited by God, and spoken of by David; and Paul argues that there was a rest promised and they to whom it was offered did not enter into it. It still remained for the people of God; and we hear Christ saying Come unto me all ye that labor (serving your Master sin) and find rest for your souls; and Paul says he that is entered into his rest, has ceased from his own works (works of his master sin).

I, for one, believe that when the servants of God command the people to repent (cease to sin), and they harden not their hearts as in the day of provocation, but obey the command, that they then enter into the rest prepared and remaining for the people of God; and that the Sabbath was a type of this rest; that as they ceased to work on that day, it pointed them forward to this day of rest; and when the antitype came the type ceased, hence the seventh day is not binding.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

October 23d.—Parliament reassembled today. The following is the Queen's speech at the opening of the sessions: "My Lords and Gentlemen: I have brought you together to enable you to further consider the great subject of representation of the people. I continue to maintain relations of amity with all foreign Powers. The information from the Soudan includes painful uncertainties, but the energy, courage, and resources conspicuously displayed by Gen. Gordon in his successful defense of Khartoum, deserve my warm recognition. The advance of my troops to Dongola has for its object the rescue and security of that gallant officer and of those who faithfully co-operated with him. I am using my best endeavors in Egypt to promote further improvement of affairs in that country. I have given my support to the Egyptian Government in the difficult financial position in which it was left through the failure of the recent conference. I regret the occurrence in Transvaal and am considering with the Cape Government means to secure the observance of the convention. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, the operations in the Soudan render it necessary to ask of you further pecuniary provision. My Lords and gentlemen, a bill for the extension of the Parliamentary franchise will be at once introduced. May the blessing of God attend your labors."

In the Commons Gladstone gave notice that he would ask that priority be granted the Franchise Bill throughout the session.

Germany has opened negotiations with Spain in relation to West African affairs.

It is stated in Paris that one of the Powers is likely to take steps looking to mediation between China and France, with a view to the amicable settlement of the present difficulties. This Power is believed to be Germany. Gen. Camponon, Minister of War, asks the authority of the Committee of the Chamber of Deputies on Tonquin affairs to form a number of new battalions, under the conditions of the bill for reorganization of the colonial army. Advices from China give the following particulars of the French defeat at Tamsui October 15th: Ling Ming Schuan, the Chinese General, sent some of his soldiers disguised as coolies to the officer to assist the French in their work of building forts. Meanwhile the rest of the Chinese soldiers formed an ambush near at hand. Presently the signal previously agreed upon was given, whereupon the supposed coolies and the soldiers in ambush made a sudden attack upon the French and hemmed them in on all sides. The French were overwhelmed and rushed into the sea in the wildest confusion. Admiral Lespes admits that 106 of his men were killed. He offered a reward of $6 for each corpse restored. The loss of the French flag is greatly deplored. Admiral Lespes endeavored to recover it from the Chinese by offering them two flags in exchange, but the Chinese refused. Prime-Minister Ferry, Capt. Fournier, who negotiated on the part of France the Tien-Tsin treaty, and Gen. Millot, lately commander of the French forces in Tonquin, have been invited to confer with the Tonquin Committee of the Chamber of Deputies.

Two deaths have occurred in Madrid, Spain, that are suspected to have been caused by Asiatic cholera. During the last twenty-four hours there were sixteen fresh cases of cholera at Naples and one death. At Genoa no new cases or deaths were reported. The report of the existence of cholera cases at Yport in the Department of the Seine-Inférieure France, is confirmed. It was brought there by a sailor from Cette. Precautions have been taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

The serious not to say solemnizing fact, is disclosed in the report of the Massachusetts Prison Commissioners that the total number of sentences imposed by all the courts of the commonwealth has risen from 28,149 in 1879 to 48,876 in 1883. This is an appalling increase to take place during the short period of four years.

October 24th.—A new Belgian Cabinet has been formed, as follows: Premier—Bernaert, Minister of Agriculture in the retiring Cabinet. Interior—M. Tonissen. Agriculture—Bruyn. Justice—Fries or Becker. The other places will be retained by their present incumbents.

Yport, in the Department of the Seine Inférieure, where the last outbreak of cholera in France has occurred, is in a bad sanitary condition, and the inhabitants of the place are a drunken lot. The doctors believe the deaths which have been assigned to cholera were really caused by cheap, villainous spirits which the victims drank. Two cases of cholera have occurred at St. Leonard, a village in the vicinity of Yport.

The United States Consul at Genoa, Italy, in a dispatch to the Department of State reports that the total number of deaths in that province from cholera, from its first outbreak to September 24th, was 617, and the proportion of deaths to the cases, 75 per cent. Experts who investigated the matter report that the spread of the epidemic in all parts of the city was caused by the use of impure water.

Oct. 25.—The chief rabbi at Naples, Italy, is rebuked by ultra-orthodox Jews for shortening the fast on the recent day of atonement. As a preventive of cholera the precaution was a good one, for not a single Jew has yet died of the disease in all Italy. Nor were there any Jewish deaths in Toulon or elsewhere in France, save at Marseilles, where seven died; but five of these seven disregarded the race hygienic precepts habitually, and one of the remaining two died while doing the hospital duty. There have been two more deaths from cholera at Yport, France. The physicians discredit the allegations that the disease was brought to Yport by sailors. They believe it generated spontaneously at Yport through want, privation, drunkenness, and dirt, which are prevalent there.

The Chinese Government has given immense orders for munitions of war to London, Berlin, and other cities. Arrangements have been made for a consignment of heavy guns and small arms. Among the purchases already made by China are 5,000,000 cartridges, which were made during the Franco-German war. These are now being shipped from London. Experts say the powder in these cartridges would at this late day be unable to eject a bullet from the muzzle of the rifle.

In 1844 Charles John of Norway was succeeded by Oscar I., and he 1859 by Charles XV., or "Karl" as he is called, who reigned until 1872. Under these Kings Norway enjoyed a period of peace and prosperity. Salutary laws were passed and improvements inaugurated. Railroads and telegraph lines were built. Some changes were made in the fundamental law. Among the most important was that of 1851, which removed the restriction upon the Jews. For thirty-seven years, by a constitutional provision, they had been refused admission into the kingdom. One of the most active in bringing about this change, which, however, was not effected until after his death, was the brilliant poet and author, Henry Wergeland. In the principal cemetery of the city upon a rise of ground, stands a handsome monument with this inscription upon one side: "Henrik Wergeland. Born 1808—died 1845. The unwearied champion for the freedom and the right of the citizen and of mankind." And on another side; "This monument was raised to his memory by grateful Jews outside the limits of Norway in 1847." Four years afterwards the restriction was removed.

The jury in the Clawson case at Salt Lake City, U., this afternoon returned a verdict of guilty. A long argument to defer the sentence and allow the defendant to go at large on bail followed. The Judge allowed the motion, and set Monday, November 3d, for the sentence. The church organ to-night says an appeal will be made to test all the points, especially the open venire.

It is a fact worthy of note that among the pioneer pianomakers of America there was but one that was distinctively American, and while others have done much to supplement his inventions, they have all built upon the principles, and accepted the mechanical ideas of the late Jonas Chickering. It was he that improved the scale and introduced the iron plate. In 1840 he made the first grand piano with full iron frame of one casting ever manufactured in the world. Another of his valuable improvements was the invention of the circular scale for the square piano in the year 1845. From this invention, and in connection with the entire iron frame, sprang all the excellence of the American piano. Improvements in the Chickering piano did not cease with the death of Jonas Chickering, for his sons, who now constitute the firm of Chickering & Sons, have also originated many important inventions, and the pianos manufactured by them not only contain all appliances common to those of other first-class instruments, but in addition many that are not to be found in those of any other maker, including their improved action which prevents the possibility of atmospheric interference.

Oct. 26.—The Plenary Council of the Roman Catholic Bishops and Archbishops of the United States, which will convene at Baltimore the 9th of November, will be in session for seven weeks. Thirteen Archbishops, sixty Bishops, ten mitred Abbots, and ten Monsignori will attend. The principal questions to be discussed are ecclesiastical discipline, education, mixed marriages, and divorce.

Michael Davitt is urging the leaders of the Irish National League to join in the English agitation for the abolition of the House of Lords.

Second ballots taken in Belgium for communal representatives resulted in decided victories for the Liberals. They returned twenty-six members, to ten Clericals. The Independents elected twelve members.

The anti-Peer demonstration in Hyde Park this afternoon was successful to an extent far beyond the hopes of even the most rabid of the proletarians. The crowd certainly exceeded 80,000 and contained many females, the most prominent of whom was Miss Jessica Craigen, who took so conspicuous a part at the meeting of representatives of Radical associations held a few days ago at Anderton's Hotel in Fleet street. In the vicinity of each stand was a band of music which played at intervals, and crowds of people listening to the tirades indulged in by the several speakers against the privileges and the excesses of the nobility. Their entire incapacity for government was explained to the full satisfaction of those present, each instance of specific depravity or any particular denunciation of the Lords generally being cheered to the echo. The only melody played by the bands was the "Marseillaise," which seemed to fire the enthusiasm of the multitude to an extent unprecedented in England. Every time the well-known revolutionary air was heard there was a perfect storm of accompaniment, all joining in the chorus with a vehemence which smacked strongly of the communism of France. The whole display was more intensely republican in its character than anything ever before seen in England, and tonight in many of the Conservative clubs a feeling of dismay exists such as has not been experienced in many years.

It is officially stated that no doubt exists that Col. Stewart and his party were massacred by Arabs near Merawi. The Canadian contingent for the Nile expedition has arrived at Wady-Halfa.

Forty-three new cases of cholera and nineteen deaths were reported to-day, most of them at Naples. Four deaths from cholera occurred at Oran, Algeria, to-day. Dr. Gilbert, official municipal physician, denies that there is any cholera in Havre. He says all attacked with cholera at Yport were notorious drunkards. He declares that there is no necessity for a quarantine at Havre.

Special services in honor of Sir Moses Montefiore, the Jewish philanthropist, were held in the synagogues throughout America yesterday. Friday was his rooth anniversary. At New York Mr. Beecher delivered the address in the course of which he said: For thousands of years a Jew has been a name of reproach. The wanderings of the desert have been nothing compared with the wanderings of this great people over the earth. I for one am glad in my soul that the whole world is obliged to-day to bow down to the name of a Jew. He stands conspicuous this day above the head and shoulders of common men for his goodness, his philanthropy, and his true humanity. When Sir Moses Montefiore received his title from the hands of a great Queen he took it not to obtain honor for himself, but to reflect honor from himself on it. . . . Sir Moses Montefiore belongs to humanity. He belongs to mankind. He is in possession of the world. If all Israelites are like this great man, whose birthday we celebrate, I am a Jew, I am a Hebrew; I am of the seed of Abraham. He is my brother. He belongs to me by the right I have to admire everything that is good. In such a man I recognize the breaking down of partitions between us. He unites in himself the teaching of the Old and the fruit of the New Testament, and so, as a Christian gentleman that reveres and uses the Old Testament, I rejoice that I am here to-day to express my reverence and admiration for this great man. And I would to God that this one man of the age might not be the only man of the age. If Judaism is to prevail—and may God speed it—let it prevail by bringing forth such heroes of goodness, and then all the world shall worship with unity of mutual confidence and give glory to God. No matter in what candlestick the candle stands—it may be of lead, of iron, of gold, or of gems—it is the candle we must look to. No matter in what church you worship, no matter to what sect you belong, no matter what beliefs you hold, it is the living, heroic life and a rich heart that will rule everywhere and forever. My honored friends, accept my thanks for the privilege of standing before you to-day."

Oct. 27.—Election riots occurred at Ludwigschafen, Germany, to-day. It was necessary to call out the troops.

At an imperial audience in Pekin, China, November 5th and 7th, which all Princes of the Empire have been summoned to attend, it will be decided whether to open war against France or sanction mediation. Rumors are again current in Paris that Prime Minister Ferry is endeavoring to secure English mediation.

Roman Catholic priests under French protection were last week ordered to leave Hong Kong, China, by the Chinese authorities. When those at Chao Chou Fu, about twenty miles north, had left the place, Chinese soldiers went to their houses and destroyed everything they could find. The mob destroyed not only the Roman Catholic places of worship, but those belonging to the English Presbyterian and other missions, and the Wesleyan chapel. Chan Tsung, a large trading mart a few hours' journey from Canton, was destroyed the 14th of September by a mob.

Oct. 28.—The plan for Gen. Wolseley's expedition to Khartoum as finally settled furnishes him a total of 8,500 English troops. He will take 5,000 of these troops to Dongola, leaving a reserve corps of 3,500 at Wady-Halfa. The Mudir of Dongola has promised to furnish a contingent of 3,000 men, which he will have recruited from the vicinity of Dongola and be armed with Remington rifles. If an advance in force be deemed necessary beyond Dongola, the reserve will be pushed on from Wady-Halfa.

Zobehr Pasha in an interview to-day declared that a messenger who left Khartoum sixty-three days ago had informed him 100,000 rebels were around Khartoum, but that Gen. Gordon would be able to hold out for two years, provided he had sufficient provisions. Zobehr is certain the British troops will encounter serious trouble and much fighting before they arrive at Khartoum. He strongly advises that no advance be made until it is known whether Gen. Gordon still holds Khartoum. Zobehr expresses regret that England refused his assistance, but says it is too late now.

It is reported that orders have been sent to Admiral Courbet to exercise, in blockading the Island of Formosa, the smallest offensive measures possible to trading vessels, to avoid making seizures, and only make the blockade effective in preventing communication with ports of that island.

Services were held at Ramsgate, England, to-day in honor of Sir Moses Montefiore. Chief-Rabbi Adier read a special prayer. Sir Moses insisted upon standing through the entire service, at the conclusion of which he said in a very strong voice: "I can not tell a thousandth or a ten thousandth part of what I feel to-day when, by the blessing of the Almighty, I have arrived at so full an age. I thank him for His merciful Providence, and I thank all my friends for their great kindness." A reception was subsequently held. Sir Moses was in excellent spirits. During the day he received more than 800 letters and 600 telegrams, besides many addresses and bouquets. The anniversary was celebrated throughout Europe.

Lord Ronald Sutherland Gower has added another to the long list of escapades by British noblemen. He is charged with having thrashed a sentinel at St. James' Palace with a walking-stick in punishment of some alleged impertinence. A complaint was lodged and a summons has been issued against his lordship.

The ship Little Beck, on a voyage from Ibraila to Rotterdam, Holland, was wrecked. Fourteen persons were drowned.

The Supreme Court of Ohio, in a majority opinion, have decided the liquor law of Ohio known as the "Scott Law," to be unconstitutional.

Oct 29.—In the parliamentary elections in Holland the Liberals were generally successful, and by increased majorities.

The steamer Estado de Sonora, which left Mazatlan, Mexico, September 29 for San Francisco, is supposed to have been capsized during a terrific storm which occurred the following day. There were fifty-seven persons on board, and it is believed all perished. Several smaller craft were lost off Mazatlan and Cape St. Lucas during the storm of the 7th inst.

In the House of Commons to-day Evelyn Ashley, Under Secretary for the Colonial Department, stated that the Government was preparing to send a force to expel the Boers from the Montsioas Territory.

In consequence of the statement in the House of Commons by Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, that neutrals must regard the French blockade of Formosa as a notification of the existence of a state of war between France and China, it is expected British ports will be closed to transports taking French troops to China. Hong Kong will be closed for refitting vessels after naval engagements, or as a base of supplies and stores. Official advices from Pekin have reached the Chinese Embassy and been communicated to Earl Granville, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, that the Chinese Government is averse to any mediation between that country and France. Rumors have reached here via Shanghai that a severe type of cholera is spreading through the French squadron under Admiral Courbet, now blockading Formosa. Admiral Courbet has forwarded a dispatch to Admiral Peyron, Minister of Marine, in which he describes in the darkest colors the sanitary condition of his men, and expresses fear that he will be compelled to abandon the attempt to occupy Tamsui, in which event the Admiral would leave two vessels to blockade that port.

The town of Ramsgate, England, is en fete in honor of Sir Moses Montefiore. In the streets are triumphant arches. Excursion-trains from various places arrive crowded with people. Business was entirely suspended during the day. An immense procession marched through the streets, headed by the Mayor and municipal authorities and followed by numerous trade-unions and friendly societies, to the residence of Sir Moses and presented him a congratulatory address. Sir Moses replied most gracefully, expressing his regret that his strength would not permit him to utter the words that were burning within his heart.

The Governments of Spain and Portugal combined oppose the right of the Berlin Conference to deal with the territorial claims of Portugal in the Lower Congo Country. Should the conference persist in discussing the question of her claims in that country, the Spanish and Portuguese Envoys will withdraw from that body.

Considerable uneasiness is manifested in Government circles at Madrid, Spain, owing to reports that Zorilla, the revolutionist, is hiding on the Spanish frontier, where he is tampering with French troops in the northern provinces. The authorities are taking such precautions as they deem necessary to overcome his efforts against the peace of the country.

Yellow-fever has again broken out on the west coast of Mexico in a most malignant form. The City of Colima, 1,450 feet above the sea level, has not escaped. The fever also rages at Manzanillo.

An unknown vessel, supposed to be the schooner L. Van Valkenburg of Chicago, foundered on Lake Erie. It is thought her crew of eight men were lost.

Eight jurors were obtained to-day in the Connelly polygamy case, at Salt Lake City, Utah, four from the regular panel and four from open venire. Four Utah Commissioners (Pettigrew being absent) heard the argument yesterday in favor of excluding polygamists from voting at school meetings. To-day they decided not at this time to pass on the question, as they leave for the East in the morning.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Oct. 23.—Eight persons were burned to death in a fire in Westphalia.

Oct. 24.—Loss by fire at Utica, Ill., fire brick works, $15,000. Fort Howard, Wis., car shops, $25,000. Pittsburg, Pa., $8,000. New Orleans, La., a large cotton packet, $45,000. Waterloo, Iowa, $69,000. Johnstown, Pa., $15,000.

Oct. 25.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $80,000. The Colvin Mine near Connellsville, Pa., was discovered on fire to-day. The entrance was closed by earth and rock in the hope of smothering out the flames. Old miners say it will have to be flooded—a plan which is very expensive and at present well-nigh impossible because of the drouth. The origin of the fire is a mystery. It is surmised that it might have caught from the smoldering flames in the old abandoned workings adjoining. Smoke is issuing from the gangway of the Anchor Mines adjoining, tonight, and it is feared they also are on fire. The Colvin works include sixty acres and eighty coke-ovens, the Anchor one hundred ovens and a large tract of coal. Both are members of the Connellsville Coke Association. Loss by fire at Toronto, Ont., $50,000. Pittsburg, Pa., $5,000. Manchester, N. H., $25,000. New York City, $25,000.

Near Ada, Minn., a train was wrecked, and two persons killed.

Oct. 27.—In a collision on the Wabash Railroad near Taylorville, Ill., fourteen Italian immigrants were somewhat seriously injured.

Oct. 28.—The steamer Arabic, which arrived at San Francisco, Cal., October 26, from China and Japan, brings the following further details of the great typhoon which Sept. 15 caused such terrible destruction of life and property in Yokohama and Tokio; the storm came up so rapidly and with such tremendous fury that no precautions could be taken. In Yokohama the entire lower part of the city, called "The Settlement," was completely wrecked, not a house being left standing. The inhabitants made no attempt to save their property, but fled for their lives to escape drowning from the rushing waters driven on land by the fury of the wind. The higher portion of the city, being more exposed, was equally unfortunate. Several of the largest and most substantial buildings were swept away, as if built of pasteboard. In that section alone 128 houses were destroyed and 390 damaged. The loss of life on shore is less than at sea. Out of eighty sailing vessels, fifty-three were lost with 223 persons abroad. Twelve vessels with 120 persons are also missing. Of five lifeboats that went to rescue the drowning crews, four were swamped and ten of their crews drowned. The typhoon was the severest experienced since 1870.

A violent northwestern storm prevailed last night and continued to-day throughout the British Isles and neighboring seas. Houses were destroyed at Shields. Vessels in the Clyde were driven from their moorings, and many small wrecks are reported along the coast. Four vessels were driven ashore off Greenock. Incoming steamers report fearful weather encountered at sea.

The steamer from Lisbon for Cardiff was wrecked at Penzance and the German steamer Undine was wrecked off the Danish coast. The crews of both were saved.

An explosion in a mine near Uniontown, Pa., killed two men, and injured several others.

Oct. 29.—Loss by fire in Chicago, Ill., $100,000. One man was killed, and five other persons injured.

The Oder sighted the Maasdam about seven hundred miles off the Irish coast. As the blazing wreck was neared it was seen to be a large ocean steamer. The flames had complete mastery and she was drifting with the wind and sea. So dense was the volume of smoke and flame that it was at once concluded that her crew had been obliged to desert her, and as she was approached the sea was scanned in all directions around her for a sign of the steamer's boat. No trace of the boats, rafts, or crew was to be seen on the face of the waters, although every effort was made to discover them. The cargo was evidently burning, since the upper woodwork of the ship could not have fed the flames for any length of time. The gravest fears of a great disaster were entertained. From her position it was believed that the steamer must have been abandoned at least two days before. According to the Captain she should have been at that date (the 25th) at least five hundred miles to the westward. This was in some measure reasonable, as the passengers and crew may have been picked up by a west-bound ship or steamer, and in that case will be first heard from in an American port.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

H. D. Cooke & Co., private bankers of Washington, D. C., suspended October 23. The liabilities are about $170,000.

The aggregate clearances in the principal cities of the United States last week show a decrease of 19.6 per cent as compared with the corresponding week last year, and a gain of 9 per cent as compared with the previous week.

Adams & Allen, dealers in woolens, of New York, have made an assignment. The liabilities are estimated at $150,000.

The Manchester, Eng., Guardian in its commercial article says: "The market is steady and quiet. Buyers, in view of the drooping tendency in cotton, are cautious. There is a fair demand for yarns and goods, owing to the lowness of prices."

Worth thinking of in this country—George Herbert's judgment:

Gold and the gospel never did agree:
Religion always sides with poverty.

Which reminds one of Mr. Baxter's saying, that: "When the rich are indeed religious, and overcome their temptation; as they may be supposed, better than others, because conquest is greater, so they may do more good than others because their talents are more. But such—comparatively—are always few."

The sins of society are the chief barriers between it and a marvelous welfare. They compose the malarial wind that sweeps over the land day and night interfering with every office of body and soul. Apart from this there is nothing small in humanity, for men are all so interwoven together that the rich are a part of the poor, genius a part of the common intellect, and fame a culmination of an age full of virtue.—Prof. Swing.

THE UNITED STATES VS. RUDGER CLAWSON FOR POLYGAMY.

[From the Deseret News.]

OUR report of proceedings in the trial of Rudger Clawson, for polygamy, closed last evening while United States Attorney, W. H. Dickson was replying to Judge Harkness, in defense of the admissibility of certain testimony tending to prove an alleged polygamous marriage, in an effort put forth to establish the first marriage. The discussion sprung from a question put by Mr. Dickson to Miss Alice Dinwoody, a witness, asking if she was introduced to Lydia Spencers, at the defendant's house, on the occasion of first meeting her. Mr. Dickson spoke for nearly thirty minutes and having closed, Judge Zane made the following oral ruling:

The counsel for the prosecution in this case propose to prove, as I understand from the argument, admissions of the defendant of a second marriage, the first one not being in dispute, and he offers also to prove circumstances tending to prove the second marriage. Both of these classes of evidence I believe you propose to offer?

Mr. Dickson—Yes, sir.

Judge Zane—Counsel have referred to a number of cases, and there appears to be a conflict in these cases; but the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of the People against Miles, have held that this class of evidence was proper in that case. The first marriage was in issue, and the second one, I believe, was admitted; and it would seem from the authorities that the issue generally has been upon the first marriage, and that would be naturally so, I presume, because the second marriage being more recent might be more easily proven. It is not until the prosecution have some evidence, at least—satisfactory evidence—of the second marriage that an indictment is found, and the investigation usually is directed more, in bigamy cases, with respect to the second than the first marriage. It is insisted that a different rule, however, applies; that while the admissions of the defendant and circumstantial evidence are competent to prove a first marriage, it is not competent to prove a second. Some reasons have been given. One is, I believe, that the first marriage being more remote it may be more difficult to prove it by the records. While that is so, there are some reasons why the second marriage—where the first is admitted—would be difficult to prove; because in a country where there is a law—as in this—against a second marriage, it is not reasonable to presume that a person knowing that he was subject to punishment would furnish the evidence by which he could be convicted; and it would seem to me that the admission of the second marriage, if clearly and deliberately made, and correctly understood, and correctly reported, would be of greater weight as to the second marriage than an admission of the first marriage before the second marriage took place; because it is not to be presumed that a person knowing that a transaction which he acknowledges would subject him to punishment, would state that it occurred when it had not occurred. Men sometimes will tell a lie when they think the lie will do them better than the truth; but no man is so fond of it that he will tell a lie when the truth will do him better. Men do not state falsehoods for the purpose of receiving punishment, and it would seem to me, therefore, if the defendant deliberately makes the statement that he had married a second wife while the first one was living, that at least ought to be competent evidence to go to the jury. In respect to the circumstances, it would seem that in this Territory there is no law requiring a record to be kept of marriages, and none requiring witnesses to be present, and it can not be proved by the record, because there is no legal record, there is no record made in pursuance of the law. Resort, therefore, must be made to other evidence, to the testimony of persons who were present, to the admission of the defendant, and the circumstances. While the general rule is, that when it is competent to prove a fact by the testimony of a witness who knows it directly, it is competent to prove it by circumstances. That is the general rule, unless there is some law against it. It is upon presumption we know fact. No human affair stands alone; it is connected with others—the cause and the effects of the act. Every act in a man's life is connected with others. And the ceremony of marriage—marriage is necessarily not like any other transaction in human life—it is not just like—and the circumstances that stand around and follow and precede, are not like any other transactions in human life, and when these circumstances—when a coincidence of circumstances all pointing to a marriage—concur, it would seem to me that they ought to be competent evidence; for you can not explain them upon any other reasonable hypothesis than the existence of the marriage; they ought to form a reasonable inference of the marriage; and while the authorities are conflicting, yet I am disposed to hold that upon the weight of authority this testimony ought to be permitted to go to the jury.

The Judge having ceased Miss Alice Dinwoody was recalled and the examination went on. The question before objected to was put again and the witness replied: "I was introduced to Lydia Spencer at that time by my sister Florence, I think; do not know whether Lydia was there as a visitor or not; guess she had a room there, it was upstairs I think; Florence's bedroom was down stairs; I saw Lydia there once at meal time, she took her meal with the family; never heard Florence nor anyone else in the presence of defendant say anything about defendant's relations with Lydia Spencer; if I ever said anything about it to any one it was jokingly; believe I have spoken to Florence about a report that "Rud." had another wife, but don't remember that she answered anything; think it was April; they had a child, which was treated like one of the family, but I never heard defendant say it was his. Their house in the 18th Ward was almost opposite President Young's grave, north.

Henry Dinwoodey, being sworn, said:—"Am acquainted with the defendant; he married my daughter Florence Ann, two years ago last August; they lived with me perhaps a year afterwards, had a child, and then went to live in the Eighteenth Ward; they went there before January 1st, 1884; I occasionally visited them, and have dined or lunched there probably twice; have met Lydia Spencer there; called there with my wife, and Lydia answered the door; I afterwards asked who she was, and was told it was Lydia; afterwards heard her name was Lydia Spencer; when she came to the door she was not dressed for the street; this was before last April, and less than six months ago, I believe; never conversed with defendant as to his relationship with Lydia Spencer, nor spoke of it to any one else in his presence."

Mr. Dickson—"Had you heard it reported, prior to April last, that defendant had married Lydia Spencer?"

Question objected to by the defense.

Prosecution stated that they did not offer it in evidence, but simply to refresh witness' memory.

The court sustained the objections.

Mr. Dickson—"Did you ever speak to the defendant about his contemplated marriage with Lydia Spencer." Objected to. Court permitted witness to answer.

Witness—"No."

Mr. Dickson—"Did you ever hear him say anything about taking another wife?" Witness—"No."

Fames E. Caine was sworn and testified: "I live in the city; am 22 years old and a son of John T. Caine; have known defendant for about fifteen years; know Florence Clawson, but did not before her marriage; do not know Lydia Spencer, except by sight; know of her; saw her first in Spencer Clawson's store, about a year ago last March; the employees were Orson Rogers, R. V. Decker, Rudger Clawson, W. Lund and myself; the defendant was bookkeeper; think he commenced there in December, 1882; I started to work there in March, 1882, and quit in July, 1883; my employment was that of drummer, principally; I went back a week ago last Friday, and quit again last night; while employed there first, I was out traveling about half the time; have seen Lydia come into the store twenty or thirty times from March, 1882, to July, 1883; she came to see Rudger Clawson; his place was inside the railing, in the south-east corner of the store; she went inside the railing at times; the defendant was the only one regularly employed in that part; have seen her talking with him; have not seen them leave the store or come in together; have seen Florence come in two or three times a week; she came to see the defendant; I have conversed with the defendant on the subject of his relationship with Lydia; I think it was in April, 1883; that was the only time; Lydia had been there to see him immediately before; it was only a few seconds after and while she was leaving the store."

Mr. Dickson—"What was said by you and the defendant?" Question excepted to by the defense. The witness was allowed to go on. He said:

"I asked him if that was his second wife; he said 'yes'; I never after that conversed with him on the same matter."

Cross-examined by Judge Bennett—"Was any one else present when this conversation took place?"

Witness—"No."

"Where was it and when?"

"In the office, I think in April, 1883."

Redirect—"Could you tell more accurately by referring to the store's books?"

Witness—"I think I could, as I could then tell when I was out and when in."

The witness was excused for the time being, but before he had left the room, U. S. Attorney Dickson beckoned him back and the two stood conversing in whispers a few moments, after which the attorney announced that he desired Mr. Caine recalled. The witness again took the stand.

Mr. Dickson—"Mr. Caine, did you ever have any conversation with the defendant, after that, in relation to the first conversation?"

Witness—"I did."

Mr. Dickson—"When was it?"

Witness—"Last night, or night before last."

Mr. Dickson—"What was it?" (Objections.)

Witness—"I had been subpoenaed with the other clerks; the defendant came to me and said: 'I understand you have said that you asked me if Lydia was my second wife? I answered Yes.' I replied 'Yes, I said so;' he then said he did not say yes, or if he did it was qualified, as 'Yes, that's what they say,' or something to that effect. I replied that I did not hear him say anything but 'Yes.' He said: 'Well, you admit there is a doubt?' I answered 'Yes, there is a doubt, but not in my mind.' I meant the doubt was in his mind."

We will here state that Mr. Caine, while evincing great readiness to answer, did not deliver the above glib narrative continuously. Such a proceeding was attempted at the start, but was objected to by the defense, and so Mr. Dickson plied him with leading questions, which we have omitted for brevity's sake, simply bunching the answers made.

John M. Young was the next witness who testified: "I live in the Tenth Ward, this city. Am twenty-eight years old, have known the defendant probably two-thirds of that time; I have known Lydia Spencer about eighteen months; I first saw her at her home on Third East street in the Tenth Ward; don't know the other parties' names who reside in the house; I saw the defendant there a short time after I first met the lady; never saw him in the house, but have seen him frequently coming and going; he came at midday and in the evening at half-past six or seven, and I saw him leave at eight in the morning. Have seen both in company together frequently, at the theatre and elsewhere. We went to the theatre together, and my wife and I came home with them, saw him enter the gate. I never carried a message to her. I frequently saw the people who lived in the same house, but don't know where they now live. The house is owned by Miss Spencer's mother, Mrs. Auer."

Walter J. Beatie, an employee of Z. C. M. I. was examined for the purpose of fixing the time November, 1879, when the defendant last entered that institution's employ, and December, 1882, when he left.

Spencer Clawson was then sworn and testified: "I reside in this city; my business is wholesale dry goods, at No. 51 and 52 Main Street; defendant has been in my employ as bookkeeper since January, 1883; have known Lydia Spencer six months or a year; she has been to my store frequently; she came to obtain work, and usually talked with whichever of the clerks she met first; I have seen her in the office with my brother a number of times; I visited his house once; I can't recall the date; no one was there except my wife, myself, my brother and his wife; did not see Lydia Spencer there; never conversed with defendant about her; have seen them together once or twice going to church; Mrs. Florence Clawson was not with them; think this was before Christmas; I am unable to locate the date. I have never been introduced to Lydia Spencer; I am not a member of the 18th Ward Improvement Association; Lydia Spencer never bought goods at my store and had them charged to defendant; never had a conversation with him about it."

Mr. Dickson—"Do you remember the incident of a parcel having been picked up in your store, of yourself or some one else saying, 'Whose is this?' of some one's answering, 'Rud's wife's,' and of his saying 'which one?'"

Witness—"I don't recall it definitely; I remember something of such a package and of some one saying it was Lydia Spencer's; I ordered it rolled up and laid away for her. I don't know that defendant was there. I don't remember the remark about 'Rud's wife;' can't recollect that it took place; I made no such remark; I can only state that I have no recollection of it. (The court reporter read from Mr. Clawson's previous testimony, where he stated that he did not recall it definitely). By 'definitely' I meant I only recalled the portion I stated."

Mr. Dickson—"Do you state that you did not state on that occasion, 'That's a good piece of evidence?'"

M. Clawson.—I have no recollection of making such remark. My books would not show any charge for goods gotten by Lydia Spencer; it would only be a memorandum, as she had no account; could not say whether or not my books show that she purchased goods on his account; he has never been absent from my employ any length of time; only a few hours occasionally to go to the lake, etc.; I was away in January and February, 1883, also from June 1st to the 18th; left again in August, and was absent in January and February, 1881; Orson Rogers was left in charge during my absence. The books would not show my brother's absence; he has never asked my permission to be absent except at the times stated; we keep a day book, a journal, a ledger, and a press copying book; I have them all on hand.

Mr. Clawson was requested to have the books in court Friday morning, at ten a. m., and on his agreeing to do so, the court adjourned to that time.

Friday, October 17th.

The first witness called was R. V. Decker, who testifies as follows: "I am a general clerk, packer and shipper, at Spencer Clawson's store; have been there over two years; know the defendant; he is employed there; I was there before January 1st, 1883, and have been continuously since, except some weeks in January and February, 1884; don't know when defendant started to work there; have seen Lydia Spencer; first met her in the store about a year ago; don't know of her purchasing goods on defendant's credit or account; she paid as other cash customers; don't remember anything about a package of which Spencer Clawson or any one else said it was 'Rud's wife's,' or asked 'which wife,' or said 'that's a good piece of evidence;' I have not, to my recollection, said that such a thing took place in my presence; I know James E. Caine; have not within the last three weeks stated to him that such a thing took place in my presence (the question which brought this out was objected to); don't remember making such a statement to him or anyone else; don't admit or deny it, but do not recollect it."

Spencer Clawson was recalled: He produced, by request, the blotter or day book kept at his store, but when asked for the other books, said he did not understand that they were wanted. He was asked to send for them and did so. Pending their arrival, the witness opened the day book and stated that he found entries in the defendant's handwriting as follows: from January 2d, 1884, to March 1st, 1884, every day except Sundays.

John M. Young was recalled, and testified to carrying a parcel from Lydia Spencer to the defendant, and of being in her apartments in the Tenth Ward, and seeing defendant's photograph on the mantle piece in her bedroom. Also to their both visiting at his house one evening, and taking supper. The witness and Mr. Dickson consulted in an undertone and the former was then excused.

Spencer Clawson was recalled, the other store books having arrived. He turned to the defendant's account, and after diligent comparison of the books with each other by the witness and Mr. Dickson, the prosecution seemed to abandon the idea of getting anything from those records to suit their purpose. Mr. Clawson was asked to explain the method of doing business at his store and did so. Mr. Bennett for the defense, then asked the witness to describe the office of his store, which he did, and in answer to another question said that persons in the office could not be readily seen from the front of the store, on account of piles of goods intervening, unless they looked up the south aisle.

H. M. Wells was sworn, and testified: I live in this city; am City Recorder; last winter was a member and secretary of the Eighteenth Ward Mutual Improvement Association; know the defendant; don't know Lydia Spencer, but have had her pointed out to me; don't know whether she was a member of that Association or not; the defendant was, I think. (The witness was here asked to produce the books of the society and complied). The defendant's name is marked as being first present at the second meeting in February; he was proposed for membership January 31st, 1884; members were not always present when proposed; don't remember that he was; others were proposed the same evening, among them Lillie Clawson; don't know her; her name is next after the defendant's on the roll; don't know whether Lillie was present or not when she was proposed; if members came in too late for roll call I marked them present if I knew them, otherwise not; no book was kept where the members signed their names that I know of; Lillie's last name was spelt Clawson.

Sidney B. Clawson, sworn, said: I am a brother of the defendant. I know a lady called Lydia Spencer. Have known her for a good many years by that name. I was a member, during the months of January, February and March of this year of the Eighteenth Ward M. I. A. My brother was a member of that association. I do not know that Lydia Spencer was a member of that association. I have seen her there, but I could not tell how many times. I do not know by what name she was called in the association.

Did you testify before the grand jury that they called Lillie Spencer Lydia? I do not remember.

Do you remember whether she was called Lillie in that association? I never heard her called Lillie. At this stage, Mr. Dickson stepped up to the witness with a document in his hand, and asked him sub voce, to read part of its contents, after which he was asked:

Do you remember now that you testified before the grand jury that she (Lydia Spencer) was called Lillie at that association?

No sir. I have seen her at the association. Have seen my brother there also. I have seen him in company with Lydia Spencer on one or two occasions. I do not know whether she was called Lillie or Lydia at that association. I have not seen the defendant go to or from the association with Lydia Spencer on any occasion. The defendant lived during the months of March, February and April of this year in the Eighteenth Ward. I twice visited his house while living there. Don't remember the time. It was since Christmas last and before I testified before the grand jury. There I met my brother and Mrs. Florence Clawson. Miss Spencer was there. She was there only on one occasion. I only spent a few minutes in the house. I never was there at a meal. I did not pay any attention as to how Miss Spencer was dressed. Do not know the portion of the house she occupied. I can not tell whether this Lillie Clawson and my brother joined the association at the same time. I testified before the grand jury that I did not know when they joined, because I might have been out of town at the time, my business sometimes called me away. I know no member of the Clawson family who is a member of the Eighteenth Ward Association named Lillie Clawson. There is no member of the Clawson family named Lillie. I have a sister called Lulu, but no sister whose name is Lillie.

Orson Rogers was next sworn; I am and have been employed at Spencer Clawson's store since March 1st, 1882; am second cousin to the defendant; Henry Stringham delivers parcels bought at the store, when there are any; I have known Lydia Spencer about eighteen months; have seen her at the store several times; have seen her conversing with the defendant; never heard the defendant say anything about his relations with Lydia Spencer: have joked with him about the report that he had a second wife; he always passed it off lightly, never admitting or denying it; this was before I saw Lydia at the store; she has purchased goods of me; sometimes she bought more than she had money with her to pay for, I then made a memorandum of the debt and she would call next day perhaps and settle; she was never charged on the books that I know of; don't know anything about the package incident, (the one several times referred to); was not there when it was alleged to have occurred; have seen Lydia and defendant together on the street; she lived in the Tenth Ward in 1883; have been inside the gate to get flowers, but not in the house; it is about a block from John M. Young's, on Third South Street; my wife and I got the flowers; saw no one else but Lydia.

Stanley H. Clawson: this witness proved the Sam Weller thus far, and Messrs. Dickson and Co., like Dodson and Fogg, did not make much out of him: "I am brother to the defendant; know Lydia Spencer; visited the defendant in January, February and March, 1884; don't remember testifying before the grand jury of having met Lydia there before Christmas; may have said so, but think not; met them at my mother's house once, last year, I think; could not say whether they came or left in company; may have seen them in other places; don't recollect testifying that I saw them frequently on the Third South street car, going towards the First Ward; I am not in the habit of traveling that way; these things pass from my mind, can't remember everything, you know; my memory is not very good at best: have never had any conversation with defendant about his relationship with Lydia Spencer; don't remember saying before the grand jury that I had joked him about it and he passed it off; won't say I did or did not, but don't remember it; never heard any one allude to his relationship with her in his presence; think I have seen them together at the theatre; my name is not Stanley B. Clawson, but Stanley H.

H. B. Clawson. I am the father of the defendant. I know Lydia Spencer. I have known her for three or four years. My son lived during the latter part of 1883 and during 1884, up to some six weeks ago, in the Eighteenth Ward, opposite the grave of Brigham Young. I visited him during the latter part of 1883 or during the first four or five months of this year. I visited him once. I do not recollect the time. I met Mrs. Florence Clawson, the wife of the defendant. My wife was with me. In addition to these there was a middle-aged woman there. I did not see Lydia Spencer there. I do not know whether she was there or no. That is the only time I visited my son's house. I have seen my son and Lydia in company. Not frequently. I can not say how many times. I have seen them at my residence once or twice. Lydia Spencer was visiting there. My son would also be visiting. I have seen both there at the same time. I did not see them come or go. Can not say whether they came together or not. I found them in the house. Can't fix the date of the visit. Have seen them there this year. Have seen them there two or three times since the first of January. I have seen them at the theatre in company two or three times. I could not place the date. It may have been the early part of this year or the latter part of last year. Mrs. Florence Clawson was not at the theatre with them. I have not seen them anywhere else that I remember.

Have you ever spoken with your son about his relation with Lydia Spencer? . . . Well, since this indictment has been up I have had some talk with him.

You had no conversation before that with him? . . . Never. I never heard anybody allude to the matter in his presence.

Your son, the defendant, is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints? . . . Yes.

Did you ever have any conversation with him as to whether he believed in the doctrine of plural marriage as taught by the Church of Latter Day Saints?

Mr. Bennett—We object.

Mr. Dickson—Was he in fellowship with the Church? . . . As far as I know. I am a Bishop of the Church; have been for some time.

Mr. Dickson—I press the question whether he (witness) knows, from conversation with the defendant—whether or not he was a believer in the doctrine of plural marriage as taught by the church?

Mr. Bennett—We object to the question on account of its being immaterial.

The point was then argued by both sides; but the hour of recess having arrived, the judge said he would reserve his decision until the re-assembling of the court.

On the reassembling of the court, Judge Zane asked that the last question asked the witness, H. B. Clawson, be read over. This was done by the official reporter.

Mr. Dickson—Perhaps I might alter the question a little, so as to specify the time.

Mr. H. B. Clawson then took the stand, and was asked the following question:

Mr. Dickson—Do you know, from conversations had with the defendant prior to August, 1882, whether or not he believed in the doctrine of plural marriage as taught by the Church?

Mr. Bennett—Don't answer.

Judge Zane: This question and the objection to it raises two questions, and probably there were another one or two discussed that I do not think were material, however. The first is—in the order that I have considered them—is the opinion of the defendant as to the rightfulness or wrongfulness of polygamy a material fact? The second, can this witness state that he knows what defendant's opinion is?

Mr. Dickson: I will obviate the second question by altering it to—Did you ever hear the defendant say anything as to his belief or unbelief in the doctrine of plural marriage as taught by the church?

Mr. Bennett: The same objection.

Mr. Dickson: That presents the question differently. The latter question I think is obviated.

Mr. Bennett: We desire to raise the merits of the question.

Judge Zane ruled that the question was proper and Bishop Clawson answered that he had no recollection of anything of the kind; nor did he remember testifying anything of the kind before the grand jury; had heard the defendant preach, but did not recollect ever hearing him allude to plural marriage; the defendant never told me of his intention to enter the polygamous state, with Lydia Spencer or any one else; have never cautioned him not to, nor heard him say that to do so was a religious duty, as I remember; don't remember, except one or two points, what I testified before the grand jury, and those points I have stated.

Mr. Bennett—We object to all this; we don't know what is in those Grand Jury minutes; they may have been made up on the street, and I apprehend they were. (Laughter.)

Mr. Dickson—Why?

Mr. Bennett—Everybody denies them.

Mr. Dickson, (slightly staggered.) If necessary we will call the clerk who took them and have them corroborated. The witness was here shown what purported to be his evidence before the grand jury, and after reading it emphatically reiterated that he did not remember saying anything of the kind.

Mary Jane Spencer Auer was next called. This witness, the mother of Lydia, led the prosecution a wild goose chase which ended in their catching nobody, unless it was themselves. The gist of her testimony could be boiled down to this: Rudger Clawson came to my house first in the summer of 1883, but has never stopped over night there; Lydia was with him on a second visit in the summer of 1884; she had rooms at his house in the eighteenth Ward, and took in sewing; saw her last going westward. I don't know in what part of the city; I went about my business and she about hers; she last lived at Mrs. Smith's near the Temple block, and before that in the tenth Ward; I was never asked by defendant for consent to marry her; she called him "Cousin Rud." In answer to Mr. Bennett, witness repeated that Lydia called him "Cousin Rud," because there was a relationship between the families.

President John Taylor was then called, and being sworn, was asked to take the stand. The court room was now crowded, many coming in with and after the President, and the most intense interest was manifested on all sides.

Is your hearing good, Mr. Taylor?... Yes, sir.

You are the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints?... Yes, sir.

How long have you occupied the office of President?... Well, I cannot say precisely. The records will show.

Quite a number of years, is it not?... Yes, sir.

You are familiar with the laws and revelations that have been given to the church?... Not as familiar as I might be, perhaps; but I know a number of them.

Do you know of the sacraments that are observed by the church, or the observance of which is taught by the church?... I do not know what you refer to.

Is there a sacrament of marriage or a ceremony, as taught by the church?... Yes, sir.

The law of the church is opposed to and forbids intercourse between the sexes—that is outside of the marriage relation? [Question objected to as immaterial: objection overruled as usual.] ... Yes, sir.

Do you know, Mr. Taylor, who the officiating priests or ministers in the Endowment House in this city were during the year 1883?

Mr. Bennett—We object to that, if your honor please. There is no proof before the Court that there is any Endowment House.

Mr. Dickson—Well, I may ask him—is there an Endowment House in this city?

Question objected to as immaterial.

Mr. Dickson—Where are marriages in the Mormon Church—that is, by members of the Mormon faith—celebrated, in the Endowment House or elsewhere?... Sometimes they are, and sometimes elsewhere.

Where else, if not in the Endowment House?... I do not know that I can say. There is no specific place appointed in which marriages occur.

There is a doctrine of the Church, is there not, Mr. Taylor, of plural marriage?... Mr. Bennett—We object to that, if your honor please.

Mr. Dickson—We expect to follow this up, if the question is answered in the affirmative, by showing that plural marriages are celebrated in the Endowment House only. If I am correct about this, Mr. Taylor can state so; if I am not, he can correct me. But I expect to follow up this and show that plural marriages are required by the laws of the Church to be celebrated in the Endowment House.

Mr. Bennett (to President Taylor, who seemed about to answer)—Be kind enough to answer slowly.

Mr. Dickson—If I can succeed in showing that plural marriages are required to be celebrated in the Endowment House, or some Endowment House, this testimony will be made very material by subsequent proof which we have.

Judge Zane—Well, state your question.

Mr. Bennett—Read the question, Mr. Reporter.

The Reporter—The question is—There is a doctrine of the Church, is there not, Mr. Taylor, of plural marriage?

Judge Zane (to witness)—You may answer that.

A—Certainly.

[Exception taken].

What is your answer to that?... Why, certainly there is.

Well, now, does not the Church require that when members of its faith are about to enter into a plural marriage, that such marriage shall be performed—in some one of the Endowment Houses?... No, sir.

Are not the plural marriages entered into by the members of the Church, so far as you know, performed in the Endowment House?

[Question objected to as immaterial and irrelevant].

Mr. Dickson—It will show what the general custom is, if any.

Judge Zane—You may answer the question.

[Exception taken].

Mr. Dickson (to the reporter)—Just read the question.

The Reporter—Are not the plural marriages entered into by the members of the Church, so far as you know, performed in the Endowment House?... No, sir.

Where are they performed?

Mr. Bennett—Same objection. I do not like to object to every question, but this whole line is irrelevant. This man (the defendant) is not indicted for being a member of the Mormon Church.

Mr. Dickson—Where are they performed if not in the Endowment House? [Exception taken].... I can not say.

Do you know of any plural marriage ever having been entered into by members of the church outside of the Endowment House?... Yes.

Who? When?... Could not say.

Do you know of any plural marriages entered into by any members of the faith, residents of the Territory of Utah, ever having been performed and entered into outside of any one of the Endowment Houses, within the past three years?

[Question objected to as immaterial and irrelevant].

Judge Zane—You may answer the question.

[Exception taken].

Question repeated.

A—I have recollection of many such.

Have you any recollection of any such within the past three years?... I could not answer at present.

Well, it is your present recollection we have to take.... Very well, I have no recollection at present.

Is there any place called an Endowment House, a temple, or known by any other name, which is set apart as a place for the celebration of plural marriages?

Question objected to.

Judge Zane—Well, he may answer the question.

[Exception, taken].

Question repeated.

A—Not specifically.

What do you mean by that answer?... I mean by that answer that there are a great many things performed in those houses.

I do not ask you if it is set apart exclusive of other things. We understand that. I repeat the question—Is there any place which is set apart as a place for the celebration of plural marriage?... There is no specific place set apart for the celebration of marriages.

You mean by that, do you not, that there is a place in which other rites of the church are performed?... Yes.

Is there not a place set apart for the performance of the rite of marriage in connection with other rites of the church?... Yes.

What is the place, or are the places?.... Well, one place is the Endowment House, other places are our Temples.

Now, then, I will ask you, to get at it, when the Temple at Logan City was completed for the celebration of the rites of the church?.... I can not say precisely.

I do not ask you to say within a week, or two weeks, or a month?.... I do not keep those things in my mind.

Was it not in June last? You were there when the temple was dedicated, and you took part in the dedication rites?.... I took part in the ceremonies.

As President of the Church?.... Yes, sir.

Can you tell when that was?.... The records will show. I do not carry them in my head.

It was this year?.... Yes.

Was it not in the summer season? Don't you remember whether the trees were in foliage or not?.... I can furnish you the time if you get the records.

[Here President Taylor said that if Mr. Nuttall was in court perhaps he could tell.]

Mr. Nuttall, by permission of the court, here spoke up and said: In May last.

Now, prior to that time, President Taylor, what Endowment Houses were there in the Territory?.... Only one.

Where was that?

(Question objected to as immaterial).

Mr. Dickson—I expect to show that this was the only place where this marriage in question, if performed at all, that it must have been at the Endowment House in this city or the temple in this city.

Judge Zane—You must answer the question. (Exception taken).

There was only one Endowment House. Where was that?.... In this city.

What temples were there prior to the time the Logan Temple was completed?.... There is a temple down at St. George.

Was there any other?.... There were no others in this Territory.

Then, prior to the time when the Logan Temple was dedicated in May last, I understand you to say that there was no place set apart for the celebration of the rites of matrimony except the Endowment House and the Temple at St. George?.... I think you misunderstand me, sir.

Well, be kind enough to correct me if I do. I do not wish it to be understood that any place was set apart for the purpose of matrimony, not for that exclusively.

But I understand you to say that there are places set apart for the performance of matrimony and other rites, and that these places were the temple and the Endowment House. In what county is St. George, where this temple is?.... In Washington county, I think.

Now, are there no other places than those you have mentioned where the church authorizes the rite of plural marriage to be performed?.... The rite of plural marriage can be performed in other places. There is no place set apart specifically for it.

Is there any other proper place for the performance of these rites?.... As I have said, there are places that are appointed for a great many ceremonies, among which is the ceremony of marriage. The ceremony of marriage can be performed outside of any of these places.

I am speaking of plural marriages?.... Yes, sir.

Does the church allow members of its faith to enter into plural marriage, according to circumstances?.... Yes.

Where? Any place, indoor or out of doors?

[Question objected to.]

Under what circumstances does the church authorize the performance of the ceremony of plural marriage outside of the Endowment House or temples of the church?

[Question objected to as immaterial and irrelevant.]

Judge Zane—Answer the question.

[Exception taken.]

A.—I do not know anything special about the matter.

Mr. Taylor, if members of the faith, a man and woman, members of the church, were living, for instance, in this city, within convenient reach of the Endowment House, desired to enter into plural marriage, would not the law of the church require them to have the ceremony performed in the Endowment House?

[Question objected to.]

A.—Not necessarily so.

Would they not require a dispensation from the church to authorize its celebration elsewhere?.... Yes sir.

Under what circumstances would the dispensation be granted?

[Question objected to.]

Judge Zane—For what purpose do you ask this question?

Mr. Dickson—For the same purpose, all tending to show that this marriage must have been performed in the Endowment House in this city.

Mr. F. S. Richards—It has already been shown that marriages could be performed elsewhere than the Endowment House.

Judge Zane—Answer the question.

[Exception taken.]

Mr. Dickson—What are the circumstances necessary to the obtaining of a dispensation?.... It would be very difficult to say. There might be twenty or thirty different circumstances.

Well, do you know of some circumstances that would authorize such a dispensation?.... I do not know particularly.

Did you say it would require a dispensation?.... Yes, sir.

For the performance of the act, but not for a specific place?.... Yes, sir.

If parties are living here in Salt Lake City, members of the Mormon faith, a man and a woman who are desirous to enter into plural marriage, would they not be required in the absence of a dispensation, to have the ceremony performed in the Endowment House?

President Taylor—In the absence of a dispensation?

In the absence of a dispensation authorizing the marriage elsewhere?.... It would be the authority to get married that would pass, no matter where it was.

Who gives the authority?.... I give that authority.

In all cases?.... Generally in all cases.

Is there any other person authorized to grant the dispensation?.... There are persons I might appoint.

Have you conferred upon any person that authority within the past three years?

[Question objected to as immaterial and irrelevant.]

A.—Yes, sir.

[Exception taken].

Who?.... Sometimes Joseph F. Smith, sometimes George Q. Cannon.

Do you remember any others upon whom you conferred that authority within that time?.... I do not remember any at present.

When this authority is conferred upon any one by you, is it an authority limited to some particular case, or a general authority?.... It would be a general authority until rescinded.

Give me the names, if you can, of the priests or ministers, or whatever name they are known by in the church, in this city, who were authorized to perform plural marriages within the past three years?

[Question objected to as immaterial].

Mr. Dickson—It may be that he is one, and I may follow it up by showing that he was present at that marriage.

Mr. Bennett—Oh, anything may be. The question is whether it is lawful.

Judge Zane—I do not see that it is not material if followed up. He may answer the question.

[Exception taken].

Question repeated.

I could not give you these names.

Can you give me any of them?.... No, sir.

Can you not give the name of any person in the church who was authorized to celebrate marriages within this period of time?.... I will state in relation to these matters, that I have nothing to do with the details.

I understand it is you from whom the authority comes?.... Yes, sir; but I have nothing to do with the details of the matter.

But you are the person who confers the authority?.... Yes sir.

Then you do know upon whom you do confer authority?.... There are hundreds of people who have authority.

In this city?.... Well, there are a great many in this city.

How many?.... I could not say.

Do you keep any record of the appointments?.... No, sir.

You do not know at any time who is authorized to celebrate plural marriages?.... No, sir; I do not know.

Is there no means by which you can inform yourself?.... There may be.

Do you think you could find out?.... I might by asking the parties.

But if you don't know who to ask?.... Then I would not know who to ask.

Then I understand you to say you do not know who they all are?.... I do most emphatically.

There are persons; but with your unaided recollection you are unable to say who is or who is not authorized to administer that rite?.... I do not understand you.

If I understand you aright, by your unaided recollection to-day you are unable to say who is or who is not authorized to celebrate the rites of marriage in the church?.... My recollection would tell of hundreds if I could remember their names that would be authorized, but my recollection would not tell me who is or who is not.

Your recollection would not give all who are? Is there any means by which your recollection could be refreshed?.... I do not know. I could investigate.

There are no records kept?.... Don't have any such records.

Then if you don't know the names of the persons who celebrate the rites, and there is no record of it known to you, how can you tell whether a marriage is celebrated?....I have nothing to do with details.

It is a matter of no concern to the church whether these marriages are celebrated by persons authorized or not?

[Question objected to and sustained.]

During the year 1883 give me the names of persons who were authorized to celebrate plural marriage in the Endowment House of this city?....I could not tell you, sir.

Can you ascertain?....I presume I could ascertain.

In what way?....By asking, as I said before. I answered that question before.

Is there any record of marriages?....I am not acquainted with the records.

Do you know whether a record of marriages is kept?....It is very probable there is.

Can you say whether there is or not?....I think likely there is.

Did you ever see it?....I do not know that I have.

If you wanted to see it is there any means of ascertaining where it is?....I could find out by inquiry.

Will you be good enough to do so?....Well, I am not good enough to do so.

I understand, then, that unless you are compelled to do so you would refuse?

[Question objected to.]

Mr. Dickson—I have the right, I presume, to ask the witness whether or not he could ascertain where the records are, or whether he refuses to do it.

A—I do not know anything about the records. They are not in my custody.

I understand you to say you could inquire as to their whereabouts. Will you be good enough to do so and give us the information?....I do not think I am good enough.

Who is the custodian of the records?....I can not tell you.

Did you ever know who the custodian of the records was?....I do not know that I ever did.

Do you know you don't?....Yes, I know that I don't.

You know that you have never known who the custodian was? Did I understand you to say that you have never seen the record?....I do not think I ever have to the best of my knowledge.

Have you ever given any directions as to the custody of the record?....No, sir.

At no time?....No, sir.

Have you ever enquired of any one where the record was?....I could not say positively whether I have or not.

What is your best recollection?....I do not know.

You do not know whether you have enquired as to the record? Have you ever inquired as to the custodian of the record?....I do not think I have.

Have you ever been told who the custodian of the record was?....Not to my recollection.

Do you know whether Elias Smith, sen., during the year 1883, was authorized to celebrate plural marriages in the Endowment House of this city?....I don't sir.

Do you know whether Angus Cannon, sen., was?....I do not.

Do you know whether there is any person or number of persons, body of persons, in the church, who are authorized to direct the custody of the records?....I do not.

Do you know whether there is any regulation in the church, or adopted by any one in authority, with respect to the records?....I am not acquainted with anything pertaining to the records.

Has any one not authorized the right to celebrate the rites of matrimony?....No sir.

It must be some one upon whom authority has been conferred by you?....No sir, not by me.

Who confers the authority?....Sometimes others.

Well, who else besides yourself?....Well there are others besides myself.

Who in this city besides yourself?....Quite a number.

Who in this city is authorized to celebrate plural marriages?....A great many have been appointed—hundreds.

Can you give me the names of those in this city who are now authorized to perform plural marriages?....I could not.

Do you mean there are so many?....There are a great many that would be authorized under certain circumstances.

Is it not a fact, Mr. Taylor, that plural marriage is a secret rite, a secret ceremony?....It is a secret to some and not to others.

I of course exclude those who were present?

[Question objected to; overruled.]

With the exception of those present—parties to the contract—is not that a secret ceremony?

[Question objected to.]

A.—Necessarily so.

What do you mean by that answer?....There might be a great many others, acquainted with the circumstances and who could be present if they desired.

Is that confined to members of the priesthood, or those in authority in the church?....No, sir; those who were properly recommended could be there.

Those in whom the church had confidence?....Yes.

Are not the parties who enter into the contract of plural marriage, and those who are present in officiating sworn to secrecy?

[Question objected to as immaterial.]

Mr. Dickson—I think we are entitled to know how these marriages are celebrated, what ceremony has to be gone through and observed from the time parties enter upon it until it is concluded.

Judge Zane—You may answer the question.

Question repeated.

A.—No, sir.

Is secrecy enjoined upon such?

[The same objection made.]

A.—Not that I am aware of.

What is the ceremony of plural marriage?....I do not propose to state it.

Do you decline to answer?....I do.

Mr. Bennett—We object, your honor.

Question withdrawn.

Are you acquainted with the defendant?....Yes.

How long have you known him?....A number of years.

You have been on speaking terms with him?....Oh yes, all the time.

Have you ever had any conversation with him about his marriage relations?....No, sir.

Did you ever hear him say anything about it?....No, sir.

Do you know whether he has taken a plural wife or not?....I don't.

He is a member of your church, in fellowship?....Yes, sir.

You knew there was an indictment against him?....I have heard of it.

Did you ever ask him whether he had entered into plural marriage or not after you had ascertained that he had been indicted?....No, sir.

You have met him since his indictment was found?....I do not remember. Have you any means of knowing whether or not he has entered into plural marriage?....I do not know that I have.

Do you know that you have no such means?....Yes.

Examined by Mr. F. S. Richards. President Taylor, in your direct examination you spoke of having appointed or authorized persons to celebrate plural marriages. State whether or not such authorization or appointments extended only to plural marriages, or whether the appointees had the authority to celebrate first marriages also. In other words, was the authorization general as to marriage, or confined to plural marriage only?....It was general in all these matters, and things performed in the house.

And as to all classes of marriage, Mr. Taylor?....Yes, sir.

Whether plural or first Marriages?....Yes, sir.

You also made some reference to authorization or recommendation of parties to the buildings at which these ceremonies are performed. State also whether the regulations and recommend you refer to applies equally to parties who go to celebrate marriages, first marriages or plural marriages, or whether there is any distinction?....There is no distinction.

Mr. Taylor, I will also ask you whether such authorization or recommendation that you might give to individuals would designate the purpose for which they go to the house?....No, sir, it would not.

Would it even show that they went there for the purpose of marriage at all?....No, sir.

Are there not various other rites and ordinances performed in these houses aside from marriages?....Yes, sir.

Then in giving an authorization to go there, you would not signify or indicate for what purpose?....I do not know for what purpose they go.

Re-direct by Mr. Dickson—You stated in answer to Richards' question as to the scope of the authority?

A—My answer was that it pertained to all matters performed in the house. I refer to the Endowment House or to the Temple.

President Taylor, having exchanged a few words with Judge Zane, left the room, and with him the interest for a large number went also, for they passed out in swarms after him.

Elias Smith, Sr., the next witness, said he had seen the defendant; don't think I officiated in 1883 in any plural marriages in the Endowment House; I was sick or absent from the Endowment House in January, February, March, April, May, June and July; I never was authorized to perform marriages there, nor was I present, to the best of my knowledge, when defendant was married.

C. J. Thomas, the following witness, stated that his office as Elder and his position as Janitor at the Temple Block, did not include any service in relation to marriages in the Endowment House; he knew the defendant, but not Lydia Spencer, and never saw defendant at the Endowment House.

Heber Dinwoodey was called, but the prosecution in his case admitted they had been misinformed as to information in his possession, and he was quickly excused.

Angus M. Cannon, Sr., being sworn, testified as follows: I am a member of the Mormon church; I did not officiate in any plural marriages in 1883 that I know of; November in 1882; nor last Thursday. It is some months since I was at the Endowment House; I don't know of any record of marriages; I never saw one or any part of one; never had one in my house, and don't know of the existence of one.

Mr. Dickson was evidently growing weary and Mr. Varian came to the rescue in a very brusque manner.

Mr. Varian—How is the record of marriages in your church perpetuated?

Mr. Cannon—I suppose every one keeps his own; I do mine. (Laughter and calls for order).

Do you mean to be understood as saying that there is no means by which these marriages are perpetuated?.... Oh, no; I do not.

What then?.... I only say that I don't know of any.

Is there any person not seen who takes down the record of those marriages?.... Not that I know of.

Is there any kind, shape or manner of record written, cut, carved, movable or immovable or anything else from which these marriages can be learned?.... I am only supposed to tell you what I know. I know of none.

You derive your knowledge from your senses, don't you? (hotly).... I presume so, (quietly).

Then you never saw the record?.... Never.

Never heard of it?.... Never.

Then it would be impossible to obtain from the archives of the church any record of such marriages?.... I don't know. I never had occasion to find out. (Laughter and calls for order).

When you officiated did you never write down any names?.... Yes, on a slip of paper merely.

And what then?.... I burnt it up.

In response to further inquiry, Mr. Cannon said: I can only say that I don't know of any record; was never enjoined to make or not to make a record; I always received the names from the parties themselves.

Mr. Varian: Then burned them up and forgot the matter as quickly as possible.

Is there such a thing as church divorces, and if so, how can separation be made when no record of the marriage is kept? You say there is no record?.... Oh, no; I don't say so.

How about church divorces?

Mr. Bennett: We object; this is not a divorce suit; we are on the other branch of the business. (Laughter). Mr. Cannon was excused.

Waldemar Lund, clerk at Spencer Clawson's store, and John D. and Henry Spencer, half brothers to Lydia, were each in turn examined, with no results that the prosecution had any reason to feel gratified over, and Arthur Pratt was then called to testify to the stage routes between here and St. George. He said a person could make the round trip in about a week, the quickest time; by leaving Salt Lake Monday morning he could reach St. George, Wednesday about four or five p.m., and leaving there next morning could arrive here Saturday morning.

A motion made by the defense to strike this out as irrelevant was overruled, and the court was then adjourned till Saturday at ten a.m.

There was a good attendance of spectators at the District Court this morning, but it was materially less than the crowd of yesterday.

The first witness called was Walter J. Beatie, who was simply required to state what time in December, 1882, the defendant left the employ of Z. C. M. I. He answered that he could tell as far as the pay roll indicated; this was December 31st. Mrs. Auer was asked for, but not being present, President George Q. Cannon was called, and being sworn, testified as follows:—

Mr. Dickson—Mr. Cannon, you are one of the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints?.... Yes, sir.

How long have you held that office?.... About four years.

How long have you been a member of the church?.... About forty-five years.

How long have you been a resident of this city?.... Thirty-seven years.

Have you ever officiated, Mr. Cannon, in the celebration of plural marriages in the Endowment House in this city?.... I can not say about plural marriages. I have officiated many times in marriages.

How long since you first officiated?.... Oh, nearly twenty years.

Do you know if any record of marriages celebrated in the Endowment House is kept?.... No.

You have never seen any record?.... Never a record of any names. I have not officiated for many years.

When you were in the habit of officiating, were records kept?.... I am inclined to think there were.

Have you seen them, Mr. Cannon?.... I have not.

At the time you officiated, the act under which the church was incorporated required these marriages to be recorded?.... I do not know. I do not remember the tenor of the act.

How long since you officiated in that capacity?.... It is a good many years, I have occasionally officiated for friends. For instance, a man wanted to be married, and wished me to celebrate the ceremony, I have attended to it.

How recently?.... The last was the case of Mr. Riter and Miss Jennings.

How long ago?.... I can not speak definitely. It is within two or three years.

Do you know whether any record was made of that marriage?.... I do not.

Is there any rule or record or book which persons about to enter marriage are required to sign before the ceremony is entered upon?.... I have never known of anything of the kind.

Have you ever heard that there was any such?.... No, sir.

Have you ever inquired, Mr. Cannon, whether a record of this marriage was kept?.... I have not.

Is there any means known to you by which those in authority in the church can determine whether or not members of the faith had been married or not?.... I do not know any means that I can suggest. I am not familiar with any means.

If you desired to ascertain that fact in any case, do you know of any means by which you could ascertain?.... I do not know except by taking the words of the parties themselves.

Suppose that the alleged married parties were deceased and a question of the legitimacy of the children should arise, do you know of any means by which you can ascertain their legitimacy?.... I do not know of any means. In the case of Mr. Riter and Miss Jennings I think they asked me to write them a certificate.

Do you know whether it is customary to give certificates?.... I think it is not usual.

Is there no means taken to preserve the names of those who have been married there temporarily or permanently?.... When I performed the ceremony it has been the custom with me to write the names on a small slip of paper, so as to enable me in solemnizing the marriage to know the names.

From what source do you get the names?.... I have generally written the names as given by the parties.

What is the object of getting these names?.... So as to be correct.

You wished to have the names on your mind when you performed the ceremony. Are these names put on this slip of paper for any other purpose?.... Not to my knowledge.

What is done with that slip of matter?.... Generally passed to one side.

Not given to any other person?.... I have not passed it.

Do you know, when you read from the papers, when you perform the ceremony, that there is anybody to take down the names as they are pronounced by the minister?.... No one in my presence.

No one to your knowledge?.... No, sir.

Perhaps not in your presence, but behind the veil?.... Outside the sealing room persons could not hear, and no one wrote names in my presence.

Do you after the ceremony is performed destroy the slips of paper?.... Yes, sir.

Do you report the names to any other person?.... I never did.

When parties are going into the Endowment House for any purpose—that is, to celebrate any rite of the church, or to partake of any sacrament of the church, is there any book, record or paper in which they are required to sign their names?.... I never knew of any.

Is there any case in which the names are required to be written on a roll?.... I do not know as to the practice now; I do not know whether there is anything of that kind.... I suppose some record would be kept of endowments.

Why do you suppose so?.... I should imagine there should be some record.

You think there ought to be. Have you never taken pains to inquire?.... I never wished to be employed in that way. I prefer not to be acquainted.

That is the case with all those in authority, as far as you know?.... I should imagine so. (Laughter).

If I understand you correctly, in early days when you were in the habit of officiating, a record was kept? . . . I think so. The record I refer to is for parties who come to receive their endowments; their names I presume would be taken.

I am not informed as to what you mean by receiving their endowments? . . . They go to pass through the house. You asked about sacraments or ceremonies. Endowments have no connection with marriage.

Do you know who was custodian of that record? . . . I do not.

Did you ever know? . . . Perhaps I did. I wish you to understand that I have not officiated in the Endowment House for a great many years. It is, I suppose, fully fifteen years since.

Do you believe, Mr. Cannon, that you could ascertain the whereabouts of that record, if you desired to do so? . . . I do not think I could.

Is there any one who has the care of the Endowment House, who has the custody of the property of the Church in the Endowment House, whose duty it is to look after the house and property? . . . There is a woman cleans the house, but who she is I do not know.

Is there any person who has the care of any property of the church—that is in the Endowment House? . . . I did not know of any one in those days more than I speak of, and the janitor at the gate, Mr. Thomas, where the keys are kept.

Can you give me the names of those authorized during the year 1883 to celebrate plural marriages in this city? . . . I do not know.

You do not know the names of any? . . . I know the names of several who might solemnize marriages, but whether they do solemnize them I do not know. There are, I say, several authorized; but I do not think, unless it be in the case of Mr. Riter, of whom I have spoken, I have solemnized any marriages.

Who else solemnized marriages during 1883? . . . I think Mr. Taylor.

Anybody else to your knowledge? . . . I suppose any of the Twelve have the right to solemnize marriages.

You say they have the right to solemnize plural marriages? . . . I do not know of any distinction. Formerly the Apostles were the ones who attended to these marriages, but latterly a great many others have been authorized.

Give me the names of the Apostles? . . . Wilford Woodruff, this city; Lorenzo Snow, Brigham City; Erastus Snow, St. George; F. D. Richards, Ogden; Brigham Young, this city; Albert Carrington, this city; Moses Thatcher, Logan; F. M. Lyman, Tooele; John H. Smith, in England on a mission; Geo. Teasdale, Nephi; and Heber J. Grant, this city.

In order to authorize a Bishop to solemnize marriage the authority must be conferred upon him by the President? . . . Technically it ought to be.

Well, are the Bishops authorized to celebrate marriages in the Endowment House as well as elsewhere? . . . Some are.

Does it require a special authority to celebrate marriages in the Endowment House? . . . I do not know that it does. If they officiate there, they probably attend to marriages as well as to other ordinances.

Do you know any of the Bishops in the city that are authorized? . . . I do not know any person who worked in the Endowment House in 1883. I expect I could probably form an idea; but from any knowledge I do not know anybody laboring in the Endowment House.

Susan E. Smith testified. I live in the city on West Temple Street, opposite Temple Block; have seen defendant and know Lydia Spencer; have seen him at my house since last May; Lydia occupied rooms there from June last till eight or ten days ago; don't know where she is, she did not give up her rooms when she left; she had two rooms, a kitchen and bedroom; I saw defendant in the bedroom, which was also the sitting room; it was about midday, I think; did not see him come in or leave; don't remember seeing his picture there, never had any conversation with him.

Frederick Clawson. Am a brother to the defendant; have known Lydia Spencer for about five years; have visited defendant at his house in the Eighteenth Ward; met his wife there (Florence); have seen defendant and Lydia together on the streets and once or twice at the Theatre; it may have been this year; never spoke to defendant about his relationship with Lydia, nor heard anyone else in his presence speak of it; my mother's name is Margaret G; don't know where she is; she left home yesterday; am not a member of the Eighteenth Ward M. I. Association, nor a resident of that Ward; have visited the Association but never saw Lydia there.

Mary J. S. Auer was recalled. She merely stated that she could not tell the names of the tenants of her house on Third South Street where Lydia once lived; they were Germans; know nothing further of my daughter since yesterday.

James E. Cane recalled for the defense, was asked to repeat the conversation he claimed to have had with the defendant in which the latter is alleged to have admitted that Lydia Spencer was his second wife. He repeated his former statement. He was asked if anyone else was present at the time, and answered that he could not say whether there was or not, but he thought not. He was then asked if anyone was present when his second conversation with the defendant (about the first one) took place, and said he thought Orson Rogers was, and perhaps others. He volunteered having said to the defendant at this time, when the doubt was referred to. "I don't care a damn, if I am asked I'll have to tell the truth."

Mr. Bennett—"Is it not true that when the defendant said there was a "doubt" as to what was said by him in your first conversation, that you replied: "Well, by Jove, I don't know what you did say?"

Witness—"It is not true."

Orson F. Whitney said: "I am a member of the "Mormon" Church. I am a Bishop in the church, in the Eighteenth Ward. I have been Bishop of that Ward since 1878. I do not know definitely whether the defendant was a resident of that Ward in 1882 and 1883. I had been absent for twenty-one months in England. Robert Patrick, my first counselor, acted as Bishop during my absence. I returned in July, 1883. I have been a member of the Eighteenth Ward Mutual Improvement Association. I attended perhaps two or three meetings during the months of February, March and April of this year. I know Lydia Spencer by sight. I do not know that she was a member of that association. I never met her there. I have known the defendant from childhood, almost. Been on friendly terms with him always. Have met him frequently of late years. I have never had any conversations with him as to his marital relations that I know of. Never remember to have alluded to it in his presence. Never heard it alluded to by any one else in his presence.

Robert Patrick was the next witness. I live in this city; have resided in the Eighteenth Ward twenty years; am an Elder in the Church; acted as Bishop during Bishop Whitney's absence in England, this was nearly two years; know the defendant by sight; could not say he resided in the ward then; he never spoke to me about a marriage with Lydia Spencer, nor applied to me for a permit to get married; was a member of the Eighteenth Ward Mutual Improvement Association in January, February and March last; do not know Lydia Spencer, and never saw her there that I know of; saw defendant there once, I think.

Fullette Croxall. I know the defendant and Florence his wife; don't know Lydia Spencer; lived next door to defendant in the Eighteenth Ward; never visited them; Florence visited me, but never with defendant; never met them in company, nor defendant and Lydia in company.

Horace G. Whitney. I know the defendant; have resided in this city all my life; am intimate with the Clawson family; don't know any lady named Lilly Clawson; was a member of the Eighteenth Ward M. I. Association last winter; it met once a week in the evening; know Lydia Spencer by sight; am not positive, but think I have seen her once at the Association; same as to the defendant; heard the name Lilly Clawson called from the roll; inferred it was Lydia Spencer that was meant, because it had been rumored she was defendant's second wife; this was only rumor, however; never heard her respond to the name called; but understood she had joined the society; never heard Lydia Spencer spoken of as Lilly Clawson, or Lydia Clawson, or Lib Clawson, or Mrs. Clawson.

The defense objected to this evidence from where the witness said he inferred the name Lilly Clawson meant Lydia Spencer, including all that he inferred and that was rumored and everything based upon the inference. A discussion of some length ensued and the evidence was ruled out. The witness went on: I did not know that the name Lilly Clawson meant Lydia Spencer; never heard the name Lydia Spencer called from the roll; think I never heard the name Lilly Clawson called from the roll prior to the time I saw Lydia Spencer present.

Did you ever hear her called Lilly Clawson among her associates?

The question was objected to as irrelevant, but was allowed.

Witness—"To the best of my recollection I never have."

The court took recess till two p. m.

Saturday afternoon.

The Court was called to order about ten minutes past two o'clock, when the jury roll being called, William Husbands was found to be absent. He soon entered, however, and the examination of witnesses went on.

George Reynolds said: I live in the city; am a member of the Mormon Church. I hold the office of an Elder, and am a member of the Seventies. I do not know of the existence of any marriage records; heard of some in times past, but not in whose custody they were kept. They were never in my custody: I saw a marriage record some twelve or fifteen years ago in the Historian's office. Wilford Woodruff is the present historian. (A subpoena was here asked and issued for Mr. Woodruff). That is the only time I ever saw a marriage record. I have never heard since where the marriage records are.

William Kraut. I live in Mill Creek; lived in the 10th Ward, Third South, between Seventh and Eighth East, in 1883; I rented of Mrs. Auer; resided five months there; went there last fall; left this summer; I know Lydia Spencer; she occupied two rooms while I was there; I have been in those rooms; have seen defendant in her part of the house; he visited my part once; have seen him eat once in Lydia's rooms, and she was there, myself also; I was employed in that part of the house that day; never saw him coming from the house but once; never saw him in the house but once; saw him going in once before; I am a bricklayer, and am absent a good deal of the time between morning and evening.

Mary Kraut. Am wife of William Kraut; lived in the Spencer House with him last summer; Lydia Spencer lived in part of the house; have seen defendant there sometimes; never saw defendant in Lydia's portion of the house; saw him drawing water for her three or four times; saw him in the evening about the house, not in the morning; Mrs. Canham, an old lady lived in the house; saw defendant and Lydia coming home together one night about nine o'clock; they went in together.

O. F. Whitney was asked to testify that Florence Clawson, defendant's wife, was living in this city after this trial commenced.

Mary Kraut, sister of William Kraut; have seen defendant once at the Spencer House, going out of the gate, towards noon; only saw him that once.

Mr. Dickson here stated that, as the Eighteenth Ward Mutual Improvement books could not be found to-day, in order to save time it was conceded by the defense that the name of Lydia Spencer was not on the roll of membership of this Association; and that it was also conceded that the mother of Mrs. Florence Clawson was Mrs. Annie Dinwoodey; in this connection he wished to mention that subpoenas had been issued for Lydia Spencer and Margaret Clawson, who had not been found.

He referred to this so it would be seen that the prosecution had been diligent in seeking for these parties, that any question in the minds of the jury as to why they were not present, might be answered.

Mr. Harkness replied that this case would have to go to the jury on the evidence brought before it, and that the absence of the witnesses referred to was not to be construed prejudicially to the defendant. The jury must determine on the evidence in the case, not on suppositions. The court sustained the objection made by defense. The prosecution here rested.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883.

I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
Geo. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.

JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.

JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds,
WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.

Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.

MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.

Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds,
E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We print the minutes of the Philadelphia Conference, and the protest of Elder Joseph A. Stewart in connection, for reasons that will appear, after further investigation.

Attention, Saints! All those who are in arrears for subscription to HERALD, HOPE, &c., and in account for books, tracts, &c., will please send in the amounts due. Renew for the papers as soon as practicable. We are anxious to get sufficiently forward to insure the issuing of the Voice of Warning to be sold at five cents per copy; and also a store of tracts for a more vigorous prosecution of the missionary labors of the Elders. Come one, come all. Let us see what the New Year, now near at hand, can do for us.

Bro. G. A. Blakeslee reports a most excellent conference in their district. Bro. Hiram Rathbun, of Lansing, Michigan, for many years an active minister for another society, during which years he preached the gospel as in the New Testament, testifying that God had or would bring again the truth, he preached an acceptable sermon at the conference.

Bro. Joseph Lambert, who has been attending to some church affairs in Kansas, returned home; but left again on October 31st, for Bevier, Macon county, Missouri, to which place he was called by circumstances requiring his attention.

Bro. Israel L. Rogers of Sandwich, Ill., arrived at Lamoni, Tuesday, October 28th, and remained visiting old acquaintances among the Saints. He is in excellent health, and feels well. He reports that crops and business are good at his home, and also in central and north Iowa, where he has been visiting.

One of the best conferences ever held in Southern California District closed at San Bernardino, October 26th. Nine were baptized, thirteen children were blessed. The Divine Spirit was present, and peace prevailed.

Bro. John J. Cornish reports the baptism of five at Ubley, Michigan, October 28th, making eleven at that place recently.

Three were baptized at Lamoni, November 2d, by Bro. Samuel Ackerly, and one by Bro. Asa S. Cochran.

Sister Green, living on her homestead, some five miles west from Lamoni, sent into the Herald Office, to be divided and eaten by the inmates, an apple weighing a pound. It was of fine flavor, and was eaten with thanks to Sr. Green by all hands.

Brethren Simon Peterson, William Pierce, T. J. Smith, Albert Mullindore, and Sisters Mira Milton, Rebecca Milton, Emma Taylor and Kate Smith, are requested to write to Bro. George Hill, clerk of the branch at Waterloo, Nebraska, who desires to know their addresses.

THE following circular letter was sent us by Bro. H. P. Brown. It speaks for itself; and the project therein set forth is most cordially commended to the consideration of the Saints everywhere. The press is a mighty lever for good, and for evil; as it is unwisely, or wisely used. We believe the brethren engaged in it to be moved by love for the cause of Christ, and give them hearty support.

911 BROADWAY, OAKLAND, CAL.

To the officers and members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on the Pacific Coast: Greeting.

SAINTS: We have, all of us, for a long time felt the necessity of having a paper published on this Coast reflecting our views upon the subject of the Gospel of Christ and the "dispensation of the fullness of times," to be scattered freely among the people, that they may obtain correct ideas of our labor and faith. The distinction between us and the Latter Day Apostasy, represented by the "Mormon" Church in Utah, should be clearly drawn and placed before the people on this Coast.

This is a duty we owe to ourselves and the work of God committed to our charge.

When our ministers go out into the world, they are met by the prejudices engendered by the bad conduct and doctrines of Utah Mormonism; doors are closed against us and the work of the Gospel is impeded from misunderstanding our position, doctrines and work.

To remedy this evil and so advance the work of God on this Coast, a few names of us have agreed and undertaken, by the help of God and the co-operation of our brethren and sisters, to publish a monthly paper for six months, devoted to the objects above named. Our object is to furnish for free distribution some 10,000 or 15,000 copies of a monthly paper among the people of the Pacific Coast devoted to the objects above stated. To accomplish this, it will require the co-operation of the Saints on this Coast, by donating for that purpose, monthly, such amounts as they feel able and willing to give. We have already subscribed one-fourth of the amount necessary to carry on the work for six months; and we hope that by your united effort to secure enough to publish a paper for that time, for free distribution. Each branch or member will receive a pro rata share, as per their donation, to distribute among their neighbors. We hope and trust that by the end of six months that the paper may be sustained by regular subscriptions and by the advertisements which we hope to obtain during the first six months.

We intend to put the subscription price at fifty cents for six months or one dollar per year. Those who do not feel able to donate but who will subscribe for the paper will also do a great amount of good in the work. We wish to publish notices of the times and places of meetings of all the branches on the Coast. This will be of great advantage to the Church.

With plenty of patronage we can publish oftener than once a month.

The size of the paper will be about 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ by 15 inches, sixteen columns, and contain as much as sixteen columns of the Saint's Herald.

Of course we do not want, nor expect, this to take the place of or in any manner interfere with the support of the Herald.

Now, Saints, will you put forth an effort to make it a success?

Asking your co-operation and the blessings of God for the welfare of Zion's Cause, we are your brethren in one faith,

H. P. BROWN, GEO. S. LINCOLN,
T. J. ANDREWS, A. HAWS,
And Others.

The following letter we publish by permission of Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, Nebraska City:—

Elder Waldsmith, I thank you for the use of this history of Mormons. Although it settles not the question as to where Joseph Smith got his book, it gives, on the 350th page the only acceptable definition of faith. Emerson reasons not unwisely on the 351st page, "We must concede that God still lives, and may now have prophets, and still continue to raise up prophets, in his church as he shall see fit." Our own good old bible sustains this effectually; and if we had a man once in a while, who could show his faith by his works, even as well as Joe Smith did, it would go far to encourage many of us, who are almost overwhelmed with popular infidelity.

I would to God that I could have been fortunate enough to have learned more about the teachings of the Mormon Church a little earlier in life, but my prejudices were magnified by polygamy. Of all the churches on earth, the Mormon Church is the one, that I should have thought to be the least likely to yield to the sin of polygamy, but thank God for the abolition of polygamy, which leaves the church, the only one, of all the (652) denominations that maintains all the necessary tenets of the true church of Christ in its primitive purity and power.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. I. N. Roberts writes from Osborne City, Kansas, October 29th, 1884, as follows:

I am still at this place holding meetings and baptizing. Nine have obeyed since my return here, and more will obey soon. We organized last Sabbath; held sacrament and prayer meeting, in which many good testimonies were given by the Spirit of God. Tongues and prophecies were enjoyed, which made our hearts rejoice. May the good work go on, is my prayer.

Bro. B. V. Springer writes from Six Mile Grove, Iowa, October 30th, reporting "good news."

I am speaking every night. Good audiences, good liberty, good health, good spirits, good prospects, good resolutions, good weather, and a good cause.

Very good, good brother, very good indeed.

THE following from the Philadelphia Record of November 3d, gives additional light upon the withdrawal from church fellowship of the Olive Branch, elsewhere noted.

SUFFERING FROM THE MORMON STIGMA.

The Olive Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints has severed its connection with that body, and now stands forth as "Independent." Hereafter it will be known as the "True Church of Christ," will be under the pastorate of Elder Absolum Grist, and will worship at No. 2244 Ridge avenue. "People called us Mormons," said Elder Grist to a reporter yesterday, "and that is the reason we changed the name of our branch. We are not Mormons. We believe a man should not have more than one wife, and to call us Salt Lakers and such stuff was more than we could stand. Besides, we were going all to pieces, and we thought the only expedient left us was to change our name and renounce Mormonism. We believe in all the teachings of the New Testament and nothing more. That includes faith, repentance, baptism for the remission of sins and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. We believe all wickedness is coming to an end, and then Christ will reign with us for a thousand years on earth. Satan will then be let loose for a short period to tempt the saints, and then fire and brimstone will come down from heaven and kill him."

A BROTHER sends us a Genoa, Nevada, Courier, for September 26th, 1884, from which we cut the following marked item:

Last Saturday G. W. Buchanan, an old pioneer of Chehalis, W. T., died at his home at the advanced age of 90 years. The deceased came to the coast in 1854. Buchanan was the Captain of the company of volunteers who attacked and killed Joe Smith, the noted Mormon apostle, at Carthage, Ill., on June 27th, 1884. The deceased also took an active part in the Black Hawk war.

It may be that G. W. Buchanan, was captain of that company on that memorable day; but if he was, he will not be likely to boast of it in the day of accounts.

THE distressed Latter Day Saints camped on the west side of the Mississippi, in the fall of 1846, who were fed by quails, driven into the camp by divine intervention, as believed at the time, are not the only ones for whom such relief has been sent in modern days, as the following will show:

The old miracle of the supply of quails to feed the Israelites in the desert had its parallel in Georgia the other day, according to the Calhoun Times. The story goes that a good dame who was entertaining a lot of ministers who were holding a revival in the town of Resaca was sadly perplexed to find food for them one day, the crowd of people in attendance having consumed everything edible in the place. Not a solitary ham was to be had, and only one small chicken. While she was busy in the kitchen preparing the chicken and wondering how she could provide for her guests, a covey of partridges flew into the dining-room, the doors were closed, a number of the birds caught, and the ministers regaled with a feast fit for the gods.

Correspondence.

BANDERA, Texas, September 25, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I do not think there is anything in Lyman Wight's journal, respecting a removal of the church to Salt Lake Valley. I carried a petition from Black River, Wis., from Lyman Wight to a council held in Nauvoo, Ill., in February, 1844, asking permission to locate a mission among the Indians, which the council granted, your father in the chair. At the same time Lucian Woodworth was directed to go to Texas to apply for the privilege of settling a colony in that State, which he did. He called upon Sam. Houston, then president of the Republic of Texas. Houston's reply was he could not do anything till Congress met; but your father was killed the June following, before the work was completed.

In the same council, there was a call for volunteers to go to California to examine the Pacific coast. Salt Lake was not mentioned. I do not think anybody knew anything about the big salt basin; because when Brigham Young took his first party of emigrants, they hauled salt; and when they passed the trading post on the Platte River, the traders told them there was no need of hauling salt, as there was plenty in that valley, and they actually hauled some of it back; so my cousin, Lyman Curtis, told me afterwards.

MEACHAM CURTIS.

DOW CITY, Iowa, October 26th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—It is an evident fact, from what is revealed in the word, that all spirits that have gone abroad are not all of God. Then all false spirits when they present themselves, should be rebuked. How shall we know the good from the bad? Judge them by the law of Christ. Christ rebuked the devil by what was written. We read that the "Elders are to conduct all meetings as they shall be led by the Spirit." We also read, "If they [the Elders] receive not the Spirit, they shall not teach." There are volumes contained in this text. We are told what they shall teach; but did you ever in all your life hear them when under the influence of the Spirit use the Thus saith the Lord, I teach you the doctrine of Christ, to make it stronger? Or did you ever hear them teach by revelation or commandments? No, they teach you the truth as they find it written; or if anything else it must agree with the word, and this is all done while they are under the Spirit of the Lord. Here is a lesson for us. These Elders while under the influence of the Spirit, dare not speak by commandment, or revelation, for they are commanded not to do this; but if any members or Elders while under the Spirit in a prayer and testimony meeting, speak by thus saith the Lord, or by commandment or revelation, we have often felt to accept that as the word of the Lord, because they were spiritually moved upon.

Do we not see, that if the Elders, while under the Spirit, have not the authority to thus speak, that the members are under the same restrictions and they should not thus speak, therefore I would say to them, restrain that spirit, and do not let it lead you. If the one presiding does his duty, he will proclaim against that spirit. The best time to reprove is when false spirits appear. Then is the time to rebuke. The present presiding Elder once at our Conference held at Parks' Mill, gave us a good key with which to try the spirits; and he did it by the word. We had a very spiritual prayer and testimony meeting one night, and some manifestations were by commandment to the Elders. He came on the stand next morning, and said: "Do you have any manifestations in your prayer meetings by way of commandment to the Elders to go abroad to preach? If you do, they are not of God; for the sending of the Elders belongs to the conference." This rebuke did me good, and I was glad to hear it; for it agreed with my understanding. We understand this was his right. Let us reason a little. Did you ever hear an Elder while under the influence of God's Spirit, in our own language commanding the elders or members to do anything? We should say they had as good a right to thus speak as they have by tongue or prophecy; but if we are not on our guard, we will take the prophecy or tongues before we will by the Elder in our language.

This ought not to be. Therefore I say, when a spirit manifests itself, let it come through whomsoever it may, if it agrees not with the law or gospel of Christ, rebuke it on the spot. If it is of a governing character, or by commandment or revelation as of a condemning character, rebuke it, and have no fellowship with it. Any one can enjoy the Spirit of God without prophesying, or having the gift of tongues. Has it not oftener been the case, while you have seen them under the influence of some of the gifts, such as tongues or prophecy, that they have shown more zeal, or excitement, than when speaking in our language? You all will answer yes. Let us look at the spiritual darkness that came on the church, and profit by the past. Seek the gift of belief; and the more you have of this gift, the wiser you will be.

JNO. HAWLEY.

WILBER, Nebraska,
October 21st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I am rejoiced to learn of the good time had at the Reunion, and that so many were added "to the army of the Lord." I had an appointment for baptism for yesterday, but on receipt of telegram to attend the funeral of Sr. Baker, some fifty miles distant, I was compelled to postpone the baptizing. This field needs more active work than it has received for the past. I greatly regret that for a season I must leave the active work. May the Lord bless his people, and put it into their hearts to make some little sacrifice that the cause may not drag, and that faithful men may enter upon the task of spreading the news of the gospel.

ROBT M. ELVIN.

ZERO, Iowa, Oct. 30th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—My last letter was written from Burlington, August 12th. I was there a few days longer to finish the work then deemed necessary. After that I came to this place, which is a small mining town east of Chariton. During two visits here before the present one, I preached several times. Except on the second Sunday, when the steady rain prevented holding more than one meeting, the attendance was fair and the attention good. At the time that I am now here, political meetings and other things are interfering with the attendance and the interest. Still some good may be accomplished by the efforts in behalf of the truth. I have been speaking nightly this week upon the prophecies and their fulfillment: past, present, and to come, culminating in the reign of Christ over the earth as the ultimatum of all prophecy, and as the fulfillment of God's design from the beginning concerning the earth and man. There were only seven members here until recently, namely: Sr. Caroline Powell, her three sons and one daughter, and the wives of the two oldest sons. They are all interested in the progress of the Lord's work, and Bro. Lorenzo having been ordained a Priest recently, has instituted prayer meetings in his own house. These are doing them good, and the influence will extend if the members are faithful. Their upright ways have already won them good names and laid the foundation for a work in this place, and the Lord has promised them that it shall be accomplished if they are faithful to him.

Zero is considered as being a cold spot, but it was warm enough the other times I was here, and now it is far from being zero weather. I have also been "below Zero" three times—two hundred and fifty feet below—and it was not even freezing down there. My wife and child were here once, and went down in the mine to see life underground; Sr. L. W. Powell descending with them to ensure safety. They found it a pleasing adventure, not a dangerous one.

I was at home the early part of September to see to affairs there, and to attend the district conference at Davis City. It was held the 6th and 7th. There was a large attendance and good preaching. The next Sunday, 14th, I visited Pleasanton, the branch there being one of those under my charge, and preached twice. Bro. A. W. Moffet presides. The Saints seem to be doing well. While at Bro. Abram Reese's, I saw something of a vegetable wonder, namely, upon one vine three squashes growing, whose aggregate weight was three hundred and thirty pounds.

Bro. Reese picked and weighed them before I left. The heaviest weighed one hundred and thirty-three pounds, the next one hundred and two, and the last ninety-five pounds; a large amount of food to be drawn from the earth by only one vine. At Bro. Chrestensen's, in Lucas, I afterwards saw one that weighed one hundred pounds.

I left home again on the 18th and since then have been at the following places: I was called to Burlington to marry a couple, and while there baptized one lady, the mother of Bro. J. W. Sawyer. By arrangement with Bro. A. W. Head I went to Creston and preached several times four miles south-east of the city, near Brn. A. M. Bullard's and H. D. Redfield's. The county fair one week and the soldiers' reunion another week prevented meetings that might otherwise have been held. Subsequently I spoke seven miles north-east of Creston, three times in Bro. E. D. Bullard's neighborhood. Intended to continue through the week, but being requested by Pres. Smith to attend the Church Reunion I left Creston on Monday, October 6th. The above gathering near Mondamin, Iowa, was indeed a camp of peace, for peace and good-will prevailed throughout. I enjoyed seeing the old friends once more, and the making of new acquaintances. Tent-life with Bro. Kennedy and family was a pleasant experience.

I returned to Creston on Monday 13th and Bro. Head having arranged for the use of the Methodist house in the city I spoke there Tuesday evening. But few attended, chiefly I think because amusements and political affairs in such a place take up the attention of the people. It is fashionable to attend church on Sunday, and in many places scarcely that any longer. But on week nights it is asking altogether too much. Bro. Head said that on the previous Sunday the minister had rebuked his people because only sixteen of them had been present at the prayer meeting the previous Wednesday evening, whereas he supposed that a hundred of them were at places of amusement. We may gradually work in there, however, till we get a good hearing, whenever we can get a house on successive evenings and on Sundays also. The last time I was at Creston I was the guest of Bro. and Sr. D. W. Hall, formerly of Shenandoah, the only ones except two sisters, who live in the city. The four brethren previously named live in the country.

I was also at Lucas and preached seven times, three of them funeral sermons. I also married Sr. Margaret A. Davis to Mr. Wm. Willetts. I am to remain here over the coming Sunday, November 2d, and then expect to return to Lamoni. Except for a few days at a time I have been absent from home the past seven months, and my work as Secretary and Recorder has accumulated largely, so that it and what will continue to come and the necessary correspondence about the records of branches and districts, will take up my time till April comes again. However I shall try and be out a few days at a time during the winter, if health permits, and make it up by closer application and extra hours.

Whatever may be the present hindrances and haltings, the past or present errors, uncertainties, misunderstandings or abuses, the work is of God, and "in his own time, in his own way, and according to his own will," he will bring about his purposes and the grand triumph of truth and righteousness, whoever may help or whoever may hinder its progress. And that day is fast drawing near. Yours in the faith,

HENRY A. STEBBINS.

MANASSAS, Colorado,
September 12th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—All is not peace, harmony and love in this Brighamite Zion, as they are as vindictive as ever; for the wound they received in the late conflict is still fresh; and smarts them considerably; as was fully demonstrated in their conference here, which has just closed. I did not attend, yet I received a correct report of their doings, through my wife, who did. She and sister Moore were the only bona fide members of the Reorganized Church that were there, as there are but three of us remaining. The Brighamites are very much like the man who climbed up into the loft when the bear entered his house, and after his wife had killed bruin, came down and boasted of their bravery. As I said before, I did not attend; for this reason: I was perfectly familiar with the text and theme; viz, apostasy and vituperation. They have preached on little else since Bro. Caffall left us; and oh, how I did wish for him back here, if it was only to give them one broad-side with his red hot shot on polygamy and priestcraft! I believe it would have satisfied them. As I have run ahead of the main subject, I will go back and take it up again where I left off. After Sr. Moore and my wife had seated themselves, the big Utah guns turned loose on them; and just as soon as one exhausted his venomous ammunition, another was mounted in his stead; and as they were the only Josephite targets present, they were the center of attraction; and all eyes were on them to see if there were any splinters knocked off. They were clad in the steel armour of truth; consequently, they could stand the satanic fire of falsehood and vituperation like heroines. While some of the noble and pure hearted, who have ceased to bow the knee to Baal, became so disgusted with the tirade of abuse that was heaped upon all who had the moral courage to dissent from them in their pernicious doctrines and practices, that they left the house, and went out of hearing of the vile sound of the speakers' voices. My wife said the bitterest pill she had to swallow came from a person that she has cooked and washed for, weeks without number, (not only out here but back in the states), free of charge—not so much as thank you. I presume that I will remain here and watch the corners unless I can dispose of my property and there is no likelihood of that. I am not very particular whether I sell or not as I am doing a very fair business in Conejos. Should any of our elders be passing through this section at any time I would be pleased to have them call on, and stay awhile with me.

As Bro. Caffall has requested me to write up a brief account of the work, and also the split that has occurred in the Brighamite ranks of this place, and have you to publish it, I will do so, in a series of letters, if it is acceptable to you. In-form Bro. Blair that the Advocates came all right, and that all mail matter for me should invariably be addressed to Conejos. Ever praying for the success of Zion,

I remain you brother,
FELIX B. MOYERS.

CABOOL, Texas Co., Missouri,
November 1st, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Lord is working with us; recently he has increased us, three. Bro. Ariso Willmont Russell, of this place, I baptized and confirmed a member of the church Oct. 24th, 1884. He was born February 21st, 1859, in Massac county, Illinois. He is a promising young man.

At Noblet's Mill in Howell county, Missouri, October 27th, 1884, I baptized Edna McGowen, born May 4th, 1823, White county, Tennessee, and her daughter, Drewsy Margaret Lay, born January 16th, 1850.

The two Wright county, Missouri, ladies, of which I write, live about fifteen miles from here. They are relatives of Bro. Schofield. They became believers by reading our church Heralds, sent them by Bro. Schofield.

October 25th, 26th and 27th, I preached at Noblet's Mill five times; about that time blessed four children. I think I see the way opening up more favorably for us. It occurs to me that if we are obedient to the Master he will continue to increase us. Our Master is very fair with us; he only asks us to do that which is right.

If we are entitled to an organized branch send some one here authorized to organize us, please. In Cabool, we have six members, adults; two children, members; three members at Norwood, twenty miles west of here; Bro. Schofield and family; Bro. Metzger and lady, about fifteen miles from here; and two sisters at Noblet's Mill, about fifteen miles from here. In Cabool three or four believe from reading Voice of Warning and Herald, and talking with us. Some of said number would be likely to become useful were they to take membership. One of said party does a good deal of street preaching for us, now. He has whipped the Dunkards, Baptists, Methodists and one writer at Mountain Grove, ten miles west of here.

B. A. ATWELL.

ALLISTON, Ontario,
October 20th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I avail myself of the first spare time I have had since I returned from my late mission. You will have learned ere this that Bro. John H. Lake and I were laboring together since last June, and altogether in new places, and with good results. I see by one of Bro. John's reports in the Herald that at the time of his writing, there, there were twenty-nine new members organized into the Cameron Branch. Well, the number since then has grown to thirty-three; and Bro. John and I together, since last June conference and up to the time of meeting in our late fall conference October 4th, just four months, baptized forty-five, and made six new openings; made many friends, a few enemies, and removed very much prejudice. I have been at home since our conference, setting things in order to make home comfortable for the winter while I am away. I intend leaving home the last part of this month, about the 27th, to be gone all winter, and until the spring. I find more demand for preaching than I can attend to.

Bro. Joseph Luff remained a week with us at Alliston. After conference there was a good chance to remove some prejudice, which Joseph availed himself of; there being an exciting contest over what we call the Scott (temperance) Act, which is being submitted to each of the counties separately, and is virtually a prohibition act. Joseph met an old acquaintance, a Mr. Webber, who is a great temperance man from Toronto. He invited Bro Luff to assist in firing a few hot shot at the liquor traffic; the outcome of the meeting was that Bro. Luff got most all the applause, and made some excellent points which are yet fresh in the minds of the people. The election has since come off, carrying the country with 1,134 for the Act. This is a large majority, and we in Alliston give considerable credit to Bro. Joseph Luff for increasing the vote here, which would no doubt have been otherwise had he not had part in the speechifying.

J. A. MCINTOSH.

BROCTON, Massachusetts,
October 27th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I am in Brocton again on my round of the district. Had good liberty yesterday and evening in presenting the word. I find the Saints mostly alive to the interests of the work. I go from here to Boston, and from there to open a place near Fitchburg, Sunday next, where the gospel has not been preached heretofore. This through the request and aid of Bro. John Hoxie. Political excitement is high in this country, as elsewhere I suppose; but I am consoled with the truth of the old Quaker's saying, that "God will have his way in the end no matter which side wins." "Righteousness exaltheeth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when the wicked bear rule the people mourn." We may have a form of government devised by angels or God himself, but if men without the fear or knowledge of God bear rule, any great measure of prosperity can not long be enjoyed; and although we may have our political preferences, it would seem that in view of our hope it would not pay for Latter Day Saints to get very much excited over the question as to which of the parties clamoring for place and power should be placed in charge of our national affairs. Jesus Christ has been said to be "The desire of all the nations." To those who know and are declaring the glad tidings of the Kingdom of God in this generation, this statement is peculiarly and wonderfully significant. "Thy Kingdom come," was the great thing to be petitioned for in Jesus' prayer. "Surely I come quickly," "Amen," said John, "Even so, come Lord Jesus." Amen I should have said, and yet the thought—am I ready; for "Who shall stand when he appeareth?" Am I ready for the refiner's fire? But it is a fact that honest, thinking people are getting sick and tired, and have lost confidence in both them that are and those who would be rulers of the kingdoms of this world; and this fact may prepare the hearts of the people for the candid consideration of the great facts foreshadowed in prophecy concerning the subject of the Kingdom of God, which has been committed to us as a people for delivery to the nations of the earth. The theme of all themes, the burden of the testimony of an Isaiah, of a Daniel, of Jesus, the transcendent theme of Paul's letters and sermons, of all the apostles, and of latter day revelations; the unexpressed desire of all earth's sorrowing, tried, suffering and afflicted ones, is that "The kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ;" instead of fraud and oppression "Righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins; with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth." The ideal government. May God hasten it in his own good time, and what is more, prepare us for the glorious appearance of the coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, to whom be glory and honor, both now and forever. Amen.

Yours in hope of the ultimate triumph,
MYRON H. BOND.

St. Louis Mo. Oct., 30th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I have been constantly laboring for the master since writing and learn that good has been done. On Sunday last, I was invited by the colored Baptist preacher on 2521 Wright St. to speak to his people. I cheerfully accepted the favorable opportunity of preaching, for the first time in my life, to the colored people; and on Tuesday evening I addressed them, from Acts 16: 30: "What must I do to be saved?" Many were shouting all the time I was speaking; but the colored Methodist preacher, who was present, held his peace. I can not account for his keeping silent unless we gave him too much matter, laying on of hands, and signs following the believer. A number of the Saints were present, and said my shots took good effect. I felt good in speaking to them, am to preach to them again, on the evening of November the 7th.

The Lord willing, I will be in Almer, Illinois, for Sunday, November 2d. May speak in East St. Louis next week to the colored people in the M. E. Church.

I want to say that the Braden and Kelley Debate is doing more good to our cause in St. Louis than harm. I have been talking to those of Mr. Braden's church, and one said to me: "We are not satisfied with Mr. Braden's way of presenting things, as he did." He said Braden bulldozed too much, although he is a good debater. I told him that if the Christian Church hadn't any better man to represent them, and to try to prove the Book of Mormon to be Spaulding's romance, they would better try and borrow one from some other church, if one could be found.

We had a good meeting last evening the Spirit present; and the gifts of the gospel enjoyed. There is a good class of Saints here, and the most of them are anxious to see the work spread. They are trying to raise means to get them a house to worship in. If any one is mindful enough of the poor Saints in this large city, and desires to help, please send one dollar, or more, to John Parish 1445, Madison street, St. Louis, Missouri.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

Oct. 31.—The Jews in St. Petersburg recently arranged to give a ball in honor of Sir Moses Montefiore the night of his 100th birthday. The police stopped the preparations and refused to allow any demonstration to take place. The reason given for their action was that any such large assemblage of Jews would excite the anti-Semitic spirit among the people and lead to dangerous riots.

The Italian Government is about to send two cruisers to the Congo to look out for Italian interests.

Prince Bismarck will preside at the opening and closing of the conference, but will not be present during the debates.

At a meeting of the Spanish Cabinet Council yesterday, presided over by King Alfonso, Senor Elduayan, Minister of Foreign Affairs, submitted for consideration the conditions agreed upon between United States Minister Foster and Senor Albacote, Spanish Commissioner, for a special treaty of commerce with America. This treaty would be the starting point for a new colonial and tariff policy in the Spanish West Indies. It would open the Castilian colonies to American competition against Spanish imports, but it would also admit Cuba and Porto Rico into the Zollverein which America is gradually forming with Mexico and other Spanish-speaking countries around the Gulf of Mexico and in Central America, on the basis of reciprocal concessions, and discriminating duties to the exclusion of European competition. Canada, the British West Indies, and the Central American republics will receive the same advances shortly. The special Hispano-American convention stipulates that its advantages shall apply only to trade between the United States, Cuba, and Porto Rico which is carried on under the American and Spanish flags respectively. By its terms America will admit sugars, molasses, and raw tobacco free of all duty, and the duty on other articles imported from the West Indies will be reduced. Spain will place American flour and cereals imported into her colonies upon the same footing as those imported from Spain, and will make a large reduction in the duties on cattle, salt, fresh fish, and all but a very few of American manufactured goods. Spain will also suppress the consular tonnage duties which are now levied at American ports, and promises further to reform the custom-house, harbor, and sanitary regulations and fines in her colonies. The convention is likely to meet with much opposition in the Cortes.

Nov. 1.—The latest news makes it probable that Prince Bismarck will not have more than 160 votes in the Reichstag on which he can rely. He would need to get forty others in order to have a majority, but the tone of the catholic press shows that he would have to make great concessions in order to get them from that quarter. It is said that the Prince is much disheartened at the immense growth of the Socialist vote, and especially in Berlin, where they number nearly one-half of the electorate.

The cholera is in its last flickering state in the Mediterranean and is being skillfully confined in Normandy to the original seat. Much alarm has been caused by the report of an outbreak in Nantes, but the doctors insist that it is only typhoid. The news from Madras that the cholera is raging there in a more violent form than usual makes a visitation in Europe next year improbable. In Belgium there has been a single isolated case, but it seems to have been without contagious effects.

A new refinement in vegetarianism has been devised. At a recent vegetarian banquet in England, after the usual amount of distensive food had been consumed, a malcontent had the courage to observe that if we left off rearing animals for food it would interfere with clothes. He was, however, instantly confuted in the most practical manner by a true vegetarian, who arose and asserted that he was completely dressed in materials which had involved no blood guiltiness whatever. A cotton velvet coat, a dark linen drill waist-coat, corduroy trousers, and lawn-tennis shoes constituted the array of this animals' friend. He also committed himself to the statement that "he had never tasted animal food in his life."

The United States against John Connelly, and that of the same plaintiff against Joseph Evans, both polygamy cases, are set for trial at Salt Lake City this week. The former has been dismissed.

Nov. 3.—During the last twenty-four hours five deaths from cholera have occurred at Nantes, France.

Frederick J. Allen, Vice President of the Young Ireland Society, arrested last night on a charge of treason-felony, was brought into court to-day at Dublin, Ireland, and arraigned, and was remanded to jail to await trial. Evidence was produced showing that he wrote a letter to the headquarters of the Fenians in Paris containing an account of the receipts of cash for Fenian purposes and an account of the avengers' expenses. Among the avengers' names Joe Mullett and Patrick Malloy appeared. The letter likewise detailed the quantity of arms belonging to various Fenian centres in Ireland and numbers of men composing them. At Kilkenny it said there were 332 members, at Dublin 650, and at Louth 503.

Commissioner Pine of the New Orleans Exhibition has chartered the steamer Great Eastern for one year. She is to carry the exhibits from the healtheries and elsewhere to New Orleans free of charge to the owners of the consignments, and is afterwards to be used as a floating hotel. The managers of the exhibition expect to fasten the big steamer to the levee and give entertainments and receptions on board every evening while the exhibition lasts. The Great Eastern is expected to sail during the last week of November.

Judge Zane to-day sentenced Rudger Clawson, convicted a week ago of polygamy at Salt Lake City, Utah, to four years in the penitentiary and $800 fine. An appeal was taken, pending which his counsel moved he should be released on bail, which was refused. Clawson was remanded to the custody of the United States Marshal.

A decision was rendered by the Supreme Court of the United States this afternoon in another of a long series of cases which have arisen out of the adoption of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution. The present case, which is that of John Elk, plaintiff in error against Charles Wilkins, and which came from the District of Nebraska, is a suit brought by an Indian against the Registrar of one of the wards of the City of Omaha for refusing to register him as a qualified voter therein. The questions presented are whether the plaintiff in error is a citizen of the United States, and whether he has been denied any right guaranteed him by the fifteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution. This court, in a long and elaborate opinion by Justice Gray, holds: First—That an Indian who is born a member of one of the Indian tribes within the United States which still exists and is recognized as a tribe by the Government, and who has voluntarily separated himself from his tribe and taken up his residence among the white citizens of a State, but who has not been naturalized or taxed, or recognized as a citizen, either by the United States or by the State, is not a citizen of the United States within the meaning of the first section of the fourteenth amendment. Second—That the plaintiff in error, not being a citizen of the United States under the fourteenth amendment, has been deprived of no right secured by the fifteenth amendment, and can not maintain this action. The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed. Justice Harlan read a long dissenting opinion in behalf of Justice Woods and himself.

Nov. 5.—United States Consul Morrill, at Jerusalem, writing to the State Department regarding fruit culture in Palestine, says: "Vineyards are planted on hillsides and plains, in the valleys and on the seacoast; and vines appear to flourish as well in one place as in the other. As to grapes, those that are raised on the hillsides are sweetest and best, and they also produce the greatest quantity and finest wine. Good wine is not produced from grapes that are raised near the sea. In all the hill country of Palestine and the limestone region—and it is here that the best results are obtained—the earth between the vines is plowed twice a year, men lifting the vines while the plow passes by. In many vineyards the vines are laid on small piles of stone or on rocks, while in a few they are trained on sticks, which raise them slightly above the ground. Where the vines are very young the land between them is frequently planted to cucumbers. After three years the vines begin to bear well, and they continue bearing for an indefinite period, natives say for a hundred years. The pruning of vines is done in the rudest manner. It may be said, also, that the orange, lemon, fig and olive trees are never trimmed. Could these trees be properly cared for, and could the vineyards of the country be put likewise under the care of skilled laborers, there is no reason why the fruits of Palestine that are here mentioned might not rival the finest fruits of similar kinds that are at present raised in any part of the world. Even under the present rude system of cultivation the abundance and sweetness of the grapes raised here is simply astonishing. Grapes are not injured by mildew, nor are the vines ever irrigated. As to the cost of the crop per acre of yield and value, it is impossible to give any data. Very fine raisins are made in Essalt (east of Jordan) and also in Hebron. These are chiefly consumed in the country, for raisins are as much a staple article of food in every family as potatoes in America. The seedless raisins, which are very sweet, are sent to Egypt, and small quantities to other places. Also wine, which is manufactured in great quantities, is consumed at home, and very much is shipped to different parts of Europe. It is estimated that two kantars, or 1,200 pounds of grapes will produce one kantar, or 600 pounds, of wine, or not far from seventy-five gallons.

Several cases and one death from supposed Asiatic cholera have occurred in Paris, France, within the last twenty-four hours. During the same time there were five fresh cases and one death at Nantes. The Chinese Council of State has failed to arrange for the settlement of the difficulty with France. The government insists upon the attendance of Li Hung-Chang, Viceroy of the Pee Chi Li, at Peking. The Journal des Debats says the French Government has contracted with a shipping company for the conveyance of 5,000 troops to Tonquin.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Nov. 1.—Loss by fire at Lubeck, Me., $21,000. Omaha, Neb., $30,000. Willow Grove, Pa., $45,000.

A false alarm of fire at Glasgow, Scotland, caused a panic in a theatre. When the theatre was finally cleared sixteen corpses were found on the stairs leading from the gallery, and twelve persons were so badly injured that they only gave evidence that life was not extinct by their piteous moanings. Upon the first alarm being rung the whole fire brigade quickly went to the rescue, and, with the police, did their utmost to allay the panic and rescue the dead and dying, but they were too late to be of much effective service. Police and citizens finally succeeded in forcing their way into the building, and then aided all they could to escape to the street; but the mass was so wedged that they were sadly interfered with in their humane labors.

Eighteen persons were injured by a railroad accident near Alto, Ohio.

Nov. 2.—Loss by fire at Connellsville, Pa., $11,000. Oshkosh, Wis., $16,000.

Nov. 4.—The man whose cry of "Fire!" caused the panic in the Star Theatre at Glasgow, Scotland, last evening has been arrested. He was drunk when he raised the false alarm. Persons in the theatre at the time describe the scene as terrible. The steps were strewn with ribbons, hats, sacks, and shawls. The victims were first suffocated and then trampled upon. The panic lasted fifteen minutes. It is a noteworthy fact that the authorities had disapproved the means of exit and contemplated the construction of an additional exit from the gallery. The scenes witnessed when the relatives identified the dead were most affecting. Among the victims were eight females.

Porto Rico papers report that large waves were observed in several ports of the island during the recent cyclone in the West Indies. In Arecibo thirty-two houses inhabited by poor people were destroyed. The water entered the stores, but did little damage. A schooner was cast ashore. The cyclone was felt severely in Nuevitas. The city was inundated in a few hours, causing some damage. The water at the railway station rose 25 centimetres above the passenger stairs. The telegraph station was struck by lightning and destroyed.

Nov. 5.—One of the largest fires that ever visited that city, occurred in Jerseyville, Ill. Loss not ascertained. Loss by fire at Fort Plain, N. Y., $12,000.

In the two recent gales of Saturday and the previous Thursday terrific havoc was wrought in shipping on the New Foundland and Labrador coasts. The British brig Dugong was lost with all hands at Western Head. The schooner Topsy and Julia were totally wrecked, the crews barely escaping with their lives. Eleven other vessels were lost. No particulars of the disasters have yet been received. At Torbay an unknown vessel was lost with all hands. The wreck is in pieces, and most of it is being driven ashore.

Nov. 6.—The entire business portion of Silver Plume, Col., was burned this morning. The streets are filled with crowds of excited, homeless people. Several lives were lost. One body so far has been recovered. The loss will reach $100,000. Silver Plume is a small mining camp of a few hundred inhabitants three miles west of Georgetown. Loss by fire at Port Huron, Mich., $10,000.

A boiler in an iron-foundry at Stafford, England, exploded and four men were killed and twenty injured.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The mill-spinners of Dundee, Scotland, have resolved to reduce the wages of operatives five per cent in consequence of the depression of trade. Thousands of workmen are unemployed. The municipal authorities are devising work for their relief. Gerwood & Forrest, wool brokers, with houses in Bradford and Glasgow, have failed. The liabilities are $306,710.

The steadiness of American securities in the London market, in view of the excitement concerning the election, is favorably commented upon by the British press. The Pall Mall Gazette refers to the matter as an instance of the stability of democratic institutions. A similar crisis, it says, in any other country would convulse prices:

POEM

Read before the Young Men's Christian Union in Boston, in 1882, by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Selected by Bro. J. F. Burton.

Why linger 'round the sunken wrecks,
Where old Armadas found their graves?
Why slumber on the sleepy decks,
While foam and clash the angry waves?
Up! When the storm-blast rends the clouds,
And winged with ruin sweeps the gale;
Young feet must climb the quivering shrouds,
Young hands must reef the bursting sail!
Leave us to fight the tyrant creeds,
Who felt their shackles, feel their scars;
The cheerful sunlight little heeds,
The brutes that prowl beneath the stars.
The dawn is here! The day star shows
The spoils of many a battle won;
But sin and sorrow still are foes,
That face us in the morning sun.
Who sleeps beneath yon bannered mounds?
The proudly sorrowing mourner seeks—
The garland-bearing crowd surrounds—
A bright-haired boy with beardless cheeks.
What nobler task, what fairer prize,
Than earth to save and Heaven to win?
'Tis time this 'fallen world' should rise;
Let youth the sacred work begin!

IS THE ORDINANCE OF BAPTISM OF DIVINE APPOINTMENT.—No. 3.

BY ELDER CHARLES DERRY.

WHO has authority to administer the ordinance of baptism? Webster defines authority, as "legal, or rightful power; a right to command or act." When used in connexion with the ordinances of God's house, it signifies, legal right or power to act in them—administer them. It will be admitted on all hands, that in human affairs, no person can legally act for another, who has not been authorized so to do. It will be further conceded, that in all human governments, no person can legally administer the laws and ordinances of a government without being chosen, or appointed, and qualified for such duty. The common sense of humanity has foreseen that anarchy and confusion would ensue, were persons permitted to act in the name of, and for the government, without being legally authorized. Hence the most stringent measures have been adopted to prevent such unauthorized acts. No argument is required to prove this truth, even to the most obtuse mind. What, then, about the government of God, either in his spiritual kingdom on earth, or in his heavenly kingdom? Will he have any less respect for order, and good government, than man? Would there be order where every one was at liberty to assume the right to administer at his own will? If one might assume it, might not another? and thus every one assume to be administrators? And if they can make themselves law administrators, what should hinder them from being law makers? And, as many men have many minds, so we would have an equal diversity of laws; hence confusion, just as we see in the so-called Christian world to-day. "The house divided against itself must fall."

But a being with all the perfections of Deity, must be a God of order. And Paul emphatically tells us that "He is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the Saints." 1st Cor. 14: 33. Scientists, after viewing His works, tell us that "Order is heaven's first law." This is in perfect accord with his character. Let us review some of his dealings with man.

In the beginning His works were perfect. The lower animals, to whom of course no revealed law could be given, acted in accordance with the law of their being, and always in harmony with their welfare. And to-day, there is less infraction of the law of nature among the lower order than there is among mankind. But to man, the image of God—endowed with intelligence, entrusted with responsibilities of the highest nature—to him a law was given, perfect in itself, and revealed to him that he might have it continually before him. So long as he observed that law, all was well with him, peace reigned. He was in harmony with his own being and with all things around, above, and beneath him on the earth. He was in harmony with his Creator; but when he broke that law, how changed the scene. One tremendous jar of discord vibrated through his whole being, affected all creation, and from that time to this has kept vibrating through this lower world, bringing all the deadly consequences of sin upon us, and causing us to groan beneath the curse. This is one grand evidence that our Creator is a God of order,—that his laws can not be infringed without our suffering loss.

Now let us scan his works in the great redemption of man. We will pass over the patriarchal age till we come to Abraham. God had purposed to bless the world, and he made choice of this patriarch, and his seed, as the means by which it should be accomplished. Bear in mind, Abraham does not assume this great honor; God confers it upon him. Gen. 12: 3. In order to prepare Israel, or the seed of Abraham, for this great task of blessing the world, He causes them to go to Egypt. They are brought under bondage, that they might witness the power and goodness of God in their deliverance. They witness the display of his omnipotence in a manner that forever rivets the truth upon their hearts, that he is "the Lord God Omnipotent, full of goodness and slow to anger," and all this through the ministration of one whom he called and authorized to act in his name. To this man he reveals a law for their guidance; and appoints ordinances and statutes; but none are allowed to assume to themselves the honor or right to administer these laws and ordinances. God sets apart for himself whom he will—Moses as the lawgiver, and Aaron and his seed as the ministers thereof. Exod. 28, 29. See also Numb. 18. And when even the sons of Aaron assume that unto which they have not been appointed, they are visited with severest punishment. Numb. 16. They had been called to act in the priest's office; but not being content, they sought to assume the high priesthood also, which attempted usurpation brought about their destruction in so signal a manner, as if intended to impress all mankind with a sense of the crime of assuming sacred duties, or the right to administer in holy things, without being called by Divine appointment. It is well known by all Bible readers, that none were allowed to minister in the priest's office but such as had been properly set apart for that sacred calling. Hebrews 5: 4. Nor were the succeeding ages any exception to this rule. No prophet attempted to run before he was sent. They were all called of God, as witness their writings. In fact, they could not have been His prophets, if they had run without tidings from him—they would have been self made prophets, and as their predictions could not have exceeded their knowledge, the future would have been hidden from their view, and the world would have been in total darkness as to the great events that were foretold so many ages before their fulfillment, just as the world to-day is ignorant of the things that are coming upon it, because it seeks wisdom from men whom God hath not sent and to whom he will not commit his secrets.

We will now turn to the New Testament for evidence as to God's dealings in that age. First, as we have already seen, John the Baptist was sent from God. (John 1: 6). He did not run before he was sent; yet no doubt he had as good desires as any man, and would delight in having the honor to prepare the way before the Redeemer of the world. The next in order is he of whom it is written, "Lo! I come to do thy will, O God." Surely, if any person could presume to run without being properly sent, this personage could. If any one possessed the qualifications in himself, surely he did. He came from the bosom of the Almighty. He had long gazed upon suffering humanity, with divine compassion; and we have every evidence of divine love for man in his life and death. If earnest desire to bless could be a sufficient reason for hastening to the help a perishing world without being sent, separated, consecrated, ordained of God to the work, surely the Redeemer had that desire; but it is written of him, "So also, Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest, but he that said unto him, thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee;" and who also said, "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec."—Heb. 5: 5, 6. The testimony of the Son confirms this testimony. "I am come, not of myself, but he that sent me is true."—John 7: 28. "Neither came I of myself, but he sent me."—John 8: 42. For still further evidence, read the whole of the gospel, from all of which we have the most abundant testimony that the Son of God did not take this honor upon himself; but he bowed in obedience to his Father's will, and thus "Became the author of eternal salvation unto all them who obey him."—Heb. 5: 9.

"I would ask, Is the servant greater than his Lord. (John 13: 16.) How then can the ministrations of one who does not even recognize God's order of appointment, but who presumptuously runs before he is sent. I say how can such a man's ministrations be acceptable in the sight of God when the Son of God, though full of infinite love, would not presume to act until authorized of his Father? Jesus well knew that the only way to carry out the eternal purpose was to act in harmony with that purpose. And although he was, above all others, that seed in which God had promised to bless all the families of the earth, yet he, like all others chosen of that seed, had to submit to God's appointed way—to the plan devised in the eternal councils. Furthermore, when he has accomplished this great work, he is to deliver up his authority to him who sent him. (1 Cor. 15: 24.) So every man, entrusted with holy things, will have to deliver up his stewardship. But how can a man deliver up that which he has not received? Those who have not been called to the holy ministry, but have presumed to run without being sent, have no such stewardship to deliver up, neither can they receive the glory attaching to such as have been called, and are faithful.

Let us now consider the Apostles' ministry, and ascertain if theirs was an exception to the rule, or strictly in accordance with it. We read that Christ called upon them to follow him, and "he would make them fishers of men." (Matt. 4: 17, 18.) And in the tenth of Matthew we read, "He gave them power over unclean spirits, etc. Then he commanded them to go and preach, saying: "The kingdom of heaven is at hand, (See also Mark 6: 9; Luke 6: 13; 8: 1; 9th and 10th chapters.) From these passages we have unmistakable evidence that these men were first chosen to be his ministers, and then were properly set apart to that duty by him. And to complete this evidence, we have his own words in John 15: 16—"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go, and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain." Surely, this is plain, that these holy men did not run without authority from God. Now examine their final mission. Hitherto they have only been sent to the "Lost sheep of the house of Israel." His mission to them did not authorize them to go into all the world, nor did they undertake to do so until they were sent, much as they might have learned from their divine Master, to love the world.

Christ has died and is risen again, He appears to his disciples, and in due time gives them the great commission.—"Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."—Matt.

28: 18. Mark states it thus: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," etc. Here, then, they received their authority to preach the gospel, and administer its ordinances, to all the world; and by tracing the Acts and Epistles of these men, we find that all who were afterward called, received authority through them; and we have no instance of any departure from this rule so long as the church retained its purity.

The sacred things of God's house were guarded with jealous care. If the law of Moses that "Made nothing perfect," but only served "As a school master to bring us to Christ," was so jealously guarded that Moses was commanded,—"See thou make all things according to the pattern showed to thee in the Mount, (Heb. 8: 5), then, how much more important that "This more excellent ministry,"—ministry of "A better covenant, established upon better promises," should have every safeguard thrown around it, that corrupt men may not steal in and introduce strange doctrines, and ordinances not of God, and thus corrupt the temple of the Lord? As Moses received the pattern of the church in the wilderness, Jesus received the pattern of his glorious church. As the work of the former could only be acceptable when done according to the pattern, so with the greater work of the latter. And when the latter committed His work into the hands of his apostles whom he set in the church, 1st Cor. 12, they, too, were commanded to work according to the pattern. And in the above chapter, as also in Eph. 4, we find the order of the ministry defined, as set in the church and given for the work of the ministry. As stated before, "The Acts of the Apostles," and the Epistles, show that they acted strictly in harmony with the pattern given by Jesus. When one was needed to fill the place of Judas, they appealed to the Lord to show whom he had chosen; and when God declared in favor of Matthias, "He was numbered with the eleven." Acts 1st. When it became necessary to appoint some one to minister in secular affairs in the church, the apostles commanded the church to look out "seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint to this business." These men were afterward set apart by laying on of hands and prayer. Acts 6: 2-6. Paul was chosen of Jesus Christ, Acts 9: 16, but in process of time, "The Holy Ghost said, separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." This was also done by laying on hands and prayer. Acts 13. In the 14th chapter and 23d verse, we learn that "They ordained elders in every church." We read of no deviation from this rule so long as the church retained its primitive purity; but as soon as it began to corrupt itself by the traditions of men, and by false doctrines, just as Paul and Peter predicted, (See Tim. 1 and 2 Epistles, also 2 Thes. 2: 2; 2 Pt. 2), then men began to assume authority with which they had never been clothed; and thus one evil after another obtained until they lost all likeness to the Church of Christ; and as a consequence every vestige of authority to act in his name. (See Mosheim 2d Cent.) Mosheim shows the assumptions to which the church was tending in an early day, and in the third century he says: "The form of government degenerated toward the form of a religious monarchy." He describes these acts as "usurpations." Thus things went on until the Bishop of Rome assumed universal supremacy. One of the homilies of the Church of England, speaking of the condition of things from this time to the reformation, says,—"The whole world both clergy and laity was sunk in the most abominable idolatry, and that too, for the space of eight hundred years or more." (I quote from memory). This then was the result of the Great Apostasy; hence, their claim to divine authority is utterly groundless; for God would not confer authority to act in his name, upon such corrupt, ambitious, and idolatrous men. This truth was recognized in the reformation, therefore reformers withdrew from such corrupt rule, and whatever authority they were invested with by the Church of Rome, was assuredly stripped from them by her authority, when they seceded. And what they did as reformers was done by no higher priestly authority than their own. Not one of them claimed to have any special call from heaven, further than the promptings in his own mind, which promptings could not be called revelations from God, or they would have been all led in one direction; whereas there was great diversity among them in regard to what should be established as the rule and doctrines of the Reformed Church and as a consequence, instead of one reformed church, there were a number, differing in faith and practice. Could they all be of God? If not, which, if any, are to be recognized as His? If the world "Both clergy and laity had been sunk in abominable idolatry for over eight hundred years, "How, or by what means did the reformers obtain authority to act as God's ministers? The Church of Rome took from them whatever authority she had conferred; they denied any later revelation than the days of the apostles; the apostolic commission could be no commission to them, for it was not given to them; it was given to a different class of men—men who were witnesses of the death, resurrection, and ascension of the Lord Jesus,—men who believed in and taught the blessedness of immediate revelation. The reformers were not witnesses of these events, nor had they, like Paul, seen him afterwards. And they rejected (like the Romish Church) any further revelation than the Bible; hence that commission could not be claimed by them. They had no part nor lot in the matter. The inspired apostle says, speaking of the priestly office, "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron."—Heb. 5. Aaron was called by revelation from God, and set apart by one authorized of God. (Exod. 4: 14; 28; also 30: 30). It may be urged that this was in the Mosaic dispensation. True, but Christ, who was the head of the Christian dispensation, followed the same rule, and "set us an example that we should walk in his steps." And we have seen it was God's rule in all the ages; and as he changes not, it is the same now. Thus the early reformers were without divine authority, from the fact that they denied the only means through which that authority could be restored; viz: immediate revelation from God. Did any of the later reformers claim to have received authority by revelation from heaven? They all deny it; hence, as divine authority must come by revelation, they too are destitute. Moreover, if the churches from which they seceded had possessed authority, then, in the event of their secession it would undoubtedly have been taken from them, and they (the seceders) would be left naked. How, then, could they be authorized to act in divine ordinances?

I would ask a few plain questions for the candid reader to ponder. Why did Luther, Calvin, Knox, Melancthon, in fact all the early reformers, leave the church of Rome? Their answer is, "Because it was corrupt, and had been sunk in abominable idolatry for the space of eight hundred years." Could divine authority be with such a church? And as the reformers denied immediate revelation, and, as that was the means by which divine authority was conferred, is it not evident that they were without authority? But supposing they had been recognized of God; why did the later reformers leave the Protestant Church? If they believed the church, or churches, from which they seceded, were recognized of God, would they be justified in leaving them? and could they conscientiously seek for guidance to establish other churches governed by different principles? If they believed those churches from which they seceded were corrupt, did they claim to have any authority from God by revelation to establish new churches? If the church from which they seceded was recognized of God, could he recognize the works of these seceders? Would not their acts be schismatical? Is God the author of schism? Paul says God organized his church so that there should be no schism in it. 1 Cor. 12. Is it in harmony with the character of the unchangeable God for him to set up such a diversity of churches, endow them with authority to preach and administer so differently and contradictorily to each other, when he has declared himself as not being "the author of confusion?" If such would be the opposite of his character, are we not justified in the conclusion that in spite of all the pretenses to piety, "disinterested love for souls," etc., they are at best unauthorized to speak and act in his name? and that they have no authority to administer the heaven-ordained ordinance of baptism?

But we will present another test. We have proved in this article that baptism is a divine ordinance. We have also proved that it can only be administered by immersion. Would the unchangeable God authorize a man to administer such a sacred ordinance in any other way than that laid down by him? Would any other way be baptism? God has proclaimed it a "burial," a being "born of water;" will he authorize any one to tell the people, "If you want to be baptized by immersion we will immerse you, if by pouring we will pour you, and if by sprinkling we will sprinkle you?" Will he make his ministers weather-vanes to turn whichever way the winds blow? or will he make them a "flaming fire" consuming the rubbish and traditions of men? Did God ever ordain men to please the people by preaching and practicing such precepts and rites as are suited to their tastes and notions?

"My ways are not as your ways, nor my thoughts as your thoughts." "Cry aloud, spare not, and shew my people their sins." "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman, * * * when I say unto the wicked thou shalt surely die, and thou givest him not warning * * * I will require his blood at thy hands." "He that breaketh the least of these commandments and teacheth men so to do, he shall in no wise be saved in the kingdom of heaven." "Preach the word, be instant in season." "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God." "He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, I judge him not; * * * but the word that I speak, that shall judge him at the last day."

These are unmistakable utterances of Jehovah, and plainly show that God is not to be mocked; and that while he seeks to save, he saves only in his appointed way; and the man who preaches or offers any other way than he has laid down, comes under the curse.

But some teach faith, repentance and baptism for remission of sins, and deny the baptism of the Holy Ghost, in these days. Such God has never sent, or they would preach his word entire—not a part. They whom God sends like Paul would declare "The whole counsel of God." Others preach the baptism of the Holy Ghost, but deny that of water. We reply as above, and point you to the words of the Son of God, who joined the birth of water and of the Spirit together, as being absolutely necessary for admission into the Kingdom of God.—John 3. It is very evident that none but those who teach the pure principles of the gospel as Christ taught them, can be authorized either to teach or administer in the things of God. But the question still remains, Who has authority to administer the ordinance of baptism?

In all ages when God gave authority to man to act in his name, they who were called and authorized knew it. They could not be in doubt. And while they would not be found boasting over this mark of God's favor, they would, like Moses, declare "I am, that I am, hath sent me unto thee." Or, with Jesus, "I am come, not of myself, but he that sent me is true." None could mistake the call. But in this day of many creeds, who are found among all the sects who can truly and firmly declare, that God has sent them? God has not sent them; for they would know it if he had. But they tell us "I hope so, I believe so." This was not the language of Paul. He could say, "I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it by man, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." How different this from the language of uncertainty, that modern priests utter? Yet the temporising policy that prevails to-day, declares it uncharitable for a man to declare himself as called of God to be his minister, lest it should reflect upon, or wound the feelings of some other Christians that could not say this; or lest it should appear presumptuous. But the real reason is, they are destitute of divine authority. The whole Christian world is acting only upon human authority; and they in reality deny, with few exceptions, any authority or priesthood from God, to-day. And those who claim to be in possession of the latter, have only a corrupt priesthood of no higher source than a pope. Since all the history of the dealings of God with his people, all comparison of modern Christianity with that of the New Testament times, as well as the confessions of all sects who have arisen to "reform" the corrupt churches from which they seceded, combine to prove that there has been a general apostasy from the true order of God; and further, since no man or set of men, called by whatever name they may be, can confer divine authority without first receiving divine authority; and as none ever did, or can receive it but through revelation, it follows that in order to receive it, it must be sent to earth by revelation, as it was in all ages of the world. And those to whom it is restored will know it, and will proclaim the fact, not to boast of their superiority, but in humility, with a broken and contrite heart, and yet in that positive language that always marked the chosen of the Lord. Before I give the final answer to these questions, I must show that not only was a general apostasy from the true order of God foretold in the Old and New Testaments, but also the restoration of the gospel to earth in the last days.

While John was upon the Isle of Patmos, he declares: "After this I looked, and behold a door was opened in heaven, and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither and I will show thee things which must be hereafter."—Rev. 4: 1. From this we learn, that the events which were shown to John in the succeeding views, were yet in the future. In the sixth verse of the fourteenth chapter of this book we find John declaring. "I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth."

The time of this vision was about ninety-four years after angels announced the Savior's birth, and about sixty years after the angel, at the tomb of Jesus, announced to Mary, "He is not here, he is risen!" I mention these facts, because some claim that these events are the ones referred to by John, while the Lord declares to John that the event now spoken of was in the future. The time when the gospel was to be restored may be pretty nearly determined by the text and other scriptures. That gospel was to be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. It would be at a time when the true worship of the true God was not performed; for they are to be called upon to "worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountain of water." It was to be "the hour of God's judgment," (his judgment of the great whore." Rev. 17: 1), when "Babylon the Great, the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth, is to have "Doubled unto her double according to her works." Rev. 18: 6. This event is spoken of by Jesus in Matthew 24. He there describes the condition of things at the "End of the world, or destruction of the wicked;" and one of the signs spoken of is, "The preaching again of this gospel unto all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come," (the destruction of Babylon). The same event is predicted in Daniel 2, when God decrees the overthrow of all the kingdoms of the earth, and the establishment of his glorious kingdom. Now mark the similarity in these three predictions. Daniel declares that the "God of heaven will set up his kingdom on the earth." (The gospel, always the means of preparation for his kingdom, is the same now). Jesus declares, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness." The Revelator says, "I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth." Again; Daniel declares as the result of the setting up of God's kingdom, that the kingdom of men, "Became as the chaff of the summer thrashing floor, and the wind carried them away that no place was found for them." Jesus declares that when, "This gospel of the kingdom has been preached in all the world" then shall the end come, or the destruction of the wicked." John says, "And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication." Thus we find a perfect harmony. This comparison destroys the idea cherished by some, "That the event spoken of by Daniel took place when Christ came;" but we have no space to dwell on it here further than to urge that Daniel, Jesus and John, all spoke of the same event in the scriptures quoted, as being in the future. All declaring the restoration of the gospel, etc. A comparison of the numerous contradictory creeds and diverse churches with the gospel of Jesus and the church as organized by him, with all its blessings from the gift of tongues up to the gift of eternal life, will convince any intelligent mind that the apostasy foretold by Jesus in Matt. 24, by Paul in his letter to Timothy, and by Peter, and Jude, has literally taken place; and hence the necessity for the gospel in its original purity, fullness and power to be restored. To whom shall it be restored? Who shall be the honored instrument to receive and declare it to all the world? God has always worked among men by men, and although heavenly messengers have been sent to earth, yet they have been sent to some one previously prepared for the message they brought. Who shall be the honored instrument now? Is it, has it ever been God's way to call the great and the mighty to do his work? Paul answers, "Not many mighty, not many noble are called; for God hath chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the wise" that no flesh should glory in his presence. 1 Cor. 1. He will not change, though men should rage with disappointment. His course will be the same, the great are not his ministers, else man would glory in man, and make flesh their arm.

In accordance with God's eternal plan, he was pleased in the spring of 1820 to reveal himself to a youth named Joseph Smith, who had set his heart to seek after him, and to enquire in what manner he could render himself acceptable to him; for at this time he was ignorant of the true gospel. Words of comfort were given to this youth. He was told that the gospel was about to be restored in all its fulness, and that he was called to be an instrument in the Lord's hands in declaring it to the world. Other glorious visions were shown him at various times, and in 1827, the plates of the record called, "the Book of Mormon," were placed in his hands by an holy angel. This record contained the fulness of the gospel as taught by Christ and his Apostles; and this youth was enabled by the Spirit and power of God to translate the record, by which means the fulness of the gospel was revealed to him; and in 1830 the Book of Mormon was published to the world. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized with six members April 6th, 1830, and men were ordained by the holy order of God to preach the gospel to all the world, as the great means of establishing and building up the kingdom of God. In the midst of opposition from both clergy and laity, imprisonment, whippings, burnings, and death, the work has gone on. Those who have received the glad message have rejoiced, and have "set to their seal that God is true." They have received the testimony of the Holy Spirit which bears record of the Father and of the Son, and confess their willingness to sacrifice all for the truth of the gospel they have received. Testimonies come in from all parts of the civilized world, that not only is the letter, but also that the power of the gospel is restored, and is as it was in the days of Christ and his apostles; thereby proving that Joseph Smith was endowed with authority and power from on high, and that the Elders sent out by him were so endowed; and hence authority to preach the gospel and administer its ordinances is restored to man, and that this authority rests with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. It is true that many Latter Day Saints, (like ancient Israel and many former day saints), have wandered from the Lord, and have gone into abominations; but God preserved unto himself "a remnant" who would not bow the knee to Baal. And many who wandered into by and forbidden paths, have returned to their first love, and are working with might and main to spread the glorious tidings of salvation, trusting in God alone for success, and to the merits of a crucified and risen Redeemer for eternal salvation.

Now, dear reader, I have finished my task, fully satisfied that I have proven from the word of God, and by right reason, that the ordinance of baptism is of divine appointment, and "for the remission of sins," "adoption into the kingdom of God," and for "eternal salvation to all them that obey." That its mode is immersion. That it is essential to salvation; and that the true Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has authority from God to administer it unto all true, believing, and truly penitent souls.

In parting, dear reader, let me admonish you not to put it off with a sneer, not to feign disgust for that which you do not understand, nor to join in the popular cry of delusion, fanaticism, false prophets," etc., but read and compare with the word of God which you profess to believe. Look at the signs of the times as they fill the world with dread. Compare them with the signs spoken of in Scripture which should transpire before the second advent of the Son of God, and see if there is not a perfect agreement. And as you become convinced of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, fix your faith on him, repent of your sins; and be baptized for the remission of them, and "ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you, and to your children and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2:38. "Fear God and give glory to him for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him who made heaven and earth and the sea and the fountains of waters."—Rev. 14:6, 7. "So shall be granted unto you an abundant entrance into the celestial kingdom of our God." For to "him that overcometh" God has promised to "clothe with white raiment," "make him a pillar in the temple of God," and "he shall inherit all things." Is the prize worthy of the effort? So run that you may obtain. "Seek and ye shall find," "knock and it shall be opened unto you." And now may the God of peace bless the reading of this article to your whole soul; may his Spirit accompany the word with power to your understanding, and help you to resolve and do the will of God and obtain the great salvation, is the earnest prayer of the writer.

Liberality, courtesy, benevolence, unselfishness, under all circumstances, and toward all men—these qualities are to the world what the linchpin is to the rolling chariot. And, when these qualities are wanting, neither father nor mother will receive honor and support from a son. And because wise men foster these qualities, therefore do they prosper and receive praise.

Always avoid the company in which you are willing to tell a coarse jest, because for you it is demoralizing company. Grossness is never humorous, profanity is never admirable; and if your manner and speech once begin to ravel out upon that edge all their manliness and charm are in danger.

It is wise and profitable to improve the best seasons, or best days, that we have, to cultivate and practice goodness. While life, reason remains there is hope for doing better.

THE UNITED STATES VS. RUDGER CLAWSON FOR POLYGAMY.

[From the Deseret News.]

THE result of the first trial of Rudger Clawson, for polygamy, in the United States Court, in Utah, was a disagreement between the jurors who failed to find a verdict. A new trial was ordered by Judge Zane; a venire was issued, and J. J. Farrell, P. E. Fitzgerald, Charles Connor, Charles Barnett, Henry Denhalter, J. B. Griffin, John Knapp, W. H. H. Bowers, E. B. Wilder, A. Bechtol, J. W. Mason, Thomas Smith, secured as jurors. The proceedings of the second trial, so far as the main features of it are concerned, we give below from the Deseret News of October 28th:

LYDIA SPENCER REFUSES TO BE SWORN OR TO AFFIRM, AND PASSES THE NIGHT IN PRISON.—SHE IS BROUGHT INTO COURT THIS MORNING, TAKES THE OATH, AND ADMITS THAT SHE IS THE WIFE OF RUDGER CLAWSON.—VERDICT OF GUILTY AGAINST THE DEFENDANT.

THE climacteric incident in the Clawson polygamy trial was reached yesterday afternoon, shortly after our report closed for the day. It was the calling of Lydia Spencer to the witness stand, and her refusal to take the oath, or even to affirm, according to the legal custom before a witness gives evidence. Following is a verbatim report of the highly dramatic scene. John M. Young having testified—simply to the extent of repeating his former evidence—Mr. Dickson said, "Call Lydia Spencer."

The lady named arose, and, amid a general stir of interest, walked up to the witness chair with compressed lips, determined air, and a face pale with emotion. The clerk asked her to stand up and take the oath. She answered, "I decline to take it."

Mr. Dickson—"Will you affirm?"

A.—No, sir.

Q.—What's your reason?

A.—Well, I just decline to take it.

Mr. Varian—"Will your honor instruct the witness in this case?"

Judge Zane—"Do you decline to take the oath?"

A.—Yes, sir.

Judge Zane—"Do you decline to affirm?"

A.—Yes, sir.

Mr. Varian—"You decline to be a witness, as I understand?"

A.—Yes, sir.

Mr. Dickson—"We will ask your honor to wait for a few moments. We will contend, if your honor please, that this refusal to be sworn without any reason given is a contempt of court. There is no question about that. And we say it is contempt punishable under the United States. In the Organic Act this court, in United States cases, is, by express provision, invested with the power of a court of the United States circuit. This being a United States case, contempt, if committed on the trial of the United States case, is punishable, as we shall contend, under United States laws, and not under the Territorial laws. The Territorial law is limited as to its period of punishment—namely, five days. We claim that it is punishable under the United States laws; that it is in the discretion of the court to order the witness to be confined for a year or for any reasonable time, and we wish to be heard on that question.

Judge Zane—Very well.

Mr. Dickson—"I will ask the witness one or two questions before the argument is commenced. I understand (addressing Miss Lydia Spencer) you decline to be sworn in this case?"

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Is it because you have any conscientious scruples against taking an oath in any case, or is it simply that you decline to be a witness in this case?"

A.—I do not care to be a witness in any case.

Q.—Do you decline to affirm?"

A.—I do.

Q.—Do you decline absolutely to testify at all in this case?"

A.—I do.

The prosecution had evidently anticipated just such an outcome as this, as Mr. Snow had left the room immediately before Miss Spencer had been called. He now returned with his arms laden with law books, and asked, on the part of the prosecution, to be heard in support of the motion he was about to make.

He then said that, in behalf of the government, however disagreeable it might be, he begged to move that this lady be committed for contempt for refusing to act as a witness in this case. In making that motion he asked, not that she be committed for two, three, or five days—which would be the limit of the length of imprisonment for contempt under the local Territorial Statute, under the special practice act of 1874, and applicable to civil cases—but it was a motion that his honor exercise the broad power conferred upon him as the representative of that court—the court of general jurisdiction—and to commit this lady to imprisonment for such a time as his honor might see fit.

Mr. Snow then cited the case of Miss Schofield, the reputed second wife of George Reynolds, and proceeded to make an address on that celebrated case when Mr. Bennett objected to the argument proceeding in the presence of the jury.

The jury was therefore conducted to another apartment by the bailiffs.

Mr. Snow proceeded by citing the Connolly case, the Belle Harris case, and the Nellie White case, drawing attention to the brief imprisonment each one had endured for contempt; he then came to the present case, stated that the witness declined testifying on no conscientious grounds, but merely because she objected to giving evidence in this particular case. More than an hour was then consumed by Mr. Snow in reading various authorities to support the view that the Court possessed the power to imprison for contempt for any length of time it saw fit; during the whole argument Miss Spencer sat quietly in the witness chair, while the spectators yawned, shuffled their feet and in other ways testified their weariness.

Mr. Varian supplemented the remarks of Mr. Snow by quoting other authorities, and concluded by asking that the witness be adjudicated in contempt, and that if the final decision is not reached now that the criminal be kept in custody and not allowed to leave court.

Judge Zane—"This is a case of contempt, there can be no question, and the order will be made giving the custody of the witness to the Marshal, to be held until the final judgment is rendered on this matter."

A brief pause occurred, during which Miss Spencer sat quietly awaiting the next move—every spectator stretching his neck to the utmost to gain a view of her.

Judge Zane turned to her and broke the silence by saying: Now, Miss Spencer, don't you know it is wrong for you not to be sworn or affirm and testify?"

A.—It may be.

Q.—That being so, you don't want to do wrong?"

A.—I decline to take it.

Judge—"You know the consequence is, that you may have to be imprisoned, for how long I do not wish to say yet?"

A.—No, that depends on you.

Judge—"Well, in view of that, don't you think you ought to answer the truth?"

A.—Not if I don't feel like it.

Judge—"Well, you understand the consequences of it. You take a fearful responsibility in undertaking to defy the government. You stand as a criminal before the law, and it is your duty to testify; and you must testify or else you must take the consequences. If you are not ready to determine now, you think about it before morning—think about it seriously. Remember you become a criminal in the estimation of the law and will have to take the consequences of being a felon as far as the imprisonment is concerned. You will be committed to the custody of the Marshal until morning."

The Court then adjourned until to a. m. to-day, and the crowd reluctantly dispersed. Miss Spencer was taken out to the Penitentiary soon afterwards, and passed the night under the same roof which shelters the condemned criminals of the Territory.

Saturday, October 25th.

The overwhelming majority of those who went early to court this morning, to avoid the crowd and secure a seat—within or without the rail, according to sex, social standing or the altitude of their self-esteem—arrived just in time to find the places they had mentally reserved already occupied, and anathematize themselves for not coming earlier. Before 10 o'clock every chair, table and bench was taken, many ladies being included in the crowd, and some standing up. This of itself is sufficient to show the size and quality of the congregation. The counsel for both sides, the jurors and the defendant were all in their places before Judge Zane arrived, he being for some reason a little less punctual than usual.

At twenty minutes past ten o'clock the Judge made his appearance, and about the same time Lydia Spencer, the recalcitrant witness, walked into the Court-room. She was sad-eyed and pale, and wore an expression which gave token of a night of agony. Her appearance awakened a feeling of sympathy in the breasts of all capable of feeling it, while others with those vulture-like instincts which human beings sometimes manifest, sat gloating upon the picture of helpless distress.

"Call Miss Lydia Spencer," rang out the voice of Mr. Dickson, the prosecuting attorney.

The lady arose from where she sat, and walked up and took the witness chair. Before anything further was done, Mr. J. L. Rawlins, her attorney, addressed the Court and asked the privilege, before final judgment was passed in this matter—providing it should come to that—of being heard in Miss Spencer's behalf. His request was granted, and he resumed his seat.

Judge Zane (to witness)—"Are you willing to be sworn this morning?"

Miss Spencer—"Yes."

The increased interest and elongated necks of the spectators were now painful to behold. The witness lifted her hand and assented to the oath, which fell like the patter of rain from the practiced lips of the clerk.

Mr. Dickson—"Miss Spencer, are you married?"

Witness (in a low tone)—"Yes, sir."

"To whom?"

"To Rudger Clawson."

"When were you married?"

"In 1883."

"Where?"

"In this city."

A pause, during which the prosecuting counsel consult.

Mr. Dickson—"What month was it?"

Witness—"I don't remember."

Q.—"It was in the year 1883?"

A.—"Yes, sir."

Q.—"And in this city and county?"

A.—"Yes, sir."

Mr. Dickson—"That's all."

Judge Zane (to witness)—You are discharged from custody.

The lady left the stand and soon after passed out of the room, many of the crowd following her and straining their eyes to get a glimpse of her before she vanished. She was escorted home by Bishop H. B. Clawson, father of the defendant.

Mr. Dickson now announced that the prosecution submitted their case without argument, and rested here, with the understanding that the other side had no evidence to offer.

Mr. Bennett arose and said it was mutually agreed that the case be submitted without argument or evidence for the defense, but he added that they desired to hand in a bill of instructions which it would require a little time to prepare, and asked that a respite be given until two o'clock for that purpose. The other side assented, with the stipulation that they be allowed to see the instructions before they were handed in. This being agreed to, the Judge granted the time asked for, and ordered that the Court take recess until two p. m.

The jury were charged, as usual, against holding converse outside of their own number, etc., and then committed to the sworn care of a couple of bailiffs, who conducted them to the jury room. It was now half-past ten a. m. The throng moved slowly out of the building, impeded at intervals by little knots of gossipers, busily discussing the outcome of the morning's session.

A few minutes after the above hour Chief Justice Zane took his seat and ordered the jury roll to be called. All present.

Mr. Bennett stated that on further consideration the defense had decided to present no request for instructions. The Judge asked the prosecution if they had any request to make, and on receiving a negative answer, proceeded to charge the jury as follows:

Gentlemen of the Jury—I will read to you the charge. The Court charges you that the laws of the United States of America, in force in the Territory of Utah, declare that every person who has a wife living and marries another, is guilty of polygamy, and that the first count of the indictment upon which the defendant stands charged, states that on the 1st day of August, 1882, Rudger Clawson, the defendant, married Florence Ann Dinwoodey, with whom he is still living as a wife and from whom he has not been divorced, and that afterwards on the 1st day of June, 1883, he married Lydia Spencer in the Third Judicial District. The laws of the United States also declare that any male person who cohabits with more than one woman is guilty of a misdemeanor, and the second count in the same indictment charges that on the 1st day of June, 1883, and on divers other days, between that day and the 17th of August, 1884, the defendant cohabited with Florence Ann Clawson and Lydia Spencer, treating them as his wives.

The Court charges you that cohabitation in a legal sense, as applied in this case, means the living together of a man and woman as husband and wife, or under such circumstances as induces a reasonable belief of the practice of sexual intercourse. To both points of the indictment the defendant has plead not guilty, and the law presumes him innocent until the evidence shows his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

The Court further charges you that it is not necessary that the evidence shall show the marriages mentioned actually occurred on the particular days named in the indictment.

Gentlemen, you are the sole judges of the credibility of the witnesses, of the weight of the evidence and of the question of the facts material to the issues. You should diligently and impartially consider all the evidence before you, and reach such conclusions and beliefs with respect to the guilt or innocence of the defendant on both counts of the indictment as you may be able to in your best judgment.

The Court charges you as to the form of your verdict—that if you find the defendant guilty on both counts of the indictment the form of your verdict will be, "The Jury find the defendant guilty on both counts of the indictment." If you find defendant guilty on one count of the indictment, and not on the other, you will in your verdict name the count upon which you find him guilty. If you find the defendant not guilty you will say that "The Jury find the defendant not guilty."

The Jury then retired, Mr. Bennett asking and receiving permission from the court to make an exception to the instructions at any time in the future. It was about fifteen minutes after two o'clock when the Jury went out. Seventeen minutes later they refiled into the presence of the court and resuming their seats in the box, were asked by the Judge if they had agreed upon a verdict. The foreman, Mr. Bowers, answered "We have," and handed a paper to the clerk who read aloud from it the following:

VERDICT.

"In the District Court for the Third Judicial District of Utah Territory, County of Salt Lake.

The United States vs. Rudger Clawson; polygamy; We, the jurors empaneled in the above case, find the defendant, Rudger Clawson, guilty on both counts of the indictment, as charged in the indictment.

W. H. H. BOWERS,
Foreman.

October 25th, 1884.

The jurors were asked if this was their verdict, and on affirming such to be the case, were discharged.

Mr. Dickson now made a motion that the defendant be committed for safe keeping to the custody of the Marshal, pending judgment upon the verdict and that he be not admitted to bail. An argument ensued and the Court sustained the motion, but reconsidered the matter and after further argument decided to admit defendant to bail on $3,000 bonds.

In connection with the foregoing we give from the same paper the following editorial in regard to the trial.

THE CLOSE OF THE CLAWSON CASE.

The Rudger Clawson case took a sudden turn this morning, as will be seen from our minutes of the court proceedings in the testimony of the witness Lydia Spencer. Her change of position from the firm refusal to testify last evening to the open acknowledgement, this morning, of her marriage with the defendant, will no doubt occasion much surprise and the reasons for it will be asked for. We can give them. The young lady is possessed of just as much self-will and determination as Belle Harris or Nellie White, and would we have no doubt, borne any punishment that might have been inflicted upon her with unflinching fortitude. Her friends were determined to stand by her and engaged special competent counsel to aid her. They put all the consequences, pro and con before her, but failed, up to the time she went into the witness box, to learn what she intended to do. She remained firm in her resolve. But her husband's wish was that she should give way and acknowledge the truth and let him take the consequences, instead of her being placed in jeopardy by refusing to testify. Her bodily condition also was such that protracted imprisonment would have been highly injurious.

We believe that the community will say that under all the circumstances she did just right. We know that the Clawson family think so and that she is fully sustained by them in giving her testimony. A conviction is now assured. But with a jury selected as this has been and with the threat of violent and unstinted newspaper abuse if they fail to convict, no other verdict could be expected, even if the essential witness delined to testify and went to prison for contumacy. Her refusal would have been taken by the jury as evidence against the defendant—although legally it is not evidence—and the result would doubtless have been the same.

An appeal will now be taken and the various errors in the proceedings be tested. Among these the most important is the method resorted to of impaneling a jury. If an open venire can be issued when the regular jury list is exhausted, we might as well have no jury list at all. The methods by which it can be exhausted have been abundantly exemplified during the present term of the Third District Court. If the common law is to prevail in the presence of opposing statutes, what is the use of enacting them? The controversy is an interesting one and may go up to the court of last resort. All that we ask for is that the prosecution and execution of the law shall itself be legal; then whatever the result may be we shall not be found repining or disputatious. But when those who are so zealous for the enforcement of one particular law are themselves evaders or ignorers of other laws, we expect to be found on the side of those who are singled out for attack and against the lawless pretended champions of the law.

Conference Minutes.

PITTSBURG DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Glen Easton, West Virginia, October 4th and 5th, 1884. G. T. Griffiths President; A. M. Teagarden and F. J. Reese, Secretaries pro tem. The minutes of last district conference, as contained in Herald, June 19th, 1884, were objected to because they did not contain any mention of the rehearing and acquittal of Bro. Hugh Windland; who was dealt with by the Monroe Branch, which verdict was set aside, and the brother exonerated, by recommendation of a committee of Elders; viz:—James Brown, James Craig and George H. Hulmes, appointed by district conference last June, to investigate the whole matter, per appeal of Bro. Hugh Windland. Minutes were then adopted with the above corrections.

Shinn resigned as vice president and secretary of the district. G. T. Griffiths was sustained as president of the district, by a unanimous vote. F. J. Reese elected secretary and A. M. Teagarden assistant. Upon motion James Craig was requested to labor as circumstances permit, under direction of Josiah Ells. By request of Bro. David J. Jones, Bro. PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT.

The conference of the Philadelphia District met at Philadelphia on Sunday, October 19th, 1884. Brn. W. O. Owens president, W. H. Brown secretary.

Statistical reports.—Philadelphia 41, Olive 20, Hornerstown 24, Brooklyn 29. Elders John Stone, Absalom A. Grist, Joseph A. Stewart, R. W. W. Preece and W. O. Owens reported in person. Hosea Bacon, Priest, reported in person. Bro. W. O. Owens reports that he has labored for one year in the ministry, and has not succeeded in making one Latter Day Saint.

A resolution was offered by brother Irvine Bransen to the effect that because of certain things stated in said resolution, the names of Irvine Bransen, Edith S. Heck, Matilda Heck, and Ida Roby, be stricken from the Church Record, as they wished no further connection with the Church. Resolution carried.

Resolution offered by A. Cameron: Resolved, That we question the wisdom of the early Elders in naming this Church the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and we recommend the General Conference to drop the title of Latter Day Saints, as savoring too much of egotism and conceit, and name the Church strictly as commanded on page 328 of the Book of Mormon.

Moved and carried that brother W. O. Owens be chosen president for the next six months.

Moved That brother W. H. Brown be chosen secretary for the next six months. That the conference adjourn to meet at Philadelphia, on the third Sunday in April, 1885.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct., 28th, 1884.

BRO. JOSEPH SMITH.—President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.—I hereby earnestly protest against the minutes of the Philadelphia district conference, held in Philadelphia on the 19th of October, 1884, being accepted by the church, or printed in the Herald, as they do not contain a full report, neither were they read before, and approved by the body.

JOSEPH A. STEWART.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA DISTRICT.

Conference met October 3d, 1884, in Saints' Chapel at Sacramento. Temporary organization, Alexander H. Smith president, George S. Lincoln secretary.

Branch reports.—Santa Rosa 66, including 1 Elder, 1 Priest, 2 Teachers, 2 received by letter, 3 removed by letter, 2 died, 2 ordinations, 1 marriage. Stockton 12 members, including 3 Priests. San Francisco 35 members, including 4 Elders, 2 Priests, 1 Teacher, 2 Deacons, baptized 3, 4 died, 1 received on former baptism. Oakland 92, including 1 High Priest, 12 Elders, 2 Priests, 1 Teacher, 1 Deacon, 1 received by vote; 1 died; children blessed 9. Sacramento 89, including 1 High Priest, 7 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Deacons, 4 baptized, 1 received by letter; 1 died, 1 ordination. Uniontown 18 members, including 1 Priest, 1 Teacher, 1 Deacon.

Official reports.—President of district, J. B. Price reported: had labored in Sacramento, Stockton, Santa Rosa, Bartlett Springs, and other places; distributing thousands of tracts, doing his duty so far as circumstances would permit. Vice president Harlow reported: visited Uniontown branch with Bro. Price, laboring with him. High Priest H. P. Brown reported: preached in San Francisco and Oakland, officiated at 3 funerals, and in Bible Class at Oakland; had written a book reviewing the Adventist (seventh day) doctrine &c. Elders Thomas Daley, D. J. Phillips, R. Ferris, George S. Lincoln, James Steele, J. H. Parr, Owen Dinsdale, Albert Haws, reported in person;—Elder J. R. Cook reported by letter. Priest Stromberg and Deacon Gallagher reported in person. High Priest H. P. Brown was nominated for president of the district, but owing to the absence of the Bishop's Agent (Elder T. J. Andrews), and the conference not obtaining a definite knowledge how the requisite financial assistance could be guaranteed, no person was elected to that office; however, resolution calling for volunteers was carried, but no one offered to go as District President. Motion electing R. Ferris as District Secretary was carried.

Elders Daley and Harlow, committee appointed by last conference to settle Uniontown Branch troubles, reported and were discharged. Resolution that the chair should appoint a committee of three to hear Deacon Gallagher's statement of the difficulties existing in Uniontown Branch, resulted in the appointing of brethren Price, Phillips and Dinsdale. They having proceeded to investigate as directed, reported that the efforts of the former committee to adjust the difficulties were not effectual, and therefore recommended that the matter be referred back to the authorities of the branch for solution; and that if these authorities be unable to adjudicate the difficulties they shall call a court of Elders for that purpose. Report received and committee discharged.

Resolution sustaining Elder A. H. Smith as President of Mission was carried. Resolution sustaining all of the officers of the church in righteousness was adopted.

The preaching was done by Elders H. P. Brown, Alex. H. Smith and J. B. Price, to fair congregations, and was received with earnest attention. During Sunday meetings, a considerable number was present, and during sacrament meeting, the gifts of the gospel were manifested, and a spirit of peace and solemnity prevailed.

Adjourned to meet at Oakland, the first Friday in March, 1885.

NOTICE.

The following letter was received by us November 1st, 1884:—

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., October 28th, 1884.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH; Dear Brother:

It was resolved at our meeting last night, and carried, that this branch hitherto known as the Olive Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, for what were considered justifiable reasons to sever its connections from and declare itself independent of said Reorganized Church, and trust in God alone for council, guidance, and protection; believing that under God's blessing we shall for many reasons be able to carry the gospel to and reach many more of the benighted sons of earth than we have been able to reach heretofore.

Signed in behalf of the now a true Church of Christ in Philadelphia, Pa.

ABSALOM GRIST, PASTOR.

2244 Ridge Avenue.

And on the 5th we received the Philadelphia Record of November 1st, 1884, containing the following notice:—

Preaching of Elder Owens, of Brooklyn, Sunday evening, November 2d, at half-past seven o'clock, at 2244 Ridge Avenue. All invited.

Resolved, that the church formerly known as the Olive Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which meets at 2244 Ridge Avenue, does hereby sever its connection from and declares itself independent of said Church of Latter Day Saints, and that it be hereafter called a True Church of Christ, under the pastorate of Elder Absalom Grist.

We also have advices from Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, that Elder W. O. Owens, of Brooklyn, New York, had, for reasons set forth in his letter, withdrawn from the Reorganized Church; and stating that he could no longer preach the gospel under its auspices. In accordance with these letters and these notices, we have written Elders W. O. Owens and Absalom Grist, requesting them to return to Secretary H. A. Stebbins licences and certificates of appointment as held by them issued by the church, and the members of the church and all others interested, and to whom the HERALD shall come, are hereby notified that said Elders, W. O. Owens and Absalom Grist are requested not to act further for and in the name of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; as all permission and authority heretofore granted them to act for said church in any of its ordinances, or in its behalf are revoked; and all Saints are requested to take cognizance of this notice.

We further authorize and request Joseph A. Stewart and William Small to take charge of the affairs of the church in the Philadelphia district, until further inquiry may be had. We further authorize and request Bro. W. H. Kelley to proceed to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Horners-town, New Jersey, New York, Brooklyn and vicinities, to make such inquiry as the case may require.

All officers and members of the church are requested to remember that these persons who thus go out from us, earnestly endeavoring to serve an honest purpose, in the exercise of the right to determine of themselves what their action should be, are entitled to kind and courteous treatment, however much we may feel that the course pursued by them is an error. The right to receive, or to reject is one reserved to all; the right, or wrong, remains for the day when the Savior's words will be fulfilled; "there is one that judgeth him, the words that I have spoken, they shall judge him in the last day."

JOSEPH SMITH, } Presidency.
W. W. BLAIR, }

November 6th, 1884.

KEWANEE DISTRICT.

As the business of the district seems to demand it, and by counseling with some of the Elders, I have decided to convene the next quarterly conference at three o'clock p. m., on Friday, December the 12th, 1884.

I. B. LARRE, President.

J. L. TERRY, Clerk.

FOOD FOR THE HORSE.

Dr. Robert McClure in his "Diseases of American Horses and Cattle," makes the following suggestions in regard to the food of the horse:

Never use bad hay on account of its cheapness. There is not proper nourishment in it.

Damaged corn is extremely injurious. It brings on inflammation of the bowels and skin diseases.

Chaff is better for old horses than hay. They can digest it better.

Mix chaff with corn or oats, and do not give it alone. It makes the horse chew his food more and digest it better.

Hay or grass alone will not support a horse under hard work. There is not sufficient nutritive body in either.

When a horse is worked hard his food should be chiefly oats and corn. If not hard at work let it be chiefly hay. Oats and corn contain more nourishment and flesh-forming material than any other kind of food. Hay not so much.

For a saddle or coach horse, half a peck of sound oats and eighteen pounds of good hay are sufficient. If the hay is not good add a quarter of a peck more oats.

Rack feeding is wasteful. The better plan is to feed with chopped hay from a manger.

Sprinkle the hay with water that has salt dissolved in it. A teaspoonful of salt to a bucket of water is sufficient. It is more palatable and aids digestion.

Oats and corn should be bruised for an old horse but not for a young one. The former can not chew them, while the young horse can do it, and the food is thus mixed with the saliva and turned into wholesome nutriment.

Do not allow your horse to have warm water to drink. If he has to drink cold, after getting accustomed to warm, it will give him the colic.

When your horse refuses his food after drinking, go no further that day. The creature is thoroughly beaten.

Cut grass should always be given in spring to horses that cannot be turned out. It is cooling and refreshing and medicinal in its effects. It must be given in moderation else it is liable to ferment in the stomach.

Water your horse from a pond or stream, rather than from a well or spring. The horse prefers soft, even muddy water, be it ever so clear.

A horse should have at least a pail of water morning and evening, or better four half pails at different times. He should not be made to work directly after he has had a full draught of water. Digestion and exercise can never go on together.

The congregational pastor of a certain Massachusetts town lost his place in the following manner. A brother minister, member of his church, was delegated by the masonic lodge to get the pastor to join the Freemasons. He spurned their proposition, declaring his hostility to the lodge. The result was, he was very soon obliged to leave a pastorate in which he had previously been honored for a long period of years. Such facts are altogether too frequent. Those who desire long pastorates must first destroy the lodges.

Clear boiling water will remove tea stains; pour the water through the stain, and thus prevent it spreading over the fabric.

THIS IS NO HUMBBUG, BUT PLAIN FACTS!

Read what the following Brothers say, some of whom have dealt with us for over a year, and if you are out of employment, or wish to better your condition, write to us and tell us exactly how you are situated. If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. The credit includes Springs and Portraits, which we know to be the fastest selling agents' goods on the market.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa
and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor.
The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell
all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.

Very respectfully,
N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.

Yours in bonds,
J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs
are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brethren—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.

Your brother in Christ,
O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.

Yours in bonds,
WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren—The Springs give entire satisfaction.
Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs.
Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks
in their favor.

Yours,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Gents—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly
Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,

W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
Bro. Johns & Ordway—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not fail to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.

Yours in gospel bonds,
E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Nov. 22d, 1884.

LEST some may have misunderstood the position of the Editor of the HERALD, in regard to the law of marriage, from mistaking an article heretofore published in the HERALD, we hereby state that we endorse, stand by, and fully believe the affirmation of the church as found in the Doctrine and Covenants, Section one hundred and eleven.

1. "According to the custom of all civilized nations, marriage is regulated by laws and ceremonies; therefore, we believe, that all marriages in this Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints, should be solemnized in a public meeting, or feast, prepared for that purpose; and that the solemnization should be performed by a presiding high priest, high priest, bishop, elder, or priest, not even prohibiting those persons who are desirous to get married, of being married by other authority. We believe that it is not right to prohibit members of this church from marrying out of the church if it be their determination so to do, but such persons will be considered weak in the faith of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

2. Marriage should be celebrated with prayer and thanksgiving; and at the solemnization, the persons to be married, standing together, the man on the right, and the woman on the left, shall be addressed by the person officiating, as he shall be directed by the Holy Spirit; and if there be no legal objections, he shall say, calling each by their names: "You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others, during your lives." And when they have answered "Yes," he shall pronounce them "husband and wife" in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by virtue of the laws of the country and authority vested in him: "may God add his blessings and keep you to fulfill you covenants from henceforth and forever. Amen."

3. The clerk of every church should keep a record of all marriages, solemnized in his branch.

4. All legal contracts of marriage made before a person is baptized into this church, should be held sacred and fulfilled. Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication, and polygamy: we declare that we believe, that one man should have one wife; and one woman but one husband, except in case of death when either is at liberty to marry again."

We believe in the whole section, but quote that part referring to marriage only.

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. Goodale, of Barry, Illinois, under date of November 12th, writes as follows:

"I am just recovering from a violent attack of malaria, which lasted two weeks, and came very near taking me off. I baptized a man and his wife in this county on the 5th ult."

THE NATIONAL JEWISH NEW TESTAMENT CONGREGATION.

FROM the Gospel Messenger for October 14th, 1884, we clip, as follows:

"Two hundred Jewish families, living in Bessarabia, in the South of Russia, have recently formed themselves into a society bearing this remarkable designation. A lawyer of that district was moved by the persecution to which his fellow-countrymen had been subjected, to study the question of the re-peopling of Palestine. For this purpose he visited the Holy Land. While he was proceeding with his investigations, he was led to believe that the present condition of the Jews, was the result of their rejection of the claims of Jesus to be recognized as the Messiah; and that their only hope of restoration lies in repentance. On his return, he announced his views to his fellow-villagers, who joined him en masse. We are hopeful that this new movement will attract the attention of the Jews in all parts of the world, and that many of them will be led to study the claims of Jesus with the candor which characterizes Joseph Rabinowitz. Such a study would do much to bring about the fulfillment of Paul's grand prophecy which indicates that Israel shall turn to the Lord, and the veil which is now upon their heart shall be taken away."—Christian Commonwealth.

THE Iowa Commission of the World's Fair, to be held at New Orleans, Louisiana, to open December 1st, 1884, and continue open until May 31st, 1885, request us to publish the following circular, which we comply with, on account of the general interest certain to be felt in the matter.

THE IOWA COMMISSION.

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Oct. 6th, 1884.

THE WORLD'S EXPOSITION—IMPORTANT INVITATION TO CITIZENS HAVING ARTICLES TO EXHIBIT—PHOTOGRAPHS, STEREO AND OTHER VIEWS DESIRED—PREMIUMS AWARDED.

To the People of Iowa:—At the World's Exposition, that opens on the first of next December, Iowa is preparing to make a fine display of her resources and products. The work has been divided into several leading departments, whose superintendents are making very complete collections for the exhibit. There are a large number of articles in the State that the Commission desire to have for the Exposition, that do not fall regularly under the head of any special department. We have decided to invite the citizens of the State to send such things directly to this office. The articles especially desired are as follows:

PHOTOS AND OTHER VIEWS.

1st. Photographs of public buildings, such as school houses, churches, court houses, city halls, boards of trade, opera houses, large business blocks, private residences, birds' eye or other views of towns and cities, of streets and parks, and especially of public men and old settlers. Groups of the latter are particularly requested. Pictures of stock and miscellaneous views of all kinds can be used and will be used to decorate and embellish the Iowa exhibit. Views of wrecks and destructive storms, with data attached, will be acceptable. Photographs of railroad stations and rolling stock, machinery of all kinds, incidents of farm life, views of farm houses and scenery, and, in short, any kind of illustrations of Iowa are desired. Views of assemblages, political, religious, social or otherwise, photographs of military, fire or other companies' reunions, and especially views of any curiosities or odd freaks of nature will be gratefully received. Almost every family in the State has such photographs or views in their possession and should be willing to contribute or lend them to the commission for the worthy purpose of making an interesting exhibit of the State at the Exposition. We particularly desire any flags, banners and other historical relics, and where their return is desired, the Commission will guarantee it, ordinary wear and tear and extraordinary accidents excepted.

In all cases, furnish a plainly written, concise statement of the article, owner's name and residence which will be shown on handsome display cards, at the exposition.

IMPORTANT TO AUTHORS.

2d. Iowa is comparatively a young State, but she already boasts of a number of artists who have made a wide reputation by their brush, or in other fields of artistic work. The leading artists of the State will doubtless contribute their pieces to the general art hall, of the Exposition, and no special department for art has been organized in Iowa. We desire however that all artists send to this office such specimens of their work as they are willing to donate or lend. If sent without frame, the commission will frame them, and consider them the property of the commission, to be disposed of as mentioned hereinafter. Such contributions will be used to beautify the Iowa exhibit in the Government and States building, and the artist's name and residence will be properly and attractively presented. All painters, crayon workers, and artists in plaster and other similar work are earnestly requested to give heed to this invitation, and to promptly communicate with this office.

HOW TO SEND ARTICLES.

3d. As to sending articles to this office, mail the lighter ones and send the larger ones by express or freight, charges to be paid here. Be sure to be explicit in descriptions of articles that there may be no errors.

PREMIUMS AWARDED.

4th. The photographers have usually fine collections of the articles desired, and if they will kindly attend to the matter, they will secure a valuable advertisement for themselves and aid a worthy movement. To the photographer sending in the largest and best collection of photographs and views, the Commission will pay a premium of $25 in cash. To the assistant commissioner sending us the largest and best collection of photographs and views of his county, the same premium will be paid. A similar premium will be paid to artists, for the largest and best contribution of their own work. Proper committees will be appointed during the exposition to decide the premiums. Artists' work will be divided into six classes and the above premiums awarded to each class; 1st, works in oil; 2d, crayon work; 3d, India ink work; 4th, porcelain and China; 5th, modelling and wood carving; 6th, lithographing, printing and binding.

In all cases where premiums are offered, diploma will be given for second and third awards.

AUTHORS' BOOKS WANTED.

5th. It is desired to have a full display of all books and other publications written by Iowa men and women. Every author, no matter how modest his publication, even if it is but a pamphlet, is earnestly requested to send a copy to this office immediately. The collection of books and other publications will be attractively displayed.

At the close of the Exposition, the Commission will bring to Iowa and arrange in the Capitol, all of the Iowa exhibit of permanent value, such as the geological, mineral, woman's work, photographs, views, paintings, educational and other specimens. It will be a collection of great interest and value to the State, and will become its property in case the General Assembly, as now seems very probable, makes an appropriation to cover the actual cost of the Iowa exhibit at New Orleans. Such a collection will be one of the most interesting features of the State, and we sincerely hope every citizen will contribute what he or she can to make the display a noteworthy one, and that they will donate their contributions so far as possible.

As the Exposition opens in a very short time, it is earnestly hoped that the contributions will reach us by not later than November 1st.

For the Commission,
HERBET S. FAIRALL, Secretary.
Iowa City Iowa.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Always write the Business portion of your Letter on a separate piece of paper, and let it be brief and explicit.

If you have anything to say to the Editor, or something you wish published, do not write it on the back of a business letter. Business is Business, and must be done in a business-like manner.

Correspondence.

GAINES, Orleans Co., New York,
October 29th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I left Bro. Whitehead's in Oswego county, on the 4th of this month. We made a visit to Bro. Thompson's, in Jefferson county, a few days previous. Had a pleasant visit. There are four of the members there who are rejoicing in the work. I called at Bro. Seelye's in Wayne county; he and family are zealous in the gospel.

I came here on the 10th. Am at the house of Bro. Justus Minthorne. I baptized one of their family yesterday—their youngest daughter. Bro. and Sr. Minthorne are from Missouri, and formerly belonged to the branch at Turney, a little south of Cameron. They moved east, and settled first in Lockport, about thirty miles west of this, ten years ago; and moved here three years ago. They think to sell out here, and go west again. The first Sabbath I was in this part, I was in Lockport with Bro. Minthorne, and was at the houses of a son, and son-in-law and daughter of Bro. Minthorne, who reside there. The son and daughter were baptized when in Missouri, though quite young at the time, and had but little understanding of the work.

Not many opportunities for preaching here, as the people are afraid to open their meeting houses for the Saints. I spoke here at Bro. Minthorne's house one Sabbath afternoon; had a few present. Last Sabbath a couple came in, and I conversed with them, and read out of the Book of Mormon, and explained the object of its coming to light. Referred them to the Bible to show that there was a book to be revealed, and that a marvelous work and a wonder was to be done in connection with the book, when it should be brought to light. One of them became interested and wanted the book. Last evening Bro. and Sr. Minthorne and myself were at his house, and spent the evening. He took down your address, as he thought he would send and get the Book of Mormon, also the Voice of Warning. I read to him out of the Book of Covenants the vision on the resurrection; also the first section. He thought that no man could have written that without help from a higher power than that of man. I think to go from here to Greenwood, Steuben county, again; after leaving this part; probably next week.

In bonds,

C. G. LANPHEAR.

MANASSAS, Colorado,

October 22d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—In presenting this my first of a series of letters which I propose to place before your readers, I do so with a great deal of diffidence, feeling my inability to do justice to a subject which is, or should be, paramount to all others, as it is of such vital importance to the generation in which we are living. For we are undoubtedly living in a day and age of the world that holy men of old were most desirous of beholding; an epoch in the world's history when great and marvelous events are continually transpiring. Matters and things of the most momentous concern are daily presented to us, which our minds and hearts can scarcely comprehend. It is indeed, a time when men's hearts begin to fail them, looking for the things which are coming upon the earth. Well has the Apostle Paul predicted that perilous times should come in the latter days, for we are living witnesses, and can testify to the truth of the same; for it is very easy to discern that the whole world is in commotion, and is full of violence, corruption, and all manner of abominations; a time when truth is cast aside or trampled under foot, and fables are hugged close to men's bosoms; a day when new gods are introduced for men to bow down to and worship, gods that our worthy ancient fathers had no knowledge of; a day in which the true and living God of the heavens and earth is almost as little known as he was in the day when Paul proclaimed his glorious name and cause when he stood on Mars' Hill in the ancient city of Athens; a day when destruction is stalking through the land—it rides upon the winds; it is in the bowels of the earth; it is upon the face of the great deep; it is in the palace as well as in the hovel; and there is no spot or place that is too sacred or holy for it to enter. There is a great wail wafted to us from over the seas; nations in distress; a devastating disease sweeping through the old world carrying the inhabitants off the stage of action by the thousands and tens of thousands; the high and the low, the rich and the poor, have to succumb to its blighting influence; and how long this great and free America will escape, the Lord alone knows, for sooner or later our time will come; the fiat has gone forth from the mouth of the great Jehovah, that the earth shall be utterly emptied, and but few men left.

A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; the Lord hath a controversy with the nations; he will plead with all flesh; he will give them that are wicked to the sword, and evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and great whirlwinds shall he raise up for destructions, so that the slain of the Lord shall be from one end of the earth even unto the other. Jeremiah 25: 31st to last verse. "And there shall be men standing in that generation, that shall not pass until they shall see an overflowing scourge, for a desolating sickness shall cover the land." D. and C., Rev. March 7th, 1831, and numerous other passages of scripture reiterate the same. Now, this great and solemn question looms up before our minds, who of us will be able to abide the day, and be worthy to enter into the holy city? See Isaiah 33: 15-17. He says that it is those who are righteous, upright, do not oppress for gain, receive no bribes; will not hear of blood nor look on evil with approbation. "They shall dwell on high, and their defense shall be strong, and they shall see the king in his beauty." Many are called, but O how few will be chosen, to witness in the flesh, the glorious advent of the Son of God. The signs of the times admonish us that the day can not be far distant when he shall come who is Lord of Lords and King of Kings, whose right it is to reign. Therefore it behooves every soul who has the Master's interest at heart to be up and doing while it is called to-day. Let none sleep or slumber in the night of forgetfulness, but have their lamps trimmed, and with plenty of the oil of righteousness in their hearts. And, as one that is striving to obey the behest of my heavenly Father, I feel it incumbent on me, and a sacred duty which I owe to my fellow mortals, to expose the pitfalls and snares which evil and designing men have dug and laid to entrap the honest but unwary seekers after truth—and bring them into subjection and bondage not only mentally, but also physically, rendering them slaves unto sin and shame, leading their souls down to destruction and perdition. No wonder that the earth is filled with violence, and waxes worse and worse, when intelligent beings who bear the impress of the great architect who made them, even in his own image, who, after they have been educated in the school of social refinement and brought out of the heathenish practices of the darker ages, instead of progressing onward and upward to the highest pinnacle of religious and social greatness, have taken a retrograde course; for it has been left for this, the nineteenth century to sanctify and make holy some of the grossest of crimes and abominations in the sight of the Lord, such as polygamy, whoredoms, blasphemy, stealing, lying, and other kindred sins which God has positively commanded men not to be guilty of. Yet with all these, and a multitude of other abominations which mother earth is not responsible for, the Lord will find faith when he comes; for there are many honest hearts that will not bow the knee to Baal, but are firm in searching for the light of truth; and when and wherever presented to their understandings, the spirit of truth tells them to embrace it.

We are told in the Scriptures to hear all—"Prove all, and hold fast that which is good." But our "Orthodox" Mormon friends have entirely ignored this great principle, and have gone back on their former teachings, and tell their blind dupes not to go and hear; for they profess to know that they are right, and that there is no use in hearing or receiving any more, only such things as "the priesthood" tells them, and which is enough for them to obey! Now the gospel truths are not for such; for the Lord said on a certain occasion, that "none but the sick need a physician." But the humble heart and contrite spirit will receive and hold fast to the truth; and when the Lord of glory comes to make up his jewels, they will be numbered with the bright thousands that adorn his diadem, and will be permitted to feast upon the fat things which is prepared for the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Ever praying for the abolition of wickedness and corruption, by the grace of God, through the gospel of his Son Jesus, I remain your brother in the new and everlasting covenant,

FELIX B. MOYERS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 10th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I have been quite unwell or I should have apprised you ere this of the departure of Brother and Sister Smith for Tahiti. They left here Oct. 1st, on the "Tropic Bird," a very nice vessel, having every needful accommodation, and above all, an excellent Captain, who promised me he would do anything possible to make the passage a comfortable and pleasant one for them. In fact, Bro. Joseph, I think that kinder providences could not have been arranged for them. The morning of their departure was a most beautiful one; a bright clear sunshine, with just breeze enough to make the bunting of the vessel flaunt joyously at her mast head. A good number of the Saints were gathered at the dock to witness the departure, and exactly at the turn of the tide seaward, the monster tug, named the Sea King, made fast to the comparatively tiny ship, and carried her away from her berth, into the stream, out of our hearing, and soon out of our sight. We all greeted them a parting adieu with our cambrics, as long as discernible, but that came to an end in time, as finally all things earthly must do. We trust their thirty days' passage will be a most pleasant one. Our Heavenly Father was good enough to tell us unmistakably that he would make the winds and waves favorable to his servant, and without doubt loving hearts and willing hands are awaiting their arrival.

My letter to Bro. Blakeslee gives more particulars which probably he will forward to you. I shall be ready to receive all mail, and will forward it to Bro. Smith; although, in view of a probably large mail, a small notice in the Herald is not amiss that each one intending to correspond with him could do so direct. His address will be, I presume, Papatec, Tahiti. The postage on each ordinary letter is five cents. Already I have quite a good number. If this notice is observed, the burden will be more equally distributed; don't you think so? I feel somewhat better to-day, and remain as ever yours respectfully in bonds,
T. J. ANDREWS.

MACON CITY, Macon Co., Mo.,

November 5th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—When I last wrote you for publication, I was in the Goshen Branch, near Clay Center, Kansas.

On September 26th, Bro. A. Kent and I took an overland trip to Cuba, Republic Co., where I remained nearly a week, preaching in Cuba, and in the Prairie Home school-house, in the country. I spoke four times in the new depot building, in Cuba, to good congregations, part of the time large, and, with one exception, enjoyed good liberty. We had three excellent meetings at Prairie Home, and I could not help mourning, somewhat, over my physical inability to do more. While at Cuba and Prairie Home, I formed the acquaintance of some saints from North West Iowa, also met some whom I had seen before; and met for the first time Bro. John D. Bennett and family, all of whom manifested a desire for the good of the cause. But the Prairie Home saints are not so active and united as they should be in the great work committed to their trust. I am not going to say who is to blame for this state of affairs, which exists to too great an extent in the North West Kansas District, but, in my opinion, the responsibility does not rest with any one alone; and it may be safely said, that an undue appreciation of self, and a deficiency in love for Christ and his work, lie at the foundation of the trouble. "For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." (Rom. 12: 3.) If we would closely observe this wholesome injunction, it would help us "to see ourselves as others see us," and jealousy, envy and a disunity of the Spirit would find but little, if any place among us.

I returned to Clay Center, remained over Sunday, October 5th, and on Monday, started for home. Friday night and Saturday I was very sick had one of my bad spells in which I suffered much, and was brought into a weak condition.

On Sunday and Monday, the day before I started home, Bro. Kent preached the funeral discourse of Sr. Chatfield, who died at his home while we were gone to Republic county. In the evening I spoke to the people from Heb. 4: 9, and God's Holy Spirit, richly shed forth, made the occasion one of joy and profit to the Saints and people.

The exposure of travel, on my return home, brought me down again; but with the influences and care of home, I soon rallied to my usual degree of health.

Last Friday left home for these parts, but as I have had a severe attack already, it is impossible to say how long I shall be able to remain. The quarterly Conference of the North East Missouri District convened last Saturday, at Salt River Branch, near Macon City, and passed off very pleasantly except reports from Bevier Branch. Expect to go to Bevier to-morrow. Bro. Hicklin and I are holding meetings at Salt River, and the people come out and hear. It strikes me that if we were just as ignorant, superstitious and fanatical as Clark Braden & Co. would have us believe, we would turn away from the faith at once; but with a fair degree of intelligence, a little good sense, and a willingness and desire to serve God in His own appointed way, such efforts as are made by Braden and his fellows can only confirm us in the belief that in the work we represent is divine. Yours in hope of final triumph in the right,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

CABOOL, Texas Co., Mo.,

November 7th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Master continues to increase our numbers. November 6th I baptized two brethren into the kingdom: William G. Maxey, born May 11th, 1843, Jasper Co., Mo. His father is a Baptist preacher. His wife's father is a Methodist preacher. Bro. Maxey accepted the faith by reading our Heralds, church books, talking with us, and attending our prayer-meetings, which are twice a week. Aaron Burlison, born January 16th, 1843, Posey county, Indiana. He came here a believer. His lady is a member. She came here from Joplin, or Short Creek, Missouri. She states their branch was broken up. I suppose she belongs to the, or with the scattered. The said members were baptized at Cabool.

Your brother in the one work,

B. A. ATWELL.

PLEASANTON, IOWA,

October 1st, 1884.

Brother Joseph:—I thought I would give my views in regard to the conversion of this world. No popular doctrine is true, nor need I expect a hearing from a popular, peace-predicting pulpit. Now brethren how is the evangelizing of the world to be done? Is it to be done by the slandered, vilified Christian Church? The power of reason—the hue and cry—in her hands might do more now than in the days of our Lord; but it is doubtful. Is it to be done by the Protestant world. Protestants are wavering before the mighty pomp and mummery of Catholic priests.

If the signs of the times are to be relied on, the "man of sin" is to have a full share in the mighty work. He is treading on the heels of missionaries on earth, converting their converts, reaping their harvests, supplanting their missions, and pushing his exertions beyond the boundaries of Protestant landmarks. So if our clergy and sanguine evangelists do not soon convert the Man of Sin he will soon have the world converted to the most blasting despotism that ever cursed a credulous human family. If the world is to be evangelized and brought into gospel order, on whom are the vials of wrath to be poured. The conversion of the world will supersede the vials of wrath. They cannot both take place, there is not a word about men repenting under all the plagues of this great drama. There is no room for the terrible figures of Daniel and John, and also for the conversion of the world before the coming of Christ. There can be no millennium till after the wrath of the Lamb is past; no reign of peace till the sovereign order is given; which order is not to be found in the Bible, it is only predicted. The Savior did not anticipate that the gospel would evangelize the world; that the reign of peace would be brought in by the gospel as he established it while on earth—not an idea of the kind proposed by Christ or his apostles till after the fearful fall of Babylon. Christ said to his disciples and followers. "In this world, ye shall have tribulations." "I came not to send peace, but a sword." He bequeathed to his church—those that were worthy of his name—perils and persecutions. Who is to persecute when the world is evangelized? If the Bible be true we are to have wars and blood-shed till the Master comes; with confusion, distress of nations, perplexity, &c. Place this coming over till the final judgment, as the clergy have done, and we may place the reign of peace over till the final judgment also. Can the present means on earth beat the swords into plow-shares? It is impossible. War is taught as a science and adepts in shedding human blood are deified. Not a nation on earth could be persuaded. It will not be done while there is a throne or nation on earth standing. We are perpetually running into error, by merging predictions relative to Christ's reign of glory, with the reign of his humility and suffering. This idea of the church coming up out of the wilderness, converting the world, prevents men from examining the true ground which we occupy. The unavoidable destiny of an apostate church is a fearful dissolution. The misconception keeps the clergy, the learned the dignitaries of the church, in hot chase after some brilliant phantom, some ignis fatuus. They cannot, will not, see the lowering cloud, the gathering storm, soon to break forth on a misguided world—soon to break in unexampled vengeance on devoted christendom, Go where you will, listen to either the pulp or press, and one might be ready to expect the triumphs of Christianity over vice, but what do facts say? What report does every day's observation bring? What are we taught to expect? When we consult the sacred oracles, Paul says "in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving head to seducing spirits." In another epistle he is more explicit, saying, "know this also that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of themselves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers."

What a picture Paul has drawn of the present age. But how the clergy and the periodicals contradict Paul! They are for converting the world in these latter days, and are putting forth their energies in making millenniums; and if by chance, some common-sense layman speaks out about the fearful, true state of things, the increase of crime, the approaching dissolution of an apostate church, oh, it is paralyzing the mighty schemes of evangelizing the world! If the world is to be converted, Paul has made a mistake. Peter's testimony is directly to the point. He says: "There shall come in the last days scoffers walking after their own lust and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" This is the same impressive language relative to the "last days," associated with scoffings about the coming of the Son of man. How applicable to the scoffings of the present time, about the nearing advent of the crucified Messiah. More than half of the living are treating the subject with contempt or indifference. Paul to the Thessalonians, speaking of the same important fact and time, says: "The day so cometh as a thief in the night, for when they shall say peace and safety suddenly destruction shall overtake them." Daniel evidently alludes to the same period of peril and trouble, saying: "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people, and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." See Ezekiel 38th, speaking of the latter days, he says a tremendous array of armies called Gog shall come against "the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel which have been always waste; but it is brought out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely." "Thou shalt come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land." Couple this with Zechariah: "For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle," &c. "Then shall the Lord go forth and fight against those nations as when he fought in the day of battle, and his feet shall stand in that day on Mount Olives" &c. Does this look like the reign of peace, about to be introduced by the potency of tracts, colleges, missions, ancient orders, &c. It is like the false glow of apparent health on the incurable consumptive's cheek. But this is paralyzing the efforts of the pulpit to evangelize the world, mystery Babylon, the Man of Sin or the Mother of Harlots. The Man of Sin or Mother of Harlots is to be converted or exterminated before the world can be evangelized. There is no hope to be found in the sayings of the Lord, or his inspired prophets for a conversion of the Man of Sin, but the most infallible proof that the physical head of an avenging God, in an hour of extremity to the Saints. God's witnesses will order his body to the burning flame. Would to God I could break the fatal spell that hangs upon the eyelids of the pulpit, but the day is to come as a thief in the night, because the watch is crying peace and safety. Every word, or expression, or idea, is a delusion. As to converting the world, there is no peace to the world till after it has been deluged in fire.

As the study of prophecy becomes daily more interesting, and the developing facts hourly more alarming, I propose a few fundamental principles of expounding prophecy. First, the burden of prophecy stands pointing to the dissolution of the present Christian dispensation. Second, the heavens and the earth are to be in a new state after the present dispensation is closed, and like the Jewish, dissolved, rolled together like a scroll. Third, no destruction of this world by fire, but of its wicked inhabitants—compared to the flood. Fourth, no millennium till the coming of the Son of Man. Fifth, no conversion of the world till the man of sin is destroyed. Sixth, no destruction of the man of sin till the Lord is revealed in flaming fire. Seventh, no peace to the world while there is a standing throne on earth. Eighth, no beating of swords into plowshares till the thrones are cast down. Ninth, no casting down of thrones but by the King of kings. Tenth, no coming of the Great King till the Jews are gathered to their land again. Eleventh, no coming of the Lord till Papacy has had another triumph over the Saints in the killing of the witnesses—fearful anticipation. Twelfth, instead of the world being evangelized, as blind men are expecting, it will soon be one vast theatre of war, a slaughter house, calling for the interposition of heaven; closing the great drama of blood by the personal advent of the Lord Jesus Christ to the rescue of his Saints to the salvation of Israel.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Nov. 7.—The Suez Canal Company will send a committee to Egypt to examine and report upon the feasibility of widening the present canal or to see if any necessity exists for building a second canal. De Lesseps and his son will accompany the committee. During the twenty-four hours ending at four o'clock Thursday afternoon there were four deaths from cholera at the St. Antoine Hospital Paris, France. At the Tenon Hospital seven cases and three deaths occurred. From Wednesday morning until noon to-day there was a total of twenty-one cases and thirteen deaths in Paris. The reappearance of the cholera has had a depressing effect upon the Bourse. Tourists are again leaving the country. The Prefect of Police at today's sitting of the Seine Council expressed the opinion that the cholera would again speedily disappear, as only isolated cases are reported.

A supposed case of cholera has caused much alarm at Buenos Ayres, South America. The steamship Bruzzo and another Italian vessel are detained at Montevideo.

In the Evans polygamy case, at Salt Lake City, U., the mother of his second wife testified that her daughter married Evans. The second wife admitted the marriage, and said it was not by the consent of the first wife. The jury convicted Evans. Bail was refused pending an appeal.

President Arthur has declared Thursday, the 27th of November, Thanksgiving Day.

On the 22d of October, Bishop O. M. Stewart, George W. Wilson, Hyrum Phelps and Alma P. Spilsbury, Mormons, of Mesa City, Arizona, were indicted on the charge of unlawful cohabitation. Their cases were continued until the next term of Court. Some nine or ten indictments are out for other Mormons of that vicinity.

Nov. 8.—A dispatch from Gen. Briere de l'Isle, dated Friday, November 7th, says: "The Chinese have made a fresh attack on Tuyen Quan. They were easily repulsed, however. One French soldier was killed." A dispatch from Admiral Courbet, dated Kelung, Friday, November 7th, says that the Chinese had attacked the fortified works commanding the road to Tamsui, but had been repulsed with heavy loss after three hours' fighting.

Judge Caton's lecture before the Philosophical Society at Weber Music-Hall, Chicago, Ill., last night, drew a large audience. His subject was "The Eternity of Matter and a Supreme Intelligence as Taught by Reason." The lecturer said matter could not be annihilated, nor could energy be destroyed; there was a restless activity of atomic matter, composition and decomposition, growth and decay, always going on. Such changes were not produced by the operations of an inexorable law alone, but a governing power was required to bring the atoms together in the proper relations so that the law might operate. It was not the lecturer's opinion that every change was ordained by a supreme intelligence from the beginning. Under certain fixed physical conditions certain things were certain to happen, but how could these conditions be arranged without an intelligence which was more than human? As he understood it, evolution or physical advancement involves of necessity a supreme intelligence. If physical changes were managed by no intelligence superior to human, it would be no better than no management at all. Judge Booth criticized some points in the lecture, and thought that matter was of more importance than a supreme intelligence. He was followed by Dr. Thomas, who thought that most differences of opinion in regard to the subject of discussion arose from a faulty definition of terms.

Nov. 9.—The British Franchise Bill passed the House of Commons by a majority of one hundred and forty, ten more than before.

Lord Northbrook, First Lord of the English Admiralty, has earnestly urged upon the Government the necessity for an addition to the English navy of 100 first-class and 150 second-class torpedo-boats. In accordance with Lord Northbrook's urgent representations, the Admiralty Board has ordered the construction of four torpedo cruisers and a number of torpedo depot vessels for service at all the important ports at home and in the British colonies.

Pontifical mass was celebrated by the venerable Archbishop Kenrick of St. Louis, and the sermon was preached by Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia.

Nov. 10th.—P. N. Fitzgerald, tried for treason-felony, in organizing branches of the Irish Republican Brotherhood, was acquitted.

There is rebellion among the crofters of the Scottish islands against their landlords. Open expression of this rebellion will be given soon in the island of Uig, where the people are expected to resist the collection of rent and to disarm the police.

Since midnight there have been fifty-five fresh cases of cholera and twenty-two deaths in the city of Paris. Twelve of the deaths occurred in the old men's hospital. At Toulon there were two deaths. At Mentreuil ten new cases were reported.

ed during the same time. Today a fresh case was reported at St. Nazaire and four deaths. The cholera is emptying the hotels. Foreign and provincial guests have hurriedly left the Grand Hotel, and there are now only eighteen families in the whole house. It is admitted that the water supply of Paris is generally defective, and that the water is charged with organic matter. The ambulance service is inefficient and is being enlarged, and a fumigating corps is being organized. The annual fair at Montmastre is suspended. The weather is mild and foggy.

Owing to the prevalence of cholera in France, goods from that country will be fumigated at the frontiers of Spain. The Government has ordered lazarettoes to be prepared for cholera patients, but is undecided whether to institute quarantine.

The steamer Pedro, from Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 24, has arrived at Liverpool, England. She has yellow-fever on board. The steamer Pedro arrived at Wilmington, Oct. 13 from Sagua, via Philadelphia, which latter port she reached Oct. 22, sailing hence Oct. 9 for Wilmington.

Chinese mobs have been committing fearful outrages on places of Christian worship and persons at Canton and interior points. In the Province of Kwangtung alone, four Roman Catholic and five Protestant churches were destroyed, and 120 houses of resident Christians looted and the occupants driven away. In Namhoi three Catholic chapels and converts' houses were pillaged, the priests and occupants beaten, and women outraged. At Hi Hung the Church of England Chapel was destroyed, the clothes torn from the preacher's wife, and she was shamefully treated. At Chant-Sung the Wesleyan Chapel was destroyed. The Christians are fleeing from the province to Hong Kong. The Chinese gave them the alternative to sacrifice to the idols or leave their homes. They preferred the latter. Many of the women were caught by the mob and outraged.

There is a movement in Wisconsin in favor of high license. Petitions in furtherance of such a policy have been circulated already.

An universal exhibition will be opened at Paris May 5th, 1889.

Nov. 11.—Between noon and 11 o'clock last night ninety-seven fresh cases of cholera and eleven deaths were reported in Paris, France. These numbers do not include the additional cases and deaths which occurred at the hospitals. In numerous instances the victims were seized by the dread disease in a most sudden manner. With hardly a premonition they were stricken on the streets, in omnibuses, and other public places, or when about their ordinary avocations. The hospitals set apart for the use of the cholera patients are already full to overflowing, and others are being placed in readiness as rapidly as circumstances will permit. Many cases have occurred among the troops of the garrison. In nearly all the barracks some soldiers have had attacks. If the epidemic continues an order will be issued closing the public schools. The eastern and central portions of the city are the ones most affected. The residences occupied principally by the English and American people are in a most excellent sanitary condition. Up to noon to-day there were thirty-six deaths from cholera, including those in the hospitals. Two deaths by cholera were reported to-day at Nantes, four at Oran, and two at Toulon. There have been six fresh cases of cholera since midnight, at Paris, and fifty-six deaths. The victims of the epidemic were mostly illy fed or dissipated, and rarely of robust constitution. As soon as it is known that a case of cholera is in tenements two constables are assigned to guard the house until the patient is taken to the hospital.

Nov. 9th the election in the Mexican States Coahuila and Nueva Leon came off for State and municipal officers. Riot reigned in the City of Saltillo and in the Towns of Sabinos, Hidalgo, and Bustamente. At Saltillo five men are reported killed, and fifteen or twenty wounded. A number were also killed in Santa Catarina. At Sabinos, in Hidalgo a battle occurred between Government soldiers and citizens. District Judge Garcia was killed, while the Colonel commanding the troops, together with about twenty soldiers, are reported killed. The towns are full of dead and wounded on both sides. The rioting is attributed to the attempts of the Government to coerce citizens by the use of troops at the polls in support of the Government candidates.

The report that France and China, through negotiations in Paris, had arrived at satisfactory agreement for a settlement has been officially confirmed. China recognizes the Tien-Tsin treaty, and an armistice has been arranged so as to settle the Tonquin frontier question.

Another attack was made by rebels on Suakin last night. It was promptly repulsed, and the Egyptian cavalry are now in pursuit of the flying enemy. There is now a total force of 2,500 British troops in Dongola.

The growth of Socialism in Germany is probably largely due to the extreme poverty of the population. Less than ten years ago there were in Prussia 6,591,559 persons exempt from taxation—that is, nearly 27 per cent of the entire population exempt, because their annual incomes did not amount to $100. The fortunes of Prussia are classified thus:

6,034,263 persons, or 58.5 per cent, very poor.
3,520,691 persons, or 34.1 per cent, incomes from $100 to $250.
478,410 persons, or 4.6 per cent, incomes from $250, to $500.

178, 930 persons, or 1.7 per cent, incomes from $500 to $1,000.

89,293 persons, or 86 per cent, incomes from $1,000 $3,750.

9,634 persons, or 09, per cent, incomes over $3,750.

It is safe to say that if the above table is true, and the author, Herr Meyer, is a reliable statistician, no less than 95 per cent of the population of Germany consists of persons who do not earn one dollar a day. In England the population has been accustomed for generations to look upon unlimited wealth on the one side and extreme poverty on the other. Medievalism in Germany kept such contrasts down, and it is only since the breakup of the old system that such contrasts have become possible. In the City of Berlin seventy-one persons are said to pay 10 per cent of the entire income tax. The income, however, of these persons, would be considered small in comparison with New York incomes. Forty out of the seventy-one vary from $36,000 to $51,000; the next twenty are under $75,000, and only eleven exceed $100,000, the highest being $450,000, less than the quarterly interest-check for Mr. Vanderbilt's registered and United States bonds.

Judge Welch of the Circuit Court has just rendered a decision at Carlinville, Ill., sustaining the position taken some months ago by Judge Philips, that the directors of a broken bank are personally responsible to a depositor for deposits made after the bank has become insolvent and when the directors by due diligence might have known of such insolvency.

Nov. 12th.—The French casualties in the fight on the Tamsui Road last week were trifling. The French have captured the Chinese tender Feihoo, used in conveying stores to various coast light-houses. The Chinese are still blockading Keelung. The steamer Feihoo has merely been detained for acting in a contraband manner at ports of Formosa. The Feihoo belongs to the European administration of the Chinese customs service.

From midnight to noon today there were twenty-eight deaths from cholera in Paris. Of these nineteen occurred in the hospital and nine in the city. Two soldiers of the guard at the Elysee Palace were seized with cholera today. One died almost immediately. These cases have caused a profound sensation. In the eighteen hours ended at six to night, there were forty-three deaths from cholera in Paris. The medical and surgical societies belonging to the Paris hospitals have decided not to admit women to competition for positions in the hospital service. At Melun in the last forty-eight hours there have been seven cases and two deaths from cholera. At Toulon there were two deaths from cholera today. Several fresh cases are reported. An actor was seized with vomiting last night as he went upon the stage, and died shortly afterwards of apoplexy. The city is dirtier than ever.

Twenty-five more working days will see the Washington monument completed, and February 22d next will witness its public dedication. Standing 520 feet and ten inches above its base, it now ranks as the highest structure in the world, its nearest rival being the lofty spire of the Cologne Cathedral.

The New Orleans World's Exposition will open December 16th and close June 1st.

During the year just closing 175 men have been lynched in the country, as against 57 in 1882. Nearly all these victims of mob vengeance were furnished by the South and West, only one case of lynching having occurred east of Ohio. The record is as follows: Alabama 4, Arkansas 11, Colorado 5, Georgia 9, Illinois 2, Indiana 2, Iowa 7, Kansas 1, Kentucky 7, Louisiana 7, Michigan 3, Mississippi 16, Missouri 10, Nebraska 7, North Carolina 3, Oregon 3, Pennsylvania 1, South Carolina 3, Tennessee 6, Texas 29, Virginia 4, Wisconsin 1, Arizona 2, Indian Territory 1, Montana 18, New Mexico 3, Utah 4, Washington Territory 1, Wyoming 1, Alaska 3, Canada 1. Total 175.

Nov. 13.—One of El Mahdi's chief lieutenants is reported to be marching against Dongola with 12,000 men, while another with 9,000 is advancing against the Kabbish tribes.

Distinct shocks of an earthquake were felt at Colchester and Kingsville, Essex county, Ontario, and similar shocks Wednesday night at Concord, Hopkinton, Hillsboro, Bradford, and Warner, N. H. What was thought to be an earthquake shock at Cleveland, O., this morning proved to be the detonating report of a terrific explosion in the giant-powder factory of A. J. and O. B. Rummel, near Toledo. Although $10,000 worth of property was destroyed, not a life was lost, and only one person was injured. From midnight to noon to-day there were thirty-three deaths from cholera in Paris, nineteen of which occurred in the hospitals. The revised report for yesterday gives a total of eighty-one deaths, all but twenty of which occurred in the hospitals. Eighty-four fresh cases were received into the hospitals yesterday. Fifty-eight deaths from cholera are reported since midnight. Thirty in the city, the remainder in the hospitals. Two deaths are reported at Oran. One fresh case of cholera and one death were reported at Toulon to-day. In consequence of popular indignation at the filthy condition of the city the municipal authorities are having the streets and gutters cleaned. The Swiss Government forbids railway cars from Paris to cross the frontier until passengers have been subjected to a thorough medical inspection.

Another case of cholera has appeared at Buenos Ayres, S. A., causing great alarm. The strictest quarantine will be observed on all vessels coming from France. Three Italian steamers are expected soon. They will not be allowed to enter the port. The press censures the agent of the Italian line and all others who have tried to evade the sanitary laws.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

There were but 206 failures in the United States and Canada during the week ending November 8th, as compared with 267 failures the previous week and 285 the week preceding that.

The wholesale clothing house of Theodore Dissel & Co., at Syracuse, N. Y., was destroyed by fire November 8th. Nearly 1,000 people are thrown out of employment. The loss is about $75,000.

November 8th $1,411,000 worth of dry goods was imported at New York.

During October the British imports have decreased, compared with October of last year, £4,737,000; exports have decreased, compared with October of last year, £725,000.

After having consultation with the Ohio State officials in Columbus, Ohio, President Green of the Columbus & Hocking Valley Railroad sent the following telegram to Gov. Hoadly; "The three bridges burned were in Hocking county. The wires were cut at ten o'clock at night and the bridges fired about the same time. We had assurance from the President of the Miners' Association that no such work should occur and were not expecting such an attack. The Sheriff could have no knowledge of the intentions, as all is done secretly and in the night. Our operators' lives have recently been threatened. If mines and railroads are to be operated successfully and with safety we need the prompt and immediate assistance of the State." The following telegram was received at the Executive office, November 7th, from T. T. McCarty, Sheriff of Hocking county. "Our mines have been fired and three railroad bridges have been burned. Murray City, in Hocking county, was attacked last night by three or four hundred strikers. No guards were killed, but I think some of the attacking party were. They used the most dangerous explosives, which were composed of tin cans filled with giant powder, with fuses attached, some kerosene oil in bottles placed on the powder cans, and one package of dynamite, of all of which I have samples in my possession. I am getting entirely discouraged with the situation. I could manage Hocking county if Perry and Athens counties are looked after and their strikers kept in control. With the determination and disposition of the men that are attacking at every opportunity, life and property will suffer greater damage than ever in the past. Hoping that you will give a reply, I remain yours truly, T. T. McCARTY, Sheriff of Hocking County.

Gov. Hoadly returned from Cincinnati, November 8th, and held a consultation with President Green of the Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo Railroad, in reference to the disorders in the Hocking Valley. The interview was very animated, the officials expressing their views quite freely. Gov. Hoadly recognizes the condition of things as exceedingly perplexing, but is not disposed to keep a standing army in the valley from one year's end to the other unless there is no other means of preserving the peace and protecting life and property. He is inclined to think that the Sheriffs of the counties which include the disturbing element have not put forth sufficient effort to suppress the rioters. The Governor sent for Sheriff T. J. McCarty of Hocking county to meet him here, and the Sheriff arrived during the day. The situation is full of difficulties in the eyes of the Governor, and he is disposed to gather all the information and view the subject from every standpoint before acting, and then only after careful deliberation. The Governor instructed the Sheriff to give notice that if any more attempts were made to destroy property and take life, the guilty persons would be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. The militia of the State will be placed at the disposal of the sheriffs if necessary. The railroad company will commence to build their bridges and hold the different counties responsible for any further damage. Their loss so far is over $35,000.

The imports of New York for the week ending November 8th were valued at $8,036,000.

Wolfe Bros. & Co. of Chicago, failed November 8th. The liabilities are placed at $150,000 and the assets at $50,000.

The annual report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the year ending June 30th, 1884, has been submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury. From this it appears that the total receipts for the year were $121,590,039, as compared with $144,553,344 for the previous year. It is estimated that the receipts for the current fiscal year will be $115,000,000. The falling off the Commissioner attributes to the diminished quantity of bourbon and rye whiskies on which the tax will be due this year. The receipts from the tobacco tax last year were $16,041,850 less than for the previous year.

The stock of wheat in England is estimated at 150,000 quarters, being less than two-thirds of the amount held a year ago. The low prices current there repelled American imports and thus lightened the stock held by English dealers.

Sugar, like wheat, is now at the lowest price it has recorded since 1860, and the unfortunate plight of the wheat-farmers of the United States, India, and England appears to be fully matched by the difficulties pressing on the sugar-farmers of the West Indies, Germany, France, and Belgium. Cuba finds itself ruined by high taxes and low sugars, and Germany, which has been its successful rival, appears to have found the victory of its sugar-beet a very costly triumph. Germany possesses the same aptitude for the manufacture of sugar from the beet as the Southern States of this country have for the production of cotton, as the Western States have for the production of corn, and as the North-west for the production of wheat, but the superiority has brought to it, as to them, loss instead of gain.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British grain trade says: "The weather last week was fairly propitious for thrashing. Deliveries of grain by farmers are liberal in amount. Native wheat declined 1@2s. Sales of English wheat during the week aggregated 63,812 quarters at 32s, against 67,120 quarters at 40s 1d the corresponding week last year. Flour is lower. Medium to inferior malting barleys are 2s lower. Foreign wheat is dragging along with prices in favor of buyers. The downward movement continues, and it is impossible to predict when and where it will stop. The position of trade is without precedent. The free supply is crushing the life out of it. "Maize is in small supply and prices are sustained. A very heavy drop, however, is expected when the immense American crop of 1884 gets fairly in motion. Trades in cargoes off coast is trifling. There were thirteen arrivals. Three cargoes were sold, four withdrawn, five remain, and sixteen are due. Trade in cargoes forward is small and purely nominal."

Prices of grain and breadstuffs in the British markets were greatly reduced last week. A further reduction is expected when American cargoes arrive in England.

R. A. Wight, President of the Hanwel Furnace Company of New York, assigned Nov. 10. The liabilities are $612,000, the nominal assets $518,000, and the actual assets about $51,000.

The cotton crop of the United States for the present year will amount to 5,276,000 bales. This is somewhat larger than last year.

Chicago elevators contained, November 8th, 7,397,848 bushels of wheat, 1,270,895 bushels of corn, 400,864 bushels of oats, 44,792 bushels of rye, and 115,128 bushels of barley. Total, 9,229,524 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 10,626,336 bushels a year ago. During last week the stock decreased 212,370 bushels, including an increase of 723,649 bushels of wheat and a decrease of 692,460 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 38,343,187 bushels of wheat, 4,448,873 bushels of corn, 3,261,944 bushels of oats, 577,605 bushels of rye, and 2,228,445 bushels of barley. These figures are larger than a week ago by 2,240,039 in wheat and smaller by 727,051 corn.

The Dutch colonial banks are in difficulties owing to the great depression in the sugar trade. The shares of Dutch-Indian and Colonial banks have fallen from 10 to 16 per cent. Efforts are now being made to prevent a financial crisis through the closing of sugar factories which are connected with the Dutch-Indian Bank.

Gold to the amount of $1,000,000 was brought over from Europe by the steamers Donau and Umbra.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884, the internal-revenue collections for this (the First) district of the U. S., amounted to $8,447,053.

One million dollars in bullion was shipped from France for the United States in the week ending Nov. 8.

Breadstuff exported from the United States for the ten months ending Oct. 31, aggregated in value $120,998,047, against $145,125,331 for the corresponding period in 1883. Official reports of the French harvest returns for the year show a yield of 111,141,845 hectolitres of wheat, against 103,753,426 in 1883; and 25,487,587 hectolitres of rye, against 24,842,602 in 1883.

Shipments of gold from Europe are unusually heavy. The total amount received in New York this week and known to have been ordered is estimated at $4,000,000. It is anticipated that fully $20,000,000 will be imported between now and February. The movement of securities of both stocks and bonds is from this side to London and the continental centres.

Pensions to the number of 322,756 and to the amount of $56,908,597 were paid in this country during the last year. Of the 927,922 claims filed since 1861, 545,130 have been allowed, the total amount disbursed during that period being $678,346,834.

According to the report of the Baltimore & Ohio directors for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1884, the revenues of the road aggregated nearly $19,500,000, while the surplus increased over $1,900,000 during the year.

An assignment has been made by the Pioneer Lumber Company of Eau Claire, Wis., whose liabilities are put at nearly $250,000 with assets much less.

The cooper-shop works of the Standard Oil Company at Pittsburg, Pa., will close for an indefinite period Monday Nov. 17th, on account of a scarcity of orders.

Advices from Cali and other towns in the United States of Columbia report that the most severe shock of earthquake that has been experienced for three years was felt last night. The church of San Pedro at Cali was wrecked and another church and several houses suffered severely. Other towns which felt the shock escaped without serious injury.

An explosion occurred to-day in the Tredeger Coal & Iron Company's colliery at Hockin, near the Town of Tredeger, England. Fifteen lives were lost.

Advices from Yokohama, Japan, are to the effect that Tokio and Yokohama were visited by a severe earthquake October 15th, the heaviest experienced since February 22d, 1880, but the damage was comparatively slight. The shock lasted two minutes, and was quickly followed by several minor shocks.

The loss of the brig Julia E. Haskell, Capt. J. T. Paine, of Boston, and six men, is reported.

Nov. 11.—Tramps threw open a switch on the Ohio & Mississippi Road early this morning at Vincennes, Ind., hurling a passenger train into a ditch, killing the engineer, and injuring several others. A few hours later what is supposed to be the same gang wrecked a train, on the Evansville & Terre Haute Road. Attempts were made in each case to rob the train, but the ruffians were repulsed.

WHAT IS VULGARITY.

To be vulgar, one only needs to forget that other people have feelings that may be wounded, or, remembering it, to wound them maliciously; to boast of one's own possessions, or of one's own prowess, or of one's beauty; to flaunt and brag in the presence of the poor and humble, and to condescend and attempt to be affable to those we deem our inferiors. It is only a vulgar person who will address any one, however poor and lowly, in a tone differing in any way from that which should be used to an equal or superior. The true lady can bestow alms upon the beggar in such manner that no one watching her would know that it was an alms.

In fact, in our present social use of the word "vulgarity"—for, actually, vulgar only means common, as we all know—you may take it for granted that a true Christian—by which we mean one who obeys the mandates of our Savior, and not merely a member of Dr. Someone's church—is never even apparently vulgar; and that one who has hate, and pride, and scorn of his fellow-men in his heart will be assuredly vulgar though his clothes are of the finest, his habitation a palace, and his "family" ever so "high" and "good."

Nevertheless, assumption and impertinence will continue to be considered a proof of gentility by many poor, silly creatures, until the end of time, as we all very well know.

CULTIVATE YOURSELVES.

What plowing, digging, and harrowing is to land, thinking, reflecting, and examining is to the mind. Each has its proper culture; and as the land that is suffered to lie waste and wild for a long time will be overspread with brushwood, brambles, thorns, and weeds, which have neither use nor beauty, so there will not fail to sprout up in a neglected mind, a great number of prejudices and absurd opinions, which owe their origin partly to the soil itself, the passions and imperfections of the mind of man, and partly to those seeds which chance to be scattered in it by every kind of doctrine which the cunning of statesmen, the singularity of pedants, and the superstition of fools raise.

If all the blind men in the kingdom should endeavor to bear down that the sun is not bright or that the rainbow has no colors, I would still believe my own eyes. I have seen them both; they have not. I can not prove to their satisfaction what I assert, because they are destitute of sight, the necessary medium; they would not—they could not—hesitate a moment, if they were not blind. Just so they who have been taught of God, who have tasted that the Lord is gracious, have an experimental perception of the truth which renders them proof against all the sophistry of the infidel.

As the roots of a tree are out of sight, yet from them it derives its firmness and stability, so upon the hidden life of the Christian, that life which is out of the sight of other men, his firmness and stability depend; and as it is through the hidden roots that the nourishment is drawn up to the stem and branches, and the leaf continues green, and the tree does not cease from bearing fruit, even so in the Christian's life, that life which is "hid in Christ with God," lie the sources of his strength and of his spiritual prosperity.

BOOK OF MORMON.

"Truth shall spring out of the earth, and righteousness shall look down from Heaven."—Ps. 85:11.

Thou didst spring from the dust, and though men may revile thee,

Despising the name that is dear to the Saint;
Yet God will establish the truth thou hast spoken,
And they who drink of thee shall never more faint.

Thou revealest the story, unknown to the nations,
Of peoples departed, once treading earth's sod;
Who were blessed by the presence of Jesus the Savior,
And learned from his lips the salvation of God.

Thou speakest the annals of men that were faithful,
Revealing to mortals the pathway they trod;
A light in the darkness to all that revere thee,
Dissolving the gloom that enshroudeth the rod.

Yea, the strong "iron rod," the pure gospel of Jesus,
Sure guide through the pathway of life and its cares;
The "Pearl of Great Price," that from evil redeems us,
The victory ensuring o'er sin and its snares.

Pure is thy teaching, thy doctrine ennobling,
To the wayfarer, weary and worn, they appear
Like the beacon's fall glare, beaming forth gladness,
To the tempest-tossed soul breathing words of good cheer.

Rod of Ephraim, thou wert by the prophets recorded,
Unearthed by God's wisdom to show us the way;
The "stone from the mountain," destined in thy greatness,
To shatter the image, whose feet are of clay.

Book of Mormon, the blessed, the Saints' hope of promise,
The gospel's full light by a prophet restored;
They who receive thee, and in meekness believe thee,
Shall evermore rest in Christ Jesus the Lord.

Ever hail blessed record, thy writers are angels,
Though once on this earth as weak mortals they trod;
Through obedience redeemed by the blood of a Savior,
They will dwell evermore in the presence of God.

Precious book, full of promise, though men may despise thee,
I will honor thy precepts, thy truths I'll maintain;
Believing that God ne'er forsakes those who serve him,
Having promised salvation, through Emanuel's name.

"NON-ESSENTIALS."

UNDER the above caption I noticed an article in HERALD of the 6th inst., and though I may not endorse the position taken by the writer, yet that which is proposed by him; viz: "I think the time has come for it (referring to the Church) to decide what is, and what is not the doctrine, the faith, the order, the law of the church, and then to refuse to recognize as its representatives those who will not teach or obey what it determines as its faith and order," seems quite correct and commendable; though if justice is to be meted out by the process, as appears the obvious intent, then in that case in order to make "all men equal under the law," the Church should make belief in such avowed declarations of faith a test of fellowship; as the elder and member in this regard are equal.

I for one am glad to see this move, as reference to my report made to last General Conference will readily show, believing now as I have for some years past, that a decision upon these points of controversy was due all parties concerned; it is due to the Church; and is due to the world, that the world may know where the Church stands, and what its actual faith is; so that all persons desiring to unite with us may know at once what confession of faith is necessary to membership and good standing. And, per consequence, all members not in "good standing" ought by right to be dealt with and expelled from fellowship, unless restitution or amicable settlement be reached; for, if the Church should affirm the idea of gathering "into the regions round about," and make it part of "the faith once delivered unto the Saints," then representatives not only ought to so teach but members also ought to so teach and so act. But the dilemma in which we as a Church are placed, is simply this: that subsequent to the reception of the revelation of 1873, (which apparently revived the gathering into the regions round about), in General Conference at Plano, Illinois, (I believe), the elders there in council, passed by vote, in said conference, a resolution declaring there is "no place" to which we are commanded to gather. The reason for this act was stated as being a part of the provision made in the revelation referred to above, and is as follows: "Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me."

The resolution declared there is "no place;" "regions round about" is a place: now which of these shall we choose? The "resolution" declaring there is "no place," is more recent than the one which "endorsed the revelation as one sent from God;" hence, I take it that the legal status of the Church upon that point to-day is that there is "no place" unto which we should gather. The Church by vote can repeal, undo all this, and by vote reinstate "gathering into the regions round about," or it could be done by new revelation commanding; but in the nature of the case this is not apt to be done. But certainly it looks strange, if not a waste of time, to advocate "gathering" when the resolution, yet, (so far as I know) unrepealed, declares there is "no place." It may be claimed that the resolutions passed at last General Conference by the Twelve and the body, touching "local commands," &c., cover the case. It might have been so intended; but certainly is not clear, not explicit upon this point. If it should be decided, that the resolution declaring there is "no place" has been repealed, then our practice, as a Church upon this question, resembles the alleged practice of medicine in the use of the bark of a certain tree; viz: "Strip the bark up for an emetic, but down for a physic." However, if the effect be for good, I dare say none will object, but each will choose which process he prefers.

The question with me is not one of mastery, but one of conscience. I am trying to build upon the "foundation" that Christ laid, and I feel the force of Paul's saying, "Let every man beware how he buildeth thereon;" for certainly it will not be sufficient answer in the day of judgment, that I have accepted all that which has been spoken in the name of the Lord, as the foundation. No matter how good the prophet, now what his name, I am responsible to God for my own work, the manner I have builded and not to man; and we ought to remember that God "is no respecter of persons," but that he "giveth liberally unto all men," and they who really "seek him," will find him; though probably "few there be" who learn this.

Gathering into the "regions round about" is the question. "Former commands" are referred to. What do these commands teach? I take up the D. and C., and at page 287, Sec. 102, pars. 7 and 8, I read from the last, or one of the last upon this point: "Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith nor of mighty works; but carefully gather together as much in one region as can be, consistently with the feelings of the people * * * saying unto the people, execute judgment and justice for us according to law and redress us of our wrongs. Now, behold, I say unto you, my friends, in this way you may find favor in the eyes of the people, until the army of Israel becomes very great; and I will soften the hearts of the people as I did the heart of Pharaoh, from time to time, until my servant Baurak Ale, and Baneemy whom I have appointed, shall have time to gather up the strength of my house and to have sent wise men to purchase all the lands (in the counties adjoining Jackson county, Missouri) * * * and after these lands are purchased, I will hold the armies of Israel guiltless in taking possession of their own lands which they have previously purchased, and of throwing down the towers of mine enemies that may be upon them, (upon their lands) and scattering their watchmen, and avenging me of mine enemies unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me."

A careful reading of the text will I think show:—1st. A pacific course, on the part of the Saints, is recommended to secure "grace and favor," with the people. 2d. Pharaoh's case is made a parallel, and the "hearts of the people" are to be softened as his was, from "time to time." 3d. The pacific course on the part of the Saints, by which they obtain "favor in the eyes of the people," is to continue "until the army of Israel becomes very great." 4th. The hearts of the people are to be "softened," "from time to time," "until my servant Baurak Ale and Baneemy, whom I have appointed shall have time to gather up the strength of my house," and purchase the lands &c., as before described. 5th. When the army of Israel "becomes very great," and the "lands" are purchased, then they are to be held "guiltless" in going in and taking possession of those "lands," &c., and are to "avenge God on his enemies to the third and fourth generation."

I have heard many say, "I object to armies avenging God;" but why "object" when it is expressly provided for in these statements, provided you accept this command to "gather," &c. Please notice in the eighth paragraph the statement, "my servant Baurak Ale, and Baneeny whom I have appointed," and then turn to sec. 79, pars. 7, 8, and sec. 100: pars. 4, 5; and when you shall notice this "appointing" and provision for the army—"warriors and young men," &c.—and you then compare these with paragraphs 7, 8, sec. 102, and find, as all must eventually, that this "gathering" here spoken of is made dependent upon the "army of Israel" for its final and complete establishment—the "army" being germane to its execution and administration of revenge!—Then ask yourself, kind reader, if you are prepared for this. Can you accept it: are you willing to take the consequences. I for one desire to act in all good conscience before God, but I can not accept such things. The words of Jesus ring in my ears, "My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight," &c., John 18: 36; again: his words to Peter, "Put up again thy sword into his place; for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Matt. 26: 52: also, "He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword." "Here is the patience and the faith of the Saints."—Rev. 13: 10. I take it that the "faith of the Saints proper is against "killing with the sword;" and when I read in Joseph Smith's history of his going up to "Zion" with a certain "Camp," and for the purpose of delivering Zion; and learn from one who was with him that the said "Camp" numbered between two hundred and three hundred men, armed and equipped with rifles, pistols, knives, &c., and that fifteen of their number were picked out as "sharp shooters;" and that with his men between the branches forming the head waters of Fishing River in Missouri, he was prevented from actual engagement with the Missourians by heavy rain and hail storm swelling the creeks into floods; and that then and there under such circumstances he received a revelation dated June 22d, 1834; I can I think, with these facts, readily account for the war spirit so prevalent in this revelation. I find no parallel nor warrant for such conduct in Christ, as revealed in the New Testament, or Book of Mormon; but I do find a parallel in Moses, and sincerely, I think the issue with us as a people at the present time is, which shall we follow, Christ? or Moses? Joseph taught the organization of an "army" or "armies," the doctrine of revenge, and a gathering; so also did Moses. Remember that Moses taught these to a people who had departed from the gospel—"the word preached" not having profited them," &c. Heb. 4: 2; and I think the inference is fair that the people under Joseph were in the same condition. But, I forbear for the present anything like an exhaustive consideration of the subject.

The next subject introduced by the writer of "Non-Essentials" is the law of tithing, as contained in "revelation of July 8th, 1838," and referred to in revelation of 1861, which provides, or rather requires all the "surplus property," and, after this, "one-tenth of the increase," to "pay the debts of the Presidency," and "support of the priesthood."

In the spring of 1879, or 1880, I placed myself upon the record touching this question. I "rejected" it then as a law, and I reject it now, for the simple reason that I believe all gifts or sacrifice for Christ's cause should be of the willing heart and mind—a free will—and not by exaction as this law provides; for anybody ought to be able to see, that if this law on Tithing be adopted as obligatory upon the church; then each and every individual member ought to bring forward his "surplus property," and after that pay "one tenth" of the increase—annually as the law provides: and, I hold that acceptance of that law by an individual is authority to the church to collect that amount of money or property each year from each member liable to pay tithing. The Bishop would have just as much authority to collect this revenue—expulsion being the penalty in case of non-conformity—as the tax gatherer. Some good brethren get scared, and look at me very meaningly when I say I "reject" this law as not an essential part of my faith; but these very saintly Saints turn right around and keep all their surplus property, and pay the Bishop as little as they like; and yet represent to me that they believe in the law of tithing. But I have always thought they believed in that law somewhat as Mark Twain thought the only proper place to have a boil was "upon your neighbor." Honesty is the best policy my friends. If you do believe in the law of tithing, as a law, then walk up and act in harmony with its provisions; but if you do not believe in it as a "law," then say so; "show thyself a man." The church, as also every member, will find it best to be either "cold, or hot."

But before I dismiss this topic, it might be well to remind some that at Kirtland General Conference, the Twelve and Bishopric, in joint council, declared that the law of tithing of 1838 is not obligatory upon the body—I can not remember the exact verbiage, and I do not know that the body ever passed upon the resolution. I hold that every person is the steward of his own property; that the right to give of that property, as he chooses, is absolutely his, and inalienable, and can not be superseded by a law exacting one-tenth. The whole matter might, I think, be summed up in this, "Give, as the Lord has prospered you;" as the answering of a good conscience is to God, not man. However, if the majority in the church believe in this, and believe it should be made a law, then so enact, and give all who do not so believe the benefit of that decision. At any rate let these, with many other points of controversy be disposed of; as all must know that "a house divided against itself can not stand." I can not find, or at least have not learned, that Christ; or his apostles; taught the law of tithing to the early Saints. I know that Matthew 23: 23 and Luke 11: 42 are quoted for the purpose of proving that he did, but I think they fall far short. Careful examination will show that he endorsed the idea that the "Pharisee" ought to pay tithing, and so he ought, for he was under that law. And I presume that if one of Abraham's seed should have asked him "is it lawful to be circumcised?" he would have answered "yes," for it was a "covenant enjoined upon Abraham and his seed after him."—Gen. 17: 10. But it was not a part of the gospel. Some, it appears, in the apostles' time thought it necessary to be circumcised in order to be saved, (Acts 15: 1) just as some with us advocate tithing; but the "apostles and elders came together" and settled the case contrary to the law as given to Abraham. (See 22d to 29th verses.) And though the majority of the apostles were Abraham's seed, and had been circumcised, yet, from Paul's writings, as also others, it is quite evident that they outgrew that old law, just as we ought to the law on tithing, and learn that circumcision of the heart is profitable, but no other; and that money and gifts to Christ's work alone are worthy when they are a free-will offering. However much Bro. T. W. and I may disagree upon the final issue, I certainly do agree with him that something definite is requisite. It is high time that representatives should know and teach the faith of the church; and when thus out teaching, that those at home be not allowed to call them "apostate," simply because the Elder does not accept the ideas of the individual upon abstractions; neither will much sacrifice be made by Elders in traveling, nor by members of their means, until these vexing questions be disposed of. So let the bolt fall as it may, for one, I am ready. Yours for truth,

Z. H. GURLEY.

PLEASANTON, IOWA, Sept. 27, 1884.

WHO IS ELIAS?

ELIAS, is an office, a position and there are many such spoken of as Eliases. Any person that has been or may be commissioned to do any special work of restoring is an Elias. He that had power to create, organize, has power to disorganize, scatter and divide, has authority to reorganize, reestablish, reunite, restore; and is the great restorer which is to come and restore all things.

Shiloh is also an office, a position, which only one person can hold at any one time. He that stands at the head, and holds the scepter of power, which creates and makes him a law giver, is a Shiloh. Moses was a Shiloh, Christ is Shiloh, and is of Judah; and when the scepter shall depart from Judah, unto him whom Christ said he would raise up like unto Moses, he will be Shiloh; and unto him will be the gathering of the people of Israel; not the tribes, but Israel, which is the old patriarchal house of Jacob, which is Israel. This Reorganized Church is that patriarchal house of Jacob, with Ephraim at the head as our great patriarch. Inasmuch as Christ wrote the law to Moses, with his own finger, so will he write the law with his own finger to him whom he said he would raise up like unto Moses.

The Book of Mormon is not the Stick of Ephriam, but is the history of Manasseh, not the tribe of Manasseh. Manasseh and the tribe are two different people. Joseph the Martyr was a descendent of the tribe of Ephriam, and not of the children of Ephriam, as they are two different peoples. Inspired Translation, Gen. 48: 5, 6. Read this over and think of it, for it is correct as you will find.

Yours in bonds,
E. F. MOORE.

The following document was found with the manuscripts of the Inspired Translation of the Bible.

THE SUBJECT OF THE DISPENSATION OF THE FULNESS OF TIMES.

Eph. 1: 9, 10.—“Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in himself: that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him.”

Gen. 3: 9, 10.—“And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou? And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden: and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.”

OFFERING OF ABEL.

Gen. 4: 4.—“And Abel, he also brought of the firstlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof. And the Lord had respect unto Abel, and to his offering.”

Heb. 11: 4.—“By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts; and by it he being dead yet speaketh.”

TRANSLATION OF ENOCH.

Gen. 5: 22-24.—“And Enoch walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters: and all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years: and Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him.”

Jude 14: 5.—“And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints.”

Heb. 11: 5.—“By faith Enoch was translated, that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God. But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.”

Gen. 5: 28, 29.—“And Lamech lived an hundred eighty and two years, and begat a son: And he called his name Noah, saying, This same shall comfort us concerning our work and toil of our hands, because of the ground which the Lord hath cursed.”

Gen. 6: 13.—“And God said unto Noah,

The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them: and behold, I will destroy them with the earth.”

Gen. 9: 8, 9.—“And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying, And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you.”

Gen. 9: 24-28.—“And Noah awoke from his wine, and knew what his younger son had done unto him. And he said, Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren. And he said, Blessed be the Lord God of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant. God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.”

Heb. 11: 7.—“By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.”

Gen. 12: 1-4.—“Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.”

Gal. 3: 8.—“And the scriptures, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed.”

Gen. 27: 7.—“And I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant; to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.”

Gen. 22: 9-11.—“And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order; and bound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar upon the wood. And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son. And the angel of the Lord called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham. And he said, Here am I. And he said, lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou anything unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from me.”

COVENANT RENEWED UNTO ISAAC.

Gen. 26: 2-5.—“And the Lord appeared unto him, and said, Go down into Egypt: dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of. Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and I will bless thee: for unto thee, and unto thy seed I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father; and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries: and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed: Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.”

COVENANT CONFIRMED UNTO JACOB.

Gen. 28: 13, 14.—“And behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed. And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.”

Gen. 32: 28-30.—“And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God, and with men, and hast prevailed. And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name; and he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there. And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.”

Psa. 105: 8-10.—“He hath remembered his covenant forever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations. Which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac; and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant.”

Gen. 35: 23-26.—The sons of Leah; Reuben, Jacob's first-born, and Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Zebulon: the sons of Rachel; Joseph, and Benjamin: and the sons of Bilhah, Rachel's hand-maid; Dan, and Naphtali: and the sons of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid; Gad and Asher. These are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him in Padan-aram.”

BIRTHRIGHT OF JOSEPH.

1 Chron. 5: 1, 2.—“Now the sons of Reuben, the first-born of Israel, (for he was the first-born; but, forasmuch as he defiled his father's bed, his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph the son of Israel: and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright. For Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief ruler; but the birthright was Joseph's).”

JACOB'S BLESSING UPON JOSEPH.

Gen. 49: 22-26.—“Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall: the archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him: but his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel;) even by the God as thy father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings, of the breasts, and of the womb: the blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.”

THE BLESSING OF JOSEPH BY MOSES.

Deut. 33: 13-17.—“And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath, and for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren. His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh."

THE BLESSING OF JACOB UPON EPHRAIM AND MANASSEH.

Gen. 48: 15-20.—"And he blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day. The Angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth. And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it displeased him; and he held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head. And Joseph said unto his father, Not so, my father: for this is the first-born; put thy right hand upon his head. And his father refused, and said, I know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations. And he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh, and he set Ephraim before Manasseh."

Psalms 80: 1, 2.—"Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that dwellest between the cherubim, shine forth. Before Ephraim and Benjamin and Manasseh stir up thy strength, and come and save us."

Jer. 31: 6-9.—"For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the Lord our God. For thus saith the Lord: Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations; publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel. Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind, and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither. They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble; for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born."

THE BLESSINGS OF LEVI BY JACOB.

Gen. 49: 5-7.—"Simeon and Levi are brethren: instruments of cruelty are in their habitations. O my soul, come not thou into their secret: unto their assembly mine honor; be not thou united! for in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they digged down a wall. Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce: and their wrath, for it was cruel: I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel."

Deut. 33: 8.—"And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one, whom thou didst prove at Mas-sah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah."

STRIFE AT THE WATERS OF MERIBAH.

Num. 20: 11-13.—"And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and the water came out abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also. And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them. This is the water of Meribah; because the children of Israel strove with the Lord, and he was sanctified in them."

Exo. 3: 4.—"And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses! And he said, Here am I."

AARON CALLED.

Exo. 4: 16.—"And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him instead of God."

AARON'S DEATH.

Num. 20: 23-29.—"And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying, Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ye rebelled against my word at the waters of Meribah. Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor: and strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there. And Moses did as the Lord commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation. And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount. And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron thirty days, even all the house of Israel."

Heb. 5: 4.—"And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron."

THE CALL OF JOSHUA A SPY.

Num. 13: 8.—"Of the tribe of Ephraim, Oshea the son of Nun."—16v.—"And Moses called Oshea the son of Nun, Jehoshua."

Num. 27: 18-23.—"And the Lord said unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the Spirit, and lay thine hand upon him: and set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation: and give him a charge in their sight. And thou shalt put some of thine honor upon him; that all the congregation of the children of Israel may be obedient. And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall ask counsel for him after the judgment of Urim before the Lord: at his word shall they go out, and at his word they shall come in, both he, and all the children of Israel with him, even all the congregation. And Moses did as the Lord commanded him: and he took Joshua, and set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation: and he laid his hands upon him, and gave him a charge, as the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses."

1 Sam. 3: 10, 11.—"And the Lord came, and stood and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth. And the Lord said to Samuel, Behold, I will do a thing in Israel, at which both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle."

SAUL ANOINTED.

1 Sam. 10: 1.—"Then Samuel took a vial of oil, and poured it upon his head, and kissed him, and said, Is it not because the Lord hath anointed thee to be captain over his inheritance?"

DAVID ANOINTED.

1 Sam. 16: 13.—"Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and the Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward."

ELIJAH COMMANDED TO ANOINT HASAEL AND JEHU AND ELISHA.

1 Kings 19: 15, 16.—"And the Lord said unto him, Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus: and when thou comest, anoint Hazael to be king over Syria; and Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel; and Elisha the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room."

ELIJAH TAKEN UP.

2 Kings 2: 11-14.—"And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven. And Elisha saw it, and he cried, My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof! And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces. He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the bank of Jordan; and he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters, and said, Where is the Lord God of Elijah? And when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and thither: and Elisha went over."

LINEAGE OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Luke 1: 5.—"There was in the days of Herod, the king of Judea, a certain priest named Zacharias, of the course of Abia: and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elizabeth."

TRANSFIGURATION.

Matt. 17: 1-12.—"And after six days, Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them; and his face did shine like the sun; and his raiment was white as the light. And behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him. Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias. While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them; and behold, a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased: hear ye him. And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid. And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid. And when they lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only. And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead. And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes, that Elias must first come? And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things; but I say unto you, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed: likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

THE FULNESS OF TIMES COME.

Dan. 7: 9-14.—“And I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld then, because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time. I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed.”

FAITH.

“FAITH is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen;” and by it have all the children of God walked since the world began; and by it must his children walk till time is no more. All are the children of God in a temporal sense, but in a spiritual sense none except those who have obeyed the ordinances of adoption, and walk by faith and not by sight. We read of wonderful works being performed by the power of God, through the faith of his children; and as he has not changed, and in him is no variableness or shadow of turning, we may still expect to see and enjoy wonderful spiritual manifestations through Christ, by the prayer of faith; and also by the works of faith.

For example, a sister in the Western Maine District related to me the following:—“A few weeks ago my husband went away to his work, to be gone several weeks. I had just fifty cents money by me, was needing many things for my children, six in number, yet had resolved not to go in debt if possible to avoid it. Expected some help from work I had taken, yet it looked dark concerning my immediate supplies. The Spirit bade me give my fifty cents for the spread of the gospel. How can I, when I need so many things? and similar questions arose in my mind. That is all my living; I can not give that. Yet the Spirit continued to prompt me to the act. Thus there was a warfare in my mind. At length I resolved to go to meeting on Sunday and make the sacrifice. When Sunday came I was tired, and as I had more than three miles to walk, lay down and went to sleep. Just after Bro. J. B. came in on his way to meeting, and persuaded me to go. Never thought of the money till I had gone nearly two miles. If I went back should be too late, so went on with a sad heart, because of my thoughtlessness. The case pressed so heavily on my mind that I was obliged to arise and give it in detail in the meeting. Firmly declared that I would be like the widow, and give my mite, my living, before the sun set, believing that God, according to the promptings of his Spirit, would provide for me and my little ones. I deeply felt all I said, consequently others imbibed the same spirit, and cast in their offerings. On my return home I gave Bro. J. B., the Bishop's Agent, my offering. At first he declined, but by my urging he reluctantly accepted. After acknowledging my determination in the meeting, the burden left my mind, and happiness came instead; and after having performed the work the warfare ceased, and joy filled my breast. My rest was peaceful and refreshing. The following week the children and I earned nine dollars by our own labor, taking the first berries to market, etc. The next Sabbath we gave one dollar. The next week we earned ten dollars, then we made another offering.”

Thus the Lord verifies his promises. Thus he will do by all who walk by faith. It is blessed to be thus led, if we had only this life to live. Dear Saints, he is calling us to bring our tithes into the store-house, and if we do so, he will surely pour us out a blessing so great that our hearts can not contain it. It is the freewill offering, the sacrifice, that brings the joy to our own bosoms. Brothers, sacrifice your pipe and tobacco; sisters, sacrifice your useless ornaments, your extravagant dress, and put on the adorning of a meek and quiet spirit. Verily, thus saith the Lord, If you thus deny yourselves for my sake and the gospel's, great shall be your reward; while on the other hand if ye continue on spending your money for that which is not meat, great shall be your condemnation when ye stand before me. Ye can not imbibe the fullness of my precious truths while ye are corrupted by the gratification of selfish desires; neither can those who are hungering and thirsting for the ways of life to be expounded more perfectly, be fed, unless ye send forth my servants to instruct them. Unto you have I given the work; so labor that ye stand justified before me.

THE NAME OF THE CHURCH.

In the Herald for November 15th, page 741-2, is a resolution passed by the late Philadelphia conference questioning the propriety of calling the church, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and asking “the General Conference to drop the title of Latter Day Saints, as savoring too much of egotism and conceit;” and asking further, that the name of the church be “strictly as commanded on page 328 of the Book of Mormon.”

To my mind this resolution, while originating in good motives, is, nevertheless, based upon a misapprehension of the facts touching the case. It claims that the words “Latter Day Saints” savors “too much of egotism and conceit.” I think not; and for the following reasons. The people of God were known and called by the name of “saints” in all the various dispensations, and this was their special denominative title. In proof see Deut. 33:23, 1 Sam. 2:9, 2 Chron. 6:41, Job 15:15, Ps. 16:3, 79:2, 106:15, Prov. 2:8, Acts 9:13, 26:10, Rom. 12:15, 1 Cor. 14:33, Eph. 4:12, Heb. 6:10, Jude 3. And that God's people will bear the same name in these last days, and this, too, according to the will and appointment of God, is made certain by Bible prophecies, as the following citations clearly show: Ps. 50:5, 149:9, Dan. 7:18, 21, 22, 25, 27, 2 Thes. 1:10, Rev. 13:7, 10, 14:12, 16:6, 17:6, 18:24. These citations, candidly examined, will compel unbiased, intelligent minds to conclude that the peculiar people of God in this age should be, and will be, known and called saints. The seeming “egotism and conceit” of that name appears only when it is measured by the false meaning attached to it by corrupt forms of christianity, and not when measured by historical and prophetic usages as found in the Scriptures. If we are God's peculiar people, then we are saints; and if we are such, it is just and proper we should be called such. Those who do not claim that name, and bear that name, give plain evidence of not being God's special, foreknown, and forenamed people.

As for the name of the Church, it was called anciently “The Church of Christ;” (Rom. 16:16; 1 Cor. 11:16); “The Church of God;” (1 Thess. 2:14; Acts 20:28; 1 Cor. 1:2; 10:32; 11:22, 15:9; Gal. 1:13; 1 Tim. 3:5); “Churches of the Saints;” (1 Cor. 14:35); “The Church of the First Born;” (Heb. 12:23); and also by various other titles, such as, “Bride,” (Rev. 21:9); “Fold,” (John 10:16); “Lamb's wife;” (Rev. 19:7); also “The Kingdom of God;” “The Kingdom of Christ;” “The kingdom of heaven;”

all relating to and meaning the same thing; just as the names Jesus, Christ, Savior, Redeemer, Son of God, Alpha and Omega, Prince of Peace, Good Shepherd, Holy One, Lamb, Messiah, King of Israel, &c., relate to and mean the same person. In the Book of Mormon the church is called "The Church of the Lamb of God." (1 Nephi 3:46, 48). This, too, relates to Christ's Church in these last days. In the 48 paragraph the prophet says—"I beheld that the Church of the Lamb of God, who were the Saints of God, were also upon all the face of the earth; and their dominions upon the face of the earth were small, because of the wickedness of the great whore whom I saw." In paragraph 46 he says,—“Behold, there are, saye two churches only; the one is the church of the Lamb of God, and the other is the church of the devil; wherefore, whoso belongeth not to the Church of the Lamb of God, belongeth to that great church, which is the mother of abominations; and she is the whore of all the earth.” In Second Nephi 11:3, the church is mentioned as the "Church of God;" so it is in Mosiah 11:11, 12, 17, Alma 1:5; 3:1; Helaman 2:10, and elsewhere. In Book of Nephi 12:2, 3, it is called "The Church of Christ;" and in Book of Mormon 4:4, it is called the "Church of God;" and this last is said prophetically of the church in these last days. No one, we think, will deny that all these titles mean, essentially, one and the same thing, and relate to one and the same church. Verbally—in letter—the names differ; but in meaning, in intention, in essence and reality, they are one and the same.

We conclude, therefore, that God's people in these last days must be known as, and called, Saints; and because these are "the latter days," it is quite correct and proper that they should be called Latter Day Saints; and inasmuch as "the Church of Christ" is really the Church of Jesus Christ, it is quite correct and proper that it should be called the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints—which means, simply, "The Church of Jesus Christ," composed of latter day Saints.

It is a fact that in 1831, and from then till now, there has been in this nation societies, churches, other than the one founded and organized by Joseph the Seer and others, organized under the names and titles of the Church of God, and the Church of Christ, and that they were so entered upon record. This seemed to necessitate another and different title than either of the above, so far as the mere letter is concerned, and hence the title, the "Church of Latter Day Saints" was adopted May 3d, 1834, and the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" at a later date. Personally, the writer would prefer a short, expressive name for the Church, and none better than the "Church of Christ;" but that title seemed impracticable at an early day, and another embracing all the essential features of it was adopted, and under this the church has flourished and been richly endowed and approved of God through the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, whenever and wherever Christ's authorized ministry have built upon the pure, plain gospel found in the standard books of the church. Whatever name the church bears, or might bear, so long as it teaches the pure gospel of Christ, it will be persecuted and maligned, (Dan. 7:21, 25; Rev. 13:7; 16:6; 18:24), by a certain class, as it has been in every gospel age; and they who are ashamed of Christ, or of his gospel, or of his Church, or of his Saints, will be found unworthy of the name Saints, unworthy of a place in Christ's Church, and unworthy of eternal life. We should therefore beware lest pride, ambition, and love of the world and the vain things thereof, blind our minds, corrupt our hearts, and rob us of Christ and his love in this world, and eternal life in the world to come. We should hold to the enduring substance, and let the vanishing shadow go.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, IOWA, Dec. 29th, 1883. I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage. Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884. Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Brothers—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, Geo. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883. Johns & Ordway, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings. Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884. Johns & Ordway: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion. Yours in bonds, Wm. ARD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884. Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor. Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883. Messrs. Johns & Ordway; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours, W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883. Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well. Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. Cole of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Nov. 29th, 1884.

THE election of Mr. Grover Cleveland, the Democratic candidate for President of the United States, for the presidential term commencing the Fourth of next March, is now conceded. His election is being ratified by the party whose candidate he was pretty much everywhere, with shoutings, bonfires, speeches, illuminations and other demonstrations of political joy.

The number of votes by which Mr. Cleveland is chosen chief magistrate though small is decisive. Whatever regret Republicans in and out of public office may feel because of the result, it would be unmanly, and strikingly un-American to deny the official count, or to attempt to frustrate the will of the people by factious fighting, to prevent the proper inauguration of the successful man.

To the Democratic party now coming into power, the situation is a very grave one. This party has charged the one which they are succeeding with having ruled unwisely; with having permitted and fostered corrupt practices in places of public trust; with having sacrificed the interests of the people to partizan greed and party success; with having squandered the public money, and prostituting governmental patronage for the sake of spoils. They have also given pledges that these abuses shall be reformed, and that they will, so far as human wisdom can, give unto the American people an honest administration of public affairs.

If the charges made are true, which it is not the province of the HERALD to affirm, or to deny, it is high time the things complained of should be corrected. The party that makes them coming into power, and into whose hands the reins of National government will fall next March, will stand face to face with the real facts in the case; and upon them will rest the responsibility of correcting whatever wrong may be discovered. The day of party bravado and bluster on either side is now past. The serious work of the successful party will begin when the outgoing one lays aside its livery of office, and turns over the keys of administration. The misty and ill defined lines of theoretical government and national policy of each party will be dispelled by the near contact of necessity for action. If Mr. Cleveland and those men whom he shall select from among the statesmen of his party shall be prepared to devise and carry out the reforms indicated as necessary, aided by circumstances that shall dispel the doubts and fears of the better elements of the losing party, they will be entitled to the commendation of good citizens of all classes. And however it may be disguised, this is the question for solution. Not what the outgoing party has done; but what will the incoming administration do?

An opportunity, such as has seldom occurred in the history of the American people, is now offered to the party so long out of power in the government; and there is room for hope that that party will rise to the height of the occasion; and instead of making their triumph that of a party only, they will make it what their promises would lead the people to expect, the triumph of right over wrong, the success of good measures over bad, to be verified by the experiences of the people governed; the displacement of corrupt public officers, by honest patriots, whose love for their country is superior to their greed for place, power, or pelf.

That the administration of Mr. Cleveland and the party with him will be closely watched is a foregone conclusion. That the Republican party, will as a party, so far as it can within the lines of party politics hamper the now successful opposition, may with some certainty be predicted. That unwise, or merely experimental measures if unsuccessful, or disastrous will be taken advantage of, may also be looked for.

But it is to be hoped that citizens of the commonwealth, whose love for their country is greater than their love for party, or rule, will unite in sustaining rulers and magistrates as such, supporting the officers in the right discharge of their duties, grave and responsible as they must be, with hearty accord; commending the good, with cordiality; and bearing with the erroneous, if any occurs, with patience until it can be righted in proper time and place.

The HERALD may not hurrah with the successful in the elective contest just passed, nor mourn with the defeated; but it can and does counsel the Saints to be lovers of God and of country more than lovers of men, or of pleasures. We may enjoin upon them that the individual citizen may not assert to himself the right to determine what law, or laws are constitutional, and for that reason to receive his support, for the Constitution, the palladium of our political liberties reserves the right of constitutional decision to the court of highest jurisdiction and resort, whose privilege alone it is to say what is the law. Under the safeguards which honest patriotism has created and will continue, all may rest satisfied; but to throw these aside for the decisions of individual judgment is but to open the door for anarchy and political ruin.

The HERALD then on behalf of all, ventures to express the hope that the change in the political policies that may be instituted upon the inauguration of Messrs Grover Cleveland and Thomas A. Hendricks, next March, may result in giving a wise and conservative administration of public affairs to the American people for the next four years; and thereafter whichever party may be successful in after struggles for the supremacy in federal affairs.

WE are in receipt of a letter from Rev. Clark Braden, dated at Emporia, Kansas, November 15th, in which he refers to a debate which Bro. J. M. Terry and the Saints of the Stewartsville Branch, are negotiating with him about.

"I do not care what course you may pursue, I have Mormonism 'corralled.' I propose to take its hide off, tan it, and bury the malodorous carcass in it."

We presume Mr. Braden proposes to do what he threatens above without giving Mormonism the benefit of the clergy, or the privilege of the resurrection.

WE are sometimes asked, When is Christ coming? We answer that we do not know. The time of his coming is to be preceded by certain things called signs. Some of them we think we can discern; but some of them, though apprehended are not in view.

One of the apparently most important of the things to precede his coming is, that there shall be a people prepared for his righteous advent. Is there such a people. We once advertized in the HERALD for the names of 144,000 who could "read their titles clear to mansions in the skies." We received four names. Either the call was premature, the worthy people too modest, or there were 143,996 too few people ready for the coming of the Lord whom they loved.

Perhaps it may be well to remember that the Scriptures aver that "no man knoweth the day nor the hour, no not even the angels in heaven, that God hath set in his power." And although it is said, "There is no need that that day shall overtake you as a thief in the night," it is apparent that the reason why those to whom the statement was made were not to be so overtaken was, not that the day when Christ was to come had been revealed, or could be known from anything then written, but was that by upright lives according to the gospel they were to be ready, let him come when he would.

That it is possible, and perhaps consistent with the economy of the gospel dispensation in the culmination of which the coming of Christ must take place, that the time, day, or hour may be either discovered, or directly revealed, with further directions how to prepare for the then immediate coming. That his coming will not be delayed longer than the preparation is fully accomplished, is safely concluded from the promise that he will come, made by himself: "If I go away, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

It seems to us that the most important question is, am I ready for Christ's coming, as that coming is foreshadowed in the promises made concerning it, and the things to be accomplished at that time; and not the mere question as to its specific time.

While we sincerely hope for the coming of the Lord, and confidently look forward to it, we just as sincerely hope that this dispensation of preparation may be extended until the host of the saved is very much greater than it now is.

BRO. JOHN HAWLEY writes from Dow City, Iowa, that he had baptized Bro. John Young and wife and three of their children, at Galland's Grove, where Bro. Young has long resided as a good consistent citizen. He was a member of the old time church, and entitled to be received on original baptism, but preferred to renew his covenant at his home, where his influence could be more effectual for the truth. We welcome Bro. Young and family, as we do all the men of sterling worth and faith who in former times received the Word of Truth.

Bro. Joseph Luff writes from St. Mary's, Ontario, that Bro. Brown has purchased in that place a church which affords an opportunity for the worship of God, and the preaching of the word under our own "vine and fig tree." He is to speak there, and hopes for success in the city.

There is a new order being started in Independence by Elder Peterson, the same who used to issue the Sword of Justice. The proposition, if we understand it correctly, is to institute the order referred to in Doctrine and Covenants, which is to be established by a deed and covenant that cannot be broken. An elder who has joined with the movement wrote us that a "few had made a covenant by baptism," &c. It is we think further stated that there is to be community of property, or interests, a sort of, "all things common" institution. We were promised full details, but as yet have received none; we suppose for the reason that the time has not been sufficient to mature and print them. We shall give them perusal when we receive them.

There is a revival in some respects of the interest in Elder Joseph Morris, by the publication of a paper at San Francisco, California, by Elder James Dove, called the Olive Branch. In one of the late numbers it is announced that George S. Dove, either a brother or son of James, is the successor of Joseph Morris. The Olive Branch is publishing the revelations of Mr. Morris, as fast as their space will permit. The last number received by us notifies those interested that unless better support is given it by its friends it will be suspended for a time.

By card from Bro. John Shook, of Buchanan, Michigan, dated November 6th, we learn that Hon. J. C. Burrows who so kindly aided brethren Gurley and Kelley and the editor, in Congress a year ago last winter, was re-elected to Congress in his district at the late election. Hon. W. P. Hepburn of the Eighth Iowa, district, also a friend to us on the same occasion, is re-elected for the next congressional term.

Bro. John D. Eckerd, writes from Nanticoke, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, November 10th, 1884, that the branch at that place is trying faithfully to do the duties, and perform the services which their calling to be Saints makes imperative upon them. He writes in a cheerful vein; though there are but few of them.

Brethren John R. Evans, Isaac Phillips and Adam Fletcher, of Lucas, Iowa, Branch, visited Lamoni, November 17th in answer to arrangements for prospecting for coal near the place, made with the citizens of the town and vicinity.

Bro. Joseph Luff was at Egremont, Ontario, October 24th, 1884, cheering the Saints by his teaching.

Bro. J. M. Terry of the Stewartsville, Missouri, Branch, visited Lamoni, November 18th, and staid one night, on business connected with his branch.

The Chicago Burlington and Quincy Railway Company have great energy and dash in their make up. The latest thing in that line is the running of a train from Chicago to St. Louis between sundown and daylight. A man can do business in Chicago, or St. Louis all day, leave either city at 8:30 in the evening in a Pullman Sleeping car, or a car furnished with reclining chairs, go to sleep when he chooses and wake up in the city at the other end of the route, fresh for a day's work in that city. The train goes by the name of The Owl Express.

THE Saints of the Lamoni Branch were invited to a Bee on Saturday, November 8th, for the purpose of grading about the new church. At eight o'clock on that morning they began to come on the grounds, and soon busy men with teams, wagons, plows, scrapers, spades and shovels were earnestly engaged in work.

The Mite Society spread an ample collation in the chapel the Saints have been using for the last three years, and a merrier, happier set never sat down to dinner than ate that day.

There were forty-three teams and over a hundred men, with a "smart sprinkle" of boys at the "bee," and a fine job of work was done. Not only did the Saints turn out, but their good neighbors came also, and lent cheerful and willing hands to the toil, laboring with a will for the end had in view.

The one day was not enough, so with unanimous consent they assembled again on the 15th to complete the job. And never did men work together to better advantage than did these busy men. They came from every direction and went at the work in hand earnestly, as if interested in the object to be accomplished, which indeed they were.

There were no drones, and no croakers. All were of one heart and one mind, moving with one will and one impulse to beautify and render attractive the plot of ground on which the house of worship stands. The work began upon each day about eight in the morning and continued till quite late in the afternoon, and on the second day as on the first, the Sisters of the Mite Society and others provided a good dinner for the busy workers to sit down to.

Thus in two days' time by a joining of labor the Saints accomplished easily what it would have taken weeks for one, two, or three to have done. And besides this, the excellent harmony and spirit of fellowship that were exhibited during the work, were in themselves worth the seeing and experiencing.

It was remarked that even the animals seemed to partake of the general desire to be busy and useful.

A splendid roadway from the principal street to the front of the house was constructed of the earth from the building. The removing of this earth has greatly improved the general appearance of the building, which before that looked too low.

The flooring is being put down and the windows will be put in probably this week, which will make the building safe for the winter.

The Brockton, Massachusetts, Daily Enterprise, of November 10th, gives the following notice of the meetings of the Saints in that place:

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, called Latter Day Saints, closed their two days' meeting last evening. The meetings commenced at two o'clock on Saturday. Representatives of the church were present from Boston, Providence, Fall River and New Bedford. Elders John Gilbert and M. H. Bond, missionaries of the society, were present and preached during the sessions. Last evening Elder John Smith, the presiding elder of the Massachusetts district conference, preached from the text, "What a man sows that also shall he reap."

The meetings were fairly attended, and were very satisfactory to the church here. The society desires the public to know that the church of which they are a branch is not a part or faction of Utah Mormonism, but is the deadly opponent of that system of organized iniquity in the west. They are fully in harmony with the institutions of the country, and believe and preach the gospel of Jesus Christ as contained in the New Testament, and Jesus Christ as the only name given under heaven whereby men can be saved. The society holds meetings every Sunday, day and evening, and would be glad to have the public attend, and hear before they judge.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. D. S. Mills writes from San Diego, California:

"All well, fine weather, closing an excellent series of meetings here; good spirit manifest. Bro. Burton is here with us, but expects to start shortly for Australia via Honolulu. Elders Holt and Thompson are just off again for their missionary work in San Diego county, where some are awaiting baptism and many wishing to hear truth. I feel to thank our Father for excellent liberty in declaring the word of life."

MISS KATE FIELD is of the opinion that so far as Utah Mormonism is concerned that it is time that the axe was laid unto the root of the tree. The Boston Daily Globe for November 15th has the following:

"THE TIME FOR THE AXE."

MISS KATE FIELD ASSERTS SOME EMPHATIC VIEWS ON MORMONISM—A YEAR AMONG POLYGAMISTS.

"How long does it take to go to Utah?" "That depends," said Miss Kate Field in reply. "I did not go direct, as I wanted to see the West; consequently it took me three months and a half to reach Salt Lake City, and five weeks to return. On going out I tarried in Colorado, which is simply glorious in scenery, enterprise, mining, and hospitality. On coming back, I visited all the old Mormon settlements in Missouri, Illinois, Ohio and New York, and obtained an immense deal of valuable information from eye witnesses to the birth of Mormonism. By the way, in Independence, Missouri, I met Joseph Smith, Jun., and Alexander Smith, sons of the Mormon prophet, and I found them to be good men and citizens, and generally respected. They belong to the anti-polygamy branch of the Mormon church, and are fighting the revelation on plural marriage with all their might. I think they are doing good work. I met half a dozen men who had known Joseph, the prophet, well, and never in my life enjoyed myself so much in traveling as while unearthing the relics of the only brand-new religion this country has invented. If Utah Mormonism were only a religion it would be curious as a phase of humanity—and nothing more. It is its crimes from social and political standpoints that renders its crimes dangerous to republican institutions. The East does not realize this fact, nor did I until accidents led me to 'Zion.' Destiny kept me there until I might have been a citizen of the Territory, and—just think of it!—voted, had I registered my name at the proper time and place.

"It is a crime nowadays to be in earnest about anything. Knowing this, and also the way in which a certain social element will denounce me for lecturing upon Mormonism at all, you may be very sure that I should not have devoted a year of my life to the most astounding anomaly in this country, had it not impressed me profoundly. It is infinitely more agreeable for me to entertain the public, with eyes and ears in London, than to horrify with Mormon polygamy and treason. It takes infinitely less vitality out of one to laugh and be merry than to wax indignant over human wrongs and the criminal negligence of our government. But if Bostonians are true to their traditions, they will appreciate my position and not forget that here the death knell of slavery was sounded. 'The twin relic of barbarism' thrives in Utah like a green-bay tree, and is extending its roots over the West. The time for the axe has come."

WE learn by letter from Bro. John Eames, from Denver, Colorado, that brother and sister Robert Standing were murdered at their ranch near Pine Grove, Colorado, on Sunday night, November 9th, the murder having been committed for the purpose of robbery. From the Tribune Reporter of November 15th, sent by Bro. Eames, we clip the following; and will await news from brother James Kemp, who conducted the funeral services, Sunday, the 16th.

But one man, it is thought, committed the horrible crime. Only the tracks of one man were to be discovered about the cabin. The assassin was armed with a shotgun loaded with slugs, and a 44 caliber revolver. He knocked at the door, so the story goes, and Standing, who was reading a copy of the Saints' Herald, a paper which he had received that day, opened the door, with the paper in hand. As he opened the door he received a charge from the shotgun which struck him squarely in the breast. The slugs pierced the heart and death must have been instantaneous. The murdered man reeled and fell in a stooping posture beside the bed and expired. Then the assassin fired three bullets from the revolver into the prostrate man's back.

Mrs. Standing had retired, and the presumption is that her husband was reading the paper aloud. On the shooting of her husband, she attempted to get out of the bed, but as she arose the assassin placed the muzzle of the shotgun against her breast and fired, killing her instantly. The gun must have been almost touching her person, for her breast and clothing were scorched and powder-burned. Not satisfied with his bloody work, the assassin then fired a shot from his revolver into the woman's head, as a bullet was found to have entered the right side of the head, just above the ear, and passing through to the other side.

The assassin then began a search for the money for which he undoubtedly committed the deed. It was well known that Standing always carried a sum of money on his person. The result of the robbery has not yet been made public, but it is understood that evidence was taken at the inquest which clearly shows that robbery was the motive of the murder. A wallet was found in Standing's pocket containing one dollar in silver and a few cents in change, but a roll of money which he was seen to produce during Sunday afternoon was missing. The assassin then escaped.

The discovery of the crime was not made until Wednesday morning, or three days after the murder. Mr. E. J. McReet, a neighbor, eighty years of age, went to Standring's place on a business visit. The door of the cabin was open, and failing to get any response to a rap, he peered in to the door. He says that he saw at once that Mrs. Standring was dead, and thought, from the kneeling position of Mr. Standring, that he was praying. Mr. McReet stepped to his side and laid his hand upon his shoulder. He was horrified to find the touch cold and his neighbor dead. He at once ran to the neighbors and gave the alarm.

Mr. and Mrs. Standring were last seen alive at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, neighbors, on Sunday afternoon at about five o'clock. They had been to church during the afternoon and had stopped at Ellis' on their way home to pay a short visit. James Kemp the elder of the church was also present, and before leaving for home he paid the elder five dollars as his tithings to the church. He took the money from his pocket-book, and those around him at the time say they saw a large number of bills, thus proving that the assassin took that much money at least. At the time that Standring and wife left to go home, Standring remarked that they would call again on Tuesday on their way to Denver, in which city they expected to make their future home.

Mr. and Mrs. Standring belonged to the anti-polygamous church of Latter Day Saints. There are a large number of such believers in the Standring neighborhood, and they had built a church and were prosperous. Standring was an officer in the church, and he and his wife were firm believers in this faith. They were highly respected by the congregation, and consequently there was much regret and indignation among the followers of the church when the news of the murder reached them. Yesterday they held services over the remains, and the singing and praying and hallelujahs were kept up so long that it was next to impossible for the relatives to get possession of the remains in time to bring them to Denver on the train.

While the verdict of the Coroner's jury is kept secret, yet it is known to be a fact that those men came to the conclusion that a certain individual, whose name is locked up in the jury room, committed the deed, and they have evidence in their possession which will convict. The person suspected was seen in the neighborhood at the time of the murder, but has been missing since that time. It was learned that he came to Denver, but he disappeared from the city. His apprehension is expected soon.

Immigration to Canada has materially fallen off during the first ten months of 1884, when the arrivals were 138,386, as compared with 163,485 for the corresponding period in 1883. Of this year's arrivals 80,510 settled in Canada and 57,876 passed through to the States.

Chief Brooks of the Secret Service thinks there are to-day in the hands of counterfeiters nearly 300,000 new spurious $10 and $20 notes produced within the year. The percentage of circulation of counterfeit money in 1884, however, has been the smallest since the "coney" industry began to flourish.

Correspondence.

VIOLA, Linn Co., Iowa,

November 12th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith: The second day after the Reunion found us at Rhodes, to attend the White-Scull debate. It was carried out as per notice in Herald, and we think was productive of good. Our associate, I. N. White, acquitted himself well, maintaining the cause in his hands with ease and pleasure. His late research of the work of the Bible Revision Committee enabled him to give many new and interesting features relative to the written word and the great necessity to the perpetuity of revelation. On the mode and design of baptism he cited so many authors, and all of them pedo-baptist, that opponent, audience and all, were surprised. These, added to the Bible evidence, made overwhelming testimony. Rev. Scull only cited Dr. Sumner, he being on Rev. Scull's side. The contrast between the lines of argument was of vast width.

The case was very similar with the second question. From this and the consequent results, we had the privilege of listening to such exhortations each evening as is common in protracted meetings. At one juncture Rev. Scull expressed hopes to yet convert the Saints, but lost it all ere the next session closed. He admitted much of ground directly opposite to the negative of the question, possibly thinking that the easier way out; but rather than admit that the utterings of Enoch were reduced to writing, as per Jude, he, Jude, was declared void of inspiration; quoting from a work forged by the Jews, and purporting to be Enoch's prophecies. Rev. Scull was more gentlemanly than several who have been met in discussion.

The Sunday following we presented the word at Cambridge, where Bro. Chandler rents a hall, that his community may be warned. Bro. McDowell spoke once for us. The sojourn with Bro. Chandler was pleasant.

On 31st of October, in company with Bro. A. White, I landed at this immortalized spot of earth (not exactly in the sense the city of Enoch was immortalized) to look after the interests of the work. We readily found that it was expedient to desist from public work till the election was over. We visited, and read the Braden-Kelley Debate, and found it all we hoped for, and based our conclusions on a careful reading rather than the eulogies of the brethren.

Our return here was different from former ones, for "the stony ground" that seed sometimes falls on was "apparent;" some of the hands that greeted us with warmth once, were—well, you know how! Those who at one juncture talked of building a church for the use of the Latter Day Saints had grown "faint." All of this failed to "surprise us." We thought of Christ at a time when treated similarly and who said to his own, "Will ye go also?" We were willing to believe that the servant was not greater than his Lord. Those of the faith here were "firm and hopeful" for the future, notwithstanding the strong persecution they have been subjected to. Others also have a love for the work, and we still think that more sheep will be found. Held four services the 7th, 8th and 9th, and the master of the vineyard forgot us not.

We are informed (seemingly authentic) that in the vicinity of Springville there had been a mob organized, and some of the timber old "experienced" vigilantes, with the Rev. Pye as main-spring. This, with continued threats since our first visit, alarmed some of our friends in our behalf. We have been in more genial climes, but stood our ground and were permitted to occupy in peace, for which we feel devoutly thankful.

On the 10th made a pleasant visit at Springville with the "Jordan friends," whose kindness in a time of need, coming eight miles for us at our call by telephone, when ill in body last winter, with other kind acts, will "never fade in memory." Sold them a Braden-Kelley debate, and presented the good seed of the kingdom in a social way. Mr. and Mrs. Bingham of that place have also stood by and defended us, despite the strong opposition they were met with. We have been reassured of late that the lone sheep of the Master's fold are cared for. At Viola we are kindly cared for by Mr. and Sr. Hart, Mr. and Sr. Newlin and friends. We purpose visiting at Sr. George's, who is old in the work and years, and lives near Monticello; doing what may open to us. Return here for 21st, 22d and 23d, (as we can not have house for consecutive services), hoping Bro. Banta will meet us here, as we have written him. Bro. White will then return home, Bro. Banta and self going to Randalia, Fayette county, Oelwin, Bremer county, and as openings may occur. We enjoy assisting in the pruning of the vineyard though we can not accomplish all, apparently, that we sometimes anticipate or hope.

Your brother in Christ,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

GAINES, Orleans Co., N. Y.,

November 6th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am still at this place, where last I wrote you. I baptized another of Bro. Minthorns family last Sabbath, his youngest son, a young man in his nineteenth year. Think to go on my way to Greenwood, Steuben county soon. Cold weather seems to be getting along here now. It blowed hard yesterday with snow.

Yours in bonds,

C. G. LANPHEAR.

GOOD INTENT, Atchison Co., Kan.,

November, 1884.

Dear Bro. Joseph:—Our conference is over, and we had a splendid good time. Bro. Kinneman and two sons and one daughter, and a Sr. Lewis from Stewartville, Mo., were with us. The singing was grand; Sr. Lewis playing the organ. Bro. James B. Jarvis, from Scranton, was with us, and preached on Saturday evening in his able manner; telling of the love of God, and showing us the plan whereby we can obtain his love. Bro. Kinneman preached for us on Sunday morning and evening, with such eloquence and alacrity, that the attention of the audience was quite under his control; for their eyes were placed on him with all attention, to hear every word that dropped from his lips, which came with such ease and plainness, that every one could understand. The afternoon meeting for prayer and testimony was led by brethren Parker and Williams. The power of the Spirit of the Master was with us. Before the close a lady stood up and stated she wanted to be baptized. After this meeting some that attended our meetings said the preaching was splendid, and the singing lovely. So the work goes on in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Bro. Kinneman has partly promised to pay us another visit. There are many out north and west who have never heard the gospel as yet; so here is plenty of work for a good live elder to help us do.

I remain your brother in the gospel of Jesus Christ,
DANIEL MUNNS.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas,
October 31st, 1884.

Beloved Saints, Lovers of the Truth:—I am deeply interested in the promotion of this glorious work, and being now in my ninety-first year, I am no longer able to travel, as formerly, to lift my voice to men. The next best thing I can do is to strive to prompt others to duty. A greater responsibility never rested on men, in any age of the world, than now rests upon Latter Day Saints. And, first, the present salvation of the church depends upon its diligence in keeping the commandments of God, collectively and individually. In accordance with our diligence, as sure as the Lord lives, so will we be blessed.

Having said so much by way of introduction, I will call your attention to the 100th section and second paragraph Doctrine and Covenants. "But verily I say unto you, that I have decreed a decree which my people shall realize, inasmuch as they hearken from this very hour, unto the counsel which I, the Lord, their God shall give unto them. Behold, they shall, for I have decreed it, begin to prevail against mine enemies from this very hour, and by hearkening to observe all the words which I, the Lord their God shall speak unto them, they shall never cease to prevail until the kingdoms of the world are subdued under my feet; and the earth is given unto the Saints, to possess it forever and ever. But inasmuch as they keep not my commandments, and hearken not to observe all my words, the kingdoms of the world shall prevail against them, for they were set to be a light unto the world, and to be the saviors of men; and inasmuch as they are not the saviors of men, they are as salt that has lost its savor, and is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under the foot of men." All members of this church that lived in the time of the first settling of the Saints in Nauvoo till the walls of the Temple were raised, know to a certainty that a people could not be more blessed of the Lord, both spiritually and temporally than were the Saints in that time. Suffice it to say their prosperity surprised the world. And why did they not continue to prosper? Because they were not careful to keep the commandments of God. We have their example before us and why not profit by it? Oh that we may never forget for a moment wherein our strength lieth! The text reads: "And by hearkening to observe all the words which I, the Lord, their God shall speak unto them." A part of a meal of food will not strengthen us so much as a whole meal will. The Lord says, "You shall live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." He that is perfect in wisdom knew exactly what was necessary to purify and prepare his Saints to abide his presence. There are no non-essentials in the commands of God. Jesus says, "Be ye perfect even as your Father who is in heaven is perfect."—Matt. 5th chapter and closing verse. If any thing short of that state of perfection would have secured our salvation, Jesus would certainly have informed us; and as all Saints have an ardent desire for the promotion of this glorious work we wish them to remember that it is God's work, and although he makes use of men to do it, they can do nothing of themselves. Says the prophet, "Surely shall one say In the Lord have I righteousness and strength." Paul says, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me;" and Jesus says, "Without me you can do nothing;" again, "Abide in me and I in you; As the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye except ye abide in me."—John 15: 4.

Beloved brethren, our spiritual life, strength, and usefulness depend on our diligence in keeping the commandments of God. The Psalmist says "thy commandments are exceeding broad, extending to every thought," but Jesus sums up the whole duty of the Saints, which they owe to God, or man, in a few words in the 15th chapter of John, and 12th, 13th, and 14th verses: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

Yours in Christ,
JOHN LANDERS.

WEST FORK, Crawford Co., Ind.,
November 12th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Since writing to you I have been laboring in the ministry, as my circumstances would permit, on Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday nights, in Crawford and Perry counties; and as I would like for the people of this district to know how the work is prospering thought I would tell them through the columns of the Herald. In September there was a rumor came down into our township from Sterling township, that there had been some Mormon Elders preaching polygamy; as an old lady said, when Bro. Blair first visited southern Indiana: "Just from Ute, just from Ute;" so we went to see whether they were really Salt Lakers or not. We got there very late in the evening and sure enough they were just from Utah, but had left six days before we got there; had preached four or five discourses. They had been praising up the glories of Utah, and saying that all of the writing was lies against them, and no man was compelled to take more than one wife if the first wife objected; so all of the force about this celestial law hinges on the first wife; if she is willing, all is lovely; but if not, God is made to submit to her. What an idea! but Elder Greenwood taught it in Crawford county, Indiana; he was one of the missionaries from Salt Lake Zion. We got the use of the school-house and posted our meetings, and spoke three times, tried to show the difference between us and them. We felt our weakness but God was with us. On Sunday night we felt that it was good to be a Saint, if we were misjudged and persecuted, (through those that claimed the name, but had disgraced the profession). They voted for me to come back; so on October 1st, we went back and talked to the people three times more; and the trustee sent word, No more preaching by the Mormons in that school-house.

The Josephites do not receive any persecution; oh no! But through the kindness of a United Brethren's class leader we got their church house, and spoke three times in it, and have an appointment for the first Sunday in next month. Some expressed themselves in favor of our claims. There are quite a number of the Christian order there.

On the third of September we went to hear one of the Christian order preach at our little town, Maryetta. He gave our faith an airing, so we told him we expected to be there the second Sunday in October, and invited him to be there. We went, but he didn't come. The house was full. We tried to show the primitive order of Christ's Church. We had very good liberty and the people are investigating. So you see brethren and Elders in the district, how the work is here in this part. We desire some one to come and labor here. Will some one come to the rescue? O come! for God is working with the people.

Yours,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

UPPER NEWPORT,
November 3d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—The Newport Branch has been blest. We met in conference on the 6th of September, and felt refreshed by hearing the truth set forth by Bro. Sheehy. He spent some time, and had some good meetings, but, it being a hurrying time with the farmers, the meetings were not very well attended; but he left a good many friends outside of the Saints, that would like for him, or some other Elder, to come again. We feel weak, but when opposition comes it makes me feel stronger, for then I know from what source my strength comes. We often feel blest when meeting with the Saints. Our motto is to sow the seed whenever we can, praying the God of heaven will water it, that it may spring up in some heart, and bring forth fruit to the glory of God.

Since Bro. Sheehy left, the people, especially the Baptist friends, have been working hard, in their way, by publishing ridicule through the Christian Messenger. My prayer is that they may see the error of their ways, and accept the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. We know that this doctrine is of God, because we have done the will of the Father. Jesus is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. He speaks to his people as he did in days of old. I can say it is good to be a Saint in latter days.

Your sister in Christ,
MRS. J. C. BURGESS.

PERSIA, Iowa,
November 12th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—In order to obviate the necessity of writing to so many individuals, with your permission, I will say to those who are and have been expecting me to visit them at various points in my field of labor, that I am doing the very best I can to meet their expectations, I am laboring constantly and faithfully; striving to do my whole duty to God and man. I am having good audiences and great liberty of the Spirit in speaking; am to speak to-night at Portsmouth, and move on from point to point, as shall appear to be for the best interests of the cause.

To the dear Saints of the String Prairie District, I can only say, Have patience; I am coming as soon as practicable. I have greatly enjoyed the society of the Saints and old time friends since I came to this section, and am vain enough to believe that my labors here will not be in vain.

O my brethren of the ministry, how can we afford to be idle and slothful in such a glorious enterprise? What a grand and noble work is ours! as for myself, I love the work and dearly love to present and defend it, under any and all circumstances; and it is not without a feeling of dread and regret, that I look forward to the time, in the near future, when I shall have to throw down the weapons of warfare and engage in other pursuits; but whatever comes, knowing this to be the work of God, I shall ever pray that he will bless and strengthen every instrumentality employed for its progress and final triumph. It will suffice to say, without waste of time and space in giving details, that I am doing the best I can to meet the expectations of the church and the requirements of God. Kind regards to all the Saints. Do not forget your weak brother, in bonds,
B. V. SPRINGER.

EAST TAWAS, Michigan,
November 12th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Soon after writing to you in July, I went to Canada, to labor for a while, and upon arriving in Grey county, and laboring some among the Saints there, I went into the township of Proton, where Brn. C. Scott and J. A. McIntosh formerly had been, and left an impression upon the people not yet forgotten. I delivered twenty-two discourses there, and baptized two; and I think there is a number of others there near the kingdom. From there I went to a place called Riverview, preached a few times and organized a branch to be known as the Riverview Branch. From there I went to Alliston to attend the London District Conference. Was pleased to meet with Elders Lake, Luff, and McIntosh; also with others of the Saints, with whom we spent an enjoyable time during conference. I felt glad in listening to the reports of the ministry, and the testimony of the Saints there. The work is taking a new impetus in Canada, and the present outlook bids fair for the prosperity of the work there. After conference I went back to Proton and Egremont, where Bro. Joseph Luff soon joined me. I was very sorry to part with him, as I enjoyed his company, and was much pleased with the able and forceable manner in which he presented the gospel of Christ; but as the time was at hand for the convening of the Northern Michigan District Conference, and as I was desirous of attending that, I left loved ones behind, and took train for Vassar, where I found a number of the brethren assembled in the capacity of a prayer and testimony meeting. Here we found Brn. W. H. Kelley, M. H. Forscutt, G. E. Deuel, J. J. Cornish, and a number of other Elders and friends with whom we were pleased to meet. I enjoyed this conference well, and was pleased with the unity and harmony that prevailed throughout the entire session. After this conference I came here to East Tawas, and found the Saints all well and alive to the work. Since coming here I have baptized twelve, and others are "almost persuaded." Bro. E. Delong is here with me now; we intend to remain in this place until the first of next week; we will then cross the bay, down into Sanilac and Huron counties, where I expect to remain until about the 1st of January; and then I expect to go to Canada again. I am desirous of doing all the good I can to help build up the cause of Christ, and I ask the prayers of the Saints that I may always stand in the discharge of my duty.

Yours in bonds,
W. J. SMITH.

It also contains special privileges for commercial travelers; reforms the Cuban customs regulations concerning fines and the responsibility of vessels for errors when fraud has not been proved; and it contains, besides, a stipulation against the imposition of new export taxes. A clause, not in any of our treaties, admits from Cuba and Porto Rico free of duty, sugar not above No. 16 Dutch standard; molasses, coffee, dye and other goods; cacao, fruits, vegetables, and some other products: tobacco, leaf, manufactured at a reduction of 50 per cent of the present tariff rates, but the tobacco is to pay internal revenue taxes. These concessions on the part of the United States are in exchange for United States products to be admitted in Cuba and Porto Rico free of duty, of which the following is a partial list: All kinds of meat, lard, butter, cheese, fish, grains, rice, milk, flours, (wheat flour excepted), vegetables, fruits (fresh, dried, and canned), wood, lumber, window and door framing, etc.; all kinds of cooperage, boxes, sacks for packing all articles, and furniture of ordinary woods; all kinds of articles in cast-iron, heavy articles in wrought-iron and steel; all kinds of tools and instruments; all kinds of machines for agriculture, the arts, industries, including locomotives for railway stock; shipbuilding materials, and almost all products in the raw and bulk, as cotton, wood, stone, earths, minerals, and

Gen. Briere de l'Isle, commander of the French forces in Tonquin, telegraphs Le Paris that the Chinese made a vigorous attack on the French gunboats Eclair and Trombe as they were proceeding along the River Claire after revictualing the garrison at Tu-yen-Quan. There was a sharp frost again last night in France. It is believed that it will have beneficial effect in repressing the cholera. There were thirty deaths from cholera in Paris yesterday. All but five occurred in the hospitals. Up to noon to-day there were eight deaths, five in the hospitals and three outside. Three fresh cases of sickness and two deaths have occurred at Tolulo, which are believed to be due to the cholera. At Beniopa there have been three fresh cases and two deaths. Judge Utt, in the Circuit Court at Dubuque, Ia., rendered a decision yesterday sustaining the defendants' demurrers to a petition by the Citizens' League for an injunction to restrain certain saloonkeepers from selling liquor, on the ground that such sale was a nuisance and opposed to the State law. In his decision Judge Utt holds that under the Prohibitory law there must be a conviction before an injunction can issue, and that to grant the petition would be to deprive the defendants of the right of trial by jury.

At today's session of the National Cattlemen's Convention at St. Louis, Mo., a committee was appointed to confer with a similar committee appointed by the Chicago Live-Stock Convention. A constitution and by-laws of the proposed association were adopted, and the body will hereafter be known as the National Live-Stock Association of America, its general object being to promote the interests of the live-stock industry. After a long debate a resolution was adopted praying Congress to open a National trail from the Red River northward to the boundary line between the United States and British America. It was also decided to ask Congress for an appropriation to aid in the suppression of pleuro-pneumonia.

Information from Perseyville, McDowell Co., W. V., near the Virginia border, gives a frightful account of the ravages of the so-called "cholera" in the extreme southwestern counties of Virginia and adjoining territory of Kentucky. Making every allowance for exaggeration, the loss of life has been appalling, while the condition of the survivors is terrible in the extreme. No rain has fallen in the Cumberland Mountains, in which the infected district is situated, for four months; the drouth entailing not only an almost total failure of crops, but cutting off the supply of water over a wide area. Difficulty was experienced in obtaining water for stock in localities as early as the middle of August, but no actual suffering among the inhabitants occurred until toward the end of September, when the ordinary sources of supply having for the most part failed, the mountaineers were compelled in order to sustain life to obtain water for household purposes from mineral springs in the mountains or from stagnant pools in the beds of the streams. A persistent use of this water soon developed a peculiar disease as deadly as Asiatic cholera in its nature, which has ever since raged with terrible fatality over half a dozen counties in the two States, the loss of life thus far being variously estimated at from 400 to 800.

Among children and adults well up in years the mortality has been greatest, but no class has been exempt. In a number of instances, especially along the forks of Mileans Creek, a tributary of the Big Sandy, and in the Valley of Powell's River, emptying into the Tennessee, entire families have perished, while in numerous other cases but one or two members of a household survive. Few recover from the disorder, from 60 to 80 per cent of those attacked dying, which may be accounted for by the fact that pure water is still unobtainable and proper food and medical attendance can not be had. The drying up of the streams has necessitated the stoppage of the numerous small gristmills along the mountain valleys and the population for the most part appears to be in the most abject want and misery. The locality is almost inaccessible to the outside world, there being no railroad within 100 miles, and the obtaining of reliable news is very difficult; but even should the matter be greatly magnified the calamity is still one of most serious nature and calls for prompt action by the authorities or the public.

Heavy rains in the eastern provinces of Spain have caused serious floods.

Nov. 19th.—A fire at Patterson, Pa., destroyed eight houses, involving a loss of $60,000.

There have been very many fires of late at Mobile, Alabama. One half of the total number has been of incendiary origin. So great has become the trouble that insurance companies are enforcing protective clauses and some threaten to withdraw altogether. During last week the police obtained clews and Saturday and today arrested two colored men and Anthony Koppensmith, engineer of Fire Company No. 2. The latter is charged with being a dangerous and suspicious character, and is said to have had relations with men who are believed to be incendiaries. It is stated that one of the negroes has made a confession, upon the strength of which Koppensmith was arrested. Loss by fire at New Hope, Ky., $53,500. New York City, $30,000.

Toisnot, N. C., was practically destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Loss, $25,000. A fire at Potsdam, N. Y., did $15,000 damage, and a loss of $20,000 was inflicted in the destruction of the Universalist Church at Norwood, Mass.

Nov. 20.—A fire at Haverhill, Mass., destroyed a hotel and several stores, involving a total loss of about $25,000. A girl was fatally injured in jumping from the hotel windows, and the inmates generally experienced very narrow escapes.

A Boston ship—the Alert—bound from New York for Shanghai, and carrying 400,000 gallons of kerosene oil, was struck by lightning near Pernambuco, and burned. The officers and crew were saved.

Frequent fires having recently occurred at Alexandria, Egypt, it is feared they are the work of incendiaries. A cotton warehouse burned yesterday, and 362 bales of cotton were destroyed. At seven o'clock last night, when the Democratic procession was forming for a demonstration at Hickman, Ky., a rocket struck in the furniture factory and set it on fire. All efforts to extinguish the flames were unavailing, and they spread until the whole city from the elevator upward was destroyed.

Extensive forest fires are raging in Mitchell County, beyond the Blue Ridge in North Carolina, in the extreme north-western part of the State. Immense quantities of timber and fencing have been destroyed. A number of houses have been swept away. The fires burn night and day. No rain has fallen for many weeks. Loss by fire at Bloomington, Ill., $3,000.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

There were two hundred and eleven failures in the United States and twenty-five in Canada during the last seven days, an increase of twenty over the preceding week.

Refusing to reinstate a discharged workman precipitated a strike by the entire force of the Hoyt shoe factory at Haverhill, Mass.

One hundred and ninety-one new National banks were chartered in the United States during the year, adding a net aggregate of about $15,000,000 to the National banking capital of the country. During the period named eleven National banks have failed.

United States pension payments for November will probably amount to $13,000,000.

Operations have been resumed at the Elba Iron Works, Pittsburg. The Sharon (Pa.) Mills, employing five hundred men, have closed down, however, owing to a lack of orders.

TRASHY LITERATURE.

THE INJURY IT IS CAUSING AMONG THE YOUTH OF THE COUNTRY.

"It is one of the greatest obstacles in our way in the work of reforming the newsboys," said the matron of the Newsboys' Home, yesterday, in speaking of sensational literature. "I talk to the boys about this class of reading matter, but it has very little effect. A newsboy has more or less of an air of romance hanging about him, and he is naturally of an adventurous disposition. It has the effect of blunting the perception and rendering the boys almost incapable of learning anything. We have great trouble in beating knowledge into the heads of pupils who are in the habit of reading sensations. They are thinking of some imaginary bloodthirsty hero when they should be thinking of matter of fact. Then I find it also has the effect of robbing the reader of a fixity of purpose.

"I have learned lately of two very interesting cases where boys came near being ruined from reading this vile stuff. Whenever a boy runs away from home his parents come here to look for him. Not long ago a gentleman came here in search of his son. He said the boy, who was sixteen years old, had left his home and no trace of him could be found. The lad took all his clothes with him. After hunting the whole city over the parent found the boy had purchased a ticket for Louisville, Ky., where he was followed and brought home. He went there expecting to secure a position with Sells Brothers' circus. He said he had been reading a story about a boy who ran away and joined the same circus. The hero of the tale had become a great acrobat, and finally eloped with a Louisville belle. The Philadelphia boy thought he could be successful in the same way.

"Another case of a lad who ran away happened recently. The boy had a luxurious home in Trenton. His father had several times punished him for reading dime novels. The boy was in the habit of spending all his time in the stable reading. When the father found out the reason why he spent his time in the stable, he gave his son a sound flogging and compelled the young man to remain in the house. In a few days afterward the boy disappeared and was traced to Philadelphia. He was found selling papers on the street. He had been reading 'Bob, the Philadelphia Bootblack,' which pictured the life of a street urchin a very happy one.

"When I was in Leadville," said William H. Wilson, "I frequently saw some sad results of dime-novel reading. Leadville and the characters located there were favorite subjects for sensational novel-writers. The result was that many a boy belonging to good families in the east was attracted there. I remember one boy named Stigeos, belonging to a prominent Buffalo family, who came to the famous mining camp. He was just about nineteen years old. He had a little money when he arrived, but it did not last long. He became a waiter in a low dive, and finally developed into a faro-bank dealer and a thief, Stigeos landed in jail, charged with theft, and in some way his father heard of him, and came to Leadville. He eventually returned to Buffalo, but has become an outcast. He often said he came to Leadville to meet St. Louis Charley, the hero of the dime-novel.

"In Kansas City," continued Mr. Wilson, "when it was the scene of the exploits of the James boys, Chief of Police Speer arrested a lad who ran away from Chicago for the purpose of joining the James gang. The boy had actually become insane from reading these novels."

"No one sees more dime-novel cranks than I do," said a conductor of a Fifth street car. "The district messenger-boys are about the most inveterate novel-readers you can imagine. I often carry some of these boys a mile farther than they want to go. They settle down in the corner of the car and become so intensely interested in the yellow-back books that they forget even where they are."

"I have other passengers just as bad as the messengers. Every day I see girls who look as though they had lost good sense reading books with the rankest kind of sensational titles. It's funny to watch them. They try to hold the book so that no one can see what the character of it is, but they soon get so interested that they attract the other passengers' attention."

"No one has better reason to abuse these novels than I have," said a clerk in a large retail store situated on Chestnut street. "Every cash-boy in our establishment spends half his time in poring over the adventures of murderous heroes. We are constantly discharging boys for reading this class of books, but still they persist in it. The habit gets as firm a hold on them as drunkenness does on some men. At noon-time, when they are supposed to be at their meals you can find them out in the alley reading. Now we have here ten boys, and they exchange novels. Each boy buys a book every week, so you see their reading costs very little."—Philadelphia News.

A MANUSCRIPT OF 1833,

FOUND AMONG THE PAPERS OF JOSEPH SMITH
THE SEER.—AUTHOR UNKNOWN.

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT.

WISDOM is such a knowledge of revelation as to give a correct understanding of God. James says, 3:17, It is first, pure; second, peaceable; third, gentle, or easy to be entreated; fourth, full of mercy, or good fruits; fifth, without partiality; sixth, without hypocrisy.

First pure. The first grand constituent of wisdom is purity; from which we would understand St. James to say, that those persons possessed of this wisdom, will show by the purity of their lives that they are possessed of this principle. To the pure in heart there are many precious promises. They shall see God. Matt. 5:6. They shall abide in God's tabernacle and dwell in his holy hill; even he "that walketh uprightly and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart." They shall be free from error and falsehood. Psalms 15:1, 2; John 8:32. As many are skeptical, in the present day, that it is the privilege of man to attain to this purity, we will mention two in the Apostolic age, of whom our Savior and the Scriptures bear testimony. The first is Nathaniel, of whom our Savior said, "Behold an Israelite indeed in whom there is no guile." John 1:47. As purity in an accountable being can not spring from ignorance, we must necessarily suppose that Nathaniel was a man of wisdom as well as purity. The second is Stephen; of whom it is said, He was full of faith and the Holy Ghost.—Acts 6:3. "Neither were they able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake." Acts 6:10. "And to whom, for the testimony he bore to the truth, our Savior revealed himself." Acts 7:56.

The second constituent of wisdom is peace. Those possessed of this wisdom will be peaceable; to whom there are also many promises. Our Savior blesses them and says, "They shall be called the children of God." Matt. 5:9. St. Paul exhorts his Hebrew brethren to follow peace with all men. Heb. 12:4. The fruit of righteousness is sown in peace. James 3:18. Peace is the gift of Christ. "My peace I give unto you." John 14:27. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." Psalms 37:37. "The peace of God shall not depart from his Israel." Isaiah 54:10, 13. Peace, means connecting into one. As war divides families and individuals from each other, so peace restores them to a state of unity, giving them one object and one interest. A peacemaker is one, who, being endowed with a generous spirit, labors for the public good, and feels his own interest promoted in promoting that of others. As all men are represented to be in a state of hostility to God and each other, the gospel is called the gospel of peace, because it tends to reconcile men to God and to each other. Hence our Lord here terms peacemakers the children of God, for as he is the father of peace, those who promote it are his children. As the purity of the Deity is infinite and beyond our conception, so also is his peace. According to St. James, peace makes up a very large part of the christian character, and may be called the ground work or platform of religion; for he likens it to the earth. He says, "The fruit of righteousness is sown in peace." 3:18. We are well assured that the fruits of righteousness can not be produced in them who indulge in hatred or hostility to God or man. We can have a conception of purity without peace, but we can have no conception of peace without purity; therefore purity is placed first, as that brings peace, the peace of God. It is also one grand characteristic of the Millennium. The prophet says, There shall be nothing to hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain. Everything will be in a state of unity or peace, seeking one common end, enjoying one universal blessing.

Three. Wisdom is gentle, or easy to be entreated. In other words, meekness or humility, which consists in a right view of our frailty and inability, and our entire dependence on God for every good. "The meek shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5:5. When pride cometh, then cometh shame; but with the lowly is wisdom. Prov. 11:2. "Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you; let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom." James 3:13. "To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all meekness unto all men." Titus 3:2. The humble are blessed; they shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. In their meekness they will resemble Christ, and be of a spirit that in the sight of God is of great price. They will show forth their works in the meekness of wisdom; they will neither give provocation to others nor receive irritation by the provocation of others; meekness will prevent the first; quietness will guard against the last.

Full of mercy and good fruits, or charity, is the fourth characteristic of the wisdom of the Spirit. Those possessed of it will be ready to pass over a transgression and to grant forgiveness to those who offend them. They will also perform every possible act of kindness, each temper and disposition producing fruits suited to and descriptive of its nature. "Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy." Matt. 5:7. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven." Matt. 5:16. Let the light of the Spirit which is within you be shown to the world by your good works. We see by this that the heavenly light or wisdom of the Spirit in those that possess it, will be manifest to the world by their good actions; so that a bad man claiming to have the wisdom of the Spirit, his own actions will confound him. Mercy is one of the attributes of God. Psalms 100:5. "The Lord is good to all and his tender mercies are over all his works." Psalms 145:9. "He that trusteth in the Lord, mercy shall compass him about." Psalms 32:10. "He that despiseth his neighbor sinneth; but he that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he." Prov. 14:21. "He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding but he that is hasty of spirit; exalteth folly." Prov. 14:29. "He that oppreseth the poor reproacheth his Maker, but he that honoreth him hath mercy on the poor." Prov. 14:31. "This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which believe in God might be careful to maintain good works; these things are good and profitable unto men. Titus 3:8. Charity properly expresses that affectionate attachment we may feel to a person whose wants we have been enabled to relieve. If it be applied to God's benevolence to man, it comes in with all propriety and force. We are dear to God, for we have not been purchased with silver or gold, but with the precious blood of Christ who so loved us as to give his life a ransom for us.

Without partiality. To be partial is to be so much in favor of one side as not to do the other justice. Rendering to every man his own whether he be rich or poor. Do not treat any man in religious matters according to the rank he holds in life, or according to any personal attachment you may have for him. Every man should be dealt with in the church, as he will be dealt with at the judgment seat of Christ. "But if ye have respect of persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors." James 2:9. It is not good to have respect of persons in judgment. Prov. 24:23. In the days of Malachi, God made the priests contemptible and base before all the people, because they had not kept his ways, but had been partial in the law. Malachi 2:9. "Henceforth know we no man after the flesh. Yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, henceforth know we him no more." 2 Cor. 5:16. "Ye shall not respect persons in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man." Deuteronomy 1:17.

SCULL-WHITE DEBATE.

A SYNOPSIS of the discussion held between Elder I. N. White of the Latter Day Saints, and Rev. J. H. Scull of the Methodists, at Edenville, Iowa, commencing October 16th, and continuing eight nights.

First proposition: "That baptism by immersion, for the remission of sins, was the true mode and object of the same, in the primitive Christian Church." This Elder White affirmed. Elder White in the opening said that he hoped this point would be observed by the honest seeker after truth, What do the scriptures teach, not what do men believe. He took as a basis, Isaiah 24:5-7. He said he expected to prove that baptism was by immersion in water, and the earth was defiled by reason of a change of that ordinance. Drew special attention to the last of the chapter, showing that this defiling would culminate in a final burning of the inhabitants; the moon would be confounded, and the sun ashamed, until the Lord would come to reign, with his remnant, in Zion and Jerusalem, which would be more clearly shown in the second proposition, as it would introduce a prophetic era. Here he quoted Matt. 3: 5, 6, 16; Mark 1: 5, 9, 10; John 3: 5-23; Acts 8: 38, 39; 22: 16; Col. 2: 12; Rom. 6: 4, 5; 1 Cor. 6: 10, 11; Heb. 10: 22; Titus 3: 5. Then gave his rendering of these several texts. He introduced some fifty authors, all Pedo-baptist scholars and divines, which positively favored his interpretation. And for the benefit of those who may not be so well posted by reason of not having the proper book, I will give some of the authors, and their testimony as produced by Elder White: Lightfoot on Matthew 3: 5, 6, says: "That the baptism of John was the immersion of the body, in which manner both the oblations of unclean persons and the baptism of proselytes were performed, seems evident from those things which are related of it; namely, that he baptized in the Jordan, and in Enon, because there was much water; and that Christ, being baptized, went up out of the water." Bishop Taylor on Matt. 3: 16, says: "The custom of the ancient churches was not sprinkling but immersion, in pursuance of the sense of the word in the commandment, and the example of our blessed savior." McKnight says: "Christ submitted to be baptized, that is, to be buried under water, and to be raised out of it again, as an emblem of his future death and resurrection." On John 3: 5, 23, Dr. Wall of the English Church, who explored all the voluminous writers of antiquity in search of evidence of infant baptism, and who wrote the most giant work on infant baptism, a work so able that the assembled clergy, in convocation gave him a vote of thanks for his learned and able defense of this custom says: "This [immersion] is so plain, and clear, by an infinite number of passages, that one can not but pity the weak endeavors of such Pedo-baptists as would maintain the negative of it. So we ought to disown and show a dislike of the profane scoffs which some people give to the English anti-pedo-baptists, merely for the use of dipping; when it was, in all probability, the way by which our blessed Savior, and for certain, was the most usual and ordinary way, by which the ancient Christians did receive their baptism." * * * "The custom of the Christians in the near succeeding times [to the apostles] being more largely and particularly delivered in books, is known to have been generally or ordinarily a total immersion."

Elder White maintained that sprinkling was introduced as baptism, because our early Christians believed baptism to be really necessary to salvation—hence the "council of Carthage," composed of sixty-six bishops, which met A. D. 253, to deliberate on certain queries referred to it, by Bishop Fidus,—one of which was,

"Whether an infant, before it was eight days old, might be baptized if need required." The decision was: "Whereas we have judged that the grace and mercy of God are to be denied to no person that is born," therefore sprinkling was introduced as it was not convenient to immerse infants. Yet Dr. Wall says in his history on infant baptism, introduction, pages 1, 55: "Among all the persons that are recorded as baptized by the apostles, there is no express mention of any infant." He further adds, "But sprinkling for the common use of baptizing was really introduced in France first, and then in other popish countries in times of Popery." And France seems to have been the first country in the world, where baptism by effusion was used ordinarily for persons in health (page 470). It was also shown from Dr. Wall and others, that Novatian was probably the first adult that received sprinkling as baptism and this about A. D. 251. But on his recovery from sickness the Church was opposed to his taking the Eucharist, or receiving priesthood, because he was not immersed. Elder White in his closing speech on the mode said: "I have proven by Christ and his apostles, by John Wesley, Calvin, Luther, Bishop Lightfoot, Taylor, McNight, Dr. Wall, Dr. Adam Clark, Dr. Thomas, Zwingle, Joseph Benson, Barnabas, Clement of Rome, Hermas, Ignatius, Polycarp, Eusebius, Tract No. 153, p. 51, published by the authority of the Methodist General Conference, forty-two ante-nicene and post-nicene Fathers, including five Apostolic Fathers; and lastly by Rev. J. H. Scull, of notoriety in the M. E. Church at Edenville, Iowa, that baptism by immersion was practiced in the primitive Christian Church. About twelve of these authors are eminent in the Protestant Churches, five being Methodists, one a Bishop in the Catholic Church, and all advocates of pedo-baptism, yet admitting with the strongest of evidence, that immersion was the only mode of baptism practiced in the primitive Christian Church; and that sprinkling and pouring of water for baptism were first introduced in the year A. D. 250-1 in the case of Novatian, and while the churches quarrelled and wrangled over the innovation that more than one hundred and fifty of the clergy met under the direction of Lightfoot and voted by a majority of one, to wholly dispense with immersion. The legislation of Ravenna declared immersion to be indifferent. Also the question of the validity of sprinkling was referred to Pope Stephen 3d, by the works of Cressa, and his answer was, "I pronounce sprinkling valid!" All of this in face of Jesus the Christ and his Apostles.

While Rev. Scull has proven nothing to us, he has quoted but one author, Mr. Summers, and he a friend to the cause he represents. While the thirteen authors I have introduced, are all pedo-baptists,—enemies to the practice of immersion, but out of good sense, and loving to speak the truth of what Christ and his bleeding apostles practiced, frankly and truthfully admitted that the only mode for baptism in the primitive Christian Church was immersion, and the scriptures as they were, afford no relief to him until a retranslating upon the points of baptism in, into, out, out of, etc. It was amusing to hear him twist those words to suit his creed. It was just like the sermon the puzzled dutchman listened to. Here Elder White made a critical examination of this far fetched interpretation, reading a number of passages where in and into occurred, and applying Rev. Scull's strained interpretation to them. Also gave the definition of sprinkling, (to scatter), and pour, (to run out), introducing scatter and run out to several of the texts which his opponent had introduced to prove his sprinkling and pouring. Elder White said: "Baptizo is found eighty times in the New Testament, in about seventy of these it is used to designate the ordinance of baptism. Bapto, is found three times in the New Testament and means to dip, but is never applied to baptism. Lono is found six times and means to wash, but never applied to the ordinance of baptism. Niplo is found seventeen times, and means to wash the extremities as hands, face, feet, &c., but never applies to baptism. Rantizo is found four times, but in neither of the cases is it used to designate baptism. Keo means to pour, and is found many times in various combinations, yet never refers to baptism. Katharizo is found thirty times, and means to purify and cleanse, but never refers to baptism. The preposition "en," is found 2,660 times in the Greek New Testament, and is translated "in" 2,045 times in King James' version." It was easily to be seen that sprinkling and pouring drifted with the debris under the scathing argument. Rev. Scull's arguments were those which are generally produced by the pedo-baptists, only that they were presented in a weak way; they are probably well known to the readers of the Herald.

Baptism for the remission of sins was taken up during the last half-hour of second night. Elder White opened the battle by referring to Heb. 10: 9-22, showing an inauguration of a "new and living way," and quoted voluminously from scripture, showing that it was not only a command, but it had been put to practice by Christ and his Apostles. Rev. Scull took the position that John's baptism was not a Christian baptism, and was only used as an ordinance under the old Jewish law, and was not to be introduced into the church as the Christian baptism. He quoted Acts 19: 1-5. He said Paul did not recognize it as such. In answering this, Elder White said, it was a saving ordinance as the "Lawyers and Pharisees" in rejecting it, rejected the "counsel of God." Christ had to accept it to "fulfill all righteousness." Through this baptism Christ was to be made manifest to Israel. Elder White took the position that Christ in Mark 16, commanded the gospel to be preached to all the world, "and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." * * * And they went everywhere, and preached the word, and the Lord confirmed the word with signs following. When Paul learned that these twelve brethren spoken of in Acts 9th, had been baptized, and God had never recognized the fact by giving them the Holy Ghost, or confirming the baptism with signs following, he felt sure that there was a link left out of the chain, for the promise was that he would confirm the word with signs. Hence Paul enquired unto what they were baptized; and on learning that they had never heard whether there be any Holy Ghost, Paul was doubly sure that John had nothing to do with their baptism, as John invariably said, "I baptize you with water, [signifying the element used], but he [Christ] shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." Paul then baptized them with the same element, and immediately it was recognized by the God of heaven, by giving them the Holy Ghost, so that they spoke in tongues and prophesied. If John did baptize them, God had failed to fulfill his promise, as he had done to others that he had baptized, as in the case of the apostles, (Matt. 19:28), and that of Christ himself. John was sent to baptize none but those that were called the "House of Israel," and there is good historical evidence that these twelve here alluded to, were Gentiles, and John never baptized a Gentile. Hence the evidence is plain, that the baptism was performed by an unauthorized person; one that did not know that there was any Holy Ghost to be given; and God failed to recognize such a baptism, even as he does in this day. This is the reason why the Latter Day Saints rebaptize people. (Rev. Scull had twitted Elder White and his church for assuming so much authority, that they would not even admit a minister into their church without re-baptism). Elder White next averred that baptism was for the same object after Christ's death as before it; and first quoted Luke 24:46, 47: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem," and referred to Acts 2:38 as the first fulfillment of this direct command from Christ, commencing the remission of sins by being baptized in the name, and by the authority, of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins. This was a commencement, or a beginning at Jerusalem, and thus it should be preached "among all nations" in order to be obedient to the commission.

Rev. Scull said he admitted that these Jews were thus baptized, for the remission of sins; but it must be remembered, said he, that the Scriptures said, "There were dwelling at Jerusalem, Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven;" and hence, if they were devout men, they did not have many sins to remit. But Elder White referred him to Peter's words, "Ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain." * * * "Now when they heard this were pricked in their hearts," &c. * * * "And Peter told them to repent, and be baptized for the remission of sins." Rev. Scull then took the position that because they were the ones that killed Christ, that their sins were of such a nature, that it was necessary for baptism in order to the remission of them. Elder White wanted to know whether when the Methodist ministers go to jails or penitentiaries to preach to convicts, they baptize for the remission of sins, those who have shed innocent blood, and offer to those more noble another kind of gospel. Then Rev. Scull advocated redemption through faith, then by the blood of Christ, then by hope; for he advanced all three of these as saving ordinances. Elder White wanted to know which of these he was going to stick to, as he first said they were saved by faith alone, and then it was "saved through hope," and after a while it was "saved through the blood of Christ." In answering this, Elder White introduced the following: That when he is away from home and writes to his family, he generally commences his letter: Dear wife and children. Then he said, If my brother will notice this, saved by faith, hope and the blood of Christ, and similar expressions occur in letters written by the apostles to the saints,—thus 1st Cor. 1:1, 2: "Paul * * unto the Church of God, which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be Saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ," &c. And all this saved by grace, hope, faith and the blood of Christ, was to those who had accepted the gospel by having their "hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and their bodies washed with pure water." It is the Saints who are "justified through faith," Rom. 5:9. "Saved by grace," Eph. 2:5; "Saved by hope," Rom. 8:24; "saved by his word," James 1:21; but a doer of his word, and not a hearer alone, James 1:22, 23. Saved by "washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost," Titus 3:5; saved by baptism, 1st Peter 3:21, 22. Let it be remembered, that "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works;" and hence the apostles are often found encouraging and instructing the saints to look forward in hope, as the blood of Christ was shed for them, &c.

The discussion of the first question was lively throughout; and the work well maintained, and the Saints felt thankful to God for so able a defender of God's word as was found in the person of Elder I. N. White. This has been written from notes taken during the discussion, but in most cases I have given the words verbatim.

THE INSPIRED TRANSLATION.

WE herewith cite the reader to revised, corrected, and supplied texts, found in The Holy Scriptures, as given by Joseph Smith the Seer. We have sought to select the most important ones, but it is probable some such have escaped our search. All who carefully and impartially compare these texts with the various versions extant, will readily discover their superiority in respect to morals, doctrine, harmony of facts, perspicuity of statement, and can but admit that herein a needed and important work has been accomplished. Mr. Mitchell, of the firm of J. B. Lippincott & Co. who printed and bound the first edition, when reading the advanced sheets, also other competent judges, said to the writer that Joseph Smith, by his translation of the Bible, conferred a great benefit upon society in improving its moral sentiments and tendencies. Such we apprehend will be the opinion of all competent critics who examine the work without prejudice, comparing it with the numerous other versions.

This translation, whether viewed as a work done by the inspiration of God, or by human skill and wisdom, reflects great honor upon the Seer, because of its moral excellence, its doctrinal unity, and the manner in which it clears many texts of doubtful meaning and application.

In conclusion, we respectfully suggest that the reader compare the texts cited directly with the various versions at hand, and carefully note the changes.

THE SACRIFICE OF CHRIST.

I SEE quite a considerable sharp sparring among the soldiers in the front ranks about the atonement and Christ's sacrifice. I send you an article from the "Book of the Law," from an able pen; and it is mine, for I heartily endorse it, as the best I ever saw in print. Hope you will publish it. I think it will give light and disseminate truth.

As ever yours,

JOBE BROWN.

The most common doctrine among Trinitarians is, that Christ was God from eternity to eternity, according to the theory of the Creed of Saint Athanasius,* and possessed all the attributes of the Godhead; that God, being infinite in all his attributes, his Law was infinite; and, therefore, the violation of it an infinite sin; that as man was finite, and therefore incapacitated to endure an infinite punishment, there was no way by which he could be redeemed from the stain of sin, and consequent everlasting destruction, but by a vicarious and infinite atonement; that Jesus Christ, being Almighty God, infinite in all his attributes, offered himself a sacrifice to appease the wrath of God; or, in the language of the creeds, "to reconcile his Father unto us;" that by his infinite sufferings, paying the debt which we by our sins had contracted, we might be released therefrom, come into the favor of God, and live forever.

This theory involves the dogma that justice and mercy are antagonistic, and not collateral attributes, and that justice is so vindictive that it must have its demand, without reference to the reformation of the subjects of its exactions, or the amount of intellectual and physical happiness enjoyed in the creation of God.

And it involves the further dogma, that the exactions of justice are so indiscriminating, that they are equally satisfied so the demand is paid, no matter who pays it; a dogma which, though not particularly obnoxious in the mere voluntary payment of money, presents a very different aspect, when it exhibits itself in inflicting pain on an innocent being, who, through excessive generosity, may volunteer to suffer as proxy for the guilty.

Such dogmas could only have got footing among men in times of ignorance and barbarism. They, in fact, grew up among a people not half redeemed from Pagan superstition. But once thoroughly established as a part of the creed of Christendom, the mind is progressively hardened in them as it advances in the knowledge of such a system. Hence many very intelligent and just men, in later times, have given an unconsidered assent to this dogma, in comparatively enlightened ages.

The innate injustice of this dogma has had less influence in overthrowing it, for the want of anything on which to fall back; the true doctrine of the atonement and the mediatorial office having been quite lost among Christians.

The idea of a sacerdotal sacrifice is not original, but derived from that of a natural sacrifice. A natural sacrifice is something given up, or yielded to be lost or destroyed; and is made, not willingly, but as the means of saving something else, or of avoiding some calamity. Sacerdotal sacrifices are voluntary offerings of things esteemed, in pursuance of some appointment or law, by the keeping of which, calamities are avoided, or blessings obtained; the assent of the heart being the very gist of the matter, of which the offering is the proper sign.

The offering of Christ was a natural sacrifice, and it was not necessary that he should be offered on an altar, nor by a Priest. The numerous volumes written on the fact of his being killed by the instigation of the Aaronic Priesthood, and at Jerusalem, the place consecrated for sacrifices, are nonsense; for he was not slain upon the altar, nor after the manner of slaying victims for sacrifice. The Priesthood are not authorized, and never were in any dispensation, to offer human victims for sacrifices. Sacerdotal sacrifices are either eaten or burned, and he was neither.

But this dogma is obnoxious to the further objection, that if the manhood only of Christ suffered death, then there was no infinite suffering, and therefore no infinite atonement; and if the Godhead died, immortality, and consequently infinity, are not attributes of God. If God died, he was mortal, and finite like ourselves. If he did not die, there was not an infinite sacrifice.

All these mistakes and follies flow naturally from the error of imagining that God can do anything whatsoever that the mind of man can conceive, and is only restrained by his own attributes from doing many things which to good men seem most desirable and right, which he does not do.

Believing that God can do anything whatsoever, and therefore that he can at any moment purify all men from all sin, and all corruption; and thus make them all holy, and all happy; most undisputably a most holy work, and well worthy of God; they set about accounting for his not doing it, by saying that it would be contrary to his attribute of justice, which, when mercy pleads in behalf of miserable man, continually demands satisfaction for the debt of sin. Man, therefore, must have perished everlastingly, but that Jesus Christ, the infinite God, took upon himself this infinite debt, and expiated it by his infinite sufferings, in the death of the infinite.

The dogma is monstrous blasphemy. It makes God's mercy so short that he will not forgive the penitent till they have paid the uttermost farthing, knowing they have nought wherewith to pay, and never can obtain it. It makes his justice so blind that it only demands a victim, and is as well satisfied with punishing the innocent as the guilty. It charges on God all the misery of the universe, which it alleges he can change to blessedness, by only willing it.

In opposition to this horrible dogma, the truth is, that God made man and all the creatures of his hand as good as it was possible to make them. If the creator was infinite, the material of which he made man and animals was finite; corruptible. He made the best possible work of the material. His goodness demanded of him to make all things the best possible, and forbade him to make anything which, on the whole, would not be blessed by its existence.

It is necessary to be thoroughly impressed with this truth; that God can not do all things; that some things are essentially and immutably impossible; impossible to omnipotence, as well as to worms of the dust; that almighty power extends only to doing such things as, in their nature, are possible.

For instance, almighty power can not produce something from nothing; it can not make two and two to be either more or less than four; it can not make truth to be false, or falsehood to be true; it has no power over the past, but oblivion; over the future, but change; and it can produce no effect, but by the use of sufficient means. And in the selection of means, there are many things possible, which, nevertheless, can only be accomplished through numerous processes, which, in their accomplishment, necessarily occupy long periods of time.

As the earth and all things therein were created of corruptible matter, the creation necessarily partook in some degree of the nature and of the defects of the material. The successive acts of creation seem to have developed improved results in every step of progress; not by any improvement in the skill of the creator, for, so far as we can judge, the most stupendous acts of creation were in the beginning; but, by the improvement of the material, by each change for the final consummation.

Each thing made was good, because on the whole its being was beneficial, especially each living thing was good, because its existence was a blessing to it. But the last, best, the finishing work of creation, was the making of man, in the image and likeness of God. Though we know he was of the dust, for he returns to it, yet that dust must have undergone numerous and great changes, to bring it from mere dust to be a living man. What time these changes occupied, we can not know, for we know not the creative process.

To man was given dominion over the earth, and all created things therein. Had it been possible to bestow divine perfections on one thus placed to rule as Lord over the creation of God, and who, because made in the likeness of God, was feared and obeyed as God by all the rest of creation, the infinite goodness of God would have dictated that he be so created.

The injunction in the gospel, "be ye perfect as your Father in heaven is perfect," (Matt. v. 48), is conclusive evidence that in the mind of God this is a desirable and necessary attainment, and if desirable during the eternity to come, equally so in the times past. If we really believe that God is infinitely good, we are compelled to believe that the only reason man was not so made, was because it was impossible.

It being impossible of any existing material to make man perfect as God is perfect, and yet possible to so make him that his existence would on the whole be beneficial, and so that through a long series of changes he could ultimately attain to that, it was consistent with the goodness of God to make him as man was created, relatively good, but not altogether perfect.

And as the world would be better by his dominion over beasts than without it, notwithstanding his imperfections, it was also consistent with his goodness to give man the dominion over them.

We are equally compelled, both by our faith in the divine goodness, and by all our knowledge of the works of God, to believe that the means devised for the improvement and final perfection of man, is the best adapted to accomplish that end; and that by the use of that means as large a portion of the human race will be made "perfect as God in heaven is perfect," as it is possible to bring to that condition.

As God, like man, can only produce results by the use of sufficient means, no amount of suffering in his creatures becomes a reproach upon divine goodness, unless that suffering is allowed by him wantonly, or is so great as to make the existence of those who suffer, a curse, rather than a blessing.

Wisdom, knowledge, prudence, are in some degree the result of experience. Inspiration and revelation may act a large part in producing them, but they can no more be brought into being without experience, than a child can be born without a mother. Experience is the mother of them all.

But whatever other attributes man was created with, he could not be with experience. That every being must have for himself. None can derive it from another.

Had the conduct of man been subject to such a control that he could only choose, and do the right, his time of life would have given no experience. Unless he was capable of choosing or refusing either the good or the evil, he could no more learn by experience than could a machine. He could have no wisdom. He could only act the wisdom of the maker, as does the clock.

Therefore, the very condition of things through which sin entered the world, and death by sin, was necessary, in the progress of the work, of making man perfect as God is perfect. Not that sin itself was necessary, but peccability, or the liability to sin.

Sin, having entered the world, the benevolence of God demanded that an effort be made to save the sinner; and justice did not demand that he should be immediately destroyed; or that he should be destroyed at all, if he could be separated from sin; and thus made a blessing, rather than a curse.

The fall of man principally introduced hereditary corruption of the flesh, which could only result in the death of the body. This hereditary corruption, and consequent death, is not to be regarded as a punishment inflicted by God on all men for the sin of one, but as the mere natural consequence of the corruption which Adam, by eating improper food, produced in his flesh; which corruption of flesh his posterity inherited from him with its consequent death.

Had it been in the power of God, by a mere and immediate effort of the will to remove that corruption, his goodness could not have failed to do it. But this being impossible in the nature of things, the divine goodness has, in its wisdom, devised a practical mode of finally accomplishing that result, and something more than that, for such as by obedience to the Law, seek everlasting life.

In bringing about this result, the corruption of man's flesh, constantly exciting evil passions, is at war with those features in the character of man which approach nearest to the divine character. And God's mercy can not save and render happy, those who will not exercise a proper government over their passions and propensities.

It is proper to know, therefore, that if any are lost in the end, it is because they prefer corruption. That the difficulty in the present and perpetual salvation of all men, from all sin, and their early delivery and perpetual redemption from all misery, is in their own unwillingness to live according to the true laws of life, and not in any unwillingness of God to forgive and save them.

This unwillingness to live according to the law of life, is not peculiar to Adam. Every violation of the law of life in eating, drinking, or other carnal indulgence, is a new fall, like in kind to that of Adam, though possibly less in degree; and, like that, it not only brings an earlier and more aggravated death on the sinner, but it entails it on his posterity also. The reason men, in their sins, are not saved, is, not that God is unmerciful, but that their salvation is impossible. What the wicked ask as salvation, is the worst damnation. God is better to them than their prayers.

Those who are anxious to obtain delivery from pain and disease, without reforming in their character and conduct, are seeking to themselves the worst of calamities, an eternity of ill, in the unrestrained indulgence of a corrupt heart; against which God guarded Adam, by casting him out of the garden and placing cherubs to guard the way, lest he should eat of the tree of life, and live forever in his corruptions; (Gen. 3:24); a calamity greater than everlasting death.

As death was the ultimate and inevitable consequence of sin, the life for which man was created could only be attained through a resurrection of the body. But had the power of accomplishing that resurrection been conferred on sinful man, in his anxiety to live, and to give life all to who were dear to him, he would have conferred the boon on those he loved, though they were yet in their corruptions; and in that way secured an eternity of ill, which he had not yet learned to sufficiently abhor.

There can be no such thing as a conformity of man to the character of God; which is the true idea of salvation; till with a high order of wisdom and intelligence, and a power of choosing between good and evil, man continually prefers the good, and abhors the evil; preferring good to evil, not from the fear of the punishment which evil deeds entail, but on account of the innate loveliness of undefiled goodness; of pure, unalloyed holiness.

To be a safe reposit of the keys of the resurrection, or the power of raising up these mortal bodies, and sealing them to everlasting life, one must not only love every good thing with an unalterable affection, and hate every evil thing with unchanging abhorrence, but he must have such divine wisdom, such a patient forbearance, and so much control over the sympathies of the heart, that he will never turn aside to raise up any one, even his own child, to that state of being, only such as are prepared for continuing ever in a state of perfect holiness, without any compulsion exercised over them, but from the mere love of righteousness.

Such a one was the Lord Jesus Christ. Down to the age of thirty years, in the retirement of a peasant's life, he never stepped aside from the path of rectitude, to do a single evil deed. Not one even of the least of all the Commandments or precepts of God did he ever transgress, nor did an evil thought enter his heart. Conscious that he was the lawful heir to the throne of David, and that the whole house of Israel were his inheritance; never did he turn aside from the present duties of the humble position in which he was born, to disturb the peace, and peril the safety of his brethren, even in claiming his own.

Made of the seed of Abraham, (Gal. iii. 16. Heb. ii. 16), of the tribe of Judah, (Heb. vii. 14), and of the house and lineage of David (Rom. i. 3, 2 Tim. ii. 8) according to the flesh, tempted and tried in all things as we are, (Heb. iv. 15), and partaking with us of the common infirmities of human nature, he was holy, harmless, and without sin. (Heb. iv. 15; vii. 26-28).

It was fit that such a one should receive the keys of the resurrection and of life everlasting, (John xi. 25, 26), and be exalted on high with divine power; for he had maintained the divine characteristics through all the trials of his mortal existence; and having ever "loved righteousness and hated iniquity," (Heb. i. 8, 9. Ps. xlv. 6, 7), he was exalted by his Father and his God to be our God, and the Father of the world to come. (Isa. ix. 6).

Jesus Christ, having committed no sin, deserved to suffer no evil that was avoidable. Taking upon himself the Priesthood to which God called him, and working a faithful ministry with the sole view to the salvation of mankind, without regard to any suffering he might bring upon himself, he suffered bitter persecution, and a cruel death, all which he might have avoided, without sin against God or man, by doing less for the salvation of others. It was thus that he became a natural sacrifice for the sins of man.

But having loved righteousness and hated iniquity, through the severest temptations, and never swerved one moment, God raised him to an incorruptible, an immortal life, and gave him the power to raise up all others; a power which, as he had already resisted every temptation, he could not be moved to abuse. Thus was established that incorruptible dominion of man over the creation of God, which the divine goodness had sought from the beginning, by the most direct means to establish.

He was not demanded of God as a victim to divine vengeance, but offered himself as the victim of man's malevolence. And having walked in the way of life everlasting, through death and the resurrection, he was capable of leading others the same road. Thus, by the appointment of God, and the requisite intelligence, he was possessed of the keys of the resurrection, and life everlasting.

He is a propitiation for the sins of all men, in this, that whereas all, both by inheritance were doomed to death, and by actual guilt had aggravated that doom, he brings the actual resurrection of the body to all, (1st Cor. xv. 22), and puts it in their power by obedience to a law which he makes known, to lay hold on everlasting life.

By means of this law the way of life is ever so guarded that none can lay hold on immortality, except those who have, through the experience of temptation, a settled and unconquerable hatred of sin, and an unchangeable love of righteousness, so that the keeping of the Law of God, instead of being a restraint on them, is their chief desire and greatest pleasure. No other can enter into life.

It is because Jesus Christ was a mortal man, subject to the same infirmities as other men, and tempted in all things like his brethren, that there was merit in his giving his life for the salvation of others. Had he been God Almighty, co-equal and co-eternal with the Father, of one Godhead with him, and thus had power as God, to lay down and take up his life, death to him, at most, would have been no more than is a few moments' sleep to mortal man, entered upon without terror or dread; and the sufferings of his lowly life would have been only apparent, for God can not suffer. To a man it was an act of the profoundest faith in God to trust undoubtingly that, though dead, God would raise him up the third day, and of boundless benevolence to offer his life to save his persecutors.

Thus Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham, mortal, but sinless, offered himself a natural, but not a sacerdotal sacrifice, for the sins of men; that he might be the Savior of all men, especially of those that believe; of all, from inherited death; and of those who believe and obey the gospel, in the likeness of God, and the life everlasting; not because God was angry and demanded a victim, but because no other means could bring man into a condition to participate of true happiness.

Among the means appointed to draw men unto righteousness, inspire them with the same divine benevolence, and with due gratitude to him, was a partaking of this sacrifice, as a sacerdotal offering.

Hence, he said to his disciples, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you;" (John vi. 53); and when the eucharistic bread and wine are to be ate and drank, they are first consecrated the flesh and blood of Christ, and offered up, and then a feast made upon them, as a feast upon a sacrifice. Such is the actual sacrifice for the sins of men, made once; of which the eucharistic offering, made ever, is a lively symbol.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883. I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage. Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with. Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, GEO. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings. Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884. JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion. Yours in bonds, WM. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884. Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor. Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883. MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours, W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883. Bro. Johns & ORDWAY.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well. Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents. JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Dec. 6th, 1884.

BRO. HEMAN C. SMITH sends us a copy of the Pantagraph, published at Big Springs, Texas, for July 12th, 1884, in which there is an article published in the Texas Christian of July 2d, from the pen of C. M. Wilmeth, reflecting upon the town of Big Springs, its people, business, morals and prospects, to which a denial and denunciatory reply, warning citizens of other places against the Rev. C. M. Wilmeth also appears. Bro. Heman desires us to reproduce the article entire; but space does not permit us to do more than give an extract from it.

A notice for the citizens of Big Springs to meet at the school house to consider the statement of Mr. Wilmeth. This notice was signed by George Hogg, R. W. Morrow, John Snoddy, Thos. Volina, R. H. Black, F. W. Heyn, G. A. Forbett, J. M. Walker, C. W. Williams, Andy Dennison, and R. M. Bressie. The meeting was held July 8th, Rev. J. A. Zinn, was chosen chairman, and George Hogg, secretary. After reciting the cause for calling the meeting an article was drafted for the papers, from which we quote:

"Not satisfied with the hospitality and tolerance of a law abiding, generous and intelligent people, he skulked away, displeased and discouraged with the futile effort he had made to gull an intelligent public, and he has sought to palliate his grief over his failure to deceive, by publishing a scurrilous article in the Texas Christian on Big Springs, her people, society, improvements, &c. And it is the sense of this community that it should be beneath the dignity and good taste of the Texas Christian to receive and publish any such contributions, especially when coming from a brute showing himself so unworthy as an advocate of a Holy Cause. He hails from Thorp Springs, Texas, and he claims to be the Rev. C. W. Wilmeth, and claims to belong to the "Christian" or "Cambellite" church, which, if true, reflects such wanton depravity and malicious rascality as no church ought to be willing to tolerate in one or any of its disciples or missionaries, and we assume to say that if it is a good cause, such blackguards, libellers, slanderers, liars, hypocrites and vagabonds as this of whom we write as its representative, must undoubtedly bring it into bad repute; and it seems to us that all well regulated and well meaning institutions, orders and denominations should throw such curses out when they prove themselves to be neither worthy nor well qualified, as the subject of this article has done.

"Now in paying this tribute to the Rev. scrub referred to, we would not be guilty of even quoting again any portion of the document which has called forth this communication, because its flesh and ear marks show it to be the production of an ill-bred cur, and we simply refer all well-thinking men, and more especially the women, to his article in the Texas Christian, dated 2d, inst., under the head of "Journeying and Sojourning."

"Now, in conclusion, we wish to cite all persons feeling themselves interested, to the record and history of our town (now a little over two years old), on the Texas and Pacific railroad, midway between Fort Worth and El Paso, forty miles west of Colorado City and on the border of the Staked Plains, and by comparison with other towns between the points last above mentioned on said road, and in the light of such comparison, let the public press, railroad men, and other good citizens and sojourners of the state who know us, say what we are. And then the fair fame of our little town will be, and is now, fully vindicated; and Thorp Springs can with much propriety send her debased and debasing liar out to seek new fields and pastures green."

This Rev. C. M. Wilmeth is the man with whom Bro. H. C. Smith held the debate not long since in Texas. The citizens of Big Springs at least have not a very exalted opinion of the good feeling and Christian deportment of this Disciple of Mr. Campbell

Now that the issue as to who is to be the next President is no longer in doubt, we run no risk of being adjudged partizan when we publish what is anticipated for the country by the incoming administration. We therefore quote from a local Democratic paper what their construction of the late election means.

WHAT IT MEANS.

It means better times.
The re-building of our wrecked navy.

It means that the Republican party must go.
A fair and honest reduction of the robber tariff.

Economy in the expenditure of the people's money.

The clearing out of the corrupt ring in Washington City.

The equalizing of the bounties and pensions of Union soldiers.

A thorough overhauling of the books in the public departments.

It means a new south and a united country—one flag in reality as well as in name.

It means that the people yet have confidence in honest men, measures and politics.

It means that the Pacific railroads shall come to time in their settlements with the government.

It means better times for the poor man and fair dealing with the different industries of the country.

It means that a new broom sweeps clean, and that just such a "weapon" has long been needed in Washington.

The turning out of the rascals—every one of them—and the appointment of honest and capable men in their places.

It means that the people are not yet ready to place a self-convicted scoundrel in the chair of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln.

It means that "a party long in power becomes corrupt," and that it is necessary to have a change at least as often as every twenty-four years.

It means that the force of the reasoning and common honesty of the better elements of society can not be set aside by ridicule and such epithets as "Dudes," "Mugwumps" and "Pharisees."

"It means that there is still enough intelligence and honesty in the United States to prevent such notorious rascals as Blaine, Dorsey, Dudley, Elkins and Gould from retaining power by the use of money, false issues and corruption.—Democrat Reporter."

In connection with the foregoing, we express the desire that all the good foreshadowed to the American people by it may be most fully realized.

Correspondence.

ELKADER, IOWA, Nov. 15th, 1884.

Joseph:—I wish to correct a mistake. You mentioned while I was at Lamoni, that you thought I made a mistake in a communication, some time since published in the Herald, concerning what I said about being at the conference in the Spring of 1844, when the subject of districting the United States was talked over. The mistake is not about my being there, but in calling the council a conference. A special council of the twelve apostles was called in the Spring of 1844, to deliberate upon the affairs of the church, and to take into consideration the propriety of making choice of candidate for the presidency of the United States. This was the year of the great Mormon Political Campaign. This council was convened at Nauvoo early in the month of June, 1844, in which all of the twelve, with many others of the prominent members of the church who were present, participated. This subject of districting the country for missionary work, as well as political affairs, was talked over and well understood as I have previously stated; and every one of the twelve that went from that council understood most perfectly the instructions given at the time, as to the future labors of the ministry in the work of preaching the gospel to all nations.

I notice, Joseph, also in last Herald, that brother H. P. Brown and others, are getting up a paper to distribute on the Pacific coast, and to the Saints abroad generally. I think the undertaking of this work is a good one, and I hope the effort will find willing hearts and ready hands. I have for a long time been of the opinion, that a plainer distinction, and more extensive measures ought to be adopted in showing the difference between the Utah Mormons and the true Church of Christ. When the false coloring is taken from Utah Mormonism, and it is fully exposed to the world, in full expositions of their false doctrines, I think that a brighter day will dawn upon those of the Saints who have made choice of the way of righteousness and truth, instead of being adherents and servants to a corrupt priesthood. It is true that the Herald has been a great messenger of truth in preparing the way for a greater flood of light upon the workings of Utah Mormons. The truth in plainness should be told, that the world may know upon whom responsibility for wrong doing rests.

I notice in the Advocate the letter of a brother withdrawing from this Utah Church. He gives his experience among these people, and an account of the profanity of the leaders of that church. This profanity reminds me of the short experience I had, of four months' duration in Nauvoo, after your father's death, when the seeds of apostasy first began their work of destruction in the church, in threats of murder towards those whom these apostates pleased to call dissenters from their practice in faith and doctrine; and such profanity is unfit to relate. May God speed the right, and bless every effort made to open the eyes of the honest Saints and the world, to the corruption of Utah Mormons. So far as my knowledge extends, the friends of the Herald most highly appreciate the generous and kindly course it has taken towards Utah Mormons, in discoursing to them upon the law of righteousness in the declaration of the pure words of the gospel.

Remembering at all times that I am as ever your fellow laborer in the interest of this latter day work, and in gospel bonds, and your brother in Christ Jesus,

WILLIAM B. SMITH.

LACROSSE, Wisconsin,

November 20th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just returned from Springville, where I have had the privilege of the Advent house of worship, and preached nine successive discourses, first, "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good"—Paul; I preached on this subject twice; next on these words, "O Lord, revive thy work." First I endeavored to show what the Lord's work is; second, its frequent revivings from creation, &c., the means to be used and the great necessity now. I contrasted the zeal of politicians with the efforts of God's people, and got their ears. Then presented the six principles in a following discourse; and on the second Sunday night reviewed them all in one discourse. It was pronounced by most of the best judges there, by far the best sermon ever preached in that house. Joshua V. Himes has been there, and Sheldon also; in fact all the eminent Advent preachers have been there. In the midst of it all, I was called to administer to a very sick woman, which I did in the presence of six witnesses of different denominations; and she was blessed and restored immediately, and the end is not yet. They did not forget to minister to my wants, and invited me to come again any time I could.

JOSE BROWN.

ELKHART, Anderson Co., Texas,

November 21st, 1884.

Dear Herald:—After my last communication from Coryell County, we continued our meetings until the 28th of September. Had good audiences, and good liberty in presenting the word. Had several invitations to go elsewhere to preach, which we could not fill on account of previous engagements. I think Coryell county is a good field of labor and hope to be able to cultivate before long; but there are so many openings, and so very few to fill them. While at Pidcock's Ranch, we succeeded in drawing the Methodist fire. Parson Collins, the circuit rider, called a meeting on the night of the 29th of September, for the purpose of exposing our "fallacies." Of course we were present, and listened attentively. After he was through, we asked permission to speak, and was refused, and calmly informed that he "did not come here to divide time." However, when he had dismissed, I told the audience if they wished to hear my reply to be seated. All remained but the Parson and his wife. They left the room, and I thought he was gone, but no, he was listening outside; and it got so warm for him, he made his appearance in the house again; and then left and returned the second time, making himself extremely ridiculous. When we invited him to publicly discuss the issues between us, his religious scruples would not permit him to do so. While at the Ranch, we were the guests of Mr. W. G. Newberry, the village blacksmith, and were kindly treated by himself and lady. We were well treated by nearly all, and felt quite at home among them.

The night of October 2nd found us on Little Elm, in Bell County, where we held a series of meetings, and were well pleased with the interest manifested. I yet have hopes of doing a good work in that vicinity. Spoke a few times at Elmwood Branch, and once at Mr. Frost's, Near Pendleton, and then on to Robertson County, in time for the District Conference which convened, with the Central Branch, November 1st and 2nd. We had a very good conference considering the excitement of the election was right upon us. We remained at Central Branch, until the 12th, preaching every night except election night, assisted by Bro. Warren Allen, of Alabama, with whom I was acquainted while upon that mission, and who is now here on a visit. The Meeting resulted in the baptism of seven. On the 11th we held business meeting, at which time we ordained Bro. Samuel Hay to the office of Priest, and he was chosen to preside; also ordained Bro. James L. Dotson to the office of Teacher. Bro. Whitehead was chosen secretary; so this branch which has been in a languishing condition since the death of Bro. W. W. Belcher, is now again in working order with fair prospects of success. The officers are men of good repute and strong faith in the work. I think they will prove to be workers in the vineyard. On the 12th I parted with Brn. Wilson and Allen and the saints of Central Branch, and at eight o'clock at night took train for Elkhart, via. Palestine. Laid over three hours at Palestine, and at four o'clock a. m. of the 13th, was on my way to Elkhart; but having been up all night, and also having been up so much for two weeks before, I was so exhausted I went to sleep, passed Elkhart, and the first I knew I was at Grapeland, where I had to remain until late on the night of the 13th, before I could get a train for Elkhart. This accident came near giving me some trouble. On the 15th, constable Stokes with an aid came from Grapeland for the purpose of arresting me, claiming I suited the description of a man by the name of Tillery, who had committed murder in Longview. The constable here, and several of the leading citizens of Elkhart, told them that they were on the wrong track, for they had known me for three years before the murder was committed, and I then went by the same name, and represented myself to be the same I now did. They were not satisfied, however, with the word of the officer, or any one else; and seemed determined to arrest me. I told them if they gave me any trouble they would pay for it. They hesitated, and finally said, if I would show my left arm, and the scar in the description was not there, they would let me off. I first refused, thinking if they wished to take me, and risk the consequences, in the face of the evidence they had received, they could do so; but being advised by the constable here to comply with their request, and save some trouble, I off with my coat, rolled up my sleeve, and told them to look. Failing to find any scar, they expressed themselves satisfied. I asked to see the picture and description of the man, which was granted. There was some resemblance, though some marked differences. The description was entirely different, for instance, he weighed 135 pounds, while I tip the scales at exactly 175 pounds; he had Sandy hair, while mine is dark brown, &c. Some think they were honest, while some think it was done for a scare, thinking to cause me to leave. I express no opinion; but would advise these young men, when they find their man not to fool around him as they did around me, or they may not only lose the $500 reward offered, but also their lives.

Well, I am here yet doing the best I can; but on account of inclement weather have not been able to do much. I will remain here until the 25th, and then turn my face westward again.

There has never been a time when the openings and prospects for preaching were better than now; but Bro. Cato and I are alone again. Bro. Bozarth's health failed him in August, and he returned home; and about the 1st of October, Bro. Bays went home sick. I have not a word of censure for these brethren; they are the best judges of their condition, and fitness for the field; but it leaves us without the help we hoped for, and which encouraged us last Spring. At last advices, Bro. Cato was at Grand Prairie, Dallas Co., still making himself heard in the defense of the truth. I have this confidence in him, that if I am fortunate enough to be in view of the field, when the smoke of battle clears away, I shall expect to see A. J. standing by his guns. I hope the next Annual Conference will send us some help. If the brethren who came this time had been blessed with health and prosperity, we would have made great advancement in this mission.

The branches I believe are generally improving, spiritually. There are some young men in the mission, who, if they had proper support and encouragement, I believe would do a good work.

The Saints of this branch are most of them doing well. "Hassell and Co.," have built a new drug store since I was here, with a commodious hall above; which these brethren propose to use as a place of worship; so there is no danger of being closed out. Brn. Ryan and Hassell still hold the fort; and whether the sun shines or the storms blow, they are found at their post.

Hopefully,
HEMAN C. SMITH.

Dear Bro. Joseph: In reading the Herald I see the many testimonies of the children of God, and his wonderful love and blessings unto them in the last days. I send you my testimony, that the printed word may bring forth fruit unto the glory of God. I was baptized into the church, January 22d, 1877; and though scarcely able to stand upon my feet because of a bad leg before being baptized, after I came up out of the water I was able to walk without any pain, and I received thorough healing through the anointing with oil by the Elders and the prayer of faith. But somehow I fell away from my meetings, and my name got taken off the book of the branch to which I then belonged, and instead of trying to regain my position, I still further rebelled; so that God saw fit to afflict me again with a terribly bad leg. At this time I was called to attend my daughter, Elizabeth Tankard, who was a faithful Saint in Christ, and through whose reasoning I was led to see my error. She being very ill one night, had sent her husband for the Elders, desiring them to come and administer to her; and I being in severe pain with my leg, she said, "Ask the Elders to administer to it, and I know God will heal it." But it being in such a bad state, I said they will not touch it, I know. She said, "Will you have faith, and I will ask whosoever God sends here this night to do it." I answered, Yes. My son-in-law came, bringing one with him, and that one very young in the work, though full of faith in the living God.

He administered to my daughter and she received the blessing. I shall never forget the look on her face when she said, "Bro. Mudrick, I know the Lord has sent you here that we might receive a blessing through you from Him, and I want you now to administer to my mother's leg, and I know that it will be healed. You will not mind doing it will you?" I told her I would ask you as she did not like to do so, thinking you might refuse. I remember his answer as if it were yesterday. "Sister, it is for you to call and for us but to obey in all things pertaining unto the glory of God, and it shall be done unto you according to your faith." And though my leg was quite black, and had five holes in it, the moment that his hands were taken off, all pain departed; and on the next week I walked up to the Hall at Hackney with my leg quite well and strong, the distance being over a mile, and gave my testimony in the meeting, praising and glorifying God for his love and mercy unto me and mine. I have not suffered any return of my affliction since, but am able to run about more like one of twenty than one of sixty years of age.

But the day came when sorrow overtook us, and my daughter was again laid on a bed of sickness, through watching and attending the death-bed of a son, whose mind became deranged through over study. The same brother came, the Lord answered his prayers in his behalf, and gave peace, but to the plea of his mother and father, Will he recover? the answer was, "He is in the hands of God. He has blessed him and given him peaceful sleep," a thing he had not had for two days and nights before. But I felt that he was withholding something from us which was revealed unto him; but it was to try our faith. God took him to himself.

I shall never forget the night when my daughter rose up in bed, and told her husband, who was Priest of the branch, to go and fetch Bro. Mudrick directly to her; nor the pleading she made to God, saying I have not lost my faith in the administrations of the Elders. When Bro. Mudrick came in, she said, "I know, brother, that I have faith to be healed, and called upon him to anoint her for healing. I can not forget how that brother knelt and asked God to quiet that spirit within his sister, pleading so to him, asking her to look beyond him to the giver of all good, who could raise her up in the twinkling of an eye if it was his holy will. How the anointing with oil seemed to give calmness unto her soul. How again she cried out, as it were she would fain stay, asking him to again anoint her, for her faith was strong that God could heal her. Nor the import of the words he spake with the anointing, that he had done wrong once by not speaking the revealings of the Spirit, and saying, I should have said then as now that this anointing is unto death.

Afterwards she sank into quiet slumber for a time. This was about ten o'clock at night. Presently she called me and said, "Mother, go tell my sisters when I am gone, that I have sent you to tell them to embrace the gospel, that they may be the means of bringing their husbands in also; for I have seen my future abode, and know that I shall come forth in the first resurrection, and I want them to be with me there, that they may live and reign with God and Christ forevermore;" and then calmly departed this mortal life to live in the paradise of God, with the just, and to come forth to live forever and ever with Jesus our Lord and Redeemer.

May we all strive as she strove to show forth her faith and light, that like her when we are called away, we may have the blessed assurance and knowledge that we shall enter into the paradise of God, and rise at the first resurrection with the coming of our Lord, to be with him forevermore, is my prayer for all the children of God.

Dear Brother:—I feel to rejoice that my son, and self, have become members of the true church of Christ, of which I am convinced, and we pray earnestly, that our "Eternal Father" may bless us, and strengthen us from day to day, with his Holy Spirit, and that we may prove faithful to the epd. I wish we had an Elder out here, so that we could receive instruction, for we are but little children concerning the Kingdom of God.

ELDER M. T. SHORT, Millersburg, Ill.:

DEAR SIR: Thirty years ago I saw a copy of the Book of Mormon. It was loaned to me by a friend in Boston, who had become a Mormon. I was well pleased with all that it contained. I saw in an American paper that you had the genuine book for sale—the original book that Joseph Smith published. Will you send a copy by mail to my address, as above? and I promise you, on the word of an honest man, that I will remit to your address the full price; also, an invoice or list of the early books published while you were at Nauvoo. I had one that gave me more light on the Bible than anything I ever read, but I forgot the name of it. I think that if I could see the names of your early books, I could remember it. I once saw an engraving of Joseph Smith; if you have an engraving or likeness of him, please send it.

Yours,
DONALD KENNEDY.

KENTON, Tenn., Nov. 19th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I came here yesterday, at the request of Bro. Wm. Rossom, expecting to preach a week or two; but have not succeeded in getting out an appointment yet. The excitement caused, and the prejudice raised, by the doings and killing of those Utah Mormons seem to operate wonderfully against us here. The people, it seems, have decided that there shall be no Mormon preaching in this place. Brethren Hyde and Scarcliff have been here, but the people generally don't seem to know the difference between us and the Brighamites. I don't think they want to learn.

The brethren that were here left a good name; no fault attaches to them; but it is Mormonism; that's enough. I may preach some in the country here before I leave. I shall make an effort any way. I hope the authorities of this mission will forgive my trespass, in coming here; and if they wont, just let them come over into Illinois and pay us back. Will write again and let you know the result. Yours in faith,

G. H. HILLIARD.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Nov. 21st.—British troops are now arriving at Wady-Halfa, in the Soudan, and rapidly departing for the front. An advance beyond Dongola is considered impossible for a month. Disease is decimating El Maddi's followers, the daily mortality reaching 100.

In the British House of Commons, on a motion to abolish the House of Lords, there were 71 votes cast in favor of the motion, and 145 against it.

Advices from Tamsui of Tuesday state that Admiral Courbet still remains at Kelung, unable to advance until reinforced. Chinese labor is scarce, and French soldiers are employed in coal-ing the ships. The Chinese ironclads Cho Lung and Yung Wei have arrived. They intend to force the French blockade of the Island of Formosa. It is reported that the Chinese Government offers France 75,000,000 francs in settlement of claims. France demands 1,250,000,000 francs.

Yesterday there were thirty-one deaths from cholera in Paris. All but eleven occurred in the hospitals. During the twelve hours ending at noon today there were ten deaths, six in the hospitals. From midnight Thursday to 6 p. m. Friday eight deaths from cholera occurred in the city and fifteen in the hospitals. There were thirteen deaths today at Oran and one at Nantes. There were eighteen deaths yesterday at Compegne.

Acute typhoid-dysentery is the medical name given to the fatal scourge which has recently broken out in the western portions of Virginia. One hundred and fifty deaths have occurred in Wise County alone.

Nov. 22d.—The scourge which has for two weeks past created a panic in Southwest Virginia and part of West Virginia and Kentucky is, according to reports just received, abating slightly, although it is still creating desolation in a section already terribly tried. Postal-Clerk Wills has just returned here from Wise County. He says: "Since a time previous to the late election a contagious and fatal disease has visited the counties of Wise, Lee, Buchanan, Dickinson, and the edge of Scott in Virginia, and Lee, Harlan, and adjoining counties in Kentucky, and has been very disastrous in its effects. The symptoms are described as being very much like cholera and almost as fatal, lasting nine days as a maximum and being very quick in many cases. There has been a dreadful mortality, and in one small graveyard thirty new graves are seen as the result of its ravages. The disease is unknown and its nature undefined, but the symptoms are described as being like cholera and, indeed, that is the name given it by the people. It could not be more dreaded or much more disastrous if it were veritable Asiatic cholera. The disease is fatal in a large number of cases and frequently does its work in twenty-four hours or less, and persons who recover are sick about nine days." Mr. Wills said when he left that section a few days ago but few springs were flowing freely, and the water was so impregnated with a copperas or mineral taste as to be not only easily distinguished but very disagreeable. This is the supposed cause, and the disease is described as being contagious, so much so that when one in a family is taken all are apt to have it. Cases are stated where five out of a family of six died from its effects and others where persons died alone on account of their friends being afraid to go to them. The people are frightened and local business interests suffer. A large number of cattle are also reported dying from black-leg in the same counties. The people are absolutely dependent upon agriculture and cattle-raising, both of which branches have suffered from the drouth of last year as well as this. Twelve months ago this same section was visited by a famine and the people reduced to such a state that they were forced to beg aid from the country at large. In Carroll County the disease has been supplemented by a diphtheria scourge from which 150 children have already died. There are very few physicians in the section. Those who have been seen describe the disease as acute typhoid dysentery. Recent rains have slightly swollen the mountain streams, but water is still very scarce, in many instances farmers having to go ten miles to get it. They are in a deplorable condition, and winter coming on will aggravate their distress.

Nov. 23.—Articles of incorporation have been filed at Indianapolis, Ind., in behalf of the Eastern & Western Air-Line Railway, which is said to have a capital stock of $52,600,000 and which proposes to construct a continuous line through Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania.

Nov. 24.—It is stated that the experts attending the Congo Conference are of the opinion that England has no claim to the Bonny-Benue and upper Niger Rivers and she can claim only the real mouth of the Niger. It is semi-officially stated that France has concluded two conventions with the African International Association—one of which defines the boundaries of the Congo country and the other acknowledges the association by treaty. At Friday's sitting of the committee of the conference the Italian delegates proposed an addition to Germany's draft of the proposed declaration of the conference, to the effect that the Powers should contribute to the protection of all missionaries, travelers, and savants. Mr. Stanley advocated the construction of a railway from Vivi to Stanley Pool in order to cheapen the cost of transportation.

There were nineteen deaths from cholera in Paris yesterday. In the twelve hours ended at noon to-day there were only three deaths. The publication of bulletins is abandoned. The death of Admiral Fourichon is announced. At Oran during the forty-eight hours ended this evening there were eleven deaths from cholera. In the eighteen hours ending at 6 o'clock p. m. yesterday there were fourteen deaths from cholera, all but five of which occurred in hospitals. From midnight Sunday to six this evening there have been six deaths in the city from cholera.

Advices from Tonquin say that as reprisal for the attack made by the Chinese upon the French gunboats Eclair and Tromer the 19th inst., on the Clair River, while they were re-arming the garrison at Tu-Yuen-Wan, Gen. Briere de l'Isle telegraphs that Col. Duchesne was sent to attack a force of Black Flags and Chinese regulars intrenched in fortified works near that place.

The French forces captured the fortifications, the enemy fleeing. The French lost eight men killed and twenty-five wounded. The Chinese have evacuated the Song-Kan Valley. A later dispatch states that Col. Duchesne next day stormed without loss three fortified villages, and destroyed or captured all the enemy's supplies. The enemy were in full retreat, taking refuge in the mountains and forests.

The Times' Shanghai dispatch says: The Chinese fleet is preparing to leave for Formosa. It is believed that the French will demand the execution of the Tien-Tsin treaty, to be permitted to occupy Kelung and Tamsui for five years, and that the Chinese apologize for the Lang-Sou affair. The Chinese insist that the trouble at Lang-Sou was the fault of the French, and utterly refuse to comply with the terms proposed by France. They believe the French will keep Formosa if they once get possession.

The reports of the French victories in Formosa are fabrications, and their successes in Tonquin are overrated. The French invaders are at a standstill. Their operations are confined to the delta in Tonquin and to the Kelung harbor, Formosa. The Chinese are assuming the offensive in both Tonquin and Formosa. Before the French can resume the aggressive they must have an additional 15,000 men in Tonquin and 10,000 in Formosa. An expedition to Peking would be cheaper in the matter of both men and money.

At a demonstration at Paris, France, to-day of the workingmen and Socialists several advocated the massacre and robbery of the rich. Two speakers who advocated moderation were kicked into the streets. The shop-keepers in the vicinity of the meeting closed their places, fearing violence and pillage. The police were unable to disperse the assemblage, and were obliged to call on the military. The troops then took possession of the streets.

Nov. 26th.—The Government of Switzerland is imitating the example of its Austrian neighbor and waging a war against Mormon propagandists. The Federal Council at Bale has formerly resolved that the work of the Mormon missionaries in Switzerland is a great and growing evil, and that their converts or dupes are plundered and outraged after being decoyed from home. Strict repressive laws against the Mormon sectaries have been enacted, and their first results have just appeared. Two apostles of the Latter-Day Saints, one of whom is a German and the other a Swiss, have been arrested at Aarau and its suburb, Sofingen. In strict accordance with the new law they were sentenced to pay a fine of 100 francs each, and to spend twenty-five days in the communal jail. These two culprits have been very successful in procuring converts in the Canton of Aargau, and are said to have recruited hundreds of women among the peasants, as well as many of higher classes. Among the recent converts to the new faith were two rich maidens of Zofingen, of uncertain age, who converted all their property into cash and started for America under the leadership of the Swiss apostle. They were arrested in his company at Bale and compelled to return to their homes.

The French Government have resolved to send two more cruisers to the west coast of Africa in view of possible results of the Congo Conference.

A German Admiral and other European officers are employed in the Chinese northern fleet. The Chinese Government at Foo Chow has notified foreigners that Kinpai Channel is guarded by torpedoes, excepting a 100 foot passage. Thousands of troops are actively drilling there.

Foreigners are rigidly excluded from the arsenal, but it believed the reason is to conceal the damage by the bombardment and consequent stoppage of work. English and American gunboats are still off the settlement to protect neutrals. Chinese of the higher classes are bent upon fighting and discourage all overtures for peace.

The Mahdi's followers are menacing all caravan routes, frequently debouching to the river near Debbah and preventing supplies of cattle and camels from reaching Khartoum. Gen. Gordon has repeatedly repulsed attacks of rebels in their strenuous efforts to capture Omdermum, on the opposite side of the river.

Great and increasing distress is reported among the employes of the ship-builders in England. Starvation is said to be staring hundreds in the face.

Graetz, the capital of Styria, has just experienced five shocks of earthquake.

Vienna is afflicted with an epidemic of hydrophobia. Eighty cases have been reported, eleven of which proved fatal.

Small-pox is epidemic near Toronto, Canada, and its rapid spread has occasioned great alarm. Precautions of the most thorough sort have been taken to prevent the further ravages of the disease.

Eight Hocking Valley, O., miners have been indicted and arrested for firing upon the guards at Murray City, Nov. 5. In spite of emphatic denials, it is known that Frank Snyder, one of the miners, has been arrested, and, though now in a place of safety out of the State, will appear when wanted as witness.

"The Growth of the Catholic Church in America" was the theme of a sermon preached by Bishop McQuid of Rochester, N. Y., in the Cathedral to the members of the Plenary Council and a large congregation. Referring to the vast development of this country, Bishop McQuid said that the experiment of a government by the people has successfully withstood the rude shocks, serious defects, and conflicts of National interests—even a civil war. All the avenues of advancement to wealth and honor have been thronged with the children of intellect and industry. The home, the freedom, and the prosperity promised in the invitation to this land have been found by millions. Going into statistics regarding the Catholic Church, he said that in 1783 the number of Catholics, according to Bishop Carroll's calculation, might have amounted in Maryland to 1,600 souls, and in Pennsylvania to 7,000, and in the other States to 1,500. There were few or no churches, and no Bishops, and, in the judgment of the eighteen or twenty missionaries who ministered to the spiritual wants of those scattered members, as expressed in a letter to Rome, there was no need of a Bishop inasmuch as the Vicar-Apostolic in things spiritual would suffice. There was no college, schools, asylum, or hospital. The Bishop then spoke of the growth of the Catholic Church, in spite of the intolerance sometimes shown, as in the burning of the Ursuline Convent in Charlestown, Mass., and the attacks upon convents in Baltimore and other cities. The church in America to-day be summed up as follows: A Cardinal of the Holy Roman Church, an Apostolic delegate, the most reverend and illustrious metropolitan of the See of Baltimore, thirteen other Archbishops and Coadjutor-Archbishops, and sixty-one Bishops and Vicar-Apostolics, rulers over God's Church in this glorious Republic; 6,835 priests, under the leadership of the successors of the Apostles, in 7,763 churches and chapels, feed their flocks with the bread of life and devoutly care for their souls, and in 708 seminaries, colleges, and academies the higher education of the youth of both sexes is carried forward by learned professors and accomplished nuns. Sisters of all the teachings, communities, and orders assist the priests in the performance of a part that without their services would be left undone. Our orphans and the aged would be abandoned. In 1883, 481,834 pupils attended these schools, which institutions are supported without State aid.

Consternation prevails in the Village of Bloomington, N. J., in Passaic County, on account of the outbreak of virulent diphtheria, which appeared there about a week ago. The Patterson papers say that the disease is said to prevail in its worst form, and in most cases death ensues in a short time amid horrible suffering. It is calculated that since it first appeared there has been on the average one death every day. This, in a population of less than 1,000, is an enormously high death-rate.

Nov. 27.—In connection with the discussion of the subjects of revenue and appropriations in the German Reichstag, Secretary of the Treasury Burchard admitted that the financial exhibit was not satisfactory. There has been a notable decrease of 21,000,000 marks in the revenue derived from the beet-sugar industry, and in Herr Buchard's opinion no improvement can be expected in this direction at present. His only suggestion was that the House devote itself earnestly to a reform of taxation. Several Liberal members strenuously objected to all fresh taxation upon the people, and declared that they would only vote for the Government's actual requirements. The Reichstag—180 against 99—adopted a resolution in favor of the payment of its members for their services as legislators. The resolution was strongly opposed by Bismarck. The result is considered a signal defeat for Bismarck.

The Secretary of the Interior in his annual report, congratulates the country that there has been no Indian outbreak during the year, and lays great stress upon the system of education now in vogue among these wards of the Nation, with a special reference to the success of the manual-training system. Among other things, the Secretary recommends that payments of annuities to the Indians be made in cattle, agricultural implements, etc, and that the Homestead act be made permanent. He again urges the purchase of 18,000 square miles of the Sioux reservation and a reduction of the Crow reservation. In connection with that portion of the report on the General Land Office, Secretary Teller urges the repeal of the pre-emption laws, recommends more liberal appropriations for the detection of land frauds, and asks for legislation which will enable the department to destroy fences illegally constructed on public lands.

Thirty Hocking Valley miners have been arrested. Gov. Hoadly denies that the troops have been ordered to be in readiness to go to the valley, and expresses the opinion that the civil authorities will be equal to any emergency that may arise.

Thanksgiving-Day was generally observed throughout the country in the familiar, time-honored way. There was one notable exception to the general rule, however, and that was afforded by the turnout of about 1,000 men in the streets of Chicago to publicly express their reasons for not giving thanks. The tone of the meeting was one of fierce denunciation leveled at "capitalistic robbers" and "our lords," who were represented in the words of one of the speakers as "feasting on the blood of our wives and children." The black flag, typical of hunger, was hoisted and carried in Chicago for the first time, and a procession of the discontented marched past the dwelling places of the "Lords," determined, to use the phraseology which set it in motion, "to make the voice of hunger heard."

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Meyers & Cohen, dealers in cloaks, New York, have made an assignment, with preferences amounting to $39,000.

It is believed that the coal-miners' strike on the Monongahela River is practically ended.

Four hundred hands at the Branford (Conn.) Lock Works struck Nov. 17, on account of a cut of ten per cent in the wages.

Robert Titus, dealer in seeds, New York, failed Nov. 17, with liabilities of $33,000 and assets of $4,000.

Exclusive of specie, the exports from New York for the week ending Nov. 18, were $7,085,000 against $5,543,000 the week previous.

Bismarck has a new project for bettering the condition of the workingmen and counteracting the influence of the Socialists among them. He proposes the establishment of trade committees in all the German manufacturing centers, with a view to regulating the labor supply according to the demand, and ascertaining where labor can be best employed.

Between 1,500 and 1,800 men will be thrown out of employment Nov. 21, by the closing down of the North Chicago Rolling Mill Company's mills at South Chicago. Work will probably be resumed in two months.

Reports of heavy reductions in the number of operatives, and of fears that many of the manufacturing interests concerned will close down indefinitely, come from Boston, Fall River, Pittsburg, and other centres. The outlook for the winter is not a specially attractive one to the skilled working classes in the East.

There were two hundred and forty-eight failures in the United States and twenty-nine in Canada during the week ending November 21st, a total increase of forty-one over the week previous. The increase is mostly in the Western and Southern States.

According to the annual report of the Third Assistant Postmaster General, the total value of postage stamps, stamped envelopes, postal-cards, etc., issued during the year was $41,515,877—a decrease of $1,394,442 as compared with the year previous.

One of the most interesting points in the forthcoming report of the Controller of the Treasury will be the one which shows that the contraction of the bank circulation amounted in the year ending October 31st only to about $25,000,000. This is less by half than was anticipated at the beginning of the year.

A national bank, known as the Government Bank of China, has been established at Pekin. Its capital is half Chinese and half foreign, and the Board of Management is half Chinese and half foreigners.

Heavy rains have seriously damaged the rice crop in the Province of Chinkiang, China.

The clearing-house returns for New York last week were $555,711,400, a decrease of 18.6 per cent as compared with the returns for the corresponding week in 1883. Chicago's returns aggregated $43,258,217, or a decrease of 9.7 per cent. Outside of New York the falling off as compared with the corresponding period in 1883 was 9 per cent.

Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the corn trade says: "Young wheat could scarcely look stronger, and there is not an autumn-sown crop of any kind which has not an exceptionally good average appearance. Wheat declined one shilling per quarter in London Monday, and prices have been weakening ever since. Sales of English wheat the last week, 68,663 quarters, at 31 shillings 7 pence per quarter, against 80,102 quarters at 40 shillings 5 pence per quarter the corresponding week last year. Flour declined 2 shillings under pressure from London bakers, who reduced the price of bread. Foreign wheat in London is gradually sinking toward unfathomable bottom, and how far yet it will be before bottom be reached is a matter of pure speculation. Maize is firm, owing to scarcity. Oats are six-pence per quarter lower. There are no cargoes off coast, prevailing east winds keeping off expected arrivals. One cargo was sold and one withdrawn, leaving the market bare. For cargoes forward there is but little demand."

The annual report of the Controller of Currency, contains the following facts: The number of new banks organized during the year was one hundred and ninety-one, with an aggregate capital of $16,042,230. Of these, one hundred and two were organized in Western States, their capital aggregating $8,905,880. The number of National banks organized since the establishment of the system is 3,261, and the total number in existence November 1, was 2,671—the most in operation at any one time. Eleven National Banks, with an aggregate capital of $1,285,000, failed during the Year. The reduction of liabilities and of loans by banks during the year was over $63,000,000. One of the Controller's suggestions is to fund the 4 per cent bonds maturing in 1907 into 3 or 2½ per cent bonds, maturing in proportionate amounts at certain fixed intervals. He also recommends an issue by the National banks of circulation to the extent of 100 per cent par value, of bonds deposited, instead of 90 per cent as at present.

About 150 operatives are thrown out of employment by the closing for an indefinite period of E. W. Chapin & Sons' woolen mills at Northborough, Mass. The striking weavers at Taunton, Mass., have reconsidered their previous determination, and now refuse to go to work at the reduced wages. The latest cuts in the iron industry are a twenty per cent reduction at the Oliver Bros.' mill, Pittsburg, and one of five per cent at the Susquehanna Rolling Mill, Columbia, Pa.

American distillers are again endeavoring to make arrangements to export into Canada a portion of their surplus bonded whisky.

Scarboro Brothers, worsted spinners at Halifax, Eng., failed for £130,000. The failure was caused by depression in trade.

The great mining and transportation corporations representing the coal combination have determined upon a general suspension of operations at the collieries in the Schuylkill, Lehigh, Wyoming, and Lackawanna regions of Pennsylvania. The suspension will be ordered about

Dec. 1st. An army of between 75,000 and 100,000 will be thrown out of employment by the movement. The colliers, considering the scheme uncalled-for, unwarranted, and unjust upon the part of the companies, are preparing to begin a counter movement, and it is confidently believed serious trouble will ensue.

The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows an increase of £166,000. The proportion of the Bank of England's reserve to the liabilities is 39¾ per cent.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows a decrease in gold of 500,000 francs; increase in silver, 1,200,000 francs.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Nov. 24th.—Loss by fire at Evanston, Ill., $20,000. Chicago, Ill., $125,000. Santa Fe, N. M., $10,000. Washington, Pa., $25,000. Rome, N. Y., $23,000. Green Cone, Florida, $25,000.

Norton's otherwise known as the Grand Opera-House, St. Louis Mo., was destroyed by fire yesterday, causing a loss of $175,000. It was insured for $150,000.

Advices from India state that a terrible cyclone visited Madras Presidency, causing immense damage. The dykes on Cholaveram Lake were burst in many places, with the consequent effect of stopping the water supply of the City of Madras.

Nov. 27.—Six business houses at Whitehall, Greene County, Ill., have been destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $21,000. A coal-breaker near Wilkesbarre, Pa., containing 510 tons of coal, together with a lot of machinery, was destroyed by fire early this morning. The loss is placed at $50,000.

SELF RELIANCE.

There is nothing more likely to result in the successful career of a young man than confident self-reliance. It is astonishing how much more a youth will accomplish who relies upon himself, than one who depends upon others for assistance. Having first ascertained the direction in, and the means by, which his object is to be reached, let him put his whole energies to work, and, with unflinching industry, press forward. The young man who, instead of rising at five, sleeps till seven or eight, and who spends his evenings on the corners, or in the companionship of those who are wanting in laudable ambition, rarely ever wins a position of honor, or achieves a reputation above that enjoyed by the common masses.

In a country like ours, where the avenues to honor and wealth are open alike to all, there is no reasonable excuse that can be offered for a man's failure to achieve one or the other, or both. Ill health, or extraordinary misfortune, may keep him down, but these are the exceptions that establish the rule. Few men know how much they are capable of until they have first thoroughly tested their abilities. The amount of labor, literary or mechanical, which a person in vigorous health can perform, is almost without limit, if a systematic method is adopted, and the proper spirit incited to the effort. An hour of each evening spent with some good author, or the study of some branch of useful science, will, in the course of a few years, give to a young man who thus devotes the small portion of time an amount of information (literary or scientific) which can not fail to fit him for positions to which he could never properly aspire without his attention to study.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled by them. The things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them.

If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away, full of perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary hours, and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a bare coffin without a flower, and a funeral without an eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand, for their burial. Post-mortem kindnesses do not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary days.

MAKE A FEW.

A pretentious student in Brown University once told Dr. Wayland that he thought it would be easy to make proverbs like those of Solomon. The only reply of Dr. Wayland was, "Make a few!" If skeptics who have spent so much time in railing at the Bible would try their hands at making a better book, a book that would take hold upon the heart of humanity; which would interest children and comfort old age; which would inspire manhood and womanhood with the highest, truest, noblest thoughts; which would chasten them in joy and comfort them in sorrow; if infidels would produce the first page of such a book as this, we would gladly listen to what they have to say. But this eternal fault-finding, this everlasting negation; this seeking to rob people of a healthful and comfortable faith and leave them nothing in its place; this parading of a few worn-out sneers and objections, never will accomplish much with a world that is hungering for the bread of life, and that longs to drink of the waters of salvation.

TRUE STRENGTH.

We must measure a man's strength by the power of the feelings he subdues, not by the power of those which subdue him. And hence, composure is often the highest result of strength. Did we ever see a man receive a flagrant injury, and then reply calmly? That is a man spiritually strong. Or, did we ever see a man in anguish, stand as if carved out of solid rock, as if mastering himself? Or one bearing a hopeless daily trial remain silent and never tell the world what cankered his home peace? That is strength. We too often mistake strong feelings for strong character. A man who bears all before him, before whose frown domestics tremble, and whose bursts of fury make the children of the household quake, because he has his way in all things, we call him a strong man. The truth is, that he is a weak man; it is his passions that are strong; he, mastered by them, is weak.

As nature delights to array herself in beautiful garments in the springtime, so our children should be taught to array themselves in the beautiful garments of gentleness, purity and love.

Original Poetry.

GOOD, TRUTH, AND RIGHT.

God made one happy pair, from whom sprang all of every nation;
No man can claim a higher birth, whatever his rank or station;
No patent of nobility can alter his condition;
He only is a nobleman who nobly acts his mission.

The humble man, whose brawny hands are hard with honest labor,
Is in God's judgment, far above his vicious, lordly neighbor;
And she, who in the poor man's home, does earnestly her duty
As wife and mother, ranks above a useless, royal beauty.

God made us all, just as we are; one common blood He gave us;
He left uncurbed the human will, and only deeds can save us;
Titles and ranks were made by man, but Death sets all things even—
To pauper and to king alike, six feet of earth are given.

Then how absurd for us to boast of blood, and caste, and classes,
When man in virtuous deeds alone his fellow man surpasses;
God's law, in spite of human rules, this principle evinces—
That right is right, and wrong is wrong, with paupers and with princes.

The vicious man of rank and ease, the conscienceless despoiler,
Who treats with scorn, and frowns upon, and robs the honest toiler,
May feel secure from censure when creatures deify them;
But what will be the verdict when the Infinite shall try them?

They'll find that Heaven will set at naught all titles, ranks and treasure;
Good, truth and right, and honest worth, will only meet the measure:
Each man must answer for his deeds, in spite of rank or splendor;
The higher in the social scale, the greater the offender.

There is a monitor who guides the richest and the poorest;
And he will win the highest prize, whose record here is purest.
Brothers—sisters—we are all of one Father and Protector;
And Death, the stern-browed monarch, is of persons no respecter;
Naked we came, naked we go, when our brief stay is over,
And ranks and titles will not move the righteous, just Jehovah.

MISTAKES OF BRADEN.

1st. States on p. 34 of Braden and Kelley Debate that the Book of Mormon speaks of "ore plates," when the language of the book is "I did make plates of ore."

2d. On p. 43 he says he proved certain things by sixteen witnesses who "from reading it, (Spaulding Romance), and hearing him read it, became more or less familiar with its contents; when he had produced testimony from only six who testify to having read or hearing it read.

3d. On p. 43 he says he proved by these sixteen witnesses that Solomon Spaulding, "between the years 1809 and 1816;" "spent much of his time in preparing manuscripts," &c. He had produced testimony from none giving these dates.

4th. He had produced testimony from only one who spoke of manuscripts in the plural.

5th. On p. 43 he claims the sixteen give "an outline of the historic portion of the Nephite part of the Book of Mormon." He had produced testimony from only nine who relate any incident related by the Book of Mormon.

6th. On p. 43 he claims his sixteen witnesses give names "of the principal characters." Only seven pretend to give names.

7th. Claims on p. 43 that the sixteen give the "starting point of the history;" when only six of them mention it.

8th. On page 43, "They (the sixteen) all declare there was no religious matter in his manuscript." In their testimony as presented by Braden but few had said so.

9th. He says on p. 43, "Oliver Smith testifies that Spaulding told him, just before going to Pittsburg, that he would prepare the manuscript for press," &c. This is not in Oliver Smith's testimony as produced by Braden; see p. 35 of Debate.

10th. On p. 43 he says that J. N. Miller testifies: "Spaulding told him that he landed the people at the Isthmus of Darien which he called Zarahemla." This is not in J. N. Miller's testimony as found on p. 35.

11th. On p. 52 he says: "The Book of Mormon declares in several places the Nephites were Manassehites," which is not true.

12th. On p. 62 he represents Mr. Gilbert as saying the manuscript "abounded in misspelled words," when Gilbert says: "The spelling was good." See p. 382.

13th. On p. 64 he claims Spaulding was guilty of "caricaturing the Bible;" but on p. 67 he says: "Nearly all of our witnesses are careful to state that the religious portion of the Book of Mormon was not in the Manuscript Found."

14th. On p. 65 he claims Spaulding was "the very man that would attract company, and have much company, and of the highest character and intelligence;" yet on p. 64 he makes him out a skeptic, a liar, and his motives "very questionable."

15th. On p. 66 he claims Mrs. Solomon Spaulding, Miss Martha Spaulding, John Spaulding, Mrs. John Spaulding, Lake, J. N. Miller, Smith, Wright, Howard, Cunningham, Jas. Miller, McKee, Dodd and Sidney Rigdon, testify to Spaulding's Romance being a history of the first settlers of America; when he had produced no testimony to this effect from Miss Spaulding, Jas. Miller, McKee, Dodd, or Rigdon.

16th. On p. 66 quotes Miss Martha Spaulding, Mrs. J. Spaulding, Smith, Cunningham and Jackson, to prove the leader's names as represented by Spaulding were Nephi and Lehi; which is false so far as Miss Spaulding, Cunningham and Jackson are concerned.

17th. On p. 66 he says: "The end of their wars, in two instances, was the total annihilation in battle, of all but one;" for which he quotes Jackson. Jackson does not say so. See p. 42.

18th. On p. 66 he quotes J. Spaulding, Mrs. J. Spaulding, Miller & Smith as authority for the "Romance" giving an "account of the civilization, arts, sciences, laws and customs of the aboriginies of America." Mrs. J. Spaulding, nor Miller speaks of this point.

19th. On p. 66, as authority that the Romance was "written in Scriptural Style," he quotes "Rigdon, Winter, Spaulding, Mrs. S. Spaulding, Mrs. J. Spaulding, Lake, Jas. Miller, Smith, Cunningham and Jackson. By examination it will be seen he had produced no evidence upon this point from either Rigdon, Mrs. J. Spaulding, Lake, Miller, or Smith.

20th. On p. 66 as authority that the Romance contained the phrases, "And it came to pass," "And now it came to pass," he names Mrs. S. Spaulding, J. Spaulding, Mrs. J. Spaulding, Lake, Cunningham and Jas. Miller. Consult their testimony as produced by Braden, and you will find this false so far as Mrs. S. Spaulding, Mrs. J. Spaulding, Cunningham and Miller are concerned.

21st. On p. 66 he says: "One party of emigrants landed near the Ithmus of Darien, which they called Zarahemla, and migrated across the continent in a north-east direction," and quotes J. N. Miller. See Miller's testimony on p. 35.

22d. On p. 73 he says: "He spent five years on it," (The Romance), but on page 43 he says "seven years."

23d. On p. 73 he says that Mrs. Spaulding, Miss Spaulding and Miller "declare that he had many manuscripts." He produced this testimony from none of them.

24th. On p. 73 he says: "That he (Rigdon) had it (Spaulding Romance) in 1826, and declared it would be a great thing some day, to his niece, Mrs. Dunlap." Mrs. Dunlap does not say he had the Spaulding Romance. See p. 45.

25th. On p. 73 he says: "We have proved that he (Rigdon) knew of the publication of the Book of Mormon long before it appeared, by D. Atwater, A. Bently, Alexander Campbell, Green and Dille." This is false especially as regards Green, and Dille. See p. 46.

26th. Read what he says he proved by Campbell, Atwater and Bently as found on pp. 74 and 75, and then read their testimonies as found on p. 45 and the reader will see a great mistake indeed.

27th. On p. 95 he says that Mrs. Davidson said she "only gave him (Hurlbut) an order to examine a trunk hundreds of miles away, in Hartwich, N. Y., to see if it (the manuscript) was in the trunk." If the reader will refer to Mrs. D's. testimony he will discover this to be a false statement.

28th. On p. 96 in regard to the charge that Hurlbut sold the manuscript to the Mormons he says: "These charges Hurlbut never met but laid under them until his death." On p. 91 in a letter Hurlbut wrote to Mr. Patterson of Pittsburg, dated Aug. 19th, 1879, he says: "I did not destroy the manuscript nor dispose of it to Joe Smith or to any other person."

29th. Will Mr. Braden tell us where he finds his authority for saying that Joseph Smith claimed to have "examined all religious parties?" See p. 98.

30th. Will he also tell us why he says Joseph Smith claimed to "found a purer system than the world had ever seen?" See p. 98.

31st. On p. 107 he garbles the testimony of the Three Witnesses. See p. 5.

32d. On p. 108 he states in speaking of what the Book of Mormon teaches that Nephi "makes Laban drunk." This is false. See B. of M., p. 8.

33d. On p. 109 he says Lehi prophesied "that these plates of Laban shall go forth to all nations;" but the Book adds "who were of his seed." See B. of M. p. 11.

34th. On p. 111 he represents that the Book of Mormon claims that Nephi and his company left only Laman and Lemuel and their families when departing into the wilderness, which is absolutely false. See B. of M. p. 62.

35th. On p. 119 he represents Mrs. Salisbury as saying the plates were translated "at their fathers;" which she does not say. See p. 100.

36th. On p. 120 he says: King Jacob tells us that "a hundredth part of the wars, contentions and exploits of the Nephites could not be engraven on his plates." A quotation not to be found.

37th. On p. 120, in speaking of events recorded on p. 118 of Book of Mormon, he says: "About forty years before this, six women left Jerusalem;" when according to the book at least fifty-five years had passed. See Book of Mormon p. 112.

38th. The number of women as stated above is wrong. There were Lehi's wife, see p. 4, Ishmael's wife and five daughters, see p. 12, besides Nephi speaks of his sisters, how many we do not know. See p. 64.

39th. Braden adds, "but one (of these women) was then married." Doubtless the wives of Lehi and Ishmael were both married.

40th. On p. 120 he garbles a quotation from the 120th p. of the Book of Mormon as follows: The book says: "It began to put forth somewhat a little, young and tender branches." Braden quotes it: "It began to put forth somewhat a tender little branches."

(Note.—Nearly every passage I have examined purporting to be from Book of Mormon is more or less garbled. Space will not allow me to notice all).

41st. He says, on p. 130: "Moroni takes up Mormon's work, and he informs us that Masonry shall be prevalent when the Book of Mormon appears;" when the word Mason, or Masonry does not appear in the book.

42d. On p. 132 he says: "Moroni prophesies the one who finds these plates shall show them to three persons. Joe showed them to eleven." The language of the book is: "And behold ye may be privileged that ye may show the plates unto those who shall assist to bring forth this work; and unto three shall they be shown by the power of God."

43d. He says, on p. 34: "It is our purpose to prove that the Book of Mormon originated with Solomon Spaulding;" but on p. 139 he calls "Rigdon the author of the book."

44th. On p. 141 he says: "Amulek declares that Nephi, and all who went with Lehi were Mannassehites, and not Jews at all." Amulek only says, "Lehi was a descendant of Mannasseh." See Book of Mormon p. 231.

45th. On p. 141 he says: "Page 375 we are told the devil led Jared and his people." It is not there.

46th. On p. 148 after many falsehoods in regard to the Jaredites he says: "Sidney did not stop and figure that story out when he wrote it;" but on p. 43 he says: Spaulding "added the Jaredite emigration."

47th. On p. 150 he claims that events recorded on p. 136 of the Book of Mormon transpired 250 years B. C.; but on p. 151 he says this page relates to things happening 400 years B. C.

48th. On p. 151 in trying to make the Book of Mormon to agree with Shakespeare he misquotes the former.

49th. On p. 159 he says, speaking of the Book of Mormon: "It had not a mark of punctuation in it;" but on p. 160 he says: "The fabrications of the Book of Mormon copied * * * the punctuation of King James' version."

50th. On p. 159 he says it was "badly spelled;" but Gilbert says, (see p. 382), "The spelling was good."

51st. On p. 161 he tries to make Spaulding out an ignorant man; but on p. 75 he says "he received the degree of A. M. from Dartmouth College."

52d. On p. 161 he says: "It was like Josh Billings' spelling." Gilbert says: "The spelling was good."

53d. On p. 161 he says: "We have proved by historic evidence that Rigdon remodeled Spaulding's manuscript;" but on p. 171 he says: "We can trace it no farther back than Joe Smith in 1830."

54th. On p. 33 he tells us he expects to prove the Book of Mormon had its origin "about seventy years ago," (1814), then admits his failure on p. 171 by saying: "From the Tower of Babel to 1830, not a human being knew of the book, or knew of the book, or knew a single particle of its pretended history."

55th. On p. 173 he says a certain document was signed by "Sidney Rigdon and eighty-four other leading Mormons;" and on same page says, "Rigdon and eighty-three other leading Mormons."

56th. On p. 173, accuses O. Cowdery of living in adultery in Nauvoo, when he did not reside there at all.

57th. On p. 180 he says: "The eight witnesses tell us that the leaves Joe had translated were loose, separated from what he had not translated." This is false, as will be seen by reference to their testimony found on p. 5.

58th. On p. 180 he tells us that the eight witnesses testify that they did not see the plates which were not translated. False again. See p. 5.

59th. On p. 202 he relates what a "Mr. Moreton, one of the first apostles, told his daughter." There was no man of that name among the first apostles.

60th. On p. 206 he falsely states: "The Josephites publish, and use as their standards, the works of the Pratts and other Utah Mormons."

61st. On p. 206 he misquotes the Book of Mormon on the subject of polygamy.

62d. On page 214 he falsely states that William Marks was once the Editor of "their (the Josephite) official organ."

63d. On same page he makes the same false assertion in regard to Zenas H. Gurley.

64th. On p. 216 he claims to have produced testimony from Rigdon to the effect "that Solomon Spaulding wrote a romance," which can not be found in the book.

65th. He claims on 218 to have proved that Cowdery "died a drunken sot, with delirium tremens." This he had not attempted to prove.

66th. He almost invariably misquotes the Bible: I will ask the reader to read the two passages found on p. 222 as samples of his garbling.

I have not written this to refute the positions taken by Mr. Braden; this was neatly and thoroughly done by his opponent. But as Mr. Braden was introduced as a witness in my late debate, and may be so introduced again, I write it to show his utter unreliability. I thought first to speak of all his mistakes, but they multiplied so rapidly, I concluded to pass by misrepresentation of other books, and confine myself to the book under consideration, and the standard of evidence. I soon found however that this would have to be abridged. Then when I had passed through one proposition, noting perhaps half of his mistakes, I concluded if I examined the other two it would be too voluminous to publish, and so conclude. Surely here is enough to accomplish my object.

HEMAN C. SMITH.

LETTER FROM A. H. SMITH.

BRO. JOSEPH:—As I promised, so I now essay to fulfill, and write you for the Herald.

There are some things I have to meet in my travels, which I think are erroneous, and ought not to be. Prominent among them is the willingness and readiness of the Saints to adjudge a person's motives to be evil, because forsooth he does not believe certain doctrines which have been taught in the past, and have been esteemed as cardinal points in the gospel of Christ. The legitimate results of this growing evil, are loss of confidence in, and suspicion of the individual, who may have been so unfortunate as to express his unbelief, and materially injures, not only the person, but the good work he might do. While I do not agree with some of my brethren, and believe their ideas to be erroneous, I at the same time grant them the same meed I ask for myself; and thus I am bound to believe them honest, and for the finale just as anxious as I, i. e., the restoration and establishment of Zion, the city of our God. There is one principle that has long been taught as a means to the much desired result, which, (unfortunately I think), has been called in question, and a disbelief in it expressed by some of the leading ministers of the church. From this expressed unbelief, coming from such a source, I find a growing dissatisfaction, and uneasiness among the members of the church; and as a result of this uneasiness and mistrust of the motives of the officials, the hand is stayed from giving the church her just dues, and thus the Bishop is forced to say the treasury of the church is depleted, and the church is in a deplorable state financially.

The principle I refer to is that of a Literal Gathering. In writing on this subject, I do so after careful consideration, examination, and prayerful thought. I have refrained from doing so until I became painfully aware that an injury was, and is being done to the work, by the misunderstanding I believe to exist because of the unwise expression, (publicly it may be), of the private views of a few leading men of the church.

I protest against the manner in which these expressions of private views are received and made use of. It is assumed that because one or two members of a quorum express an unbelief in a doctrine, of necessity the whole quorum so disbelieves, and of course the whole quorum is on the verge of apostasy. This kind of reasoning is wrong, and works an injury, both to the individuals, the quorum, and the cause; and frequently seriously injures their effectiveness in their ministerial labors. No man ought to be adjudged as being in error upon any principle, until he has been heard, or has placed himself upon record upon the matter in controversy; and upon the subject of the gathering many have been silent for a few years, and yet have been judged from the expression of others' views. They have been led to believe that the church has never authoritatively spoken on the principle, and that this was one of those disputed questions referred to the General Assembly, and have been passive. Others have understood the matter differently and have written and talked, and thus have put themselves on record; and from this record I believe an unjust judgment is formed in the minds of many, yea very many of the church members.

I have carefully examined the minutes of the General Conferences, and only find where a motion was made to refer this principle, in common with the whole matter contained in the findings on the case of Bro. J. W. Briggs, to the General Assembly; but a motion to table defeated the one to refer. Immediately followed the resolution to "remove the disability," and restore Bro. J. W. Briggs to his standing in the church; and this without farther action on the subject of the gathering left the matter an open question still. So I have held, and so I hold it still. And therefore I believe I have legal right to examine the principle, and publicly express my views and the reasons for them. While I express my views, I also believe I am expressing the views of the church I represent.

I believe in the literal gathering of the Saints. I read the definition of the word literal to be, "According to the letter," exact; and with this meaning, the letter referred to is the revelations of God on the subject. These revelations are largely found in the book of Doctrine and Covenants.

That we may not assume to dictate, or commit the error of assuming dictatorial powers, and claim the right to say, some of those revelations are of God, and some are not; and reserve to ourselves the right to say which are and which are not, and thus accept just those which suit our private views and purposes, and reject those which do not, I purpose examining the record, and tearing down the excuse used by some, z. e., "the church has not spoken authoritatively." To do this, I call your attention to the position assumed by the church in its present appellation, Reorganization. To reorganize in this instance has been defined to mean, the assembling of former members of the church, and organizing anew. If this be correct, and I have no desire to doubt it, this church is the very body to whom those commandments found in the Doctrine and Covenants were given, and consequently they are binding upon us. This idea is confirmed by the records of the Reorganization, as witness the testimony of Bro. Z. H. Gurley, sen., in the very conception of the work of reorganization. He writes, Herald, vol. 1, No. 1, of himself and Bro. Reuben Newkirk: "The Spirit of God was with us, and day after day was spent in holding council about the matter, until one day, being at work together in a lone place, we joined hands, and in a most solemn manner entered into a covenant, calling God to witness, that we would from that hour renounce all that claimed to be prophets, and take the Bible, Book of Mormon, Book of Covenants, and the Holy Spirit for our guide."

This was in the fall of 1851, and in connection with brethren J. W. Briggs, David Powell, and a few others, these two brethren formed a nucleus for the Reorganization; and in 1852, by a return to the standard works, the church organization was effected anew; and from that time till now, the great high tower of strength in the struggle with the apostate church and the world, has been our abiding in the teachings of those three witnesses, the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, especially the last two, the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, as standards and the end to all controversy. Again, in 1878, September 13th, the church affirmed by resolution these three books without any reservation, as the "standards of authority on all matters of church government and doctrine; and the final standard of reference on appeal in all controversies, arising, or which may arise in this church of Christ. So I hold them, and to be consistent with myself, the church and the world, so long as I remain a representative of the body that thus affirmed, I am in honor bound to teach whatever is clearly taught in those three books, or either of them, as doctrine. My private opinion has very little to do with it. So long as I am a representative, I have no right, as such, to advance ideas and views of my own, that are antagonistic to those books, and detrimental to the faith of those who believe in them. In support of this idea, I call your attention to the report of the First Presidency, as a committee appointed by the General Conference, to define the meaning and latitude of the resolution above referred to. In this I find this clause: "It is clear to us, that it is destructive to the faith of the church, and inconsistent with the calling and dignity of the ministry, to decry, disclaim, preach or teach contrary to the revelations in said Book of Covenants; or to arraign them in such a way that the faith of the people is weakened, and they thereby distressed."

I regret very much, that I have been so unfortunate as to have seen in several instances, where the faith of the Saints has been shaken by the talk and unwise expression, both in writing and speech, of representative men in the church, on the principle under examination. I will not say their faith in the gospel has been shaken; but their faith in the Reorganization and its representative men has been weakened, and harm is being done to the work; and the simple minded are in doubt and trouble. It is for this reason that I am moved upon to write this article, to remove the obstacle that may seem to be in the way, because of the pretended lack of authoritative statement.

I assume that the church has so affirmed, and shall try to prove it; and then examine what grounds we have for our belief in the principle, and see if it is simply a "vagary" of the mind, and purely of human origin. Some may urge, that the principle of gathering is not the issue; but is there now a place to gather to. Observe the term place has been inserted and made to mean stake. I can agree with the idea that there is no stake now for the gathering unto; but I affirm there is now a place, and that the gathering has now begun; and in strict keeping with the revelations so far as the church has moved in the matter. In Herald vol. 22, No. 10, May 15th, 1875, page 295, afternoon session of General Conference, we find it recorded, that the church not only believes in the gathering, but that the "necessities and genius" of the latter day work demanded a place for the gathering; and not only that, but that the spiritual condition, and the mind and will of the people, were now favorable to the gathering. As a result of the authoritative affirmation, a committee, mark you a standing committee, was appointed, five in number. The primary object of this committee, as shown in the preamble, was to seek out and locate, and purchase the land for a place of gathering. When this location was determined, the chief authorities and the press and fixtures, were to be moved thereto, or to within the limits of such gathering place.

This committee sent out circulars to the various points which were thought available in the "regions round about," that they might make a wise selection; and reported from year to year, or semi-annually, and their reports were received, and they continued as a locating committee. The result of their work may be seen in the little town of Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, as a gathering place.

Here I wish to go back in the history of the church, and examine some of the evidences used against there being a place now for the gathering; and upon the basis of these evidences an argument has been made against the gathering at all. In the Word of consolation, sent out to the scattered Saints in the early days of the Reorganization, is found a resolution as follows: "Resolved, That in the opinion of this conference, there is no stake to which the Saints on this continent are commanded to gather at the present time; but that the Saints on all other lands are commanded to gather to this land, preparatory to the re-establishment of the church in Zion; when the scattered Saints on this land will also be commanded to gather, and return to Zion and their inheritances, in fulfillment of the promises of God; and it is the duty of the Saints to turn their hearts and their faces towards Zion, and supplicate the Lord for such deliverance."

In 1863 the church re-affirmed the whole resolution. Observe, there is not one syllable of contradiction to the principle of the gathering; but upon the other hand an affirmation of a command of God to gather; first to the Saints in all other lands, and then to the Saints in this land also; and all in fulfillment of God's promises. Where, oh where is Zion? For the Saints on this land are commanded "to turn their hearts and faces towards Zion." No place? Where, oh where is Zion? Echo answers, where? Again, in 1878, just before the close of a long session, a resolution was introduced, censuring an Elder if he should teach, or preach, contrary to the resolution of General Conference. Referring again to the already famous resolution quoted, and an argument was urged, that the Elders were injuring and retarding the work of the locating committee, by teaching the Saints to gather in the "region round about;" because if the gathering should begin and become known to land holders, the price of land would go up fabulously; and a desire was had that the work of the committee might be a success. And for fear this last action of the church might prejudice the minds of the Saints, and alarm them, it was deemed necessary by the editor of the Herald, to insert the original Resolution, and quote from the Resolution of 1873; and expressly state, that the Resolution censuring, &c., must not be construed by any one as an attack on the principle of the gathering. Consistency is said to be a jewel; but I fail to see any consistency in the position the aforesaid resolutions place the church in; neither can I see any consistency in any saying she has not spoken on the matter.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., March, 1884.

THE KING AND KINGDOM.

A NARRATIVE in the Herald, written by a brother from California, in which he makes out that Christ is not now a king, is in my estimation a very weak argument, because not sustained by the law and the testimony. He admits my quotation in a letter written by me, that God is a great king. Malachi 1:14. In a former letter, written by this brother, he stated that there was no king and no territory, and therefore could be no kingdom; but admits that God is a great king. Well, I could prove that we have territory. I will quote Deut. 33:17: "His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns; with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth." That this is a part of the globe upon which we dwell, see also Ps. 98:10: "According to thy name, O God, so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth." "But behold, this land saith God, shall be a land of thine inheritance, and the Gentiles shall be blessed upon this land; and this land shall be a land of liberty, unto the Gentiles, and I will fortify this land against all other nations." This is the word of the Lord by the prophet Nephi.—Book of Mormon, p. 77. We have now territory. I did not state that Christ sat on the throne of David, but a king had to be anointed; Jesus Christ is the anointed, and he was so from everlasting." "The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. I was set up from everlasting." Prov. 8:22, 23. The word set up, is the anointed, hence "he is the Everlasting King, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, and of his kingdom shall be no end." Read 1 Kings 1:32-34, how that Solomon was anointed king, and David says, "Cause Solomon my son to ride upon mine own mule, and say God save king Solomon." This was before he sat upon the throne of his father David. "Rejoice greatly, O daughters of Zion; shout, O daughters of Jerusalem; behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass." Zech. 9:9. "And they brought him to Jesus; and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon. And as he went they spread their clothes in the way. And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the Mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice, and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen, saying, Blessed is the King who cometh in the name of the Lord, peace in heaven, and glory in the highest!" Luke 19:34-37, I. T. Why did Jesus not inform them that he was not yet a king, but would be; read also St. John 1:45-49, I. T. "And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross, and the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS. This title then read many of the Jews; for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city; and it was written in Hebrew and Greek, and Latin. Then said the chief priest of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews, but that he said, I am King of the Jews." St. John 19:19-21, I. T. It seems that this was one of the many reasons that they crucified him, for when pilate said "Shall I crucify your king?" they said, "we have no king but Cæsar." John 19:15. See also Matt. 27:11, 12, with Mark 15:3, 4, I. T.

To prove that we are in his kingdom without being in the Church of Christ, you quote Doc. and Cov. 85:9. But the kingdom of the prince of darkness is also in space; therefore we must be translatable, for we can not be in both at the same time. You might as well say that a man is in the world before he is born, because the one that compasses him is in the world; hence when we are in the kingdom of darkness, we are in space; for there is no space in the which there is no kingdom; but we never can be in the kingdom of God unless we are translated, hence Paul says, "Giving thanks unto the Father which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light; who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear son."—Col. 1:12, 13. The kingdom that Paul spoke of is the kingdom of God; which was taken from the Jews and given to a nation that brought forth the fruits thereof; which kingdom was taken by force; but to reappear in the dispensation of the fulness of times, that he might gather together in one all things in Christ; both which are in heaven, and which are in earth, even in him. This dispensation began to be ushered in when the angel (Rev. 14:5) made his appearance to Joseph Smith, 1827, when he revealed to him the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated; which contain the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and is the means by which the fulness of the gospel is restored; and by the preaching of this gospel the church is brought out of the wilderness; Revelation 12:5. "And the woman being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered. And she brought forth a man-child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne." In the Book of Mormon we read that the rod of iron is the word of God; and the man child is the priesthood, which was restored again to the church or before the church was organized. "Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came she was delivered of a man child, who hath heard such things? who hath seen such things? shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? or shall a nation be born at once? for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children." Isa. 66.

Here we have the man child that was caught up unto God and his throne, which was the priesthood restored again to the earth in the dispensation of the fulness of times; by which the church was organized in 1830, on the 6th day of April. Now we read that the prophet Isa. 66:8, 9, calls this Zion, that in the last days is again brought forth out of the nations by the preaching of the gospel of course. Now, I will prove that Zion is the church and kingdom of God; "And he that fighteth against Zion, shall perish, for I the Lord, the King of heaven, will be their king; and I will be a light unto them forever, that hear my words. Wherefore, for this cause, that my covenants may be fulfilled, which I have made unto the children of men, that I will do unto them while they are in the flesh, I must needs destroy the secret works of darkness, and of murders, and of abominations; wherefore, he that fighteth against Zion both Jew and Gentile, both bond and free, both male and female, shall perish."—2 Book of Nephi, ch. 7, p. 76. Have the people not been fighting this latter day work ever since it has been brought forth? War to the knife; and are they not the whore of all the earth?

Now we will turn to book of Doctrine and Covenants. "But firstly let my army become very great, and let it be sanctified before me, that it may become fair as the sun, and clear as the moon, and that her banners may be terrible unto all nations; that the kingdoms of this world may be constrained to acknowledge that the kingdom of Zion is in very deed the kingdom of our God and his Christ; therefore, let us become subject unto her laws."—102:9.

Now you may call this a spiritual kingdom, and the land upon which the Zion of God is established spiritual land; and the wheat, and corn, and potatoes, and beans, that grow on it, for all I care. "And I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it; and the cities shall be inhabited, and the wastes shall be builded; and I will multiply upon you man and beast; and they shall increase and bring fruit: and I will settle you after your old estates, and will do better unto you than at your beginning." When was this beginning? When he, the Lord, brought them in the land of Canaan. This you will say is the kingdom of Israel. (Ezek. 36:10, 11.) But here is where we find Israel in the last days, for there is to be but one kingdom, and this is to fill the whole earth. But here is to be the first dominion of the kingdom.

"And thou, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem."—Micah 4:8.

Why is this called the stronghold? We read in the Book of Mormon that God will fortify this land against all other nations. "Joseph is a fruitful bough by a well, whose branches run over the wall." We all understand that the wall is the ocean. "From thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel." (Gen. 49:22-24, I. T.)

"Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her; and I will give her her vineyards from thence." Now the words from thence do not differ in Hosea second chapter, but must have the same meaning of that in Genesis 49. Hence, here is where we find Israel, and the church and kingdom of God.

"For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the Lord our God. For thus saith the Lord, Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations." Is the great republic the chief of the nations, where God says that he will fortify the land against all other nations. (Jer. 31:6, 7.)

The words "allure and bring into the wilderness," have reference to the church. Allure is to tempt, to entice. I do not mean to be understood that this is a wilderness, in a "salt land, and not inhabited;" for they belong to a people that have made flesh their arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord; which is the fortune of the people in Salt Lake; but into the wilderness of the people; see Ezek. 20:35. This is now fulfilling by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, as the Saints are gathering into the borders. And here she shall sing as in the days of her youth. Read Hos. 2:14, 23; also Mic. 7:11, 18. Now God is to plead face to face with his people, "Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness." How did God plead with them in that day when he brought them out of the land of Egypt? By his servant Moses, says the prophet. You will say, Well then, there must be a prophet upon the earth to-day. Therefore all those people that have no prophet nor apostles, can not be the church of Jesus Christ. "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers; after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ, till we, in the unity of the faith, all come to the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." This is the only church upon the earth that is organized according to the New Testament pattern; but if the people will not receive the gospel and will not enter in by the door, will not be born again—be born of water, they can never see that this is the church of Christ; because that Jesus says, "Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God. Hence to be in the kingdom before we come into the church will not answer the purpose; will not do; because not according to the word of God. "Strive to enter in at the straight gate; for I say to you, many shall seek to enter in and shall not be able." "Therefore, when once the Lord of the kingdom is risen up, and hath shut the door of the kingdom, then ye shall stand without, and knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us, but the Lord shall answer and say unto you, I will not receive you." Here then is where they are striving to enter, but are not permitted. They would not hear the word when it was freely offered to them; just as it is to-day. But when they see that the harvest is ended, and their souls are not saved, they will in vain endeavor to enter, but will not be able. They were outside of the kingdom and therefore did not come into the church; "and there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, among you when you shall see Abraham and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God and you are thrust out." Luke 13:25-28, I. T.

One more item; a king is a lord paramount, a lord by himself, and is the highest sovereign in the universe. Hence our Heavenly Father is the highest Lord, (lawgiver), in space, and our Redeemer admits it. Matt. 5:18; 19:17; John 8:26, 29. This, you say, is as much as that Jesus is not a lawgiver; what does it then mean, Judah is my lawgiver? "Gilead is mine, and Manasseh is mine. Ephraim also is the strength of mine head; Judah is my lawgiver." Ps. 60:7. Did not Christ come of Judah? Hence he is the great Lawgiver. But Jesus was born into this world; he came to do the will of the Father and "made himself of no reputation, but took upon him the form of a servant, and became obedient in all things; he made himself the least of all, because he became servant of all, and was obedient unto death; even the death of the cross, in order that he might redeem us and bring us to God." Hence the quotation that you cite, is in this sense all good enough; but let us see what he calls himself.

"All things are delivered to me of my Father; and no man knoweth that the Son is the Father, and the Father is the Son, but him to whom the Son will reveal it."—Luke 10:23. I. T. "And now Abinadi said unto them, I would that ye should understand that God himself shall come down among the children of men, and shall redeem his people; and because he dwelleth in flesh, he shall be called the Son of God: and having subjected the flesh to the will of the Father, being the Father and the Son; the Father because he was conceived by the power of God; and the Son, because of the flesh; thus becoming the Father and Son: and they are one God, yea, the very eternal Father of heaven and of earth."—Book Mormon, Book of Mosiah, chap. 8: p. 5. New Ed. This agrees with the I. T. And then to say that he is no law giver, is not giving him the honor that belongs to the Lord Jesus Christ. Let us see what Paul says: Col. 1st chap. I will not quote all points but shall proceed: "Then said the Pharisees unto him, Why will you not receive us with our baptism, seeing we keep the whole law?" "But Jesus said unto them, ye keep not the law, if ye had kept the law, ye would have received me, for I am he who gave the law."—Matt. 9:18, 19. I. T. "And it came to pass that Jesus said, behold, I am he that gave the law, and I am he that covenanted with my people Israel."—Book Mormon, book of Nephi, chap. 7.

You say he went to sit on the throne of his Father a mediator, not a king. But I have proved by the word of himself, that Jesus said I am a King to Pilate. Could he not be a mediator between God and man and at the same time be the king of heaven and earth? Is anything too hard for the Lord? How is it that he was both the Father and the Son? Did he not receive a name above every name that is known in heaven and in earth; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, Angels and authorities being made subject unto him. Can not an Elder, or a High Priest act in the office of a Priest, or Teacher? Does this take away his eldership? This being the Law of God, and a rule in the church, as the church is organized according to the Law of God, by direct revelation, there is nothing strange in it; but it looks reasonable, unless you can prove that he is yet to be ordained, which I defy you or any other man to do.

Hoping that we may see the truth as it is in Jesus, N. S.

THE APOSTOLIC CLOCK.

A FAC-SIMILE of the original apostolic, musical and astronomical clock in the Strasburg Cathedral, a curious and wonderful piece of mechanism, celebrated the world over, was opened for exhibition at Horticultural (lower) Hall yesterday. It is the work of a young clockmaker's apprentice, Fritz Von Engle, of Strasburg, who having conceived the idea of making a fac-simile of the clock invented by Isaac Habricht, obtained permission from the sexton of the cathedral to copy it. After seven years' close application to his self-imposed task his work was completed, and so overjoyed was the young man that he became insane and died six months after. A disagreement arose among the heirs respecting the disposition of the clock, which was purchased about a year ago by the present proprietors for the sum of $5,000 in gold. The clock stands on the base four feet front, three and a half deep, and ten feet four inches high. The lower section has a dial representing the ancient zodiac, with the stars of the first, second and third magnitude, with the signs of each month of the year exhibited at the proper time and seasons, the dial making but one revolution in the year, and but one-half of it exposed at a time. Above this, in each corner, are lions' heads, with rings in their mouths. Above this is another section, with a dial twenty-two inches in diameter, on which is represented on the outer circle the minutes and hours in the usual manner. Within are four dials, representing the month, day of the month, day of the week, and phases of the moon. In alcoves on either side of the frames are carved figures of Time and Justice. Above this are two Roman columns with capital, representing two rams' heads. On the top of the capital there stands a wolf watching the sheep. Above the dial is a keystone, with a small door in the center, with cherubim on either side guarding it. The top section is in the form of a Gothic chapel, with a small door on either side, and a large one over a stair in front in the center, with a balcony over center, and spires extending up either side. At every half hour is heard the ringing of a bell, and the door of the keystone opens, showing the figure of Death, followed by the music of an organ. Three minutes after a chime of twenty bells is heard, when from the right door of the chapel the disciples come out in procession while the center door opens and the Savior comes in sight. As the disciples receive him they pause, one by one turn their faces toward him and bow, except Peter, which is the central figure. The bow is returned by the Savior, and immediately a cock perched on the right corner flaps his wings and crows, when Satan appears and disappears in the balcony above. Meanwhile a Roman sentinel on the left of the procession has faced toward it and remains until the procession has passed, when Satan appears again, turning his head in the direction of Judas. After Satan appears he is followed by the music of the organ, when the left door closes the scene. The Apostles come out once every half hour during the day and evening.—Boston Advertiser.

HISTORY OF THE ALPHABET.

How many of the millions that daily use the alphabet ever stop to think of its origin and long history? In the true spirit of a student, Isaac Taylor, a well-known English writer on philosophical and philological subjects, has recently written and published in London two stout volumes under the title of "The Alphabet; An Account of the Origin and Development of Letters." It is only by the help of recent discoveries of early inscriptions and the progress in the art of reading lost languages and deciphering hitherto unknown symbols that such a well-posted history has become possible. By careful study of the essays and scientific investigations of the latest philologists, Taylor has set forth in language within easy comprehension, the origin of the alphabet, showing that our town Roman letters may be followed back to their very beginning, some twenty or more centuries ago, as he asserts. We have no better letters, according to this account, than those of the Italian printers of the fifteenth century. These were imitated from the beautiful manuscripts of the tenth and eleventh centuries, the lettering of these being derived from the Roman of the Augustinian age. The Roman letters, in turn, are traced to those employed at Rome in the third century before Christ, and these do not differ greatly from forms used in the earliest existing specimens of Latin writing, dating from the fifth century before Christ. This primitive alphabet of Rome was derived from a local form of the Greek alphabet, in use about the sixth century before Christ. The Greeks got their letters from the Phœnicians, and theirs are clearly traceable to the most ancient known form of the Semitic.

The most ancient of books, a papyrus found at Thebes, now preserved in the French National Library, supplies the earliest forms of the letters used in the Semitic alphabet. The stone tables of the law could have been possible to the Jews only because of their possession of an alphabet, and thus the Bible and modern philological science unite in ascribing a common origin to the alphabet which is in daily use throughout the world. The nineteenth century before Christ is held by Taylor to be the approximate date of the origin of alphabetic writing, and from that time it grew by slow degrees, while from Egypt, the home of the Jews during their long captivity, the knowledge of the alphabet was carried in all directions where alphabets are now found.

The Aryans are thought to have been the first to bring the primitive alphabet to perfection, and each letter and each sound may be traced by Taylor's careful analysis through all the changes that have marked the growth, progress, and, in some instances, the decay, of different letters of various alphabets. It is an interesting fact that the oldest known "A B C" in existence is a child's alphabet scratched on an ink bottle of black ware, found in one of the oldest Greek settlements in Italy, attributed to the fifth century before Christ. The earliest letters, and many later ones, are known only by inscriptions; and it is the rapid increase by recent discovery, of these precious fragments that has inspired more diligent research and quickened the zeal of learned students in mastering the elements of knowledge of their origin and history throughout the world. As late as 1876 there were found in Cyprus some bronze plates inscribed with Phœnician characters, dating back to the tenth and even the eleventh century before Christ.

Each epoch has its fragments, and the industry of English explorers, the perseverance of German students and the genius of French scholars, have all contributed to group them in their chronological order. Coins, engraved gems, inscribed statues, and, last of all, the Siloam inscription, found in 1880 at Jerusalem, on the wall of an old tunnel, have supplied new material for the history. From the common mother of many alphabets—the Phœnician—are descended the Greek and other European systems, on the one side, including that which we use and have the greatest interest in; and, on the other, the alphabets of Asia, from which have sprung those of the East, Syriac, Arabic and Hebrew.

THE PAPER REED.

THE Hebrew name for paper reed, or papyrus, is gnome, which our translators generally render bulrush. If this is so, then the infant Moses was laid in an ark of papyrus, not bulrushes, and the people of Ethiopia must have made their ships of the same.

The native country of the papyrus is Egypt. It is found all along the borders of the Nile. The appearance of this reed, growing in heavy clusters in company with others, is very graceful, the top resembling an elegant plume, but the want of lower leaves takes somewhat from its beauty when growing alone.

These wavy, feather-like tops of the full-grown tree, which often reach a height of fourteen feet in favorable situations, were used to crown the statues of the goddesses in many of the temples of the East. The upright stem was of service in the construction of light vessels, while the solid part, near the root, was converted into soles for sandals of the priests, as well as cups and other ornaments, which were the more valuable on account of the scarcity of wood in Egypt.

Even the roots themselves appear to have been used for food by the ancient Egyptians, but those who professed to chew it as a luxury doubtless mistook the sugar-cane for the papyrus, as the stem is neither juicy nor agreeable to the taste.

But the chief and most important use of this wonderful reed was that it furnished material for writing upon. Of all the ingenious contrivances in earlier days, there was nothing like the sheets of papyrus, the original manufacture of which is described as follows:

The reed was cut into strips, each sufficient for a page, and then carefully peeled, at its entire length, as far inward toward the core as possible, so as to make a tolerably wide strip.

Several of these strips were laid together, to make the breadth of a page. These pages were then covered over with simple gum, animal glue or flour paste.

The first layer of papyrus being dry, a second layer was placed transversely upon it, that the fibers might cross each other like the threads of woven cloth. The sheets were then beaten, and a strong pressure applied to render them smooth and ready for use.

Among the ancient Egyptians the word for papyrus was biblos, and is preserved in the name for the most venerable book in the world—the Bible.

The beautiful substance called "rice paper," of which artificial flowers are made, and on which are sometimes painted exquisite flowers in most delicate designs, is cut in the same manner from the pith of a rush growing in great abundance in the waters of the Ganges.

The fishermen there tie bundles of these rushes together, and use them as floats for their fishing nets.

The most ancient Italians as well as East Indians appear to have used linen cloth to write upon, so prepared as to retain the marks of the pen, and there are ancient books in existence even now written upon the folds of palm-leaves.

With regard to Egyptian rope, the fibers at the bottom of the palm furnish a large proportion of it, but it was probably the finer cord, twisted from the papyrus, that was employed in the curious lacing of those mummy cases, of which we have so often read, where the body was introduced after the case was ornamented. Only the very rich could afford this expensive method of embalming.

Important in every way as the papyrus was to this nation, in a fit of commercial jealousy, one of the Egyptian monarchs prohibited the exportation of this kind of paper, and occasioned the invention of parchment at Pergamos, by Attalus, its king.

And yet at no great distance from the kingdom of Attala the papyrus grew in great profusion, according to ancient writers, from the very source of the Jordan to the Lake of Tiberias, as well as at the Tigris and Euphrates.

Not a single plant exists that has not at some time played an important part in the great economy of nature, even to the very leaves. As an example of this, we see what the papyrus must have been to the ancient people before the manufacture of modern paper which is such a desirable substitute for all.—Golden Days.

SOME GREAT WRITERS.

DIFFICULTIES THEY HAVE ENCOUNTERED IN PERFECTING THEIR WORKS.

ALEXANDER Hamilton, on a certain occasion, remarked to an intimate friend: "People are all accustomed to speak of me as a man of genius. Now, call it, if you will, genius; it is, in truth, only the ability to do well what comes before me to perform." And the correctness of Hamilton's definition of the term is fully sustained by the example of so many eminent intellects whom the world takes pleasure in referring to as "men of genius." The great Plato, whose thoughts seemed to come so easily, is said to have toiled over his manuscripts working with slow and tedious elaboration. The opening sentence of "The Republic," on the author's tablets, was found to be written in some thirteen different versions. When death called him from his work, the great philosopher was at his desk, "combing and curling, and weaving, and unweaving his writings after a variety of fashions."

Coming to the gifted Addison, whose diction is full of such grace and simplicity, so much so as to create envy, yet admiration, in the mind of every writer who has flourished since his day, we find that the great author wrote with the most painful deliberation. It is narrated that the press was stopped again and again, after a whole edition of The Spectator had been thrown off, in order that its author might make a slight change in a sentence. At the time he occupied the position of under secretary it became necessary for him to inform Prince George, of Hanover, of the demise of Queen Anne, and to make known to his royal highness that the throne of England was vacant. But the fastidious secretary was in such a dilemma with respect to the choice of expression in which to convey the information, it was found, at the last moment, that the duty of writing the prince would have to be delegated to a very humble clerk, who afterward boasted of doing what his superior—the great Addison—found so impossible to perform.

The historian Gibbon, in speaking of the manner in which he wrote his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," said: "Many experiments were made before I could hit the middle tone between a dull tone and a rhetorical declamation. Three times did I compose the first chapter, and twice the second and third, before I was tolerably satisfied with the effect." Lamb toiled most laboriously over his essays. These papers, which long ago became as classics in the English language, which are replete with the most delicate fancies, were composed with the most exacting nicety. Yet the author is regarded the world over as possessed of genius of a high order. La Rochefoucauld was occupied for the space of fifteen years in preparing for publication his little work called "Maxims," rewriting many of them more than thirty times.

The celebrated French critic, Saint-Beuve, was accustomed to devote six days to the preparation of a single one of his weekly articles. A large portion of his time was passed in the retirement of his chamber, to which, on such occasions, no individual—with the one exception of his favorite servant—was allowed to enter under any circumstances whatever. Here he wrote those critical papers which carried captive the heart of France and filled with wonder the cultivated mind everywhere. It took Buffon fifty years to write his "Studies of Nature." After the first draft was made he would rewrite it some eighteen times before he deemed it ready to go to the printer. His manuscript was peculiar. He used large-sized letter paper, on which he ruled five distinct columns. In the first column he jotted down his first thoughts, in the second he enlarged upon and pruned his thoughts, and so on to the fifth column he would labor, in which column he at last wrote down the result of all his toil. And yet it is told of him that after all this excessive labor of mind he would rewrite a sentence to the extent of twenty-eight times, on one occasion spending fourteen hours in discovering the proper word with which to finish a sentence.

In the early career of Bulwer he found that seventeen lines in a single day were all he was able to write. As he became experienced, however, in authorship, he acquired such facility, that he was easily able to write several pages every day. Still, with all his genius as a novelist, Bulwer was never reckoned as a ready writer. The poet Rogers once toiled for two weeks in the preparation of a note to his "Italy," and the note was made up of only a very few lines at that. Albany Fonblanque, editor of the once famous Examiner, wrote in such a labored manner that the very best he was able to do was to write two, sometimes three editorials each week, and all agree that several of them were rewritten a dozen times each.

The great Balzac, after he had made a plan of a novel, and had, after the most laborious research, gathered together the materials which he was to embody in it, would lock himself in his private apartment, shut out all the light of day, and then, by the aid of his student lamp, he would toil night and day over the work before him. His servants, knowing so well his peculiar habits, would attend to his every want, fetching him the necessary food with which to sustain his physical needs, and thus he would toil on and on, until finally, with his task completed, as he thought, he came forth from his retirement, looking more dead than alive. But invariably his task would not be altogether satisfactory to him after all, for again he would seek the seclusion of his chamber to rearrange and make more perfect that which he had before supposed wholly complete. Then, too, when in the hands of the printer (God pity the poor printer), he would be as apt to alter, in one way and another, the manuscript, until both printer and publisher were on the verge of despair. Kinglake's beautiful "Eothen" was rewritten half a dozen times before it was given to a publisher for consideration. Tennyson's song, "Come into the garden, Maud," was rewritten some fifty times before it gave complete satisfaction to the laureate, while he spent eight hours a day for six weeks rewriting "Locksley Hall," though the first draft of the exquisite poem occupied only two days in its composition.

Tom Moore, with all his wonderful brilliancy, considered it doing very well if he wrote fifty lines of his "Lalla Rookh" in a week. Our own matchless Hawthorne was slow in composing. Sometimes he could write only what would amount to half a dozen pages in a week; often only a few lines in the same space of time, and, alas, he would frequently go to his chamber and take his pen, only to find himself wholly unable to perform any literary work. (I fancy this trait of character a peculiarity of genius). The author of "Pleasures of Hope" was slow of thought, and consequently his mode of composition was toilsome in the highest degree. He wrote extremely cautiously, weighing and shaping the effect of each particular line before he permitted it to stand. He used to say that his "Gertrude of Wyoming" was his best performance, while at the same time he expressed himself to the effect that it was sadly in need of a careful revision. It was rarely the case that he was satisfied with his poetry. Oftentimes that which he had written at night would be given over to the flames in the morning; but his perseverance was wonderful, and he has left to the world as rare a fame as any poet of his time.

Bret Harte, whose creations read as if they had come from his brain without a flaw or hindrance, showing brilliancy of thought with the grace of the artist, is still another who passes days and weeks on a short story or poem before he is ready to deliver it into the hands of the printer, which speaks great praise for the author of the most strikingly original volumes of prose and verse that have ever come before the reading public. So too, with Bryant. Though, in reality, the sum total of his poetry might be included in a small volume, so few are his lyrics, we can not fail to be impressed with the truth of the statement when we are told that even these few gems of verse cost our later Wordsworth hard toil to bring into being and endow with the splendor of immortality.

HEBREW A LIVING LANGUAGE.

USED IN SOCIAL AND BUSINESS LIFE BY JEWS IN MANY LOCALITIES.

NEW YORK Commercial Advertiser: The appearance of an advertisement in a morning newspaper, offering a reward for the recovery of an ancient account book in Hebrew, caused a reporter to call on the editor of a Hebrew newspaper in this city and ask him to what extent that language was still a living tongue. "It is popularly believed," he began, "that the Hebrew language is dead in the same sense that Latin is dead. This is an error. Hebrew is still spoken by Jews as their chosen language; it is used in synagogues, in social circles, in trade, and even as you see by the advertisement, in accounts. Newspapers are published in Hebrew characters, and there is not an orthodox Jew in this city who does not use the ancient tongue in all the sacred offices of life. In fact, an orthodox Jew is required to be able to read and write Hebrew. The sacred books that are used are never in any other text than the original, and there are even circulating libraries whose books are exclusively written in that tongue. The Hebrew is used almost exclusively as the language of social life and trade among Polish Jews. They have been cruelly persecuted, and the danger with which they have been confronted during the last six centuries in Poland and Polish provinces has had the effect of compelling them to use a language which is essentially their own, and which can not be acquired save by a vast deal of labor. Many of these Polish Jews neither read nor write, yet talk Hebrew with the facility of the dwellers in Jerusalem. German Jews have also acquired the common use of Hebrew, and use it with almost the same facility as do the members of their race living in Poland, Hungary, and through the Turkish provinces. From the same reasons which have made the old language the ordinary speech of the Polish Jew the Russian Jew has been compelled to adopt it. The dispensation of the Russian Government oblige the Russian Jews to live in quarters by themselves, subject to almost the same severity that was enforced in Spain and England during the middle ages. They are surrounded by the people of the country, who are anxious to surprise them in any covert speech or act, and a mistake of any kind is apt to lead to the most fearful massacres. They are accused of practicing witchcraft and all manner of evil things, and these unfounded charges result in their drawing themselves in their shells, as it were, to associate only among themselves, and to use a language that is intelligible only to themselves. The emigration of Russian and Polish Jews to this country has brought with it a language which is properly one of the oldest in existence, and yet has by a curious reanimation become the newest. I believe that in the Jewish colony in the neighborhood of Grand, Essex, and Ludlow streets a weekly journal is circulated, the text of which is entirely in the ancient character, and which is printed on a hand-press. It hasn't a very large subscription list, but one of these papers is sometimes read by as many as thirty different persons.

"It is, as you know, one of the requirements of our orthodoxy for the head of the family to read the Old Testament in the original to his family. A chapter or more is read each evening during the week, and a more elaborate ceremony takes place at the beginning of the Sabbath. This tends to keep the language current, as it were, and obliges every Jew to understand it. The younger members of the family circle are taught Hebrew by their elders, and it is not seldom that you will find in a family of ten or a dozen members a combination of Hebrew scholarship that would be the envy and pride of many an eminent Orientalist. When I say that Hebrew is used in the Polish or Russian colonies as the language of social life and of trade I do not, of course, mean that it is the same language as that of the Scriptures or the Talmud. It is in many instances simply a corruption of the old tongue. The dialects of the various provinces creep in, and, while this curious combination of Russian or German and ancient Hebrew makes an excellent language for general use, it would puzzle a Hebrew scholar in a most demoralizing way if he were to go down into Essex street and try to converse with the natives. He would find that the grand old tongue of the prophet was sadly marred by its close contact with the vernacular. This is perhaps the natural fate of every ancient language. Still, as the Hebrew language is the tongue of a large number of persons, and as it is read and understood by persons who lay no claim to scholarship, it is a living language and will remain so until the persecution of the Hebrews ceases entirely in all lands."

Craven asked the duties of this district agent, which were explained; therefore, Resolved, that we rescind the former resolutions as read by clerk, and abide the law—the president of the district receive funds for Bishop's Agent, also district funds, the agent being absent. Resolved, that David Powell be treasurer of the church building funds. Resolved, That there be a committee or court of inquiry to set the Waconda Branch in order, and the president of district appoint this court. Resolved, that this conference instruct the district clerk to notify all authorities of this district to report in person or by letter to the next conference and they who disregard this resolution will be held amenable to the church. Resolved that this conference do now adjourn to meet with the Carrolton Branch, the first Saturday and Sunday in July, 1885.

There is to be a two days' meeting at each of the branches between now and sitting of next conference.

NORTH-EAST MISSOURI DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Salt River, Missouri, November 1st and 2d, 1884. Session commenced at three o'clock p. m., Elder Joseph R. Lambert presiding, and J. T. Williams clerk.

The following branches reported.—Renick 20; Hannibal 25, including 3 Elders, 1 Priest, and 1 Teacher. Salt River 27. Bro. J. T. Williams reported the spiritual condition of the Bevier Branch not encouraging.

Bishop's Agent's report was read and approved. Balance on hand August 2d, 1884, $7.45; received up to date $30.50; total $37.95; paid out $42.25; due Agent $4.30. For the information of the Bishop's Agent, there are $8.50 inserted in the above report which Bro. Lambert received at Renick.

Elders' Reports.—Geo. Hicklin, (baptized one, preached in several places, demand for preaching more than he can fill; willingness to continue but can't see his way clear for the lack of means, as his traveling expenses exceed his income from the district), Robert Thrutchly, J. T. Williams. Charles Perry. Priests' Reports.—Mark Surridge in person, and William Vincent by letter. Teacher Amos Rice of Renick, reported.

Resolved, That we consider the Bevier Branch to be in the hands of the missionary in charge.

Preaching at 7:30 p. m. by Elder George Hicklin. Preaching Sabbath morning by Elder J. R. Lambert. Sacrament meeting at 3 p. m. Preaching again in the evening by J. R. Lambert. Peace and harmony ruled the whole session; the Saints appreciated their meeting together.

Miscellaneous.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

Bro. Richard Ellis, of Sydney, Australia, having been recommended to me as a suitable person for Bishop's Agent, I do hereby appoint him as my agent for the Australian Mission, and as such recommend him to the Saints.

G. A. BLAKESLEE, Presiding Bishop.
GALLEN, Mich., Nov. 21st, 1884.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S ADDRESS.

To the Saints in Colorado, Greeting: Whereas, I have been appointed Bishop's Agent for this state, and knowing that the coffers of the church are very empty, I now call upon all the members of the church in this State to send in their Tithing and Freewill Offerings and Mites, just as the Lord may have blessed them in temporal things; yes, dear Saints, let us have faith in the promises that God has made unto his people, as recorded in the third chapter of Malachi and tenth verse. The Lord has said, "Bring ye all the tithes unto the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Please read the whole chapter, and see what God has promised to do for all that will bring in their tithings and offerings.

As I have received a blank book wherein to record all the Saints' names that are willing to contribute their mites to the support of the great latter day work, I trust that all will send in something, so as to get their names enrolled in the book. May God bless you in so doing, is the prayer of your loving brother in the gospel of Christ,

JAMES KEMP,
Hutchinson, Jefferson Co., Colo.

AN APPEAL.

To the Saints of the North Nebraska District, and all others who are friendly disposed to a good cause. We appeal for aid to assist in paying the debt on the church in Fremont, which debt amounts to near five hundred dollars, which must be paid very soon or they will lose the building. This would cause a great loss to them and to the work there, and the enemy would rejoice at our downfall in this regard. The Saints in Fremont have done all that they can possibly do, being very poor; the friends outside have done very well in donating towards the same. A failure to meet the dues was caused by reason of a terrible disease breaking out among the hogs, many of the Saints and friends having lost all their hogs, which were the only things they had by which they expected to meet their bills. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been lost in this part of the country from this cause. Now having this debt to meet, and having met with such great losses, they are compelled to appeal for aid. Now, you to whom this appeal shall come, who have comfortable homes free from debt, who have good churches to worship in, with no incumbrance upon them, just think of your poor brethren who are in distress, and think that you have the privilege of delivering them, and of making their hearts glad by your imparting of your substance to them, thus showing your faith by your works, and show also that you love your neighbors as yourselves. Now, we do not like to make this appeal, but we feel that we are compelled, under the circumstances, to do so. Therefore, all who can give any sum large or small, even as the Lord has prospered you, let them give, and it will be thankfully received, and you will in no wise lose your reward. Do not be ashamed to send your mites because you have not a large amount to send. Remember that the mighty ocean is formed by drops of water; the land by grains of sand. The Saints in Fremont have built a beautiful little church, with the aid of some friends, and we sincerely hope that you will not stand back and see it taken from them, and thereby have all their sacrifice and labor fall to the ground, so to speak. No, dear Saints and friends, we hope you will respond to our appeal. All remittances may be sent to me, and I will give you credit through the Herald for all received, with your names attached. Hoping and praying for the welfare of Zion, both spiritual and temporal. Written by request of building committee.

W. M. RUMEL, Pres. of Dist.

He united with the church in its infancy, was in a great deal of the troubles the Saints passed through, notably among them was the Haun's Mill massacre. After the death of the prophet he moved to Utah, where he remained for three years, and in 1854, moved to San Bernardino, where he lived until his death, which occurred October 11th, 1882. Our Alma dear has left us,
He died and went away;
His spirit used to cheer us,
But it left its house of clay.
And now we feel so lonely,
Since he has gone from us;
But if our lives are holy,
We'll meet him with the blest.

TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883.
I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage.
Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with.
Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love,
Geo. MONTAGUE.

ENNO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883.
JOHNS & ORDWAY, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings.
Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884.
JOHNS & ORDWAY: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion.
Yours in bonds, Wm. ALBID.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884.
Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one speaks in their favor.
Yours, V. D. BAGGELLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883.
MESSRS. JOHNS & ORDWAY, Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours,
W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883.
Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well.
Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Dec. 13th, 1884.

MR. GEORGE Q. CANNON one of the chief apostles of the Utah Mormon Church delivered a discourse in the Stake Meeting House, at Ephraim, Sanpete county, Utah, November 16th last, which was reported by John Irvine and printed in the Deseret News of November 25th. From this discourse we quote the following as a bit of information to the Elders that they can use when occasion requires the quoting of Mr. Cannon and others against themselves:

"There may be faithful men who will have unfaithful sons, who may not be as faithful as they might be; but faithful posterity will come, just as I believe it will be the case with the Prophet Joseph's seed. To-day he has not a soul descended from him personally in this church. There is not a man bearing the Holy Priesthood to stand before our God in the church that Joseph was the means in the hands of God of founding—not a man to-day of his own blood,—that is, by descent—to stand before the Lord and represent him among these Latter Day Saints. But will this always be the case? No. Just as sure as God lives, just as sure as God has made promises, so sure will some one of Joseph Smith's posterity rise up and be numbered with this church and bear the everlasting Priesthood and who will honor and magnify that Priesthood among the Latter Day Saints."

If Mr. Cannon rightly reflects the hope or desire of the people whom as an apostle he represents; if he expresses the sentiment of any respectable number of the people of the Utah Church, a little reflection upon the manner of the fulfillment of the prediction should startle some of those who heard him, and those who are readers of the sermon as reported.

Joseph Smith now has no posterity among the Utah Saints, "not a man" descended from him among them; but "there will be." The man himself is dead; and all the sons begotten by him are hostile to the principal feature of Utah Mormonism. If any of his posterity ever stand among the Latter Day Saints of Utah it must be one of these sons, or a man descended from one of them. For there is not now a possibility that a son from the loins of Joseph the Seer can be born to him in "plural marriage," to take the place of the lawful issue. Think of it Mr. Cannon, and all who heard him, or who read of his utterance, and consider how possible it is that the "abomination in the sight of the Lord" which is taught and believed among you is keeping the posterity of Joseph from among you.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Editor visited Des Moines, Iowa, November 28th to 30th, preaching to the little band of Saints there on Sunday the 30th with liberty. Bro. C. F. Merrill, who resides at the corner of 18th and Des Moines streets is in charge, and all are laboring as they can to keep the lamps of spiritual life burning. He is aided by Brn. W. N. Ray, N. Stamm, J. P. Knox and S. Longbottom, as is proper. Harmony seemed to prevail among them at this visit. Brn. Banta, Etzenhouser, McDowell, White and others have visited them at intervals, with good results.

The Saints at Lamoni, have succeeded in laying the floor in the main assembly room of the New Church, and are only waiting the arrival of the windows and doors ordered, to make this room nearly ready for use.

Bro. C. G. Lanphear, wrote from Greenwood, Steuben county, New York, November 26th, 1884, that he was trying to do what he could, visiting the Saints, strengthening them, and preaching as he had opportunity.

Bro. E. Banta writes December 3d from Randalia, Iowa, where he has been for some time preaching. "Bro. Etzenhouser is with me. We are preaching every night now. We leave here Friday or Saturday for Oldwine, about fifteen miles south of here. Bro. Etzenhouser will not hear to anything but that I must go and help him there. Weather very fine."

Bro. E. C. Brand writes us from Webster, Dodge county, Nebraska, that he began to preach there November 16th and intended to continue until he "made them mad or glad." His first congregation had eight; Sunday morning fifteen; Sunday evening, twenty-two; Monday, twenty-seven; Tuesday evening, crowded house; and Wednesday and Thursday evenings the same.

Bro. B. A. Atwell was to baptize one at Cabool, Texas county, Missouri, November 27th, which would make six members at that place.

The whereabouts of James Mack of the Stewartville, Missouri, Branch, is wanted by the officers of that branch; for reasons. He is requested to write J. M. Terry, Willard Wells or Jacob Smith.

REV. CLARK BRADEN lectured in the Opera House, Independence, Missouri, November 26th, 27th, 28th, upon features of Mormonism, including "Mormon Problem and Its Solution" for the closing lecture on the evening of the 28th. A fee of twenty-five cents for entrance was charged, and an audience of some sixty-four heard the last lecture. This audience was composed of all classes, including Saints.

Mr. Braden among other things made the following statements, which will be news to the members of the Reorganization:

"The other sect, the Josephites, have 20,000 church members and 50,000 adherents. They have over 200 emissaries working as home missionaries, and over 500 preachers, who preach as much as the average preacher of other sects.

"Brighamism has an annual income for church purposes of nearly $2,000,000 and great wealth that it holds as church property.

"Josephism has a large income through its tithing gathering system and has accumulated a large fund that is now on interest.

"Both sects of Mormonism are thoroughly organized systems for acquiring and using power. At the head of each stands a President, then beneath him two Vice-Presidents, twelve Apostles, three severites of apostles, a high council, a large number of Elders and Presiding Elders, Bishops and Presiding Bishops, Patriarchs and other officials, until every fifth adult male Mormon is an official of some sort or other. These constitute a vast standing army, whose ambition and interests are enlisted in building up and maintaining the system. The money that it can exercise that it controls and the power of espionage that it can exercise through these officials enables it to coerce its adherents and crush out any opposition to its commands. Such a system would corrupt good men, and in the hands of bad men is a dangerous engine for accomplishing evil. That which renders both systems of Mormonism particularly dangerous is the claim of its leaders that they possess supernatural power and do all things in accordance with revelation. Mormonism is the most absolute theocracy the world has ever known. It is an organized rebellion against all authority except its own. Its government is the government of God and the utterances of its unprincipled leaders are the voice of God. All else is human, a usurpation of what rightfully belongs to Mormonism against its divine authority. Josephism and Brighamism is exactly alike in these features and in the hands of their crafty leaders are a constant conspiracy against all Gentile government and authority.

"In Independence and West Missouri, the Garden of Eden, the Holy Land and Zion of Mormonism, according to a revelation of Joseph Smith, given in this city in August, 1831, the inhabitants have more at stake in the solution of this problem than most of them generally suppose. According to revelations, which all Mormons believe as religiously as any Christian believes Christ's sermon on the Mount, all this territory belongs to the Mormons by divine decree as much as Palestine belonged to the Israelites, and all of its inhabitants except Mormons are as much interlopers as the Canaanites were in Palestine.

"In 1832 and '33, as all who lived in this region can testify, the Mormons plundered and abused all the Gentiles that they came in contact with. They did this in accordance with the following revelation found on page 194 of the Book of Revelations and Covenants:

"Behold, it is said in my laws, or forbidden, to get in debt to thine enemies; but behold, it is not said at any time, that the Lord should not take what he pleases, and pay as seemeth to him good; wherefore, as ye are agents, and ye are on the Lord's errand; and whatsoever ye do according to the will of the Lord, is the Lord's business, and he hath sent you to provide for his saints in these last days, that ye may obtain an inheritance in the land of Zion, and behold I, the Lord, declare unto my words are true and shall not fail, they shall obtain it."

"The outraged Gentiles arose and drove them across the river. In the spring of 1834, Joe Smith led a gang of armed men to Missouri with the intention of driving the Gentiles out of Independence, and reinstating the Mormons by the sword. Not being able to do this he returned to Ohio. David Whitmer gathered the Mormons in Missouri into Caldwell county. Under his leadership they lived in comparative peace with their neighbors until 1838, when Smith and Rigdon and several thousand Mormons, who had been driven out of Kirtland, O., came to Missouri. Smith and Rigdon organized the Danite band and compelled Whitmer and his friends to flee for life. They soon renewed the troubles with the Gentiles by a crusade of robbery and violence, and the Gentiles drove them out of the state. The same scenes were re-enacted in Illinois between the years 1839 and 1847. These troubles with their Gentile neighbors are a necessary result of the fundamental teachings of Mormonism. They will be repeated wherever it obtains a foothold.

"Since all devout Mormons regard Independence as their Zion, and the land round about it as their holy land by divine patent, they have been constantly endeavoring to colonize it. This delusion has brought to Independence bands of Mormons known as Hedrickites, Patterites, Haldemanites, McClellanites and many other 'ites,' with the present influx of Josephites. The latter already number over 300 members and are constantly increasing by immigration. They intend to continue this immigration until their entire numbers are collected in and around Independence. They are collecting a large fund with which to build on the 'Temple Lot.'

"The result of their attempts will be that Independence will be known as a Mormon town, and will be avoided as such. People will be unwilling to invest in real estate in or around Independence unless they are Mormons. The present high price of property will soon be very much reduced. The Mormons will obtain political control of Independence and surrounding townships, and hold the balance of power in the county, congressional district and state, and use it as they always have in their past history.

"Such is the problem that the people of Independence and Western Missouri have before them."

At the close of his lecture, several asked questions, and young Ephraim Peterson asked liberty to read an extract from a paper. Mr. Braden consented, and Peterson read the extracts from the Falls City Journal, and the Table Rock Argus, Nebraska papers; the same as read by Elder Kelley in the Kirtland debate. Mr. Braden was incensed at this and denounced the young man. The next morning some one, or more of the brethren of Independence procured a thousand copies of these extracts and scattered them round the city under the head of Braden on Mormonism. This we believe to have been an error and wrong, for, notwithstanding Mr. Braden made statements that are decidedly false, and for which he had no sort of warrant, it was impolitic, in our opinion, to pursue that course. A better way, as we view it, would be to review Mr. Braden's lectures in the same place, if practicable, at an early date, publicly inviting those who were present on the occasion of Mr. Braden's lectures to be present; and that without cost to them.

For a man who is ostensibly laboring under the auspices of the Disciple Church, and who professes so great regard for truth and the good of his fellow men as Mr. Braden does, he certainly "economizes the truth" at a fearful rate. In this line it will be an astonishing bit of news for the elders to learn that the church has a "large fund" out on interest that has been "accumulated through its tithe system." Will Mr. Braden in his next lecture please give the elders the name of the treasurer who holds the securities of this fund, and the bank, or banks in which the funds are lodged. We would like to have a part of it to further the Herald Office interests.

Any sort of lie against the Latter Day Saints, told by a "Rev." gentleman with a long face, in the pulpit, or in a newspaper will be greedily received and believed; while the simplest and plainest truth told in their favor will fall on deaf ears.

THE following decision is of interest to many:

The Supreme Court of Iowa rendered a decision lately which embodies a world of warning that should interest every young woman in the country. A wife had made application for divorce, on the ground that her husband was a confirmed drunkard, when the evidence showed that she had knowledge of his intemperate habits when she married him. In refusing the petition the judge said: "You voluntarily chose a drunkard for a husband, and you should discharge the duties of a drunkard's wife. His failure to keep a pledge of reformation, made before marriage, does not justify you in deserting him. Having knowingly married a drunkard, you must make yourself content with the sacred relationship."

STEWARTSVILLE, Missouri,

December 3d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—A few lines from the seat of war—"war to the knife and the knife to the hilt"—may be of interest to your readers. Arrangements have been entered into with Clark Braden for another discussion, to commence the night of the 9th inst. Bro. J. W. Gillen, of Lamoni, has kindly consented to stand for the truth and against error in our behalf. The discussion is to last for ten or more nights, of sessions two hours long. Three propositions will be discussed, embracing continued revelation, polygamous revelation, Book of Mormon, &c. Braden affirming two and denying one.

Mrs. Gaylord Smith lectured here last night on "Evils of Mormonism," to a small house; she presented the matter quite fairly, with but few exceptions. There is quite an interest manifested concerning the Gillen-Braden debate. It is hoped it will be beneficial in behalf of truth.

Bro. J. R. Lambert has been with us for a few days, and has very forcibly dispensed the word of truth. On Sabbath evening he delivered a forcible sermon in defense of the work. Bro. J. R. Lambert will be with us during the discussion.

Our quarterly conference passed off quietly with no changes of importance. The attendance was good on Sunday, a good social meeting in the afternoon. The Saints are feeling quite well in spirit, and bearing well the oppression of the enemy. Our new church, 36x60, is nearly enclosed. When done will afford us a good place for worship, Yours for truth,

J. M. TERRY.

COLDWATER, Mich.,

November 23d, 1884.

Editor of Saints' Herald: During the latter part of September I visited Kirtland, Ohio, and some other points in the State. A sufficient interest was manifest at the various places visited to encourage us in the belief that the way is open in that State to present the word; that free and fair minded men may be found almost everywhere, who are willing to investigate the claims of our faith. The evangelizer can scarcely go amiss. He must be persistent and untiring in his efforts, "apt to teach," despising not the day of small things; that is, be content to do as did the Master; preach to the few or the many; go from house to house, or address large or small numbers in public; be content to sow the good seed of the kingdom and wait until it has time to take root and grow. It is God who gives the increase. We can not expect to reap where we have not sown; neither harvest the same day that the seed is planted. I am confirmed in the opinion, long since held to, that the most efficient builders—laborers—we have are those who are content to do their work, and do it well, and wait the developments of time, and the blessing of God upon it for an increase. It is difficult to root up the seeds of truth once sown in the hearts of honest men. We not unfrequently gather in one now, who heard the word in your father's day; others befriend us by reason of a love for that truth heard forty or fifty years ago. Many would, doubtless, have long since shown themselves, had it not been for the bad examples of self-constituted leaders. Discouraged by men, they have been hid in the world all these years, hoping that the truth would show itself, and move on to victory. It is an evidence, at least, that the truth remains with the truth-loving when once known, and that the laborer can well afford to wait God's time for the increase.

At Kirtland, Bro. E. L. was busy, and I set to work to help him a few days, going through books, criticising, hunting points, &c. October 12th, two were baptized by E. L., brethren William Harvey and Israel P. Titus, both heads of families.

Saturday and Sunday, October 18th and 19th, I attended the Northern Michigan District Conference at Vassar, Michigan, held in the Opera Hall. Brethren A. Barr, E. DeLong, J. Baily, J. Carpen'er, Levi Phelps, Willard J. Smith, and others were present; brethren Deuel, Forscutt and Cornish, did the preaching. A large number of the citizens were in attendance at the preaching services, and manifested a deep interest in what was said. There was an urgent request came to continue the meetings, but something hindered. The interest continues, and the people await a preacher. The Saints dispersed to their several labors, renewed in spirit to toil on in the Master's service.

The 21st of October I came to Lansing, and stopped at Dr. Hiram Rathbun's, and was made welcome. Bro. Rathbun was received into membership with the church on his original baptism, by vote of the Vassar Conference; he having been baptized by Oliver Cowdery in 1831, in a small stream just south of the town of Independence, Jackson county, Missouri. He passed through a number of the trials that the church experienced in an early day, while yet quite young. Lived with his father at one time in the house with old Gov. Boggs, in the town of Independence; was present during that terrible persecution and slaughter of the Saints at Haun's Mill, in Missouri. He says there were sixteen of the brethren buried in that one well, after being slaughtered by a mob. The family having returned to Ohio, and his father having died when he was yet but a youth, isolated, and doubting the propriety of following any of the "isms" of self-imposed leaders, he has been a kind of wanderer among the nations, adhering to religious truth, as best he could, until the light of the Reorganization reached him. Since which time he has been getting ready to unite fully with the Church and its work, and help defend the faith cherished by his father, and which has lingered with him as a sure guide all these years. We welcome him as a brother and a laborer, and believe, if faithful, that God will bless his efforts.

I met with Bro. Gordon E. Deuel at Bro. Rathbun's, who had been laboring for some time in the vicinity of Lansing, at the request of Bro. Rathbun, and had succeeded in baptizing a number into the fold. Among the number was a lady by the name of Supry, who had preached for the Free Methodists at one time, and for some other parties, who had grown tired of "the sects," as they express it. She became acquainted with the faith some time since by Bro. Rathbun, and now by the aid of Bro. Deuel she was led to embrace it. But, here arose a difficulty; Sr. Supry was accustomed to preach: she might not wish to bury her talent; but the Saints have not sent out, or authorized, a female ministry. Brother Rathbun met the emergency by stating that the church did not ordain the sisters, but made Elect Ladies of them. This, with other similar cases likely soon to arise with us, here, fairly brings up the question as to whether sisters who have been accustomed to church work, and to occupy the pulpit in other churches, and possess gifts and talents for such work, shall, or shall not be permitted to thus exercise their gifts according to conviction, and as they may be led, when they unite with the Saints. With us, there are but two things that stand in the way of duly authorizing them, on the same ground with the brethren. These are, first, the want of a Scriptural precedent; second, the lack of authority in the word. But that sisters did eminent service in the church at one time, and in some way were connected with the ministry in work, the New Testament is witness. In view of this, we encouraged Sr. Supry to use her influence and talent, if so led, to convince her friends where she had been accustomed to preach, of the truth of the gospel, as the Lord might bless and direct her; and her labors would be appreciated. Was this heresy?

While at Lansing I visited Bro. G. F. Weston at his father's, at Delta Station, in their new, cozy little home. Bro. George has begun to present the work in their vicinity. In company with Bro. Rathbun, I went six miles out from the city to a Mr. Kelley's, friends of his. Bro. Deuel and others came out in the afternoon. In the evening Bro. Deuel and I introduced the work in the Dolivardin School-house. The audience was not large, but attentive, and a good impression seemed to be made on the hearers.

On Friday evening, the 24th, Bro. Deuel introduced the service, and I preached, in the Oliver Hall, at Dimondale—ten miles from the city. The next evening Bro. Deuel preached in the same hall, to an attentive audience. On Sunday I continued the services, morning and evening, and also on Monday evening following. Sunday afternoon Bro. Deuel was called away to fill other appointments. The weather was growing bad but he went courageously to the place of duty. At Dimondale a good interest was manifest by many, some appearing as old friends, who recognized me quite readily from a circumstance that occurred some twelve years ago, when the writer and Bro. E. L. Kelley were passing through the State of Michigan; they chanced to attend a meeting one Sunday morning, held by an Adventist by the name of Wilson, at a place said to be two miles from Dimondale. Wilson was about thirty years of age, I should judge, full of zeal, and had all confidence in himself and his cause. He preached a stirring discourse on the resurrection of the dead, and, with all, advanced the soul-sleeping theory. He was forcible, attractive and tonguy. E. L. was just from the field of conflict with J. V. Hines and others of that faith, and concluded that Wilson should be set right before we proceeded further; so gave him to understand that he was ready to do it. Wilson quickly accepted; preliminaries were arranged, and time set to commence the next evening. Every thing was a venture with us, for we were not acquainted with any one within fifty miles, only we knew the Lord was on our side. On Monday evening we ventured on a place to stay, the Lord opened the way, and we were made welcome by a family by the name of Bohanan, I believe, belonging to no church. For six consecutive evenings the tilt went on, over the soul question, Wilson being defeated, so voted unanimously the audience. He is now preaching for the Baptists. Neither of us had returned to that neighborhood until recently. The announcement was made, and a number of the old audience came out and made themselves known, including one of the Moderators. Something said and done during our stay there remained with the people for good, and some are not now far from the kingdom. So much for sowing the seed by the way.

Returning to Mr. Kelley's on Monday evening, the 27th, and sleeping a part of the night, I met again with Bro. Deuel, who reported good success in the places where he had been. I met also, while here, Bro. David, recently baptized by Bro. Deuel. He is in the prime of life, is a good talker, and if constant, contented, and faithful in well doing, will doubtless prove of excellent service to the church.

Tuesday morning, the 28th, leaving the pleasant family of Mr. Kelley, in company with him, Bro. Deuel and Dr. Meade, I returned to Lansing; and stayed during the day at Bro. Rathbun's. Appointments had been made for Bro. Forscutt, but learning that he could not fill them, Bro. Deuel returned with Mr. Kelley in order to continue the work, and fill the appointments. In the evening I took the train for Galien, in order to attend the District Conference, to be held there. I chanced to meet with Bro. Forscutt on the train.

The Michigan and Northren Indiana District Conference commenced at Galien, November the first and closed on the evening of the third. The attendance was good, considering the late division of the district, and every service was well attended. Present, of the ministry and good workers, were C. Scott, Bro. Bootman, Bishop Blakeslee, Francis Earl, J. Shook, C. Thurston, Wm. Lockerby, H. B. Hulse, Brn. White, Wheaton, C. Butler, &c., too numerous to mention, and sisters not a few. The Spirit was present in the meetings, and a good feeling was manifest. Brn. Forscutt, E. L. Kelley and H. Rathbun, did the preaching, and were listened to by an attentive and appreciative audience. Bro. Rathbun was ordained to the office of an Elder, by the prompting of the Spirit, and the direction of the conference. On Monday evening he made his first effort before the Saints, and rather surprised them. The effort of the Bishopric to set before the conference the duties of the Saints under the temporal law was a decided success: and each believer felt that he, too, had something to do in the great latter day preparation, whether he was a preacher or not. Bro. Mark's effort on Sunday evening delighted and carried away his audience.

At the close of conference the Saints dispersed: brethren C. Scott and E. L. Kelley going to Dimondale—Bro. Kelley to remain a few days, and Bro. Scott to continue according to the demands of the work in that section of the country. They had just got under good headway, and a large audience interested, when both were called away; Bro. Scott to see his sick father. Bro. Deuel having gone into other parts, the writer was required to return there and continue the work. Accordingly he arrived at Dimondale on the afternoon of the fifteenth, and continued until the 19th; held seven meetings and baptized two, Mrs. Lettie E. Kelley and Dr. Wm. R. Meade, both of excellent promise. I could not remain longer, but the interest continues. While there a lady preacher attended my meetings, and arose and informed the audience that she would show a different side to matters when I was done. She does not believe in the ordinances; Jesus had done it all. We poor sinners have little to do but believe that the blood of Jesus has cleansed us from our guilt, without our lazy selves doing one thing. I offered to divide the time with her, but she declined; was going to wait until I was through. To close, the work is onward in Michigan, and we are encouraged and hopeful.

RHODES, Iowa,

Bro. Joseph:—I am officially informed that one John T. Lane is now at Washta, Cherokee county, Iowa, and has been preaching and baptizing. This same Lane belongs to the Boonsborough Branch, and he left his family under peculiar circumstances; and after being gone for some months, not informing his family of his whereabouts, he now turns up at above named place with these peculiar attachments. He is in bad standing in his branch, and is not and never has been an ordained officer, but has sought ordination time and again, but was repulsed by reason of his being too unwise even to represent himself as a good living Saint. Therefore, I would advise he be published in the Herald, that our cause may not be in disrepute by reason of such action.

Yours, I. N. WHITE.

NORWALK TOWNSHIP,
Pottawattamie Co., Iowa,

November 26th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Upon leaving the Reunion, where we spent a pleasant and profitable time, I went to Mondamin, thence to Council Bluffs, thence to this vicinity, when on Sunday 19th, ult., per request, a church was dedicated near Weston, for the Danish brethren. On the 20th, I went to Rhodes, Marshall Co., where debate between Elders I. N. White and J. H. Scull was in progress. While Bro. White did the best he could under the circumstances, yet it was little to what might have been done had he been favored with a good opponent. But when a man reads for thirty minutes, something entirely foreign to the subject under discussion, and will also give a good "Methodist exhortation," there's very little said to furnish the other side with something to say. When a man doesn't seem to know the difference between argument and exhortation it makes a poor discussion.

After debate I preached a little in Rhodes; and on 6th inst., went to Boonsborough, in company with Bro. J. S. Roth, where we began meetings on the 7th. Delivered eleven discourses to full and crowded houses. Was much blessed with the divine presence, and the auditors appeared well pleased. At the close I delivered by request, three lectures on "Divinity of Book of Mormon." On the morning of 9th, while in social service, the Holy Spirit being present in much power, writer felt prompted to have special services for the young people, so appointed one for evening of 11th, at which a goodly number were present, and gave them an hour's chat. Three were held, other two in day-time; at one of which God graciously blessed the young Saints, and I felt strengthened. By their request we instituted a "Young People's Prayer Meeting;" they selected Bro. Fulton Brown to preside. We gave them special instructions, that the meetings must be held with the highest and purest of motives. That prayerfulness, humility and meekness must ever be cultivated by them. That they should come and go from service prayerfully, and seek daily God's guidance and blessing. On 19th we left, reluctantly.

Have preached six discourses here so far, and shall leave this week for elsewhere. I must say of the young Saints at Boone, that they appear to be very zealous and devoted to their convictions of "the truth." It did me much good to witness their manifest devotional earnestness. I don't see why the young people of the church everywhere can not be earnest and alive in the gospel work. The world has no satisfying good to give them. Its allurements and daily enticements are deceptive. Sin is a brazen hypocrite. Evil is blinding and debasing. All the glittering fancies of the world are but empty bubbles—while their cloring may be as beautiful as the tints of a rainbow, yet they soon burst and are not; leaving no substance to possess. The gospel of Christ, its promises and blessings are everything. Paul said: "The things that are seen, are temporal, but the things that are unseen, are eternal." We seek for "the unseen" by faith; the faith in them being created by the possession and enjoyment of blessings that are but as shadows cast by the coming event; which, when obtained, will be worthy the gift of an infinite God! The promises of God in many minor things having been fulfilled, thus establishing the honesty of his intention and work, we feel that we can readily trust Him to give the greater "things unseen" to those for whom they are prepared, and who are preparing themselves for their reception.

Many seem to think to live a Christian life is "so hard." Well, it does require more of an effort to live it than to live worldly. "All good is from above." Hence to do good is to take steps upward. Sin is down hill, because it debases: Goodness is up hill, because it exalts. Now, any one can lie down at the top of a hill and roll down, with but a starting move—and the base is reached without any further effort on one's part. But you can't lie at the base, give one turn and roll up. The ascent must be made standing about erect; step by step the summit is reached. Goodness leads upward and Godward, and as effort is necessary to go up hill, so it is necessary in keeping God's commandments. Can any one expect to reap any good thing without effort? If he does he but deceives himself.

For the gift we're striving,

J. FRANK McDOWELL.

Bro. Joseph:—Books, &c., came all right. I am laboring here in a church Bro. Robert Brown has bought. Our audiences are small; but we hope they will increase in numbers. Bro. Brown is indeed a fine example. He has paid a tenth of all his property valuation, and has bought a church here, besides doing many commendable works for the Saints. I hope a branch will be raised up here, for his family is the only one having Saints in it, in this town. I have written for Bro. Leverton and expect him on the 29th, to help me in holding service every night, for my voice wont stand the strain alone. I send you a paper herewith, in which I have a brief letter. It is inserted gratis; but for the Epitome, at the close, Bro. Brown paid two dollars and a half as insertion fee. Regards to all.

Yours as ever,

JOSEPH LUFF.

Dear Herald Readers:—I will try to tell you what a good, blessed time we enjoyed at our district conference at Union Branch, some fifty miles from our place on the 8th and 9th inst. I left home on the 6th, in company with my father and mother and uncle Harbert Scott. Landed there in the afternoon on the 7th, at our worthy brother Rector's home. We were made glad to meet our foreign brethren, Uncle Mark and J. W. Waldsmith, splendid good brothers, indeed. We met in the neat chapel which the Saints have reared in which to serve the great I Am, and had a time long to be remembered. The Spirit of God was in our midst, and peace and love prevailed throughout the entire session; and the Saints felt encouraged to press on in this glorious work.

The dedicatory service was good, excellent indeed; this we attribute to the good spirit. Meeting Monday night; there was a large attendance and good attention. Meeting was appointed for Tuesday night; when time came a telegram reached us—sad, sad news! Our dear, beloved uncle, John A. Scott was dead. The meeting was disannulled, and we returned home on the first train. Will we not miss him by our fledge and in our meetings? Oh how sad to think of him! Let me say to his children who read this, Live faithful; remember his wise instructions to you all, as a father. He did all a father could do to teach you the good way. Let us try to live so as to meet him, one and all. For years he has suffered for the faith. He has fought a good fight, he has finished his course, he has kept the faith, and a great reward is laid up for him.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I write you this evening to tell you that Bro. Joseph Burton and family sailed from here to-day at two p. m., on steamer "Australia." They arrived here on Friday last, expecting to sail that day, as the steamer was so advertised, but one thing and another has detained her until to-day. So we had the pleasure of their company for a few days; doing the city. They were in excellent health, and were looking forward most hopefully to their new field. Bro. Burton preached for us, last evening, a most excellent discourse, showing how saints and sinners might and should become Christ-like; a very lucid sermon, indeed, full of rich thought, which he embellished in a most excellent manner. I am favorably impressed toward him, and believe he will win and hold the confidence of the colonial Saints.

Yours in hope of triumph,

THOS. J. ANDREWS.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.,

November 27th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph: Last night the Right Rev. (?) Clark Braden closed a series of three lectures. He was duly announced in the papers here, and advertised thoroughly. His subjects were announced with all the pomp imaginable, as follows: "Mormonism, and its falacy;" "Book of Mormon, and its falacy;" "the Problem of Mormonism, and its Solution." Thinking the Christian Church entirely too small to accommodate the enormous crowds who would pay their twenty-five cents to hear the great Mormon Killer; he very wisely (?) procured the Opera House. The first night there were, including complimentaries and dead heads, 34 persons in attendance; the second night, there were 43; the third night, 53. However, the empty chairs seemed to inspire the speaker considerably; and after the Spaulding gush, and Braden slush, composed chiefly of brass, sarcasm, assertions without any proof whatever, this signal failure has departed, we think a sadder but somewhat wiser man, in the, to him, wonderful discovery that his eloquence did not, to any apparent degree, stir up the good citizens of Independence; and the opinion of both Jew and Gentile, is that he made friends instead of enemies for the Mormons.

On the second night a young brother, Peterson, arose and asked permission to read an extract from a paper. Mr. Braden, thinking it something to strengthen the unreasonable and very elastic assertions, courteously gave the young man permission to read; whereupon he read from the Braden-Kelley Discussion, the extracts taken from the "Falls City Journal," and the "Table Rock Argus." On the conclusion of the reading, Braden, with considerable venom re-remarked,

"You are a sneaking hound, and a cowardly skunk, and I shall no more notice you than I would the animal you represent." The next morning some of our brethren had a few hundred hand-bills struck, bearing the head line of "Braden on Mormonism." Then followed the extracts from the Journal and Argus. These were scattered broadcast over our city, Mr. Braden receiving a copy from small boys on nearly every crossing. The solution of Mormonism, if he had any was in his mind, as he did not advance any mode whatever for dissolving the Mormons, and only intimated should the citizens of Independence suffer the Mormons to settle in and around this city they would soon carry the elections, and drive out the citizens. But what course to pursue, or how to get rid of them, he was too cowardly to even attempt a remedy. Quite a number of questions were asked by Brn. Crawley, Pitt, May, Brackenbury, Chatburn and others. He would not, nor could he be induced to defend the position of his church, nor deny that the Latter Day Saints were in harmony with the Scriptures as to organization, practices, &c.; but he would argue the fallacy of the Book of Mormon, and that Joseph Smith was a polygamist, and gave the pretended revelation on polygamy; and he could prove it by affidavits from Salt Lake City, and from enemies of the Latter Day Saints. From such evidence we think he could prove Christ to be a glutton, truce breaker, drunkard, seditious, and perhaps a Polygamist.

He announced from the stand that Kelley had backed out entirely, and would not meet him in discussion again under any circumstances. In conclusion will say, for the encouragement of the Saints, that Independence is still here, and the Saints meet regularly at the little brick church, where the Spirit of the Lord is made manifest, and the Saints rejoice.

Yours in bonds,

T. W. CHATBURN.

Long Valley, GRISWOLD P. O.,

November 16th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—We are still striving to hold on to the rod of iron, and I feel stronger in the faith every day of my life; but I am famishing, not for physical but spiritual food, as we have no meetings here. There are only two families of saints in this valley, that is Bro. Holmes' and my own; and the nearest branch to us is about thirty miles. So we can not meet with them very often. But, dear brothers and sisters pray for me, that I may ever be faithful, and hold out to the end, realizing that the prize lies at the end of the race.

GENERAL NEWS.

Nov. 28.—Italy reserves her right to liberty of action in regard to her interests in Africa, and her delegate to Berlin has so informed the Congo Conference.

According to the annual report of United States Treasurer Wyman, the decrease in the net revenues of the Government during the last as compared with the previous year was $49,767,712. This was accompanied by a decrease of $21,281,893 in the expenditures. The surplus applied to reducing the public debt was $104,393,625—a decrease over 1883 of $28,485,818. The report deals at some length with the gold and silver holdings of the Treasury, and, among other things, calls attention to the question whether the department shall continue to make in gold or its representative payments which are now made through the clearing-house, or whether it shall substitute the use of silver dollars or silver certificates. In commenting upon the subject of the redemption of National-bank notes the Treasurer states that the comparatively small amount of such redemptions in the last five years may be attributed to the recovery during that period from the effects of the panic of 1873, the increased activity of business, and the benefits attending the resumption of specie payments.

The value of assessed property in Washington Territory is $50,513,852. The Territory is out of debt and has $47,901 in the Treasury. The population is estimated at 150,000. The Governor urges the admission of the Territory as a State.

Count von Hatzfeldt, Minister of Foreign Affairs, presided at to-day's session of the Congo Conference. The Congo Committee made its report, which was adopted. It contains a provision in favor of the extension of the Congo basin boundary eastward, duly respecting the rights of Portugal, Zanzibar, and one native King. The Powers will offer their good offices on the spot for the settlement of any important questions that may arise. A second committee was appointed which will to-morrow arrange the details, and a third committee was appointed to conclude the labors of the second committee and compile their report. The resolutions of the committee were then adopted. The question of free trade will be discussed when the frontiers have been settled.

Paris, France, has resumed its usual appearance. It is estimated that the total number of deaths by the recent inroad of cholera will reach 866. There are still a few cases of cholera in the dirtier quarters of the city.

Nov. 30.—The sitting Saturday of the Congo Conference Committee lasted four and a half hours. The committee unanimously decided in favor of freedom of trade within the limits of the newly-defined Congo Basin. The English, French, and Belgian delegates were the principal speakers at the meeting. The English delegate upheld universal free trade, both in exports and imports. The Belgian favored that free trade be restricted to imports. The French delegate urged that the plan adopted should be limited to twenty years as an experiment. The report of the committee will be presented to the conference Monday. Its adoption is certain, probably without discussion. After the adoption of the report the Niger question will be discussed.

Advices from Khartoum state that the Mahdi continues to summon Gen. Gordon to surrender, and the latter replies by firing into the enemy. On one occasion Gordon told the Mahdi to dry up the Nile and come across if he be a real prophet, and that he (Gordon) would then surrender. The rebels are entrenched at Wasy-Gamar. Gen. Wolseley has offered a prize of £100 to the regiment which would make the quickest passage in the whale-boats from Sarras to Debbeh. A message from Gordon dated Aug. 28 says it is imperative to the prosperity and tranquility of Egypt that she retain possession of the whole course of the Nile. He attributes the present evils to the use of the word "abandonment" by Gen. Wolseley in telegraphing to the Khedive. It is reported that the Mahdi is short of provisions, and much sickness prevails among his forces. Five hundred of the Mahdi's regulars are said to have joined Gordon's army.

Two German men-of-war have anchored in Bay St. Lucie, south of Mozambique, Africa, and the German Commissioner has informed the Boers of the intention of Germany to construct a railway from St. Lucie to Pretoria, giving Transvaal access to the coast.

Starvation in the near future threatens the striking Hocking Valley coal-miners and their families unless the strike is brought to an end and the miners return to work.

An unusually heavy snow-storm in Northern and Middle England caused great interruptions to travel.

A meeting of the colored people at Petersburg, Va., has been called to consider the advisability of an exodus to California and other parts of the West.

Dec. 1.—The French Senate has passed a bill abolishing all public executions in future.

A bill has been prepared by the Italian Government appropriating $4,000,000 to sanitary improvements in and about Naples.

During the present session of the British Parliament the Government will introduce a bill establishing the confederation of Australasia.

Prime-Minister Ferry has advised the Powers of the complete cessation of the cholera in France, and has requested them to raise their quarantines.

The Redistribution bill, as finally agreed upon by the Government and presented in the British House of Commons this evening, is a sore disappointment to the Radicals. They denounce it as a complete surrender to the Conservatives. It provides that boroughs having a voting population of less than 15,000 shall be merged in their respective counties, and that constituencies of more than 15,000 but less than 50,000 voters shall have but one representative. If this were to go into effect at once it would deprive half the boroughs in the Kingdom of their members; but the proposed measure is not to become operative until after the constituencies have been enlarged by the passage of the franchise. It will, however, increase the voting power of the rural electors at the expense of those in the towns and the smaller cities.

A dispatch from Suakin to the Times says: "Saturday the rebels closely invested the town, and the ships and forts kept up continual firing all day. A force of 500 rebels attacked the cavalry and camel patrols, but were repulsed." Bands of Bedouins are robbing all the caravans of the pilgrims to Mecca. Telegrams from Dongola reassert that Gen. Gordon has taken Shendy.

The Congo Conference adopted the project de declaration of free trade within defined limits of the Congo country.

The following is a summary of the President's message:—Our relations with all the Foreign Powers are pronounced satisfactory. A treaty has been signed with Belgium, securing equal rights to citizens of either country in the other's jurisdiction. A revision of the Chinese restriction law, passed at the last session, is recommended, so that injustice may not be done to Chinese who left this country with return certificates valid under the old law, and who are now debarred from returning under the provisions of the new law. The renewal of our diplomatic relations with Egypt is recommended, likewise the conclusion of a single extradition treaty with Germany, which shall be applicable in all parts of the Empire. The request made by Hawaii for a seven years' continuance of the reciprocity treaty is favorably urged, and Congress is also asked to consider whether the present discrimination which the tariff makes against foreign works of art is not likely to result in serious harm to American artists. The ratification of a treaty of commercial reciprocity with Mexico is announced, and the legislation to make it effective is urged, as well as the conclusion of a full treaty of commerce, navigation and Consular rights, for which Mexico is also prepared. The treaty for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal is commended to favor, as well as the commercial convention with Spain for reciprocity of trade with Cuba and Porto Rico.

The President strongly urges the enlargement of the scope of the neutrality laws so as to cover all patent acts of hostility commenced in our own country and aimed against another country with which we are at peace, and all overt preparations for the commission of crimes of this kind; also, a revision of the naturalization laws so as to clearly define the status of persons born in this country and subject to a foreign Power, and of minor children of fathers who have declared their intention of becoming citizens, the object being to facilitate the efforts of the Government to protect its citizens abroad. It is further recommended that the diplomatic and Consular service be so reorganized as to more fully meet the demands of our rapidly increasing trade and population.

The financial condition of this country is recapitulated from the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, with whom the President concurs in recommending the immediate suspension of the coinage of the silver dollar and the issue of silver certificates, and in withdrawing the $1 and $2 notes. The abolition of all excise taxes except those on distilled spirits is renewed, and the proposition of the Secretary to organize a commission to ascertain the most effective means of increasing our foreign trade, as well as his recommendation that Congress shall pass such legislation as will revive our merchant marine, is also favored. He also urges upon the House the passage of the Senate bill permitting the National banks to issue notes equal to the face value of deposited bonds.

The reports from the other departments are fully considered, but do not need detailed mention, except that he concurs with the Secretaries of War and of the Navy in urging upon Congress the adoption of the most powerful improved ordinance, the strengthening of coast fortifications, and the restoration of the navy to its former high state of efficiency.

The President expresses himself strongly on the Mormon question, and as the only solution of the problem again recommends that Congress shall assume absolute political control of Utah and govern it with a commission. Before closing he reverts to the question of foreign trade, devoting himself mainly to the question of developing commerce with the American States.

The First Baptist Church of Rockford, Ill., is rent with internal dissension, a portion of the congregation having expressed its disapprobation of the politics and methods of the pastor, the Rev. E. Anderson. The latter does not seem inclined to go, although his resignation has been politely requested.

Dallas, Tex., seems to be an uncongenial sort of a place for the gamblers. One hundred and twenty cases were disposed of yesterday, the fines aggregating $6,000. Altogether the gamblers have recently paid the municipality over $30,000 in fines and costs. Knowing like wise men, when they have had enough, the Dallas gamblers have quit.

Judge Wallace of the United States Court at New York, in the great suit of the rival telephone companies which involves about $100,000,000, decided yesterday in favor of the American Bell Company. The decision grants a perpetual injunction restraining the People's Telephone Company from using or disposing of the telephones which conflict with Bell's patent. The case will be appealed.

Nov. 29.—M. Hofsell was elected President of Switzerland, yesterday, and M. Bezzola, Vice-President. Both are Radicals.

There has been a fresh collision between Spanish and British authority. A Spanish cruiser captured a vessel in British waters, which was supposed to be a smuggler. The British thereupon sent an armed launch in pursuit of the vessel, recaptured her, and the vessel, along with its Spanish captor, was towed into the harbor. What the final result will be is not yet clear.

The New Zealand Government has been empowered to conclude arrangements with the New Zealand Shipping Company for a monthly mail service direct with England. The bark Clyde, from Mauritius, was wrecked November 5th, near Akaroa, New Zealand. The captain, his wife and three children, and the officers and crew except one, were drowned. The experiment of growing tobacco in New Zealand proved successful.

It is rumored that the Mahdi is disposed to negotiate with Wolseley, meeting him if possible near Khartoum.

There are persistent rumors in the bazaars that hostile tribes are gathering within a day and a half's march beyond Meraw, under the leadership of a daughter of Mahmoud, one of the Mahdi's lieutenants, recently killed by the troops of the Mudir of Dongola.

A dispatch to-day from Shanghai to the Times says the Chinese factories appear to be to retire and allow the French to follow them into the deadly passes of Tonquin, thus weakening their lengthened line. The native press is certain that China will succeed in reconquering Tonquin.

The report of the Utah Commission is made public. It states that the duties imposed on the commission at the recent election were successfully performed, and that all polygamists were excluded from voting, and continues as follows: "After more than two years of labor and experiences here, it becomes our duty to advise the Government and country that, although the law has been successfully administered in respect to the disfranchisement of polygamists, the effect of the same upon the preaching and practice of polygamy has not been of a character to improve the former or decrease the latter. During the present year there appears to have been a polygamic revival. The institution is boldly and defiantly defended and commended by spiritual teachers, and plural marriages are reported to have increased in number." A considerable portion of the report is devoted to an account of the recent trial and conviction of Ruderger Clawson, which the commission think will have a restraining influence upon young Mormons. "It is not unlikely," says the report, "that finally the Federal Government will find it necessary to take into its own hands all civil power in this Territory. For the present, however, we advise only: First, that the offices of Territorial Auditor and Treasurer should be definitely defined by Congress as offices to be filled by appointment; and we may remark in this connection that, although the organic act would seem to leave no doubt as to the appointment of a double character of these officers, and the commission has persistently refused to recognize the right of election under the law, and local courts have sustained this view, still the incumbents of these offices at the present time are holding over from previous elections. We would recommend in addition to the above, Commissioners to locate university lands, Probate Judges, County Clerks, County Selectmen, County Assessors, the County Superintendents of District Schools be made by act of Congress appointable, and all these, after nomination by the Governor, shall require to be confirmed by a majority vote of the commission before being commissioned. The reason for this is obvious. The organic act now requires that all nominations by the Governor shall be confirmed by the Legislative Council. The council is always the creature of Mormon power, hence no suitable appointments can be secured. The Governor and commission, acting respectively as nomination and confirming powers, would insure such appointments as would be an effective effort of the Federal Government to overthrow polygamy. For the courts, after conferring with the Judges and District-Attorney of this district, we recommend: First, that the provisions of the law of 1874 relative to juries and their mode of selection be revised either by providing for a greater number of jurors or by authorizing an open venire when the names in the box have been exhausted. A better provision, perhaps, would be one authorizing open venire in all cases prosecuted by the United States. Second, the jurisdiction of the several District Courts ought to be extended so as to give each jurisdiction in all cases of polygamy, wherever in the Territory the crime may have been committed. Third, in United States cases Territorial courts should be invested with power co-extensive with that possessed by the United States Circuit and District Courts in the several States in matters of contempt and punishment thereof. Fourth, prosecutions for polygamy should be exempted from the operation of the general limitation laws. Certainly while parties continue to live in polygamy the statute should not run against the principal crime—polygamy. Fifth, the process of subpoena in all cases prosecuted by the United States should run from the Territorial courts into any other district of the United States. Sixth, provision should be made for binding over witnesses on the part of the Government in all United States cases to appear and testify at trial. Seventh, when a continuance is granted upon motion of defendant provision should be made for taking depositions of witnesses on the part of the Government, with opportunity given the defendant to be confronted with the witness or witnesses at the taking of such depositions, and to cross-examine, such deposition to be used at the trial in the event of the death of the witness, or in case of his or her absence from the Territory at the time of trial, or in event such witness concealed himself or herself so as to elude the process of subpoena. Eighth, it should be made a penal offense for any woman to enter into the marriage relation with a man knowing him to have a wife living and undivorced. This should be coupled with a provision that in cases when a polygamous wife was called as a witness in any presentation for polygamy against her husband her testimony given in such case could not be used against her in any future prosecution against herself, with like provision as to testimony as to a husband called as a witness in a prosecution against his polygamous wife."

Dec. 3d.—Seventeen Anarchists have been arrested at St. Petersburg, Russia, one of them a woman.

A dispatch from Dongola says: "The Mudir has received news that the Mahdi is dead, and his followers are dying fast."

El Mahdi, the false prophet, was born at Dongola, and was of humble origin. His real name is Mohammed Ahmed. In his youth he learned to read and write, and after he had emigrated to Sennaar he abandoned his trade as carpenter, and became a public reader of the Koran. He was eloquent, imaginative, strong willed, and apt at dissimulation. Pretending to be in direct communication with Allah, he frequently, in the midst of his speeches, stopped suddenly and appeared to fall into a sort of trance or stupor. When he recovered he exclaimed: "I come from paradise, where I have been with Allah and his prophet. How I would like to tell you all I saw and heard, but you would not be able to understand it." By these and similar means he gathered around himself thousands of infatuated and zealous followers, to whom he finally announced that Allah had chosen him to be his prophet. He proclaimed that he was the spiritual and temporal ruler of the whole Soudan. El Mahdi's followers organized a court, formed an army, and became so formidable that Egypt, a large part of whose territory was claimed by the prophet, began to interfere. Reuf Pasha, Governor of the Soudan, sent several hundred regular troops to arrest him, but they were put to flight and slaughtered. Inflamed by success, the pretender set out upon a career of conquest, and began the war now in progress. He met with varying fortunes, sometimes being victorious over the Egyptians, and at other times suffering enormous losses. At Khartoum and El Obeid he left 10,000 of his followers in the trenches. Up to that time his total losses were estimated at about 70,000. Undaunted by reverses he gathered new forces from all parts of Mohammedan Africa, and continued the war with undiminished zeal.

Dec. 4.—In the Reichstag, Dr. Windthorst having replied to Bismarck, the Chancellor continued his remarks against Dr. Windthorst's motion to repeal the law expelling priests, etc. Bismarck declared that the freedom of the church was nowhere challenged, and that Prussia's rejection of the Papal candidate for the Bishopric of Posen was simply an exercise of her sovereign rights, and was in accordance with treaties. Bismarck said he was rejoiced to hear Dr. Windthorst state that he was opposed to parliamentary government. Prince Bismarck said:

"If it were possible for the Government to quietly resign and say to the majority, 'Here are our portfolios; be good enough to continue to dispatch the public business,' then matters would be even worse than now. If a majority, consisting of the Conservatives, the Centre, with its adherents, the new German Liberals, and the Volkspartei and the Social-Democrats, had to reconstruct the Government, the result would be a Ministry like that of England under Mr. Gladstone." Bismarck continued by saying that he was less concerned about the struggle between the Church and State than Dr. Windthorst supposed. The law, he continued, was directed against political agitation, and not against religious liberty. Dr. Windthorst's motion to repeal the law in question passed—217 to 93—notwithstanding the opposition of Bismarck. The adoption by the Reichstag of Dr. Windthorst's motion to repeal the law empowering the Government to expel priests implies the complete failure of the negotiations on the subject between Prussia and the Vatican.

The Pall Mall Gazette discredits the dispatch yesterday from Hong Kong to the Times which stated that China was determined to resist France to the last, and would insist on her suzerainty over Annam. The Chinese Ambassador, in an interview to-day with Earl Granville, protested that it was a breach of neutrality on the part of England to permit French men of war to coal and victual at Hong Kong. The tentatives relative to mediation between France and China have ceased. Tsung-Yi-Lamen has rejected the overtures made by England in that direction. A Tien-Tsin dispatch states that the Chinese claim the following successes:

Oct. 8.—Captured forts and the City of Lohg-Nan-Hsien, Tonquin; sunk a French gunboat after an engagement. The Elders of over twenty Christian villages tendered their submission to the Chinese commander.

Nov. 8.—The French were defeated at Hoo-wei, Tonquin; French commander shot himself; troops demoralized and fled.

Nov. 13.—Black Flags repulsed three French attacks upon Seun-Kwai. The same day the French were defeated at Tamsui.

Nov. 19.—The French, including Turcos, were forced to take refuge in the woods near Seun-Kwai. At Formosa the fighting continued six hours. The French losses are very heavy, including two superior officers. The French also lost several guns and were pursued to the waterside, where four French launches were sunk.

Gen. Briere de l'Isle, commander of the French forces in Tonquin, telegraphs that an imperial decree urging the natives to poison the French has been placarded in Loch-Nay. It was issued, he says, by order of the Viceroy of Kwaug-Tung.

The Chinese in Kam-Gsi, Province of Tonquin, defeated the French, who lost seven officers, while their General was severely wounded. The same day the French made an unsuccessful attack upon the Chinese positions at Kwan-Yin-Kio.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

Dry-goods imports at New York, during the last week were $1,362,000, and the amount marketed $1,479,000.

Last week's failures in the United States were 222 and in Canada 27—a decrease of 28 over the week previous.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the grain trade, says: Wintry weather during the last week has strengthened the wheat market, and more money is asked by builders. Prices have also improved in the provinces. Sales of English wheat during the last week were 66,895 quarters at 38s 5d per quarter, against 73,461 quarters at 40s 2d per quarter the corresponding week last year. Foreign wheat is in inquiry. American spring and red wheat have generally advanced in Liverpool. On off-coast trade the market is firmer, sellers asking higher prices, but buyers decline to respond. Twelve cargoes have arrived. Two were sold, two withdrawn, and nine remained. Twelve off-coast cargoes are due. In trade for cargoes on passage or for shipment soon the market is active. Flour is dull and slow sales. Maize is scarce and the market against buyers. Barley is quiet and steady. Oats are higher.

Estimates submitted to the House Committee on Appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1886, include: Pensions, $60,000,000; Military Academy, $393,344; fortifications, $7,303,000; Consular and Diplomatic expenses, $1,623,176; navy, $30,654,000; Post-Office Department, $56,099,164; Indian Bureau, $7,328,049; army, $26,110,489; legislative, executive, and judicial expenses, $32,326,402; District of Columbia, $1,740,073; rivers and harbors, $8,177,400; total, $254,820,707. This is an increase over the estimates of the present year of $4,346,2054.

Increased disbursements on account of pensions and decreased receipts have caused an increase of the public debt during November of $747,124. This is the first increase since July, 1879. The decrease since June 30th, 1884, is $32,143,249.

United States mints coined $4,039,700 in November, of which $2,450,000 were standard silver dollars.

The failure of D. Nicolopolo & Sons, merchants at No. 7 Great St. Helens street, London, Eng., was announced December 4th. The firm was extensively engaged in the Eastern trade, and its failure includes several other houses at Marseilles, Braila, Roumania, and elsewhere. The Eastern trade has been greatly demoralized during the last few months by the warfare in China and Egypt and by the threatened troubles in Northern India. Experts predict that there will soon be an enormous crash in this trade, and that its effect will be felt by Eastern merchants throughout all Europe.

The Verein Bank of Germany has suspended. The former manager committed suicide in prison, and the present manager is under arrest. The suspension caused the stoppage of the business firm of Bruning of Bremen, who were large shareholders in the bank.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Nov. 28.—A fire at Jacksonville, Fla., consumed an elevator and mill and did other damage to the total extent of $60,000.

Twenty lives were lost yesterday by the sinking of the steamer Durango, collided with the bark Bruce in the English Channel.

A dispatch from Belgium reports the explosion of a gunpowder factory at Wetteren. Several violent shocks of earthquake were felt at Geneva, Switzerland, Thursday night.

News has been received that the steam-berge Erin went on the rocks at Keweenaw Point, Lake Superior, November 30, during a severe snow storm Sunday night. The crew escaped, but the vessel and cargo, valued at $35,000, are probably a total loss.

REMARKABLE ANCIENT RUINS.

The Chihuahua (Mexico) Enterprise, reports the discovery of some remarkable ancient ruins on a hill or mountain four leagues south of Magdalena, in Sonora. The hill is about 700 feet high, and half-way up there is a layer of gypsum, which is as white as snow, and may be cut into any conceivable shape, yet sufficiently hard to retain its shape after being cut. In this layer of stone are cut hundreds upon hundreds of rooms from 6x10 to 16x18 feet square. So even and true are the walls, floor, ceiling, so plumb and level, as to defy variation. There are no windows in the rooms, and but one entrance, which is always from the top. The rooms are but eight feet high from floor to ceiling. The stone is so white that it seems almost transparent, and the rooms are not at all dark. On the walls of these rooms are numerous hieroglyphics and representations of human beings cut in the stone in different places; but, strange to say, all the hands have five fingers and a thumb, and the feet have six toes. Charcoal is found on the floors of many of the rooms; Implements of every description are to be found. The houses or rooms are one above the other to three or more stories high, but between each story there is a jog, or recess the full width of the room below, so that they present the appearance of large steps leading up the mountain.

DR. JOHNSON ON WINE.

"Pray, sir," asked Dr. Aston, "what objection have you to wine?"

"A sound one, sir," answered Dr. Johnson; "it disagrees with me."

"And yet, sir," says Mrs. Thrale, "you will eat heartily of a veal pie stuffed with plums—a mess that would poison an ostrich."

"Madam," he answered, "you have to accept life on the conditions under which it is offered. I can eat veal pie and plums without injury to my health, for when my hunger is appeased, I eat no more. But of wine, madam, I am never to know when I have had enough. One glass creates the want of another, and a second demands the support of a third. Besides, madam, I have no confidence in my powers of resistance. There is a heedless vivacity in wine that is above the reach of judgment. Come, Dr. Aston, let us pledge one another in water and put in for a hundred."

"Well," said Sir Charles Bracebridge, "for my part I had rather die at fifty a wine drinker than live to a hundred on water."

"And, sir you will have all the fools in the country to agree with you," answered Dr. Johnson.

SABBATH SICKNESS.

This remarkable disease has not yet been treated in books of pathology.

1. It is of the intermitting kind, attacking the patient by violent paroxysms, which return every seventh day.

These paroxysms return only on the Lord's day, and hence it is called Sabbath sickness, but by the faculty it is technically known by no other name than Die Domini Morbus.

2. The patient is sometimes deprived of the use of his limbs, and especially the legs and feet, so that he is indisposed to walk to the house of God.

3. In some cases this attack has come upon them after they have gone to the house of God, and has been attended with yawning and slumber.

4. In other cases there has been great uneasiness in the house of God, and a disposition to complain of the length of the sermon, though they have been known to sit very contentedly in a play house several hours at a time or stand on the street in the cold several hours to listen to a political harangue.

5. These persons often surprise their neighbors with their great activity and health on Monday, however unfavorable the weather may be.

6. Most of the faculty agree that there is a low feverish heat, technically called febris mundi, or fever of the world, which may be detected in these patients during the intervening days of the week.

7. There also seems to be a loss of appetite for savory food and a want of relish for panis vite—bread of life, which in this case is an indispensable remedy for this disease.

8. Persons affected with this disease generally have a disrelish for private religious exercises of the closet and the reading of the Scriptures.

9. It is also contagious—neighbors take it from neighbors, and children from parents.

THERE are a great many of us who are willing to do great things for the Lord, but few of us willing to do little things. The mighty sermon on regeneration was preached to one man. There are many who are willing to preach to thousands, but are not willing to take their seat beside one soul, and lead that soul to the blessed Jesus. We must get down to personal effort—this bringing one by one to the Son of God. We can find no better example of this than in the life of Christ himself. Look at that wonderful sermon he preached to that lone woman at the well of Samaria. He was tired and weary, but he had the time and the heart to preach to her. This is but one of many instances in the life of the Master from which we may learn a precious lesson. If the Son of God had time to preach to one soul, can not every one of us go and do the same?

The more a church takes hold of living questions and works at them the more will it flourish, and the better will it establish its claim to permanent existence. There are Christians who seem to think that all Christianity consists in protesting against sins and follies, and that the positive, aggressive character of the Gospel need not be recognized.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.

DEAR HERALD:—

Of late I have been reading the Book of Mormon a good deal. While reading this most blessed gift of God to his Saints, I have more than once felt strongly impressed to write to you, for the encouragement, benefit and instruction of your readers. And, beloved Saints, if I can have the aid of that Spirit through which I am satisfied that those impressions came, it may not be in vain that I pen these lines. Nearly every time that I have had these impressions my thoughts have been directed to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, page 226, par. 8, Plano Edition.

"And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received."

Is it not treating lightly that most valuable gift of God to his Saints, that gift that was created, (made and engraven on plates of ore), and preserved by the toil, faith, prayers; yes, and by the blood of his servants, the Nephites; that gift that was brought forth by the power of God, in the days of the poverty and weakness of his church; that gift that was given for the confounding of false doctrines and the laying down of contentions, because of the fulness of the gospel that it contained; the necessity of which was that the great and abominable church, "had taken from the Book of the Lamb of God, (the New Testament), many of the plain and precious parts of the gospel, whereby an exceeding many do stumble;" I say is it not treating lightly this most inestimable gift of God to lay it away on the shelf, where it will not get soiled, and where all the dust that may chance to come in contact with it will be on the outside, and can easily be brushed away; or like the unwise steward, whose treasure was hid in a napkin, (Luke 19: 20-22); and for saints of God, (professedly so at least), not to know what it contains? And further:

"Which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation, until they repent, and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written, [caused to be written by his servants], that they may bring forth fruit meet for their Father's kingdom; otherwise there remaineth a scourge and a judgment to be poured out upon the children of Zion; for, shall the children of the kingdom pollute my holy land? Verily, I say unto you, nay."

How, let me ask, can the Saints "repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon;" both to say and to do, according to what God has caused to be written for our benefit, even to the confounding of false doctrines, and the laying down of contentions, if we do not read that precious book, and familiarize ourselves with its great and glorious teachings. Well may it be called, and we be proud of the name, the "Golden Bible."

Written, or engraven by the servants of God, on plates of gold. Hid up in the earth by the prayer of faith. Preserved in the earth from all the ravages of time for over fourteen hundred years, by him unto whom those prayers were offered; and then revealed unto Joseph the Seer, by an holy angel, Moroni; and then translated by the power of God for the salvation, yes, for the salvation of all who would look into its perfect law of liberty, "being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the same," Rom. 8: 21; James 1: 2, 5; for St. Paul says, Rom. 1: 16, "That he was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it was the power of God unto salvation." Then if this precious book contains the fulness of the gospel, it was brought forth for our salvation was it not?

Then well might Sr. Randall, our aged and beloved mother in Israel, compose and sing by the aid of God's Spirit, who caused this precious boon to come forth to us:

"I'd rather have this precious book,
Than all the golden gems
That e'er in monarchs' coffers shone—
Than all their diadems.

"Yes, were the moon one silver lamp,
This earth one golden ball;
And diamonds all the stars of light,
This book were worth them all.

"This book was hid from learned men,
They could not it translate;
But God gave to his servants power,
To bring it forth to light.

"It teaches us of sacred things,
That ne'er'd been brought to light;
How Ephraim's children long had passed,
A dark and dreary night.

"It tells us how the Savior came,
To their forefathers here;
And taught them how to worship him,
To mingle love with fear.

"It teaches us that earthly things,
Are fleeting and are vain;
That we must lead a holy life,
God's kingdom for to gain.

"It teaches us there's no relief,
In glittering hoards of wealth;
Gems dazzle not the eye of woe,
Gold can not purchase health.

"But here a blessed boon appears,
To ease our deepest woe;
And they who seek this book with tears,
Their tears shall cease to flow.

"Here he who died on Calvary
Hath made that promise blest:
'Ye heavy laden come to me,
And I will give you rest.'

"O, yes, this little book is worth
All else to Ephraim given;
For what are all the joys of earth,
Compared to those of heaven.

"It tells us of a heavenly land,
From sin and sorrow free;
Where Jesus Christ shall reign as king
To all eternity.

"It tells us of a thousand years,
Millennial reign on earth;
Where Saints shall with the Savior reign,
'Cause they've obeyed the truth.

"This precious boon to us is given,
To guide our steps aright;
That all who will this book remember,
May walk within the light."

"Yes, all they who will "Repent and remember," that is, turn to and keep "the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon," "not only to say but to do," they shall walk in the light. Had the Church but heeded that revelation when it was given, the main body of the Church to-day might be walking in the light, and basking in the sunshine of God's favor, instead of wandering away to a desert wild, a salt land without inhabitants. Had she but remembered the Book of Mormon, loved and heeded its golden precepts, instead of casting it off like a boy's coat or pants, which were good enough in their day, but now outgrown, she would not have apostatized. Outgrow the word of God, the law of the Lord! Impossible! But this was what the church did soon after she was bereft of her two principal shepherds. The law of God was too strict. The Book of Mormon and its golden precepts were too pure and too holy for them to walk in and pattern after. They must throw it aside, must walk after the light, not of God's holy word, but the light that was in them, which "Light had become darkness." They first rejected the books that God had given to be a law unto his Church, and then the Lord rejected them as a church organization, but not as individuals. Many who had received the witness of the Spirit to the truth of the Book of Mormon, and of the latter day work, held fast to the rod of iron, the word of God, the Bible, the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, until the light of the Reorganization burst forth upon their longing, waiting, anxious souls.

But is there no danger of our getting into the same condition that the church was in when that revelation was given commanding them to repent, and to remember those things that God had given his people. Even if we do not like them cast aside the books given for our instruction, and say that they are no longer necessary; that we have outgrown them. Say as the writer once heard Brigham Young say, when speaking of being led by the books, "Here is all the Bible I want," at the same time slapping his breast with his hand. "These books were given to the Saints as a means by which to try every revelation, every prophecy, every spirit and doctrine. "To the law and the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." But how shall we try them by the detector that God has given us, if we let it lie upon our shelves, and do not know what it contains? Or at most they will post themselves in imperfect translations of the Bible, which the inspiration of the latter day work came to correct, because of the many plain and precious things that had been taken "from the book of the Lamb."

How often do we hear from the Saints, the wonder that there should be so little oneness among the Saints on doctrinal and other points. Is it any wonder when the church is composed of recruits from all the different denominations of the country, when they do all their thinking from the stand point of King James' translation of the Bible? Even though we have a Bible translated by the same man and power that the Book of Mormon was. But is there not consistency here? If the church was in a condition in as early a day as 1832, to merit the severe reproof and rebuke in said revelation, because it had treated lightly the things it had received; if they lacked faith, the love of the truth, or anything else to be directed and governed by the teachings of that book that is said to contain the fulness of the gospel, they would have the same reasons to be indifferent to the teachings of the Inspired Translation of the Bible. On the other hand, how can we have implicit faith in the Book of Mormon, believing it to be what it professes to be, and to have come forth as it claims to have come, and at the same time depreciate one half or two thirds of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and be skeptical towards the Inspired Translation.

I write from a strong desire to encourage and stimulate the Saints to a renewed love for the Book of Mormon, and to "Remember," become acquainted with, its most glorious teachings. I write because I love the cause of God; I love this most glorious latter day work. I write because I love the Book of Mormon, and its most glorious teachings, and because I have been prompted or impressed so to write by the same Spirit that carries the conviction of its truth to me when reading it with a prayerful mind. The Spirit of God has many times borne witness to me that this latter day work is true, that the Book of Mormon is true, and given us by a kind and loving Father for our benefit, for our instruction. And that the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures is for the same purpose, and of equal divinity. And let all who may read this testimony, know assuredly that I realize the fearful responsibility, of bearing my testimony to the things of God. Knowing all this, and that the witness that I now bear, will meet me at the bar of God; I now testify that the gospel as taught by the Latter Day Saints, with the Book of Mormon and the Inspired Translation of the Bible is of God. And further, that every honest seeker after truth, who will with an honest heart obey this gospel, and seek diligently and prayerfully for this evidence, shall receive the same; for God is no respecter of persons. Further I testify that Jesus, in St. John 7: 16, 17, revealed the truth. Desiring that we may all grow strong in the faith of the gospel, and in the knowledge of the word of God,

I am your brother in the gospel of Christ,
W. R. CALHOON.

THE CHURCH.

THAT the church is of divine origin, and that all who are converted should unite with some branch of the visible church, no one will deny. The people who compose the world to-day, are in wonder and are looking for the individual who dares to give a "Thus saith the Lord,"—yet the individuals are living. And the inspired penmen are abroad in the earth. And God's servants and chosen ones have been martyred and slain in these latter days, because they give, and have the courage to say, "Thus saith the Lord." There is abundant evidence in Scriptures, that the inspired penmen had the visible and invisible church many times in their minds; and there is equal evidence that all believers should enter an organized body. Jesus intended that all who individually professed their faith in him, should combine in the discharge of certain outward duties for common work and mutual strength. That through the atonement of Christ all men may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the gospel. 1 Cor. 15: 3; 2 Tim. 1: 10; Rom. 8: 1-6. That these ordinances are faith, repentance, baptism by immersion, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Out of darkness into the visible church. This was the New Testament order. But to the proof. Has the order ever been repealed? During the Savior's ministry disciples were associated with him. That was his desire, and a work of discipleship.—Matt. 4: 19, 20. The word disciple means follower or learner.

Separation from him then, indicates abandonment of his cause, John 6: 66, 67. Thus they grew up a society, a body, a church, as properly organized, with Jesus in their midst. From its members he appointed twelve as apostles, Matt. 10: 2, 3, representatives of the twelve tribes of Israel, James 1: 1; Rev. 21: 14. Later he chose seventy, Luke 10: 1: representatives of the elders, Ex. 18: 21; 24: 9. Then the society, body, and church, had its component parts. Jesus at the head, apostles twelve, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists, &c., 1 Cor. 12: 28; Matt. 10: 1; Acts 6: 4; Eph. 4: 11; 11: 20; Titus 1: 5, and a large body of believers. This organization had a treasurer, John 13: 29. Government and discipline were ordained in it and by it. Matt. 16: 19; 18: 17. In connection with this body, society, and church, religious services and exercises, and preaching to the multitudes were held. Matt. 13: 24. Systematic teaching of the disciples, Matt. 5: 1, 2. Prayer, Luke 11: 1. Singing, Mark 14: 26. Almsgiving, Matt. 6: 1, and John 13: 28. The Lord's supper, Matt. 26: 26-28. Missionary labor was done by those who went out from this body, society and church, and they returned to report it, Luke 10: 17: 11: 10. This church increased in importance as a visible organization to such an extent, that the ambition of some of its members was awakened, Matt. 20: 19-29. The Holy Spirit was poured on this church in such a manner, that thousands of converts were added, Acts 2: 41-47. If there were any true disciples outside of this church, receiving the gifts and blessings that are promised to the believer, we have no knowledge of them. In their midst Jesus repeatedly appeared. To the church he gave many further instructions, and delivered a commission to all his disciples, promising his perpetual presence to the end of the world. Matt. 28: 19, 20. All those who were baptized were required to enter the church; whose branches were beginning to spread far and wide in the cities of Antioch, Corinth, Philippi, etc. There are many practical precepts in the New Testament, that can have no meaning only as they are addressed to the visible church. There is only one incident that can be quoted to favor the opposition to this position, viz., Mark 9: 38-40. Probably this occurred in the earlier part of Christ's ministry before the organization was fully known. Besides it is the case of a single individual. We should forbid no men or set of men from opposing sin and Satan. Moreover, our blessed Lord and Master does not encourage the man in his separation from the band of his disciples. But satisfied them with, Whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward. For he that is not against us is on our part.

This is simply one instance of spontaneous, unorganized, individual activity, not to be opposed, not destined to appear again. The visible church is made the home of the Saints, and the training school and body of workers. If any man can say that the church is not of divine origin, and that Christ instituted more than one, he himself being at the head, formed and patterned it, I can not see how he could well be convinced by the scriptures. Who knows but the salvation of thousands of souls may depend on the training of a single child? Why not train it aright according to the Scriptures? The Scriptures are profitable for doctrine, for reproof, rebuke, for our wisdom and learning.

Reader, have you obeyed the gospel and become obedient to it? If not, do not delay, for the Lord Jesus with his mighty angels will shortly come in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Accept of salvation on God's terms, viz., the scriptural plan; and know for yourselves and not for another. And God will bless you abundantly.

WHO WAS ELIAS, AND WHAT WAS HIS MISSION?

OUR thoughts upon this subject are given independent of what has heretofore been published, and while they may differ somewhat, yet the same object will be kept in view, that of presenting the mission of Christ Jesus before the minds of the people, with an explanation of the means through which he is to fulfill that mission. The power to save mankind is ministered of God, by his Son Jesus Christ through the gospel. See Rom. 1: 16; 2 Tim. 1: 7-10. God is the source from whence all blessings come. Jesus Christ the being to whom was committed the authority to minister those blessings to man upon earth. The gospel the means through which he ministers those blessings. He, Christ, is "the way" which leadeth unto life, see Matt. 7: 14 and Jno. 14: 6, as "no man cometh to the Father but by me" (Christ). Although all power is in him to do the work of the Father, yet he has chosen those to assist him in this work; committing to each portion of the work, and with that commitment, power to fulfill the duty, as is best calculated to advance the work of the Father. To some of those who have proven themselves worthy, he has committed keys of certain portions of the work, yet they to whom these keys are committed, do their portion of the work in the name of the Great Master Builder, Jesus Christ.

To Abraham and his seed was committed the great work; of whom Christ was, as all the holy men who have spoken as moved by the Holy Spirit. This choice was made "because thou hast obeyed my voice" says God. See Gen. 12: 3, and 22: 18. To Aaron and his sons was committed authority to act for Him in particular duties. See Ex. 40: 12-15; and Num. 18: 8. But from among these who were thus set apart, none were made choice of to act unless they willed to so act, and continued faithful to the duties assigned them, acknowledging the Lord as him for whom they labored.

Some of those who have thus been made choice of, have so proficiently fulfilled the task, and become so efficient in the use of the power committed to them, that the power has been called after their name, hence arises the expression, "Melchisedec priesthood," and "Aaronic priesthood." Yet the source from whence they received this priesthood authority, or power to act in the name of Christ, was God, committed to them through his Son.

Such we hold to be the principle governing the case of Elias. Because of his peculiar fitness to have charge of a certain portion of the Father's work, Christ committed to him the keys of that portion.

"And also with Elias, to whom I, Jesus Christ, (see par. 1, line 1), have committed the keys of bringing to pass the restoration of all things, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, concerning the last days."—Book of Doctrine and Covenants page 112, par. 2.

The keys of this work being committed to him, shows that he had the power to unlock the means through which this work was to be done upon earth, and deliver that means to whomsoever should be called. To illustrate: John was called of God to open up the way before Jesus when he came as the Son, and to him Elias delivered that portion of the Spirit of God to qualify him for the duty; and as upon Elias rests the duty of thus unlocking the heaven, by which all who are called to labor in this work of restoration, or opening up the way, shall receive that "power of the Holy Spirit" needed to qualify them for the work, it (the power of the Holy Spirit) is called the "spirit and power of Elias." See Luke 1: 17; and Book of Doctrine and Covenants 112, par. 2. So long as God's work is to be done among finite beings, so long will finite beings be called to act, and for them to act righteously, to them must be committed those heavenly blessings necessary to fit them for the duty assigned to them. Nothing seems more reasonable than that certain ones who had proven themselves worthy from among those who had ministered on earth in certain positions, should be chosen ones to minister for Christ in committing certain powers and blessings to their "fellow servants" who are called from among men to receive those powers and blessings, and act in the name of the Master; besides it is scriptural. See Rev. 19: 10; St. Luke 9: 28-33; and Book of Doctrine and Covenants sec. 26: pars. 2, 3. Besides, this principle is further observed in the fact that those who are ordained to an office in the Church of Jesus Christ have committed to them by that ordination, power to ordain others, and thus open the way for them to receive of special powers and blessings peculiar to their callings.

"Every Elder, Priest, Teacher or Deacon, is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost, which is in the one who ordains him."—Book of Doctrine and Covenants, s. 17: p. 12; see also s. 16: p. 5.

Hence, Christ, the Great Master Builder, commits to certain ones because of their peculiar fitness to have them, the keys of certain portions of the work, and they in turn commit to others to have charge of certain portions of the work under their charge, but he who hath charge of all things is God.—See Heb. 3: 1-4.

While, as held by many who should know, and we doubt not the truth of it,—the words Elias and Elijah are the same in meaning, yet different when spoken in different languages; yet this does not prove but that there were two personages even with the same name to whom were committed different portions of the Father's work, and keys to that portion. No doubt but translators of the Scriptures not discerning the difference by the duties of each have mistaken one personage for the other, or have not discerned any difference, and hence have not left in the many translations that discernible difference that should be. But this is not the case in the utterances of God to his people, as given in these last days. There it is made plain that there are two personages.

"And also with Elias, (Christ with Elias), to whom I have committed the keys of bringing to pass the restoration of all things, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, concerning the last days; * * * and also Elijah unto whom I have committed the keys of the power of turning the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers, that the whole world may not be smitten with a curse."—Book of Cov. sec. 26: par. 2.

Thus we have learned that Elias is one with whom Christ will drink of the fruit of the vine on the earth, and to whom he committed certain keys to perform a work in the salvation of mankind, and that he is a separate personage than Elijah to whom was committed keys of a power in the same great work for the saving of souls; but that his mission as well as the mission of Elijah, and as well as all of the chosen servants of God, is to assist in the fulfillment of God's work, the whole of which is committed to the supervision of Christ Jesus through the Spirit. May God bless his servants by the light of the Holy Spirit that they may be workmen who need not be ashamed; and keep them humble workmen, under the guiding counsel of the meek and lowly Jesus, that all parts of the building may be fitly framed together, growing up unto an holy habitation of God; exercising upon that gift given to each in honor to him who is "The head stone of the corner."

WE REAP AS WE SOW.

"AND they were judged every man according to their works."—Rev. 20: 13.

Every intelligent being should become conversant with the fact, that every act of life has a material bearing upon his present and future welfare. When this thought is forgotten, liberty is often abused, and men are led to follow that which is pernicious in the blind pursuit of present enjoyment. True instinct naturally prompts men to seek preservation from every evil that may befall them, and once properly instructed and made to realize that their condition for good or evil is the necessary result of their own choice and the legitimate fruit of their own action, this conviction serves continually under all circumstances and in every condition of life, to guard them from evil and encourage them to do right.

The idea that faith rather than works constitutes the basis of judgment, and contains within itself absolute regenerative powers, is unwarranted in fact, contrary to scripture, and opposed to philosophy and reason. If our acts do not determine present happiness and elect future welfare as related to those who perform them, then the argument is made that demons will go scot free. Genuine faith can only find expression in the performance of the duties it prescribes. Any thing else known by this name is but presumption, fostering hopes never to be realized, and painting fancies to fade in bitter disappointment. God has made no promise to save men upon condition of abstract faith. As well feed the child with vanity and the aged with the chaff of nothingness. The popular conception of God and his work is that principle emanates from, or originates in, Divine decree; and that whatever method He may choose as the means of saving whom he will, is right by reason of this appointment. This I deem to be untrue, upon the ground that principles of right and wrong are not made; and that whatever governs the very least intelligence must necessarily govern the greatest of all. God is as much restricted in the character of his labors by the principle of justice, this being coeval with him, as mortal beings are; and the only reason why salvation as instituted, taught and exemplified by the man Christ is just and holy, is because it is founded in the eternal principle of justice, and based upon real and individual merit. It does not detract from the merits of the Omnipotent One, to assert that even he is powerless to save man, otherwise than upon the principles of adaptation and voluntary choice upon their part.

Theology of the old school—not however the Adamic, Mosaic, nor yet the Christian—inculcates the sentiment that God by reason of his omnipotence, may do as fancy, or special choice, may lead him; and Divinity gives sanctity to the act. Should we fear the consequences of believing and advocating that God has no more liberty to do wrong than those whom he has commanded to do right? His continual maintenance of righteousness and truth makes him God, and worthy of honor, glory, and the admiration and devotion of all men. Such a being as this is not worshiped by the mere utterances of the human voice in the vain exaltation of his name. Nothing less than an intelligent Christlike service is pleasing to him or beneficial to the devotee. The example of Christ is one of life service in the interest of truth and humanity, and not a vain showing of profession without works of charity and true fidelity.

We shall be judged according to our works. The gospel is a practice, not an abstract theory, and will benefit men in proportion as they carry it into effect; no more, no less. The cheering address, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," can not be tendered by the righteous judge to those whose example in life has not proven them to be "good," and whose continuance in well doing has not entitled them to the commendatory appellation of "faithful servant."

In the bestowal upon any one of something for which he has not labored, and of which he has not proven himself worthy, two evils occur. First, there is an exhibition of partiality on the part of the giver in favor of an individual without reference to his merit. Second, there must be a desecration of the superabundance which he is not capable of appreciating, and with which he knows not what to do. The principle may be illustrated by bringing the pig into the parlor. The intended favor is an extravagance, and the matters of appreciation and thanksgiving are decided failures. We may sigh and long for the joys of paradise; but except by patience, charity and love, portrayed and developed in and by our good deeds, we prepare ourselves in intellectual and moral capacity for those felicities, they must forever remain obscure from our vision. Capabilities of enjoyment are a matter of development and progression, attained by the continued exercise of every faculty divinely bestowed. Our ability to appreciate is at par with our desires and powers of doing good to others. Talents committed to our trust and hidden under a napkin, only serve to burden the heart and sadden the soul; but when brightened with constant usage for the aid of mankind, will lighten the pathway and insure the progress and happiness of their owner.

Life is an arena in which we fight for liberty, hoping for the supremacy over every evil. Success stands at the door of those who study carefully the secret emotions of their own souls, thus determining whether the impulses of desire and aspiration are praise-worthy, and in keeping with the divine standard. Aspiration to something great and good is highly necessary, without which we could not cherish a well defined idea of life, its purpose and final issue. Means for the accomplishment of good are placed within our reach, with the promise of reward commensurate with the labors we perform.

A thought with reference to the value of time is worthy of consideration. Time teaches us the passage and expiration of the allotted days and years of our life. Can we afford to expend them foolishly? Shall we let them pass in such a way as to guarantee to us no reward? Is it not nearly or quite as culpable to trifle away ten hours of precious time as to unwisely expend its equivalent in cash? Morally we have no better right to loiter the hours away in idleness than to destroy that which has been earned in the moments of our industry. Time as well as anything else with which we have to do, is a commodity—something given for the use of man, with profit to himself and others. Says one, "All work and no play, makes Jack a dull boy." True enough, but when in the very nature of things it is working time for Jack, let him work, "making hay while the sun shines." Then recreation in its time will be both legitimate and enjoyable. If in the vigor of youth or the prime of manhood we are careless of the passage of time, and the moments are allowed unimproved to pass by, until we find ourselves in want of necessities which are supplied by others, they, not we, are worthy of the reward. The poor man who labors each long day with ax, shovel, pick or hoe for the support of his family and himself, is justly entitled to reward, and "He who doeth all things well" has pledged himself to favor all who are faithful in the most menial duties of life. Upon entrance before the august tribunal, it will not be the thousands or millions of wealth we have selfishly hoarded, that will commend us to the favor of God. No, indeed! It will be the record we have made, showing a proper use of time and means in the accomplishment of good to our fellow men. If we have been blessed with worldly goods, and have made a wise and judicious use of them, it will stand to our credit; otherwise the record will testify against us, and justice can only reward us according to our works. The spheres in which different individuals move and labor, are not always alike, indeed seldom, if ever, are; hence it is vain and useless for one to aspire to the ability, usefulness, or position of another. B is as necessary for the completion of the alphabet, as A, and neither can successfully assume the place, or do the work, of the other.

One man has superior financial ability; another is called to preach the gospel, and still another to serve in the affairs of the civil government. Adaptation or fitness is the real basis of appointment to any of these labors, whether directed by human or divine energy. The financier is accountable for the faithful performance of duty by the minister of the word only so far as the giving or withholding of his means, aids or retards his progress in that service. The preacher is responsible for the deeds of the financier, in proportion as they are the result of his teaching and practice. Every man is responsible, simply for that which has been committed to him, and in no sense are we chargeable for the acts of another, only as it may be shown that they are the result of our example.

It should be a consolation to Latter Day Saints, to know that they do not have to answer for the mistakes of their erring brethren, or those whom they deem to be in error. In view of this it seems to me, that they should burden themselves as little as possible with the sins of others, nor should they, having no authority, assume to relieve the Teacher of the specific and very responsible duties of his office, wherein he is to see that there is no "iniquity in the church." Promiscuous administration is dangerous in its tendency. It seems to me that if it has pleased God to place in the church a corps of officers, pointing out the several duties of each, that work should be left to them; and our anxiety for the welfare of the body should incessantly prompt us to uphold, aid and encourage these men in the performance of their, not our duty.

The Master said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." This places the matter of receiving the gospel and carrying it into effect, or rejecting it, with the consequences that follow in either case, as an individual matter. Nevertheless, in the gospel association we are united by a common tie of interest and benefit, rendering us amenable to each other only to the degree that our acts, our words and our influence, effect the welfare of another. In the service of God and humanity, there is sufficient for all to do; and each day's labor should be begun with the self-interrogation, "What can I do to-day to win the favor and blessing of God?" A day spent carelessly or selfishly, is sure to bring an unsatisfactory reward. As the children of light, it is our privilege to so conduct ourselves, that we may enjoy the approving smiles of God at morn, and his continued aid until the eve; and so continue through each recurring day. Sometimes mistakes are made by the Saints, and it is common among those of less profession, by allowing this mischievous thought to have place and exert its influence, "God knows my desires and what I need, and any effort upon my part will not further inform him, nor particularly change the natural course of events." Upon this hypothesis men often base their hopes or, more correctly speaking, take their chances, thus becoming careless and negligent of duty; and how could the result be otherwise than spiritually impoverish them. The light of the gospel, if they ever enjoyed it, dies out, or recedes from them, and they are left to suffer the evils of a spiritual drouth. Prayer is a system of mental and spiritual adaptation, preparing the recipient for the blessing of God. Even the young robin could not be fed, did it not act according to the instinct placed within it by the wise hand of the Creator. "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find," expresses a just requirement in consideration of a promised reward. Another Scripture passage of rare beauty, emanating from Divine lips, breathes a sentiment not always understood. "Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of Man also confess before the angels of God."—Luke 12: 8. How are we to confess him before men? Shall it be in the single act of a public manifesto? or rather should it not be in our daily devotion and conversation, supplemented by corresponding deeds of love and kindness. If we do not pray to God before our fellow men, how shall we exhibit the confidence we have in him. To illustrate the justice and moral necessity of vocal prayer at suitable times in the presence of those who surround us in life, we will suppose that one is poor and needy, having not wherewith to help himself; but he has a wealthy friend who gratuitously offers, that as often as he will petition him for aid in times of need, it shall be sent him without delay. This very rich and good man is also desirous of helping others in like circumstances. His name however is not known to all, and his character is sometimes misrepresented. Some claiming that he is as likely to give to those who do not ask, as to others who do. That he is eccentric and partial to men, but not to principle. That he favors and upholds the evil as often as the good. That his promise can not be relied upon, thus rendering it unsafe to trust him in times of trial and distress. When he has been proven a friend indeed, a truthful and benevolent man, how needful it is that his character should be properly vindicated, and confidence in him and his word be established among men, who are equally needy with those who have been favored by the gifts of his beneficence. To accomplish this how shall this work be done? By carefully shunning the mention of his name? By secret correspondence alone? Will it not be more becoming for me to seek every favorable opportunity to speak in favor of his good work and kindly disposition? It is unmanly for us, after having received the light of God to evade in any manner the duties of our religion. Cowardice is reprehensible. Let the truth be known. Let the merits of Jesus and his work be heralded among the people. Let the gospel in all of its excellency be exemplified, that conviction may reach every heart. The people have eyes to see and ears to hear, and the chief implement of gospel conquest is living our religion. As we sow we shall reap, and our Master giveth good wages to all.

GEO. S. HYDE.

LETTER FROM A. H. SMITH.—No 2.

DEAR HERALD:—I wish to show some reasons why a faith may safely be held in the principle of the gathering. I do not propose to go back to the ancient prophets and prophecies, to find foundation for my belief. It is not necessary, as the church has affirmed her standards of doctrine, and I am not at liberty to reject all or either of them. While I can find evidence in all three, I shall content myself with but one. I am aware that the one I select is sometimes doubted by members of the church; but so long as I remain a representative of the church, I have no right to reject either of her standard witnesses. When I can no longer sustain those three witnesses, or either of them, I will cease to occupy the position of a representative of the cause.

In Book of Covenants, page 65, par. 5, I find the following:

"Behold I am God, and have spoken it; these commandments are of me and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding."

And in the 7th paragraph this:

"Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful; and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled."

From this basis, and the preceding premises, I propose to reason. I am aware that there are those who are willing to receive those revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants, given prior to the year 1832; but reject many, if not all, subsequent ones. For the benefit of those I wish to say, the gathering does not depend altogether upon the revelations given subsequent to that date, as I shall now endeavor to show. In September, 1830, a revelation given to six Elders, 2d par., page 115, Plano Edition of Doctrine and Covenants, reads:

"Whatsoever ye shall ask in faith, being united in prayer according to my command, ye shall receive; and ye are called to bring to pass the gathering of mine elect; for mine elect hear my voice, and harden not their hearts; wherefore the decree has gone forth from the Father, that they shall be gathered in, unto one place upon the face of this land, to prepare their hearts," &c.

Here we discover that the Father, even God, has decreed to gather his elect to a "place" on this land. Here seems to be one of the primary reasons for the restoration of the gospel, and certainly the reason these six Elders were called, in connection of course with the main issue, the salvation of so many of the race, as will be saved through God's mode of salvation. Again, we hear the word of the Lord in October, 1830, to Ezra Thayre and Northorp Sweet, sec. 32, par. 2:

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, that this church have I established and called forth out of the wilderness; and even so will I gather mine elect from the four quarters of the earth, even as many as will believe in me and hearken unto my voice."

In keeping with the above is the "command to all the Saints in all other lands, to gather to this land." And in the extract from the prophecy of Enoch, page 133, par. 12, we find one of God's promises to his people. Enoch asked the Lord if he would come to the earth again; and received for answer:

"As I live, then, so will I come in the last days; * * * and righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out my own elect from the four quarters of the earth, unto a "place" which I shall prepare, a holy city, that my people may gird up their loins and be looking forth for the time of my coming; for there shall be my tabernacle, and it shall be called Zion, a New Jerusalem."

Do not forget that the Lord has said, "These commandments are true, and all prophecies and promises therein shall be fulfilled." From the foregoing we discover that, true to his decree, he has promised to gather his people to this land, and plant them in Zion; and the meeting of the two Zions is clearly promised in the thirteenth paragraph of the same section, showing clearly the distinction between the two Zions. Again, in harmony with himself and the foregoing, we hear the pleasing word of God coming from the lips of his prophet, after warning the church of the mysterious iniquity which lurked in secret chambers to work her ruin; sec. 38, par. 4, pages 135 and 136:

"I have made the earth rich, and behold it is my footstool; wherefore again I will stand upon it, and I hold forth and deign to give unto you greater riches, even a land of promise; a land flowing with milk and honey, upon which there shall be no curse when the Lord cometh; [please note the promise]; and I will give it unto you for the land of your inheritance, if you seek it with all your hearts; and this shall be my covenant with you, ye shall have it for the land of your inheritance, and for the inheritance of your children forever, while the earth shall stand; and ye shall possess it again in eternity, no more to pass away."

O how half-heartedly the Saints are seeking this richest of all rich promises, so far as the earth is concerned. What light here flashes upon and explains that glorious promise made in the sermon on the mount, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." We are too apt to think the precious inheritance will be given without any effort on our part, except to believe and be baptized; but we must seek it. And if we do this our inheritance is secure while the world shall stand; and O, glorious thought; it shall be ours in the eternity where Christ and God shall be. I like this; there is something tangible in it, something real. How great and good are the promises of our God and his Christ. Following close on the last named promise, in February, 1831, Sec. 41, par. 1, God commands those Elders, who were "called to gather his elect," to assemble in Ohio, in order to receive his law, that they might know how to govern all things aright in his church; and in the same month and year that law was given, the law of God to his church, see sec. 42, par. 3:

"And from this place ye shall go forth into the regions westward; and inasmuch as ye shall find them that will receive you, ye shall build up my church in every region, until the time shall come when it shall be revealed unto you from on high, when the city of the New Jerusalem shall be prepared, that ye may be gathered in one, that ye may be my people, and I will be your God."

Could anything be plainer than this. Little by little, God reveals his decrees, and men become educated to his will; and if faithful, are sure of great reward. There seems to be no temporary work contemplated here in God's commandments; but on the contrary, an eternal, everlasting work. So let us follow this matter still farther, and see what new light we may find. In par. 10, the Lord tells us what is his will, if there should be properties in the hands of his church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support. It shall be used for purchasing land, building houses of worship, and building up of the New Jerusalem, which is hereafter to be revealed. Why should all this be? The answer is found in the Lord's own words, "That my covenant people may be gathered in one, in that day when I shall come to my temple." Still further reason is given; "And this I do for the salvation of my people."

Will any one tell me these revelations are not binding on the church now? If not, then the command, "Thou shalt not kill," is not binding; for both are found in the same section. Have the people of God all been saved? Has God changed his plan of salvation? Has the Lord come to his temple? Has the gathering been as God decreed it? No, reason answers no. History answers no. The faith, the hopes, the aspirations, the wants and necessities of the people of God answer no. The fulfillment and the non-fulfillment of the promises and prophecies of God, answer no. But let us examine a little farther. In the 16th paragraph we are commanded to take the things written in the Scriptures for a law to govern the church; "and he that doeth according to these things, shall be saved; and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues." From this we see it is no trivial matter to treat lightly the commandments of the Lord. Knowing this, and also recognizing that there was not sufficient written to enable his people to become perfect in the knowledge of his ways, he continues in par. 17:

"Thou shalt ask, and thou shalt receive revelation upon revelation, knowledge upon knowledge. * * * Thou shalt ask, and it shall be revealed unto you in mine own due time where the New Jerusalem shall be built."

Here are promises and prophecies made, and made, too, at a time and place, which all who have accepted the latter day work, recognize as legitimate. Do not forget that God has said, All these prophecies and promises shall be fulfilled; for they are true and faithful. Here, too, we see special instruction given to the servants of God, to warn the people who should be converted, to flee from the east to the west, because of what was coming to pass on the earth, and of "secret combinations." Will any one tell me what crowned head or potentate of all the eastern countries is free from fear. Who among them all is not troubled and trembling because of the power of secret combinations. We are not left comfortless, but are made acquainted with the will of our God; and he still exhorts us, ye shall observe the laws which ye have received, and be faithful; and ye shall hereafter receive church covenants, such as shall be sufficient to establish you both here and in the New Jerusalem. All this promised, all this affirmed by our Heavenly Father; and still no place to gather, no literal Zion on this land! O ye of little faith, repent of all your wanderings, and seek with all your hearts, and God will forgive you, and give you a place for your gathering. He has decreed it, and his decrees are unchangeable. If we lose our inheritance, it will be because of disobedience, or a neglect to seek for it with all our hearts. God will not force his Zion upon us, no more than he will force us into heaven. If men do not believe, and will not be baptized, they have no part in the salvation of the gospel. If they will not believe, nor seek to obtain an inheritance in the Zion of our Lord, they ought to have no place therein. This subject is of too much importance to be treated superficially; and would occupy too much space if crowded into one number of the Herald.

Miscellaneous.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

We are informed by Bro. John A. Robinson that only "forty-two" of the "ninety-six" have secured their licences. We think all could have applied by this date. The church and its quorums want workers; if it takes an entire year to get a license, it will take a great many to discharge the responsibilities imposed thereby. Come brethren, wake up! I have written all that I could get the addresses of. Hope all are working, now that the winter—best preaching time—has come. We desire a full report from each member of quorum for the year 1884, on or before March 1st, 1885. Send them to R. Etzenhouser, Rhodes, Marshall county, Iowa.

R. ETZENHOUSER,
President of Fifth Quorum.

NOTICE AND WARNING.

This is to notify the church and people that Elder Clarence St. Clair, of Independence, Missouri, is no longer authorized to represent the faith of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. His license has been asked for, but he claims that it has been lost; that he has preached since the silence was pronounced, and will continue to "preach the Scriptures, as an Evangelist." The causes which led to this unpleasant affair, were deemed entirely sufficient to justify the act.

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT,
Missionary in Charge.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., Dec. 2d, 1884.

CHURCH RECORDER'S REQUEST.

To aid the work of keeping a complete record of the church, as commanded, it is necessary that the clerks of districts and of district conferences should send to the General Church Recorder the branch reports that are presented at the conferences, and as soon after the conferences as may be possible. Where there is a regular district clerk, and a record is kept, it is well for the clerk to write to the branches and obtain reports and corrections when they do not report regularly, thus he can keep his own record and aid the Church Recorder. Many clerks hold the reports of the branches either because indifferent to the work that God has commanded, or because the districts do not supply means for postage expense, and they do not like to bear it individually. I would like all reports to be forwarded, and also urge branch presidents and clerks to see that more regular reports are made out and sent to the conferences.

H. A. STEBBINS,

General Church Recorder.

LAMONI, Ia., Dec. 4th, 1884.

They have gone to live with Jesus,

In that bright and happy land,

Where the souls of little children,

Ever in God's presence stand.

Angels robed in shining glory,

Unperceived by mortal eye,

Bore their precious little spirits

Upward thro' the ethereal sky.

Dead to us, but bright and blooming,

In the garden of the Lord.

'Suffer them to come unto me,'

Was the Savior's precious word.

Pain and sorrow can not reach them,

Shades of darkness never come

To that realm of light and glory,

To our angel-children's home.

LET IT DRY.

Mr. Spurgeon once went to preach in a church a little outside of London. The day was wet and muddy, and Mr. Spurgeon's clothes were plentifully covered with dirt. A good deacon in the vestry said:

"Brother Spurgeon, let me get a brush and take off some of that mud; you can't go into the pulpit in that state."

"Don't be foolish Deacon!" said Mr. Spurgeon, in his usual good humored way, "don't you see the mud is wet, and if you try to brush it off now, you will rub the stain into the cloth? Let it dry, and then it will come off easy enough, and leave no mark."

There is an admirable hint here for every one. When evil spoken against, as we may be for the sake of truth, and men throw mud at us, don't be in a hurry about brushing it off. Too great eagerness in this respect is apt to rub the stain into the cloth. Let it dry, and then, by-and-by, if need be, it can be removed by a little effort. If there is a little trouble in the church, don't foster it by haste and hurry in doing something. Let it alone, let it dry, and it will be more easily settled than you think now. Time has a wonderful power in such matters, and it is surprising how many things in this world would be far better arranged, and how many difficulties easily got over by judiciously letting them dry.—Sol.

SKETCHES OF THOUGHT.

There is no burden of heart, no sadness of mind, no fretting care, no pain, nor sickness, nor circumstance, nor misery of any kind, but that heaven will finally cure, and sure and soon to all who now believe in God, obey his law, and make an effort to live peaceable, industrious, honest and humble. For as the wicked's day is now closing, the day star of the righteous is rising, the dark hour is fleeting, the dawn of millennial morn will soon appear. Then when the curse is removed and Satan bound the earth will be as the Garden of Eden, and heaven will be on earth and the Savior of men will be king of all. Then weary souls bear up under your burdens, they will soon be cast off, and a rest of busy life devoid of suffering and weary toil will soon be yours to enjoy, and also the work of your own hands for a long time, the second death to have no power.

INFERIOR.

LOVING FRIENDS.

Never cast aside your friends if by any possibility you can retain them. We are the weakest spendthrifts if we let one drop off through inattention, or let one push away another, or if we hold aloof from one through petty jealousy or heedless slight or roughness. Would you throw away a diamond because it pricked you? One good friend is not to be weighed against the jewels of the earth. If there is coolness or unkindness between us, let us come face to face and have it out. Quick, before the love grows cold! Life is too short to quarrel in, or to carry black thoughts of friends. It is easy to lose a friend, but a new one will not come for calling, nor make up for the old one.

If you can not pay all cash down for our goods, send us references, and we will investigate, and if we find you are trustworthy (though poor), we will give you a limited amount of credit. But if you can send the cash with order, we of course can do better by you, as we have to pay large interest on the money we use to enable us to give credit. TESTIMONIALS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 29th, 1883. I have been traveling and selling Johns & Ordway's new Self-Adjusting Bed Springs for over eight months in Iowa and Kansas, and have been richly rewarded for my labor. The springs give better satisfaction for the money than any other springs on the market, and I know they outsell all other springs. Leave them on trial and they readily recommend themselves. The above named firm are now engaged in enlarging Pictures, also of which I now have some samples, being of the finest quality, and could not help but meet the approbation of all. I heartily recommend Messrs. Johns & Ordway as being prompt and reliable firm, and justly deserve patronage. Very respectfully, N. N. HAZELTON.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan'y 11th, 1884. Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Dear Bros.—Out of fifty beds put in on trial in this county, I have had none to take out, as they all give satisfaction. I also use them in my own home. I can conscientiously recommend them as being the cheapest, easiest cleaned, and most adjustable Bed Spring that I am acquainted with. Yours in bonds, J. C. CLAPP.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan'y 15th, 1884. Johns & Ordway, Peoria, Ills.—Brethren—The Springs are just daisy, and I like to handle them, because I can recommend them. I remain your brother in gospel love, G. R. MONTAGUE.

EENO, Gallia Co., Ohio, Dec. 31st, 1883. Johns & Ordway, Dear Brothers.—I can truly say your Springs has given greater satisfaction than any other article that has ever been sold in this country. If a person will take a set on trial, they will not part with them. I have often put up three sets at one house, and gone the same road four times, and sold more the last time than I did the first. I do furthermore say that you have always been prompt, honest, and just with me in our dealings. Your brother in Christ, O. WILDMAN.

HEBER CITY, Utah, Jan'y 7th, 1884. Johns & Ordway: Dear Bros.—I must say your Springs are all you represent them to be, and all who have had them put up are well satisfied with them, which gives me great satisfaction to be able to write on this occasion. Yours in bonds, Wm. AIRD.

LANCASTER, Ind., Jan'y 1st, 1884. Dear Brethren.—The Springs give entire satisfaction. Love to sell such an article. No discount on the Springs. Out of one hundred and fifty sets sold, every one sleeps in their favor. Yours, V. D. BAGGERLY.

MILLERSBURG, Ills., Dec. 27th, 1883. Messrs. Johns & Ordway; Gents.—I have used one set of your Bed Springs for over a year, and would not be without them for three times their cost; also, all I have sold are giving satisfaction, and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are desirous of a handy, easy, and cleanly Spring. Wishing your success, I remain yours, W. F. CLARK

MOBILE, Ala., Jan'y 23d, 1883. Bro. Johns & Ordway.—The Pictures you enlarged for me came to hand in due time and in good order. I was well pleased with them, as also were the parties for whom they were taken. I am trying to preach the gospel, doing this work to make my expenses, so I will not have to call on the church for help, and I am getting along very well. Yours in gospel bonds, E. W. CATO, SEN.

Bro. M. N. COLE of Augusta, Butler Co., Kansas, writes us that the Springs give good satisfaction, and has often got paid for them after their being out on trial one night.

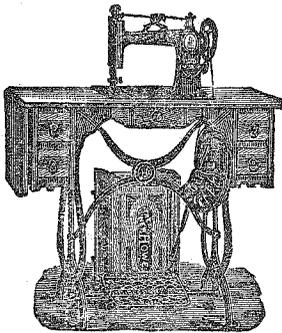

OUR OFFER still holds good to send a complete full size set of our Bed Springs by Express for only 97 cents. (Iron Heater included for $1.30) to any one who will act as our agent, or try and get us one where we have not already got one. JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Dec. 20th, 1884.

But few Christians, as compared with the great number of professed followers of Christ, are able to appreciate the saying, "when ye are reviled revile not again." They do not seem to comprehend its force and meaning.

The misrepresentations and vilification to which the "Mormons," so called of the world, and the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day-Saints as we denominate the Reorganization, have been subjected, and are now assailed by, are very trying to impulsive natures that value their honor and citizenship. It is hard to bear such ignominy and contempt as form the staple argument of men who assail the church, with equanimity. Especially is it hard when the circumstances compel us to know that opponents count upon forbearance on our part and construe it to mean an acknowledgment of what their slanders assert; or in token of cowardice. If we fail to make reply to the most trivial as well as the gravest charges, those charges are taken as confessed and we so treated.

Men make charges of evil and crime against the Saints without proof; misconstrue the plainest and simplest declarations of intention and purpose to conform to the law of good to man, and distort them to mean deceit, fraud and wickedness, or as cloaks for wrong doing. Many who make these charges are men of more than average ability and learning, who make a fair pretense to liberality and honesty of intention themselves. They forget that; were we to retort by charging them with corrupt motives and with being of evil mind and practice, they would at once say that vilification of them did not disprove their charges; or make the faith they teach an error. To this we would need to consent as being true. But, may we not with equal truth demand, when we present the doctrines we hold, and offer incontrovertible proofs from the Scriptures in support of those views, that it is not a sufficient answer to those views to accuse us, or those through whom we received those views, of crimes and evils.

Is it a just, a noble defense against our attack upon assumption and priestly domination, to charge the early elders of the church with being deceivers, false prophets, evil and unscrupulous men, and if it be proved that some of those early elders were breakers of God's commandments, does that disprove the statement that Jesus is the Christ; and that he who will demean himself in accordance with the command of the New Testament Scriptures, "Repent and be baptized," and "ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost," which shall "testify," to this most important truth, shall be entitled to "remission of sin," and eternal life if he abide in the covenant of the Redeemer. No. God must remain true though every man, (all men) be found a liar.

The favorite method of attack upon the faith of the church from 1830 to 1844, and thence on, by the whole phalanx of those who have essayed to destroy "Mormonism," as they have styled it, has been to assail the family and character of Joseph Smith, and those who builded with him. The cry of pretender, money digger, peep stone seer, vagabond, thief, mountebank, idler, vicious fellow, drunkard, ambitious aspirant, false prophet and arch deceiver was raised at an early day and has formed the staple of the "hue and cry" since.

"Ambitious." Is it a sin for an American to be ambitious, to aspire to the highest and best in the gift of God or men? If so when did it become a crime against law, social or political?

"Arch deceiver." There is one a greater deceiver than Joseph Smith ever could have been, were he twice as bad and vile as he has been charged but never proved guilty of having been. It is "he who now worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience;" and who will if possible deceive the very elect." It is he whom the Word calls Satan, the manner of whose coming is in "all subtlety." It is he who is leading men to "refuse the truth," to "believe a lie that they may be damned." It is he that causeth men to lie, defame and traduce their fellow men. It is he that lulleth the minds of men to rest, while they are saying "a bible, a bible, we have a bible; we don't want any more bible."

"A seer." And yet the old world had them, and so has the modern world; and the class that opposed and defied them then are the class that are doing it now.

"A drunkard." And yet no man testified to having seen him drunken. Raised in a state and in a period when to drink strong drink was as common as to drink water; an age when rulers, clergymen, statesmen, merchants, traders, farmers, dwellers in country and town, drank strong drink openly; when every tavern and hostelry in village and city was a place where liquor was sold by the dram, bottle, pint, or gallon, and that too without subjecting seller or drinker to opprobrium, or loss of caste until he became an habitual roysterer, disturber of the public peace, or charge upon public charity—this it is not charged that Joseph Smith was, or ever became.

"Money digger." If there were any truth in this charge, and all who dug for money; the hidden treasures of Lafitte; the doubloons of the Spanish maulauders; the Dutch pirates of Long Island sound and along the southern shores, and the Islands of the Indies; the stored mines of gold and silver from Virginia to Peru, were furnished together there would be such a lot of them. Besides this, there are men now who claim to be able to locate rich veins of ore, by witchery, or by clairvoyance; (clear seeing); and these men are not relatives or followers of Joseph Smith. They find credulous believers and do not come in for the hard names bestowed on the prophet.

"False prophet." If there be false prophets, there must be true ones. Where were the true prophets in the days when this seer from the Green Mountains of Vermont began his false prophesying, by which the falsity of his prophecies may be measured? And where are the true prophets now among the hosts of his accusers—where are they? Can those who stand in the streets and cry to the Latter-day-Saints, "False prophets, false prophets," open their ranks and point to the true prophets among them; thus to lead the unwary and deceived away from their delusion?

"Vagabond." "A wanderer, purposeless, characterless and homeless."—WEBSTER. Joseph Smith had a home when persecution permitted him to occupy it. He had a purpose, which he adhered to with strongest pertinacity—even unto bonds, imprisonment and death. He had a character strong enough to endear him to thousands; to impress wife, children and friends with the warmest respect, reverence and love. Strong enough to make a host of enemies to him because of his work, mission, or calling. He wandered only when compelled to by enemies; who relied not upon the law to punish him as a "vagrant," but outraged the law to drive a laborer from his work, a citizen from his home.

"Pretender." Joseph Smith claimed to be a follower of Jesus Christ. He believed in the promises made in the New Testament. He claimed that he received divine blessings, guidance, direction and assurance by communication from heaven. Who of those who accuse him of being a pretender is qualified to say that he did not receive as he states that he did? Are his accusers recipients of blessings of a similar character? They assert that they are not, for there are none given of God now. How can those who have not received and deny the willingness, if not the power of God to give the blessings claimed to have been received by Joseph Smith, decide that he had them not? His methods of belief are those which Christ brought in his advent. His blessings were like those bestowed on believers in Christ's day. His aspirations and hopes were those to which Israel looked forward to with joy—when the fullness of time should come in.

He "pretended" to have revelations from Jesus Christ. True. Did he not have them? How else can the fact that what he claims was revealed to him corresponds with the teachings of Jesus Christ be accounted for, only on the idea that he did receive revelations, and that from Jesus Christ?

A little reflection ought to convince the thoughtful man that the main features of this great hue and cry are without foundation in truth, or good honest sense. If the man was the criminal against law and the good of society that the cry against him would assert, it is singularly strange that the power of society was not brought to bear upon him in a legitimate manner, and legal punishment commensurate with his crimes administered. This was not done. The conclusion is irresistible, that he was not guilty as charged.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Richmond, Missouri, Conservator for December 5th has the following: "We have received a letter from Elder Clark Braden, regretting that owing to unavoidable circumstances the proposed examination of the original manuscript of the Book of Mormon be postponed till after the holidays."

Bro. George Hicklin writes from Bevier, Missouri, December 6th that three of the branches of the North Missouri District were at peace, some trouble existed in the fourth. Good opportunities for preaching were offered outside the branches. The district could not support an Elder to travel in it at present. Bro. Hicklin proposed to do what he could to further the cause.

Bro. J. W. Gillen left Lamon, Saturday, December 6th for Stewartville, Missouri, to meet Rev. Clark Braden, according to arrangement with Bro. J. M. Terry and others of that place. The debate is to commence the 9th and continue ten days, if nothing occurs to shorten the time.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Joseph Luff, writes from St. Mary's, Ontario:

I am keeping up the services here as my voice, &c., permit—twice on Sunday [and every other night. I expect Arthur Leverton to come and help me next week every night. I baptized three heads of families on the 30th November all intelligent, well-read people. Others are at the door, I think. My lungs are over-strained, but only the present is mine, and I may as well improve it, and let the future find men and laborers to meet its demands. Never felt my responsibility more, or greater anxiety to labor while the day lasts. God is indeed with us, to our comfort.

THE Independence, Missouri, Branch, took action in regard to the issuing and circulation of the circular referred to in the letter of Bro. T. W. Chatburn, in a late number of the HERALD, the resolutions adopted by the branch we give, as published in the Independence Sentinel of December 6th passed:

At a meeting of the official members of Latter Day Saints, held last Monday, the following preamble and resolutions were passed.

Whereas, One Braden has visited Independence and has lectured against the Latter Day Saints, and in so doing has but given voice to vituperation and slander, both upon the living and the dead; and

Whereas, Some one or more persons without the sanction of the Church of Latter Day Saints in this city, caused to be printed a circular supposed to be in defense of Latter Day Saints, which consisted of two extracts from the Falls City Journal and the Table Rock Argus, which reflect very severely upon the character of Mr. Braden in the section of country where he formerly lived, and

Whereas, While we recognize in Elder Braden an ungentlemanly opponent, we can not approve of such retaliation as a means of defense; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby avow our disapproval of the circular issued against Elder Braden, and deprecate [deprecate?] the act as being inconsistent with the rule enjoined by the Great Master of "returning good for evil."

Correspondence.

MANASSA, Colorado,

November 25th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—All mankind do not entertain the same views taken from the same standpoint; consequently many differ in a small degree from others when treating the same subject.

In placing this, my second letter, before your readers, I shall confine myself strictly to matters and facts as I have known and seen them transpire. The question has been asked times without number, What is it that produces the craze that seizes on all converts to Brighamism, to emigrate, or gather up, as they term it? The answer is very simple and easy to every one who has had the experience of going through the ordeal; for to some it is a very trying time, to forsake all the earlier ties of life, and go to an unknown part of the world, and amongst strange people. One of the minor causes is undoubtedly in the social world by which they are surrounded; as the pernicious doctrines of the Utah Church are so repulsive that decency recoils from coming in contact with its adherents, not understanding all the glamour in which it is presented by the Elder to the honest but willing dupe, who is entirely ignorant of its ultimate results; hence petty persecution against them is set up by their neighbors and surrounding society, which invariably engenders a feeling on the part of the proselyte of contempt and disgust for every one that does not entertain the same religious views that he does. And after swallowing one dose of the sugar-coated pills, he is always ready to take more; and the Elders are ever ready to administer them. If the Christian world would exhibit more of that charity that St. Paul speaks of in his Epistle to the Corinthians, there would not be so many of the poor, honest-hearted out here in this inhospitable climate, to endure the rigors of its extreme cold winters; but instead, would be basking in the genial rays of hickory log fires on their hearthstones in the Sunny South.

In classifying the element that furnishes victims for this latter day apostate church, we will place them under three headings:

First, the honest, humble heart, seeking for the truth. Second, the mammon worshipper, whose god is the almighty dollar; while the third class is the ignorant and shallow-minded, culled from the dark corners of the back-woods settlements.

The first class is as a general rule, composed of persons in comfortable circumstances, and of moderate intelligence, members of some religious society, honest and upright in business transactions, striving to, and are serving the Lord, according to the light and knowledge they have received, and are ever ready to hear the truth, it matters not from what source it comes. So the Utah emissary finds a willing ear to listen to the first principles of the gospel, which they do not vary from in the least; but never teach their higher law from the stand publicly; but after gaining a convert, they will let a few remarks fall in a private way, in regard to the great blessings that are received in the Endowment House. That signs and grips, with a new name, enable the initiated to pass by the gods and angels to the highest degree of glory; but are careful not to mention the contents of paragraph twenty-six of their celestial law of marriage; viz., permission to commit any sin in the catalogue of transgressions. Another great hobby with them, is priest-craft as practiced by the sectarian churches. That the laity are nothing more than slaves to pander to the insatiable appetites of the Priests; and at the same time they will declare that the Mormons are the most free and independent people on the earth. But the surest bait they throw out, is the power of God manifested in spiritual gifts, which they claim to possess; and these gifts are bestowed upon all who join their church, so that none can doubt or be deceived; when at the same time they know that they are not telling the truth, for they do not have any of the gifts that accompany the gospel. Little do they heed St. Paul's warning, as recorded in Romans, 3: 7; yet it answers their purpose, and they make use of it. Consequently the honest, humble heart is ensnared, and ready and willing to swallow down more of the same. Also the crafty, polygamic procurer, embraces every opportunity of instilling into the minds of his hearers, the great importance and the necessity of gathering out immediately. He tells them that the only place of safety is in the valleys of the Mountains, where they can escape the destructions which are sweeping off the inhabitants of the earth. He will preach to them; and picture starvation in all of its dire and soul-abhorring necessities. And as prophecy is a very cheap commodity with him, he will give it out in any quantity to suit the occasion. He will tell them it is better to be in the mountain valleys without a dollar, than to remain in Babylon with the wealth of Croesus; and will leave no stone unturned to carry his point, which is to create a desire in the minds of his victims to emigrate. But after they have seen the big elephant, a majority of them get their eyes open to the gross deception that has been practiced upon them; therefore, they very soon shake off the shackles of the detestable priesthood delusion. While a few may drift back into the world again, a majority will hold to the truth as it is found written in the books.

The second class are mammon worshippers. I will qualify that by introducing another, as they are so fond of plurality, and will give it the firm name of money and lust. This class of individuals can be found in all communities. They are very intelligent beings, and what they don't know is not worth knowing; as they are a whole steam power-news office in themselves, from editor to devil, and travel around for the accommodation of their neighbors. These are the tale-bearers, the backbiters, the meddlers, the spongers, the jockeys, the traders, the sharp ones generally; in fact all who make their living by such small capital as their wits.

So after listening to the Utah Emigrant agent expatiate on this great Western Eldorado, they hook on with eagerness; and when gathered up to this their future Zion, they become the most important part of the Zionites. Without them life would be almost a burthen. They give zest and tone to the community; in fact, they are a great acquisition in this altitude, as they keep the inhabitants in hot water, and make things generally lively wherever they are.

In regard to the third class. They are made up out of a people who have from time immemorial been hewers of wood and drawers of water, subject to commands, illiterate, having no settled convictions or opinions of their own; improvident in a great degree, letting every day provide for itself, taking the world easy; and as some writers assert, beings that are born subjects of master minds, which may be a correct theory; but I beg leave to differ; for God made all of one flesh and blood, so the cause must be in education and raising. However, let that be as it may, this material is the most ductile in the hands of the Priesthood. These are they who uphold and support the arrogant priest-craft, by stinting themselves and families by paying tithes. These are they who blindly obey the dictates of their leaders without questioning; who uphold Polygamy, although they themselves can never obtain the imaginary glory of the celestial exaltation, as they are too poor in this life to have more than one wife; consequently they will be damned, being little angels, and servants unto those whom they have by their hard earnings enriched here on earth, and enabled them to have their harems of beauties and live in opulence, while they themselves will be servants unto them and their retinue of queens forever and ever in eternity. O, what a glorious future they have in prospect. But I do not envy them in the least, for they are entitled to all of that particular kind of glory, as they did voluntarily, with their eyes opened, bind themselves slaves to said priesthood while on earth.

In my next I will give examples of emigration and colonization schemes.

I remain your Brother in Christ,
FELIX B. MOYERS.

REESE, Michigan,
December 2d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—On leaving my home the ninth of last month, I joined Bro. Willard Smith at Tawas. While there I baptized three. Left the Saints there well and encouraged. I feel safe in saying that they are all trying to do their duty, and build up the cause. From there we went to a place called Whitmore, where we held four meetings. The people seemed very anxious for us to stay; however, we left with a promise to return sometime in January if nothing prevents. From there we went into Sanilac county; met with the Saints in Brown City; held two meetings. From that place Bro. Smith left for Deckerville, and I went down into the locality where Bro. Levi Phelps lives. With him we went into a new place, and made an acquaintance with a Free Will Baptist preacher. We told him we had come to hold meetings. He seemed pleased, and at his meeting held on Sunday, at three o'clock, announced one for us in the evening. We came at the time appointed. We had a good gathering. This preacher introduced me to the congregation, and said to them that we were Latter Day Saints, recognized as a body of Christians, and distinct from the Utahs. I felt that he would be rewarded for that truth. I felt well blessed in presenting the truth. I desire to continue in the Master's cause until my work is done.

E. DELONG.

TABOR, IOWA,
December 3d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Since the Re-union I have been trying to do the best I could for the great work in which we are engaged, in spreading a knowledge of the saving truth as revealed in the gospel of the Son of God. I have labored some here and at Hamburg. The Saints are doing the best they can at the latter place, having organized a Sabbath School, and fitted up a neat little house for holding meetings. I think the work will prosper more in the future than in the past. We have two added by baptism, and others are believing; we hope they will obey. From Hamburg I went to Keystone, found all rejoicing in the truth, and the majority striving earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints; had good meetings; baptized one, the daughter of Bro. Weed; others are believing. From thence went to Farm Creek; these are all, or nearly so, old time Saints, with Bro. D. Hougas presiding. All seemingly are feeling well in the work. Some not of our faith attended the meetings, and expressed satisfaction in the word spoken.

At the two days' meeting held at Wheeler's Grove Branch, had a most excellent time. Met with Bro. Hanson, President of the District, for the first time; believe him to be a noble hearted valiant soldier of the cross. The preaching was done by your humble servant and brethren James Caffall, Hanson, E. C. Briggs, and Jason Briggs, D. Hougas; and notwithstanding the weather was cold, and a little disagreeable we had a good time. The Saints are scattered, but they come together, and God according to promise, met us by his Holy Spirit, and all hearts were made to rejoice in the glorious hope set before us through Christ our Lord. We sang the sweet songs of Zion, and Bro. Caffall's melodious voice was heard, and not least among the rest. We thank the Saints of this place, as well as those who have not yet the name, for love and kindness manifested.

Wednesday November 26th, found Bro. Caffall and myself at the Keystone Branch, according to previous appointment. Brother James preached two stirring discourses to the people, composed of Saints and friends, with good effect.

Friday 28th, through the kindness of Bro. Hithard we were taken to the station, and placed in the cars for Shenandoah, with others of the brethren, to attend conference. Held services at night. Preaching by Elder Caffall.

Saturday morning convened in conference capacity with the representatives from the various branches of the district. The sessions for business, morning and afternoon, were peacefully attended, the business amicably disposed of to the satisfaction of all present. The preaching was done by Bro. James Saturday night and Sunday, to good congregations. Our prayer and testimony meetings were more than ordinary, every heart was made to rejoice. The old veterans of the cross bore testimony to the truth of the work, with tears trickling down their cheeks.

I thank God for all his mercies manifested towards me, for the kindness of the Saints and friends of the cause; and still have a desire to press toward the prize, of the mark of our high calling which is, as Paul says, in Christ our Lord. I shall labor here this week, next week at Bartlett.

Your brother in bonds,
HENRY KEMP.

HUTCHINSON, Colorado,
December 3d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish to say a little in regard to the tragedy that occurred here on November 9th, in correcting a few statements or items in the Denver Tribune, and give as correct a statement, without exaggeration, as possible. Bro. and Sr. Standerer came to church on Sunday afternoon November 9th, and seemed to feel very good. I preached a sermon on the temporal law, the result of which was fifteen dollars, collected as free-will offering, to be sent to the Bishop, five of which our deceased brother gave. (The money was given in Sr. Ellis' house, as we always made a practice of gathering in there before leaving for home, as the church is close by her residence—only a few yards between). When he opened his pocket-book, it is said by some that they saw a roll of bills doubled up in his hand, but he did not exhibit them. He took the five dollars from his pocket-book, leaving only, as could be discerned by some, a one dollar bill, and some small change. The reason such particular notice was taken of what he had, was, he was always known to be very close, hence the curiosity of some being aroused, they took more notice than some others. I just mention this to show that there could have been no mistake on the part of those that saw it. A few more words were passed, and we parted for home, all feeling well. Bro. and Sr. Standerer having about three or four miles to go home, made it a little late—the days being short. They prepared supper and ate. Sr. Standerer not being a very strong woman, and I suppose feeling weary, pushed back the supper dishes and retired. At what hour the deed was done we can not say, but certainly not very late, as evidence went to show by Bro. Standerer's reading the Herald, and having on his glasses which he did not remove; nor did he lay the Herald down when he went to the door. He did not die instantaneously as we will show. The first shot was fired at the door. From splashes of blood that commenced at the door, he must have turned around and staggered to the bed, which was about four yards from the door; and, it is supposed, thought to throw himself upon the bed, feeling faint, but failing in the attempt, sank to the floor on his knees, his right hand clutching the bed-side, his head also against the bed, with his glasses knocked a little to one side. The Herald he must have kept in hand till he reached the bed, for it was stuck fast on the side with his own blood. The statement in regard to Sr. Standerer is correct, also the first man that entered the house and discovered them, except his name and age, it is Mr. McPeak, his age is sixty or thereabouts, and not eighty. They were not discovered till Wednesday morning. It was at first uncertain as to when they were killed. He was to have gone to Denver on Tuesday, as stated, to make arrangements for moving, and it could not have occurred any later than Sunday night, as he had on his Sunday suit, and her clothes lay just as she had taken them off, after returning from church. The news when brought us, so stunned and shocked us, that we scarcely knew for a few moments where we were, or what to do. News spread like wild-fire. My wife, sisters M. Kennedy and E. Elliot hastened as quick as possible to the spot (myself having been sent for a coroner). Crowds of people gathered around; feelings and opinions were very freely expressed, rather too much so. The coroner to do the work did not arrive till Thursday noon, the bodies still lying from Sunday till Thursday, in the same position. In the mean time a nephew of Sr. Standerer had arrived from Denver. My wife, with the aforesaid sisters, having gone up again on Thursday to be on hand to do anything that might be required of them, knowing it to be a duty, although a very painful one, was soon met by the said nephew, and informed that their services would not be required, and they need not wait. The inquest was held on Thursday afternoon. The bodies presented a most horrible, soul-sickening sight. It would have been a most painful task for our sisters had they had it to do, and not one to desire. The deed was not done for robbery, as I will endeavor to show, although the assassin took from Bro. Standerer his pocket-book, and extracted some money therefrom. The pocket-book was found just inside, and at the top of his breast pocket, and it could not have got in that position itself. He was known to have eighty dollars in his pocket-book on the Friday before, but had it been done for robbery or plunder the house would have been upside down, and evidence of a plunderer's work seen without searching for it. Nothing seemed to be out of its accustomed place. Their watches and one hundred dollars or more, that Sr. Standerer had, were found. Had it been for robbery, nothing would have been left that was of any value. The assassin took just enough to get away with.

The one suspected, was seen the morning after the murder at Pine Station, making preparations to leave for Denver on the afternoon train. He was also seen to display a roll of bills. (He came up from Denver the Saturday previous, partially drunk and not a cent of money). After arriving in Denver he got drunk again, got into a fuss and had his leg broken and was taken to the hospital, where he now lies under arrest, but will not be able to have his trial for several weeks. He was a great enemy to Bro. Standerer.

On the afternoon of Thursday, while the inquest was being held, a second nephew arrived with temporary coffins for the bodies. This same nephew was a bitter enemy to Bro. Standerer, so were all of the relatives that were on his wife's side. They consist only of an own sister, her husband and children. The latter nephew attended the bodies (did all for them that was necessary, to be shipped to the undertakers) with many oaths over them. Oh, could they have but spoken we know well what their wishes would have been! The bodies being prepared for departure under the management of their heartless relations, with no invitation to us to do any thing. We thought as far as we were concerned everything was all over, but on Friday at very short notice, we were informed that if we wanted to very badly, we might come and read a funeral service, but we would have to be quick, so we few Saints (for we are not a large crowd, as the Tribune represented us) gathered up. We had a distance of four miles to go, and went and paid our last respects to the bodies of our brother and sister. On arriving we were told we were only allowed thirty minutes; so we sang one or two hymns from our funeral selection, (there were no hallelujahs sang as our friendly city paper stated), took a text, made a short speech, and offered prayer; and as to our not giving them a chance to take the bodies away, it was quite the reverse. They would scarcely give us twenty minutes, to say nothing of thirty; and of all the disgraceful carrying on while the service was being held! it would shock an heathen. We were not invited to follow the bodies, not even to the depot; and indeed it would have been hard to have done so, as we afterwards learned from good authority, for we could not have kept up with them, at the rate they drove down the canyon, a distance of nine miles to Pine Station. They were quite drunk when they arrived there, and jumped up and down on the coffins, as if they were solid pieces of wood, and contained nothing; reiterating oaths and curses, at a dreadful rate.

The whole affair from beginning to end, has been one of the most cruel, cold-hearted and disgraceful, it was ever my lot to know anything about. Seeing we could do so little for our deceased brother and sister at the time, and knowing so well what their wishes would have been, I thought it my duty to preach their memorial on Sunday the 16th. Sisters M. Kennedy, S. Kemp, and one or two others decorated our little church very handsomely with mourning, which we intend to leave dressed for a few weeks.

Bro. Standerer is estimated to be worth between forty and fifty thousand dollars. He was just on the eve of making his will, and he told Sr. Ellis he should deed his portion to the Church, but alas he left it too long. He has a brother and sister in England, and I presume there will be a great deal of quarreling over the property, as it is hard to tell which died first. I thought it but just to give you this plain statement of the whole affair, in vindication of ourselves.

I wish to say further that his enemies were not created because of his religion, but the trouble came financially, or through business transactions. We believe it to be a complicated affair, and more than one or two concerned in it. It has cast a heavy gloom over us all, and one which will take a long time to dispel.

Yours in bonds,
JAMES KEMP.

OIL CITY, Ontario,
December 1st, 1884.

Editor of the Herald:—I am yet alive, and working some for the Master. In the town where we live the most of the people say they have all the religion they can live to, and when we have meetings, very few will come out to hear. I have done some labor at Inwood. It is a village seven miles east of us. If there was some one to take hold of the work there, I think good could be done. There are friends there who would make an Elder welcome.

One mile west of Inwood, at Weedman, Bro. Badder, of Badder Town, has started an ashrey for making Potash; and Bro. and Sr. Culp live there. About eighteen months ago I started to hold meetings in Petrolia. There was only one Saint there then. In September Bro. E. H. Gurley helped to give the cause a lift, by the help of the Master. Then, early in the spring, Bro.

Samuel Brown came; and was with us at different times through the summer; and with what labor I have tried to do, in my weakness, we have got a branch of over twenty members. From the first of June until the first of October, I have traveled almost three hundred miles, in the Master's cause. In that time, in my weak way, by the help of God, I spoke eighteen times, the most of the time with good liberty; administered to the sick fifteen times, sometimes with marked success.

When we organized the branch, they chose me as president. There are some fine brethren and sisters in Petrolia. Having to work for a living I find that I can not do as much labor for the cause through the fall and winter as I can in the summer.

I have baptized nine this year. Where is Bro. Lake? We have never seen him near Petrolia, yet. Twice word has come here that he was coming. Come along Bro. Lake; and if Bro. J. J. Cornish is in Ontario, we would like to see your faces, and hear you tell us of the good Master; or let any of the brethren come, and we will find them a home.

Ever yours in the one faith,

J. N. SIMMONS.

LACROSSE, Wisconsin,

November 27th, 1884.

Dear Herald—"The great day of His wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" This is where I ended my lectures at Plano, in 1880; and Bro. Joseph Smith followed up the lectures with a discourse from the 13th Psalm, showing very plainly who should stand. Now we have chronologically arrived at that "day of wrath." The fulfillment of "the shaking of the powers of the heavens" was fulfilled to the very letter in 1883—"the black year of creation," as recorded in all the secular papers; and we are now in the little season of "silence" or quiet, in the temporal power of the heavens, atmospheric. It is very noticeable that cyclones, tornadoes, earthquakes and tidal waves, are not nearly so numerous and frequent as they were in 1883, and a few years previous to that date, and culminated in the sinking of the Isle of Java, and the destruction of three hundred thousand souls at one great, grand and terrible calamity; thus closing the sixth seal and opening the seventh, which is the great day of His wrath—the Judgment Day. And the seven calamities, symbolized by the seven trumpets, are due as soon as this word of prophecy, "the half-hour's silence," is complete. Then comes the quick and terrible judgments in rapid succession, so terribly portrayed by the seven trumpets. But right here in this time of silence, or quiet, another message is due our earth. Rev. 8: 3-6, inclusive. This message was never due till now, just in this time of quiet, or silence, and before any of the trumpets sounded. And first, He had a golden censer (present head)—golden, pure and precious, just such a one as was set in the church at the beginning; offering the prayers of all the Saints (not part only) upon a golden altar. This indicates a pure and successful church, "a cleansed sanctuary." "When all that are holding their offices in unrighteousness are shaken out," and all work righteousness in their several quorums, and offices as directed by the Holy Spirit, and in harmony with the word by which they are to be sanctified, (John 17: 17), and by which the church and its principles and non creeds are to be judged and adjusted, as well as its officers and members and also the world, in this present judgment period—"the seventh seal." And, I must say I was surprised to see the position taken by Bro. Z. H. Gurley in last Herald, that tithing and gathering were not taught in the New Testament scriptures, while it is written, "These ought ye to have done, and not to have left the others undone." Now the only question to settle is, was tithing instituted under the law as Bro. Gurley intimates, by referring to circumcision—or did it precede the the law—which was added on account of transgression, to act as a schoolmaster and then be taken away—when it had accomplished its purpose.—Heb. 8: 13, 17. But that tithing is a principle that belongs to the everlasting gospel—that was preached to Abraham—is plainly shown by his, Abraham's, paying tithes to Melchisedec, and probably at the same time that Melchisedec preached the gospel to him, for they partook of the sacrament of bread and wine, and he was a priest of the Most High God. But why need I dwell upon this? Christ was made a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec; and however much this principle may have been abused or perverted, God has never been compelled under any circumstances, to modify or change his everlasting gospel; which also holds good in regard to the gathering. That was typified in Jeremiah and prophesied of in the 91st Psalm, also mentioned in 2 Thess. 2: 1, "By the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him," (this gathering will be made plain in due time), the tithing is due now. CHICAGO, Illinois,

November 23d, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—The Saints are holding their prayer meeting every Sunday afternoon, the first and third Sunday of each month, at Bro. S. C. Good's house, and the second and fourth at Bro. C. L. Muetze's. There are only a few of us that meet. We are trying to hold up the cause in this great city of Chicago. My prayer is that the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ may prosper here; and we feel the need of the prayers of the Saints in our behalf, as it is hard to hold up in so hard a place as this city.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Dec. 5th.—The Judges of the Superior Court of the State of New York, have decided that a newspaper reporter cannot be compelled in a judicial proceeding to divulge the source from which he obtained his information.

There have been five polygamy convictions in Prescott, Ari., within a week. The first three cases were Tenny, Christopherson, and Kemp. The convictions were found on the evidence. Two cases were tried to-day. Elders Flake and Skousen pleaded guilty. This is regarded as settling the question of Mormon rule in Arizona. Sentences will be passed by Judge Howard tomorrow.

The evening of Nov. 26th thieves entered the room of Capt. Conner, proprietor of the St. James Hotel, New York City, and rifled a jewel box belonging to Mrs. Conner, carrying off $7,500 worth of diamonds and jewelry. The work was that of a professional thief, and a whole gang seems to be "doing" the city. All the New York hotels have suffered greater or less losses during the last few weeks. One of Pinkerton's detectives said this evening that the man who has done the real work is a young fellow not over twenty. He never registers, but simply loaf about a hotel. He jumps at the first opportunity. They are English professionals; a gang of them is here. They came a month ago. The same detective said they would have the young fellow, the leader of the gang, in limbo before morning. It is said that the losses at New York hotels in the last six months exceed $60,000. The Brooklyn hotels have also suffered.

Israel Hart, a Jew, has just been chosen Mayor of Leicester, England. The general interest of the fact lies in the circumstance that about the year 1230 Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, granted a charter to the borough for the total exclusion of the Jews from Leicester, and they took refuge near the Jewry wall, a portion of which is still preserved.

Dec. 6.—A number of vessels at the London docks which were supposed to be loading with provisions have been discovered to be taking on board munitions of war for China.

The London police were thrown into a state of wild excitement to-day by the discovery of what they term a new form of American criminal industry. During the last week several jewelers in the city have sent information to the authorities that precious stones of fine quality were being hawked about under the most suspicious circumstances. Some of these complaints were quite wild and sensational, and the drift of most of them was to the effect that some large robbery of jewels must have recently occurred, and that the thieves were making desperate efforts to dispose of their plunder in London. A man was arrested supposed to be an American. Upon his person the police found a large number of diamonds and sapphires. The theory is that he is an agent of a band of American robbers, sent by them to England to dispose of their plunder. The arrested man gave Miller as his name, and America as his residence, and this is all that could be gotten from him.

The Franchise Bill was read a third time in the House of Lords this afternoon and was subsequently passed by that body.

The Standard's Hong Kong dispatch says the Chinese appear to have abandoned all hopes of mediation, and have determined upon a vigorous policy. Twelve men-of-war have been ordered to engage the French fleet and break the Formosa blockade. There are twenty-four Germans on the fleet. One commands a ship under the Chinese Admiral. Satisfaction is expressed, as a short and sharp campaign will make one of the combatants readier to entertain propositions of peace. The present situation is ruining trade.

Secretary Chandler of the U. S. Navy, has made his report public: In connection with the statement that three new ships have been successfully launched, he says it has been shown that American steel makers can readily furnish excellent material for ship-building in large quantities. The secretary points out that comparisons of speed between the new cruisers and the great transatlantic racing steamers are unfair because the latter attain their high speed only by the sacrifice of qualities essential to a ship of war, and adds that the former could overtake 96 per cent of the merchant steamers of the world. The report calls attention to the necessity for torpedo-boats, and recommends the construction of seven modern cruisers annually for the next ten years. Commenting on the present condition of the navy, Secretary Chandler says that the disproportion between the expenditures therefor and the results accomplished is due to the policy of attempting at great cost to rehabilitate worn-out structures under the name of repairs. The report recommends the discontinuance of several navy-yards and workshops and certain improvements in the management of the remainder, among these the exclusion of politics, recites the history of the recent Arctic expeditions, comments at length upon the frauds connected with the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, fixes the ordinary estimates at $17,292,601, and those for increasing the navy at $15,071,592, and, in conclusion, advocates Government encouragement for the development of our merchant marine either in the shape of bounties upon construction or payment for carrying the mails.

Three of the polygamists convicted at Prescott, Arizona, were sentenced each to three years confinement in penitentiary, and five hundred dollars fine; and the other two each to six months imprisonment and three hundred dollars fine.

Dec. 7.—Still another complication has arisen between France and England. Like two or three other misunderstandings which have recently occurred it is based upon England's effort to readjust the Egyptian debt. The proposals sent by the English Government to the Continental Powers seem likely to be accepted by Germany, Austria, and Italy, and their rejection by France only would consequently have but little weight. Now, however, the Turkish Government has interposed a formal protest, in which it states that the rights of the Sultan as the suzerain of Egypt would be wantonly violated by the proposed settlement. The significance of this protest lies in the fact—which is an open secret in the diplomatic circles—that the action of the Porte has been directly instigated by France. The theory is that M. Ferry, finding himself powerless to effectually oppose England's wishes in regard to the Egyptian financial situation, is seeking to make all the trouble he can by enlisting the sympathy of the Powers for the Sultan.

The Gladstone-Salisbury Redistribution Bill as a whole, though preserving many of the existing anomalies and creating others, is revolutionary in its general character, being by far the greatest advance toward democracy since 1832, and leading to a still greater advance before many years. The Redistribution and Franchise Bills together insure for the first time in the history of England something like representation in Parliament by the people of England. The centre of political power is transferred once for all from the middle classes to the working classes, whether artisan or agricultural. The large towns, almost always Liberal, gain enormously. The counties pass their power from under the control of the landlords to the farmers, though nobody knows what line the new electors will take. Hardly a Radical whisper is heard against the Lords and there is every prospect of a quiet recess. There is general rejoicing over the truce in party strife. Tory and Liberal journals vie with each other in appeals for harmony. The only noticeable suggestion of the controversy over the House of Lords comes from Lord Roseberry, who spoke in Liverpool Wednesday at a dinner given in his honor by the Reform Club. He hinted at the possibility of preserving the present House by extinguishing the hereditary legislative privilege.

It is rumored that China has signified her willingness to have England mediate between her and France.

Great pomp and ceremony marked the last day of the meeting of the third Plenary Council at Baltimore yesterday. A street procession from the archiepiscopal residence to the Cathedral was followed by pontifical high mass, which was celebrated by the Most Rev. Michael Corrigan. Bishop Spalding of Peoria preached the sermon, the subject of which was a review of the work of the council. At the conclusion of the sermon the closing solemn session of the council was held and the final decrees were passed and signed. The kiss of peace was exchanged among the prelates, the apostolic benediction followed, and the Apostolic Delegate declared the third Plenary Council adjourned sine die.

In an action of foreclosure brought by the Equitable Trust Company of Hartford, Conn., against Dr. E. S. Fowler of Springfield, Ill., to recover $25,000 lent by the trust company to Dr. Fowler ten years ago, Judge Treat of the United States Circuit Court has decided that the charge made by the trust company of 10 per cent usury invalidates the claim for interest, and that the $14,500 already paid as interest shall be regarded as payment upon the principal. An appeal will probably be made.

A bill was recently adopted by the Washington Territory Legislature, giving the right of suffrage to women. In the recent municipal election, and also in the Territorial election, the women organized an independent party in favor of prohibition and against Sabbath breaking. They chose such candidates as suited their purposes from the nominees of both the Democratic and Republican parties, and were everywhere successful in electing them.

Dec. 9.—The Congo Committee agreed that the African International Association shall have control only over navigation on the Congo River; that England shall have control of the navigation of the Lower and France control of the Upper Niger River. England and France have bound themselves by formal declaration to uphold the freedom of navigation. Any other Power which may acquire territory in that country will be required to undertake a similar obligation. The discussions of the English, American, German, and Belgian neutrality proposals was unfinished.

A dispatch from Alexandria says De Lesseps has obtained from the Egyptian Government a concession for a fresh-water canal from Hagazig to Port Said.

Reports reach Hong Hong, that fresh encounters have occurred in Tonquin between the Chinese and the French, in which the Chinese were defeated and forced to retreat. The Chinese military authorities are preparing to throw a large force across the frontier into Tonquin.

A messenger from Khartoum says the officer sent by Gen. Gordon to capture Shendy shelled the inhabitants out of the place and took many prisoners. Also that small parties of rebels make daily attacks on Khartoum, but are invariably repulsed with heavy loss. The Mahdi, he says, fears to make an open attack, on the ground that it would result in a great slaughter of his followers.

The United States Supreme Court gave to-day a decision in the California case of Chew Heong, plaintiff in error, against the United States—a test case involving the construction of the Chinese restriction acts of May 6th, 1882, and July 5th, 1884. Chew Heong was a Chinese laborer, and was in the United States November 16th, 1880, the date of the last treaty between China and the United States, and remained here until June 18th, 1881, when he went to Honolulu, whence he returned to San Francisco last September. As the act of 1882 had not become a law when he left the United States he did not of course provide himself with a certificate, which is prescribed as a prerequisite to re-entrance, and upon his return to San Francisco in September, 1884, the custom-house authorities refused to allow him to land, on the ground that to permit him to do so would be to violate the law. He thereupon sued out a writ of habeas corpus, and was brought before the United States Circuit Court, where it was heard by Justice Field and Judge Sawyer. The Judges were divided in opinion, Justice Field holding that the laborer could not re-enter the United States without the certificate prescribed by Sec. 4 of the amended act. Justice Sawyer, on the contrary, held that a Chinese laborer who was in the United States Nov. 17th, 1883, and departed therefrom prior to the passage of the Restriction act, could return without any certificate. The Judges thereupon certified to the division of opinion. Judgment was entered in accordance with the decision of Justice Field, and the case was brought here by a writ of error. This court holds with Justice Sawyer. The right of such laborer to re-enter was secured by the treaty of 1880, and the court holds that Congress did not intend to violate that right. Chinese laborers who were here at the date of the treaty can be admitted, the court holds, upon such evidence as will be competent under the general principles of law. The decision in this case is based on the ground that the acts of Congress did not necessarily conflict with the treaty, and that the duty of the court was, if possible, to make the statute and treaty stand together. On that ground the court holds that Congress did not intend by its legislation to violate any rights previously acquired under the treaty of 1880. Opinion by Justice Harlan.

A pearl worth $17,000, supposed to be the largest ever found, has been shipped to London from Guaymas, Mexico.

Italian laborers employed on the Port Dover & Port Royal Railroad, near Rowan, Ont., threaten to burn the town if they are not paid. The military has been called out.

Dec. 9.—Count Tolstoi, Russian Minister of the Interior, has been condemned to death by the Nihilists.

It is announced that for political reasons the Government has telegraphed to Admiral Courbet and Gen. Briere de l'Isle to maintain a defensive attitude until they receive further orders.

The Hocking Valley miners appear to have the worst of the struggle with their employers. The pressure of starvation is gradually forcing them back into the mines at the reduced wages offered them. Their last ditch appears to be the demand of their employers that they should renounce their union. It is stated in the dispatches that the miners would almost all return to work immediately if this last condition was not insisted upon. Liberty of association they will not give up except upon absolute necessity. But the prospect appears to be that the miners will have to yield in this as in wages, for there is no likelihood whatever that the employers will recede on the eve of what appears to be the certain surrender of their men.

"Omaha Charley," a desperado, whose real name was Charles Stevens, was taken from the jail at Maryville, Mo., yesterday morning by a mob and hanged from the railroad bridge. Stevens shot Hubert Kramer at Maryville, Dec. 3d. Another lynching occurred at Daggett, Cal., where William White, charged with killing Josiah O. Harris, Dec. 5th, was hanged to a telegraph pole by a party of regulators.

Dec. 10.—It is reported that England's negotiations with China in regard to the Franco-Chinese difficulty have failed.

London Truth says that the Duke of Edinburgh has been appointed to the command of the Mediterranean squadron.

A firm of German merchants has just completed the purchase of the territory of Sheik Said, at the southern extremity of Arabia and bordering on the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden. The price paid was 4,000,000 francs. The new proprietors propose to open up the country to colonists, and expect to make a large profit from the trade that will thus be developed.

El Mahdi's uncle, Governor of Obeid, died recently—not the Mahdi.

French transports loading for Tonquin are taking on board material for a portable railway; also a large number of baggage-wagons and mules.

Gen. Briere de l'Isle is reducing to a minimum the number of coolies attached to his flying column in Tonquin.

Of the foreign exhibits at New Orleans that of Mexico will be the most attractive. It will contain a full display of the resources of the sister Republic, and for the most part will be handsomely housed in a building especially constructed for it by the Mexican Government. Besides, so great will be the display that 50,000 feet of space has also been secured for it in the main Exposition Building, and a large section of Agricultural Hall and the park reserved for fruits, exotic flowers and plants, and forest trees that will form no inconsiderable part of Mexico's exhibit. Another feature will be a famous Mexican band of fifty pieces, a regiment of cavalry, and another of infantry of the Mexican army. A portion of the infantry regiment arrived several days ago, and is quartered in the barracks erected for the troops in the Exposition grounds. The Mexican Commission, headed by Mgr. Gillow, is also there. The importance attached to the Exposition by Mexico may be inferred from the fact that Gen. Diaz, the most distinguished citizen of the Republic, was selected as the Commissioner-General by President Gonzales, and entered upon his duties with alacrity and zeal, to which full scope has been given by an appropriation of $200,000 by the Mexican Government. General Diaz, now President of Mexico, has promised to be present and take part with President Arthur in the inauguration ceremonies. Only less in importance to the Mexican display will be those of the Central American Republics. In comparison with their population and wealth these will be fully abreast with the exhibit of their northern neighbor. The productions of the tropics will be exhibited in great number and variety, and will serve to stimulate the trade between the United States and the other American nations. In fact, this is one of the great objects of the Exposition, and all the probabilities are that it will be fully attained.

Dec. 11.—The French Government, in order to avoid the threatened complications with Australia, decided to-day to transfer the penal colony of New Caledonia to Madagascar. This new convict establishment will occupy the entire peninsula forming the northern extremity of Madagascar.

Reports from Ireland indicate that an alarming revival of outrages is in progress. The special seat of disturbance is in Tralee, where armed men have brutally maltreated a man who was taking care of Sir Edward Denhey's estate. The man injured is now in a precarious condition. The cause of the outrage was the recent eviction of a tenant, for which the caretaker was held responsible.

Twelve Nihilists were arrested last night at St. Petersburg. They were holding a meeting in a restaurant, under the guise of a ball. Important documents fell into the hands of the police.

At Retchitza, Russia, a town of 5,000 people, on the River Dnieper, a subterranean passage has been discovered under the Tax-Receiver's office, which contained 80,800 rubies.

The London medical journals are again bewailing the widespread adulteration of drugs. They say that this evil has grown to such enormous proportions as to paralyze in many cases the best skill of learned physicians and almost to destroy the value of modern progress in the healing art. The physician prescribes remedies according to their potency as fixed in the pharmacopœia, but between him and the patient there are the manufacturers and dealers in drugs, and their dishonesty often prevents, or even reverses, the expected result. The papers also deplore the immense sale of patent medicines among ill-informed people. Many of these nostrums, they say, are impotent to either cure or kill, and therefore are responsible for nothing worse than robbing the credulous patient of his money. But there are others which are mischievous and pernicious to the last degree. They are advertised as specifics for the cure of the most delicate and dangerous diseases, and their merits are often indorsed by forged recommendations from reputable physicians and by certificates from mythical patients. These medicines, being taken by persons who are really suffering from serious complaints, do an incalculable amount of harm, and have caused thousands of chronic and incurable maladies both of body and mind.

Snow has been falling plentifully during the last twenty-four hours throughout Indiana, Illinois, Kansas and Missouri.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

The leading weekly circular of Liverpool, England, says: "Wheat is still firm, and in most markets is one shilling per quarter dearer for both English and foreign. The demand for consumers has improved markedly. Cargoes are in fair request at full rates both for the United Kingdom and Continent. At to-day's market there was a fair attendance. Wheat was steady and a moderate business was done. There was a good home demand for flour at full rates."

The Manchester, Eng., Guardian's commercial article says: "The market shows much firmness. Sales are small. Producers feel strong with the orders in hand and the upward tendency. Cotton-buyers will not concede their terms, therefore the demand is light. The position of sellers is decidedly stronger and there is steadiness in all directions."

Last week's failures in the United States numbered 296—an increase of fifty-nine over the week before.

Dry-goods imports at the Port of New York last week were $1,068,000, and the amount marketed $1,148,000.

A number of the pig-iron furnaces at Pittsburg, Pa., will blow in during January, the stock on hand being lighter now than at any previous time for years.

Raymer, Seagrave & Co., private bankers at Toledo, O., made an assignment December 6th. Their liabilities are about $500,000.

D. Nicolopule & Sons, merchants of London, Eng., have failed. Liabilities, $450,000. The failure is attributed to the financial crisis in the Danubian districts.

The Post Master General's report contains the following information:—The total expenditures made on account of the service of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1884, were $46,404,960.65. The amount of postage collected on second class matter during the year was $1,889,592.14, an increase of $184,414.61, or 10.82 per cent over the previous year.

The postage on local matter at the several offices aggregated $4,777,484.87, an increase over that of the preceding year of $417,745.65, and over the total cost of the service $1,273,278.35; an increase of 995 per cent in the former and 36.33 per cent in the latter. The average cost per piece for handling matter was 2.3 mills, a reduction of one-tenth mill as compared with last year. The average cost per carrier was $898.78, an increase over that of last year of $38.83. This was owing to the fact that the number of carriers receiving the maximum salary was considerably increased during the year under the provisions of the act of 1882. The mail matter delivered during the year was as follows: Mail letters, 402,577,395, an increase of 17.70 per cent over that of the preceding year; mail postal cards, 97,421,725, increase of 13.10 per cent; local letters, 121,853,932, increase of 16.68 per cent; local postal cards, 69,230,704, increase of 14.48 per cent; registered letters, 3,093,961, an increase of 9.32 per cent; newspapers, 231,645,185, an increase of 13.79 per cent. The J. I. Case Plow Company of Racine, Wis., is about to make an assignment in favor of its creditors. The unsecured liabilities are from $60,000 to $70,000, and the assets nearly $70,000. The heaviest creditor is J. I. Case, President of the company. Other large creditors are iron and steel dealers of Pittsburg, Pa. The stockholders and directors will hold a conference with the creditors to-day.

In 1880-'81 China exported 174,514,000 pounds of tea. In 1883-'84 the exportation had fallen off to 151,140,000 pounds. In the latter year the exportation of silk from China had fallen to 17,869 bales, as against 79,199 bales in 1860-'61. Part of the decline in the Chinese tea trade must, of course, be credited to the rivalry of Japan for the American trade and of India for that of England; the balance is attributed by many economists to a steadily increased poverty among the constantly enlarged population of the United Kingdom and a consequent decline in their ability to obtain the favorite and annually cheapened tea."

The Hessian fly is destroying the winter wheat of Kansas.

Fabulously rich silver mines are said to have been discovered in the north of Georgia.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the grain trade, says: Autumn-sown crops continue to present a healthy appearance. English red wheats less freely offered in London Friday against buyers. Sales of English wheat last week were 66,970 quarters, at 30s 10d a quarter, against 74,755 quarters at 40s a quarter the corresponding week last year. Flour sales are difficult to make. Malting barleys are unimproved. The market for foreign wheats is spiritless, the large stock of American acting as an incubus upon trade. Maize is scarce, and prices favor sellers. The market for off-coast cargoes and for cargoes on passage has lost its transient firmness. To-day's market was enervated owing to the mild weather. Values are nominally unchanged, and there is very little disposition to buy.

Exports from the port of New York during the week ended Dec. 9, exclusive of specie, were $9,456,000—an increase of $4,183,000 over the week before.

Chicago elevators contained last Saturday evening 10,668,049 bushels of wheat, 1,253,381 bushels of corn, 470,453 bushels of oats, 51,954 bushels of rye, and 113,375 bushels of barley. Total, 12,557,212 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 14,029,839 bushels a year ago. During last week our stock increased 1,143,891 bushels, including an increase of 1,051,267 bushels of wheat and a decrease of 14,028 bushels of corn. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 44,570,050 bushels of wheat, 4,034,729 bushels of corn, 3,060,126 bushels of oats, 532,949 bushels of rye, and 1,980,810 bushels of barley. These figures are larger than a week ago by 1,416,401 in wheat and smaller by 1,187,312 in corn.

From the report of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, rendered December 10th, it appears that there is a tendency to general decline in the prices of farm products in domestic markets. The average price of corn is 36½ cents—one cent lower than in 1879. The average farm price of wheat is 65 cents per bushel, 26 cents less than this time last year. The average value of oats is 28 cents, against 33 cents last December. The present value of oats is the lowest ever reported by the department. The plantation price of cotton ranges from 9 to 9½ cents per pound.

It is reported on good authority that North Alabama capitalists, among whom is D. T. Parker, a banker of Anniston, formerly of Mobile, have struck oil at Cullom's Springs, within a mile of Bladon, in Choctaw County, Ala. The work has been going on for one year, and the drills were down 900 feet last week, at which time gas came up in great quantity. It is said that the flow of oil is greater than can be secured. Bladon is about 130 miles above Mobile on the Tombigbee River.

Wilkinson & Co., private bankers at Syracuse, N. Y., have made an assignment. Their liabilities are estimated at about $500,000, with assets less than half that sum.

Flint glass workers at Pittsburg, Pa. have struck against a 20 per cent reduction in wages.

A financial panic threatens Syracuse, N. Y. Westcott & Co., bankers and brokers in that city, made an assignment December 11th, with liabilities estimated at $100,000. The assets are a little over $50,000. The liabilities of S. D. Richardson, a retail dry-goods dealer of Syracuse, who also assigned same day, are more than $100,000, with assets two-thirds that sum. A run is expected on the banks.

Glass-workers' unions throughout the country have subscribed $50,000 to aid the Pittsburg strikers, and have agreed to give, if necessary, the proceeds of one day's work each week for the same purpose.

Two attempts have been made recently to palm off spurious gold bullion at the Philadelphia Mint. The bullion was mixed with gilded steel filings.

Erastus C. Alden, dealer in millinery goods at Providence, R. I., failed Dec. 11. The liabilities are reported to be about $60,000.

FIRES—STORMS—ACCIDENTS.

Dec. 4.—The fire losses for November in the United States and Canada are estimated at $7,900,000. This is largely in excess of the average November fire-waste since the Boston fire of 1872. Eleven months fire loss, it is computed, will be $101,000,000. December is still to hear from.

Dec. 5.—A dispatch from Stratford, N. H., says that a fearful explosion of dynamite and gunpowder occurred there this evening, destroying a house and its contents and badly injuring eight persons, four of whom will probably die.

Loss by fire at Albia, Ia., $2,000. Meyersdale, Pa., $50,000. Millstone, N. J., $50,000.

Dec. 7.—During a terrific wind and rain storm night before last at Trenton, N. J., fire broke out in the Home Rubber Company's Works, which were entirely consumed, involving a loss of $50,000. There was an insurance of $30,000 on the property. Loss by fire at Elmira, N. Y., $8,000. Pittsburg, Pa., $10,000.

A terrific norther began blowing at San Francisco, Cal., last midnight and has continued all day. It is the most violent wind-storm ever experienced there. The passengers on ferry-boats were made sea-sick, street signs were blown down, and windows blown in. Several vessels broke from their moorings and were washed ashore. Many others are seriously damaged. The American ship, Edward O'Brien got into such a dangerous position that the captain paid a steam-tug $5,000 to tow him to a safe anchorage. Two sections of the sea wall are smashed in and the breakwater at the foot of Green street is completely washed away. It is impossible to estimate damages. No casualties are reported.

A tornado of considerable severity passed over the Ohio Valley, blowing down and unroofing houses, and injuring several persons.

Dec. 9.—In a gale off Holyhead the steamer Packard, on its way from Cork to Liverpool, foundered. Thirty people were drowned. Another steamer, supposed to be Alliance of Cardiff sunk with all hands off Boscastle, Eng.

A dispatch from Cheyenne, W. T., says: Snow has covered the ground here to a depth of several inches. The storm was general to the north and west of here, and on the line of the Union Pacific Railway the banks of snow were so heavy that trains got through only by the use of several additional engines. On Sherman Hill the snow in places has drifted as high as the top of the coaches, and the train, which arrived here to-night, was several times stranded, but the engines butted their way through. The snow did not pack, otherwise there would have been a blockade. The passengers relate some thrilling experiences.

Near Bokersfield, Cal., in the wheat region, three inches of snow fell. This is unprecedented.

Fire partially destroyed the Village of Trenton, Pa. Six persons were burned to death.

Dec. 10.—One thousand bales of cotton in the hold of the steamship City of Augusta, on the point of starting for New York from Savannah, Ga., were discovered to be on fire. The ship was filled with water and the flames extinguished, with a loss of $40,000.

Fire destroyed the furniture-manufactory of Clark Brothers & Co. in Philadelphia, together with a few other buildings in the same block. The loss is about $165,000. Loss by fire at Dixon, Ill., $9,000. Toledo, O., $28,000. Near Grand Junction, Mich., $2,500. Boston, Mass., $50,000. Trenton, N. J., $20,000. Centralia, Ill., $25,000. Philadelphia, Pa., $30,000. Decatur, Texas, $25,000. Decatur, Ind., $1,800.

FALSE DOCTRINES OF BRIGHAMISM.

DOW CITY, Iowa, June 1, 1883.

BRO. PENROSE; Sir:—Suffer me through the columns of the Deseret News to tell the Saints in Utah some of my reasons for disbelieving some doctrines taught by Bro. B. Young and others.

In the first place, my record, while I was with you for thirteen years, must speak, and I think it will say I am entitled to a place in your columns; and by that you will see I was worthy of all the blessings bestowed upon men of like calling unto myself. I was true to the laws of the territory, and those that administered them. The tithing that you will find placed to my credit in the Tithing office, in Salt Lake City, will entitle me, I think, to a place in your paper.

In the latter years of my life with you, I was led to disbelieve some of the doctrines taught, it being, as they said, the doctrines of Christ; but as the words of the Savior rested with force upon my mind, which say, "My words shall judge you," I began more fully to judge myself, and to examine Young's doctrines, and compare them with the Word. The first thing I saw in him that was wrong, in my judgment, was in changing the baptisms for the dead that were performed in Joseph's life time. This change was made so that men should be baptized for men, and women for women. My understanding is (and I think your's must be too), that when Joseph said on the stand, in Nauvoo, that "Your baptisms for the dead are no longer acceptable in the river," that he gave us to understand that up to that time they were acceptable; therefore, to this I object.

He also says that "Adam begat Jesus as he begat Cain and Abel." Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, page 50. He ridiculed the idea of Mary being overshadowed by the Holy Ghost. [The following from the Inspired Translation, John 1:13, settles this question against B. Young and his followers: "He was born not of the blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."—EDITOR.] This doctrine of Brigham Young the Book of Mormon condemns, which you will find in Alma, 5th chapter, 2d paragraph. The Spirit of Christ being upon him he says: "And behold, he shall be born of Mary, at Jerusalem, which is the land of our forefathers, she being a precious virgin, shall be overshadowed by the Holy Ghost, and bring forth a son, yea, even the Son of God." You and I can see that the two books agree, that is the Bible and Book of Mormon; therefore I had to lay B. Young's doctrine aside, as not being of God.

We now come to his doctrine of sacrificing the human family to atone for sins. In Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, pages 219 and 220, he says: "I have known a great many men who have left this church, for whom there is no chance whatever for exaltation; but if their blood had been shed, it would have been better for them. Will you love your brother and sister likewise when they have committed a sin that they cannot atone for without the shedding of their blood? and will you love that man or woman well enough to shed their blood?" That is what Jesus meant when he says, "Love your neighbor as yourself." I could refer you to plenty of instances where men have been righteously slain in order to atone for their sins. I have seen scores and hundreds of people for whom this would have been a chance [in the last resurrection there might be], if their blood had been taken, or their blood spilled on the ground as a smoking incense to the Almighty,—but are now angels to the devil, until Christ raises them up, conquers death, hell and the grave. The wickedness of the people and nation forbids this principle being in full force; but the time will come when the Law will be in full force. This is loving your neighbor as yourself. If he needs help, help him; if he needs salvation, and it is necessary to spill his blood on the earth in order that he may be saved, spill it."

We could refer you to other sacrificing sayings of B. Young, but this we think sufficient. We will now quote from J. M. Grant's sayings on this same subject, and then compare their words with the law given unto you and me. He says in Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, page 49: "I say that there are men and women, that I would advise them to go to the president immediately, and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to their case, and then let a place be appointed, and let that committee shed their blood." This is easy to be understood, very plain talk; let us now compare this talk with the law given to you and me. We will take the Book of Mormon first, book of Nephi. 4:8:

"And ye shall not offer up unto me any more the shedding of blood; yea, your sacrifices and burnt offerings shall be done away; for I will accept none."

If we accept the testimony of Nephi, we must condemn these sacrificing sermons of Young and Grant. Where is the evidence found, that will justify their doctrine? The Book of Covenants also condemns Blood Atonement, where it says, "I will accept no sacrifice of my people, but that of a broken heart and contrite spirit." With these evidences from these two books, B. Young and J. M. Grant could not have had God's Spirit when they spoke; therefore, I object, and you must also, to their teaching. Let us have no fellowship with this sacrificing talk. I have read and listened to the sermons of both these men, when they have preached the Gospel of Christ, and their teachings were all right; and I am in full fellowship yet with the truths they uttered; but not with their false doctrine. By the word of God we must try every man's Revelations; and we are safe in condemning them if they are not in keeping with the gospel of Christ, just as the Twelve did with Sidney Rigdon's Revelations. They saw at once that his Revelations were not in keeping with the pattern, and they were justified in the sight of God in so doing; and I honor them for so doing. Let us show no partiality, but try B. Young, and all others, by the word. By this we try the Revelation that purports to have been given through Joseph Smith, in July, 1843; and say that it is utterly impossible to keep the one that was given in February, 1831, if we keep the one of 1843, on plural marriage. Without further comment, we (that is you and I), must put the one given in 1843 under our feet; for the one given in 1831 was a guide and law till Christ comes to the Church; and in that marriage is clearly defined, and according to this the law of 1843 cannot stand.

How easy it was for us to excuse ourselves as the Nephites of old did, when we began to be lifted up in pride in Nauvoo; and the next step was to want more wives. Look at the caution we had before us in the revelation given in an early day to us, which reads, "Beware of Pride, lest you become as the Nephites of old. Examine this revelation carefully and see where you stand." Let us talk a little about the excitable times we had in the time of the reformation, which commenced in the fall of 1856. Heber C. Kimball was always ready to say something, and he tried to get before the people, that the law of Moses, or a portion of it, must again be established. He said, October 16, 1866, I believe when I relate what he said, you will remember it:

"We calculate to have two pillars on this temple block, and a knife fixed in a slide, and at one stroke, when it comes down, it will take off a man's head; for there are, as Brigham says, some sins that you will have to atone for by having your heads taken off, and some may be answered for, by bringing a lamb, or dove, or pigeon." We can see what this means. The law of Moses again introduced.

I wish now to refer you to B. Young's doctrine of having your sins forgiven for this once by confessing them at the time of reformation, even adultery, while the law of 1843 says for this you shall be destroyed, that is adultery. Do you see where he brings it in? If you can please tell me. Also, his divorcing the whole church, or the major portion; and I saw that time when he divorced and freed every man from his wife. Tell me, please, where he brings this in, and by what authority. I was really in hopes when Bro. John Taylor took B. Young's place, that he would condemn many of Young's notions; but last summer, while he was south and preaching to us, in one of his discourses, he refers to the law of 1831, and that of 1843, and says on the subject of adultery, "The law of 1831 says for adultery you shall cast them out; but the law of 1843 says unqualifiedly, they shall be destroyed, and advises those in authority to look after this matter." This was published in the semi-weekly Deseret News.

Now, Bro. Penrose, if your eyes ever fall on these lines, in the Josephite Journal, I wish you would republish in the Deseret News, and I ask you to answer. I subscribe myself a friend to truth, let it come through whom it may.

JNO. HAWLEY.

SECRECY.

"THE secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant."

A subject embracing so many important historical facts, and so many phases of human economy must in the very nature of the case be one of great importance, and worthy of the earnest, careful and prayerful consideration of all men. Neutrality upon any matter affecting the hopes and experiences of mankind is nearly or quite impossible. We fail to have an opinion, or to decide for or against a proposition, only when the evidence does not seem to warrant a conclusion. I believe the gospel to be the standard of truth and wisdom—it being the economy of God; and that which conflicts in spirit or result with this mandate of peace and good will to men, can not be of divine origin. That the bosom of the Infinite is a repository of things unknown to the finite is very evident. Under certain circumstances, a revelation of facts known to one, may be an injury to another, upon the ground of irrelevancy, it being a matter that does not concern them; But if one is in possession of knowledge that has proven beneficial to him, and he knows it will secure the same result to his neighbor, morally he is under obligation to inform him, thus to let his light shine and become useful in the world. As humanity has one common origin, and the necessities of all men are substantially the same, a system or revelation of truth which is of worth to one, can not fail to be beneficial to another. A recognition of the facts is found in the gospel, which is universal in its adaptation, and free to all men.

Those who favor secret orders, beneficiary or otherwise, having as the tie of friendship, and for a means of security against intrusion, a system of oaths and penalties, may urge that the beauties of the kingdom of God are only known to those who enter by obedience to the gospel. This is true in the main, but by reference to the gospel plan you will learn that God delights to share his glory and blessings with all men; and he induces them to serve him by telling them what they may receive, and just what he wants them to do. In other words when the kingdom of God is preached among men its benefits are heralded to them as the inducement to enter it. Those who become attracted, and seek an entrance, are at liberty to ask any question with reference to what will be required of them, and what the result will be. Men do not enter the kingdom of God blind-folded, but so far as duty and obligation are concerned, they see the end from the beginning. The work of God does not present itself as the blind leading the blind, but as the wise instructor, leading the one instructed in paths previously made clear to his understanding.

The promise of the gospel is that we shall be made free. In what does our liberty consist? Surely not in fearing that in some unguarded moment we may disclose the secret that serves as the tie of our affiliation. When I embraced the gospel I consecrated my soul to the service of God by recognizing, and publicly expressing my obligation to do right to my fellow men under all circumstances and in every condition of life, thus removing the barriers from between myself and God, and giving myself free access to all the blessings that flow from a careful observance of the same. Liberty, freedom and impartiality are written in flaming characters upon the broad banner of our King and Lawgiver. The child of God is obligated to do good to all men, and that obligation can not be strengthened by any number of penal oaths.

We are fellow travellers in life, and our duty one toward another springs from this relation and can neither be made known nor strengthened by secret agreement. Who is the man professedly christian or not, who feels at liberty to ignore the widow's moan, or the orphan's plaintive cry; Is not the obligation to be humane as binding upon one man as upon another? And mark you, this incumbency is not created by an oath. It is the result of mutual association in life, and is governed by higher laws than those originating among men.

The gospel is universal and not partisan and those who embrace it pledge themselves to be philanthropists to the world of mankind, and not to a few who are made the recipients of favor by penal ties.

Secret combinations are worldly in their character because partisan in the spirit of their administration. Jesus spoke in terms of commendation of the Samaritan upon the ground that he acted as "neighbor" to him that "fell among thieves." Does it require the mysteries of secrecy to unfold to us the nature of similar obligations? or is it possible to make them stronger by any number of pledges that we may make? No man can create or live a higher law than this. "Love thy neighbor as thyself;" and so far as comprehension and so far as discharge of our duties in life are concerned, there can be no better code.

Those who embrace one or more of the secret orders must have one of two objects in view; i. e., the benefit of self, or some one else. If I live up to the standard of the gospel as it is the privilege of myself and every other man to do, how much will remain for me to accomplish by joining some secret organization? How, pray tell, could this separate alliance facilitate my usefulness when the law of God has already enjoined upon me to "love my neighbor as myself" and to "do unto others as I would have them do unto me?" If a man lives as Christ lived can he do more for the welfare of himself and others? It seems to me that every effort we make for self defense unauthorized in the gospel only weakens our cause. Is there any legitimate desire that the human heart can entertain unprovided for in the gospel? If so God has made a terrible mistake. If I want safety and protection at home, God has promised it. If I desire his watchcare when abroad and among strangers, I still have his promise; and he has said that the riches of eternity are his to give to those who trust in him. If I do not trust God for temporal protection at home or abroad, how can I trust him for the salvation of my soul? Can he be pleased with an extraneous effort for self-preservation, when he has promised a perfect watchcare? In what, and in whom, do the Saints trust? In the institutions of men, and the arm of flesh? or in the gospel and the power of God? I know of none claiming otherwise than that these institutions are less in their significance and benefit than the gospel. How then is it possible for them to add anything to our usefulness or comfort if we live our religion. If we have, as we claim, the fullness of the gospel, and it is the power of God unto salvation, uniting us together by the strong and gentle tie of love, is it possible that any other pledge or covenant will bind us closer? Moreover it seems to me best not to be "unequally yoked together with unbelievers." To associate socially or for the transaction of business with those whom we chance to meet, is well enough, but an affiliation with the world requiring a secrecy so unlike the gospel covenant, with due deference to my brethren who think and feel differently, I do not care to sustain.

Respectfully yours,

GEORGE S. HYDE.

BRADEN AND KELLEY.

THESE names have become familiarly associated in the knowledge of the readers of the Herald, for reasons well known to the Saints, viz: Because they (Braden and Kelley) have of late had an open investigation and discussion of views relative to principles held by them, each claiming that his are based on and in harmony with theological truths and facts, in the light of King James' translation of the Bible. I have a few words which I wish to say, through the Herald, not, however, directly in reference to matter in the debate, for I have not read it as yet, for reasons best known to myself, though I hope I shall in future. I wish to speak more particularly in reference to the propriety of such open investigations, by representative Biblical scholars. I believe, from every perceivable reason known to myself, that they are right; and are in the strictest sense of the word quite beneficial to the thinking part of the race. For the reason that it is by this and its kindred ways, that many of the great principles of the scheme of redemption have been so amply and elaborately spread out; so that now many of the honest (thinking part) of the race are enabled, with fearless firmness, to step out upon them.

Those parties (who are the honest, reflecting part of the race) who are concerned about their salvation, have heard the voice spoken of by St. John: "Come out of her (Babylon—confusion) my people; be ye separate from her, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." All restorers, reformers, yes, the protestant world, claim that they know just how and where to apply this language of St. John. Now, don't forget it, for John said, "Her sins have reached unto Heaven;" and he didn't want any of God's people, that were in there, to be partakers of her sins, neither to receive of her plagues. And, let me say right here, in all candor [and I want to make this article that which I shall not fear to meet in the judgment], that the greatest trouble, according to my judgment, that I have found with all people, is, that they think they have gotten out of Babylon too soon. O yes, we are all right; and they get into the great cradle, and are willing to be rocked to sleep by some good friend, who assures them that he knows they are correct. Now, I hold membership with the people known as Josephite Latter Day Saints, and, I believe, strictly in reformation and restoration of that which is in consequence of the falling away, spoken of by Paul; and I say to you, who are about to lullaby, Wake up, be careful, consider again; for it is written, "Cursed is he that trusteth in the arm of flesh, or that maketh flesh his arm." But here comes the cry from every quarter, from every source, "I can testify of the goodness of God to me, I know that God has given me of His spirit, and I know that I am right." Ah! these glorious old cradles! Our fathers rocked in them, and so will we. I say, Wake up! Did not I quote to you here, where God recognized a people as His—spoke to them; and you can see the reason why. They were in confusion, and He wanted them to escape the sin and condemnation. But each one is ready to say, that don't apply to us; for I know that there is more real religion, more power, among us than any other people. Let me ask you, Do you think that those whom God recognized through John were His people? And yet do you think that they would have no power? And again, do you think they could enter Heaven with sin? Then why the cry, "Come out of her." Now let me say to one and all, that you are responsible for yourselves. Do not listen to the syren song of priest-craft, for this is the damning curse that first caused the truth to be hid; and kept it in the darkened shade of priest-craft; stepping between the common people, saying, You need not bother yourself, and teaching others to say, We need not bother ourselves; if the church is not right we are not to blame. Thus they shut off investigation, saying, We know it is all right, and surely no Scripture is of any private interpretation. This is the same song that was sung to Jesus. Surely the angels have charge of you; you need not be afraid of dashing your foot against a stone; they'll bear you up. It is the same song; but these later singers propose to bear you up themselves.

I shall proceed. It is the same damning curse that hid, and kept under, many of the glorious truths now so firmly occupied by the reformers. The common people have never been so much to blame. But their fault is for listening to those singers, and not rather trusting in God's word—knowing for themselves, "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to these, it is because there is no light in them." Let me say to you, then, do not make up your mind too soon in regard to your condition; but if you judge that God is blessing you as a people, because His power is among you, remember that He blessed the people in the days of Paul, Peter, James and John. There was much power there; the sick were healed by the laying on of hands; by handling handkerchiefs from the apostles, and by even falling in the shadow of some of them. Even the dead were on an occasion or two brought to life by these servants of God; and many mighty signs and wonders followed the believers. If your course of reasoning is right, and if we were as good in every particular as they were, and there is nothing to hinder us from being, God would certainly bless us as he did them, unless He has changed wonderfully. Now, some one is to blame; either God or the people.

Let no one beguile you then with vain words, saying this or that side has beaten the other, or that he don't think any one can have buzzard enough about him to read the one side, or that it is the same old course of slang, or that every honest lover of truth will have to conclude that this one has routed the other on every point. Do not let any one of these good fellows, be he whom he may, pre-judge for you in this way. And let me say to such persons, I don't like to hear this kind of sophistry. If you think that this, or that, side has made such a grand success; if you think that the one side has made such a grand failure, don't be scared about the flock; don't throw in anything to prevent the free and impartial consideration of both sides. Let the people see it for themselves, and it will do them good, and the truth will lose nothing. There is no danger of any one learning too much; but there has always been people who did not care to learn themselves, nor let others. You may know them by their saying, "Oh, I am satisfied; I've made up my mind;" and if they think you are not willing to quiet down, they will speak, perhaps, of some ever learning and never being able to come to the knowledge of the truth. Now I have heard this in different churches, but it is the syren song before alluded to. So do not pay any attention to it, but go right on with your investigation for truth, remembering that you are responsible for yourself. I pray that God may bless the honest with wisdom, and that He may not let them rest; but that they may continue, by every possible means, to reform, by looking in every direction, and thus free themselves from error and sin; and if the churches that they are in will not keep up the march, let them get out of the peculiar cradles, and go on, trusting in the same God who has blessed others of the past.

That God may hasten the time when His people may get out of Babylon, become one, see eye to eye, and speak the same things, and thus have the faith (with all of its power) once delivered to the Saints; and that we all may receive and retain that fullness of the Spirit of the Master that will enable us to rule our own spirits, and thus be prepared with joy to meet the King when He comes, is my prayer in His name.

J. V. L. SHERWOOD.

REPLY TO "FIDEI DEFENSOR."

"Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven."—Matt. 6: 10.

DEAR HERALD:—There appears in your columns of December 8th, 1883, an article entitled, "God's Gifts to the Church." (Eph. 4: 11: 13). From the time I first heard and obeyed the gospel of Christ, until the present, I have believed this scripture. I have also at different times and places, tried to persuade others into the belief that I did believe. Ah! more, I have tried to persuade them to believe as I believed. As "Fidei Defensor," (defender of the faith), has given us his views as regards perfection, when and where it is to be attained, and at the same time acknowledges the imperfection of the Saints, I wish to offer a few words of consolation to the imperfect ones; for we read, "They that are well have no need of a physician; but they that are sick."

I select the above text because the brother attempts to make it a strong weapon in defense of his claim. I agree with him in his statement, that "the Saints are as yet imperfect," so far as my understanding of the term is concerned; for I understand it to be the opposite to perfection. It is not the intention of the writer to cast reflection, reproach or derision, or in any manner discourage the efforts of any one in living just as near to God and perfection as is possible. But it is my desire to encourage, strengthen and build up your faith; and if it be possible enlighten the minds of some, who through apparent blindness are not yet able to see or understand the message which we bear. I believe the writer of the article referred to, to have written and expressed therein the honest sentiments of his heart when he says, "When and where this perfection is to be acquired, we think, is now and here, in this life of probation. * * * Secondly, that this perfecting ourselves must take place here on earth while in the flesh. Then he quotes the language of our text, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." Then asks, "Can his will be done perfectly by any, except it be a perfect being?" We join with the brother and say, "Most assuredly not." "But," says the writer, "if we pray 'Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven,' do we not pray that his will may be done perfectly on earth? And does not this require a perfect being, or beings?" To this I answer, Most assuredly yes. I believe the whole mission of the Messiah to this earth, (speaking condensedly), was and is for the express purpose of bringing about, and consummating an answer to this holy prayer which heads this article. If we limit one portion of the Lord's prayer, which portion shall it be? He who said, "Pray, Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven," also said, "Pray, Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors, and lead us not [suffer us not to be led] into temptation, but deliver us from evil." How often were they to offer this supplication to our Father which art in heaven? Answer, Every day they wanted bread, or the necessities of life, the bread which perishes; and as often as they had need of this they were instructed to say, "Forgive us our debts [sins] as we forgive our debtors [those who have in any manner wronged us] and suffer us not to be led [enticed] into temptation," because we are not yet perfect. We are liable to give way in a measure to the seductive devices of the adversary; hence, "Deliver us from evil, for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever, Amen." We may get a better understanding of the above prayer and its meaning by the following: "And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven suffered violence and the violent take it by force." (Matt. 11: 12). But it will not be so when his will is done on earth, as it is done in heaven; for we read again: "I beheld, and the same horn, [power], made war with the Saints, and prevailed against them, until the ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the Saints of the Most High. And the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." (Daniel 7: 22). "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." (verse 27). Here is presented a far different state of affairs from what our Savior witnessed and predicted should come to pass prior to that glorious event. For farther proof of the violence that was perpetrated in the days of the earthly ministry of our Lord, we find he made use of the following strong and powerful language: "But woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer [let] ye them that are entering to go in." (Matt. 23: 13). This with the remaining portion of the chapter, is enough to show that wicked men and hypocrites then had the ability and power to shut up the kingdom of heaven against men who were trying to enter, that is, they were teaching and instructing their followers to have nothing to do with this "strange doctrine," Christianity; and that its author was "a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners," thus shutting many out of the kingdom of heaven for the time being. Thus enforce-ing their will to be done on earth, contrary to the will of our Father in heaven. Is it not so in this generation! Are not many kept from entering (obeying the gospel) the kingdom, by men who profess to be very devout and pious, full of learning, many of them too good to bow the knee to their Creator, but love to pray, (standing), and others are kept from entering, by threats of desertion of some friend or relative, and by circumstances over which they have no control. Thus the will of man, poor, weak, mortal, fallible man, is to-day obeyed, because his power is feared; instead of the will and power of our Father who is in heaven.

I differ with "Fidei Defensor" as to the time and place of attaining unto the perfection to which he draws our attention; for he pictures to the mind the highest degree of perfection, even the perfection of God! That mortal man can and should seek for, and through faithfulness to his Creator attain unto, a goodly degree of righteousness, holiness, sanctification, and perfection, I heartily admit; but that man in this probationary state should and can attain unto the perfection of the Deity, is to my mind a mistake, a misconstruction, and misapplication of Scripture. We will now examine another quotation which the writer of the above article refers to, as unmistakable evidence that man must become while here in the flesh, as perfect as our Father in heaven is perfect. "Ye are therefore commanded to be perfect, even as your Father who is in heaven is perfect." (Matt. 5: 50, Inspired Translation). King James' Translation (48 verse) conveys the same meaning. The brother here remarks: "If we can find wherein consists the perfection of our Heavenly Father then we may know what we must attain to that we may be perfect, like unto him." We are here commanded to be as perfect in our office, calling and stewardship, while dwelling on this sphere in the church militant, as our Father in heaven is perfect in his sphere. This is comparing earthly things with heavenly things. When we have done this, obeyed all the commandments of God unto the end of this mortal probation, we will be as far from the perfection of the Almighty as the throne of God is above the earth. In order to do justice to the different writers of the New Testament Scriptures, I call your attention to Luke's version of the above scripture. "Be ye therefore merciful as your Father also is merciful." (Luke 6: 36). This corresponds precisely with Matt. 5: 48, as to time and place, both evangelists recording the same discourse and instructions of their Lord. Are we to give less or more credence to one than the other? I think not, but to each with equal weight, and let the preponderance of evidence turn the scale. Does God require of his believing children in this age, a greater degree of perfection than he did of those of eighteen hundred years ago? I think not. Weak, mortal man in his great zeal to imitate his Creator, sometimes becomes over zealous. That which is perfect can not be perfected; hence, if mortal man should or can or is to become perfected in this life of probation, there is nothing to be gained by the resurrection of his body from the grave. O presumption, thus to make man in the flesh equal with God in heaven. Thus each man would become an independent will-power of his own. The author of our salvation has designed no such thing for, nor demands anything of the kind of, any man in any age of the world. The history we have of the best men, the most influential men, God-fearing, law-abiding, devout men, men who were in their days recognized as the servants of the Most High, who commissioned them, heard and answered from heaven, his dwelling place, their cries, the history of those men does not disguise the fact of their being in a measure imperfect men, men liable of themselves to commit error, (sin), because of the weakness of the flesh. I shall cite you to but few of them. They shall be good representative men. "Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples and said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" (Matt. 11: 2, 3; Luke 7: 19, 20). This is the man who was the fore-runner of Christ, the Lord, called to this office-work before his conception in the womb; who, when baptizing in Jordan, pointed unto the multitude and said, "Behold! the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." Who said, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?" He who, after he had baptized his Lord, heard the voice of the Father from heaven saying "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." We here find him displaying the weakness of the flesh, to which all mortals are subject. When persecution rages, our liberty is restrained, as was the case with John the Baptist. Then we, too, may manifest the spirit of man more than the Spirit of Christ, and give way to fears and doubtings, as did he, that all was lost. But the message which his Master sent him in answer to his questions was no doubt sufficient to satisfy his mind.

After our Savior was betrayed into the hands of his enemies, "all his disciples forsook him and fled." (Matt. 26: 56). Peter, who had said "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," (Matt. 16: 16), concluded to follow on, and see the end of the matter. But he had not the courage to go into the High Priest's office, where they were bringing false accusations against and scourging his Master; but remained within the palace. He was there met by a damsel who accused him of being "with Jesus of Galilee." "But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest." So to get rid of this bold little maid, who was trying to convict him in the palace, he repaired to the porch. But to his horror he is still haunted; for there another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, "This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth." "And again he denied with an oath! I do not know the man." It was by this time apparent to almost all who were there assembled, that he was a friend of Jesus. So after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said unto Peter, "Sursly thou also art one of them, for thy speech betrayeth thee." Peter could stand it no longer. He had been accused two different times by two different damsels, which he had as often denied. Now to be accused the third time, of the same thing, and that by the mass of them that stood by was too much for his human nature to silently endure. "Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man." (Matt. 26: 69-74). I have been somewhat lengthy in Peter's case, because it was to him the Lord had said, "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16: 19). Also Peter had said unto him, "Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended. Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewise also said all the disciples." (Matt. 26: 33-35). The above is written to show the willingness of the spirit, and the weakness of the flesh. I do not thus write to excuse myself or you in committing evil; for I do not believe that God can look upon sin with the least degree of allowance. Unto whom much is given, from him will the more be required. I hope and pray that we may all while here, live just as near our religion as did those men of God; and be just as worthy when the time of our transition comes as I believe they were. We read that "Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are. He prayed earnestly that it might not rain, and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. He prayed again, and the heavens gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." (James 5: 17, 18). In the sixteenth verse, "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." From this we learn, that although having some faults, they were righteous men. Elias was subject to like passions, as was the Apostle James, and all to whom he wrote. Please remember, that according to his (Elias') words, the rain was withheld, or sent. (See 1 Kings 17: 1; 18: 41-45).

We shall briefly notice the hope and faith of the Apostle Paul, for he does not lay claim to any considerable degree of perfection, while in the mortal body. Here are his own words:

"And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith, that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death, if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead, not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect be thus minded, and if in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you. Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule. Let us mind the same thing."—Philip 3: 9-16.

Here Paul is teaching the Saints, that the perfection for which he started out, is not attainable this side of the resurrection; but he was pressing on toward that prize. He warns all, as many as be perfect in understanding, men of mature years, not children in understanding, to be thus minded. How? To have the same belief, the same faith and hope that he has just been explaining; and says, that if in anything they shall be otherwise minded, should think differently from what he has here taught them, that God shall reveal even this unto them. He tells them nevertheless whereto we have already attained, to walk by the same rule, mind the same thing, that the measure of knowledge, understanding, faith or perfection of which each was then in possession, would be strengthened by their remaining steadfast in the doctrine of Christ. Not to fall back, but hold their position in faith that Christ is the great Beacon Light, and it is at the end of the race that the prize is awarded.

We will now examine the text in the article referred to:

"And he gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ, till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."—Eph. 4: 11-13.

The Apostle Paul is here instructing the Saints at Ephesus as to the purpose for which God had placed these officers in the church, and the length of time they or others holding equal authority, would be needed. He was teaching them God's law, the perfect law of liberty. That in keeping said law they would eventually become perfected. "For the perfecting of the Saints." A continuing on toward perfection, not the completion of it in this life. But these officers were to teach and guide them on toward perfection. This would be perfecting the Saints. They were also placed there "for the work of the ministry." If so, the ministry could not be worked without them; for the officers, each in his calling, were the ministry. Take either one of these quorums of officers away, remove them from the body, [church], and that moment the church is disorganized. They were "for the edifying of the body [church] of Christ," to comfort, cheer, encourage, strengthen and build up the members of the body [church] of Christ. How long would these officers be needed? "Till we all come in [into] the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." Paul tells us, that these officers were to be had in the church till we all, not only come into a unity of the faith, but unto a knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man. Let us see how perfect. "Unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. I hold, that just so long as a man remains mortal, he fails to attain unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. For further proof that perfection is not to be attained in the outset by any Christian, we will continue to quote Paul's epistle to the church at Ephesus, beginning where we left off: "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive, but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things which is the head, even Christ, from whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love," (verses 14-16), "that we henceforth be no more children." Here Paul includes himself with the rest of the Saints. Although the word "perfecting" appears first, or as the first reason why God had set those officers in the church, it would be superfluous for Paul to say to them "henceforth," or from the time they were perfected; but "that we henceforth" from the time that God had organized his church, with all its quorums of officers, "be no more children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine by the sleight of men," etc., "but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ," by coming to a unity of the faith, and edifying each other with truth spoken in love. Thus they would grow up into him in all things. This was not a momentary consideration, it was the work, the faithful labor of a life time for the people who lived then. It is none the less for us. We are to grow up into him, as a child from its infancy grows up to manhood or womanhood, and partakes of its parents' good or bad qualities.

I shall now give the words of John the beloved disciple, to show that he professed not to having acquired the perfection of his Lord and Master. "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." (1 John 1: 8, 9). The above was not written to the world, to unbelievers, but to the church, to children in Christ. He frequently addresses them, "My little children." Hence comment is needless. I will give another quotation from the same writer manifesting his hope of perfection, and when it was to be attained. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself even as he is pure." (1 John 3: 2, 2). "When he shall appear we shall be like him," that is, our bodies will be renewed. This corresponds with Paul, who said, "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body. (Phil. 3: 20, 21). This is the hope of the Christian, in fact it is the whole tenor of Scripture. It all resolves into this; A glorious resurrection when we shall be perfected."

Let us hear what the only infallible teacher that ever lived on earth has said on this subject: "And he said unto him, why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God." (Matt. 19: 17). We can only account for this answer upon the ground that he at that time was in possession of dying flesh and blood and "bearing the sins of many." "That he took not on him the nature of angels, but the seed of Abraham," "and was fashioned like unto weak and fallen man," etc.

I believe that I have produced sufficient evidence to convince some that perfection, according to God's standard, is only attainable in immortality, after the resurrection of the body from the grave, or after it has been quickened at his appearing, as will be the case with all his people who remain alive on the earth when he comes. But again, I call your attention to his words; "And he said unto them, go ye and tell that fox, [Herod], behold I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected." (Luke 13: 32). "This he spake, signifying of his death." (Verse 34, Inspired Translation). This language, coming as it does from Christ our Lord, should forever silence all who would attempt to teach that poor, weak, mortal, fallible man "can, and should attain unto the perfection of God in heaven while he is here in this life of probation." O! I feel to say, "God be merciful to me a sinner. For it became him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." (Heb. 2: 10). "The servant is not greater than his Master." If he was "made perfect through sufferings" even unto death, it is as much as his followers need expect. "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." (Matt. 28: 18). "I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen. And have the keys of hell and of death." (Rev. 1: 18). Here is manifested the beauty of perfection, as well as the greatness of power. He had said unto his disciples when they were partaking of his Holy Supper, "But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom." (Matt. 26: 29). Again, we feel constrained to say, "Thy kingdom come, that thy will may be done on earth as it is done in heaven." That is the time when his will will be done perfectly on earth, when his kingdom comes. Paul says, "Charity never faileth; but whether there be prophecies they shall fail; whether there be tongues they shall cease; whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away; for we know in part and we prophesy in part; but when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." (1 Cor. 13: 8-10). Then he reasons with them that these things, these gifts of the gospel are in comparison to perfection as the thoughts and playthings of a child are to that of grown people; and also compares these things which are only in part, to a man looking through a smoked glass, "a glass darkly," or through a riddle, a sieve, to that which is perfect. I thank God that these things "in part" are again restored to man on the earth; for since the above was written many dark ages have rolled into eternity, carrying with them millions of the human family who have had the Bible in their hands, with a desire to obtain eternal life, who have "heaped to themselves teachers," which teachers have taught them that these things "in part" are no longer needed, thus virtually, and some positively teaching, that perfection has already come; for Paul says, "when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." God in his infinite mercy has seen fit to send in our age an holy angel from the regions of glory, with authority to commission men to go forth and proclaim this same gospel, promising that the same signs should follow the believer. Surely we are witnesses that they do, and will, until that which is perfect is come. Then the prophets will not need to prophesy, for Christ, the chief teacher will be here to instruct all. Tongues, different languages, shall cease; for the Lord will restore unto the people a "pure language." There will be no need of "laying hands on the sick, for there will be no sick there. There will be no "casting out of devils," for the Prince of devils will be bound." None will need to say to the others, "Know ye [do you know] the Lord? for they shall all know him from the greatest of them unto the least of them." Then we shall not see through a "glass darkly," we shall see face to face. We shall not only "know in part" but we shall "know as we are known." The "knowledge of God will cover the earth as the waters now cover the mighty deep." We, that are faithful, will have become perfected, even perfect in Christ our Lord. No cruel steel will be raised against man or beast. "The lion shall eat straw like the ox, the cow and the bear shall feed, and their young ones shall lie down together." Then will have come the time when God shall have "poured out his Spirit upon all flesh." It is now only poured out upon a small portion of his creatures. Then will have come the millennium, the glorious day of a thousand years. We shall realize an answer to our prayer, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." Now, all the host of heaven are performing the will of God, because they are perfect. Then all the inhabitants of the earth will perform the will of God, as it is now done in heaven. For the same reason they will have become perfect. By living up to the perfect law, they will be sanctified and resurrected.

Yours with this hope,

J. H. LAWN.

His Prophetic Mission Vindicated, and the Divine Origin of the Book of Mormon Defended and Maintained. Paper covers, 200 pages..... 35
 This is a reply by Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Adventist Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, especially; and it is a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon.

No Credit for moneys received on subscription will appear on the Colored Address Label of the Herald and Hope for this issue, as no changes have been made, except in case of persons desiring a change in P.O. address.

Paid out $55.30. Balance on hand $5.28.

Committee chosen by last conference to settle difficulties in branches continued.

Resolved that the Rockland Branch is disorganized, and that the members of said branch report to district president; That we sustain Bro. G. W. Eaton as missionary in district; That we recommend Elders G. W. Eaton and W. G. Pert to their quorms for licences.

Sunday morning preaching by G. W. Eaton; afternoon by the same; evening by G. W. Eaton assisted by W. G. Pert.

Resolved, That we adjourn to meet with the Bray's Mountain Branch, the last Saturday in May, 1885.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

Conference convened with the Union Branch, in Jefferson county, Indiana, November 8th, 1884, Elder H. Scott president, Elder M. H. Forscutt secretary pro tem.

By motion the district secretary, Bro. John Carmichael was released and Leonard Scott was chosen secretary of the district.

Branch Reports.—Eden 32. Union 33. Canaan 22. Elders' Reports.—J. G. Scott, (baptized 3), Samuel Rector, (baptized 1); Priest Wm. Burton; Teachers Edwin Flint, David Stites and William Winscott reported. Bishop's Agent, S. Rector, reported on hand last report $12.51; expended $5; balance on hand $7.57. He also reported, that $753.28 had been received, and expended toward the building of the new church house at Union.

Brethren Forscutt, Waldsmith and Stites were appointed as a committee to audit Bishop's Agent's account. Committee reported that with the exception of 50cts omitted by mistake, now corrected and added, we find the Bishop's Agent's report correct; and although they regretted that so little had been done for the general funds of the church, we recommend very highly, the strong and successful effort to build a house of worship in Union Branch.

The committee appointed to examine title deed of ground for church house, reported: We your committee appointed to examine title deed for land on which church building is located, suggested some changes to Bro. John Fewel, to which he readily consented. This involved the making out a new title deed, which is herewith presented. Your committee ask that the Bishop's Agent be authorized to pay the expense of the new title deed, which makes a legal transfer of the property to the Church of J. C. of L. D. S., in harmony with the laws of the land and of the Church. M. H. Forscutt, J. W. Waldsmith and Harbert Scott, committee.

The report of the committee was adopted, and the agent authorized to pay expenses of new deed.

On Sunday, the 9th, the church house was dedicated, the services being conducted by Bro. Forscutt, who delivered the sermon and the dedicatory prayer, assisted by Bro. H. Scott.

Resolved, That we recommend and sustain Bro. J. G. Scott as a missionary in the district for the next three months. Harbert Scott was sustained as missionary in his present field. All unfinished business was laid over till next conference.

Adjourned, after a pleasant and encouraging session, to meet with the Canaan Branch, March 28th, 1885, at 10 o'clock a. m.

SECOND QUORUM OF ELDERS.

It is expedient that a full and complete report be had from every member of the quorum, by March the first. A resolution obtained through a joint meeting of the several quorums of Elders, in the year 1882, to the effect: That it would be prima facie evidence of unfaithfulness of any Elder, who neglected to report his labors to the president or secretary of his quorum, by the first of March yearly. Therefore, it is hoped that our quorum will not be negligent to duty. Write your reports full, giving the number of baptisms, confirmations, time occupied in the active service, spirituality, your ability to labor during another year. Do you desire a mission by General Conference appointment—note your ability or not of self support, &c. There has a little misunderstanding arisen by the resignation of Bro. Wm. Chambers, as president of quorum. It is well known that Bro. William served his quorum faithfully and ably. He had sought God in earnest prayer, and through love to the work he asked to be relieved of the presidency, desiring and hoping that it might redound to a more thorough reporting of the quorum. His desire may never obtain during my presidency, but brethren send in your reports and let us have a unit of action in the quorum. Any desiring information in regard to quorum work, I will gladly assist if they will write me. Address me at Rhodes, Marshall Co., Iowa. Your co-laborer,

I. N. WHITE, Pres. of Quorum.

BORN.

McKIERNAN.—At Farmington, Iowa, August 1st, 1884, to brother and sister James McKiernan, a daughter. Blessed November 9th, 1884, by Bro. M. T. Short: named Lucretia.

MARRIED.

CHURCH—LOVELL.—At Lamoni, Iowa, Bro. Edward C. Church to Sr. Emma Lovell, Decem-4th, 1884, by Bro. Asa S. Cochran.

DIED.

GARNER.—At Missouri Valley Junction, Iowa, September 25th, 1884, Stephen M., son of Bro. Henry and Sr. Ann M. Garner, of Magnolia Branch. He was born March 1st, 1862, in Harrison county, Iowa. He left his home in apparent good health, and just as he was waiting in the Missouri Valley Junction for the train, he fell down dead, without any apparent cause. He was esteemed by all who knew him; and his death, in the bloom of manhood, was greatly regretted. Funeral sermon preached by Charles Derry, from Job 1:21.

God gave us life, we hear Him say,
This mortal life, it must decay,
Then we go to God above,
The Eternal Father, God of love.
Sleep on my son and take thy rest.
God took him home, He thought it best.
It was hard for me to part with thee,
But Christ's strong arm supported me.

HENRY GARNER.

DICKSON.—At St. Louis, Mo., November 11th, 1884, Sr. Jane Dickson. She was born June 9th, 1805, near Glasgow, in Lanarkshire, Scotland; and was baptized September 12th, 1864, at St. Louis, Missouri, by Elder Alexander H. Smith. Sr. Dickson was a true Latter Day Saint, and had a firm faith that the promises of God will be realized in his own appointed time. A frequent saying of hers was: "The Lord's time is a good time, it is the proper time, and is well worth waiting for." Elder William Smith delivered her funeral discourse in the Saints' Hall, St. Louis, Missouri, on Sunday evening November 30th, 1884.

VAUGHAN.—At St. Louis, Missouri, November 1st, 1884, Sr. Mary A. Vaughan. She was born in the State of Ohio, July 11th, 1808; and was baptized at St. Louis, Missouri, September 10th, 1871, by Elder John Clark, and confirmed by Elder Isaac Poole. Although in feeble health for years past, she was a regular attendant at the Saints' meetings; but was of a singularly unobtrusive disposition. She has gone to meet loved ones who have gone before. May her loved ones who remain behind emulate her virtues and follow in her footsteps.

BOZARTH.—At Cameron, Missouri, August 16th, 1884, Sylvia M., infant daughter of Bro. W. T. and Sr. Mara I. Bozarth. Funeral service by Bro. James Drown.

BOOTH.—At her residence, near Davis City, Iowa, November 27th, 1884, of paralysis, sister Phoebe Marcelles, wife of Bro. Robert Booth; aged 74 years and 9 months. Sister Booth, with her husband, was one of the pioneer settlers of this county, was not a stranger to hardships, was a woman of untiring industry, and noted for her generous hospitality and sincerity of friendship. She was the mother of nine children, three of whom have preceded her into eternity, leaving six grown children and an aged companion to mourn her loss. Was a member of the church in its early days, and united with the Reorganization more than twenty years ago, under the ministry of Elder W. W. Blair. Funeral services by Elder Z. H. Gurley. She passed away in peace, and so may she rest until the resurrection morn. Her remains were interred at Rose Hill Cemetery, Lamoni, Iowa, November 30th, 1884.

STEVENS.—At Farmington, Iowa, October 17, 1883, of consumption, Sr. Matilda Stevens; was born July 31st, 1818, in Prescott, county of Leeds, Canada west; was baptized by James Blakeslee, November, 1836; was received on membership into the Reorganization, April 27th, 1873. Funeral services at the Saints' Church.

MARTIN.—At Columbus Branch, Cherokee county, Kansas, November 24th, 1884, Curtis Manning, only son of Bro. William and Sr. Euretta Martin, and grandchild of Bro. Curtis Randall, aged 3 months and 13 days. Funeral discourse by Bro. Evan A. Davis. "Not lost, but gone before."

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

BY PRES. JOSEPH SMITH.

ONE of the most commendable declarations of the revelations in the Doctrines and Covenants, having relation to the conduct of the Saint, as a citizen, toward the Government is that found in section 58, paragraph 5.

"Let no man think he is ruler, but let God rule him that judgeth according to the counsel of his own will; or, in other words, him that counsel-eth, or sitteth, upon the judgment seat. Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God, hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet."

This revelation was given in August, 1831, and is among those given as permanent guides for the personal conduct of the church to which it was sent.

We quote below an extract from the Editorial columns of the Deseret News, of December 5th, 1884:

THE PERSECUTIONS IN ARIZONA.

Another conviction has been obtained in Howard's court in Arizona, for polygamy. Peter J. Christofferson is the victim. The evidence, it is stated, was as incomplete as in the case of Mr. Tenney. A dispatch to the San Francisco Chronicle says: "The Mormons threaten vengeance against the court." That, of course, is a falsehood. The Prescott press dispatcher has taken a leaf out of his Salt Lake confrere's book. The "Mormons" will naturally feel indignant at the course pursued, in committing without bail pending an appeal prisoners who have been convicted on hearsay. But they will neither threaten nor injure the court.

Submission to the law is and has been one of the characteristics of the Latter-day-Saints, and they have not changed their principles nor their policy by moving over the line into another Territory. Their non-obedience to the anti-polygamy enactments is well known to spring from their belief in the invalidity of those statutes, and it is acknowledged that with those exceptions the "Mormons" are exemplary in their submission to the laws of the land.

Whatever opposition may proceed from our friends in Arizona to the verdicts of juries and the rulings of courts, no matter how unjust and arbitrary they may be, will be taken on legal grounds and pursued by lawful measures. Such proceedings as have been inaugurated may give temporary comfort to bigots, but patience is a "Mormon" virtue and "the end is not yet."

There are three points in the foregoing editorial worth a notice: 1, Persecution in Arizona; 2, Constitutional law; 3, Submission to law.

1. The persecution referred to can be no other than the effort made to enforce the United States law against polygamy, and unlawful cohabitation, in the territory of Arizona. This effort is being made by the officers of the courts of the United States, representing the Government, through the legal machinery appointed for the purpose of enforcing the authority of the Government. If a persecution, it is a legal one, pursued by lawful measures, and for a lawful purpose.

2. Constitutional law. What is it?

The second clause of section 3, article 4, of the Constitution, provides as follows: "The Congress shall have power to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory, or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State."

The second clause of article 6 provides that: "This Constitution and the laws of the United States, which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

Section 4 provides that: "The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the legislature, or of the executive (when the legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence."

Constitutional law then is that rule of civil conduct prescribed by the Federal Government through representatives chosen from among the people by themselves; such rule of law acquiesced in and endorsed by the Supreme Court of the United States, as being in conformity with the provisions, expressed or understood, of the Constitution.

3. Submission to law.

To people whose religious form of church government is a theocracy, to whom the "thus saith the Lord" is the end of controversy, the foregoing provisions defining the powers of an earthly court from which there is no expectation that divine decrees shall issue, would appear to be hard, and irreconcilable with their faith; upon the hypothesis that men should "obey God rather than man." It is possible that the people for whom the Deseret News speaks may take this view of the case; fortified by article 1 of the Amendments to the Constitution, which provides: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

In the demand of the Utah church for the privilege to practice polygamy under this amendment there is a seeming of justice; but it is seeming only.

The foolishness of the claim for immunity for the practice of polygamy from the interference of the courts, made by the church in Utah, is seen; and that the justness of their plea that it is their religion is seeming only is shown by consideration of the following facts:

First. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day-Saints, from which the present Utah Mormon church is a fragment, dissevered in faith, principle and practice, was founded in 1830 under organic laws given of God himself.

Second. In justification of himself and his action in thus founding this church, on this land of America, he gives as one reason, that certain things named by him should be done; "by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you, according to the laws and constitution of the people which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles, that every man may act in doctrine, and principle, pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency which I have given unto them, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment. Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men, whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood."—Doctrine and Covenants, section 88, paragraph 10.

Third. The Supreme Court of the United States is a creation of the Constitution, and was in existence and held judicial rule when the church was established; hence, when God established the church he did so cognizant of the fact that he had endowed wise men unto the very purpose of framing the Constitution.

Fourth. This framing of the Constitution and the establishing the church were correlative—one to the other, so determined of God.

Fifth. To further express his will concerning the Constitution and government of this land, and the conduct of the people of the church under them; the law of 1831, already quoted, was given. In addition to it one was given in August, 1833, section 2: "And now, verily I say unto you concerning the laws of the land, it is my will that my people should observe to do all these things whatsoever I command them, and that law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges (that) belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore, I, the Lord, justifieth you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, cometh of evil."

Sixth. The church founded in 1830 existed under the operation of these provisions of the law of God from that time, until that portion now claiming exemption from the authority of government left Illinois and Iowa in 1846 and 7.

Seventh. No command, or revelation, of God was had or claimed, or stated to the church, or this Utah fragment, until August, 1852, after the people had left organized States of the Union, and settled on territory belonging to the whole of the States.

Eighth. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day-Saints was not the Supreme Court of the United States in 1830, and has not been since. Nor is the Utah Mormon church, or any member of it, now vested with the authority of that Supreme Court, or entitled to pass decisions upon law and say whether it is constitutional, or otherwise; that extraordinary function belongs to the tribunal created by the constitution, and that alone. Neither John Taylor, with his counselors, George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith, the Utah First Presidency; the Twelve with W. Woodruff at its head; the High Council, the seventy, the elders; nor the Editorial staff of the Deseret News, including, of course, its chief editor, whose production we have quoted, has any right to decide, either for himself or themselves, or others, what is and what is not the constitutional law of the land demanding their obedience.

The human rendition of the powers vested in the Supreme Court, by the very men whom God "raised up for the very purpose," is found in sections 1 and 2 of article 3 of the Constitution itself and the custom of the States and Courts under the Constitution.

"The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court."

2. The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made under their authority.

The Constitution recites the cases in which the supreme and inferior courts established by congress, hold jurisdiction, the cases in which the Supreme Court holds original jurisdiction are recited, and in all others "the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact."

This expressly denies to any church—Catholic, Episcopal, Methodist or Mormon—or to any State corporation, or individual, the right to sit in judgment upon questions arising in which the constitutionality of law is involved, and deciding such question for themselves; and thus determining their own action of conformity to or disregard of the laws involved.

The church from 1830 to 1844 was law-abiding. Its utterances in theory, principle, dogma, faith and practice, were in keeping with the teaching of the Constitution. It was the claim of the Elders that the discovery of America was foreseen and provided for by God, as the founding of a government to be the asylum for the oppressed of all nations. It was the belief of the leaders and the people that the struggle for independence was the baptism of the tree of Liberty in fire and blood, without which it could never flourish. It was taught as a heritage of the covenant made with Abraham, that the men who framed and wrote the Declaration and the Constitution were raised up by the Almighty for that purpose. Christ so stated it in his declarations to the church in the restoration of the gospel. Love of country was held and enjoined from father to son. This was enforced as a sacred duty, and more binding on the Saints because of the wondrous manifestations of God's providence, watch-care and determination concerning the land, and the people who should live upon it. The church felt this. Joseph Smith boasted that he was a "Green Mountain boy," for in those Vermont hills patriots were born and raised. Obedience to law—the laws of the land—was a duty and a cardinal virtue. The laws of the States in which the church originated, and appointed for the stakes of Zion were under the Constitution. They were good and sufficient for the establishment and continuation of the church until the Prophet and Patriarch were slain. There was up to that time no church tenet, or practice that required a Saint to break, or defy, or evade the law of the land; and yet everywhere the Elders went, or Saints settled, there were laws forbidding more than one companion in wedlock.

The Utah fragment sought a soil on which to develop the folly of Solomon and David anew; a land where the crime and abomination of the people to whom Jacob ministered the rebuke of God, might be again re-enacted. But the will of God went before them. His hand was stretched out over the land. His care fashioned the events of the time. His thoughtful and watchful provision sent the representatives of the authority of the United States, the Constitution and the Supreme Court—the law—the human law enacted by his own divine direction before them like a cloud. If they would get out from under the ægis of that government, that constitution, that court—God's law—they must go beyond the bounds of the everlasting hills—over the confines of Joseph's land—out of the limits of the land of Zion, the heritage of the obedient and the pure in heart.

The Deseret News says that "Submission to law is and has been one of the characteristics of Latter-day-Saints, and that they have not changed their principles, nor their policy by moving over the line into another territory."

Not long since when we charged that God had changed his law, if the revelation on plural marriage came from him as a law, the News took the ground that God had not changed, but that he had adapted his laws to the changed condition of the people. As there had been a change in the people, there had been laws given suitable to their changed condition. Now the News says that the people have not changed. Where is the change? If God has not changed, and the people have not changed, what need of the people failing to obey the law? But, says the News, the "non-obedience to the anti-polygamy enactments is well known to spring from their belief in the invalidity of these enactments." Exactly. And if the principle is the correct one, any other people, class, or church, may incorporate into their religious creed any vagary, hurtful to society, or otherwise, independently of the courts, or the government; for if the Mormon church is to be permitted to judge of the validity, or invalidity, of the laws passed "for the good of all flesh" upon the land, chosen by God for the purpose named, there can be no line of demarcation drawn where the law is supreme. In such case belief alone would determine the allegiance of the governed.

To guard against such a contingency in this government, whose foundations the builder of the church himself laid down, the same wise master-builder placed the precautionary statement at the close of the revelation enjoining obedience to the constitutional law of the land, "Whatsoever is more or less than these cometh of evil." Who so blind as not to see that the one item alone incorporated in the Utah church system that now involves a disregard of and disobedience to the "law of the land," so sanctified by God's expressed will, "cometh of evil."

God never made the Utah Mormons, or any other people, to be the Supreme Court of the United States. Congress has never entrusted that church, or any other, with the functions of the Supreme Court. God has said to the Latter-day-Saints, "Let no man think he is ruler." Why then should we who are striving to call Israel back to the worship whence he has fled, consent to let men who refuse obedience to the laws under which we have been placed by divine clemency and commandment, sit in decision upon those laws because they believe them invalid? God has not made the people in Utah who refuse compliance with the laws of the land, because they believe them to be invalid, to be counselors to him that "counsel, or sitteth upon the judgment seat." He fixed that when by his chosen agents he established the constitution and the courts under it. He reserves to himself the right to rule and counsel; the one who "sitteth on the judgment seat." "But let God rule him that judgeth, according to the counsel of his own will," is the terse prohibitory declaration. Who are these men who propose to counsel the Almighty? Who are these men who, despite God's declaration concerning the "palladium of human rights and liberty," the Constitution of the United States, and the express enactment of his will, refuse their consent and their obedience to the laws of the land? They are not the ones whom God has permitted to be set in the "judgment seat," nor chosen to be the "counselors of him that judgeth." He will himself provide for the occupants of that high bench where justice holds her courts and whence her edicts are issued, whenever the rights and just privileges of those to whom this land has been consecrated as the place of political refuge, the land dedicated to freedom, are put in jeopardy. As in the past history of the land no grave emergency ever occurred in which the man, or men, for it were not provided for; so none will in the future occur unprovided by God's watchful care, according to the counsel of his own will.

The law of 1862, prohibiting polygamy in Utah and other territories, passed by Congress, has been declared to be constitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States. Each successive enactment of Congress, had in respect to the same crime, has been but supplementary, or auxiliary to that law, providing safeguards against those who have proposed to evade the law because "they believed it to be invalid." The acts of Congress, under which the men "persecated" in Arizona were arrested, tried and convicted, have been but enabling clauses of the same law in harmony with the first.

The judge, under whose administration these men were tried, is the proper one to interpret the language of the Constitution in respect to his own court, which declares that "the judges in every State shall be bound thereby (by the Constitution and all laws passed under it) any thing in the Constitution, or laws of any State, to the contrary notwithstanding."

No legislature of any State of the United States, nor any assembly of any territory belonging to the United States, has a right to enact provisions which make nugatory, or inoperative, the Constitution, or the laws of the United States, made under it. Neither the State of Iowa, nor the (state of Deseret) territory of Utah, can rightfully pass and enforce enactments which estop the action of the courts of the United States from punishing men who have refused obedience to the laws declared to be constitutional by the Supreme Court, or who have violated statutes passed by Congress in pursuance of the general provisions of the Constitution, approved by the Supreme Court. The laws of the United States passed into being and operation upon territory belonging to the States per se. That which is a crime in the States, by virtue of the United States law, is a crime in the territories of the States. Not until territories merge into States are they relieved of such disabilities as are imposed by the special and direct jurisdiction of the United States.

What the (state of Deseret) Utah territory could not do as a territory, she could not authorize the church of Jesus Christ to do. Hence, marriage being a civil contract, according to the declaration of the church, founded under God under the divinely authorized provisions of the Constitution of the United States, while that church was within States whose laws were monogamic, and before the establishment of such territory of Utah, it must remain a civil contract still in all and every territory belonging to the United States, nor was it in the power of the Territorial Assembly to so endow the church in Utah by an incorporating charter with the right to violate the general rules of the States as to remove the right to regulate the domestic relations of husband and wife, parents and children from the province of Congress and the United States courts. And not until Utah shall be admitted as a State of the Union, with an express provision in its constitution providing for the practice of plural, or polygamic marriage can it become lawful, or the laws against it become invalid.

Should Utah be admitted as a State without such express provision in its constitution at its admission, we believe that the legislature could not then legalize polygamy, neither by direct enactment nor by the round-about method adopted by the legislature of Deseret, and approved by the Utah Territorial Assembly, by charter to the church allowing it to control the marriage relations.

Whether Congress may lawfully admit Utah with such a clause in the Constitution permitting plural marriage either as a civil contract, or as a church sacrament, we do not discuss, as such contingency is of doubtful occurrence. But it may be pertinent to say that bigamy, or polygamy (plural marriage) being a crime in all other States of the Union, should Utah be admitted with such a clause in its constitution, "full faith and credit" could not be given such "public acts," in the other States, for persons plurally married in Utah could not legally live in those States."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. J. M. TERRY wrote us a card from Stewartville, Missouri, dated December 11th, stating that the discussion between Bro. J. W. Gillen and Clark Braden, was "progressing well." They were to enter upon the consideration of the second proposition on the evening of the 11th. Later word from Bro. A. McCallum states that the debate on the second proposition was ended on the evening of the 13th. He states that Bro. Gillen did his part well. Circumstances took Mr. Braden away, so that he could not attend the discussion on Monday evening the 15th, but was to return for Tuesday night.

Bro. J. C. Crabb wrote us from Little Sioux, December 7th, that the discussion with Mr. Allen, Baptist, at Mondamin, had concluded on the first proposition. Mr. Allen had gone home on account of his wife, the discussion being adjourned till the 29th instant, when it was to be resumed.

The St. Mary's Journal, published at St. Mary's, Ontario, has nearly a column of defense of the work by Bro. Joseph Luff, written in reply to some one who signed himself "D. C. B." It is well written and sets the leading points out in strong light.

Bro. and Sr. James Martin, from Forest City, Missouri, gave the sanctum a visit Tuesday, December 16th, in company with Bro. Mart Sorenson. They brought from their home to "ye editor," a bushel of sweet potatoes, the largest of which weighed four and one half pounds.

Judge Chauncy L. Higbee, of the Third District Appellate Court of Illinois, fell dead at Pittsfield, Illinois, his home, a few days since. Judge Higbee was one of the sons of Elias Higbee, who died in Nauvoo many years ago. His early life was connected with the Saints, from whom he drifted at the time of the destruction of the Expositor, newspaper in Nauvoo, for causes deemed sufficient by him. He was an able lawyer and good judge, and a politician of note in his county.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith wrote from Lower Lake, Lake county, California, where he had been called by telegram upon the sickness of a son of Bro. John and Sr. Esther Cobb. He had baptized four, we presume at Lower Lake, whence he wrote, at which he says: "The service was solemn and impressive, and all present felt it so. I think I never witnessed a better baptismal service. I felt the influence of the Spirit there." Bro. Smith would go to Healdsburg, December 1st.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard writes from Jeffersonville, Illinois, that he had preached three times at Kenton, Tennessee; audiences small. Not much desire on the people's part to hear. A man and wife were favorable, as it appeared. Utah Mormonism is at the bottom of the apathy of the people to hear our claims.

Card from Bro. Jos. A. Stewart, dated December 6th, states that Bro. W. H. and E. L. Kelley reached Philadelphia on the 5th. They are there on business relating to the Olive Branch, by direction of the Presidency.

Bio. M. H. Bond was at Dennisport, Massachusetts, December 8th, and expected to be in Plainville the 14th.

"THE PRIESTHOOD AND RE-INCARNATION."

UNDER the above caption the last number of the Olive Branch, published by James S. Dove & Co., at San Francisco, California, in an attempt to revive the brethren and followers of Joseph Morris, and unite them under the lead of George S. Dove, now claimed to be the successor of Mr. Morris, the editor discusses some part of the work to be done by the Lord in different dispensations. He says that after Jacob's departure from earth he "appeared again in the body of Moses in order that he might see the deliverance of the people whom he had previously taken into bondage."

We presume that this "taking of the people into bondage," referred to above, is the going of Jacob and his household down into Egypt, at the invitation of Joseph, then next the ruler of that wonderful land. We had thought that it was not till long after Jacob's death that Israel was put under bonds. However, this writer further states that Moses had "not a thorough knowledge of the priesthood." And this, too, after his instruction by Jethro, his father-in-law, and by God who commanded the ordination of Joshua, the calling of the council and the seventy elders.

Further on, the editor says, "Moses appeared again in the person of Samuel, and the angel of the Lord speaks to him."

This seems to dispose of Jacob rather summarily; for, if Jacob appeared in the body of Moses, it was not Moses; but Jacob who led Israel, and there was no Moses. And, if Moses appeared again in the person of Samuel, what became of the Jacob-Moses? Besides this, whence came Moses, who is re-incarnated as Samuel? What necessity could there have been for such re-incarnation when the principle announced through Joseph Morris must hold good: "The Lord reveals himself unto whomsoever he will, and his blessings and callings are unto none but those who are heirs to them."

The editor states that there was a long "contest between Saul and David, which resulted in the victory of David. He was a priest of the Malchisedec order. In fact, he is the president of that order."

This was long after the time of Melchisedec, in whom the Book of Covenants places the naming of this order of priesthood, to avoid the repetition of the name of God and the Son of God, in the latter of whom it is usual for Latter-day-Saints to recognize the "presiding high priest over all," or the Great High Priest. To make David the president of that order will seem to supplant the Son of David. But the Editor states in reply to a question, "How do you reconcile the revelations that were given through Joseph Morris? They appear to be contradictory; for they infer that he would see his enemies subdued; that those revelations do appear to be contradictory, and they do infer as stated. But by taking this "principle of re-incarnation" into consideration, it will be easy to see how the promises made through him, and by inference to him, may be fulfilled. For Joseph Morris stated the "he was the same spirit that appeared in the body of Moses," and that "as Moses had delivered the children of Israel from a temporal bondage, in like manner he would deliver the children of God in the latter day from a spiritual bondage; consequently we expect that he (Joseph Morris) will come again with greater power than he has had on any previous mission."

This would make Joseph Morris to be Jacob-Moses-Samuel-Morris; and as a consequence, if any one succeeds the prophet Joseph Morris, it is Joseph Morris-Samuel-Moses-Jacob; and reversing the order, the successor is Jacob-Moses-Samuel-Morris-Dove, if the latter is successor in the sense of the one referred to as the deliverer from spiritual bondage.

It seems to us that it is simpler, truer and much easier to believe that God could, can and does carry on his work by men and measures without mixing up and destroying identities in this style. It is in its style like the old doctrine of metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls. That Melchisedec, Moses, David, Jacob, Jesus, James, Joseph Smith, Joseph Morris and G. S. Dove might be called of God and chosen to their respective work as such identities, without the intervention of such a philosophy, seems easier of belief. To us the easier way to fulfill promises to Joseph Morris, that he shall "see his enemies subdued," is to continue his individuality as Joseph Morris, and not as Jacob-Morris, &c.

To us this merging the identities of men of modern times with those of the ancient regimes, exalts the former very much to the disparagement of the latter. Not only that, but it leaves the literal resurrection of the men of the past in bad shape for thinkers to dispose of. As if Joseph Morris-Samuel-Moses-Jacob was but one spirit, in several bodies, when the resurrection ensues, there will be the four identities either with one spirit, or five for four bodies. For our own part, we prefer to live and die, and live again (if permitted to be worthy), as Joseph Smith, the son of Joseph Smith, and as such person alone, than to be the first, second, or fortieth re-incarnation (re-instating in the flesh), of any man that ever lived.

This re-incarnation (relating to bodies), was the bane of Baneemyism; and has been a part of several schemes advocated by men who have risen and fallen away. We have none but the kindest feeling toward the brethren of the Morrisite faith; and notwithstanding the statement of Revelation No. 64, given by Joseph Morris, May 4th, 1861, respecting the Josephites, that "they shall become subject to you;" (that is, subject to Joseph Morris), we do not yet feel as an individual any inclination to accept the foregoing theory of re-incarnation as a way out of the environments of mystery surrounding the priesthood.

We should not now notice this theory, but that a continuation of the subject is promised at some future day; and we desire these ideas to be answered when that is done.

The Olive Branch, for November 15th, contains the following reason for the present discontinuance of that paper:

THE LAST PAPER.—After having made several calls for financial aid without receiving any response from the brethren and friends, we are compelled by force of circumstances, occasioned by limited means, to discontinue the Olive Branch for the present. But it will be commenced again as soon as circumstances become more favorable, and the brethren manifest their willingness to uphold it. We were desirous to continue the paper, knowing that the principles that it would advocate from time to time were heaven born; but realizing the truth of the saying, that "Men prefer a prosperous error to an afflicted truth," we are willing to patiently await a deliverance. As there appears to be only a few who are sufficiently interested to donate toward the support of the paper, we have concluded to let the Morrisite brethren rest until we can preach to them. They seem to be sleeping; but we hope that before long they will be awakened by a genuine spiritual revival. We have on hand back numbers of the paper which we will send to any one upon receipt of their address.

We think that the brethren of the Morrisite faith will do well to accept that part of the revelation No. 64, which states that the Reorganization has been blessed of the Lord in that he has given his spirit to them "to prepare them for the work which I have called them to do. * * * They are in my hands, and I will turn them hither and thither as it seemeth me good." If this is true, and those who believe the revelation will not deny it; it strikes us that the "wisdom" which God has given the Reorganization, ought to prevail with these scattered and peeled people, whom the Olive Branch is trying to rouse into revival, and cause them to come into that work, that they may become partakers of the promise: "I have given them wisdom, and love for each other, and I will take good care of them." They can do this and wait in such care the turning of the Josephites thitherward as seemeth good of the Lord.

Q.—Does the "Elder" referred to in D. & C. sec. 17, par. 10, seventh line, mean the Presiding Elder, or does it refer to any Elder that may be present?

A.—The elder in charge of the branch, where there is an organization; and to any elder where the assembly is composed of members of the church, but where there is no branch, or district organization.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith wrote from Windsor, California, December 10th:

"Since I wrote from Spruce Grove, or Lower Lake, I have held several meetings in Healdsburg; but with poor success. The people there are very much prejudiced against Mormonism, as our faith is called everywhere, and would not come and hear."

He was to speak three times at Windsor the week of the 10th, and at Santa Rosa on Sunday, the 14th.

LEAVES OF MEMORY.

No. 9, Hazel St., PITTSBURG, Pa.,
December 8th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—I may not say as said our Poet of the long ago, "Little Herald go and tell them," for you have grown out of your boyhood's dress, and as one who helped you assume your manhood's garb, I must not forget that I address now the sterner friend, nor carelessly arouse the ire of the foeman more than worthy of my steel. Your experience will justify your patience, however, and I anticipate your need of it, for it is so long a time since I ventured to address you that deficiency in method and inefficiency in skill, may make the poverty of my theme the more distinct. In your youthful days I was wont to mark and point the order of your going; but hands more skillful since have guided, and brains more weighty directed you. I grew fearful of their power, and wilted beneath their intense heat; but the invitation of your chief has fallen like dew upon the faded grass, and under its reviving power, I seek your friendship and in the spirit and presence of unforgotten vows recall the memory and the loves of "auld lang syne."

You heralded last Spring my appointment from conference. Pursuant thereto I left my Nebraska home, whirled down the valley of Russell's "mighty Missouri which runs toward the sea," in one of the chariots preceded by the flaming torch of second Nahum's thought, intensified by Mica's reflecting brilliancy, and arrived in the future city of promise. My rushlight scarcely distinguishable amid the trinity of Apostolic brightness, which, with your chief as central radiant, made a quarternary guard of Zion's interests more formidable against our common foe than were ever quarternion of Jewish soldiers against Rome's proud Caesar. Joseph, Alexander, Wm. H., and T. W., independent in their natures as the name of the city where we met, were there; we were all there, with "Saints upon the promised land," to testify our dependence on the source of every good, give praise to Him and congratulations to each other and to the faithful of Independence that, after these many years of toil and wanderings amid hope in promise, a "House of the Lord," a house to the Lord had been reared in honor of his name.

As it had fallen to my lot in Plano, the first head-quarters of the Reorganized Church, to dedicate the house of the Lord, so here was the honor accorded me also, your beloved chief and ours preaching the dedicatory sermon. It was an effort without effort, art without art, to all outward seeming; but the Spirit of the Lord was there. Of that house, humble though it be, it may be said "Joy and gladness shall be found therein."

Brethren Pitt and Barbee are worthy of the Saints' best thanks for the laboring zeal with which they had wrought effectively in choral music, thanks the organist and choir should rightly share. You have already been informed respecting the character and capacity of the house, friend Herald; I will not offend by repetition. No doubt desirous that I may not fail in reward through non-action, the powers that be appointed me to evening duty. I thought the choice unfortunate in presence of the higher powers and gifts, for though I felt and often feel that the higher qualities of a Christian Soldier are not mine in large degree, that of submission was not wanting. And there is comfort in the thought, to the speaker at least, especially if human nature be large in him, if the authority I submit to appoint me to service others present could render better, my labor is equalled by their loss.

There was comfort to me in the thought, friend Herald, that after years of absence from exclusively ministerial work, I could recommence that work in the spot God's finger had pointed out as the choice spot of the nobleman who yet shall occupy, as the spot whence

"Zion's towers soon shall rise,
Attract the gaze and wondering eyes
Of all who worship, gloriously."

Thence came I on the Master's errand. Shall I be accounted worthy to return and occupy when he comes? is a question the degree of sovereign grace to me and righteous submission from me can alone determine. I hope one day to see you there, and hear your clarion tones vibrating thence as Herald of the king, "Israel is free;" while from lowly vale and craggy peak shall be heard, responsive to your voice, the voice of thousands bidding each glad son and daughter of the city of our God, "Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion; for great is the Holy One in the midst of thee."

While traversing with the four named, and through the courtesy of brother Stephen Maloney, our chaperone, the "regions round about," and on learning then the value of the land lying westward of the Temple Lot, and afterwards from my brother-in-law, in Kansas City, one of the buyers of the immense stock firm there, I almost despaired of a home in Zion. For instance, the value of a one thousand acre farm between Kansas City and Independence, a farm largely uncultivated, was held to be such, that the said firm offered seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars for it, but were denied purchase unless they would pay one million dollars. I was forcibly reminded of the word of the Lord to the martyred prophet, given July, 1831,—"And thus saith the Lord your God, if you will receive wisdom HERE IS WISDOM. Behold the place which is now called Independence, is the center place, and the spot for the temple is lying westward upon a lot which is not far from the courthouse; wherefore it is wisdom that the land should be purchased by the saints; and ALSO EVERY TRACT LYING WESTWARD, even unto the line running directly between Jew (Lamanite) and Gentile. And also every tract bordering by the prairies, inasmuch as my disciples are enabled to buy lands. Behold this is wisdom."

"The wisdom of God is greater than the cunning of men." Had faith ruled, and obedience marked God's people, who will add up the present value of the lands that could have been bought there, and for the purchase of which there was then money in the hands of "the disciples."

A disciple is a scholar. We have been slow to learn, though our Father has been apt to teach. When I hear doubts expressed now where we have a right to look for examples of faith, and yet know that in some sort these have faith, I am led to pray and do pray the prayer of the doubting believer of the sacrificial age, "Lord, we believe; help thou our unbelief." Lest I weary you, dear Herald, good by, and return you my parting salutation. God bless you on your way.

MARK H. FORSCUTT.

AKRON, IOWA,

December 6th, 1884.

Dear Saints and Herald Readers:—After enjoying the kindly associations of Saints, and those among whom my whole life has been spent at the Re-union, I returned home to enjoy a day or two of change of employment, by arranging home affairs, as far as circumstances would admit, for the mission to which I had been assigned; but then I left with a sad heart, feeling that my time in missionary work must soon close, for awhile, unless providentially ministered unto. But, praise God, I felt that all would work together for my good if faithful; but I cried in my soul, "O God, when will Zion be redeemed, and when will the gospel witness be borne to all nations, with a depleted church treasury, and the laborers in Zion almost universally becoming embarrassed with seeking to provide for their families upon the expectation that the church would soon arise and redeem the obligations expected of her in sending out her ministry?"

On Wednesday, October 29th, I came to River Sioux, at which place, and at Little Sioux, I continued preaching with the exception of the following Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at which time the election prevented, until the 17th of November, during which time I baptized one person and blessed one babe.

On the 17th, I came to Sergeant's Bluff, stopping with Bro. L. N. Streeter, who still trusts in God's promises.

On the 18th, I came to Sioux City, where I was successful in finding some scattered Saints, who are trying to get the gospel before their neighbors. I remained there till the 27th, delivering eight discourses; but did not feel flattered that many hundreds will be gathered into the family of God soon, but I most assuredly felt that some would soon obey the Savior's voice.

On the 27th, I came to Akron, Plymouth county, where Sr. Christy has been, and still is pleading with the people to hear the servants of God, of whom Bro. Derry, Lambert, Longbottom and others had been there before me; all of whom were spoken of in kindness. Still I remain to plead with and for them; and feel that the pleading will not be altogether in vain. The prospect for some to be added to the church in the near future, at this place, is good.

I expect ere this is read to be on my way homeward, to extricate myself from indebtedness; but hope soon to be at liberty to fulfill the Master's call, and pray that such circumstances will not occur again to prevent a life work in the ministry.

Considering the present condition of the church and surrounding barriers to prevent the advance of truth, I am satisfied that no work but God's could make the progress that is now being made.

Ever praying for Zion's welfare, I remain your brother and friend,

J. FRANK MINTUN.

VINCENNES, IOWA,

Bro. Joseph:—I have been reading the Braden and Kelley Debate and am much pleased with the exemplary course of Bro. Kelley in the discussion. He has brought forth much evidence that is plain and to the point in support of the divine origin of the Book of Mormon, while the negative is lacking in many of these qualifications; and I will say without fear or favor, whoever reads Clark Braden's speeches in that discussion hoping to be edified, will be badly disappointed; that is if truth and consistency are a jewel. I find them nothing but a heterogeneous mixture of scriptural citations badly construed; with slang, slander and personal abuse, incompatible with truth, only to be reiterated over and over. Such could only come from a corrupt heart, void of the pure love of God. Well might the apostle say ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth. Here let me predict that unborn thousands will reverence the name of Joseph the Seer, when his enemies have passed into oblivion's shade, and their names had in remembrance no more, and the world never the wiser or better for them.

Yours for the truth,

J. MATTHEWS.

PLEASANTON, IOWA,

December 8th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph:—I have too much faith in the works of God to believe that he is going to do only a part of his work in the last days. We have it laid down that this is the last time he is to prune his vineyard; and before the commencement of that pruning, he (God) would bring forth a choice Seer, as the Book of Mormon declares. That through that servant God would bring forth a certain work; and that he was to do only the one work which the Lord would command him to do, and that work was to bring his people to salvation. We understand that the work alluded to is the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon, the setting forth of the fulness of the quorums of priesthoods, and the correction of the Scriptures; and in fact, setting the kingdom of God to rolling in full power, that the pruning of the vineyard might be done in accordance with the pattern laid down in the law; for we read in Isaiah 8: 2, that the law shall go forth out of Zion, and the word of God from Jerusalem. We take it for granted, that this law spoken of is contained in the Book of Covenants. What did the angel say to Z. H. Gurley, Sen., R. Newkirk and others, when God saw a determination in their hearts to turn and rely on the three standard books, and take the Holy Spirit for their guide. The angel, speaking to them in regard to the Salt Lake faction says: "They seek to build up their own kingdom to suit their own purposes; but I countenance it not, saith God. I have given my law, I shrink not from my word. My law is given in the Book of Covenants; but they have degraded my law."

Here we have proof from the angel, that the Book of Covenants contains God's law. Does it look reasonable that part of that book contains God's law, and part of it not? I do not believe that God works in part. His work is a fulness, not a part. If it is true that part is from God and part from the deceiver, it certainly would not be a work to bring God's people to salvation. We have from God's own mouth a law by which to test all contrivances, that by their fruits we may know them

A. J. HINKLE.

CANYONVILLE, OREGON,

December 3d, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Some time ago I noticed an article in the Herald from Bro. Stebbins about the Indians, and the mode of civilizing them. While I agree with him on the subject, on my way out here from Iowa, I had the privilege of seeing the Indians in their native place. While looking at them in their present downtrodden and ignorant condition, I could not help but pray the Lord to hasten the day when he would gather together the remnants of Israel. At present they are surely far from being a white and delightful people. I passed through the Flathead agency, referred to by Bro. Stebbins. True they had farms, but those farms, compared with the farms of the paleface, remind me of the comparison between Tom Thumb and Captain Bates. They were harvesting at the time. I felt like taking off my coat, and showing them how. But let the good work go on. Small farms are an improvement on none at all. Slow and awkward work is an improvement on killing game for a living, and making pack-horses of their wives to carry it in. Let education equip them for the warfare of life, and in the due time of the Lord he will restore them to their former glory. Should there be any Latter Day Saint who has an over-supply of prayers on hand, without an object to pray for, he might try praying for the Indians awhile.

The name of Mormon is known here (except by a few) only as connected with polygamy, and its kindred crimes. When will the gospel be preached to all the world. The harvest is indeed great.

I have come here to stay, if I continue to be suited. The climate is very warm compared with Iowa. What level land there is is good, but most of it is set on edge, with heavy timber on both sides. Should any one wish information about this part of Oregon, I will gladly tell what I know. Will the president of the district that includes south-western Oregon please send me his address. My future address will be Gravel Ford, Coos county, Oregon.

In gospel bonds,

K. H. HANSEN.

RIDGETOWN, Canada,

December 4th, 1884.

Bro. Joseph and Readers of the Herald:—I do not see how some get along without the Herald, as there are so many good pieces in it. But I see some do not like to hear the tithing bell wrung in their ears; and yet there is not one of us as saints but feels sorry that the church is so reproached for that Salt Lake dirt, which is often thrown in our faces, and more especially of those who have to travel and preach the word. I know here in Canada, as a rule, when we mention the word Mormon, they turn up their noses as if they smelt something; so Brigham Young and his followers, together with madam rumor, have so filled people's ears with trash that it is hard to get a hearing. So we want a kind of pocket sorrow, which is, to put our hands down deep in our pockets, and give that which will put laborers into the field, who with the help of the Master, will sweep off the chaff that is trying to cover up the wheat.

I have some "Voices of Warning" which I try to get the people here to read. Some say they are good books, others say they are not fit to read, and others are afraid to read them. No doubt any person who wishes to make lies their refuge, the books would not help any.

Brethren, this latter-day cause is a glorious work, I feel thankful that my eyes were ever opened to it. As a rule modern Christianity stands on her own chip-pile and crows, but dares not come out and face the music, and act like a gentleman, or a child of the Master whose mouth is not full of dirt and filth which Mr. so and so chooses to make up. Men should speak of a man by their own knowledge, fearing the great judgment of God; as I often tell people here, if they had a speck of charity in them, they and their ministers would come with love and gentleness, and reason with us out of the Scriptures; but no they would rather use the tongue of the slanderer, and abuse us. People should read the epistle of Jude, and learn a lesson from the angel talking to even the devil himself, over the body of Moses.

The band of Saints planted here are doing very well. Some are trying to become the salt of the earth, and some have yet to try, as it seems hard for Saints to come clear out from Babylon, but will still keep slipping out of the golden cup. Tobacco is a cradle which the devil takes to rock people off to sleep in, for look at how they will puff and chew with so much fleshly comfort while the honest in heart are perishing for the want of the bread of life. Five cents a week is $2.60 a year; that looks like it would buy the Herald, which is like a light-house on the shore, showing us how to steer clear of the shoals.

Ever remaining a defender of this great latter-day cause, JAMES H. TYRRELL.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,

December 9th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—That staunch gospel-standard-bearer, James Caffall, left us yesterday. He was here for three days, and spoke four times, and let me whisper so that all may hear, he dealt sin and doubt, both in and out of the church, some sledge-hammer blows. The cause is languishing for the want of laborers, and it appears that some of the laborers have left their work and gone fishing. Notwithstanding the gospel is without money and without price, there is a necessity that those left upon the care of the church should be provided for. However, I wish it understood that it is not financial want alone, that has caused me to leave the field for a little season. The dark cloud of hard times is not only seen and felt in the east, but likewise here in the west. By those who have ample means of knowing, it is estimated that $2,000,000 will not indemnify the farmers of Nebraska, for the hogs that have died during the past two months, and now the cattle are dying by the hundreds in the western part of the state. While the stock is thus dying, corn has fallen in price so that in some places it has been sold as low as six cents per bushel. Surely the "signs of the times" bespeak the end draweth nigh, and blessed be those who have oil in their lamps, the lamps trimmed and burning, but woe to those who are in debt, or sin hath a mortgage upon. One thing seems to favor the poor here; up to this time we have had an open, pleasant fall and winter; no ice in the river or streams, and the roads are dry and dusty. May the wind be tempered to the shorn lambs, is my humble prayer.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

DENVER, Colorado,

December 4th, 1884.

Dear Herald:—Here in Denver we are still rejoicing in the work of the Lord. We have no preaching here excepting the Herald, Hope and Advocate. We are always glad when Saturday comes to get the Herald. My daughter and self have just been to Independence on a visit. It seemed good for me to be in company with the Saints again. We enjoyed ourselves while there. We visited the Temple Lot, and I can not describe my feelings as I stood by and viewed that sacred spot, all covered with beautiful clover. It brought to my mind many scenes of the past, when our blessed brother, the prophet, was martyred for the gospel's sake. Many trials and tribulations we have gone through since that day, still the Lord has brought us straight through. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may ever live faithful to the end.

I remain your sister and well wisher in gospel bonds,
ELLEN PLATT.

Summary of News.

GENERAL NEWS.

Dec. 12.—Cholera still lingers in Paris. Twenty-one deaths occurred last week from the disease in the eastern part of the city.

Wholesale massacres of Christians are reported from Macedonia.

Gen. Milot further telegraphs from Madagascar that the 6th inst., after a march of fifteen hours, he captured the second fort south of Fort Vohemar. He captured five guns from the Hovas, 200 of whom were slain. The French loss was four wounded.

A dispatch from Hong Kong to the Times says: "Affairs at Kelung and in Tonquin remain in statu quo. Gen. de l'Isle threatens to resign the command in Tonquin unless he be reinforced." Each mail steamer brings more Germans for the Chinese military and naval service. One hundred and twenty-six Germans have already entered the Chinese service.

Eminent jurists are preparing a long paper on the third part of the programme of the Congo conference, defining the rules that shall govern European annexation of Africa.

A dispatch from Shanghai says a native paper announces that the Ministers of foreign powers at Peking have notified Tsung li Yamen of their intention to meet the 22d inst., to discuss the Franco-Chinese question with a view to arranging an acceptable basis for mediation.

Count Tolstis, Russian Minister of the Interior, has ordered the expulsion of all Jews residing in Odessa, Kieff, and other large cities with foreign passports, unless they also possess special Government permits of residence. Jewish firms doing business in these cities are dismayed at the order, and many will probably be obliged to go into liquidation. The Colored People's World's Exposition will open in Chicago the first Monday in September, 1885, and continue sixty days, and all persons of whatever nationality are cordially invited to participate with them in making the exposition a success. The Mackay-Bennett Commercial Cable Company received its first cablegram at its New York office from Waltham, Ireland. The new cable will not be open for business for some days.

Warren Price was hanged at Wrightsville, Ga., for killing his son-in-law, R. F. Perry. George Cook met a similar fate at Laramie City, Wyo., for the murder of James Blunt, his brother-in-law.

The world has three great constitutional documents, the Declaration of Independence, the Declaration of Rights of 1688, and Magna Charta of King John. The original of the first named is preserved in the Independence-Hall in Philadelphia and is familiar to most Americans. The Bill or Declaration of Rights that followed the Revolution of 1688 is preserved in the Somerset House, London. It is written in a small, but plain hand, in English, and covers a parchment twelve inches wide and nearly thirty feet long. Such was the form in which in those days the records of the House of Lords were kept. The original of the great Magna Charta of King John has had a varied history, having been many times moved, and barely escaping destruction in the great fire of 1666. It is written on very heavy parchment, in size 30x42 inches, and surrounded by the seals of the eighteen Barons who forced the Plantagenet King to execute the document on the plains of Runnymede that June day 669 years ago. The text is in old Latin, the exact translation of which has given rise to a great deal of learned controversy. At the bottom right-hand corner is the signature of the King, in a bold hand, and through it runs a leather thong which sustains the seal—a black and white quartz rock the size of a walnut or thereabouts. The interesting old document is now preserved in one of the two mammoth safes in the British Museum, and is shown to visitors only upon an order from the Lord Chamberlain.

Dec. 15.—An attempt has been made to blow up the Thames Bridge in London, England, and no clue has yet been found to the perpetrators of the deed.

Nine bills were introduced in the House of Representatives yesterday to pay citizens of Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Georgia for supplies confiscated by the union troops during the War.

The Pope has created a sensation in clerical circles by writing a pontifical letter to Cardinal Parrochi strongly denouncing divorce as a flagrant violation of the sacraments of the church. The Holy Father makes a most vigorous appeal against the divorce bill now being discussed in the Italian Chambers.

The municipal authorities of Turin, Italy, refused to receive a deputation of unemployed workingmen. This exasperated the men and a riot ensued, during which the windows of the Mayor's apartments were smashed. Twenty-five arrests were made before the disorder was quelled.

A Hong Kong dispatch says: It is reported from Nagasaki, that the Koreans have rebelled, that the King fled to the hills, and his General was killed. The outbreak occurred during an entertainment by the King to the British Ministers and others. On a given signal the King's son and Ministers were massacred. The Queen has disappeared. A collision occurred between the Chinese troops and the Japanese. The King placed himself under the protection of the Japanese. The foreign residents of Corea are safe. The gunboat Espoir has arrived in the Scoull River. The motives of the rebellion are unknown.

A movement has been set on foot to organize popular mass-meetings in all parts of the United States, beginning in Chicago, with a view of suppressing Mormonism and the crimes of polygamy in Utah, Idaho, and Arizona. A committee consisting of the Revs. M. M. Parkhurst, W. T. Stowe, E. R. Davis, C. R. Bliss, W. P. Elsdon, D. H. McCooley of Chicago, and the Rev. R. G. McNiece of Salt Lake, representing all the leading denominations, met in the Young Men's Christian Association parlors and decided to hold the first "patriotic anti-Mormon mass-meeting" at Farwell Hall Tuesday evening, Dec. 23d.

The details of the treaty with Nicaragua show that the scheme of constructing the interoceanic canal through that territory is of more importance than has been heretofore supposed, and that important advantages will accrue to this country as compensation for the cost and trouble of building it. The treaty binds the United States to construct a canal with all possible dispatch after the plans already made by A. G. Menocal, Civil Engineer of the United States Navy, beginning at the port of San Juan de Nicaragua, better known as Greytown, intersecting the San Juan River above the Rio Colorado, thence running by the river to Lake Nicaragua, and across that lake to the mouth of the River del Medio, and thence to the Pacific Ocean at the port of Brito. It will be seen by this that a large part of the proposed route is already completed, as no work of any consequence will have to be done on the San Juan River, which is wide enough for the largest vessels to pass each other, with plenty of leeway left, and Lake Nicaragua is large and deep enough to make a harbor for the combined war fleets of the world. In consideration of this work the United States is granted not alone the right of way, but an additional strip of land three miles in width on each side of the proposed canal, or an area six miles wide through the very heart of Nicaragua. The ports and harbors of Greytown and Brito, at the termini, are also granted to the United States, and all the land conceded becomes a part of the National domain, Nicaragua reserving only a police surveillance to prevent smuggling, and preserve access for business connected with the canal. The United States is also conceded the right to protect the canal, and for this purpose can build forts or institute any other measures which may be necessary for the defense of the route.

A workingmen's meeting was held in Paris, France, at which many inflammatory speeches were made. At its close, the infuriated crowd rushed into the streets, armed with stones and sling shots. Several officials were knocked down and badly wounded, before quiet was restored by the timely arrival and vigorous charge of a troop of dragoons.

The cholera has cost a loss in the Italian revenues of $8,000,000 and in the Spanish revenues of $4,625,000. It is an expensive visitation.

According to recent estimates, the city of London contains more Jews than Jerusalem, more Irish than Dublin and more Roman Catholics than Rome.

A New York company have bought up all patents for electric motors and is preparing to operate the elevated railroads by electricity; and the Brooklyn Bridge railroad the same way. The gain will be in silence, cleanliness, and cheapness. The number of operatives will be less and expenses one half what they now are. Instantaneous communication over land and under sea will probably be succeeded by talking familiar speech into the ear of the most distant auditor. Tens of thousands of sewing machines are being run by this new power. It has been applied also to elevators, and is declared the very thing for bicycles.

Two towns in Switzerland are being connected by an electric railroad. The water power of Alpine streams to be used for generating the electricity.

Night is turned into day in all the great cities, so brilliant is the new light. Not only streets are illuminated but houses, steamers, cars and private coaches.

Electricity is a war force and must fire off torpedoes and guns. It rings alarm bells, cures diseases. Steam and gas are being supplanted. Even Salt Lake City has adopted the new light.

Dec. 16.—English Conservative journals denounce the Nicaraguan treaty as a flagrant act of contempt of international obligations. The Liberal organs treat the question gingerly.

Full confessions were made by some of the Anarchists on trial at Leipsic for the recent attempt upon Emperor William's life at Niederwald. The dynamite used was inclosed in a stone jar and glass bottle, furnished with percussion caps. A fuse was attached, and the engine was placed in a drain over which the Emperor was expected to pass. The man who was to fire the mine lost heart and failed to light it at the proper moment. The trial excites great interest. Two American nauralization papers were found upon Remsdorf, which evidently emanated from the New York Central Committee, who have remitted 100 marks to assist in the defense of the prisoners. The court and prison are strongly guarded. The Judges have received letters threatening them with violence.

It is reported that the Mahdi has written Osman Digma appealing for reinforcements, and that Osman replied it was impossible to comply, as he himself expects an attack. The Nile expedition has gone into encampment at Korti, where cattle and provisions are plentiful. A dispatch from Korti says a messenger who left Khartoum eleven days ago reports Gen Gordon well, and that the General had recently severely defeated the rebels, killing a large number of them, and blowing up the forts at Omderman.

A dispatch from Admiral Courbet dated Kelung, Saturday, Dec. 18 says: "We dislodged the Chinese from the works they had thrown up menacing our positions. Two hundred Chinese were killed or wounded." A dispatch from Hong Kong to the Times says: "Admiral Courbet, the French commander at Kelung, still detains the lighthouse tender Fei-Hoo, which was captured some weeks ago. This action renders the maintenance of four lights impossible and of eleven improbable." The Chinese cruisers, which have been preparing to put to sea for some days, sail to-day. The Hovas News Agency publishes a letter from a private soldier stating that Gen. Negrier, in defeating 10,000 Chinese regulars, handed over 200 prisoners to the best French riflemen for targets in ball-practice, and that all of them were killed. The newspapers demand a prompt and categorical denial of the statement.

The Railroad Commissioners of Iowa have been at last aroused to action concerning the oppression of the farmers by the railroads whose exorbitant charges for freight transportation are causing such widespread distress, and are moving toward an investigation of the abuse.

A large quantity of dynamite and giant powder has been found at Victoria, B. C., secreted behind a pile of freight on the wharf of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

The World's Fair at New Orleans was opened by telegraph from the Executive Mansion at Washington. President Arthur started the great machinery of the exhibition by an electric spark, and his address of congratulation was sent over the wires to the Crescent City. In New Orleans the Exposition Commissioners, home and foreign delegations, and notable visitors were escorted with military honors to the boat which conveyed them to the grounds. Secretary Seller and Postmaster-General Hatton represented the President's Cabinet. Gov. Hamilton opened the Illinois State exhibit, which is large and well arranged.

Small-pox is raging at Trieste, Austria. There are twenty-four cases daily, many fatal. The shools have been turned into hospitals.

Dec. 7.—The Liberal party in Belgium has practically fallen to pieces. The dissensions in the party proved somewhat serious last June, when M. Frere-Orban, the Liberal who was then at the head of the Cabinet, had to consent to an extension of the suffrage in order to get the budget passed. This concession resulted in the overwhelming defeat of the Liberals at the polls, the election of a Catholic majority to the Chamber of Representatives, and the installation of a Catholic Cabinet.

The discovery of cracks in the lower portion of one of the piers of London bridge has revived the excitement about last Saturday's explosion, and has caused some uneasiness among the thousands of people who daily cross the bridge. The cracks are small and superficial. There is nothing to show that the structure has been at all weakened by the explosion, but an examination of the foundations is to be made by divers tomorrow to reassure the public.

The trial of the Garman Anarchists for attempting to kill the Emperor and others at Niederwald was resumed to-day. Kuechler testified that Reinsdorf said the Emperor should be spared: that any accident to the Crown Prince Frederick William would have the desired effect. Rupsch denied this testimony. He declared that Reinsdorf's object was to kill the Emperor as well as the others. Rheinbach and Sochngen pleaded not guilty to the charges against them. Sochngen swore that Rupsch stated that something might happen at Niederwald. The Anarchist Rupsch adds to his testimony the following: "Ruechler wished me to place dynamite under the Emperor's tent, but I refused to do so because it would be dangerous. Throughout the whole affair I intended to throw the dynamite into the river Rhine." Kuechler declared he joined Reinsdorf in order to discover his intentions and frustrate the attempt on the life of the Emperor.

FINANCIAL AND CROP REPORTS.

H. J. Goodwin, a New York dealer in woolens has made an assignment. The liabilities are about $300,000, with $100,000 preferences. John C. Fares, a hatter at Evansville, Ind., has failed, with liabilities estimated at $40,000.

A deficit is shown by the Prussian budget of 22,000,000 marks.

Clearing-house receipts at the principal cities of the United States last week show a decrease as compared with the corresponding week of last year of $253,243,886. The decrease in New York is 26.9 per cent. In Chicago the decrease is 9.1.

Herewith is presented an annual estimate of the cotton crop of the United States: North Carolina 5,688,000; South Carolina 5,885,000; Georgia 5,706,000; Alabama 5,810,000; Mississippi 5,604,000; Louisiana 5,655,000; Texas 5,722,000; Arkansas 5,693,000; average, 5,732,000. Galveston 5,825,000; New Orleans 5,774,000; Mobile 5,942,000; Savannah 5,931,000; Charleston 5,842,000; Wilmington 5,787,000; Norfolk 5,943,000; Baltimore 5,825,000; average, 5,830,000. Memphis 5,747,000; Charlotte 5,917,000; Montgomery 6,086,000; St. Louis 5,843,000; Cincinnati 6,015,000; Shreveport 5,819,000; Atlanta 5,703,000; Houston 5,831,000; Vicksburg 5,724,000; average 5,863,000. According to the above showing it would appear that in round numbers all that can reasonably be expected from the last growth is 5,800,000 bales, and that amount is a close estimate for the cotton crop of 1884-'85. The crop last year was 5,714,000 bales.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the grain trade the last week, says: Continued rains favor autumn-sown crops, especially wheat. The stoppage of thrashing and the effect of the damp atmosphere on corn in transit largely reduced the output, but the mildness of the weather renders trade slow and dragging, the tendency being against sellers. Sales of English wheat last week were 61,240 quarters at 30s 10d, against 70,130 quarters at 39s 5d during the corresponding period last year. Foreign trade is depressed by the weather. Two cargoes arrived off-coast. Five cargoes sold, two remained, and ten are due. Flour is depressed by the recent large arrivals. Maize is scarce and firm. Barley is quiet. Oats are dull. Beans and peas are unchanged.

After a survey of the situation in Pittsburg and along the lines of the Pennsylvania Road, the Secretary of the American Iron & Steel Works says that notwithstanding the great depression in trade there is a notable absence of the hopeless feeling which prevailed after the panic of 1873.

The steamship Carranza, from Rotterdam for Lisbon, foundered off the Isle of Wight. Eleven persons were drowned.

There was an explosion in a colliery at Anuna, Steyrdorf, Austria, caused by the ignition of coal-dust. The fire in the mine is still burning. Distressing accounts continue to arrive of the colliery explosion at Anuna. Miners from other collieries, wishing to attempt a rescue, were forcibly prevented by their wives and children, while relatives of the victims of the burning mine were kneeling and imploring rescuers to descend. The Staatsbahn Company will provide pensions for the families of the victims, as it has a relief fund of 2,000,000 florins. The cause of the explosion is believed to have been the use of the ordinary lamps by the miners.

THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST; FIGURATIVE AND LITERAL.

WHILE investigating the great work of Christ, and becoming convinced that it was the grandest accomplishment this earth has ever known, we undertake by erecting a figurative building, founded on true facts as they exist, to exhibit the harmony and perfection to be found in all that he did, believing that the figurative is a representation of the literal church, as God intended that it should be built.

That it was to be a stone building, is proven by Peter's words to the church: "Ye also as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house."—1 Peter 2:5. And to prove that the church is the house, Paul speaks of "Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end."—Heb. 3:6. That is, if we remain firm until the end, we are Christ's house. Paul claimed to be a builder for God, laboring to build up the church; and he said unto them, "Ye are God's building."—1 Cor. 3:9. And he adds, "Ye are the temple of God."—Ibid., verse 16. A temple is "an edifice erected in honor of some deity, or for his worship. * * * The edifice erected at Jerusalem for the worship of Jehovah. * * * A church."—Webster. Here we see both the figurative and literal applying in the same way—the church. And Paul speaking still further says of Christ, that it is he, "In whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord. In whom ye also are builded together."—Eph. 2:21-22. Thus we see that the name church, applied to this figurative building, as well as to the body of worshipers, and was complete in all its parts, as we will attempt to show.

THE BED-ROCK.

The solid, firm substance, on which the church was to be built, was revelation from God, as Jesus himself declared. Having asked his apostles who men said that he was, they told him that some said he was John the Baptist, or Elias, or Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He then asked them who they said that he was. "And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it [the knowledge of his being the Son of God] unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16:15-18.

Upon this rock—revelation, the means by which Peter obtained the knowledge of Jesus being the Christ, the church was to be built. We know there is nothing firmer than a rock; and there is no safer support (rock) than revelation. That this is what Christ meant, is clearly proven from the scriptures. God always called his servants by revelation, in all ages of the world; and by revelation made his will known unto them, when about to do a work among the children of men.

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—Amos 3:7.

To reveal himself and his intentions unto those who were to do his work, was always God's first step. Therefore it was the first thing he would do before building his church; and that was what he did in the days of our Savior. He revealed his secret unto John the Baptist. John 1:33, 34. He was constantly giving revelations unto Jesus. He revealed unto Peter that Jesus was His Son; and Jesus says, "upon this rock [revelation] I will build my church." Upon revelation God's work always began, upon it his work always must stand; and upon it the church must be built. So necessary was it that all should be built upon revelation, that Paul, who received the gospel by it, (Gal. 1:12), and in the same manner was called to preach, (Acts 9:15) says: "No man taketh this honor [to officiate in the things of God, or to become a builder of the church] unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron."—Heb. 5:4.

Aaron was called by direct revelation from heaven. God spoke unto Moses, whom He had chosen to be a Prophet, telling him to take his brother Aaron, "And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people."—Ex. 4:16. Thus we see that unless we build upon the rock, our efforts are vain, and that God always calls those who are to build, and he calls them by revelation, and upon that his work must be established.

THE FOUNDATION.

Paul in addressing the Saints at Ephesus says:

"Ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the Saints, and the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets."—Eph. 2:19-20.

We are here told that the Ephesian Saints were in full unison with the church, and were built upon the same foundation that "the apostles and prophets" were built upon, which was the "sure foundation" upon which the church must stand. What was the foundation? Paul says to the Corinthian Saints, "Ye are God's building. According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise master-builder, I have laid the foundation [for you Corinthians], and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."—1 Cor. 3:9-11. Jesus Christ is the foundation, and there is none other, neither can there be any other laid.

But Christ could not be the entire foundation, for he was only one stone! Then what composed the rest of the foundation? Paul answers:

"The principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God. Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of the resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment."—Heb. 6:1-2.

Thus we see that Jesus Christ, and the doctrine which he taught, composed the foundation of the church, and "other foundation can no man lay." Paul warns every man to "take heed how he buildeth thereupon." They must build after God's pattern—not according to their own ideas. Jesus Christ and his doctrines must be the foundation. If any build differently, they become transgressors. John says:

"Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds."—2 John 9:11.

Paul adds:

"Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1:8-9.

Thus we see that all must build upon the foundation which God has laid.

THE CORNER STONE.

If Jesus Christ was only one stone of the foundation, what part does he occupy? We are told that the Saints at Ephesus were "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." Eph. 2:20. Then he is the most important part, that in which all our hopes center—the corner stone! He was chosen, tried and found worthy of being that stone, as God himself declared. "Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation." Isaiah 28:16. What is a corner stone? "The stone which lies at the corner of two walls and unites them; the principal stone; especially, the stone which forms the corner of the foundation of an edifice; hence, that which is of great importance or indispensable."—Webster. That is the exact position which Christ holds to the church; he "lies at the corner of two walls, and unites them." After the Jews and Gentiles had stood for centuries as two separate walls of the human family, with no apparent sign of their ever becoming one, Christ came and united them, at the very point where they met—Religion—at the corner where their differences turned. Paul says Christ "hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain (of the two—Jews and Gentiles) one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby; and came and preached peace to you which were afar off, (Gentiles) and to them that were nigh (Jews.) For through him we both have access by one spirit unto the Father." Eph. 2: 14-18.

Thus we see that the corner stone—Christ—united the two walls.

Again, the most imposing feature connected with the erection of an important building, is the ceremony of laying the corner stone. It has been a custom for centuries, and when the event is to take place, thousands of people meet to witness it. It is made a season of feasting and rejoicing, demanding the attention of all. And thus it was with the corner stone of the church, Jesus Christ, the attention of the entire world was called thereto, and thousands were witnesses; and when they realized the importance of it, there were great rejoicing and thanksgiving.

We also find, that within the corner stone is placed records, manuscripts, coins, histories, etc.; so that in case the stone may be found in years to come, by other people, its contents may give a clue and history as to who were the builders of the edifice, what were their hopes, desires, etc. Even so with Christ; in him is placed all our hopes; and through him will all our desires and wishes be made known. Whoever finds him will learn the cause which prompted the actions of all who labor for him.

THE WALLS.

"The upright inclosing parts of a [the] building"—Webster. The four outer walls of the building were strong, firm and solid, and were composed of the four grades of humanity—the human family in their four different conditions. They were built upon the solid foundation. Paul states that, "by one spirit are we all baptized into one body [church], whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free." 1 Cor. 12: 13. These four, as divided by Paul, constitute the walls. They include the inhabitants of the earth from all classes, who are willing to be placed therein, through the ordinance provided—baptism.

That it really was intended the walls should be constructed of all mankind, and that they should be in four distinct divisions, and only be built into the walls through the gospel, is evident from John's declaration:

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth; and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue and people."—Rev. 14: 6.

THE ROOF,

Was the spirit of God, which rested upon and covered the building. It was the upper part, reaching toward heaven, protecting the church from the storms and violence which raged without. It was this spirit which shielded the members, when persecution fell upon the church. This roof held the weight of oppression from the members, that they should not be crushed, and as long as they remained under this covering they were safe. It protected them from the snares of the tempter, and enabled them to stand secure when their enemies hoped to see them fall. It warded off the arrows of malice which descended upon the church, and guarded all who sought its protection, from the fierce blasts which seemed to threaten them.

THE STEPS.

At the entrance of the church there were two steps, that were a part of, and continued out from, the foundation. None could enter but by them. They were FAITH and REPENTANCE. This great important first step was made known in the following:

"Without faith it is impossible to please Him; for he that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him."—Heb. 11: 6.

From this we see that it was impossible for any to enter the church, if the first step had not been placed there by our Heavenly Father; for all must take the first step, faith, or they cannot please Him; and if they do not please Him their efforts are vain. This faith is the full confidence and assurance that all must have in God and his promises. They must trust fully in Him, believing that He will reward them for all their efforts to find Him and do His will.

Now, "faith is the substance (assurance) of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb. 11: 1. Then all must get the assurance of things we hope for, and this assurance is the evidence which God gives to all who seek it; but none can obtain it, only by earnest prayer and study, and hearing the word of God. So all must diligently seek for this faith. We must have faith in the plan of salvation, which God framed for the saving of fallen man. All must believe in, and accept, the "terms of reconciliation," which he sent his Son Jesus Christ to offer unto them. They must believe that Jesus had authority from his Father to organize "the Kingdom of God," and preach the gospel—"the good news of the kingdom;" and provide the means whereby all could enter into it. That he was sent to this earth to teach how the church should be built, and to show how to enter it.

After having reached this first step, all could see the necessity of the second step, Repentance. They must repent of all their sins and evil deeds; feel sorry for their transgressions. They must "cease to do evil, and learn to do well." Cease sinning, and practice doing good. They must do all in their power to make full restitution for the wrongs they have done. If any one has injured his neighbor, he must make amends. He must regret having offended his fellowmen, and seek forgiveness for having transgressed God's laws.

THE DOOR

Was baptism, and through it every soul must enter. It is opened to all who knock, regardless of race or color; all who will, may enter; but they must go in by the door—baptism. Jesus says:

"He that entereth not by the door, * * * but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."—John 10: 1.

Is it not truly so? Who but a thief would wish to enter a house but by the door? And who would try to climb in any other way, but those who go to steal? Are we not suspicious of any we see trying to enter a house but by the door. An honest man will enter at the door, regardless of whose eyes are upon him. He would never wish to steal into the church in any other way.

There is no promise of salvation for any, only "he that believeth and is baptized." (Mark 16: 16). Jesus plainly stated to Nicodemus, that "Except a man be born of water [baptized] and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5). That all might enter the church clean and pure, the door, baptism, was "for the remission of sins." (Acts 2: 38). By it all become adopted sons and daughters of God, engrafted into the tame olive tree, naturalized citizens of the kingdom, united with the seed of Abraham; joint heirs with Christ, and members of his body, the church." Without baptism none of these desired objects can be accomplished. Then who dare say they can enter the church as well in any other way, as by the door. This door led into the vestibule, from which all must pass through another door—baptism of the Spirit—before they can enter the body of the church. "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he can not enter." This baptism of the Spirit was given through the laying on of the hands of the apostles and elders. (Acts 8: 17; 19: 6). It was the means by which all were confirmed members of the church, and through which God gave them the seal of their adoption—the gift of the Holy Ghost. It was these two doors John spoke of, "I indeed baptize you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost."—Mark 1: 8.

THE KEYS

Were the power and authority to open the doors of the church. This was given unto Peter by Christ. "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 16: 19). By this authority Peter opened the doors, first to the Jews on the day of Pentecost, promising unto all the gift of the Holy Ghost. (Acts 2: 38). By a portion of this authority, the first door—baptism, was then opened to the people of Samaria, by Philip, who preached to and baptized them. When he had done so, Peter and John went unto them, and opened the second door, Peter holding the keys thereof; thus conferring upon them the gift of the Holy Ghost, the baptism of the Spirit. (Acts 8: 14, 15). Peter also opened the doors by these keys to Cornelius and all the Gentiles. (Acts 10: 34). Thus we see that none could open the doors, only those who held the keys; and they were only given through revelation from God. (Heb. 5: 4). By the keys the doors are opened to all who are willing to pass through them.

THE VESTIBULE, or "ante-chamber next the entrance; an apartment before the chief apartment, and leading into it, in which persons wait for audience."—Webster. When a person had passed through the first door, and entered the vestibule, he was there instructed concerning the second door. He was there taught of the spiritual affairs of the church, confirmation, the Lord's supper, etc. All remained there until they had learned of those things, after which they could pass through the second door, into the body of the church, entitled to all the rights, privileges, gifts and blessings of the church. Hence we read:

"The duty of the members after they are received by baptism: The elders or priests are to have a sufficient time to expound all things concerning the Church of Christ to their understanding, previous to their partaking of the sacrament, and being confirmed by the laying on of hands of the elders; so that all things may be done in order. And the members shall manifest before the church, and also before the elders, by a godly walk and conversation, that they are worthy of it."—Doc. and Cov. 17: (2) 18.

Thus we see the work done in the vestibule, while the converts "wait for audience."

THE WINDOWS

Were the Christian graces that the church was to put on. Peter says to the church:

"Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful, in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall."—2 Peter 1: 6-10.

Through these graces they were to become fruitful, (plenteous, abundant), "in the knowledge of Jesus Christ." They were the only means through which any could grow in that knowledge. Through them all can receive the light and understanding that brings the desired knowledge. The more thoroughly they did "these things," the nearer they approached to perfection, and the more godlike they became. Thus we see, the light comes through them—the windows. And Again: Jesus said unto the church,

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5: 18.

They were to show the light they had received. So by taking upon themselves these graces, men might see their "good works," and know by their acts, that they were Saints indeed, and thus be led to glorify our Heavenly Father. Through these graces (windows) their light was to shine; and the light which is in the church can not shine so that it can be seen by those outside the church, unless it shines through the windows, the Christian graces.

THE PILLARS.

"The firm, upright, insulated supports for a superstructure."—Webster. There were twelve pillars in the church—the twelve apostles, three of which held the most important positions, near the door. Paul says: "James, Cephas, (Peter), and John, who seemed to be pillars * * * gave to me and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship." (Gal. 2: 9). These pillars were special supporters of the church. Each one stood by itself, having been placed in its position by special call from our Heavenly Father. Upon them all the weight of the inner part of the church rested, and all the other supports leaned upon, and were upheld by them. These twelve pillars (apostles) were the first officers Christ placed in the church. It was unto them that the commission was given to carry the gospel into all the world, unto every creature. Unto them the promise was made, "Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain they are retained." (John 20: 23). Upon them fell the care to watch over and uphold the church. They were to "ordain and set in order all the other officers of the church." (Doc. and Cov. 104: (3) 30). They were a traveling high council, and had the general supervision of the church everywhere.

THE ARCHES

Were the other officers, which "God hath set in the church." Prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers." (Eph. 4: 11). These were the united beams, which equally shared the burden, strain and weight of the inner part of the church, "supporting each other by their mutual pressure." Upon them the roof (the Spirit of God) more particularly rested; and they with the support they received from the pillars, (apostles) upon whom they leaned, held the roof, that it should remain upon them. Under these arches (officers) all who entered the church could feel secure, as they were firm and strong, staunch and true. There was no fear of their moving out of their place as long as the roof rested upon them. All could look up to them, and see how secure the church was made by their being there; and all should acknowledge the great wisdom of our Heavenly Father, in so placing them, that under them all could feel safe. That was God's intention, that the arches should be there for the protection of his church, and for the safety of his people. So long as they remained in the church, it could not fall. They, in turn, helped to hold the walls together, that they could not be moved from their place. By them the entire church was kept compact. Eph. 4: 11-16.

THE TIMBERS

Of the building, were the spiritual gifts—the signs that followed the believers. Although they were of the same material, still they differed much in appearance, and varied in size, and shape, according to the position they occupied. They were to be found in all parts of the building. They supported the floor, (the platform), upon which the saints walked. They were a part of the roof, that covered the church; also of the windows and doors; in fact, they extended all over the edifice, thoroughly binding all parts of the building, and strengthening it to such an extent, that it never could fall unless the timbers were first removed. As to their differing one from another, we read:

"There are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit; and there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord; and there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. * * * For to one is given by the spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same spirit; to another faith by the same spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another diverse kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues. But all these worketh that one and the selfsame spirit, dividing to every man severally as he (God) will."—1 Cor. 12: 4-11.

These gifts were given by our heavenly Father, to the members of the church, that they might be firmly bound together, into the "one body." God gave to every one such a gift as he saw was needed, greater or less as the circumstance or individual required. Thus we see the timbers, small or great according to the importance of this position. And as the timbers were dispersed all over the building, so the gifts extended all through the Church, "dividing to every man." They were as important to the church as any other part of the structure. Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, * * * and these signs shall follow them that believe. In my name shall they ["them that believe"] cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."—Mark 16: 16-18. Here we see more of the gifts mentioned, and the promise of our Savior that they should follow all that believe and obey the gospel—not all who profess religion, but "he that believeth and is baptized" into this particular church we are describing. These gifts (timbers) were for all who entered the church to rest upon, and enjoy the benefit of, that they might know they were in the church which God acknowledged as his.

The promise of our Savior was of a twofold nature. The first, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." We can not realize or verify in this life, we can only believe it through faith; hence the great necessity of the second promise, to prove that the first will be kept. That "these signs shall follow them that believe"—in that particular gospel,—can be proven by every individual who will honestly make the test. Then, when they prove the second promise true, and the signs (gifts) do follow them, they know that they will be saved, they know that their Redeemer lives; and that they are in the church of Jesus Christ. By these gifts they are bound together so firmly, that they can not be separated, even as the timbers strengthen and hold the building. That these gifts and signs did follow, is proven by the statement of Mark. "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."—Mark 16: 20.

The gospel was the cause, the gifts and signs were the effect. The same cause must produce the same effect now, that it did then. These signs shall follow them that believe," says Jesus. If they do not follow us it is because we do not believe; and it is high time that all begin to examine and see if they do believe, and are in the church of Jesus Christ; for if these timbers (gifts) are not to be seen, it is because we are not in the church. Hence not in a condition to be saved.

THE NAME.

While viewing this beautiful structure, with the eye of faith, we can see it arising before us in its grandeur, perfect in all its parts. Above the door we see the name, "as though it were written in letters of living light," "The Church of Jesus Christ." "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12. This was, and is, the name of the church we have been describing, which was erected over eighteen hundred years ago, by direct command of our heavenly Father, and re-built by his instructions, A. D., 1830, and incorporated February 5th, 1873.

It is the only church God claims, and the only one he approves of. Jesus Christ has so guarded his name, that none of the many churches that men have built, to suit their own ideas and notions, have been called by his name. Men have dedicated their churches to all the saints and martyrs; but they were so blinded that they have entirely overlooked the name of Jesus Christ. That holy name was to be given to none but his own church. Although many have attempted to rear churches to God, none have made an approach to building one like the Church of Jesus Christ. Our heavenly Father has not permitted them to do so, and the distinction is so great, that any who are honestly seeking can easily distinguish between them.

When we consider the great work the church must accomplish, and the importance of all being done according to the will of God, we marvel that any man should dare attempt to build a church of his own accord, to suit his own ideas. David plainly states that, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."—Psalms 127:1. This clearly shows that no man can do this work, unless God chooses and calls him to do it. And now that the church of Jesus Christ is upon the earth, it is worse than folly to attempt to build others.

In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, we now call upon all of every nation, and invite them to come and enter the church, and partake of the blessings to be found therein; for they are for all who are willing to receive them, and all who will come, may come.

May our Heavenly Father so direct the readers of this article, that they may see and understand the truth as it is, that they may be led to obey it, is the prayer of your humble servant,

GEO. S. LINCOLN.

If thou hast not mercy for others, yet be not cruel unto thyself. To ruminate upon evils, to make critical notes upon injuries, and to be acute in their apprehensions, is to add unto our own tortures, to feather the arrows of our enemies, to lash ourselves with the scorpions of our foes, and to resolve to sleep no more, for injuries long dreamt on take away all rest; and he sleeps but like Regulus, who busleth his head about them!

GLIMPSES OF ASTRONOMY.

BY F. R. TUBB.

THE SUN, as the most magnificent of the heavenly bodies visible to us, exerting, too, as it does, an almost unlimited influence over our planet, naturally is the first of those "wondrous spheres above" to claim our attention and to excite our admiration. Situated at a distance of 95,293,000 miles from the earth, so great is its power that it governs not only the diurnal and annual motions of this planet on which we stand, but of all the planets and comets of the solar system. We ascertain by computations in trigonometry, that the diameter of the sun's body can be no less than 852,584 miles; its circumference, therefore, slightly exceeds 2,557,752 miles. In order to convey to the Herald's readers some idea of the immensity of these dimensions, I need only add that the surface of this enormous globe exceeds that of the earth by 11,574 times, and the volume 1,245,130 times; so that it would require 1,245,130 bodies the size of our earth to make a globe equal to the sun. The sun is a sphere, and is surrounded by an extensive and rarified atmosphere, and is self-luminous, emitting light and heat which are transmitted certainly beyond the planet Neptune, the most distant of all the planets of the solar system, which is itself a distance of 2,700 millions of miles from the sun.

Of the sun's heat it has been calculated that only $\frac{1}{2,381,000,000}$ part reaches our earth; so that the total amount of it must be beyond all human calculation. Our annual share, according to Poulet, would be sufficient to melt a layer of ice all over the earth 114 feet in thickness. Another similar calculation determines the direct light of the sun to be equal to the light of 5,563 wax candles of the ordinary size, placed at a distance of one foot from the observer! The light of the moon being, in comparison, equal to that of one candle at a distance of twelve feet, it follows that the light of the sun is 801,072 times greater than that of the moon!

A very remarkable feature in connection with this vast luminary is the fact that spots, often of vast magnitude, are frequently observed on the sun's surface; some spots being distinctly visible even to the naked eye. A spot measured by the astronomer Pastorf, on May 24th, 1828, was found to have an area about four times the entire surface of the earth! In June, 1843, Schwabe observed one 2'-47", or 74,816 miles in diameter. It was seen for an entire week without the aid of a telescope.

On March 15th, 1858, the day of the celebrated eclipse, a spot having a breadth from west to east of 4'-00", or 107,520 miles, attracted considerable attention; On September 30th, in the same year, one having a breadth from west to east of 5'-21", or 143,808 miles was observed!

I may here take occasion to advert to a very remarkable phenomenon seen on September 1st, 1859, by two English observers whilst engaged in scrutinizing the sun. A very fine group of spots was visible at the time, and suddenly, at 11h 18m, two patches of intensely bright light were seen to break out in front of the spots. They at first thought it due to a fracture of the screen attached to the object glass of the telescope, but such was not the case. The patches of light were evidently connected with the sun itself; they remained visible for about five minutes, during which time they traversed a space of 33,700 miles. The brilliancy of the light was dazzling in the extreme, but the most remarkable circumstance was the fact that a marked disturbance took place in the magnetic instrument of the observatory simultaneously with the appearance in question, followed, in about sixteen hours, by a great magnetic storm on the earth. The sun, according to Nolff, undergoes a period of intense magnetic disturbance every eleven years; and a still greater disturbance every sixty-six years.

PLANETS.—Around the sun, as a center, certain bodies called planets (from the Greek planetes, a wanderer), revolve at greater or lesser distances. They are usually divided by astronomers into two groups, viz: first, the Inferior planets, and second, the Superior planets; the former are those which revolve in an orbit nearer to the sun than our earth, the latter (Superior) planets being those whose orbit extends farther from the sun than the orbit (or path) round which the earth travels. This is doubtless well known to your readers; but they may not hitherto have been informed as to the enormous size and distance of some, especially of the Superior planets; so, for their pleasure and instruction, we will take a look, in imagination, through Lord Ross' magnificent 40-foot telescope, that we may find a few wonderful facts to present to the Herald students concerning the size and distance of "vast, eternal worlds beyond."

The planets are opaque bodies, like the earth; and shine only by reflecting the light they receive from the sun. They revolve upon their axes in the same way as the earth. This we know by telescopic observation to be the case with many planets, and, by analogy, the rule may be extended to all. Hence they will have the alternation of day and night, like the inhabitants of the earth; but their days and nights are of different lengths to our own.

The Inferior planets are three, viz: Vulcan, Mercury and Venus; the Superior planets are, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune. There are two or three minor planets between Mars and Jupiter; but so small as to be wholly invisible to the naked eye, and only visible through a very powerful telescope. Two of them are designated by the names of Flora and Mnemogyne.

A very accurate idea of the immense size and extent of the vast solar system may be obtained from the following scheme: Choose a level field or common, at least two miles and a half long, and two miles and a half wide. On it place a globe two feet in diameter, about the centre of the common or field; this globe will proportionately represent the sun. Vulcan, the nearest planet to the sun, will then be represented by a small pin's head, at a distance of twenty-seven feet from the two-foot globe; Mercury by a mustard seed, at a distance of eighty-two feet from the ideal sun; Venus by a pea, at a distance of 142 feet; the earth also by a pea, at a distance of 215 feet; Mars will be represented by a small peppercorn, at a distance of 327 feet; the minor planets by grains of sand, at distances varying from 500 to 600 feet; a moderate-sized orange placed a one-fourth mile from the globe will represent Jupiter; a small orange two-fifths of a mile for Saturn; a full-sized cherry three-fourths of a mile distant for Uranus; and lastly, a plum a mile and a quarter off for Neptune, the most distant planet yet known in the solar system.

The interior, or Inferior, planets, with the exception of the earth, are not, as far as we know, attended by any satellites, or moons; while the exterior, or Superior, planets all have satellites. I can not but consider this as one of the many instances to be met with in the universe, of the beneficence of the Creator; that the satellites of the remote planets are designed to compensate for the small amount of light and heat those planets receive from the sun, owing to their great distance from that luminary. I take this, also, as one of the many proofs we have that the planets are inhabited by a race of beings to whom both light and heat are as necessary as they are to ourselves; if not, what object could be subserved by the great Architect in hanging out great burning lamps around planets in which there are no beings to whom the heat gives pleasure, or the light brings joy.

I will pass over the moon, as being too well known to your readers to need any further comment from me than to observe that the Prussian astronomers Beer and Madler, the selenographers to whom we owe most, have measured the height of 1095 lunar mountains, several of which exceed 20,000 feet in height. The Crater mountains are by far the most curious objects shown to us by the telescope; and several astronomers report a mountain in the moon named "Aristarchus, which had flying from its summit a bright streak of fiery cloud, as of a volcano in eruption; and in the words of that great astronomer, Sir J. Herschell, decisive marks of volcanic stratification, arising from successive deposits of ejected matter, and evident indications of lava current streaming outwards in all directions, may be clearly traced with powerful telescopes." In Lord Ross' magnificent reflector, the flat bottom of the crater of the mountain Albategnius is seen to be strewn with blocks, not visible in inferior telescopes, while the exterior ridge of another mountain (Aristyllus), is all hatched over with deep gullies, radiating from its centre.

Passing from the lunar orb, we rise to the contemplation of those wondrous planets known as the Superior ones, whose distance and magnitude must startle the most atheistic observer into a solemn and awe-inspired recognition of the astonishing power, and unparalleled wisdom of the Supreme Being; but your readers must not expect in this limited space, and from one so insufficient as myself, anything more than a mere outline of some of the vast wonders in those worlds beyond the sky.

In alluding to the immense distances of these bodies, I will just remark that, owing to the extreme eccentricity in the orbits of some of the planets, we find that they are at certain periods of their orbits (or courses round the sun) many millions of miles nearer to the sun than at other periods; but the average, or nearer, distances are as follows:

Jupiter.	{	475,693,000 miles from the sun.
	{	567,123,000 " " " earth.
Saturn.	{	872,134,000 " " " sun.
	{	963,564,000 " " " earth.
Uranus.	{	1,753,851,052 " " " sun.
	{	1,845,281,052 " " " earth.
Neptune	{	2,746,271,232 " " " sun.
	{	2,837,701,232 " " " earth.

Some idea of the immensity of these distances may be gathered from the fact that although Jupiter revolves at the high velocity of 467 miles per minute,* it takes 11 years, 7 months, 13 days, 5 hours and 13 minutes to revolve once through its immense orbit round the sun. Saturn takes 29 years, 5 months, 24 days, 7 hours and 19 minutes to perform the same task; his orbit being nearly twice the size of Jupiter's. Uranus takes 30,686.7 days to travel round the sun; that is, rather more than eighty-four of our years; although it moves at the enormous rate of two and a-half astronomical degrees in an hour! Neptune revolves round the sun in 60,126 days, or 164.6 years; i. e., 1164 years, 14 days, 17 hours and 21 minutes. When it is remembered that this planet travels at something like the rate of 643 miles per minute, your readers may entertain some feeble idea of the immensity of the heavenly circle traversed by this planet in going once round the sun. Indeed, the mind seems completely staggered in its attempt to grasp the immensity of the paths of the world in space.

I mentioned in a former part of my letter, that I would, before coming to a conclusion, say a few words upon that which is almost as wonderful as the immense distance of the heavenly globes, viz: the size of some of them. In order, first, to be able to appreciate fully that which I am about to write upon this point, I want your readers to bear in mind that the earth is 7,925 miles in diameter, and 24,869 miles in circumference. From this statement, as a basis, your readers will be the better able to appreciate the dimensions of those which follow; and that these dimensions may be the better fixed in the memory, and that the great contrast between the lesser and the greater of the celestial orbs may be seen to greater advantage, I have included, on the one hand, our moon, with the inferior planets; and the sun with the superior planets, on the other hand; having calculated and placed the whole in one concise and convenient table, as follows:

Names.	Diameter in miles.	Circumference in miles.	Square miles of surface.
The Moon..	2,160	6,480	14,657,402
Mercury...	2,962	8,886	27,562,595
Venus....	7,510	22,530	117,186,122
The Earth.	7,925	24,869	197,399,727
Mars.....	4,920	14,760	76,046,649
Jupiter....	88,390	265,170	24,544,610,170
Saturn....	71,904	215,712	16,242,621,723
Uranus....	33,024	99,072	3,426,173,230
Neptune...	36,620	109,860	4,212,951,456
The Sun,..	852,584	2,557,752	2,283,621,466,000

The reader will see what immense orbs the superior planets are, in comparison with the moon, the planet Mars, or even the earth. Thus, the immense bulk of the planet Jupiter would contain 62,769 moons of the size of ours, or 1,280 globes each the size of our earth, with the planet Venus added in; this immense orb (of Jupiter) being almost 1,281 times the size of the earth! Let us now suppose the whole of the inferior planets (including the earth and the moon) welded together in one huge mass. They would not equal the bulk of the planet Uranus by 18,356,359,000,000 cubical miles; while the planet Jupiter would contain this vast mass nearly twenty times over, in the cubical bulk of his vast circumference!

The contemplation of such immense orbs is surely sufficient to cause any thinking, not to say devout, mind to sink into insignificance under the meditation of such amazing power and wisdom as must reside in the arm and mind of the Great Supreme. Well might the prophet-psalmist of old exclaim in a burst of adoring wonder and reverence, "O, Jehovah! how manifold are Thy works; in wisdom hast Thou made them all."—Psalm civ: 24.

"When I consider the heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and stars which Thou has ordained, what is man that Thou art mindful of him? and the son of man that Thou visitest him?" Psalm vii: 4-5.

When we look up at those mighty, far distant orbs, shining solemnly and silently in the majesty of their glory, and worthy to be the abodes of angels and arch-angels, the most unbelieving and unthinking mind must be filled with wonder and veneration.

There is one great question which arises first of all in the mind,—a question which has agitated the minds of philanthropic astronomers in all ages, and will continue to agitate, more or less, all thinking men, till the knowledge of all mysteries from the foundation of the world shall be communicated unto the faithful in the great and grand hereafter, by Jehovah himself. The great question I allude to is this: "Are those grand and glorious planets, floating around us in the vast and unfathomable oceans of ether, inhabited or not? And if inhabited, are they the abodes of men, or of angels, or of some other form of intelligent beings known only to the mind of the great and infinite Creator of those orbs, and of our own smaller sphere, "and all that is therein?" That they have not been created solely to bestow nocturnal illumination upon our comparatively insignificant earth has been rendered tolerably certain by the wonderful researches of science, which show that while the light from some of the fixed stars takes hundreds of centuries to reach our orb, owing to their enormous distance, there are others whose light never reaches the earth at all! Had it, therefore, been the mind of the all-wise Eternal to hang the vast planets simply, as one poet sings, as "Lamps in the sky, to illumine our benighted globe," they would certainly have been placed, like the moon, at such nearer distances as would enable the earth to feel perceptibly the benefit of their illuminant effulgency. Such, therefore, not being the evident and primary object of their creation, I am compelled to leave my readers at the foot of a vast and lofty "Hill Difficulty," a high and snow-capped mountain of uncertainty and wild conjecture as to the primal object in the Great Eternal mind in the creation of those vast and wondrous planets, which we have thus feebly and imperfectly attempted to introduce to our readers.

Should it meet the approval of the numerous subscribers of the Herald, we propose to glance at those still more mysterious strangers among the heavenly bodies, in our next letter; by considering the form, structure and velocity of comets.

DIED.

COBB.—Near Lower Lake, California, November 10th, 1884, of injuries from accident, Bro. Wm. T. Cobb, son of Bro. John and Sr. Esther Cobb, aged 28 years, 5 months and 11 days.
