heart, and he judges us accordingly. Oh the silent sufferers! We see them on every hand; we feel their presence; we know they are "legion." My soul goes out to them this night, and my heart is lifted in earnest prayer for strength from on high, to enable them to keep their faces Zionward, and their feet within the "narrow way." It matters not, dear ones, if your tender hearts do smart beneath the sting of injustice. It matters not who it is that adds another load to your already overburdened shoulders. It matters not if every flower that shows its bright face along your path of life withers and fades in your grasp; tread on in tears and don't waver, nor fail to cling to the Hope of Eternal life, for God will adjust your wrongs, and will "wipe away all tears from" their eyes, "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain." It is when we find that we can not carry our happiness in our idols along with us and still stand approved before God, that we are called upon to choose between ourselves and him; and to-night I feel free to say that rather than to give up my "hope of eternal life" I would rather see all that I hold dear upon earth swept away; and I have always tried to live in that condition of life that I could feel, let "come weal or woe," that his will is better than mine, and he will order my life far better than I could had I the power so to do. Many times since I found the "better way" I have felt the weight of the rod, but I know I needed it and that it was for my good and without it I might be lost. I love the "gospel of Christ" because it teaches me to be patient under crosses, and towards those that are unkind to me. It teaches me to be just toward others as well as myself; and above all, it tells me to pray that the same mercy which I desire for myself may be given to all of God's children, wherever they be, and to lay no snares whereby some one may stumble and fall. I believe that we a great many times cause others to do things that are wrong, by our own actions; sometimes innocently and sometimes, I fear, otherwise. But I pray that we may all be kept from evil until that day dawns which shall gladden the waiting, watching heart, and will fill the whole earth with its glory. Then shall all the meek and humble toilers arise, free from their bondage, and can "lift their glad voices in triumph on high, for Jesus has risen and man shall not die." Then face your duties, dear sisters, with a firm determination to conquer, no matter whether life be long or short; for there remaineth a "rest" beyond, that will be gained only by children who are faithful through obedience and sacrifice.

Praying that I with you may be able to "perfect myself" in my own sphere, and gain my crown, I remain your sister in the gospel.

HATTIE WHITE.

Dear Sister Eleanor:—Yes; I agree with you. I used the term "to please the eye," as many other terms are used, in the sense that it is understood by people in general, instead of giving what is implied; just as one says "a certain man has to work hard from morning till night, to provide food for his family to eat," and yet it is not merely that his family may eat, but for the effect that eating produces, which is, to sustain life and health, and these bespeak the discharge of the duties of life. No, dear sister, I do not think that is all. It is simply a term by which a deeper meaning is conveyed; for in reality I do not know that the eye is sensible of being pleased at all, since it is but the "window of the soul." So it is the soul that is pleased; and being pleased is one species of happiness, this happiness is conveyed through the agency of the eye. But in the case of the blind lady, the "windows" being closed, her soul was lit up by "the candle of the Lord," and through that agency, together with the sweet scent of flowers, she was taught what beauty was. The rose speaks no words, but its sweet fragrance lends a calm and hallowed influence that I have no words to describe; I only know I feel happier, and a greater desire to please, while breathing in the fragrance of a rose upon my bosom; and I do not think I could feel very cross while it remained there; and although this happy influence is conveyed by, or through the sense of smell, it is not the organ of that sense which is pleased, but I.

SISTER EMMA.

SPICKARDSVILLE, Mo., March 3d.

Dear Sister Walker:—I ask an interest in the prayers of the sisters in my behalf. I am much afflicted and very nervous most of the time, also poor in this world's goods, and living away from any branch of our church, it is quite trying to me indeed. I have a husband and three little girls, but my husband takes but little interest in church matters.

Ever your sister in Christ,

ELLA VANDERPOOL.

Correspondence.

ANTWERP, Ohio, March 22d.

Editors Herald:—Since my connection with the latter day work I have tried to live worthy of the name I bear, although at times I have felt very unworthy of that name, and perhaps I have made some mistakes whereby I have been an offender. I hope to profit by the past and that needed grace and strength may be given that I may be enabled to resist evil and temptation and be worthy of the name of Saint and also magnify the office of priest. I was chosen to preside over the little band of Saints here who were organized into a branch by Bro. B. V. Springer the 22d of January last. The Saints here and many friends join in the sincere wish that Bro. Springer may be continued in this his present field of labor. He has been untiring in his labors here and has made many friends for the cause. He is a good and able defender of the latter day work. There are some here who are fully persuaded that the doctrine we represent is true, but they stay out simply on the plea of "What would folks say?" We are surrounded by religions of almost every name except Utah Mormons. A vast amount of prejudice exists in the minds of some against us because of the latter; but we hope the patient, faithful lives the Saints are trying to live will outlive and wear out such prejudice, and that the honest in heart may be gathered into the fold.

Bro. Springer left here the 17th of February, after spending a month with us, preaching nearly every night. He opened up some new points with good interest.

JOHN ERTER.

DETROIT, Minn., March 16th.

Brother Blair:—I arrived home yesterday after six weeks' labor in this district. I found your letter of February 8th. I know of none going from here to the General Conference, so can do nothing in the matter of the Mosher letter. If I had got it before I could have given it to Bro. Alexander, and I think he would have looked after it.

I have had some good meetings, especially at Friberg, where I baptized a daughter of Bro. Toplin. At Friberg is a family of Strangites; and while they admit Bro. Joseph's authority, they want to bring Strang in with them, and the letter of L. D. Hickey helped to strengthen them in their belief. They use us first rate; come to all the meetings, do all they can to get others to come, and tell others to join us, but won't drop Strang and come in themselves. The Saints all hope to see you up here next summer. Our gospel tent is a sure thing, and that will help us, for that will attract people out of curiosity, if nothing more. Yours,

T. J. MARTIN.

TABERVILLE, Mo., March 9th.

Bro. Blair:—I attended a two-days' meeting with the El Dorado branch of late and had a good time. The Saints secured the Opera Hall for four nights in El Dorado Springs, but owing to rain and bad roads the attendance was small. While there I baptized two promising young men; then returned to Taberville in time to intercept Elder Wicks, of the Christian Church, who once belonged to the Latter Day Saints, but was cut off while living near Kingston, Missouri. He lectured against us on the evening of the 17th and 18th insts., and opened up by telling the people he had come to declare truth and expose error, and said he had been informed that the Mormons had been preaching there, and he said he knew all about them and their doctrines, having been identified with them for nine years, and said he would now turn their own guns upon them. During his lecture he said he had been deceived by the Saints, but had left them. Further on, he said the Saints had a command that they should not preach without the Spirit. When he closed I asked him how long he was preaching for the Saints. "Nine years," he replied. He then said he never received any evidence of his ordination, but had preached nine years and added twenty-five members, and never had the Spirit, yet knew at the same time there was a positive command not to preach without it. This caused a big laugh at his expense.

He said he would next evening prove to the congregation that Joseph Smith was a false prophet and the Book of Mormon a failure. As evidence he read page fifty-nine of the Book of Mormon, where the fruit of the loins of Joseph should write, and should prove to the confounding of false doctrines and laying down of contentions, &c., which had not come to pass, therefore the book was false. He said Joseph Smith was a false prophet, for he declared a temple should be built at Independence in this generation, and this had not come to pass. However, the Saints did not believe in polygamy. I asked for five minutes time to refute him, but was denied it. When he dismissed the congregation I asked them to be seated, and then I corrected his misstatements in regard to polygamy, telling the people that the Revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants taught that a man should have only one wife. From what I can learn I think the Christian friends got about enough of him. Yours, E. CURTIS.

LONDON, Ontario, Mar. 22d.

Bro. Joseph.—The Herald is a welcome guest to me. It brings glad tidings of great joy from far and near. It has comforted and cheered me when feeling somewhat sad and weary. When reading some of the kind letters it contains I have felt the winding influence of God's holy Spirit, that has caused me to rejoice in the great latter day work.

Brethren J. H. Lake and R. C. Evans have been with us for one week and their visit has been profitable to us. Two were baptized. God is remembering Zion, and bringing her comforts once more. Bro. Lake has left for General Conference, and Bro. Evans for Seaforth. May God bless them in all their deliberations and strengthen and cheer them that they may be able to stand the many trials that await them and all God's chosen servants.
W. CORBETT.

WESTON, W. Va., March 15th.

Dear Herald.—Since last writing you I have continued preaching and visiting my relatives in Page county, Virginia. Have enjoyed the blessings of our Master upon every occasion; have delivered thirty-five discourses in all, twenty-six at Rileysville church, five at Marksville, two at Alma, and two at Mount Zion. Would have preached more but the weather has been so bad that people could not come out to hear. The places above named are inviting fields for gospel work. Hope the brethren in Maryland and Pennsylvania will look after them as they are handy to them. The Shenandoah Valley Railroad runs direct from Hagerstown, Maryland, to Rileysville and Marksville. Any one going there will be taken care of by my brother Phillip Roberts, at Rileysville, and my cousin, R. P. Foltz, at Marksville. I hope some one will avail themselves of this opportunity. Many are investigating our claims and say they are satisfied as far as they have gone. My wife and I have taken great pains to enlighten every family we visited, and we feel confident that God has a people there. When I went to Alma to preach, I found a large crowd of people standing outside the church, the doors being locked and nailed shut. But they were soon opened by Mr. A. J. Huffman, one of the trustees. I learned it was shut against me through the Lutheran preacher at that place. But thank the good Lord the preacher's plan was frustrated, and I was blessed with the Spirit to preach the gospel. At Alma, many reports were abroad by the hired priests. I challenged them to meet me in public debate and establish what they had said, but they played the part of cowards and kept hid. On the 13th inst. we bade our loved ones in Page county good bye. This was hard, but the time had come to go. We landed safe, on the 14th inst., at Weston, West Virginia, where we were met by W. H. Wuggy, my wife's brother, who conducted us to his home where we met his kind family waiting to receive us. We have many friends here to visit and preach to. The weather is very bad—snow and rain plenty. Will preach here as soon as the weather moderates. I never enjoyed the Spirit more in the gospel than since I came to visit my people. Good health has been with us all the time, while the monster death has broken into many families and caused much sorrow. There have been forty-five deaths in Page county since the 17th of December, 1887. Yours in gospel bonds,

I. N. ROBERTS.

TAWAS CITY, Mich., March 19th.

Bro. Blair.—The work is onward in this part of the district. We baptize some occasionally and confirm others baptized by the lesser officers. Never did I see the work go ahead faster than now; never more urgent calls than now; and never have we as ministers for Christ felt better blessed with liberty and the Spirit, and with words of knowledge, &c., than now. The work is onward. I am encouraged.

A WINTER TRIP TO MAINE.

HAVING been requested by the Bishop some time since to visit our people in Maine, and explain to them the finance law as revealed in the gospel, we left home November 12th, determined to do the best we could. Stopped at Brockton on Sunday the 13th. Monday, the 14th, went to Boston, accompanied by Bro. John N. Ames at Brockton, who all through the trip proved a very genial and agreeable companion. That evening we took steamer for Maine, and while on board we were interrogated by a Mr. Snow, who heard us at Brockton, concerning our faith. After a night's sailing we reached Rockland. Next morning, the 15th, we boarded another steamer for Green's Landing, and were tossed to and fro by the fierce wind which was blowing. We wondered if we were a "Jonah." Remembering that the winds and waves were sent for a purpose, we concluded not to murmur, and in a little while we made a safe landing, and found Bro. George W. Eaton, the gallant warhorse of former days, whose experiences are both instructive and entertaining. We were kindly provided for by himself and good wife. Green's Landing is a thriving little town, built near the shore, where every man, who does not "build his house upon a rock" it is his own fault, for it would be difficult to find anything there but rock. The morning of the 16th brought pleasant weather, so we advertised a meeting for the evening at the Saints' Chapel and were favored with an audience who gave good attention to those "who turn the world upside down." The 17th Bro. Briggs but in an appearance, and in the evening he favored us with a timely discourse. Held another meeting the 18th, and during the past night we had the peculiar experience of having our discourse shown us in a dream; and what could be expected but that we should have good liberty. By this time we had made the acquaintance of some excellent brethren and sisters. The 19th we started to find Bro. W. G. Pert, Bishop's agent and district president. Bro. Candage took us to North West Harbor where we took steamer for Sedgwick and soon found the president, who proved to be a "hardy son of toil," we were made welcome by him and his pleasant family. He laid aside his work and travelled several miles to inform the Saints that we would be present at a meeting the next day. Sunday the 20th, after a walk of several miles on foot with some of the Saints, we reached the humble home of some good Saints and felt the freedom of the gospel when we entered. At the appointed hour we essayed to speak upon finance, and at the close we allowed the brethren and sisters to question us upon the subject, and in answering we tried not to be wise above what "is written." The justness of the law was conceded by those who were willing "to render unto God the things which are His."

Monday the 21st, with Bro. Pert, we started for Little Deer Isle, and while waiting at the wharf for the seamboat we were informed that the evening previous, in the Baptist Church at Sedgwick, a "Hard Shell," Dr. Mason, of Boston, had been telling some "awful" yarns about our people. My informant considered his statements blasphemy, and he asked me to have some talk with the Reverend upon the subject, and considering that we had only to meet the face of man, we readily consented. Our informant introduced the subject to the teacher of "never ending punishment," and then left the matter with him and me and the Lord. When I asked him why he did not state the difference between us and those of Utah, he replied that he never thought of it, notwithstanding he said he knew we had no affiliation with those in the valley. We tried to have pity upon him, and remanded him to the class mentioned by Peter where he says: "They are willingly ignorant." This little incident created quite a stir. Our interview was cut short by the arrival of the boat, at which time we met Bro. Green, the noted "boy-preacher, of Maine," whose stately form and winning smile caused me to wish again for my younger days. Having agreed to work together for a few days, we went to Little Deer Isle, leaving Bro. Pert upon the wharf, to console the Baptist Elder in whose church our people had been arraigned the evening previous because we dared to call in question the "tradition of the Elders." The steamer not landing where we desired to go, we were dropped into a small boat with two barrels of lime. (I do not know what the consequences would have been if we had had two barrels of Baptist sulphur instead), and safely landed on shore. There being a scarcity of "Nahum's chariots," in this locality, we had to depend upon our own locomotion, and so, "tramp" being the order, after a short journey through the wet and mud we found the amiable Bro. Billings. Toiling amongst the rocks we plodded along a little further and reached the home of Bro. Blastow, who had found joy and pleasure in gospel life. Here we were reinforced by Bro. Pert, who had pulled across in his own boat. We met in the evening at early candle-light and spoke for the benefit of the Saints upon finance. Meeting over, we agreed to return home with Bro. Pert, and when we reached the shore the tide had receded and left the boat a long distance from the water. "Faith and works" being essential to success, we all took a hand, and through the mud and slush we pushed the boat to deep water, which, when we reached, we discovered that a useful article for our journey was missing, so a landing had to be made, and a search instituted for what was wanted, which was found. And with a distance of four miles to the opposite shore, the water calm and still as death, the moon shedding its soft light upon us, tending somewhat to relieve our midnight travel. Brethren Pert and Green manned the oars while the writer was obliged to sit at the stern, his lower limbs shaking with cold and rattling in their sockets, wondering "if time and chance did happen to all men!" We reached the other shore in safety and soon found a quiet resting place at the liberal home of Bro. Pert. After a few hours sleep it was deemed advisable, on the 22d to see if we could speak in Sedgwick, and correct the serious mistakes which the doctor of Calvinistic faith had made. The public hall was hired, and in company with Bro. Green we called upon the Baptist Elder and invited him to attend our meeting; but he positively declined. He asked me to tell the people that we believed in the Book of Mormon, and of course I consented. We had a short argument upon "everlasting punishment," and when about to separate, he asked us not to mention what had passed between us, inasmuch as there were only three of us; and yet he declined to have a public discussion upon the merits of our faith. I learned that he had been circulating Lamb's "Golden Bible," as though that represented our faith. What nonsense!

In the evening there was a congregation of nearly a hundred who came to see and hear "the sect every where spoken against." We had good liberty and gave some of our reasons for believing that God will continue to manifest himself unto the sons of men. In company with Bro. Green we procured a team the 23d and started for West Surrey, a distance of twenty miles, to see and speak to a few of the Saints who were anxious to hear how the Lord could be made a profitable partner in business, and thus become "Workers together with God." We reached there in the afternoon, and found a small band of willing workers, who gave us kindly greetings, for which we pray God to reward them. In the evening we attempted to show how "He that gathereth much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack."

Had an early breakfast the 24th and started back to Sedgwick. We were reminded that it was Thanksgiving day; but why should not all days be days of thanksgiving to those whom the Lord blesses? We reached Bro. Pert's at mid-day and partook of a good turkey dinner prepared by amiable sister Pert, and she can testify that we did justice to our portion.

The 25th we were reminded that winter was near at hand by a gentle fall of snow; but we had to make a journey, intending to go to Bray's Mountain, and having the company of brethren Green and Pert we started by boat, rowed by Capt. Pert. But when we reached the middle of the stream the snow changed to rain, the wind blew furiously, and the boat was turned back to shore. But after a few moments hesitating we turned again to make the other shore. It reminded us of the storm, mentioned by the sacred writer, when the "Master was asleep," but it was impossible for us to sleep while we were taking in so much salt. We finally made a landing several miles from where we wanted to, on account of the storm, and as we struck the shore a surf-wave came up behind us and admonished us to move quick,—which we did after we got a wetting. Ten miles from Green's Landing, rain falling, lower limbs salted, no "Nahum's chariots" to help us out of the difficulty, inquiry was made as to hiring team; price considered too high, so we plodded on foot with bags in hand, for several miles, until we found a person who was reasonable in his charges, and we hired him to take us to the Landing where our wants were supplied by the Saints.

In the afternoon of the 26th, met with the Saints of the Western district for conference. Everything passed off pleasantly, especially during one discourse—when some of the lights went out, also some of the congregation before the speaker finished. Here we made the acquaintance of some of the hardy sons and daughters of toil, who for years have endured reproach for Christ's sake. We were favored with being a guest of Justice Richardson and his pleasant wife, who, though not members of the church, yet take pleasure in caring for those who break the bread of life. In the afternoon of the 27th we spoke upon the subject of finance, enjoying excellent liberty, and commended Jacob's vow, wherein he promised the Lord "one tenth" of all he received, above food and raiment. The justness of the finance system revealed in the gospel was commended by the business brethren, and some thought it was worth an experiment. Conference closed on the 28th, and in the afternoon, in company with Bro. Ames, we were carried by Bro. John Knowlton with his team to Bray's Mountain. As we entered the place, at the foot of the hill, it was a desolate looking spot, and we wondered if it had been the home of such animals as "rebuked the madness" of the ancient prophet, but our guide corrected this impression by informing us that it was named after one of the old settlers. We soon reached Bro. Harvey's and were made welcome. In the evening a few of the Saints gathered to listen to the Lord's banking system. We cautioned them of the unwise course pursued by Ananias and his wife when making their offering to the church. Bro. Ames bore testimony to the practical workings of the system, which says, "Render unto God," that which is his. Others spoke of a desire to make an investment, because "a man's life does not consist in the abundance of that which he possesseth," but in that "treasure" which he has laid up, "where rust doth not corrupt, and where thieves can not break through and steal."

On the 29th Bro. Knowlton did us good service, carrying us to the steamboat wharf. But we missed the boat—storms had changed her running time. We bade him good bye, with thanks for his help, and attempted to cross the stream in an open boat. The day was cold and chilly, with wind enough to make the passage uncomfortable; and after paying forty-five cents to have the salt froze on us, we plodded along, thankful that with all the drawbacks, there would at some time be some pleasant places in missionary life. After a walk of three miles we reached the home of Bro. Pert and was made welcome by his good wife, who is a sister "in deed." The 30th, we spent a few hours with Captain Currier, the custom officer, who is one of those liberal minded men who befriends and defends our work everywhere, because they discover some good in the doctrines of the "sect everywhere spoken against." In the afternoon we boarded the steamer Silver Star, for Bar Harbor. After rolling and pitching for several hours, we reached the harbor at ten p. m. The captain gave us permission to remain on board all night. It was a night that will never be forgotten. The temperature was below zero, the wind blew a gale, and the little steamer pounded against the wharf all night, and to sleep was impossible, and to keep warm we could not. We stood over the steam pipes, shivering with cold, while they did not give heat enough to light a match. And to add to the unpleasantness, we were amongst strangers in a strange place, and supperless. We frequently peeped through the cabin window, looking for the "dawn of day," that we might be free; and when it arrived we hailed it with delight, left the steamer in a hurry, and eagerly sought a place where we could supply the wants of the physical man. With a keen appetite the oatmeal porridge soon disappeared.

We left Bar Harbor December 1st by steamer, for West Gouldsboro. The cold was so intense that the boat was covered with ice from stem to stern. We learned here that we were about forty miles from Jonesport, and no means of reaching it only by stage. Millbridge was the next town of any note. A man at the steamboat landing asked an exorbitant price to carry us to our destination. He said the roads were so rough that his horse would have to walk all the way, and his wagon was an open one. We were informed that Millbridge was about eighteen miles distant, and to go with an open wagon, the horse walking, and the weather below zero—the thoughts of such a journey by team made us shiver. We had heard a good deal about walking-matches, so we resolved to try the experiment. Each of us procured a stick swung our valises over our shoulders and started. There was one thing certain, as long as we kept moving we should not freeze. But the walking was terrible. The roads were rough and broken like a ploughed field. But we were bound to reach Jonesport. After traveling a few miles we enquired the distance to Millbridge. "Sixteen miles," was the reply.

After travelling a few miles further, we again enquired the distance—"Eighteen miles" was the reply—and it seemed like "travelling the furthest way around for the nearest way home." But Millbridge must be reached by sundown, "and where there's a will there's always a way;" so on we plod, "Go as you please" speed, until we began to feel hungry; and of course, to resist cold we must have food. We then agreed that at the next house we would try and purchase some food. People gazed at us with wonder and astonishment as we trode along. We made a halt of some fifteen minutes and obtained some milk and bread. The lady of the house refused to take any pay, and in our hearts we prayed the Lord to set it down to her credit, though she did not know we were gospel peddlers. On we trudged again, though our shoulders ached with the pressure of the valise, and in the dim distance we beheld a town. Lot never looked upon Zoar with more gratification than we did upon that place where we hoped to rest. Sundown found us in the town, where enquiry was made for a relative of Bro. Ames, and we found that he lived thirteen miles further on! A moments' hesitation. What is best? Shall we rest here, or proceed? We decided to go on. A team was hired at dusk. Strength for a cold ride must be mustered, so a "thing begun being half done," we sped on, up hill and down hill, until we reached Addison Point and found the home of Bro. Ames' relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Plummer. The house was shut up—no one at home—so a kind neighbor took us in until the Plummers returned from meeting whither they had gone.

When we left the team, it was with much difficulty that we could move our lower limbs. And the neighbors being made aware of our condition, hastily prepared supper for us, which we ate with a relish—and who would not have had a good appetite after such an exposure as we had that day? Brethren, if you want to feel Artic weather, don't go in the icy regions of the north; but just take a trip to Maine when one of those "cold snaps" is around—only be careful not to get your ears snapped by John Frost, for he is very vicious at such times. After supper, the room being warm, in spite of myself, I went to sleep, seemingly satisfied with my situation. For what would be the use of grumbling when friends were so kind to us! But in a little while I was awake—the Plummers had returned home, and we must go there for the night and rest. Our visit was a surprise, yet we were made welcome, and everything possible was done to make us comfortable for the night. What would this world be if it were not for some good motherly woman such as we found at this house, filling her position with honor as a help-mate! Sisters Walker and Holmes, keep up your defense for woman! Noble woman! who was given to man to be his partner in all his joys and sorrows, and not to be beneath him, as a slave. Do not forget that the framers of our Constitution thought of the rights of woman when they said, "This government should be for the people, by the people, and of the people." And where would society be if we did not have woman and her work? Brethren, give woman an equal chance with her work. Cast aside the barbarian thought that woman is your inferior. Help her work in her field of usefulness, and the race will ever be the better for it.

After a good night's rest we were again ready for work. Learning that there were some Saints in the neighborhood, we called upon the aged veteran, Bro. Steele, and wife, also Bro. Kelley and family, Sr. Caroline Hall, and others. They all gave us a gospel welcome. December 3d, Mr. Cleaves, son-in-law of Sr. Hall, carried us with his team to Jonesport, and we reached Bro. Joshua Walker's by sunset, so we finally got to our field of operation. We knocked at a door and enquired if Mr. Walker lived there. A lady came and accosted us as "Bro. Smith." It was another noble woman—Sr. Walker. Several days afterward, she informed me that she was made aware of our coming by a dream, and from that she knew me when I came to the door, though she had never seen me before.

Jonesport is a quiet little town, situated on the water-front. The houses are neat and pleasant; there is a canning factory which furnishes employment to a few during the summer months; but most of the people earn their living by "going down to the sea in ships." This place is had in remembrance by many people on account of the colony scheme of G. J. Adams who, with the colony, went to Palestine and met disaster. To-day the people speak in reverence of the preaching of Adams. It evidently prepared many minds for this latter day work. The branch there is composed of some of the best people in town. There is also a Congregational society in the place, and during the series of meetings which were held after we were reenforced by Brn. Briggs and Green, the minister offered prayer for the success of the Redeemer's cause, thus manifesting a more liberal spirit than is found in many places. "The liberal deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things shall he stand." In this place we found a noble band of Saints, earnest, energetic and vigilant, especially the women. God bless them for their noble work. The Sabbath duties commenced by school in the forenoon. Sister Walker superintendent, who is ably assisted by an efficient corps of teachers. One pleasing feature is the choir of youthful singers, of both sexes, who attended upon all the meetings during our stay and helped to make the meetings a success by exhibiting and repeating the beauties of song, which really gladdened my heart. Thanks to those willing youths! The Sabbath School is in a flourishing condition, and may it ever prosper. It is really necessary as a nursery to the church. We preached afternoon and evening, attendance good, liberty all that could be desired.

It would make this letter too long to mention the names of all who kindly ministered to us during our stay, both in and out of the church. We shared the hospitalities of Captain Hall and others, whom many of the brethren will remember as a friend to the cause. We were requested to conduct a funeral service of an aged lady, by the name of Smith, at which some of the Congregational choir did the singing, and assisted by the good Spirit we spoke for a few moments upon the resurrection. The Saints here were very anxious for a discourse on finance, and so an evening was set apart and we spoke upon the Lord's method of saving, cautioning them against the fallacy of the "common stock" doctrine, and advised them not to put their money in a bag with "two many holes." We tried to show them that the Lord required them to bring "their tithes into his storehouse" that the families of the ministry and the poor should be provided for, that they may reap the benefit of all their labor, and to not forget what the wise man said: "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

During my stay here I gave two discourses on the temporal law, and also other gospel sermons; and I hereby desire to thank all, both in and out of the church, who tried to make my visit and labor in Maine pleasant and agreeable. In closing I desire to say as did Paul, that while engaged in this missionary effort, "The Lord stood by me." For this I praise and thank him; and if the Saints have been instructed, encouraged, and the church built up, I shall feel amply repaid for my little effort in the Master's cause.

Your brother in the faith,

JOHN SMITH.

THOUGHTS ON TITHING.

DEAR Herald:—It may not be amiss to present a few thoughts on tithing, more especially because there are some who seem to have but little faith in the principle.

I believe it to be the duty of every agent and solicitor to teach the principles in connection with the Bishopric, and that it is the duty of all, both those holding priesthood and the members to pay it. There has been considerable controversy as to the divine authenticity of the principle, and Abraham and Melchisedec have been cited as examples, and their acts as precedents for all future time. Other quotations are claimed to be directed to us. I think that those things were written for "our profit and learning," but I think there is a possibility of going to extremes in trying to make all that is written appear as directed to us and no other people. There is no doubt but what the principle of tithing was taught both in the Patriarchal age and under the Mosaic economy. But even this would hardly be good reason why we should believe and practice it. There were many things believed, taught and cherished by those ancients that are inoperative in our day. We are under the gospel economy, the New Covenant.

Some wonder why it is that the New Testament Scripture is so silent in regard to tithing, and that Jesus has not said more in regard to so important a matter. Has it ever occurred to you what a meager account we have of the teachings of Jesus Christ and also of his apostles? And while we don't find any record of them teaching tithing in exactly the same words as we would use now-a-days, still Paul teaches substantially the same thing,—Let every man give as the Lord has prospered him." Again:—"For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not. But by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want, that there may be equality."—2 Cor. 8: 12, 14.

We find it recorded that the Saints sold their lands and brought the price and laid it at the apostles' feet, and distribution was made to every man according as he had need.—Acts. 4: 35.

It is possible that the work of the Bishopric was not fully developed at this time; but we find that it was in after years. And at this time deacons had been ordained to attend to some of the temporal affairs of the church. The historian has simply recorded the acts of those who sold their lands, but has not told us when this principle was first introduced, by whom nor where; but it must have been soon after the ascension; and it is but reasonable to suppose that those parties had been indoctrinated so to do, or perhaps the force of circumstances brought them to it. I would judge it to be the former, as a result of the latter. Be it as it may, the principle of "sacrifice" is amply exemplified in selling their lands and giving the price to the apostles for the church.

Jesus told his disciples to take no thought for to-morrow, telling them that the Father would provide for them. At that time it is possible that there were but comparatively few in the church. But be that as it may, he promised that God would care for them, and that would evidently be by some giving to their support. And there must have been provision made for the support of those who had families. It must be remembered also that there were others besides the apostles in the ministry. And all are to be co-workers in the kingdom of God, and as there are many that can not preach nor take missions, they can aid by giving towards the support of those who are actively engaged, and then they are actually preaching by their representatives. All can not be the mouth; else where would be the hands, etc.

Dear Saints, what is there in tithing that we can possibly object to? Its our religion to feed the poor, the widow, the orphan, support the ministry, erect churches, publish tracts and periodicals and books, and erect publishing houses; and how can this be done without co-operation? How can there possibly be unity of action unless every man will contribute or give as the Lord has prospered him? Where much is given, much will be required. The world advocates equality in taxation, and we all say that is fair and right, and tax a man according to his wealth. We say the church is the Kingdom of God. Paul in speaking of it says that God has set "helps, governments," in the church, so that if the kingdom is to grow and fill the whole earth we may as well commence aright upon that principle of equalization—tithing. But suppose, for an argument, that there is no intimation within the entire Scripture giving authority to the law of tithing, and that such a system had no prior existence, but had its birth in this dispensation, and that there is no claim other than that it is purely the production of the human mind. What can be said of it other than that it is a system created, recognized and subscribed to by the church, by the which every man can compare himself to that standard? It is simply a meter without which it is very probable there would be much confusion in regard to how much we should give.

The disciples of Christ should be one in faith, hence in doctrine and practice. There is no better method yet known by which to create oneness than an acknowledged standard. Hence the propriety of fixing by law a standard of weights and measures. Dealers compare their measures and their weights with the acknowledged standards, and as a result uniformity prevails.

The servant with the one talent accused his lord of injustice for reaping where he had not sown; of gathering where he had not strewed. This will not hold good against tithing; for those who have no surplus are not asked to pay tithing. Some say that they love free-will offering. That is right; but to what extent do you love it? Do you love it to one-tenth of your increase? If so, you have evidently borne fruit. But there are some who do even more than this. The other morning a brother called and gave me one hundred dollars in excess of his tithing, as a free-will offering. This brother's love for free-will offering was great. He has kept tally on tithing, and is now scoring above that one-tenth mark. I would like to know what are the suggested plans of those who oppose this principle and I think such should find place in the Herald if offered.

I question the propriety of using anything like coercive means with those who are slow in paying tithing. I think it very wrong to tell those who have sacrificed for many years, now at the sunset of life, that unless they believe it, to step down and out. That is too hard, brethren. Better that those parties bear, "some thirty-fold, some sixtyfold," than none at all. If we are ministers for Christ, let us be wise in the advocacy of tithing. Let us be firm and frank. Unless we are wise in this matter, there are many in the world that will take offense. And there are quite a number in the church who are doing much good and giving of their substance, who do not fully believe in the principle as taught. When I remember how the people were wronged and the principle abused in the old church, I feel to be patient with the unbelieving. My father was one among the many who bore that heavy burden until he became a wreck financially. I feel satisfied that greater efforts will be put forth in the near future to live up to the law of tithing, and that those interested in the great latter day work will not fail to see the necessity of sending more laborers into the vineyard—and those sent will need help to support their families.

Money will be needed to print tracts, to erect churches and support the poor. And when I say poor, I think there is a class of poor that should be first cared for, those poor elders, who many of them have spent years of their best time, and some of them hundreds of dollars, (and, some few, even thousands), of their own money, in support of themselves and families and for the good of the work, while some have resigned good and remunerative positions so they could take missions and thereby have become poor. And when they have become too old or infirm for further use, will the church turn such aside or place them upon the superannuated list, unsupported, if they should need? I hope not!

E. B. MORGAN.

CLEVELAND, Iowa, March 19th.

PERSEVERANCE.

PERSEVERANCE is a characteristic of all true followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. Without it there can be little or no progress in the Christian warfare, and therefore, no assurance of final success.

When the promises made by Jehovah to his children are once fully understood, there should be no fainting by the way, no standing still while the foe is before us unconquered, but a forward march against the enemy should commence the very day of our enlistment under the banner of "King Immanuel," and continue in faith and love with full confidence in our "leader and commander," until the victory is won.

The enemy is before us, on our right, and on our left, concealed in every conceivable way, and the command is: "press forward;" "watch and pray;" and "work while the day lasts." The Scriptures assure us that, although the enemy is counted by legion, yet not one faithful, trustful, persevering soldier of all that enlist shall be lost. Yet every inch of the battlefield must be thoroughly tested, and should we falter and be overpowered, and lost, we must know it is because we have not faithfully persevered.

But the soldiers must be fully equipped; and when they are, all foes combined can not destroy one of them. "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle, not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore, take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God: praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all Saints."—Eph. 6: 11-19.

To retain this equipage and keep it in proper condition for active service, each soldier is expected to keep himself neat and clean internally and externally. For, although all the soldiers were poor, ragged, dirty, and miserable when they were found and enlisted by the Captain, or his officers, they were washed and neatly dressed before they were given full possession of the weapons of defence. This washing, cleansing, and clothing, was accomplished by receiving and obeying the gospel of Christ. Here the warfare commences. Right here the enemy takes his position and must be overpowered and taken prisoner. He presents himself in jealousy, hatred, spite, slander, backbiting, lying, profanity, filthiness, gluttony, intemperance, lustfulness—and many other evils. Therefore the war commences with our members, or the members of our bodies. "And every man that striveth for the mastery [of self] is temperate in all things. . . I therefore so run, [the Christian race], not as uncertainly; [but having a knowledge]; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air. But I keep under [subjection] my body, [and all the members and passions thereof], and bring it into subjection."—1 Cor. 9: 25-27.

It will not do, if ye give way to these evils, to say that we were tempted above that which we were able to bear, for it is written: "There hath no temptation taken [befallen] you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able [to bear]; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."—1 Cor. 10: 13.

It is necessary that every soldier of Christ should be thoroughly tested and tried before receiving the plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

"My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into diverse temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith work-eth patience, [which includes perseverance]. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."—James 1: 2, 3, 12.

Peter also understood that trials were indispensably necessary in order to prepare a people to reign with Christ, as may be seen from the following:—"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time. Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations; that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory of the appearing of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter 1: 3-7.

Nor will it do for us to blame God or the devil for our temptations, though the latter is always ready to take advantage of them in order that he may take us prisoners and "lead us captive at his will," for James tells us that we are tempted by the desires of the flesh, as follows:—"Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God can not be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man; but every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lusts, and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."—James 1: 13-15.

Our wonderful Captain, Christ Jesus, was tempted in all points and yet without sin; and therefore "became the author of eternal salvation unto all who obey him."

"Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."—Heb. 5: 8, 9. "For we have not a high priest which can not be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."—Heb. 4: 15, 16.

Who can believe they are true soldiers for Christ when they are found sleeping on picket, or are visiting the haunts of sin with every member of their body carried away with the lusts thereof? Who can think for one moment that enjoyment can be found in the giddy dance as it exists today! Or, that the trials and sorrows of this life can be drowned in the intoxicating cup! Christ alone has the panacea for all our troubles, sickness and pain. There is more enjoyment in one hour's sweet communion with Christ through the Spirit, than can be had in a lifetime anywhere else.

Perseverance is necessary, not only to shun the paths of sin and conquer the evil, but also to find the way of righteousness and walk therein. To help us persevere, God reaches down from his lofty habitation and kindles the spark of light that is within us into a lively flame:—"Do not err, my beloved brethren. Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."—James 1: 16, 17. And these gifts are given, or divided, to every soldier "severally as he will" in order that they may be fully equipped and prepared to accomplish their part of the work, though they are given according to the faithful perseverance of each individual. These gifts consist of wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, prophecy, discerning of spirits, tongues, and the interpretation of tongues. But in order to enjoy the full benefit of these gifts, every soldier must keep every member of his body in subjection to his intellect as it shall be assisted by the Spirit of God, which will show him every duty, and enable him to make his thoughts and actions harmonize with every command of the General, as found recorded in his word. The General teaches us that if our thoughts are high and pure, our actions will be in perfect harmony therewith in the following language:—"For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." (Isiah 55: 8, 9). High and holy actions are the result of pure and holy thoughts.

The Savior teaches that a man's intellect or heart is his treasury for good or evil.

"A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh."—Luke 6: 45.

Paul illustrates the same principle still farther in teaching his fellow soldiers in these words: "Finally, brethren whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, . . . think on these things."—Phil. 4: 8.

Peter understood that a faithful, trustful perseverance would enable us to cast aside every evil thought and action and plant pure and holy thoughts and actions in their place, by which we become partakers of his divine nature, thereby securing a passport which will entitle us to all the blessings, privileges, and glories of the everlasting kingdom of God.

"Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."—2 Peter 1:2-11.

We must be careful that the enemy does not make us think that there is no danger, thereby throwing us off our guard and taking the advantage of our weak position: "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." "For we walk by faith, not by sight." That is, not in our own strength, but by divine assistance. Nor should we persuade ourselves that we have already done enough or made all the sacrifice that is necessary, for there is no standing still or turning back. Jesus said: "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God."—Luke 9:62. But we should follow the example of the Apostle Paul as we find it illustrated in these words: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; [overcome and secure the prize]; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before; I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."—Phil. 3:13, 14.

Paul's faithful perseverance secured for him the prize as may be seen by his last testimony, which is as follows: "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Tim. 4:6, 7, 8.

"Here is the patience of the Saints; here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus."—Rev. 14:12.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

THE SEXES ARE EQUAL.

THE lords of creation say that man was made to bear rule over the woman and in that they at least have ever held their own, for ever since the days of Adam, all down through the pages of history, among the savage barbarians, or free and enlightened, the woman has always had to bow in submission to his mandates.

We have seen "the noble red man" seated on the fence puffing his pipe while he watched his wife and daughter at work in the field; and betimes he would go hunting and kill a deer or other game. Did he carry it home? Not he. He hung it on a tree, marked the spot, and then went home and sent the squaw to bring it. And among all the savage tribes she has ever had to do the hardest share of the labor in historic time; and among most of the nations of the earth even to-day she belongs to her father, he either gives or sells her to her husband, and if he should die first her oldest son bears rule over her. It is not so long ago, even among the free and enlightened, that a wife had no rights which her husband was bound to respect.

There is said to be an old law in England that has never been repealed, permitting a husband to sell his wife. And it is not very long ago that a husband did sell his wife for one dollar and twenty-five cents. Perhaps some will say mayhap that was all she was worth. If so, since it is admitted that the wife is "the better half," what would the husband be worth?

We have also learned of another husband who sold his wife and two boys to a Yankee for twelve dollars and fifty cents, the Yankee taking away the woman and boys, while the husband went to the ale house to have a jolly good time while the money lasted. Now to bear rule—to be a ruler—is one thing, and to be a master is another; and in this mankind in general has been amiss; for the one to be master the other must be servant, or slave, who is bound to obey without even a word of protest. But to bear rule is to be responsible, to be a head guardian and guide where advice may be given and free consent obtained. And this is how it should be with man and wife, else how could she be a helpmate meet for man? When we consider them in relation to each other, they are equal, hence it may truly be said of them they are two halves of a whole, without which neither would be complete.

They are also equal in the trades and occupations of men, if she were taught. Take her on the farm, where she has had the best opportunities, and what is there that man does that she can't do? Many times she gives much needed assistance in harvesting, haying, gathering crops, and other work. Without her help there are many poor western farmers who could not succeed. In the fields of European countries she labors side by side with men; in coal-having and in brick and tile making she is much employed, and has been known to wheel a load of clay that a man who was not practiced at that labor could not move. But for all such labor she seldom receives but little more than half the wages of the man, because you know it is said she is "the weaker vessel." In intellectual ability she stands equal, and is just as easily taught, and is as apt to learn. And since she has been admitted to the universities the testimonies of the presidents and professors are that the presence of women has improved the manners and morals of both sexes; that the conversation which so often disgraces places where young men are congregated together, becomes impossible when lady students are present. Some have excelled in every branch in the most abstract and difficult studies, and the proportion of women who pass well in examination is much greater than that of the men. She has been trusted as a teacher, and has been equally successful. As a doctor she has succeeded, and in many cases she is much better fitted to the profession than men, as it is more in the nature of women to care for and nurse the sick. She has also been successful as a lawyer and a public speaker, though it is not long since women began to speak in public. Many men go to hear what she has to say, as a matter of curiosity, and are somewhat surprised that a woman can say anything sensible. And even if she was not made to rule, she has many times succeeded as a leader, ruler and judge. There was Deborah, a mother in Israel, who led an army against the Canaanites to victory, and the land rested for forty years. Hatasu, queen of Egypt, who perfected the system of irrigation which redeemed her land from the desert, and Catherine, of Russia, who did much more for the internal improvement of her empire than any other sovereign of her realm. These are a few of the many facts that could be brought from history proving that women have had ability equal with men. There are many men who, to-day, look upon the present advancement of women as an injury to the peace of the home, as, for instance, the laws that permits woman the right over her own property or money in marriage; to sue and be sued. This is because all husbands are not true, and many a man has cruelly wronged his wife. The law is, or at least should be, for the protection of those who do right, as against those who do wrong. Look at the laws of some of the states as to the right of women to their children, and you will learn of a premium on immorality, for the woman's child who is born out of wedlock is hers, but the respectable wife has no legal right to her child. It is not long ago that a woman in the state of Michigan went into court and swore that her children did not belong to her husband, as this was the only way the law would give her the right to keep her children. Pray tell us what a mother would not do for her child!

Men say woman should not vote because she can't work the road tax! Just give her a chance and there would be a decided improvement on roads, as her love of order would not permit the unsightly heaps and unfinished bridges that are oftentimes seen from year to year, all because men won't work a few minutes longer than the law compels. "Oh, yes; and she can't fight; for you know it is only men who can be warriors brave." But why should she fight, since she does not make the quarrels, and is not even permitted a voice in the affair? And since all fights are the result of pride and base ambition, it never makes right except the right of might, which oftentimes compels the weak to submit to the strong, irrespective of justice.

Much is said about "wives, obey your husbands;" "submit to your husbands." But we hear little about, "husbands, love your wives, even as your own bodies."

It is said that man is the natural protector of woman. Some of them may be of their own wives, but how then does it happen that women fear men? Lately there was a lady from the country who went to visit some kindred in the city of New York, and unexpectedly they were not at home, and she was too late to get back to her home that evening, and so was forced to stay in the city. She made an effort to find a place to stay in the hotels, but the answer was, "All full; no room." After wandering around till eleven o'clock that evening, in her despair she cried in answer to her last refusal, "Is there nowhere in this great city a place for a lone woman to find a night's rest?" Her appeal attracted the attention of a man who chanced to be staying there, and he remembered her as the daughter of Doctor Jones; and on his recommend the poor weary woman found rest.

Here is another case, just to show the inconsistency of some men's claim to nobility: Four women were found in the corner of a cellar in the city of New York; this cellar was partitioned into small places for the poorest of the poor, and there they were trying to eke out an existence by sewing. They were sisters; the oldest was well educated and good looking. She was asked why she had never made application for some place as a governess. She said she had, oftentimes, but always had been met by insulting propositions. Truly, it is sometimes a misfortune for a woman to be good looking, for many fall by temptation. It is little credit to men that they are the tempters. Facts can be produced to show that women are far superior to men in this respect, also in the cause of temperance and religion.

Much is said about the great men of the world, though it might well be asked, "Who were their mothers?" For it is well known that the mother has the making of the child; and it is a fact, as the pages of history show, that most all of the men who have been of worth in the world owed much of their success to the early training of a wise, intelligent mother, as for example the faithful two thousand sons of the children of Ammon whose watchword was, "Our mothers have taught us."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

At a meeting of Christian scientists at Sixteenth and Broadway, New York, yesterday afternoon, January 4th, some lively speech-making was indulged in over the announcement that Rev. C. L. Thompson of the Second Presbyterian church would preach a sermon on Christian science in a few weeks. The members of the circle held that the ministry was failing to preach true Christian doctrine. One of them arraigned the clergy as follows:

"For too many years have we allowed the clergy to do our thinking; we have accepted their beliefs thinking them more capable of arriving at true conclusions than ourselves. We have been taught creeds. The poor stand outside the gates in the elegant churches and their creeds no longer satisfy the thinking mind. 'Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.'"

The same speaker went on to say:

"Will some of the learned divines who are opposing Christian science tell us why they have felt constrained to hand down to coming generations that part of the teachings of Jesus which is related to the healing or saving of souls, and withhold that from poor, suffering humanity which would release the body from pain and suffering? It is not in keeping with the life, example or teachings of Jesus. Why theology should have overlooked that part of Jesus' teachings which gave the spiritual law for healing disease, and felt called upon to teach only that part which applies to the saving of souls seems most singular. It certainly finds no authority for this either in the teachings or example of the Master as laid down in the New Testament.

"We fail to find even a hint in the Bible to sustain the claim that the power of healing of diseases through the understanding of spiritual law should be reserved to only a few individuals. Jesus said:—'He that believeth in Me, the things that I do, he shall do also.' He could not have meant this to apply only to the disciples; if He had He would not have expressed Himself in this way. 'And these signs shall follow them that believe or understand My teachings.' 'In my name they shall cast out devils.' 'They shall speak with new tongues; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover.' And again, even after coming forth from the tomb to prove to their doubting minds that spirit possessed all power over matter he emphatically commands his disciples to go forth and teach all nations, saying, 'Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world.' He knew the disciples would remain but a short time. It must indicate that he would be in spirit for all time with those persons who understand the spiritual law which he taught.

"We are told that before the great teacher sent out His disciples to heal the sick and teach the gospel to all nations He opened their understanding so they could interpret the Scriptures. The light flashed upon them and they saw, or understood how the life of man was the mind of man. They were one and it was only necessary for man to place his mind in unison with the infinite mind of God in order to become an instrument for directing the light of truth or the love of God to the darkened mind of the sufferer and thus bring him light and peace. Jesus taught that the most illiterate could if they followed Him be gifted with such a flow of language as we know could not be acquired at the present day among the cold, lifeless theological schools of learning if the Spirit of the Holy Ghost is lacking. It was all so simple nineteen hundred years ago. 'Preach the gospel to all nations, heal the sick.' 'Behold

I send you forth as lambs among wolves.' They were simple, honest men without intellectual training, and yet where is there a minister in all these years that has ever preached as did those simple fishermen of Gallilee? They spoke with new tongues, the gift of the Holy Ghost descended upon them, and this Holy Ghost or realization of truth is for each one of us who seek it. There are no exceptions to the rules of Jesus, as in the faulty sciences of men. Intellectual and physical culture alone are miserably inadequate to evolve a perfect state. Greece, Rome, Babylonia, Chaldea and multitudes of ancient names tell us this. The nations which fell away most completely from virtue and at length from material prosperity, also those whose ruins alone remain to tell the tale of their glory, have fallen when culture was at its height. The one thing needful in culture was unhappily left out, and that was spiritual understanding."

THE RELIGIOUS RITES OF THE ABYSSINIANS.

SOME twenty years ago, England went to war with the then King Theodore of Abyssinia, because that potentate had been keeping the British Consul, as well as a number of missionaries—among these Dr. Stern, a man of Jewish birth—in captivity for a great length of time. The immense interest which centered upon that country during and after the unbloody war in which Lord Napier of Magdala was so eminently successful, had been in abeyance for some years when, early last year, it became more lively than ever on account of the hostilities that broke out between Italy and the Negus in connection with the Italian occupation of Massowah. It will be remembered that at the end of January, 1887, a detachment of Italian troops was massacred by Bas Alula, a vassal of King John. Ever since then, the Italians have been preparing to avenge the blood of their countrymen. The Abyssinians on their part have not been idle, and a host of them may be expected almost any day to attack the Italian settlements.

The Vessillo Israelita and the Jewish papers of the Continent have, in connection with the forthcoming campaign on the shores of the Red Sea, spoken at great length of the peculiar manners and customs as well as the religious rites of the Abyssinians. A telegram dated Massowah, January 2d, had been going the round of the Italian press, to this effect: "The Negus has spent a whole day and a whole night in prayer at Aksum, where the Ark of the Covenant is kept." The second day before sunrise he entered the Temple, where he received the heads of the Jewish tribes who came to deliver up to his hands the treasure of the sanctuary for defraying the expenses of the Holy War. While a series of bloody sacrifices were going on, in accordance with the ancient ritual of the Jews, the Negus swore to exterminate the Infidels, adding the words, "avenging sword of Solomon" to his title "Negus Neghut."

The papers referred to explain the foregoing telegram as follows: "The city of Aksum mentioned in the telegram of the Nuovo Corriere del Mattino is exceedingly old; it was mentioned two thousand years ago by the Greek geographer, Ptolemy. The Abyssinians pretend that it existed in the time of the first Temple. For a long time it was the abode of the Abyssinian sovereigns, who built a church dedicated to the mother of the founder of the Christian religion; this Church is still looked upon as the most sacred spot of Abyssinia. In the Abyssinian churches, the same as in the Greek Orthodox churches, there is a 'holiest' spot just behind the Altar, which none but the priests are allowed to set foot in. In the 'holiest' the sacred books of the old and new dispensations are kept, and the whole of the walls are adorned with pictures of Saints."

"In the Aksum church there is an imitation of the tabernacle built by Moses, within which the sacred books are kept. It is obvious from the foregoing that the Negus must have spent full twenty-four hours in prayer at the entrance of the Temple, calling down the aid of the Almighty in favor of the armies he is going to lead against the Italians.

"Christian and Jewish rites and ceremonies are commingled in the forms of worship in use among the Abyssinians. The Aksum church being considered the holiest of the land, there is a high priest engaged therein, who is assisted by twelve elders, bearing the names of the twelve sons of Jacob. These are the twelve 'heads of the Jewish tribes' who, with the consent of the High Priest, made over the treasurer to the king for war purposes. As regards the 'bloody sacrifices' spoken of, they must have consisted of seven sheep, calves or bullocks, as provided in the ritual laws of the Abyssinians."

It should be understood that, prior to entering upon any campaign, the Abyssinians are in the habit of offering a sacrifice to God, this practice being based upon 1 Sam. xiii. 9, "And Saul said, Bring hither a burnt offering to me, and peace offerings. And he offered the burnt offering." The beasts intended for sacrifice are killed by the High Priest, and then burnt upon the altar in accordance with the forms provided in the Pentateuch. But all this is done by Abyssinian priests, and the poor Falashas, men of Jewish blood who live in the country, have nothing whatever to do with it. In fact, the Negus in his fanaticism do not even allow one of these Falashas to come near him; still less does he permit them to perform any religious ceremony. Therefore it is absurd for the enemies of the Jews to pretend that the Negus has been incited by our brethren in faith to wage war against Italy."

"It may be added that the sovereigns of Ethiopia or Abyssinia profess to be descendants of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba (1 Kings x. 13); and to this day they claim to be members of the House of David. King John himself avails himself of every opportunity to bring his descent from King Solomon more prominently to the knowledge of his subjects. A few years ago, he commissioned the Italian sculptor Maritti to build for him a throne that should be the exact counterpart of Solomon's throne as described in Scripture. For this dynastic hobby he paid no less than twelve hundred pounds."

These particulars can not but be of the highest interest to all our readers at the moment when the 16,000 Italians gathered in and around Massowah, under the command of General San Mazzano, have as much to do as ever they can to prepare for the attack of the Abyssinians, who are stated to be on the march against Massowah, under the Negus' vassal, Ras Allula, to the number of 50,000, according to some, and 100,000, according to others.—Prophetic News.

EASY PLACES.

It seems nothing but natural for every person, man or woman, to think the position he occupies is just a little bit worse than that of any one else. And he imagines that if he could only exchange places with some one else, what a relief it would be! Much of the worry and fretting in life is caused by a desire to secure an easy place.

Success is obtained only by earnest effort. And this implies hard work of some kind. And when you are doing hard work, you certainly can not be considered as having found an easy place. It is those who do not make a success that are always on the lookout or hunt for an easy place. And after they find themselves in positions where little earnest effort would considerably improve their condition, rather than make the effort they allow themselves to make an easy place for their individual comfort, and let the chance slip. Many a young man, in an effort to find an easy place, has allowed opportunities to pass by which, if he had taken them up and added a few years of hard, well directed labor, would have placed him in a condition where, if he desired, he might take upon himself an easy place.

One item should by no means be overlooked in this,—that many places are like the one you are occupying; that is, they are very deceiving. Others imagine that you are having a very easy time as compared with theirs, and they would gladly exchange with you, while at the same time you are thinking the same with them.

We often make our lot in life not only harder but considerably worse than it really is, by continually looking at the dark side. We try to see all the drawbacks rather than to better our condition all the while, and this at least adds nothing to it. The fact is, if life were all sunshine, if we all secured what we might consider an easy place, it is very doubtful if we would appreciate it as fully as we do our present blessings. Better wear out than rust out. Life can be made much pleasanter if we will try to make the best of everything, and then when we are able to better ourselves, we are in a condition to enjoy better. It is an impossibility that each and every one of us should be able to secure a place that we might consider as easy. Added to this is the fact that much that we see is deceiving, and that if we fail to find what we are seeking in making a change, we are only breeding discontent instead of bettering ourselves.

It is certainly to the interest of every man to better himself or his condition when he can do so honestly. This is what, to a certain extent, we are all aiming to accomplish; but we will not be able to reach this if instead of earnest, faithful work, we devote our energies to seeking out and obtaining an easy place.

A REVIVAL WILL AVERT NATIONAL DANGER.

THE benign effect of a substantial revival of pure and undefiled religion can not be measured. In our large cities, where the greatest danger from lawlessness exists, Christian work among the common people, the artisans and laboring men, is in the nature of a public good, and averter of danger. The following from the Christian Statesman is to the point:

"A great revival of religion would avert, in this country, what threatens to be a serious conflict. A Chicago liquor dealer wrote some time ago: 'We will kill every Temperance woman and strangle every preacher; we will burn down every church and blow up every courthouse; but we will not give up our lawful business, or submit to restraints on our liberty, which are the offspring of superstition.' To some these words seem but the frothy ravings of a mind as ill balanced as malignant; but they should be read with an eye upon the Pittsburg riots, for two days holding the militia of Pennsylvania at bay; they should be read in the light of Cincinnati's blazing court house; read while a whole city holds its breath in fear of an anarchist outbreak, when law and justice are vindicated; read by the graves of Haddock and Gambrell; read side by side with the declarations of the Personal Liberty Leagues of New York and Pennsylvania. Men may sneer at the thought of serious trouble with the lawless and dangerous classes in American society. So men sneered at the threat of secession. Lydia Maria Child wrote: 'When you hear of the town's poor seceding from the town you will hear of South Carolina seceding from the Union.' But secession came and it cost rivers of blood and untold millions of treasure to repair the breach when once it was made. We would have no reason to fear for the ultimate issue of a violent conflict with the enemies of law and order. But we would fain see it averted. How can we avert it? Not by the policy of compromise. Not by the gradual surrender of the Christian features of our government to those who are offended by them. We tried that policy in the controversy with slavery. For three-quarters of a century we granted every demand. We haggled and paltered always before we yielded—but we yielded. Then there came an hour when slavery asked the whole national domain. The demand was too great and was refused—and the conflict came. Compromise will not save us. But a general, genuine, powerful revival of true religion, a revival which would infuse courage as well as tenderness into the hearts of men, a revival which would strike the keynote of resistance to all public evils, and call the Church of God out from all complicity with them—such a revival would save us. Before the majesty of public sentiment and opinion, stirred by the Spirit of God as we can easily imagine them stirred, unbelief and opposition would stand abashed, all movements of reformation would be borne forward resistlessly to speedy triumph, and Christianity, general, tolerant, unsectarian Christianity, would be frankly acknowledged to be at once the religion of the people and the law of the land."

SPIRIT VOICES IN THE AIR.

BROOKLYN is noted in Spiritualistic circles for the large number of members of that belief who reside there. Recently issued figures place the number as high as twelve thousand. Some of the members are well-known citizens.

Mrs. Ruggles, who lives in Lawrence street, is an active worker in the Spiritualistic cause. She does not claim to be a professional medium. She says that the number of Spiritualists in the city is not exaggerated, but, on the contrary, underestimated. She has been interested in Spiritualism for fifteen years, and during that period has noticed its progress. She herself has been astonished at the rapid strides it has made.

As to the causes of its popularity, she believes that they are various. She thinks that, in the first place, people realize that Spiritualism has come to stay, that it no longer is in a state of infancy, but has reached a robust age. It has, she says, borne the sneers of the sceptical, the laughter of the irreverent and the investigation of the scientific, and has not only survived them, but prospered in the face of them. She says that she does not believe any doctrine, with the exception of Christianity, has had such torrents of invective poured upon it as Spiritualism.

"We have been accused," she said to a reporter yesterday, "of making our profession the cloak with which to hide all manner of foul crimes. It has been charged against us that we encourage free love; time and again it has been said that we are an association of sharpers whose prime object it is to swindle dupes. We have been accused of plotting against the foundations of religion; we are said to have filled insane asylums, and yet in spite of all this we have gained ground and our ranks include the educated, the thoughtful and the scientific."

Mrs. Ruggles was asked if it was true that Henry Ward Beecher was a Spiritualist.

"Perfectly true," she replied. "I have on many occasions sat in the same circle with him. As a rule we obtained very extraordinary manifestations when he was present. He has often expressed to me the satisfaction he derived from the tangible proofs given of the soul after death. I may go further and say that Mr. Beecher was an extremely strong medium. He was aware of the fact, but did not cultivate his gifts. Almost two-thirds of Mr. Beecher's congregation are Spiritualists. Many personal and dear friends of mine are members of Plymouth Church. Indeed, I think that there are more believers among church congregations generally than in any other sections of society."

This statement of Mrs. Ruggles is carried out by other people in Brooklyn who were acquainted with Mr. Beecher. Since the death of the pastor of Plymouth, Mrs. Beecher has been bothered by Spiritualistic mediums, or frauds representing themselves as such, who have extended written invitations to her to attend their seances, declaring that Mr. Beecher appeared at them and talked in his old, natural way. Mrs. Beecher has not paid any attention to these letters, but friends of hers have attended the meetings. They have reported to her that the person said to be Mr. Beecher was made up to closely represent him, but that the fraud was totally unable to imitate Mr. Beecher's flow of eloquence.

Mr. Tice, who formerly kept a well-known jewelry store on Fulton street, corner of Johnson, but who retired some time since, also states that the number of Spiritualists in Brooklyn is not at all exaggerated. He himself is a warm believer in the faith. He says that of course there are a number of charlatans hanging to the skirts of Spiritualism and in its name perpetuate frauds and do the cause much harm. All great movements he says, are pestered with such parasites and he cites the number of hypocrites and scoundrels who make Christianity a cover for their misdeeds. The trouble is that outsiders confuse Spiritualists proper with those advertising frauds who on its name live on the gullibility of fools. He says that after being a Spiritualist for many years he can truthfully say that the longer he lives the better satisfied he is with the teachings and truth of his noble religion.

A clergyman whose church is near the junction of Flatbush and Atlantic avenues, says that he notices with regret the distinct tide that is setting in among his congregation toward Spiritualism. Many of his flock, he says, have come to him privately and confided to him their inward struggle with the temptation to believe in the alluring promises of Spiritualism. They tell him of things seen and heard which, he says he can not entirely ignore, as he is convinced of the reliability of his informants. At times the pastor says he is confused and perplexed at these revelations. He says that, on the one hand are certain events of whose existence he can not entertain any reasonable doubt, and, on the other, the religion of Christ, whose dogmas are in many cases diametrically opposed to the Spiritualistic creed.

He tells those who come to him for counsel to watch and wait. If the thing be of God it will last, if it be not of Him it can not remain. Still he himself is very anxious about the outcome of all these things. The matter has grown to such proportions that it can not any longer be ignored. In his opinion it will call for grave debate before long.

There are among the Brooklyn Spiritualists such well-known citizens as Judge Daley, formerly Surrogate of the county; O. E. Houghton, the dentist; Dr. J. Blake, W. H. Rhymes, Dr. F. Crockett, A. W. Bisbee, J. Lajeunesse, J. Waterman, L. Haslin and C. R. Miller, a prominent East New York real estate dealer. All of these gentlemen are men of high professional or business standing, and far above the usual order of intelligence. They are all most sincere believers in Spiritualism, and are fully prepared to give their reasons for their belief. They all regard Spiritualism as a formidable rival to recognized systems of religion.

There are two societies of Spiritualists in Brooklyn, one of which believes in the visibility of spirit forms, while the other takes opposite views of the matter.

Conference Minutes.

KEWANEE.

This district conference convened at the Saints' Chapel, on Saturday, March 10th; Elder J. W. Terry presiding, John Chisnall secretary. Morning session taken up with addresses from brethren Short, Holmes, Jones, Lord, Garland, Chisnall and others, all of whom spoke with the Spirit's presence with reference to their desires and the needs of the work in the district. Branches: Millersburg, no change. Kewanee 72; received by vote 1, died 1. Buffalo Prairie 63; baptized 1; Bro Holmes explained that the sickness of the president of the branch had doubtless hindered the names of the four that were baptized at the September conference from being reported as additions to the branch. Letters were read from F. G. Dungee of Rock Island, Nellie Williams, clerk of Henderson Grove branch. L. L. Jones and Thos. Emanuel of Canton, on the condition of the work in those localities. Bishop's Agent, John Chisnall, received $49.16, disbursed $40; balance $9.16. Elders Short, Holmes, Jones, Lord, Garland, Whitehouse and Terry reported their labors. Bro. J. W. Terry to preside the next six months, J. D. Jones secretary. Elders Terry and Short delegates to General Conference. The spiritual authorities of the church, including the district missionary, were sustained. Preaching in the evening Elder Holmes, Sunday forenoon, by Elder Short, and evening by Elder Holmes. Afternoon sacramental and fellowship service, conducted by brethren Holt and Chisnall, was thought by all present to be one of the old-time "Feasts of fat things,"—the Lord condescending to speak to the Saints through prophecy. Adjourned to Millersburg, June 23d.

SOUTHERN INDIANA.

This district conference met at Union Chapel, Jefferson county, Indiana, March the 10th, 1888, at 10:30, a. m., J. G. Scott in chair, M. R. Scott, secretary. Branches:—Olive 14; 1 baptized; Jennie Thompson, clerk. Union 28; 1 removed by letter, 2 scattered; Mayam Ford, clerk. New Trenton 15; W. W. Carmichael, clerk. Canaan 24; 2 deaths; Nancy P. Porter, clerk, James A. Scott, Bishop's agent, reported:—On hand last report $5.40, received $11.40; paid out $8.95; due church $7.95. Audited and found correct. Elders J. M. Scott, J. R. Chappelow, J. G. Scott, M. R. Scott (baptized 1); Priest W. H. Burton; Teacher W. Marshall; Deacon J. Fewell reported. By request of the Olive branch a Court of Elders was appointed to adjust difficulties in said branch. M. R. Scott and W. H. Kelley were appointed delegates to General Conference. J. G. and M. R. Scott were sustained as president and clerk. Preaching in the evening by J. M. Scott, on Sunday forenoon by J. G. Scott, and evening by M. R. Scott. Sacrament meeting in the afternoon, in charge of M. R. Scott. Adjourned to the call of the president.

LONDON, ENGLAND.

Minutes of Zion's Hope branch, Emmanuel Hall, Old Ford, London, England, quarterly meeting held Tuesday evening 6th December, 1887. J. Gerrard president, W. Gerrard clerk. The financial report showed income, £4 7s. 4½d.; Expenditures £3 6s. 8d.; paid to Bro. Biggs, office, furniture-purchase account, £1; reducing balance to 8½d. Reported in person; Elders Wm. Kendrick and F. R. Tubb; Priest J. Tankard. Elder James Gerrard, president, reported (as acting teacher,) the branch in an excellent condition, now numbers 42; 2 having been added, 1 by vote, 1 by baptism. The total ministry consisting of 7 elders, 2 priests and 2 deacons; all included in the above total. There is also a prosperous Sunday School which, under the superintendency of Elder James Gerrard, assisted by his son William as secretary, and by Bro. J. Tankard, Jun., as treasurer, is in a growing and prosperous condition; having only been in existence three months, and numbering 65 children. Resolved, that an entertainment be held on boxing-day next, accompanied by a free tea given by the superintendent and teachers to the Sabbath School children, 137 being present, to conclude with a distribution of prizes to regular and successful Sunday Scholars. The officers of the church, from our honored president downwards, were by vote sustained in righteousness. The officers of the branch were sustained by vote. Adjourned till 6th day of March, 1888.

Monday evening, March 5th. Although battling alone and unaided for the truth of our blessed Lord, the branch in this the Capital of England, is rising in numbers and, better than all in spirituality. Reports were heard from the following brethren, all being present. Elders J. Gerrard, W. Kendrick, and F. R. Tubb; Priest Joseph Tankard, Teacher J. Warman and Deacon F. Sames. Financial report: In hand, 15s. 8½d.; collected £4 12s. 9½d.; total £5 8s. 6d.; rent and expenses £5 3s. 1½d.; balance 5s. 4½d. The ordination of Priest Joseph Tankard to the office of elder, received full and earnest consideration, and the feeling being unanimous, it was decided that this ordination take place next Sabbath evening during Divine service. Services are held from 6:30 till 9:30 p. m. on Sunday evenings. At the close of the preaching service, while visitors who wished to leave were so doing, a quarter of an hour recess should be occupied in singing, previous to the commencement of sacrament and prayer and testimony meeting. Bro Kendrick was pleased to hear that another opening of the baptismal font would take place the following Sabbath evening, and it is felt and believed that others are on the verge of obedience to their Lord's command. Altogether the prospects are flattering.

TENNESSEE AND KENTUCKY.

This conference convened March 10th. Peter B. Seaton chosen to preside, and S. L. Cooper secretary. Elders S. Reed, J. H. Adair and Peter B. Seaton, (baptized 6), reported. Elder J. C. Clapp reported that he found the district in good working condition, with few exceptions; had been hindered much by bad weather and ill health, and thought it well worth sustaining an able elder in the district. Teacher S. L. Cooper, deacon J. F. Roberts reported Branches: Farmington, 24; J. H. Adair, president, P. Snow, clerk. Eagle Creek 25; H. Griffin, president, D. C. Roberts, clerk. Foundry, not reported. Peter B. Seaton was continued president, S. L. Cooper, clerk. Preaching, on Sunday forenoon and afternoon by Elder J. C. Clapp. J. C. Clapp to represent this district in General Conference. Adjourned to Foundry branch the fourth Saturday and Sunday in July, 28th and 29th.

Miscellaneous.

NOTICES.

Saints visiting or locating in Omaha will find the Saints' Chapel on North 21st street, between Clark and Grace. It would please the Saints here very much if the elders going through the city would tarry with them.

EDWARD RANNIE, Jr., Pres. Branch.
2220 Clark Street

To whom it may concern:—The silence heretofore imposed upon Elder John Parson, by Elder Heman C. Smith, presiding in the Pacific Slope Mission, and published in late Herald, has, upon appeal of said John Parson to the Presidency, been removed, and he is hereby released from the same.

JOSEPH SMITH, President.

March 15th, 1888.

C. B. & Q. TO CONFERENCE.

BORN.

HOXIE—A son born to Bro. Albert and Sr. Villa L. Hoxie, November 7th, 1888 [7], named Jesse Willard; blessed by Elder E. C. Briggs.

DIED.

At Mason's Bay, Maine, July 19th, 1887, of consumption, sister Sophronia Foss. She was born in Robbinston, Maine, in 1821; was married in Jonesport, to Francis Foss, in 1840, where she resided until her death. She joined the Latter Day Saints in 1869, was baptized by Elder Andrew McCaleb, having been a member of the Methodist Church previously. She was the mother of fifteen children and thirty-four grand children; eight of her children are members of the church: John C. a seventy, S. O. an elder, William a priest, and B. F. a teacher. She remained firm in her faith in the restored gospel until death. Funeral sermon, by her request, was preached by Elder F. M. Sheehy, assisted by U. W. Greene, to a large gathering of relatives and friends, among whom she had spent the greater part of her earth life.

"She sleeps! Her troubles here are o'er;
She sleeps where earthly ills no more
Will break the slumbers rest;
Her dust will rest beneath the sod,
Her spirit has returned to God,
To mingle with the blest."

HEPWORTH.—At her residence in Armstrong, Kansas, Sr. Sarah Elizabeth, beloved wife of Bro. George Hepworth, the 10th of March, 1888; born at Rothraham, Yorkshire, England, March 23d, 1851, aged 36 years, 11 months and 16 days. She has gone to rest in peace; leaves a loving husband and four children, a father and mother, brothers and sisters, and many friends to mourn her loss. She was baptized into the Church of Christ in 1874, and remained strong in the faith up to the end, and died with the sure hope of coming forth in the resurrection of the just. The funeral sermon at the Saints' Church in Armstrong, by Elder F. G. Pitt of Independence.

JAMES—At her home in Bevier, Missouri, 11th March, 1888, of inflammation of the stomach, Sr. Mary Jane, wife of Daniel James, and the only daughter of Edward Bennett, aged 39 years and 18 days. She was born February 22d, 1849, in Nantyglo, Monmouthshire, Wales; baptized at Bevier, by Elder T. W. Smith, August 18th, 1883. She lived a Christian life. Funeral services conducted by Bro. Ephraim Rowland.

STEWART.—At Detroit, March 23d. Addie Pearl, daughter of William and Rachel Stewart, aged 2 years and 9 months. Funeral sermon by Elder Davis.

CARRIER.—Bro. John Carrier died March 25th, 1888. He was baptized by Elder E. C. Briggs, July 9th, 1871. Funeral services at the house by Elder E. A. Shelley.

ROBERTS.—Sister Hannah, wife of Mr. William Roberts, departed this life February 26th, 1888. Born in England, June 24th, 1846; baptized at Harlan, Iowa, October 12th, 1879, by Elder John H. Lake. Funeral sermon in the Latter Day Saints' Church at Harlan by Elder J. W. Chatburn.

HOW TO KEEP WARM.

WHEN exposed to severe cold, a feeling of warmth is readily created by repeatedly filling the lungs to their utmost extent in the following manner: throw the shoulders well back, and hold the head well up. Inflate the lungs slowly, the air entering entirely through the nose. When the lungs are completely filled, hold the breath for ten seconds or longer, and then expire it quickly through the mouth. After repeating this exercise while one is chilly, a feeling of warmth will be felt over the entire body, and even in the feet and hands. It is important to practise this exercise many times each day, and especially when in the open air. If the habit ever becomes universal, then consumption and many other diseases will rarely, if ever, be heard of. Not only while practising the breathing exercise must the clothing be loose over the chest, but beginners will do well to remember, in having their clothing fitted, to allow for the permanent expansion of one, two, or even three inches, which will eventually follow. Sheets of newspaper inserted between other garment greatly increase their cold-resisting power.—Sel.

THE PREVALENT IRREVERENCE.

THE irreverence which so sadly characterizes the age intrudes itself into our public worship. There is need of attendance in some quarters to the injunction of St. Paul, "That thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the church of God." It is not reverent on entering the church to think no thought of him whose house it is, to lounge in carelessly and settle in your seat at ease without petitioning a blessing on yourself, your pastor and your fellow-worshippers.

It is not reverent to come in late, thereby conveying the idea that church attendance is a privilege that may be just as much abridged and that you care not for the opening services; nor is it fit when needfully detained to pass up to your seat during prayer.

It is not reverent to gaze about to criticise your neighbor's dress, to act in any way which indicates your mind is rather busied with your fellow-worshippers than with the business of the place.

It is not reverent to make the last amen the signal for a hasty exit, or worse, to have made previous preparations that no time may elapse in securing overcoat or hat before a start.

But it is reverent to act as though your heart and mind were occupied with worship, as though, in short, you realized "the Lord is in this place; this is no other than the house of God; this is the gate of heaven."—Our Church Work.

This is a reply by Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the church; and it is a most excellent one to be circulated both in the church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon.

LAW AND FOSTER.

DR. WYL makes William Law to say that Dr. Foster, one of his fellow persecutors, and one of his partners in publishing the Expositor at Nauvoo in 1844, was a most excellent man. That may be true enough, in the main, but it is evident, as we shall presently see, that Dr. Foster, on cool and mature reflection, when not under the influence of bad associates and evil counsels, changes his mind, radically, from what it was when he with the Laws and Higbees persecuted Joseph and Hyrum and others to their death.

Mr. Law has this to say of Dr. Foster:

"Dr. Foster was an Englishman, a fine surgeon, and a wholehearted man, when I knew him. He was zealous in the cause, until he found out the wickedness of the Smiths and other leaders. He stood by me faithfully throughout our troubles, left Nauvoo with me and remained near me for more than a year, his family and mine being close friends. He afterwards moved south and I lost track of him. * * * Dr. Foster was a fine physician and surgeon and a very agreeable, lively, interesting man."

Let us now see what this man, whom Mr. Law endorses, said of Joseph Smith as late as 1874. The temper and spirit and moral fairness of this testimony of Dr. Foster is in striking contrast with the vengeful and false statements of Mr. Law against Joseph Smith, his wife and their sons. Dr. Foster says:

LODA, Ill., Feb. 14th, 1874.

JOSEPH SMITH, President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Plano, Illinois:

DEAR SIR: Accept my sincere thanks for the favors that came to hand this day, by mail, namely, a copy of the Book of Mormon, and a copy of Parley P. Pratt's Voice of Warning; as well as your very welcome letter with your photograph enclosed; the same now occupies a page in my daughter's album and is very highly appreciated. Next in order comes many familiar names that you enumerate as co-workers in advancing the cause of gospel truth. While reading them over I was carried back some thirty odd years, and many incidents of, or about that period were made vivid in my memory; scenes that occurred when you were quite a little boy and I was in the prime of manhood. One particular circumstance I will mention, as it appears to me to be incontrovertible evidence of the fact that your father was no false pretender; but that he was a true prophet of the living God. I was practicing my profession in Kingston, in the County of Adams, in the State of Illinois, in the year 1839, and boarding with a Benjamin S. Wilber, a member of the Latter Day Saint's Church; his wife was also a member and a most excellent little lady and very intelligent. In the fall of this year, President Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, Judge Elias Higbee and Porter Rockwell, came to this house on their way to the city of Washington, in accordance with a revelation given to the Church at Commerce, (afterwards Nauvoo), through Joseph Smith, the Prophet, to lay their grievances before the President of the United States, (Martin Van Buren), for the sufferings they underwent in Missouri, from which State the church had been driven by mob law, after many of them had been inhumanly murdered, and others driven from the lands they had purchased of the United States government in that State. On the arrival of this company at Mr. Wilbers I was told by Joseph Smith, the Prophet, that if I was willing to obey the will of God and be obedient to his commandments, I must quit my practice and start the next day with them to the city of Washington, to aid them in their mission and minister to Elder Sidney Rigdon, who was very sick at that time. So, in obedience to this mandate, I suddenly closed my practice, and started the next morning, in company with these gentlemen, to visit the chief magistrate of the Union at the federal city.

I have many incidents, dottings and jottings, taken during our journey, one of which I will mention. After we got to Dayton, Ohio, we left our horses in care of a brother in the Church, and proceeded by stage, part of us; and the same coach that conveyed us over the Allegheny Mountains also had on board, as passengers, Senator Aaron, of Missouri, and a Mr. Ingersol, a member of Congress, either from New Jersey or Pennsylvania, I forget which; and at the top of the Mountain, called Cumberland Ridge, the driver left the stage and his four horses drinking at the trough in the road, while he went into the tavern to take what is very common to stage drivers, a glass of spirits. While he was gone, the horses took fright and ran away with the coach and passengers. There was also in the coach a lady with a small child, who was terribly frightened. Some of the passengers leaped from the coach, but in doing so none escaped more or less injury, as the horses were running at a fearful speed, and it was down the side of a very steep mountain. The woman was about to throw out the child, and said she intended to jump out herself; as she felt sure all would be dashed to pieces that remained, as there was quite a curve in the road, and on one side the mountain loomed up hundreds of feet above the horses, and the other side was a deep chasm or ravine, and the road only a very narrow cut on the side of the mountain, about midway between the highest and lowest parts. At the time the lady was going to throw out the child, Joseph Smith, your father, caught the woman and very imperiously told her to sit down; and that not a hair of her head or any one on the coach should be hurt. He did this in such a confident manner that all on board seemed spell-bound; and after admonishing and encouraging the passengers he pushed open one of the doors, caught by the railing around the driver's seat with one hand, and with a spring and a bound he was in the seat of the driver. The lines were all coiled around the rail above, to hold them from falling while the driver was away; he loosened them, took them in his hands, and although those horses were running at their utmost speed, he, with more than herculean strength, brought them down to a moderate canter, a trot, a walk, and at the foot of Cumberland Ridge to a halt, without the least accident or injury to passenger, horse or coach, and the horses appeared as quiet and easy afterward as though they had never run away. One by one the passengers came along, some of them limping badly, others bruised; and some of them swearing about the driver and threatening to have him arrested, &c. At last the driver took his place and we were all going along nicely, when one of the members of Congress, after hearing the history of our ride and escape, from the lady on board, said it was a miracle, and if Jo Smith could perform such a miracle he would then believe he was a Prophet sent from God. This was Mr. Ingersol. Mr. Smith and Sydney Rigdon were both travelling incog., as, if their real names had been made public on the way, especially that of Mr. Smith, we should have been very much annoyed by the inquisitive. Little did those gentlemen think that Joseph Smith was the identical man that was instrumental in the hands of God in saving that coach load of human beings from a terrible death.

We made our first stop at Gadsby's hotel, in Washington City. Our board was seventeen dollars a week each, and we sought as soon as possible Senator Richard M. Young, our senator; and, after introducing our business to him, enquired if we could not get accommodations equally as well suited to our wants, for less money, in some private boarding house. We made arrangements at once with Mrs. Carlisle, mother of Counselor Carlisle, who lived at the corner of Third and Missouri Streets; and kept our illustrious fellow travelers' names as yet incog.; which were, (Wallace and Bruce), Joseph Smith and S. Rigdon were asked for their cards, in exchange for those presented by our former fellow passengers in the stage, as this was the hotel where nearly all staid for a few days after arrival. When Mr. Smith presented his card, "Joseph Smith," the gentleman said: "Rather a notorious name. Are you any way related to the man they call the Mormon Prophet?" And your father replied, "I am he." He then introduced Sydney Rigdon, Judge Higbee and myself, and in less than two minutes it was known all over the hotel, and in an hour, all over the city; and although this was in the latter part of the afternoon, it was in print and in two different papers that evening that "Jo Smith, the Mormon Prophet, was in the city." And then cards began to roll in thick and fast, to have an interview with this wonderful man. We made the acquaintance of our Senator Young and our members of the lower house as fast as possible, according to the instructions your father had received, and laid a history of the case before Martin Van Buren, the then President of the United States; who, after hearing the whole story, said he "could do nothing for us;" that he "had no power." He said we should appeal to the executive of the State and the legislature and judiciary of the State of Missouri. Mr. Smith replied that all this had been done, and that he could get no relief nor even protection against further murder and molestation; that he and his people had been robbed, murdered, plundered, and driven from the very homes that they had bought and paid the United States government for, and still held the patents issued by them, which patents warranted and defended the soil and guaranteed peaceable possession to the purchaser; and that in consequence of this very treatment he had laid his case before Almighty God, and he had received instruction to come to Washington and lay his case before the President of the United States; and if he refused to listen to him or regard the cries of the agents thus appointed, He would speedily proceed to vex the nation. Mr. Van Buren said he had no power; that we had better lay the case before Congress; and accordingly we shaped a paper with the advice and counsel of Senator Young, and Mr. Stewart, of the House of Representatives. A memorial was drawn up and presented, with no better results than were found at any place that had been tried before. Henry Clay told us that we would never get any redress under that administration; that we had better do all we could to get a better administration, then we would get a chance. We staid there during the winter of 1839 and 1840 to testify before committees and attend to all we could in the premises and in the meantime to preach and talk to the heads of the nation upon the mission and calling of Mr. Smith in this latter day. Curiosity was on tiptoe, until many believed, and some were baptized and went back to Nauvoo, or Commerce, as it was then called.

Benjamin Winchester and Elder Barnes were preaching at that time in Philadelphia, and Mr. Smith and Mr. Higbee went there and did some preaching, leaving myself in the city of Washington to take care of Mr. Rigdon, and also to wait upon every preacher in the city, irrespective of his church organization, and particularly to declare unto them the tidings of the Latter Day Saints, committed to this generation through Joseph Smith, Jr.; and to warn them against the danger consequent upon its rejection. I commenced my duties as soon as I had any time, and called upon all the leaders of the different organizations of religion in the city. As a general thing I was pretty well received and very kindly treated. Mr. Spicer, of one branch of the Methodist persuasion, was extremely courteous, and I thought that they manifested a kind spirit; although some were apparently treating this strange doctrine with rather too much levity. I thought that my report would be uniformly favorable, but I had one more visit to make; that was to Geo. C. Cookman, the chief preacher and elder of the other branch of the Methodist Church; and he was then chaplain of the United States Senate. On my introduction he was rigid as marble and cold as an icicle. He was proud, tonguey and arrogant in the extreme. I endeavored to show him all I could of the doctrine and convince him of its importance; and asked him to lay the matter before his people, or allow me or one of our company to do so in his church at some time that he might appoint when his pulpit would be at liberty. He told me to call again at a time that he set for that purpose, as he said he would like to see me in the presence of some of his pious friends. I went and there met some six or eight gentlemen and ladies, as well as the members of his own family. He was very unkind, and treated me and the subject very cavalierly; quoting some scriptures to put me and my strong doctrines, as he thought, to confusion. I was only a neophyte in the business and trembled before this Goliath; but it so happened that while he was quoting scripture to put me down, his quotations were the strongest evidences of the truth I tried to impress upon him. He found he had got a bigger job on hand than he first anticipated, and then began to tell the meaning of the scriptures as he quoted in the Greek and Hebrew. I had a little knowledge in this department which I found very valuable, and on this score he made no headway. He then began denouncing Joseph Smith as an impostor, and his followers as dupes or knaves; and said he thought it strange that a man with as keen an eye as he said I had, with a fair share of miscellaneous capacity and intelligence, should be so deceived, and concluded that I was not a dupe but as big a knave as Smith.

I thanked him for the cross compliment, and told him he could find scholars attached to the Church that were able to read as many languages as himself, yet I believed them to be truthful and sincere servants of God; and that they would be very willing to measure their strength with him or any other opposer. I begged him to take time and consider the matter; not to decide hastily; that it was unwise to give a decision until both sides were fairly and fully before him. I asked him for his church, and told him that either Mr. Smith or Mr. Rigdon would be glad to illustrate the subject any time before him and his congregation. He said that my impudence could only be attributed to one of two causes, and he was constrained to believe it was not from ignorance, but was intended as an insult; that he would neither let me have his church nor hear anything further on the subject, and should take good care to warn his brethren and sisters against listening to any such blasphemous

my. With this he opened his library door, conducted me to the outer hall door, and refused to give me his hand. I reported this to Mr. Rigdon and wrote to Philadelphia to Mr. Smith the result of my labors. On the following Sunday this same George C. Cookman preached in his church, and told some strange tales; that he had had an interview with Jo Smith, that arch impostor; and that the doctrines he taught were very irreligious and inconsistent with Bible truth; that he, Smith, did not believe in the Bible, but had got a new one dug up in Palmyra, New York; and that it was nothing but an irreligious romance, and that Smith had obtained it from the widow of one Spaulding who wrote it for his own amusement. I wrote this to Mr. Smith, and he said there must be some preaching in Washington to counteract these statements, as he was sure God had some people in that city. We first got an upper room of an engine house to speak in; but half, no, not a quarter of the people could get in. We had speaking then in the open air on Pennsylvania Avenue, near that place, and gave out that there would be further services as soon as a room could be obtained. Before night some people secured the use of Carus's saloon, one of the largest and most suitable rooms in the city, outside the capitol building, and at night there was held services. A great many of the members of Congress and heads of departments were present, as well as Martin Van Buren. We, of the committee from Illinois, all took the speaker's desk. And when near the close, who should come into the hall but Joseph Smith himself. We speedily got him up on the stand and I had the honor of introducing him to that vast audience. He had just come in on the train from Philadelphia, and was tired; but he arose by the invitations of many who called for him, and on that occasion he uttered as a prophecy one of the most wonderful predictions of his life. He adverted to the statements made by this George C. Cookman, declaring them to be wilfully and wickedly false, and that if he, Cookman, did not take it back and acknowledge that he had dealt falsely of him, his people, and his own congregation, that he must turn and preach the truth and quit deceiving the people with fables; he should be cut off from the face of the earth, both he and his posterity. And he said that this should be so plainly manifest, that all should know it. At this, many gentlemen took out of their pockets their tablets, and began to take notes of the prophesy; and Mr. Smith noticing them, "Yes," said he, "write it on your tablets; write it in a book; write it in your memory; for as sure as God ever spoke by my mouth all these things shall come to pass."

Henry Clay, Felix Grundy, Tom Benton, John Q. Adams and many other celebrated characters were present at this time. Now, instead of Cookman doing according to justice and truth, he became more virulent than ever, and laid all the obstacles in our way that he could during our stay in the city. The matter appeared to be forgotten by many, and I thought often upon the subject, having taken notes also. Soon after this, there was an extraordinary excitement in the religious world, and they appointed a Conference of all orthodox religions to assemble in England at a certain time, to adopt measures of harmony between all the sects; the United States were invited and accepted a part in these proceedings, to break down the partition wall that separated the various churches. George C. Cookman was elected or appointed as a delegate for the District of Columbia, to represent his views on the subject; standing, as he did, at the very head of the church, and Chaplain of the United States Senate. Now, he being an Englishman by birth, and his family in suitable circumstances for a pleasure trip; at the appointed time he, Cookman thought it would be very pleasant to take his whole family with him, and this he did; both he, his wife, and all his children went on board the steamship President, and neither the ship nor a soul is left to tell what was their sad end. But the prophecy is fulfilled to the letter, and the words uttered on that occasion have never been forgotten by me; nor I presume by hundreds of others. Had Cookman went alone it might be charged to chance; but why was it that his whole family were so suddenly cut off, both root and branch.

This, sir, is one of many wonderful evidences that Joseph Smith was as much of a Prophet as Jonah, who foretold the destruction of Nineveh; or Nahum, who prophesied concerning the present locomotion for traveling; both of them took centuries and one of them thousands of years for their fulfillment; but the prophecy by Joseph Smith on George C. Cookman has been literally fulfilled in the shortest possible period; and that too in its fullness, beyond the possibility of question from any source.

On my return from Washington, I moved to Nauvoo, and there I was able to learn more fully of the doctrine and the people who belonged to the Church. I have many records of prophecies, and the doings and teachings I heard at that city that are marvelous to me; and I have had no means of ascribing many of them to any other source than the power that holds all things by His sovereign will, and makes known his purposes through His servants the Prophets.

I will here mention that I was the accepted physician of the Church; was at the bedside of the aged Patriarch, Joseph Smith, Senior, at his death; received his nearly last blessing, taken down by a scribe at the time, and have it yet. I was also present at the death of Don Carlos Smith; was intimate in the families of all, and was recommended by Joseph Smith very highly; and on one occasion, when Brigham Young came home from England, I was sent for in great haste to administer to him, as he was very sick and in great danger of dying. I was successful in getting him through that terrible prostrate situation in which I found him. Joseph Smith was present on the occasion, and told him to take what I prescribed, and he did so. After this, in talking with Mr. Smith on the subject and telling him what I considered his disease, he said I was right; and remarked in the presence of Mr. Law, Bishop Knight, John P. Green, Reynolds Cahoon, and some others, that "if ever Brigham Young became the leader of the Church, he would lead them down to hell." I little thought that he would ever occupy that position, but he has it over one branch of the Church at least; and from all accounts he is filling the letter of the prophecy.

You are at perfect liberty to use anything I write in any way you may deem best for the purpose of benefitting the honest in heart; for what I write is nothing but the truth, as it was uttered in my presence, and has often been spoken by me since the death of Joseph Smith, your father.

I will tell you also another prophecy that Joseph Smith uttered in my presence, that has been proved true. That was in relation to Stephen A. Douglas; he said he was a giant in intellect, but a dwarf in stature; that he would yet run for President of the United States, but that he would never reach that station; that he would occupy a conspicuous place in the councils of the nation and have multitudes of admiring friends, and that in his place he would introduce and carry out some of the most gigantic measures in the history of the nation. This was said when Douglas was Judge in that district of Illinois, and before he ever went to Congress. Has it not been fulfilled? Did he not get Andrew Jackson's fine remitted by law, a thing that was by all considered impossible? Did he not introduce the bills for the covering of Illinois with railroads, without one cent's expense to the general government? Under his management were not the Illinois bonds raised from a condition nearly worthless to a value nearly par with currency? Did he not rule in and through the State of Illinois, work and carry out its destiny for twenty consecutive years, more than any and all other men together? Was he not always one of the greatest men in the Senate? Did he not do more for the line of compromise on slavery than any other one man? Did he not say, "and cursed be the ruthless hand that attempts to remove it?" Did he not run for President and get defeated? Did he not take the most active part in removing or breaking down that line of compromise? Let the history of Kansas and Nebraska tell the story! Did he not fulfill his destiny and, at last, on his dying bed, bequeath his children to his country, and counsel them to obey the laws and the constitution? Did he not utter these memorable words at the commencement of the rebellion, "That there were only two parties in all the land; the one he called Patriots, the other Traitors?" Was it not true? Did he not throw his adhesion to A. Lincoln at the time of deep trouble? And does he not now occupy an honored spot in the memory of his many friends, and a sacred spot in his own loved city of Chicago? Yes; this prophecy has been literally fulfilled in my day, and I bear testimony to its truth, when compared with history.

This is enough for this time, I have many things yet to say, but will wait your report on this, and perhaps you will scarcely be able to read my poor writing; for I am a poor scribe, and in consequence of a cataract on my eyes, am nearly blind. * * *

With considerations of very kind regards, I am, sir, yours for the truth.

THOMPSONISM.

WE have before us the "Cypz Herald," edited and published by Charles B. Thompson and A. Grist, 2244, Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. Sketching the document rapidly we readily see it is of a piece with "Zion's Harbinger and Banne-my's Organ," edited by this same C. B. Thompson at Preparation, Monona county, Iowa, about 1854-6.

This Mr. Thompson prevailed on many to put their property into a "Common property" concern, fixing the titles in him and his family, the result of which was a demand for a pro rata division of the property, which he refused; then came wrath, the rapid running away of Thompson and his pals, threats of hanging them if found near Preparation, a protracted and expensive lawsuit followed, in and by which the property was divided up—what remained of it—among those who paid it in, pro rata.

We see he still claims that fleshly regeneration is the highway to holiness and heaven; but if he can't furnish a better specimen in that line than C. B. Thompson, we may conclude that it works in the wrong direction and will land its devotees down on the low level of Darwin's primal progenitor—the cunning, thieving monkey.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELDER M. R. SCOTT wrote us the 29th from Riseville, Indiana, that a Rev. Brown who had there threatened to demolish Mormonism on short notice, when offered a joint discussion with Bro. Scott on the relative merits of the authorized doctrines of the Campbellite Church and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, backed squarely down, and that the popular report is that Elder Scott is master of the situation. Bro. Scott had baptized some. On the 30th he wrote that excitement ran high, three more were to be baptized that evening, and others believing.

Bro. James Cazier wrote of late from Moscow, Idaho, remitting for church publications and expressing heartfelt gratitude for being a member of God's church on earth. He thinks if a faithful, intelligent, spiritual elder would labor in that place and vicinity a large branch could be established, for the people seem favorable to the doctrine of the Saints. He also says he has been loaning his papers and church books with good results. This is wise, and all the Saints would do well to profit by the example, for when the people learn of doctrines from our own books, prejudice is subdued and souls saved.

Sr. Ella M. Fuhr, of Grove Hill, Iowa, asks that General Conference provides that the gospel be thoroughly preached in that region soon, for they have had no preaching there of late, and that they are willing to aid temporarily what they can. She says: "The field is white, but no laborers to gather in the grain." She resides twenty-two miles east of Waverly, and fifteen miles west of Oelwein, in Bremer county.

Sr. Ellen Fletcher wishes us to say that her house is six miles south and four west of Pawnee City, Nebraska, and that she and others wish the ministry to call on them and preach there.

Miley Young writes from Ola, Lucas county, Iowa, subscribes for the HERALD, and says he would be glad to have some of our ministers call and preach there; also that the M. E. preacher there would be glad to meet them in discussion. Can not Elder Stebbins provide the call?

The "Woman's Standard," edited by Mary J. Caggeshall, and published in Des Moines, Iowa, is one of our most interesting exchanges. It is a warm, strong advocate of the social, legal and political interest of woman, and—of course—of woman's right to the elective franchise.

J. H. Jackson, clerk of Central Nebraska district, informs us that at the conference held February 25th, Clearwater numbered 69 members, instead of 9, as published.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH was interviewed by representatives of the Los Angeles (Cal.) papers of late, and we publish below what the Times of the 24th ult. had to say about him. The Herald and Tribune had lengthy reports of their interviews, but they got matters so mixed and muddled that Mr. Smith would have abundant cause for joining Ben Butler in deploring the vanity and vexation of the average newspaper reporter. But the Times is commendably correct in its brief article.

A SON OF JOSEPH SMITH IN THIS CITY.

A Times reporter yesterday called at the residence of F. P. Schnell, 119 North Bunker Hill avenue, and interviewed Joseph Smith of the Reorganized Mormon Church.

The present Joseph Smith is the oldest son of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, and was born at Kirtland, Lake county, Ohio, on November 6th, 1832. Mr. Smith has been a member of the Church of Jesus Christ, as founded by his father, on April 6th, 1830, up to the present time, and is now president of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa. The Reorganized Church is in contradistinction to the Brighamite Church in Utah, and is anti-polygamic, and believes that a man should have but one wife at a time, and holds that there is but one sufficient cause for divorce—marital unfaithfulness. This rule of marriage obtained in the church from 1835 to the death of Joseph Smith, in 1844, as shown by their published creed.

Mr. Smith here produced a book of "Doctrine and Covenants," printed at Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1846, by John Taylor, deceased, late president of the Utah Church, in which the one-wife doctrine is clearly declared in the following language:

"We believe that one man should have one wife, and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again."

Mr. Smith visits California for the purpose of looking after the interests of the different branches of the church, and a brief respite from editorial duties, and recuperation. He has been on the Pacific Coast since January 22d, and will depart for the East on Sunday evening to attend an annual conference to be held at Independence, Missouri, on April 6th. At that time there will be delegates from over four hundred different churches in the United States, Canada, Australia, England and Wales.

Neither Mr. Smith nor any of his family followed Brigham Young to Utah nor believe in polygamy. Joseph Smith, at the time of his death, had three sisters and a brother, neither of whom followed the teachings in Utah.

Mr. Smith will preach at eleven o'clock Sunday morning at Knights of Pythias Hall, No. 24 South Spring street.

STUDENTS' SOCIETY OF LAMONI.

THIS society is making fine progress, and seems to be blessed of God and favored of man. They study the sacred books of the church in a regular, systematic manner, ask and answer questions in respect to their lessons, and thus mutually aid each other in learning well the matters they have in hand.

Bro. E. Stafford, when meditating on their work, was assured by the Holy Spirit that their labors, if faithfully continued, would result in great good, and he thereupon wrote them "the whisperings of the Spirit" concerning their work, which they prize for its advice and encouragement.

THE following is taken from the Ohio State Journal of March 28th, sent by Bro. A. B. Kirkendall, of Creola, Ohio:

MORMONS IN OHIO.

Your correspondent had the pleasure of attending the district conference of the Church of Latter Day Saints held at Limerick, Ohio, in this county, the 17th and 18th instants. Perhaps a short sketch of this people would not be uninteresting to the readers of the State Journal. I found them a hospitable people, sociable to non-members as well as among themselves, plain in their manner of dress, thrifty, sober and industrious, and in high standing among their neighbors. In their services, business meetings or deliberative assemblies they do not differ from other churches.

Although they are called Mormons, they do not acknowledge the name and repudiate all the claims of Brigham Young and his followers and cling tenaciously to the pure, simple doctrines promulgated by Joseph Smith from 1830 to the time of his death in 1844. They claim Brigham Young is an apostate, who, by cunningly devised schemes and by the aid of confederates instituted the doctrines of polygamy, Adam-God worship, blood atonement, that is, human sacrifice, and other kindred heretical doctrines, and succeeded in making people think that Joseph Smith taught these doctrines. But strange to say that none of these doctrines were made known until eight years after the death of the "Prophet Joseph," as they term him.

They have this fact on their side of their argument, that not one of these pernicious doctrines are sanctioned in the accepted works of the church prior to 1852, when Brigham made this doctrine public for the first time. Then they point to the fact that Joseph Smith was a man in the fullest meaning of the term, capable of begetting children until the time of his assassination in 1844. There being no polygamous children born until 1847 is very strong presumptive evidence that their arguments on this point are correct.

They are flatly opposed to polygamy, and refer to their standard work, the "Book of Mormon," page 116, where the statement is made: "Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken unto the word of the Lord, for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife and concubines he shall have none, for I, the Lord, delighteth in the chastity of women." The Brighamites treat the Book of Mormon like a last year's almanac—very good in its time, but no good since we have received the perfect law.

They believe in the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith; that he was the instrument in divine hands for bringing back or restoring primitive Christianity to earth again. Men had strayed away from God, and added to and taken from the original form of doctrine as instigated by Jesus Christ and his apostles; they had, as the immortal John Wesley said, "Turned heathen again, and had only a dead form left," God having rejected the people as a church, and taken the authority of the priesthood up into heaven, hence a restoration was necessary.

When "the fulness of the times," 1830, had arrived, the gospel in all its primitive power was restored, in fulfillment of Revelations xiv. 6, and the church exists in full power and authority and is preaching the gospel to all the world as a witness of the near approach of the end of all earthly things. Soon Christ will appear and set up his kingdom on this earth, after its final purification, and the faithful Saints will reign with Him forever.

This church has no small following, having a membership of over three hundred in Jackson, Highland, Vinton and Meigs counties. These men must not be confounded with the ones that were mobbed in Adams county, Ohio, last week. Those were Brighamites. These are like those at Kirtland, Lake county, Ohio.

WE take the following paragraph from the St. Joseph (Mo.), Herald of March 31st. It is an added evidence of "grace and favor."

"WANT IT HELD IN ST. JOSEPH.

"On April 6th, the national convention of the Latter Day Saints is held at Independence, Missouri. The church has in the states a membership of 30,000, and about 500 delegates attend its national meeting. The Manufacturer's Bureau at its last meeting decided to extend an invitation through Mr. Robert Winning, for holding the next national meeting in St. Joseph. The move was a good one and every effort should be made to further the success of the undertaking."

THE following clipping sent us by Bro. Thomas Taylor, of Birmingham, England, is a large "Straw" in the theological minds of Sectarianism and indicates that some are tending toward original, genuine Christianity. The open, fairly interpreted Bible, will lead all lovers of truth to the foundations laid of God in Christ Jesus, and taught by former day apostles, as recorded in the sacred word. May the good work go on—and we know it will!

MR. SPURGEON AT EXETER HALL.

Yesterday morning the first of a series of meetings for enforcing "The Fundamental Truths of the Gospel" was held at Exeter Hall, under the auspices of the Evangelical Alliance. There was a large attendance. Mr. Spurgeon began by reading the passage in which the Apostle declares the man "accursed" who should preach any other gospel than that which he himself preached, and observed that he would not use stronger language than Paul. The unchangeableness of the Gospel was his subject. Those who thought it was not unchangeable would do great service by clearly showing what parts of the Bible could be relied upon as inspired. Let them print a new edition, with the really trustworthy portions in black ink and the doubtful in red. The world was the same now as formerly; there was the same sin among us as in Sodom and Gomorrah, as the revelations of a few years ago showed. The needs of men were the same. The weapons to be used must be the same; let them fling away the wooden swords that some offered, and put their trust in the old Jerusalem blade. He did not care what science might say; in the end it would be seen that the Word of God could never contradict the works of God.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Have not members the right to use the consecrated oil otherwise than when administered to them by elders?

Ans.—Yes; but not in the capacity, nor by the authority of the priesthood. They should use only with the prayer of faith, in the absence of the elders.

MRS. STENHOUSE ON MOR- MONISM.

THE intelligent reader will easily perceive how Mrs. Stenhouse, like thousands of others, have become confused, blinded and bewildered in regard to the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints. For so long as the ministry observed the teachings set forth in the sacred books, those books approved of the church in the days of Joseph the Seer, and so long as they builded the church in harmony with them, God blessed their efforts mightily and gave them wonderful success; but when strange and heretical doctrines crept in, then the Spirit of God was grieved and withdrew. And this suggests that when those deceived and misled will return to their "first love," God will accept and bless as at the first.

Mrs. Stenhouse writes to the Christian Herald and Signs of our Times, published in England, as follows:

About eighteen months before I visited Southampton, one of the Mormon missionaries had come into that town, "without purse or scrip." He was quite a young man and almost penniless, but he was rich in faith and overflowing with zeal. He knew no one there; and homeless, and frequently hungry, he continued his labors. Of fasting he knew much, of feasting nothing. He first preached under the branches of a spreading beech tree in a public park, and when more favored he held forth in a school-room or public hall. He had come to convert the people to Mormonism, or he was going to die among them; and before such zeal and determination, discouragements, of course, soon vanished away. He troubled the ministers of other dissenting churches when they found him distributing tracts and talking to their people. He was sowing broadcast dissatisfaction and discontent wherever he could get any one to listen to him, and thus he drew down upon himself the eloquence of the dissenting pulpits and the derision of the local press. But the more they attacked him the more zealously did he labor, and defied his opponents to public discussion. Mormonism was bold then in Europe—it had no American history to meet in those days. This, and a great deal more, I had heard discussed in glowing language by my relatives and friends; and thus the young missionary—Elder Stenhouse—was, by name, no stranger to me.

It was Elder Stenhouse who now addressed the meeting, and I listened to him with attention. The reader must remember that at that time polygamy was unheard of as a doctrine of the Saints, and the blood atonement, the doctrine that Adam is God, together with the polytheism and priestly theocracy of after years, were things undreamed of. The saving love of Christ, the glory and fulness of the everlasting gospel, the gifts and graces of the Spirit, together with repentance, baptism, and faith, were the points upon which the Mormon teachers touched; and who can wonder that with such topics as these, and fortifying every statement with powerful and numerous texts of Scripture, they should captivate the minds of religiously inclined people? However this may be, I can only confess that, as I listened to Elder Stenhouse's earnest discourse, I felt my antipathy to Mormonism rapidly melting away.

At the close of the service, when he left the platform, he was warmly received by the brethren and sisters, for so the Saints speak of one another, and they came about him to shake hands, or it might be to seize the opportunity of slipping a trifle into his hand to help him in his work. Young and old, the poor and the more wealthy neighbors, mingled together like one happy family. It was altogether a most pleasing scene; and, whatever explanation may yet be given to Mormonism in America, one thing I know—the fact of its early history in Europe are among the most pleasant reminiscences of my life.

Elder Stenhouse came up in a familiar and open-hearted way to my mother and sisters, and I was introduced to him as "the other daughter from France." He kindly welcomed me, and when I frankly told him the state of my mind, he made, I must admit, a successful attempt to solve my doubts, and when I left the meeting it was with sentiments toward the Saints and their religion far different from those which I entertained when I entered. This meeting was a memorable era in my life.

In the afternoon I attended a meeting of a still more interesting character. These Sunday afternoon meetings were held for the purpose of receiving the Sacrament, and the confirmation of those who had been baptized during the week; they were intended exclusively for the Saints, but for certain reasons I was permitted to be present. The meeting was opened with singing and prayer, and then the presiding elder—brother Cowdy—arose, and invited all those who had been baptized during the week to come to the front seats. Several ladies and gentlemen came forward, and also three little children. Upon inquiry I found that children of eight years of age were admitted members of the church by baptism—which is administered by immersion. At that age they are supposed to understand what they are doing; but before that, if of Mormon parents, they are considered members of the church by virtue of the blessing which they received in infancy. Brother Cowdy—the presiding elder—then called upon two other elders to assist him in the confirmation. One of the ladies took off her bonnet, but retained her seat, when all three of the elders placed their hands upon her head, and one of them said: "Martha: by virtue of the authority vested in us, we confirm you a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and as you have been obedient to the teachings of the elders, and have gone down into the waters of baptism for the remission of your sins, we confer upon you the gift of the Holy Ghost, that it may abide with you for ever, and be a lamp unto your feet, and a light upon your pathway, leading and guiding you into all truth. This blessing we confirm upon your head in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

Then, before they took their hands off her head, the presiding elder asked the other two if they wished to say anything. Whereupon one of them began to invoke a blessing upon the newly confirmed sister. He spoke for some time with extreme earnestness, when suddenly he was seized with a nervous trembling which was quite perceptible, and which evidently betokened intense mental or physical excitement. He began to prophecy great things for this sister in the future, and in solemn and mysterious language proclaimed the wonders which God would perform for her sake. When we consider the excited state of her mind, and—if the statements of psychologists be true—the magnetic currents which were being transmitted from the sensitive nature of the man into the excited brain of the new convert, together with the pressure of half-a-dozen human hands upon her head, it is not at all astonishing that when the hands were lifted off she should firmly believe that she had been blessed indeed. She had been told that she should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; and she did not for an instant doubt that her expectations had been realized. Each of the newly-baptized went through the same ceremony, and then they all partook of the sacrament, when, after another hymn, the meeting was closed with prayer.

In the evening I returned to listen to a lecture upon "the character, spirit, and genius" of the new church, delivered by Elder Stenhouse; and I was captivated by the picture which he drew of the marvelous latter day work which he affirmed had already begun. The visions of bygone ages were again vouchsafed to men; angels had visibly descended to earth; God had raised up in a mighty way a prophet, as of old, to preach the dispensation of the last days; gifts of prophecy, healing, and the working of miracles were now, as in the days of the apostles, witnesses to the power of God. The long-lost tribes of Israel were about to be gathered into the one great fold of Christ; and the fulness of the Gentiles being come, they, too, were to be taken under the care of the Good Shepherd. All were freely invited to come and cast away their sins, ere it was too late; and the fullest offers of pardon, grace, sanctification, and blessing, in this world and in the next, were presented to every repentant soul.

Surely, I thought, these are the self-same doctrines which my mother taught me, when I knelt beside her in childhood, and which I have so often heard—only in colder and less persuasive language—urged from the pulpits of those whom I have ever regarded in the light of true disciples of Jesus. Who can wonder that I listened with rapt attention, and that my heart was even then half won to the new faith? The days passed; and as I pondered over these things it appeared to me that I had at last found that which I had so long earnestly desired and prayed for—a knowledge of that true religion for which the Savior presented himself a holy sacrifice, and which the apostles preached at the peril of their lives—the only faith, in which I might find joy and peace in believing.

But why should I dwell upon those moments, soul-absorbing as was their interest to me then—sadly-pleasing as is their memory now? The reader can see the drift of my thoughts at that time; and I feel sure, although I have but hastily sketched the causes which brought about these great changes in my religious belief and in my life, that he will not hastily accuse me of fickleness and love of change, if he himself has fought the battles of the soul, and has learned even in a slight measure to realize the mystery of his inner being. Each day the finger of destiny drew me nearer to the final step. The young elder, whose words I had listened to with such strange and, to me, momentous results, was intimate with my father's family, and called frequently to see us, and before long he convinced me that it was my duty to test for myself whether the work was of God or not. In the agitated state of my mind at that time, I could not withstand the earnest appeals which were made to my affections and hopes; and within two weeks after my arrival in England I became formally a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; or in more popular language—I became a Mormon. The day was fixed for my baptism. Several others were to be baptized at the same time; for scarcely a week passed without quite a number of persons joining the church. For this purpose we all repaired to a bath-house on the banks of the Southampton river. This place was not perhaps the most convenient, and it certainly was devoid of the slightest tinge of romance; but it was the only one available to the Saints at that time.

When we were all assembled and had united in singing and prayer, Elder Stenhouse went down into the water first, and then two men went down and were baptized, and came up again. Now came my turn. I was greatly agitated, for I felt all the solemnity of the occasion. I had dressed myself very neatly and purely, for I believe that angel eyes were upon me; I wished to give myself—a perfect and acceptable offering—to my God, and I was filled with a determination henceforth to devote my whole life to his service.

As I went down into the waters of baptism, how thankful I felt that it had been my privilege to hear the gospel in my youth, for now I could give my heart in all its freshness to the Lord, before it had been chilled by the cold, hard experience of life.

I descended the steps, and Elder Stenhouse came forward and led me out into the water; then, taking both my hands in one of his, he raised his other hand toward heaven, and in a solemn and impressive voice, he said: "Fanny: by virtue of the authority vested in me, I baptize you for the remission of your sins, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

Then he immersed me in the water; and as I reascended the steps I really felt like another being; all my past was buried in the deep—the waters of baptism had washed away my sins; and a new life lay open before me, in which my footsteps would be guided by the inspired servants of God. All now would be peace and joy within me, for I had obeyed the commands of God, and I doubted not that I should receive the promised blessing, and that now I could indeed go on my way rejoicing.

My baptism took place one Saturday afternoon, and the afternoon following I was confirmed a member of the church. Elder Stenhouse presided at the meeting, and he, with Elder Cowdy, and two other elders, confirmed me. As the "blessing" which I then myself received differs somewhat from the one which I have already given, and as it is a very fair specimen of those effusions, I present it to the readers in full.

Elder Stenhouse, Elder Cowdy, and the two other elders placed their hands solemnly upon my head, and Elder Stenhouse said: "Fanny: by virtue of the authority vested in me, I confirm you a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and inasmuch as you have been obedient to the command of God, through His servants, and have been baptized for the remission of your sins, I say unto you that those sins are remitted. And in the name of God I bless you and say unto you, that inasmuch as you are faithful and obedient to the teachings of the priesthood, and seek the advancement of the kingdom, there is no good thing that your heart can desire that the Lord will not give unto you. You shall have visions and dreams, and angels shall visit you by day and by night. You shall stand in the temple in Zion, and administer to the Saints of the Most High God. You shall speak in tongues, and prophesy, and the Lord shall bless you abundantly, both temporally and spiritually. These blessings I seal upon your head, inasmuch as you shall be faithful; and I pray heaven to bless you; and say unto you—Be thou blessed in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen." After the meeting, I received the congratulations of all the Saints present, and more particularly those of my own family. My dear mother and father were overjoyed; and I now learned how anxious they had been, and how they had feared that I should return to France and reject the faith of the new dispensation. Altogether we were very happy.

Elder Stenhouse and Elder Cowdy returned home with us to tea, and afterwards we all attended the usual evening lecture. In this way was passed one of the happiest days of my life—one which I shall ever remember—and yet that memory will always be mingled with regret that so much love and devotion as I then felt were not enlisted in a better cause.

Thus began a new era in my life. All my former friends and associations were now to be remembered no more; my lot was cast among the Saints; and in the state of my mind at that time, I believed that I should be happy in my new position, and resolved to give evidence of the sincerity of my faith. The untiring energy and restless activity of Elder Stenhouse was ever before our eyes, and inspired all who associated with him with a similar enthusiasm. There were no drones in that hive. The brethren at a word from him, would roam the country, teaching and preaching in the open air, while the sisters would go from house to house in the city, distributing tracts about the new faith. I caught the enthusiasm of the rest, and was soon in the ranks with the other sisters, as devoted in my endeavors as a young, ambitious heart could be. I was indeed like one born again from an old existence into a new life. I felt grateful and happy—I began to dream of the eternal honor which crowns a faithful missionary life; and I soon found an ample field for testing my fitness for that vocation.

At the time of which I speak, the Primitive Methodists in England were doing a great work in the way of converting sinners. Their missionaries were zealous and devoted men, though generally poor and uneducated. They resembled very closely the Mormon elders in their labors; and, in fact, a very large number of the leading Mormons had been Methodist local preachers; and the greater number of the new-born Saints had come from that denomination with their former teachers, or had followed them soon after. The change from Methodist to Mormon was, in course of time, very strongly marked; but for a considerable period the same, or what seemed the same, influences were at work among the people. Remarkable scenes of excitement were often witnessed at the "love feasts;" and from the "anxious seats," as they were called, might be heard the entreaties of self-accusing souls, frightened by a multitude of sins, crying earnestly, nay, wildly, for grace, mercy, and the Holy Ghost; while many of the supplicants would fall upon the ground, completely overcome by nervous excitement. Then they would have visions, and behold great and unutterable things; received the forgiveness of their sins; and coming back to consciousness, believed themselves now to be the children of God, and new creatures; doubting not that they would ever after be happy in the Lord. The experience of the Saints at their meetings, when Mormonism was first preached, was exactly similar to this. Into the psychological, moral, or religious causes of these scenes of excitement I can not here enter;—I simply mention facts as they came under my own observation.

The Mormon Missionary often came upon whole communities in the rural districts of England, where this "good time" was in full operation; and being a man of texts he would follow up the revival, preaching that the spirit of the prophet was subject to the prophet, and not the prophet subject to the spirit. Controversy would arise, and his appeal to Scripture, literally interpreted, was almost invariably triumphant. Even in America, especially in New York and Ohio, the same causes produced the same effects. It was after his mind was excited by a general revival near his native place, that Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, received his first religious impression. His followers, even in the early days of the church, and revival meetings and meetings at which the most extraordinary excitement was manifested,—when the Saints fell into ecstatic trances, saw heaven opened, and spake with tongues. But Joseph, shrewd man as he was, albeit "a prophet," when he found too many rival seers were coming into the field, announced by special revelation, that these too-gifted persons were possessed by devils, and their visions and prophesyings must be at once suppressed. And he did suppress them. Not long after my own baptism I was present at a meeting of this description in Southampton. It was called a testimony "meeting," and was held in a large upper room situated, if I rightly remember, in Chandos Street. No one from the outside would have supposed that it was the place of assembly of the Saints, for it was generally used for ordinary secular meetings, and I have heard that great objections were at first raised as to the propriety of letting it to the Mormons.

As we entered the door, we were saluted by brother Williams, who expressed great pleasure at seeing us. There was a full attendance of the Saints, and every face wore an expression of peaceful earnestness. A person who has never attended a Mormon meeting can form no idea of the joyous spirit which seemed to animate every one present. I am not, of course, speaking of modern meetings, but of meetings as they used to be. Whence and whatever that "spirit" might be which moved the sisters and brethren when they met in early times, I can not tell; but I, and with me ten thousand Mormons and seceding Mormons in Utah, can testify that that spirit no longer visits the Tabernacle services over which Brigham Young presides, or the meetings of the Saints since they adopted the accursed doctrine of polygamy, and forsook the gentle leadings of their first love. Often have I heard Mormons of good standing and high position in the church, lament the "good old times" as they called them, when the outpouring of the Spirit was so abundant, and mourn over the cold, barren services of the present day. But the elders say it is the fault of the people themselves, and because their own hearts have become cold.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"God blesses still the generous thought
And still the fitting word he speeds,
And truth at his requiring taught
He quickens into deeds."

Sisters of the Home Column:—It has not been from lack of interest that I have not appeared among you for so long. I always scan the Column first when the Herald comes in its weekly visits; I am pleased to read the testimonies about the truth and work of the gospel. But, sisters, it has been a question in my mind as to whether this is the true work of the Mothers' Home Column; it appears to me that the writers are losing sight of its object, which it was understood to be for the gaining of helpful knowledge and suggestions for the rearing and training of children and care of home. But these subjects of so much importance scarcely appear in the Column; almost everything seems to be thought of before home interests, so far as it finds a place in the Column. I can well understand how large a share the preaching and spread of the gospel has in all of our hearts, but it places us in the position of onlookers instead of workers. To write of our joy and interest in the work, so dear to all our hearts, is not objected to so long as we do not overlook its practical workings in our homes.

I submit a few propositions to the Home Column for consideration. First, that we have a stated time set apart for concert of prayer for special objects,—for wisdom and guidance in the training of the young under our care, as mothers, teachers or guardians; for the conversion of those out of the fold, and the preservation of those in it; for the sick and afflicted who make request for it, or any other special object desired.

"In union there is strength," and I believe this method will also aid the disseminating of sympathy, Christian fellowship and love; that is, one hour of one day in each week for all who have an interest in this work, to lay aside all other cares and pursuits and let our united prayers ascend for the objects in view. Special subjects for each week could appear in the column, and thus all whom the Herald could reach in that time could take part; the day and hour appointed to be the same every week. Then in our letters we can tell of the benefits and answers received; for I do not doubt of the blessings that would flow from it.

Every mother gains experience of some kind, whether of success or failure; often one is as valuable for its lesson as the other, when imparted to the inexperienced. The interchange or discussion of these lessons in the "Column" would be of incalculable benefit.

I offer these suggestions with heart-felt desire for the good of the care-worn, burdened mothers; some of them, no doubt, will be able to improve on these few hints and by our united action grow into the fellowship of the Spirit and of one another. It can not be expected that the editor should contribute the chief interest every week, She will be powerless to prevent the decline of the "Column," if the mothers themselves, in whose hands are its usefulness and success, are indifferent to its best interests. If these measures meet the approval of the sisters, I will write more upon it.

In gospel bonds,

ELEANOR.

BASS, Western Port, Victoria, Australia, Jan. 26th.

Dear Sister Frances:—I often feel inclined to write to you, yet amidst the every day duties there seems to be no time, and I keep putting it off till a more convenient season. Now I begin to see the "convenient season" will not come of itself, so I will put aside all else to-night and write to you. I feel my inability to write just such a letter as I should like too, or as the sisters write from time to time in the Herald. However, my desire is to tell the sisters how we appreciate their efforts, and to thank them for the words of comfort and encouragement which we gain from reading the Herald. The Home Column seems to give us fresh energy and strength to press forward. I feel to say God bless all those noble sisters who help on this glorious latter day work of the Lord's. We so much like to know of the advancement of the Saints in the far off lands; and I am being led to think they are equally interested in our welfare.

As you are probably aware, Bro. and Sr. T. W. Smith have arrived, and with Bro. and Sr. Burton there has been excellent meetings at Queensferry; and we have enjoyed the gifts of the gospel. We have had several testimony meetings. Many who never before gave a testimony having done so lately. I am sure we all feel better and happier for having done so. They had an excellent meeting at Queensferry last night, the best ever held there. How I should like to have been with them, though I feel I have had quite a feast lately. Through the kindness of one of the brethren I have been enabled to attend most of the meetings lately. We are five miles distant from the branch; too far to walk and carry baby; yet I have a great deal to think of, and examine myself to find out in what I am wanting. There is much for me to be thankful for. I feel my unworthiness, yet I desire to live nearer and nearer to God, to be humble and patient, and to know more of the things of the kingdom. I desire the prayers of the brethren and sisters in our branch, and though I may not make the same advancement as they who are privileged to attend the meetings, still I shall hold on to the "rod of iron."

We are all so sorry for Bro. Stewart, who is still suffering, and though he suffers a great deal of pain it is wonderful with what patience he bears his affliction. To each heart who will accept it, a great lesson is being taught, a lesson of patience and meekness. He is much loved by the Saints, and also loved and respected by the public in general. May God bless and strengthen his loved ones for the care and attention they manifest towards him daily and hourly in this great trial.

Now, Sr. Frances, I shall close, adding, however, we are pleased to hear "Autumn Leaves" is to be started so soon. Will try and get you some more new subscribers, though just hereabouts there are none who seem interested enough to take it. One or two are convinced the doctrine is true, but they do not like the idea of uniting with such an unpopular sect, they say. May God strengthen them that they seek not "honor one of another."

In gospel bonds,

SISTER ISABELLA.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sister Elizabeth Beemer, Fremont, Nebraska, writes:—"I have been left a widow with eight children. Many times my cares and perplexities seem greater than I can bear, but I know that God will not lay upon us burdens greater than we can bear. I also know that this work is of God and I pray that I may have grace and strength given me to prove faithful to the end. The "Home Column" has been and is a great comfort and help to me."

Sr. Emma Jenkins, Samaria, Idaho, writes: "It is two years last month since my husband and myself were baptized. We had long waited and prayed that we might hear the gospel again in its purity, and the God who hears and answers prayers sent Bro. Joseph Luff to declare the good news again to us. We have a small branch here, (five in all), but the Lord meets with us when we meet, and we are comforted and blest by his Holy Spirit."

Sister May Rudd, Dow City, Iowa, writes: "Bro. W. W. Whiting led myself with three others into the watery grave, which step I have never regretted taking. My heart rejoices to see so many trying to advance his glorious cause."

Sr. Helen Ackley, Allendale, Missouri, writes: "I am rejoicing in the work of God. It is now one year since myself and husband were baptized by Elder H. A. Stebbins. We do not have preaching here very often, only when Bro. Stebbins comes and preaches a few days at a time. We are always very glad to see him, and thankful for the time he has spent with us; and we praise God for the knowledge of light and truth which he brought to us, and of which we have had many testimonies. He has many warm friends here, both in the church and out."

Sr. Victoria Hardy, London, Ontario, writes: "I know there is a reality in this gospel, that the world knows nothing about. I have had to endure many bitter trials, and from my own people, since I embraced the faith; but trials are good for us, for they draw us nearer to our heavenly Father than we might otherwise have been. I am young in the work and have a great many lessons to learn; but my desire is to do at all times that which is right in the sight of God, that when the Master comes to gather his own I may be ready, with oil in my vessel. Since I have embraced the faith one of my aunts has also been brought into the fold, and she too has had to suffer bitter persecution; but we know that God has power to soften the heart, and we have faith to believe that he will in time do so."

Sr. Jemima Peck, Glenwood, Iowa, writes: "I united with the church in 1844, and have been a partaker of the bitter as well as the sweet, the adversity as well as the prosperity, and I know for myself that the work is true. I many times feel most deeply my need of help, but I can truly say I have always found the Lord true to his promise, and a strong refuge in every time of trouble."

Sister Elizabeth Hartnell, Juniata, Michigan, writes: "Since entering the fold of Christ I have had to pass through many heavy trials, and the end is not yet. On the 15th of last November I had to part with my oldest son, Samuel, which was the hardest of all my trials. It was like parting with life itself. Yet we do not mourn as others who have no hope. His life and example were worthy of imitation, and this is our comfort. We have a branch of thirty, here; raised up through the labors of Elders Davis, Cornish, Carpenter, and DeLong.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., March 18th.

Dear Sr. Frances.—It is eleven years since I obeyed the gospel, and I have never had a doubt of its truth. Before I ever heard of a Latter Day Saint I was investigating the claims of the different denominations to find one to unite myself to. When a child I was raised a Baptist; but not feeling satisfied, was seeking something better. While investigating I became quite interested in the M. E. Church, and was about ready to unite with them. One evening at a prayer meeting I rose for prayers, and after meeting the minister came to me and talked so kindly; I thought he was truly a servant of God, if ever there was one, and my mind was made up to unite with them. While on my way home that night these thoughts came to me: Join them not; they are not of God. This minister is not a servant of God; he is but a man made minister, and in his own wisdom and strength he preaches and prays so eloquently! I was astonished at my own thoughts. Could it be a good spirit or a bad one causing such hard thoughts. By the thoughts which then took possession of my mind I was so set against all the churches that I had no desire to go to any of them again. I stayed at home and read my Bible and prayed to God to forgive me if my thoughts were wrong in regard to the churches. I received many blessings while reading at home, and it gave me a longing to find a church that taught as Jesus and his apostles did.

One evening my husband's sister came in and we got to talking on religion. This was the first time we had met her since she obeyed the gospel. She asked us what church we attended, and I related my experience among the different churches, and she gave us a testimony of the latter day work. This was the first time I had ever heard there was such a people. I had heard of the Mormons at Salt Lake and read of them, but looked at that as a delusion. While our sister was telling us of the glad tidings, a thrill of joy went through my soul. I felt it was truth. Never shall I forget the witness I received of its truth. She invited us to attend her church the following Sunday. When Sunday came my husband did not care to go, and I did not like to go alone in a strange place. When the next Sabbath came something else prevented, and so three months past and I never went; but I never forgot the testimony our sister left. She also told us what God had done for her since she obeyed the gospel, how her little ones had been healed by the power of God, and the great blessings she had received from her heavenly Father.

My oldest son was taken very sick. He was then ten years old. He had always been a delicate child, and was now taken with lung fever, pleurisy fever and pneumonia. We sent for the doctor as we always had done, and he treated him for nine days; but my boy grew worse all the time, and the doctor could do nothing more, and gave him up to die. While we were watching him breathe (as we thought) his last, the Spirit of the Lord came upon me and these words came to me, "Send for the elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and your boy shall be raised." The testimony that our sister gave us came up before me, and the faith was given me that my boy would be healed. Those words came to me three times before I spoke to my husband, then I told him there was one thing more we could do, to send for the elders of the Church of Latter Day Saints. I told him I had that faith come to me that our boy would be healed, and my husband seemed to feel new courage in what I said. He started out for them not knowing where to find them, they being all strangers to us. It was five o'clock in the morning. He went to his sister's house and told her, and her husband went with him and got Brn. Webster and Nickerson. When they came our boy was just alive and that was all. When they saw him they almost lost faith, but I did not. They knelt down and prayed for faith. The Spirit and power of God was manifested right there, and our boy was healed. The first time they administered he broke out in a perspiration; the fever was rebuked. The second time they administered the pleurisy was rebuked. The third time they administered he could raise up in bed. The power of God was manifested, and we witnessed our boy restored to health. The neighbors were present at the time, and the next day he was up and dressed to the astonishment of all that knew of it. I realized that God was working with signs following, according to his word.

I had been afflicted for fifteen years with paralysis of the brain; had been under the doctor's treatment for years, but received no benefit. My husband said to me, Why don't you send for the elders and be administered to, our boy was healed so wonderfully? I told him I did not have faith as I had for my boy; if I could get that faith I would send for them. I grew worse all the time, so I was not able to go out, and could hardly be left alone. I had not had a good night's rest for years, I was so afflicted. It was three weeks, I think, after my boy was healed, when I told my husband to go for the elders. I had not much faith for myself. I prayed God would give the elders faith for me. It was one Sunday evening after meeting, when Brn. Webster and Nickerson came to my house to administer to me. I was feeling very badly; I told them I had not much faith for myself. They knelt down and prayed for faith, and God blessed them again with mighty power. When hands was laid on my head the disease left me at once, and I had the sweetest night's rest that night I had had for years, and I was made every whit whole; and never from that time have I been afflicted with that disease. I have had good health ever since.

I then had a great desire to investigate the latter day work. I went to their meetings and read their works, and compared them with the Bible, and found them to harmonize. While reading the Book of Mormon I was greatly blessed. Three months after I was healed, Bro.

Webster baptized me one beautiful Sabbath in May, at Boston Highlands. I was confirmed that night at prayer-meeting. When hands were laid on me I received the gift of the Holy Ghost in mighty power. The knowledge of the gospel was then made plain to me. My tongue was unloosed. Never will I forget the glory of God that shone around me. I was filled with the Spirit. My soul was satisfied. I could say I knew the work was of God, and Joseph Smith was a true prophet. For six weeks I was filled with the Spirit and love of God to such an extent that I thought I would never have any more trials in this life. But, sisters, when I began to tell the story of the gospel my trials began, but my heavenly Father was ever ready to help me through them all.

My husband and two boys, then nine and eleven years old, (now nineteen and twenty-one), were baptized one year after I was. They, like many others, love the pleasures of this world, which cause me many sad hours; but the promise of God to me is, if I am faithful they will become teachers in Israel. I have my mother and one sister in the faith. My father is dead; he did not belong to the church. I am striving to do what little I can for the gospel which I know to be the power of God unto salvation to all that obey it.

I would say to the mothers of the Home Column, Take courage and never give up. Take your little ones to the Lord in prayer; he never will turn you away. I have always proven him an ever-present help.

Correspondence.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 23d.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—For some time I have been thinking to drop a few lines to the readers of the Herald lest they might think that I had forgotten them and become swallowed up in the excitement of this wonderful country.

Some may think that the Saints in this far off western land have forgotten their former hopes and given up the idea of the re-establishment of the "waste places;" but this is not the case. There are none more anxiously praying and hoping for God to reinstate Zion's stakes and prepare a city of refuge, than are the Saints of California. We are trying to carry out our part of that remarkable vision seen by Nephi, wherein he saw the time when the "church of the Lamb" should be scattered upon all the face of the earth, and that "the power of the Lamb was with his people." So it seems that, in the prosecution of the work the desires of the Saints should be turned in various directions. But when the time shall come when the place of safety is prepared we hope to be ready to return laden with sheaves.

For the past few months we have been made glad by having with us President Joseph Smith, E. L. Kelley and H. C. Smith, during which time we held our first Conference in the city of Los Angeles. When it was first mentioned, there seemed to be some imaginary clouds arise on the spiritual horizon of some, thinking there were too many obstacles to overcome, but by the persistent work of a few, full and complete arrangements were made, and the whole district responding to aid in the effort to make it a success, although the weather was very unfavorable, it was one of the most successful conferences ever held in this southern country. Perhaps there was not so much spiritual power as upon some other occasions, but it was a peaceful, quiet session, the meetings being well attended. Preaching was done by Elders Joseph Smith and E. L. Kelley, the conference being ably presided over by Pres. H. C. Smith. The attendance was large, for this place. The people of Los Angeles are beginning to find out that we are here.

Brothers Joseph and E. L. Kelley have just returned from San Bernardino, and will preach for the last time, before their return east, on Sunday next. An interesting interview was held between them and several newspaper reporters to-day. We hope the interview will not be in vain. It is with much difficulty that we get our cause in the local papers, but anything that is slanderous and contrary to truth, is published and read with much relish by those who are watching for something to criticise. A lie is much easier for people to believe than the truth.

While we are not as spiritual as we should be, yet I believe the Saints here have the love of the truth, and we hope for the time when they may become more and more interested, and feel due personal responsibility resting upon them, and feel that each Saint was one of the Father's household, and that all selfishness and evil thoughts be banished far from the mind and not allow Satan to enter in by making them believe that there is nothing for them to do but to depend wholly on the elders. The elders have their place to fill; the other officers have their work to do also, and so has the members. For each one has grace given according to the gift and measure of Christ unto them; and if all will contend for the gifts of wisdom, faith and knowledge, and wait patiently, God will qualify all for the work whereunto he has called them. The duties to the Saints are so various that there is no beginning or end, but one continuous round. We hope all will remember the injunction of the apostles to contend earnestly for the best gifts. And whatever our calling is, to so work that the Master will say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many."

Dear readers, remember us on this coast; and "let us pray for one another," that we may all meet in the "sweet by and by."

In the bonds of peace,
J. R. BADHAM.

OSCODA, Mich., Mar. 26th.

Bro. Blair:—Five more were baptized here yesterday and others are believing. Large crowds meet in the hall and pay good attention. It may please Bro. J. A. McIntosh, of Ontario, to learn that one of his brothers, Daniel, has been baptized here.

I would like to attend General Conference, but it would be much better to remain by the work. The demand is great. The work is onward.

Whittemore, March 20th.—On the 27th, five more were baptized in Oscoda. There are nearly thirty members there now. Several more are believing the gospel here now, and will no doubt obey in the near future. I am now to spend a few days in Gladwin.

J. J. CORNISH.

CENTERVILLE, Iowa, Mar. 31st.

Bro. Blair:—I came here a few months ago and found a branch of seventeen members organized by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. We rented a hall in town that our meetings might be more public, that the people might come to hear us. We furnished the hall complete for about forty-five dollars. And since we have a commodious place to meet in, we have school and sacrament meeting and preaching at night, every Sunday. A few strangers attend our meetings regularly. I baptized one of late, a married man of good qualities who will be useful if faithful. This branch, composed of good members, can, with the power of God, do much good. The brethren avail themselves of every opportunity to distribute tracts and speak a word in due season, and the sisters are not backward in using their efforts in doing what they can as opportunity offers. If I am able to judge, the Saints at Centerville will in the near future, accomplish the objects they have in view, viz, to establish the work of God here. The Saints here have been greatly blest. Many have been suffering from sickness and they have been restored by the power of God. It is a consolation to us as his people that we are accepted of him when approaching him in faith and humility.

A little girl, the daughter of Bro. and Sr. McDonald, had suffered from her birth with running wounds all over her body. Medical aid was employed for one year constantly, and did not avail any thing. The parents requested me to administer to the child, which I did, and the power of God was so manifested that the house was full of the divine influence, and the child, only three years of age, spoke out when I took my hands off her head, and said, "I am better." All her scars and wounds are dried up, and she is getting along well in every respect. How many are our privileges and our blessings when we strive to live humble before the Lord.

Yours,
HENRY JONES.

SIGEL, Michigan.

Dear Herald:—The work of God is onward; the Saints are growing stronger in the faith of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Since our branch was organized four were baptized by Elder Davis; others are believing. Elder Robert Davis has been preaching here four weeks; he has gone to administer to the sick in Detroit. One baptized in Detroit.

From your brother in Christ,
C. M. MORGAN.

DUNHAM, Ala., March 25th.

Bro. Joseph:—The Herald is the only preacher we have, and oh how welcome its weekly visits. I can't see how any Saint can do without it. Many times my heart has been made to rejoice while reading the testimonies of our brethren and sisters; also of the progress of the work in other missions. I am sad when I think how little is being done here; but I hope ere long the work may be revived in this mission, and the Saints more united, and see the necessity of living a more consistent life, that we may have a greater influence for good. Let us arise in the strength of Israel's God, and let our light shine, for the eyes of the world are upon us; let us then be careful that we do nothing that will bring reproach upon the fair name of the church; but let us by a godly walk and conversation show to the world that we are what we profess. The Saints with whom I have conversed are anxiously hoping that General Conference will send one or more elders to this south-eastern mission. All would do more I think financially to sustain them. Ever hoping and praying that conference will be able to supply our needed wants, I am your brother in Christ,

J. R. HARPER.

SYRACUSE, Ohio, March 26th.

Bro. Joseph:—Since my last letter to the Herald, I have been laboring in Vinton county, Ohio, and Jackson county, West Virginia. On March 2d met Bro. James Moler, and in company with him went to Wilksville, Ohio, preached four times at the house of Bro. and Sr. R. H. Erwin, to a crowded house, and on Sunday, 4th, baptized one. On March 8th began preaching in the Valley Ford school-house, in West Virginia, and continued until the 15th and had good attention paid to the word spoken. On the 14th three were baptized, Bro. Moler officiating.

March 15th we went to Sand Hill some six miles distant, preaching the same evening, and continued until Saturday, 17th, having appointment made for Sunday, 18th, at Rocky Knob school-house, a mile from Sand Hill, Bro. Moler preaching forenoon to an attentive house. Another appointment was made for evening, and on going to fill it a man met us on horse-back in the woods and enquired if a man by the name of Moler was among us. Bro. Moler said, "I answer to that name." The man then said, "I have come as a friend, to warn you not to preach in the school-house to-night; but go back and leave the place as quick as you can." Bro. Moler asked him to explain what he meant by such warning; and he said, "I have nothing more to say to you, only leave as quick as you can."

This "wolf in sheep's clothing" we were told is one of the leading men of the Southern Methodist Church in that part of West Virginia. After warning us as above he wheeled around through the woods in another direction, and we on to the school-house (trusting in God), and told the people the greeting we had on the way. Bro. Moler asked the congregation to vote by rising to their feet if they wanted us to preach, and they arose with almost one accord. We had good attention, and spoke to a crowded house. I heard some say if there was anything going on to hurt or mob us, that they would be in the front rank to see how it was done, meaning they would protect us. But, thank the Giver of all good, we were not molested. One of the magistrates of the county said if he had been there he would have arrested him who threatened us. One of the leading lawyers of the county said he would prosecute the case free of charge to us.

On Monday, the 19th we had preaching some two miles from the above place, at Squire Thomas' house, by his request, his wife being afflicted and not able to go from the house. We preached the next two evenings at Sand Hill School-house, baptizing one more March 22d; leaving others near the door of the kingdom.

I am happy to say that I found in Bro. Moler a noble co-worker in the cause of the Master, and we thank our Father that our labor was not in vain.

THOS. MATTHEWS.

WHEELOCK, Texas, March 29th.

Dear Herald:—I have just come home from district conference; had a good time, all things considered. The cause seems to be in better condition in this section than for some time past. The way is opening before me in the work, and I thank God for it. I am preaching now in my own neighborhood, where I preached nearly five years while a Baptist preacher. The prospect is very good for some of the Baptists in this section to come into the Church of Jesus Christ. I have an appointment to hold a protracted meeting in Burleson county, commencing the first Saturday in April, and expect to have a successful meeting and organize a branch there, as several members have moved into that section recently. I then expect to go to Hill or Anderson county.

I do love to promulgate this glorious gospel, and work in this latter day work, for I know it is the work of God. May the good Lord help me to continue faithful until the end, for such shall have part in the first resurrection, and shall reign with Christ a thousand years upon the earth, and then enter into the celestial glory, and dwell with God forever and forever.

E. W. NUNLEY.

RICEVILLE, Ind., March 31st.

Bro. Joseph:—We baptized four at this place yesterday, and to-day we have organized a branch to be known as the Riceville branch. This is on the Louisville and St. Louis railroad, and any of our elders passing on this road would be kindly treated to call on the Saints here. Many are near the kingdom. Rev. Brown's brethren say they want no more of Brown. Rev. Right of Bird's Eye and Rev. Brown of Taswel will let Mormon as they call it, alone for a while at least.

M. R. SCOTT.

NEWARK, Dak., March 20th.

Bro. D. Dancer:—I have learned that those Books of Mormon from Salt Lake City are not correct; that every place where it speaks of wife it says "wives." I will get one, and will read it and let you know all about it. I got home from Michigan all safe, and found my family well, also my horses, five in number, and the cattle in good condition. The oats that my horses eat in three months I supposed would last only one month. And my wife burned about one ton of coal in three months and she tells me that she burned all she wanted to, and that the house was warm and comfortable all the time. Three of my children were on the road to school on the 12th day of January last, in that great storm. They were caught about one fourth of a mile from the school house, but they got there all safe, stayed in the school house all night and came home next morning. To God be all praise.

About the oats and coal, I must say it appears like the case in 1 Kings, 16th verse. "And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail," according to the word of the Lord which he spake by Elijah. The Lord is the same to-day, yesterday, and forever. All glory and power are his. Yours,

ROBERT OEHRING.

WASHINGTONVILLE, O., Mar. 26th.

Dear Herald:—You are a herald indeed; for you bring glad tidings every week. I am young in the work, having been in the church about one year, but that is long enough to show me what a blessed work you are engaged in. I have walked on that thorny path, and I tremble to think how wicked I was, and thank God that I heard and obeyed this glorious gospel plan of salvation. I was baptized February 21st, 1887, by Bro. John McMillen, and I am trying to be a Latter Day Saint in word and deed, and I know they are the people of God. Dear brothers and sisters, this is a glorious work of the latter days. I am striving to walk in the path that Jesus laid out for us, and I know that God will care for his children, for has He not said:—"Not even a sparrow falleth to the ground without the Father's notice."

I pray that we may all be faithful and live worthy to bear the name of a "Latter Day Saint," for "Its good to be a Saint in latter days." Pray for me that I may endure to the end.

Your brother,

ROBERT J. ROBSON, JR.

BIG SPRING, W. Va., March 23d.

Dear Herald:—About six years ago I was initiated into the Kingdom of God, Bro. L. R. Devore officiating. Since that time I have been all alone until the present year, when it pleased God to send in our midst Bro. L. R. Devore and T. J. Beatty, who, notwithstanding the persecutions that came upon them while here, stood up in the fear of God and proclaimed the gospel as restored to us in fulness of times and the results of the same. I can not see any reason why we would not be justified in calling it even a miracle, when they brought into the fold of Christ nineteen souls, myself making twenty, that we now have in the branch. So you see now that I am not alone, and I feel to think had we an elder with us again in the near future there are others that would come in. Although the enemy is at work, threats being made, and as it was grievous wolves entering in among us seeking whom they may devour, I think of the expression of Paul: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trials which are to try you as though some strange thing had happened unto you." We have meetings every Sunday, and with few exceptions the Saints here are strong in the faith.

Your sister in the one faith,

M. A. LEBSON.

REV. DWIGHT SPENCER.

THE Rev. Dwight Spencer, of the Baptist Home Missionary Society, delivered a lecture on Mormonism in the Baptist Church in Dow City, Iowa, on the evening of March the 11th, 1888, and opened about as follows: "One of the wonders of this wonderful age is the multiplied forms that are had for evil. One of these evils is Mormonism. You all know what it is. It was commenced about fifty years ago by one Joseph Smith, commonly known among his neighbors as "Jo Smith." Any one who wishes to know its evils has only to go to the neighborhood where it began, as I have done, and learn from individuals who know all about it—about Smith's fortune telling for a living and his pretended revelations."

Nearly all of our people were in attendance.

When the lecturer was through, he stated that there was liberty for any one to ask questions, as he had been in Utah seven years and knew all about the Mormons. But he took good care to keep on talking about the need of money to assist in the Utah mission. I made two efforts to rise before I succeeded, and would not have been able to do so then, without disturbing the speaker, if it had not been for the pastor of the church, who is a young man from the state of New York, by the name of Onderdonk, and who is, to all appearances, a gentleman. I presume our people would have known nothing about this lecture if the pastor had not informed them of the fact.

When I arose I stated that the lecturer had done the people which I had the honor of representing a great injustice in some statements made, and asked for the privilege of making a few remarks, but I was emphatically denied. I then asked if they would allow me the use of their church the next Sunday evening to reply to that part of the lecture which I conceived to be untrue; and here the lecturer took it upon himself to answer "No!" with emphasis. I then announced that I would reply in our own church the Sunday night following, and asked the lecturer if he did not know that there was a body of people called the Reorganized Church, independent and distinct from the Utah people. To this he whiningly replied,—"Yes; but they have no influence in Utah," asserting that the Utah people were called the Reorganized Church.

I went to him after the congregation was dismissed, although every possible effort was made by some of the Baptists to keep him so engaged that I could not get at him, one woman following me up all the time gibbering away like one possessed. I tried to get him to debate the question with me; but no; he would not, stating that it was too insignificant and contemptible for him to bother with; to which I replied that, he would not because he dare not! Quite a number of their members said,—“We will go out next Sunday night and hear what Charley has to say.” But when Sunday evening came lo, and behold, they held their regular services, although there were a few of their members out to our church.

These people held revival services near five or six weeks, in the early part of the winter, without making any converts, and the Methodists, who followed them up, had but little better success. Therefore I have come to the conclusion that the wonderful spirituality with which the Saints at Dow City have been blessed of late has given them too much influence to suit these religionists, and has provoked their jealousy.

One can hardly believe that a missionary could labor seven years in Utah and not know that the Utah people are not called the Reorganized Church! But this was the name the Reverend used when ever he forgot to call them Mormons. And I can not help thinking that it was done for the express purpose of injuring our people.

We endeavored in our reply to answer the following points as best we could with our limited time and ability, speaking about one hour and a half, refuting them:

1. The truth concerning a prophet and his work can be learned from his enemies in the neighborhood where his work commenced.
2. Mormonism is false in its inception.
3. Its organization is of human origin.
4. Its president claims to be in constant communication with God, so that every word he speaks is as though it was spoken by Jehovah.
5. Its members are bound by oaths to obey the priesthood.
6. It is low and degrading to believe that God is in the form of man.
7. It teaches a plurality of Gods.
8. It has a catechism.
9. It teaches that earthly governments are in rebellion against God, or that they are treasonable organizations.
10. The Utah Church is called, or claims to be, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.
11. The Reorganized ("Josephite") Church is without influence in Utah.
12. No one but ignorant people will belong to the Mormon Church without evil desires.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

BELL, Iowa, Mar. 20th.

CRUCIFIED BETWEEN TWO THIEVES.

"BROTHER C. HOLMES read a paper on 'How to introduce our books into schools and how to keep them there.' He spoke of the needs of the schools as regarded literature and how to meet those needs. Children everywhere need good books, which many can not get. He attended to the pernicious literature which has done so much evil to the children and which has to be contended against by the missionaries. Liberalism, Mormonism and the Rum Power, all have to be met by the missionaries."

The above extract is copied from Christian Home, a paper published at Council Bluffs, Iowa, under the management of the "Rev. J. G. Lemen," and is part of a report to the Missionary Conference at St. Paul, and contributed to Christian Home by R. A. Shaw, Sunday School Missionary of Harrison county, Iowa.

The grandest, noblest and purest character that ever graced the earth in human form was made the butt of the most fiendish hate by men who claimed to be the chosen of God, lights to the world and models of piety for all mankind. Indeed they said to the rest of the world "Stand by, I am holier than thou." These were the men who branded the Son of God as a "Nazarene," a "winebibber, a friend of Publicans and sinners," "a colleague of devils," a "blasphemer" of the deepest dye. And after they had haunted him, through the grandest life known to man, with their hellish spleen, vented in persecution most bitter and relentless, they crowned their hypocritical cant, diabolic piety, and infernal rage, by putting him to the most cruel and ignominious death, by nailing him to a tree; but death on the cross was not degradation enough to gratify their malignant hearts, their priestly tyranny must sink lower still and drag down their victim if possible to the ignominy of crucifixion between two thieves as though he was the worst of malefactors. And then as they gathered their priestly robes around them, red with the precious blood of the slain Savior of the world, they laid "the flattering unction" to their polluted souls that they had done God service. Thus it ever was, from the beginning and ever will be until the hydra head of hypocrisy is crushed, evil uprooted, and priestly tyranny has sunk to rise no more. Well did Jesus say to his followers: "The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?"—Matt. 10: 24, 25. "Ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake."—Luke 21: 17. One of the greatest evidences that the people are endeavoring to serve the Lord, is found in the fact of the hatred of those who do not serve him, but who "honor him with their lips while their heart is far from him." And especially when a hireling priesthood under the pretense of love for souls and God endeavors to stir up the spirit of hate and persecution against them; for the Master says: "If ye were of the world the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John 15: 19.

In this fact we can see the real cause of the base misrepresentations, and blind rage of the hireling priests of the present day. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has been called out from the world by the same Jesus who was persecuted and slain by the pretendedly pious but consummate hypocrites of that day. That same Jesus who rose again from the dead ascended into heaven and gave gifts unto men, and who set in his church, apostles and prophets, inspired evangelists and pastors and teachers, together with gifts of the Holy Spirit for the work of the ministry and edifying of the body of Christ. Yes, he has again organized his church after his own pattern, and to that church he has committed the oracles of eternal truth, and upon that church he has poured of the Holy Spirit, in rich abundance, as manifest in the precious gifts promised by him (Mark 16), and enjoyed by the ancient church, as declared by Paul (1 Cor. 12 and two following chapters). The same gospel which Jesus proclaimed and the apostles preached, and of which Paul declared: "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1:8. I say, that same gospel has been made known again and the church, at the express command of God, is declaring it to the world, just as Christ and his apostles declared it, and the effect is manifest in the conversion of many souls, with the signs following the believer, as promised by the Savior. Furthermore, its effects are seen in arousing the hatred of the world, and priestly intolerance. And after sixty years of persecution, slander, and falsehood, on the part of the priestly bigots, who are "Teaching for hire and divining for money."—Micah. 3: 11, 12. And who never rested until after driving the Saints from city to city, plundering their homes, destroying their property, and killing men, women, and children, and then ransacking earth and hell for evidence to convict Joseph Smith and his associates of crime, in vain, in their pious (?) rage they declared, "If the law can not reach them powder and ball shall." And thus, while these innocent men were under the sacred pledge of protection of a sovereign state, they were shot down in Carthage jail as though they were dogs. But finding the church still lives and prospers, and is daily bursting the shackles from the dupes of priestcraft, that although it has been cast down and degraded, since the martyrdom of its chief shepherds, by a fearful apostacy on the part of aspiring and ambitious men, and abominations have been practiced in its name, yet it has arisen in the strength and name of the Lord of Hosts who has reorganized it, and placed it upon the original foundation, eternal truth. Seeing this the priests of the day are seeking to add insult to injury by crucifying it between two thieves, Liberalism and the Rum Power, but even these two thieves are only equalled in their degradation and thievish proclivities, by the consummate hypocrisy of a hireling priesthood, who are enslaving and making merchandise of the souls of men. When the same class of men brought Jesus before Pilate to condemn him to such an ignominious death, the governor enquired, "Why, what evil hath he done?" And so will all candid and liberal minded men ask to-day, respecting the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which the priests brand as "Mormonism;" and we demand of them, "Why, what evil" hath this church done? Is it contrary to God's word, his loving nature, and his Fatherly care, that we should seek communion with him? "Whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name he will give it you. . . Ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full."—John 16: 23, 24; James 1:5. Joseph Smith sought, and found; and thereby received a testimony that "God is and that he is a rewarder of them who diligently seek him."—Heb. 11:6. That "God is no respecter of persons."—Acts 10:34. That he changeth not."—Mal. 3:6. He gave this testimony to the world. God revealed unto him the abundance of peace and truth by enabling him to understand the record of his dealings with man, as found recorded in the Record of the Jews. He gave to him the record of the Nephites as recorded by Mormon, from the history of the prophets upon this continent. By this means a two fold testimony of God's existence, goodness and love was given to the world, as it is written: "That in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established."—Matt. 18:16. See Ezekiel 37:16, 20. From the Book of Mormon our enemies have called the doctrine we teach "Mormonism." But the doctrine taught in the Book of Mormon is the doctrine of Christ, without even a modification. Surely the fact of it being found in that book will not change its nature. The name of Mormon has no more to do in establishing the nature of the doctrine, than the name of Paul in giving character to the doctrine of Christ, but thank God we are not ashamed of the name of either of these worthies. Even the name Christian was once used as a synonym of contempt, and instead of the name being given to the church and doctrine of Christ by him, "The disciples were first called Christians first in Antioch."—Acts 11:26. And when God has chosen to recognize his church in this day as "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," we have no reason to blush when our enemies, Nick named it "Mormonism." Because it teaches first, that there is a God, the one Supreme Being—Creator of heaven and earth, and all things therein, infinite in wisdom, knowledge, goodness, love and power, whose mercy endureth forever, who is unchangeable, and with whom there is no respect of persons. And that this Being created man in his own likeness, and gave him the earth as his dominion.

Secondly, it teaches that man forfeited his dominion, and his right to the favor of God, and became lost and fallen man, subject to the will of the devil, and the eternal thralldom of sin.

Thirdly, that he who had created all things knew the end from the beginning, and having foreseen the fallen and ruined condition of man, he had made provision in his boundless love for man's eternal redemption, on the conditions of repentance and returning of God. This provision was found in Jesus Christ the Only Begotten Son of God, who was as "a lamb slain from the foundation of the world," who should come in the fulness of time to redeem all mankind, even as many as would accept the proffered grace on the terms of the gospel. "Mormonism" teaches that the atonement of Christ was an infinite atonement, that His name is the only name in the heavens or on earth, by which salvation can come unto man. It teaches that all mankind, prophets, apostles, pastors, teachers, evangelists included, have sinned against God, and come short of his glory, and hence it does not, as our enemies falsely declare, teach that any man can properly stand between mankind and God, but the man, Christ Jesus. Hence while we are taught by Christ to honor his messengers, as the messengers of Christ, we give unto God and Christ alone, the honor due to the all sacred name, hence it proclaims salvation, alone and only through our crucified and risen Redeemer, the Lord Jesus Christ. This precious doctrine runs like a thread of gold from beginning to end of this sacred record, thereby proving itself one with the Bible, just as God told Ezekiel, "They shall be one in mine hand."—Ezek. 37:19.

Fourthly, the Book of Mormon teaches the same gospel of preparation for the great salvation that Jesus taught the Jews and sent his servants to preach to all the world. Namely, faith in God and in Christ, as the God and Savior of the world. This implies faith in his commands, precepts, ordinances and promises. A lively faith illustrated by works of obedience, by repenting of all sin, and being baptized in water, as Jesus was, for the remission of our sins, and seeking the baptism of the Holy Ghost by prayer, and the laying on of hands, by those whom God hath ordained to this duty, as in Acts 8:14, 19; 19c. It teaches the believer to expect such gifts of the Holy Spirit as Jesus promised, (Mark 16), and were enjoyed on the day of pentecost, (Acts 2), and declared by Paul to be divided by the Spirit to every one, as seemed wisdom to the divine Spirit. 1 Cor. 12. Eph 4. "Mormonism" demands that we shall grow up from grace to grace until we come to the stature of the fulness of Christ. It teaches that in order to attain to that measure we must become holy. It teaches that all mankind shall rise from the dead, some to everlasting life and some to everlasting shame and contempt, and declares that God will reward every man according to his work.

I will now tell you what "Mormonism" has not done. It has not trailed the standard of the gospel in the dust, nor fouled it with the mud and mire of lust. Polygamy is no part of "Mormonism," any more than David's adultery with Bathsheba, or his murder of Uriah was a part of that law which says, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," "Thou shalt not kill." It was no part of "Mormonism" any more than the corrupt and lecherous doctrine and practices of the Nicolaitans or the pollutions of a Jezebel spoken of in Revelations second chapter were the doctrines of the holy and immaculate Lamb of God. The Book of Mormon declares polygamy an abomination before God, and emphatically states, "There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife and concubines he shall have none."—p. 116. The Book of Covenants given specially for the observance of the church says, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else." The pollution of polygamy has been fastened to the fair name of the church by ungodly and ambitious usurpers, since the martyrdom of Joseph Smith. Moreover, "Mormonism" has never degraded the character of the Supreme Being, by teaching that "from all eternity he had decreed that a portion, and that the larger part of humanity, should be eternally lost and doomed to endless misery, and that without any reference to their works. And that the smaller portion should be saved and that without any reference to their works." It has abhorred the God dishonoring doctrine that "there were children in hell not a span long." It has never taught that the heathen who have had no opportunity to learn of Christ, should be hurled to the regions of darkness, and be made to suffer the vengeance of eternal fire, for not believing in him of whom they never heard, but it does teach that "the mercy of the Lord endureth forever," that "where little is given little is required," and that he who "being put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit, by which also he went and preached to the spirits in prison (1 Pet. 3: 18, 19; 4: 6) will have as much love for the untaught heathen as he had for the rebellious Antediluvians, and has made provision for their salvation. For "God is no respecter of persons."

"Mormonism" has never made merchandise of the souls of men by "teaching for hire and divining for money." Its ministers go forth without purse and scrip as the Master sent his disciples. It teaches them that inasmuch as they trust in God, he will supply their every want, and thus they are "to lay up treasures in heaven." It does not "teach for doctrines the commandments of men." It teaches whatsoever Christ and his apostles taught, neither more nor less. It wages war against unbelief of God, and his word, wherever such unbelief is found, whether in the avowed and open blasphemer of God, called Infidel, Atheist or sceptic, or among the ranks of those who make long prayers, who cry "Lord, Lord, and do not the things which he says," who "honor him with their lips while their hearts are far from him." It wages war against the evils of Intemperance of every form. It declares, "Behold thus saith the Lord unto you, in consequence of the evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days. I have warned you, and forwarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation that inasmuch as any man among you drinketh wine or strong drink, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father." This is a part of a revelation received by Joseph Smith, in Kirtland, Ohio, February 27th, 1833. The entire revelation declares against strong drinks, hot drinks, tobacco, excessive use of meat and closes with the promise of great blessings to those who shall observe this Word of Wisdom. Section 86 of Doctrine and Covenants. See also Times and Seasons, vol. 2, p. 464. "Inasmuch as the use of ardent spirits is prohibited by the gospel, and is not conducive to the happiness, peace and well being of society; therefore, Resolved, 1st, that this conference utterly discountenances the use of ardent spirits as a beverage. 2d, Resolved that this conference disfellowship every member who continues to indulge, and will not forsake such evil practices. 3d, Resolved that this conference collectively and individually, covenant to keep all the known commandments of God, as made known in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants." From the whole history of this church it is well known that it has raised its voice against polygamy, Infidelity, bogus Christianity, or any form of godliness that denies the power thereof." And the soul-destroying, body-slaying, peace-breaking and law-defying rum power. Why then does the pious (?) cant of the nineteenth century seek to ally this church with these deadly foes of God and humanity. Why does it seek to crucify "Mormonism" as they term it between these two thieves, "Liberalism and the rum power." The only true answer that can be given is that which Jesus gives, "If ye were of the world the world would love his own; but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John 15: 19.

This "Mormonism" as found in the Book of Mormon, Bible and Book of Covenants, is a living reality, it will not die, God is its Author, Jesus Christ its great Captain, the Holy Ghost its pilot, and under such guidance, it will continue to do battle against priestcraft, avowed Infidelity, and the rum power, until eternal victory shall crown the banner of the King Immanuel. Amen.

CHANGE YOUR NAME.

For the last two nights in February, and the first Sunday in March, arrangements were made for the occupancy of the Rink in Sterling, Colorado; but on arriving there on Sunday morning found a Roman Catholic priest in full uniform; benches arranged to suit, holding forth to a small audience in front of a table, of sufficient elevation, with two tallow candles burning, a crucifix, etc., for mass, which rather excited our surprise; but our calm nature was somewhat calmer on being informed by the proprietor that the priest had a standing appointment every four weeks, and he forgot this when arranging with us for the Rink, etc., which had a semblance of plausibility; but it all vanished on hearing another version, by one who claimed to know. But Roman Catholics are more popular than Latter Day Saints, far more, as are the children of the desolate, than the children of the married wife. (Isa. 54). On the following week, secured a school-house a few miles from town, and preached three consecutive discourses, to most attentive and interested, though small, audiences, and regretted that previous appointments in other localities prevented a longer stay. Stopping at North Platte, Nebraska, held four meetings in Bro. Joseph Richards' private house, a few in attendance—some believing. The Baptists showed favor to the Saints one time, in opening their church; but now say they are sorry for doing such a thing, as they disgraced themselves. I struck Sutton, Nebraska, on the 16th instant. Sister Emery, who requested baptism some time ago, applied to three trustees of the Congregational Church for their church: "Yes, oh yes, your elder can preach in our church," they said. On the strength of such a promise I announced preaching for Sunday morning and evening, March 18th. But by eight o'clock on Saturday night, a nullification act was passed, or so we supposed, for we were told we could not preach in the church, which nullification act involved a necessity for rising early on Sunday morning to stick up a notice to the effect that I would not preach, over the one I put up on Saturday to the effect that I would preach. Whether I did or did not pray for the trustees is not essential for the readers of the Herald to know.

I prepared an article and asked a popular editor to give it publication. He refused, which was his right, but suggested the propriety of changing our name, thinking we would gain but little public favor until we did; all of which I could believe, if he could mould the public mind.

It is strange indeed, that astute editors and pious ministers, so well informed in other matters, should be so profoundly ignorant or willful, as not to know that between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Mormons there is no affinity. In the face of the fact, of the formers antagonistic position against the latter, for the last quarter of a century. But so it is, with some honorable exceptions of course, though in the western wilds are few and far between. It is amusing to see some of the dauntless editors, catering to orthodox ministers and churches, in making his columns luminous in detailing the success of a sociable, the erection of an edifice, through the giant like efforts of Rev. — and the salutary effects his cultured ministerial, labors, produces, etc., followed by effusions of the grandeur of free toleration; and then witness his behavior to a Latter Day Saint elder, who merely asks if he can grant him a hearing through his columns. And the fact is soon visible that his much prating about toleration, individual rights, etc., is but for effect, having no favors to grant but to those moving within the circles of popular orthodoxy.

Said the above editor, "You people can hardly expect favor until you put polygamy from you." On being informed that we were not polygamists, with an expression of surprise of his being ignorant of the fact, then the polished editor said, "You should change your name." Just so; change, modify, etc., orthodox-like to meet the exigencies of the times. But we Latter Day Saints have not so learned,—Christ established God's saving method once for all. And he who would dare enter its sacred precincts with a view to modify or change it, exhibits an ignorance or willfulness fearful to contemplate. There is a distinctive feature between the Latter Day Saints and orthodoxy. The latter evade the primitive gospel, taxing their towering intellect to offer something in lieu thereof. The former amid the clamor and splendor of modern Babylon contending for, presenting and defending the primitive gospel in its entirety, which makes a wide gulf between us and them; and the past fifty years' experience has taught us that from orthodoxy we have nothing to fear. And it is a matter of congratulation to know that from the first inception of the church, in 1830 until now, no ecumenical or authorized council has been called to change or modify its doctrine, laws or rules, nor will this ever be; for the introduction of the gospel in this, the dispensation of the fullness of times was the death knell to all unauthorized creeds and sects, for the kingdom was not to be left to other people or be thrown down, but to stand forever. Change? No; Saint is the denominative name of Christ's church, while Mormon has its significance, and latter day is expressive of the time and age in which we live, being the times of restitution spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began, and all this to prepare the way for Christ's second coming. We change nothing, save our unbelief for faith, impurity for purity, rebellion for obedience, and loyalty to heaven's decrees. Work these changes, and leave other matters to God who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will. Change of creeds, forms, etc., belongs to Protestants, dissenters, Catholics, etc., who labor under a broken covenant and corrupt priesthood, or no priesthood at all. And they are doing their work pretty thoroughly, and their disturbed condition of mind, through evidence of a lack of Christian unity, and striving to hit upon some method to effect it, is but a prelude to what is near, when rationalism will assert itself to test their faith, in new fangled doctrines and man-made creeds. Thank God for a perfect gospel.

Conference Minutes.

GALLANDS GROVE.

The above conference was held at Dow City, Iowa, February 24th to 26th; W. W. Whiting president, C. E. Butterworth assistant, J. Pett and J. W. Wight secretaries. Branches: Galland's Grove 273; 1 received by vote, 1 died. Mason's Grove 128. Boyer Valley 72. North Coon 26; 3 baptized, 1 expelled. Salem 80. No reports from Union, Camp Creek, Coalville, or Pilot Creek. Official reports: C. E. Butterworth, J. Rudd, F. Rudd, W. E. Peak, J. T. Turner, (baptized 3), B. Salisbury, John Pett, J. W. Wight, D. W. Shirk, (baptized 2), W. W. Whiting, Ira A. Goff, A. H. Rudd, J. Pearsall, C. J. Hunt, James Spence, L. Butterworth, and J. Baker. All had labored as circumstances and opportunities offered. Bro. W. E. Peak had labored continually. John Pett, Bishop's agent, reports: Cash on hand and received since last report $278 16, paid out $258.16; balance on hand March 1st $20. Committee appointed to investigate charges against member of North Coon branch reported part of the charges sustained, and that the brother promised to make the necessary acknowledgment to the branch. Report accepted and committee discharged. Recommendation from Boyer Valley branch to ordain Bro. C. Butterworth an elder unanimously adopted. Priest's license granted to Bro. A. H. Rudd. Teacher's licenses granted to J. L. Butterworth and J. Spence, and Deacon's license to J. M. Baker. W. W. Whiting, C. E. Butterworth, J. T. Turner, B. Salisbury and J. Hawley delegates to General Conference; and instructed to request conference to appoint J. W. Wight and W. E. Peak missionaries in this district. Local ministry requested to labor in harmony with previous resolution and appointment. W. W. Whiting sustained as president of district till after the close of the next conference, with C. E. Butterworth his assistant. Preaching Friday evening by J. T. Turner, Saturday evening and Sunday forenoon by J. C. Crabb, and in the evening by W. W. Whiting. In the afternoon a good spiritual prayer and testimony meeting was had, at the commencement of which C. Butterworth was ordained an elder by J. C. Crabb, C. E. Butterworth and I. A. Goff. Adjourned to Deloit, Iowa, Friday, June 15th at half-past two o'clock.

CENTRAL KANSAS.

This district conference met at Netawaka, Kansas, March 17th and 18th. Branches: Netawaka 33; 2 marriages; D. Williams president, H. Green clerk. Fanning 34; W. Gurwell president, G. Gurwell clerk. Centralia 22; 1 removed by letter; A. Dodd president, F. Weise clerk. Scranton 31; 2 received by letter; J. B. Jarvis president, W. Chapman clerk. Good Intent 25; D. Munns president and clerk. Elders D. Williams, W. Hopkins, H. Parker, J. Buckley, D. Munns, H. Green; Priest J. McDougal, reported verbally. By letter: P. Anderson, J. Menzies, W. Menzies, J. B. Jarvis, C. Herzog, W. Gurwell, R. Smith, W. Cairns, and J. D. Price. D. Munns sustained as president, and J. Buckley clerk. Hiram Parker sustained as Bishop's agent. D. Munns delegate to General Conference. Saturday evening preaching by J. Buckley. Sunday forenoon by D. Williams, in the evening by H. Green. In the afternoon, Saints' meeting and sacrament, conducted by Elders H. Parker and D. Munns. Adjourned to June 23d and 24th at Centralia, Kansas.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN MISSION.

This conference met in the Saints' chapel, Salt Lake City, Utah, Saturday, 24th March. R. J. Anthony appointed to preside, and C. H. Barrows secretary. Reports.—R. J. Anthony, Seventy, present, reports: At the last General Conference, held in Kirtland, Ohio, was sustained in charge of this mission, and from early June until now have traveled and labored to the best of my ability. My labors extending from Nephi, south, to Bear Lake, and Cassia county, north, and west in Idaho. Have had urgent demands from Southern Utah and Montana, but was unable to go. J. C. Clapp rendered excellent help in Montana, baptizing 14 and organizing the Deer Lodge branch with 40 members. Bro. Clapp leaving, Peter Anderson alone remained, but confined his labors to the Scandinavians, adding a number. As Bro. Anderson was so busy with the Banner and Bro. Clapp away I made an urgent appeal to the First Presidency; Bro. R. M. Elvin came, his reviews of Rev. Lamb have done good at Malad, Idaho, Pleasant Grove and Provo, Utah. I have baptized 13. Peter Anderson, Seventy, reports by letter: Since last conference have labored in Utah, with the exception of about four months; have had better success than ever, and feel very much encouraged respecting the future. Have baptized 23; blessed several children, and administered to several sick persons. Elder R. M. Elvin: I arrived in the Rocky Mountain Mission December 16th, 1887, and since that date have done whatever I could for the advancement of the Master's cause. Have preached at Salt Lake City, Provo, and Pleasant Grove, Utah, and Malad, Idaho. Blessed 4 children. Elder W. P. Smith, Union Fort, present, gave a statement of the things to be met with as president of branch; expressed himself firm in the work. Elder E. Barrows, Salt Lake City, present, reports: Have labored and sought for the good of the cause, have kept up the meetings and assisted in whatever was possible for the advancement of the work. Elders Ezra Strong and Thomas Burt, Priest J. F. Weston, Teacher J. Page and Deacon G. Houghton, reported. Branches: Salt Lake, last report 96; 1 removal, 2 received, 2 deaths. R. M. Elvin president, C. H. Barrows clerk. Mortimore, and W. C. Mathews reported in person, also Priest J. W. Comstock and Teachers J. B. Cline and C. A. Long. Henry Kemp was sustained as president, W. C. Mathews as secretary, and Wm.

Leeka as Bishop's agent. Delegates to General Conference to endeavor to have Henry Kemp returned to this district. Bro. B. R. Schick to be ordained an elder, according to recommendation of Key Stone branch, and Bro. B. R. Hillier be ordained teacher of Key Stone branch; the secretary to issue licences to those ordained. Preaching in the evening and Sunday forenoon by J. R. Lambert. Social meeting in the afternoon. Every one present seemed to enjoy the Holy Spirit. There were good testimonies by several young brethren to their associates, which was a pleasing feature of the meeting. Social meeting in the evening. Adjourned to Farm Creek June 23d, at ten o'clock.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS.

This district conference met at Plano, Illinois, February 25th and 26th. F. M. Cooper presiding, and W. Vickery clerk. Branches:—Plano 205; 2 baptized, 1 removed by letter. Mission 103; 3 baptized, 13 removed by letter. Burlington 33; 1 baptized. Reorganized First Chicago 19; 1 removed by letter. Streator 28; 1 received by letter. Courtland 18. Broughton 16. There were no reports from Sandwich, Amboy, Janesville, Leland, Braidwood; Piper City, Marengo, or Pecatonica, Officials reporting:—I. L. Rogers, Elders F. M. Cooper, S. C. Goode, T. Hougas, G. Scheidecker, W. Vickery, and S. H. Whitaker; Priest L. Lewis. T. Hougas and W. Vickery were appointed a committee to investigate matters at Braidwood, and reported to next conference. Appeal of Father Kent was presented, he having been expelled illegally. On motion he was reinstated in the church. District treasurer reported $24.68 on hand. A district record was ordered. F. M. Cooper was sustained president of district and W. Vickery secretary, for the next four months. Recommendation of Burlington branch for Aaron Burr's ordination as an elder was granted. I. L. Rogers and C. D. Carter delegates to General Conference, and instructed to use their influence to obtain ministerial aid for the district, and to have the General Conference for 1889 at Plano. Bishop's agent reported: On hand last report $57.30, received since $77; paid out $80; balance on hand $54.30. The following was moved and adopted: Whereas, we believe there has been in times past some instances of branch legislation in the district in which members have been improperly dealt with, either in the nature of the charge preferred against them, or the improper methods adopted to carry out such legislation; Therefore, resolved that this conference pronounce all such legislative acts as null and void, and that the judgment of this conference is that the passage of this action by this body covers the case of Ranson R. Partridge and that we acknowledge our brother as a member of the church, and that we extend to him our love and fellowship in the Lord, and pray that the spirit of love and peace may ever actuate us one for the other, (signed), F. M. Cooper, I. L. Rogers. On Saturday evening preaching by Thomas Hougas, assisted by G. Scheidecker. On Sunday forenoon by W. Vickery, assisted by S. C. Goode. Sacrament and fellowship meeting in the afternoon in charge of T. Hougas, and G. Scheidecker; a very Spiritual time was enjoyed, some said it was the best conference they had attended; thirty-one bore testimony, six prayers were offered, tongues and the interpretation were manifested; many were in tears, and love seemed to fill all hearts. Preaching in the evening by F. M. Cooper. Adjourned to Chicago, the 23d and 24th of June next.

ST. LOUIS.

The above district conference convened in the Saints' Hall, No. 1302 North Broadway, St. Louis, Missouri, on Saturday afternoon, March 31st. W. Jaques, president; J. S. Parrish and J. G. Smith, clerks. Branches:—St. Louis 187; 2 baptized, 2 died. Belleville 58. Kirkner 10; 1 removed. Cheltenham 33; 1 baptized, 2 removed. Chester 11. Boon Creek 19; 4 baptized. Wearso, no report. forenoon by Elder James Whitehead, of Alton, Illinois. Sacrament and testimony meeting in the afternoon. Bishop's agent, N. N. Cooke reported for two months:—Cash on hand $46.55, received $190.25, total $236.80, paid out $141.50, balance February 29th, $95.30. Audited and found correct. As president W. Jaques intended being absent in Europe for the next three months, and as the vice-president had removed by letter from this district; therefore, Elder James Whitehead was elected acting president of the district, to serve the remainder of this term. Adjourned to St. Louis, on Saturday afternoon, June 30th, for the transaction of business, and on Sunday, July 1st, for worship. The evening meeting was a song service.

Miscellaneous.

SURPRISAL.

At the close of last evening's services, the president of the Rocky Mountain mission said to me, "I want you to go with me." We walked from the chapel to the postoffice, when my escort remarked that he wanted to see Sr. Robinson, so back we tramped, when to my surprise I met a procession issuing from the kitchen, it then dawned upon my mind, that I was the subject of the social gathering.

The hours sped away, and the tasty viands disappeared; but memory will cease to act when I shall forget the cheerful and encouraging words, and the very substantial aid bestowed. Herewith I return to the Saints of the Salt Lake mission branch my unfeigned thanks, and may the God of love and glory grant to confer upon each one divine grace, spiritual guidance during life's uneven journey, and the crown of eternal life when the Master cometh to make up the jewels for his everlasting kingdom.

LAMONI.

At the last meeting of the Lamoni Board of Trade it was decided that Lamoni greatly needs a bank. The Herald Office having quit the Exchange business, it is thought that a bank here would be a paying investment. Who will start one? For information address Lamoni Board of Trade, Lamoni, Iowa.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The North-East Missouri district conference will convene April 21st, 1888, at Bevier. All are invited to attend.

DIED.

HALL.—At his home near Pleasanton, Iowa, Tuesday, March 27th, 1888, Bro. William Hall died suddenly while eating dinner. He was born March 11th, 1815, in Hardin county, Kentucky, being 73 years and 16 days old. He leaves an aged widow to feel the loss of his companionship during the short time she may be permitted to remain on earth, also five sons; an only daughter having preceded him to the other shore November 9th, 1864. Bro. Hall was a kind and indulgent husband and father. Goodness of heart and a kindly disposition were prominent traits of his nature. He has often assisted those who asked his aid to his own detriment, financially and otherwise. He united with the church in 1862, and has continued ever since to maintain and unshaken faith in the gospel of the Son of God. Funeral conducted by Elder Duncan Campbell, assisted by Elder Wm. Anderson, March 31st.

CHAPMAN.—At the residence of his daughter, in Scranton, Kansas, March 22d, 1888, George F. Chapman, aged 62 years, 9 months and 16 days. He bore his affliction with much patience and continued to affirm his testimony to all his family and friends of the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ. He leaves a wife at Washingtonville, Ohio, also three sons and one daughter at Scranton, to mourn his death. He became acquainted with the Latter Day Saints about twenty-seven years ago, but was displeased with the church represented by Brigham Young and his followers, and united with the Reorganized Church fifteen years ago. Elder Wm. Menzies preached his funeral sermon at the Saints' Church in Scranton, assisted by Elder J. B. Jarvis. He died in the hope and faith of a glorious resurrection, and so passed away to the better world.

REBECK.—On the 23d of March, 1887, in Los Angeles City, California, Sr. Lydia Rebbeck. She was born December 14th, 1823, at Middleton, Lancashire, England; baptized May 5th, 1880, at Elmonte, California, by Elder J. F. Burton. Sr. Rebbeck was an old-timer, and came to California at an early day; had many acquaintances and friends both in and out of the church. She suffered much in her sickness, but she bore her testimony to the truthfulness of the work to the last. Funeral services by Elder D. S. Mills.

MARRIOTT.—At Murray, Utah, March 26th, 1888, Sr. Martha, wife of Bro. Joseph Marriott, of a third paralytic stroke. Her sojourn in life was 65 years, 11 months and 11 days. She suffered for a number of years, but is now at rest awaiting the call on the morning of the first resurrection. She was born at Cambridge, England, and was baptized at Salt Lake City, December 9th, 1874, by Elder Z. H. Gurley. The funeral sermon was from 1 Corinthians 15:26, by Elder Robert M. Elvin, at her former residence, assisted by Elder R. J. Anthony.

LEACH.—At Maitland, Holt county, Missouri, March 27th, 1888, after an illness of eight days with nervous intermittent fever, sister Louiza G. Leach, wife of Bro. Burton Leach, aged 51 years, 8 months and 12 days. She leaves a husband, two daughters and a circle of relatives and friends to mourn her departure. Funeral services were in charge of Elder R. K. Ross. Funeral discourse by Elder Joseph Flory. By courtesy of those in charge, the Christian Church was opened for services, and a respectable and attentive audience attended.

MCINTYRE.—At her own residence, near San Bernardino, California, March 22d, 1888, Catherine MacIntyre. She died firm in the faith; was born at Edinburg, Scotland, September, 1812; came to California in August, 1856; was baptized by Elder Burton, November 3d, 1879. Funeral sermon by Elder W. M. Gibson.

She died in hope; in peace she'll rest
Unto the resurrection of the blessed.

MAHONEY.—Elder Stephen Mahoney, of Magnolia branch, (Iowa), departed this life the 22d day of February, 1888, aged 79 years and 9 days. Born at Elkton, Maryland. The funeral sermon was preached in the Saints' church, by Elder C. Derry, before a very crowded assembly who knew and respected his honest, manly worth, and were anxious to manifest their esteem in death, and their sympathy with the bereaved family.

"A precious one from us has gone,

A voice we loved is still;

A place is vacant in our home

Which never can be filled.

God in his wisdom has recalled

The boon his love had given;

And though the body moulders here,

The soul has upward risen."

SPECK.—At Independence, Missouri, March 29th, 1888, of quick consumption, Sr. Margaret Speck, aged 17 years and 9 months. She was baptized June 29th, 1883, by Elder F. C. Warnky; was a model of purity in all her acts and conversation. She has gone to rest in the paradise of God. Funeral services by Elder F. C. Warnky.

ROBINSON.—At Independence, Missouri, March 15th, 1888, of croup, Henry R., dearly beloved and only child of Elder Hiram H. and Sr. Mary Robinson, aged 1 year, 7 months and 2 days. He was a smart and lovely child, and hard to part with; but we do not mourn as those without hope, because Jesus said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Funeral services by Elder F. C. Warnky.

JOSEPH SMITH
W. W. BLAIR

EDITOR.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, April 21, 1888.

THE Independence, Missouri, Daily "Sentinel," in its issue for April 7th, has the following pithy editorial in relation to the Reorganized Church:

"THE REORGANIZED CHURCH.

"The Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints is holding an annual conference of the world here at the present time. The leading men of the church are here and it is fully represented in all its parts.

"The conference is composed of a greater number of delegates than ever assembled at Independence prior to this time, and of a representation from a greater territory than has gathered together for similar purposes in many years.

"The people who have come here have the appearance of honest, zealous, faithful men, engaged in what they conceive to be the propagation of great truths that have been confided to their care and been made their especial responsibilities. They teach the cardinal virtues of the Christian religion and such the orthodox churches hold and believe. They claim a new revelation and that the day of special revelation has not passed. They invite investigation, and are open and candid in their lives and conduct.

"It is not longer excusable to charge upon the Reorganized Church sympathy with the polygamists. They regret the Salt Lake dogma with loathing and disgust, and teach and keep the marriage relation as sacredly as other Protestant people.

"The sobriety of the Mormon people of this community and their testimony against all forms of dissipation does them great honor and ought to silence the tongue of ignorant criticism. Men are entitled to credit for lives of usefulness and morality and there should be no disposition to withhold it from them. It can not be an unprofitable thing for other than the Mormon citizens of Independence to make this conference the means of learning more about the sect or denomination that has become so numerous in and about the city and which is destined, it seems, to take so prominent a part in moulding the minds of so many people."

Such a statement as the above, being made by a leading paper at the place to which many of the Saints are looking as a place of rest and final prosperity for the church, should carry great weight in every place where the elders have been and are laboring in the presentation of the primitive faith of the church organized April 6th, 1830.

We have long been satisfied that the rule of marriage in the Gospel Dispensation was and is monogamic, and feel assured that when Zion "the pure in heart," shall be gathered, and the "waste places" (spiritual waste) of Zion shall be rebuilt, it will be done under that rule; and that neither men openly avowing a belief and practice of polygamy in any of its forms, or secretly practicing it, will be permitted to engage in that work. Joseph Smith, the Seer, stated that secret oaths were unnecessary, dangerous and weakening to the righteous intents of a people; hence no people trusting in secret obligations to hold them to allegiance to each other can hope to abide the light that shall arise and shine upon Zion. The bond of unity, purest and strongest, is that which binds the disciple to "the Christ," the assurance of justification and that "Jesus is the Christ;" the open confession of belief made in the covenant of baptism. This is the bond made, acknowledged and ratified between the Savior and the saved, witnessed and testified to by the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth which bears "witness in earth" and "record in heaven."

Apropos of the foregoing from the "Sentinel," is the following from the Desert "News," Salt Lake City, Utah, of March 31st:

"WE DECLINE.

"We have received a somewhat interesting letter from a wanderer from the church, who now resides in Independence, Jackson county, Missouri. He makes a brief sketch of his career since 1840, when he became identified with the Latter Day Saints. In 1842 he was ordained an Elder under the hands of Hyrum Smith and Brigham Young. After the martyrdom of Joseph the Prophet he became an estray and associated with a number of others who were in the same scattered condition. They finally formed an organization of which they ordained one Granville Hedrick to be the head. In 1866 our correspondent and others, by direction of Mr. Hedrick removed to his present location, where, in consequence of some misdeed of one of the members over which a dispute arose, the association broke up and became extinct.

"This wanderer from the fold, then identified himself with what is known as the Reorganized Church, with the understanding that he reserved the right to dissent from a number of its doctrines. He became convinced that that body was on the wrong track and withdrew. He feels greatly dissatisfied with its action in relation to himself. This, however, is something with which we and the public have nothing to do. Now it seems that he wishes to expose the Reorganized Church, which he designates as a fraudulent concern, and desires us to assist him in the matter by giving him information that will serve his purpose.

"We wish it to be understood that we are not in that kind of business. People who have been connected with a religious organization and after disconnecting themselves from it engage in a special fight against it are, according to the way we view the matter, not in a strikingly consistent position. No matter how strongly we might differ from the organization thus specially assailed, we could not be induced to participate in an assault upon it. If the gentleman who addresses us on this subject realizes that he has discovered that the religious body of which he has been a member did not come up to his idea of what it ought to be, it seems that his best course would be to seek the truth, if he loves it, that his soul may be satisfied. If a person desired information about the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints we would think him inconsistent if he did not seek it from that organization. Justice would lead us to the conclusion that the same rule will apply to the Reorganized or any other church."

Whoever the man may be who has been so sadly misused by the Reorganized Church, and who now wishes to expose that body, it is to the credit of the church itself that of himself he knows nothing by the use of which he can make the exposition he wishes successful; for if he did he would hardly make application to the church in Utah for information upon which to make such exposition. It is not likely that those to whom this man made his application are possessed of facts concerning the Reorganization of a seriously damaging nature, however capable they may be of demolishing the theories of that body; and for this reason we thank the "News" for the kind way it rebukes this seeker after knowledge and declines to assist him in his warfare; it is both kind and manly. We venture in addition, to offer whatever facilities for obtaining information concerning the Reorganized Church are at our command, reserving this premise only, that the man who seeks to avail himself of them, shall show that he is by character worthy to make the inquiry, either by religious or social standing. We do this because we conceive it to be possible that men may be both honest and earnest and yet in grave error; and if this man be of this sort, inquiry may divest him of his mistakes and he be helped upon the way; or if he be in the error he may show us wherein our error lies, and thus help us. On the other hand, if he be of that class of cavaliers, of which Mormonism has been so prolific, and simply desires to air his notions and vent his spleen it will appear—no organized body violates the rule of courtesy in denying men of the latter class a hearing.

THE "Desert News" of March 31st contains the following. We take it as a straw indicating the set of the wind:

"KEEP COOL.

"The public pulse of this city is not entirely healthful. It is made to beat intemperately by trivial causes. Heretofore it would have been difficult to find, in any part of the world, a community more self-possessed, and having cooler heads and calmer hearts than the inhabitants of the 'City of the Saints.' Deliberation, stability, fixedness of purpose and indifference to causes calculated to produce excitement, have, in the past, been preeminent among the characteristics of the people here.

"In the early '50's, when all the States of the Union were infused with an intense excitement, which led tens of thousands to leave their homes on the Atlantic Coast in a mad chase after fortune on the Pacific Slope, the great mass of the people here, though comparatively near the gold fields, were not infected with the gold fever, and instead of succumbing to it, they patiently persisted in the toil of subduing the elements and making homes in the desert, and remained invulnerable to a fortune-seeking spirit.

"On unnumbered occasions since that time they have shown a nonchalance and imperturbability, when causes of a nature to produce excitement, exasperation and demonstrations, of a public character, were operating which have been little short of wonderful, and have won for them an enviable reputation for soberness of thought and action.

"But a change has come over the public disposition in this regard, which is quite observable in the capital, and also in other parts of the Territory. Several recent manifestations of this morbid condition may be cited. A dramatic 'chestnut,' mutilated to the verge of the grotesque, not to say the horrible, is to be put upon the boards of the Theatre 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' with two 'Marks' two 'Topsies,' is the bewildering announcement to which is added the promise that two dogs will come upon the stage and bark, and that some genuine colored performers will appear!

"A furore is the result. A large concourse of people assemble in front of the Theatre, long before the hour for raising the curtain. The crowd is so dense and struggles so that it defeats itself in its efforts to reach the box office and the entrances. Police officers labor, and for a long time in vain, to prevail upon the crowd of humanity to be cool and deliberate, and to preserve a semblance of order in the attempt to procure tickets and enter the Theatre. The building is jammed in every part. Standing room in the galleries can scarcely be obtained. A 'nigger show' has rendered wild our theatre-going public, who, as the alleged entertainment proceeds, conceal their disgust at its quality under a guise of good humor, but who, when the 'attraction' is presented the second time, give it so wide a berth that the theatre contains only a sprinkling of auditors.

"Closely following this episode is a similar one. A dramatic entertainment is to be given, whose high character can not be questioned, but about which there is nothing that need create public excitement. But the public nerves are tensely drawn, and ticket speculators work upon them until the price of good seats runs up to $25, which figure was actually paid for a number of tickets to see Booth and Barrett.

"A far more serious and deplorable symptom of the unhealthfulness of public feeling at the present time is seen in the number of attempts at suicide which have been made in this city within two or three weeks, several of which were successful.

"A spirit of speculation and eagerness in the pursuit of wealth and pleasure, which is antipodal to that calmness and contentment that have heretofore prevailed here, has come among us. It is being stimulated by adventurers who have lately made their advent here, and by the anti-religious influences and agencies of longer standing in our midst. It is a spirit which Latter Day Saints should resist. It will mar their peace and happiness, and detract from their welfare, in the highest sense of that term, precisely in that proportion in which they imbibe it and yield to it. It may influence, or even carry away many persons, but the wise, thoughtful and far-seeing will pursue the higher purposes of their lives unaffected by it."

MRS. STENHOUSE ON MOR-MONISM.

THE Christian Herald, edited in London, England, by Rev. M. Baxter, contains in its issues for February 8th, 15th, and 29th, 1888, a continued story on Mormonism, written by Mrs. Stenhouse, once the wife of a leading Brighamite missionary. In the first paper she states that she arrived in England from Australia last July, and that her "eyes, which had been failing for some time, grew worse, and," that "since that time," she says, "I have been unable to see at all."

While, so far as we have seen, she ranks Brighamism as Mormonism proper, yet in the following extracts she makes statements very damaging to that theory, and, in fact, proves that original Mormonism as she found it in England, in 1848, and Brighamism as she afterwards found it in Utah, were as different as heaven and hades. Apostate Mormonism, and that which is set forth in the standard, authorized books of the church up to 1844, are two different and widely differing systems, as Mrs Stenhouse really shows.

If the doctrines of original Mormonism, and the practices of its faithful devotees, procured so much of moral, social and spiritual purity; inspired such lofty zeal and hope, animated the heart with such benevolent, holy resolves, filled the soul with such spiritual power, peaceful joy and heavenly rapture, then it must be conceded; it was a mighty and a marvelous power for good, and its tendencies and its fruits were of the purest, most exalted character. If pure and undefiled Mormonism in 1848-9, was capable of such wonderful, moral, holy work as Mrs. Stenhouse testifies of, then there was inherent in it such blessed, helpful, and divine forces as the race of mankind needs, and such as are described in the Scriptures as the heritage of God's faithful children in all ages and among all nations. And if original Mormonism wrought these blessed conditions then, it will do the same now, or in the future, when the conditions it lays down are fully and faithfully complied with. On these principles the Reorganized Church began its work at the first, and that, too, by the direct inspiration of God; and so far as it has builded in keeping therewith, the Lord has been "working" with it, giving most blessed results.

Here is what she says:

"On my arrival in Southampton I soon discovered that my father, mother, and sisters, were full of the spirit of Mormonism. They were rejoicing in it, ardently believing that it was "the fulness of the everlasting gospel," as the elders styled it; and whatever I might think of the new religion, I was forced to confess that it brought into my father's house peace, love, kindness and charity, such as were seldom seen in many households of religious people. My sisters were completely changed in their manner of life. They cared nothing for the amusements which girls of their age generally crave and enjoy. Their whole thoughts seemed to be occupied with the church, attending the meetings of the Saints, and employing every leisure hour in preparing comforts for the elders who were travelling and preaching without purse and scrip. And in all this they were as happy as children.

Of my parents I might say the same. My dear mother rejoiced in the belief that she had been peculiarly blessed in being privileged to live at a time when "the last dispensation" was revealed; and my father, though an invalid, rejoiced that he had entered into the kingdom by baptism. Such was the condition of my father's house; and who can wonder that, accustomed as I was to listen with respect to the opinions of my parents, I was more than ever troubled about the new religion which they had adopted? The first Sunday morning that I was in England, my parents asked me to accompany them to meeting, and I readily complied, as I wanted to hear more of the strange doctrines which in some mysterious way had made our family so happy, but which in other quarters had provoked such bitter hostility. I know now that this joyousness of heart is not peculiar to new converts to Mormonism, but may be found among the newly converted of every sect which allows the emotional feelings to come into play. To me, however, it was a mystery; but I must confess that the change which had taken place in those nearest and dearest to me, affecting me personally, and being so evidently in accordance with the teachings of the Savior, led me to regard Mormonism with less antipathy. The bright side alone of the new faith was presented to the world abroad; we had yet to go to Utah and witness the effects of Brigham Young's teachings at home before we could know what Mormonism really was.

I shall never forget the trial it was to my pride to enter the dirty, mean-looking room where the Saints assembled at that time. No one would rent a respectable hall to them, and they were glad to obtain the use of any place which was large enough for their meetings. On the present occasion there was a very fair gathering of people, who had come together influenced by the most varied motives. The presiding elder—I should here remark that the word "elder" has among the Mormons no reference whatever to age, but is simply a rank in the priesthood—called the meeting to order, and read the following hymn:

"The morning breaks, the shadows flee;
Lo! Zion's standard is unfurl'd!
The dawning of a brighter day
Majestic rises on the world.
The clouds of error disappear
Before the rays of truth divine;
The glory bursting from afar,
Wide o'er the nations soon shall shine!
The Gentile fullness now comes in,
And Israel's blessings are at hand.
Lo! Judah's remnant cleansed from sin,
Shall in the promised Canaan stand.
Angels from heaven and truth from earth
Have met and both have record borne;
Thus Zion's light is bursting forth
To bring her ransom'd children home.

Every word of this hymn had a meaning peculiar to itself, relating to the distinctive doctrines of the Saints. The congregation sang with an energy and enthusiasm which made the room shake again. Self and the outer world were alike forgotten, and an ecstasy of rapture seemed to possess the souls of all present. Then all knelt down, and prayer was offered for the prophet, the apostles, high-priests, "seventies," elders, priests, teachers and deacons; blessings were invoked upon the Saints, and power to convert the Gentiles; and as the earnest words of supplication left the speaker's lips, the congregation shouted a loud "Amen." There was no prepared sermon. There never is at a Mormon meeting. The people are taught that the Holy Ghost is "mouth, matter, and wisdom." Whatever the preaching elder may say is supposed to come directly by inspiration from heaven, and the Saints listening, as they believe, not to his utterances but to the words of God himself, have nothing to do but to hear and obey.

The first speaker on this occasion was a young gentleman of respectable family, who had been recently baptized and ordained. He, too, was from St. Helier's and I had known him from childhood. His address impressed me very much. He had been a member of the Baptist church, and he related his experience, told how often he had wondered why there were not inspired men to preach the glad tidings of salvation to the world to-day, as there were eighteen centuries ago. He spoke of the joy which he had experienced in being baptized into the Mormon church, and realizing that he had received the "gift of the Holy Ghost." The simplicity with which he spoke, his evident honesty, and the sacrifice he had made in leaving the respectable Baptists and joining the despised Mormons were, I thought, so many evidences of his sincerity. Alas! how little could that young preacher conjecture how different the practical Mormonism in Utah was from the theoretical Mormonism which he had learned to believe in Europe, before polygamy was known among the Saints. A short time afterwards he gave up his business, married an accomplished young lady, and went with her to Salt Lake City. There they were utterly disgusted with what they witnessed, apostatized, and set out for England. When they had gone three-fourths of the way back to the Missouri river, the young man, his wife, child, and another apostate and his wife, were killed by "Indians"—such, at least, was the report; but dissenting Mormons have always charged their "taking off" to the order of the leaders of the Mormon church.

But to return to the meeting. The reader must please forgive me if I dwell a little upon the events of that particular morning, for naturally they made a deep impression upon my own mind—it was there that I saw for the first time my husband who was to be. I had heard a good deal about a certain elder, from my family and from the Saints who visited at our house. They spoke with great enthusiasm of the earnestness with which he preached, of the effect which his addresses produced, and of his confidence of the final triumph of "the kingdom." At that time—the summer of 1849—although the branch of the Mormon church in Britain was in a most flourishing condition, there were not in England more than two or three American elders preaching the faith, for when—two years before the period of which I speak—the Saints left Nauvoo and undertook that most extraordinary exodus across the plains to the Rocky mountains, the missionary elders were all called home, and the work of proselytizing in Europe was left entirely to the native elders. To direct their labors there was placed over them an American elder named Orson Spencer, a graduate of Dartmouth University, a scholar and a gentleman—a man well calculated from his previous Christian education to give an elevated tone to the teachings of the young English missionaries. Mormonism in England then, had no resemblance to Mormonism of Utah to-day. The Mormons were then simply an earnest religious people, in many respects like the Methodists, especially in their missionary zeal and fervor of spirit. The Mormon church abroad was purely a religious institution, and Mormonism was preached by the elders as the gospel of Christianity restored. The church had no political shaping nor the remotest antagonism to the civil power. The name of Joseph Smith was seldom spoken, and still more seldom was heard the name of Brigham Young, and then only so far as they had reference to the Church of the Saints. At the testimony meeting of which I speak, a happy spirit was peculiarly present. An encouraging smile, or a kind word, greeted me one very side, and, as a newly-converted sister, I received the most cordial welcome. The brethren were seated on forms and chairs and any other convenient articles which came to hand, while at the further end of the room was brother Bench, who was to preside, and with him several other leading elders. Brother Bench gave out a suitable hymn. The whole congregation joined in the singing, and every heart seemed lifted up with devotion. Then another elder rose, and offered a spirit-moving prayer; and then the brother who presided stated that for the time he withdrew his control of the proceedings, and, as the phrase was, he "put the meeting in the hands of the Saints," exhorting them not to let the time pass by unimproved. Then arose brother Edwards, a well-tried champion, and to him every one listened with profound attention, eagerly drinking in his every utterance. I could almost, even now, imagine that he was really inspired. Then I firmly believed he was. His voice thrilled with an earnestness which seemed to us something more than the mere excitement of the soul. A burning fire seemed to flash from his large, expressive eyes; his features were lighted up with that animation which gives a Saint-like halo to the earnest face when fired with indignation or pleading soul-felt truths; while his whole frame seemed to glow with the glory of a land beyond this earth, as in the most impressive and convincing language he reminded us that our sins had been washed away by the waters of baptism, that upon us had been poured the gifts and graces of the Spirit, and that it was our sacred privilege to testify of these things. The effect of this exhortation was magical. We forgot all our outward surroundings, in the realization that the great work of the Lord was so gloriously begun, and that it would surely go on conquering and to conquer. One sister—an elderly woman—who was present, unable to control her emotion, burst out with that Mormon hymn which I have heard some old Nauvoo Saints declare produced upon the people in those days an enthusiasm similar to that which moves the heart of every true Frenchman when he listens to the soul-stirring notes of the Marseillaise:—

"The Spirit of God like a fire is burning!
The latter day glory begins to come forth;
The visions and blessings of old are returning,
The angels are coming to visit the earth.
We'll sing and we'll shout with the armies of heaven,
Hosanna! Hosanna to God and the Lamb,
All glory to them in the highest be given Henceforth and forever: Amen and Amen."
I have often heard in magnificent Cathedrals, hoary with the dust of time, and in vast places of amusement dedicated specially to music and to song, the outpouring of that glorious vocal flood which a chorus of a thousand well-trained singers can alone send forth. I have felt sometimes that entrancing state of ecstasy which thrilled the soul of the seer in Patmos, as he listened to the melody of the angelic throng—"the voice of many waters, and the peal of mighty thunders, and the notes of harpers harping upon their harps;" but never, even when surrounded by all that was best calculated to produce a sentiment of devotion in my mind—never did I experience so rapt a feeling of communion with "the armies of heaven"—as I felt in that unadorned meeting room, surrounded by those plain but earnest and united people. Nor was I alone in this. The feeling was contagious. There was not one present who did not sympathise. And thus, I suppose, melody has always played a prominent part in all religious revivals, whether of Divine or human origin. The apostles had their psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs: the martyrs their Te Deum; the Waldenses made the hills and vales of Piedmont vocal with their singing; the Lollards and Hussites had their melodies; and in more modern days the followers of Luther, Wesley, and (may I add?) Joseph Smith, have poured out the fulness of their souls after the same fashion.

The last notes of the hymn has scarcely died away when another, and then another brother, arose and bore testimony to the great work, told what the Lord had done for them personally, told of their zeal for the faith, and exhorted all present to persevere unto the end. Again prayer was offered, another hymn sung, and the Saints were dismissed with a solemn benediction. I was now a Mormon in every sense of the word, although entirely ignorant of Utah politics and polygamy. My dreams of a life of happiness spent in seeking to convert the whole world to the religion of Jesus, which I believed had been restored again to earth by the ministry of holy angels. It is easy to say that such an ambition was ill-directed when associated with Mormonism, but no one can deny that, in itself, it was the noblest and purest that could inspire the heart of man. There was no sacrifice too great for me to make; there was no object too dear for me to resign, if it stood in the way of my sacred calling. The whole current of my thoughts and plans was now changed. It was henceforth my duty to be entirely forgetful of self, and to devote my energies—my all—to the advancement of the Kingdom of God. My life was to be identified with the Saints,—my faith required it, and I was willing that it should be so."

In the Kingston, (Mo.), Times of February 3d, Mr. John Murphy, of Polo, Missouri, had an article justifying a former one in which he sought to pervert and refute the testimony of David Whitmer touching the divinity of the Book of Mormon. Brother Lambert had replied to that article most effectively, and Mr. Murphy's rejoinder of the 3d of February is the one to which Bro. Lambert now replies. Mr. Murphy strives, by garbled quotations and misstatements, to make the Book of Mormon both justify and teach murder, because of what is written concerning the killing of Laban by Nephi. The judicious remarks of Bro. Lambert in his reply will be read with interest and profit by all who desire to get at the truth and the moral bearing and tendencies of that homicide.

This Mr. Murphy claims to be an educated man, and a lover of justice and truth. The propriety of that claim, at least the latter and most important half of it, remains for others to judge when they learn of his manners and methods. Bro. Lambert's reply presents the strongest points of Mr. Murphy, and then points out their errors, both in their statements and conclusions.

"MURPHY ON MORMONISM."

THE OTHER SIDE.—No 2.

WILL Mr. Murphy be so kind and just as to allow me to represent myself?

It would be equally proper for me to address him as a cardinal or priest in the Catholic Church as for him to address me as "a bishop of L. D. S." If he does not know whether I am a bishop or an elder, why does he address me as bishop throughout his article? Is it just "for suavity?"—Mr. Murphy admits that when he interviewed David Whitmer he had given the Book of Mormon only a hurried perusal, getting "impressions" as he went along. It would have been much better had he relied on the statements of the book. This impression business, as the Times informed us some time ago, will not do in matters of this kind. But now he has the book again, and has been testing "his earlier impressions," and wonders how well he "remembered." "In no question," he says, "have I made a false impression."

I am truly glad that Mr. Murphy is now in possession of the book. It is not too much now to look for a true and honest representation of its teachings, as, it is claimed, Mr. Murphy is both intellectual and learned. In his former article, he says Nephi murdered his uncle, Laban. Now, with all his circumlocution and begging of the question, he has only succeeded in proving that Laban was of the same tribe (tribe of Joseph) as Lehi and his family? Did not Mr. Murphy know, when he penned that sentence, that every intelligent reader, who was not acquainted with the Book of Mormon, would understand Laban to be a brother to one of Nephi's parents, or the husband to a parent's sister? Did he not make a false impression by that false statement? Mr. Murphy certainly gives himself away when he says "so for suavity I called the Shiek Nephi's uncle." Not because the Book of Mormon so states, but just to be sweet, pleasant and agreeable! Who knows but what he had the same disposition for suavity in writing of the whole article? Perhaps David Whitmer told him that he "did see the angel of God and hear his voice;" but just for "suavity" he represents him as saying it was only an "impression," etc.

Mr. Murphy, who is said to be a Bible student and a professor of the Christian religion, says that the first chapter of Nephi contains precedents for murder, and he is now making a cunning and desperate effort to substantiate his assertions. Before proceeding to present and examine what Mr. Murphy conveniently left out, in order to convict Nephi of murder, I will submit for his plain consideration a few plain questions and statements. (1), Mr. Murphy is about to settle down in the conviction that Mr. Solomon Spaulding, that sickly clergyman, is the author of the Book of Mormon. Was this Spaulding, who had been a minister of one of the popular churches, and who, it is claimed, was a pious and educated man, in his last days while sick, full of the spirit of murder?

(2), If the first chapter of Nephi contains precedents for murder, what shall we do with the second chapter of Exodus? Moses saw "an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren; he looked around, and when he discovered that no one saw him, he killed the Egyptian and hid him in the sand." When he discovered that he was found out, he fled into the land of Midian, where the Lord appeared unto him, made him a great prophet, and the deliverer of His people Israel. Is this a clear Bible precedent for murder?

(3), Pharaoh would not let the Hebrews go, as requested by Moses, so, as a last resort, the poor innocent children are threatened with death; and the Lord smote the first born among all the Egyptians, from the king on his throne to the captive in his dungeon.—Ex. 12: 29. The Hebrews were commanded, before departing into the wilderness, to borrow jewels of gold and jewels of silver, from their neighbors. Are these authoritative precedents for theft and murder? If not, how does Murphy explain them?

(4), In 1st Samuel, chapter 15, Saul is commanded of God to go against the Amalekites and utterly exterminate them. But Saul spared Agag, the king, taking him prisoner. When Samuel learned of this, he commanded Agag to be brought before him, "and Samuel hewed Agag in pieces before the Lord in Gilgal." Is this a precedent for murder? If not, then what is it?

The reader will please bear in mind that I do not claim the foregoing cases, taken from the Bible, to be precedents for murder; but Deists and Atheists do so claim, just as some of our opposers affirm that the first chapter of the Book of Mormon contains precedents for murder. I am under no obligations to apologize for the Bible while meeting the attacks of one of its professed believers against some of the historical statements of the Book of Mormon. All that can be justly required of me is to show that the moral tone of the statements attacked by Mr. Murphy is as pure as that of many of the historical statements of the Bible. I am perfectly safe in challenging Mr. Murphy, or anybody else, to prove that the Book of Mormon teaches or sanctions murder, or any other crime found in the decalogue. And right here permit me to say, as a representative of the church to which I belong, that we believe the Bible to be one of the best and grandest books ever given to the people. Mr. Murphy attempts to prove by quotation and otherwise, that Nephi, the first leading character of the Book of Mormon, was a murderer. It is true that he tells us of the first, second and third attempts to get the plates; but in doing so he leaves out the strongest statements which are against him, and very artfully calls them "much improbable rubbish," etc. He also garbles par. 34. (I quote from the Plano edition), leaving out the last thirty-five words, without anything to indicate it, from the midst of his quotation. Why Murphy calls the neglected statements "improbable rubbish," and why he left them out, and why he garbled paragraph thirty-three, will appear when the case is fairly presented to the reader.

First, they were commanded of God to procure the plates (sacred records) of Laban. They were not instructed to kill Laban, nor to steal the records.

Second, Nephi was willing to go, believing that the Lord would prepare the way; and he and his brethren took their journey to the land of Jerusalem.

Third, After nearing the city, it was agreed that Laman should go to Laban, and if possible procure the plates. Nephi says he "went in unto the house of Laban and he talked with him as he sat in his house. And he desired of Laban the records which were engraven upon the plates of brass, which contain the genealogy of my father." (par. 28). So far all is very plain. Not a word from which we can justly infer that there was any intention to either kill or defraud. It was an open and honorable effort to negotiate for the plates.

Fourth, Laban would not give up the records, but thrust him out and called him a robber. Mr. Murphy thinks he had good grounds for calling him robber, "inasmuch as that family had taken to the wilderness, the refuge of all outlaws then, as well as now." This is too absurd to need any extended notice. What about the children of Israel who took to the wilderness of Egypt? Were they all robbers?

Fifth, They now make a second effort to get the plates. But first, as Mr. Murphy says, "they went to their old home and collected their gold and other treasures which they had left behind them." Connecting this statement of Mr. Murphy with a previous one, viz: "They left their homes in the land of Jerusalem with their necessary movables, in haste, leaving their gold, silver and other valuables, a misfortune which would break the heart of Shylock, or Isaac of York," and we have another of Mr. Murphy's unfriendly and unjust thrusts. He says, by implication, that Lehi's family were avaricious, like "Shylock, or Isaac of York," though the record furnishes no foundation for such belief. But I suppose Mr. Murphy had an "impression" that they were inordinate lovers of gold, and that was deemed sufficient.

Right here, in order to make plain the character of this second attempt to procure the plates, I will insert some of Mr. Murphy's "improbable rubbish," at the risk of being called uncivilized and insane. The point at issue is this: Are we justified in rejecting the statements of the first chapter of the Book of Mormon concerning the manner of obtaining the plates? Mr. Murphy has undertaken to affirm that we are, while I deny. In making out his case, he conveniently set aside as "improbable rubbish" that part of the record which is most against him! This is neither logical nor fair. I will now quote at length: "And it came to pass that we went in unto Laban, and desired him that he would give unto us the records which were engraven upon the plates of brass, for which we would give unto him our gold, and our silver, and all our precious things. And it came to pass that when Laban saw our property, and that it was exceedingly great, he did lust after it, inasmuch that he thrust us out, and sent his servants to slay us, that he might obtain our property. And it came to pass that we did flee before the servants of Laban and we were obliged to leave behind our property, and it fell into the hands of Laban. And it came to pass that we fled into the wilderness, and the servants of Laban did not overtake us, and we hid ourselves in the cavity of a rock. And it came to pass that Laban was angry with me, and also with my father, and also was Lemuel; for he hearkened unto the words of Laman. Wherefore Laman and Lemuel did speak many hard words unto us, their younger brothers, and they did smite us even with a rod. And it came to pass as they smote us with a rod, behold an angel of the Lord came and stood before them, and he spoke unto them saying: Why do ye smite your younger brother with a rod? Know ye not that the Lord hath chosen him to be a ruler over you, and this because of your iniquities? Behold ye shall go up to Jerusalem again, and the Lord will deliver Laban into your hands. And after the angel had spoken unto us, he departed. And after the angel had departed, Laman and Lemuel began again to murmur, saying, How is it possible that the Lord will deliver Laban into our hands? Behold he is a mighty man, and can command fifty, yea, even he can slay fifty; then why not us?"—1 Nephi chapter 1: 27, 28, 29, 30.

What do we learn from the above? That in their second effort to procure the plates, they came openly and offered to give Laban all their wealth as a compensation for the plates. If Laban was the true and faithful man that Mr. Murphy would have us believe him to have been, why did he not say, "No, gentlemen, I do not want your gold, I propose to be faithful to my trust." Instead of this, he unjustly robbed them of their wealth, and also attempted to slay them. It was not until after all this had occurred that Nephi was commanded to slay him.

Sixth, The third effort is made, as described by Mr. Murphy, only he garbled badly, as before mentioned. I will supply what he left out from the midst of his quotation without anything to indicate it. After finding Laban dead drunk with his sword on him, and perhaps still watching for an opportunity to slay Nephi and his brethren, and after having been commanded twice to slay him he uses the following words: "Ye, and I also knew that he had sought to take away mine own life; yea, and he would not hearken unto the commandments of the Lord, and he also had taken away our property."

Mr. Murphy evidently did not want the reader to see this last quotation, for it would spoil his position, inasmuch as it shows that the killing of Laban was largely in self defence. He says "many are hung almost weekly for just such midnight murders and robberies, such as that of the prophet Nephi," etc. I challenge Mr. Murphy to produce one parallel case where the individual has been duly convicted and hung!

That the reader may know in what light this same Nephi regarded the crime of murder, together with other crimes and wrongs, I call attention to his second book, chapter 11, the closing portion of the 15th and the first part of the 16th paragraphs. "He commandeth that there shall be no priestcrafts; for, behold, priestcrafts are that men preach and set themselves up for a light unto the world, that they may get gain and praise of the world; but they seek not the welfare of Zion. Behold, the Lord hath forbidden this thing; wherefore, the Lord God hath given a commandment that all men should have charity, which charity is love. And except they should have charity, they were nothing; wherefore if they should have charity, they would not suffer the laborer in Zion to perish. But the laborer in Zion shall labor for Zion; for if they labor for money they shall perish.

"And, again, the Lord God hath commanded that men should not murder; that they should not lie; that they should not steal; that they should not take the name of the Lord their God in vain; that they should not envy; that they should not have malice; that they should not contend one with another; that they should not commit whoredoms; * * * and that they should do none of these things, for whoso doeth them shall perish; for none of these iniquities come of the Lord," etc.

What would become of the Bible should we treat it in the same manner that Mr. Murphy has treated the first chapter of the Book of Mormon? Paine, Voltaire, Graves, Ingersoll and other infidel writers, have not been more unfair than he, and some of them have brought forth much better support for their conclusions—"impressions"—and yet they have come far short of making a valid argument against the Bible and Christianity. Whatever Mr. Murphy and his fellows may think of the Book of Mormon, there is one thing which he can not successfully deny, namely: that the moral tone of the book as a record, is excellent; and that it is surpassed by no other.

Mr. Murphy claims that Nephi's use of the word "brethren," shows that the book is of modern origin. I have looked the matter up and found that his opinion with reference to this has no foundation in fact. Should this point be urged, I will adduce the evidence which will prove his opinion to be extremely fallacious.

When Mr. Murphy comes to "Reformed Egyptian," etc., we shall endeavor to give his learned effusions such notice as the nature of the case may demand.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Truth should be the first lesson of the child, the last aspiration of manhood."

FIRST—A MOTHER.

It is sometimes said of reformers, particularly of women, that if they did better work at home in the training of their children, their outside work would be more effective. Though this may be said with "malice aforethought," there is a deep truth underlying it which we do well to heed.

Every woman who is called to motherhood should feel that her first, best work lies at home, and no call to other work can be so imperative as to justify her in neglecting the earnest training of her children. With every child that comes into our arms, comes anew the command to "take this child and train it for me—the Father, God," and woe be to the mother who dares disobey the divine injunction.

"We long, and struggle and aspire," and it is right we should, yet bethink you, mothers, is there aught you can do more beautiful and holy, more deep and vast in its effects, than the training of a child to true manhood or womanhood? Is there any work which should come before this?

It is sickening to hear people prating of "woman's narrow sphere," or "her limited work," when she, above all others, is the true homemaker, and the mother of children. I would lay the burden of grave responsibilities and high privileges on both parents, yet the mother moulds and guides the tender plant in ways of her own; she, in a deeper sense than man can know, works with God in creating an immortal soul, and truly, if she seeks a great work, she can find it here. Far be it from me to say anything against any organization which has for its object the advancement of mankind—to all such I give a hearty "God speed;" yet I sometimes think if mothers, wives and sisters everywhere worked in their homes as they should, if every home was a reform society, a temple dedicated to the highest and holiest things of life, to temperance and purity in all things, the need of these auxiliary societies would be greatly lessened, and the work we are trying to forward would be more truly and more wisely done.

It is because so many children are denied their birth right and are not well born, not born into the kingdom of love and truth and purity, as every child should be, and not properly guarded and guided, not earnestly trained and instructed through childhood and youth, because parents have failed in their high calling, doing that which they should not do, and leaving undone that which they should do, because fathers and mothers alike do not feel the importance and sacredness of their work, that evil is so widespread among us to-day; and every one must be "up and doing" to fight it down. For every other work in life we fit ourselves by study and careful preparation, but how many among men and women take special thought to fit themselves for parenthood? How many take up its duties and its responsibilities with a devout spirit, feeling the need that it, above all other work, shall be well done? How few, even among thinking men and women, but rush haphazard into this "holy of holies" where the crown is given us! Is it any wonder that our children are born maimed and weakened in body and mind, and that society must be hedged about by all the safeguards of the law to give us even the appearance of a peaceful, God-loving people? How can it be otherwise?

But let the husband and wife, when the marriage vow is given and the blessing is promised, give themselves to the work of bearing children with the same earnestness, the same careful, prayerful, preparation, the same uplift of heart and soul with which they enter upon any other good work, and how different the result would be. Then children would be born to honor and be an honor to us through all the way of life.

"He builds too low who builds beneath the sky." Our children are born not for time alone, but for eternity—not for earth only, but for heaven, and the seal of Divinity should be plainly visible upon them from the first. It is not to the baby's body alone that we give birth, but to its soul as well, and what that soul shall be, whether a "vessel of honor" or of dishonor, rests largely with us. If we accept the trust with humble, reverent spirit, with loving wisdom and unswerving fidelity, if we work from first to last as "seeing Him who is invisible," seeing the God-likeness in every little face upturned to ours, in every trusting, loving soul entrusted to our keeping; if day by day we recognize the right of that soul to the best that is within us, and give it, we shall not fail of the "exceeding great reward" promised to the faithful. Our name may never be heard "outside the gates of the city," we may not be accounted great among men, yet we shall have done a wondrous work, and the "well done" of the Father will more than atone for any lack of praise or appreciation here. Our children and our children's children for untold generations will carry on the work we begin. The little seed we scatter by the way-side to-day shall be a mighty, fruitful tree in the future. All the world shall be more blessed because of the home we build, and mankind be lifted up and ennobled because our children are pure and strong.

Then call ye it a little work that we are doing? A narrow sphere that we are filling? Ah, no! there is no little in God's sight. It is deep and broad as the need of the soul, wide and large as heaven. Let us thank God that we are accounted worthy to work with Him in the vast field of humanity. Let us rejoice that we are one with Him in all good work, and with the armor of His love about us, the strength of His strength sustaining us, let us walk and faint not, exemplifying, each in our own life, the truth we would impart to others:

"Thou must be true thyself,
If thou the truth wouldst teach;
Thy soul must overflow if thou
Another soul would reach;
It needs the overflowing heart
To give the lips full speech.
Think truly, and thy thought
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly, and thy word
Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed."

PROTON, Ont., March 4th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—I am but young in the gospel and in years, but have often thought I would like to write to the Herald. I know this work is true. I have seen the sick healed, and I have been healed myself by the prayer of faith. I have said words which afterwards I thought were not right, and I have prayed that the offense might be forgiven me; and I have been told that patched things did not look so well, no matter how nice they were before. Then let us, dear sisters, not have to patch ourselves up in the gospel, but let us try to keep on and as near to the right line as we can. I have never borne my testimony in a prayer meeting, for I feel too backward; but we should not be that way. I know that the church is true; and it makes my heart rejoice when I sing:

"Great is the Lord, 'tis good to praise
His high and holy name."

Pray for me, sisters; my prayers are for you all, in Jesus' name.

Your sister in the gospel,
MARY BOSFIELD JACK.

KINGSLEY, Iowa, March 14th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—I am a young girl of eighteen summers, and have been a member of the Church of Christ seven months, and have never had the first time to regret the step I have taken. My father and mother have been united with this church for twenty-three years past, and still hold to the same faith. I believe this church to be the true church of God, and am strong in the faith. There is no branch here, but prayer meeting is held each Sunday evening at our school house, where the young members of the church offer prayer and bear testimony. We have just splendid prayer meetings. Let us not neglect to pray, and pray for one another; and so live that when we are called from this world we may praise our Father's name in heaven; and when we stand around the judgment bar to be judged, that the Lord may say well done, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

MINNIE HUDSON.

QUARRY, Ohio, March 23d.

Beloved Sisters of the Home Column:—I have not been silent so long for want of something to write. The fact is, I have so much to say and tell of the great goodness and blessings daily flowing from God, that I feel to say too much, and I am not yet able to write as I should. Let me say to those who have been my constant comforters and whose prayers have ascended in my behalf, since my great affliction, and to many of whom I was not able to respond, our Father has heard our prayers, and since I have been administered to by his authorized servants who kindly advised me to use only the consecrated oil—"God's universal remedy for his people,"—I am much better, and am gradually, surely gaining. Oh, if my pen was that of a ready writer, what glorious things I could tell of the manifestations and blessings I have witnessed of His power and loving kindness. From many states comes the testimony of the Saints, who have written they knew I would recover. It was given them in answer to prayer; and from three of God's servants in different places came the same words and promises by the bidding of the Holy Spirit; they were grand, and to some extent I am already realizing them, and my heart o'erflows with the love and gratitude we Saints only can understand! Oh how I wish every mortal soul could feel as I now do!

Dear Saints, permit me to say to you all, (while I tremble with the power of God's Holy Spirit, and am filled with love for all his people), hold fast the iron rod; trust in darkness as in light; keep the one only true faith, and our Father will aid you to obtain eternal life.

"Aunt P," permit me to tell you your piece on visiting the sick was timely, and is already bearing fruit. Some Saints who had slacked off, and had not written for months, after reading your advice, have written saying your advice aroused them to duty. They say, as they can not cross the deep waters or come over the many miles that separate, to visit me, they send kind words of cheer, flowers, mosses, cards, books, and boxes of stationary, stamps, and various tokens of regard and mementoes. And here I wish to say, I thank all; and also to the kind unknown friend who send me "The Invalid's Visitor," to Lillie, Georgie, and "Aunt Fannie," and Anna, and all, they are all daily remembered by me. That love Jesus commanded his children to have flows in our hearts for each other, by which we know we are his children. It will not be said to the Saints, "Ye visited me not or ministered not unto me."

I hope all the afflicted are receiving benefit from the advice of aunt P.; and may we all hear from the blessed Savior in the day of reward from him. "Ye visited me, and ministered unto my need and comfort. Ye owned me before the world, as my witnesses. I now own you before my Father and your God. Come ye blessed of the Lord; receive the kingdom prepared for you."

Then, dear Saints, faint not at the trials which must be borne to refine the gold. "If we suffer with him we shall reign with him." He tells us he overcame, and so may we.

"And thou weary, art thou languid,
Art thou sore distressed?
Come to me, says our dear Savior,
And coming be at rest.
If I ask him to receive me will he say me nay?
Not till earth and not till heaven pass away.
Finding, following, struggling, keeping,
Is he sure to bless?
Saints, apostles, prophets, martyrs, answer yes."

I perceive God is working greatly through all the faithful. I find all are delighted with "Autumn Leaves." It far exceeds what was expected, and will do a vast amount of good. Let us all unite to work valiantly for the cause we love, that we may share the blessings and glory of God, is the prayer of your sister.

S. A. ROSE.

TEACH ME TO LIVE.

Teach me to live! 'Tis easier far to die—
Gently and silently to pass away—
On earth's long night to close the heavy eyes,
And waken in the realms of glorious day.

Teach me that harder lesson,—How to live;
To serve Thee in the darkest paths of life,
Arm me for conflicts now, fresh vigor give,
And make me more than conqueror in the strife.

Teach me to live! Thy purpose to fulfill;
Bright for Thy glory let my taper shine;
Each day renew, remold this stubborn will;
Closer round Thee my heart's affection twine.

Teach me to live for self and sin no more,
But use the time remaining to me yet;
Not mine own pleasure seeking as before,
Wasting no precious hours in vain regret.

Teach me to live! No idler let me be,
But in Thy service hand and heart employ;
Prepared to do Thy bidding cheerfully;
Be this my highest and my holiest joy.

Teach me to live! My daily cross to bear,
Nor murmur though I bend beneath its load.
Only be with me; let me feel Thee near;
Thy smile sheds gladness on the darkest road.

Teach me to live! And find my life in Thee,
Looking from earth and earthly things away;
Let me not falter, but untiringly
Press on and gain new strength and power each day.

Teach me to live; with kindly words for all:
Wearing no cold repulsive brow of gloom;
Waiting with cheerful patience till Thy call Summons my spirit to her heavenly home.

Selected by SISTER LILLIE.

PRAIRIE VIEW, Kansas.

Dear Sisters:—When reading the letters of the Home Column, the Spirit of the Lord burns within me, and I feel that I must add my testimony to the rest. I do know this work is of the Lord, and I also feel that every Saint ought to turn with all their heart unto the Lord, whom they have promised to serve the rest of their days. If we do our duty we will not find any time to spend in the follies of the world. I have heard some say they would not tie themselves altogether to the gospel; that they "must have a little enjoyment." Oh thoughtless words, if they only remember this question, "Who shall abide the day of his coming?" would they not feel that they could not spend too much time in preparing for that day? I do not think any one can have right thoughts and go to play parties and dances. I think Bro. Caffall wrote a good piece and gave good advice to the Saints. Some have said, "If I never let my children go anywhere they will be perfect dunces." I always tell such if that will make them so I hope they will be. I think if I can teach my children the gospel and lead them to obey it, and then to realize the duty that rests upon them, I shall be happy. I wish the prayers of all God's children, that I may have that spirit that will help me to be a faithful Saint, wife and mother.

Ever praying for this work, I remain your sister in the gospel,

EMMA PAYNE.

RIVER SIOUX, March 6th.

Dear Sister Frances:—Please allow me a little space in the "Home Column." The Herald is very precious to me. I could not live without it. It gives me great satisfaction to read the sisters' letters. I feel like an old veteran, but I can't get to meet with the Saints very often. My health is very poor, but I desire with full purpose of mind and all my strength to help all I can in the work that I love above everything else on earth I send all that I have and that is all any one can do. I have been very sick. I desire the prayers of all the Saints. I send my birth-day offering.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

THE fiftieth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ, being also the thirty-sixth of the Reorganization, convened at Independence, Missouri, at ten o'clock on Friday, April 6th, 1888.

A hymn was sung and, on motion Herman C. Smith of San Bernardino, California, was chosen as temporary chairman, and R. M. Elvin, of Lamoni, Iowa, as temporary secretary.

Prayer was offered by W. W. Blair. The chairman was authorized to appoint a committee of three on permanent organization, and he named G. A. Blakeslee, of Galien, Michigan, Charles Derry, of Magnolia, Iowa, and W. H. Kelley, of Kirtland, Ohio.

On separate motions W. C. Cadwell, of Woodbine, Iowa, J. T. Kinneman, of Stewartville, Missouri, I. N. White, of Clinton, Missouri, F. C. Warnky, of Independence, Missouri, and James McKiernan, of Farmington, Iowa, were chosen as a committee on credentials of delegates.

Subsequently the committee on permanent organization reported that they submitted for adoption the following recommendations:

I. That Presidents Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair preside over the sessions.

II. That the Church Secretary and Recorder, H. A. Stebbins, act as secretary of the conference, assisted by W. C. Cadwell and W. R. Sellon.

III. That F. W. Barbee and J. T. Kinneman have charge of the singing.

IV. That J. A. McGuire and F. G. Pitt act as ushers, with authority to select others to aid them.

V. That the order of the meetings be: Prayer meeting at nine o'clock; preaching at half-past ten o'clock; business meetings from half-past one o'clock till five, and preaching each evening at half-past seven.

VI. That the presiding officers appoint the ones to occupy the pulpit at the preaching services and at the prayer meetings, and that they be requested to occupy the stand when wisdom directs.

VII. That Joseph Luff, E. L. Kelley, D. F. Lambert, R. S. Salyards and R. Etzenhouser act as reporters to send articles to newspapers, and to confer with the reporters who may be present representing any literary department abroad.

Respectfully submitted,
W. H. KELLEY,
Secretary of Committee.

The report was amended by striking out, at his own request, the name of Luff as one of the reporters. Then as amended, the report was adopted.

Addresses were made by Presidents Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair and Apostle E. C. Briggs.

President Smith said:—"The circumstances under which we are gathered are pleasant. The ground upon which we meet is historic, and it should be sacred to us. I am pleased to note that there has been a striking improvement among our people, and that improvement should continue. I trust that we shall remain together at this conference with the same impulse for good that has moved us to come together. If we shall patiently wait and quietly move along we shall succeed without disruption. Only that which is honest and straight will be permitted to abide. I feel to congratulate the brethren upon the thought that the constant endeavor of the great majority who have been preaching has been to maintain righteousness and truth, both in word and in conduct. We can afford to be patient with those who differ from us, and more so with those who are of us."

President Blair said: "To me the whole outlook of the work is very promising. What a contrast this day is with our situation in 1856 to 1860, so great that we can hardly imagine the change. Then our number was few indeed and there were foes everywhere. The only source we could look to for aid was above. Old Saints said that the efforts of the Reorganized Church would be a failure, and, indeed, it had to face all the factions and their antagonisms. But we were conscious that we were in the right, and that all would work out well, for we looked above and trusted in God. The inspiration of the Spirit was with us and we were comforted by the testimony that the standard should not be permitted to fall; for God had lifted it up and it should triumph gloriously. Now the work stands higher than it ever did before, though we are largely misunderstood by the world and a good deal misrepresented. Still there are many who begin to think that there is some truth with us."

Elder E. C. Briggs said: "I believe that this will be one of the most important conferences we have ever held. In June, 1852, I attended the first conference that the Reorganized Church ever held. I was also the first elder of it that took the field to preach its faith. Now how different is the condition of things. Of the east I will say that in many cities of those states our people have a standing that is high, and they have places of worship and are known as being followers of God and Christ. I never saw the day when there was such a desire manifest to hear the word of life as there is now."

President Joseph Smith appointed the speaker and his assistant for the evening service. Sung "Come thou fount of every blessing," and closed with benediction.

At half-past one o'clock, after singing a hymn, prayer was offered by Bishop G. A. Blakeslee. Pres. Joseph Smith in the chair. The committee on credentials presented and read their report; then withdrew it to perfect it, after which the conference adjourned to witness and take part in the ceremonies of laying the corner stone of the meeting house now being erected in Independence.

At half-past seven Leonard Scott, of Galien, Mich., preached. He was assisted by William Crick, of Lamoni, Iowa.

SATURDAY, APRIL 7TH.

The nine o'clock prayer meeting was in charge of J. C. Crabb and J. W. Wight. It was a peaceful and pleasant occasion. The morning sermon was by Willard J. Smith, of Armstrong, Kansas. He was assisted by I. L. Rogers, of Sandwich, Illinois.

At half-past one o'clock the business session was opened by singing, "Hark! listen to the trumpeters," and with prayer by James Caffall. Pres. Blair in the chair.

The minutes of yesterday's session were read by the secretary. This was followed by the report of the committee on credentials, reading as follows:

The Fremont, North-Western Kansas, Spring River, Far West and Southern Nebraska district credentials fail to show the membership, or number of votes they are entitled to, and no written credentials came from the Kewanee and Independence districts. In the last two cases we report the names of those that we believe to be accredited delegates, according to evidence from authentic sources. In the other cases we had to get statements of numbers from the latest and most accessible sources at hand. According to credentials submitted, the London (Canada), the Massachusetts, and the Northern Illinois district failed to send enough delegates to fully represent their respective districts, in case of a call for the yeas and nays. The Pittsburgh and Kirtland and the Southern Indiana districts also fail to send written credentials, so we report upon them as in the other cases.

W. C. CADWELL,
Secretary of Committee.

R. M. Elvin stated that the Malad District, Idaho, desired this conference to provide a way for that district to be represented here, it having no delegate present. It was moved that their request be granted, but the vote being taken upon it the negative prevailed and the request was denied, there being no provision in the Rules of Representation for such an exigency.

The report of H. A. Stebbins, as General Church Secretary and Recorder, was read:

CHURCH SECRETARY AND RECORDER'S REPORT.

I present the following synopsis of the labor that has been done upon the Church Records during the year just past, and I feel sure that the body will be pleased to see that there has been such a gain in numerical strength. The table given further on in this report shows that there has been a gain of one thousand, six hundred and seventy-one (1,671) by baptism, nine hundred and forty-three (943) by letter and vote, making a total of two thousand, six hundred and fourteen (2,614) names put upon the General Record of the Church during the past year. With them have been recorded the dates and places of birth and baptism, and by whom each was baptized and confirmed.

During the same time there has been a loss of seven hundred and seventy-five (775) by Letter of Removal, two hundred and seventy (270) by death, and one hundred and twenty-seven (127) by expulsion, making a total loss of eleven hundred and seventy-two (1,172), which taken from the stated increase leaves a net gain of fourteen hundred and forty-two (1,442) members for the year. This added to the total of last annual report brings the aggregate of the Church up to twenty thousand, six hundred and seventy eight (20,678) members, according to the records in my office.

I have also recorded one hundred and seventy marriages, or changes of name by marriage, and the names of two hundred and eighty-eight officials of the Church, with the items of when, where and by whom they were ordained, one hundred and sixty of them being new ordinations in the various branches of the Church. Have corrected and brought up the records of each quorum in the Church, so far as organized, and have enrolled the names of all Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons who have applied to be placed in quorums.

Eighteen new branches have been organized and placed upon record, and several previously inactive ones have been reorganized, or put in working order, after a decline caused by the removal of pastors or people during past years. There are several other new ones that I have heard of, besides two or three new ones that came into my hands too late for recording before making up my Annual Report.

There has been an improvement in order, system, and promptness about reports and records among branch and district officials, which I am glad to note. I have received during the year one thousand and three reports of branches or letters affecting the Records, frequently these letters being transcripts of or pertaining to six or more branches, as sent in by district secretaries, thus being equivalent to so many separate reports of branches. In corrections of records, or additions in items of dates or places of birth, baptism, confirmation, ordination, etc., to that previously on record, I have made fifteen hundred and fifty-five entries. Have also written between five and six hundred letters, besides issuing the usual number of Certificates of Appointment, Certificates of Membership, Licenses, etc., and done such other writing as was necessary, or as was required of me.

The annexed tabular form will show at a glance what has been the number of baptisms recorded in favor of each state, and the number received, removed by letter, expelled, died or ordained during the year, with the net gain or loss, as the case may be, in each country or state. The footings show the aggregate gain and loss of the whole Church, and the net gain of 1,442 members as stated above:—

Of England I would say that only one branch has been reported during the year, namely the Zion's Hope, of London, which accounts for the meager statistics given of that country. The lack in the Society Island reports is accounted for by a letter found later in this report, from the secretary of that mission.

The work in Scotland has not been heard from for many years, and since Bro. Brix died nothing has come from Denmark in the way of news or records.

REPORTS OF DISTRICTS.

I give a summary of the yearly reports of missions and districts, so far as sent in. It includes their membership, account of spiritual condition and progress, and of labor done. The totals given include all officials, namely First Presidency, Apostles, High Priests, Seventy, Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons. It does not seem necessary to take space to publish their number in each district.

"Elder H. A. Stebbins, Secretary of the Reorganized Church:—Salutations to you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ; Amen. I find great difficulty in giving you the names of the members of the church in this part of the world, because the books have not been properly rectified by the several churches. I trust that you will wait patiently for a little while until we can send you a correct list of the members of the body of Christ, but the dates of birth we can not well give. We are still looking over the Registers to ascertain the age of the younger part of the community. The books are kept by the chiefs of the respective districts. You are aware that the greater part of the members are at the Paumotu Islands, where the register of births and deaths has never been well kept, until about the last fifteen or twenty years. Of those born before that nothing can be put down as certain, the ages of the people being guessed at. Since then the books [public registers] have been properly kept. But it costs a great deal of money to take extracts from the books, and then to translate them into English. That is one of the great difficulties that we encounter in this part of the world, and more especially in our correspondence with you, for which the church here has made no provision whatever, such as paying interpreters, purchasing writing material, and whatever else is necessary in that line.

"Salutations to you in the name of the Lord,

"DAVID POHEMITI,

"Secretary of Church in the Islands of the Southern Sea.
"A correct translation.

"R. BARFF."

Welsh Mission.—This mission includes 9 branches having a total membership of 162, including 1 of the Seventy, 32 Elders, 11 Priests, 3 Teachers, 4 Deacons. During the year 16 persons have been baptized; 4 have been expelled, 4 died, leaving 8 as net gain. T. E. Jenkins, president; D. C. Lewis, clerk. Bro. Jenkins writes that the Saints in Wales feel grateful to the church for appointing Bro. J. D. Jones to labor there, for his preaching, his exhortations and his conduct were alike good. But his affairs made it necessary for him to return to America, so they ask for another to be appointed to come there. Bro. Jenkins suggests Bro. John Watkins, of Lucas, Iowa, as a true man, worthy of confidence, and that he be put in charge of the mission, the duties of which Bro. Jenkins says he is not really able to perform, owing to weakness of body. But whoever is sent there he will do all he can to aid them and the work. The local Elders have been faithful the past year, some of them very faithful. The most successful were Brn. John Jones, of Ogmere and Thomas Gould, of Cardiff, the latter a young man of promise. The church in Wales rejoices in the prosperity of the cause in the various parts of the world, while still praying and believing that ere long it will prosper in their land. Peace and happiness are with them, and gifts of God's Spirit are enjoyed to a good degree.

Kent and Elgin, Canada.—Is composed of 14 branches, having a total of 383 members, 62 baptisms, 16 received; 14 removed, 1 expelled, 6 died; 57 net gain. Arthur Leverton, president; Richard Coburn, clerk.

Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin.

Embraces about 14 branches and several fragments, 756 being total membership. During year 14 persons been baptized, 22 received by letter, total gain 36; loss of 16 by letter, 1 by death, leaving a net gain of 19 over last report. F. M. Cooper, president; W. Vickery, clerk.

South-Eastern Illinois—Has 6 branches, with a total of 337 members. Baptisms during the year 25, received 2, total 27; loss 2 by letter, 6 by expulsion, 5 by death, leaving 14 as net gain. There are also 15 scattering members, 1 baptized this year, making a total of 352. The work is said to be not in good condition, and laborers are few, with only one appointed missionary. Times are hard and other Elders having to support their families, can not devote much time to preaching. G. H. Hilliard, president; I. M. Smith, clerk.

Nauvoo and String Prairie.—Contains 5 branches, 295 members; 10 baptisms; 12 lost by letter, 7 by death, 1 by expulsion, making a net loss of 20 for the year. Its condition is not as good as the officials would like to see; still there is an increasing interest to hear the doctrine, and there are good prospects. Since June first the president has devoted much time to the work, both in the branches and outside of them. Brn. A. H. Smith and M. T. Short have preached some for us, besides the regular preaching of branch officers. James McKiernan, president; G. P. Lambert, clerk.

Decatur, Iowa.—District contains 8 organized branches, all alive and in working order, and with one exception doing well. A good degree of harmony and peace exists throughout seven of the branches, and there seems to be a steady growth in spirituality, as a rule; and especially is there an increasing interest in studying the revealed word. There has been during the year a gain of 107 members, 56 by baptism, 51 by letter and vote; a loss of 53 by letter, 12 by expulsion, 10 by death, total 70, leaving a net gain in the branches of 37, though there has been a loss besides of 5 from the 52 scattering ones reported last year. The branches contain now 1,139 members, which with 47 scattering makes 1,186 present membership of the district. The president has spent several months time in preaching where most needed, and has baptized 25 during the year. Brn. C. H. Jones, John Johnston, John Shippey, J. R. Evans, T. J. Bell, Samuel Ackerly, O. J. Bailey, Nephi Lovell and J. W. Johnson, of the local brethren, have done more or less away from their homes in the district, while Brn. Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, J. R. Lambert and A. J. Moore have given occasional aid, and Bro. Duncan Campbell some. It is hoped that a part or all of these and others will be free to do more the coming year, in declaring the salvation of God unto the people. H. A. Stebbins, president; F. M. Weld, clerk.

Des Moines—Has 9 branches, 467 members besides 13 not in branches. There have been 19 baptized, 45 received, gain 64; loss of 22 by letter, 4 by expulsion, 3 by death, total 29, leaving net gain of 35 for the year. The district is reported as being in a fair condition, and so with most of the branches. Branches have been organized at Flagler, Marion county, and at Angus, Boone county, by Bro. E. C. Brand, who has labored earnestly. Bro. J. S. Roth has divided his time between this district and the Eastern Iowa, and has worked hard. Brn. Stamm, Allen, Thompson, Shimel, Hand, Baker and Knox all report doing some work. More laborers are needed, as not one half of the territory has been worked over. The What Cheer branch has been reorganized and is doing well. W. C. Nirk, president of district; H. A. McCoy, clerk.

Eastern Iowa—Five branches, 155 members; 28 baptized, 4 lost by letter and 1 death, leaving 23 net gain. There are also 12 members not in branches. District in a good state, though two branches have had no gain, and one is holding no meetings whatever. The help of the missionary in charge is needed, and he has been called for. There are many calls for preaching, and the work prospers nearly everywhere. Bro. J. S. Roth has labored acceptably and his return is desired. Bro. W. T. Maitland has spent much time, having been called so to do. Offers of aid have been made by some not of the church, for the purpose of building a meeting house. Jerome Ruby, president; W. T. Maitland, clerk.

Galland's Grove.—Contains 9 branches, in which are 689 members, besides about 40 scattering, making about 729 as a total. A gain of 29 by baptism, 13 by letter and vote, total 42; loss of 15 by letter, 3 by expulsion, 4 by death; net gain 20 members. Excepting in two branches the cause is onward, and these exceptions are for lack of labor on the part of the branch officers. The following have labored in the district: J. R. Lambert, A. H. Smith, Charles Derry, J. Crabb, J. A. McIntosh, J. W. Chatburn, E. C. Brand, J. F. McDowell, John Thomas, W. E. Peak, W. W. Whiting, C. E. Butterworth, David Chambers, Jos. Seddon, George Sweet, Robert Ford, Edmund Ford, James Allen, Ingvert Hansen, John Pett, Alfred Jackson, Jno. Hawley, Ira A. Goff, James Turner, James Wedlock, William Jordan, B. F. Wicks, Benam Salisbury, Franklin Rudd, Abel H. Rudd, Jos. W. Smith, Chauncy Williamson, Charles J. Hunt, Leonard Butterworth, Cyrus Dobson, Samuel Jordison, David S. Baughman, and other of the Priests and Teachers of the several branches. W. W. Whiting, president; John Pett, clerk.

Little Sioux.—Has 8 branches, 720 members. There has been a gain of 44 by baptism, 33 by letter and vote and 27 by organization of Union branch, total 104; a loss of 20 by letter, 10 by death, leaving net gain of 74 for the year. The district is said to be in a fairly prosperous state. With the possible exception of the Little Sioux and Union Center branches they are all in good condition, spiritually. The brethren have opened several new fields, and there has been a greater increase in membership than during any previous year, showing the wisdom of sending two such men as Brn. Derry and Wight; also Bro. Crabb has labored extensively. Our conference requests the General Conference to return the brethren to this field so that the cause may still prosper. There is talk of keeping the large tent in partial or continued use during the summer in such important places as Sioux City, Kingsley, Woodbine, Dunlap and Missouri Valley, in hopes of creating a better interest in the gospel. J. C. Crabb, president; W. C. Cadwell, clerk.

Pottawattamie.—Contains 5 branches, 453 members; 28 baptized, 1 received; 2 expelled, 1 died; net gain 26 members. Records have not been well kept; otherwise the cause is advancing there. Invitations come from all sides. The president has spent much time, and the labors of Bro. J. C. Foss were much appreciated and resulted in good. Few of the local brethren have preached outside the branches. The field is wide and more laborers are needed. H. N. Hansen, president; Thomas Scott, clerk.

Central Kansas.—Five branches; 153 members; 1 received; 1 removed, 1 died; net loss 1 member. Daniel Munns, president; J. B. Jarvis, clerk. The president writes that none of the traveling ministry have visited that district, and they feel that they have been neglected. There are many chances for preaching, but few of the local brethren can spend time outside their respective branches. Therefore they ask to be remembered when appointments are made.

North-Western Kansas.—Has 7 branches; 254 members; 29 have been baptized, 5 received; 2 expelled, 3 died, leaving a net gain of 29 for the year. District in a moderately good condition. Labor has been done in branches by brethren in them, and missionaries A. H. Parsons and G. W. Shute have labored in the district. There are 45 members resident who have not united with branches, those who are numbered with the church in other states. A. H. Parsons, president; W. D. Jamison, clerk.

Michigan and Northern Indiana.—Eight branches and 310 members. Gain of 32 by baptism, 6 by letter; loss of 9 by letter, 13 by expulsion, 7 by death; net gain 9 members. A scattering membership of 29 makes a total of 339 in the district. The work is in fair condition. Brn. B. V. Springer, Hiram Rathbun, L. Scott and J. B. Prettyman have labored there, the two first continuously. Dimondale and Webberville branches disorganized, and Lansing and Maumee organized during the year. C. Scott, president, D. B. Teeters, clerk.

Western Maine.—Five branches, 149 members; 7 baptisms, 2 died; net gain 5 members. District is in better state than it was a year ago, although the branches are not thriving well. Brn. F. M. Sheehy and U. W. Greene have labored constantly, and Bro. E. C. Briggs was there awhile; also Bro. John Smith came and taught the law of tithing more perfectly. New places for preaching have been opened by the laborers. W. G. Pert, president; E. H. Pert, clerk.

Massachusetts.—Ten branches; Fall River 115, Providence 166, Boston 101, Plainville 62, Dennisport 56, Brockton 30, Compton 29, New Bedford 23, North Plymouth 26, Cranston 21, total 651, being a gain of 14 over losses. Bro. E. C. Briggs has labored some in the district, and Brn. M. H. Bond, F. M. Sheehy, John Smith and Thomas Whiting also. The demands for preaching are more urgent than ever before, and prospects are bright. Financial condition of the district is far above that of any previous year, the Bishop's agent having labored to that end. John Smith, president; Thomas Whiting, clerk.

Northern Minnesota.—Has 4 branches, 150 members; a gain of 16 by baptism; a loss of 18 by letter, 4 by expulsion, 2 by death, making a net loss of 8 for the year. The branches are in fair condition, yet the members are so widely separated that meetings are not as well attended as they should be. But there is a feeling among the Saints to live faithfully; and the faith is enjoyed through which the sick are healed. Brn. J. C. Foss and A. H. Smith have labored with good results; and Brn. Way, Martin, Barnard, Mosher, Anderson and Gould have done what they could. There is need of an elder who can preach in the Norwegian language, as there are many of that nation in Minnesota. T. J. Martin, president; William Barnard, clerk.

Central Missouri.—Three branches; 77 members; 29 baptized, 2 received; 1 expelled, 3 died; 27 net gain. The Carrollton branch has been disorganized, and the Wakenda reorganized. Brn. Bozarth, Bronson and Warnkey have labored with some benefit to the work, but the situation is anything but encouraging. W. L. Booker, president; M. A. Trotter, clerk.

Far West, Missouri.—Seven branches; 527 members. Gain and loss not stated. The Center Prairie and Far West branches have been consolidated and now form the Kingston branch. Also a branch has been organized at Edgerton Junction, Platte county. The work is in an encouraging state, though there has been little district work done by the local brethren. Of the traveling ministry, Brn. Lambert, Bronson and Independence.—Seven branches; 874 members. During the year 156 persons baptized, 117 received by letter and vote; 11 removed, 2 expelled, 8 died, leaving net gain 254 members. The president has worked faithfully and directed to advantage the laborers given him. The vice-president, Emsley Curtis, has also done much good. H. H. Robinson labored part of year; Alfred White some of time; also J. C. Foss, C. St. Clair, F. C. Warnkey, R. Etzenhouser. Samuel Crum in the field about four months, sickness of wife preventing further labor. Many have been brought into the fold, and the district is in excellent condition. I. N. White, president; Samuel Crum, clerk.

North-East Missouri.—Three branches; 180 members; 2 baptized, 1 received; 14 removed, 1 expelled, 2 died; 14 net loss. J. T. Richards, clerk.

St. Louis.—Contains 7 branches and several fragments, with a total of 491 members. During the year 9 persons have been baptized, 17 added by letter and vote; 43 taken letters, 5 have died and 2 been expelled, making a net decrease of 24 for the year. Nothing said of the condition. William Jaques, president; J. G. Smith, clerk.

Central Nebraska.—Four branches; 136 members; 3 baptized; 4 received; 7 removed, 1 expelled, 1 died; 2 net loss. The condition of the district is said to be good. Levi Gamet, president; J. H. Jackson, clerk.

Southern Nebraska.—Has 6 branches; 511 members; gain of three by baptism, 8 by letter, total 11; loss of 6 by letter, 8 by death; net loss 3 members. There are also 118 members not in branches. The small gain is accounted for by the little preaching done. The only missionary they had was taken from them and sent to preach in Utah, therefore they are in need of others (two or more) to labor constantly. Brn. Caffall, Elvin, Blair and Foss have preached more or less. Three of the branches are in fair order, but the other three are about dead, owing to the lack of officers. Levi Anthony, president; J. B. Gouldsmith, clerk.

Utah.—Contains 14 branches, in which are 426 members. Besides there are 105 not in branches, making a total of 531 of the Reorganized Church in the territory, a few less than are known to the Church Record. Peter Anderson, president; C. H. Barrows, clerk. Bro. Barrows reports gain of 3 by baptism and 2 by letter and vote; a loss of 2 by death, 1 by removal; change of 3 names by marriage; 1 ordination. He says that they are in great need of missionaries, and the interest to hear is good everywhere but in Salt Lake City. There infidelity increases on one hand, while on the other the various religious bodies combine to crush everything that has the name of Mormonism. The local elders are doing little in the way of preaching. Brn. Anthony, Clapp, Elvin and Anderson have done good service for the gospel cause, waging a warfare against the powers of sin and unbelief of the various kinds.

Western Wisconsin.—The clerk, Bro. W. A. McDowell, writes that it is generally supposed that their district contains about 114 members, where as many have moved to Dakota and elsewhere, leaving once good sized branches nearly desolate, there having been deaths also that lessened the number. Of the Freedom branch only about six members can really be called resident, of the Willow about five, of Excelsior about four, of Webster about the same. Wheatville has 14 members, but some are old and some indifferent, so there are no less than forty, or about that, resident members. Not much time is devoted to the cause by the elders, but lately they appointed Bro. W. A. McDowell to travel, and will care for his family. Some are willing to do all things for the work, but their number is few. The Saints also wish to aid the church financially, and to be visited by those in charge over them, but can not well do the first to any amount. Still they wish to get their situation before the conference, and that some would come to their aid as soon as possible under conference appointment. There are many calls and Bro. McDowell was preparing to leave home as he wrote.

ELDERS, PRIESTS, TEACHERS, AND DEACONS.

I give herewith the names of the Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons who have applied for enrollment in existing quorums or in those that may be organized, according to the commandment in the revelation of September 29th, 1882:—

TEACHERS:—Andrew K. Anderson, William Bentharn, William Burk, Edward M. Davis, Morgan Davis, Pearl Dutcher, Clarence W. Earl, George W. Hobart, Charles J. Hunt, Joel W. Mooney, William J. Rainey, John T. Roberts, Thomas Shepherd, Edward P. Shupe, Henry Sparling, William Talbot, Willard Wells, Franklin Wiley, Samuel D. Wilson—19. I gave 14 names a year ago, making now 33 who desire a quorum organization of Teachers, there being none yet.

DEACONS:—Daniel S. Bowen, Richard R. Gaither, Thomas M. Parr, James H. Smith—4. There were 6 a year ago, and thus 10 names are now on file for the organization of a quorum of Deacons.

There seemed to be a misunderstanding at the last Conference about the enrollment of names for quorums, as I saw by the minutes. For, when the lists of names that I sent then were read, it was moved that I should enroll them. If by this it was meant that I should enroll them in quorums I would say that, by the action of the Conferences of September, 1882, and April, 1886, I was only authorized to receive and record the applications of Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons, preparatory to their being placed in quorums, and that, by resolution of September, 1879, no one can be enrolled in a quorum except upon their expressed wish and desire to be so received, and that this is done by vote of the quorum, upon the names being drawn from my hands for the filling of vacancies. Or, if enough names are received, and a sufficient number are present to effect an organization, then the Church can direct that a new quorum be organized.

Of the 58 applications of Elders for enrollment 23 are likely to be received to fill vacancies, there being at this time, according to my records of the quorums, 4 vacancies in the Second Quorum, 7 in the Third, 6 in the Fourth, and 8 in the Fifth. The others await your action in relation to a new quorum. There is but one vacancy in the First Quorum of Priests, thus leaving one more than enough to organize the Second Quorum. There has been no quorum of Teachers organized yet, but now there are nine more names than are necessary for one quorum, and of the Deacons there are two less than needed for a quorum.

I have with me upon sheets the alphabetical lists of 58 Elders and 50 Priests, together with the necessary items of birth, baptism, and ordination, which I have copied from the Church Record, to supply the quorum with for their records. Those of the Priests and Teachers I can give at any time.

I have in my hands a petition from the McFall branch, Gentry county, Missouri, asking that said branch be attached to the Decatur district.

Respectfully submitted as my report to the General Conference, and to the Church.

H. A. STEBBINS,

General Church Secretary and Recorder

In reply to an inquiry the Church Recorder stated that those represented as removed were such as had taken Letters of Removal, and some of them had joined other branches and some had not. But they were not lost to the Church numerically, unless they ultimately failed to unite with branches.

The committee appointed a year ago to examine the books and accounts of the Herald Office, presented their report:

We, your committee appointed to examine the books and affairs of the Herald Office beg leave and report that by agreement we met in Lamoni, March 15th, 1888, and proceeded at once to perform the duty assigned us.

Finding that the books had not been audited for several years by a General Conference committee, we made such an examination of them for the three years prior to 1886 as time admitted of; but more especially devoted our attention to the business of 1886 and 1887, bringing our investigation down to the close of the conference year, March 15th, 1888, at which date the books were balanced, and the entire showing was found to be correct.

Our work occupied seven days, and considerable time at nights, and we were aided, cheerfully, by the Secretary of the Board of Publication and the attachés of the Herald Office throughout, by reason of which help our labor was materially lessened and our insight into the entire management was made the more clear and comprehensive.

We find that the work in every branch of the Herald Office business has materially increased during the past two years and shows signs of continued increase for the future, and we believe that the management has been judicious and economical.

An examination into the matter of salaries was also made by us, and we are of opinion that in some instances the wages paid are considerably lower than would be necessary to secure the same service elsewhere, while in no single instance is an employee paid more than he is entitled to.

A complete inventory was taken of everything of value in each department, and the Secretary's report will present the result of our labor in this as well as in all other directions.

We were much pleased with the general arrangement and management; but are of opinion that the Banking Exchange business of the office should be discontinued, for the reason that there is not a sufficient remuneration to the Board for the great risk taken by said business, and for the further reason that the Secretary is already overburdened by reason of the increasing business of Herald Office itself.

We have taken the liberty of offering the above thought as a suggestion to the Board of Publication, together with the additional one, that the doors of the Secretary's office be not opened for business with those without until nine a.m. and that they be closed at four p.m., thus allowing time and opportunity before and after said hours to the Secretary for quiet attention to the demands of his books and accounts.

These suggestions were made because of what we learned from observation while in the office. It became a matter of surprise to us that the book keeping work had been conducted in the past so well, and without occurrence of any serious errors where work so continuous and so varied in character had to be attended to by the Secretary, thus diverting his attention from the accounts. The future (if business shall increase as per present prospect) will demand more constant attention to the books than has the past, and with this fact in consideration, the above suggestions were offered to the Board for the exercise of its judgment upon.

We call attention to the fact that there are found a number of old accounts, amounting to about $2,500, varying in detail from $5 to $50 each, settlement of which should be made by those owing at as early a date as possible. If all parties indebted to the office would interest themselves in making an early settlement, the Board could pay off its indebtedness and thus save the payment of interest upon money borrowed, as well as hasten the publication of books much needed in the church.

A new Babcock Cylinder Press, No. 6, has been purchased and is now in operation in the Press room, being used in printing the Herald and other periodicals, and is satisfactorily meeting a demand which has been felt for some time.

One peculiarly gratifying discovery made by our Committee, was in the fact that the indebtedness of the Board had been decreased during the past year, by about $1,700, and the net gains amounted to over $2,300.

Our investigation has satisfied us that the Board of Publication and the Church have been faithfully and efficiently served by those at present engaged in the conduct of Herald Office business affairs, and we do so report, believing that the entire church will be gratified by the announcement. Believing that our commission related to Business matters alone, we confined our labors in that line

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. PETERS,
WM. C. CADWELL, } Com.
JOSEPH LUFF.

On motion of J. T. Kinneman and J. C. Foss the report was received and the committee was discharged. On further motion, made by J. W. Gillen and W. H. Kelley, the report was adopted.

The financial report of the Board of Publication was read, and on motion of C. E. Butterworth and J. W. Wight it was spread upon the minutes.

ASA S. COCHRAN, Secretary.

In answer to inquiry about the Music Book, Pres. Blair said that the Board was ready to proceed with the publication of the book whenever the manuscript should be handed in. J. T. Kinneman also made some remarks upon the proposed size of the book. Pres. Smith spoke of the probable cost of an edition of it. He said that the plates from which to print the book would cost from $2.50 to $4.50 per page.

The report of M. H. Forscutt, as Music Editor, was read; and on motion of E. L. Kelley and D. K. Dodson the chair was requested to appoint a committee of three upon the report; they to take the propositions under advisement and to confer with any who can throw light upon the subject, and to report. The chair appointed G. A. Blakeslee, J. A. Robinson and J. T. Kinneman.

A report of the quorum of Apostles was read, and it was moved by H. H. Robinson and J. A. Robinson that it be adopted, but on motion of Joseph Smith and Charles Derry, it was deferred subject to call.

MINISTRY REPORTS.

The following reports of the ministry were read by the secretary:

Elder Joseph Smith, of the First Presidency, present, reports:

I left home December 27th, 1887, for Utah and California, intending to labor there as I might be directed and the way open. My stay in Utah was limited to the first twenty days of January, and my labors to the city of Salt Lake, for reasons which were considered good by Bro. R. J. Anthony and myself. I arrived in San Francisco, January 21st, and remained there and at Oakland until February 29th. During this time I heard and determined a cause of appeal, referred to me, and preached alternate Sundays in the two places; except one Sunday spent at Irvington.

From San Francisco I went to Los Angeles, where I remained until March 24th, preaching twice at San Bernardino, during the time.

My visit to Utah and California was undertaken, partially in the hope of a brief rest from active labors and cessation from care, and to recuperate in health. I found neither rest, nor cessation from care; my stay at Oakland being the most unhappy month that I ever spent abroad in the field. The work in Oakland is in a most unfortunate condition, the Saints divided into two divisions, almost if not quite irreconcilable. It is but just to state that in both these divisions the majority are earnest, and devout; and so far as I could judge, equally possessed of honest intentions and a good Spirit. There is also a third party composed of those who have taken sides with neither of the disputants, but are sadly pained at the want of unity. A church was built; but in the building of it a debt was incurred; and, though the building was dedicated, it is now the property of an individual and not the property of the church, and will most likely be sold to pay the indebtedness thereon, it being a matter of doubt if the Saints can raise the amount needed to prevent such sale.

The church at San Francisco is in fair condition, Elder George S. Lincoln, a young man of excellent ability and wisdom being in charge.

The church at Los Angeles is in a prosperous condition. Under the wise care of J. R. Badham, seconded by the efforts of his co-workers, Brn. F. P. Schnell, Earl, and others, meetings are kept up and an increasing interest maintained. I found one of the best spirits manifested at Los Angeles that I met during my absence from home. The church there deserves commendation.

A good spirit prevails also at San Bernardino, where Bro. G. W. Sparks still presides, as of olden time. The Saints are striving to build a new and larger building for worship, and will be successful if no local jealousy occurs.

At Los Angeles I met the Saints in conference, and was pleased among them to see Bro. Q. S. Sparks, whom the Saints of Long Island and New Jersey will likely remember. After much wandering he returns to the fold, as many others have done.

Elder W. W. Blair, of the First Presidency, present, reports:

Since attending the General Conference at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6th, 1887, I have been engaged chiefly in duties pertaining to the First Presidency of the church, and to the editorial department of the Herald. But in the mean time I have labored in the ministry at the following places:—St. Joseph, Mo., May 14th to 16th; Lucas, Iowa, May 28th to 31st; St. Joseph, Mo., June 1st; Plum Hollow, Elm Creek and Ross School-house, Iowa, June 3d to 9th; Persia and Salem, Iowa, June 9th to 13th; St. Joseph, Mo., July 9th to 11th; Nebraska City and Elmwood, Neb., July 20th to August 1st; Fanning, Kansas, August 6th to 9th; Scranton, Kansas, August 10th to 15th; St. Joseph, Mo., September 17th to 19th, (baptizing 5); Harlan Reunion, September 27th to October 3d; baptized 1 at Lamoni, October 9th; labored at St. Joseph, Mo., November 12th to 14th; Lucas, Iowa, December 3d to 5th; St. Joseph, Mo., December 10th to 12th, and February 4th to 6th, 1888. To this may be added occasional ministrations at Lamoni, my present home.

The past year has been most eventful in the experiences and progress of the church. So far as my observation goes, there has been a steady and very encouraging moving forward of the church, in nearly all its departments, and the Lord has richly blest and notably sustained the ministry and the Saints.

In order to secure further and complete success, there must be had vigilant and unyielding adherence to the accepted law and approved precedents of the church as found in its authorized books and authentic records. No one should be suffered to remove or dishonor the foundations upon which the church is being builded, the laws and rules by which it is to be disciplined and governed, nor to violate or ignore its approved precedents and its regular and established order; for, "a house divided against itself can not stand." The unity that is essential to success in righteousness, can only be attained by virtue of those laws, rules and precedents, in the light and love of that Holy Spirit which dictated them.

Elder T. W. Smith, of the Twelve, writes from Hastings, Victoria, Australia:

I left the field in the South Sea Islands in very fair condition. To keep everything in the best of shape there would require my presence every week or two in every place. But, when the difference in mental caliber and moral influence is considered, and the general surroundings of the people of the church are taken into account, I believe that the branches there will compare well with those in other parts of the world. The natives are but children in understanding, and they can not be expected to be as wise and circumspect as more enlightened people are. Indeed I think that they are very much to be praised for the degree of virtue, uprightness and intelligence that they exhibit. I am aware that I judge them at times harshly, when greatly provoked, as I have been at times in certain localities, but during the last months that I was there I obtained a better insight into their true character than I had before. And I left them with deep and lasting regret, and daily do I think of them. In fact I sorrow that duties here have called me away from there, and if I continue to feel as I have ever since I left them I shall rejoice when I shall be free to return to them, which I have promised to do, and which they will anxiously look forward to. I reached Australia on December 4th, 1887, and visited, Sydney, New Castle, Hamilton and Wallsend. There are Saints in each place, but branches only in the two latter places. I came to Victoria on December 22d, and have visited and preached in Hastings and Queensferry branches. I did not reach Forster and Nambucca branches in New South Wales. Expect to visit the branch near Geelong this week. This mission is divided into two parts, Victoria and New South Wales. These are states or provinces, and are independent of each other. The branches in Victoria and New South Wales are about six hundred miles apart, and for that reason I organized the branches here into a district on January 1st, and expect to establish a district in New South Wales. I have not found any of Bro. Burton's work or teaching that I could not fully endorse; and, were it not for the fact that he feels that he is justified before the Lord in returning to California soon, I should insist on his remaining another year at least. The work here demands several more laborers. One man can not attend to it. There are no elders here who can go into the field as yet. They are not free from temporal bondage. I can not engage to remain here over a year, though if I find that the Lord so requires I shall do so. New Zealand is a field that ought not be longer neglected. I have written to Pres. Smith my ideas on that matter. The work here is in quite good condition, Bro. Burton having done as well as any one could have done under the circumstances. He and Sr. Burton and Addie have the love and entire confidence of the Saints and are respected by the world. I do hope that you will send one or two men here, and two to New Zealand. Don't entertain the idea that anybody will do for those fields. They demand men of intelligence, firmness, and force of character. Men who can go into any community and defend the faith. Two elders here can be amply sustained without help from the Bishop in America, or even three or four could be. But at least two ought to be sent here this year and two others next year. Two ought to go to New Zealand. My mind is lead to Bro. Caffall as the one to go to New Zealand, this year, and that he come here and take my place after that. Bro. McDowell would do well in this field, Melbourne and vicinity. Two young unmarried men would do well to come here. However, if none such can be had, send those who have wives who will help and not hinder the work. Sister Burton has done as much in her sphere as an additional elder would have done, unless he would have occupied a different field.

As by the last revelation there is liberty to occupy foreign fields, I hope that they will be filled, unless an impending General Assembly might prevent the Apostles and Seventy from going far away. I do not say anything about any one going to the South Sea, because I surely believe that it is my duty to return there. And then I really do not know who I could ask to be sent there except Bro. and Sr. Devore; not but that others would succeed as well as they would, but I can think of none who would be less encumbered, or who could better endure the inconveniences to be borne there. If they could be sent I would recommend their appointment. If I am expected to remain here beyond January 1st, 1889, some one should go there soon. If I can be free to return there by October or November no one need be sent. I wish one or two of the Seventy to be sent here, so that they may be got into harness by the time I want to leave. I think that I will not be required to remain from America more than five years. I expect to continue in charge of both Australia and the South Sea Islands if you see fit. Or you can send some one here to take my place, which will not offend me, I assure you.

Elder A. H. Smith, of the Twelve, present, reports:

Not being able to attend the last Annual Conference, I learned of my continuance in my present field by published minutes. In keeping with that appointment I made arrangements for entering the field as soon as practicable. I was obliged by circumstances to sell my home in Independence, and to change my place of residence. In making that change, and in repairing my house I was delayed from active service until July 1st. I then visited part of my field in Illinois, the Kewanee District and also Burlington, Montrose, and Keokuk, Iowa. Subsequently, under the instruction of the First Presidency, I started for Minnesota. On my way I turned aside and preached for two weeks, in Buena Vista County, Iowa, in the field of Bro. Joseph Lambert. Held several meetings at and near Marathon, and was blessed by leading into baptism five noble souls. Passing on north I enter my own field and began work at Lake Crystal, Blue Earth county, Minnesota. I labored there for two weeks, with no visible sign of much good being done, save the renewal of spiritual strength to members of the church, and possibly removing prejudice from the minds of a few. I discovered how easy it is for the people to take fright at the sound of Salt Lake. I incidentally mentioned having been at Salt Lake, when the word went out that I was right from that place and was a Utah Mormon, and thereafter my meetings were almost deserted. I soon saw that it would take too long to overcome the evil done, so from there I went north, and began work in Clitherall, Otter Tail county. By this time winter had set in, and storm and cold, and much snow, prevented very extended labors, and indeed prevented people from attending meeting at all, without danger of freezing.

After several weeks I moved on, and held meetings at Girard, Luce and Cormorant, Becker county. At the latter place I baptized two. Then I concluded that, on account of the severity of the weather, and almost an impossibility for the people to come out, I would cease preaching. There also seemed to be a necessity for my presence at home, so I left the field and returned home on February 17th, having been hindered materially by the severe cold, and heavy storms.

My field is far too extensive for the ministry assigned to it. My force was very small numerically. M. T. Short, F. M. Cooper, G. H. Hilliard, I. M. Smith and J. W. Wight, have reported labors in the past year. The work is spreading, and in general is in good condition. The field is large and white for the harvest, and few, oh so few, laborers. I have not been able to visit, save a mere corner of my immense field, and many are hurt and feel slighted. I am sorry for this, yet I could not help it. I have again and again been made to feel the need of a fellow laborer, as by the law of God specified, "Two by two let them be sent." Once more I urge upon the church sending laborers as thus specified. The magnitude of the field assigned me is of that character that if it should be your will to continue me in that field I shall expect a larger force of elders to aid me. Bro. T. J. Martin rendered very acceptable aid, and is worthy of much credit. My aids in the ministry have not been free to give their entire time, but have been laboring as District Presidents, and thus their work has been local. Still they have responded cheerfully whenever I have called upon them. Bro. F. M. Cooper has reported to me a good work in Illinois. Bro. J. W. Wight also reports a good work in Dakota. I have received no report of labor from Bro. M. T. Short, for the past six months, but expect he will report to the conference. When I last received word from him, he was requested to labor in Wisconsin, and I so instructed him to do, so I trust that when his report comes in, good news will come from that part of my charge. I have been very much blessed in my labors, both in preaching and in administering to the sick, and baptized seven. Shall expect to move out into any field that God's will may assign me to, and do all that my judgment and my circumstances will enable me to do. But I beg of you to give me more help.

Elder J. H. Lake, of the Twelve, present, reports:

I have labored in the Canadian mission and have baptized and confirmed thirteen, and have officiated in ordinations and blessing of children. Organized one branch with twenty-nine members, called the Windham branch; Robert Langherst priest, James Bannister teacher. Have administered to the sick, in some instances with marked result. Prejudice is giving away, and some of the leading papers are open for the elders to write in defense of the faith of the church. There has been a goodly number added to the church by baptism.

So far as I am informed, most of the Saints are striving for the crown that is promised to the faithful. My co-laborers have done well in caring for the Saints, in defending the faith of the church, and in opening new place where the gospel can be preached. Also the local elders have been firm in defending the faith of the church wherever duty called or opportunity was given. Most of the branches are in fair condition. Those that have any trouble we hope to have set in order ere long.

I realize that it requires diligence, patience, long-suffering, meekness, brotherly-kindness and charity to care for the Saints of God. May the Lord grant unto me sufficient of the above named graces to make me perform all my labors in righteousness.

My desire is to strive to do all I can to help establish "Peace and good will" on earth. May the power and inspiration of the Holy Ghost be with you, so that all your acts may be righteous, and for the gathering of the honest in heart. I hope to have more help in the mission, as the calls for the word of life are increasing, and we can not answer them all. "Come over and help us," is the cry heard from many parts of the mission.

Elder James Caffall, of the Twelve, present, reports:

Since last report my entire time has been spent in the performance of ministerial labor. In many places in Kansas, Nebraska, and Colorado, our work is comparatively new, and prejudice is deep rooted. Some of these places I have visited, and, while I have no startling result to report, I believe that some good has been done, and I hope to reap fruit, or to hear of some one else doing so. The time spent in branches has been considerable; there has been some unpleasant labor, but thinking it imperative, I essayed the task.

The necessity for church trials is decreasing, I think, with some prospect of peace and good will; yet much room for improvement. For the gospel imposes the highest moral rectitude.

My co-operative work with brethren A. H. Parsons and G. W. Shute of Kansas, W. Rumel, R. M. Elvin and C. H. Porter of Nebraska, and other local officials has been, so far as I know, of the most pleasant nature, and profitable to ourselves, and to the cause. I know of no reason why it should be otherwise among church officials. Of the appointees in the Spring River district I know nothing but what has appeared in the Herald. Doubtless they will report. In Kearney county, in North Platte, and in Sutton, Nebraska, I have received editorial favors. I have sought to have branch officials attain a greater proficiency in their several positions, for a low proficiency militates against the success of the cause.

An increased proficiency by branch officials will decrease the labor of the traveling ministry, affording greater opportunities for the introduction of the gospel into new localities. There is also a necessity for a greater zeal among the local elders, leading to Sabbath day preaching, for it can not be that labor imposed on local elders, under the general law is a myth. I think efforts should be made for more thorough ministerial labor by paying less time and attention to localities, where much has been done, with no prospect of immediate results, and breaking out into new localities. But it must be that the real purpose of the conference in sending out missionaries is to open up new places, that the gospel may spread. Among other labors I have baptized eight persons. I view the past year's work with some satisfaction, and with thanksgiving to God.

Elder J. R. Lambert, of the Twelve, present, reports:

More than one year ago I was strongly impressed with the importance of this mission, as representing an important part of the great work committed to our trust; which relative importance I endeavored to make plain, though in few words, in my report to the Kirtland Conference. Another year's experience and observation have served to strengthen and confirm my previous impressions; and without any regard to whether I shall be returned to this field or not, it should be provided with a suitable man to take charge, also with a good corps of efficient missionaries. The demands of this field are urgent, and in some respects peculiar. And if we would insure future and permanent success we must supply with a view, not only to the urgency, but to the peculiarities of the situation. May the Lord help his servants to be wise and spiritual.

The missionaries in this field have done well. As a rule they have been faithful and conscientious, though there has been manifested, (as might be expected) quite a difference in these respects. They will, of course, report for themselves. I have endeavored to do all that strength and ability would permit; and the Lord has truly stood by me in the work. I have been blessed with additional spiritual light and power, and occasionally in a very marked degree.

I am pleased to say that the work in this mission, within the past two years, has taken some important steps in advance; though in some districts there is still cause for alarm. In the North-East and Central Missouri districts the work has languished in the past, largely for the want of proper ministerial labor; but in the latter, through the labors and management of Bro. Bozarth and others, the prospects are beginning to brighten. North-East Missouri needs a missionary, badly; and to all appearances, unless they are furnished with one, before long, the district will go down. I believe I never was more anxious about the work, nor more desirous of its prosperity, than now. Nor did I ever have a stronger desire to labor and magnify my office and calling; but indications, which it is not necessary to name, seem to say that my labors, in the future, will be more greatly curtailed than in the past. I thank God for grace and strength received. May the work continue, and triumph gloriously, as I believe it will.

Elder W. H. Kelley, of the Twelve, present, reports:

I have labored in the states of Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Being associated with G. T. Griffiths and E. C. Briggs, the latter took direct charge of the Eastern mission, and I was relieved from the necessity of extending my labors there. I find a growing demand for ministerial labor where I have been, and in many places the people are anxiously awaiting an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the facts of the faith. Indeed there is a willingness manifested by the enquiring and fair-minded to accord to us the same rights and privileges to present our faith that is accorded to others. Individual and denominational prejudices exist, of course, but the liberal-minded and truth-loving people are too numerous to permit the sacrifice of our rights to such influences. The spirit of indifference to all religions, with a strong attachment to the world and its interests largely prevails in most places. The tendency is to doubt rather than faith. Doubts as to the existence of any true faith now or at any previous time is a widespread distemper. Yet there are those in every place who desire the truth, and with opportunity they will receive the gospel message. A minister can be much more successful away from the attractions of cities where the pleasure-seekers resort, and where strongly organized sectarian prejudice exists. Hence we think it a mistaken idea that the most efficient workmen and best talent of the church should be kept in the great centers of wealth, prejudice, fashion and pleasure.

There has been a large increase of membership—perhaps more than in any one previous year—and in some places it has been almost phenomenal. As a rule the ministry has put forth increased efforts in prosecuting their work. The blessing of God has attended the preaching of the word in a remarkable degree. C. Scott, B. V. Springer, J. J. Cornish, Leonard Scott, Levi Phelps, R. S. Salyards, J. G. and M. R. Scott, V. D. Baggerly, E. Delong, W. J. Smith, L. R. Devore, James Moler, Thomas Matthews, James Brown, J. J. Morgan, T. J. Beatty, A. Barr, C. G. Lanphear, J. Shippy, and Robert Davis have all labored more or less in the territory embraced in the states of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, West Virginia and New York. Some of these have shown themselves to be very industrious and able workmen. I am still confident that our cause is just, and that it ought to be heard; and also of its final triumph. I am willing to serve the church in whatever capacity will bring it the greatest good.

Elder Joseph Luff, of the Twelve, present, reports:

During the Conference year I have devoted about three months to general field work, and the balance to the demands of the locality where I reside. Prior to last General Conference I had obligated myself to act as committeeman in building a meeting-house at Independence, and this, together with matters relating to my own temporalities, has hindered me from more constant general work. I regret that my situation has been such, but could not avoid it, even by the most strenuous efforts. I have labored in several places in Fremont and adjoining counties in Iowa, and some in Johnson and Jackson counties, in Missouri. Have baptized twenty persons and attended to all other ordinances of the church as need for them was revealed to me.

Demands for preaching are numerous and doors seem to be opening everywhere. Would like to have responded promptly to them all, but found it impossible to do so. While I regret this inability on my part, I nevertheless make report that I have done my best.

Elder G. T. Griffiths, of the Twelve, present, reports:

Have preached in the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Iowa and Missouri. Have been abundantly blessed of the Lord, and enjoyed much of the Holy Spirit when attending to the duties of my calling. The work in the east, especially in the parts that I have visited, is in excellent condition, with the exception of Scranton and Plymouth branches. But I think that the trouble there will soon be adjusted in a manner that will give satisfaction to all. A goodly number have been added by baptism, and the present prospects indicate that many more will soon unite with the church. What is needed mostly in the east is a host of ministers to keep the standard of the gospel continually before the people. R. S. Salyards and James Brown have labored considerably and with very good effect. The Saints are anxious for their return to the Pittsburg and Kirtland district. Also the Pittsburg Saints have made a request to have a minister sent to that city, and it is to be hoped that their request will be granted, for there is great need of such help. Have baptized nineteen persons, blessed many children, and have attended to all other duties that required attention. I still feel like pressing onward toward the prize of everlasting life.

Elder H. C. Smith, of the Twelve, present, reports:

The first part of the year I spent in Southern California, preaching in San Bernardino, Los Angeles, Santa Ana, Newport, Downey and elsewhere. In September I was in Santa Barbara and Monterey counties. Attended conference at San Benito late in September. October 6th, attended the conference of the Northern California district at Oakland, where I met Elder E. L. Kelley, who rendered me valuable assistance. We labored in San Francisco, Oakland, Stockton and Sacramento, until early in December, when we went south and spent a short time in Tulare county. Then to Southern California again, where I labored until I left home for this conference. President Joseph Smith and Elder E. L. Kelley have done acceptable service in the mission.

Of those appointed at the last session of conference, D. S. Mills labored effectually in Nevada in May and June. Since July he has been in the vicinity of home, where his labor and counsel are well received. Albert Haws has labored constantly in Oregon and Washington Territory. His work has been well received. J. R. Badham has preached in Los Angeles and accomplished much good, though able to give but little time to the work except Sundays. J. R. Cook labored in Central California district acceptably for a season; but since returning home last summer, for good reasons, has not labored to any extent.

The following brethren were hindered some in consequence of receiving no appointment from the conference; Thomas Daley was engaged in secular affairs until about the first of the year, since which he has labored with success in Stockton, and in Humboldt county.

H. L. Holt preached some in the Central district, where he was well liked, and also in the Southern district. William Gibson has labored in San Bernardino county, mostly among the Saints, his work has been well done. D. L. Harris did a good work in Santa Barbara county, and labored some elsewhere. D. J. Phillips received an appointment in October, and entered immediately into the field; but two months after he was called from this earth-life. In November I appointed David E. Lander, a young priest, to labor in Central California. He has worked zealously, and accomplished good. He should be encouraged, for he promises to be useful to the cause.

I think the condition of the mission is improving. Though it seems hard to reach the ears of the people, yet there are some good openings awaiting the missionary, and the work on the Pacific slope should be pushed vigorously. I am satisfied with my present field, but am subject to be sent where the good of the work demands. God has abundantly blessed me in my administrations, for which I am grateful.

Elder Charles Derry, of the High Priests, present, reports:

I have labored chiefly in the Little Sioux district, but have preached in the Gallands Grove district. Last fall I aided Joseph Smith, Joseph Luff and R. M. Elvin in holding a Reunion-Meeting at Plum Hollow, Fremont district, at the request of the authorities there. I find that it requires a great deal of very earnest work to win souls to God, and I have tried so to labor. Have only baptized four, but have had the pleasing satisfaction of seeing numbers baptized, in whose hearts I have been an humble instrument in planting the good seed. I am content to break up the ground, sow the seed, and let others water, knowing that it is God who giveth the increase. My life is for the Lord. His church can use me as he shall direct. All I ask is to know God's will, and I will try to do it. I have no desire to be at ease in Zion, and I am sure my Father will place no greater burden on me than I am able to bear. I have not done all I would like to have done, but it seems to me I have done my best. May Infinite wisdom and love guide your councils is my prayer.

Elder W. B. Smith, of the High Priests, writes from Elkader, Iowa:

I have no missionary work to report, having been sick most of the time for two years. I desire the prayers of the church for my restoration to health.

Elder E. C. Brand, of the Seventy, present, reports.

During the last year I have delivered 140 discourses, as follows: Des Moines 8, Pleasant View Church 2, Richland Creek 2, Taylor school-house 1, Caldwell's school-house 5, Collins 5, Swan 2, Cambridge 1, Plum Creek 3, Shenandoah 2, Angus 10, Ross school-house 1, Rhodes 11, Boonesboro 8, Grinnell 7, Sheridan 12, Newton 17, Vanmeter 10, Ortonville 3, Hardscrabble 1, Dawson 4, Mound Prairie 4, Flaglers 10, Harlan 1. Baptized one; confirmed two; blessed eight children; ordained one deacon; solemnized one marriage; organized two branches; sat on four cases in Elders' courts, and administered to many sick with blessed results. Have travelled 2,441 miles. To some extent was hindered by severe weather and sickness.

Elder Duncan Campbell, of the Seventy, present, reports:

My labors during the past year have been confined to Decatur county, Iowa, and Mercer county, Missouri. The chief points in Iowa were High Briar and Pleasanton. In Mercer county, a series of meetings were held at various times at Hickory, New Zion, Middle Point, and Jones, where more or less interest existed on account of labor performed by various brethren. New fields were opened at Goodwin, White Oak and Marion, and in all of these places I have been much blessed in presenting the word.

My efforts in the field have been supplemented by the labors of William Anderson, A. Reese, Lyman Little, O. B. Thomas, Joseph Smith and S. V. Bailey, as well as William Dodson and George Thorp, living in the neighborhood of Middle Point. The work is onward in this field.

All mission fields have difficulties and hindrances peculiar to themselves and this one is not an exception. In this field there are a large number of persons seriously interested in the gospel, but some who have recently gone out from us have also been earnestly advocating their peculiar belief, (or rather unbelief), and they have made impressions upon the minds of the people, (either intentionally or otherwise), which are unworthy of men of candor and strict integrity. This naturally excites, on the part of those interested, a more careful inquiry as to the internal economy and working of the church; but I am confident that this will not prove harmful to the work in the ultimate; for while it renders those convinced more tardy in action, yet, on the other hand, they will be better informed and more firmly grounded on account of the closer investigation given. In order to reap the fruit of the labor already done in will be necessary to maintain earnest, faithful and persistent efforts and watchfulness. I am willing to continue in this field, or go elsewhere, if by so doing I can better serve the interests of the cause.

Elder J. T. Davis, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Not finding any mission assigned me I applied myself to other business for the support of myself and family. In July, however, I was instructed by the First Presidency to go to St. John, Kansas, and labor among the two factions of Bickertonites and some Brighamites located at that place. I preached, discussed, and visited among them to the extent that I thought necessary for the time being, and found an efficient and willing helper in Bro. O. L. Ferguson. A detailed account is too voluminous for this report. They need more preaching there. After returning home, I received a kind letter from James Caffall, and found that he had tried to reach me by letter early in May; but not having my correct address it failed to find me until fall. It explained that my non-appointment was an "over-looked" matter. By an understanding between him and the Bishop and myself, I entered the missionary field early in December, and continued up to date; therefore I have only been out four to five months since last conference. I preached in five counties, Stafford, Crawford, Cherokee, Labette, and Montgomery, and I was blessed with good liberty of the Spirit in my ministration of the word, and also in my administration to the sick, and in other duties. Results are with the author and finisher of the work.

Elder J. F. Burton, of the Seventy, writes from Australia:

I have continued my labors in the colonies of Victoria and New South Wales. A new part of the field has been opened, and a branch of eleven members organized. A large field of labor being near towns, villages and settlements. Thirty-five persons have been added to the church by baptism, 29 baptized by myself, the others by elders here, including 2 lately baptized by T. W. Smith. The work in this mission is improving, as much as is possible under the circumstances. Since T. W. Smith's arrival he has more firmly established the Saints in faith and doctrine in this portion of the field, and here and in Queensferry has given an impetus to the work which will be of lasting benefit. And from all points come calls for preaching, a tithe of which he will not be able to answer. Bro. Smith called a conference on December 31st, at which the Saints of Victoria met and organized the first district in Australia, consisting of 3 branches, 84 members. At this conference on January 1st, I was ordained to the office of Seventy by T. W. Smith, according to your request in conference of 1886. The participants in the ordination receiving a token of divine approval by the manifestation of God's power and love during and after the ordination.

It is more than three years since I landed in Sydney. During this time I have assisted in restoring the three branches organized by my predecessors, and have organized four others. There have been 145 persons baptized since my coming. Have assisted in confirming the most of these. Ordained 5 elders, 9 priests, 2 teachers, 1 deacon, blessed 77 children, administered to the sick, and attended to all the duties of my office, as well as I was able to and not sparing myself when duty called. But the exposure, outdoor preaching, and the changeable weather of these colonies, have resulted in a throat affection which has for some time hindered me from preaching. But, by the blessing of God and the ordinance, I have been much relieved. Still I deem it wise to change to a more equable warm climate, that my recovery may be permanent. Therefore I request you to release me from this mission, that I may return to Southern California, where, with God's blessing, I may resume my labors in full. If released I can not get away before May or June, which will make my stay here about three and a half years.

I think there ought to be two of the Seventy, or one of the Twelve, and one of the Seventy sent to these colonies at once, as Bro. Smith will probably not stay longer than one year. And these ought to get here before his departure. There can not possibly be a more inviting field than Australia, which will most assuredly, if worked, bring in members by thousands, ere long.

Elder R. J. Anthony, of the Seventy, writes from Salt Lake City, Utah:

I traveled in the early summer in Utah, visiting the Saints and doing what I could, going as far South as Nephi and east to Kamas and Heber City. I found it almost impossible to get a hearing in many places. The cords seemed to have been drawn closer than ever before. From the passage of the Edmunds law in 1882, and the first convictions under it, the people seemed to be bound closer together, and until last summer the way seemed to be almost entirely hedged up. I made an extended tour into Northern Utah and Idaho, and found prospects a little more favorable. In June the Utah people in convention appointed delegates to prepare a State Constitution, and in that document they saw proper to make the practice of polygamy a crime, and in August at the election some 13,000 voted in the affirmative to about 500 in the negative. To the nation and to the world it was an abandonment of the doctrine so long held as being sacred and the only way to Celestial Glory. The elders of the Reorganized Church have for years been accused by this people of seeking to destroy the work established by Joseph Smith, and of casting reflections upon those who were the co-peers of "Joseph the Seer." But those sages appointed to frame a constitution recommended the abandonment of the dogma that we have so long and persistently opposed, thus completely vindicating the position occupied by the church we represent, and making that question in some sense a dead issue. From that time until now there has prevailed a more liberal spirit, and where in early summer we could not get either a public house or a congregation, we can now get both.

Bro. R. M. Elvin came to our aid early in December. I received an appeal from Malad to send Bro. Elvin there to meet the Rev. M. T. Lamb, as he was billed to lecture there against the Book of Mormon. I was also requested to go, some of the dominant church offering to pay the expense if we would go and defend the Book of Mormon. Bro. Elvin went and did so, of which you have had an account in the Herald. He has since reviewed Lamb's lectures in Pleasant Grove and Provo, occupying the Fourth Ward meeting-house in the latter and a school-house and Opera Hall in the former. I also occupied the City Hall two nights in Springville, and the Court House in Nephi three evenings on the same subject. In each place we had good audiences and excellent attention. I have reason to believe good will result from each.

Bro. Joseph Smith made us a short visit during January and done us much good, and formed the acquaintance of some who in time will do us good.

While I have nothing flattering to report, yet I see brighter skies and sunnier prospects than for a long time. If the same spirit prevails that is now manifest in many places it will not be long until we will reap the fruits of so many years' sowing. While there will be many tares there will be some wheat. Infidelity has put on her sword and breast plate; and with Dr. York as its general, is now waging war against Mormonism and Christianity in general, with increasing hosts. On the other hand a general call has come from the Christian phalanx to meet April 3d, to take under advisement what will be the best method of attack or defense for them. Not claiming seeric powers, I may guess that in that counsel a resolution or "whereas" will be adopted, in which Mormonism and Infidelity will be slain.

Brethren Clapp, Anderson and Elvin, have all done well in their respective fields. I recommend their return to this mission. As to my self I am at your disposal, as wisdom and the spirit of the Master may direct. I have done the best I knew, and I leave the result with the Lord. I have baptized only thirteen during the year, but have sowed the seed unsparingly, both by word and by tracts.

If it is practicable I would recommend the sending of two English-speaking elders, besides the missionary in charge, one to labor in the southern part of Utah and the other in the northern portion; also two Scandinavian elders, Bro. Peter Anderson to labor north of the city and the other south. By this way they could change about, and I believe good would result therefrom. At this time we ought to be prepared to strike where and when we can, and by the help of the Lord do battle for the right, the gathering of Israel and the redemption of Zion. I believe the time has fully come when we shall have to defend the faith and the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the divinity of the Book of Mormon in Utah. The stand taken by Mr. Lamb and others confirms me in this. We are but as a little speck on the earth, but we have the truth on our side. So far in the conflict the revelations of the Lord are clear and emphatic in our defense, while the courts have ruled in harmony with the general teachings of the church, simply asking those who have transgressed the law to abandon the practice and be free.

It is gratifying to know that the voting population of the Utah church have voted to abandon polygamy, yet it is sad also to see the desperate struggle the leaders are making to hold the people in the toils. Brethren; we have struggled long, and we are weary; we need help. Send us reinforcements this year, and let us see if we can not turn some of the erring to the Just One.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BROTHER E. W. NUNLEY, of Wheelock, Texas, writes that the work of the Lord is moving forward steadily in that region, he is doing more in the ministry than formerly, and yet can not fill all the calls for preaching in that section.

Bro. W. W. Hodge, of Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, requests some of the elders to call there soon, as there are some who desire baptism. He resides on Thirteenth street, between First and Second Avenue, near the Erie R. R. depot.

Bro. E. Carlton, of Petrolia, Ontario, wrote the 2d instant, expressing thanks for the labors there of Bro. Arthur Leverton, the latter part of February, who came in good time to refute a conceited preacher who taught that the kingdom was set up in the heart. Bro. Leverton showing it was and is set up on earth and believers press into it.

Elder H. L. Holt is appointed to labor in Oregon and Washington Territory. His address will be Sweet Home, Linn county, Oregon.

Bro. William Dowker wrote from Bayport, Michigan, the 17th inst. He had labored in the ministry some since the middle of February, had met with some opposition, many thinking all Saints were Utah Mormons, baptized six, all heads of families, and more to follow soon. He says the Saints at Bayport are doing well.

Sr. N. V. Pearson, of Haman, Gonzalez, county, Texas, wrote us the 26th ult., and testifies to the truth of the restored gospel, and says there are good openings there for preaching the word.

Bro. Joseph Flory, of Mound City, Missouri, requests us to say that in the obituary of sister Louisa G. Leach, found on page 239 of HERALD, for the 14th inst., it should read wife of Mr. and not Bro. Burton Leach.

Sr. Mary L. Elliott, of Richmondale, Ohio, suggests that while so much is being said against the use of tobacco, the weightier matters be not neglected.

We regret our lack of space to publish all the valuable and interesting correspondence received at this office; but many letters have only a few extracts taken from them, if any, and some others we can merely notice their leading facts. Let none be grieved over this, for we seek to do for the best.

Bro. Jacob Reese has changed his address from No. 10, Dinwiddie street to No. 45½, Lombard street, Pittsburg, Pa.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. A. McIntosh wrote of late from Alliston, Ontario, that he had never been so busy as of late in church work, and never before heard such pressing demands for the truth. He further says:

"There is a famine in the land for the word of the Lord. New fields are opening up, and urgent letters are sent asking us to come and preach to the people."

Sr. Catherine Salisbury the only surviving sister of the Seer, wrote us the 30th ult., from Fountain Green, Illinois, and regrets giving offense to any in her late letter. She is still anxious that some spiritual elders visit and preach in their place and vicinity. She says:

"I spent all my youth waiting on comers and goers, helped to build up the church, and thought it no more than right that some of the elders should call on us when passing and preach for us. . . . If I had the means to send more elders into the field I would give it with all my heart; for the harvest is great, and the fields are white and are calling for more reapers. I pray the Lord to send more reapers."

Bro. John Y. Graumlich, of Lower Lake, California, writes of the late Geo. P. Dykes:

"The last time I saw him he walked eight miles out of his way to see us. We sat up nearly all night talking on the great plan of salvation, and nearly his last words to us was advice to never turn away from it, but to stand firm in the cause and defend it to the last."

Bro. John assures us he is seeking to teach by example and says of his faults, if he has any, they shall be those of the heart. He also says his knowledge of the truth of the work has kept him, by the grace of God, in all times of temptation and trial.

Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, of Manchester, England, writes us March 26th:

"The work continues to prosper in this district; we have four or five to baptize here in Manchester on Thursday next. Our influence is spreading for good. Conference convenes on Friday next. Our anticipations of success are large. God helping, we are determined that it shall be the best conference ever yet held in the district. We are expecting President Taylor to be with us."

Bro. C. Walton writes from Green Ridge, Manitoba, renews for church papers and says:

"I must have the Herald. It has the true Spirit with it, that which was manifest in the days of the Seer."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Like warp and woof all destinies
Are woven fast,
Linked in sympathy like the keys
Of an organ vast,
Pluck one thread and the web ye mar,
Pluck but one of a thousand keys, and the paining jar Thorough all will run."

"THAT THEY ALL MAY BE ONE."

IN connection with the subject referred to by sister Eleanor in her late letter to the "Column," we this week give place to an article from an English magazine, which may give a more definite shape to Sr. Eleanor's suggestions. We learn that such meetings are held by the Saints in Australia, and lately when we heard a sister in testimony meeting requesting the prayers of the Saints in behalf of her boy we thought what a power for good such meetings if properly conducted might become. They would be organized in every branch and the Home Column become the medium through which reports would be received.

Let us tell you, sisters, that good can "come out of Nazareth" and if with the doctrine of Christ, we had the zeal and systematic working organization found in other churches, no limit could be put to the good which might be done. "Prayer moves the arm which moves the world" and "As iron sharpeneth iron, so doth a friend the face of a friend." Can the mothers in Zion estimate the vast amount of faithful labor wrought out for the cause of God, if each mother with the divine blessing should present to the church her entire family as workers prepared to help roll on the cause we love. Think of it, mothers, and let us hear from you.

A MOTHERS' PRAYER MEETING.

MOTHERS' meetings in the ordinary sense of the term are familiar to most of us. Within the last half century they have spread with such rapidity throughout the land that in most town parishes the mothers' meeting is as thoroughly established as any form of ministerial effort. Many an ignorant, burdened woman has found in its simple teaching the first light for her soul; many a cheerless life has been brightened, and many a home transformed by its influence; and countless toiling mothers look forward to it weekly as the brightest spot in their monotonous lives.

The meeting described in the following paper is of a somewhat different character and for a different class. It could never from its very nature be other than a small and private gathering; but we believe it would meet a deep want, and be a means of incalculable blessing, if such mothers' meetings could be organized wherever a few Christian ladies are really in earnest about their children's souls, and sufficiently intimate to help and not hinder each other.

To any objections or difficulties that may be raised, we can only answer that the following is a true account of such a meeting begun by four friends, and carried on for nearly thirty years, with results that may well encourage others to simimular effort.

"Having been asked to give a short account of a mothers' meeting, which for many years has been a help and comfort to myself, I gladly make the attempt. About the year 1858, four friends who were personally much attached to each other, and living in the same neighborhood, thought it would be helpful to meet and pray together for wisdom in the training of their large young families.

Hearing that the late Mrs. E. Hoare, wife of Canon Hoare of Tunbridge Wells, had organized a meeting of ladies for the same purpose, a paper was drawn up containing several of the rules which she had already suggested.

In substance they were:—That the members should meet monthly, and that each meeting should begin and end with prayer. That a subject should be chosen from the Bible for consideration and prayer, to be discussed at the next monthly meeting. That such subjects should have a direct bearing upon the duties of Christian women as wives, mothers, mistresses, and heads of families. That it include our conduct to trades-people, dressmakers, the poor, and all with whom we are brought into contact. That we take in order the histories of the women of the Bible, trying to find out what to imitate, or avoid in each. That a list be made of the names of each of the children of our respective families, with a guide to help us in praying for them thus:

A. B.	born May 20, '44.	C.,	i. e.	at College.
C. D.	" Oct. 5, '50.	H.,	"	Home.
E. F.	" Jan. 6, '48.	S.,	"	School.
G. H.	" Apr. 4, '40.	A.,	"	Abroad.

That we unite, in spirit, in special prayer for all the children of the union every Monday morning. That we ask for special remembrance of them at baptism, confirmation, and other marked events. That every member of the Association shall consider herself bound, if possible, to read a portion of Scripture daily with her children.

That no meeting should last beyond the hour. That no fresh member be invited without the consent of all. That the number be limited to twelve. This ensured an average attendance of eight, and was found more profitable than with a larger number."

One of the early cards of membership lies before us as we write, dilapidated and brown with age, but truly a consecrated record of answered prayers. Of the families of two out of the four original members we are enabled to trace the history, and we give the facts with deep and solemn thankfulness, to the glory of our prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God.

The families were large, numbering respectively eleven and thirteen children. Of the first five are with God in heaven, and five walking with Him on earth in manifest consistency and usefulness; and the only one still outside the household of faith is in every other respect all that a mother's heart could wish. Of the second, seven have been called home—four as infants, three giving bright evidence that they were Christ's. The six living are all out-and-out Christians, workers for Jesus, as well as safe in Him. It is touching to look at this soiled sheet of cardboard, with the name and date of every child inserted in order, and to think of the corresponding record above, of prayers that have drawn down such an ever-widening blessing. The subjects of prayer are also entered, and we subjoin them for the earnest consideration of every mother into whose hands this page may fall.

FOR OURSELVES.

1. For faith to trust our children with the Lord entirely.
2. For faithfulness to seek for them the one thing needful.
3. For decision to train them in the way they should, and not in the way they would go.
4. For love and forbearance in bearing with and correcting their faults.
5. For wisdom to discern the right method of dealing with them.
6. For patience to wait the Lord's time for the result.
7. For the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on our own souls.

FOR OUR CHILDREN.

1. Their true conversion in the time and by the means the Lord sees best.
2. A teachable spirit, that they may receive with meekness the engrafted word.
3. Their sanctification—that they may be filled with the Spirit.
4. That as they advance in years they may have grace given them to resist the temptations of the world, the flesh, and the devil.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sister M. Leckney, Olneyville, R. I., writes:—"I am not rich in this world's goods, but when I have strength of body to perform my duties from day to day, I am content and thankful to my Creator, and it is a great pleasure to help what little I can from time to time to roll on the good cause."

Sister E. Cornish, St. Thomas, Ontario, writes:—"I desire the prayers of God's people that health may be restored to me. The more I learn and the more I know of his work the dearer it becomes to me. It cheers, consoles and comforts me, and I never weary of its teachings.

Lately I have been asked a great deal about our faith by my neighbors and they have sent for me to talk with them about it. May the Lord help me to declare the pure principles I have embraced by my daily life."

Sister Mattie Adair, Nathan, Arkansas, writes:—"We have had no preaching here until lately. Bro. A. J. Cato came and preached some six able discourses for us. He has made many friends here, and many are investigating. We had been loaning the church papers, and some of the people had become interested before Bro. Cato came. We are looking for Bro. I. N. Roberts soon, and believe a good work will be done here."

Sister M. C. Epperly, Millersburg, Illinois, writes:—"I first heard the gospel preached by Bro. J. Gillen and Bro. George Brady, and soon decided that it was true. I have had many evidences of its truth, and many blessings have come to me through it. At one time, when given up by the doctor to die, I was healed immediately by the power of God under the hands of his ministering servants, as many who were there at the time can testify, among whom was Sr. Helen Smith. Dear sisters, many of us have trials and perplexities in raising our families, but let us hold fast to the rod of iron and walk in the straight and narrow way that leads to eternal life."

We are also in receipt of a letter from Dunlap, Iowa, to which no name is signed. The sister writing it requests the prayers of the sisters of the Home Column for herself and her little boy who is a cripple.

If the sister who last week wrote us that she had files of the Herald for over a year which she would be glad to send to parties wishing them, would send them to Miss Katie Dawson, Cisco, Illinois, they would be very acceptable.

Correspondence.

BROWNSDALE, Minn., March 31st.

Bro. Blair:—As I see no communications from the south-east part of Minnesota, I would say the Saints here are not all dead or snowed under. I have just returned from a visit to Bro. John F. Gibbons', who lives forty miles north of here. On my return home I unexpectedly found Sr. Bragg, of Lost Creek, Wisconsin, who was visiting her relations in Dodge Center. She is strong in the faith; seventy-four years old; bright, lively, and strong in body. She had not seen a Saint for ten years. We had a time never to be forgotten. She has been a member of the church for fifty years.

Bro. J. and family are doing all they can to advance the truth. We do not find fault if we don't see an elder every six months; but think we are lucky to see one once a year. The Spirit manifested itself to us in warning power, showing us he was present, although we were few.

Your son in Jesus,

WILLIAM JUDSON GRAVES.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 16th.

Bro. Blair:—We are pleased to inform you that the work of the Lord here is quite encouraging at present. Since our district conference there have been six added to the church here by baptism, and a very good spirit prevails in our meetings. The lady you wrote of in your letter of advice is now a member of the church, and she seems to be quite happy, and we feel happy to have her in our company. We are now hoping we shall soon have more added to our number.

Yours in hope,

JOSEPH SQUIRES.

GLADWIN, Mich., April 2d.

Bro. Blair:—Through the love and mercy of our God I take my pen to tell you that I have been led, by searching the Saints' Herald, to see the true route to heaven as administered in God's word by Bro. J. J. Cornish. My soul has been led to cry "Abba, Father."

Elder Cornish came to this place the 24th day of last month, and has preached six sermons and baptized three. There is a great inquiry among the people. At first they could not be got out to church, but said they did not want to hear "no old Mormon preach." But God opened a way for his servant. A young man of the place died, and the other preachers here being absent, a friend of the young man engaged Bro. J. J. Cornish to preach the funeral sermon, the house of the M. E. society was opened for the occasion giving a good excuse for all to attend. After that the court-house was crowded. Our God is no dumb idol, for he can work and none can hinder. I say like one of old, "Let others do as they will, but as for me and my house, we will serve the true and living God."

In gospel bonds,

W. H. H. BROWN.

PERSIA, Iowa, April 2d.

Dear Herald:—We are still alive in this part of the Lord's vineyard, and greatly rejoice in the assurance we have of eternal life through the gospel of Christ. I feel a greater determination in my heart every day to hold fast to the rod of iron, do my duty, and be more faithful and obedient to the commands which God has given.

But through the weakness of the flesh I sometimes neglect my duty and step aside from the path of duty and right. My desires are to live as becomes a Saint of God and be worthy of the name which I bear. The Lord has truly blessed us in the passed few months. My aged mother was sorely afflicted for some weeks, and her recovery seemed to us impossible. Her sufferings were great, and at times she was in the greatest agony. We went to our heavenly father in prayer, in humbleness and simplicity, and he heard and answered. Mother is with us yet, and almost well. She is improving all the time. How thankful we ought to be that we have such a loving Father and can go to him in trouble and sorrow for aid and comfort. Yet there are many who are walking in darkness and know him not, and doubt his goodness. Can I doubt his goodness and mercy? No; not for one moment. Twice has my oldest sister been so low that we could hardly discern whether she was dead or alive, and she was raised from her bed of affliction by the power of faith. What a grand and glorious work we are engaged in! Dear Saints, let us double our diligence and strive to be more faithful; let us help roll the great cause of Zion on. If we are faithful the Lord will bless us in our labors; and if we lack wisdom, let us ask of him that giveth liberally.

Brethren J. W. Wight and C. A. Butterworth have been preaching here for almost two weeks. All seemed highly edified with their discourses. One was baptized, and if they could have stayed longer I believe there would have been more, for many were deeply interested and are investigating. We were all sorry to have them leave so soon, but rejoice in the hope of their return in the near future.

I am yours in Christ,

KATIE HALLIDAY.

EMMINGTON, Ill., April 6th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—The Saints in these parts are doing well and enjoying themselves well. We have meetings in our little branch, but we are deprived of preaching meetings. Can you send us an elder to preach the gospel, for there is a fine opening here now, and a good man can get a full house to hear him. Since brother Cooper left here the people want him back. We look for him back the last of May, and hope he will come. In gospel bonds,

AUSTIN HOWARD.

SPRY, Ontario, April 7th.

Editors Herald:—The Herald has been coming only a few months to my place, and in that time has made itself a welcome visitor. I can always find time to sit right down and read of the great latter day work; and while reading of the work of the ministry and the difficulties they have to contend with, my heart goes out in prayer to God that the mists may be rolled away.

I have been made to feel a little of what they have to bear from other churches. I have been a Methodist for the past eleven years, and since I have investigated this gospel as taught by the Church of Jesus Christ, I have been called upon by my neighbors to defend it. When the Methodist minister heard Elder McIntosh was coming here to preach, he took the trouble to go to every house to warn the people, telling them not to go to hear him. There has not been a day for the past two weeks but has brought somebody to my place to hear what I have to say in defense of the gospel.

I feel to say it is of the Lord, and is marvellous. The people are so stirred up now that they will go to hear him and judge for themselves. Several are convinced and more are investigating. I intend, if I am spared, to call on some next week and remove prejudice as much as the Spirit will enable me to. I would like to have a few tracts to distribute among the people. My mother, Mrs. J. H. Johnson, has a few, and they are about worn out, going from house to house.

Many of the people have very erroneous ideas of the doctrine, and the tracts would remove them and get the people searching the word of God. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

MRS. S. McBROOKS.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 9th.

Bro. Blair:—The Saints in general are getting on very well so far as I know; that is, spiritually, but temporal affairs are oppressing some. I am sorry to inform you that Bro. Howland is very unwell. Bro. Mills is like a guardian angel by his bedside. He is there to administer, to cheer and comfort. We were very pleased to have our beloved president and Bro. E. L. Kelley at our district conference, which was the first we ever held here. The people turned out well, and the papers were very liberal in advertising and publishing the discourses. Of late the young are blessed greatly with the Holy Spirit. Our week-nights prayer meetings are a success spiritually, but not numerically. I wish those who stay away from the prayer meetings could but realize what they lose. I was glad to hear from Bro. Goode, in Chicago, that the Saints there are being blessed by the Spirit. It seems that the Spirit of God is being poured out in great power all over the land. It makes my heart rejoice when I hear of the prosperity of the church.

Your brother in the gospel,

JOHN MORRIS.

A JAPANESE GIRL'S SIMILE.

At a class meeting in Japan where a number of our Christian girls were gathered together, the subject was—"How to glorify Christ by our lives." One of the girls said: "It seems to me like this: one spring my mother got some flower seeds, little, ugly, black things, and planted them; they grew and blossomed beautifully. One day a neighbor coming in and seeing these flowers said, 'Oh, how beautiful! I must have some too; won't you please give me some seed?' Now, if this neighbor had only just seen the flower seeds she wouldn't have called for them; 'twas only when she saw how beautiful was the blossom that she wanted the seed. And so with Christianity; when we speak to our friends of the truths of the Bible, they seem to them hard and uninteresting, and they say: 'We don't care to hear about these things; they are not so interesting as our stories;' but when they see these same truths blossoming out into our lives into kindly words and good acts, then they say: 'How beautiful these lives! What makes them different from other lives?' And when they hear that 'tis the Jesus-teaching, then they say, 'We must have it too!' And thus, by our lives, more than by our tongues, we preach Christ to our unbelieving friends."

ADDRESSES.

G. A. Blakeslee, presiding Bishop, Galien, Michigan.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Elder B. V. Springer, of the Seventy, writes from Ray, Steuben county, Indiana:

Having been greatly blessed with physical strength and with pure desires to magnify my calling, I have striven to be found a workman approved of God, and to meet the expectation of my brethren. Immediately after the last conference I removed my family to my field of labor, and took up my work where I left off. Visited and labored in different places in my field, besides opening up entire new places in St. Joseph and Hillsdale counties, in Michigan, and in Paulding county, Ohio, in all of which I found a spirit of enquiry and a willingness to investigate our claims. The field is widening and interest increasing. I may be too sanguine, but I confidently expect great good to the cause to grow out of my labors in those new fields, if wisely cultivated; and, although I have had my struggles in contending with opposition and hindrances, (some of them coming from an unexpected quarter), God has stood by me and vindicated my work, in the manifestation of divine approval, many times; to him be all the glory. The most glorious manifestation of his power and loving kindness in blessing my administrations to the afflicted since I have been in the ministry was witnessed on March 27th. It was an incentive to call forth a desire and determination to be more faithful, prayerful, energetic, and watchful. I resolved then and there to lose sight of all things and interests earthly beyond my duty to God and man, and to fully devote the few days or years that may be mine to the cause of truth and righteousness.

As a summary of my labor and its results, I have baptized fourteen persons, all adults; organized one branch, (Maumee, Ohio); ordained one priest; solemnized two marriages, and administered to the sick, in some cases with remarkable results. Never was I more desirous to work for the Master than I am now. I feel as young and vigorous as I did twenty-five years ago. Age sits very lightly on me, and in the last two years I have solved the problem as to why I am thus preserved in health and strength, and I have entered into covenant with God that as long as he will bless me with powers of body and mind, just so long will I work for the progress and prosperity of this glorious latter day work, both by precept and example.

I am prepared to comply with the disposal you may make of me, but should prefer being continued in my present field, if you deem it wise. I have a big year's work mapped out in case I am continued.

Elder M. H. Bond, of the Seventy, writes from Providence, Rhode Island:

Since your last session I have been laboring in the Eastern Mission. The demand for wise and efficient laborers is out of all proportion to the supply, and the interests of the church must suffer greatly unless we are reinforced speedily in this mission. With gratitude to our heavenly Father we look back to the blessings received during the past year. The wondrous fulfillment of his promises in the past are the reasonable assurances of his care in the future. The necessity is constantly apparent of laying the foundations of our work in Christ's name, and my desire is to build for his approval, and to labor for the reward which he only can bestow.

The labors of E. C. Briggs, missionary in charge, have been appreciated by us, in a measure at least, and we rest in the assured fact that time will bring its full reward to this servant of Christ. His return to this mission is an actual necessity to the interests of the church. We hope and expect to see W. H. Kelley immediately after conference. E. L. Kelley and the Bishop are expected and needed here, with one and as many more permanent laborers as we can get from the conference. I expect to continue in the field if the conference so orders.

Elder John Smith, of the Seventy, writes from New Bedford, Massachusetts:

Since last conference I have labored to the best of my ability (until January, 1888,) in the Massachusetts district. During the winter I preached some, by request of the Bishop, in Eastern and Western Maine, presenting to our people the law on tithes and offerings, and their duty in relation to the same. In my labors the Lord stood by me.

Elder J. C. Foss, of the Seventy, present, reports.

I was appointed to labor in Minnesota till Fall, and then in Missouri for the winter. While in Minnesota I preached in thirteen different places, with fair results. Some obeyed, and others were very near the kingdom. There are noble people in that north country. There are many Scandinavians to whom an Elder ought to go who can talk their language. If one is sent I am satisfied that great good can be done, and now is the time to do it. I left the Saints in very good condition; the officers are trying to do the best they can, and peace and love prevailed among them. T. J. Martin, as president of the district, visits the branches as often as he can, and does much to cheer the Saints. J. R. Anderson, Bishop's agent, is indeed worthy of the responsible office he holds.

On returning home to Missouri, I was invited by Bro. Waldsmith of Nebraska City, to hold a few meetings there, and I preached eight times. I was then requested by J. R. Lambert to go into Iowa. I did so, and preached in eight different places, with good results. Baptized nine at Underwood, and organized a Sabbath school, which I learn is flourishing. I also preached in five places in Missouri. Have preached 149 sermons, baptized 33 persons and officiated in ordaining and blessing. I can say that I have been wonderfully aided by the Spirit of God in presenting the words of life. Have striven to honor my calling, and as I am called to serve God and to work for his cause, I will pledge myself with you, my brethren, to honor the glorious name of Christ, as I have tried to do in days past.

Elder J. S. Roth, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since last report I have labored, as best I could, to do the Master's will. I put in my time about equally between the Des Moines and the Eastern Iowa districts. I labored some in the branches, and also opened some new places in both districts. I acted as Bishop's agent in the Des Moines district. I have also acted as book agent, and since last conference have taken in about $160 for church publications. It makes me rejoice when I see that the Saints and friends are willing and ready to support the church publications. I have sold a number of books to those who do not belong to the church. I find that the Voice of Warning is a grand work for outsiders to read. There are some five new openings in Eastern Iowa district, one at Fulton, where we have ten noble Saints. They desire that a branch be organized there, and I hope that the missionary in charge will notice this, for this is the request of the district. Others in that neighborhood will soon obey. There are still a number of school-houses open for us, which I have not yet reached. The people ask, "When will you come into our neighborhood and preach?" and I hope this conference will send one or two more elders to Eastern Iowa for a year. That field has been idle so long, that now there is a great demand for preaching. Bro. Maitland rendered me timely assistance in that region; but he can not be in the field the coming year. Therefore, to do justice to those who hunger for the word, two or three ministers should be sent there. The Lord blessed me wonderfully in administering to some of the sick. Diseases of from fifteen to twenty years' standing were immediately healed. I baptized sixteen and confirmed about twenty; blessed quite a number of children; officiated at one marriage, and performed other duties. My desire is to still go on in this great work, and I would like to be returned to the Des Moines and Eastern Iowa districts.

Elder A. H. Parsons, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I bear record that God has blessed my effort the past year to exceed the preceeding year. The work is onward in most places in my field; but there is a lack of observing the gospel governing the lives of Saints in some of the branches, which has led some of the old as well as the young to attend places of amusement, such as skating rinks and dances, which has brought persecution. I am glad that such cases are few, but they are more than ought to be among Saints, for they have hindered the work where they have been practiced. People say, "Elder, your members are no better than other professors; this ought not to be." Generally speaking the Saints here are a God-fearing, whole-souled people. That is the beauty of coming out of Babylon. I have baptized eighteen, assisted in confirming twenty, performed one marriage ceremony, blessed children, administered to the sick and held one discussion, as reported by Bro. Caffall. If no one else was benefitted, I can say that it did me good. I never enjoyed anything better than holding the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants by the side of the Bible. I had read all three more or less before, and believed in the divine authenticity of the two former, still my faith was confirmed on every point that attack was made on, and I was enabled to show the harmony existing between the three books. This state is like many other fields of labor, it needs to be remembered with more laborers. The calls for preaching have been more than could be filled, and the prospects for an ingathering are better than heretofore.

Elder Henry Kemp, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I have labored in south-western Iowa, in the Fremont District, according to the ability God has given me and to the best advantage of the work entrusted to my care. And with heartfelt gratitude to my heavenly Father, I can say that his blessing has attended my labors. The Spirit has been with me, giving strength, physically and spiritually, beyond my expectations. The work in the district is in fair condition. Our branches are small and members scattered. Also some are careless of the interests of the great work, and difficulties arise; yet God helps us through all, for which we feel to bless his holy name.

Our fall camp meeting was a success; much prejudice was removed, fifteen were baptized and many others believing the preaching so ably done by Joseph Smith, Charles Derry, Joseph Luff, R. M. Elvin and D. Houghas. Our camp meeting for next fall is appointed at the same place. We have a good tent, and most excellent grounds; and we fully expect a large assembly. Bro. Luff done us good service here in replying to Elder Smith, of the Christian Church, on the spiritual gifts. Elder McClure, of the same body, also, of late, has sought to damage the work by delivering in Plum Hollow four lectures, in which he tried to bring opprobrium upon the character and work of Joseph the Seer. It was simply a rehash of Braden's spleen. He gained few friends. Bro. William Leeka obtained permission to speak, and nobly defended the truth of God, and showed clearly that all the aspersion cast upon the character of his servants, would never thwart the purposes of the Almighty. The lectures will be replied to in due time.

Bro. J. R. Lambert attended our late conference and done us good. I have baptized eight persons; have preached about five sermons a week during the year; blessed children and administered to the sick. I love the work; am willing to still labor for its interest as God may direct.

On the reading of Bro. Anthony's report E. C. Briggs related some of his trying experiences in Utah in 1863, when he went there as the first missionary of the Reorganized Church to that people. M. T. Short, Joseph Smith and Charles Derry also spoke of a few incidents of their experience there in later years.

A resolution from the Independence Sunday-school, asking the conference to meet with them to-morrow morning was accepted and adopted, as was also a resolution from the branch, asking the conference to partake with them to-morrow afternoon of the emblems of the Lord's Supper.

Pres. Smith announced the names of the speakers and their assistants for this evening and for Sunday morning and evening, and those to have charge of the sacrament service. The members of the First, Second and Fifth quorums of Elders were requested by their officers to meet on Monday morning at places named.

At the evening hour Warren Turner, of Clinton, Iowa, offered prayer. The sermon was by J. C. Clapp, of Montana.

SUNDAY, APRIL 8TH.

At half-past nine o'clock many of the conference delegates and visitors attended the Sabbath-school exercises, which were under the charge of H. R. Mills, the superintendent of the school.

At the regular hour for preaching the service was opened by singing, "May we who know the joyous sound," followed by prayer offered by J. M. Terry, of Stewartsville, Missouri. After singing "The morning breaks, the shadows flee," Columbus Scott, of Galien, Michigan, preached. Over one thousand people were present, as learned by count.

In the afternoon the house was again filled, notwithstanding the falling rain. The sacrament service was in charge of I. L. Rogers, Jackson Goodale and G. A. Blakeslee, and was opened by singing "How firm a foundation," and prayer was offered by Bro. Goodale. Bro. Rogers presented the names of several who desired the prayers of the church in their behalf, namely, William B. Smith and W. H. Griffin, and sisters Foreman and Bratton. After singing "Let us pray for one another," Bro. Blakeslee made brief remarks, fitting the occasion. The time was then given to testimonies, and forty-three of the Saints improved the time well, and the Holy Spirit cheered and comforted their hearts as well as those of the great assembly. The emblems were blessed, and Priests Vickery, Farrow, Austin, Allison, Crick, May, Clemenson, Cox, and Brents passed them to the congregation. The whole occasion was a pleasant one.

In the evening W. W. Blair preached, assisted by Joseph Smith. Announcements were made for to-morrow's services, also for meetings of the High Priests' Quorum and of the First Quorum of Elders.

MONDAY, APRIL 9TH.

The morning prayer meeting was in charge of Bradbury Robinson, of Humboldt, California, and C. E. Butterworth, of Dow City, Iowa.

The forenoon sermon was preached by Jackson Goodale, of Barry, Illinois, assisted by Cyrus Thurston, of Galien, Michigan.

In the afternoon the hymn "Come, let us anew our journey pursue" was sung and prayer was offered by H. C. Bronson.

The committee on credentials made an additional report, showing Central Kansas to be entitled to six votes, Daniel Munns, delegate; Western Wisconsin four votes, F. Hackett, delegate; Central Missouri three votes, E. W. Cato, delegate.

The special order of the day, as provided by the conference of 1887, was taken up, being the proposed amendment to chapter 13 of the Book of Rules. The secretary read the chapter, also the amendment as submitted to and published in the minutes of said conference. J. C. Crabb asked a question concerning it. It was then resolved that we take up the amendment section by section and adopt.

Section 1 was moved by E. L. Kelley and M. T. Short and adopted.

Section 2 was moved by R. M. Elvin and J. W. Brackenbury. J. Luff and G. T. Griffiths moved to amend by substituting so as to make it read "from the time it becomes known that such offense has been committed." Then brethren Kinneman and Baker moved an amendment to the amendment that there be inserted words so that it would read, "From the time it becomes known to the authorities having jurisdiction." This was favored by N. A. Baker and opposed by E. L. Kelley and J. C. Crabb. The vote being taken it was declared lost. The question being now upon the amendment, it was put to vote and adopted.

Then Section 2, as amended, was adopted.

Section 3 was read and H. C. Bronson asked some questions concerning it. W. H. Kelley moved its adoption. Joseph Luff and G. T. Griffiths moved to amend by inserting after the word "party" in fifteenth line, "a deacon if obtainable, otherwise." The vote being taken, this amendment prevailed. The question being upon the adoption of Section 3, W. H. Kelley and James Thomas spoke in opposition, and brethren Crabb, Luff, Hicklin, Butterworth, Lambert and Kinneman, favored it. The previous question being ordered on motion of brethren Holt and Campbell, the first three clauses of Section 3 were adopted as amended. The fourth clause was moved by brethren Short and Crabb. E. L. and W. H. Kelley opposed its adoption. Then brethren E. L. Kelley and S. D. Shippy moved to amend by striking out the words, "If such presiding officer be not an Elder, or other officer of the Melchisedec line of authority." This was opposed by Joseph Luff and favored by W. H. Kelley. W. C. Cadwell and D. K. Dodson moved as a substitute for the amendment that there be added, after the word "branch" the words, "Who shall thereupon appoint from the elders of the church such persons as may properly sit to examine and try the case; or, in case such presiding officer shall not be in the Melchisedec line of authority, then he may either so appoint or refer the case to the presiding elder of the district, or mission, (if it be not in an organized district), who shall so appoint." This was supported by W. C. Cadwell, H. L. Holt, C. St. Clair, James Thomas, E. C. Brand, F. G. Pitt, W. H. Kelley and Richard Hawkins, and opposed by W. W. Blair, Joseph Luff, J. W. Brackenbury, J. Hawley, R. M. Elvin, John McKenzie, W. W. Whiting, E. Curtis, C. Derry, C. H. Porter, Frank Hackett, D. K. Dodson and D. Chambers, and questions were asked by J. Luff, F. C. Warnky and E. A. Davis. Previous question was moved by J. Luff and G. T. Griffiths and carried, when, vote being taken on the substitute, it was lost. The question recurring on the amendment it was also lost. J. C. Crabb and C. Derry moved to amend by striking out the words, "If he so choose" in the second and third lines of said clause and inserting in lieu thereof the words, "Or the officers of the branch." Spoken to by J. C. Crabb and questions asked by W. H. Kelley. Columbus Scott and F. C. Warnky moved as a substitute, to strike out all after the word "offended," in the second line, and insert as follows: "Should lay the matter before the presiding officer of the branch, or, if there is no organized branch, then that it be placed in the hands of the missionary in charge for adjudication by a Court of Elders appointed by him."

This was favored by Columbus Scott, when the hour of adjournment having arrived, the Bishop's report was presented and after being read, it was, on motion, referred to a committee of three appointed by the body, consisting of J. M. Terry and William Anderson, J. A. Robinson. Announcements were made for the meetings of the Second, Fourth and Fifth Quorums of Elders, and the First Quorum of Priests; also for meetings this evening and to-morrow. Sang "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." Benediction by Pres. Smith.

The evening sermon was preached by W. E. Peak, of Gallands Grove, Iowa, assisted by William Newton, of Armstrong, Kansas.

TUESDAY, APRIL 10TH.

The morning prayer meeting was in charge of J. M. Putney, of Moorhead, Iowa, and, as J. T. Phillips was absent, R. M. Elvin assisted Bro. Putney. During the services three persons were confirmed as members of the church under the hands of brethren Putney, Warnky and Elvin.

At the hour for preaching William Leeka, of Plum Hollow, Iowa, offered prayer. The sermon was preached by H. C. Bronson, of St. Joseph, Missouri.

At the opening of the afternoon session the hymn "Stand up, stand up for Jesus" was sung and prayer was offered by W. H. Kelley.

It was resolved that Thursday afternoon next be set as the special time for considering the time and place for holding the next conference.

The committee on credentials reported W. H. Kelley as properly a delegate from South-Eastern Ohio and West Virginia district; also that E. C. Briggs and G. T. Griffiths are additional delegates from Philadelphia district. The report was adopted.

The special order of the day was taken up as left over from yesterday. The substitute under discussion was read and discussed at length, being favored by E. L. Kelley, and opposed by brethren Thomas, Crabb, Preator, Whiting, Blair and Brackbury. The previous question being ordered, the substitute was put upon its passage and defeated.

The question being now upon the amendment to insert the words, "Or officers" in place of the words, "If he so choose," W. H. Kelley and E. C. Brand moved, as substitute, the striking out all after the word "offended," and inserting the words, "Shall lay the matter before the presiding officer of the branch, who shall see that the case is heard before a properly authorized court, and if satisfaction is not had, the aggrieved party may appeal to the missionary in charge, who shall see that the case is heard before a proper court; or, if there is no organized branch where said offending party resides, he may present the case to the president of the district, who shall see that it is heard before a proper court."

W. H. Kelley spoke in favor and J. A.

Robinson and J. R. Lambert opposed. The previous question being ordered, the substitute was put to vote and defeated. The question being now upon the amendment to substitute the words "Or officers," the previous question was moved and the amendment was also defeated. By a rising vote there were found to be thirty in favor of it and fifty-eight in opposition to it.

The question being now upon adoption of clause 4 of Section 3, it was put on its passage and prevailed.

Section 4 was moved by James Thomas and W. H. Kelley. An amendment was moved by W. W. Blair and J. A. Robinson, to insert the words "If practicable" after the word "accused" in seventh line. This was adopted. R. S. Salyards and E. C. Brand moved to insert the words "Or deacon" after the word "teacher." E. L. Kelley moved to amend the amendment by striking out the words, "A teacher" in the twelfth line and inserting the words, "Said officers." This was opposed by Alfred White and F. C. Warnky and favored by R. S. Salyards. The previous question being ordered, the amendment to the amendment was adopted as was also the amendment.

C. E. Butterworth moved to further amend by inserting after the words, "Years of age," the words, "Or notice shall be given through the Herald." C. E. Butterworth and E. L. Kelley favored it, and J. R. Lambert, W. W. Blair and J. C. Crabb opposed it. Being put to vote it was lost. The previous question being ordered, Section 4, as amended, was adopted.

J. C. Crabb and J. T. Kinneman moved the adoption of Section 5. H. C. Bronson and J. McKiernan moved to insert in paragraph 2, after the word, "Made," the words, "Within one year." Following this E. L. Kelley and A. White moved, as a substitute, that there be added at the close of the section as follows: "Any party desiring to appeal from the decision of any court herein provided for, must give notice of the same to the officers of the court or branch or district interested, within sixty days from the date of trial, and perfect said appeal within six months from date of trial." The previous question was ordered, and vote being taken, Section 5 was declared as adopted. It was then moved by brethren Bronson and Kinneman that it be reconsidered. It was so ordered. E. L. Kelley and James Thomas moved to amend by striking out all of the substitute after the words, "Date of trial," and inserting the words, "And decision, and must perfect said appeal within six months from date of such trial and decision." This amendment was adopted, and then Section 5, as amended, was adopted.

Section 6 was moved by brethren Lake and Kinneman. Brethren Luff and Briggs moved to amend by inserting after the word "decision" the words "if approved by the branch." Bro. Luff spoke in its favor, when brethren Crabb and Derry moved to amend the amendment by adding the words, "or district conference." Brethren Crabb, Gillen and Scott favored this, and brethren Blair and Brackenburg opposed it. W. H. Kelley asked a question. The previous question was moved and the amendment to amendment carried by a vote of fifty-one to fifteen, and afterwards the amendment was also adopted. Previous question was ordered and Section 6 was adopted as amended.

Section 7 was read and brethren Brand and Short moved its adoption. The motion to adopt prevailed.

Also upon motion of brethren Lake and James Thomas, Section 8 was adopted.

The question now recurred upon the adoption of the report as a whole, and brethren E. L. Kelley and Pitt moved to amend Section 3 by adding at the close the words, "or such court may be appointed by the branch." This was adopted. Luff and Lambert moved to add at the close of Section 6, the words, "In all cases where a doubt is entertained in regard to where an appeal should be taken from decisions of original courts, reference should be made to the missionary in charge, and his counsel observed." It was adopted. The previous question was ordered on the whole report, and it was adopted, as amended, reading as follows:

1.—In cases of offense or transgression, where redress by church trial is sought, or discipline required for the purpose of reclaiming the erring, the following rules of procedure should be observed:

2.—Any person, a member of the church, who shall have been offended by another, whether such offense shall have been publicly or privately given, or any officer whose duty it is to examine into and settle differences between brethren, shall be entitled to proceed against the person so offending before any court of the church having jurisdiction, providing that such proceeding shall be commenced within one year from the time it becomes known that such offense has been committed; except in cases of felonies, as provided by the laws of the land, and where the statute of limitation does not run.

3.—No member shall be entitled to proceed against another for an offense before any church court whatever unless he shall first have made efforts to reconcile, or become reconciled to the member offending, as directed in the Scriptures.

The steps required are:

The member offended shall seek opportunity to state his matter of grievance to the one offending, as said by the Savior, "between him and thee alone." If explanation, apology, restitution or reconciliation is not effected after candid and fair effort has been made by the one offended, then he shall take with him some teacher of the church, or, if such teacher is not obtainable, or is an interested party, a deacon if obtainable, otherwise a member, and shall try a second time to secure an adjustment of the difficulty existing, but shall not state the matter of grievance to such officer or member except in the presence of the party offending.

If no reconciliation shall be effected by this second visit and effort, the offended, if he shall so choose, may lay the matter before the presiding officer of the branch, or, if such presiding officer be not an elder or other officer in the Melchisedec line of authority, before the presiding elder of the district, or mission if it be not in an organized branch or district, who shall appoint from the eldership of the church such persons as may properly sit, to examine and try the case; or such court may be appointed by the branch.

4.—When it shall be determined to call an offending member before a court of the church, the officer appointing the court, shall cause to be prepared the charge, or charges made against the accused in writing, stating definitely and specifically what the offense is charged to be, a copy of which shall be furnished the accused, if practicable, so that he may if he so desire, make settlement of the difficulty by reconciliation or otherwise, and avoid further action; this copy may be given to the accused by any teacher, or deacon, or member in the absence of said officers, or if left at his usual place of residence with a member of his family over eight years of age, it shall be held as given to him. Upon the failure of the accused to make restitution, or explanation, the court shall be appointed, and shall proceed to examine and try the cause upon the charge, the original of which, or a copy thereof, shall be furnished them by the officer appointing them; they shall, also, give due notice to all parties of time and place when and where the trial shall be had as provided in Book of Rules. Where in cases persons can not meet together by reason of great distance between them of travel or other obstacle over which they have no control, and which is sufficient to prevent meeting in person, the work toward reconciliation and labor referred to herein may be done by written correspondence between the parties.

5.—In case satisfaction shall not be given upon the examination and decision of any cause before an elders' court, an appeal from such decision may be had by the party aggrieved to the conference of the district, if the court was appointed by a branch officer, or to the Bishop's court: or if the Bishop was present at the trial by the elders' court to the High Council if the matter has been first tried before the district authorities.

In all cases of appeal the person making the appeal must set forth clearly to the court to which appeal is made the reasons for such appeal. In case the appeal is made to the conference of the district, or to the bishop's court, the court from which appeal is taken, or the branch or conference to which an elder's court have reported shall send at once upon receipt of notice of such appeal being taken, the papers and minutes of evidence and a copy of the proceedings of the court and cause the same to be filed with the court to which the appeal is taken.

In cases where a member has been adjudged guilty of an offense, for which the penalty has been suspension from church fellowship or church privileges, such person shall so remain as affected by the decision until a re-hearing and reversal of the decision shall have been had upon the appeal.

In cases where appeal is taken to the high council, the rule laid down in Doctrine and Covenants, governing such appeals shall obtain. In all such cases notice of appeal should be made to the presidency by filing the notice in the office of the secretary of the church and courts, branches and districts from which appeals to the high council are made should upon notice of such appeal being taken, at once prepare minutes of evidence and copies of all the proceedings had of record by them.

Any party desiring to appeal from the decision of any court herein provided for, must give notice of the same to the officers of the court, branch or district interested within sixty days from the date of trial and decision of the court, and perfect said appeal within six months from the time of such trial and decision.

In all cases where a doubt is entertained in regard to where an appeal should properly be taken from decisions of original courts, reference should be made to the missionary in charge, and his counsel observed.

6. In all cases where the court, upon proper inquiry, finds the accused not guilty, or that there is no just cause for action, the decision, if approved by the branch or district conference, is to be final, and no member against whom charge has been made, so examined and decided as herein provided, shall be liable to further action upon said charge and offense. A new trial or rehearing of a case may be had by any defendant, or by either party to the action if the same is between two members, upon the discovery of fraud or new evidence, the existence of which was not known to the party suffering thereby nor the court at the time of the trial. Application for a new trial or rehearing upon this ground must be accompanied by a statement of the character of the fraud or evidence, and the same set forth clearly before the court, or the officer appointing the court, or his successor, who shall then proceed to the examination of the case as at the first, he being first satisfied that the evidence relied upon is new and sufficient to justify such procedure.

7. Nothing in the foregoing rules shall be construed to interfere with the rights and duties of those whose calling is to regulate the affairs of the church in all the world, as provided in the law of said church.

8. All rules, resolutions, or parts of the same contrary to the Book of Rules, and which are contrary to the foregoing provisions are hereby declared inoperative and void.

Announcements were made for meetings of the following quorums:—The High Priests, the Seventy, the First, Fourth and Fifth quorums of Elders and the First Quorum of Priests. The session closed with benediction by Pres. Blair.

In the evening, according to appointment, Duncan Campbell, of Pleasanton, Iowa, preached. He was assisted by J. W. Wight, of Moorhead, Iowa.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11TH.

At nine o'clock the Saints gathered for prayer, and the meeting was in charge of Wm. D. Lewis, of St. Joseph, Missouri, and T. J. Bell, of Lamoni, Iowa.

The morning sermon was by President Joseph Smith. He was assisted in the services by C. E. Butterworth of Dow City, Iowa.

The business session was opened by singing, "All hail the power of Jesus' name." Prayer by A. H. Smith; Pres. Blair in the chair.

The report of the Twelve, as presented on the 7th, was, on motion of brethren Kinneman and Roth, taken from the table. It read as follows:

The Quorum of Twelve hereby report to your honorable body that there are ten members of the quorum present, and they are now ready to act upon any matter properly coming before the quorum. We have passed the following resolutions which we hereby respectfully submit for your consideration and endorsement.

1.—Whereas, the Lord has spoken against the use of tobacco and strong drink on different occasions; and whereas, in all our appointments we ought to show respect unto said counsel. Therefore, resolved that henceforth we recommend no man for General Conference appointment whom we know to be addicted to either of the above evils, and that this decision take effect one year from date.

2.—Whereas, there is a divided opinion in the church regarding the meaning of the clause in Doctrine and Covenants 42:22, which says: "And the church shall lift up their hands against him or her," and the right to take a negative vote on the question of expelling members when so recommended by an Elder's Court; and whereas, said division of opinion has prevented uniformity of action by the branch presidents and others. Therefore, resolved that it is our opinion that both affirmative and negative vote should be taken in all cases of the kind referred to.

3.—Resolved, that in the event of a necessity for baptism, for a renewal of the gospel covenant, the former ordination of the individual thus baptized become null and void.

HEMAN C. SMITH,
Secretary pro. tem.

Section 1. Was moved, by brethren Warnky and A. White, and was favored by brethren Kinneman and Crum, and opposed by brethren Warnky and Holt. Pres. Joseph Smith explained that this move was to cure a deficit in the book of rules. Brethren Holt and Dodson moved to amend by inserting after the word "Resolved," "That the clause above referred to shall be construed to mean that the finding of the Court shall be affirmed by the branch; but if a penalty be recommended by said Court, then the negative as well as the affirmative shall be taken, except in case of adultery, where the conviction has been had for the second offense, when the guilty party must be cut off."

This was discussed, being favored by brethren Brand, Porter, Blair and Clapp, and opposed by brethren Pitt, Crum, Lambert, Crabb, Briggs, Elvin, E. L. Kelley, and then, by request of the house, Pres. J. Smith gave his views. He spoke in opposition to the amendment. The previous question being ordered, the amendment was put upon its passage and declared lost. Division being called for, it was found that 15 voted in favor and about 50 against it. In speaking upon the subject Pres. J. Smith vacated the chair, and on motion M. H. Forscutt was chosen as Chairman during the remainder of the discussion on Section two. W. W. Blair and W. W. Whiting spoke against the adoption of the section, and J. W. Gillen and E. L. Kelley in its favor. The previous question being ordered, the vote was then taken and the section was adopted.

Section three was moved by brethren Whiting and Foss and was adopted.

The adoption of the report as a whole was moved by brethren Brackenburg and Waldsmith, and vote being taken it prevailed.

Report of the Quorum of Seventy was read and ordered spread upon the minutes.

The First Quorum of Seventy respectfully report the business transacted by said quorum. We have held seven sessions, and two joint sessions with the Quorum of the Twelve. The following resolutions presented and adopted by the Quorum of the Twelve were adopted by this body:

Whereas, the Lord has spoken against the use of tobacco and strong drink on different occasions; and whereas, in all our appointments we ought to show respect to said counsel.

Therefore, resolved that henceforth we recommend no man for General Conference appointment whom we know to be addicted to either of the above evils, and that this decision take effect one year from date.

Resolved that in the event of a necessity for baptism, for a renewal of the gospel covenant, the former ordination of the individual thus baptized becomes null and void.

Paragraph 2 relating to taking affirmative and negative votes on the question of expelling members was afterwards adopted in joint session with the Twelve, and will be reported by that quorum.

The following memorials, as framed by the committee, upon the death of brethren Alexander McCord and George S. Hyde were unanimously adopted:

"IN MEMORIAM.

"Whereas, God hath permitted to be removed from our number, our much esteemed and aged brother, Alexander McCord, who for many years labored for Zion's weal; therefore, be it hereby resolved, that we, the officers and members of the Quorum of Seventy, do express our sorrow at the loss of our brother from the midst of our councils and from out the ranks of our ministerial forces.

We believe him to have been a man who loved truth and hated iniquity, and who gave many years of his life to the service of God and humanity. He was one of the early missionaries to Utah who sought to redeem erring Israel. We hereby express our heartfelt sympathy and condolence to his good wife and family, and pray God to so bless and care for them as he has promised in his holy word.

Brother A. H. McCord was born at New York City, on the 10th day of January, 1811. United with the church in York, Canada, May, 1836, being baptized by Elder P. P. Pratt. He died near Harlan, Shelby county, Iowa, June 15th, 1887."

"Whereas, it hath seemed good that God, through the mystery of his Providence, should call from our midst a co-laborer and fellow-servant with us,—one so worthy, true and good,—as our dearly beloved brother, George S. Hyde.

Therefore, be it hereby resolved that we, the members and officers of the Quorum of Seventy, do express our profound regret at the loss of him from our ministerial ranks, who ever strove to magnify his calling and office before God and the church, of which he was an able minister and faithful worker.

We also extend our sympathy and condolence unto his noble wife and family in this their sad bereavement. And we pray Almighty God that he will indeed be a father to those fatherless and a husband to this widowed mother and wife. That the extension of his mercy, love and peace, with all exhibitions of his kindness may be by them ever realized.

Brother George S. Hyde was born in Fond-dulac county, Wisconsin, — 1853; baptized at Little Sioux, Iowa, March 24th, 1878; ordained a Seventy, September 30th, 1879, Elder J. C. Crabb, being spokesman. He died July 22d, 1887, at Little Sioux, Iowa.

The quorum met on Sunday, April 8th at nine a.m., in fasting and prayer concerning the condition of the health of the President of the Church, the condition of its leading quorums, and its general welfare, and had a time of spiritual rejoicing.

The presidents of the quorum presented the following twelve names to the quorum which were unanimously accepted for membership in the quorum and are by resolution presented to your body for concurrence and ordination:

- | | |
|---------------------|-----------------------|
| 1 Thomas J. Beatty, | 7 Hiram H. Robinson, |
| 2 Isaac M. Smith, | 8 Ulysses W. Greene, |
| 3 Thomas Matthews, | 9 James A. Carpenter, |
| 4 James Moler, | 10 John W. Wight, |
| 5 Hyrum O. Smith, | 11 Orlin B. Thomas, |
| 6 Martin M. Turpin, | 12 Warren E. Peak. |

These names were also, out of courtesy, submitted to the Quorum of Twelve for examination, and were by them unanimously approved.

A committee or court was appointed at the Kirtland conference of 1887 to try the case of Galland's Grove Branch vs. Davis H. Bays. The following report from them was adopted by this quorum: "We, the committee or court, appointed to try the case of D. H. Bays, would beg leave to report that we have carefully and patiently examined the case according to the evidence presented to us and have decided that the charges were not sustained."—J. S. Roth, W. T. Bozarth, Henry Kemp, committee. The following was also adopted: "Whereas, the court appointed to try the case of Galland's Grove Branch vs. D. H. Bays, does fully vindicate Bro. Bays and find him not guilty, and this quorum has adopted the findings of the court appointed; therefore, Resolved, that this quorum ask the conference to place the matter in the hands of the missionary in charge where said branch is located, to see that the branch grant to Bro. Bays a letter of removal as asked for by him."

Statistics of quorum: number of members present, 23; reports by letter, 28; not reported, 2; total membership, 53; number last report, 54; 2 lost by death, one gained by ordination, viz., J. F. Burton. Number baptized by the members of the quorum during the past year 523—an increase of 187 baptisms over last year's report.

The following named brethren were selected for ordination as presidents of this quorum, in order to complete the number of seven presidents of Seventy as provided for in the law: 1. Robert J. Anthony, 2. Isaac N. White, 3. John C. Foss. Said names were presented to the Quorum of Twelve for examination and received their unanimous approval.

R. S. SALYARDS, Sec'y Quorum.
E. C. BRAND, F resident.

A second report from the Twelve was read, and it was, on motion of brethren

Whiting and Brand, ordered spread upon the minutes. The doxology was sung and benediction pronounced by H. A. Stebbins.

At the evening session Hiram Rathbun, of Lansing, Michigan, preached. He was assisted by Levi Anthony, of Wilber, Nebraska.

THURSDAY, APRIL 12TH.

The morning prayer meeting was presided over by brethren I. N. White and William Leeka. The sermon that followed at the regular hour was preached by M. T. Short, of Millersburg, Illinois. He was assisted by J. S. Roth, of Sonora, Iowa.

At half-past one o'clock, after singing "Truth reflects upon our senses," James McKiernan appealed to the throne of grace for divine wisdom to aid us.

Bro. Blair said that no new business should be introduced after the opening of this session. He presented several matters for consideration. Motion was then made that the yeas and nays be not taken without a two-thirds vote in favor. There being already a proviso that they may be taken on call of five members of the conference, the resolution was ruled out of order.

The matter of time and place of holding the next conference, being the order of the day, was presented. Brethren Kinneman and Bozarth moved that it be held at St. Joseph, Missouri, beginning April 6th, 1889. Brethren Anderson and Stebbins moved that it be held at Lamoni, Iowa. Brethren Griffiths and I. L. Rogers moved that it be held at Plano, Illinois. Brethren Brackenbury and Warnky moved in behalf of Independence, Missouri. Brethren N. Rumel and W. H. Kelley moved that it be held at Kirtland, Ohio.

In speeches favoring the above places, Mr. Hutchinson, of St. Joseph, sent by the Manufacturers' Bureau, and brethren Bronson, Kinneman, Burlington, Bland, Bozarth, Crabb, Derry, Kemp, Thomas, Warnky, E. L. Kelley, A. H. Smith, J. R. Lambert and Etzenhouser, spoke in favor of that city; brethren Banta, Gillen and I. L. Rogers in favor of Plano; brethren Joseph Smith and William Anderson in favor of Lamoni; and Bro. Brackenbury in favor of Independence.

An informal vote being taken, it was found that 93 were for St. Joseph, 11 for Plano, 8 for Lamoni, 4 for Independence and 2 for Kirtland. The choice being between the two highest, it was that there were 113 voting for St. Joseph and 11 for Plano. On motion St. Joseph was made the unanimous choice.

BISHOP'S REPORT.

The Bishop's report was returned by the Auditing Committee, with their report concerning the same, which was adopted:

In submitting my report of the finances to you for the past fiscal year I feel that it is but proper to commend with it the efforts of the Saints who have freely and without constraint, except that which has moved them through their love for the Master's cause, given of their means for the preaching of the gospel and assistance of the poor among the Lord's people. Notwithstanding the fact of the closeness of the times in many places monetarily, and the damage and loss of crops in others, the report will show that there has been the same steady increase in this department and assurance of a healthy continuous growth that has been marked in other years. With the growth of the work and interests is also brought about an increase in its cares and chief among these is that of giving proper home and comfort to the infirm and aged, many of whom have passed through the severe trials and perplexities of the church since 1833, and who in their strength forgot not to "earnestly contend for the faith delivered," as the apostle says, "to the Saints." To aid in this work it is hoped by the Bishopric that proper resolutions may be introduced during the conference providing for the establishment of a Saints' Home, which we believe will lessen the expense of aiding these persons in severalty and bring to them greater peace and contentment.

Invoking the rich blessings of God upon his people everywhere, and expressing my hope and confidence in the permanent establishment of the work of the Lord, I am in bonds yours,

G. A. BLAKESLEE, Bishop.

G. A. BLAKESLEE, Bishop.

We your committee to whom was referred the auditing of the Bishop's books, report that, after a careful examination of said books we find them correct to the best of our understanding, and we commend the style and order in which they are kept. As examined by us they agree with the balance sheet as read before the conference.

We congratulate the church on a net increase of means to the church of over twenty thousand dollars—an increase of one hundred per cent in available means during the past year.

Most respectfully submitted this 11th day of April, 1888.

J. A. ROBINSON,
J. M. TERRY,
WM. ANDERSON.

The committee to consider the Music Book proposition reported, and, on motion of brethren E. L. Kelley and F. G. Pitt, their report was adopted without discussion, reading it as follows:

We, your committee appointed by your honorable body on music, beg leave to report:

Having examined some of the manuscript of the proposed Saints' Harmony and conferred with the musical editor, Bro. M. H. Forscutt, we find that he has expended for books and material about $200, which he asks the church to pay him, and further that he is now ready to enter upon the duties of preparing manuscript and of proof reading of the work, from now until the work is completed, his salary to be $75 per month while the work is being done.

It is estimated that it will take six months to complete the work to put the book on sale.

We recommend that this matter be turned over to the Board of Publication, requesting it to prosecute this work at once to its completion, your committee being in possession of information that the Board of Publication is now ready to proceed with the work.

And we further recommend that the $200 be paid to the brother, and that the Board of Publication procure his services and set about the work at once.

G. A. BLAKESLEE,
J. T. KINNEMAN,
J. A. ROBINSON.

THE TWELVE AND THE BISHOPRIC.

A report from the Twelve and the Bishopric was read, being as follows:

The Quorum of Twelve and Bishopric met at the house of Bro. Bishop, Independence, Missouri, April 10th, 1888. Present E. C. Briggs, W. H. Kelly, James Caffall, John H. Lake, A. H. Smith, J. R. Lambert, J. W. Gillen, Heman C. Smith, Joseph Luff and G. T. Griffiths of the Quorum of Twelve; and G. A. Blakeslee, E. L. Kelley and Elijah Banta of the Bishopric. After examination and discussion the following was unanimously passed.

"Resolved that we re-affirm the basis of adjustment, and Principles and Rules of Action contained in our joint epistle of 1878 as subsequently amended." This resolution does not include the preface to said epistle, but it is understood that said preface shall be dropped. The subsequent amendment referred to is the striking out of the words "said agents to be Elders."

The following was adopted as the unanimous decision and request of the two quorums:—"Resolved that the secretary be instructed to prepare a proper introduction to the Epistle of the Twelve and Bishopric and furnish the same with the request that it be published, and incorporated in the Book of Rules when that is revised."

It was also ordered that the names of all members, of each quorum, who are present should be attached to said joint epistle when published.

These requests are hereby presented, and you are earnestly requested to grant them.

Respectfully submitted,
HEMAN C. SMITH, Sec'y pro. tem.

Brethren Gillen and Hawley moved that the requests be granted, and, after being opposed by Bro. Bronson and favored by brethren E. L. and W. H. Kelley and C. H. Porter, the motion prevailed, with the proviso that said Principles and Rules be amended so as to read that the ministry shall report annually to the Bishop instead of semi-annually.

HIGH PRIESTS' QUORUM REPORT.

The High Priests' Quorum reported as follows:

The High Priest's Quorum has held two meetings; Charles Derry, president, H. A. Stebbins, secretary. The following members reported in person or by letter: Charles Derry as having labored under general appointment in his field, as reported to this conference. J. C. Crabb as presiding over the Little Sioux district and laboring much in the ministry. H. A. Stebbins as presiding over the Decatur district, in which he has done what he could outside his duties as Church Secretary and Recorder; has baptized twenty-five persons, the most of them being new converts where he has preached. He also reported the deaths of four members of the quorum, namely, brethren Hiel Bronson, Wheeler Baldwin, O. P. Dunham and Justus Morse, and it was ordered that copies of the "In Memoriam" be issued to their families. Jackson Goodale has been prevented from ministry work by the long sickness and death of his wife, but he feels now that he is ready to do all that he can. George Derry and James Anderson have labored as they could. M. M. Forscutt has preached in Omaha and vicinity as best he could, in consideration of his secular business. D. S. Mills presides over the Southern California district; also preached in Nevada and baptized fourteen persons, also organized a branch there. C. G. Lanphear has preached in the state of New York, all that his age would permit. H. J. Hudson labors as president of the Columbus branch, Nebraska; S. S. Wilcox as president of the Shenandoah branch, Iowa, and George Sweet as president of the Salem branch, Iowa. H. P. Brown presides over the Northern California district, and as editor of the "Expositor" has worked for the gospel cause. John Landers (who is now in his ninety-fourth year) has preached occasionally in Lamoni, Iowa. R. C. Elvin has labored in South-Western Nebraska, and more recently in Nebraska City. Phineas Cadwell is assistant president and Bishop's agent in the Little Sioux district and president of the Logan branch. T. P. Green has preached in the South-Eastern Illinois district.

It was resolved that we consider Bro. M. H. Forscutt to be still a member of the quorum, no action of release having ever been taken by the quorum, and also that we desire his progress and prosperity in the Lord's work.

In consideration of the subject of appointment to labor under the direction of the First Presidency, the brethren, (with such understanding) are hereby recommended to them for appointment, as follows: J. C. Crabb, D. S. Mills, and H. A. Stebbins, having been chosen by the Little Sioux, Southern California and the Decatur districts as their presidents, are hereby presented for appointment from the First Presidency to so labor. Bro. Jackson Goodale to preach in the Pittsfield district, Illinois. Bro. M. H. Forscutt to Omaha and to any points in the Southern Nebraska districts to which the First Presidency may send him. Bro. Charles Derry to the Little Sioux district, and he also desires to labor in North-Western Nebraska, if agreeable to the authorities in charge.

It was resolved that we, as a quorum, heartily endorse the appointment of its members, George A. Blakeslee, as Bishop, and H. A. Stebbins, as Secretary and Recorder of the church.

Resolved that the High Priest's Quorum, in accordance with advice received from the First Presidency that there be a further enrollment of members in said quorum, do hereby recommend that the following named be ordained to the office of High Priests: 1, William Leeka; 2, David Chambers; 3, Calvin A. Beebe; 4, J. M. Putney; 5, Asa S. Cochran; 6, F. G. Pitt; 7, J. H. Peters; 8, J. W. Waldsmith; 9, W. C. Cadwell; 10, C. E. Butterworth; 11, William Anderson; 12, J. A. Robinson; 13, R. M. Elvin.

Respectfully submitted,
H. A. STEBBINS, Sec. of Quorum.

[The Presidency say that they wrote out a statement for the conference (to go with the above report) that they approved of the above selection of names for ordination as High Priests; but, for some cause unknown to us, it failed to come into my hands. H. A. S.]

The recommendations for the ordination of Presidents of Seventy were taken up, and, on separate motions, it was ordered that R. J. Anthony, I. N. White and J. C. Foss be so ordained.

On motion the names of those whom the Seventy recommended for ordination as members of that quorum were read; and on separate motions Hiram H. Robinson, John W. Wight and Warren E. Peak were ordered to be so ordained. Moved by brethren Elvin and Gouldsmith to defer further action until the brethren can be conferred with. Brethren Lambert and Etzenhouser moved as a substitute that we defer making any provision for the ordination of the absent appointees of the Seventy until missions shall have been considered."

A request was presented by certain of the Priests and Teachers who desire the organization of quorums of said officials. On motion these requests were referred to the Quorum of the Twelve, as was also the report of the High Priest's Quorum.

In the evening M. H. Forscutt preached to a crowded house. He was assisted by F. G. Pitt.

FRIDAY, APRIL 13TH.

The morning prayer meeting was in charge of brethren Waldsmith, of Nebraska City, and Bell, of Lamoni.

Brother Charles Derry, of Magnolia, Iowa, addressed the assembly in the forenoon, assisted by Bro. Waldsmith.

At half-past one o'clock sang hymn, "My soul looks up to thee." Prayer offered by brother Lake.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

The report of the Fifth Quorum of Elders was read as follows:

The quorum has held, up to date, six sessions. Sixty five members reported. C. G. Gould, Elsha McEvers, F. R. Tubb, E. C. Aldrich, Wm. Williams, W. O. Thomas, C. D. Norton, N. A. Baker, T. Bradshaw, Emsley Curtis, N. N. Cooke, W. S. Loar, J. A. McIntosh, J. A. Robinson, John H. Lee, J. H. Lawn, J. E. Reese, John Richards, W. S. Barbee, J. J. Watkins, T. N. Fields, Lewis Gault, Wm. Chapman, P. C. Peterson, G. S. Lincoln, I. P. Baggerly, John Larsen, W. H. Garrett, Henry Southwick, A. L. Whitaker, Levi Phelps, W. G. Pert, E. A. Shelley, James Allen, Joseph Lampert, J. M. Tousley, N. Stamm, G. W. Walters, Robert Oehring, Wm. Aird, Geo. Gould, A. S. Davison, B. B. Anderson, J. R. Anderson, W. A. McDowell, F. E. Anderson, Wm. Kendrick, G. W. Lush, Frank Hackett, W. N. Ray, L. H. Ezzell, Charles Herzing, Henry Jones, James Drown, Gomer

Reese, Thomas Worrell, C. J. Hawkins, J. S. Goble, T. J. Bell, John Pett, A. V. Closson, S. A. Steadman, Stephen Stone, R. Etzenhouser, Henry Hinderks. Sixteen are acting as presidents of branches, one as president of a district; total of baptisms 104, ordinations 18, marriages 13, children blessed 54.

The following resolutions obtained, and are severally presented by way of petition asking action of the body. Resolved, that it is the opinion of the Fifth Quorum of Elders that the eligibility of men to General Conference appointment, who keep for sale tobacco should be considered by the body. We therefore petition the general body to ask action of the Twelve, and to report to this session of conference that action may be had and the time of the general body economized.

We further petition the general body to perfect the work begun in 1884, at Stewartville, Missouri, as introduced by R. Etzenhouser of the Fifth Quorum of Elders, which was designed to secure a living and perpetual schedule of all General Conference acts. And further that the present General Conference take some action in behalf of the interests of brother Charles Herzling and others. Brother Herzling setting forth that through a term of years irregularities in the branch and district of which he is a member have obtained, and that the measures of adjudication have been inadequate to secure justice.

The following names were enrolled to supply vacancies:—Abner Lloyd, Thomas Worrell, Wm. Sparling, J. D. Erwin, B. A. Atwell, A. Haws, Samuel Brown, John G. Smith, V. D. Baggerly.

The name of P. P. Powell was dropped from the quorum. One case for adjudication was referred back to local authorities, and one is yet in hand.

The following names were recommended to the Twelve for General mission work:—R. Etzenhouser, John Richards, E. Curtis, L. H. Ezzell, E. A. Shelley, Levi Phelps. Of these Bro. John Richards is desired to be understood as asking no help from Bishop.

There being a surplus fund of twenty dollars, it was unanimously voted to the Independence church.

In all the work done while there has been earnest and vigorous expression and debate, there has also been peace and harmony. The outlook for the quorum was never so good as now.

R. ETZENHOUSER, Pres.,
W. S. LOAR, Secy.

FIRST QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

The report of the First Quorum of Priests was read:

The First Quorum of Priests have held two sessions with good feeling and interest manifested. Charles A. Wicks having been cut off from the Church was dropped from the quorum, and J. A. Allison was enrolled.

The following brethren reported by letter or in person: R. May, J. B. Gouldsmith, M. M. Ballinger, F. M. Dennis, D. C. White, C. P. Paul, E. Sparks, E. Ranné, Jr., L. C. Donaldson, J. A. Upton, (E. B. Morgan an elder), C. H. Derry, G. F. Weston, W. Crick, W. H. Kelley, J. F. Clemenson, A. J. Cox, J. J. Vickery and J. A. Allison.

The following resolutions were passed upon and are submitted for your consideration:

1st.—Whereas, the Rules of Representation permits members (if chosen as delegates) to vote and take part in General Conference; Therefore be it resolved, that we ask your honorable body to so amend said rules that the Priests be allowed to take part and vote in General Conference.

2d.—Whereas, God has chosen the Aaronic Priesthood to act in all temporal things, therefore be it Resolved that we consider that the membership of this priesthood should be chosen to act as Bishop's agents, and that disability and unworthiness should be the only reasons why they should not so act.

WM. CRICK Secretary pro tem.

The following was present:

The committee appointed to examine into and report upon the question of the church holding property through its legal trustee, the Bishop, in California, would respectfully state that they have examined the law relating to the same and find that the church can so hold real estate in California by the law of comity between the States under its general corporate character.

G. A. BLAKESLEE Chairman.

The report of the Quorum of Twelve concerning the nominations by the High Priest's Quorum was read as follows:

The matter referred to us by the body, contained in the report of High Priest's Quorum, was duly considered, and all the names recommended except one were unanimously endorsed. Against that one there was one negative vote.

HEMAN C. SMITH, Secretary pro tem.

The regular order being on the report of the Seventy the substitute under discussion on adjournment yesterday, was put to vote and prevailed.

The names of the remaining brethren nominated by the Seventy for ordination were separately presented, and the ordination of Brn. J. T. Beatty, J. M. Smith, Thomas Matthews, James Moler, H. O. Smith, M. M. Turpen, U. W. Green, J. A. Carpenter, and O. B. Thomas, was ordered as members of the Quorum of Seventy.

On motion of brethren Salyards and Moore the ordination of brethren H. H. Robinson, J. W. Wight and W. E. Peak, as provided for yesterday, was referred to the Twelve.

The nominations from the High Priest's Quorum were taken up and it was moved that we approve. Concerning the matter Bro. E. L. Kelley spoke in opposition. Bro. W. W. Blair made a statement and also read the message that the First Presidency sent to the High Priest's Quorum which caused that body to take action in so selecting. Brethren Derry, Crabb and Brand favored the proposed ordinations, and Bro. J. R. Lambert opposed.

Then brethren W. H. Kelley and M. H. Forscutt moved that the matter be referred to the First Presidency, the Twelve and High Priests who are present, to examine and report. It was then moved to amend by adding the Quorum of Seventy, and to be subject to the call of the First Presidency.

Brethren Whiting and Scott opposed and brethren Luff, Derry, Elvin, Brackenburg and E. L. Kelley spoke in favor. Then brethren Crabb and George Derry moved to refer to the First Presidency alone. Being put to vote, the motion was defeated. Vote being taken on the amendment, it was lost. Previous question was ordered and the original was adopted.

The appeal case of Bro. J. L. Pride vs. the North Freedom branch was taken up and referred to the missionary in charge.

The question from the Des Moines district as to whether a member may keep the records of a district, or if the district clerk should be an elder, was referred to the chair. Pres. Smith said that any person qualified, whether an officer, lay member or good sister, can act as clerk of the district.

A communication with reference to furnishing matter for the encyclopedias was, on motion, referred to the First Presidency.

A request from the Eldorado branch, Missouri, asking that Bro. Swen Swenson be ordained an Elder was referred to the president of the Independence district.

The resolution of the Seventy concerning the case of D. H. Bays was moved. The following substitute was presented by brethren Cadwell and Crabb:

Resolved, that the missionary in charge be requested to communicate with the Galland's Grove branch and either procure from said branch a letter of removal for brother Davis H. Bays or see that his name is removed from the branch records, in which latter case said missionary in charge shall issue said letter of removal and recommendation to said brother.

Brethren Lamb and Hawley opposed and brethren Cadwell and Whiting favored it. Being put to vote it was lost by a vote of 31 to 22.

The petition of the McFall branch, Gentry county, Missouri, to be added to the Decatur district was read and motion made that the matter be referred to the Decatur district and the McFall branch. It was also moved that it be referred to a committee of three, appointed by the chair. It was further moved that it be referred to the missionary in charge. This last motion to refer was adopted.

The following was moved by brethren Scott and Salyards:

Whereas, General announcement has been made throughout the United States and throughout the world, by the medium of the press, that at the "Centennial Celebration of the Century's Progress," to be held at Cincinnati, Ohio, during the Summer of 1888, at which the religions of the pioneers of the century are to be represented, we are informed that especial prominence is to be given to the faith of the Latter Day Saints; and

Whereas, The faith has been grossly perverted and misrepresented by the Utah Apostasy, and also by other fragmentary factions that have departed from it, which departures have given wrong impressions to the public concerning the doctrines and practices of the church; and

Whereas, From said wrong impressions existing in the public mind the faith of the church is liable to general and historical misrepresentation at said Centennial Celebration unless steps are taken to place the church before it in its true light.

Therefore, Resolved, that a committee consisting of Presidents Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, the missionary in charge of Ohio, and such others as the conference may see fit to select to be appointed to see that the interests of the church are cared for and its faith properly set forth at said celebration. Said committee to take such measures so to do as shall in their wisdom be deemed necessary.

Bro. Short opposed it and Brn. Briggs, Kinneman, and E. L. Kelley favored it. Then Brn. Kinneman and Keeler moved that the name of E. L. Kelley be added to the others mentioned. Brn. Etzenhouser and Forscutt moved as a substitute that those named in the original motion be authorized to select others to assist them as they may find necessary. Brn. Hansen and Kinneman opposed, and Brn. Whiting and Crabb favored the substitute. It was then put to vote and defeated. Brother Chatburn favored the amendment. Previous question was ordered and the motion to amend prevailed. Then the original as amended was favored by Bro. Scott and was adopted.

Announcements were made for meetings of the First, Third and Fourth Quorums of Elders. The assembly sung "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and Pres. J. Smith pronounced the benediction.

The evening services were in charge of Bro. J. A. Robinson, of Independence, Missouri, and the sermon was by Bro. R. M. Elvin of Lamoni, Iowa.

SATURDAY, APRIL 14TH.

The nine o'clock prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. J. A. Robinson and Wm. Anderson. The sermon of the morning was by Bro. H. L. Holt of San Bernardino, California. He was assisted by Bro. W. M. Rumel of Omaha, Nebraska.

The afternoon service begun by singing, "Come thou fount of every blessing." Bro. John Hawley of Galland's Grove, Iowa, offered prayer.

The brethren have preached about 1,800 sermons, baptized 154, and officiated in all the ordinances. Fourteen are acting as presidents of branches. Brethren William Anderson and Stephen Mahoney have died, and W. E. Peak and J. W. Wight have been chosen to the Seventy.

C. A. Butterworth, S. W. Hogue, B. Kester and Warren Turner, have been enrolled to fill the vacancies.

S. MALONEY, President.

THIRD QUORUM OF ELDERS.

The following report was read:

The Third Quorum of Elders have held four meetings which were of a most harmonious character. There were fifteen of the quorum present.

Reports were received from brethren J. T. Turner, L. Anthony, D. Munns, John Hawley, E. W. Cato, J. W. Waldsmith, B. Robinson, G. W. Beebe, H. R. Harder, Josiah Curtis, Hiram Parker, W. N. Abbott, C. H. Porter, Geo. Hayward, Daniel Brown, George Mottashed, J. T. Kinneman, Bartley Myers, Wm. Lewis, W. W. Whiting, O. P. Sutherland, John Goode, George Hawley and J. M. Terry. On motion Bro. W. C. Kenyon was dropped from the quorum for good and sufficient causes.

Brethren J. T. Turner, B. Robinson, J. E. Malcolm, H. R. Harder, Samuel B. Robinson, O. P. Sutherland and E. E. Bradley were added to the quorum, making our number ninety-six. $5.35 was donated for quorum expenses. The same officers were sustained. The names of Brethren B. Robinson, C. H. Porter, T. W. Chatburn and E. W. Cato were recommended to the Twelve for missions.

J. T. KINNEMAN, President.

J. M. TERRY, Sec'y.

FOURTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

The following report was read:

The Fourth Quorum of Elders have held five sessions. Nine added to the quorum: Edward L. Page, Henry E. Goff, Willis L. Booker, John Shippy, John McKenzie, Evan B. Morgan, Moses W. Gaylord, Henry Holdsworth, and A. W. Thompson, and 63 members reported having baptized 73 persons. Presidents of branches 18, of districts 4, Sunday School superintendents 4, clerks of districts 2, of branches 2; and several are busy distributing tracts and the Voice of Warning. With the exception of two reports all were favorable. From several very aged ones we can not expect much labor. There were nine losses, James Foxall, J. T. Clark, D. A. Framp-ton, A. N. Caudle by expulsion, B. F. Kerr, P. H. Reinsimer, R. Thrutchley and B. F. Daggs died, and H. H. Robinson ordained a Seventy. With two exceptions all of those heard from are willing to do all they can. The quorum is in better working order than ever before since its organization.

J. D. FLANDERS, President.

SECOND QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

The following report was read:

We met at Bro. Bishop's for the purpose of organization; brethren A. H. Smith and J. H. Lake, of the apostles, and Bro. G. A. Blakeslee, of the Bishopric, meeting with us. The organization was effected; fourteen priests being present, from whom the following were elected as officers: T. R. White president, U. A. Austin as first counselor, S. D. Shippy as second counselor, G. E. Harrington as clerk. They were ordained by brethren Smith, Lake and Blakeslee. An excellent feeling existed, and we now await any action the conference may see fit to make with reference to our quorum work.

List of names: John W. Peterson, Talmon R. White, Usellus A. Austin, Saleda D. Shippy, James S. Tankard, Daniel Donavan, Seth W. Farrow, William P. Brents, Henry J. Jemison, Charles W. Sifton, Isaac Philips, Andrew J. Taylor, Geo. E. Harrington, Moses Welsh, Thomas R. Williams, Edward D. Bennett, Frank P. Schnell, Samuel A. Reeve, Charles R. Green, Fred G. Dungee, David S. Seavey, W. Dowker, Wm. Cairns, Peter N. Surbrook, Wm. F. Clark, Seth M. Bass, John S. Parrish, Jacob B. Gunsolly, Wm. D. Bullard, John A. Stromberg, Edward Charlton, John Wahlstrom, Geo. Graves, Thomas Rawson, Erwin C. Perthel, Hugh Harvey. Total 48.

Resolved, that notice of organization appear in the Herald, and the names of members, and that they report to the secretary, enclosing their license as Priests, if possible, with stamped envelope and place of residence; the old license will be returned if desired.

T. R. WHITE, President.

G. E. HARRINGTON, Sec.

FIRST QUORUM OF TEACHERS.

The following report was read:

We have held two meetings and effected organization. Bro. E. C. Briggs presided, assisted by Bro. W. H. Kelley. Fifteen teachers were present. The following officers were chosen: B. J. Scott president, F. W. Barbee first counselor, Henry Sparling second counselor, G. H. Hidy secretary.

Under the instructions of the apostles present in selecting names to fill the quorum from those enrolled but not present, it was aimed to select those who lived nearest the main body.

The names of those present were: B. J. Scott, John Kennedy, F. W. Barbee, Wm. S. McMullin, Josiah M. Curtis Martin S. Frick, Fred J. Gerber, James A. Burnham, John Inman, Peter Simpson, Frederick Peterson, Joel W. Mooney, Peter L. Case, Henry Sparling, G. H. Hidy.

The names of those not present who were enrolled are as follows: Joseph Hammer, Joseph Schmutz, Thompson Cochran, Willard Wells, G. W. Leach, C. J. Hunt, Wm. Bentham, Franklin Wiley, John B. Cline.

The secretary was requested to make a report of the organization of the quorum to the conference and ask approval.

B. J. SCOTT, President.

GEO. H. HIDY, Sec.

On motion the Church Secretary and Recorder was instructed to place these names upon the Church Record.

Bro. A. H. Smith made the following report:

Brethren:—In the case of Bro. J. L. Pride vs. the North Freedom branch, Wisconsin, referred to the missionary in charge, I report that I find ground for believing that there have been irregularities, and thereby injustice may have been done, and that Bro. Pride is at least entitled to a rehearing.

A. H. SMITH,

Missionary in charge.

E. L. Kelley and J. C. Clapp moved to refer the matter to the missionary in charge for adjustment, at any time and place he may select. This was adopted.

The following was moved by brethren Cadwell and Luff:

"Resolved, that the business years of the Bishop's office and that of the Board of Publication shall commence with January 1st and end with December 31st of each year, and the respective reports of such offices shall be for the time covered by such period. Also, that said reports shall be prepared as soon after the close of such business years as possible, and published in the Herald before the meeting of Annual Conference. At each Annual Conference there shall be appointed a standing committee on finance to whom shall be referred such reports as soon as made, who shall examine and report upon them to the next Annual Conference. Such committee on finance shall take under consideration and report on anything they may deem of interest to the church with reference to the property or the management of the office of the Board of Publication.

It was favored by Bro. Cadwell and opposed by Brn. Blakeslee and E. L. Kelley, and being put to vote was defeated.

The following was moved by E. L. Kelley and J. Luff.

Whereas, the report of Bro. T. W. Smith shows the organization of a district in Australia, named the Victoria District; therefore, be it Resolved, That this conference approve said action and order the same enrolled with the districts of the church.

The subject of establishing a mission in the Indian Territory was taken up and the following was moved by Brn. Clapp and Campbell and adopted:

That the matter of establishing a mission in the Indian Territory be submitted to a committee of seven, and said committee include the Bishopric.

A letter from W. T. Whittaker of the Cherokee Nation, was read by Secretary Stebbins, and Bro. S. Maloney gave his views and related his experience as a missionary who has labored there. Brn. J. A. Robinson and J. Hawley spoke in favor, and the motion prevailed. Pres. J. Smith appointed E. C. Briggs, S. Maloney, D. Chambers and H. Kemp as the other four of the committee to act with the Bishopric.

The following was moved:

That the chapter adopted as an amendment of the Book of Rules be embodied in said book in the next edition; also that the Board of Publication have said amendment printed in size suitable to be put into the Book of Rules as it now is.

It was moved to amend by adding:

And that the Rules of Representation as they now prevail be also embodied in said book.

This amendment prevailed by a vote of 46 to 11, after which the motion, as amended, was adopted.

The following was moved by Brn. Luff and H. C. Smith, and adopted:

Whereas, the General Conference of April, 1878, adopted the construction put upon the church law respecting Elders' Courts, as found in Rules of Order, section 159, chapter 13; therefore, Resolved, That the foot-note published at the end of said chapter in said Rules of Order be stricken out of all future editions of said book.

The following petition from the Independence Building Committee was read:

The following preamble and resolution is respectfully submitted for your action upon it:

Whereas, the branch of the church at Independence, Mo., has undertaken to build a substantial and commodious house of worship, and

Whereas, said building is being erected with a view to meeting the future as well as present demands of the general and local church, and

Whereas, said building will cost about, or over, $16,000, and the Independence branch is bearing the heavy portion of the burden, but needs help to complete the building; and

Whereas, it is understood by us that tithing and free-will offerings in the Bishop's hands, may legally be employed in building church houses, and

Whereas, it is essential for the good of the general work that a creditable house be erected at the center stake, towards which the eyes of the Saints are turning, and the attention of the world is being directed; therefore

Resolved, that we appeal to the General Conference for help, and ask that $3,500 be granted us for the above purpose; also that the Bishopric be instructed to pay said amount to the building committee as fast as the progress of the building work shall demand.

By order of the building committee, as authorized by the Independence branch.

JOSEPH LUFF, chairman.

It was moved by brethren Luff and Warnky that the request be granted. A substitute was moved by brethren Lambert and Griffiths that this whole matter be referred to a committee of five, including the Bishopric. Brethren E. L. Kelley, Brackenbury, Kinneman and Luff opposed referring; brethren Kelley and Kinneman also opposing the use of the general funds of the church for said purpose, and brethren Luff and Brackenbury defending the right of the church to do so, as did brethren Pitt, Robinson and Brand, while brethren Short, Bronson, Lake and Scott opposed. The previous question being moved the motion to refer was defeated.

The question being upon the original motion, brethren Blakeslee and Porter opposed it and Bro. Warnky spoke in favor. The previous question being ordered and five brethren uniting in a call for the yeas and nays, the vote was taken, resulting as follows:

On motion of E. L. Kelley and J. C. Foss the Bishop was requested to solicit funds in aid of the completion of the Independence Chapel.

Adjourned with benediction by Pres. Joseph Smith.

At the evening service Bro. R. Etzenhouser, of Independence, had charge, and the sermon was by Bro. J. H. Hansen, of Lamoni, Iowa.

SUNDAY, APRIL 15TH.

The day was one of the fairest, and the Saints gathered to every service in full number, the house being crowded on each occasion. The nine o'clock meeting was in charge of brethren I. L. Rogers, of Sandwich; Illinois, and M. H. Forscutt, of Omaha, Nebraska. At the hour for preaching Bro. Forscutt announced the hymn, "Sweet the time, exceeding sweet." Bro. G. T. Griffiths offered prayer and Pres. Joseph Smith delivered the sermon. After the prayer the choir sung an anthem. Following this the hymn, "Mortals awake," was sung. The last hymn was, "Lord, at this closing hour."

At half-past two o'clock, after singing, "What various hindrances we meet," Bro. H. C. Smith, of San Bernardino, California, offered prayer. An anthem was sung, and also the hymn, "How will the Saints rejoice to tell." The sermon was by Bro. W. H. Kelley, of Kirtland, Ohio.

The evening discourse was by Bro. M. H. Forscutt. He was assisted by Bro. W. W. Blair.

MONDAY, APRIL 16TH.

The morning prayer service was in charge of J. M. Terry of Stewartsville, and J. C. Foss of Independence.

Preaching at half-past ten by E. C. Brand of Tabor, Iowa, assisted by J. S. Roth of Sonora, Iowa.

The business session opened with the hymn, "Lord of the harvest, hear." Prayer by Columbus Scott. Pres. Blair suggested that inasmuch as many of the brethren had gone home that it would be well to defer till next session as much of the business now in hand as possible.

The report of the First Presidency upon the mission-fields of the Quorum of Twelve was read and adopted without change, as follows:

1. Thomas W. Smith; Australia and Society Islands, in charge.
2. James Caffall; Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, and New Mexico, in charge.

Respectfully submitted,

HEMAN C. SMITH,

Secretary pro tem.

The Quorum of Twelve ask leave to report that they have concluded to recommend two more names for missionary appointment, viz.:

112. W. H. Griffin; Kentucky and Tennessee.
113. T. W. Chatburn; Nodaway District, Missouri, when practicable.

The wisdom and legality of ordaining men of the Negro race to the office of Elder coming before us, and the name of George H. Graves being presented, the following resolution was passed: "Resolved, that the question of ordaining G. H. Graves to the office of an elder be referred to Bro. J. H. Lake with instruction to so ordain, if found wise to do so."

Respectfully submitted,

HEMAN C. SMITH,

Secretary pro tem.

Brethren Short, Bronson, Kinneman, Whiting and Herke made objections to certain items in the report, and an effort was made to change or amend two or three of the appointments. Explanations were made by brethren Gillen, Lambert and Kelley, and brethren Elvin, Parsons, Clapp, Hansen and H. H. Robinson favored adopting the report as presented. The motion to so adopt prevailed. [The names from 96 to 113 were presented later but are placed with the others that all the appointments may be together.—H. A. S.]

Pres. Smith spoke upon the method of making appointments, saying that the authorities having the matter in charge tried to do the best they could with the men and the fields before them. He said that in the closing years of his father's life he began to district the church and to set High Priests to have charge over those districts. He also said that it was the duty of all the ministry to avoid evil speaking concerning each other, fault finding, and the like.

The report of a meeting held by the Bishop and his agents present at conference was read, as follows:

REPORT OF THE BISHOP AND HIS AGENTS.

At a meeting of the Bishop and his agents on April 13th, the following resolution was passed and ordered respectfully referred to the conference for its action upon the same:

1. Whereas, as agents of the church finances, we have had trouble and complaint in the past by reason of elders under missionary appointment returning home and remaining from their work at great lengths of time; therefore, be it resolved, that in our opinion any general laborer should not be permitted to return home and remain idle except in cases of sickness in his family or of himself, except by written permission from the missionary in charge.

2. That in case of a violation of this rule it is the duty of the agent to deduct from the allowance made to such missionary in proportion to the time he is thus idle. A. White, J. W. Waldsmith, R. H. Davis, Geo W. Shute, W. R. Rumel, J. S. Roth, Warren Turner, E. W. Cato, Wm Lewis, E. L. Kelley, G. A. Blakeslee.

On motion the report was deferred till next conference for consideration, subject to call.

The following was moved and adopted:

Whereas, the Rev. M. T. Lamb has issued a work opposing the validity of the Book of Mormon; and whereas, the Rev. Lamb has sent a challenge to this conference asking that a minister be sent to discuss the question named, at Des Moines, Iowa, next autumn.

And further, whereas, the said Lamb claims that the responsibility of his efforts against the Book of Mormon rests solely with the Baptist association; therefore, be it

Resolved, that this body do respectfully ask that the minister or ministers in charge of aforesaid association in Des Moines, furnish documentary evidence that the Rev. Lamb has properly stated his case, that we may act discreetly, as a body, and that this document be sent to our missionary in charge, Elder J. R. Lambert, Lamon, Iowa, and that he be authorized to furnish a man to hold said discussion at time and place to be hereafter named.

J. F. McDOWELL,

I. N. WHITE.

A resolution from the Third Quorum of Elders was read:

Whereas, there is a diversity of opinion as to whether a person expelled from the church for second offense in adultery can be restored to the church by re-baptism; Therefore, be it resolved, that we the Third Quorum of Elders, ask the General Conference and the Quorum of Twelve to speak authoritatively upon this question.

It was moved that it be referred to the Quorum of Twelve, but a motion to defer till next conference was adopted, after being opposed by M. T. Short and H. C. Bronson.

The resolutions found in the reports of the Fifth Quorum of Elders and the First Quorum of Priests, (see minutes of 13th) were also deferred till April, 1889.

The following from the Fremont District was indefinitely postponed:

1st. Resolved, by the Fremont district in conference assembled, that all members that have moved out of the jurisdiction of said district, and who fail to report themselves to their respective branches or said district, that their names be dropped from the records of said branches or district.

2d. Resolved, that the clerks of said branches be requested to make out a list of all names of such members, with the items thereto, and forward the same to the district secretary, to be by him transmitted to the General Church Recorder, to be by him placed on record, and that he be empowered to grant letters of removal when called for, unless for good cause shown.

3d. Resolved, that these resolutions be presented to the next General Conference of the church for their approval or rejection, with a request that they approve the same.

4th. We, the members of the Fremont district, do hereby recommend and request your honorable body to approve the above resolutions, and that you order the same placed on record for the benefit of all those concerned, believing it to be for the best interest of said district and the church generally, thereby saving conflict and falsehood in our statistical reports.

The Epistle of the Twelve, as presented on the 11th, was read:

The Quorum of Twelve wish to inform you that they have carefully examined their Epistle of April, 1887, made a few corrections, and then unanimously endorsed it. They then presented it to the Quorum of Seventy, who after due consideration reported that they had approved of it by a unanimous vote. We now present it to the body for their consideration.

The following preambles and resolution was passed by the quorum: "Whereas, it is reported to us that there is a misunderstanding of, and opposition to our last epistle relating to the prerogative and duties of district presidents by a respectable number of the church; and whereas, we have no disposition to fasten this or any other view held by us on the church contrary to its own will; and whereas, we believe our positions to be substantially correct; therefore, be it Resolved that we submit our last epistle, as amended, to the General Conference, and ask its endorsement thereon." It is as follows:

EPISTLE OF THE TWELVE.

To the Saints Scattered Abroad, Greeting:—We congratulate you at the auspicious beginning of this another conference year; and we feel confident that you will join with us in the feeling of thankfulness and good cheer which has, in the providence of God, come to us as a church.

The year with its duties, anxieties and cares, its successes and failures, times of rejoicing and seasons of sorrow, is past; its closing being the occasion of one of the pleasantest, and most profitable and encouraging sessions of General Conference that the church has ever held.

The members were more than ordinarily of one heart and purpose—unity characterizing each work performed—so much so that the "yeas" and "nays" were not called for in a single instance during the entire session! God recognizing this oneness of spirit and purity of purpose, deigned to reveal Himself in answer to our prayers, in respect to most essential and important matters connected with our duties and work as a church, and signified the names of those approved by Him to occupy the office of apostle, that the Quorum of Twelve might be more nearly filled. Thus a need long since felt has been supplied, and we are greatly cheered and encouraged that others have been called to share in the burdens, duties and responsibilities of this ministry. Our petitions having been answered by our heavenly Father, giving instruction upon such things as were engendering evil, division and discord among the Saints, to the end that unity and concord might obtain throughout the churches, in feeling, theory and practice; together with the thought that He does most assuredly regard us as His Church and people, must be received with thankfulness and rejoicing of heart, among the Saints, in every place, and should tend to confirm them in the faith, and lead to a renewal of their covenants and diligence in the work.

We are admonished of the responsibilities, and important trust conferred upon us, and what is required at our hands as laborers in the Lord's vineyard, and we purpose to renew our efforts and activity, so far as may be, and we ask the prayers and confidence of the Saints that this purpose may be executed in the way that will best serve the interests of the church.

The work of restoring the grand old Temple, built by divine commandment, and long since left to the winds and wastes of time, deserted, to be pillaged by the irreverent and thoughtless, has been nearly completed, in keeping with the work of restoring peculiar to the Reorganization, and is now made a pleasant and delightful place in which to worship. The repairing done reflects credit upon the committee which had it in charge, and the small indebtedness incurred thereby, should be promptly and cheerfully lifted. The Saints may well feel glad that they can no longer be justly reproached for a seeming want of interest in the house appointed by God to be built to His name.

The financial condition of the church is in a healthy state, showing an increased faith, confidence and interest among the Saints concerning tithes and offerings, which gives encouragement to the thought that the church will soon be able to put the whole of her available ministry into the field.

With hearts full of gratitude to God and love toward you and with unflinching faith and confidence in our holy religion, we invoke the blessings of God upon you and his work everywhere, praying that prosperity, and a renewal of confidence and effort may come to the church throughout the whole world. As a means of better understanding our respective duties, and with a view of coming to a greater unity of action, and avoiding misunderstanding and strife, we commend the following statements, declarations and definitions, for the guidance of district presidents and all whom it may concern:

1. The law of God provides for general presiding officers in the church, and also for presidents of branches: but it contains no provision for the office known as "district president." This office should, therefore, be considered as an outgrowth in organization, the object of which is to perform work not specially provided for in the law, and to assist in the discharge of duties and obligations which, by law, are imposed upon other officers of the church.

2. Presidents of districts, according to the custom which has heretofore obtained, hold and exercise their presidency, solely by virtue of selection by vote; hence they have no right to dictate, direct, or control any except those who placed this presiding responsibility upon them. A simple choice, only, made by any body of Saints, can not bestow authority to do the work which is clearly provided for in the revelations of God, and which is assigned to other officers of the church.

3. The branch organization with a presiding elder, a priest, teacher and deacon, to perform the respective duties necessary for the welfare of such organizations, is clearly provided for in the law; and if from any cause these branches need to be set in order, the law also provides for this emergency, and assigns the duty of setting in order, or regulating to another class of officers, whose duties and prerogatives are clearly defined.* It follows, then, that the rights and duties of presidents of districts are outside of the above named provisions; and that they can not regulate, or set in order the branches of the church, except by invitation, request, or direction, of those to whom this work properly belongs. It is evident, therefore, that the leading duties of presidents of districts are to open up new fields of labor; encourage and stimulate to activity the ministry in their respective districts, who are not burdened with branch duties, or who are not under general church appointment, and, so far as possible, aid all classes of ministers, in an advisory way, in order that the greatest possible degree of good may result from their labors in the respective localities where they are required to operate.

4. It is their duty to preside over district conferences, by the voice of said conferences, when there is no member of the "travelling, presiding High Council" present, a Seventy under special direction from him, or others whose right and privilege it is to preside by reason of their position and standing in the church. They should be as conversant with the needs and demands of the branches as their circumstances will permit; and should aid by counsel, when called upon, in any work which properly belongs to branch officers. It is not necessary, however, that he should travel from branch to branch, in one constant round, dictating and directing in branch affairs, and thus become an expensive burden while attempting to do that class of work which clearly belongs to branch and general church officials.

In connection with the above, we call attention to the two following questions which have disturbed and divided the Saints, in some localities, and which were duly referred to us for consideration and decision.

1st. Resolved, That it is our opinion that in all cases where faith and repentance are professed, and baptism administered by one having proper authority, that we can not assume the motive of the person baptized to have been evil because of subsequent transgression; but due diligence should be exercised by church officials, to honor the law contained in Doctrine and Covenants, section 17, paragraph 7; and section 42, paragraph 20.

2d. Whereas, there is a divided opinion with reference to the meaning of the law contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 42, paragraph 7, which reads as follows: "Thou shalt not commit adultery; and he that committeth adultery and repenteth not shall be cast out; but he that has committed adultery and repenteth with all his heart, and forsake it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive; but if he doeth it again, he shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out." Therefore, be it resolved, That it is our decision that the law of God requires the church to forgive once, upon confession; and that a second offense, demanding excommunication, can not be committed until after the guilty parties have been once forgiven of the crime charged.

May the spirit of wisdom, and the love of the truth abide with the faithful everywhere, is the prayer of your co-workers in the vineyard of the Lord.

Respectfully submitted,

HEMAN C. SMITH, Sec'y. pro tem.

M. H. Forscutt and Charles Derry moved that it be referred to the First Presidency. J. H. Hansen favored this and W. H. Kelley and F. G. Pitt opposed. Then F. G. Pitt and R. M. Elvin moved the following:

Whereas, There appears to be a difference between the decision of the First Presidency in 1877, and the Epistle of the Twelve; therefore be it Resolved, that this document be referred to the First Presidency, and that action thereon be deferred till the General Conference of 1889.

Joseph Luff and E. L. Kelley moved that it be laid on the table until the matter referred to the First Presidency, the Twelve and the High Priest's Quorum is reported upon. Brethren Luff, Gillen, Derry, Lambert, Brackenburg, Pitt, Brand, Kinneman and E. L. Kelley spoke in favor of this, and brethren Hansen, Whiting, Elvin, and Bronson, opposed it. Bro. Crabb asked a question. The motion to lay on the table prevailed.

The evening sermon was by J. F. McDowell of St. Joseph, Missouri. He was assisted by J. W. Wight of Moorhead, Iowa.

TUESDAY, APRIL 17TH.

The nine o'clock meeting was in charge of R. M. Elvin and C. E. Butterworth. M. T. Short preached at half-past ten, Columbus Scott assisting him.

At half-past one the brethren still remaining assembled for the closing business of the session. After singing a hymn James Caffall offered prayer. Then the following report was read:

We, as the committee appointed by you, consisting of the First Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve and the High Priests, do hereby report that we have consulted upon the subject referred to us (the ordination of High Priests as contemplated in the report of the High Priest's Quorum) and, upon such consideration and because of instruction received by us, we recommend that the matter be deferred till the next conference, and that it be made the special order for the fourth day of said session. And we further recommend that the Epistle of the Twelve be also deferred till said conference, to be taken up and considered on the same day following in its order.

JOSEPH SMITH, President,
H. A. STEBBINS, Sec'y. of Council.

On motion of F. G. Pitt and J. W. Brackenbury it was adopted by a unanimous vote.

The report of the First Presidency, upon the missions of those High Priests whose names had been sent in, was read:

In the matter of the appointment of High Priests referred to us, we hereby recommend the following:

C. Derry, Little Sioux and Galland's Grove District, with privilege of Nebraska.

Jackson Goodale, Pittsfield, Illinois, district.

J. C. Crabb, Little Sioux and Galland's Grove.

M. H. Forscutt, to be provided with a field by the Presidency at the expiration of his engagement in editing the Saints' Harmony, now pending.

H. A. Stebbins, Decatur District.

D. S. Mills, Pacific Slope Mission, under Missionary in charge.

JOSEPH SMITH,
W. W. BLAIR,

On motion of J. T. Kinneman and W. Newton it was adopted.

An additional report of the Twelve on missions was read. The names presented will be found with the main list. M. T. Short desired permission to labor in northern Illinois, on account of the poor health of his wife, as well as in Wisconsin, and his appointment was so amended. R. S. Salyards was released from his appointment in Ohio and Pennsylvania because he has been selected to serve the church in other duties.

Heman C. Smith was requested to stop in Utah and ordain R. J. Anthony to be one of the presidents of Seventy. It was also provided that the following brethren see to the ordination of the members of the Seventy nominated and approved at this session: E. C. Briggs and G. T. Griffiths to attend to the ordination of T. J. Beatty, James Moler and Thomas Matthews; J. R. Lambert to that of O. B. Thomas and M. M. Turpen; James Caffall to that of H. O. Smith; J. W. Gillen to that of I. M. Smith; W. H. Kelley to that of U. W. Greene, and Columbus Scott to that of J. A. Carpenter.

The question of publishing "Persecution and its Causes" in pamphlet form, as deferred from last conference, was referred to the Board of Publication.

Also the deferred question of publishing the revelation of April, 1885, in the Book of Covenants, was taken up, and it was moved that, to be consistent with ourselves, it should first be presented to the quorums of the church for approval, and it was adopted that the Presidency so do with it as they see fit.

It was moved by David Chambers and E. L. Kelley that the subject of establishing a mission in Indian Territory be now taken up. This, on being put to vote, was defeated. Then W. H. Kelley and M. H. Forscutt moved the following, and it was adopted:

That the committee to whom the above matter was referred be authorized to prosecute the mission, if found feasible by them, and report to next conference.

Fifty-five ministry reports not yet read were ordered to be published as though read. It was also ordered that the minutes of this conference be published in supplementary form, if found practicable and not involving too great expense.

Bro. A. H. Herka suggested the propriety of providing for the free delivery of mail during the St. Joseph conference.

The authorities of the church were sustained as a body, and on separate motions the Board of Publication, the Church Secretary and Recorder, and the Church Librarian were sustained in their appointment.

Concerning the committee to audit the Board of Publication books and accounts it was moved that the same ones be appointed as were last year, but W. C. Cadwell refused to serve, and M. H. Forscutt was chosen and J. Luff and J. H. Peters were re-appointed.

Thanks were voted as follows: To the Kansas City Journal, Kansas City Times, Independence Sentinel, and Independence Gazette for publishing minutes of our conference. To the citizens of Independence for hospitality shown us. To the various railroads for courtesies received. To the secretary of conference and his assistants. To the Building Committee for preparing the building for the conference to be held in.

Pres. Smith was requested to make a closing address but did not feel able because of neuralgia in the face. On motion the conference adjourned to meet at St. Joseph, Missouri, April 6th, 1889.

NOT GREAT.

"SHE never did much. You never saw her name in the society column of the newspaper. She was not a crusader or reformer in any sense, and yet there were many who came to her for comfort. Her soothing words, gentle spirit, and quiet, restful home were a balm to tired, weary hearts." Such were the words of a friend upon the departure of one she loved. She did for humanity what the moss and lichens do for nature. Says Ruskin: "The mosses and lichens are the first mercy of the earth, veiling with hushed softness its dintless rocks; creatures full of pity, covering with strange and tender honor the scarred disgrace of ruin; laying quiet fingers on the trembling stones, to teach them rest. They will not be gathered, like the flowers, for chaplet or love token, but of these the wild bird will make its nest and the weary child its pillow. And, as they are the earth's first mercy, so they are its last gift. When all other service is vain from plant and tree, the soft mosses and gray lichens take up their watch by the headstone."—Sel.

VALLEM.—In Wade Valley, Alpine county, California, March 17th, 1888, Sr. Harriet, wife of Peter Vallem. She was born in Iowa, December 16th, 1846; was baptized November 17th, 1872, by Elder Abednego Johns. The cause of her death was confinement on the birth of a son, and were both buried in the same coffin. She was a kind and loving mother, and highly esteemed by all that knew her. She leaves a husband and ten children (three daughters and seven sons) to mourn her death. The funeral took place from her residence, on Sunday, March 18th. Her remains were interred in the Mottsville cemetery, in Douglas county, Nevada, and were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of friends. Mr. D. I. Jones conducted the funeral services.

CARRIER.—At his residence at Sugar Grove, Michigan, after a lingering illness, March 23d, 1888, John Carrier, aged 66 years, 11 months and 10 days. He was born near Utica, New York, in 1821, came to Michigan in 1866. The last fourteen years of his life was spent in the Reorganized Church. He passed away fully established in the faith. His suffering, though intense, was patiently borne. A wife and 5 children remain to mourn their loss. The skillful care of physicians, the kind and loving care of relatives and friends were all bestowed. But his days were numbered. He passed on to await his final reward at the resurrection of the just. Funeral services at the house, March 25th, by Elder E. A. Snelly, where many of his friends gathered to take a last sad look of one they respected.

Dear father, thou art gone from this cold world of sorrow,
And the clouds of the valley now hide thee from sight,
But the sunlight of heaven beamed bright on thy morrow,
And the angels did welcome thy passage to light;
Rest, soldier of Christ, thy warfare is over,
The crown thou hast won, thou shalt rest evermore.

FULLER.—At Nebraska City, Nebraska, of a complication of diseases, chiefly of congestion, and of debility consequent upon advanced years, Sr. Hannah Fuller. Born January 20th, 1815, and passing away April 5th, 1888, she had reached her seventy-fourth year of earth-life, a life of devotion to God and her many children, and was gathered peacefully to "the rest" which is provided for those whose activities are here promotive of good. Eight of her children were present at her funeral, four unable to reach there. Twenty-five relatives followed her corpse to the grave, and these were followed by a long line of carriages and other vehicles whose living freight thus attested their regard for the beloved one gone, and their esteem for such of her descendants as reside in the city of her later years' residence, the place of her death and burial. Among these is the esteemed wife of our noble-hearted brother, J. W. Waldsmith. The services were conducted by the family's friend, M. H. Forscutt, at the house, at the Saints' Chapel, and at the grave. He was assisted by father R. C. Elvin. Little more than half the number attending the funeral could find accommodation in the chapel. May our last hours here be peaceful as were hers, and our memory as fragrant.

BROWN.—Nancy Brown was born in Hamilton, Warren county, Ohio, April 25th, 1823, moved to Lee county, Illinois, in 1849, was baptized at Amboy, Illinois, by Elder W. W. Blair, in December, 1859, and died near Sublette, Illinois, March 30th, leaving a husband, two children, five grand-children and one great grand-child to mourn her departure. Elder Stephen J. Stone preached her funeral sermon from 1 Corinthians 15: 22, to a large concourse of people. Sister Brown was a most worthy child of God, had clear and decided convictions on Christian duty, with courage and decision of character to follow them regardless of consequences. She was an every-day Christian, had perfect hope of immortality and eternal life in Christ, knew for herself of the truth of the gospel, kept the faith to the end, triumphed over every obstacle and opposition, and has gone to paradise to await the crown of glory at the hands of her loved and loving Lord and Master.

RICHARDSON.—At the residence of Mr. John Hetzler, Waterloo, Iowa, April 6th, Bro. Stephen Richardson. His body was taken to La Moille, Illinois, for interment. Bro. Richardson was born in Royalston, Massachusetts, in 1799, came to La Moille in 1839, and settled at Perkins' Grove, near which he resided until about four years ago when he accompanied his daughter, Mrs. Hetzler, to Iowa. He has seen a great empire grow up around him, and died at the ripe age of 89 years. He leaves an aged wife, four sons and three daughters to mourn his death, they, too, being past their prime, still live to revere his memory and call him blessed.

[Many Saints and friends will recall numerous pleasant recollections of Bro. Stephen Richardson, for he was a true hearted man, a noble citizen, a faithful Saint, a generous helper of the church and the needy ones of earth, and we confidently trust his rest will be glorious.—Ed].

EATON.—Charles J., son of Bro. John B. and Sr. Hannah Eaton, February 27th, 1888, aged 15 years, 4 months and 8 days. He was a conscientious, upright young man, patient under extreme suffering. His last words to me were: "May the Lord spare my life until I can obey the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ." He died without that privilege—his strength not being sufficient. Funeral attended by Elder U. W. Greene.

TEETERS.—At Golden Springs, Nebraska, 13th March, 1888, of consumption, Sr. Mary, wife of John Teeters, aged 46 years, 4 months, 15 days; baptized by Elder W. M. Rumel, February 9th, 1888. She leaves a husband and seven children to mourn their loss. She was highly esteemed in the neighborhood where she lived, as the large congregation at the funeral attested. Funeral sermon by George W. Walters.

Now, ye mourners, cease to languish,
O'er the graves of those ye love;
Far removed from pain and anguish,
They are chanting hymns above.

CHAPIN.—At Oconee, Platte county, Nebraska, Sr. Laura Chapin, April 12th, 1888, aged 73 years, 8 months, 15 days. She was the widow of Adolphus Chapin, who preceded her July, 1880, dying in the faith. She was born in Dalton, New Haven, Connecticut, came west with her husband and family to Nebraska, in 1860, went to Utah in 1864, soon became dissatisfied with the teachings of Brigham Young, accepted the Reorganization in 1866 being baptized by James W. Gillen, with her husband and family, and at once returned to Nebraska, settling on land near the place of her decease. She leaves three sons and two daughters to whom she was a kind and gentle mother, endearing herself to her friends and neighbors. Her faith in the latter day work never wavered, and she passed to her rest in a peaceful slumber, retiring at night in usual health, which was good, but her spirit was gone when her family called her to breakfast. Elder George W. Galley preached on the occasion of her death, kindly assisted by Rev. Patterson, Presbyterian, whose church had been tendered Bro. Galley to conduct the funeral exercises in. A large concourse attended, manifesting their esteem of Sr. Laura Chapin, who had been their neighbor for twenty years. Her remains were brought to Columbus for interment in the cemetery.

COOK.—Sister Mary Margaret Cook, was born April the 19th, 1825, at Brownville, Venango county, Pennsylvania. Was married to George Conally at Fallston, Beaver county, Pennsylvania, March 31st, 1845. She was baptized by Elder C. Scott, near Lawrence, Van Buren county, Michigan, July 21st, 1879, after a brief sojourn among the United Brethren, believing that greater light and spiritual power would be enjoyed by obedience to the gospel as understood by the Latter Day Saints. Nor was she in this disappointed, for she died satisfied with the faith, after a brief illness with inflammation of the stomach, March 24th, 1888, at Hartford, Michigan, 62 years, 11 months and 5 days of age. Her husband, three sons and three daughters remain to mourn her and honor her memory. Funeral from the Hartford Baptist Church, March 26th, a large concourse of friends being in attendance. Sermon by C. Scott, the text being John 12: 23, 33. God's blessing comforted us.

SUBSCRIPTION REDUCED.

FROM and after the first of July next, the price of subscription for the HERALD will be reduced to $2.25 per year. We regret that the Board of Publication is not prepared now to reduce it to an even two dollars; but we hope that at no distant time that figure, or less, will be reached. This depends upon a large increase in subscriptions, and in prompt payment on the part of subscribers. Every minister, every member, and every friend of the church should diligently seek to procure subscribers for the HERALD and other church publications, and every person now in arrears for them should pay up at the earliest time possible. Prompt payments, even if the amounts paid are small, give needed encouragement and strength to the publishing department. Extra efforts should be used by all interested in the progress and success of the literary work of the church, to extend its influence and perfect its efforts.

The Board has determined to not extend such long time to subscribers as in the past, and it will be well for all concerned in this matter to make a note of it.

THE Kansas City Times had this to say of the late conference at Independence, President Joseph Smith, the gifts of the Spirit, and the source from whence comes the revealed law for the Church:

"As was anticipated the world's conference of Latter Day Saints reached its end yesterday afternoon, and the delegates are now speeding away to their missionary fields in all quarters of the globe. This latest conference will not be set down in the annals of the church history as settling any important question of polity or doctrine, but it will be known as an exceedingly harmonious session, in striking contrast in this respect with meetings of earlier years, when the proceedings were largely the record of the quarrels of angry factions.

"President Joseph Smith, the present head of the church, is a man of great natural ability, a good thinker and logical reasoner, and is besides endowed with that tact which marks the born leader of men. While the Saints trust to his leadership as implicitly as now, they will possibly avoid the many rocks upon which they may split, but when accident or death removes him, the change of leadership may involve the Latter Day Church in confusion and ruin.

"From first to last the present conference was harmonious. The revelations announced by President Smith at the conference of last year, held at Kirtland, Ohio, had settled all the questions which had vexed the church but one, that of setting bounds to the authority of district and branch presidents. That remaining cause for controversy was left unsettled by the recent session, and the next conference must decide it if revelation does not come opportunely in the meantime. For several days past the first presidency had been fasting and praying in anticipation of a revelation regarding the authority of district and branch presidents, but the days wore away without its coming. With unshaken faith the Saints granted the Spirit more time and postponed further consideration of the subject until the next conference.

"The session was marked by a number of so-called tongues and prophecies, as given in the reports published, but the Saints give these signs only passing attention as they are frequent occurrences among them. They say that revelations which are to be observed by them as commands from the Deity must come through President Smith, who is appointed to receive them."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

PRES. JOSEPH SMITH, up to this writing, (April 28th), remains at Independence, Missouri, seeking the removal of the cause of his neuralgia troubles—defective teeth—and we confidently hope he may meet with complete success and be relieved of an affliction from which he has suffered greatly, at times, during a number of years past.

Bro. Michael Lade wrote from Rawdon, Nova Scotia, the 18th inst., and spoke in high terms of the labors of Elders Briggs and Sheehy in that place last fall. He says the people seem ready to hear, and all are anxious that competent, spiritual elders come and labor among them.

Bro. Alexander McFarland, of West Burlington, Iowa, renews for HERALD of late and says: "We all remain firm in the church, although we have no branch here."

Bro. S. B. Kibler wrote us the 23d ult., that the Saints in and about Woodbine, Iowa, would organize a Sunday School April 29th, for which he ordered a package of Hopes, and he further says they intend to build a church soon. Bro. Charles Derry preached to attentive congregations there, Sunday the 22d ult.

Sister S. B. Morgan wrote 16th inst. from Sigel, Michigan, that eight have lately been added to the branch there. Bro. Levi Phelps had labored there of late with success, baptizing four persons, and has won the esteem of many. Sr. Morgan testifies to her having been speedily healed of God under the hands of Bro. Phelps, and she rejoices in the power and knowledge given of God in the gospel.

Brn. J. W. Wight and N. Stamm visited Lamoni friends a few days since conference, and both have gone forth to engage in preaching the kingdom of God in the fields appointed them.

Bro. and Sr. Heman C. Smith are visiting relatives and friends at Andover and Ridgeway, Missouri.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt came to this office the 25th ult., to engage in getting out the "Saints Harmony," and he proposes to push that work to its early completion.

Bro. James Green and his daughter Melissa, of Willow Creek, Gallatin county, Montana, and Sr. Thomas Reese, of Reese Creek, in the same county, have visited their Lamoni friends of late. We regret that that they are not numbered among our permanent citizens, and we hope they may be by and bye.

Lamoni and vicinity rejoices and prospers in the warm, gentle, refreshing rains that came April 26th to 28th, giving fresh and vigorous life to plant and tree and filling the heart of man with hope and gladness.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Does paragraph 25 of section 17, Doctrine and Covenants, apply to district conferences?

Ans.—We understand it relates to all the conferences of the church. Paragraph 13, of the same section, relates, manifestly, more directly to "district" conferences, for the reason that the elders are instructed thereby "to meet in conference once in three months, or from time to time, as said conferences shall direct or appoint." And it is impracticable for the General or Mission Conferences to meet every "three months," or anything near that.

Q.—What would be appropriate when teaching a child to pray?

A.—Teach it to ask for what it can comprehend as being for its good. Simplicity and propriety should be observed always.

Q.—Can any other than an Elder be a secretary for a district or district conference according to law?

A.—Yes; but no one, unless he be an elder, can be legally a Church Recorder. (See D. C. 17: 25). And yet we think it best, all other things being equal, that all Church secretaries be active Church officials, for the reason that they are supposed to be posted in church matters and methods.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Let our faith which in darkness and coldness has lain Revive with the warmth and the brightness again,
And in blooming of flower and budding of tree
The symbols and types of our destiny see."

WE bespeak for this poem a careful reading.

"JUDGE NOT."

Oh! man, judge not thy brother! though there come
Dark rumors wafted on each wind that blows;
Though to defend, his very friends be dumb,
Add not thy weight of influence to his foes;
The whisperer of a slander must be wrong,
The subject may be—'tis not thine to scan;
And surely none who owes account to God,
Should take it harshly of his fellow-man.

Judge not thy brother! though the case be clear,
Tho' thine own eyes have seen, thine own ears heard,
Though of the facts thy reason is convinced,
Yet speak not lightly one condemning word;
Till thou canst dive into the heart's deep cells,
Track the dark paths by each lone spirit trod,
And trace each blending motive to its source,
Judge not thy brother, leave him to his God.

E'en though he be the basest of the base,
Or she, thy sister, lowest of the vile,
Cast out as evil, loathed and spurned aside,
Can thy heart frame no pitying plea the while?
Thou knowest not what varying forms of ill,
Grief, want, temptation, may have shaped their lot,
Pause then—and till thou canst weigh these aright,
Pity thy fellows, help, but judge them not.

* * * * *

It may be too that on their dread account,
In the just judgment of an eye Divine,
Full many pleas of palliation lie,
That make their darkest errors light to thine.
Our souls are framed diversely,—there are some Whom God hath posted in the battle's van;
Most fierce their bosom foes, most marked their falls;
Thou art at ease—judge not thy fellow-man!

Is it a Christian that hath done the wrong?
And wilt thou censure whom his God forgives?
Oh! man, bethink thee, that above yon sky,
Pleading for such as he, thy Savior lives,
Covering the sins of which He bore the pain!
It is the hateful work of hell's dark king,
Th' accuser of the Saints, to scan their steps,
And count their falls—which art thou following?

It thou art Christ's, thou knowest the bitter strife
Of the new nature, with the carnal will;
Oft hast thou fallen, oft disgraced thy Lord,
Yet he restores thee, and upholds thee still.
Thyself a pensioner at Mercy's gate,
Standing in strength vouchsafed thee from above;
Surely no word should ever pass thy lips,
Of others' fallings, save in pitying love.

Pray then, and strive, that all these idle thoughts,
This worse than idle talk, of others' deeds,
May cease, absorbed in a still growing sense.
Of thine own errors—thine own soul's deep deeds;
To learn these, and to win from grace their cure,
Is work enough for this life's narrowing span;
Walk with thy God, humbled, because forgiven;
And oh! judge not thine erring fellow-man!

—Service for the King.

ALLENDALE, Mo., April 18th.

Sister Frances:—I am in favor of sister Eleanor's plan and suggestions for the united prayers of the sisters, and I feel confident if we should adopt her plan and make it a resolution and put forth our united efforts and let all be done with an eye single to the glory of our heavenly Father, we would surely be blessed and accomplish a great deal of good. As a people we have great faith in prayer, for it is written, the prayer of the righteous availeth much; and now, sisters, ere we begin the good work so kindly suggested, if we so decide let each and all of us so establish ourselves in righteousness that we may on every occasion be worthy to have our prayer answered, and should we endeavor to pray unitedly let us remember that a great deal depends upon promptness and punctuality. Hoping to hear remarks from many of the sisters on this subject, I remain in gospel bonds,

HELEN ACKLEY.

HASTINGS, Australia, March 15th.

Dear Sister Frances:—I was in Geelong when the American mail arrived bringing Autumn Leaves, and did not return till the mail had gone out again; and now number two has arrived. I thought the first number was just splendid, but the second is, I really believe, a little better. Sister Annie Grayden's husband thinks you paid a very high compliment to the young people of the church, by preparing such a periodical for them; says he likes it better than anything he has read yet. Yes, we all are pleased, more than pleased with them; and I heartily congratulate you on the success of your undertaking, and feel deeply grateful to the contributors for furnishing such a variety of "good things" for the mind to feed upon. This "last born" is still another witness to the increase of knowledge attained by many whom we are proud to call brothers and sisters. And as I perused its pages I read several lessons concerning the writers and the editor, for such productions, I well know, can not be gathered up in a moment. Therefore I learned that there must have been a preparatory work going on within them, a work of diligent thought and study to acquire knowledge. And not only that but a work of self-denial and perseverance, to take the time and trouble, in the midst of busy life, when perhaps the spirit is weighed down with care and anxiety, or perhaps wearied by over work and sadly in need of a few hours of relaxation, to select from their different store-houses, and prepare something fresh and new to go forth to the people. All this is contained in the fair pages of our new magazine besides the choice editorial therein contained.

And now let me ask the readers how much they would have been benefitted if Sr. Frances had only thought or spoken of the need of such a magazine as Autumn Leaves, and stopped right there without making the exertion to bring it to pass. Is there not a lesson for many of us in this? Who can tell the good that will be accomplished through the agency of Autumn Leaves? Then shall we not follow the noble example set before us, and by our exertions, bring to pass much righteousness also? Who has read Autumn Leaves or the Herald, or other equally good works, whose mind has not been in a measure inspired and ere they were aware have ceased to read, and are lost in thought: thoughts all unorganized, thoughts they may be, yet only require an exertion to catch and arrange them and send them forth to be a lasting benefit to many and encouragement to those who are so vigorously pushing on the good work.

I, like many others no doubt, wish to lend a helping hand to the noble band of workers in this cause, and yet I really shrink from having anything that I could offer placed side by side with the valuable matter that is selected from the different store-houses of knowledge and so well prepared and set forth. But how shall we walk if we never creep? or how shall we run if we never walk?

We have just returned from our good bye visit with the Saints of the Queensferry branch, dear, kind-hearted, loving Saints! How our hearts ached to leave them! I can not realize that I am never to meet them again on the shores of time. It is sad to part with those we love, and yet I would rather that than not to have known them. We have been mutually benefitted by each others' society; have we not, dear Saints? And though time and distance may separate us, yet in spirit we will often meet and commune together and I hope the faces we left bathed in tears as we pushed from the shores of Western Port Bay, we will find beaming with joy when we all land on the other shore beyond the dark river. We are making all haste to be ready to leave Victoria by the first of April, and, ere many months elapse, hope to see our own native land loom up to our gaze, and with joy to clasp again our dear children. How quick the time sped past; but oh, is that all! How have we used the passing hours? and what shall the record be? These are solemn thoughts. This we know, the record is kept and we must meet it—whether for weal or for woe. As each mission draws to a close, it reminds us forcibly of the close of life, the one great mission; and what shall the record be?

SISTER EMMA.

KINGSLEY, Iowa, April 5th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—The tears fill my eyes when I read the good and interesting letters from the sisters. I have just been reading sister Gertie's letter. May God bless her, and may she ever walk in the path marked out by the Savior and continue faithful unto the end. I know she is a faithful worker in the Lord's vineyard. I have been some eight months in the church. I shall never forget the day Bro. Wight led me into the waters of baptism. The brother has done a great deal of good here. My hope is that I may lead others to come into the fold and realize the work they could do for the Master, also what happiness they could enjoy. There is nothing so grand as giving up the pleasures of the world, in order to serve the Lord, and for the enjoyment of this great latter day work.

Although we are despised of the world we know if we do our duty and our hearts are filled with love to God, that "we are precious in his eyes."

We have the Book of Mormon and the book of Doctrine and Covenants. My mother surprised us with the "Autumn Leaves," which is a splendid paper. We also take the Herald.

Most of Ma's family belong to the church; my prayer is that the day will come when I can say all belong. We have fifteen members here, and we meet together often and have prayer and testimony meetings; also Sunday School. It makes me sad when I see so many who know so little about the Church of Latter Day Saints, that they even do not know that we believe in the Bible. Thank the heavenly Father there are some here yet that are willing to investigate the work. I hope and pray that in time they will obey the truth. My soul yearns for them to belong to and know of the work.

Pray for me, that I may grow stronger in the faith as I grow older, and be more able to do my duty, and cause others to come to the light.

May the Saints everywhere be guided by the Spirit of truth, is my prayer.

Your sister in the bonds of truth,
VIOLET JORDAN.

PANAMA, IOWA, April 4th.

Dear Sister Frances:—It has long been my desire to write a few words for the Home Column. If we never put forth an effort in doing what we can to help roll on this work, how can we expect to find that rest which is promised to the faithful, when we are called to give an account of the deeds done in the body. No matter whether old or young, great or small, there is work for each to do no other one can do for them; and why not commence while young, for who will take the places of the aged when they are gone—as goes all the earth—if not we? Not only this, but ought we not to prove ourselves Saints indeed, as well as word? Every one would answer Yes, I am sure. I know there are many young Saints who feel as I do, that they can say nothing to edify any one, and give way to older ones. I would say to such, Let us awaken and perform every duty that is required of us with an eye single to the glory of God, that we may be blessed of him more abundantly.

The Herald is our only preacher, with the exceptions of a few occasions when some of the elders have preached for us the past winter. I so much miss the privilege of meeting with Saints. Oh, what a glorious meeting it will be when the earth is purified and we no sin nor sorrow shall know, if we are only faithful.

I remain your sister in the one faith.

NORA WHITE.

Sister Frances:—As a great deal has already been said about the training and government of the family, I will enter only one department of it, that is educating the daughters to household duties. To me it seems like a grave responsibility which rests alone on the mother—What must your daughters come to after they leave your parental care? How are you training them? Are you taking every care and pains to show them their position in life? Are you teaching them to perform every duty well, that you know they will have to do? Are you teaching them in all the various departments of home duties? Are you teaching them to be clean and frugal; to be neat and tidy; to be kind and affectionate to their companions and offspring if it be their lot to be thus situated? If you are doing all this you may feel assured you are doing your whole duty to them, and thus fitting a generation of daughters that in after years can not fail to be called blessed. My observation has been that mothers are not all doing this, thus exciting my sympathies for the young sisters. Mothers, will you take heed? Who of you has a kind and dutiful son that you would want to see join his future destiny with a young lady who knows nothing save to play the piano, dress handsomely, walk gracefully, flirt a little occasionally, and do as she pleases generally, and is devoid of the least knowledge whatever of what constitutes a genuine good wife? Would or could you love her as you do your good son? I think I can hear you all exclaim in concert, No. It is true there are exceptional cases, where young ladies of this kind make good wives and mothers, but I only speak in a general way. There is also the other side of the picture to look at; but as I promised to only enter one department I will let the other be canvassed by someone else more efficient than myself. My faith and hopes are rooted and grounded in this latter day work, and my prayers are for its spread and final triumphant success.

I am your sister in the one faith,
ELLA HOUSEMAN.

LAMONI, IOWA, April 7th.

Dear Sister Frances:—I often, very often, think of the future welfare of our church, and am hoping and praying for peace and prosperity to come to our people because they so much need it. And we as a people have borne so many trials, our thoughts often wander from us and we are shown what will come to us if we are only faithful. It is now about three years since I was one day thinking and wondering what would come to the church, when my thoughts passed from me and I saw a very wide country spread out before me. I thought, "It is Montana;" then I saw it dotted and covered with small houses and many industries carried on there. I saw the smoke of peace curling from their chimney tops, and the thought came to me, They are a peaceful and happy people. They were not rich and they were not poor, but happy and contented. As this view passed before me it passed on to Utah and at last, as it seemed to me, it settled over Salt Lake City; then I saw as it were, a great sieve, which raised very gradually, carrying with it a terrible black cloud of smoke, and this gradually passed to the south and west of the city, and left the place below where the sieve had been, quiet, and a spirit of rest had come where grief and strife and wickedness had been.

A. SISTER.

RIVERSIDE, California.

Dear Sisters:—About two years ago I lost a dear little grand-daughter, who had one of the sunniest dispositions I ever saw. She was always singing some little songs like "Precious Jewels" or "There is a bright crown for me,"—Sunday School pieces that her mother had taught her. She could sing almost everything of that kind, also play on the organ, although but six years old. We felt it was a hard trial to give her up. The day before she left us, I had been up with her almost all night, and still could not become reconciled to her death; and I had a dream, and, Oh, such a sweet comforting sight was opened to my vision! It seemed that my youngest daughter and myself were on a journey, walking, on a dark and rough road; and we could hardly get along, the road was so rough. We met some people coming towards us, but our way seemed like a long, dark, narrow lane. As we were holding each other up and stumbling along, there was a bright light flashed out over our heads. Mattie said to me, "Mamma, did you see the light?" I said, "Yes." Just then there was another light more bright and glorious than the first; and my eyes were opened so I could see in the spirit world, and see the departed spirits, as they left this world, clothed in pure white—fleecey white drapery floated around them, and I could see many floating away heavenward. All seemed so peaceful and happy! Their faces shone so brightly, and sweet smiles were on their faces. The thought came to me while I was beholding their happy journey through the air, (for there were many happy spirits taking their flight from this world), that I might see the gates ajar, as I had read that book years ago, when I was a little girl. I looked more closely and just beyond the clouds I could see a great pillar like a gate partly open, and the spirits entering in. Then I looked eastward and saw the bed where our dear little one was lying, and all the friends standing around to see the spirit leave the body with us, which was all that remained for us. Those that stood around the bed were dressed in colors—they had not put on the white robes yet.

There was much to comfort and cheer our hearts in this dream. May we so live that we may come forth in the morning of the first resurrection to meet the dear ones that have gone before.

Correspondence.

LEWISTON, Ill., April 11th.

Brother Blair:—I had the pleasure of reading Dr. Foster's letter in the Herald to-day; and although I had read it once before some years since, I did not take the notice I did to-day. I recollect the doctor well. I passed his place of business twice every day for about a year and a half. I knew him to be a prominent man in Nauvoo. I also knew William and Wilson Law. I was present at the last preaching done by Joseph the Martyr; and recollect a circumstance that occurred there very well. There was a very large audience, William and Wilson Law, and a Dr. Cole, occupied the stand while Joseph was speaking. Doctor Cole was a very tall man, with but one eye. He sat between the Laws. I was not eight feet away from them. I was in a sapling about four feet from one end of the stand, so that I could see and hear all that was said and done. I was then in my fourteenth year. After Joseph had been speaking some time he spoke of his days being numbered; he said, "My days are numbered." He knew that he would not be with them much longer, and turning about half around, facing me at the time, he looked towards the congregation, but his left hand was towards the three men; at the same time calling the attention of all present, he said,— "You all look upon these men as being in high standing in the church; but these men will be the death of me." The entire congregation, it seemed to me, commenced to weep, also the three men in the stand; William and Wilson Law and Dr. Cole. I learned afterwards that the three left Nauvoo in a hasty manner. Joseph also stated that polygamy had crept into the church; and he called it an abominable doctrine, saying that it must be put down. However, I do not remember John Taylor rising and saying, "I will help you, Bro. Joseph, to put it down;" nor any one else. But Joseph said it was of the devil, and must be rooted out of the church, by all means. Three weeks from that day he was, with Hyrum, dead. And the report was that the Laws, with Dr. Cole, Chauncy Higbee and Dr. Foster had made their boasts of accomplishing the death of Joseph.

I am so glad to read the letter from Mr. Foster. It does me good; it brings old times back again. Higbee was our Circuit Judge here about sixteen years. He knew my faith and was always glad to see me, and was always very sociable. Whether he knew that I knew him in Nauvoo, or not, I can not say. The last time he was here before he died, he came to see me, was very anxious to know how I was prospering, and appeared well pleased when I told him I was doing real well. I always thought he had deep remorse of conscience that nothing could wipe out, and he could not help respecting Latter Day Saints. I thought he felt relieved when talking to me. He was very good to Bro. Mark H. Forscutt while here during a term of court. But what I say concerning Bro. Joseph, William and Wilson Law and Dr. Cole is correct; and no doubt there are others living to-day that will say the same. Dr. Foster's letter was a waker, and when I read it the old grove in front of the temple came into view in a short time. I am so glad that it gives the lie to William Law's spleen against the prophet.

Yours in hope,

T. F. STAFFORD.

HORTON, Kansas, April, 18th.

Editors of the Herald:—We would like to say a few words to our would be friends in relation to sending us tracts, pamphlets, etc.

We as Saints having become rooted and grounded in the truth, have no use for such folly as we find in these scribblings of wandering stars, or clouds that hold no rain. (Such ones as Brown, of Newton, Kansas). A few years ago they came thick and fast; but since order begins to reign and truth is in the hands of men who dare speak out, these blind guides have, one by one, disappeared, and left the field to the sons of God.

These greedy fellows once knew the good way of the Lord, but wandered away into places where the good shepherd did not call them, and fed until poisoned with false doctrine and whims. We had one of these tracts sent here a few days ago which we took as an insult. The idea of a good man pretending to be a friend to his neighbors who gets up a dinner of poison to feed them on. Is he not a liar? Is he not one of those of whom Jesus told us to let alone? We had one of those got up by Mr. Brown sent here; but it was identified before it was opened by one of the elders, and no sooner did Elder Wake and wife begin to read it than they threw it to the waste; it was no food for a healthy man.

Give us the priesthood from the angels to Joseph and on down as God and not mere man has given, and with that the law and order of heaven. The word of God in the Bible, Book of Mormon and other books God has given and will give. And these tract writers can pass us every day and night; we have no use for them or their books. We use them for kindling fires. By this let all men know we have no use for such folly. Give us the church and the sayings of Joseph down to the day he was shot. Yes, fools may laugh and make derision over the wise legislation of the martyr. They will only feel the pang that the poor foolish rich man did who could not respect and love the poor man at his gate; yet when he died he was glad to call on him for favors. As the heavens are higher than the earth, so is Joseph higher in honor, glory, majesty and power above such folly as is found in this last trump of the sect-pedigree-Brown, & Co.

I don't believe it to be the duty of Saints to read their dirty works. Let us confide in God's word and the general policy of him whom God has placed at the head of his church. Build on the rock, and Zion will arise and Babylon will fall.

Yours, etc.,

L. D. HICKEY AND OTHERS.

QUEENSFERRY, Western Port,
Australia, Feb. 18th.

Dear Herald:—With pleasure we look forward to your arrival, for there is much good to be gained by reading your pages. What beautiful ideas we can gather from all the different thoughts expressed. It makes us feel proud of our position, and gladdens our hearts to know that we are privileged to enjoy so many blessings.

I have just finished reading a piece from sister Emma, and feel to say with her, that as Christ is the living Head of the church, how then can the Herald be aught but good when the church is its source. The Spirit of God is certainly with his people, enlightening them so that they may be able to impart knowledge to all around. All the letters seem to be the same—all tending to show us what obedience to the laws of God will do. We seem to be lifted from the world altogether in thought. What a grand thing if our minds could stay above the vain things of this world. But we are so weak in ourselves, and there are such hindrances in our pathway in life which makes us go on slowly. The Saints in all places seem to be alive to the work, and are trying to do their duty. For my part, I am trying, and only wish I could put my thoughts into words as I would like, to show what happiness can be enjoyed in being a Latter Day Saint. When we look around us, on all sides there is tumult and strife in the religious circles, telling us that the end is near, and also the coming of our Savior. How comforting to know that, no matter what may come, we, if we are faithful, have access to a throne of grace, to ask and be protected from all harm and danger. We feel truly to say that "It is good to be a Saint in latter days."

It is sad to think that through prejudice so many good, honest people are hindered from obeying the gospel. But we must not be in a hurry. The time will come when it will be too late for some, and how sorry we will feel for them, knowing what they have lost.

Our conference is coming on and we look forward to a time of rejoicing, for a goodly number of the Saints from all parts will be with us. "In union is strength." We expect something extra good. Bro. and Sr. Smith, Bro. and Sr. Burton, and Sr. Addie will be with us, so we may well look forward to the conference. This is Bro. Burton's last visit, and I can truly say we will feel sad in parting with them. There is this comfort, that if we never meet here again, we have the hope of meeting again when Christ comes to call his elect from the four corners of the earth. My prayer is, that we may all have our portion there. Our desires are good at all times, but we are so weak in ourselves that it does not take much to make us turn from the paths of duty. Still we will try to do our best that we may, when the time comes, receive our crowns with those who have lived in accordance with the word of God. May God help us that we may be strengthened and willing to do whatever is our duty. Our reward is sure if we are faithful."

MILAN, Mo., April 14th.

Dear Saints:—I left home in Texas on the 26th of last January to go to Hickman, Nebraska, where my mother lived, whom I had not seen for twenty-three years. I met her on the 5th of February and found her well. The Christians opened their church to me and I preached several discourses to large audiences. The people said if I would lay aside Bro. Joseph as a prophet they would be with me. That I could not do and believe the Bible. I administered to one lady who was down with heart disease. She was healed. I left Nebraska on the 7th of March for home in Texas. I got home on the 11th, and the second of April I received a telegram that mother was about to die. I got there on the fourth, she was dead, we buried her the 5th. I then came to this country where I found sister Mary Montgomery, who was baptized in Wayne county, Ohio, about the year 1832 by Robert Rathbun, who traveled with Seymore Brunston. She is strong in the faith. I will preach some here as soon as my lungs get better. The prospects are good here. I will thank some brother who will let me know where Bro. William Bozarth's address is.

HENRY GRIM.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 4th.

Dear Brother Blair:—Last Sunday, (April 1st,) was the, or one of the happiest days of my life. I enjoyed the Spirit of the Lord to a greater degree than I had ever before in my whole life at any one time, excepting on the day of my confirmation, which has been a confirmation, a making sure to me, all the way through. On the occasion I speak, (Sunday last), I was called to Oakland to baptize two ladies. I felt how weak I was, but trusting in the Lord with much prayer I determined that where duty called I would not be wanting. So I arose early and prepared to be there at the morning preaching service. The baptisms were to be at one p. m. You can judge of my surprise, when I went into the church and took my seat among the congregation, to have the president call me by name to come and speak for them. I trembled for a moment and then I felt I would be sustained if I only did my part the Lord would certainly do His. When I took the stand I hardly knew where to begin. The words found in John 12: 47-50 came to me, also the 17th verse of the 17th of John, and the concluding words of the 6th verse of the 5th chapter 1 John. I read from John 12: 47-50 and began to speak; the other quotations I have given came to me with much force, and I was enraptured—as it were—in a halo of light. I had not the slightest fear, nor did I have to wait one moment for words, they came like a flood to me, and I felt that all my effort to obtain the Spirit of the Master had not been in vain, and I went on speaking to the conclusion, thanking God for the perfect peace I felt, and not only peace, but security. At the appointed time I led into the waters of baptism two estimable ladies, both of which are now in favor with our Heavenly Father.

er, and I hope and believe will be saved in the celestial kingdom. Sunday was the best day's work I ever did in my life, because its reward will not fade away nor grow less with the using. I learned much from Bro. Joseph, God bless him, and I treasure those things in my heart. I am not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ. God bless you.

PORT HURON, Mich., April 18th.

Dear Herald:—In the spring of 1884 the diphtheria was very bad here, and it seized five of my children in a severe way. We did the best we could for them. The neighbors wanted us to doctor. We told them we did not want any. Some one told the Board of Health and a doctor was sent. When he came he asked my wife if we had any sick children. She replied Yes. He asked who was doctoring them, and she said "No one," and that we did not want any doctor. He said he was sent by the Board of Health to examine them. We told him he could examine them, but that we did not want his medicine. He pronounced the disease diphtheria and put a card on the house in large letters—"Diphtheria." We waited on the children the best we could. One little girl grew worse, and we sent for Elder J. J. Cornish. He came and administered to my children and the Lord raised them up to the astonishment of the neighbors. Then some said they did not have the diphtheria or they would not have got well so quick.

Yours in the one faith.

CORTLAND, Illinois, April 8th.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Feeling spiritually blessed I thought I would pen a few lines to the Herald, not intended for the Mother's Home Column. Having felt thus blessed many times I have attempted to write, thinking even my testimony might cheer and encourage some loved one; then would the curtain of doubt and fear be raised for a moment, and I would see what I had written in love and faith being closely scanned by the eye of the critic, and I would feel that soon I too would be a target for the sharp-shooters; then my heart would fail me, and down would go my pen. But in thinking of the foolish servant who so carefully guarded the one talent and was blamed, I feel that perhaps I may not escape though I remain silent. Therefore, I take new courage and trusting in the spirit that prompts me to write, I do so with good intent.

Many times in reading the precious Herald I have been inclined to oppose what to my mind seemed to be erroneous. In reading the article from the pen of my brothers, "Woman, the Weaker Vessel," I took my pen and wrote what to my mind was a kind and friendly reply. I could not boast of having the best talent in the church to back me, and I now feel thankful I never sent it to the office. There was no scorn nor contempt exhibited by me toward those whose opinions differ from mine. I love this latter day work too dearly to oppose in scorn those whose views differ from mine on the subject of religion. Surely we are not all in the unity of the faith, we do not all see eye to eye. There are often wrong impressions drawn by those who oppose. I feel that the brothers who wrote that article had never a thought of slurring woman. Said brothers both belong to our Cortland branch. They are both faithful workers in the cause of Christ; each ever bears a faithful testimony to the truth of the gospel. I have never heard a brother or sister in our branch criticise one of the writers of the Bible because they said, or did many things that we believe to be in opposition to the teachings of the gospel that we have embraced.

I have a living testimony in my heart of the truth of this latter day work. I have been blest many times, and have seen many lovely visions. Once I saw your father and yourself sitting in the bright clouds of heaven, surrounded with the Saints of Zion. I heard a voice saying to the Saints, "Behold the chosen of the Lord," pointing to young Joseph, "to reveal the new name to those who are worthy to receive."

My prayer is that with all the Saints I may live worthy to bear the new name.

Your sister in the gospel,

FIDELIA CALHOON.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 1st.

Bro. Blair:—I never forget the time you and I met at San Bernardino, California. I there made the happiest move of my life, and that was joining the Church of Latter Day Saints. Although I have had many crosses and losses, and ups and downs in life since that, yet this I may safely say, that I do not believe I have had one of these losses and crosses because of my righteousness. The time seems to have come when no one needs to suffer much because of their righteousness, or because of being a Latter Day Saint, if they live just as God wants them to live. How any Saint can live without taking the church papers and knowing of the welfare of the church, I can not understand, unless it is that they love something else more.

I would be very glad to hear from you personally. My health at times, is not what it should be, but in the future I expect to wake up the people in this section with the sound of the true gospel.

Yours in bonds,

L. M. SOLLENBERGER.

EAST LAKE, Mich., April 17th.

Brother Blair:—When I was young, in the days of Joseph the prophet, I lived in Wayne county, Michigan. There I heard Sidney Rigdon, Strang and one Smith preach, and my mother became a believer in the gospel taught by the Latter Day Saints. Since that time I have been wandering like the children of Israel in the wilderness, going from one church to another seeking for knowledge and the true gospel as it was left us by our Savior, but found it not until last fall I heard Bro. Cornish preach at Free Soil, Mason county, Michigan. Then I became satisfied that what he taught was the work of God, and was baptized by him and confirmed a member with the Saints. Since that time I have received great light and have been wonderfully blessed.

Now comes the test of my faith in the healing power of Christ. On the sixth day of February I was taken with a severe chill, and knowing that when the fever would come on I would be unconscious, I put in my time telling my family what I wished them to do providing I should be very sick, and should die. The disease proved to be pneumonia of the lungs. But contrary to my request they sent for a doctor (one of the best) in the city of Manistee. I continued to grow worse until finally they had a council of doctors, who decided that I could not live. They then sent for my friend and brother Jacob Kaplinger and Bro. Shelley from the town of Sherman, and on Monday, at nine o'clock, the doctor was here and said I could not live longer than noon. But before noon the elders came, and while they were administering to me I came to myself for a moment so I knew brethren Kaplinger and Shelley, and knew what they were doing. I began to get better from that hour. My folks tell me there were a number of the neighbors in at the time to see me die, and that the Congregational minister and wife were also there at the time. I hear that the minister and others admit that I was healed by the power of God. I am now quite well. Now, brothers and sisters who are scattered over the land, take new courage and put new trust in God; take him at his work; pray more earnestly for the faith which was once delivered to the Saints. I thank God that I am healed and have this privilege of writing and telling you what the good Lord has done for me.

SOLOMON BRUCE.

RICEVILLE, Indiana, April 1st.

Dear Herald:—About fourteen years ago I obeyed the gospel, and I do not regret it, but feel thankful that my eyes were opened. I moved away from the branch two years after, and could not meet with the Saints, being sixty miles from them. While thus alone I grew cold to the cause of Christ; but thanks be to God-I never denied the faith, and hope that I may never grow cold to the cause again. Here I find some of my brethren and sisters still contending for the great cause of eternal life. Brother Moses Scott left here yesterday after preaching several discourses, the result was five were baptized and a branch organized called the Riceville branch. Considerable interest is being manifested by others who we trust will be added ere long. The Saints and outsiders seem to be anxious that Bro. Moses may be sent back here. Should any traveling elder chance to pass through Southern Indiana on the the Air Line rail road, and stop with the Saints of this place, they will be thankfully received.

Your brother in Christ,

JOHN CRITCHFIELD.

WILSONBURG, Ills., April 17th.

Dear Herald:—Brother H. H. Robinson was with us at Chester, Illinois, about ten days last December. We had splendid meetings and the gospel was set forth in power, so much so that many were astonished, and some were almost persuaded, while others said, "We never heard such preaching." Since then myself and family, six of us, have moved up here. Bro. Willis Tousley and family, four of them baptized have gone to Independence, Missouri, so you see our Chester branch of seventeen is reduced to seven, with brother Joseph Tousley as presiding priest. I have got the people to know what I am, and what I represent. There had been two Brighamite elders in this neighborhood preaching about a year ago, and of course I have to show them the difference between the base and the true coin. I want brother H. H. Robinson, to come if possible and assist me to make a good start here.

Your fellow laborer,

NEPHITE RECORD.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

DURING the past sixty years, has the above ancient record of the early inhabitants of America, under the caption of the "Book of Mormon," been a source of agitation in the so-called religious arena. Catholic priest and "Orthodox" minister alike have sent out their shafts of wrath against both the book and the man who, by divine appointment, introduced it to a gainsaying and unworthy age. The lecturer hath waxed vehement in the delivery of his hypotheses of proof or argument, while the debater has raked and scraped, in every nook and corner, for material out of which to spin a tale to defame, and to create doubt and unbelief among the people. Both the book-maker and pamphleteer have exhibited much pertinacity in collating without any regard to truthfulness of data, whatever and wherever a screed could be found, to weave into a plausible story against the character of the book and those believing it to be a revelation from God.

The object of this paper is to give a short, but comprehensive account of the coming forth, and the means of translating, the Book of Mormon. And perhaps it would be as well for me to explain the reason why I undertake the task.

First, far and wide, will continue the attack made to destroy the influence and doctrine of the Saints, which is so closely united that when war is made thereon, the true Latter Day Saint can not afford to keep silent, and still retain faith in the work of God. And in the very nature of things, it must be apparent to all thinking persons within the church, that the burden of defense is fast falling upon the young men, inexperienced in the church history, which history is not to be found in all parts of the world where this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached, I therefore may become useful to my co-laborers in gathering up items of value, bringing the same into the possession of all the Herald readers.

Second. During the past few months I have discovered how little the people of Utah know concerning this record, which should be the "Magna Charta" of their religion, and how utterly unfit they are to arise to the exigency, when immediate and intelligent defense are important.

Third. Not until after my arrival in Utah was I aware that any Latter Day Saint entertained an opinion that the translation was accomplished by any other means than the Urim and Thummim.

Fourth. The lectures and "Golden Bible," by Rev. M. T. Lamb, Baptist missionary in Utah, has occupied some of my time and attention, and caused me to search after evidence relative to this interesting and important topic. I therefore feel justified in presenting this my compilation, hopeful of some little good.

As early as 1838, many false reports obtained with those fighting against the restored gospel, and in that year Joseph Smith began writing up his own history, and I think it fitting, as an introduction, that I make an extract therefrom, to wit:

"Some time in the second year after our removal to Manchester, there was in the place where we lived an unusual excitement on the subject of religion. It commenced with the Methodists, but soon became general among all the sects in that region of country; indeed the whole district of country seemed affected by it, and great multitudes united themselves to the different religious parties, which created no small stir and division amongst the people, some crying, 'Lo, here,' and some 'Lo there;' some were contending for the Methodist faith, some for the Presbyterian and some for the Baptists. For notwithstanding the great love which the converts for these different faiths expressed at the time of their conversion, and the great zeal manifested by the respective clergy, who were active in getting up and promoting this extraordinary scene of religious feeling, in order to have everybody converted, as they were pleased to call it, let them join what sect they pleased; yet when the converts began to file off, some to one party, and some to another, it was seen that the seemingly good feelings of both the priests and the converts were more pretended than real, for a scene of great confusion and bad feeling ensued—priest contending against priest, and convert against convert, so that all the good feelings, one for another, if they ever had any, were entirely lost in a strife of words, and a contest about opinions.

"I was at this time in my fifteenth year. My father's family was proselyted to the Presbyterian faith, and four of them joined that church, namely, my mother, Lucy, my brothers Hyrum, Samuel Harrison, and my sister Sophronia. During this time of great excitement, my mind was called up to serious reflection and great uneasiness; but though my feelings were deep and often pungent, still I kept myself aloof from all those parties, though I attended their several meetings as often as occasion would permit; but in process of time my mind became somewhat partial to the Methodist sect, and I felt some desire to be united with them, but so great was the confusion and strife among the different denominations, that it was impossible for a person, young as I was, and so unacquainted with men and things, to come to any certain conclusion who was right, and who was wrong. My mind at different times was greatly excited, the cry and tumult was so great and incessant. The Presbyterians were most decided against the Baptists and Methodists, and used all their powers of either reason or sophistry to prove their errors, or at least, to make the people think they were in error. On the other hand, the Baptists and Methodists, in their turn, were equally zealous to establish their own tenets, and disprove all others.

"In the midst of this war of words and tumult of opinions, I often said to myself, What is to be done? Who of all these parties are right? or, are they all wrong? If any one of them be right, which is it, and how shall I know it? While I was laboring under the extreme difficulties, caused by the contests of these parties of religionists, I was one day reading the Epistle of James, first chapter and fifth verse, which reads: 'If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth unto all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him.' Never did any passage of scripture come with more power to the heart of man than this did at this time to mine. It seemed to enter with great force into every feeling of my heart. I reflected on it again and again, knowing that if any person needed wisdom from God, I did; for how to act I did not know, and unless I could get more wisdom than I then had, would never know; for the teachers of religion of the different sects understood the same passage so differently as to destroy all confidence in settling the question by an appeal to the Bible. At length I came to the conclusion that I must either remain in darkness and confusion, or else I must do as James directs, that is, ask of God. I at length came to the determination to 'ask of God,' concluding that if he gave wisdom to them that lacked wisdom, and would give liberally and not upbraid, I might venture. So, in accordance with this my determination to ask of God, I retired to the woods to make the attempt. It was on the morning of a beautiful clear day, early in the spring of eighteen hundred and twenty. It was the first time in my life that I had made such an attempt, for amidst all my anxieties I had never as yet made the attempt to pray vocally. After I had retired into the place where I had previously designed to go, having looked around me and finding myself alone, I kneeled down and began to offer up the desire of my heart to God. I had scarcely done so, when immediately I was seized upon by some power which entirely overcome me, and had such astonishing influence over me as to bind my tongue so that I could not speak. Thick darkness gathered around me, and it seemed to me for a time as if I were doomed to sudden destruction. But exerting all my powers to call upon God to deliver me out of the power of this enemy which had seized upon me; and at the very moment when I was ready to sink into despair and abandon myself to destruction, not to an imaginary ruin, but to the power of some actual being from the unseen world, who had such a marvelous power as I had never before felt in my being.—just at this moment of great alarm, I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me. It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the enemy which held me bound. When the light rested upon me, I saw two personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said, (pointing to the other), 'This is my beloved Son, hear him.'

"My object in going to enquire of the Lord was to know which of all the sects was right, that I might know which to join. No sooner, therefore, did I get possession of myself, so as to be able to speak, than I asked the personages who stood above me in the light, which of all the sects was right (for at this time it had never entered into my heart that all were wrong), and which I should join. I was answered that I must join none of them, for they were all wrong, and the personage who addressed me said, 'that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt, they draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me; they teach for doctrine the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof.' He again forbade me to join with any of them; and many other things did he say unto me which I can not write at this time. When I came to myself again, I found myself lying on my back looking up into heaven.

"Some few days after I had this vision, I happened to be in company with one of the Methodist preachers, who was very active in the before-mentioned religious excitement, and conversing with him on the subject of religion, I took occasion to give him an account of the vision which I had had. I was greatly surprised at his behavior; he treated my communication not only lightly, but with great contempt, saying it was all of the devil, that there were no such things as visions or revelations in these days; that all such things had ceased with the apostles, and that there never would be any more of them. I soon found, however, that my telling the story had excited a great deal of prejudice against me among professors of religion, and was the cause of great persecution, which continued to increase; and though I was an obscure boy, only between fourteen and fifteen years of age, and my circumstances in life such as to make a boy of no consequence in the world, yet men of high standing would take notice sufficient to excite the public mind against me, and create a hot persecution, and this was common among all the sects; all united to persecute me. It has often caused me serious reflection, both then and since, how very strange it was that an obscure boy, of a little over fourteen years of age, and one too, who was doomed to the necessity of obtaining a scanty maintenance by his daily labor, should be thought a character of sufficient importance to attract the attention of the great ones of the most popular sects of the day, so as to create in them a spirit of the hottest persecution and reviling. But strange or not, so it was, and was often cause of great sorrow to myself. However it was, nevertheless, a fact that I had had a vision."—Pearl of Great Price, pp. 36-39.

The straightforwardness in the recital of this first vision and what brought it about, told in such a candid method that it does not need explanation or argument; virtually becomes the groundwork upon which rests the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the establishing of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Likewise the honest expressions therein are calculated to remove prejudice and all suspicion of fraud or deception. The only thing contained therein that can be offensive, is that all the "sects were wrong," which, by the way, was and is a truth susceptible of demonstration, the Bible and church history furnishing the proof. Jesus declared a like truth when he said: "I am the way, the truth, and life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me."—John 14: 6. The consequences were alike to Jesus Christ our Savior, and to Joseph Smith, the great prophet of the present age, both gave offense to the religious people who never forgave or relented from their bitter persecution, until the object of their hate suffered death at the hands of a lawless mob. That which maketh alive this vindictive, murderous spirit, is found in the fact that the truth unmasketh the emptiness of man-made religion, and exposes the worthlessness of such profession.

September 21st, 1823, Joseph had the second vision. This time it was the angel 'Moroni' who visited him, and gave an outline of the future work, and the coming forth of the record of the ancient people of America. At this time he was first made acquainted with the existence of the plates, and permitted to see them. Mr. Oliver Cowdery, in his letter states that the angel said to Joseph: "This can not be brought about until first certain preparatory things are accomplished, for so has the Lord purposed in his own mind. He has therefore chosen you as an instrument in his hand to bring to light that which shall perform his act, his strange act, and bring to pass a marvelous work and a wonder. Wherever the sound shall go it shall cause the ears of men to tingle, and wherever it shall be proclaimed, the pure in heart shall rejoice, while those who draw near to God with their mouths, and honor him with their lips, while their hearts are far from him, will seek its overthrow, and the destruction of those by whose hands it is carried. Therefore marvel not if your name is made a derision, and had as a by-word among such, if you are the instrument in bringing it, by the gift of God, to the knowledge of the people." He then proceeded and gave a general account of the promises made to the fathers, and also gave a history of the aborigines of this country, and said they were literal descendants of Abraham. He represented them as once being an enlightened and intelligent people, possessing a correct knowledge of the gospel, and the plan of restoration and redemption. He said this history was written and deposited not far from that place, and that it was our brother's privilege, if obedient to the commandments of the Lord, to obtain, and translate the same by the means of the Urim and Thummim, which were deposited for that purpose with the record."—Cowdery Letters, p. 14, 15.

Here we have obtained what might be termed a forecast of the mission of the prophet and the very peculiar work he was to accomplish in bringing forth the hidden record of those ancient inhabitants of this land. And inasmuch as the work was the Lord's, I am inclined to believe that every statement of the angel had a most positive and literal fulfillment in every particular as to both manner of coming forth and the means of translation.

From the time Joseph Smith had his first interview with the angel, and viewed the plates, until he gained possession of them, he made an annual visit to the place of their cocealment. And when the time came to assume the great responsibility of faithfully caring for and doing the strange work of giving to the world a book claiming inspiration equal to the much loved and venerable Holy Bible and establishing a church upon the New Testament plan of organization, ordinances and spiritual gifts, it must be conceded it was a gigantic undertaking and he needed more than human wisdom, foresight, and understanding. Let us be timely advised that it was not the intention or purpose of God or this new church to have the Book of Mormon displace or supersede the Bible, but it was to be a help, a handmaid thereunto; and as they are mutual in doctrine, no clash would arise. This was contemplated in the forth coming records: "And they must come according to the words which shall be established by the mouth of the Lamb; and the words of the Lamb shall be made known in the records of thy seed, as well as in the records of the twelve apostles of the Lamb; wherefore, they both shall be established in one; for there is one God and one Shepherd over all the earth."—Nephi 3: 43.

Such was the divine purpose, and such is the result when intelligence and the Spirit of God guides.

Here I transcribe the account given of obtaining the plates: "At length the time arrived for obtaining the plates, the Urim and Thummim, and the breast plate. On the 22d day of September, 1827, having gone, as usual, at the end of another year, to the place where they were deposited, the same heavenly messenger delivered them up to me with this charge, that I should be responsible for them; that if I should let them go carelessly or through any neglect of mine, I should be cut off; but that if I would use all my endeavors to preserve them until he, the messenger, should call for them, they should be protected. I soon found out the reason why I had received such strict charges to keep them safe, and why it was that the messenger had said that, when I had done what was required at my hand, he would call for them; for no sooner was it known that I had them than the most strenuous exertions were used to get them from me; every stratagem that could be invented was resorted to for that purpose; the persecution became more bitter than before, and multitudes were on the alert continually to get them from me if possible; but by the wisdom of God they remained safe in my hands, until I had accomplished by them what was required at my hands; when, according to arrangements, the messenger called for them, I delivered them up to him, and he has them in his charge until this day, being the 2d day of May, 1838."—Pearl of Great Price, p. 44.

TITHES.

THE tithe is a tenth part of the gains on property and business which was devoted to God to be expended in the service of religion. The thank offering is a gift of gratitude for special mercies, sometimes in the fulfillment of a vow, and in any form, a voluntary offering. But the tithe is obligatory. It had its origin in the beginning of time. It was not therefore first ordained in the Mosaic law. It was a part of worship. It was an act of homage which God was willing to receive, an act of devotion on the part of the worshipper. It was exacted as much as prayer or praise. It was a sacrifice which was acceptable to God. In the nature of things the worshipper was expected to show his regard for religion by paying something for its support; and the effect upon his own spirit would be sanctifying. Tithes were assessed and paid in without cost—payable on demand without discount or delay. It was ordered that the altar and the temple should do a cash business. The trustees would have no occasion to borrow money when the tithes were all brought into the treasury.

"Pay as you go" is a rule of honest piety as well as of any other affairs. The support of religion was made a part of religion itself. The man who neglected to pay the tithes showed his entire indifference to the whole highest department of human obligation, enjoyment, safety and hope: the entire sphere which embraces the privileges of communion with God and the blessed walk into eternity. When the Christian Church was evolved out of the Jewish Synagogue, the tithe was not repealed nor suspended. It is to this day an ordinance of the whole Church of God. It is not enforced in the New Testament, because another source of revenue is therein appealed to. It consisted in voluntary offerings. The claim to contributions was due to gratitude for salvation through a crucified Redeemer. His followers had been captives sold under sin. He bought them with his own blood and then set them free. They were bound to him by the most endearing and absolute ties. They presented their bodies as living sacrifices upon his altar. This act of consecration carries with it all they have and all they hope to be. Yet he allows them a wide liberty. He makes them trustees to manage their affairs under a sense of responsibility as free men and not as slaves. This makes their service voluntary. It cultivates a free spirit and spontaneous giving. But this freedom is liable to abuse, and the giving is turned away from being a free-will offering to a matter of choice, and no longer felt to be a duty.

This same dodging of duty takes place in other things under the liberty which

God has given us. He would not force us, but he would have us act from conviction of what is right and from our heart's choice of what is true and lovely and of good report. But we abuse the liberty he gives us when we debate about the claims of absolute duty—then dally with it and postpone it—then make it optional whether we do it or not, and at last regard it is a thing to be done or not done, governed by our feeling or caprice. The next is the final step to a hardened state of neglect and even resistance against a solemn obligation to God. This neglect is an infectious disease which runs into the paralysis of piety. The non-payment of tithes undermines the altar; it drives away the sacrifices, and smothers the thank offerings; it leaves the priest idle and forlorn; it empties the store-houses of the Lord of Hosts, and fills the worshippers with worldliness, who says I am rich and in need of nothing.

On the other hand, bringing in the tithes and offerings means revival. All graces would flourish, because they are all connected with a vigorous administration of the visible church that requires funds to carry it on and to relieve it of the drag of debt and poverty. The voluntary offerings are the signs of devoted gratitude, the tithe is the payment of an honest debt, and both are acts of worship, the whole sum and benefit of which shall accrue to the household of faith and the cause of the only true religion.

God chooses to count the tithe for his own. When Israel kept it back, He said—"Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me . . . in tithes and offerings." God makes this cause his own, because the neglect of honest stewardship was so widespread and destructive.

Bringing in the contribution signifies a redevotion to the cause of a self-denying Redeemer. Do we not need a new consecration of our property to him who, "though he was rich, yet for our sakes became poor that we through his poverty might become rich?"—Selected.

CONVERSION OF JEWS.

"THE present movement towards Christianity by Jews seems to be unique. Eminent Rabbis are following the example of the famous Rabinowitz of Russia and becoming confessors of Christ within the synagogues, very much such disciples as the first Christians at Jerusalem were. A Vienna correspondent of the London Times writes of one such marked conversion thus:

"In connection with this movement it may be mentioned that one of the most learned and respected of Hungarian Rabbis, Dr. J. Lichtenstein, who has been thirty-five years Rabbi of Tapio-Szele, has lately started his co-religionists by two pamphlets in which he affirms the divinity of Christ. The pamphlets being very ably written, have been noticed by all the leading newspapers, and have raised much controversy, for Dr. Lichtenstein professes to remain obedient to the Mosaic dispensation while recognizing that Christ is the Messiah."

"Further particulars of this Rabbi's conversion are contained in the letter of a correspondent at Buda Pesth, writing to Israel's Watchman. His letter is as follows:—

Dear Sir:—More than two years have elapsed since Rabbi Lichtenstein first came to see me in this city, and I have had continued intercourse with him since. Through the reading of the New Testament he was led gradually into the light, and he was soon moved mightily by the desire to testify to his brethren that Jesus is the Christ. His idea, however, from the first was that he might carry his people with him, and so he indicated that he did not wish so separate himself from them by being himself at once baptized.

A year ago, having seen some of his manuscripts, I urged him to give publicity to his views through the press. He hesitated for some time, but at length consented. I undertook to get his pamphlets printed. The first, "The Talmud on its Defense," was not much noticed by the Jews. It was, as one of them afterwards described it, "a harmless thing." His object was to introduce himself to the public as a man who was heart and soul a Jew. The appearance of the second pamphlet, however, "My Testimony," in which he declares his belief that Jesus Christ is Israel's Messiah, was like the bursting of a bombshell. The excitement and wrath of the rulers of the synagogue here and elsewhere knew no bounds. He was summoned to a conference with the chief Rabbis and other leading Jews in our city. They maintained at first that he could not have written the pamphlet himself. He was a humble man from the country, who attended none of the modern schools of learning, and it was obviously impossible that he could thus wield the pen; it was a "mystification," they said; he had only lent his name to what had been written by another.

One gentleman who was present said that he would lay a thousand florins on the table, if the Rabbi would take the pen and show that he was capable of writing such German. The Rabbi replied that he had not a thousand florins at his disposal, but that he could procure that sum, would lay it on the table, take up the pen, and write on any Biblical subject which they might choose to name. "And, gentlemen," he added, "you will lose your thousand florins."

When they saw that they were mistaken on this point they pressed him to make over to them, for a sum of money, his rights of authorship with regard to the pamphlets. The offer made to him must have been tempting, for he felt he said as if might have he left their meeting-room almost a rich man, but he refused. They then said that if matters stood thus he must leave them at once and be baptized. It will not be the first time, they thought, that a Rabbi has left their community and been baptized; but that a Rabbi in office should confess Jesus as Christ, that is not to be endured.

As he did not resign, efforts were made to get him deposed, but without success.

As each Jewish congregation has its independence, a Rabbi can not easily be removed unless the people dismiss him; and the people at Tapio Szele are by no means disposed to part with Rabbi Lichtenstein.

For pamphlets sold the Rabbi has received fully one hundred florins from me. I shall be very thankful for any aid which friends may send me on the Rabbi's behalf.

Yours very truly,

ANDREW MOODY.

Rudolf Quai 8, Budapest.

"Another significant movement reported is amongst the Jews. A contemporary says:

News comes from ice-bound Siberia of a gospel movement essentially the same as that of Rabinowitz. The leader is Jacob Scheinmann, a Polish Jew, who, twenty years ago, through independent thought, came to the conclusion that the Messiah, the son of David, was the true Savior. The strict Talmudic Jews got him transported to Siberia, where for fifteen years he labored, almost unheeded, to awaken faith in his fellow-exiles. Among the un-called-for mail which he found at Tomsk, where he was engaged in business, was a pamphlet by Rabinowitz, with whom he at once communicated. He has been busy disseminating his views through pamphlets called "The Voice of one Crying in the Wilderness." Delitsch's Hebrew translation of the New Testament is being eagerly read and studied by the Siberian Jews.

"Thus in many quarters there are tokens of a stirring among the dry bones; Rabinowitz in Bessarabia, Lichtenstein in Hungary, and Scheinmann in Siberia."—Watchword.

WHY ARE HEATHENS AND MOHAMMEDANS SO INACCESSIBLE TO THE GOSPEL?

MEN of sound mind and good reasoning powers whether Heathen or Mohammedan, Atheist or Jew, can easily understand that there is no unity of faith among professed teachers of the gospel, nor is their presentation of the plan of redemption and salvation coincident with that taught by Christ and confirmed unto us by those that heard him. They claim to draw their inspiration from the Bible, denominated by them the word of God. But reasoning men understand that they teach that which is contrary to the words of that Bible, as well as to that of each other, and are therefore, unwilling to lay aside reason and sense and assent to that which is nonsense. If those teachers will lay aside their peculiar tenets, that are so evidently contrary to Scripture and come into the unity of faith by the only appointed means as declared in God's word, their united testimony would command the respect and attention of Heathen, Mohammedans, Jews or Atheists of all countries. Then such men as R. G. Ingersoll would believe and embrace the gospel instead of being scoffing blasphemers, and preach the gospel they now deride. Jesus prayed that his disciples might all be one as he and his Father were one, that the world might believe that he was sent of the Father. The efficacy of that prayer is not exemplified in the teaching of the popular ministers of to-day, and we need not wonder that Infidelity is rife in all lands, and that Heathens and Mohammedans are not perfectly affected by these gospels preached by them. When Jesus ascended up on high he gave gifts unto men, which if accepted would bring all into the unity of faith and knowledge of the Son of God, and then they would be qualified to teach that gospel which would bring Heathens and Mohammedans as well as scoffing Atheists of our own country, to accept the simple story of the cross. The idea that it makes no difference what a person believes if he is honest it will be accepted, is false in theory and pernicious in practice. Jesus' testimony is that his words shall judge us in the last day. If all would leave their own dear opinions and embrace and teach Christ's gospel, all people of every creed and nation would embrace the gospel and no scoffing Infidels or others would longer desecrate the earth.—Sword.

THE JUBILEE OF A JEWISH PAPER.

THE Allgemeine Zeitung des Judenthums has this year been celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of its existence. During the half century that has elapsed since this oldest of Jewish papers made its first appearance, it has been edited by one and the same man, viz., Dr. Ludwig Philippson, rabbi of Bonn in Rhineland. This paper, like most other Jewish papers of Germany, is favorable to a large amount of reform in the Jewish ritual and ceremonial, whilst the Israelit, which is now in its twenty-eighth year, represents the most conservative portion of the Jewish community, being, in fact, the only authorized organ of the "Orthodox" party among the Jews of Fatherland; the other Jewish papers being somewhat eclectic in their tendencies and generally favorable to a certain amount of progress.

In connection with its jubilee, the Allgemeine Zeitung gives a highly interesting review of all the changes that have taken place in the world, and more especially in Germany, since it first sprang into being. We have not space for reproducing this review in full, preferring to translate only the short summary of events relating to the progress and development of the Jewish people, during that half century. It is as follows:—

"There are social and political problems now staring humanity in the face which were awaiting their solution in 1837 the same as they are in 1887, and probably will be in 1937. Slavery is now a thing of the past in both hemispheres, with the exception of a very limited area, and serfdom has followed suit; but these are only two departments out of a great many, and among the topics to which a point of interrogation is still appended to this day, the position of the Jews occupies a conspicuous place. Let us look a little more closely at this department. In 1837 the situation of our co-religionists was still a very unfavorable one. They were subject to many incapacities, to a great many disqualifications, to a number of most oppressive exceptional laws. No need of going into many details.

"Suffice it to say that in Prussia, with its twenty-two laws relating to Jews, there was extant also a decree which made it unlawful for them to assume 'Christian names,' or in other words, to prefix to their family names any proper names usual among Gentiles. In Saxony, no Jew was at that time allowed to keep open a shop and sell over the counter. In Bavaria, only a limited number of Jewish families, and in Moravia only a limited number of persons belonging to the Jewish race, were allowed to reside. Many countries were entirely closed against Jews, and in some of those in which they were allowed to reside, there were provinces to which they could gain no access. Nay, even if allowed to reside in a province, they were often excluded from a town, and if admitted to residence in the town, there were portions of it reserved to the Gentiles, in which it was an indictable offense for a Jew to take up his abode. The only countries in which, half a century ago, the Jews enjoyed full and integral equality of rights with their Gentile neighbors are France, Belgium, the Netherlands, and the United States of America.

"At the present day, if we except Russia and Roumania, the constitutions of all countries of the civilized world guarantee civil and political equality to the Jews, and although it may happen in some, nay in many instances, that factitious restrictions are resorted to against them by the powers that be, their right at least is in no way questioned. Let it be borne in mind that, in repealing the political disqualification of the Jews, all those countries to which we are referring have had to do away with a state of things that had lasted over 1,500 years, and in looking at the matter in this light, one is led to acknowledge the gigantic progress the principles of justice and humanity, and the practical application of these principles, have made within our own time. Of course, prejudices and hatred have not yet been entirely discarded, and much as it is to be deplored, we can not close our eyes to the fact that these uncharitable tendencies have not yet entirely lost their hold upon the nations in the midst of whom we are living."—Prophetic News.

BIBLE SYNOPSIS.

The remainder of my "Bible Synopsis" will be sold at $1.25 each, and 25 cents less to all ministers of the gospel, free of postage. Every family should have one. The Synopsis is an arrangement of Scriptures under different headings. The principal passages treating on each subject are arranged to read in connection, with book, chapter and verse. Over sixty subjects are thus arranged, with portrait of the author. I want agents in every branch. Send money by Post Office Money Order, or for single book a $1 bill and 25 cents in stamps. Good profits to agents. Address,

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

MINISTERIAL REPORTS

Elder J. W. Gillen, of the Twelve, present, reports:

I have been constantly engaged in the work, and have been greatly blessed in my ministrations. I have preached in St. Louis, Cheltenham, Moselle and Sullivan, in the state of Missouri; also in Belleville, Birkner, Alma and Springerton, in Illinois; but my labors have been principally in St. Louis and Cheltenham. I think that I can say truthfully, that the St. Louis branch is in better condition, spiritually and financially, than it has been for several years, and I think if the work done there is properly followed up, that there will be a considerable ingathering into the church before long, and more especially so if the Saints succeed in the accomplishment of their laudable undertaking, to build a house wherein they can worship God, away from the unhallowed influences of dram shops and sale stables. Bro. H. H. Robinson labored faithfully and acceptably during the time he has been with me in the district. Fifteen or sixteen have been baptized in the district during the year; three by W. O. Thomas at Cheltenham, three by Bro. H. H. Robinson at Chester and nine by myself. I desire to do all that my strength and ability permit to build up the kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Elder D. S. Mills, writes from Santa Ana, California.

Wisdom forbids that I should meet with you at this session; I therefore submit the following:

Having been duly appointed I proceeded last April from Kirtland, Ohio, visiting branches and preaching by the way, having seasons of rejoicing and feasts of fat things with our Father's family, the noblest and best of Adam's race on earth. I rejoiced with them in the rich blessings of God, knowing that he owned and blessed us in declaring the word and in administering before him. I arrived at Elko, Nevada, in May, proceeded to Ruby Valley, with team, fifty miles south, having received urgent calls from that place. I found several good old-time Saints, with their families. With tears of joy they listened, and some obeyed and rejoiced as in days gone by, testifying to the same Spirit and power of God they did over forty years ago. In that vicinity I baptized and confirmed 14 adults, ordained 1 elder and 2 priests, organized North Ruby branch with 15 members, blessed 4 children, ministered to many sick with good results, organized a good Sunday School, also got subscribers for Herald, Hope, and Autumn Leaves and other church publications. I was taken sick, quite violently, with mountain fever; it was rebuked, and I reluctantly left the state for California, having only just begun the work in that excellent field. While there I received many calls from old-time Saints in different parts of Nevada who had never heard our elders and were anxious to hear the claims of the Reorganized Church. North of Elko, in the vicinity of Iron Mountain, are many families of old-timers, like sheep without a shepherd, and they certainly have claims upon us. Had my voice permitted, I should have visited them. My heart yearns after that people, and my very soul sympathizes with them. I know they can again, by our labors, and by the labors of none other people, be made to rejoice in the body of Christ. And I beg leave to urge, that at least two elders be sent there at once to labor during the summer, (as they can not in winter), and one should be an elderly man of experience in the church. The other, a young, active man. Taking the Spirit with them, they will do a good work, and I pray it may be done. Since my return to Southern California I have labored all my strength would permit, and felt much blessed in so doing. Since last April I have preached about 100 sermons, beside doing much fireside preaching, have baptized 16 adults, ordained 1 elder and 3 priests, organized 1 branch, administered many times to the sick with good results, and I must say that during my experience of over thirty-four years in the church, I have never seen and felt the healing power of God manifest so strongly as during the past season. God is at the helm, and is guiding and mightily blessing this Reorganization. I desire to press on to victory. The work in Southern California is in a healthy condition and prosperity under the able, wise care of Bro. Heman C. Smith. We have several able, efficient elders in this district, and several rising young men shortly to become mighty in bearing the standard of Zion. The prospect is glorious. Our Herald, Hope, and Autumn Leaves are a power in the work. I am proud of them. Every family should have them. Their inspired pages grow brighter and brighter, glowing with the light of heaven and its revealed truth to bless the sons and daughters of God.

Our Sunday Schools are doing great good. The brief visit of Pres. Joseph Smith and E. L. Kelley here has done the Saints untold good and made many friends to the work, they having reached many souls that none others could reach and convince of the truth. I would suggest that Elder J. F. Burton be appointed to labor in California. I deem him well suited to this field. Send as many others to this field as you can in wisdom, and especially Bro. H. C. Smith and President Joseph Smith.

Elder J. C. Clapp, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since my appointment to labor in the Rocky Mountain mission, I have been continually engaged in the work, preaching in Montana, Idaho and Utah. I also by invitation and permission of the First Presidency, visited Kentucky and Tennessee and spent the most of the winter preaching in those two states. I also preached some in southern Illinois.

I have baptized sixteen persons since last report, blessed twenty-one children, assisted Elder Peter Anderson to ordain one elder and organized one branch.

I find many calls for preaching wherever I go, and feel greatly encouraged in the work, and am at your disposal.

Elder Columbus Scott, of the Seventy, present, reports:

My mission was the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan district. At the earnest solicitation of the Saints of the district, I served as its president, in connection with the duties devolving upon me, as missionary laborer. Have labored in Berrien, Cass, Van Buren, Kalamazoo, Branch, Eaton and Ingham counties, Michigan, and in Stark, Steuben and Jefferson counties, Indiana, and attended a two days' meeting in Paulding county, Ohio. I have been blessed with divine light and power in my ministrations of the gospel doctrines and ordinances. I would not forget to state that in the defense of the faith against one of the most unjust and bitter attacks we ever knew being made against it in the pulpit, made at Galien, Michigan, we were favored with signal victory, and the results continue favorable.

I have baptized five, confirmed some eight or ten, blessed a number of children, solemnized one marriage and administered to the ill with God's blessings attending. The Saints in the district and mission are firm in the faith, united in spirit and encouraged with the prospects. I feel assured of the divinity of the work, of its progress and ultimate triumph. I desire the salvation of our fellows, and to this end am still willing to labor.

Elder M. T. Short, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I labored in Chicago, holding forth at the home of Elder S. R. Goode. Then in the southern part of the Northern Illinois district. I baptized W. Farley and wife in Streator. In the fall attended the grand and glorious reunion at Harlan, Iowa, returned to my field at the close of the spiritual feast. In October I attended the dedication of a neat, new chapel near the world-renowned Geneva Lake; delivered seventeen discourses in the commodious church, and baptized one. I held forth elsewhere in the state, and in Rock county a deadly volley of about twenty rounds were discharged from each side of a lane we were passing through.

I returned home via DeKalb, Plano and Kewanee, preached considerable near the first named point, also in the latter places. Preached around home during the cold weather, when I went forth a month since, during which time I called on my venerable aged mother in Seligman, Missouri. While there I spoke eleven times and closed with an immense assembly. Preached for ten days at Webb City, being ably assisted by John Hawley, S. Maloney and the local brotherhood.

Elder W. T. Bozarth, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I was appointed to labor in the Far-West and Central Missouri districts. After my return from Kirtland I labored in the Far-West district until June 5th, when I went into the Central district, and attend a conference at the Alma branch, in Ray county. This district has been very badly neglected by the traveling ministry for the last six or seven years, consequently was in a bad condition. Two of the branches had been lately disorganized, thus placing the work in a bad condition in their localities. After the conference I proceeded to the Waconda branch, and after several days' labor and holding meetings, succeeded in reorganizing the members into a branch after having investigated and settled some difficulties that were existing there. Some few of the members at this place refused to join the new branch at its reorganization, and are yet standing out.

At Carrollton I found the Saints disorganized also. I tried at this place to reorganize the branch; but after careful examination of the difficulties existing here of long standing, I found nothing could be done in that way. A number of difficulties have been investigated and settled, and I am proud to say that I am satisfied the district is in a better condition now in several respects than it has been in the past. Some of the turbulent and rebellious element have been removed from the district.

The Central Missouri district is yet very weak, and should by all means have the labor and watchcare of some experienced and careful minister. I hope the conference will not neglect them, for fear that what has been gained in the last year may be lost.

During the last year I have labored in Dekalb, Clinton, Caldwell, Ray, Carroll and Grundy counties, Missouri. Have baptized one, confirmed four, organized one branch, solemnized two marriages, held two Elders' courts, and administered to the sick a number of times. In all this the Lord blessed me. I feel very much improved in health, yet have to exercise care on account of my lungs. The calls in the field are many, and a few years ago where I could not get the people to listen, they now open their houses, and some places their churches, and invite me to come and preach. One thing particularly gratifying is that the people are saying that we have only heard one side yet, and now we want the other.

Elder E. L. Wildermuth, of the Seventy, writes from Loyd, Wisconsin:

I have done some preaching in Vernon county, Wisconsin. Am still firm in the faith, and am willing to do all that circumstances will permit for the good of the cause of Christ. I am at the disposal of the church for ministerial labor, and where the church requests my services I will go.

Elder I. N. Roberts, of the Seventy, writes from Roanoke, W. Va.:

Since your last sitting I have labored continuously, as per appointment. The portion traveled over by me is in very good and prosperous condition. I have been greatly blessed in the discharge of duty imposed. Have baptized thirty-eight. Reports from brethren Gato and Currie are encouraging. I am in hopes of getting a stronger force of missionaries this year. The work demands it and may the demand be supplied. I left my mission on December 13th, to visit friends and relatives in Virginia and West Virginia. Have been greatly blessed in telling the good story of Jesus and his love. Plenty of places are open in both states. Have not been able to fill all the calls. Will return to my mission by the first of May. I am still at your disposal.

Elder A. J. Moore, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I have labored in the Nodaway district, with fair success. Have baptized and confirmed according to requests, also blessed some children and administered to the sick with good results. As a rule I have been blessed. I have assurance of the ultimate triumph of the gospel, and have many reasons to rejoice in the work of God. Am willing to labor locally, or under General Conference appointment.

Elder I. N. White, of the Seventy, present reports:

Since my appointment a year ago I have labored almost incessantly up to January the 6th, since which time only occasionally occupying the pulpit, finding it necessary to look after my financial affairs, to the end that I might early renew my efforts for the church. Have labored as president of the Independence district, under special direction of missionary in charge and voice of the quarterly conference. Many new and important places for labor have been opened up in the district. This field by reason of its location and many peculiarities, is one of great importance to the church. Presiding ability with wise laborers are needed to prepare the minds of the people to accept our brethren as they move into the "regions round about." Bigoted zeal and unwise expressions about possessing this land can never secure to us happy and peaceful homes.

The old leaven of mob spirit can easily be stirred, hence the wisdom demanded to successfully prosecute the work. The demand for preaching is unprecedented. Through the assistance of A. White I organized a branch, which now numbers thirty-seven members. I have only baptized twenty-one, and nine of these were in Grundy county—outside of my mission field, where I went under the direction of Bro. J. R. Lambert. Bro. A. White accompanied me there, and did excellent labor in that somewhat peculiar and particular field. Bro. Bozarth was with us for a few days, but being very unwell returned home. Early needs of that field I hope are seen by workers in charge. Brethren E Curtis and Abner Lloyd have done good work, and I hope can be retained in this field, as they now know and understand many of the workings that new men could not learn in months.

Elder Willard J. Smith, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Since last appointment to Canada mission I have endeavored to magnify my calling as a minister of Christ; have done all I could for the advancement of the cause wherein it has been my lot to labor. Have been much blessed in the ministration of the word, which has confirmed me in the work; and therefore feel strong and encouraged. The work in Canada seems to be receiving a new impetus; calls for labor on every hand, and in places where a few years ago the elders could hardly obtain the privilege to disseminate the principles of truth, the Macedonian cry is now being heard. I would be pleased if you would return me to that field. Have engaged in one discussion on the principle of baptism, during which the cause did not suffer. We baptized eight at the close of the debate, and have been credibly informed that quite a number have left the Methodist church (as it was a Methodist I debated with) and desire to hear more of our doctrine. I have in all baptized one hundred and ten, confirmed the most of them, blessed about twenty children, solemnized one marriage. I had nearly forgotten to say, that by the permission of Bro. John H. Lake, I left Canada and went to Cadillac, Michigan, where I preached about thirty times. Found much prejudice and bigotry there; but the Master smiled upon me and gave me liberty in drawing the line of demarcation between us and the people of Salt Lake Valley; in consequence of which prejudice was largely removed, and a spirit of enquiry manifested. I baptized five there. Also labored some at Free Soil, and several other places.

Elder Peter Anderson, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I have labored in the Rocky Mountain mission; have preached as often and in as many places as circumstances would permit; baptized 23; blessed children and administered to the sick. God's power has been made manifest in a marked degree in some instances, to my encouragement and the confirmation of the truth we preach. There is a great dissatisfaction among the Utah people, and they are more inclined to hear our side of the question. Many have inquired for Bro. Joseph; they want to hear him. It will require much patience, wisdom and charity on our part to build up the church among that people. The church would do well to sustain brethren Anthony and Elvin in that mission; they are qualified to labor in Utah, and have gained the confidence of the people. If I am sustained in the field would prefer to return to Utah because my service is needed there more than in any other place.

Elder W. M. Rumel, of the Seventy, present, reports:

I have endeavored to respond to all the calls made from different parts of the field as far as I was able to. The past winter being a very severe one prevented our labor to some extent. Have preached about 68 times, assisted in some 25 other meetings, baptized 4, sat on Elders' Courts twelve or fifteen times, blessed 4 children and ordained 2 elders. Have preached in Douglas, Sarpy, Dodge, Burt, Madison, Antelope, Knox and Holt counties.

The western part of Nebraska is a new field, and most of the people are poor and widely scattered, therefore it will require time and sacrifice on the part of the ministry to accomplish much. In some parts the interest is good, yet we do not expect to see a nation born in a day, but only a few, one here and one there. I do not think it always evidence of a great work being done by the large number baptized. Often times some are baptized through excitement, before they properly understand the work. This class generally do more injury to the cause than good; and it is only a question of time about their going out of the church, leaving a stain upon the character of the work. This has been my experience in some parts. It seems that this was the class that Paul referred to when he said that he thanked God that he baptized none of them.

If I shall have the Spirit of the Lord to aid me in lifting the warning voice until the Master comes, I shall be content, whether I baptize many or few. In all my labors the Lord has blessed me in abundance which has, at times, given me unspeakable joy.

If it is consistent with the wisdom of the body I would like to have the same field.

Elder Richard S. Salyards, of the Seventy, present, reports:

During the past conference year have labored in Pittsburg and Kirtland district, with the exception of some labor performed in North-Eastern Michigan by request of the missionary in charge. In all my efforts and experiences have been abundantly blessed by the Divine Spirit, and encouraged by the bright prospects for the growth of the work. Every part of each field presents open doors and a desire to hear from us, and while opposition and ignorance of truth oppose as ever, the work prevails when properly presented.

The last section that opened to us in one district was right in the vicinity of Hiram, Ohio, where Joseph the Seer and other leading men of the early church were tarred and feathered and otherwise greatly mistreated. The people are mostly anxious to hear from us as a people, and being in old settled communities have the advantages of wealth and education—hence whatever clerical opposition we meet is of quite an able character. It is therefore hoped that we shall have a greater number of laborers sent there.

I have baptized four, confirmed some ten or fifteen, blessed a number of children, and performed the general duties devolving upon a minister of Christ.

Deeply interested in the cause we love I am still desirous to aid its progress as a life-work.

Elder Hans N. Hansen, of the Seventy, reported from Weston, Iowa:

During the last year my labors have been confined to the Pottawattamic district, over which I was chosen to preside; have preached in seven different localities, and as often as my circumstances would permit; have baptized and confirmed five, and performed other ministerial work. Am glad to say that I have received aid and encouragement from the Master. I still feel it my duty to advocate and defend the gospel of salvation.

Elder Thomas Daley, of the Seventy, writes from Perkins, California:

I have labored in the Pacific Slope mission and been actively engaged one half the time. The remainder of the time I held services almost every Sunday and worked through the week in the mine. My labor was confined to the Northern California district, Humboldt, Sonoma, Sacramento, El Dorado and San Joaquin, California. God has blessed me in preaching the word and in ministering to the sick. I find a great many more calls than I am able to fill, and a good interest is manifested. In the branches I do not see the unity and zeal manifested that should be among the children of God. I have baptized twenty. I can not say just how much of my time I can give this year, but think that I can devote one half of the time, and perhaps more. I am anxious to give all my time and go where God's Spirit directs. I am at the disposal of the conference, hoping that the spirit of wisdom and revelation may rest with you.

Elder Luther R. Devore, of the Seventy, reports from Limerick, Ohio:

My labors have been altogether within the South-eastern Ohio and West Virginia district. In Ohio I preached in Jackson, Pike, Highland and Scioto counties; in West Virginia in Taylor, Harrison, Doddridge, Calhoun and Ritchie counties, in all 125 discourses, baptized 25, confirmed 22, ordained some officials and helped organize two branches, and aided in other duties. The work in this field is flattering; success has crowned the labors performed, and many have been baptized. Besides this a number of the young elders are thrusting in the sickle, and their efforts are worthy of commendation. In Calhoun county, on one occasion the opposition arrayed itself in the form of a mob, for the purpose of removing Bro. T. J. Beatty and myself from that county, but our lives were preserved, and we continued to preach the "word" and to baptize. Though my health is poor, yet I wish to aid in reaping the harvest which is rapidly ripening.

Elder Arthur Leverton, of the Seventy, writes from Bothwell, Ontario:

I have labored as the way has opened and circumstances permitted, and always tried to answer when duty made a demand upon me. Have preached in Chatham, Petrolia, Longwood, Mosa, Corinth, Oxford, Euphemia, Wabash and Zone, in all about one hundred sermons. Have baptized twenty-five, blessed children, administered to the sick, and met two ministers in debate, one night each week. They did not wish to continue. It was wise on their part to decline, so a large majority of the people thought. It left a good impression in our favor.

The Lord has been my helper in every time of need, and has blessed me very much in administering the gospel and its ordinances to my fellow creatures. Should you deem it wise to appoint me a field of labor, Ontario would be the most suitable field for me at the present. I will do what I can, but I do not expect to be able to devote all my time to the work.

Elder John A. Davies of the Seventy, present, reports:

Being appointed to the Spring River district I took the field for active labor in November, being so situated financially that I could not make the proper arrangements before that time. Since then I have labored some with J. T. Davies and John Hawley, preaching whenever an opportunity presented itself. I have had good liberty and felt blessed in my efforts, both in preaching and in administering to the sick. I have baptized four and made friends to the cause wherever I have labored.

Elder R. C. Evans, of the Seventy, reports from Seaforth, Ontario:

Since last General Conference have labored as best I could in the Dominion of Canada. Under the instruction of Elder J. H. Lake, I preached in many portions of Canada, and am pleased to say that the outlook for that mission is grand, and if we seek to rule our own spirits, success is sure. Thinkers are beginning to investigate the claims made by us that the gospel has been restored. Have preached in several places where the house of worship was not large enough to accommodate those who came to hear. Am willing to labor on till He who called me shall say, "It is enough." I desire to labor in Canada. The prospects were never so bright as at the present, for the cry comes from every part of the mission, "Come and preach for us." I have preached 199 sermons, baptized 42 persons, ordained some officials, blessed some children, presided in three Elders' courts. Have seen the power of God manifested in a marked degree in administering to the sick. Have acted as president of the London district, and on a few occasions had to attend to the rather unpleasant duty of setting branches in order. I feel happy to be able to report that we have not lost one member in the district by transgression, that I know of, and we know of no serious difficulty at present.

Elder Thomas Taylor writes from England:

We have been doing all that was possible, according to our circumstances, towards the onward progress of the work of God, and we feel encouraged in knowing that our labors have not been altogether in vain. Some have been added by baptism, although not so many as we could have wished. Yet we have much to be thankful for. The majority of those who comprise the church are those who do credit to the cause. The English Mission is not a very easy one, for the people here are not at all easy to reach they are so carried away with sectarianism.

The Rev. Charles Spurgeon is now making quite a commotion among the people, by calling their attention to the doctrines of Christ and his apostles. How far he will go in that direction, or whether it will cause further investigation by thinking people, and thus lead them to seek for the old paths, remains to be seen. I pray God that it may be so. We shall leave nothing undone that will help it along.

Many of our young elders, as well as those more advanced in years, are working energetically for the cause and we are trying to open new fields. We have every hope that good will result in the due time of the Lord. And by the assistance of the Spirit of God, and sustained by your faith and prayers, we desire to go on to the accomplishment of much good to the honor and glory of God.

Elder Frank M. Sheehy, of the Seventy, writes from Fall River, Massachusetts:

I have labored in Boston, Attleboro, Brockton, New Bedford, Fall River, and Mechanics Falls, in Massachusetts; in Providence, Rhode Island; in Lisbon Falls, Tenant's Harbor, Martinsville, Clarks Island, Surry, North Blue Hill, Orland, East Orland, Little Deer Isle, Green's Landing, Jonesport, Mason's Bay and Jonesboro, Maine; in South Rawdon, Hillsdale, Ashdale, "The Mines," Lockhartville, Port Greenville and Lakeland, in Nova Scotia.

At present I am stationed in Fall River, in charge of the branch, by arrangement of Bro. Briggs missionary in charge; the church here also assenting. The meetings here have increased in numbers and interest. The prospects are also brightening. Am assisted in my labors here by Bro. Gilbert and other local officers. Have baptized ten persons. I meet every week with the clergyman of the city in what they call their Ministerial Association; have been treated by them very cordially, and my orthodoxy recognized. I am appointed to prepare an essay or sermon for the next meeting, which will be open for free discussion. The chairman informed me that they were anxious to learn concerning our faith, from our own standpoint, for he knew the difficulty of being represented by others. Such a liberal sentiment is of course to be commended. As the differences between us and Utahism is learned much prejudice goes accordingly.

Elder Robt. M. Elvin, present reports:

I was appointed to Nebraska, at the last Annual Conference, and up to the first of October, I sought to improve every opportunity in preaching at Nebraska City, the Botton School-house, McCaig's Grove, Jones' Grove, and Wilber, where I baptized two. Had more calls than I could fill. Usually the interest and attendance were excellent. Am confident of an ingathering there of noble souls. I aided some at the Plum Hollow Camp meeting. In October moved my family to Lamoni. By request of the branch president I spoke there and in that vicinity a few times. At the request of the First Presidency I came to the Rocky Mountain Mission, last December, and have been constantly in the ministry. Perhaps the most important work done, was defending the Book of Mormon against the onslaught of Rev. M. T. Lamb, Baptist missionary in Utah. Our greatest hindrance in this mission is the want of houses in which to preach. The people now seem willing to listen to our claims, and I never saw such anxiety to read the pamphlets and tracts printed by the Reorganization. In all my experience as a missionary, there is more here to overcome and less opportunity for an elder to make a good showing than in any other place I ever occupied. Almost every principle of doctrine and polity of the church established in 1830 has suffered change, with much added. This people know little of the true merits, history, and standard books of the church. A continuous preaching of the sacred books is needed. This will inspire confidence and faith. This people must be taught the gospel in all its essential parts. The law of Christ alone can redeem. March 5th the Salt Lake Mission branch chose me to the oversight of the branch.

I have preached at Provo. Bishop J. E. Booth gave us the use of the Fourth Ward meeting-house. Spoke a few times at Pleasant Grove, and once at Murray. In January I was at Malad, Idaho. Our cause did not suffer there. I have employed my pen for the good of the cause. Have preached during this conference year in Ohio, Nebraska, Iowa, Utah and Idaho, and God has blessed me with the Holy Spirit. It has been a year of wonderful change and experience to me. I desire to have grace and wisdom sufficient. I shall seek to be diligent and faithful to the church. Have blessed a few children, confirmed a few, and administered to the sick.

Elder Stephen Maloney, present, reports:

I arrived in southern Kansas and met with the Spring River district conference on September 2d. Left for Indian Territory on the 12th. At Echo we were kindly treated by the few Saints who live there. Immediately we gave out an appointment to preach, and since then have preached and talked wherever opportunity presented, in different parts of the nation. We found that the only preaching that would be effectual was that from house to house, as an Indian said to me at his house, "Me no understand preach," but in private talk explaining the gospel to him, he said, "Now me understand; you talk it good, good."

Some suitable traces in their own language would do much good among what are called the "full bloods." They can not read our language, but can their own language. I have not been to the capital, on account of the trouble that existed there in the fall, and because of the severe winter, high water and mud. As all travel is done with a wagon, a missionary must be prepared to camp out all the time, and also furnish his own provision, for very few except the Saints (and they are scattered) will keep us all night or give us a meal, unless we pay for it. This is a very extensive country and a great work has to be done, for the Lord is visiting the people by dreams and other manifestations, so that wherever we go we leave a better impression than when we came. I find sister Maloney does much good talking to the women that are shy of men. The prejudice that existed is giving way to truth and reason. We are on the trail of some Utah elders and many of their false statements we have to contradict. They must let the name of the dead rest where I go, and with the help of God I will show them up in their true light.

I am located near the center of all the tribes in the Territory. I expect to remain a few years in this country, and if sustained by you we will try and do our Master's will, and perform the duty that our God requires of us.

On January 28th I baptized a worthy man and wife. He was a Methodist preacher, a man of good report, one who loves the truth with his household.

Elder Alfred White, present reports:

I have labored as my circumstances would allow. My affairs at home are not just as I would desire or I would give all my time to the ministry. Have preached forty-one times, baptized three, confirmed six, and assisted in confirming several others, administered to a great many sick. Have acted as Bishop's agent for the Independence district, and find much labor connected therewith. Labored near Lowry City, at and near El Dorado Springs, Holden, Rich Hill; at the latter place assisted I. N. White to organize the Rich Hill branch. Continued meetings there a number of days and baptized three. During the month of February I was requested to visit Grundy county with I. N. White, where we held a number of meetings; nine being baptized, and leaving the work there I hope in better condition than finding it. In addition to the above, I have blessed some children and solemnized one marriage. I desire to take the field as a permanent laborer, if arrangements can be made to that end.

Elder John Hawley, present, reports:

By appointment August 12th, assigning me a mission to Southern Kansas and Indian Territory I received, and on the 29th I left home. At Columbus I attended the Spring River conference, and then entered upon my mission, laboring in Southern Kansas and at Webb City, Missouri, till October 12th. Then Bro. Maloney was ready to go south, but because of lameness I was not able to travel, and at Webb City I was cared for by the Saints for ten days. When able to travel I took train for the Indian Territory and found Bro. Maloney battling for the truth. I labored among the Indians over a month, but as most of the preaching to that people had to be from house to house my lameness would not permit me to travel more. As Bro. Maloney wished first to locate his family I returned to Kansas and labored till the Spring River conference of January 27th, opening up four new places. After the conference I returned to the Nation, Bro. John Davis being my companion. We labored together till February 19th. He is a good worker. If the Lord had not of helped me on my mission I should have went home. The most I have done was to remove prejudice and gain friends. I am not ashamed to have any elder travel over the same ground, and I have never been ashamed to introduce myself to those I have met. I have been on the beat of the Salt Lake elders and felt well in telling the people of their departure from the original faith and doctrine of Christ, restored through Joseph Smith.

As far as the Indian mission is concerned, I think that the Indians should be preached to by us, but I do not think that they will be born into the kingdom in a day. But as those from our nation obey the truth so I think the Indians will. They are, as a rule, a religious people. I think we should establish a mission among them, and then we would have headquarters. We are entitled, by the laws of the Nation, to fifteen acres of land, and the Cherokee Nation, through their council, has the right to give one hundred and sixty acres of land for a mission. This is the extent of the law. If the church sends elders there I think that the whole Indian country should be set off as a mission by itself. The church may make all the improvements on the land that the council gives, and as long as they use it for a mission it will be theirs. No permit is required of a missionary. They labor everywhere without being taxed. I love the work and am willing to labor where I can do the most good, and as the Lord knows best. I will be content should he, through you, speak. If no revelation of this kind I shall preach in my own district; for I can do all in that I am able to do. I am quite lame as yet, but I am improving slowly. Erysipelas is the trouble I think. I feel very thankful to the Lord for the help he has given me. I preached ninety-eight discourses up to this writing.

Elder E. L. Kelley, of the Bishopric, present, reports:

During the past year I have devoted my labors principally to the financial part of the work of the church. In this there is a growing improvement in many ways and especially upon the fact of the necessity on the part of all to try and fulfill the law of tithes and offerings, as any other of the body, by keeping it. Hence my work as a rule has not been to try to convince people of the law, as in the few years immediately preceding, but to advise with the Saints as to how they might properly comply with it.

After carefully considering the results attending upon a just and faithful compliance with this law as expressed by the Saints, I feel also fully warranted in saying that the blessings of our heavenly Father attends its execution as they must properly all others of his. In my travels and work in the various missions and districts of the church I have been met with uniform kindness and courtesy from officers and Saints, and found ready aid at all times when needed by presidents of missions and districts and officers of branches. I am hopeful for the continuous growth of this department of the work, and feel that with united work the cause of the Saints will move forward more successfully than it has done heretofore.

Elder J. W. Wight, present, reports:

Since last report I have labored as follows: Beginning active work July 7th, I have preached 183 times; held one discussion of fourteen nights; baptized 44, with those at reunion; blessed four children; ordained one deacon, and administered to the sick several times. Still desiring to do the will of God, am ready to go wherever sent, but prefer the Little Sioux and Galland's Grove districts; and hope that Bro. C. A. Butterworth will be sent with me. During the nine months have received $70.50 and expended $97.08.

Elder H. H. Robinson, of the Seventy, present, reports:

Have labored in Holden, Clinton, near Ocola, Rich Hill, Independence, Kansas City, Weanblean and Collins, in the Independence district. The last of October I went to St. Louis to assist Bro. J. W. Gillen, and while in that field assisted and labored in Chester, Bellville, Birkner; baptizing in all fifteen, and blessed fourteen children, ordained one priest, solemnized one marriage and am feeling well in the work and am still willing to do what I can to advance the cause. Am willing to continue in the present field unless you think best to send me to Pennsylvania.

Elder John Shippy, present, reports:

After receiving my mission from the First Presidency to labor in Michigan and Canada, while getting ready I preached in the Decatur district. Arrived in Michigan in time to assist Bro. J. J. Cornish in organizing the Chase branch. Attended the Bayport conference, then labored in different counties preaching when and wherever I could get opportunities, until January, when I went to Canada and labored with good success, being greatly blessed with the Spirit of Jesus Christ. I have baptized six since August last, and blessed four children, ordained one priest, administered to the sick. The Michigan and Canada missions are good fields for labor; had more calls than I could respond to, and left many near the kingdom, and am satisfied that I could yet do more good there if I should be returned, which I would accept if conference so directs; or I am willing to labor in the Decatur district if it be the will of the body. My heart is in the work, and wherever I can do the most good for the Master, there I want to be.

Elder H. C. Bronson, of the Seventy, present, reports:

My field of labor embraced the Far West and Central Missouri districts. I have labored at St. Joseph, Stewartsville, Clarkdale, Mayville, Dekalb, Kingston, and in Ray county. In some of the above mentioned places, especially Kingston, I have met with strong opposition; but with the aid of brethren Kinneman and Lambert we have been able to hold the fort. I can say that the work to-day in that field is onward, but like many other places, more laborers are badly needed. I am still for the Master if acceptable to the church.

Elder Emsley Curtis, present, reports:

Since last conference I have labored in Independence and Central Missouri districts. Have organized a branch of 19 members and a Sunday School in the Central Missouri district known as the Missouri River branch. Father Westwood in charge. Preached in Carroll, Jackson, Cedar, St. Clair, Bates and Vernon counties, and also in Armstrong, Kansas, 180 times, baptized 39, solemnized two marriages, ordained one priest and one teacher. Held a four nights' public discussion. In all our labors the Lord has stood by us; we lacked for nothing. Witnessed some of the most wonderful manifestations of God's power. Prejudice seems to be giving way and we have more calls for preaching than we can fill; numbers are almost persuaded. Am ready and willing to labor to the best of my ability.

Elder F. C. Warnky, present, reports:

During the past year I have labored in Independence district, also by invitation in Ray and Carroll counties for the last five months; have acted as president of Independence branch; have preached 120 times, baptized 21, ordained 1 elder, blessed 5 children and administered to many that were sick, often with gratifying results. I rejoice in seeing the church move onward and upward with greater power than ever before, and I desire to so labor that I may stand approved before God and also my brethren.

Elder Samuel Crum, present, reports:

I labored as directed at your last conference, labored in Missouri, baptized eight up to August, 1887, when I was called home on account of sickness, which has kept me home until the present. I am at your services, to labor as the conference sees fit.

Elder James Thomas, present, reports:

Having an appointment from the last General Conference to labor in the Nodaway district, I have endeavored to honor the appointment to the best of my ability. The work in the district is in a good condition; the prospects for an in-gathering are very flattering, the Saints are all at peace with each other so far as known. I have baptized twelve during the year. Hope to continue in the bonds of peace to labor for Christ.

Elder C. E. Brown writes from Providence, R. I.:

I have done the best I could. I will do the the best I can. If I do wrong help me to do right. Ephraim is not rebellious, but he can not always hold his peace, and especially when he is being kicked to death. The brethren will bear in mind I am an old man, sixty-nine years old the 7th day of next June, so I hope you will bear with me the little while I have to stay with you. I am an elder in the Church of Christ, and belong to the Second Quorum of Elders.

Elder J. H. Merriam writes from Stewartsville, Missouri:

Being appointed to the Kent and Elgin district in Canada, I immediately entered upon my labor; but was compelled to return home at the end of six months, on account of the continued ill health of Sr. Merriam. Our work was greatly hindered while there because of sickness. Was sorry to leave Canada, although it seems to be hard to get openings. While there baptized 11, confirmed 16, blessed four children, and assisted in ordaining one priest. Since returning home have preached some, administered to a number sick, and ordained one priest.

Elder Thomas Whiting writes from Surrey, Maine:

Since August 24th have labored continuously in the field. Have not kept an account of the number of times that I have preached, but I have visited and labored in the following places: New Bedford, Fall River, (having had charge of the branch for five weeks), Attleboro, Briggs' Corner, Boston, Brockton, Dennisport, Plymouth, Little Compton and Providence. I have labored to the best of my ability to present to the people the doctrine of Christ, as set forth in the standard books of the church. I have not baptized any, but I removed a large amount of prejudice, and made many friends for the cause. The outlook in this district was never so good as at the present time, and with wise and efficient labor in the future great good will result.

Some of my time has been spent in looking after the district records, and some of the branch records, getting them into better shape. At the request of Bro. E. C. Briggs I came here to labor till after the General Conference. So I am here in company with U. W. Greene.

My faith grows stronger in the latter day work. I shall continue in the field if it shall please you.

Elder J. J. Cornish writes from Gladwin, Michigan:

I am sorry that I can not be with you, but the demands for preaching cause me to feel that I should not leave now. I am pleased to tell you that this work is rolling on in Michigan, and the Lord is blessing the Saints. Can you not sustain Bro. Robt. Davis in this district? And will you not send W. J. Smith here for the next year? My labors have been in the Northern Michigan district. Have been busy all the time, and have tried to do my duty as a minister for Christ. Since the last conference I have baptized 108 persons, and attended to other duties. I am at your disposal.

Elder Samuel Brown writes from Chatham, Ontario:

I submit a summary of labor done for the Master in the Canada mission for the past year. I took the field about the 1st of July, and have preached in Corinth, Walsingham, Houghton, Seaforth, Tilbury and Essex Center, and several other places; baptized seven, confirmed eight, administered the sacrament five times, administered to the sick twenty-nine times, blessed seven children, ordained one priest, preached 125 times, led 26 prayer meetings, made three new openings, sat on one Elder's Court, solemnized one marriage, preached one funeral sermon. Have been blessed with the Spirit of the Master very much when in the discharge of my duty. Still desire to labor until the end or as long as you may deem wise to sustain me as a representative of the Church.

Elder Thomas Matthews writes from Syracuse, Ohio:

I labored in the field, according to circumstances, up to September first. Since that time I have devoted all my time to the ministry, the church supporting my family. I have preached in Meigs, Gallia, Vinton, Jackson, Athens and Hocking counties. The Lord has blessed me in presenting the word. Many calls for preaching. The prospect is good. I have baptized six. My heart is in the work and I am still willing to labor for this glorious cause.

Elder Warren E. Peak, present, reports:

I have labored in the Galland's Grove district, with the exception of a few sermons I preached in the Little Sioux and Spring River districts. I have had good liberty, as a general thing, and made some friends wherever I have had the opportunity of presenting the word. My labor has been largely among strangers and in new fields. I have preached 175 sermons, baptized and confirmed 12 persons and attended to other duties of my calling.

Elder James Moler writes from Frozen Camp, West Virginia:

Have labored in nine counties in Ohio and West Virginia, opening up the work in five new places. Have preached 117 times, baptized 31 persons, blessed children and administered to the sick. There are many calls for preaching, and I need not be idle. I have been greatly blessed in presenting the word. I find some grumblers. May the time soon come when all will know their place and work therein. I am willing to labor in the ministry the coming year, if I am wanted. Let each one try to discourage the use of tobacco, especially with the ministry.

Elder G. W. Shute writes from Hill City, Kansas:

Having been appointed to labor in Kansas and Nebraska, under the direction of Bro. James Caffall, I entered into work the first of June, and remained until December 22d, when I was called home on account of the sickness of my wife. Still I continued to labor in Marshal and Clay counties, near my home, until March, when I went into the western counties. My mission has been mostly in a new field, where the gospel has never been preached—Ness, Gove, Trego, Graham, Phillips, Rice, Clay, Marshall and other counties. Part of the time I was associated with A. H. Parsons, but mostly alone. I have opened ten new places for preaching besides preaching in other places, branches, etc. Have been very well received by the people and many have been very favorably impressed. The outlook is favorable. In the twenty-seven years of my experience in the Reorganized Church, I have never thought prospects so favorable for a permanent in-gathering of the church in the near future. Where I have labored the country is new and thinly settled, and there are many inconveniences and hardships to contend with. At this writing I am two hundred miles from home, footsore and weary in body; but I expect to baptize some before I leave here. Expect to devote my life to this cause, to preach the word and administer in the ordinances with all lowliness and meekness of heart. Am at the service and disposal of the church here or elsewhere.

Elder Frank P. Scarcliff writes from Scranton, Mississippi:

I was appointed by you at your last session to labor in the Mobile district, but owing to circumstances I have done but very little labor. In December I suffered a severe loss by fire and have been kept very close at home. I shall try with the help of the Master to do more the coming year. I hope you will send help to this mission and this part thereof. If you see fit to continue me I will try and be of service to the cause.

Elder F. M. Cooper writes from Lyons, Wisconsin:

My baptismal record is small, four being the number; but I have diligently and earnestly sought to push forward the interest of the work wherever opportunity has presented. I have endeavored to fulfill the duties of district president as well as those of a General Conference appointee. Have not kept account of the number of times I have administered in word and doctrine, but will say it has been wherever an opening offered or an opportunity had. Never in my past ministerial experience have I felt the spirit of the gospel as I have during the past year. I have felt blessed in administering in word, in ordinance. The work is certainly progressing throughout this district, as the increased demand for preaching attests. New openings have been made, and the seed sown. We need more ministerial help in this mission. The moral and spiritual prestige of the faith has rapidly increased as the character of the work becomes known to the people.

Elder I. M. Smith writes from Tunnel Hill, Illinois:

I came to my field the latter part of April, and since then have been engaged as health and circumstances would permit, trying to hold aloft the gospel banner. I have preached 204 times, baptized and confirmed nine, held one discussion lasting three days of two sessions each; assisted Bro. Hilliard in organizing one branch, and ordaining one priest and two teachers, married one couple, assisted in administering to the sick and blessing children. Have acted as clerk of the district, copying all the branch records entire upon the district record, worked up one branch record (Parrish), assisted in correcting and straightening up others. The year's work is done. Part of the time I have enjoyed splendid liberty, but at other times darkness seemed to prevail. I am still firm in the faith and willing to continue in field if my family can be cared for.

Elder A. J. Cato writes from Nathan, Arkansas:

Since last conference I have labored in the state of Arkansas, in the counties of Faulkner, Sevier and Pike; but if you judge the amount of labor done by the number baptized, you would judge me an unfaithful and negligent laborer, yet I have not been idle except when sickness and bad weather made it impossible for me to labor. In Faulkner county there had never been any preaching by the servants of God. I succeeded by the help of the Lord in breaking down much prejudice, and opening the way for others. In Sevier county I preached in new fields, (except a few times in the Silver Hill branch) all winter. In this county, (Pike), there had never been any of our (the gospel) preaching. In all new places there is a greater interest than I ever saw before, and there are but few opposers. The Silver Hill branch is a sore to the church in this country—some of the members sent me word that if I was not careful they would get a crowd and make me leave the country; but they never said for what cause. I am still subject to your order to go where you may say, and remain as long; but I am now in a condition that I can remain in this mission at a less expense than I could go anywhere else.

Elder D. L. Harris writes from San Bernardino, California:

I have labored under the missionary in charge as circumstances would permit. On September 3d I took the field, laboring until our October conference, then went to Santa Barbara county where I labored until November 19th when I returned home, finding my family sick. I with my wife watched over our little ones for two weeks day and night before they recovered so as to admit of us taking our rest. Then I went to San Jacinto, but finding that our trip was a little premature as the brethren living there were not circumstanced so as to render the assistance necessary and do justice to themselves. I did not stay long. Held some meetings and heard an exposition of the faith of the Saints by a M. E. minister, but the cause did not suffer, for we reviewed the gentleman. I am trying to arrange my affairs to take the field again, and hope it will be permanently.

Elder W. M. Gibson writes from San Bernardino, California:

I have labored under the direction of H. C. Smith in the California Mission. Have preached in San Bernardino and Colton, administered to the sick and distributed tracts.

QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

To Quorum of Seventy: Dear Brethren:—In response to our request for a full report I am glad to inform you that out of 53 members 52 responded. There were 523 baptized by the quorum, a large increase over numbers the preceding year, a larger force than ever is sent into the field. The presidency of the quorum was filled, and 12 names selected; 3 were ordained, and provisions are made for the ordination of the following 9: Thomas J. Beatty, Jas. A. Carpenter, Ulysses W. Greene, James Moler, Hyrum O. Smith, Isaac M. Smith, Orliin B. Thomas, Martin M. Turpin, Thomas Matthews. We respectfully request that as soon as ordained they will send to the secretary of the quorum, Elder R. S. Salyards, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, 1st, dates of birth and baptism; 2d, when, where and by whom ordained; and 3d, permanent address, giving town, county and state, both of address and of ordination. Your co-laborer,

E. C. BRAND.

TAKE NOTICE.

Having made arrangements with the Board of Publication to have our books kept at the Herald Office, we wish to notify our friends that hereafter all letters of business connected with Autumn Leaves, "Home Column," or Hope, must be addressed to David Dancer, box 82, Lamoni, Iowa. This will include remittances for every purpose, whether subscription money, offerings for Home Column Missionary Fund, birth offerings for Hope, or Christmas offerings from the children. Please remember and in the future send all money to David Dancer.

All applications for change of address on either Autumn Leaves or Hope, or for missing numbers of either papers, must be sent to David Dancer in order to secure attention. These regulations can not be departed from.

Send to M. Walker, Lamoni, Iowa, all articles intended for publication, either in Autumn Leaves, Hope or Mother's Home Column.

It is desirable at all times that letters and articles for publication as above specified be sent to M. Walker, but to accommodate our friends and lesson expense, such articles or letters if sent to Herald Office will be handed to us, always provided they be written entirely separate from any matter of business.

Parties not connected with the work of the Herald Office can form no just estimate of the absolute necessity existing for a strict conformity to the above notice. It is not for our own convenience merely, but in order that all mistakes be avoided and patrons have their requests promptly and correctly attended to. Let us repeat, SEND ALL MONEY TO DAVID DANCER, BOX 82, LAMONI, IOWA.

DIED.

CRUM.—At Independence, Missouri, April 6th, 1888, Sr. Sarah E., wife of Bro. Samuel Crum. She was born June 13th, 1851; baptized December 18th, 1875, by Emsley Curtis. For nearly eight months she suffered, bearing her affliction patiently, and though everything possible was done for her by loving relatives and friends, she passed away fully resigned to the divine will, and looking forward to the resurrection of the just for the fruition of her gospel hope. Funeral services at the house, conducted by F. G. Pitt.

KYTE.—At her home in St. Louis, Missouri, February 25th, 1888, Sr. Mary Elizabeth, wife of William T. Kyte. She was born in Moccas, Herefordshire, England, December 3d, 1820. She united with the church in the spring of 1842; in the next summer was married to Bro. W. T. Kyte, and the same year left their native land for the gospel's sake and gathered to Nauvoo, where they remained until the spring of 1844, when they removed to St. Louis. In 1866, she with her husband became identified with the Reorganization, of which she has ever been a consistent member and a faithful worker for the cause she so dearly loved. She was the mother of four sons and three daughters, of whom three sons and two daughters had passed on before, while one son and daughter remain to mourn her loss. How lonely and sad must be the heart of him with whom she traveled, hand in hand, for nearly forty-six years! Sad, indeed, was the parting; but he looks forward to a glorious reunion. Funeral services were conducted by J. W. Gillen.

"A precious one from us has gone;
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
God, in his wisdom has recalled
The boon His love had given;
And though the body slumbers now,
The soul is safe in heaven."

AUSTIN.—Near Sublette, Lee county, Illinois, March 24, 1888, Elijah Austin departed this life, aged 68 years, 2 months, and 7 days, leaving a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his death. He united with the Latter Day Saints when young, was personally acquainted with Joseph the Seer, always had great respect for him, and was so sorely tried and disappointed over the errors and evils which crept into the church upon the death of the Seer, and afterwards, that he never engaged, actively, in church work from that time and after. But he was always kind and considerate towards all who professed to be Saints, and frequently exhibited clear evidences of faith in the divine mission of Joseph the Seer in restoring the gospel and building the Church of Christ. He was possessed of excellent natural abilities, had a mind well stored with useful information, was a most worthy citizen, a devoted husband and father, and was actuated in his life-work by prudent and generous impulses towards all. His future is in the hands of the just and loving Father, and his reward will be according to his work and his desires.

[But a few months since, Bro. Austin called on us and had a lengthy conversation concerning the Seer's great and last sermon in Nauvoo, which he esteemed the master-piece of the Seer in its statement of facts, grouping of principles, and forecasting of coming developments. While speaking of the Seer and his work, he manifested that profound regard and tender reverence that told plainly how well he loved the Seer and the gospel work in which he was engaged. At our request, he promised to furnish us the outlines of the Seer's last sermon; but ere he had the needed leisure from lengthy journeyings and pressing business cares, the summons came and he passed on into such conditions of being as he was prepared for according to the just judgment of an Allwise and loving heavenly Father.—Ed].

Lamoni, Iowa, May 12, 1888.

York World of last January 1st:

"POLYGAMY IN SCANDINAVIA.

"THE little Kingdom of Sweden and Norway is on the verge of civil war. The nation is divided into two hostile camps, the one of which, composed of Liberals, is fighting in favor of the adoption of polygamy, while the Conservatives, who are in the minority, are strongly opposed to any question of plurality of wives. Strange to say, the women of Scandinavia have all ranged themselves under the Liberal banner, and one of the most eminent divines, a M. Nissen, who is president of the National Temperance Union, has placed himself at the head of the crusade. The movement is a distinctly popular one and has already become so deep rooted and universal that the government finds itself unable to stem it.
King Oscar attempted the other day to show his disapproval by withdrawing a subscription from his privy purse to a student corporation at Stockholm which has just ranged itself under M. Nissen's banner. So great was the outcry, however, throughout the country that the King was forced to reconsider his determination and continue his subscription.

"The leaders of the Polygamist forces assert that, in proportion as civilization has advanced, the capacity for the procreation of the human race has diminished, and they claim that nothing but a plurality of wives can save humanity from eventual extinction.

"Meanwhile Scandinavia is flooded with literature professedly bearing on the subject, and of the most realistic nature. In fact, were Zola to migrate to Scandinavia at the present movement he would be deemed quite a milk-and-water Rabelais."

We have long been of the opinion that the problem of marriage and divorce would be worked out among the Saints for the benefit of the nations, and that, too, in harmony with the revelations given to the church in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants at the first.

And we have long been of the further opinion that God suffered these all-important matters to first agitate the Church, and that, too, by and through those whom Paul said would "depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry; (1 Tim.
4: 1-3); and who he further said (2 Tim.
3: 6), "of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts."

The great problems of the enlightened world touching civil and criminal jurisprudence social and domestic conditions, political government, industrial matters including the relations of labor and capital—as well as religious questions, are being wrought out progressively under the clear light of God's revelations to the race anciently and modernly. And now that "the dispensation of the fullness of times" is beginning to be ushered in, it is most fitting that those questions upon which the entire structure of human society rests should be thoroughly discussed in all their bearings, and examined in all their workings, actual and prospective, that mankind may find the true and proper solution of them and forever be at rest in respect to the status rights, privileges, duties and responsibilities of the sexes, as such. If this shall be done, (in a large degree), because of the pernicious anti-Mormon dogma of polygamy having been secretly thrust upon Latter Day Saints, then the church and society at large will find compensation for the unrest, pain and shame which that dogma has caused in the church and in the world. Paul said to the Saints of his times, "There must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you." One good resulting from heresy and division is discussion of points involved. And this will be found largely true of the abominable heresy of polygamy—the church and the world will in the end receive benefits through the discussion it causes.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

MANY of the missionaries, ere this reaches the Saints, will have entered upon their respective mission fields for the ensuing conference year. The church has the right to expect that all who have accepted missions will prosecute them at once, and continue therein with patient, persistent, vigorous effort, in the Spirit of Christ and in the love of all mankind. All who engage in the ministry should work, work, work, wisely and well, in faith, in hope,

in charity, with meekness, humility, sober-ness, praying fervently, and striving lawfully.

Bro. J. W. Walburn wrote from Independence, Missouri, of late, and says he has conversed with some of the citizens since the late conference, and he finds they esteem the Saints highly.

Bro. W. J. Plain wrote from Elmwood, (Neutral Strip) Indian Territory, the 20th
ult. Himself and family are located there, but find no members near them. He says an elder would be very welcome there, and he has good hope that some of his neighbors with whom he has conversed will unite with the church by and by.

Bro. John T. Davis wrote of late that he and his wife would soon start for Utah to spend a few weeks or months ere going to Wales, visiting her father, mother, and many other of their friends. Their address until further notice will be St. John's City, Tooele county, Utah. Bro. Davis says he has long felt that he has a work to do in that region. We trust the Lord may abundantly bless his labors in Utah and elsewhere. And we confidently hope his two worthy sons may prove themselves to be mighty and successful men of God.

We have on hand many questions sent us which we shall not be able to answer till we have more office help. Bro. Joseph Smith, May 5th, remains at Independence, Missouri. The business of the office is constantly increasing, and when these facts are borne in mind it will be readily seen that we have ample grounds for not answering, promptly, the numerous questions sent us. Let patience have her perfect work.

Bro. R. M. Elvin delivered three excellent lectures, to full audiences, in the Saints' Church in Lamoni of late, reviewing Rev. M. T. Lamb's "Golden Bible."
The Rev. gentleman has "left his fence down" in too many places to succeed with his book where people are posted in the matters which he treats. We shall not be surprised to learn in the near future that he denies the authorship of his book among those who do not know him, for its folly and falsity are being strikingly made manifest wherever reviewed by our ministry.

Elder J. A. McIntosh will engage in debate, in Canada, at what place is not stated, with a representative of the Christian (Campbellite) faith, May 16th and 17th, on the following proposition: Resolved: "that the church that calls itself the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day
Saints is not the true Church of Christ, and is not built on the foundation of Christ and the apostles." Elder S. Prosser affirms. Elder J. A. McIntosh denies. Bro.
McIntosh wishes Bro. W. J. Smith to be there if practicable. He says the work in that region is prospering, the field widening, and the calls many and urgent.

By card from Bro. J. J. Cornish, dated at Reed City, Michigan, we learn that in the woods in that vicinity there was yet from twelve to eighteen inches deep of snow, about four inches of it having fallen the afternoon and night of April 30th.

In this issue we begin a lengthy and very excellent article on the Millenium to be continued in future numbers, and we bespeak for it a careful perusal by our readers. We take it from the Evening and Morning Star, published in Kirtland, Ohio, from December 1833 to September 1834, and from the Messenger and Advocate, published in Kirtland, from October 1834, to September, 1836. In this article will be seen what were the teachings of the church on that subject in those early times, and also what clear, cheering light the leading elders had in regard to it. Don't fail to read it thoroughly and prayerfully.

We may have something to say in our next issue, or soon thereafter, in regard to the contradictory (or seemingly contradictory) testimony of David Whitmer in respect to the Urim and Thummim of which Elder R. M. Elvin is now writing in the HERALD. Explanations are needed.

The following has been going the rounds of the papers of late and we think it worth preserving for future use:

"Major Gilbert, of Palmyra, New York, who is well known as the compositor of the first Mormon Bible, celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday the other day by doing a good day's work at the case in the office of The Palmyra Courier. He saved the first sheet of the Book of Mormon printed from each form and preserved the book until a short time ago, when he sold it for $500."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—What does the following mean? "And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and three score days, clothed in sackcloth."—Rev. 11:3.

Ans.—Joseph the Seer taught that these "two witnesses," "are two prophets that are to be raised up to the Jewish nation in the last days, at the time of the restoration; and to prophesy to the Jews, after they are gathered and have built the city of Jerusalem, in the land of their fathers."—See Concordance to Doc. Cov. These texts, we think, should be read in connection with 2 Nephi 5:9, 10, 11; and Inspired Translation of Isaiah 51:19, 20, and their contexts.

Q.—Did the "rich man" of Luke 16:19 refer to the Jews? and did the "beggar named Lazarus," of verse 20, refer to the Gentiles?

A.—We understand they mean simply what is said, and to refer to what had actually occurred between the two individuals mentioned. We have it on good authority that, after Elder G. J. Adams had preached a sermon in the public stand at Nauvoo from the above texts claiming that the rich man symbolized the Jews and that the beggar symbolized the children of Ephraim, Joseph the Seer corrected him and said that the text meant, literally, what they stated, and that the "rich man" and the "beggar named Lazarus" were two persons.

Q.—Are there persons who will never, never be permitted to come out of the "prison," "pit," or "hell?"

A.—We understand the Scriptures to teach that the wicked will go there, and that all will come forth from the "prison," "pit," or "hell," in the Lord's appointed time. In proof see Isa. 24:22; Ezek. 31:16-18; 32:17-32; Ps. 9:17; Prov. 9:18; Zech. 9:11, 12; 1 Peter 3:19; 4:5, 6; Rev. 1:18; 20:13; Jonah 2:2; Isa. 61:1; 42:7; Ps. 142:7; 2 Nephi 6:4-6; Alma 19:4-7; Doc. Cov. 85:28, 29, 30; 76:6, 7.

These texts should be read with patience and care, free from prejudice or sectarian bias, and then it will not be difficult to perceive all the essential facts in the matter, and comprehend their relation to each other.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"And all about the softening air,
Of new-born sweetness tells;
And the ungathered May-flowers wear
The tints of ocean shells.
The old assuring miracle
Is fresh as heretofore;
And earth takes up its parable
Of life from death once more."

April 17th.

Dear Saints.—The Herald of April 14th has just come to hand, and I am glad that with it came Sr. Eleanor's gentle reminder of the work before us. It is good to mingle testimony with admonition, we all know, for the one is the seal of the other; and yet testimony of the past only, without effort for the future, would arrest progression, and by and by, we would find that even the glories of the past would be fading from view. So let us back to our work, and turn our thoughts forward, still not forgetting to give in our testimonies when they will confirm or seal the work in hand.

Just now my thoughts are drawn out very much toward our young people, and the problem, "What shall we do with them," in the hours which are justly demanded by body and mind for recuperation, is the one most demanding attention. Both the body and the mind of a young person, when at work, acts rapidly and intensely, exhausting his resources rapidly; and were not a period of time granted for several of the forces exhausted, disintegration must soon take place. Experience—though our Heavenly Father has granted us means in the shape of memory to ever carry the results of it with us—does not always bring wisdom to those who have the young in their charge. Many either have forgotten their own condition as young people, or have not used their reason in weighing and analyzing that condition; and they frequently either require unjust things of those under them, or allow them a freedom that means ruination. To those who will take the trouble to realize the powers and attributes of the young, it is evident that there must be some lawful recuperative food granted them after their season of labor, or their forces will be tardy in rallying, and sometimes will never reach that perfect development which only a broader rebuilding after a measure of destruction can bring. We can not say to them,

"Do nothing, and you will not be doing wrong," for were they to perfectly follow our instructions they would soon lose the power of doing what they have been doing. But I thank God that he has implanted within the heart of the young the irresistible desire to investigate and to do, in spite of all negative preaching they may receive. And I verily believe that where one now fails of the kingdom of God from following out the impulses of this desire, ten would do so from faithfully following the opposite course.

And yet what is there that is lawful and devoid of the spirit of evil with which we can fill up the chinks of their time, and make their entire development a healthy growth? Nearly every grown person is now a mixture of good and evil tendencies, not all of which sprang from the influences of heredity; and although we do inherit many tendencies which are not pleasing in the sight of God, could not the human family finally overcome these through the same laws by which they received them? And if we could only arrange for the education, training, and (not least) the development of our children in a perfect manner, would they not be approaching the fullness of the measure of the stature of Christ?

As an opening to this work, I will state that there are three main fields or departments of growth in a child's life, each of which must be studied and cultivated, not only alone by itself, but in its relations to the other two. Nearly every one would say that the parent who half or poorly feeds his child with physical food, when he could obtain sufficient means of sustenance to properly nourish him, must be inhuman; at least blind to his needs. Even so is it with him who denies knowledge for the mind, or food for the spirit.

But just what shall we give them in each of these three departments? I see that my letter is so long now that I dare not take up the room of the column farther; but if Sr. Frances approves I will glance with you at each of these fields of human needs in another letter.

Yours in the hope of Christ's coming.

VIRGINIA.

We trust, dear Sister Virginia, that nothing will prevent the forthcoming of your letter and also that Sr. Eleanor will favor us with her views in reference to the organization necessary in order to a successful and harmonious working together of the mothers and daughters of Zion.

Dear Editors and Sisters of the Column.—Today while reading the Mothers' Home Column my soul rejoiced in the encouragement and benefit received therefrom. I gladly endorse the new proposition submitted to us by our sister, Eleanor, and think if it is complied with, it will be of great interest and help to us in training our little ones; consequently, in this and other ways, would benefit the cause we love and are engaged in. I believe that should we be earnest and united in this effort, seeking to be guided by the Holy Spirit, we will be blessed and benefitted thereby. To me it appears that the subject of educating the minds of our children, of teaching and leading them in the right direction, should be first with us; and upon this we should reason and talk in our correspondence through the Column. Also upon other subjects pertaining to home and its wide work, together with the methods and plans we should use to persuade our children to become acquainted with and interested in the reading and study of the standard books of the Church. (Those who are old enough I mean.) I believe we should show our little ones the beauties of creation, and strive to teach them to look from nature up to nature's God, and to see in all things lovely the evidence of his loving care.

Teach them that they should love God the dearest of all. Tell them of his Son, who came and dwelt upon the earth and how he loved little children, and "took them in his arms and blessed them." If we do this we will soon see that love and reverence made manifest in childish conversations with their parents; I think the time to begin to teach them the precious lessons is while they are yet infants in our arms, while they still love to pillow their heads upon our bosoms.

It certainly is necessary also to fortify their young minds against the fruits of disobedience. In order to do this, we can not use a better example I think than that of our first parents in "the garden of Eden." We should constantly keep before their minds how the Lord loves to, and will reward all those that give their life service to him. By seeking divine aid we will be guided to teach them these most needful virtues, and ere long their minds will be prepared to receive the teaching of "the first principles of the gospel," having previously taught them to pray. Then when they arrive at the age designed and shown us by the Lord, they will be ready for baptism and the laying on of hands. After we have complied with these ordinances, and are within the kingdom of God upon the earth, we should teach them that having put on "the new man, Christ Jesus," they should strive to walk in his footsteps by keeping all of his commandments, constantly instructing them in their duties and the way of life and salvation. I believe, dear sisters, when we do this, we are only doing the duty that is reasonably required at our hands, which duty is required first of us as mothers. While many other duties are required at our hands, certainly this one, of so vast importance, is the one we should perform before all others. I believe we should not fail to provide for them useful and interesting reading matter that they may cultivate their minds and receive wisdom and knowledge; and here let me say I am so thankful that the Church is providing so liberally for our children in this respect. For this blessing, and many like blessings we are receiving, we should praise God, and sustain, by our faith and prayers, all those who are laboring in this direction.

MARGARET J. HEAD.

PROTON, Ontario, April 16th,

Dear Sister Frances and Sisters in Christ:—I have had a desire for some months to write to the Home Column, but not knowing of anything that I could say that would make the way clearer or more easily trodden to those who read it, I refrained from doing so. But perhaps it may not be amiss to tell you what I have experienced, as there may be some others in the Church who lay down the Herald with a disappointed sigh because they have not found a case like their own.

Three years ago, last September, at the age of eighteen, I was baptized by Bro. W. J. Smith, of which action I feel prouder than of anything else I ever did in all my life.

I was very zealous and tried to live up to my profession, and I enjoyed the Spirit of God almost continually, but made many blunders through a lack of knowledge and correct judgment. One year ago, I was smitten with an affliction in my lungs, and since then I have been to a greater or less degree under darkness in spirit, with occasional gleams of light to gladden and cheer me on. I have tried to do my duty more from a knowledge of right and wrong than from the pleasure I took in doing it, and have in many cases succeeded, but in many others have dismally failed, sometimes because I had not sufficient strength, but often because I would not try hard enough and tarry long enough at the throne of grace to gain the victory. With me it has been "as when a hungry man dreameth and behold he eateth; but he waketh and his soul is empty." For I have had a hungry desire for spiritual food, and have longed to again dwell in the light and joy of God's Spirit. I craved the company and conversation of Saints, and happy hours were spent in hearing the testimonies of blessings received and victories won, from the lips of mother and many others. But for myself, there seemed to be a great gulf between freedom and me, which could only be spanned by diligent prayer, and there alone I believed I could get satisfaction. But I was weak in body and nearly always tired, and I had an aversion to prayer, as much prayer had been, by me, a neglected duty; and I dreaded the battle, for to pray in the Spirit is joy and pleasure, but to pray when in darkness is not so pleasant—but to my mind is just as necessary, if not more so. Jesus taught us to pray, "Deliver us from evil."

And here I would say to all Saints, Visit the sick and those whom you know are in trouble, asking God to help you to do them good, for you little know what comfort you may give them. Feed them upon the good things of the kingdom, if they are willing to receive them, and you may yet hear the Master say, "I was sick and you visited me; hungry and thirsty and you gave me food and drink." I was always able to be up, and yet my first thought, day after day, would often be, "Maybe Sr. or Bro. So-and-so will come to-day;" and how much worse must it be for those who are not able to be up. Besides this, my wish was often gratified. I was administered to several times, and while the prayers of God's servants were ascending in my behalf, I would be wondering if God would hear them and if it would do me any good. But I felt that I was obeying the law of God, anyway; and of one thing I was determined, that if God did not heal me, man never would, for I was under the gospel law and I would die in his hands. And though my doubts and their prayers ascended together, still, God blessed me by his word through them about the third time I was administered to, bidding me to ask and I should receive, and to be faithful. And when sleep set all at rest, I was oftentimes cheered, warned or chided for wrong doing, or instructed in things that I needed, in a dream. Since then I have tried to seek the Lord more faithfully by prayer and fasting, as well as by trying to do what is right; and I have not been turned away empty, for though I sometimes thought that the road I had to travel was nearly all uphill, it was only because I looked on the dark side of the case and felt inclined to break the commandment of Jesus that "Men ought always to pray and not to faint," and I have been blessed, both in body and spirit, having had pain removed instantly several times, and have been healed to a certain extent, and have enjoyed more of the Spirit of God.

Sr. Mortimer's letter increases my courage and faith, and Sr. Gertie's seemed to have been written just for me. I feel thankful to the Saints of Proton and Egremont, and to the elders for interceding with God for me, and to God above all for hearing us and dealing in mercy and love with me. The command to pray for one another was not given in vain, for when I had neither faith nor inclination to pray for myself sufficiently to receive a blessing, I have begun to amend on the prayer meeting night when the Saints prayed for me. I have been shown here a little and there a little, to myself and through others, why I was afflicted, and I have been directed to retire early and rise early, to use the oil, and to avoid being out in damp, cold or at night, to wear warm flannels, and also what to eat. And a few night ago, when I asked God to let me know whether I was innocent or guilty before him, the answer I received was, "The just shall live by faith." Who could help loving such a Master, who knowing the depth of all knowledge is not above telling us these little things for our good, and though we fall ten times a day, is ever ready to help us up again.

And now I am still afflicted, and what the future holds for me, whether joy or sorrow, health or sickness, I do not know; but I do believe that "they that wait upon the Lord, shall renew their strength;" and therefore I hope to endure faithfully and, like Paul, "To learn in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content," and to discharge the duties of that state. If any of you should feel like praying for me, I should be glad to have you do so, and I hope the time is not far distant when I shall with my whole mind, heart, soul and strength, love God and keep his commandments, and not only I, but all his people.

Your sister,

BIBLE SYNOPSIS.

The remainder of my "Bible Synopsis" will be sold at $1.25 each, and 25 cents less to all ministers of the gospel, free of postage. Every family should have one. The Synopsis is an arrangement of Scriptures under different headings. The principal passages treating on each subject are arranged to read in connection, with book, chapter and verse. Over sixty subjects are thus arranged, with portrait of the author. I want agents in every branch. Send money by Post Office Money Order, or for single book a $1 bill and 25 cents in stamps. Good profits to agents.

Correspondence.

DERBY, Ind., April 25th.

Dear Herald:—The work is moving in this part slowly, but surely. I have been almost continually in the ministry since I last wrote to you. With some success have labored in Perry and Crawford counties, Indiana, and in Breckenridge county, Kentucky, have had very good congregations and good attendance with but two exceptions. I rejoice in the work, and that we are being heard for our cause. We have more calls than we can respond to, and we think if labor is performed rightly, in time there will be a goodly number embrace the work in southern Indiana and northern Kentucky. I am the first elder of the Reorganization visiting that part of the state. We hear there is a Brighamite branch about thirty miles back on Green river. I would go there if I thought I had means sufficient and was not trespassing on another's field of labor. We hope conference has remembered this field of labor and appointed some one or more to labor here, for the outlook is very encouraging. We have had very hard times, financially, in these parts, on account of the drouth last year; and we have had a great deal of opposition here of a cowardly nature, from different denominations. They will not meet us in open discussion, and the people can see that they are afraid to meet the issue fair and square, and their craft is about to fail them.

To-day we baptized one more, a very nice man, which makes eight since I last wrote to you. Others are not far from the kingdom.

Yours in gospel bonds.

V. D. BAGGERLY.

PLAINVILLE, Mass., April 13th.

Brethren Smith and Blair:—The Saints here, as everywhere, need to be exhorted to investigate and obey the law of tithing, in order that the promises made through the prophet Malachi (Mal. 3:10), may be theirs. My testimony is, that we can not accomplish the things that we would, until we recognize the laws and commandments given to us as a people. My efforts for temporal and spiritual success are only assured by obedience to divine law. I know that evidence of divinity of the law of tithing can be received beyond a shadow of a doubt, and those that have neglected and spurned it from them, will have it to say, "the mistakes of my life have been many," and opposition to this law has been one of the mistakes.

On Sunday, March 18th, I was with the Saints at Brockton, and showers of refreshing were with us in the prayer and testimony meeting. The meeting was of about two and a half hours' duration, and one long to be remembered by all present.

At the request of Bro. Isaiah Chase, I addressed a small but appreciative audience in the evening. A number of young men were present. Their attention was attracted to our claims, which they had never considered before. I was royally entertained at the pleasant and comfortable home of Bro. H. C. Doane. The following Sunday I enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. John Smith, the heroic Maine explorer. I turned homeward Monday, March 26th, by the way of Fall River, and found Bro. F. M. Sheehy building up "the waste places of Zion" in that city. He is doing a grand work for the church in Fall River, according to all reports, and my brief observations. While in the city I was entertained by Dr. John Gilbert.

Attleboro, April 28th. I understand that Bro. H. H. Thompson, of Providence, Rhode Island, who has been sick nearly nine months, is slowly passing away. His warfare in the gospel of Christ has been fearless and bold, and I trust his triumph over death will be as glorious.

Bro. A. N. Hoxie has given heed to our "Macedonian cry," and his timely assistance has not only strengthened and encouraged us, but others not of our faith have been blessed by hearing the word of God. Sr. Lizzie Marchington has recently been healed of a tumor on her jaw bone by "the prayer of faith" and the imposition of the elders' hands according to the promise in the epistle of James.

The interest in the work continues to increase, both in and out of the church here, and some will be added by baptism in a few weeks. I hope at the end of life's journey, that I with others may say:

"Through the furnace, through the heat,
There beneath the hammer's beat,
Through temptations manifold Comes my soul like burnished gold."

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

BAY CITY, Mich., April 25th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Since writing to you I have been laboring here the most of the time. Elder Barr and myself have organized a branch here called the Bay City branch, with one Priest, one Teacher, one Deacon and twenty-one members in all.

Last week I made a flying trip to the Richland branch to confirm six that had just been baptized by Bro. Dowker, a Priest from Bay Port. We look for more to unite with us soon. Bro. R. Davis is now here with me. May the Lord bless this great latter day work.

April 30th. Yesterday I baptized four. The Lord is blessing our labors. We are holding meetings nearly every night with good, interesting audiences; are encouraged, and hope to endure faithful to the end.

EDWARD DELONG.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., April 30th.

Brother Joseph:—I arrived here last Saturday and preached twice yesterday. The Saints have arranged for me to continue here for one week or more. They all seem to feel well and are encouraged. I do not know where I shall go when through here, but as God may direct I shall try and do. I am nearly sick with a cold, but shall continue the fight. We look for Bro. R. M. Elvin to-morrow.

Yours in bonds,

H. C. BRONSON.

TABOR, Iowa, May 1st.

Bro. Blair:—Elder McClure reviewed your sermon preached at the Ross School-house last summer at our conference on the identity of the church. He put it off, you see, nearly a year, and thought to do something great, but failed in the attempt, so those present state. His efforts put forth against us are helping us more than anything else would have done at present. It awakens a desire in the minds of the people to hear both sides of the question. If you can possibly attend our conference at Farm Creek, June 2d and 3d, we shall be most happy to then meet you, and so will the old-time Saints and friends of that place.

HENRY KEMP.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., May 1st.

Brother Blair:—We arrived at Shenandoah at 8:32 a. m., Sunday; had two good meetings, which were well attended by the students from the College. One of them applied for baptism. Bro. S. S. Wilcox will attend to it. I was strongly pressed to continue meetings, as it was believed good could be done. Came here last evening, and found Bro. H. C. Bronson on the watchtower, crying aloud on gospel themes. The laboring oar falls upon me for this evening. Has been raining here for several days.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 12th.

To the Presidency and brethren assembled in conference:—I have been actively engaged in the mission assigned me last year. Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Brooklyn, New York, and Boston, Massachusetts, each have good live branches, but need able ministers to aid them in presenting the word of life to the millions of famishing souls. They hire halls at considerable expense, have increasing audiences who are tired of the chaff doled out to them in the worded essays on the lives of the ancient prophets and apostles by the popular churches of the day, who admit that all we preach was true in ancient times—but is not true in modern times. Their sophistry is so apparent that many of the best thinkers are driven from the churches and are filling the ranks of doubters, infidels and atheists.

Providence, Rhode Island, has a splendid branch of Saints. Bro. Bond is their president, and has given success to our cause in that beautiful city.

Bro. Sheehy has been chosen president of the Fall River branch, and things are reviving there to the joy of the Saints, who have a nice chapel of their own.

Bro. John Gilbert, M. D., who did such good service in the earlier part of the work, in the east, but who, of late, has become an eminent physician, has the love of a young convert for what he calls "the science," and renders assistance to the church as a good preacher and Sunday School worker.

Bro. John Smith, of New Bedford is the president of the branch there. He has a happy manner of presenting the law on finance, and is a successful minister of the word. But his business affairs hinder him from taking the field all the time. As Bishop's agent I am not certain but he ought to have actual experience in the affairs of men of business in the world to make him a perfect success. "He only is competent who has experience in the things whereof he affirms."

Bro. U. S. Greene is an able, successful young minister in Maine. He has recently been reinforced by Bro. Thomas Whiting who is destined to make his mark as an able minister of the gospel.

There are other good brethren doing local work in a very acceptable manner.

Nova Scotia Saints need ministerial help,—they feel neglected, and should be encouraged by the conference sending them two elders.

The Saints in the Eastern mission are broad-minded, earnest people, and have much to contend with in the midst of millions of people who are ignorant of the real gospel, but are fed on husks by the clergy of the people as prophesied by the great Apostle to the Gentiles. Besides this, the latter day apostasy is kept before them by the Herald continually. The eastern people are inclined to believe our statements of what we believe without telling them what we do not believe, and missionaries of the restored gospel of Christ have not time to enter into an elaborate explanation the first thing to those who are tender hearted and seeking the pure truths of the word. No, it is a real hinderance to such.

If the Herald could be a purely gospeler instead of a battle field for every fanatic's ammunition, it would soon double its subscription, do much more good, comfort, feed and build up the pure and good.

It is lamentable, indeed, to think the East can not be supplied with an earnest, God-inspiring ministry adequate to the urgent demand from the half famished people of the grand old Atlantic states.

E. C. BRIGGS.

BELL, Iowa, April 26th.

Bro Blair.—My brothers and sisters, and, in fact, all the members of the Boyer Valley branch, are very sorry to have Bro. Cornelius A. Butterworth go to Australia, because we all love him so much. We shall also miss Bro. J. W. Wight, as one brother misses another. There is consolation, however, in the thought that they are going to preach the glorious gospel to those who know not the truth. We shall all supplicate the throne of grace in their behalf.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

MINISTERIAL REPORTS

Elder J. R. Badham, writes from Los Angeles, California:

During the year past I have held over two hundred meetings, baptized eight persons and otherwise done all that I could for the work in this city. Have labored under many difficulties, but the work is in a fair condition. Outlook of the work in this southern country will be reported by our missionary in charge, so I will only say that there is plenty of work to do, and only a few to do it. The work is surrounded with much difficulty, in this western country. Much prejudice exists, but by persistent effort much is being overcome, and we are slowly gaining ground. I am still determined to keep at the work as God may sustain me.

Elder J. P. Knox writes:

About the latter part of May I was afflicted with a severe pain in the region of my heart, when I walked my limbs and fingers would swell quite large. Feeling to be in a serious condition I thought it best for me to get to my children. So to save to church further expense I borrowed money to take me to Iowa. Thus my mission at that time ended. Expenses: Bishop $5. Pittsburgh district $3, and from Bro. G. W. Henderson $1.50, I think. I am sorry I did not give in my report before this time; but hope the conference will forgive me for my neglect of duty.

I am at liberty to labor in the Des Moines district if you deem me worthy as a representative of this latter day work. I can not be self-sustaining quite, but think $50 will be all that I will need per annum.

Elder G. R. Scogin writes from Brewton, Alabama:

I have labored this year in the Florida and Alabama districts, mostly in the branches, as they were in bad condition, though better now. In this district there are seven branches, and a large territory that has never been canvassed. I have done but little in the way of getting members. Have baptized some, organized one branch and been greatly blessed of the Lord in telling the gospel story. I am still willing to labor for the best interest of the church, here or elsewhere. I want to do all the good I can, but am one of the least. The calls are more than I can fill. They want me to labor for both districts. This I have tried to do. I am willing to give my time in this way as long as the Lord will bless.

Priest John Shields writes from Horning's Mills, Ontario:

I made an opening in Garafraxa, Dufferin county, in November, 1887. Since that time have been laboring principally in that township at different points. Have been assisted at times by Bro. J. A. McIntosh and W. J. Smith. Have preached about 50 discourses and baptized seventeen. From February 16th to 26th, attended a debate between Bro. J. A. McIntosh of Alliston and Rev. T. L. Wilkinson of Toronto. The latter is the great debater of Methodism. The debate was on the subject of baptism, three propositions, mode, subjects, use. There was a complete victory for the truth. None have been baptized there yet, but we expect in the near future some will obey. I return to labor in that region in a few days. Have been laboring under Bishop's appointment since January first.

Elder J. A. Currie, Jr., writes from Medina City, Texas:

I have labored in Wilson, Bexar and Bandera counties. Our worthy brother, I. N. Roberts, has visited us here but once, but he "straightened up" things as he went. My father has had much opposition of late in Wilson county, but we hope that all will work out for the best. Prejudice is giving way some, and the work, I think, is gaining favor faster than it has heretofore. I have felt more responsibility this year than ever before, and my way has been one continual round of cloud and sunshine, alternately, sometimes overcome, sometimes overcoming. Have preached since April last 92 discourses, baptized 5, administered to the sick and blessed children. I have been of such little use to the church the past year that I have concluded to make no application for reappointment this year.

When I read how the children of Israel doubted and murmured, I am not much surprised at so much of it now. And while here and there one fancies he is right and the church wrong, and starts one of his own, (and much of it has been carried out in the Reorganized Church), I am of the opinion that those who "jump at conclusions," beyond knowledge, had better, like Job of old, put their hands on their mouth and say no more, for the work of God will prosper, and that built on "other foundations" must be burned. I stand wrapped in amazement and wonder concerning some things pertaining to eternity, and instead of teaching, I feel an anxiety to "be taught." If I could be with Bro. Roberts, or with some other good elder, about two years I might learn enough to satisfy my desire.

I hope that conference will remember us and send us more help. I ask the prayers of all the Saints. I hope to see the day when I can rise above all obstacles that impede my progress in the divine life.

Elder David Scott writes from New Albany, Indiana:

I am trying to hold up the light of life, as taught in the books, privately and some publicly. There are some investigating. Have administered to several with good results. I rented a hall some four years ago, cost about $21. Bro. Kelley spoke one or two times, and I sent for Columbus Scott to assist; at the close of our meetings seven went in the waters of baptism. I desire to do all I can in the vineyard of my Master.

SERMON BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR, DELIVERED IN SAINTS' CHAPEL,
LAMONI, APRIL 1ST, 1888.

REPORTED BY E. STAFFORD.

ELDER BLAIR read for the morning lesson the eighth chapter of Romans, and then said:

I desired to have listened to brother Clapp, who has just returned from his mission to Kentucky; but change of climate and other conditions render him so ill that he feels unable to preach.

I hope to be able to at least stir up your minds by way of remembrance, and be a means of encouragement in the wonderful work of spiritual light and salvation established in Jesus Christ our Lord. We are conscious that our days are few in the land of the living, that, as the inspired man has written, "We come forth as a flower and are cut down," and that the places that know us at present will soon know us no more. If at the best we live to be three score and ten, yet our days are those of tribulation and vanity. When we pass through life it will be but as a watch in the night and we will feel that "the days have been few and evil—as was said by the Patriarch Jacob in his time. And however strong our heart-longings, and however intense our yearnings may be to live, the time we live will be indeed like a "watch in the night"—but a moment, compared with eternity—when seen and passed away. In view of these things it is well for us to pause and consider with all the faculties and powers of our being, and meditate upon why we are, and what the object for which we have been brought into this state of being. Compared with this all-important subject, the building of empires, founding kingdoms, and developing the sciences and philosophies of the world, sink into insignificance. Therefore, when we come to this question we should pause, and consider well why it is that we are, what are the purposes to be accomplished in our being, and what of the final end of man.

When we look within and consider the capabilities of the human soul, and reason thereon, we discover that it longs for life, and can not be content with less than the assurance of a continuation of life, and we therefore conclude that the life that now is is not the final end of man, that death does not end all; also that true happiness and perfect, lasting peace are not to be found in this world; but that there is somewhere, and there is to be somehow, a vastly better condition for man than what he can possibly attain in this present life. Such is the nature of the human soul as evinced in its longings and in its yearnings. The Divine mind would never have implanted this sentiment in the human soul unless he had deemed it possible and practicable that it should be granted, and that too, in perfection. He would not endow the soul with such lofty, heavenly aspirations, without providing an easy and certain means for their best realization.

When we read in God's word—and this we now have in the Bible is but a fragment of what God has given to the children of men from time to time,—when we read in that blessed word, comparing spiritual things with spiritual, we see a divine light, a glorious purpose that cheers the heart, encourages the spirit, and fills us with an exalted appreciation of God such as the apostle expressed in the chapter when he said, "Neither height, nor depth, nor any other creature; things present, nor things to come, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is Jesus our Lord."

The world moves on, apparently unconscious that God has, or ever had a high purpose in the being of man. They eat, they drink, they marry and are given in marriage, and seek only the transitory, illusive pleasures of life, and then pass away. This is largely the case to-day everywhere in the world. A great many never stop to consider the world that lies beyond, but they hold up the dark screen of unbelief that shuts out that common light of inspiration which God gives naturally to man, and they also shut out the light found in his word, asserting that beyond the death-line all is a blank; that when man reaches that line, that ends all; that all his patient effort for the right and the true, that all the pure desire and holy hopes he has enjoyed, all, all are a delusion!

Only yesterday we read an account coming from Utah, of a young man who had been taught to believe in a life to come, but who went, in an evil hour, and listened to the crafty reasonings of a cunning infidel lecturer. He listened until his soul, saddened and poisoned, was led astray, and he went up into City Creek canyon, near Salt Lake City, away from the haunts of men, sought a desolate place, and there fired the deadly revolver into his own brain!

He had written a letter to his mother—his love of mother could not die—he begs her to forgive his rash act; says he attended Dr. York's lecture, became convinced that there is nothing beyond this life; that life had been a weary one to him, and so, disappointed and hopeless, dies by his own hand. He begged his mother's forgiveness for his last frenzied, satanic act—for I can not believe that a sane man could commit such a horrid deed as that!

To add to this painful, ruinous ignorance concerning God and the future life that is abroad in the world, there is also a most condemnable carelessness in regard to the things of eternity. A class of individuals abound who are very busy blighting the better hopes of mankind, causing the human heart to doubt the teachings, impressions, and heavenly hopes that God has given us by his Spirit and in his written word. I detest them,—and yet I pity them.

What must be the condition of a young man just starting out in life, whose soul has been enlightened in a measure by the word and Spirit of God, who has been taught to look upon the future as a condition of divine rest and joy, which, to the obedient, will be far better than man can find in this life, and who then has been persuaded—as had this young man,—that there is no God, no Christ, no hope for the future, and has ended his life to escape its evils!

Conscience, that quality with which God has endowed man, and the movings of the Spirit by which he strives with all mankind (unless they become spiritually wicked and twice dead) teach us that there is a future and a far better life. To this agree the teachings of the holy Scriptures, revealing that, through the gospel, the plan of redemption in Christ, every holy, lofty ambition of the human heart shall be fully gratified in that future world beyond this life. Yes; the holy Scriptures teach this; and they teach it in terms that we may not misunderstand; and they teach us further, that the plan was ordained before the foundation of the world; they teach that the plan of redemption was not an accident, nor anything of that kind, but that it was established in the mind, design, and purpose of the Holy One, and was promised by him from before the foundation of the world.

God has made known his purpose and design in creating man. And he who ordained the nations of men to dwell upon all the earth also planned the eternal system of redemption to be preached for our eternal well being, that man may be established in the way of life, until finally the faithful shall be brought back into the presence of God and enjoy heaven's best blessings at his right hand for evermore. These evidences we find in God's word in the Bible, broken and fragmentary as it may be; but we find it more clearly set forth in the Book of Mormon, in that the plan and design of God in the creation of man are plainly taught. God, in his wisdom and wonderful love, purposed for man a probationary state, and also planned in his wisdom that man should be brought up, step by step, by the educating requirements of the gospel and the guiding kings of his Spirit, until he should be delivered from the bondage of error, evil and corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Such, I remark, are the teachings of God's word in the Bible, but not so clearly revealed as in the Book of Mormon and in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Some may think I am irreverent, and almost blaspheming, when making such a statement as that. But this record that has come down, down from the days of Moses and from the days of Christ to our own time—it is not so much a wonder that it has become more or less imperfect,—that interpolations has obtained, that many precious things have been lost, and that the record has become somewhat defective and obscure. Is it at all strange, then, that we say the inspired words of God given to man in these latter days are much easier for him to grasp, and are far better to instruct, guide, and lead him in the way of life everlasting?

When we examine and consider the works of God in natural things, whether they pertain to the physical world or animated nature, we everywhere discover a plan, a purpose, a design in all these works, and perceive that all things are adapted to certain and manifest ends, and that there are abundant means furnished to attain those ends. We take the physical structure of man, for instance, and consider it. And notwithstanding all its delicate, complex, and intricate workings, it is systematic, harmonious, and perfect in all its parts. What skill; what divine knowledge; what wondrous wisdom is exhibited in the formation of man! Why, if one skilled in the science of anatomy were here to take this pulpit and explain that wonderful science in all its bearings, he would tell you that it is marvelously manifest everywhere in the structure of man, from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet, that there is in him the very highest exhibition of knowledge, wisdom and skill; that every part is adapted to every other part as if it were so designed and ordained. This design is seen in the tiniest blade of grass that springs from the ground; and therein the skill and wisdom of its Creator is displayed. This is also seen in the star-spangled heavens. We look through spaces of boundless expanse, as far as the eye of mortal can penetrate by the aid of the most powerful telescope, and everywhere we discover the power, might, majesty, wisdom and skill of God displayed in the countless worlds discovered, all working harmoniously, obedient to the laws of their Creator.

The soul, the intellectual, the spiritual powers of man, are matters that should be carefully studied by every one. But, O, how vast it is!

Passing along the history of the race we see the exhibitions of man's wisdom, skill and general purposes. The world has been filled with the evidences thereof in the wondrous inventions brought about by the wisdom that God has given him. But there are conditions lying beyond these that the soul of man yearns after. They are infinitely superior to those that pertain to this present evil world. They fill the heart with reverent love for God, and for his revelations of the same to man. They bind the soul to God in such a manner that neither tribulations, nor distress, nor heights, nor depths, nor anything pertaining to this present world shall be able to separate us from the love of Christ as revealed in the holy Scriptures.

I once thought there was no God, and that, if there was a God, he could not be discerned in any way. How did I get these thoughts? By reading infidel works! But in after times, when the light of Christ's gospel broke in upon my soul, when I began to believe the faith that the Latter-day Saints taught, it planted a desire in my heart that became stronger than the bands of death after I had obeyed the gospel. And when I had obtained the seal of God's Spirit and many evidences of the truth of the same,—from that time forth my heart was filled with the love of God. Christ Jesus dwells in the hearts of his believing children by the power of his Holy Spirit; it implants love there; it binds the soul of man to its God and enables him to cry out in the ardor of his spirit, "My Father! My Father!"

Other evidences might be presented by way of encouragement to the saints of God, but we pass along to consider the afflictions men pass through in this present world. Many can not see any benefit arising from them. They take them as a great hardship, and think no good can come from them. But when we see what are the fruits growing out of a wise man's afflictions, we often discover that they are for man's best good. Suffering arises from violation of law, past or present, and suffering has for its object the awakening of the soul to its true condition, teaching it obedience, and leading the individual, when under the rod, into the observance of God's righteous laws. It teaches the eternal necessity of obedience to God. Away back in the past, the prophet Jeremiah said that God does not afflict the sons of men willingly; but that he does it in order that they might reform from their sinful and evil ways. It is for this purpose, mark you, that suffering is inflicted. And to him who sees it in this light, and in humility of spirit receives the chastening, it will bring rich results. It is not that God takes pleasure in the suffering of the wicked, or anything of that kind. I have charity so broad that I believe every man and woman who have lived in this world of evils and sufferings, who have come to the knowledge of truth and have not wilfully sinned against that knowledge—that every such soul under God's shining sun will be benefitted by having lived this present life; for there are life-lessons engraven by experience upon the heart and soul of man that will give him knowledge, though humble and lowly in this life, which will be for his well-being in this life and in the life to come. All mankind will be benefitted in having passed through this earthly probation, except those who have and know the will of God, the light of God, the power of God, and who willingly and persistently violate and resist it. Such, and such only, are "totally depraved."

Some people say that the Latter Day Saints are narrow, exclusive, and contracted in their views. Mrs. Tyng, the lady who lectured in this house on temperance last Sunday evening, came to the Herald Office last week, and while talking of the Saints' religion, said: "Elder Blair, if the world knew what your people believe, they would not persecute them." "Yes," we replied, "they persecute us because they think we deserve it; not because they understand our doctrine. For it is as far reaching as the wants of the race and as wise and holy as heaven."

I remark again, that in the growth and development of this great latter day work there are jewels of truth found in the Book of Mormon which shine out upon the world's darkness as the sun upon our dark planet. For instance, there is a brief, beautiful saying—and it is embraced in very simple words—that God formed man to be happy! Well, says one, "I don't know where that is found in the Book of Mormon." Let us see:—"Men are that they may have joy!" Man was created of God for the very purpose that he might "have joy." That was the divine purpose; and it was founded in both the love and the wisdom of God "before the world was." Man was created in order that he might have an eternal increase of joy, and that, too, in proportion to his pure faith and righteous deeds before God. O, how the dark clouds of doubt and fear vanish when we get our minds fixed on this principle and fact of divine love and wisdom!

The creeds of men tell us that God created one part of the human family for the joys of time and eternity, and the other part for endless wrath and suffering. But the word of God to us in the Book of Mormon dispels this cloud and moral miasma that has risen upon the world, and it lets in the light of heavenly truth concerning the divine purpose in man's creation, teaching us that God designed man to be happy and blessed. And all through the Bible the testimony is similar. But some will say, "If this be the case, what is the use of making any particular effort in order to obtain these conditions?" That is the very part, mark you, that God has ordained for men to perform before they can be made partakers of present happiness and future joy. Just in proportion as man acts wisely and uprightly in the use of the agency God has given him, choosing to do good, so will he receive of God's blessings. And it depends upon his faithfulness in keeping God's commandments whether he enjoys a fulness of those blessings. Hence the man or woman who lays hold upon the laws of God, and faithfully keeps them, will be blessed here and hereafter—blessed in accordance with their faith and good works. And the poor heathen that has bowed down to wood and stone in his ignorance, shall, in that eternal procession, be blessed of God "according to his works, and according to his desires." This latter is another one of those gems that shine out so clear and beautiful in the Book of Mormon. No one need misunderstand it. This is found in the Book of Alma 15: 11, 12. God will judge all mankind according to their works, and according to their desires. How much that comprehends! Many there are in the world who would do the works of charity, and would bless mankind, if they only had the means. I saw, for instance, a poor blind woman—her soul was not blind, but was as bright as yours or mine—but some things she could not do for want of sight. Her eyes had never seen the light; (brother Banta remembers her, down in Brookfield, Ohio); she was without the advantages of learning. But she would charm her thousands with the melody of her song! The "desires" of that woman were lofty, great, and good. She would have greatly blessed the world, but could not. And why? Because she had not the power and the means. That woman will be blessed of God, not only for her goodly works, but with reference to her worthy desires. Well, what does all this reveal? It reveals God's loving kindness; it tells us that he will bless all the workmanship of his hands according to their works and according to their good desires. So then, the poor heathen who has never been enlightened by God's word, God will bless them according to their desires and their works. And when the world's history is written up, they will possess blessings, in many instances, that many others will not who had greater opportunities. Many of the world are getting their eyes open to this important fact. Many such are like the man whose eyes Jesus touched, whose vision at first was imperfect, for he could only "see men, as trees, walking." But when the Master touched his eyes again, then that imperfection passed away; he could then grasp and comprehend the objects by which he was surrounded. Just so with the poor heathen; they have had but a touch of the Father's wondrous power—his Spirit striving with them—but yet their vision is imperfect. That is the way that many see now—they see, but see dimly. The mists of human ignorance and human superstition are gathered around them to that degree that they do not see clearly. But when their eyes are touched by the power of God through the gospel, then they are endowed with that divine light; their vision grows more perfect; their understanding is quickened, and they become enlarged in the knowledge of God. Then, as the apostle said, Christ is within them; they walk in the light; they see in the light; they rejoice in the light.

But before I conclude I must offer a few thoughts on the simplicity of the gospel of Christ. Its simplicity is its glory. Its divinity is its power. Simple, did I say? Yes; and yet so grand in its results, being the best gift of God to man. It takes the poor sin-cursed soul from his wallowing in his sins and lifts him up and clothes him with the new life; puts the new hope in his heart; implants in him the love and the light of life everlasting; it tells him that though his "sins be as scarlet," God will make them "as white as snow." It is by God's mercy and power that it is done. And when man is born into this new life by the gospel, and is made happy in Christ, he will then be nourished and instructed in God's word and by the light of his Spirit, and will be spiritually developed and enlarged into a noble man in Christ Jesus; and he will partake of the blessings of that wonderful heirship in the kingdom of our Father, so clearly made known in the word of the gospel of Christ. The gospel is designed to make men and women happy, both in this life and in the life to come. It is designed to bring peace, justice, equity, charity, and all those excellent fruits that should adorn the human soul and are calculated to build up the race and make them healthy, virtuous, heavenly men and women.

God has ordained that man shall commence at the lower round of the ladder. This is wonderful in working! These men who can count the stars, weigh them in balances and determine their distances, if they enter the kingdom they must come down to the same humble condition as the poor and lowly ones of earth. All must pass through the same door into the sheep-fold, and when they have done this they can "go in and out and find pasture." Not to go out and stay out; but they can go outside the fold, into the various parts of the world and learn all that pertains to the history of man, all that pertains to the sidereal heavens, learn all that is to be learned that is good and noble and true in the world, have all the advantages possessed by those outside of the fold, learning that which pertains to man's eternal welfare inside the fold, and thus "go in and out and find pasture."

But all must of their own free will enter into the sheep-fold before such privileges can be enjoyed. They must meekly and humbly follow the Savior who so loved the race of man that he gave himself a ransom for all. They must come to that Savior and obey him. He took upon himself man's sin and suffering, and has taught him to come out from a blind and wicked life and accept the gospel in all its demands. The king on his throne, the prince and the peasant, the scientist and the unlearned, the millionaire and the poor toiler—every one, of whatever class or condition—all must come alike, none are exempt from the demands of the simple but mighty gospel. This is heaven's call to the sons of men. And it is to renew and reform their hearts, and to remove everything from them that is opposed to Christ. It reforms and transforms their sinful natures. Wonderful invention! Man must believe in God, and in Christ his Son, must repent of his sins and be baptized. Why be baptized? Because it has been revealed from heaven as God's will. What a revelation! Why has God ordained that man must be baptized? and what is baptism? Baptism is immersion; for the words baptize and immerse are synonymous terms, and means one and the same thing—immersion is baptism. Man must be baptized for remission of sins, be clothed upon with Christ's righteousness, and be "translated from the kingdom of darkness into that of God's dear Son." The alien who comes to this country becomes acquainted with its institutions, has a love for them, and desires to become a citizen. But he must first renounce his allegiance to Great Britain, France, Sweden, or whatever country he comes from, and then, after obeying the required forms, he receives from this government the evidences and seal of his adoption as a citizen. So must man pass under the gospel requirements of faith, repentance and baptism, having abandoned his former conditions and renounced his allegiance to sin and Satan and receive the "seal" of adoption into God's kingdom under the hands of one who has authority to administer it. And what is that "seal?" It is the "earnest" and evidence of God's power. It tells man that his fondest hopes with regard to the life beyond are secure in the hands of God. It gives him "the earnest" of his inheritance in that life. It dwells with him, if faithful, until he passes on from this life. And when he goes down to the grave, he goes assured that he will live again, and will receive all that is promised in Christ Jesus—and that is all that the Father possesses. God has made it obligatory upon man to be baptized, and to receive through the imposition of hands the gift of the Holy Ghost. He has fixed these ordinances of the house of God, and has said, "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." When in baptism we are "buried" in the watery grave, it is a simile of the natural grave, and when we are raised up out of the watery grave, that is a simile of the resurrection from the dead. In this gospel order we discover is power to raise the dead. It is an assurance to the individual that, if he abides in the gospel of Christ, and goes down into the dark regions of death, Christ will be with him and God will raise him up by the power of that Spirit which he has received. God has a living ministry, and through the ordinances the individual becomes confirmed in the kingdom of God and is made partaker of the blessings of the household of faith.

Well, now, my brothers and sisters and friends, what are the fruits of this gospel? what is to be the final reward? Scores of sermons might be preached on this, and yet the story not be half told.

There is one thing that consoles and comforts and inspires the soul to go on unto perfection, and that is that God will redeem our inheritance and will give us one exactly suited to our then glorified condition. Then "we shall know as we are known, and see as we are seen;" and then every soul will be satisfied with the goodness of God throughout the endless ages of eternity. I apprehend that no man or woman will ever be satisfied until they partake of all the blessings that God has ordained in Christ Jesus. When that condition is reached, then the yearnings of the soul will be satisfied. And, mark you, God has promised that in Christ Jesus "he will give us all things." That means a great deal. It means there shall be no death, no pain; it means all light, all joy, all power, all dominion, all glory. Have you ever stopped to measure and consider it,—all things that God will give to those that keep his commandments? Let me tell you that, the whole scheme, including the entire plan of creation and redemption in Christ Jesus, existed in the mind and purpose of God "before the foundation of the world." He foresaw and foreknew the sufferings of the race, and knew they would, if accepted wisely and patiently, be for man's good. Christ Jesus, as we are told by the Scriptures, was "as a lamb slain from the foundation of the world."—Rev. 13:8. The entire plan was all glorious in its conception, and was established in the wisdom of God, and in the love of God. And when Christ comes, the secret of these purposes of God in Christ, and the glory of that divine plan, will be manifest to man far beyond what he is able to comprehend in this present time. And when contemplating this great work of creation and redemption, the soul is filled with holy love for God, filled with holy desires, and it then feels to say, Come persecution or tribulation, come life or death,—come what will,—I will love God; I will keep his commandments!

So, then, the design and purpose of God in the creation, and in the trials and sufferings of the human race, were not mistakes on God's part. The world is full of the mistakes of men, but God never makes mistakes. But all the follies, the treachery, and the wrath of man will God make to praise him. And, as was said by the apostle in the chapter we read this morning, "all things shall work together for good to those that love God." Persecution, or tribulation, or losses, or trials, or afflictions, all will turn to the glory of Jesus Christ our Lord.

May God bless and keep you by his marvelous power, that you may be made partakers of his wonderful grace, his salvation, his wisdom and knowledge, and be made inheritors upon the redeemed earth, when all that your then purified and exalted souls ever can desire, and your Christ-like spirits ever can enjoy, will be given you until your souls are fully satisfied. God will give you all the desires of your hearts in righteousness. God's wonderful purposes in the creation are for man's best good; for man's welfare and happiness, here and hereafter, if he will do good and do it in the way that God has ordained. These are the highest purposes for which man can live, now and evermore. May all attain these, is my prayer in Christ's name. Amen.

NEPHITE RECORD.—No. 2.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

FOR prudential and exegetical reasons let me enquire with emphasis, what were the articles that Joseph Smith stated he received from the angel, and which he had the care of until the work of translation was accomplished? He names three as follows, viz., the PLATES, URIM and THUMMIM, and BREAST-PLATE. And notice when the work of translation was done, these articles were returned into the custody of the angel.

We are aware that during the period from September 22d, 1827, till June 29th, 1829, the articles were not in the care of Joseph Smith, a fact which we will examine and explain in this paper.

Some captious person, desiring to find fault and pick flaws, might seek to show that the statement of Joseph Smith was not true, when he says these articles were in his possession until the work was complete. But in a constructive sense, it is most emphatically true. The work was God's work. In proof we offer the following: "Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."—Isa. 29: 14.

The angel Moroni was the agent of God having in charge the work, and while the articles remained in the hands of the angel or Joseph Smith, the latter violated no obligation or instruction. No effort has been made, or evidence produced, implicating Joseph Smith in permitting these articles going into the possession of any of his associates or enemies. When Joseph Smith first obtained the plates and commenced their translation, Martin Harris, acted as his scribe. And that we may have a clear account we have recourse to the history written by Mother Lucy Smith: "Martin Harris, having written some one hundred and sixteen pages for Joseph, asked permission of my son to carry the manuscript home with him, in order to let his wife read it, as he hoped it might have a salutary effect upon her feelings. Joseph was willing to gratify his friend so far as he could consistently, and he inquired of the Lord to know if he might do as Martin Harris had requested, but was refused. With this, Mr. Harris was not altogether satisfied, and, at his urgent request, Joseph inquired again, but received a second refusal. Still, Martin Harris persisted as before, and Joseph applied again, but the last answer was not like the two former ones. In this the Lord permitted Martin Harris to take the manuscript home with him on condition that he should exhibit it to none save five individuals whom he had mentioned, and who belonged to his own family."—Joseph Smith the Prophet, p. 124-5. Here is the account given of Martin Harris receiving the first one hundred and sixteen pages of manuscript.

Mr. Harris and Joseph lived some distance apart, and there seems to have been an agreement between them that while Joseph was at home and completely engrossed with family cares, sickness and death, Harris should communicate with him, but failed to do so; and that the anxiety for the great work in hand caused Joseph to leave the bedside of a sick wife to look after the Lord's business. We next notice the following scene which took place at the residence of his father, after his arrival there: "When Joseph had taken a little nourishment, according to the directions of the stranger, he requested us to send immediately for Mr. Harris. This we did without delay. And when we had given the stranger his breakfast, we commenced preparing breakfast for the family; and we supposed that Mr. Harris would be there, as soon as it was ready, to eat with us, for he generally came in such haste when he was sent for. At eight o'clock we set the victuals on the table, as we were expecting him every moment. We waited till nine, and he came not—till ten, and he was not there—till eleven, still he did not make his appearance. But at half-past twelve we saw him walking with a slow and measured tread towards the house, his eyes fixed thoughtfully upon the ground. On coming to the gate he stopped, instead of passing through, and got upon the fence, and sat there some time with his hat drawn over his eyes. At length he entered the house, soon after which we sat down to the table, Mr. Harris with the rest. He took up his knife and fork as if he were going to use them, but immediately dropped them. Hyrum, observing this, said, 'Martin, why do you not eat; are you sick?' 'Upon which Mr. Harris pressed his hands upon his temples, and cried out in a tone of deep anguish, 'Oh, I have lost my soul! I have lost my soul!' Joseph, who had not expressed his fears till now, sprang from the table, exclaiming, 'Martin, have you lost that manuscript? Have you broken your oath, and brought down condemnation upon my head, as well as your own?' 'Yes, it is gone,' replied Martin, 'and I know not where.' 'Oh, my God!' said Joseph, clinching his hands, 'All is lost! all is lost! What shall I do? I have sinned—it is I who have tempted the wrath of God. I should have been satisfied with the first answer which I received from the Lord; for he told me that it was not safe to let the writing go out of my possession.' He wept and groaned and walked the floor continually. At length he told Martin to go back and search again. 'No,' said Martin, 'it is all in vain; for I have ripped open beds and pillows, and I know it is not there.' 'Then must I,' said Joseph, 'return to my wife with such a tale as this? I dare not do it, least it should kill her at once. And how shall I appear before the Lord? Of what rebuke am I not worthy from the angel of the Most High?'

"I besought him not to mourn so, for perhaps the Lord would forgive him after a short season of humiliation and repentance. But what could I say to comfort him when he saw the whole family in the same situation of mind as himself; for sobs and groans, and the most bitter lamentations filled the house. However, Joseph was more distressed than the rest, as he better understood the consequence of disobedience. And he continued pacing back and forth, meantime weeping and grieving until about sunset, when, by persuasion, he took a little nourishment. The next morning he set out for home. We parted with heavy hearts, for it now appeared that all which we had so fondly anticipated, and which had been the source of so much secret gratification, had in a moment fled for ever."—Joseph Smith the Prophet, pp. 127-139.

Now, kind reader, let me crave your indulgence while I collate these scraps of history found in the writings of those early participants in these soul trying scenes. As well might you expect an attorney to make an able, brilliant plea for the client, omitting the "law and evidence" in the case, as to expect me to make plain and establish the truthfulness of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and the means of its translation without uniting the scattered statements left to us.

One thing I object to in the writings and lectures of those who oppose our work, and that is charging Martin Harris with stealing the one hundred and sixteen pages that were lost. Three revelations were obtained ere he was suffered to take them to his house, and he always manifested regret and deep mortification at the unexplained loss thereof. Elder W. W. Blair furnishes the following testimony upon this part of the subject:

"In 1860, when conversing with Martin Harris, in Kirtland, Ohio, in respect to the Book of Mormon and the prophetic mission of Joseph the Martyr, he in reply to direct inquiries told me that he obtained the one hundred and sixteen pages of manuscript of the Book of Mormon from Joseph, and took them to his home, where he read them in the evenings to his family and some friends, and that he put them in his bureau in the parlor, locking both bureau and parlor, putting the keys of each in his pocket, and so retired for the night, after which he never saw them. He seemed to be still conscience-smitten for permitting them to be stolen. He reaffirmed his testimony, in substance, as found in connection with that of O. Cowdery and D. Whitmer, in respect to the divinity of the Book of Mormon."—Joseph Smith the Prophet, p. 131.

Here we learn that after a lapse of more than thirty years, the mishap bore heavy upon the troubled spirit of Mr. Harris. Now, if we stop and carefully and prayerfully consider the scene of deep distress that fell upon Joseph Smith when Martin Harris confessed to the loss, we will be better prepared to comprehend the word of the Lord which chilled and rebuked Joseph for the part he took which made the loss possible: "The works and the designs, and the purposes of God, can not be frustrated, neither can they come to nought, for God doth not walk in crooked paths, neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore, his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round.

"Remember, remember, that it is not the work of God that is frustrated, but the work of men; for although a man may have many revelations, and have power to do many mighty works, yet, if he boasts in his own strength, and sets at nought the counsels of God, and follows after the dictates of his own will and carnal desires, he must fall and incur the vengeance of a just God upon him.

"Behold, you have been intrusted with these things, but how strict were your commandments; and remember, also, the promises which were made unto you, if you did not transgress them; and behold, how oft you have transgressed the commandments and the laws of God, and have gone on in the persuasions of men, for behold, you should not have feared man more than God, although men set at nought the counsels of God, and despise his words; yet you should have been faithful and he would have extended his arm, and supported you against all the fiery darts of the adversary; and he would have been with you in every time of trouble.

"Behold, thou art Josaph, and thou wast chosen to do the work of the Lord, but because of transgression, if thou art not aware thou wilt fall, but remember God is merciful; therefore, repent of that which thou hast done, which is contrary to the commandment which I gave you, and thou art still chosen, and art again called to the work; except thou do this, thou shalt be delivered up and become as other men, and have no more gift.

"And when thou deliveredst up that which God had given thee sight and power to translate, thou deliveredst up that which was sacred, into the hands of a wicked man, who has set at nought the counsels of God, and has broken the most sacred promises, which were made before God, and has depended upon his own judgment, and boasted in his own wisdom, and this is the reason that thou hast lost thy privilege for a season, for thou hast suffered the counsel of thy director to be trampled upon from the beginning."—Doc. Cov. p. 66, 67.

Kind reader, had Joseph Smith been a false prophet, a base deceiver, such as "Orthodox" ministers charge he was, he never would have permitted the publication of the foregoing document condemning his own actions and stating that he was neglectful of the advice and counsel of the angel who had been his teacher or director for some seven or eight years. Please note the state of mind that Joseph was in when we left him at his father's upon realizing the great loss, and his individual responsibility for the same. Dejected and sad at heart, he returns home to bemoan his condition before God in deep contrition, and in humility to seek forgiveness. When sudden calamity, of whatever nature, falls upon a person, family or community, it seems to paralyze all power of action and thought for the time being; and such may, to some degree, have obtained in the Smith family when the loss was discovered.

But time, which heals almost every wound, in this case also gave back anxiety and desire for the work of God. And after some two months Mr. Smith and wife, when on a visit to their prophet-son to learn the situation, on the evening of their arrival the son gave an account of what had transpired, as follows: "On leaving you," said Joseph, "I returned immediately home. Soon after my arrival, I commenced humbling myself in mighty prayer before the Lord, and, as I was pouring out my soul in supplication to God, that if possible, I might obtain mercy at his hands and be forgiven of all that I had done contrary to his will, an angel stood before me, and answered me, saying that I had sinned in delivering the manuscript into the hands of a wicked man, and, as I had ventured to become responsible for his faithfulness, I would of necessity have to suffer the consequences of his indiscretion, and I must now give up the Urim and Thummim into his (the angel's) hands. This I did as I was directed, and as I handed them to him, he remarked, If you are very humble and penitent, it may be you will receive them again; if so, it will be on the twenty-second of next September."—Joseph Smith the Prophet, p. 132, 133.

There is no possible chance to mistake the language employed. The loss of the manuscript by Martin Harris caused Joseph Smith to surrender to the angel the Urim and Thummim.

Some of those who claim to be the friends of Joseph Smith, and to believe in his mission as a prophet, Seer, and translator, would have us believe that, after surrendering the Urim and Thummim, a "Seer stone" was given him to supply the place thereof. But no facts of history are furnished to show how, where or from whom, said Seer stone was obtained; but we are asked to believe he had such means of translation upon empty, unsupported and contradicted statements, and the statements of his pretended friends. This, when boiled down, would stand about thus:—Joseph Smith obtained a Seer stone by which the Book of Mormon, as we now possess it, was translated; that after the translation was completed, Joseph Smith gave the Seer stone to Oliver Cowdery; that, upon the death of Oliver Cowdery, the Seer stone was obtained by Phineas Young; and that, upon the death of Phineas Young, the Seer stone, passed into the possession of the president of the Utah Mormon Church.

The radical opposers of the Book of Mormon, who are constantly engaged in trying to prove the whole business of so-called Mormonism, to be a cheat, a humbug and a fraud, tell us that, while a Mr. Chase was digging a well, a "Peep stone" was found, and that Joseph Smith, stole it from Mr. Chase's child. Was I compelled to believe in one or the other of these stories, I think I should prefer the "Peep stone," in lieu of the Seer stone. But I have said, and now say, if it can be established that the Book of Mormon was translated by any other means than the Urim and Thummim, through and by the gift of God, then I would abandon the book and have nothing more to do with it. Do not be startled, my reader, for this is no hasty conclusion, but the result of diligent, careful and prayerful research during the past twenty-two years, and also of having met in public discussion several able ministers upon the question of the divine authenticity of the book. All these have led me to the conclusions I now hold to.

THE SEER STONE.

October 14th, 1881, Mr. D. Whitmer, was interviewed by a newspaper reporter, and that interview was published in the Chicago Times. The Deseret News undertakes to correct some of the errors made by Mr. Whitmer. Elder George Reynolds quotes this from the Deseret News: "The next error is, that the Seer stone which Joseph used in the translation was called 'Urim and Thummim.' The instrument thus denominated was composed of two crystal stones 'set in the two rims of a bow.' The Seer stone was separate and distinct from the Urim and Thummim. The latter was delivered to the angel, as well as the plates, after the translation was completed; the former remained with the church and is now in the possession of the president."—Manuscript Found, p. 85.

Elder Reynolds is not specific in his statement as to the date or time when Joseph Smith delivered up the Urim and Thummim to the angel. If it was not until the translation was "completed," and at the same time that the plates were returned to the angel, then the query would arise as to what was the use of the Seer Stone. I can see but one object in publishing such an untruth, and that is it is the last straw at which the drowning man (church) catches to give a semblance of a continuation from the original organization of the church. Elder Edward Stevenson, of the same church, in a letter in the Deseret News, makes Martin Harris say, that, "the prophet possessed a Seer Stone, by which he was enabled to translate as well as with the Urim and Thummim, and for convenience he then used the Seer Stone."—Manuscript Found, p. 91.

This could not, under any circumstances be accepted in court as the direct testimony of Martin Harris, but only the assertion of Elder Stevenson, and it should be received with a large margin, for the reason that it contradicts the facts of history. "Martin (Harris) said further, that the Seer Stone differed in appearance entirely from the Urim and Thummim that was obtained with the plates, which were two clear stones set in two rims, very much resembling spectacles, only they were larger. Martin said there were not many pages translated while he wrote; after which Oliver Cowdery did the writing."—Manuscript Found, pp. 91, 92.

The effort is made by the use of the name to "makebelieve," there was a Seer Stone, and it is an easy thing to make, publish, and get a people to believe an untruth, who will neither read or hear the facts of history. All of the above supposed evidence, is much relished and utilized by the Rev. M. T. Lamb, who, in a foot note, gives us his masterly deductions and opinion. Hear it, O ye wondering nations, and be cheered up for his next! He says: "Mr. Smith was blessed with two different instruments for translating these plates: The Urim and Thummim and a stone called the 'Seer Stone' in the above quotation from Martin Harris, and known by outsiders as the 'Peep Stone,' because of the peculiar method of using it, to be explained farther on."—Golden Bible, p. 240.

That which gives the Rev. Lamb pleasure in using these false statements is, they serve his purpose best in his labor to destroy the simple truth. Innocence and virtue are often at the mercy of the vile spoiler of all that is pure, good, true, noble and lovable!

David Whitmer, when explaining the method of translation says: "Joseph Smith would put the Seer Stone into a hat, and put his face in the hat, drawing it closely around his face to exclude the light; and in the darkness the spiritual light would shine."—An Address, p. 12. Here the investigator is asked to believe that the "last living witness" is in agreement with his brethren of the west, and from the reading of the following, we might be inclined to think that, perhaps he borrowed the idea without giving due credit: "After the translation of the Book of Mormon was finished, early in the spring of 1830, before April 6th, Joseph gave the stone to Oliver Cowdery and told me as well as the rest, that he was through with it, and he did not use the stone any more."—An Address, p. 32.

Some one hath written that "fools may venture where angels dare not enter." This Address of David Whitmer, is dated at Richmond, Missouri, April 1st, 1887. While Manuscript Found, by George Reynolds, is dated at Salt Lake City, Utah, 1883. At the time of the issuing of Reynolds' book, David Whitmer said quite contrary to what he did afterwards in his Address. The statements of David Whitmer in his pamphlet are palpable and plain contradictions of the accepted facts of history. Whitmer says that Joseph gave the "stone" to Oliver Cowdery. No mention of such a stone is found in the history of Joseph Smith, who informs his readers that what he received he returned to the angel. Both statements can not be true when so cross-wise, and I feel impressed to admonish those who are boosting the "Seer Stone" theory, that one sure way of destroying the value of testimony is to have the witness cross himself, thereby impeaching his own evidence, and thus have their testimony thrown out of court as not reliable.

Here is something that was written after the death of David Whitmer, evidently by some one who possesses a very imperfect knowledge of the facts in the case, but who had an inordinate desire to eclipse the truth, and foist in a very adroit way the Seer (Peep) Stone falsehood: "The result of this vision was a proclamation setting forth the facts enumerated. The 'Urim and Thummim,' mentioned in the account of the vision were a pair of transparent stone spectacles. Smith would put on the spectacles, when a few words of the text of the Book of Mormon would appear on the lenses. When these were correctly transcribed by Cowdery, who acted as his amanuensis, these words would disappear and others take their place. When one hundred and sixteen pages were completed, Smith entrusted them to Martin Harris, to take to his home with a view to convert his family to the new faith. They were placed at night in a bureau drawer, and next morning were missing, having been stolen. They were never found and never replaced, so that the Book of Mormon to-day is short that number of pages of the original matter. As a chastisement for his carelessness, the Urim and Thummim was taken from Smith. But by humbling himself, he again found favor with the Lord, and was presented with a strange, oval shaped, chocolate-colored stone, about the size of an egg, but more flat, which, it was promised, should answer the same purpose. With this stone all the present book was translated."—Richmond Democrat, January 26th, 1888.

Among the egregious blunders of the foregoing, is that which says that Oliver Cowdery wrote the one hundred and sixteen pages which were lost; while the fact is, Joseph Smith had no acquaintance with Oliver Cowdery for several months after the loss of the manuscript. There is not a particle to inspire faith or confidence in the Book of Mormon, found in the effusions of those who advocate the Seer Stone theory. It is time that such an Ignis Fatuus was laid away in oblivion.

I will now prove that the Book of Mormon, as we now have it, was translated through and by the gift and power of God by the means of the

URIM AND THUMMIM.

The last direct and positive knowledge we have seen of the Urim and Thummim, was the account Joseph Smith gave of his father and mother relative to delivering the same to the angel. We now take up anew his recital of the events of that critical period to the prophet and his work: "After the angel left me," said he, "I continued my supplications to God, without cessation, and on the twenty-second of September I had the joy and satisfaction of again receiving the Urim and Thummim, with which I have again commenced translating, and Emma writes for me; but the angel said that the Lord would send me a scribe, and I trust his promise will be verified. The angel seemed pleased with me when he gave me back the Urim and Thummim, and he told me that the Lord loved me for my faithfulness and humility."—Joseph Smith the Prophet, p. 134.

By the same witness that we trace the loss of the Urim and Thummim, we also trace its restoration. And now let us be careful and watch the testimony until the translation is accomplished.

I do not suppose there are any Saints who will call in question the inspiration and authority of the revelation of May, 1829, given in relation to this very subject. It reads: "Now, behold, I say unto you, that because you delivered up those writings which you had power given unto you to translate by the means of the Urim and Thummim, into the hands of a wicked man, you have lost them; and you also lost your gift at the same time, and your mind became darkened; nevertheless, it [the Urim and Thummim.—Elvin] is now restored unto you again, therefore see that you are faithful and continue on unto the finishing of the remainder of the work of translation as you have begun."—Doctrine and Covenants, p. 78.

Here we have direct revelation from God telling of depriving Joseph Smith of the Urim and Thummim, as also the restoration thereof, and instructing him to continue by that means the work of translation to the finish.

During the first years of the church Joseph was plied with many questions on the rise of the church, and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. Here is one: "How and where did you obtain the Book of Mormon?" To this he replied, "Moroni, (the person who deposited the plates from whence the Book of Mormon was translated in a hill in Manchester, Ontario county, New York,) being dead, and raised again therefrom, appeared unto me and told me where they were, and gave me directions how to obtain them. I obtained them. I obtained them and the Urim and Thummim with them, by the means of which I translated the plates; and thus came the Book of Mormon."—Elders' Journal, pp. 42, 43.

Nothing is misleading or ambiguous in this plain reply by the chief witness in this great religious event.

The mother of the prophet gives us a description of the Urim and Thummim, and for its simplicity and candor I here insert it: "I trembled" so she says, "with fear lest all might be lost in consequence of some failure in keeping the commandments of God, that I was under the necessity of leaving the room in order to conceal my feelings. Joseph saw this and said: 'Do not be uneasy, mother, all is right—see here; I have got a key.' I knew not what he meant, but took the article of which he spoke into my hands, and, upon examination, found that it consisted of two smooth three cornered diamonds set in glass, and the glasses were set in silver bows, which were connected with each other in much the same manner as old fashioned spectacles. He took them again and left me, but said nothing respecting the record. . . . That of which I spoke, which Joseph termed a key was, indeed, nothing more nor less than the Urim and Thummim, and it was by this that the angel showed him many things which he saw in vision, by which he could also ascertain, at any time, the approach of danger, either to himself or the record, and on account of which he always kept the Urim and Thummim about his person."—Joseph Smith the Prophet, p. 107, 113.

Times and Seasons, vol. 3: pages 832, 843, 866, 885 and 897, all clearly show that Joseph had in his keeping the sacred Urim and Thummim up till the translation was completed.

And to this agrees the testimony of Oliver Cowdery concerning Joseph Smith: "Near the time of the setting of the sun, Sabbath evening, April 5th, 1829, my natural eyes for the first time beheld this brother. He then resided in Harmony, Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania. On Monday, the 6th, I assisted him in arranging some business of a temporal nature, and on Tuesday, the 7th, commenced to write the Book of Mormon. These were days never to be forgotten—to sit under the sound of a voice dictated by the inspiration of heaven, awakened the utmost gratitude of this bosom. Day after day I continued uninterruptedly to write from his mouth, as he translated, with the Urim and Thummim, or as the Nephites would have said, 'Interpreters,' the history, or record, called the Book of Mormon."—Cowdery Letters, p. 2.

He must be an ingrate, indeed, who would deny the revelations of Jesus Christ and the testimony of these two first apostles of this dispensation by an attempt to palm off the "Seer stone" or "peep stone" story and fly in the face of the written facts of the history recorded by the only fully competent witnesses, the translator and the writer of the book.

Here is the testimony of "the last living witness," David Whitmer, who says he "was an eye-witness to the methods of procedure. The plates were not before Joseph while he translated. . . . The method pursued was common-place, but nevertheless effective. Having placed the Urim and Thummim in his hat, Joseph placed the hat over his face, and with prophetic eyes read the invisible symbols, syllable by syllable and word by word, while Cowdery or Harris acted as recorders. . . . So illiterate was Joseph Smith at that time that he did not even know that Jerusalem was a walled city, and he was utterly unable to pronounce many of the names which the magic power of the Urim and Thummim revealed, and therefore spelled them out in syllables, and the more erudite scribe put them together. The stone was the same used by the Jaredites at [from?] Babel. I have frequently placed it to my eyes, but could see nothing through it. I have seen Joseph, however, place it to his eyes and instantly read signs one hundred and sixty miles distant, and tell exactly what was transpiring there. When I went to Harmony after him, he told me the name of every hotel at which I had stopped on the road, read the signs, and described various scenes without having ever received any information from me. . . . But a stone had been found with the plates, shaped like a pair of ordinary spectacles, though much larger, and at least half an inch in thickness, and perfectly opaque, save to the prophetic vision of Joseph Smith. On the tablets or plates were engraven the records of the tribe of Nephites, and the stone was the Urim and Thummim, by which the Seers of old had deciphered the mysteries of the universe."—Chicago Times, August 7th, 1875.

I call the attention of the investigator to this agreement of Mr. Whitmer and Mother Lucy Smith, in their description of the Urim and Thummim, and also to the plain, positive and very emphatic statement that the "opaque stone" was the Urim and Thummim.

Six years later Mr. Whitmer gives his testimony as follows:—"The tablets or plates were translated by Smith, who used a small oval or kidney-shaped stone, called Urim and Thummim, that seemed endowed with the marvelous power of converting the characters on the plates, when used by Smith, into English, who would then dictate to Cowdery what to write. Frequently one character would make two lines of manuscript while others but a word or two words."—Chicago Times, October 14th, 1881.

All of the foregoing testimony of David Whitmer agrees in the main fact, that the translation was done through the means known as "Urim and Thummim;" and the only discrepancy is in the repeated descriptions made thereof, and this ought not to figure against the truthfulness of witnesses who testify that the work of translation was done by means of the ancient and sacred oracle of God. Let shame, confusion and failure come to all who labor or connive to foist upon the unsuspecting and credulous the false opinion that it was by any other means.

MILLENNIUM.—No. I.

The Millennium is that important period in the economy of God, which will put to the test the theories of all ages, and all generations, when God will try the faith of all living, separating between the good and the evil, and enabling all to discern between the righteous and the wicked, between those who serve God and those who serve him not.

There is no period in human existence about which there has been as much said by the prophets and apostles, as the time of Christ's reign, which reign was to last a thousand years; which originated the idea that there will be such a period as the Millennium; which term signifies a thousand years. John the Revelator gives us the following account of it in Rev. 20:1-9:

"And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled; and after that he must be loosed a little season. And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them."

We are here told that an angel came down from heaven and laid hold on the devil and bound him a thousand years, and that during that thousand years he should have no power to deceive the nations, that during that period the saints reigned with Christ; but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were ended, that they who had part in the first resurrection shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Christ a thousand years; and when the thousand years are expired, Satan is to be loosed for a little season; and he will go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth; which proves this fact, at least, that all this is to take place on the earth; that it is on the earth where the saints are to reign with Christ a thousand years. And they will go up on the breadth of the earth, and compass the camp of the saints; so there can be no doubt as to the fact that this thousand years is to transpire while the saints are on the earth, and their camp is to be invaded after the thousand years are expired, and all this on the earth.

The sacred writers have been exceedingly prolific in their writings on the subject of Christ's reign. It is every where spoken of and set forth in the most splendid light; and that when the time comes, the saints, yea, all of them will reign with Him. That this reign of Christ is to be an earthly reign is not only evident from the before mentioned prophecies, but we have a saying of Paul in 1 Cor. 15:22, 24, which limits it to the earth, as follows: "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at His coming. Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority, and all power." Verse 28th reads thus: "And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son himself be subject unto Him that put all things under Him, that God may be all in all." Here the apostle says, that when all that died in Adam shall have been made alive in Christ, then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to the Father. In this verse we are told that He himself shall be subject to the Father, when all things are put under His feet. After this time there can be no such thing as a reign of Christ distinctly, or separately, and of necessity Christ's reign must be before this time; and if so, it must be in time; and if in time, it must be on the earth; for it would be curious indeed for Christ to reign a thousand years in eternity, where there are neither days, months, nor years. The apostle seems to have understood himself perfectly when he wrote his revelations, and set forth his ideas so clearly that none need mistake him. He says that Christ is to reign a thousand years, and the expression, "a thousand years," shows that this reign belonged to the earth and time; for it is only in time where there are days, and times, and seasons, and years: the unseen world and eternity, have no such divisions. He says that the saints were to be raised and reign this thousand years with Him, and this resurrection of the saints to reign with Christ, was the first resurrection. He says that during this thousand years, Satan will be bound, so as not to be able to deceive the nations, and during this thousand years the saints on earth will multiply and their posterity will spread abroad upon the earth.

In Rev. 5: 8-11, we have the same subject set forth thus: "When he [the Lamb] had taken the book, the four beasts, and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odors, which are the prayers of Saints. And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Here we are told that those who were redeemed unto God out of every kindred, tongue, people, and nation, were to reign on the earth. If the question is asked, how long will they reign on earth? the answer is, a thousand years, so that this important period does not only affect those in time, but those in eternity also.

If John's account of this subject be correct, all the Saints which were redeemed unto God out of every nation, people, tongue and kindred, (and if so they must be from all generations, from the days of righteous Able down to the second coming of Christ, or else they will not be from every people and nation), are to reign on the earth with Christ a thousand years: and this glory they are to obtain by having a part in the first resurrection.

In Rev. 1: 7, John describes the coming of the Savior when he comes to reign on the earth a thousand years thus: "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen."

In all that John has said about the coming of the Savior, he has never told us of any other object that he had in coming but to reign on earth a thousand years; for where he has mentioned the object, this he says is what it is; so that we are not left to conjecture as to the object of the Savior's coming; for the very same scriptures which tell us of His coming again, tell us also that when He comes, He will reign on the earth a thousand years, and all those of the first resurrection with Him. The matter is fairly settled, that if ever the Savior comes again, He will reign on earth a thousand years, and all the church of the First-born whose names are written in heaven, will at that time obtain a resurrection and reign with Him, even all who are redeemed from among men, of every tongue, kindred, people and nation, and if the Savior does not reign on earth a thousand years, and all the saints with Him, He never will come the second time.

Conference Minutes.

MANCHESTER.

This district conference was held in the Saints' Chapel, Clarendon street, Hulme, Manchester, England, March 30th and 31st, April 1st and 2d, 1888. Elder Joseph Dewsnup, president of the district, in the chair; James Baty secretary. Delegates: Manchester branch, Elder James Baty; Farnworth branch, Elder Joseph Ramsey. Officers reports: Elder Joseph Dewsnup, president of district, reported. Elders John McCue, W. R. Armstrong, Wm. Armstrong, Joseph Bennett, Charles Hughes, Thomas Hughes, Henry Greenwood, Wm. Clarke, Thomas Mills, Joseph Dewsnup, Robert Baty, James Baty, Joseph Spargo, C. H. Hassel, Joseph Ramsey, Henry Hoole, Wm. Leeking, Joseph Naylor, Thomas Paxton, John Austin. Priests: Wm. Towers, S. F. Mather, John Foden, Joseph Dewsnup, Jr., Frederick Manourie, Horace Owen, James Eckersley, Thomas Cowhill, Frederick Beaumont, Thomas Spargo, T. Roberts. Teachers: Wm. Nixon Towers, John Turner, Edward Parry, Henry Warren, Wm. Sharp, Joseph Laycock. Deacons: Samuel Platts, Wm. Partington, D. Aitkin, John Dewsnup. Bradford and Gorton mission reported by Elder Wm. R. Armstrong; prospects good. Newton Heath mission, by Elder Henry Greenwood; who reports a good work being done. Both these missions are conducted in connection with the Manchester branch. Spiritual report of the branches: Manchester, Farnworth, Sheffield and Leeds, all in good condition. The financial condition of these several branches was considered satisfactory. Statistical report for 1887: Manchester, last report 89, present, 103; including 13 elders, 7 priests, 3 teachers, 1 deacon; baptized 17, received on certificate 2, died 1, removed 2, expelled 2. Farnworth, last report 29, present 44; including 5 elders, 4 priests, 1 teacher, 1 deacon; baptized 1, received by vote 15, expelled 1. Sheffield, last report 42, present 53; including 2 elders, 2 priests, 1 teacher, 1 deacon; baptized 11. Leeds, last report 18, present 21; including 3 elders, 1 priest, 2 teachers, 1 deacon; baptized 4, expelled 1. Wigan, amalgamated with Farnworth branch, and included in the report of that branch, part having joined the branch during 1836, the remainder in 1887, with the approval of the district conference. District financial report read and approved. Endorsement of officers' licenses referred to a committee, composed as follows: Elders Henry Greenwood, Joseph Ramsey, John Austin and James Baty. Recommendations for ordinations from Manchester, Farnworth, Sheffield and Leeds, read and laid on the table. Elder Joseph Greenwood, of the Birmingham district, having arrived, it was resolved that he be invited to participate in the business of the conference. Committee upon endorsement of licenses reported that they could not recommend the indorsement of the licenses of Elders C. H. Hassall and Charles Hughes, and Priest James Eckersley, and recommended that said licenses be withheld for causes stated in their report. Report received and committee discharged. Resolved that all licenses presented be endorsed, with the exception of those named by the committee. Sunday morning services held in the Vestry Hall, Hulme Town Hall for fellowship and sacrament. Elder Thomas Taylor, president of the mission, in charge. Four were confirmed who had been baptized during the previous week. Several hymns were sung and many testimonies borne, after which the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered. Remarks by Elder Joseph Ramsey; the remaining portion of the afternoon was occupied by testimony and singing, concluding with a very interesting address by Elder Thomas Taylor, tracing the progress of the work of the Reorganized Church in this country since its introduction twenty-four years ago by Elder Charles Derry. Sunday evening meeting was addressed by Elders Thomas Taylor and Joseph Greenwood; both of whom were evidently inspired by the Spirit of God, showing conclusively what the laws of God's kingdom are, and the necessity of obedience thereunto if we desire to obtain salvation. These addresses were listened to by a large and attentive congregation. At Monday forenoon meeting, Elder Henry Greenwood, vice president of the district, in the chair. After the consideration of several incidental motions, the question of ordinations was taken up, and the following approved: Manchester Branch, member Frederick Bruton, to the office of priest. Farnworth Branch, deacon, Wm. Partington to the office of priest; member, Joseph Harper, to the office of teacher. Sheffield Branch, teacher, Wm. Sharp and Deacon Samuel Flatts, to the office of priests; member, G. H. Arbo, to the office of deacon. Leeds Branch, member, James Roberts, to the office of deacon. Letter read from Priest (suspended) Benj. Mellard, respecting labors done by him, to which the secretary was instructed to reply. Elder Joseph Dewsnup, the president of the district, was appointed to represent the district at the ensuing mission conference. The Priesthood appointments for labor referred to the presidency of the district for arrangement. The general authorities of the church, the mission and district authorities were sustained in righteousness. Resolved that an abstract copy of the minutes be prepared by the secretary and forwarded to the Saints' Herald for publication. Conference adjourned until October next, time and place to be arranged by the president of the district. Benediction by Elder Thomas Taylor. The conference, taken altogether, has been the most successful of any ever before held in the Manchester district.

INDEPENDENCE.

This district conference convened at the Saints' Chapel, Independence, Missouri, at ten o'clock, March 26th, 1888. Adjourned to meet at the New Hope branch in Monroe county, Alabama, on the 14th and 15th of July, 1888.

Miscellaneous.

PASTORAL LETTERS.

Having been appointed to take charge of the work in Missouri and Kansas, except those portions of Missouri assigned to Brn. J. R. Lambert and J. W. Gillen, we take this method of reaching the Saints therein, for the purpose of imparting and obtaining information.

Bro. A. H. Parsons has been appointed by the conference to Nova Scotia, and will leave the North-West Kansas district at once for that field. We have appointed Bro. G. W. Chute to look after the interests of said district, until the assembling of its conference in June, when provision can be made for the office by selection and vote.

Bro. E. C. Brand has been placed in charge of that portion of the field known as the Central Kansas district, and Bro. I. N. White over the Independence district. It is understood, of course, that these brethren occupy in the fields named as General Conference missionaries, and that they honor and sustain the local authorities in all righteous methods and work. This they will, doubtless, do; but we mention it that the Saints may know that these appointments are not intended as a conflict with the legitimate work of those chosen by branches and districts. One of the above named is already district president, having been elected by the Saints, and may again be chosen for that office. We aim at harmonious and effective labor throughout the mission. This, we believe, is understood by the missionaries and will be manifest among the Saints where they labor.

A great portion of the mission we are unacquainted with, and we therefore appeal to the Saints in the different localities therein, outside of the districts above provided for, to send us any information they may deem proper for us to possess regarding the condition and needs of the work in their localities, together with a statement as to the opportunities and prospects. Do not allow your deep anxiety for an elder in your neighborhood to cause you to exaggerate in reporting the prospects. There are many openings; but we desire to enter and occupy in the most important fields first; and we will try to use the light given us in judging of the relative importance of calls, when the actual facts are given us by those in the localities from which we hear.

It is desired that all the local ministry take hold, and act, under the direction of the local authorities. Remember that the work is of God, and the highest honor you can have here is in representing it. All are answerable to its Author, and, as you estimate the importance and hope for the triumph of the work, so labor; for your labors, sacrifices and endurance in the interests of the gospel are but the voicing of your love and appreciation of it, and of your good will toward men.

Those who are laboring in the fields where the above named brethren are in charge will report to them, and all others direct to us. We ask, further, that all missionaries in this field report to us once in three months, beginning July 1st.

Remember, Saints, that in return for the good it confers, the church has a righteous claim upon you for the holiness of life, and diligence in your sphere or department of the work. You are called to occupy "till he come." Let Christ be your model in occupying. If you have done well, be not weary, but continue, for the reaping time approaches. If you have been asleep, it is time to awake and redeem the time. There is no room nor place in the Lord's vineyard for trees that will not bear fruit. The idler does not represent any part of God's work. Let us be up and doing, and be found co-workers with God. Let us bear tidings of peace to the world, and live at peace with each other, that consistency in life and labor may make our service effectual.

In hope of final triumph,

JOSEPH LUFF.

Through the appointment of the First Presidency, confirmed by the late conference, I was appointed to the Iowa and Missouri mission, with this difference, that only the northern part of Missouri, consisting of the North-East, Far West and Nodaway districts belong to my charge.

The rule requiring the missionaries to report to me every three months during the last year was an experiment; but it worked so well that, with their permission, it will be in force for another year. These reports, it will be remembered, are to be made out about the fifteenth day of the months of June, September, December and March. Let the reports be as explicit as necessary, but pointed and brief, stating what has been done, prospects, etc.

Conference is now over, with its many cares and anxieties; and although not characterized (taking it as a whole) with as much unity, spirituality and power, as some of its predecessors, it was, nevertheless, an important one, and gives promise of the success and consummation for which the Saints of God have long hoped and prayed. The time has now come for good, earnest work, in the field and at home, for another year, before our minds are again diverted by the duties of another conference. Let no spirit of bitterness, unhallowed thought, or improperly founded suspicion disqualify us for duty. The Master's work has been committed to our charge, and how important it is that it should be done, and done with His approval.

Do not allow yourselves to be deceived by the thought (which has been expressed in words) that "the old Twelve led the church astray, and here lies the greatest source of danger at the present time." Admit for argument's sake (though it is not true) that the first Twelve are mainly responsible for the destruction of the church, does it follow, therefore, that the present Twelve will go and do likewise? Let me ask you, dear Saints, plainly, as one who loves your souls, and would not have you deceived by the Twelve, or anybody else, (for it is time that this subterfuge is torn away). How did the first Twelve lead the church astray? Was it by calling the attention of the Saints to the importance of God's word and law contained in the books? Was it by holding that word and law as supreme to everything else, and asking the Saints to carefully and prayerfully investigate it? Was it by submitting all their leading and important decisions to the body for free and full discussion? Was it by manifesting a willingness, nay an anxiety, that the church should give their claims a free, full and impartial investigation?

Again; God's ways are one eternal round. He is perfect and unchangeable. If we are acquainted with Him we always know where to find Him. The Devil is constantly changing. It does not matter to him how the people of God are deceived, nor by whom they are deceived, just so it is done. The Reorganization has been fully warned against the usurpations and wrongs of the first Twelve. There is, perhaps, no part of the church so well watched and guarded as this quorum. Do you think there is the place where the Devil will now make a successful attack in order to destroy the church? No, no; that would not be like him. He will, more likely, attack a less guarded point, where he would, in the very nature of things, be more likely to succeed. Nothing would give the Devil more pleasure (such as he is capable of enjoying) than to have the Saints fix their eyes upon one given point, to that extent, and in that manner, that they are rendered incapable of watching other parts of the church, or even themselves as they should. This enables him to step in, almost unnoticed, and with comparative ease accomplish his hellish designs.

One more thought and I am done with this topic. I express these thoughts because I can no longer remain silent and with a clear conscience answer to God. The Twelve did not succeed in fastening polygamy and its monstrous concomitants on the church, until years after they had taken three of their number and constituted a First Presidency out of them! It was with the prestige which belongs to this first quorum in the church that they were enabled to accomplish their evil designs.

Now, I do not believe that any quorum in the church has, knowingly, sought to lead the Saints astray. The greatest mischief and the most distrust, have been the results of individual work, and this is not confined to any one quorum of the church. It is manifestly unjust, and very unsafe, for to seek to lessen the influence of any quorum in the church because of the wrongs, or supposed wrongs, of one or more of its individual members; and while true, it is not a little strange, that Latter Day Saints will be guilty of such an unwarrantable course.

In order to correct a misunderstanding which has obtained with some, I call attention to the following: The Epistle of the Twelve, published last May, makes no new or additional claim for themselves. It was not written for that purpose, nor are the members of that quorum referred to except in an incidental manner. Its leading object was to define the duties and prerogatives of district presidents. So far as the duties and prerogatives of the Twelve are concerned, the matter had been properly disposed of by action of the General Conference in 1884, which was reaffirmed by an increased majority in 1886. Some seem to think that this epistle sets forth new and extraordinary claims for the Twelve. This is wholly a mistake. Again; there is not a word in the epistle favoring the abolishment of the office of district president, or striking at branch organization. Just the opposite of this is true. It is not true that the epistle prohibits presidents of districts from laboring in the branches. The very paragraph from which this objection is sought (paragraph 4) refutes the objection itself. Please allow the epistle to speak for itself; and beware of those, if there are any such, who seek to pervert its statements.

It will be a good thing for the church, and will remove some suspicion from one of the leading quorums, when the practice of button-holding and "lecturing" shall have been more nearly abolished. Beware of those (without regard to who they are), who with fair speeches and soft words, seek to destroy the influence of men whom God has chosen, and the church has sustained in their office and calling. Look with distrust upon the words of tongue or pen, concerning any man or set of men, which the writer or speaker, would not dare to present to the accused in an honorable way, that is, face to face. Here is a point which is not so well guarded as some others, and where not a little danger exists. The enemy knows too well how prone we are to believe evil which is said of others, without any knowledge of its existence.

If I am not almost constantly in the field, striving to do the Master's work, you may rest assured, dear Saints, that it is because I am not able, or because of sickness in my family. Let us labor together in love, live near to God, and be "wise servants," and then will our efforts be crowned with success. May the blessings of the great God and His Son Jesus Christ rest upon you all, that your hearts may be enlarged, and your souls influenced by the Spirit of truth.

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT,
Missionary in charge.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 4th, 1888.

To all Saints and Readers of the Saints' Herald, Greeting:—At the late General Conference certain matters were referred to me as "missionary in charge" of Northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Dakota and Manitoba. Among them the case of Bro. J. L. Pride, vs. the North Freedom branch, of North Freedom, Wisconsin. Upon examination of papers in my hands and other testimony, I am convinced a great injustice and wrong has been done to Bro. J. L. Pride. I am satisfied irregularities and hasty legislation was had in the suit brought against him, which would invalidate the decision made in said suit.

I therefore, to remove all odium attached to the name or person of Bro. J. L. Pride in consequence of a publication made in the Herald over my signature, do hereby reinstate Bro. J. L. Pride, so far as in my power lies, to his former position and fellowship, and so far as I have injured him in the exercise of what I deemed my official duty, I crave his pardon, and hope and trust his life and mine may be such that no reproach can be justly fastened upon either of us or the great cause we represent.

Another matter is the request made by the Western Wisconsin district to see the missionary in charge expressing a feeling of neglect on the part of said missionary. To this I would simply say, it is impossible for me to visit every locality in my vast field. And except in some matters of much importance (which can not be settled otherwise), of a local nature, my personal attention will be given where, in my judgment, I can do the greatest good to the greatest number. In the meantime, however, if there should arise a necessity for my personal attention at any point in my field, or if there should be any point, or difficult question, upon which I can legally give counsel, I shall gladly aid all who may seek such counsel, to the best of my ability, and seek God's Holy Spirit as my guide and wisdom.

Any communication sent to my address, (box 29, Andover, Harrison county, Missouri), will reach me wherever I may be.

And now to all who have been appointed to labor in my field, I ask their hearty co-operation, and desire them to communicate with me that we may understand each other and labor in loving kindness and for the welfare of Zion's cause, in the unity of the Spirit of our Lord.

ALEX. HALE SMITH.

MARRIED.

FITTON—HACKING.—At the home of the bride, April 18th, 1888, Bro. John P. Fitton and Sr. Catherine C. Hacking, by Elder John Smith. A number of friends gathered at the marriage feast, and bestowed upon the happy pair many substantial gifts.

DIED.

PROTHERO.—At San Jacinto, California, February 21st, 1888, Nettie, daughter of Bro. James and Sr. Arvilla Prothero, aged 2 years, 7 months and 5 days. Funeral sermon at the grave by an elder of the Congregational church.

WILKINSON.—Thomas Wilkinson was born March 20th, 1813, in county Down, Ireland; was baptized in July, 1842, by Alexander Hill; joined the Reorganized Church near Mound Valley, Kansas, in 1872; died May 30th, 1886, aged 73 years, 1 month, 28 days. Funeral sermon preached to a crowded congregation by Elder R. H. Davis.

THOMPSON.—Near Manteno, Shelby county, Iowa, April 21st, 1888, Claudis Isaac, son of Bro. George D. and Mrs. Mary E. Thompson, aged 2 years, 10 months and 12 days. Elder C. E. Butterworth conducted the funeral services; a number of relatives and many friends being in attendance.

DEHART.—At Allendale, Worth county, Missouri, April 12th, 1888, of disease of the throat, Bro. Alexander H. Dehart, aged 77 years, lacking 20 days. His wife, six sons and three daughters, besides grand children and great grand children, miss his companionship. He was baptized last August, by Elder H. A. Stebbins, who also was now called upon to preach his funeral sermon. Bro. Dehart was faithful unto death, and grew in knowledge of the work while he lived.

HUNNELL.—At Greenville, Pennsylvania, April 25th, of acute Bright's disease, Frank H. Hunnell, aged 7 years, 7 months, and 17 days. He was a bright child, and the only son of a widowed mother. He was a member of our little Sunday School, in whose exercises he took great delight. We miss him, but our loss is his gain. Services by Elder W. H. Garrett.

MURPHY.—At Shenandoah, Iowa, March 12th, 1888, of consumption, Bro. E. D. Murphy. He was born in the county of Claybourne, Tennessee, April 7th, 1818; baptized May 29th, 1879, by S. S. Wilcox. At the request of the departed, Elder R. M. Elvin preached the funeral sermon, in the Saints' Chapel, at Shenandoah, Iowa, April 29th, from Rev. 3: 5, to a full and attentive congregation.

BISHOP'S NOTICE.

At the convention of a conference, held in Hastings, in the colony of Victoria, Australia, on January 1st, 1888, a resolution was passed to form a separate district, known as the district of Victoria; the same being ratified by General Conference; and said district unanimously recommended Elder Edward McGurk, of Hastings, Victoria, as Bishop's agent.

I therefore appoint him to the same, and recommend him to the Saints to sustain him by Tithes and Offerings, that the bread of Life may be heralded forth triumphantly.

Ever your co-laborer for the work,

G. A. BLAKESLEE,
Presiding Bishop.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The North Michigan district conference will convene June 2d, 1888, at Hersey, Osceola county, Michigan. We hope to have a large gathering. I hope the branches will report in full, those branches newly organized, please report names, time of birth, baptism, &c. Bro. C. Scott we expect to be with us, and others who can come.

J. J. CORNISH.

The Fremont district conference will convene at Farm Creek, Iowa, on the 2d and 3d of June, instead of on the 23d and 24th. Presidents of branches and secretaries will please take notice and be on hand with branch reports. All are cordially invited to attend.

HENRY KEMP, Pres. of Dist.

SECOND QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

Bro. G. E. Harrington, secretary of the above quorum, informs me that by mistake their report to conference did not contain the name of Bro. W. O. Closson as being one of those enrolled in the quorum, but that it should be there by right. Bro. Harrington also wishes it stated that his address is Box 563, Independence, Missouri, and that Bro. T. R. White's address is Lowry City, Missouri. H. A. STEBBINS, Church Sec'y.

TAKE NOTICE.

Having made arrangements with the Board of Publication to have our books kept at the Herald Office, we wish to notify our friends that hereafter all letters of business connected with Autumn Leaves, "Home Column," or Hope, must be addressed to David Dancer, box 82, Lamoni, Iowa. This will include remittances for every purpose, whether subscription money, offerings for Home Column Missionary Fund, birth offerings for Hope, or Christmas offerings from the children. Please remember and in the future send all money to David Dancer.

All applications for change of address on either Autumn Leaves or Hope, or for missing numbers of either papers, must be sent to David Dancer in order to secure attention. These regulations can not be departed from.

Send to M. Walker, Lamoni, Iowa, all articles intended for publication, either in Autumn Leaves, Hope or Mother's Home Column.

It is desirable at all times that letters and articles for publication as above specified be sent to M. Walker, but to accommodate our friends and lesson expense, such articles or letters if sent to Herald Office will be handed to us, always provided they be written entirely separate from any matter of business.

Parties not connected with the work of the Herald Office can form no just estimate of the absolute necessity existing for a strict conformity to the above notice. It is not for our own convenience merely, but in order that all mistakes be avoided and patrons have their requests promptly and correctly attended to. Let us repeat, SEND ALL MONEY TO DAVID DANCER, BOX 82, LAMONI, IOWA.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH EDITOR.
W. W. BLAIR ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 19, 1888.

THE HERALD OFFICE.

OUR friends in the Eastern States, like those elsewhere, seem to appreciate the church publications very highly, for we receive at this office letters from them of unqualified endorsement, and this without solicitation, direct or indirect. These words of encouragement, pointed and brief, are usually found in their business letters when they send subscriptions or renewals. Here is what Bro. J. H. Eaton, of Green's Landing, Maine, says of late: "The Herald I can't do without." But this is only one like many others of that class coming to Bro. D. Dancer, the Business Manager of the Herald Office.

But we do not claim to please every one. To hope for such a thing were folly. There is almost an infinite variety of tastes and opinions and judgments, and to just suit all and every one, is simply impossible and not to be expected of any mortal, angel,—or even of the Lord himself.

The editors and managers of the Herald Office have a difficult task to perform, and we think all should concede that they do the very best they can to perform it well. The position they occupy in relation to the church and the world should be a sufficient guarantee that they do and will follow the very best light and opportunities obtainable.

From their central standpoint they should get a view of the entire field, at home and abroad, such as others do not have and can not expect to have. Others may be qualified to judge of needs and proprieties pertaining to their own personal tastes and views and circumscribed fields and surroundings, and yet at the same time be utterly unqualified to judge of or provide for the requirements of the many and diversified parts of the entire field abroad.

A man with a microscope constantly under his eye may think he has discovered in a pint of water and a pound of earth all the wonders of both sea and land. But when he has a powerful, wide-sweeping telescope given him, then the matchless wonders of earth and heaven are made possible to him in vaster, clearer, grander outline and detail.

Sectional views, sectional tastes and demands are apt to be partial, prejudicial, exclusive, selfish and limited, and may also be found very delusive and damaging if made the rule and enforced in the general field abroad. Therefore, those who are put in charge of supplying the field in all its parts should be allowed the privilege of doing that work as they see it, (and not as others may see it), and this, too, without outside annoyance, intermeddling, or any other sort of hindrance; and all who are co-workers with them should be active helpers of them in all proper, practical ways, leaving management, control and final decision, solely and quietly where they belong—with those placed in charge and held responsible.

The supposition is a fair one, that every man knows his own work best, if we except, possibly, those who may be placed in control over and above him. It is all so fair to suppose, that the views, opinions, judgments and adopted methods of those who have their own work in hand will be the nearest right of any. These facts taken for granted, it follows that those placed in charge of any work should be free from all officious intermeddling, and from any interference whatever, save by those who placed them in charge, and that even then interference should be had only in case of necessity, with the least disturbance at all practicable, lest offense be given and the work in hand be obstructed and damaged.

In the manufacturing and commercial world, also in well regulated civil governments, interference with the various departments by those having no authority, or uncalled for interference by those who have authority, meets with merited resentment and condemnation, resulting often in the dismissal of the officious party or parties.

God has graciously provided the church against evils of this sort, and the church—minister and member—would do well to faithfully observe these sensible, equitable lessons. He says:

"Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so. Amen."—Doc. Cov. 104:44.

"Therefore, let every man stand in his own of-ice, and labor in his own calling; and let not the head say unto the feet it hath no need of the feet; for without the feet how shall the body be able to stand? Also, the body hath need of every member, that all may be edified together, that the system may be kept perfect."—Doc. Cov. 83:21.

In perfect harmony with this he demands that the ministry, all of them, shall confine themselves strictly to their own work, their own authority and their own fields, for he says: "Go ye into all the world, preach the gospel to every creature, acting in the authority which I have given you."—Doc. Cov. 68:1. Again: "Teach one another according to the office wherewith I have appointed you."—Doc. Cov. 38:5. And further: "And one man shall not build upon another's foundation."—52:7.

All this tends to the unity and edification of all the church, "the body of Christ." The members—ministers included—have "gifts differing," (Rom. 12:6), yet all are members of the "one body." But it should be borne in mind that the body does not smell with its ears, taste with its eyes, nor see with its nose. Each member has its own proper work. So has every one in the church. Hence everyone should learn their own work, attend strictly to their own work, and wisely and forbearingly let every other one attend to his own work without interference or hindrance. And when this is done, those in charge of the Herald Office will be better prepared to do good work for all, and will cheerfully account for the work placed in their charge.

SR. BETTY BARDSLEY, who resides near Neola, Iowa, and who is one of the most devoted members of the church, renews for the HERALD of late and complains, and justly, too, that her paper had been stopped. In her letter she says:

"Do you stop the Herald as soon as the subscription expires? You have not been in the habit of doing that, and I don't know why I am not receiving it now. . . . I dislike very much to miss getting the Herald."

For the benefit of Sr. Bardsley and any others similarly situated, we state that the church papers are continued to those whom we know are desirous of having them, even though the time for which the subscription has been paid is expired. But in the case of Sr. Bardsley, this office was notified, by the postmaster at Neola, that Sr. Bardsley's HERALD "remained dead" in that office, and that it was not taken out for the reason that it was "refused." From all the facts now at hand we are inclined to think that some one has been unduly officious in regard to Sr. Betty Bardsley's HERALD. If others have suffered in a similar way, let us hear at once and we will set the matter in order.

Sr. Bardsley says further, that Bro. H. N. Hansen preaches for them occasionally, "is a real good speaker, does us good whenever he comes, and we hope we will soon have a branch here. We have very good attendance at our meetings when weather is fair. Please fix matters so that I will be sure to get my Herald regularly hereafter, for I am greatly disappointed when I miss getting it."

THE Chicago Journal for April 7th, last, has the following to say of the late Conference at Independence, Missouri. While it is evident that the writer of the article intends to be fair in his statements, it is also evident that he sees the work of the Reorganization "through a glass, darkly," and therefore presents the work in a somewhat faulty and perverted way. He seems to think our doctrine a mild and rather harmless sort of superstition, and should be tolerated; and he is very confident it is just the "antidote" for the evils of Utah Mormonism.

Well, we believe the latter, and are sure that if taken according to proper prescription it will work wonders in relieving Utah Mormonism of its evils. And as for the doctrine of the Reorganization, we shall be most happy to give the Journal man full information in regard to it, and help him to a clear view of all that appertains to it, so that in the future he may present it fully and properly. This is what he said:

"THE JOSEPHITE MORMONS.

"There is in session at Independence, Missouri, a convention of apostles, high priests, priests, elders, deacons, teachers and other representatives of the 'Josephite' Mormon Church. They derive their name from the fact that their leader is Joseph Smith, jr., son of the first Mormon hierarch, and the rightful heir of his prerogatives and traditions. This section of the Mormon Church did not follow Brigham Young to Utah. It repudiated the alleged revelation instituting polygamy, and has never acknowledged the authority of the polygamous Mormon establishment. Its members reside mostly in Iowa, but some are in Missouri and a few in Illinois. They are holding their convention at Independence, because it is historical ground in the annals of Mormonism, being in the locality where Joseph Smith and his followers settled after their first hegrira to the Westward from Ohio.

"The members of this Mormon sect are not objectionable as citizens in the neighborhoods where they live. They are peaceful, honest, industrious and intelligent; are mostly farmers and tax payers, and are faithful supporters of the civil law. They may be called the orthodox Mormons. Their beliefs do not corrupt their morals nor impair the general regularity of their conduct. They are not aggressive, and the people around them are charitable. They live in the same excellent way that the members of many other nondescript and eccentric sects live in the United States, tolerated for their good qualities as citizens, and for the harmless character of the superstitions to which they cling. If the entire Mormon Church had continued like them, one of the lawless evils and worst pests under the Government would have had no existence.

"In this sect is to be found the antidote for polygamous and disloyal Mormonism. They are sending missionaries to Utah to preach against polygamy in its strongholds. They uphold the purity of the family relations and the primitive Mormon faith uncontaminated by the filthy practical heresies that are the curse of Utah. They are the supporters of law and order, and should receive the charitable sympathies of the American public in their efforts to drive polygamy out of existence."

BANK WANTED.

THE business men of Lamoni and vicinity are anxious that a bank doing a general loan, exchange, deposit and collection business, be located in their town at an early time; and the Lamoni Board of Trade, who have had the matter under consideration for some time, think that such an instution is needed, feel confident it would be well patronized and would soon grow into an important, solid, well paying business.

It is especially desirable that whoever engages in it should be fully identified with the best interests of the town and its surroundings, and be willing workers in promoting these ends. For whoever will not endeavor to build up these interests by all proper methods are not entitled to business patronage and favor. A wise man has said, "But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." This principle applies also to those building up town or country, and should therefore be wisely observed by those engaged in building up Lamoni and its vicinity. No one should be encouraged in locating a bank in Lamoni unless he proposes to identify his interests with the interests of those who are to be his chief patrons, and who will give substantial benefits in return for benefits received from the people.

Some business men, like the detested Chinese, glean what they can from a locality, leave nothing in return therefor, and go to other fields to spend their gains. Lamoni does not need business men of that kind, and should not in any way encourage or patronize them. A business man who will not faithfully seek to build up the community that supports him is unworthy of that support and should be both shuned and shunted.

Lamoni is located in the midst of a finely situated and very fertile region of country, is steadily developing and increasing in its business concerns, and its prospects in this direction were never better than now.

Whoever may desire further information in respect to establishing a bank (or any other kind of business) in the town, should write to the president or secretary of the Lamoni Board of Trade, and they will be furnished reliable information at an early time.

A COLLEGE AT LAMONI.

SHALL we have one? That is a question now agitating the minds of many of the citizens of Lamoni and vicinity. And not only they, but many of the solid members of the church abroad are talking favorably of it. All are confident one can be established here that will pay, financially, a fair return for money invested in it, and it certainly will pay richly in matters of education in every other worthy direction. It would benefit the town, and the country contiguous to it, largely. It would be a general benefit to society at large and a specific benefit to the church. What is needed to move the matter forward to success is proper management and the needed capital. Shall we have these? We shall see. Later on we may have something further to say on this subject.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

At this writing, (May 5th), Bro. Charles Jones is lying dangerously ill at home, twelve miles south-west of Lamoni. His many friends and neighbors anxiously desire and look for his speedy recovery.

Splendid rains are blessing our land, and man and beast and bird and every living thing seem happy and contented.

Bro. Isaac M. Smith wrote the 3d inst. that he had changed his address from Tunnell Hill, Johnson county, to Xenia, Clay county, Illinois.

Bro. R. J. Anthony wrote us briefly from Deer Lodge, Montana, the 30th ult. He expects to be at Willow Creek and Bozeman, after the 10th inst.

Bro. Albert Haws is now at Oakland, California, having recently returned home from Butte county. His health is rather poor at present.

Bro. David M. Strachan wrote from Younstown, Ohio, the 8th instant, and says that in April four were baptized in the Church Hill branch, and that Sunday, the 6th of May, ten more were baptized, also that others were near the Kingdom, and that prospects for church work were good. We are much pleased to hear this bit of good news. We passed many pleasant seasons preaching the gospel and building up the church in that region in 1866 and later, and would be delighted to meet and labor with the faithful Saints there again.

Bro. W. T. Maitland writes from Tipton, Iowa, and sends for the HERALD and says, "I must have it. How any live Saint can content himself without it is unsolvable."

Bro. and Sr. Heman C. Smith are visiting relatives and friends in and about Lamoni, and Andover and Ridgeway, Missouri. He intends to start on for Western Iowa, Utah, Nevada and California, by or before the 18th instant, make calls at the above points and labor as needs and opportunities are found, and we confidently expect he will win success by wise, worthy and persistent efforts.

Bro. A. J. Cato wrote us lately from Nathan, Pike county, Arkansas. He reports that the opposition in that region is getting pretty strong and pronounced.

Bro. Charles Derry, writing of late from his home, Magnolia, Iowa, informs us that the rains had been so heavy and incessant that preaching or out-door work had been largely hindered thereby, but that he is now ready and anxious to prosecute his ministerial labors so far as opportunity offers.

TWO SHORT VISIONS.

ABOUT the year 1873, a man in vision saw himself in a life-boat with Pres. Joseph Smith and David H. Smith, his brother, moving out upon a troubled sea amid fierce head-winds and beating waves. Pres. Smith sat in the stern of the boat with his hand upon its rudder. David sat in the middle of the boat, his oars at rest and his arms folded listlessly, while the third man sat well forward, oars in hand, and, with eyes and heart lifted to God for help, pulled carefully and steadily onward, success being given in proportion to faithful reliance upon and prayer to God. * * *

Within a few years just past, this same man, in vision, saw himself and Pres. Joseph Smith alone in the same life-boat, occupying the same relative positions as before, and they were crossing a wide river whose dark and troubled waters filled the mind of the beholder with a dreadful sense of danger. The boat was sunk, by the many burdens piled in and upon it, till the waters were nearly up with the top of its sides. Instantly the boat and the waters about it became transparent as the light, and the man saw that a wire, reaching from a distance, and from a given direction, had been fastened to the very bottom of the boat, (whether through mistake, malice, blind zeal, or officious meddlesomeness, was not shown), and the man was given to know the extreme danger of the situation, and the possible harm that might result to the boat, its contents and its man-agers, from that kind of wire-working.

God is a revealer of secrets; and here are some matters which the people will do well to bear in mind. We said once before, and we now say, "Don't joggle the boat!" We know of what we are writing; and we advise all parties to keep hands off the wire, lest harm comes to the boat, its burthens, and those in it; and lest also those working the wires are exposed in their work and are thereby brought to shame and loss, here and hereafter. One of the wisest, safest and most profitable ways is, for every person to attend strictly to their own affairs and not meddle with the affairs of others.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. GEORGE CARTER, of South Hancock, Maine, has this to say of late:

"We would be glad to have the elders come and preach for us when they are passing east or west. They can change boats at Bar Harbor and take the boat for East Lamoine, where I will meet them if they will let me know when they come."

Sr. Mary Coon wrote of late from Osceola, Michigan:

"Though I am young in the work, I am strong in the faith. Myself and husband were baptized by Bro. Delong. We thank God that he sent an elder this way to preach the true gospel. We now have thirty members, and there is a great work to be done here by the elders, for the people are getting woke up to the importance of gospel truths."

Bro. S. B. Kibler, of Woodbine, Iowa, wrote the 7th inst:

We organized our school one week ago yesterday, (April 29th), at my house with thirty-two on the roll. Yesterday (May 6th) had eight new scholars, making forty on the roll, hence we need more Hopes. We need a church badly, as more would attend if our meetings and school were not in a private house. Bro's J. W. Wight and C. A. Butterworth are expected to preach to us to-morrow night on their way to Australia. Bro. Derry will be here next Sunday, morning and evening. There are some ready for baptism now, and are only waiting for others to go with them. We are striving to let our light so shine that others may see our good works and be constrained to unite with us. We ask your united prayers that we may have the Spirit of Christ to help us in our scattered condition, that we may in the near future be able to build a church and organize a branch here into which the honest in heart may be gathered and such added to the church as shall be eternally saved.

Bro. E. J. Martindale, in a letter dated at Brown City, Michigan, April 30th, says:

"The work is onward here, and baptisms occur occasionally. Elder J. A. Carpenter is a zealous worker, and a good defender of this great work."

Bro. John Shields wrote us from Masonville, Ontario, the 7th inst., saying:

"I have been doing only local labor here for about three weeks past. April 22d I baptized five at this place. The branch is in excellent condition, and the Saints as a rule are striving to live their religion. There are plenty of opportunities for preaching the word in the surrounding regions, and more calls come than we can attend to."

Sr. Christie, of Akron, Iowa, in a late letter says:

"I never loved this latter day work better than now, although I have not seen the face of a Saint for months past."

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"No fable old nor mythic lore,
Nor dream of bards and seers,
Nor dead fact stranded on the shore
Of the oblivious years;—
But warm, sweet, tender, even yet
A present help is he;
And faith has still its Olivet,
And love its Galilee."

CHRONIC GRUMBLERS.

THERE are many who actually seem to consider it a virtue to find a flaw in everything rather than accept "the goods the gods provide." They "can't help it," they claim. For such the weather is never right. They see no beauty in the sunset because, forsooth, "Dear knows how long such weather will last. It is very nice now, but likely as not it will rain to-morrow."

Present good is invariably swallowed up in evil. The word sympathy is advisedly avoided and the word pity used instead. Such people are truly to be pitied, but not in any degree to be sympathized with. The persons with whom to sympathize are those daily compelled by force of circumstances to listen to their vain repinings and their puerile complaints.

If one does them a kindness they are sure to see some sinister motive behind it.

If ordinary accidents happen they look wise and insinuate that it was all design.

The power to notice and enjoy that which is really to be enjoyed in our lot, is as possible of cultivation as the power to learn to read, and it is quite as necessary if one would regard life in any other way than as a long, painful grind. This latter we have, for the sake of humanity, no right to do.

It is also possible to be very miserable without making of ourselves absolute nuisances to all around us.

One of our first duties to our children should be to inculcate in them a sense of gratitude, not gratitude to us, but the gratitude which is really thankful that things are no worse.

This is our duty no more to them than to mankind. It is to be done not only that they personally may be benefitted, but lest society and the home circle be cursed in them with the most disagreeable of all bores—habitual grumblers.—
Christian at Work.

OUR PRAYERS.

"PRAYER is the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed," or the burden of the heart. It has been the earnest desire of my heart from childhood up to the present to do good in the world; that is to help the needy, relieve the pains of the sufferer and comfort the sorrowing. I will give one instance for illustration. When a mere child my mother sent me a long distance shopping. When about to start she gave me a quarter; the like never occurred before nor after. I never before had had so large a sum, so could not make up my mind what to purchase with it. I called at my dear Aunt's to rest as usual. Her husband's sister, an aged cripple occupied one room of the house. Shortly after I entered, she opened her door and came into the room by resting one knee on a chair and moving it forward with her hands. The sad sight deeply pained my young, tender heart. She spoke, came forward a few feet, seated herself in the chair facing me, and seemed to be in deep thought. That shriveled form, white, bowed head and sorrowful, meditative expression are still fresh in my memory, although forty years have since passed. Something bade me arise and give her my piece of silver. The command was promptly obeyed. If the sum had been expended in confectionery, toys, or anything else, it could not have given me the happiness that was derived from her expression, and words of thankfulness. "I need some sweetening, but had nothing to get it with; this will help me wonderfully," she said, as she looked at the unexpected gift with eyes dimmed by age and moistened by emotions of gratitude.

The greatest happiness of my childhood and youth was derived from little acts of self-denial and love, to surprise my dear mother; and no other part of my life gives as pleasing recollections.

O how many, many times I have asked God to make me an instrument of doing good—doing that which would be for the good of my fellow-beings and His glory. Am glad that the little done, has been done; but how great the contrast in comparison with the amount desired! It pleased our Allwise Father to place one, even myself, in just such a situation as others must have been placed in order that I might have the advantage of doing the desired amount of good.

Were not my aspirations right? Were they not pure? Hardly; a little selfish; not intentionally selfish, but thoughtlessly so. As some one must fill the place of the oft dependent invalid, it was truly no worse for me to be that one than some one else, only I felt it more deeply. And, besides, I had more friends than some unfortunate ones, consequently more comforts. Although, at times, when sorrows, sickness, disappointments, perplexities and vexations overshadow the mind and wrap the spirit in darkness, have felt that earth had no friends on whom I could rely, and our heart at times has been shrunken with fears that our high and holy friends above would fail. We shudder at that awful thought of unbelief, and fear it is the greatest of all sins. Oh, why such an experience of dark unbelief, when we have prayed so fervently for light and joy! Can it be of any benefit to myself or fellow-beings, or our Master? We can not answer; only eternity can give the certain reply. But this we do know, that our dear, blessed Jesus left the high courts of heaven and spent about thirty-three years on this sin cursed earth; took upon himself a mortal body; bore sickness, sorrow and sin for others, and, last of all, while in the deepest agonies of grief, was forsaken of his friends—friends who had vowed to stand by him, even though their lives were at stake. Such is the frailty of the human heart, and such has often been the lot of followers of this Nazarene; and such, too, is the lot of the Nazarites of latter day.

In some cases those for whose happiness we have made every possible sacrifice, in our necessity have left us scarcely noticed; and on the other hand many have aided us, and we are entirely unable to aid them in their extremity. Oh, how unlike our plans, our desires. We feel like one lost, bewildered in a thick forest. Occasionally a glimmer of light breaks through, which gives us a little cheer. I have long since ceased to pray for benefits that tended to gratify ambition; have felt to ask for only enough of this world's goods to meet our few pecuniary wants, and a portion for the spread of the gospel. I have learned that a Saint's pathway is not always to be lighted by the Lamp of Life, any more than the earth is by the light of day; and if such is the plan of our Father it must be for my good, so wish to be able to bow in meek submission to his will. God being my helper, I will pray for the afflicted, the tempted, the weak and for the prosperity of Zion, till my feet stand on the threshold of eternity; then and not till then shall I realize my oft repeated desires have been answered in the best way.

"Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christ'an's native air,
His watchword at the gate of death,
He enters heaven with prayer."

Dear Saints, God bless you all! May your every effort, both in pulpit and by press, be approved of and blessed by God to the salvation of men and the glory of him and the Only Begotten. Amen. ALMIRA.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 9th.

We give below extracts from a private letter received some time since from a very dear friend, and do so in the hope that it may rejoice the hearts of others as it did our own to know that the band of faithful, earnest workers for the Master are increasing, surely and steadily. There are, thank the Lord for it, those who are passing quietly along and who without ostentation or display are leaving no opportunity unimproved for "sowing beside all waters" and praying God to give the increase; and they shall reap, saith the Spirit, in due time.—ED.

Dear Sister Walker:—* * * When I sat down to write I had no thought of touching upon that subject but I intended to tell you—for the sake of telling someone—of my journey home. I had supplied myself with a dozen copies of Voice of Warning and kept one out to read. A young lady traveled with me from Lamoni to Chariton, and I offered her the book to read and she accepted, saying she would do so, but maintained rather an indifferent air. I have not much doubt that she thought me a fanatic, and I did not feel much encouraged. At Chariton I took a room and spent my evening writing; caught a few moments of sleep and at one o'clock was called to prepare for the train. I was determined to have my book on hand in case of an opportunity to give it away, and so laid out another copy. Then before leaving my room I asked God to help me to do some good that day, and I felt that he would. I went to the waiting-room and spent two hours there, the train being late. But the time was not long for I had a pencil and spent my time writing. When the train came I boarded it, and fixed myself as comfortably as I could for an eight hours' ride. We must have traveled about an hour when a gentleman came in from a car in the rear and after going the length of the car came and sat behind me. The other passengers were seeming asleep except one, an acquaintance of the gentleman behind me. There was considerable snoring going on. I was trying to read and the two behind me talked a little. Soon one of these took another seat, and the other gentleman turned and politely asked some simple question concerning my destination. I replied and he then continued to talk, and noticing my book asked me what I was reading. I handed him the book and he looked at it carefully, and silently gave it back. By this time his companion had returned and sat looking at us, and after a few moments during which a few remarks passed concerning the book he asked me to let him see it, and so I passed it over to him. He looked at it saying, "Oh, Latter Day Saints!" I asked if he had ever heard of them and he said, "Yes;" and then the gentleman who had first looked at it said he thought he had such a book at home. I was surprised, and thinking he must be mistaken said, "Where could you get such a book as that?" for few here in Illinois know anything about our faith. I think he must have been debating in his mind whether to commit himself or not, but after a pause he said, "My uncle belonged to your church. He went to Utah, and not liking things there came back and made his home in Illinois." That broke the ice of course, for he told me how he had always respected his uncle, and I could detect that he was not prejudiced against us. We three had become so absorbed in our subject that the second gentleman was carried by his station.

He came back from the platform and laughingly declared, "That is a bad gospel," and I told him I thought I ought to give him the book to make amends. He took it readily and said he should read it. He was a Universalist. He left soon after, but his companion, whose home is in Bloomington, came within an hour's ride of home in the same car with me. He seemed deeply interested and asked many questions and told me he had heard two young men—Utah elders—preach three years ago and said he thought no one had ever preached the gospel so plainly as they. He mentioned some points of their sermons that he had particularly noticed and we both agreed that they had preached truth in those cases at least. This man's name he told me is Charles Judy. I mention it because he said the elder members would know his uncle, Elder David Judy. When I came home I looked through some old Heralds and found a notice of the death of said elder.

When we reached Galesburg we went by different routes, but before bidding me "good-morning," Mr. Judy asked if I would give him a Voice of Warning, saying he wanted one and feared he should not be able to find the one his uncle had given him. So I gladly gave it to him, and did not remember for several hours after that I had felt impressed in the midnight hours that I should do a little good that day. Don't you think it looks like the fulfillment of a promise? And we can not tell what good my simple words may have done. How I should rejoice if through my instrumentality another soul should come to know that "truth which makes us free." I am very sorry for one thing. You know when we have made a good beginning that is not sufficient. The opening made needs to be followed up. Now after having attracted this gentleman's attention to the latter day work, if I had only followed up my advantage and secured a subscriber for Autumn Leaves I should feel satisfied, for I know that any one to read carefully, and honestly consider the testimonies contained in the Magazine, must gain light and knowledge. I confess I feel culpably negligent, as if I had come far short of what might have been done. And the stronger the testimonies and the better the articles are the more sorry I become; but we learn by experience and I shall probably be more thoughtful in the event of a similar occurrence. I have promised another copy of Voice of Warning to a neighbor here—that will make four I have thus far disposed of.

You have the love and prayer of your sister,
CHRISTIE.

ELIZA, Ill., April 29th.

Dear Sister Walker:—It is with a feeling of gratitude I make the attempt to write to you. I have been reading the May number of Autumn Leaves. I can truly say I am well pleased; and my prayer is that it may prosper. I remember hearing Father Whitehead preach the sermon that it contains, but that only adds to the interest of reading it over. I have been here over five months and have not had the pleasure of attending a meeting of the Saints. I often think of the good meetings we had at Lamoni, and long for the privilege of attending again. The Herald is a great comfort to me—especially the Home Column. I do not see how any of the Saints can get along without the Herald. I am keeping house for my Uncle, who's wife died last October, and left him with three children. I feel that it is a great responsibility. I desire the prayers of the sisters that I may lead these little ones in the way they should go. They lost the care of a good mother and a true Saint. May the blessings of God rest with you and us all, so that when we are called to go we can freely say, "Thy will be done." Remember me, that I may be worthy to be counted one of his children, and enjoy the rest that is in store for the righteous.

I remain your sister in the hope of eternal life.

DETROIT, Minn., April 30th.

Brother Blair:—I am in deep trouble, have just buried my wife. Her death was very sudden. She was a strong, active woman, and bid fair to live many years. I send you her obituary notice, clipped from our paper. I had planned to do much work for the church, and felt that with my boys at home, I could spare considerable time. But now it seems that I shall have to give up all church work and stay with my family. I have seven children, three of them needing special care. God doeth all things well, and will show me my work. Yours in the love of Christ,

To the Herald:—I have much pleasure in forwarding for insertion the testimony of sister Martha Morrow, which, I may say, has caused great joy in this part of the Lord's vineyard, and has directly tended to the establishment of the work. We here have been made to rejoice by reading the various testimonies of the "wonderful works of God," which have, from time to time, appeared in the Herald, and I take it to be a duty, as it is indeed a pleasure, to communicate this for the edification of the Saints scattered throughout the world; for what, after all, have we to depend upon that we have "the faith once delivered to the Saints," but that the Lord is working with us and "confirming the word with signs following?" Praying that the words "working," "confirming" as progressive, and denoting ever recurring manifestations of Divine power, in connection with the fact that, Jesus Christ is "the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever," (which is the end of the conversation of those who have the rule over the Saints), Hebrews 13: 7, 8, be duly realized and experienced.

Your fellow-laborer in the gospel of Christ,

JOSEPH RAMSAY.

TESTIMONY OF SISTER MARTHA MORROW, OF FARNWORTH, MANCHESTER, LAN-CASHIRE, ENGLAND.

For more than ten years I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism, having at times been confined to my bed for weeks. Last summer, for the first time, I heard of the Latter Day Saints, and having been invited by sister Coulson to the meetings, I attended, both in the open air and at No 47 Kent Street, Farnworth, near Manchester. From what I there heard I was, through the Lord's mercy, convinced of the truth, and believing that the work advocated by the Saints was the work of God, I went down into the waters of baptism for the remission of my sins on the 29th September, 1887, which I shall remember with joy and gratitude all the days of my life.

After I was baptized, I felt better than I had done for many a year; but two or three weeks afterward my complaint returned, and increased in severity until the last Sunday in November. From about a fortnight before that day I was indeed a great sufferer, and was so severely held that I really thought I was paralyzed, as I could scarcely drag my left limb after me, or raise my left arm. My knee also was swollen to an enormous size, and the pain was almost unbearable. On the day named, sister Mann wished me to go to the meeting, but I said I couldn't. She insisted, however, saying, "Thou mun go, and I'll link thee down." I accordingly went and suffered greatly during the meeting, in consequence of not knowing I should have called for the ordinance. At length, however, I did so, and I bear this testimony to all the world, that I was instantly healed. As soon as ever I was anointed, and the elder's hands were placed on my head, I felt a sensation going through my frame like a flash of lightning, and I was made perfectly whole, which caused great joy and rejoicing in the branch.

When I went home, my boy, about fourteen years of age, greeted me with the exclamation: "Why, mother, you can walk! Mother, where's yer lame arm? Who's done that?" I says, "God has sent his healing power."

A neighbor of the Wesleyan persuasion, named William Mann, knowing what a sufferer I had been, came into the house, and I bore my testimony to him respecting my marvellous cure, who after hearing it, made no answer, but went out, and on returning shortly afterward, I asked him why he went out, to which he replied:—"I couldn't speak, as I never had such a surprise in my life, but went out and told my mother about it."

One week after this I had the following vision in my own house:—I had returned from the evening meeting, and was bearing my testimony again to William Mann, brother and sister Coulson being present, when I saw on the ceiling the most beautiful light I ever saw in my life, in the middle of which there gradually appeared an opening, which gradually closed. Being afraid, I asked brother Coulson if he did not see the light, to which he replied:—"No; I wish I could see it; don't be feared, sister Morrow, it is a heavenly light." And sister Coulson said, "Thank God, it is a vision!"

Brother Coulson also said, "Don't be afraid; we are every one gifted, but not all alike; some see visions, and some interpret them; not all alike; but all by the same Spirit."

Prayer was then made for the interpretation, and on separating brother Coulson said, "Now Sister Morrow, pray earnestly for the interpretation, and we will pray too." I did so, and having awoke on the following morning about 4 o'clock, and had received nothing, I knelt down and prayed again, and afterward lay down again, when I had given to me the following dream:

I dreamed I was going through the most beautiful fields that could be seen, and came to a dark forest which was full of all kinds of evil beasts, ready to devour me. At the entrance of the forest was a small gate, and a man came to me and said I must come that way, when, on looking, I saw a narrow way into the forest, with wild beasts on each side, which caused me to be so frightened that the sweat dropped from my face, fearing that I should fall from the path, which was indeed very narrow, and be devoured by the wild beasts. I however ventured, and as soon as I had put my foot on the narrow way, I saw a bright light before me, similar to that I saw in vision the night before, and the man came and "clapped his hand on my shoulder" and said, "I have showed thee the light and the way; walk in it. Thou'lt have great temptations and trials, but I will send thee a Comforter."

By these things I know that the work in which I am engaged is the work of God, and I ask the prayers of all the Saints that I may continue faithful to the end

SOUTH ARM, Mich., May 5th.

Bro Dancer:—I am still doing what I can in the Master's cause, and am now holding meetings here, and am working during the week and preaching Sundays. The interest is increasing and I expect to baptize some soon. I love to present this work to others, for I know it is of God. I meet with some opposition, and one preacher said I was one of the devil's angels. Another, when I gave the privilege to ask questions, began to ridicule Joseph and to tell what his followers did on Pine Lake, and we had not talked long until he got up and left. It did me good and did the cause good, for it made friends for both.

Yours,
WM. DAVIS.

WILKESVILLE, Ohio, May 5th.

Editors Herald:—The gospel of Jesus Christ preached by the Latter Day Saints was first introduced in this place and vicinity in the winter of 1887 by Bro. James Moler, when the cry was "delusion! Mormonism!" etc., and that has continually been the cry up to this present time. But notwithstanding all the prejudice of the so-called christian people, he preached a series of sermons in this place to a few attentive listeners, which resulted in the adoption of two honest souls into the kingdom of God. Since then the work has moved along slowly, but surely, with three more baptisms, many honest friends won, and a few more earnest seekers. We have had preaching by Brn. Devore, Beatty and Matthews. At times we meet with many enemies to God's word, One of the principal being a Methodist preacher named Verdon, who publicly assailed and denounced the true doctrines of Jesus Christ. He claimed the ability and willingness to discuss the questions of our faith with our most able and worthy brethren. We answered his challenge in a gentlemanly manner, and stated that we would present Bro. James Moler for his opponent. But he cowered down like a whipped cur, and did not answer us. Bro. Moler came afterward preached a good sermon, had a number of attentive listeners, very few of the Christian people, but the congregation was of the most intelligent and deep thinking people of our place. We had services Monday and Tuesday evenings and one was baptized.

My first hearing of this gospel was last July. At that time my wife was stricken down with that dread disease, consumption, in the last stage of it. James Moler administered to her. She had had very severe fever during her sickness, but immediately after being administered to, the fever abated and never was so severe up to her death, the first of last August. During this time I was stricken down, and hearing a doctrine taught which explained the Scriptures, in what I conceived to be the true light, I examined myself to see if I was in the faith, and found that I had never accepted and obeyed that perfect law wherein men and women are adopted into the kingdom of God; and I began to ask of Him who giveth to all men liberally, and in due time I received the knowledge that if I was to be saved in the celestial world, I had to obey that perfect law that was taught by the Savior and the apostles of old. This I obeyed on last December, was baptized and adopted into the kingdom of God by Thomas Matthews. Since then I have received great light on the Scriptures, have improved in health, and can do a medium day's work. Your brother in the one faith, ALFRED TYLER.

WABASH, Ind., May 8th,

Editors Herald:—I would like that any of the Elders passing through Northern Indiana, and especially those traveling east on the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific R. R., would stop and make me a call and I will entertain them. If they will notify me a week or more ahead I will try and get a place in which to preach at least one sermon. I wish one could come so as to be here and deliver a sermon some Sunday afternoon, for the people here have never heard one of our preachers. Is there a branch, or are there any members at Chattanooga, Tennessee? I would like the address of some leading Saints there. Yours in bonds,

SUSAN EVERETT.

WHEELING, W. Va., May 1st.

Bro. Joseph:—I left Independence, Mo., on the morning of the 18th, arrived at Kirtland on the evening of the 20th ult., and left home on the 27th for my field of labor. I met with the Saints here on Sunday and we had a good spiritual meeting, one that cheered and encouraged the Saints for the warfare. Yours,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

SHERIDAN, Nevada, April 27th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Here in Nevada we are rather under a cloud at present, but hope something will renew our energy to do good as in times of yore. We rejoice to hear that in different places the work is prospering and many uniting in the latter day work. We hope some one will come and labor with us.

D. R. JONES.

BIRMINGHAM, England, April 25th.

Brother Joseph:—I have been greatly encouraged and strengthened by the good advice found in the Herald. The gospel is winning its way slowly but surely for the Lord is blessing his people. We have just closed our conference in the Birmingham district. It convened at Temple Row and we had a good time. The Lord was with us by his Spirit, for one spake in tongues, and after praying for it the interpretation came and was received with joy. We have a nice little branch known as the Summerfield Branch. It has about 27 members. We strive to do what we can for the work of the Lord. We desire to be ready when the Master comes. I, like many others, can testify that I know this work is of God. I like the Autumn Leaves very much. I often think of this poetry written by Sister Kate Curry:

"Am I working for the Master,
Striving with both mind and might
Am I laying up in heaven
Treasures precious in his sight;
Am I keeping his commandments,
In him putting all my trust,
Heeding every admonition
To be faithful—to be just?"

FOR GOODNESS SAKE, DON'T!

WHEN in the stand don't refer to the doings of Bible personages in palliation of crimes, real or supposed, committed by any man or men in the church, and which may have been flung at you during the week; by so doing you grieve the intelligent portion of your audience, some of whom may have an unfeigned reverence for the Bible worthies; and after all you only beg the question.

When in the stand don't speak in a light, familiar way of, or to Deity, as, "Well Father, what are you going to do about it?" nor to, nor of, any of the ancient worthies, for by so doing you jar the reverential feelings of the thinking part of your audience and cause them to ask themselves the question, Is that man speaking by the Spirit, as he claims? and if so, how account for the illbreeding shown?

When in the stand don't refer to any man of note, living or dead, by his slum name, as, "Tom Paine," "Bob. Ingersoll," etc. You object to "Joe Smith;" then why use these? You better say, Thomas Paine, the apostle of Deism; Robert Ingersoll, the apostle of Atheism.

When in the stand don't keep crooning upon the same thing or idea. Remember that progression is the order of the age. You can not expect people to come and sit by the hour to hear you droning over the same old threadbare, well-worn subject Sabbath after Sabbath. They finally get tired out and keep away from sheer ennui, and then you cry out, "Oh, they have rejected the gospel." Bosh! They simply object to going to hear a theological Rip Van Winkle every Sabbath.

When in the stand don't tell the congregation that you are uneducated, or an ignorant person. Eh! man; they'll find it out soon enough. If they don't they are not worth preaching to.

When in the stand don't make a theological Don Quixote of yourself and go tilting against the windmills of every ite and ism. You don't like to have your creed continually assailed; how then can you expect others to bear it from you and go away edified? A 12 by 12 preacher will never do that—none but the petty two by four's will.

When in the stand don't always be pitching into the schismatics. That is what they wish you to do—tie them to the stake—for they know that the drippings of schismatics greases the skillet of schism.

When in the stand don't preach a corn-starch sermon. A child will die of starvation if fed on corn-starch only. There is a physical innutrition, and there is a spiritual innutrition.

Finally; when you are in the stand preach and set forth the Spirit and Genius of Christianity. By so doing your sermons will "live long and prosper."

NEPHITE RECORD.—No. 3.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

BEFORE the death of the widow of Joseph Smith, a number of questions were propounded to her, and inasmuch as she acted for a time as scribe to Joseph while he was translating, she is therefore a competent witness in this case. She said to her son Joseph:

"What of the truth of Mormonism? I know Mormonism to be the truth; and believe the church to have been established by divine direction. In writing for your father I frequently wrote day after day, after sitting by the table close by him, he sitting with his face buried in his hat, with the stone in it, and dictating hour after hour with nothing between us."

"Mother, what is your belief about the authenticity, or origin of the Book of Mormon?"

"My belief is that the Book of Mormon is of divine authenticity. I have not the slightest doubt of it. I am satisfied that no man could have dictated the writing of the manuscript unless he were inspired. For, when acting as his scribe, your father would dictate hour after hour; and when returning after meals, or after interruptions, he would at once begin where he had left off, without either seeing the manuscript, or hearing any portion of it read to him. This was a usual thing for him to do. It would have been improbable that a learned man could do this; and for one so ignorant and unlearned as he was, it was simply impossible."—Life of Joseph the Prophet, pp. 792, 793, 794, 795.

In this modest reply the word "stone" is used, and it is possible a captious individual may prefer clinging to his idol and be so infatuated therewith that, like the poor unfortunate pilgrim attracted by the mirage, follows it to his death.

But we learn it was a common expression among all those who were intimate with the scenes in the coming forth of the book, to use the word "key," "stone," "interpreters," all meaning the same thing, namely, the Urim and Thummim.

The chief witnesses all agree, and the friends to the Book of Mormon are in poor business when seeking to smirch the character of the principle actors in the "marvelous work" of restoration in this the fulness of times.

Can not those who claim to believe in the divinity and doctrine of the Book of Mormon see that by publishing false and contradictory accounts that they are but furnishing aid to the enemies of the book, weakening the defence, and embarrassing and increasing the labor of those who stand for unsullied truth, and against the animadversions of the self-appointed opponents?

Among the first elders of the church, and immediately after the publication of the book, the opportunity was favorable to know the means by which it was translated from the "Reformed Egyptian" into the English language. And there was a necessity that those elders should know the truth, for they were to tell the people concerning how the "fulness of the gospel" came forth.

Orson Pratt wrote thus: "These records were engraven on plates, which had the appearance of gold. Each plate was not far from seven by eight inches in width and length, being not quite as thick as common tin. They were filled on both sides with engravings in Egyptian characters, and bound together in a volume as the leaves of a book, and fastened at one edge with three rings running through the whole. This volume was something near six inches in thickness, a part of which was sealed. The characters or letters upon the unsealed part were small and beautifully engraved. The whole book exhibited many marks of antiquity in its construction, as well as much skill in the art of engraving. With the records was found a curious shaped instrument, called by the ancients the Urim and Thummim, which consisted of two transparent stones, clear as crystals, set in two rims of a bow. This was in use in ancient times by persons called seers. It was an instrument, by the use of which they received revelation of things distant, or of things past or future."—Remarkable Visions, p. 6.

I have two reasons for offering the above. It is a pointed rebuke to the professed admirers of the brilliant philosopher, writer, and pulpit orator, Apostle Pratt, who now teach and publish contrary to what he taught and published to the world and was never called in question as to the means by which the Book of Mormon was translated. And again, it proves the assertion of Rev. Lamb to be unwarranted when he says the characters upon the plates "were great large, sprawling characters." It is to be supposed that Mr. Pratt, coming into the church at such an early day as he did, had knowledge of more value than those persons removed both by years and distance from the time and place of the transaction. Mormon, a Nephite prophet, compiled the book which bears his name, and "continued the history until the four hundred and twentieth year of the Christian era, when (by the commandment of God) he hid up the records in the hill Cumorah, where they remained concealed until by the ministry of an angel they were discovered to Mr. Smith, who, by the gift and power of God translated them into the English language by the means of the Urim and Thummim, as stated in the foregoing."—Remarkable Visions, p. 10.

Let Elder George Reynolds and all his associates ruminant upon this evidence of Apostle Pratt, and denounce him as untruthful and unreliable, or else revise their late attempts to mislead and misguide the distressed, distracted and honest in heart.

December 15th, 1850, the same apostle wrote thus: "The Book of Mormon claims to be the sacred history of ancient America, written by a succession of ancient prophets who inhabited that vast continent. The plates of gold, containing this history, were discovered by a young man named Joseph Smith, through the ministry of a holy angel, on the evening and morning of the 21st and 22d of September, A. D. 1823. Four years after their discovery, or on the morning of the 22d of September, A. D. 1827, the angel of the Lord permitted Mr. Smith to take these sacred records from the place of deposit. The hill in which they were found buried is situated in the town of Manchester, Ontario county, State of New York. With the plates were also found a Urim and Thummim. Each plate was not far from seven by eight inches in width and length, being not quite as thick as common tin. Each was filled on both sides with engraved Egyptian characters; and the whole were bound together in a volume, as the leaves of a book, and fastened at one edge with three rings running through each. This volume was something near six inches in thickness, a part of which was sealed. The characters or letters upon the unsealed part were small and beautifully engraved. Mr. Smith, through the aid of the Urim and Thummim, and by the gift and power of God, translated this record into the English language. This translation contains about the same amount of reading as the Old Testament. A large edition of this wonderful book was first published early in 1830."—Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, p. 49.

The propagandists of the hypothetical Seer stone story, would reflect credit and honor on themselves by keeping silence until all the early history of the church disappears and has passed out of memory.

Apostle John Taylor, late president of the Utah church, in his redoubtable discussion held in Boulogne-sur-mer, France, in 1850, was very much incensed when Rev. Philip Carter, made a mock of the divine means God furnished, and said: "Mr. Carter made himself very merry last night, at the idea of the 'Urim and Thummim,' which he called 'peeping through two pieces of stone in a hat.'"—Public Discussion, p. 14.

I appeal to all those who claim to be loyal to their late president, John Taylor, and ask them how it happens that the present rule of belief and teaching of their church is in perfect unison with the efforts of Rev. Carter, of France, and Rev. Lamb, of Utah, both of whom seek the overthrow of the Book of Mormon? Why, O why! ye people of Utah, have you turned away from the teaching of the early elders of the church and are now against the clear, united testimony of the prophet Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, Orson Pratt and John Taylor, and are found in harmony with the most extravagant, absurd and deceptive efforts that are resorted to as a means to destroy not only the book, but the faith of those who believe in the inspiration of the same!

"The Book of Mormon is the most ancient history of America, its people and its antiquities, that is now extant. It is also the most correct and reliable, having been discovered to the young prophet, Joseph Smith, Jr., by the angel prophet, Moroni, and was translated from the language found on the plates into English by means of the Urim and Thummim, which was received with the record. This book has been translated from the English into the French, German, Italian, Danish, Swedish, Welsh, Spanish, and Kanaka."—Compendium, p. 312. Compiled by Apostle Franklin D. Richards and Elder James A. Little. Published by the Deseret News Company, Salt Lake City, Utah, 1882.

Moses said in his time: "For their rock is not as our rock, even our enemies themselves being the judges."—Deut. 32: 31.

I accept this Scripture as true, and count all men enemies of the Book of Mormon who teach and advocate other means of translation than that appointed and provided by the Almighty; and I herewith assert my faith and confidence in said book, and my willingness to stand in defence thereof, that it was heaven-appointed, that it came forth through and by the gift and power of God, and that no man can safely reject it, for it testifies that "Jesus Christ came in the flesh," and that salvation can not be obtained in any other name. Read 1 John 4: 1-3.

As the dimensions of the plates are given in this paper, and as some critics have denied that a man was capable of carrying "such a mule load"—as they put it—I will add the testimony of Wm. B. Smith, brother of the prophet, who says he saw them weighed, and that "they weighed sixty pounds."—Foot note, Visions of Joseph Smith the Seer, p. 16.

The Scriptural rule of proving a fact is by the testimony of two or more witnesses. See Matt. 18: 16; Deut. 17: 6; 19: 15; John 8: 17; 2 Cor. 13: 1; Heb. 10: 28. In accord with this divine rule, during the latter part of June, 1829, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer and Martin Harris were by revelation appointed to be witnesses as follows:—"Behold, I say unto you, that you must rely upon my word, which if you do with full purpose of heart, you shall have a view of the plates and also of the breastplate, the sword of Laban, the Urim and Thummim."—Doctrine and Covenants, p. 89. There was nothing compulsory in this, neither any enticement of a sinister nature in their giving the following certificate to the world:

"THE TESTIMONY OF THREE WITNESSES.

"Be it known unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people unto whom this work shall come, that we, through the grace of God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, have seen the plates which contain this record, which is a record of the people of Nephi, and also of the Lamanites, their brethren, and also of the people of Jared, who came from the tower of which hath been spoken; and we also know that they have been translated by the gift and power of God, for his voice hath declared it unto us; wherefore we know of a surety that the work is true. And we also testify that we have seen the engravings which are upon the plates; and they have been shown unto us by the power of God, and not of man. And we declare with words of sobriety, that an angel of God came down from heaven, and he brough and laid before our eyes, that we beheld and saw the plates, and the engravings thereon; and we know that it is by the grace of God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, that we beheld and bear record that these things are true; and it is marvellous in our eyes, nevertheless the voice of the Lord commanded us that we should bear record of it; wherefore, to be obedient unto the commandments of God, we bear testimony of these things. And we know that if we are faithful in Christ, we shall rid our garments of the blood of all men, and be found spotless before the judgment-seat of Christ, and shall dwell with him eternally in the heavens, and the honor be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, which is one in God. Amen.

"OLIVER COWDERY,
DAVID WHITMER,
MARTIN HARRIS."

This certificate is found in the Book of Mormon. Rev. Lamb says that he believes Mr. Whitmer was an honest man, and that he saw what he testifies of, but that he was imposed upon, and that the whole thing was a base fraud, and a cunning deception. But while at Malad, Idaho, he told the people that the witnesses did not see with their natural eyes, but that they were in a trance, and that it was a visionary view. He also referred to a man in the audience who claimed to have a letter from Whitmer to that effect. This is another artful dodge, and is upon a par with much of the confused trash peddled out by self-constituted expositors of what they know nothing about, ever ready to eschew truth, and gulp down the silly and ridiculous stories told against the truth, and then feed the unsophisticated upon vile and rank falsehood.

Here is how the three witnesses obtained their evidence:—"Not many days after the above commandment (D. C., 15) was given, we four, viz., Martin Harris, David Whitmer, Oliver Cowdery, and myself, agreed to retire into the woods, and try to obtain, by fervent and humble prayer, the fulfillment of the promise given in the revelation—that they should have a view of the plates, etc. We accordingly made choice of a piece of woods convenient to Mr. Whitmer's house, to which we retired, and having knelt down, we began to pray in much faith to Almighty God to bestow upon us a realization of these promises. According to previous arrangements I commenced by vocal prayer to our Heavenly Father, and was followed by each of the rest in succession. We did not, however, obtain any answer or manifestation of the divine favor in our behalf. We again observed the same order of prayer, each calling on and praying fervently to God in rotation, but with the same result as before. Upon this, our second failure, Martin Harris proposed that he should withdraw himself from us, believing, as he expressed himself, that his presence was the cause of our not obtaining what we wished for; he accordingly withdrew from us, and we knelt down again, and had not been many minutes engaged in prayer, when presently we beheld a light above us in the air, of exceeding brightness; and behold, an angel stood before us; in his hands he held the plates which we had been praying for these to have view of; he turned over the leaves one by one, so that we could see them, and discover the engravings thereon distinctly. He then addressed himself to David Whitmer, and said, 'David, blessed is the Lord and he that keepeth his commandments.' When, immediately afterwards, we heard a voice from out of the bright light above us, saying, 'These plates have been revealed by the power of God, and they have been translated by the power of God. The translation of them which you have seen is correct and I command you to bear record of what you now see and hear.' I now left David and Oliver, and went in pursuit of Martin Harris, whom I found at a considerable distance, fervently engaged in prayer. He soon told me, however, that he had not yet prevailed with the Lord, and earnestly requested me to join him in prayer, that he also might realize the same blessings which we had just received. We accordingly joined in prayer, and ultimately obtained our desire, for before we had yet finished, the same vision was opened to our view, at least it was again to me, and I once more beheld and heard the same things, whilst at the same moment Martin Marris cried out, apparently in ecstasy of joy, 'Tis enough; mine eyes have beheld,' and jumping up, he shouted, 'Hosannah,' blessing God, and otherwise rejoiced exceedingly. Having thus, through the mercy of God, obtained these manifestations, it now remained for these three individuals to fulfill the commandment which they had received, viz., to bear record of these things; in order to accomplish which they drew up and described [subscribed] the following document."—Joseph the Seer, pp. 103, 104.

This account was given by Joseph Smith, and each of the witnesses survived him many years, and they never denied its truthfulness or called any part thereof in question. To me the strongest and most convincing evidence of the validity of the testimony of the three witnesses lies in the fact that each and severally these witnesses fell into disfavor with the church, and were each dealt with and expelled from the body. Had there been fraud or deception worked by conspiracy or collusion, as is charged by some, these men, while smarting under expulsion, would most assuredly have confessed and exposed the fraud. But, on the contrary, each of these men during ill treatment of both friend and foe, sank asleep peacefully in death, holding firm and unyieldingly to their lifelong testimony.

And now that they are all at rest, I for one do not propose to sit idly by and tamely permit their testimony to be distorted, and their conduct grossly misrepresented. To me the Book of Mormon is as leaves from the tree of life, "for the healing of the nations." The Lord in his kindness has blessed me with His Spirit in my feeble endeavors to proclaim the truth and has confirmed my faith; therefore it is totally impracticable for me to keep silent upon this all important subject.

Selections.

MILLENNIUM.—No. 2.

LET us now sum up what John has said in his Revelations on this subject:

1. He has said that Christ is coming, when every eye shall see Him. This could not have been His first coming.
2. That when He comes, He will come with, or in the clouds. This He did not at His first coming.
3. That when He comes with clouds, they who pierced Him, and all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him.
4. That all the Saints which are redeemed from among men, of all tongues, kindreds, people, and nations, are to be raised from the dead, and those who were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, are all to reign with Christ on earth a thousand years.
5. That the rest of the dead are not to be raised, or live again, till the thousand years are ended.
6. That during this thousand years Satan is to be bound so as not to be able to deceive the nations.
7. That the Saints are to become very numerous upon the earth.
8. That at the end of the thousand years Satan is to be loosed for a little season, to gather together Gog, and Magog, to battle, and they are to come up on the breadth of the earth, and surround the camp of the Saints, and fire is to come down from God out of heaven and devour them.

This is what John says, let him mean what he will; and if we are at liberty to believe what he says, the subject is so plain that he that runs may read and understand.

Let it here be observed, that when any of the Latter Day Saints speak of living and reigning with Christ a thousand years, they do not mean by this that they are to live a thousand years without being first quickened or changed, as some have slanderously reported that they affirm: but that they believe that they shall reign with all the Saints of every nation, people, tongue and kindred, when Christ descends with all the Saints to reign on earth a thousand years, according to the testimony of all the holy prophets since the world began. And he who does not expect this must expect to be cast down to hell, to suffer a thousand years with the rest of the dead who are not to be raised until the thousand years are ended.

Such is the point of light in which John the apostle sets forth this subject; and such the prospects he set before the Saints of God in his day; and this is the expectation he raised in them, that though they should have to suffer their entire three-score years and ten in a state of mortality, yet that they should rejoice; for when the Lord will come, they will reign on this same earth a thousand years, as a reward for their sufferings.

Having ascertained the substance of what John says in the Revelations on the subject of the second coming of Christ, and having seen the object for which He is coming, we shall see what the other sacred writers have said about it; knowing this first, that as John wrote by the Spirit of inspiration, all others who have written by the same Spirit will write in accordance with him; for as they all understood this subject by the Spirit of God, they must all have seen it alike, and understood it alike. This made me the more particular in examining what John had said on the subject of Christ's second coming; for having got the mind of the Spirit which was in John, I have got it as it was in all others who wrote or understood by the same Spirit. Another reason why I was the more particular in gathering together the substance of what John said was, that once having the whole subject before our minds it would enable us to understand those writers better who had not written so fully on this subject as he had; for in our examination of the Bible we have not found any other of the inspired writers who have developed the whole subject as extensively as he has. I do not consider it necessary, however, among believers in the Divine authenticity of the Bible to multiply testimony to prove that what John said is true, nor do I expect that believers in the Bible will require this at my hands; for one inspired man having said so once, settles the truth of the question forever among those who believe that the person was inspired of God when he spoke. So that I consider that the truth of the second coming of Christ to reign on earth a thousand years with all the Saints of Adam's race, who at that time shall obtain a resurrection, or a translation, is as firmly fixed as the truth of the Bible; for should any man undertake to prove, hereafter, that such a marvelous occurrence will never take place, what would he do? Why he will prove that John had not told the truth; and should he, through some management make it appear that some of the writers taught differently, he would only prove that the Bible contradicted itself and render the whole system void together. So it will come to this at last, that as John the Revelator has said that Christ is coming the second time to reign on earth a thousand years with all the Saints, that the second coming of Christ to reign on earth a thousand years with all the raised Saints is as true as the Bible.

I make these observations that my readers may not suppose that I appeal to the other prophets and apostles to prove what John said is true, but to see how all the writers in the Bible who have written on this subject have seen eye to eye as far as they have said anything upon it. Indeed, if we credit what John has said, we would necessarily expect to find that the other writers also would make some mention of a subject in which they, together with all the Saints had so deep an interest, that they would not pass in silence a theme which must have laid so near their hearts as that of their triumph and reward; as the first of their glory, after their resurrection, was to reign on earth with Him for whom they suffered the loss of all things; which hope enabled them to endure affliction without murmuring. It was this hope that made Abraham call himself a stranger and a pilgrim on the earth. Paul said concerning this promise, "unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"—Acts 26:7, 8. Surely, Paul would not have us understand that the twelve tribes served God day and night simply that they might obtain a resurrection from the dead, for he well knew that there was to be a resurrection of the unjust as well as the just; and that they would get a resurrection from the dead whether they served God or not; but the promise which they all desired to obtain, was that of reigning with their Messiah on the earth a thousand years.

The hope of obtaining this resurrection was the great reason why the ancient Saints took cheerfully the spoiling of their goods; for on such the second death was to have no power. Paul, in Ephesians 1:10, said, "that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth, even in him." This apostle surely understood that there was to be a dispensation of gathering together not only the things of earth, (as the Lord has now commenced to do) but in that dispensation, the things which are in Christ Jesus, which were in heaven, should be also gathered together with the things on earth. If it should be asked, when would the things which are in Christ Jesus on earth and in heaven be gathered together? the answer is at hand. When Christ comes in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, and all the Saints with Him, to reign on the earth a thousand years. And the apostle in the above quotation says that God had a dispensation, in which dispensation He would do this miraculous thing. So we see that the apostle knew that there was to be another dispensation ushered in, in the last days, under which dispensation of the gathering God was to do his greatest work.

This important period, which is of all others the most marvelous in human existence, has found a place, either directly or indirectly, in the writings of a majority of the sacred writers. In addition to the direct notices which prophets and apostles have taken of it, there are many beautiful allusions to it, such as are found in Psalm 104:3, 4, which reads thus:—"Who lay-eth the beams of his chamber in the waters; who maketh the clouds his chariot; who walketh upon the wings of the wind; who maketh his angels spirits, his ministers a flaming fire." Or, as some have translated it, "who maketh winds his messengers, and flaming fire his ministers." Here the allusion is doubtless to His coming in the clouds of heaven, being revealed in fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel. But not only these beautiful allusions, but the direct references are numerous; some of these from the Savior himself, others from the prophets and apostles. The prophet Isaiah says, in speaking of the glory of the last days, "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert will blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing; the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them who are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not. Behold your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; He will come and save you."—Isa. 45:1-4.

Any person who will read this chapter through with care will see that the coming of the God of Israel, or of their Messiah here spoken of, has not yet taken place, nor will it be fulfilled till Christ comes in the clouds of heaven to reign on the earth. In Daniel 7:13, 14, the prophet speaks of a night vision, in which he said, "I saw in a night vision, and behold one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Here the prophet says, "one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven," at which time he is to get the kingdom before described. This is to take place when he comes to reign on the earth a thousand years; for until this time there has not a kingdom been given unto the Son of Man, on earth, in which all people, and nations, and tongues, have served him; nor will He have such a kingdom till the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our God and His Christ. It is said in Dan. 2:44, "In the days of these kings, shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Surely this kingdom has never been set up until now; for that kingdom which was established among the Gentiles in the days of the ancient apostles, has been defaced, corrupted, and broken up, till there has not been one society left on the original platform laid down by the apostles; but all have been broken to pieces, nor can it ever break in pieces and destroy all the kingdoms of the world; but on the contrary, the kingdoms of the world have broken it. But from what Daniel saw in his night vision, as before mentioned, the Son of Man, when He came to the Ancient of Days, received a dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, and nations, and tongues, should serve Him. This is doubtless the kingdom which God was to set up in the days of the kings there mentioned, not the Roman Caesars, as some have supposed, but a race of kings which were to arise after the Roman Empire would be divided into ten parts, which were to be ten kingdoms which were represented by the ten toes of the image which were part of iron and part of clay, which was interpreted to mean that the kingdom would be partly strong and partly broken. Here it is plain, that none need mistake, that the Son of man, or Savior of the world, when he shall come with the clouds, or in the clouds, will receive dominion, glory, and a kingdom, in which all people will serve Him of every nation, and tongue; and this kingdom which he will receive at that time, was to be set up while the kings which after the downfall of the Roman Empire, or after this great kingdom was divided, should yet be swaying their sceptres; but this was not the kingdom which was taken from the Jews and given to the Gentiles, as Jesus foretold when He said to the Jews, "therefore, say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matt. 21:43. The kingdom spoken of by Daniel was to be set up in the last days, preparatory to Christ's coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, and all the Saints with Him, to reign with them on the earth a thousand years, when all people, nations, tongues, and kindreds, on earth, or in the flesh, shall serve Him; not REIGN with Him.

In Isaiah 24:23, the prophet, after having described one of the greatest desolations ever pronounced on the head of any generation of men, said: "Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." We have before seen that this reign was to last a thousand years, and His ancients, before whom He was to reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, gloriously, were all the redeemed from among men, of every tongue, language, kindred, and people. According to Daniel, He was to come to the Ancient of Days. Here he is said to reign before His ancients, that is, all the Saints from our father Adam down; for who could the Ancient of Days be but our father Adam? Surely none other person. He was the first who lived in days, and must be the Ancient of Days. And to whom would the Savior come but to the father of all the race, and then receive His kingdom, in which he was to reign before, or with His ancients gloriously? Let it here be remarked, that it is represented to be in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, where the Lord is to reign before His ancients gloriously. We shall have occasion for this fact hereafter. Zechariah says: "And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal; yea, ye shall flee like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah, king of Judah: and the Lord my God shall come and all the Saints with thee."—Zech. 14:5. This corresponds with what John says in the Revelations; for if He brings all the Saints with Him, they will be of every tribe, tongue, kindred, and people.

That all these passages refer to His second coming, to reign on the earth a thousand years, does not admit of a doubt in the mind of the believer in the Bible; for there is no other time of His coming mentioned in the Scriptures, but his coming first in the flesh to suffer and die for us, and His second coming to reign on the earth a thousand years with all those who obey His will. As to His coming at the end of the earth, or at the final issue of all things, there is no such thing mentioned in the Bible, nor is there one syllable said on it in any revelation which is extant; for so far from His coming at the end of all things, all revelations agree that He will be here more than a thousand years before. So that everything in the Bible said about His coming, which does not relate to His first coming in the flesh, relates to His second coming to reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously; and this reign is to continue a thousand years, or the Millennium. On the subject of this coming, and this reign, the Scriptures abound. In the testimony of Matt. 24:30, we have the following testimony of the Savior: "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." In Matt. 26:64, the Savior says to the high priest, "nevertheless, I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Here the Savior says himself that He will come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. As Isaiah informs us that He will reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before His ancients gloriously, He will therefore come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. In Mark 13:26, and 14:62, and Luke 21:27, we have the same account that is given by Matthew.

As for any other coming of the Savior save these two, the idea has originated elsewhere than in the Bible or any revelation of God to man. It is one of the discoveries of modern times and modern religionists; for neither Moses nor the prophets, Jesus nor the apostles had any knowledge of any such coming of the Savior. They all knew of two comings: first, His coming in the flesh, being born of a virgin, made under the law, taking upon him flesh for the suffering of death, partaking of flesh and blood because the children were partakers of the same, that through death He might destroy him who had the power of death, that is the Devil, and deliver those who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. They knew of his being smitten, buffeted, scourged, and wounded for our transgressions; bruised for our iniquities; of the chastisement of our peace being upon Him and of our being healed by his stripes. And they also knew of his resurrection and of his ascension as well as of his coming again in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, to convince all, to judge all and to reign on earth a thousand years; and of his bringing all the Saints with him, and of his reigning until all enemies were put under his feet; but of any other coming they had no knowledge, or if they had they kept it to themselves, for they never wrote anything about it.

We shall now see what the apostles have said about this coming of Christ to reign on earth where he once suffered; for he promised his disciples that he would come again without sin for the salvation of them who looked for him.

Having heard the prophets and the Savior give their testimony, let us hear the apostles give theirs. We shall begin with Paul. He said to His Corinthian brethren: "Therefore, judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God."—1 Cor. 4:5. "For our conversation in heaven from whence we also look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself."—Phil. 3:20, 21.

"For from you sounded out the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also to every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak anything. For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for His Son from heaven whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."—1 Thess. 1:8-10. "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord."—1 Thess. 4:15-17. "And to you who are troubled rest with us when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his Saints and admired in them that believe."—2

Thess. 1:7-10. In 2 Thess. 2:1 the apostle thus exhorted the Saints: "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and by our gathering together unto him." And in the eighth verse he said: "And then shall that wicked be revealed whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." Paul thus addressed Timothy Tim. 24:1: "I charge thee, therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." Titus 2:13 reads thus: "Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." In Heb. 9:28 we have the following: "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and to them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

We can see by the foregoing quotations, that the second coming of Christ formed a prominent point in the teachings of this apostle; that he kept it so continually before him, that in nearly all his epistles he makes mention of it, though he lived two thousand years before that important period; but notwithstanding his great distance from it, still in his estimation it was none the less important to himself, nor to the Saints of his day. It was in view of this coming of Christ that he admonished the Saints, comforted those who were in affliction, warned the unruly, encouraged the weak, charged Timothy, exhorted Titus, and sounded his loudest alarms in the ears of a gainsaying world. In viewing the foregoing sayings of Paul, we shall find that he has said in substance the same things which John has said in the Revelations, so that there can be no doubt that they both view the subject in the same point of light.

Paul said that Christ is coming again, and though he does not directly say that he is coming in the clouds, yet he says it indirectly in 1 Thess. 4:13-17, as before quoted: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." So the Lord, when he comes, must be in the clouds, or else the Saints who remain at his coming, would not be caught up in the clouds to meet Him. This plainly shows that Paul expected that he would come in the clouds. So says John the Revelator in Revelations twentieth chapter, as before quoted; and Daniel also in Daniel 7:12, and so says the Savior. On this point then they all agree. Paul says that at His coming they that sleep in Christ shall be raised, and so says John. Paul says that He will take vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel. (2 Thess. 1:8). John says that all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him.

It is shown in Isaiah 24th chapter, that an innumerable train of judgments will fall on those who have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, and broken the everlasting covenant, until the earth shall be utterly wasted; and all this when the Lord comes to reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before His ancients gloriously. And in Isaiah 35:4, as before mentioned, in speaking to Israel of the coming of their God, or Messiah, that He would come with vengeance; even God with a recompense He will come and save you.

Daniel says that He will break in pieces and destroy all the kingdoms of the world, and His kingdom shall stand forever. Compare Daniel 7:43, 44, with Daniel 2:44, as before quoted.

From the complete harmony there is among these writers, there can no doubt exist in the mind of any candid person that they all understood the subject alike, and have written for the benefit of the people of the last days.

James makes mention of the coming of the Savior. He says: "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruits of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receives the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; establish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."—James 5:7, 8. Peter said to the Saints of his day: "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; but were eye witnesses of his majesty."—2 Peter 1:16.

Jude also makes mention of His coming in his epistle, verses 14, 15, which is a quotation from the prophecy of Enoch, which is not extant at present; but Jude having preserved this item, shows to us thereby that the coming of the Lord was understood at a very early date in the history of the world, and that Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, was made acquainted with it. "And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam prophesied of these saying, Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousands of His Saints." Zechariah, as before mentioned, says that all the Saints will be here with Him. John, in the Revelations, says that all who will be redeemed from among men are to be with Him. Paul says that his mighty angels will be with Him.

All these doubtless refer to the same time and to the same beings, namely, the Saints who are at that time to reign with Him on the earth, to execute judgment upon all and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against Him.

In addition to what John has said in the Revelations, he has declared the same thing in 1 John 2:28, where he says, "And now, little children, abide in Him, that when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him at His coming."

In Acts. 1:10, 11, we have this testimony of the heavenly messengers: "And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven." In verse nine of this chapter we are told that while the apostles beheld, he was taken up and a bright cloud received Him out of their sight; and if he comes in like manner as he went (according to the sayings of the angels), He will come in a cloud.

The Prophet Malachi gives us a corresponding testimony in Malachi 3:1-3, as follows: "Behold I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; and the Lord whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to His temple, even the messenger of the covenant whom ye delight in. Behold he shall come saith the Lord of hosts; but who may abide the day of His coming? and who shall stand when He appeareth? for He is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers soap. And He shall sit as a refiner, and purifier of silver; and He shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness."

Some have supposed that the prophet in the above quotation referred to the first coming of the Savior; but at the first coming He did not come suddenly to His temple, neither did He appear in any sense as a refiner's fire, nor did He purge the sons of Levi that they offered unto the Lord an offering in righteousness; but all has to take place when He comes, as prophesied of by this prophet. Paul says in 2 Thess. 1:7, 8, that He shall be revealed in fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel.

David, in the 50th Psalm, doubtless had his mind fixed on the second coming of Christ when he says in the 3d verse: "Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before Him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about Him." No such occurrence has taken place yet, but will when the Lord comes with all the Saints to reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before His ancients gloriously.

A CENTURY'S PROGRESS.

THEY WILL CELEBRATE IT AT CINCINNATI NEXT SUMMER.

THE 7th of April, 1788, was the date of the landing of a little fleet of queer looking boats at the mouth of the Muskingum river, on the north side of the Ohio. From these boats came Gen. Rufus Putnam and many other veterans of the Revolution, with a miscellaneous assortment of young men, women and children.

They at once proceeded to lay out a town, and the best scholars of the company were called on for an appropriate name. Just then the Americans were warmly attached to France and her young king and queen, Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, so they took the first and last sections of the queen's name and called their town Marietta.

The territory was soon legally organized, and in 1803, Ohio became a state.

And these events, with all the mighty consequences following a few years after, with the early history and subsequent development of the northwest territory, are to be celebrated at Cincinnati this year in a grand centennial exhibition of the central western states from July 4th to Oct. 27th.

Marietta was the first permanent settlement, aside from military posts, in the present state of Ohio; and almost every acre of the city's area contained some object of interest. The pioneers had located on the Mecca or Jerusalem of that mysterious race we call the mound builders. The whole country was dotted with their memorials; in Marietta may still be seen the great rectangular mound, and in the graveyard is the lofty cone shaped mound composed of many different earths, brought, as archaeologists conjecture, by various tribes in baskets from their distant homes when they came up to the yearly sacrifice.

In laying off the new town the question was raised whether the back water from the Ohio would ever flood a certain hollow and low tract; so they appealed to the oldest Indian in the vicinity. He pointed to an old sycamore in the valley, the forks of which were some twenty feet high, and said: "When I was a boy, my father paddled his canoe through the forks of that tree." As near as they could estimate this was in 1732.

They laughed at the old Indian; but in 1832—one hundred years after the Indian's flood—the water rose above the forks of the sycamore. Fifty more years passed, and then came the great flood which submerged so many Ohio river towns. The old sycamore had long since fallen, but the water was a little higher than in 1832.

The descendants of Gen. Putnam and many other pioneers still live in Marietta, which is a handsome college town and the home of many cultured people. Gen. Putnam died there May 1st, 1824. He was a cousin of "Wolf Killer" (Israel) Putnam, and born in Sutton, Massachusetts, April 9th, 1738; he served in the French and Indian war, entered the Continental army in 1775 as lieutenant colonel, and rose to the rank of brigadier. As a government surveyor he became familiar with eastern Ohio, and early in 1786 assisted in organizing the Ohio company in Massachusetts. The company bought 1,500,000 acres of government land, and proceeded to lay a solid foundation for the new common-wealth. In 1790 Washington appointed him judge for the territory and in 1796 surveyor general; Jefferson removed him from that office in 1803, while he was a member of the first Ohio constitutional convention.

Between the years 1780 and 1787 all the north-west was ceded to the United States by the states which claimed it under original grant, and the territory was organized by the celebrated ordinance, passed July 13th, 1787. Thomas Jefferson had drafted a form of organization dividing all the region into nine states, with the somewhat pedantic titles of Chersonesus, Metropotamia, Saratoga, Assenisipia, Polypotamia, Washington, Pellisipia, Michigan and Illinois. The people very sensibly retained the general form of his scheme and rejected the "trills," so we have Ohio, Indiana, etc., names appropriately adopted from the aborigines instead of coined from Greek; but that part of the territory in the present state of Minnesota did not get into the Union till 1858. The donating state reserved small tracts for specific purposes, most noted of which are "Clarke's grant" in Indiana and the "western reserve" in Ohio, the former retained by Virginia for the soldiers of Gen. George Rogers Clarke and the latter held by Connecticut. Other reserves are known as the "fire lands," "indemnity lands," etc.

Cincinnati is certainly the place to fitly celebrate all the events in the early history of the northwest territory, and her citizens took hold of the matter so enthusiastically that in a few days they raised $1,050,000 as a guarantee fund. The legislature of Ohio passed a joint resolution authorizing the governor to appoint five commissioners for the state, and invite the co-operation of the federal government and the states of West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan; and those states have already named five commissioners each. The city has granted the use of Washington Park, and opposite the permanent exposition building an elegant cruciform structure is being put up, two stories in the main, with a dome 140 feet high. Other buildings are to be erected, and all these will be used in connection with the present exposition halls; so there will be over forty acres of buildings and halls, the largest and most complete exposition grounds on this continent.

The list of attractions is very long. There will be exhibits for foreign states, literature, local history, science and art, music and floral decorations, manufactures, minerals and agricultural products, curiosities from the old civilizations, and an immense display of woman's handiwork of every kind. Foreigners can import for exhibition without paying duty, and commissioners have visited all the principal cities of Europe for articles, ideas and plans of arrangement. Of course the historical department will be very full, and in appointing commissioners the various governors have taken care to select some persons devoted to local history. Indeed, the story of the settlement and development of the north-west is one that never wearies; it has all the solid interest of history and more than the charm of romance. Almost every country between the Muskingum and the Mississippi has its local history of interest and its local collection of relics; the remains of Indian workmanship are everywhere, and every man whose taste runs in that way has, or can have, his collection of flint arrow points, stone hatchets and idols, and other indices of the vanished race. It is expected that the department devoted to these and other archaeological curios will be especially interesting.

The religion of the pioneers will also furnish material of abiding interest; for in the century just closing not only have the regular denominations toiled earnestly, but the great territory has been the scene of almost every possible experiment suggested by a heterodox or fertile fancy. The Mormons of Kirtland and Nauvoo, the Icarians of Nauvoo, the Rappites of Pennsylvania and New Harmony, the Owenites, who succeeded at the latter place, the Shakers of Ohio and many other sects furnish material for this branch of inquiry. And, saddest story of all, Gnadenuhuten was founded, grew, flourished and was destroyed before Marietta was located.

In 1749 the British parliament acknowledged the Moravians as an Episcopal church and invited them to settle in North America and convert the Indians. The history of their enthusiastic work in this line is disgracefully neglected by Americans; it makes the blood of any noble minded man thrill to read of their sacrifices. They soon had stations from the north of Canada to Savannah, Georgia; and in the wilderness of what is now Tuscarawas county, Ohio, they established the noted mission of Gnadenuhuten ("Tents of Grace"). Here they soon had one hundred Christian Indians, and their fate even now demands a tear of sympathy. When Col. Crawford's expedition penetrated the Indian country the wild borderers discovered that the savages from the Wabash, who had lately raided Pennsylvania, had visited this town on their way; and without a particle of proof they decided that Gnadenuhuten was a refuge for the hostiles. Before daylight of March 8th, 1782, the savage whites fell on the Christian Indians, exterminated the whole community of about one hundred persons and destroyed the town. There is no parallel in our history to this atrocity, unless it be found in the Mountain Meadow massacre or the slaughter at Camp Grant, A. T. It is related here as but one of a thousand thrilling incidents of the century which is to be celebrated.

What was the northwest territory now contains some 15,000,000 white people. It is a nation in itself, and with the energetic men at the head of the enterprise its centennial should be of equal interest to any in our history. The material is overabundant. We may safely prophesy that the centennial of the northwest territory will attract an immense throng of visitors, and exert an educating power that will work for the development of the country, and the culture of patriotism.

THE HOT-WATER CURE.

A KNOXVILLE lawyer, after trying various remedies for Bright's disease without being at all benefited, was advised to try hot water. He says: "To make a long story short, I began drinking it. I felt sure that it could do no harm, and it cost nothing. I drank a glass of hot water that night before retiring. I drank another the next morning before breakfast, one before dinner, before supper, and on retiring. I remained in the town where I was for a little more than a week. The third day after beginning the use of the water I felt more comfortable than I had for months. I threw away my gin and morphine. At the end of the week I could walk with my head erect. I was sleeping well at night and enjoying my meals. I have continued the use of the hot water, and to-day I am a stronger man than I have ever been. I have never enjoyed such general good health, and I count myself a sound man. Do you wonder at my believing in the 'hot-water cure?' I tell you that it has cured me of Bright's disease. I have known several cases of dyspepsia cured. It will cure catarrh. It will cure anything that is caused by a bad condition of the blood, as well as any disordered liver, constipation, or indigestion. Let those who do not believe try it."—Atlanta Constitution.

DESCRIPTION OF CHRIST.

THE following beautiful description of our Savior is said to have been found in a manuscript written by Lucius Lentulus, President of Judea, to the Roman Senate, and is well worthy of preservation by those who are his followers at the present time:

"There is at present a man in Judea of singular character, whose name is Jesus Christ. The barbarians esteem him as a prophet, but his followers adore him as the immediate offspring of the immortal God. He is endowed with such unparalleled virtue as to call back the dead from the grave, and heal every kind of disease with a word or touch. His person is tall and elegantly shaped, his aspect mild and reserved. The hair flows in those beautiful shades which no united colors can match, falling into graceful curls below his ears, agreeably touching on the shoulders and parting on the crown of his head like the head-dress of the Nazarenes. His forehead is smooth and large; his cheeks, without spot, are of a lovely red; his mouth and nose are finished with exquisite symmetry; his beard is thick and suitable to the color of his hair, reaching a little below his chin and parting in the middle like a fork; his eyes are large, bright and serene. He rebukes with mildness, and invites with the most persuasive language.

"His whole address, whether in words or deeds, being elegant, grave and strictly characteristic of an exalted being. No man has ever seen him laugh, but the whole world beheld him weep; and so persuasive are his tears that one can not refrain from joining in sympathy with him. He is modest, temperate and wise; and whatever the phenomenon may turn out in the end, he seems a being of excellent beauty and divine perfection—in every respect surpassing the children of men."

A THOUGHT FOR MOTHERS.

TALKING the other day with one of the most sensible women I know, one too whose large family is so well ordered that there never seems to be a particle of friction in its management, I determined to repeat it to a wider audience than the one my friend had at the moment.

"I never fret about little faults of manner, nor even about transient irritability, in my children," said the lady. "Children, as they are growing up, go through many temporary conditions, which if apparently unnoticed, pass away. In fact, there are little moral disturbances to be expected, like whooping cough and measles in the physical life, and if the general home atmosphere be wholesome and the trend right, I do not think it worth while to be too much distressed over occasional naughtiness."

Is there not comfort here for you, dear friend, who can not understand why John, carefully trained as he is, sometimes in the eager heat of play, bursts into the room like a tornado, or forgets to put his cap on nail, and boots on shelf, as an orderly boy ought? And if Sarah is not so patient as she should be with the younger ones, sometimes has mysterious fits of depression, or is hysterically gay with no cause that you can see, summon your own gentle self-possession to the front; remember that the period between childhood and youth, like a transition period, is very trying, and while you pray a great deal for your darling, do not worry about her or talk to her too much. Above all, do not suffer yourself to be always censuring a sensitive boy or girl, to whom judicious praise now and then will be a tonic.

Line upon line, precept upon precept, we must have at home. But we must have serenity, peace and the absence of petty fault-finding, if home is to be a nursery fit for heaven-growing plants.—Statesman.

SENATOR STANFORD'S METHOD.

The other day I asked the millionaire Senator from California, "How would you abolish beggary?"

"There is only one way," said he. "Dry up the source—abolish the conditions that make beggars. To try to cure poverty by street charity is like trying to stop a hole in your roof by mopping up the puddles that gather on your floor."

I asked him if he would specify the conditions. "Yes," he said, "I can vaguely indicate them. Let me say, in the first place, that it is not millionaires that cause poverty. Nobody is worse off because the Vanderbilts are worth $200,000,000. If they had not the wealth it would not exist at all. It is only in those communities where millionaires are possible that the average citizen has enough to eat. Now what causes poverty?"

"1. Ignorance of how to save money. I found beggars in California in 1850, when any man could go out with a tin pan and earn $5 before breakfast. When by working three hours a day a man could make his board and clothes there were always shiftless creatures around whom the rest had to support. It is the same way now. The soil is wonderfully fruitful there. Merely 20,000 men produce all the wheat of the State and export 1,000,000 tons of it every year, and yet there are beggars. We can cut, thrash, and sack wheat at an expense of one and a half cents per 100 pounds, potatoes cost only a half a cent a pound, and flour is only $4 a barrel, and yet there is want. An important cause is unthrift. People do not understand economy or practice it as almost every rich man has had to at some time in his life. I really believe that there would be beggars in the world before night if $20, gold pieces were to be sown broadcast every morning, and so distributed that every man, woman, and child was certain to get some.

"2. The sale and use of liquor. As long as there are ten times as many saloons in this country as there are of both churches and schools, and they are mainly supported by the very poor, the sources of misery are pretty obvious.

"3. A lack of manual training. This last need is most serious. If so many people could be taught trades that the entire product of this country were doubled, next year the wages would be doubled, either in increase of money received or in the smaller cost of the necessities of life to be bought. More capable skilled hands—that is one of our greatest needs. My great hope is in my university, which I wish to build so tall and deep and broad that the rudiments of every useful trade and occupation may be taught. When everybody knows how to do some difficult and useful thing poverty will rapidly diminish."—Washington Letter in the Philadelphia Press.

THE HUGUENOTS.

THE term Huguenots was one of contempt formerly applied to the followers of Luther and Calvin. The origin of the word is uncertain, but it is stated to be derived from Eidgenossen (bound together by oath), a term borrowed from the motto of the Confederate Cantons of Switzerland, by certain inhabitants of Geneva, who were among the earliest to introduce reformed ideas into religion. In France the word has fallen into disuse, the followers of Calvin being called Reformers, while the disciples of Luther are included, together with the former, under the general name of Protestant. The history of the rise and progress of the Huguenots forms one of the chief chapters in the annals of France. For some time after their establishment as a sect, the Huguenots continued to increase in numbers, although they were troubled with occasional persecutions under the reigns of Francis I. and Henry II: until 1560, when they took part in the conspiracy of Amboise. By the edict of St. Germain, January 17th, 1562, the right of the free exercise of their religion was restored to them. But in truth this edict was worthless to them, and they were forced to rise en masse to save themselves from the persecutions of the government. The leaders were the Prince Louis de Conde and Admiral Coligny; and indeed they numbered among them some of the noblest and most influential houses in France. Although thus powerful, the wars of the sixteenth century soon decimated them, and they gradually lost ground under the continual aggression of the Catholic body. After the conversion or perversion of Henry IV., most of the nobles abandoned the falling cause of the Huguenots; they managed to sustain two civil wars against Louis XIII. In the following century, the history of the Protestant church in France ceased to have any political bearing, and the name of Huguenot soon passed out of ordinary use.—Episcopal Record.

KING HUMBERT AND SMOKING.

THE American Register, published at Paris, says: "The King of Italy is known for his temperance in all things except in that of smoking. It has often been noticed what an exceedingly small eater the king has shown himself on all occasions, and, as to drink, his guests may have it in plenty, but his favorite 'tipple' is water. His one great weakness was (for it is a thing of the past) a good cigar. He was a formidable smoker, but he abused his tastes in that line to such an extent that recently he had taken a new departure, and had 'sworn off' from the fragrant weed. His nerves had begun to suffer, he had asthmatic turns, could sleep but little, and then had to be propped up by plenty of pillows. Some weeks ago his physician told him what was the matter, and King Humbert said: 'From this day forth I will not smoke another cigar, or anything in the shape of tobacco.' His majesty has kept his word, and the result has been a most noticeable improvement in his health. King Humbert is a man of iron will, and no one doubts that he will keep his self-made pledge."

Miscellaneous.

TO THE CHURCH OF CHRIST, GREETING.

The Quorum of the Twelve, and Bishopric, feeling that a perfect understanding should obtain between us in order to properly discharge the responsibility placed jointly upon us by the revelation of October 7th, 1861, which reads as follows:

"In order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law, the Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing; and let them before God see to it, that the temporal means so obtained is truly used for the purposes of the church, and not as a weapon of power in the hands of one man for the oppression of others; or for the purposes of self-aggrandizement by any one, be he whosoever he may be.

"As I live, saith the Lord, in the manner ye execute this matter, so shall ye be judged in the day of judgment."

We met at the residence of Bro. C. A. Bishop, Independence, Missouri, April 10th, 1888, to agree upon Rules of Action. There having been important changes in each quorum since an understanding was had, it was deemed best to reconsider the joint epistle of April, 1878, signed by William H. Kelley, Thomas W. Smith, James Caffall, John H. Lake, Alexander H. Smith, Zenos H. Gurley and Joseph R. Lambert of the Quorum of the Twelve, and Israel L. Rogers, Henry A. Stebbins and David Dancer, the Bishopric of the church. It was therefore carefully considered, and after a few unimportant changes unanimously re-affirmed, and is now placed before the church as containing the "Basis of Adjustment and Principles and Rules of Action" upon which these quorums agree to execute the important duties resting upon them. It is as follows:

BASIS OF ADJUSTMENT.

1.—The word "execute," as used in the revelation of 1861, is, in our view, to be construed to mean to "carry into effect," to set in motion legitimate forces, to put existing laws into active operation. To "execute" any given law may, and in this instance does, involve different offices, or the administration of different officers.

2.—The charge to the Twelve is intended to define their duty as an advisory and judicial body, with whom lies the "regulating" of "the affairs of the church," according to law.

3.—The part to be performed by the Twelve in carrying into effect the "Law of Tithing," is precedent and subsequent, and involves both teaching the law and administering it; administration and teaching to be upon principles agreed to by the Twelve and the Bishopric.

4.—The Bishopric are the legal custodians of all the temporalities of the church, upon whom devolves the duty of gathering, safely keeping, and disbursing the moneys and properties of the church, in keeping with the law, and agreeably to the rules mutually agreed to by the Twelve and the Bishopric.

5.—In the receiving and disbursing of church funds, all persons who may be entrusted therewith are in fact, or ex-officio, agents for the Bishopric, and should account to the Bishopric; and in disbursing general church funds should do so by the direction of the Bishop, or in accordance with an agreement and understanding with the Bishopric previously had; specific, in regard to the objects before determined upon; generally, in regard to objects incidental to the prosecution of missionary labor, for which, in the nature of things, no specific directions can be given.

6.—The Bishopric being created by and responsible to the Church for the proper administration of their duty, should not, in justice, be made finally responsible to the Twelve, in any other sense than all other church officers are responsible to the same quorum; that is, by proper charge and adjudication before the general church officers, or by decision of General Conference.

7.—Discretionary power to receive and disburse church funds, and dispose of church property for the uses of the Church, according to the laws of the Church, and subject to inquiry by the Twelve and the Church, must rest in the Bishopric only, as, by law, the Bishopric only are legal custodians of such properties; but the Twelve may and should exercise such supervisory jurisdiction, according to previous arrangement and agreement with the Bishopric, as will prevent unnecessary delay and injury to the work of the ministry, and will facilitate the proper expenditure of funds in the Church Treasury for the purpose of carrying on the preaching of the word, in which is included the support of the families of travelling ministers in the field; the publication and distribution of such books and tracts as may be deemed expedient, for which no other provision is made; the erection of houses of worship; purchase of lands, together with the care and uses of them in missions assigned by conferences.

8.—The Twelve being by law a traveling, spiritual, ministerial body, supposed to be in the missionary field, can not in justice be expected to act as a council exercising local and decisive direction in the disbursement of church moneys, in the sense that no expenditure could be had, except upon their consent or order, first obtained; it is necessary that there be a full understanding between that Quorum and the Bishopric, as to the scope of the law demanding their attention to the temporal affairs of the Church; also as to the rules which may govern both parties; which rules once agreed upon shall obtain until modified by mutual agreement and understanding; no power being given to either party to dictate those rules.

PRINCIPLES AND RULES OF ACTION.

1.—We believe the duty of the Twelve to be to teach the law of tithing, viz: Explaining to the church the necessity, and the mode of complying therewith, in order that the financial interests of the Church shall be properly supported, and that they may receive tithing and forward the same to the Bishop, who is the acknowledged Treasurer of the Church, or to his appointed Agents.

2.—That it is devolvent upon the Bishopric and their authorized Agents, to travel among the churches from time to time, to teach the law of, and collect tithing and free-will offerings, and see that the financial interests of the Church are duly cared for, and the wants of the poor duly administered to, and use their best and earnest endeavors to keep the ministry in the field, as appointed by General Conference, especially the members of the Quorum of the Twelve and of the Seventy, and to see to it that the families of such receive proper support.

3.—That officers in charge of Missions appointed by General Conference, receive necessary support in the prosecution thereof, from the Agents of the Bishop in said missions, and that said Agents in the disbursing of moneys be not subject to the direction of Districts, Conferences, or Branches, (yet said Conferences may advise or recommend), but should make itemized reports to said Conferences, who may audit and approve the same, and said reports as certified to, be forwarded to the Bishop.

4.—And that in all Missions where there is no Agent to represent the Bishop, the officer in charge of said mission may receive tithing and free-will offerings, and use such sums as shall be considered necessary for said mission, keeping an account thereof, together with the names of persons from whom received, and forward a quarterly account thereof, together with whatever moneys may remain in his hands as a residue, and not needed by him, to the Bishop; and upon receipt thereof, the Bishop should enter the same upon his books, crediting and debiting the church with said amounts, received and paid out, together with the names of those from whom received and to whom paid; and that all such itemized reports be published by the Bishop from time to time with his regular reports.

5.—In all missions where the officer in charge can not consult with the Agent, (though one may have been appointed thereto), he may receive tithings and free-will offerings and use the same, (as hereinbefore provided for in Article 5, of Basis of Adjustment), or only part thereof for said mission, accounting therefore to the Agent and to the Bishop in his quarterly reports.

6.—We advise the utmost care and economy in the expenditure of moneys; that the first of all objects to be attained by the church is the promulgation of the gospel, and all other interests are but secondary compared with it, which object must ever demand our first attention; next to which is the support of the poor. And believing that moneys have been extravagantly expended in the publication of books, and unnecessarily so, we advise the utmost care in that direction, and the strictest economy. And we recommend that the Bishopric encourage so far as seems wise and is practicable, the building of church-houses, and that they take the advisory oversight thereof; and also the erection of store-houses in such localities where the interests of the church do now or may hereafter demand it; believing that through this channel the families of traveling Elders would receive more ready support, and which means does not now come into the Church Treasury.

7.—Members should be taught the moral obligation that rests upon them, to put forth an effort to do something of some moment, during the year, either in tithings, free-will offerings, or donations, according to their financial abilities.

8.—Where branches, districts or individuals wish labor in any special locality, the needed funds to sustain such effort should not be taken from the means designed for, or belonging to the General Treasury.

9.—When means are given to ministers of the church for their benefit, by persons in and out of the church, such "means" should be reported to the Bishop, that he may be cognizant of the help that each receives, and that said report be made to the Bishop on the first of March, annually.

PASTORAL LETTER.

Having been appointed to take charge of the Virginia and West Virginia Mission for the ensuing year, I desire and invite the hearty co-operation of all the officers and members therein, so that great good may accrue to the church through our incessant and faithful labors. Dear Saints, let us try, by the help of God's Holy Spirit, to have clean hearts, clean bodies, and clean mouths, and lips untouched by poisonous intoxicants and unstained by the filthy weed, so that we will be fit temples for the indwelling of the Holy Ghost.

It is expected that the ministry will endeavor to set a proper example before all men in all things. If any of you have habits that impair your influence, I trust you will dispense with those evils, and be worthy representatives of the meek and lowly Christ.

Let not jealousy have any place in your hearts.

If the Lord of the harvest has blest some of our brethren with greater eloquence and ability than others, we should rejoice and praise God that we have such able and eloquent men associated with us in the ministry. Let every man stand in his own office and labor in his own calling, and all will be well.

We sometimes come in contact with persons who call themselves Saints, who are given to the great evil of fault finding, and make it a special business to criticise the acts and to speak disparagingly of the brethren who have preceded us. Whatever you may hear, do not allow it to bias your minds against them. If you think some of the brethren have acted unwisely, report them to the proper authorities. Also remember that those who talk so freely about others to you, may in like manner talk about you when you are gone.

Let us love one another and work together in unison.

I sincerely believe that if we are diligent, wise and faithful servants, we will experience unprecedented clearness of perception and power of speech in preaching the gospel, and that great success will attend our labors.

Brn. B. V. Springer, Thomas Matthews, and James Moler have been appointed to labor in the Mission; and Brn. L. R. Devore, T. J. Beatty, and James Brown will spend part of their time in West Virginia, hence it will require considerable means to keep these brethren continually in the field. It is hoped that none will be backward in paying in their tithes and offerings. I am confident that those who will honor and obey the temporal law will never lack any good thing. Please send them at your earliest convenience to F. Criley, 116 Federal St., Allegheny City, Pa., or to T. J. Beatty, Limerick, Jackson Co., Ohio. Many of you have done nobly in the past; and now, do not let Satan or the love of the world prevent you from imparting of your means, great and small in amount. Forget not your duty to see that the poor are provided for, and that the hands of the elders are loosed so they can carry the gospel to all nations, tongues and people. I shall be pleased to hear from any or all, and from the missionaries as often, at least, as once a month.

My permanent address is Kirtland, Lake Co., Ohio.

Dear brethren, let us remember the trust which has been reposed in us. Let us strive to be virtuous, patient, and Christ-like in our deportment. Praying that God's blessings of peace, and mercy may be and abide with us and all His Israel.

Yours in the one faith,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS,
Missionary in Charge.

THIRD QUORUM ELDERS.

Dear Brethren:—It was decided at the last conference to arrange and have issued a Circular Letter containing names and addresses of each member. That the work may be complete we want the name and address of each member of the Third Quorum. Don't presume that we already know, but send in your address on a postal card, and when the letter is complete we will mail one, and also a blank report to each of you. It should not be forgotten by the members of this quorum that a resolution was passed in 1880 and re-affirmed in 1885, requiring each member to report once each year in person or by letter. The penalty affixed being a forfeiture of a standing in the quorum. We earnestly request each member of this quorum to keep a strict record of number of sermons preached, persons baptized and confirmed, persons ordained, children blessed, sick administered to, and marriages solemnized; also in what capacity you have been laboring as an elder. With these tabulated reports before us we can give a report of the entire work done by the quorum. Please don't let this pass unheeded—respond heartily and at once, and without cost to you will be returned a circular letter and blank report.

Your brethren,
J. T. KINNAMAN, Pres.,
J. M. TERRY, Sec'y.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., May 9th.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINUTES—ERRATUM.

On page 263 of the Herald, containing section 8 of the amendment to the Book of Rules, it should read: "All rules, resolutions, or parts of the same, contained in," etc.

Also at the bottom of the same column it should read: "Section 1 was moved by Brn. Warnkey and A. White. It was favored by Bro. Kinneman, and the previous question being ordered it was adopted. Sec. 2 was moved by Brn. Wight and Foss, and was favored by Brn. Kinneman and Crum," etc.

In both cases the original minutes are correct and so also is the first copy, namely that which was preserved at the conference, but the copy which was made to send to the Herald for immediate publication does not contain the words between one "favored by" and the other, and it is probable that the eye of the copyist took the latter for the former in his looking back and forth.

H. A. STEBBINS, Church Secretary.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The quarterly conference of the String Prairie and Nauvoo district will be held at Montrose, Iowa, June 2d, at which time it will be necessary to elect a president and clerk. A full representation of the branches is requested.

TAKE NOTICE.

Having made arrangements with the Board of Publication to have our books kept at the Herald Office, we wish to notify our friends that hereafter all letters of business connected with Autumn Leaves, "Home Column," or Hope, must be addressed to David Dancer, box 82, Lamoni, Iowa. This will include remittances for every purpose, whether subscription money, offerings for Home Column Missionary Fund, birth offerings for Hope, or Christmas offerings from the children. Please remember and in the future send all money to David Dancer.

All applications for change of address on either Autumn Leaves or Hope, or for missing numbers of either papers, must be sent to David Dancer in order to secure attention. These regulations can not be departed from.

Send to M. Walker, Lamoni, Iowa, all articles intended for publication, either in Autumn Leaves, Hope or Mother's Home Column.

It is desirable at all times that letters and articles for publication as above specified be sent to M. Walker, but to accommodate our friends and lesson expense, such articles or letters if sent to Herald Office will be handed to us, always provided they be written entirely separate from any matter of business.

Parties not connected with the work of the Herald Office can form no just estimate of the absolute necessity existing for a strict conformity to the above notice. It is not for our own convenience merely, but in order that all mistakes be avoided and patrons have their requests promptly and correctly attended to. Let us repeat, SEND ALL MONEY TO DAVID DANCER, BOX 82, LAMONI, IOWA.

OH, THAT BROKEN SEWING MACHINE!

W. W. BLAIR

EDITOR.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, May 26, 1888.

CHRIST THE LIFEGIVER.

A GENTLEMAN who has been taking the HERALD writes us of late and says: "I believe the Saints are right in many things, but I believe that man has life now only through Christ the life-giver,—that is, eternal life. And I see that the wicked will die the second death, and that this means death and not misery. The Bible teaches that the wages of sin is death—and not misery—and that the soul that sins will die."

We perceive that this gentleman has learned to apply the terms life, and death, after the soul-sleeping philosophers methods.

The Saints believe that man has life now and hereafter only in and through Christ the Lifegiver, for "All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men;" (John 1: 3, 4); "who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God;" (Phil. 2: 6); "Whom he [God] hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds;" (Heb. 1: 2); and of whom the Father saith, "Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever; a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom. Thou has loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows. And, thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed; but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail."—Heb. 1: 8-12.

This "Lifegiver," in the Book of Mormon, has this to say: "Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God. I created the heavens and the earth, and all that in them are. I was with the Father from the beginning. I am in the Father, and the Father in me; and in me hath the Father glorified his name. I came unto my own, and my own received me not. And the Scriptures concerning my coming are fulfilled. And as many as have received me, to them have I given to become the sons of God; and even so will I to as many as shall believe on my name, for behold, by me redemption cometh, and in me is the law of Moses fulfilled. I am the light and the life of the world. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end."—Book of Nephi 4: 8. To this we add the following from the Doctrine and Covenants, 38: 1: "Thus saith the Lord your God, even Jesus Christ, the great I AM, Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the same which looked upon the wide expanse of eternity, and all the seraphic hosts of heaven, before the world was made; the same which knoweth all things, for all things are present before mine eyes: I am the same which spake and the world was made, and all things came by me." Again: "And he [John] bore record saying, I saw his glory, that he was in the beginning before the world was; therefore, in the beginning the Word was, for he was the Word, even the messenger of salvation, the light and the Redeemer of the world; the Spirit of truth, who came into the world because the world was made by him; and in him was the life of men and the light of men. The worlds were made by him. Men were made by him. All things were made by him, and through him, and of him."—Doc. Cov. 90: 1.

And the Saints believe also, that a man may be "dead" spiritually—"in trespasses and sins"—and still live, physically, in the flesh. And they believe further, that the spirit or soul of man lives—exists—when the physical, corporeal body has returned to dust. They also believe that the persistently wicked will at last die "the second death," and that that death will be spiritual, the wicked then becoming dead in sin—"in trespasses and sins"—or "twice dead," as the holy Scriptures teach, (Jude 12), and yet be alive physically.

The Saints believe what all holy Scriptures teach, that when a living man dies physically, his spirit—soul—returns to God who gave it; and that, if the man dies a sinner, then his conscious spirit—soul—will be "turned into hell," the "pit," or "prison;" and that, if the man be righteous, or innocent, then his spirit—soul—will go to paradise, into the society of "the spirits of just men," and into the immediate society of the pure and the good, to joyfully wait and become fully prepared for the glorious resurrection; while the wicked will remain in "hell," "the prison," under reformatory punishment, reformatory teachings, and reformatory influences, until "the resurrection of the unjust," to "shame and everlasting contempt," because he knowingly, negligently and wilfully failed and refused to be governed by the truth and righteousness of our God and his Christ.

The Saints believe that the Spirit—soul—of man, will never cease to exist, but will always and forever have being, whether "twice dead," "dead in trespasses and sins," or alive in Christ to all the fullness of his power, glory, bliss and dominion, or to such measures of the same as are shown forth in the "glory of the moon," or the varying and diversified "glory of the stars" as taught by Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 41, 42, all being judged and rewarded according to their works by Jesus Christ the Lifegiver.

The Saints believe that man is "the offspring of God," (Acts 17: 29), and that as Christ was, so were they with God before the world began; and that God in his love and wisdom made his "offspring"—"children"—"partakers of flesh and blood" in this earthly pilgrimage and probation, and that because "the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he [Christ] also himself likewise took part of the same, [flesh and blood], and that, too, for a wonderful and glorious purpose pertaining to time and eternity, also to this world and endless ages to come, namely, "that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them, who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage."—Heb. 2: 14, 15.

The Saints believe that this great deliverance through Christ the Lifegiver, works complete deliverance from sin, error, evil, pain and death, and effects the salvation and exaltation of the faithful in Christ Jesus to all the heavenly light and knowledge and wisdom and power and dominion and glory and immortal joys, possessed by the angels, by Christ and his Father, and by all the sanctified and exalted ones in the eternal worlds, and for endless ages to come.

Yes; the Saints believe that Christ is the Lifegiver in the highest and most glorious sense conceivable, or possible. And they believe that the work of creation was founded in the matchless wisdom, love and power of God; that there were no mistakes made in it, and that the work of redemption, exaltation and eternal progression of the faithful ones of earths' children was not an afterthought on the part of God, but that both the work of creation and redemption in Christ were and are parts of the all-glorious plan devised by divine wisdom "before the world was," for the present and eternal happiness of man and the glory of God, and that all mankind, except the sons of perdition, will be blessed and benefited through Christ in having lived this present life of tribulation, trial, development and progression.

Jesus said of Judas, his betrayer, a son of perdition, "But woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born." But men in their blindness have said as did one of Job's "miserable comforters," that men are "born like a wild ass's colt;" and some have thought and said as did Job when under the clouds of trial and affliction, "Let the day perish wherein I was born," not understanding the high purposes of God. But the Infinite One, whose wisdom and love ordained the worlds, in their times and in their order, to be the eternal inheritances of his intelligent creatures, has a higher, nobler estimate of the importance and worth of man, and a far loftier purpose in man's creation and destiny than people are wont to allow. A glance at the redemptive work of Christ who, in the glorious purpose of God, was "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world;" (Rev. 13:8), "who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world," (1 Peter 1:20), and whose redemptive "works were finished from the foundation of the world" (Heb. 4:3) so far as relates to their design and purpose,—we say a glance at Christ's redemptive work plainly exhibits God's marvelous love for man, and his wise and carefully designed provisions for man's salvation from error and evil of every kind and name, both here and hereafter, and for his final elevation and exaltation to a fulness of salvation and eternal happiness.

God's creation is not a thing of naught, even in the least of its parts, or in the lowest of its departments.

God loves the world, the workmanship of his hands! "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16. And the importance and magnitude of this blessed gift can only be measured by a clear understanding and a full appreciation of the importance of man's salvation and happiness on the one hand, and the wonderful, matchless price paid to procure them on the other. Christ had unspeakable glory with the Father "before the world was."—John 17:5. "God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved."—John 3:17. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, [all should ever keep this in mind.—Ed], that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."—1 Tim. 1:15. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sake's he became poor that ye through his poverty might be rich."—2 Cor. 8:9.

These are a few of the many testimonies found in holy writ revealing the purposes of God in the creation of man, and the rich provisions foreordained of God for his present and eternal welfare in and through Christ the Lifegiver.

The Saints believe all this; and they also believe, in harmony with these things, that all mankind will learn of Christ's redemptive work for man, and that if they fail to learn it in this life, they will learn in the world of spirits as is contemplated in 1 Peter 3:18, 19; 4:5, 6; John 11:25; Zech. 9:11, 12; Isa. 24:21, 22; Ezek. 32:21; Jonah 2:2, etc., etc; for God "will have all men to be saved and come unto the knowledge of the truth," (1 Tim. 2:4), so that "every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea," may be qualified to say, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever," (Rev. 5:13), and, "that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."—Phil. 2:10, 11.

Thus can the way be prepared, and the Scriptures be fulfilled which everywhere teach that God will finally and fully judge all men according to their works, as may be seen in Ps. 62:12; Prov. 24:12; Jer. 17:10; Matt. 16:27; Rom. 2:6-11; 2 Cor. 5:10; Rev. 20:12, 13; 22:12, etc., etc. And how can all men confess that Christ is Lord until they learn of him and know of him? And how can unnumbered millions of heathen, and others, who have lived and died without even the least opportunity to hear of the Lifegiver—how can they "confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father," unless they learn of him after this present life? And how can God judge all men and reward them according to their deeds, if death ends all with the wicked in this life? But thanks be to God, the redemptive work of the Lifegiver will be made known to all the living and the dead, in God's good time.

DECORUM IN CHURCH.

THERE is need for reform among the Saints in regard to decorum at church service. If there is any one place where the injunction, "Let everything be done decently and in order," should be observed more closely than in others, it is in the place to which the Saints are accustomed to gather to sing, to pray, and to hear the preaching of the word.

One does not retire to his closet to pray with a feeling of levity in his mind; no more should he attend divine worship in the assembly of the Saints in such mood. It seems to be almost the first requisite condition of mind that we be sober in worship. The topics of conversation among the worshipers before and after the services should be cheerful, but not those calculated to incite to levity. There is always enough to talk about among the Saints without recourse to that which is ribald and coarse. Neither should the character and failings of their neighbors be the subject of their Sabbath conversation. "Godly walk and conversation," certainly means such as would be becoming in Saints were the Lord present to hear in person as He is in power.

It is important to the devoted worshiper that he reaches the place of worship in time to hear the opening song if not to join in singing it. He should be in a frame of mind to enter into the sentiment of both song and prayer; and a hearty amen should exist in his heart to the "fervent, effectual prayer" of the one who offers that service to God.

True etiquette and the polite requirements of the house of worship declare that the men should remove their hats when entering within the doors, and to remain uncovered while in the building. Some foreign nations, trained by courtesy and long custom, take the hat off on entering public rooms, such as art rooms, parlors of hotels, dining rooms, and other places of indoor public resort, and more especially all places of worship. It is a beautiful custom, no matter where, or with whom it originated; and Saints would do well to cultivate the gentle grace and courtesy of which it is the mark. Men of the present time raise the hat to lady friends in the streets, promenades and places where they publicly meet, and some are even so polite as to remain uncovered with hat in hand while conversing with a lady, unless she bids him to resume it. Is it not meet that we treat Him in whose service we engage in our houses of worship, as courteously as we would the creatures whom he hath made, though they be but a little lower than the angels.

Many persons are restless and uneasy by nature and are seldom at rest; but while in the assembly room where worship is being held all should avoid shuffling the feet upon the floor, moving the chairs, or seats on which they are sitting, drumming with the fingers; and, especially, beating time with the feet on the floor when singing. It may be well enough for the ball room fiddler to emphasize the time of the music he is playing for noisy dancers; but it is not only highly indecorous in the house of worship, and in the children of God, but it is very annoying and disturbing to those who may be fond of music and singing whose nervous system makes them sensitive to inharmony and discord. Not confessing for others, we can assert safely that we have had many an otherwise excellent song service spoiled by the thump, thump, of some thoughtless brother's foot beating time to the singing—if it is necessary for any one but the leader to beat the time, it is better that it be done with the hand and without noise. Another distressing interruption to worship is the habit of coughing, hack, hack, that many indulge in. It is in many instances positively hurtful to the one who coughs, and is by no means essential to their health, or their ease, as any competent physician will advise; it is largely habit, and a bad one at that. One person will throw his head back and give a loud cough; and sooner than we can write it there are twenty at work, cough, cough; some trying hard to suppress it and others just indulging in it to their own hurt and the distress of nearly all who hear them. Were it a matter of necessity we should not write one word about it, but it is not. A very few moments of keeping the mouth closed after coming in and sitting down, with the exercise of a little will power that says "I will not cough," will relieve the throat and the cough will be repressed. We once suggested to a young lady that she was doing an unnecessary amount of coughing and ought to suppress it, and upon her stating that she could not help it, asked her to try; and in a few minutes she said with surprise: "Why, I can stop coughing!" Of course she could, and so can many of those who are troubled by the desire to cough because they hear some one else do it. Try it.

Some church goers are found at their posts on Sunday, providing that the elder whom they like best to hear is to speak; if not they stop at home. These people, sometimes, find fault openly with the efforts of the elders not so richly endowed as the best, and disparage them. With some elders such disparagement is a spur to more study and a better manner, but these are very few; with the greater number it hurts and wounds and discourages, and finally drives them out of the stand. The object of the hearer should be to get good out of the sermon that he hears; he should look for the sweet, not the bitter. Men usually find what they seek; and it is according to the word, "seek and ye shall find." It is a poor sermon, indeed, from which the earnest, devoted Saint can not gather cornels of comfort and cheer and strength, if the man who delivers it is an earnest, honest man.

PAY YOUR DEBTS.

THERE is considerable truth in the following little bit from the Associate Reformed Presbyterian: "Just at this time our country needs a religion that will make a man pay his debts. Shouting don't settle old notes or accounts, with God or man. We pounce down on a fellow and put him out of a church if he goes to a ball or theater or gets drunk, but never say a word to the pious scamp who never pays his debts. Preachers and people who never pay their debts are doing the church more harm than dancers and drunkards—there are more of them in the church."

If all followed the instruction given by the Savior and his worthy servants, the church would never be scandalized in the manner indicated above, for all would pay their just debts according to agreement, or make ample provision so as to secure their creditors against loss when in their power to do so. The person who gets in debt to others, thereby enters into contract—covenant—to pay in a given time and manner, and if he fails to do as he agrees, he breaks his covenant, disappoints those who trusted and accommodated him, and possibly inflicts double loss upon them, because the evil of this failure to keep contract may reach far beyond the first creditor. For if the latter can not get his dues, he in turn may fail to pay his creditors and thus entail disappointment and loss in that case. Negligent and dishonest debtors are a curse in any community, and such is the light in which they are held by all fairminded people.

An intelligent writer has recently said: "I am almost in favor of the abolition of all laws for the collection of debts, except those involving liens like mortgages or those founded on fraud and false pretenses. It would break up the credit system and compel men to pay as they go. Debt is second cousin to dishonesty. When one incurs a debt without reasonable assurance of ability to pay it, the relationship of the transaction to dishonesty is much closer. 'Owe no man anything, but to love one another,' is the eleventh commandment."

This is putting the matter pretty strong, yet in some cases it is not far from the correct thing. For it would be better for some persons, and better for business generally, if some persons were never accommodated with credit. And certain it is that when one runs into debt and has no good grounds to believe he can pay as he contracts, then that smacks of dishonesty. And when one runs into debt with no fixed determination to pay, he is as vile as a common thief, and should be proclaimed and treated as such.

Covenant breaking, (contract breaking), is denounced in all the Scriptures as a grievous sin. If any one will reflect upon the disappointment, loss, and discouragement resulting from violated contracts and unkept covenants, he will readily perceive that these evils are to be avoided and strongly condemned.

The person who fails to fulfill his contracts, disappoints and vexes others, and may cause them to sin in thought, in word, or in act, and may cause those whom he owes to break their contracts with parties they owe, and in this way the evil spreads in its effects. The Book of Mormon says: "Whosoever among you that borroweth of his neighbor, should return the thing that he borroweth, according as he doth agree, or else thou shalt commit sin, and perhaps thou shalt cause thy neighbor to commit sin also."—Mosiah 2:5. This being true of those who borrow, it is equally true of those who owe just debts; they should pay them, or arrange with their creditors in a proper manner for their payment.

The voice of the Lord to the Saints is, "Pay the debt thou hast contracted." (D. C. 18:5). Again, "Behold, it is my will that ye shall pay all your debts." (D. C. 101:13).

If the Saints kept these commands, they could never be ranked with those denounced by the Presbyterian and the writer we have quoted.

Indeed, the Saints, generally, including the Utah Mormons, have a most excellent reputation in respect to honestly paying their debts. This is true of them probably in all places, if we except a few unworthy persons here and there.

Business men frequently remark that they lose little or nothing by trusting the Saints. This should be exactly the truth of all Saints; and the officers of the church should see to it that all the membership are both honest, prompt, diligent and industrious in this respect.

An unfaithful, unjust, slothful debtor should not be known among the Saints; and if any such be found among them they should be dealt with for their sins as the law directs, and, if they do not repent, they should have no place among the Saints; for such persons disgrace the Church of God, offend, and wrongfully obtain means from confiding, accommodating creditors, besides ruining their own reputation, blasting their own happiness, and heaping upon themselves condemnation for both this life and the life to come. For Jesus says, "If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?"

The idler and the dishonest person should find no place in the Church of God except they bring forth fruit meet for repentance, for the Lord says to the ministry "purge out the iniquity that is among you."

The Lord demands that the Saints shall be "the light of the world" by keeping all his commandments, thereby walking in the light of Christ, "do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God."

Pay your debts, and pay them honestly and promptly, and thus save yourselves and others from trouble.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE again notify all parties writing articles for the HERALD to sign their proper names to such articles, otherwise they will not be printed. Some send no name, others give initials, and others sign fictitious names. Parties writing should sign their proper names and then, if they choose, ask that their initials, or a fictitious signature, take the place of their name. We further notify all to use only one side of the sheet when they write for publication; also that they do not write on the same sheet matters of business and what they wish published. Careful attention to this advice will secure respectful attention to communications sent us, and will facilitate the labor of editors, printers and the office clerks.

Bro. R. S. Salyards reached Lamoni Sunday morning the 13th inst., and entered upon his new and untried duties in the Editorial department the morning of the 15th instant. His zeal for missionary labor has not abated one jot, and we have promised him all the aid at our command in finding him opportunities for preaching in "the regions round about." We trust he will find this an ample and fruitful field of labor, both in the Herald Office and in preaching and building up the gospel as an active minister in the church.

Bro. Ebenezer Miller writes from Scammonville, Cherokee county, Kansas, and asks: "Are there any Saints here or near here?" Yes; there is a branch at Columbus, also not far from Weir City, and there are many Saints throughout that region.

Bro. A. J. Cato's address is Nathan, Pike county, Arkansas. He wishes Bro. J. W. Gillen to write him.

President Joseph Smith reached home from Independence, Missouri, 16th inst., and is in excellent spirits.

Bro. Joseph Flanders, of Horton, Kansas, expresses heartfelt gratitude that Rome and the Romish church have lost their power to persecute and destroy the children of God, and he feels joyful that he found and investigated the faith of the Saints and thereby secured the knowledge of gospel truth.

Bro. James Allen and family, formerly of Coalville and Van Meter, Iowa, have recently located in Lamoni. Bro. Allen has purchased the steam mill property of Bro. George Adams and intends to add other machinery. We welcome him and bid him good speed.

Mrs. John Stewart, now of Pittston, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, formerly Mary Gillispie, of New Cumnock, Forfarshire, Scotland, is anxious to learn if there is any one of the Saints who formerly knew her. If so she will be pleased to correspond with them. Address Mrs. Mary Stewart, Pittston, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania.

Bro. Bradbury Robinson, of Humboldt county, California, has been spending a few days of late among the Saints at Lamoni. He expresses gratification at what he sees and hears among them, and also in the prospects for the future development of the interests of the church in this region, including the material interests of the country. It is among the probabilities that he will, at no distant time, locate himself and family here.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—It is right and proper for any believer in the gospel, male or female, to lay hands on the sick when they pray for their recovery?

Ans.—We know of no Scriptural evidence authorizing it. The Scripture evidences in respect to administering to the sick are these:

"Is any sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."—James 5: 14, 15.

"And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy. And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die, they shall die unto me, and if they live, they shall live unto me."—Doc. Cov. 42: 12.

These passages point to those who have authority, under the law of the Lord, to administer to the sick according to these ordinances of the church, and they are "the elders." In Doc. Cov. 17: 11, it is clearly stated that, "neither teachers nor deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands." And inasmuch as "neither teachers nor deacons have authority to * * * lay on hands, then it is certain that a mere member has not "authority" to do so.

Q.—What kingdom is that spoken of in Daniel 2: 44? and when was it to be set up?

A.—It is the kingdom of God, "set up" by "the God of heaven," and that, too, in "the days of these kings" (or kingdoms) mentioned in verses 41-44, which were evidently the ten subdivisions of the Roman Empire, which empire was symbolized by "the fourth kingdom" of verse 40. And we understand the prophecy to mean that some of "these kings" (ten kingdoms) would still be in existence in the latter days, when "the God of heaven" would "set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed." And we further understand that that kingdom was "set up" by "the God of heaven" in founding and organizing the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. See Doc. Cov. 32: 2; 39: 5; 65: 1, etc., etc. This "kingdom" when "set up" was to be small and obscure, but was to progress and increase until Christ with all the Saints shall come and the kingdoms of this world come under the reign of Christ, when the kingdom will "fill the whole earth."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. W. Wight wrote a card from Salt Lake City, May 13th, and say:

"As per appointment we left Omaha the 10th inst., arriving here last night. In contemplating our mission, I feel a peaceful assurance never felt before. Pray for us."

Bro. Thomas Bradshaw of 48 Repton street, Limehouse, London, England, sends for church publications and says:

"I want them as I am engaged preaching in the open air on the south side of the River Thames, and am loaning my books to some who are enquiring after the work of the Lord. I hope before long to be able to give a good report of my labors."

Bro. E. Day Bennett, of Santa, Clara, Dakota, under date of the 7th inst., says:

"We had two more additions to our branch yesterday; one a young man of considerable ability, a son of a Methodist minister. He was baptized April 8th by Bro. Oehring. The other was received by letter. Others are about ready to come into the fold. We have excellent meetings. The Spirit of the Lord is with us in tongues, prophecy and healing."

Bro. Bennett says further, that in the report of the organization of the "Second Quorum of Priests," his name should read "E. Day Bennett," instead of "Edward D. Bennett."

Sr. Ruth A. Turner wrote us from Montrose, Iowa, of late, saying:

"The Saints in this place are striving to do the will of God, although some are being sorely tried. Our much beloved sisters Simpson and Thornton are now very near the end of their life's journey. Pray for them that God may give them grace and patience to abide his time."

WITH a great deal of pleasure we print elsewhere in this issue an excellent sermon delivered by Elder John Nicholson, in the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, April 29th, which we take from the Deseret News of the 4th instant. Its leading topic is most timely, its proof-texts well chosen, and the manner of presentation entertaining and instructive.

The sermon gives evidence that the leading Mormon ministers in these times when much tribulation environs and afflicts them, are observing the teachings of the sacred books and teaching them to others. In other words, they are getting back to the teachings of the church from 1830 to 1844

—perhaps as late as 1852. It also shows that they see the need of the Saints being guided by the accepted word of the Lord which requires them to "judge all things pertaining to Zion," and to prove the "liars and hypocrites" among them, and examine and know "they who are not Apostles and Prophets." Besides this, it proves that they perceive and admit the fact that the people of God are not "always maltreated because of their righteousness," but that, on the contrary, "when they have kept His commandments, they have been prospered and protected, . . . unless in exceptional instance," all of which is true, and we are delighted to know these men see and teach these truths.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

TEACH ME.

"Teach me to live! 'Tis easier far to die—
Gently and silently to pass away—
On earth's long night to close the heavy eye,
And waken in the glorious realms of day.

Teach me that harder lesson—how to live,
To serve thee in the darkest paths of life;
Arm me for conflict, now fresh vigor give,
And make me more than conqueror in the strife."

PRAYER.

WE give place to another article from the pen of sister Eleanor, in which will be found a fuller explanation of her ideas with reference to the formation of a band for prayer, or "The Prayer League," as she terms it. It remains for the sisters to think of the matter seriously and then write the Home Column with reference to it. The prayer of Christ for his disciples was, that they might be one, even as he and the Father were one; and if this uniting of our faith and prayers will tend to such a unity, then it will be working in harmony with the earnest desire of our Redeemer. That it will have this effect if faithfully carried out, we certainly believe; and if an indispensable element of strength is unity, we shall be gaining in the strength needful to fight the good fight of faith and lay hold on eternal life. "Teach me that harder lesson, how to live." Who does not feel the need of studying this lesson each day of life? How many are the conflicts within the heart of each Christian, day after day; and how many times they suffer defeat when had they only been prayerful and watchful, victory would have been theirs. If this should prove a constant reminder of duty, like the ringing of the bell calling us to the house of worship, would it not be thus far, if no farther, beneficial? Could we from day to day, from week to week, and from month to month pray for the same things, knowing that we were doing this, without feeling drawn more closely together? Could we read the same page or pages from day to day, knowing that hundreds of our sisters were reading them the same day, without this feeling of unity and nearness growing upon us? We think it would be impossible. We shall be glad to have the sisters respond to Sr. Eleanor, giving their views; and when prepared to take action, send in their names—not for publication, but for the purpose of having them recorded as belonging to the "Prayer League."

LAMONI, Iowa, May 12th.

Sr. Frances:—I submit the following as embracing my ideas of the objects and duties of our prayer association; and hope the sisters will signify their approval or dissent. The gospel, indeed, covers all our needs, but we are told to work out our own salvation, and to grow in grace and in knowledge. We have many instances in all three of our standard books, of God's blessing on those who covenant to seek and serve him; and we as Latter Day Saints looking for His appearing, should be anxious as wise virgins to have our lamps trimmed and burning. This organization is not proposed as a means of doing away with any individual duty, but by the aid and strength which we hope to gain, to render our individual efforts of wider benefit, and to gain the added strength always found in union. We propose, therefore, that this organization be known as the Prayer League.

That its primary objects are, "The cultivation of a devotional spirit, the exercise of faith, and to gain an endowment of spiritual light and wisdom, to fit and aid us in our work in the home, the Sabbath School, the church and the press, and for the more general diffusion of Christian unity and love.

And, in order that these objects be obtained and our prayers be regarded, it is desirable that any one wishing to become a member of this organization shall examine herself and be able to pray, from the heart, the Lord's prayer in each particular; and further, that no one should present their name for enrollment who has enmity against any brother or sister, nor one against whom there is any serious charge resting at the time, until such persons shall have made their peace with their fellow man and with God.

A list of the names of members should be kept by the editor of the Home Column, as a means of ascertaining the progress of the League; and the sending of one's name for such enrollment should be considered a pledge for the faithful fulfillment and observance of all requirements and regulations of the association. (Said names not to be published).

It is further provided that requests for special prayers for the sick be at all times regarded, but should not be made until the gospel law providing for their healing has first been complied with, except in such cases as it is not possible to have the elders anoint them with oil and administer.

Finally, the rules to be observed by this League are only these: That each member shall devote a portion of time during each week to prayer for the general and special subjects as they appear each week in the Home Column, and also for reading from the standard books in connection therewith. ELEANOR.

FRAZEE CITY, Minn., April 8th.

Dear Sisters:—As I have never written any for the Column I will now write a few lines to tell you how much good your kind letters do me; some of the letters seem to be written expressly for my benefit, for in them I often find answer to a great many questions that trouble me. Saturday night when I get the Herald I always find something there that will explain it all out to me. I am the only member of the church in this town, and sometimes I feel very lonely; but at such times I go to the Lord in prayer, and he always cheers me up. The people of this town are nearly all Methodists and Catholics. They are all very kind to me, but it is a hard task to make them understand that we are not like the Utah church; they say that part of the doctrine is kept back by the church. I used to wonder why it was that the church had to bear the shame of the doings in Utah; but now I think that if it had always prospered as it did when it first started and never had had any thing happen to mar its fair name, that to-day it would be a very popular church. Therefore there would be no reproach, and many would flock into it, just for popularity; but as it is we must each one be as the wise man that buildeth, "first sit down and reckon the cost," for we are sure to be looked down upon by the world if we belong to this church.

I have three dear little boys, and my daily prayer is that I may be taught how to do my duty by them. Sisters, please pray for me that I may ever be found faithful.

Your sister in the faith,

ELLEN ALBERTSON.

LITTLE SIOUX, May 7th.

Dear Readers of the Home Column:—I come this morning desiring to chat with you upon the problem of life. There are two pictures before my mind. Life as God has designed it, and life as poor, weak, erring mortals would have it. How often when we are afflicted or bereft of some very dear one are we enabled to say from the very depth of our soul, "Thy will, Lord, not mine, be done?" And again how often do we see those who are professing to be faithful Christians charge God with injustice when visited with severe trials, or by death taking from them some dearly beloved one. So far as my limited experience goes the latter condition of mind occurs the most frequently. How well do I remember not yet one year ago when oh! it seemed God could not be my friend, for he had taken from our home the light and chief object there. But was I right? Oh, no, God was and is my friend. I desire to tell you, dear readers, while suffering in this condition of mind there came to me a letter from a dear sister whom I had never nor have I yet seen, containing these words, "Believe the Lord is too wise to err, to good to be unkind." Well what did these few words do for me? They set me to thinking as well as mourning, and the result is I see more mercy in God's way of doing than ever before. Well, says one, why do you? Go with me to our guide to govern our lives and we read: "We are not our own, we are bought with a price;" and again, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away;" and again, "Neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord," &c. "Well, what have these texts to do with reconciling you so much?" They teach me that it is often necessary for God to take from us that which we hold most dear, to purify and subdue this human nature of ours. God chooses his own way of consuming the dross and purifying the gold. We all know (or should know) we are naturally selfish. It is quite easy for spectators, or lookers on, to stand at one side and say, the Lord designs this or that in some one else's trouble, but when it comes right home to our own hearts, how is it then? Do we apostatize? Do we charge the Deity with injustice? I feel to say to-day in the language of the beautiful, yet sad and solemn hymn:

"The path is rough, my Father! many a thorn
Has pierced me; and my feet, all torn
And bleeding, mark the way; yet thy command
Bids me press forward. Father, take my hand."

The rehearsal of these sad facts brings the thought to my mind, "It is not all of life to live, nor all of death to die." Our religion is a practical one. We must bear in mind the Saints must come up through much tribulation, notwithstanding the promises of the gospel. Why? Because if God would always prosper us in every selfish undertaking, always grant our desires, always answer our prayers according to the petitions, what warfare would it be to serve God? We would grow more selfish than Godlike. When we are visited with trials and privations, do we ever think of the sacrifice God made for the salvation of the human family? I trust we may all take these solemn facts to heart and labor to show ourselves approved of God. Everything with which we have to do here is transitory, and perishes with the using. Then how needful while laboring for these things we do not forget the more important matter, our souls salvation. Let us take up life with our minds firmly fixed, if we can't have things as we would like, to make the best of them as they are, ever trusting in God for guidance.

Dear Herald:—I have often thought that I would like to thank the sisters of the Mothers' Home Column for the many kind and encouraging letters which we receive through the Herald. I also thank God for this latter day work. I am glad that it was preached here in this place, and that I was led to obey it, for it has brought that peace and comfort which I never enjoyed while in the Methodist Church. I often feel burdened with the cares of this life, for I have a large family to care for, but still I know that we can at the same time enjoy the blessing of God; for while our hands are busily engaged our thoughts can be ascending to God and our hearts uplifted to him who is ever watching over us that we may receive strength and be enabled to overcome all the evils and sins of the flesh and endure unto the end—for the promise is only to such.

There is quite a large branch of Saints here, but we do not have an elder with us very often. We have been expecting one here, and think that should one come there could good be done. It would do the Saints good, if nothing else. I am young in the work and have many things to learn, yet I know that the gospel as taught by the Latter Day Saints is true—although I have never heard the gifts of tongues or the words of prophecy, yet I believe they are in the church, for we read in the Herald of other branches enjoying them. I have seen the sick healed almost instantly, when the elder laid his hands on them; also saw my husband healed of a lame shoulder after the doctor told him that he would never be able to use it again. When Elder W. J. Smith administered to him, in a little while his shoulder was as well as ever. Thus we see that the signs will follow them that believe.

Your sister in the one faith,

ELIZABETH COOK.

WILBER, Neb., May 14th.

Bro. Blair.—Emma and I arrived here on the 5th inst., at midnight, expecting to visit for two or three days. The railroad company lost our trunk, which we did not obtain until yesterday. Monday, the 7th, Bro. Levi Anthony and I answered an urgent call, going to York to administer to Mrs. Carpenter, a daughter of Sister Bray. We found her low, remained over night, and three times did we administer, and she was of the opinion that some benefit was obtained. God alone can raise this one up to health.

At the request of the branch president I have spoken here nine times; congregations good, considering the excessive rains. Had light frost last night. We have enjoyed this visit with kind and true friends of other days. God bless the Saints of this place. In bonds,

ROB'T M. ELVIN.

ST. JOHN'S CITY, Utah, May 9th.

Bro. Blair.—It is with pleasure I address you from this land of captivity of a portion of Latter Day Israel. I left my home in Kansas in company with my wife on the 3d inst., and arrived at Salt Lake City at 1:30 a. m. on the 7th, and at this place the same day, in good health, and was met by our numerous friends with tears of joy and gladness in their eyes, after over eighteen years of separation. The difference in views and actions were all forgotten in this hour of joy, and tears for the causes of the divisions of Saints, while nothing was left unturned to make our welcome and comfort complete while we stay; and regrets are manifest that our visit is bound to be but short.

Our influence for good among this people has not diminished we think. The time thus far has been one continued period of preaching and exchanging of views, even through the small hours of midnight and early morning, searching the dark recesses of the awful causes of the separation and present and past captivity and bondage of Saints.

Our heart felt sympathy goes forth for the return of the honest among this people. We will continue the good work from family to family until we are ready to address the people in public as well as in private. We think we can have a house here and also at Grantsville when we shall have prepared the minds of some and effected an open door for some of the elders to come in and continue the good work. As yet no opening has been made in this part of the vineyard.

We have written twice to Bro. Anthony but have no word from him yet; neither have we seen any of our faith. We have a great number of friends in almost all parts of the Territory, and shall work as far and wide as our limited time and means will permit.

Let this be sufficient for the time being to those that expect to hear from us. In bonds,

J. T. DAVIS.

REED CITY, Mich., May 14th.

Bro. Blair.—I have just arrived from Chase. Weather is cold and backward in these parts. It is snowing to-day. Every thing moves on nicely in church affairs. The officers in this district have baptized about thirty people since the General conference.

Bro. Blair, we are blessed and encouraged day by day. Our Father in heaven is blessing us with his Spirit, the word is preached in power, and the honest are obeying the truth. Pray for us.

J. J. CORNISH.

SAN JACINTO, Cal., May 7th.

Bro. David Dancer.—My wife and I are counting the days for our church publications to arrive, and so you can imagine our disappointment if they fail to come. There is nothing like them, no where, to cheer, strengthen and comfort. I am sure that neither you nor any body alive can fully realize the amount of good these messengers of glad tidings do us. All do not know how many downhearted Saints there are who, many of them, are almost ready to give up in despair, when all at once comes the Herald with its good tidings; and it seems to suit our condition each and every time just exactly, and gives us new strength and courage to battle on until we go home rejoicing, knowing we have fought the good fight of faith. Please tell Brn. Joseph and Blair to give us some more like that of April 14th. It was a most excellent one. I have read it over about half a dozen times, and also friends of mine, and they are not done yet. I may read it over again. I am now very well. The asthma has left me entirely, and I am enjoying first rate health.

Your brother in Christ,

WILLIAM SCHADE.

WHEELLOCK, Texas, May 11th.

Dear Herald.—I write to inform you that I am getting along fairly well, all things considered, and that I am in better health and am also actively engaged in the discharge of my duties as an ambassador of the Lord. I have been praying for the way to open in this section for me to preach to the people that I had formerly ministered to while a Baptist preacher, and I thank the Lord that my prayers have been answered. I now have an opening to preach when I please without a single objector. I have been using the opportunity; the people turn out well and give good attention and some are investigating our claims; that too in the community where they formerly turned me out of the Baptist church for denying my baptism, as they called it, when I was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

It seems that they have seen that they did not know what they were doing when they persecuted me and the "Mormons," that they said I had joined. I am glad that none of them take issue with me now, nor havent for some time. I hope to have the pleasure of baptizing a number of them.

I still have more calls for preaching than I can fill at present; but perhaps when the missionaries come to Texas that were appointed by General Conference they will fill some of the calls in this section. Taking all things into consideration, prospects are very favorable and I am thankful for it. May the good Lord help you all now and evermore.

Yours in gospel bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

SANTA ANA, Cal. May 4th.

Bro. Joseph.—As many of the brethren are anxious to know what we did while east in regard to buying land, I write through the Herald. When Bro. Goff and myself left California to attend the conference we went not only to do that, but to see the country; the chances of buying land; the prices and the chance of getting in some place where there could be a settlement from this part of the country established. Many here were waiting to see what the result of our visit would be.

While we were in Independence the brethren all seemed very anxious to show us land; and all we talked with on the subject wanted us to buy in the part of the country where they lived. Of course they all have a good way in telling all of the good qualities of the country; that is natural; but we thought if they were all right it must be the best country in the world. We found too that the town was full of real estate men, the same as here. We were constantly invited to look at the land they had for sale; for they all had the choice land of the state for sale. All these things bothered us some, and we were thrown on our own judgment.

We finally decided to go into the neighborhood of St. Joseph, and had bought our tickets for Kansas City; but when we were about to step on the cars, we changed our minds and took the train going south. We bought tickets for Nevada, Missouri, one hundred miles south of Independence, and twenty miles east of Ft. Scott. We found the best looking country that we saw on our trip. Plenty of good farming land, plenty of timber and coal. We bought two hundred and thirty acres, two hundred in crop, thirty is timber. It is five miles from the county seat of Vernon county, a city of eight thousand inhabitants. Land can be bought there from ten to twenty-five dollars an acre, on easy payments. The country is prosperous; the farmers are mostly from the north and east, and there is a rush in there to buy land. There were one hundred houses building in Nevada when we were there, and none to rent, which speaks well for it. We intend to move there in September.

One word in regard to what I think of Independence. There is a splendid chance to make a lovely place, where Independence now stands; that is, the city is on a very nice piece of ground, and there could be a very nice place built there. I have no doubt the Saints are doing all they can, but they have a very hard element to convert, or make any thing of; and I should think it would be better for the Saints living in town, working by the day to support a family, if they would sell out and buy, if only a small piece of land in the country, where they could be their own bosses, working for themselves. There are many living there who have a house and lot they could sell for enough to buy twenty to forty acres in the country; then they could raise their own living and be independent.

Your brother,
A. W. THOMPSON.

RICEVILLE, Indiana, May 15th.

Bro. Blair:—I love to read the Herald and hear how the great work is gaining in spite of the united efforts of sectarianism to overthrow it. The cause has gained many friends throughout Southern Indiana by the persistent efforts of the Elders in the past year. Bro. V. D. Baggerly has labored mostly in Perry county and has shown himself to be an efficient workman. As a result of his labors he baptized ten in the Hope branch during the past winter, and four in the West Fork branch. I was with him all winter assisting him in song service. The Saints here are striving to live the faith. Bro. M. R. Scott has done a good work here. Though we are few in number and many are young in the cause, still our meetings are kept up and enjoyed by all.

Yours,
CHAS. BARMORE.

CUBA, Kansas, May 14th.

Dear Herald:—It is more under a sense of duty than pleasure that I pencil this communication to your readers. There is within me a continual yearning for the progress of the work, an earnest desire that it may prosper and become truly known and accepted by the children of men—not to save them from the burning torments of the damned, but to make them heirs and joint-heirs with Christ our Elder Brother—kings and priests unto God in the glorious thousand years, which is so close at hand. Our banner has for some time past been hanging at half-mast, and although though an effort is sometimes made to elevate it to the masthead there is a combination of conditions that prevent it. In consequence of these and other preventing causes, the ministry have not been able to push the battle to the gates with that energy and effectiveness of which its capabilities have given, and still manifest the assurance of. But thanks to the prudential workings of the late conference, with other prospects in view, the probabilities favor a change for the better which I pray God to grant speedily.

Although Emanuel's banner has not trailed in the dust, Bēlzebub, the author of confusion, has not been idle, but is marshalling his forces in every conceivable way for deceiving the people, and has set his hand (and imps) "again the second time" to the overturning of the last vestige of christianity by a renewal of the "philosophy" of the second century, asserting that religious truth is to be found in all sects, who only differ from each other in their method of expressing them and in opinions of little or no importance, and that by a proper interpretation of their respective sentiments, all may be united into one body; fully corroborating the statement of Paul, to-wit: "They will not endure sound doctrine, * * and be turned unto fables."

The latter day delusion differs from that of earlier times by adopting modern fables, having a "form of godliness" without the power of the the apostolic age; rejecting the counsel to preach "the word" "with longsuffering and doctrine."

Any profession standing with outspread arms crying "lo! here!" having for its basis a mutilated doctrine, and calling sinners to come home, with neither food, raiment, or shelter to offer them, is badly planted and will come to naught. During the revivals of the past winter I have been able to do some heavy looking on, and many have seen the opportunities thrown in my way for contrasting true and false theories; and you may depend upon it that I was well employed, inasmuch that some of the friends have sought the opportunity, found and secured the Lion who proposes to annihilate the Mormons by proving that "old Joe Smith" was a polygamist in theory and practice. This annihilator is said to have been for some years a clergyman and pastor somewhere in Utah, whence he obtained the documents and affidavits from "old Joe's widows direct from head-quarters." How I tremble in my boots! lest the champion shall fail to put in an appearance and thus defeat my cherished hope of presenting the truth to those who can not be reached by other means. Recently I was called to Minersville by telegram to the deathbed of Sr. Mary Jane, youngest daughter of Mr. William Williams. She was born twenty-three years ago in Scranton, Pennsylvania. Soon after coming into the church, Emma was named after elect lady, the honored widow of the martyred prophet, and like her name-sake, was only known to be honored, loved, and mourned by a host of weeping friends. She began life with God's blessing and consecration at the hands of the elders, and departed with an invocation and blessing under my hands, a short time after my arrival. In had ridden twenty miles in two hours and twenty minutes.

I preached her funeral sermon to a very large audience. She was not a member but seriously investigating the work with a view to obedience. Pursuant to her request, I blessed her eight months and five years old baby girls. I suppose the funeral notice has been sent you ere this.

That champion Mormon-eater is expected here some time in June, and as yet I hardly know where he will assault the fort, save the hint that Joseph's wives is proposed as the theme. My champion is Rev. Dr. Fisher of Maryville, Kansas.

In gospel bonds,
JOHN D. BENNETT.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 16th.

Bro Blair:—In view of my appointment, I returned to Kansas to arrange matters there. In passing through Chase, Rice county, I preached twice and baptized one, a promising young young man, who, if faithful, will in the near future be in the ministry. From there I went to Barton county, baptizing two more precious souls. Thence to Jewell county, to bid farewell to my parents and relatives; and thanks be to God, who works and none can hinder, I baptized my father and two sisters and one of my old neighbor's sons, and Bro. Adam Saladen. The aged will will come. It done my soul good to baptize them all, but especially my father, fifty-four years of age. He was a Quaker in belief. From there I proceeded to Independence, where we enjoyed meeting with the Saints, and met my wife's sister, who had just came here since conference. We witnessed her baptism this morning and left Independence this afternoon and leave here this evening for Chicago; thence to Boston. We go, trusting in the living God, that we may be able to do good. In everlasting bonds, BALM, Missouri, May 8th.

Dear Herald:—Your pages are near and dear to me. As I read the many testimonies contained therein, my eyes often fills with tears. May our heavenly Father ever bless the writers to the Home Column, for in it is contained each excellent testimonies, good advice and counsel. I became convinced of this glorious work of God through the efforts of our able and worthy brother I. N. White, in a discussion held at Lebeck, Missouri, with Elder Henry Price. Was baptized September 1st, 1886, by Bro. James B. Jarvis; have since been ordained to the Aaronic priesthood by Brn. E. Curtis and H. Loyd. I can truly say I know this work is of God, and that Bro. Joseph Smith has been called from heaven to fill the place he occupies, also that his father before him was a prophet of God.

May God bless us all and enable us, by that divine wisdom from heaven, to overcome all trials and difficulties, come out from the world and not be bound by secret organizations and combinations with the tares to be burned.

Your brother in the one faith,
D. E. TUCKER.

CONVERSION.

THE conversion of the soul to God is one of the most important of all subjects, and one, perhaps, that is as little understood as any that can be mentioned, although it has been considered by the best talent in the world, and has been proclaimed from every pulpit in the land.

The importance of the subject is shown by the following language of the Lord Jesus Christ as found in Mark 8: 36, 37:—"For what shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

Conversion means more than a mere belief in God; for the Scriptures show conclusively that men believed in and followed Jesus Christ and were numbered with his disciples, while he was in this life, and yet they were not thoroughly converted. This may be seen by reading the following:—"At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 18: 1, 2, 3.

This must have been a startling revelation to them. And would it not surprise you, kind reader, if you have believed in God and have followed Christ through the waters of regeneration, to have the Lord say unto you, "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven?" Yet this is just what Christ said to his early followers, including one of the first apostles who had listened to the gracious words of the Master for three years and a half, and who had witnessed the transfiguration of Christ upon the mount where Moses and Elias were seen in glorified forms when the voice of God was heard to say of Christ: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him," (Matt. 17:5), who witnessed also Christ's marvelous power when "the wind and the waves obeyed" his voice, and when Lazarus, and the widows son, and the nobleman's daughter were raised from the dead and restored to their weeping friends at his command. Yes, Peter was so favored of God that he was able to say in truth: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," (Matt. 16:16), and without a doubt he thought he was converted and could follow his Master even unto death; yet the Lord Jesus knew full well that Peter's strength and boasting were vain, that he trusted too much in his own strength, and therefore he said to him: "Simon, Simon, behold Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat; but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren."—Luke 22:31, 32.

Peter's conversion after this seems to have been very gradual. But after the risen Redeemer was seen by the apostles and they had received the promised endowment of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost, we find Peter one of the most fearless of Christ's servants, ready to declare in the face of death itself as it were, "We ought to obey God rather than man."—Acts 5:29.

What a wonderful change had taken place in his heart since the night when he thrice denied his Lord because of the fear of men! On this point, at least, he was converted and prepared to strengthen his brethren. And yet, strange as it may seem, there was another lesson of vast importance for him to learn; for although the last instruction the Lord had given him was to "go out into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," yet he was laboring under the belief that salvation was for the Jews only. He put a misleading construction upon Christ's words and misconceived his authority and duty.

How long and patiently Jesus labored with Peter to convince him that God was no respecter of persons! And how his heart must have overflowed with joy when the truth dawned upon his mind and he was enabled to say:—"Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."—Acts 10:34, 35.

From the foregoing we learn that, although the minister of Christ may study the revelations contained in the word of God, and may study them for weeks and months and years, yet he needs the inspiring touch of the Almighty through the Holy Ghost to relieve him of his personal notions and enable him to understand the Lord's word and work and fully qualify him to teach the same and understand his own authority and calling.

Ministers who are but partially converted can have but poor success in converting others. For instead of inspiring their hearers with the truths of the gospel law which should be spoken in words of faith and confidence and exemplified in their own lives, their unbelief and lack of the Spirit will manifest itself both in their lives and in their teachings, chilling the very heart of the thoroughly converted child of God.

Listen how Christ taught these early ministers:—"Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken; . . . and beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself."—Luke 24:25, 27.

Gospel conversion means that we discovered we were in a lost and fallen condition; that we had not power to save ourselves; that we have heard of and do believe in the goodness and power of God to save; and that we have been convinced that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God, sent forth in the love and power of the Father to redeem and save the world. It means also that we have heard the gospel of Christ, and that our hearts have been touched and subdued by the warning, enlightening influence of the Holy Ghost, which has enabled us to put our whole trust in God and rely with childlike simplicity and unyielding faith on the teachings of His holy word.

Who has not noticed with what confidence little children listen to the teachings of a consistent and truthful father or mother? When such parents tell their dear ones of the goodness of God, how He provides for all their wants, and how He sent His beloved Son to die upon the cross that they might be brought into His presence and live forever, the matter is settled with them because of the confidence they have in their parents. And while this confidence remains unshaken, all the world combined could not make them believe that father and mother are mistaken. Every question their little minds can not solve is brought to father or mother for solution, and their answer is received with the utmost confidence. So it is with those who are fully converted to the religion of Christ; every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God is received and gladly obeyed with childlike confidence, although they may not at first be able to determine just why the command was given. It is true there is a difference between blind credulity and genuine faith; and no one should mistake the former for the latter.

God has provided an ample test, and placed it in his children's hands, by which everything that claims to be a divine revelation may be fully tested, and has given them full instruction how and when to use this test in order that they be not deceived, and, of course, they will be to blame if they do not use it.

It would be blind credulity, indeed, to receive everything that claims to be given by inspiration without examining it. But when it has been thoroughly examined, and it is proven beyond a reasonable doubt that it came through the proper channel; that it is in perfect harmony with all former revelations which are known to be of God; that the attributes of the Deity are reflected therein, such as love, truth, justice and mercy, it shows a lack of conversion on our part when we disbelieve it or fail to be governed by it.

Nor is a minister fully prepared to strengthen his brethren who is in this unconverted condition. If he is not very careful his converts will be spiritually diseased. Such an one needs Jesus Christ to come and open up all the Scriptures to his understanding, as quoted above.

There is always danger in extremes. If many of the early converts to Christ under the preaching of the restored gospel were too credulous, following their leaders blindly wherever they chose to lead, thus wrecking the church upon the rocks of corruption, is there not danger that we may take the other extreme and allow unbelief in the revelations of God and disrespect for those officers set in the body by Him who worketh everything after the counsel of his own will, to allure us from the path of duty, bringing upon ourselves "swift destruction," and great calamity upon the Church of God? I think there is.

I hope the reader will not think me egotistical if I refer to an experience of my own in order to illustrate what I mean by conversion, as it does so better than anything else I think of at present: I was baptized, I think, in 1861, when a boy of about fourteen years of age, and I had a very peculiar experience with the powers of darkness shortly thereafter, which I shall never forget so long as life shall last. As time passed I grew negligent of Christian duties, until the fall of 1864, when my father was drafted to serve in the Union army, and I took his place and went with others from Galland's Grove, Iowa, as far as Nashville, Tennessee, where I was taken sick and remained so nearly all winter. When I became too sick and weak to write, I requested a friend to write for me and to request the prayers of the Saints in my behalf. Before my letter had time to reach home I grew so much worse that the physician of my ward called in the physician in charge of the hospital, and five or six others of the same profession, to hold a council with reference to my case. After all the others had left, the physician in charge of the hospital remained by me for about thirty minutes, and just before he went away he said: "Well, my boy, what do you think about dying?" To which I replied, "I am going home before I die." At this he laughed, and said: "Well, that is good pluck; may be you will."

A few days after this I was lying awake after a very restless night, while the rising sun was streaming through the window at the back of my head, when, all at once, a peculiar sensation passed over my entire body, and a series of scenes passed before my vision, from the north to the south, in which I saw myself baptized, and also everything that I had thought or done from the day I was baptized up to that time. And I saw myself die, carried out and placed on a shelf in the dead-house where there was another corpse on the shelf just above me. I saw that a wagon drove up the alley containing two pine coffins into which myself and the other corpse were placed and hauled some distance to the east of the city and placed in a cave. Time wore away, and the cave fell in partially covering the coffins over which the moss grew until they were hid from view. The scenery stopped a moment; then reversed its course, passing from the south to the north, and represented what I should have thought and done up to the time of my sickness, and still farther showing me my recovery and return home, after which the most joyous feelings permeated my very soul, and I cried for joy for hours. I felt as though I had been born of the Spirit—converted to God and healed by the prayers of the Saints!

I had also realized the reality of a future judgment.

It is needless to say that I repented, and the future must show whether or not I have been faithful to God.

In bonds,
C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

Selections.

SERMON BY ELDER JOHN NICHOLSON, DELIVERED IN THE TABERNACLE,
SALT LAKE CITY, APRIL 29TH, 1888.

HE said the Saints had assembled to partake of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in commemoration of the great work which He had done for the salvation of mankind. It was a most profitable theme for a disciple of Christ to consider the nature of the redemption He has wrought out for the children of men. The Saints had gathered from various nations in response to a peculiar proclamation in this age. As a rule the world reject this message, which is, in effect, that the long silence which has prevailed for ages between heaven and earth has been broken; that God has designed once more to communicate with His children; as in days of old, a prophet has been raised up, and the gospel in its fulness as it existed in ancient times, has been restored. The Church of Christ has again been organized with all its officers and gifts and all its powers of salvation—with apostles, sevens, high priests, elders, priests, teachers and deacons, and the duties of all are so plainly defined that one need not infringe on the prerogatives of the other. It is not now fashionable in the world to believe in the voice of revelation, or in these officers, and the miraculous gifts that followed the labors of Jesus and His Apostles.

To-day men go forth as did the ancient apostles, having authority, and declare that those who receive the gospel become the children of light; having faith in God and His Son Jesus, repenting of sins and being baptized by immersion for the remission of them, they received the Holy Ghost.

It was because the ancient disciples possessed the power of the Holy Ghost that they would rather lay down their lives than deny their Lord. They obtained that spirit by obedience to divine laws. The possession of this influence is the great distinguishing feature between the Latter Day Saints and the world. The latter believe the former are deluded, but the Saints are assured they are not, but are identified with a work of divine origin. This is the reason why the Saints are able to remain steadfast in the face of opposition. Were it not for that power they would be vanquished.

Among the revelations that came through the Prophet Joseph was that we were living in the generation when Christ would come and reign on earth and establish His kingdom to remain forever; and that the restoration of His gospel and the conferring of authority to act in His name were preparatory processes, that He might find faith on the earth when He should come. When His disciples asked for the signs that would precede His second coming, one of the most conspicuous to which He referred, as recorded in the 24th chapter of Matthew, was that "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness, and then shall the end come." The Latter Day Saints claim to be preaching this gospel preparatory to the end of the rule of the spirit of the world and the ushering in of the reign of righteousness. There had come more light on this subject through Joseph Smith, to whom the Lord gave revelations relating to the coming of the Son of Man. The Lord explains more fully what He said to His disciples, and His words are contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants of the church, section xiv, verses 16 to 30, as follows:

"And I will show it plainly as I showed it unto my disciples as I stood before them in the flesh, and spake unto them, saying, as ye have asked of me concerning the signs of my coming in the day when I shall come in my glory in the clouds of heaven, to fulfill the promises that I have made unto your fathers; for as ye have locked upon the long absence of your spirits from your bodies to be a bondage, I will show unto you how the day of redemption shall come, and also the restoration of the scattered Israel. And now ye behold this temple which is in Jerusalem, which ye call the house of God, and your enemies say that this house shall never fall. But, verily, I say unto you, that desolation shall come upon this generation as a thief in the night, and this people shall be destroyed and scattered among all nations. And this temple which ye now see shall be thrown down that there shall not be left one stone upon another. And it shall come to pass, that this generation of Jews shall not pass away, until every desolation which I have told you concerning them shall come to pass. Ye say that ye know that the end of the world cometh; ye say also that ye know that the heavens and the earth shall pass away; and in this ye say truly, for so it is; but these things which I have told you shall not pass away until all shall be fulfilled; and this I have told you concerning Jerusalem, and when that day shall come, shall a remnant be scattered among all nations; but they shall be gathered again, but they shall remain until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And in that day shall be heard of wars and rumors of wars, and the whole earth shall be in commotion, and men's hearts shall fail them, and they shall say that Christ delayeth His coming until the end of the earth. And the love of men shall wax cold, and iniquity shall abound; and when the times of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fulness of my gospel. But they receive it not, for they perceive not the light and they turn their hearts from me because of the precepts of men; and in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

Nearly all Christians believe that a time will come when Christ will reign personally on the earth. Therefore there is no dispute between them and the Saints in regard to that. As the angels said to the men of Galilee, at the the [ascension, Ed.] of Christ, in like manner as He ascended, so He should in the latter days descend. But there is this distinction between the Saints and the Christian world—the latter believe Christ's coming to be afar off, while the Saints believe it to be near at hand. The prophecies regarding this event are not new, but through Joseph Smith they were made more easily understood. In the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew Jesus spoke of two great historical epochs of the future. One of these was the destruction of Jerusalem and the scattering of the Jews, a remnant of whom would be gathered in the latter days. The temple, then in its magnificence, was to be destroyed and the Jews to be dispersed and become a hiss and a byword in all nations. Could any prediction be more faithfully fulfilled than this has been? If that part of the Savior's prophecy has been so clearly verified, should it not increase in the hearts of men a faith that the remainder will transpire as precisely? Jesus revealed to Joseph Smith that in the latter times, preparatory to His coming, a light should break forth among them that sit in darkness—that it should be the light of the gospel. He said the same thing to His ancient apostles. He told them the gospel should be preached in all the world for a witness before the end should come.

It is also stated in the revelation to Joseph Smith, that the dispensation of the fulness of times should be ushered in by the proclamation of that gospel, which is now being taught to the Gentiles, and will be until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled. Then will a great change take place. No more will the despised elders extend their evangelical labors to the Gentiles. There is a time and season for that work to be prosecuted, and a time when it shall be withdrawn from the Gentiles, and if they come in after that season it will be on their application, not upon entreaty. Then will be ushered in the day of Israel; for that is a labor of this dispensation, the carrying of the gospel to Judah. Not many years hence and their ears will be saluted with the sound of the gospel. This generation will witness the marvelous phenomenon of the realization of the sacred promise made to Israel and the gathering of the remnants of Judah, who shall rebuild the waste places of the Holy Land. Many believe this will not occur, but it will transpire before long, and in the eyes of all nations, for the word of the Lord has declared that it should be in this dispensation.

We are living in the days of the coming of the Son of Man in His glory, and His appearing is not far distant. It is for the true disciple to understand the signs of His coming, which are multiplying on every hand. The good book says there shall be earthquakes in divers places. Do we hear anything of such events at the present time? We have heard during the last few years of numerous instances of the earth opening and engulfing thousands of her inhabitants. Those destructive disturbances of our globe have even visited our own beloved country as well as distant lands.

In the latter days there were to be great disturbances in society, great perplexities of nations, wars and rumors of wars, etc. At the present time there is not much actual war, but the rumors are so frequent as to be without precedent in history; as are also combinations between nations for offensive and defensive purposes. Witness for instance the condition in this regard of the most powerful empires of Europe. There never was a time when warlike enunciations were so completely and rapidly spread over the world as now. Indeed there never were such facilities before for the news of warlike demonstrations to be flashed over the earth almost momentarily.

Not only are the nations perplexed by threatening international questions, but there are social conditions of a singular and terrorizing character. There are tendencies toward popularization of power. There is an element honeycombing the nations, threatening the destruction of all forms of order and government. In many respects men's hearts fail them for fear of these things. This fear is exhibited by the fact that in some of the nations it is impossible for a ruler to go safely a short distance from his abode without being protected by the military. Those who take a leading part in the affairs of nations are in a like position and sometimes such men are assassinated notwithstanding all their caution. An element among people of the world is manifesting a spirit that will not brook the restraints of the governments under which they live.

The Prince of the power of the air is abroad in the earth, seeking whom he may devour. He is also seeking the destruction of the Church of Christ as an organization. Jesus said, regarding the condition of affairs when He should come, that those who profess to take upon them His name, as we do here to-day, would be divided into two distinct divisions—that one-half of the virgins only were wise, and the foolish ones could not enter into the presence of the Savior, not having a wedding garment, in other words, not being clothed with the power of righteousness, they will have no oil in their lamps.

How shall we keep the oil in our lamps that we may be ready when the cry goes forth, Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet Him? We will have no oil unless we take the Holy Spirit for our guide and follow in the path pointed out by Jesus. It has been predicted that the hypocrites in Zion shall tremble—those who have the name of the Lord on their lips, yet seek first their own advancement. They seek to promote their own welfare and those objects that relate to their personal comfort. They seek the things of the world first, thinking perchance they will obtain the kingdom of God and His righteousness as a secondary consideration. This reversal of the order embodied in the divine injunction will not stand. The kingdom will decline to take a secondary position, The time will come when the hypocrite shall be afraid; his knees will weaken and his cheeks blanch when his hypocrisy can no longer be hidden. The voice of revelation, through Joseph the prophet, declares that the pure in heart who constitute Zion, shall judge all things pertaining to it. The words of the Lord in that respect are: "For it shall come to pass that the inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion; and all liars and hypocrites shall be proved by them, and they who are not apostles and prophets shall be known. And even the bishop, who is a judge, and his counselors, if they are not faithful in their stewardship, shall be condemned, and others shall be planted in their stead; for behold I say unto you that Zion shall flourish, and the glory of the Lord shall be upon her."

We are placed upon the threshing floor of the Lord to see whether we are wheat to be garnered into the store-house of the Lord, or chaff to be blown away by the wind. It shall be demonstrated whether or not we can pass through the crucible of temptation unscathed or whether we will be consumed or evolve from it as dross. The Saints are surrounded by temptation. Their duty is to examine the effects of every contemplated act and if it would be detrimental to the cause of truth, or injurious to the community, the individual should refrain from its performance. The Saints are enjoined from following after evil, and if they have the Spirit of God they will have the light to behold the truth clearly. When they are in circumstances of temptation, by that spirit they can cast the temptation aside, and say to the evil one, "Get thee behind me Satan." But sometimes, to obtain the satisfaction of questionable desires, we say in effect, "Get Thee behind me Lord, for a little while, till I consummate my present object, and then I will come around to Thee." The Lord will be slow to hear the cry of those who thus seek to temporarily thrust Him and His laws aside to suit their convenience.

We sometimes lay the flattering unction to our souls that the people of God are always maltreated because of their righteousness. When they have kept His commandments they have been prospered and protected. Such is the history of Israel unless in exceptional instances. There is an invincible power, a principle that leads to victory within those who serve the Lord. Truth is mighty and will prevail, and no power can prevent its blessings following those who conform to it in their lives, for God's throne is based on justice and righteousness.

What is needed to-day is that the Saints should observe the second principle of the gospel; they should repent fully and completely of their sins, and call on the name of the Lord with pure hearts and clean hands. Those who think they are too righteous to need repentance are generally and simply self-righteous. If we are righteous, we have no need to repent, but I think there is some necessity to turn from our evil ways that the Lord may exhibit His power, as He will do, in behalf of His Saints. He will redeem His people by His own power, and He will have the glory for that great work, for it is not the prerogative of man to exalt himself; that power is retained by the Almighty. He that exalteth himself shall be abased, and he who is humble shall be exalted. This is an eternal principle. There is everything to cause the righteous to rejoice. God will manifest Himself in behalf of His people, and will bring about their deliverance when they show themselves worthy. May He bless us, and enable us to place ourselves in unison with Him and with the powers of heaven.

MILLENNIUM.—No. 3.

WHAT proves that David, in Psalm 58, had reference to the second coming of Christ is, that in v. 5, he says, "gather my Saints together unto me; those who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Paul says in Thess. 2:1, "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him." In Matt. 24:31 the Savior is speaking of his second coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, and says "He shall send his angels with the great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

The prophet Habakkuk, in Hab. 3:3 doubtless alluded to the second coming of Christ. He said, "God came from Teman and the Holy One from mount Paran. Selah. His glory covered the heavens and the earth was full of his praise. And his brightness was as the light; he had horns coming out of his hand; and there was the hiding of his power. Before him went the pestilence, and burning coals went forth at his feet. He stood and measured the earth: he beheld and drove asunder the nations: and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow: his ways are everlasting." No such wonders as these have transpired yet, nor is there anything ever mentioned by the prophets to take place that can admit of such a scene but the second coming of Christ. Isaiah, in Isa. 64:1-3 uses very similar language, at least sufficiently so to show that both had the same thing in view:

"Oh that thou wouldst rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence. As when the melting fire burneth, the fire causeth the waters to boil, to make thy name know to thine adversaries, that the nations may tremble at thy presence. When thou didst terrible things which we looked not for, thou camest down, the mountains flowed down at thy presence." It is necessary to observe that the prophets speak of things to be accomplished long after their day, as though they had been accomplished at the time they wrote, because they saw them accomplished in the vision of heaven.

The same subject, the second coming of Christ, is set forth by the sacred writers in another form.

For instance, Peter, in Acts 3:19-25 had the same subject in view, calling it "the times of the restitution of all things." He says thus:

"Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord: and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began. For Moses truly said unto the fathers, 'A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.'"

The prophet Joel calls it the great and terrible day of the Lord. Joel 2:28-32 reads thus:

"And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness and the moon into blood before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come. And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call." This same passage is quoted by Peter in Acts 5:14-22 with a little variation, such as notable instead of terrible and saved instead of delivered, &c.

John, in Revelations, calls it the great day of the wrath of the Lamb. He says:

"I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood: and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind. And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth and the great men and the rich men and the chief captains and the mighty men and every bond-man and every free-man hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand."—Rev. 6:12-17.

A close reader of the Scriptures will see that the writers in the preceding quotations had in view the second coming of Christ and the things attendant on that advent. In the quotation from the Acts the apostle says he will send Jesus Christ who was before preached unto you. He also says that Moses had previously spoken of this, that is, that the time was coming when every soul should be cut off from among the people who would not hear that prophet that was to be raised up like unto himself, which prophet was Christ: but the time when every soul who would not hear that prophet should be cut off has not come yet; but it will come when Christ comes: for this is the uniform testimony of all the prophets that have written of these things. Paul says when He comes He will take vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel. John says that all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him; and Peter says that Moses had testified that every soul should be cut off. So great is the sameness among these writers that there need be no mistake that the times of the restitution of all things, spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began, is the time of the second coming of the Savior.

The quotation from Joel is equally plain, in which the Lord says, "I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood before the great and terrible day of the Lord come;" and at that time there is to be deliverance in mount Zion and in Jerusalem. This is the same in substance as others have said about the second coming of Christ. Paul says, as before referred to, that He should be revealed in fire. Malachi says that when He shall come suddenly to His temple He will be as a refiner's fire.

Joel here says that the sun shall be darkened and the moon turn to blood before the great and terrible day of the Lord come. Isaiah says, as before quoted, that the moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed when the Lord of hosts shall reign in mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before His ancients gloriously. Again, Joes says that there shall be deliverance in mount Zion and in Jerusalem; and Isaiah says that the Lord will reign in mount Zion and in Jerusalem. The sameness is so striking that any attentive reader may see that the terrible day of the Lord spoken of by Joel and quoted by Peter is the time of Christ's second coming. In the quotation from Revelations 6 c., the similarity is as visible. John mentions the sun becoming as sackcloth of hair, the moon turning to blood and the stars of heaven falling as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when shaken of a mighty wind. The Savior says, when speaking of his second coming, "immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven." Matt. 24:29. It is also declared in the preceding quotation from Rev. 6 c., that every island and mountain was moved out of their place. Isaiah, in the 64th chapter, as before quoted, speaking of the Lord rending the heavens and coming down, says that the mountains flowed down at his presence, &c. One more coincidence is, that John says: "And the kings of the earth and the great men and the rich men and the chief captains and the mighty men and every bond-man and every free-man hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth upon the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of His wrath is come and who shall be able to stand?"—John 6:15-17. This is the same as others have said. Paul says that he will take vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel. Daniel says that he will break in pieces and destroy all the kingdoms of the world. John says that the kings of the earth sought a covert under the rocks and mountains, and in another part of his Revelations "all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him," that is, when He comes in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory to "reign" on the earth a thousand years.

It must be plain to every thinking man, that all these writers, in the foregoing passages, referred to the second coming of Christ, and that the great and marvelous things there spoken of to be accomplished, are to take place in connection with His second advent, and that the great and terrible, or notable day of the Lord, mentioned by Joel, and afterward by Peter, and the times of the restitution of all things spoken of by Peter, as well as the great day of the wrath of the Lamb, all refer to the second coming of the Savior, when He comes to "reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before His ancients gloriously."

Every candid reader of the Bible, who is not so completely bewildered by the prejudice of education and in the greatest possible darkness by reason of false teaching, must see that the second coming of Christ to reign on the earth, is by far the most important period in human existence—all the sacred writers have viewed it to be so—heaven, earth, and hell are to be effected with it—saints and sinners are deeply interested in it—all the righteous who are sleeping in their graves, fell asleep in Christ in view of that glorious and awful day of wonders and majesty—the disembodied spirits of the Saints in the paradise of God are waiting the arrival of that period to receive their glorified bodies and commence their never ceasing age of glory, by reigning with Christ a thousand years on earth. The prophets, the apostles, Jesus, Moses, Abel, Enoch and Abraham, all beheld it afar off and rejoiced in it. The Saints above, and the Saints on earth, are looking and longing for that time when they shall all be gathered together, both the things on earth and the things in heaven which are in Christ Jesus; those in heaven to reign with Him a thousand years, and those on earth, or in the flesh, to serve Him a thousand years in their successive generations. Not only men, both in the flesh and in the spirit, but beasts, birds, and reptiles, are also to rejoice in it. They will cease to hurt and to destroy. The asp, the cocatrice, the lion, the leopard, and the bear, shall all become harmless; the little child shall play with them unmo- lested; the weaned child shall perform its wanderings undisturbed; the calf, the kid, and the lamb sport in playful mirth and nothing to make them afraid; the whole lower creation will rejoice, and all the heavens be glad. O glorious day! O happy period! Rejoice ye heavens, and be exceeding glad O earth! Ye lofty mountains, prepare yourselves to bow respectfully and prostrate yourselves at the feet of the King of kings and the Lord of lords; and ye humble valleys wait His advent that you may be lifted up on high. O earth, roll on and cease not; bring in haste this day of wonder and glory! O thou time, exert all thy powers and bring it swiftly to our doors! O Saints, let your prayers cease not; call upon God day and night until this day of rest comes and the heavens and earth rejoice together!

From the foregoing quotations we have learned the following particulars:

1st. That Christ is coming to reign on the earth a thousand years, and that He will bring all the Saints with Him of every nation, tongue, and kindred, and they shall reign with Him.

2nd. That previous to, and at the time of His coming, the Saints on earth are to be gathered together to mount Zion, and to Jerusalem, even all of them, from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other; for there the Lord is to reign before His ancients gloriously.

3d. That He will at that time take vengeance on the wicked, even all of them of all kindreds of the earth, for they shall all wail because of Him.

Under these three general heads, we design to comprise all that we shall write on the subject of the millenium, in this dissertation.

The first in order, then, is that Christ is coming to reign on the earth a thousand years, that he will bring all the Saints with Him of every nation, tongue and kindred, and they shall reign with Him.

There is no fact in the Bible that is set forth more clearly, than that of Christ's coming to reign on the earth with all the raised Saints; it has been declared by all the inspired men since the world began; and it has been the expectation of all the Saints in every age of the world that Christ would come, and that they should yet reign with Him in mount Zion and in Jerusalem; the ancient prophets prophesied of it, and the ancient poets sang of it. Not as some have said, a spiritual (which might more properly be called imaginary) reign; but literal and personal, as much so as David's reign over Israel, or the reign of any king on earth. All the inspired men have said that Christ shall reign over the earth literally; for literally the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our God and His Christ, and He shall reign on the earth. And He will as literally break in pieces and destroy all the kingdoms of the world, as ever one king destroyed and broke down the kingdom of another. Never did Cyrus the Great (as he is called) more literally break down and destroy the kingdom of ancient Babylon, than will Christ, the Great King, break in pieces and destroy all the kingdom of the world; and so completely will He do it that there will not, from one end of the earth to the other, be an individual found whose word or edict will be obeyed but His own; so that He will completely break in pieces and destroy all kingdoms. See Daniel 2: 44.

But before we enter particularly into an examination of Christ's reign, let us see the situation of the world in relation to the government of heaven at the time when Christ was to begin to make preparation for His great and last advent.

That the world, previous to this time, was to wander far from God, and righteousness was so far to depart from the earth, and the true principles of the religion of heaven to be so neglected as to leave the world in a state of apostacy, is pretty generally acknowledged by all who profess much confidence in the Bible. This is the testimony of the Savior himself, and I presume all will agree that his testimony is sufficient to establish any point. I mean all who believe Him to be the Savior of the world. He says:—"But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying, and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."—Matt. 24: 37-39.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTH-EASTERN OHIO AND WEST VIRGINIA.

A conference of the above named district met March 17th and 18th at Limerick, Jackson county, Ohio. A. B. Kirkendall secretary. Branch reports: Fairview, West Virginia, 20. Hocking Valley, Ohio, 21. Mt. Zion, West Virginia 11. The above named new branches presented petitions and were admitted into the district. Cabin Run, West Virginia, 17; 1 baptized, 1 removed by letter. Vinton, Ohio, last report 68; present 64; 3 expelled, 1 died. Morgan, Ohio, 5; no change. Syracuse, Ohio, 45; 3 baptized, 3 dropped from record. Milton, Ohio, 14; 1 baptized. Clarksburg, West Virginia, 28. Liberty, Ohio, 80; 5 baptized, 1 received by letter, 3 expelled. Highland, Ohio, 44; 3 baptized, 1 removed by letter, 1 expelled, 1 died. Union Grove, West Virginia, 29; 3 baptized, 2 expelled.

Elder's Reports: L. R. Devore, (baptized 24), T. J. Beatty, (baptized 33), L. W. Torrence J. L. Goodrich, A. B. Ervin, A. W. Kriebel, and A. B. Kirkendall in person; James Moler, (baptized 30), Thomas Matthews, (baptized 3) and J. L. Williams by letter. Priests H. E. Moler and W. H. Rhoads in person. Licenses were granted to Priests C. Cooper, W. H. Rhoads, and B. Beall; Teachers J. G. Depue and W. W. Cross; Deacon Wm. Cooper. On motion Bro. W. H. Kelley was chosen to act as delegate to General Conference. On motion, General Conference was requested to sustain Brn. L. R. Devore, T. J. Beatty, Thomas Matthews, and James Moler in this district. Resolved, that Bro. L. R. Devore be instructed to confer with Bro. W. H. Kelley in regard to ordinations to the Melchisedec Priesthood as to how and by whom it may be done. Resolved, that A. B. Kirkendall be chosen District Treasurer, and that a special notice be given through the Herald soliciting from the district contributions to defray district expenses. Bishop's Agent's report read and approved. Preaching was done during the conference by J. L. Goodrich, L. R. Devore, A. W. Kriebel and A. B. Kirkendall. T. J. Beatty was re-elected president, James Moler vice-president, and A. B. Kirkendall secretary. T. J. Beatty was sustained as Bishop's Agent. Adjourned to meet at Sinking Spring, Highland county, Ohio at call of president. T. J. Beatty president.

Miscellaneous.

MEETINGS AT LLANELLY.

On Sunday the Conference of the Latter Day Saints was held at Island-street Chapel, Llanelly. There were present Elder J. R. Gibbs, Morrilton; Elder David Williams, Dafen; Thomas Williams, Felinfoel; Joseph Howell, Sketty; J. Howell, Swansea; David Lewis (Dewi Elli), Llansamlet; David Lewis, Morrilton; Thomas Griffiths, Wern; Richard Treharne, Railway-terrace; Thomas Williams, Paddock-street; Arthur James Edwards, Old Castle; Adolphus Edwards, Llanelly; and John Henry Edwards, Old Castle Soad, the secretary of Llanelly Branch, and others. President T. Jenkins, of Dowlais, occupied the chair, and before proceeding with the business, thanked the Cambria Daily Leader for their impartial reports of the proceedings of the Latter Day Saints' reorganised church, and said they (the church) only required the truth written, which had been done by the Leader. The president reported that the branches were increasing in number, but they had numerous deaths amongst their aged brethren.

Elder G. R. Gibbs, Morrilton, addressed the meeting in English. He said: I am pleased to meet with you this afternoon, and to relate my experience of our faith. I was born in the Church of Christ about twenty-three years ago, when I went to hear Mr. T. Phillips, a missionary from America, who was preaching near Morrilton. At that meeting I felt the influence of the Spirit of God working upon me, not only outwardly but inwardly. I had led previous to that a life of which I was not ashamed, but found my littleness when I gave myself up to Christ, and in a few days I was baptized, and had Jesus' Spirit to comfort me and help me along. I can testify to His goodness and power to save to the uttermost. We must do our best to prosecute the good work. We do not work for the money we get in the Christian path as we are paid in money for the labor of our hand. Jesus wished us to work not for the bread that perished. He commanded us to preach to all. He set his life down for us. In Adam men die, in Christ they live. Baptism is the entrance to that Kingdom, and all will find Jesus if they seek him. Jesus Christ's Church of the Latter Day Saints invited all to seek him.

President Thomas Jenkins then administered the Lord's Supper, consisting of bread and water. He explained that the reason water was used instead of wine was, that they could not get the pure wine of grapes here. In America they get the grapes and make their own wine, but they had the teaching of the Bible to show that water could be used when they could only get intoxicating wine. Before handing the water round, Bro. Gibbs engaged in prayer, and a hymn was sung. Mr. Thomas Griffiths then spoke.

Mrs. Edwards, one of the members, spoke as to the comfort derived from making their peace with the Almighty.

Mrs. Jones, an old woman from Marble Hall road, also bore testimony to the benefits she had received from the cause of Christ.

Mr. Joseph Howell, Swansea, said he had received direct communication with the Almighty, and hoped to continue in the good work of Christ, and that some day, with God's help, he hoped to be a shining light of his mercy. He begged of their prayers on his behalf.

Mr. David Lewis (Dewi Elli), said it was thirteen years since he had embraced the Christian faith, and God had called him to preach to others who are now in darkness, and he earnestly entreated them to seek strength of the Almighty and to go on in the good work.

Mrs. Davies, an old woman from Tremsarin, spoke of the comfort of religion, and was followed by Mrs. Williams, Velinvole.

The most telling address was that by a young lady of about eighteen years of age, who rose full of emotion, her words piercing the hearts of the audience as she most earnestly entreated those present to embrace the truth of the gospel before it was too late, asking the old members to pray for the younger ones. The young lady's name was Miss Rachel Gibbs, Morrison, who appeared as if moved by the Spirit. She directed the thoughts of the congregation to the Maker of heaven and earth.

In the evening Mr. Thomas Jenkins preached funeral sermons on several departed Saints. The services were conducted with great earnestness by the members.

PASTORAL LETTER.

To the Saints and friends residing in Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, and New Mexico, Greeting: As per action of General Conference of April, 1888, Kansas is detached from my previously assigned mission, and New Mexico added. I therefore write a farewell address to the Saints in Kansas, wishing that peace and righteous progress may be theirs.

In entering upon the important duties of a new conference year I have no special promise to make, but hope by God's grace to perform whatever work may be imperative, receiving a ready co-operation from all concerned in the above localities, so far as by them a realizing sense of the importance of such co-operative actions may be had. The assignment of so extensive a mission will hardly raise the expectation to the missionary visiting every point within the limits of a conference year; but rather, that all interested within the prescribed limits should know to whom to apply for information or missionary labor, etc., with the understanding that visits and labor by the one in charge shall be as extensive as possible, for the acceptance of a mission is tantamount to a covenant to this end. Nor should the fact be overlooked that the acceptance of a position of trust guarantees to an extent the right to utilize time as wisdom directs. With no expectation of escaping criticism or of hearing from all the pleasing plaudits, "Well done;" and yet to please, gladden and instruct should be the aim, and all this through God's method only, for he never authorized man to formulate a religion—this right He reserves to himself, and he who would dare enter the sacred precincts of God's divine order, to modify or change, assumes a fearful responsibility. However evince the thunders of Mount Sinai were, of God's power, the gentle, yet positive injunction was "See thou do all things according to the pattern shown thee in the mount," was more evincive of the imperativeness of His word, which if possible was rendered more formidable in the declaration of Christ, and emblazoned as with the fire of inspiration, viz: "The word I speak shall judge you at the last day."

And while man whose towering conception of liberty looks upon the word must with horror, Christ used it without hesitation or apology; requesting Nicodemus not to marvel because he said unto him ye must be born again. When Saul of Tarsus was astonished and stood trembling, he received a response to his interrogation thus: "Go into the city and it shall there be told thee what thou must do." Was he coerced? No. Could he have refused? Yes, and been condemned; but he could not have refused and been saved. Therefore in this sense the word must was proper and very significant, and the much prating about absolute rights and liberty is absolute nonsense, presenting an antagonism with law and its object, which if persisted in, is fearful to contemplate.

There is, there can, be no liberty but that restricted or regulated by law; which is said to be the rule of action originating with a superior authority that an inferior is forced to obey; and in view of the incomparable exposition of divine law, since the demise of the apostles, by Joseph Smith, (see sec. 85, Doc. Cov.), disputations as to the imperativeness of law, among Latter Day Saints is difficult to account for, but may be construed to mean an effort with a view to a better understanding. Let us so hope!

By consulting the minutes of the above conference, you will learn that for Nebraska there were three appointees, with some prospects of an additional one in the fall. But for Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico, no provisions were made; yet from any points in those localities I will be glad to hear from member or non-member should a door be opened for the presentation of the word. With present force and facilities we must do the best we can, patiently waiting and working for re-enforcement, and increased facilities.

For the present, Brn. H. C. Bronson and C. H. Porter will operate in Southern Nebraska district; W. M. Rumel in Central, subject to calls from the Northern Nebraska district. It is also expected that Elder C. Derry will labor in North-west Nebraska, but to what extent or in what particular localities is not known. Though the ministerial force was increased over last years force, yet of necessity some who signified their willingness were passed, not willingly, for it would have been more pleasurable to have called for a hundred than to have passed one. Whatever may be the condition of representatives, the church assumes the responsibility to provide for the dependants of those sent; therefore inability to provide for all the dependants of those willing to go, necessitated a limit to the member appointed, but that which was done was for the best, though it would be something new under the sun if mortals were pleased with what a few of their fellow mortals should do.

Members, especially officers, will do well to learn that the motion to amend the 13th chapter of the Book of Rules passed; also that the question in note (a) on pages 101 and 102 in the present form of the Book of Rules was disposed of, and by act of conference the right of a negative vote granted to members in the presentation of decisions of elders courts; therefore if controversy has been had on this question, it should cease and let time determine whether this method will hamper, or facilitate the work of vindicating the innocent and punishing the guilty, when the former claim vindication and the latter seek to evade punishment. This suggestion is offered upon the hypothesis that what obtains by the majority under parliamentary rule, the minority should submit to, not because they individually acquiesce in the ruling, for I am at a loss to understand how a procedure culminating through the method of a parliamentary rule, or common consent, substituting something that the literality or imperativeness of the law does not allow, is valid. And it appears to my mind that the body will be necessitated to amend the appealing method with this or similar proviso, viz: That an aggrieved party may appeal from a lower to a higher tribunal, provided that the decision of the lower court is not set aside by a negative vote; or declare that a negative vote shall not interfere with the validity of a decision of a lower tribunal; or perchance light through some one may radiate, showing the true status of a case voted down, or rejected by a negative vote; we pause!

All who may desire to forward tithing or offerings will bear in mind that J. W. Waldsmith of Nebraska City, Nebraska, and James Kemp of Hutchinson, Colorado, are duly authorized Bishop's Agents, to receive such gifts.

In view of the great amount of evil produced, by idle gossip and the unruly tongue of the slanderer, I assume the liberty to respectfully suggest that all, (especially those who govern in the sacred spots called home), co-operate to arrest this terrible evil. And should representatives of the church essay to stoop to such despicable and demoralizing practice and berate a co-laborer, who is not present to defend himself against such ungodly attack, within the limits of your sacred hearthstone, it were well that you assert your right to the prevention of such a wicked practice, and thus hinder a desecration of your home by the tongue of the slanderer; for he who would thus act, is no more worthy to represent the church, than a babe would be competent to fill the presidential chair at Washington.

If any are injured there are means of redress, and he who is blatant of his injuries and has not the moral stamina to seek redress, ought not to be encouraged in such an abominable practice. The ostensible purpose of sending forth representatives, is to open new fields, and thus extend; this fact should not be overlooked. Branch labor and attending district conferences, should be observed as wisdom directs, that there be no improper expenditure of money. The proper systematizing of labor should not escape attention; branch officials should double their diligence to prevent trouble, and when despite their efforts it comes, continue to be diligent, and if possible, adjust it in its incipency, that the necessity for Elder's Courts may only exist when all other methods to reconcile have failed, and then to subserve and not pervert justice. However reflective it may be, much trouble comes through official negligence. This certainly ought not to be.

Some diligent officials have been discouraged by failure to co-operate upon the part of their fellow officials; this too is an evil.

Members should not be too exacting, or stumble over some supposed short-coming in their officials, nor willingly wink at wrong doing. The parading of a supposed wrong in an official after the Mother Grundy style may terminate in more trouble than the wrong of an official.

The visiting system by officials should not be neglected, or so prosecuted as to make it obnoxious, or create the thought that the visiting officials desire to be assuming and officious, or too inquisitive. That, with all other ministerial labors, should be performed with a view to better the condition of all concerned, without ostentation or encouragement of the thought that to evince gospel humility, a necessity exists to wallow in dust and ashes. Above all other people, the Latter Day Saints should aspire to, and legitimately strive for the beautiful and the good. Poverty is no excuse for a failure to adopt, rules of cleanliness which is a part of godliness. I do not mean by this that the Saints should thirst for the silly ways and forms of modern Babylon, as did the children of Israel for the flesh pots of Egypt.

The true philosophy of life is, or should be, contentment in our various stations, never failing in legitimate strivings to improve temporally and spiritually; but a little with righteousness is better than great revenues without right.

The way is open for Latter Day Saints to accumulate riches as well as others; but for the way of obtaining and their legitimate use they are responsible to God.

The financial system of the church is just what it purports to be, and the fact of efforts to collect and disburse the tithes and offerings authoritatively, ought not to alarm or disconcert any; for since the gospel economy is authoritative it is a valid reason for believing that all appertaining thereto should also be authoritatively done. Therefore the execution of the law of tithing is neither a preventative to branches resorting to measures to meet current expenses, or the bestowal of private donations, but a love too, or an undue bias in favor of long cherished theories often stands in the way of proper rendition of that revealed and made imperative by law.

In gospel bonds,

JAS. CAFFALL.

My permanent address is 137 Benton street, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The following rules and suggestions for the organization and government of the different Sunday Schools of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints within the district, were adopted by the Southern California district conference, March 3d, 1888:

ARTICLE I.

Sec. 1. Wherever there are a sufficient number of Saints in any neighborhood a Sabbath School should be organized.

Sec. 2. The several schools shall be under the general supervision of an association called, The Southern California Sabbath School Association of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

ARTICLE II

Sec. 1. The officers of said Association shall consist of a General Superintendent: whose duties shall be to preside over all meetings of the Association; to prepare, if necessary, a uniform course of lessons for the different schools in addition to the church lesson-sheets; to have the general oversight in the district; to organize new schools; to instruct in the best methods of conducting schools and classes; to impart information; and to produce unity of purpose and concert of action.

Sec. 2. Of an Assistant Superintendent: whose duties shall be to assist the Superintendent in all of his duties as occasion may require, and to take his place in his absence.

Sec. 3. Of a Secretary: who shall hold the finances of the Association and pay them out upon the order of the Superintendent, as well as to perform all the duties usually required of an officer of that kind.

Sec. 4. The above officers, who may be either male or female, shall be annually elected by the Association at the autumn meeting of the Southern California district conference, and shall take their places on the first day of the January following; provided that the conference assembled at the time of the adoption of these rules shall have power to elect the first officers.

Sec. 5. Officers of the Association, officers and teachers of the different Sunday Schools, and all regularly enrolled members of said school, are members of the Association.

Sec. 6. In the election of officers, and in amending or altering these rules, the vote of the Association shall be taken by delegates, each delegate casting one vote for every six members, or major fraction thereof, that he represents. In all other business a majority of the members present shall rule.

Sec. 7. The Association shall hold an open session at the meeting of each conference in this district, and the minutes thereof shall be reported to the Sunday School organ of the church.

Sec. 8. All needful expenses of the Association shall be defrayed by the Treasuries of the different schools proportionately.

ARTICLE III.

Sec. 1. The officers of each Sunday School shall consist of a Superintendent: whose duties shall be, to preside over and conduct each session of the Sunday School; to apportion the lessons as provided by the General Superintendent; to select questions and words as his judgment may determine for the school or classes to answer or recite upon; to see that the several teachers conduct their classes according to the best methods; to keep order; to appoint committees; to report to the General Association at each regular meeting concerning his school; and to perform all other duties pertaining to his office.

Sec. 2. Of an Assistant Superintendent: who shall take the place of the Superintendent in his absence.

Sec. 3. Of a Secretary: whose duties shall be to call the roll at each meeting; to keep a record of the attendance or absence of pupils, of verses recited, and of general questions answered; to read such record for approval or correction prior to each session of the General Association; and to perform all other duties usual to his position which are herein not provided for.

Sec. 4. Of a Treasurer: who shall take charge and keep account of all moneys received, and pay out the same upon the order of the School.

Sec. 5. Of a Chorister: whose duties shall be to lead in singing.

Sec. 6. Of an Organist, if possible.

Sec. 7. Of a Librarian: whose duties shall be to take charge of lesson books, papers, cards, etc., and distribute the same as needed at each session of the Sunday School; and to keep a record of all reading and reference books owned by the School, and be prepared to distribute and receive them on demand of the members at the close of each meeting.

Sec. 8. Of a Janitor, if necessary: whose duties shall be to arrange for the seating of classes; to assist in keeping order; and to attend to the seating of visitors.

Sec. 9. The above officers shall be elected annually on the last Sunday in December, and take their places on the first Sunday in January. If from any cause the regular election fails to take place, the previous officers shall hold over until new ones are elected.

Sec. 10. Only Latter Day Saints in good standing shall be eligible to the office of Superintendent. Other offices may be filled by non-Saints when deemed best by the School.

Sec. 11. Where practicable, each School shall be divided into four departments, viz., Infant, Intermediate, Bible, and Book of Mormon department; and there may be as many classes in each as the Superintendent may deem necessary.

Sec. 12. Outside of these departments a class called the Theological Class may be formed, for the purpose of studying the Scriptures by subjects, and fitting its members for active church and Sunday School work; but it would be advisable, where possible, for it to meet at a different hour of the day, that teachers as well as members of the Sunday School may have opportunity for learning, and that the interest of the school be not monopolized.

Sec. 13. The Theological, Book of Mormon and Bible classes should be privileged to choose their own teachers; but the Superintendent shall have power to appoint first the teachers of the intermediate and infant classes.

Sec. 14. The Inspired Translation of the Bible the Book of Mormon and the book of Doctrine and Covenants shall be the standards of reference on all doctrinal points.

Sec. 15. All persons five or more years of age desiring to become members of a Sabbath School may do so by presenting themselves in a class for enrollment.

Sec. 16. Membership in the school shall be forfeited by improper conduct during the sessions, or by absence from class for six consecutive Sundays without good cause.

Sec. 17. The Superintendent shall appoint a standing committee of three, whose duties shall be to visit absent members and solicit their attendance, as well as to solicit the attendance of non-attending Saints and friends.

Sec. 18. The officers and teachers of each school, together with the standing committee shall meet for consultation and business once in three months, or oftener if occasion shall require.

Sec. 19. On the last Sunday prior to each meeting of the District Conference, each school shall choose one delegate to represent them at the General Association, and shall instruct him, if necessary, how to vote upon the election of officers, or propose amendments to rules.

Sec. 20. Every proposed amendment, or addition to, or alteration in these rules shall be submitted in writing, and read to the General Association at a regular meeting prior to the one in which it is voted upon; and two thirds of the votes cast by delegates shall be required to adopt the same.

SUGGESTIONS.

In addition to the foregoing, the following, suggestions were adopted:

1. That every Latter Day Saint, whether young or old, be a member of the Sunday School.

2. That the greatest care be taken to select Superintendents and teachers who are apt in teaching and government, and whose hearts are in the work.

3. That Superintendents do not have charge of a special class.

4. That reference Bibles, Concordances, Ancient and Modern Church Histories, Dictionaries, and all good and reliable books be placed in the libraries as funds permit.

5. That a standing treasury be formed in each school by regular contributions, for the purpose of purchasing lesson sheets, cards, rewards, library books, etc., and of defraying incidental and Association expenses.

6. That the Superintendent be prompt in opening and closing each session of the school.

7. That three-fourths of the time for recitation be given to teachers, and the remainder be used by the Superintendent as he may think best.

8. That the recitation of verses from the Scriptures be encouraged by rewards for labor done.

9. That all rewards be presented as soon as the required labor is accomplished, if completed within the Sabbath School year; and that the number of verses to be recited by any member be restricted to not more than twelve each week.

10. That appropriate songs, readings, essays and recitations are commendable for evening gatherings, and that they be encouraged by the schools.

11. That in the Theological Class free discussion be permitted on the part of the members, that all points of Scripture and doctrine may be brought out.

12. That the church "Rules of Order" be used as a standard of government in all business meetings of the schools or Association.

13. That if these rules be adopted at the meeting of the Southern California District Conference, the General Sabbath School Association be then organized; and that it cause the rules and suggestions to be properly printed, and a copy furnished to each Latter Day Saint Sunday School within the district.

14. That the General Superintendent be then authorized to visit each school in this district, for the purpose of interpreting the rules and giving instructions as to their application.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Northern Minnesota District Greeting:—The district conference will be held at Pelican Lake, Ottertail county, commencing June 16th and continue as long as the interest warrants. Should enough Saints arrive the 15th, we will have prayer meeting that evening. Bro. J. C. Foss will be with us, and it is hoped Bro. A. H. Smith will also. Saints and friends living on the line of the Northern Pacific can write to Bro. Way, and he will arrange to take them from Audubon to the lake. All Saints and friends of the truth are cordially invited to come. We want this to be the best conference ever held here; so make due preparation by seeking for the Spirit. "They that seek shall find."

T. J. MARTIN, Dist. Pres.

The Western Wisconsin district conference will convene at the Wheatville branch, Crawford county, June 2d and 3d, 1888. All are cordially invited to attend. We also invite the traveling missionaries to come for we need laborers here. We would say for the officials to be sure and come and bring your reports also branch reports. Come with the whole shield of faith, praying for God's Holy Spirit to be with us and good will be done.

A. L. WHITEAKER, Dist Pres.

The conference of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district will convene at the Fowler School-house, five miles south-east of the city of Coldwater, Branch county, Michigan, Saturday, June 16th, 1888, at 10 a. m. Saints, come praying that the conference be a success. Make an effort all worthy of the Lord's cause. Elders E. L. Kelley, John J. Cornish, H. Rath-bun, Leonard Scott, Bishop Blakeslee, and others of the ministry are fully expected to be with us. Visiting Saints coming by railway will not forget that the brethren of the Coldwater branch are always glad to meet them at Coldwater and Quincy the day prior to convening of conference. Saints from adjoining districts will be welcomed.

C. SCOTT, Dist Pres.

A conference of the Kent and Elgin district will be held in the Lindsley branch, on the 9th and 10th of June, 1888. A full report of all the branches is desired, also a full attendance of the officers and members so that the interests of the work in each locality may be properly looked after, and the business transacted in a right and proper manner. Come, Saints, and bring the Spirit of love and peace with you, and praying that the blessings of God may attend our deliberations.

A. LEVERTON, President,
R. COBURN, Clerk.

NOTICES.

To Whom it may Concern:—In harmony with a rule suggested by the First Presidency and adopted by the Quorum of Twelve, I hereby appoint Elder Hiram L. Holt in charge of Oregon and Washington Territory as a field of labor. All persons laboring in, or wishing to labor in said "field of labor" should report to him, and all other matters pertaining to said field of labor which would properly come before the missionary in charge should be referred to him at Sweet Home, Linn county, Oregon.

HEMAN C. SMITH,
President of Pacific Slope Mission.

To all Concerned:—Elder H. C. Bronson, until further directed, will visit and labor alternately at Nebraska City and Omaha, Nebraska, seeking openings at South Omaha and Florence. Suggestions to co-operate with local authority were superfluous, it being always taken for granted by all who know and desire to recognize established rule and law. He who best understands his own duty will be first to honor and sustain others in theirs. And as we evince such a procedure we evidence an embryonic condition in the rudimentary affairs of God's economy, with a prospect of a further development. In bonds, JAMES CAPPALL.

By a resolution at our last conference the undersigned was elected District Treasurer and authorized to solicit contributions from the district to purchase a new District Record and defray postage expenses of district secretary. Branch presidents will please place the matter before their respective branches, and remit amounts to me. A. B. Kirkendall, Creola, Vinton county, Ohio.

BORN.

BROLLIAR.—Near Wilber, Nebraska, to Bro. William and Sr. Emma J. Broliar, April 11th, 1888, a daughter, named Effie E. August 12th, 1882, a son, named Loren E. January 14th, 1885, a daughter, named Alta A. December 11th, 1887, a daughter, named Alma A., and blessed at Wilber, Nebraska, May 13th, 1888, by Elders Levi Anthony and Robert M. Elvin.

MARRIED.

YOUNG—PETT.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Union township, Crawford, county, Iowa, November 22d, 1887, by Elder John Pett, Mr. George H. Young, of Galland's Grove, Iowa, and Sr. Serena S. Pett, daughter, of Bro. and Sr. John and Mary A. Pett.

HOUGHTON—LARUE.—At the residence of the bride's father, Buffalo, Iowa, Wednesday, May 9th, 1888, Bro. James W. Houghton, of Davenport, Iowa, and Sr. Clara Bell LaRue, Elder J. S. Roth officiating. A time of enjoyment was had by all present. The happy couple left the following day for Davenport, their future home, followed by the well wishes of a host of friends.

WARNER—WILCOX.—At the bride's home, Blake's Mills, Tuscarawas county, Ohio, May 14th, 1888, Mr. Charles B. Warner and Miss Mary Wilcox, by Elder William H. Kelley.

May their happiness be complete, and their future be one of prosperity.

SARGENT—GRIFFITH.—At Vincennes, Iowa, May 9th, 1888, Horace C. Sargent and Ellen I. Griffith, Elder B. F. Durfee officiating.

DIED.

HUBBARD.—At Lincoln, Nebraska, April 11th, 1888, Harriet Lavenia, beloved wife of Mr. H. A. Hubbard, and eldest daughter of Bro. and Sr. Richard Merideth, of Nebraska City; aged 28 years and 21 days; she died in peace after a short illness. Funeral sermon by the Rev. Williams, of the Baptist Church. She was baptized at Nebraska City in 1869 by Elder R. M. Elvin. A loving husband, two children, father, mother, six brothers, two sisters and many friends mourn her loss and early departure.

"A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we love is still,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled
God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon his love had given,
And though the body moulders here,
The soul has upward risen."

BENNER.—At Plum Hollow, Iowa, Wallis, eldest son of Bro. France and Sr. Nellie Benner, aged 4 years, 7 months and 17 days. Funeral conducted by W. Leeka. Sermon by H. Kemp. We mourn not as those who have no hope.

RUMEL.—At Omaha, Nebraska, April 21st, 1888, Amy Rumel, daughter of Bro. and Sr. N. M. Rumel, aged 1 year, 9 months and 4 days. Funeral sermon in Saints Chapel, by Edward Rannie, Jr.

HORTON.—At Montrose, Iowa, April 13th, 1888, of scarlet fever, Abbie Horton, only daughter of Mr. and Sr. Anna Horton. Little Abbie was born May 22d, 1882, and died April 13th. Also at same place and of same disease, Louie Horton, aged 6 months and 28 days. Dear little lambs, they suffered much here, but we know they are numbered with the blessed, for Jesus said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Like David of old we know they can not come to us, but we can go to them.

They laid my babies in the grave,
And oh, my heart was pained;
'Twill be so lonely, help me, Lord
More reconciled to be.
I know they're happy with the Lord,
These dear ones were his own,
And I believe his holy word:
'He'll bring them when he comes."

ON BEING PLEASANT.

SAYS Mr. Thackeray about that nice boy, Clive Newcome, "I don't know that Clive was especially brilliant, but he was pleasant."

Occasionally we meet people to whom it seems to come natural to be pleasant; such are as welcome wherever they go as flowers in May, and the most charming thing about them is that they help to make other people pleasant too. Their pleasantness is contagious.

The other morning we were in the midst of a three-days rain. The fire smoked, the dining-room was chilly, and when we assembled for breakfast, papa looked rather grim, and mamma tired, for the baby had been restless all night, Polly was plainly inclined to fretfulness, and Bridget was undeniably cross, when Jack came in with the breakfast rolls from the baker's. He had taken off his rubber coat and boots in the entry, and he came in rosy and smiling.

"Here's the paper, sir," said he to his father with such a cheerful tone that his father's brow relaxed, and he said, "Ah, Jack, thank you," quite pleasantly.

"The top o' the morning to you, Pollywog," he said to his little sister, and delivered the rolls to Bridget with a "Here you are, Bridget. Aren't you sorry you didn't go yourself this beautiful day?"

He gave the fire a poke and opened a damper. The smoke ceased, and presently the coals began glow, and five minutes after Jack came in, we had gathered around the table and were eating our oatmeal as cheerily as possible. This seems very simple in the telling, and Jack never knew he had done anything at all, but he had in fact changed the whole moral atmosphere of the room, and had started a gloomy day pleasantly for five people.

"He is always so," said his mother, when I spoke to her about it afterwards, "just as sunny and kind, and ready all the time. I suppose there are more brilliant boys in the world than mine, but none with a kinder heart, or a sweeter temper; I am sure of that."

And I thought—Why isn't a disposition worth cultivating? Isn't it one's duty to be pleasant, just as well as to be honest, or truthful, or industrious or generous? And yet while there are a good many honest, truthful, industrious and generous souls in the world, and people who are unselfish too, after a fashion, a person who is habitually pleasant is rather a rarity. I suppose the reason is because it is such hard work to act pleasant when one feels cross. Very few people have the courage of that cheeriest of men, Mr. Mark Tapley, who made it a point of honor to "keep jolly" under the most depressing circumstances.

People whose dispositions are naturally irritable or unhappy think it is no use trying to be otherwise; but that is a mistake. If they will patiently and perseveringly try to keep always pleasant, after a while they will get into a habit of smiling instead of frowning, of looking bright instead of surly, and of giving a kind word instead of a cross one. And the beauty of it is, as I said before, that pleasantness is catching, and before long they will find themselves in the midst of a world full of bright and happy people, where every one is as good-natured and content as they are.

GOOD ADVICE.

MARION HARLAND, winding up a couple of columns of good advice to girls, puts this plain but excellent talk into the final paragraph: "To make oneself conspicuous by open contempt of conventional and, in the main, wholesome social laws is the first degree of the descending scale. To be 'fast,' 'loud,' 'high,' 'fly,' (how many synonyms our national slang dictionary offers for the next slide!) is so nearly and dangerously allied to culpable indiscretion that the slander-mongers belonging as they do, to the 'impressionist school,' seldom pause to discriminate between them. They never halt to distinguish actual imprudence from positive—and remediless—infamy." Girls may be loud and coarse without being bad, but the best way is to take no chances. The quiet, modest girl can never be mistaken for anything but what she is.

SOME one has wisely said:

"Every human being is intended to have a character of his own, to be what no other is, to do what no other can do. Every human being has a work to carry on within, duties to perform abroad, influences to exert which are peculiarly his, and which no conscience but his own can teach. Let him not enslave his conscience to others, but act with the freedom, strength and dignity, of one whose highest law is in his own breast." * * * "God forbid that the search after truth should be discouraged by fear of its consequences! The consequences of truth may be subversive of systems of superstition, but they can never be injurious to the rights of well founded expectations of the human race."

"THE Methodist Church in this country, according to the report presented at the General Conference now in session in New York, supports a dozen theological seminaries, more than a hundred academies, and over fifty colleges, all of which represent a money value of $25,000,000, and then contributes $1,000,000 annually to foreign missions. It is a great and growing church organization."

TAKE NOTICE.

Having made arrangements with the Board of Publication to have our books kept at the Herald Office, we wish to notify our friends that hereafter all letters of business connected with Autumn Leaves, "Home Column," or Hope, must be addressed to David Dancer, box 82, Lamoni, Iowa. This will include remittances for every purpose, whether subscription money, offerings for Home Column Missionary Fund, birth offerings for Hope, or Christmas offerings from the children. Please remember and in the future send all money to David Dancer.

All applications for change of address on either Autumn Leaves or Hope, or for missing numbers of either papers, must be sent to David Dancer in order to secure attention. These regulations can not be departed from.

Send to M. Walker, Lamoni, Iowa, all articles intended for publication, either in Autumn Leaves, Hope or Mother's Home Column.

It is desirable at all times that letters and articles for publication as above specified be sent to M. Walker, but to accommodate our friends and lesson expense, such articles or letters if sent to Herald Office will be handed to us, always provided they be written entirely separate from any matter of business.

Parties not connected with the work of the Herald Office can form no just estimate of the absolute necessity existing for a strict conformity to the above notice. It is not for our own convenience merely, but in order that all mistakes be avoided and patrons have their requests promptly and correctly attended to. Let us repeat, SEND ALL MONEY TO DAVID DANCER, BOX 82, LAMONI, IOWA.

THE RIGHT TO MEMBERSHIP.

IT seems strange to us that the position of the Reorganization with regard to the rights of those holding a legal membership in the days of Joseph and Hyrum Smith should not be understood; after all that the HERALD has stated upon the subject. The fact of reorganization concedes the existence of those holding legal right to recognition in the body. Elements must exist where organization and reorganization are effected. Hence, when the attempt was made to revive the work after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the question whether it was a new dispensation, or the continuance of one already begun was raised. Upon both consideration and the teaching of the Spirit it was decided that it was not a new dispensation, but was a regathering and reorganization of elements already existing. The underlying principle was that authority to admit men into fellowship with the church, the body of Christ, had been conferred, and that many had been so received and were entitled to membership still. The Reorganization did not then demand nor has it since demanded that none of the members of the original church should be received except upon rebaptism; but has persistently admitted the right of properly baptized persons to membership in the church; it could do nothing more and did nothing less. It follows then that while holding to this position and denying the rights of no one, the other side of the proposition is that those persons whose right to membership is thus recognized by the Reorganization must in turn recognize the Reorganized Church as a body, and seek admission therein in order to be entitled to fellowship and to have their names enrolled and their priesthood, if they hold any, known and recognized.

There can be no plainer statement and proposition than the foregoing; and how it is that any man, whether he may have been Brighamite, Brewsterite, Strangite, or Josephite can expect the Reorganization to recognize him as a member of the old church, holding authority to act in the name of the church and accept his labors, baptisms, confirmations and other official acts, when he refuses to recognize in the Reorganization the church and denies its succession to that church into which he was originally baptized is not easily comprehended.

We have been inquired of in regard to such individuals and the question has been asked, what will you do with those baptized by such men? The answer may be found in Acts, 18th and 19th chapters. It certainly is not reasonable to ask the church to recognize the official acts of a man who does not recognize the official character of the church; who denies the validity of its organization and the righteousness of its claims as an organization. The organic law of the church provides "that it shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who hath authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority, and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church." In this there is both law and common sense, for no body of men could long exist together in unity where such mutual recognition was lacking. It must be known unto the church that the men attempting to represent the church are authorized. No matter how just claim for standing in the old church the man may have, unless he chooses to submit that claim to the church and secure its recognition, he can not in either reason or justice ask that the church recognize him, or his labors.

What the Master may do in the hereafter does not govern in the matter. He has ordered a certain work to be done and has ordained means to carry out that order, and given rules to guide those called into the ranks of the workers. Whoever is not contented to observe those rules is not in harmony with the order and can not be in fellowship with his fellow workmen. Which is arbiter in the case, the body itself, or the man who refuses to recognize the body. There must be a succession to the church organized in 1830. If there has been a departure from the faith, there has been also an adherence to the faith. This adherence to the faith has found and is finding expression in the Reorganized Church. It has done and is doing more toward the exemplification of the philosophy of the latter day work than has been, or is being done by the whole host of them who are cavilling at her progress; or those who are crying "lo here is Christ," or "lo there is Christ."

There was a prediction that there would come a time of shaking, and that many who stood would be shaken out. It was believed by many, and constant exhortations were heard to be prepared for the shaking. It looks a little paradoxical for any one who is standing aloof and alone, or almost so, to turn to the body standing steadfastly in its integrity and faith and hurl at them: "The shaking time has come, and I have shaken you out." It may be an assumed solution of the problem of whether the "dog shakes his tail, or does the tail shake the dog;" in flattering the self-righteousness of those who run without tidings. We do not impugn the motives of any, but see no reason why the church should concede the claims and opinions of every one who chooses to teach because he once held a standing in the old organization. Right and truth must in time prevail. The arbitrament may be late but it is sure to come. We grant the privilege to all to do their own thinking, deciding for themselves what their action may be; but this does not evade the conclusion that men may err in judgment. He who errs in judgment and decides wrong in reference to his course will not receive the reward that appertains to right doing. If the word is clear, the word is the arbiter of human hopes of life beyond; and he who goes forward upon lines of his own devising is sure to suffer loss here and hereafter.

We have said to some who have held that the Reorganized Church was wrong and they were right: "Very well. Go ahead if you are called of God. Do the work God has called you to. Never mind the Reorganization if it is not doing the work of God. If you are to do the work the Reorganization is essaying to do, and God prospers your labors, ours is at an end. But for pity's sake, for consistency's sake do not cry out against us for being at work and you yourselves remain idle. Go to work; but do not demand of us as a condition precedent to your work, that we shall stop what we believe we are called of God to do, and give that work into your hands, for this we will not do."

If what the Reorganized Church is doing is not of God it must come to naught; if it is of God—we presume it will go on. We sincerely regret the loss of those who go out from us and whom we have regarded as good and honest men, but if they are correct time will disclose it, they must prosper and increase, we fail and decrease. If they are incorrect, then shall they fail and the work of the church go on to a glorious termination.

WE give in this issue a very interesting letter from Bro. T. W. Smith, in charge of the Australian mission, to his charge in the Society Islands, upon the occasion of receiving a letter from Mr. James L. Young respecting the conduct of the native Saints at Papeete, Tahiti. The action of the Saints was indeed most commendable, and Bro. T. W. Smith is justified in thus commending them. We congratulate Bro. Smith upon the faith and works of those with whom his labors have been expended during the last three years, as we also commend the Saints. We append the letter of Mr. Young as explanatory of the reasons for Bro. Smith's letter.

TO THE SAINTS IN THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDS:

Dear brethren and sisters in the Lord Jesus Christ, scattered abroad upon the Islands called Tahiti, Maatea, Anaa and the Paumotu: Greeting in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.—I, your brother and pastor in the Lord Jesus Christ, am greatly pleased, and give to God the praise, that I have heard that you have at the time agreed upon, paid the entire debt that you owed to Mr. Young for materials for the house of the Lord, called Shiloh, in the district of Fareute, Papeete, Tahiti. I am also much pleased to hear that at the time of your feast of dedication, at which there were many brethren and sisters from various islands, that no one has been accused of quarrelling, or fighting, or drunkenness; which I doubt could be said of any similar assemblage of members of other churches, especially when you were together for many days, and even for weeks. I feel truly proud of you, and rejoice over you, for it proves that my labors among you have not been in vain. And now as you have got such a good name among the Europeans of the Island of Tahiti, and particularly are you exalted in the respect of those of Papeete, I hope and believe that you will continue to be worthy of this good name; and that each and every one of you will quickly pay any debt that you may have to make, and that you will at all times be quiet, peaceful and sober; and that the sisters will be modest, quiet and meek, when upon the streets or in the stores, and everywhere, as they always have been; and stay at home, and not be abroad at night; and in every way strive to keep the good name you have obtained. In all your dealings with the merchants, be sure to keep your promises, for you can not tell what good results to the church in all the Islands may come, if you will do this, and be honest and truthful at all times.

I have read the letter of Mr. Young in the churches here, and all of the household of faith rejoice to hear such words of kindness and good will toward you, from a gentleman of wealth and influence in society as is Mr. James L. Young. A good name is of more value than much riches.

I am also greatly pleased with your letter which you sent to Bro. Joseph and signed by Tehopea, Metuaore, Tapuni, Teriirii, Temau, Poiatu, Pohemite, Tehau, Tehu, Petero, Taimana, Puiaava, Mahana and others; and I assure you, that you can not more earnestly desire to see me than I am to see you, as also does sister Smith, or Helen. I will be greatly pleased to see you again before the first day of January. I hope I shall be with you to celebrate the opening of the new church or to hold an anniversary meeting on the day that it was dedicated this present year.

I write this in my own language, so that your brethren and sisters in all parts of the world may hear of your good deeds and the good name you have obtained thereby, from the Europeans of Papeete. My love for you was great before I came to you over three years ago, and it is much greater now than it was then. I did not leave you willingly, but because it was my duty to come here for awhile; and I shall be glad when some one can come and take my place that I may return to you. I hope that peace, love, union, and every gift of the Holy Spirit will dwell with you all in the name of Jesus Christ. I have not forgotten as yet what I have learned of the Tahiti tongue, as you will see by the epistles that I have written to you, which I hope you have received ere this.

In much love we are your brother and sister in Christ.

THOMAS W. SMITH.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Jan. 26th, 1888.*

REV. T. W. SMITH, Forster, N. S. W., DEAR SIR:—Yours of December 27th, from Hastings just to hand per "Richmond." I am glad to hear that you reached Victoria safely and that you had a pleasant passage there.

Your people have paid up all they owed on the church and held an opening festival a few days ago which was well attended. They have elevated themselves not a little in the eyes of the people here by their energy and determination in paying for the church, and by their quiet and sensible conduct in the opening of the building. They can now taste the sweets of independence and feel, as Tehopea said to me a few days ago, that they are an homogenous body and can depend upon each other. It was a little surprising to some to see some hundreds of these Pomotu people living together for several days with no rioting, quarrelling, or drunkenness. This is new to Papeete folks, and I have heard it several times remarked on.

Both Mrs. Young and myself are sorry to hear that Mrs. Smith's health has not improved by the change of climate. We trust that you may however find the colonies more congenial the longer you stay there, and we need scarcely say that we shall be very glad to see you back here again.

With best wishes and kind remembrance to Mrs. Smith from Mrs. Young, I remain very truly yours, very sincerely.

JAMES L. YOUNG.

BRO. JOSEPH LUFF, of Independence, Missouri, has prepared and has now in the printer's hands a "Minister's Diary," for the use of the elders. The description of the work is about as follows:

It will be ruled in parallel columns, and following on each date line will be spaces, under proper headings, for number of sermons preached, and where; number baptized, confirmed, ordained, married; number of children blessed; number administered to; miles traveled—by rail, wagon, or on foot; cash received, from whom; cash paid out, and for what; names of persons baptized and ordained; blanks for branch organization, when, where organized and the name of branch, also a large space for general remarks. It will be bound in flexible sheep cover, similar to bank books; and of a size convenient for the pocket. Each page has lines sufficient for one week; and at that rate each book has sufficient pages for one year, or very much longer if not used every day. It will be found just the thing for our ministers, who wish to keep a complete diary, from which they can at the end of the quarter, or year make out a complete report in a few minutes. All that is necessary will be to foot up the totals under the headings as found at the bottom of each column. It will be found to be a complete book of reference, or journal for the minister's private benefit in after years, and will supply a long felt want.

The price will be 40 cents each, postage paid. Address Joseph Luff, box 175, Independence, Jackson county, Missouri, and your orders will be promptly filled.

A BROTHER, writing from the east lately says:

"In reading 'For Goodness Sake Don't,' I wished one other thing had been put into it. That is, some of the brethren in preaching, after speaking a long time will say, 'Just one other word,' and will spin out and multiply that 'one other word,' fifteen, twenty, thirty minutes, and tire out the hearers, both Saints and outsiders, so that some otherwise interested will not come again."

Had the writer been considering the topic of public speaking he might have thought of that, and given it a hint.

We think that if the average speaker occupies from fifty minutes to one hour, profitably to his hearers, he does well. Some may, if having good liberty, occupy more time; but on ordinary subjects the hour is enough. If the elders will studiously avoid useless words, and unnecessary repetitions of statement, text and argument, they will thereby greatly commend themselves to their hearers. And it would be well if the elder would think how the audience must feel, when advised by him that he had come so near to the end of his discourse, as his "one word more" would lead them to conclude, he continues for an indefinite time putting in new and differing words prolonging his discourse many hundred words, instead of one. The average number of words spoken by a speaker is about one hundred and fifty per minute; hence, if a preacher says to his audience, "Just one word more," and continues ten minutes, he has given them fifteen hundred words, if for twenty minutes three thousand. Under such circumstances the best of elders are liable to tire their audiences, and should not complain if they are not listened to patiently to the end. Printers have a proverb: "A line if good, is never too short; if bad, it is always too long." This may be applied."

WE give below the text of the test oath provided by the election laws of Idaho. It is pretty severe, and shows the determination upon the part of the citizen law-makers of Idaho to prevent polygamists from voting or holding office in the Territory. It is significant that in a land in which the Lord said "he who keepeth the law of God, hath no need to break the law of the land," there should be found a people professing to be the people of God against whom such law as the above should be made.

IDAHO TEST OATH.

"You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you are a male citizen of the United States, over the age of twenty-one years; that you have actually resided in this Territory for four months last past, and in this county thirty days; that you are not a bigamist or a polygamist; that you are not a member of any order, sect, organization, or association which teaches, advises, counsels or encourages its members, devotees, or any other persons, to commit the crime of bigamy, or polygamy or any other crime defined by law, as a duty arising or resulting from membership in such order, organization or association, or which practices bigamy or polygamy, or plural or celestial marriages as a doctrinal rite of such organization; that you do not either publicly, or privately, or in any other manner whatever, teach, advise, counsel or encourage any person to commit the crime of bigamy, or polygamy, or any other crime defined by law, either as a religious duty or otherwise; that you regard the Constitution of the United States and the laws thereof, and of this Territory, as interpreted by the courts, as the supreme laws of the land, the teachings of any order, organization, or association to the contrary, notwithstanding, and that you have not voted previously, at this election, so help me God."

The following is from the Deseret News, Utah:

AGAINST THE CHURCH.

To-day Thomas G. Webber, William B. Dougall, George J. Taylor and B. H. Schettler were subpoenaed as witnesses in the suit of the government against the church. Mr. Webber's examination occupied the greater portion of the day, and was in relation to the purchase, by Z. C. M. I., of some real estate that had formerly belonged to the church, and of the transfer of Z. C. M. I. stock, to the value of over $360,000, to

H. J. Grant & Co., C. C. Asmussen and others. When Mr. Webber's testimony was closed, Mr. Dougall was called and examined in relation to over $20,000 worth of Deseret Telegraph Company's stock, transferred on March 2d, 1887, to the different Stake Associations.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. H. Bridgeman writes from Fontanelle, Adair county, Iowa, May 21st:

"Our little body of Saints at this place are mostly in good health; and in the enjoyment of God's blessings to a fair extent. 'Grandpa' Alden is still in the front rank, and some ahead of the rest of us here. We hold meetings at his house every Sunday, and though but few of us are present, we do as well as we can and hope for something better in the future."

Bro. James McKiernan wrote from Keokuk, Iowa, May 22d:

"Bro. Holt and I have been preaching in sister Salisbury's neighborhood, near Blandinsville, Illinois; but the roads got too bad there, so we came to Keokuk and will remain a few days preaching as long as the interest will justify."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The efforts of the Lamoni Board of Trade are likely to secure the location of a Bank in their town in the near future. We learn from reliable sources that competent business men, of ample means, are now arranging to that end, and they are heartily interested in the welfare of Lamoni and its surroundings and will work for its promotion. This accomplished, the Board should not relax its labors till a fine college graces its beautiful location.

The associate editor intends to spend the next few weeks preaching in Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska, and prospects are good that all the preaching force of the HERALD Office will be actively engaged in pulpit services so far as they can make it at all practicable. The field is wide and whitening.

Bro. Peter Anderson wrote from Council Bluffs, Iowa, the 16th inst., that until further notice his address will be box 288, Logan, Utah. We wish both him and his good wife a happy and very prosperous mission in that field.

Bro. W. H. Kelley wrote from Kirtland, Ohio, of late that two more were baptized at New Philadelphia, Ohio, on the 14th instant.

Sr. Melissa Green sends money and orders the Voice of Warning sent to twelve different persons of her acquaintance in Montana. Sister Green says: "Oh, how I wish this field was properly attended to."

Sr. Jennie Scott, of Ponca, Nebraska, remits for the Herald and expresses the hope that some capable, faithful elders will go there at an early day and preach the word of life. She thinks they would meet with success.

Bro. George H. Graves has located in Ypsilanti, Michigan, and he hopes to soon be able to go abroad in the ministry.

Sr. Mattie Lively wrote from St. Clair, Michigan, May 15th, and says there are no Saints near them; and that they would be pleased to have some of the faithful elders call on them and preach there, and that there has never been any preaching by the Saints in that region.

The Bessemer, (Wis.), Times, of the 12th inst., contains a timely correction by Elder Frank Hackett of some misstatements made by that paper touching the faith and practices of the Saints. The editor supplements it with kind words of acknowledgement and notifies his readers that the Times will publish the epitome so that the people can judge for themselves as to the faith of the Saints. This is just and generous.

Bro. Walter Bailey wrote of late from 217 South Main street, Elmira, New York. He desires to hear from Elder W. H. Kelley, and thinks some people there would listen to gospel preaching and obey it.

By the Wilber, (Neb.), Opposition we learn that Elder H. C. Bronson, of St. Joseph, Missouri, has been engaged as orator on decoration day at Wilber, and we do not doubt his proving equal to the occasion.

Elder M. H. Forscutt preached at Davis City, Iowa, Saturday evening, May 19th, and Sunday, the 20th, morning and evening to large and very attentive audiences. We hear that his efforts were well received.

Sr. Elsie Walker, of Sandage P. O., Stafford county, Kansas, is very anxious to get a certificate of her marriage to enable her to obtain a pension, her husband having served in the Mexican war. The proof of the marriage is necessary for this purpose. Her husband's name was Hugh Walker. He died at Council Bluffs in 1860. Sr. Walker states that she was married in Nauvoo, by Elder Meachum, in 1842 or 1843. If any of the Saints can give any information of Elder Meachum, or anything that will aid Sr. Walker in obtaining the proof she requires, they will confer a favor upon a worthy woman.

Bro. C. W. Hawkins, of Santa Rosa, California, overseer of the County Poor Farm, of Sonoma county, desires to engage a member of the church—a sister—to oversee and help do the general house work, and to act as matron in the absence of his wife. His postoffice box is 427.

Brn. W. Armstrong, T. Jenkins, J. Howells, and others, send us English and Welsh papers, for which they have our thanks.

Superintendent, Bro. John Scott, reports that the mail matter sent from the Herald Office May 23d, consisted of 4650 packages, weighing 887 pounds net.

Bro. W. V. Pearson, of Hamon, Gonzales county, Texas, sends us a notice clipped from the Christian Messenger, of Dallas, Texas, giving favorable mention of the late conference at Independence, Missouri. Of us it says: "This body of people are strongly opposed to polygamy, and claim that the Utah Mormons are an apostasy."

Bro. Geo. E. McConley, of Sterling, Colorado, writing to Bro. D. Dancer and remitting for church publications, says:—"I am highly pleased with the Herald, and want you to consider me a life-long subscriber."

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert started May 24th to attend conference at Pleasant Grove, near Clarksdale, Missouri.

We learn that many of the missionaries appointed at the Spring Conference have entered promptly and energetically upon their mission work, and that others are about ready for the field.

Bro. Charles Jones, of Lone Rock, Missouri, who has lately been near the dark river, paid the office a visit on May 25th, looking worn and thin from his illness, but convalescent. Bro. Charley will be satisfied from the cordial greeting of the Lamoni Saints, that they prize him on this side, and think him worthy of the society of those who have gone before.

Bro. N. Stamm, by card from Pella, Iowa, dated May 23d, states that he had tried all day to get a house to speak in; but had failed up to three in the afternoon. Pella is settled by the Hollanders, countrymen of Bro. Stamm, and it is likely that their conservative religion objects to anything new.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it a rule of the church that the elders shall interrogate applicants for baptism before administering the rite?

Ans.—There is no such rule that we are aware of. Some of the elders have adopted such custom and it is theirs alone. Circumstances may sometimes dictate that such inquiries should be made by an elder before he proceeds to baptize a candidate, of whom he knows nothing; but as a rule the fact that a man openly asks for baptism is notice to the church and to the elder who is to baptize him that he has taken due pains to inform himself concerning the faith, and that his motives are proper in demanding baptism. Wisdom is to govern in the cases as they occur.

Q.—Is there any difference between the "gift" of the Holy Ghost, and the "baptism" of the Holy Ghost?

A.—They are essentially the same. See Acts 1: 5; 2: 4; with 10: 44-46; 11: 15-17; and 15: 8.

Q.—What did Jesus mean when he said, "No man also having drunk old wine straightway desireth new; for he saith, The old is better?"—Luke 5: 39.

A.—He evidently meant that men are partial and firmly attached to their old habits, customs, prejudices, etc., etc., as all may perceive who carefully observe the affairs of men.

Q.—When was Daniel 12: 11 fulfilled?

A.—We think it has had a double fulfillment, first at the profanation of the Temple under Antiochus Epiphanes, when the Israelites them- and the dispersion of the Jews by the Romans selves erected an idolatrous altar upon the sacred altar, and offered sacrifice thereon; (See 1 Mac- cabs 1: 54; 9: 7; also Josephus 247, 411; and second, prior to the destruction of the Temple under Titus, when the Zealots profaned the Temple and altar. See Josephus, Wars, Book 4, chapter 3, to Book 5, chapter 3.

Q.—Will the temple to which the Lord "shall suddenly come," mentioned in Malachi 3: 1, be built in Independence, Missouri?

A.—That matter will be fully revealed in due time. It is certain the temple mentioned in Malachi is one to be built by the people of God in these latter days, for it is to be "His temple," erected in the times, or just preceding the times of the Lord's second advent, for he is to then "purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they [Aaronic priests. Ed] may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness." For "then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former [ancient] years."—Mal. 3: 1, 3, 4.

This view is confirmed by the further fact that Jesus, after his resurrection, taught the Nephite Saints the third and fourth chapters of Malachi, told them that the Father had "commanded" him to do so, and assured them that "it was wisdom in him that they should be given unto future generations," that is, to generations future from them, thus placing the Lord's coming "suddenly to his temple" at his second advent.

But we would exhort the Saints to not "be troubled" in respect to the Lord's coming "suddenly to his temple," for if they are "ready" for that event, whether alive, or sleeping in death, all will be well with them and they will share in the joys and glories of that day. There is much yet to be done ere that occurs, for the gospel must first be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, (Matt. 24: 14; Rev. 14: 6-16), the Jews regathered and build Jerusalem, (Matt. 23: 37-39; Zech. 14: 1-11; Joel 3: 1-21; Rev. 11: 1-18, etc., etc.), and the Saints be ready for that event. Matt 25: 1-10; Rev. 19: 7-9.

Q.—Are the expenses of any part or department of the Herald Office paid out of the tithes and offerings?

A.—No; none of them. The Herald Office employes, all of them, are paid from the proceeds of the office.

Q.—Did Adam fall that men might be?

A.—Yes;—"Adam fell that men might be; and men are, that they might have joy."—2 Nephi 1: 8. See also Inspired Translation, Genesis 4: 9-11; and 1 Tim. 2: 14.

RUMORS OF WAR.

ALL who are conversant with the facts of prophecy relative to the last days, are not surprised to read of the universal unrest, fearfulness, dark forebodings, and unprecedented preparations for war, defensive and offensive, now so prevalent in Europe, Asia, and Africa, and more especially in those regions lying mainly to the east, north, and west of Jerusalem and the land of Palestine. Those localities are clearly set forth in prophecy as the future theatre of the most terribly destructive wars ever known, or to be known, in the history of man. The heart trembles and the soul is sad in contemplating them. But these dark clouds have their "silver lining," for beyond them lies the beautiful dawn of that all-glorious day when the Prince of Peace and his people shall reign "from the river to the ends of the earth."

The Christian Herald, (England), has this to say:

"THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK

"On the Continent is an exceedingly gloomy one. Germany is standing at the dying bed of the Kaiser, and the accession of his son and successor is regarded as an omen of war. In the Balkan peninsula the Bulgarian question seems now further from settlement than at any time since Alexander resigned the throne. Roumania, which until recently appeared strong enough to preserve its neutrality, has just been agitated by a social revolution, and the confusion and chaos within its borders, even now the disturbance is subsiding, may any day furnish the vigilant Russian Government with a welcome justification for crossing the frontier, and the questions are being asked with undisguised anxiety, 'What will happen in Bulgaria then?' and 'How will Austria regard a further invasion of the Balkan States, in which she is as deeply interested as Russia?' Already 'movements' of Russian troops towards the Austrian frontier are reported, which seems to indicate that the Czar's advisers are preparing for the worst. A condition of unrest is also being fostered in Macedonia. Then, on the other side, in France, the long anticipated days of revanche are evidently near at hand, and one of the most sanguinary and disastrous wars will occur which has taken place since the days of Alexander the Great."

In addition to this we add the following from one of our late exchanges:

"Long anterior to the date of the earliest records of profane history, a people having their origin in Central Asia, migrated westward, and subjugated certain portions of Europe. In the days of Ancient Rome, this people, then long resident in Europe, had their settlements in the Carpathian mountains, which are now embraced in the eastern part of Austria. From this people have descended the Slavic races of the present age. The original stock was aggressive and prolific, and spread from the region of which Eastern Austria may be assumed to be the center, northward to the Baltic sea, westward to the Elbe and Saale rivers, southward beyond the Danube, and over the whole peninsula between the Adriatic and Black Sea.

"The territorial aggrandizements and migrations of the original Slavic race nearly or entirely ceased in the seventh century of the Christian era, from which time its division into distinct branches began to become marked. These branches began to assume the character of independent states, and out of the transmutations which the latter have experienced during the last thousand years, have arisen a number of the minor states of Europe as they exist to-day. Thus, the bulk of the population of Roumania, Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro, etc., are Slavs, and the same race predominates in Eastern Prussia, Eastern Austria, and other sections of Europe which are embraced in other governments. Russia is, of course, the great Slav state, the mass of her population being of that race; and it is in the court of the Czar that the Pan-Slavic spirit seems to have its radiating center.

"The Slavic people are connected by such sympathies as spring from a common language and religion, and a common race origin. True, the language has been broken up into dialects, but it is still so far common among a number of European states and provinces as to constitute a tie between them. But a stronger bond than this is their religion, and the position of the Czar at the head of the Greek Church, which predominates among them, gives him, in the nature of things, an influence which might naturally be expected to greatly augment his political power, in connection with the growth of Pan-Slavism. In both Austria and Germany there are populous communities which reverence the Czar as Roman Catholics do the Pope, which is a cause of embarrassment to these two governments in their efforts to withstand his aggressive policy.

"The tenor of recent dispatches from Europe is to the effect that a Panslavic furore is prevailing in Russia; that an organization to further that political doctrine is being extended in that country, and that most of the civil and military officials are uniting with it. Army officers in Berlin anticipate a declaration of war during the coming summer or autumn. Russia has announced in advance the only terms upon which she will lay down her arms; she wants the Bosphorous, supremacy over Turkey in Europe, and demands that Austria retire from Bosnia. She boasts that she can beat both Germany and Austria, and it is true she can put a larger number of men in the field than those two governments could by a combined effort, as her available army numbers 1,200,000; and with the aid of France she claims to be able to beat the Triple Alliance, Germany, Austria and Italy.

"Bismarck is laboring to bring England into closer relations with the Triple Alliance, and it is likely this will be accomplished, for it is vital to British supremacy in India that Russia's designs be frustrated. Give the latter Power the Bosphorous and the Balkan Peninsula, and no combination of nations possible to be formed, could prevent Slavic domination of Europe. Indeed, after such success, it is not beyond the range of the possible that the Czar should become to the modern world what Alexander the great was to the world as known in his day. A study of the tremendous advantage Russia would have were she to acquire European Turkey and the key to the commerce of the East, will show her motive in grasping after those objects, and will explain why the rest of Europe fear her."

In view of the warlike attitude of these nations, Great Britain is becoming aroused to the necessity of greatly strengthening her army and navy, at home and abroad, so that she can maintain her integrity and her interests amid the possibilities of impending wars. In the Commons the Government has asked for over $40,000,000 for the defense of her Australian Colonies, and a much larger sum to be used in preparing the defenses of her ports and coal-ing stations. She professes to expend at least $7,500,000 at Malta and Gibraltar, two points of vital importance as military posts, the latter being the gateway between the Atlantic and the Mediterranean sea, and the former only second in importance to it as a military base, lying as it does about midway of the Mediterranean Sea, a commanding position, and having excellent harbors. In connection with this it is noteworthy that Russia is preparing to occupy Herat, an important key to the frontier of India.

The student of prophecy and history will do well to read up Joel 3:9-21; Ezek. 38:1-23; Zech. chapters 12, 13, and 14; Matt. 24th and Luke 21st etc. etc. Be patient and faithful and await observantly the coming "storm."

NO MAN has a right to presume upon the chances of living, the less so when those chances are going to affect others besides himself. The argument that he will be able to save enough to provide for his family, if he lives, goes for naught, when it is known that he could provide for them in any event by a trifling act of self-denial.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Again the blackbirds sing; the streams
Wake laughing from their winter dreams,
And tremble in the April showers
The tassels of the maple flowers."

"MILLIONS OF BEATING HEARTS; STRANGE THAT WE HEAR THEM NOT"

ON a bright spring morning throw open your window freely and let the pure fresh air, laden with the sweet, balmy odors of waking nature into your dwelling. Not into your dwelling only, but open your heart and let the subtle influence reach to its most secret corners. The chilling blasts of winter are ended; the cold, glittering ice and snow are singing in softest murmurs as they flow along in the meadow brook, washing the shining pebbles and kissing into verdure the springing grass and sleeping flowers. All nature is full of joyous and sweetest harmonies. From the bending boughs of the apple tree the bright wings of feathered songsters shake the snowy blossoms, darting in the very poetry and gladness of motion here and there, while the air is vocal with their ten thousand notes of praise and gladness. The subdued hum of insect life comes as a softer refrain, the lambs gambol in very wantonness and all nature is singing in perfect harmony a grandly swelling anthem of praise. There is no room for sadness, but from all the wonderful creations of God the rolling anthem gathers strength and force, until peal upon peal it rises to the vaulted dome of heaven and rests as a cloud of incense before the throne of the great Creator.

Did we say there is no room for sadness? Ah that was a mistake! This is God's beautiful earth, but the curse of sin rests upon it and every throb of joy finds somewhere, in some bosom an answering throb of pain. From the time of the fall it has been thus, and until He shall deliver up the perfected kingdom to the Father it will continue to be the same. Follow the motions of that bright winged bird, and as he alights you will discover his mate near by in the grass with drooping, broken wing. All the morning he has been warbling his song; but not so with her, for very weariness and pain she is silent. See yonder under that screening bush a little lamb lies sick and suffering. The fierce blasts of a late spring storm beat upon its tender frame and chilled it to its heart. Others are frolicking and bleating around it, but it gives no sign of suffering save silence. Thus we might pass on from spot to spot, and everywhere amid the wave of glad life and joy we should find this undercurrent of pain and silent endurance. The chilled lamb, the wounded bird, the dumb mother giving her life for her offspring, the worn and broken down beast of burden, who has lain down in the midst of sunshine and joyous life-giving airs of the sweet spring time of earth, never to rise again, are but types of that other and higher creation of God to which we wish to call your attention.

"Strange that we hear them not"—these beating hearts which surround us! Life, health, and gladness flutter in very abandon and bathe themselves in the sunshine of nature and of love. Song is in the heart, laughter on the lips, life and vitality in every motion; but these are silent. "Strange that we hear them not!" did we say?

Not strange for when we listen, when we bend the ear to hear and train the eye to seek them out, we both hear and see.

"I wandered lonely where the pine trees made Against the bitter East their barricade,
And guided by its sweet
Perfume, I found within a narrow dell,
The trailing spring flower tinted like a shell
Amid dry leaves and mosses at my feet."

Returning from school a bright and loving little girl wandered away; not lonely, as the poet has expressed it, but full of life and gladness, into the piney woods of Maine in search of the same, trailing, pink-tinted flowers. Hunting among the "dry leaves and mosses;" what a wealth of beauty and fragrance—of imprisoned love and sunshine she bore away with her to her cottage home! But the richest wealth, the most subtle perfume, the fairest, sweetest flower was blooming in the heart of this gentle gleaner. Far away, on the prairies of the distant west, was one of earth's toilers, who had long had an earnest desire to see one, just one, of those blossoms. The little gleaner did not know this, but she remembered that this one had tried to glean many a flower of thought for her, and she said, "I will send her some sweet blossoms, just to let her know that I love her;" so the mail service was brought into requisition, and a whole box of sweetness and beauty started upon its long journey towards the setting sun. We will not tell you of the surprise and gladness which this act of little Ruth—this embodiment of a loving thought in a loving act—brought to the heart of one struggling against dispondency, nor how it cheered and nerved her for a renewal of her labors; but we will tell you that it did not stop here. Residing in the same village, was another toiler, one whose heart gave many a longing beat, and whose soul went out in aspirations high and holy. Physical infirmity had laid a heavy hand upon her; and not this alone, but she had been called upon to surrender her only stay and support in life at the Father's behest, and for long and weary years her frail life-barque had breasted alone—so far as earthly help was concerned—the cold waves of poverty, toil and affliction. Of herself, in an hour of despondency she had once written, "Whatever of sweetness the crushed roses of my life contain, whatever of pearls I have gathered from the depths of its sadness, is locked so far away in the secret drawers of my own heart that I am sure their existence is unsurmised by any but myself, and I feel they are the only treasures I can call my own."

What a heart beat was this! Neither was it unheard; but when the box of sweet spring flowers—the pink tinted trailing arbutus—was opened the thought came to the heart of her who received them to send a spray to this weary one, and she said: "Perhaps she like myself has never seen any, and she will appreciate them as I do." The thought became an act, and met its full reward when to her surprise she learned that in the woods of Ohio, long years ago this weary one had gathered many a cluster of the same flowers, in the company of a dearly beloved sister long since gathered to her rest in the paradise of God. "I have never seen any since my sister died," she said, "and I never expected to see any on earth again." There was the mist of unshed tears in her eyes, and the undertone of rain drops upon crushed roses of memory in the tremor of her voice; yet all this was the result of just a sweet loving thought which had taken form in a kindly act, and what mortal can say where the ripples of that one act shall be staid! Vast is the sea of human need. Hearts throb and beat on its every shore, and no kindly act shall ever be lost, which the loving heart has prompted the willing hand to cast upon its waves.

Sister Frances.—While listening, a few Sundays ago to Mr. Burton's sermon as he set forth the different divisions of the law as contained in the gospel, it all took the shape in my mind of a large ware-house. The church is the building and the gifts and blessings are the goods. When people are made aware of the existence of this great ware-house and the different assortment of goods therein contained, many think to enter is all that is necessary to be made partaker of all. They enter by baptism and at first sight there seems to be all that heart could wish right where they are. One becomes almost dazed on first entering, with the brilliancy of that spacious building, lined as it is on all sides with its precious goods, and feel that they have no need to go any farther than the first floor, (which is faith, repentance and baptism). Their hungry and destitute condition causes them to grasp eagerly the first that is set before them, and in the happiness of the hour, feel entirely satisfied; but after a time, seeing others in possession of richer garments and brighter jewels than what they have obtained, (health and hidden treasures of knowledge), they wish for those also, and make their desires known to the clerk—perhaps a little inclined to find fault for not having these things set before them. They are informed that those articles are on the second floor, and all who wish them must present themselves on the second floor—just step in the "lift" or elevator, and go up (keep the word of wisdom). "Oh," says one, "I can not go up on that, my head is not level and I shall get dizzy!" Then you must needs climb the stair. "No," say they, "I will beseech the proprietor that I may have them, and still remain where I am. The clerk simply answers, "The Master never breaks the laws of his own establishment," and moves on. And now the peace and contentment once enjoyed by the first things received seem to have vanished away, and a discontented murmur arises, even against those who have put their fears behind them and made whatever effort was required to secure the precious goods. Presently they see others passing about, holding in their hand, a deed to a rich inheritance in a beautiful city. This deed is stamped with the Master's signature and can not fail, while others have a partnership title in the great firm of which this house is only a branch. These documents are greatly to be desired. "Oh," say they, "give me also one of these deeds!" And they are answered, "These can not be obtained here, you must needs go to the highest floor to get them." Pay your tithing. "But, say they, "has not the proprietor said in his advertisement that those who are in this building may ask whatsoever they will and it shall be given?" Ah, yes, my friend, he said that to those who had been to the full height of the building. You see the highest floor contains a full assortment of all that is in the building; there are many things there not found on the second floor, while the second floor affords much that is not on the ground floor. So when one has complied with the required conditions and ascended to all these different departments, from the first steps to the top, then they may ask whatsoever they will and it shall be granted.

Dear reader, is not this the case with many of us? We often desire the richest blessings, but are we willing to make the sacrifice required to obtain them? Let us remember that all the blessings of God are conditional. Then should our faith be shaken in his word if we do not receive when we have not done what he has commanded?

SISTER EMMA.

NORTH FORSTER, Aus., April 9th.

Dear Home Column.—I feel it a duty as well as a pleasure to let you know how greatly I have been blessed since I have been a member of the Church of Jesus Christ. I now know that it is his church, and if I prove faithful I know that my reward will be sure. I can not put any trust in myself, but thank God that I am able to put my trust in Him, for He has promised to give us His Spirit and strength if we abide in Him and be faithful servants. Oh, that the Saints of God would strive earnestly to please Him in all things. We are surrounded by evil and the ways of the world on all sides; but if we would only arise in the strength of our dear Lord, and walk in the light of his love, how easy it would be for us to overcome every temptation. I am the mother of seven children. I have four sons and three daughters, and I often tremble at the responsibility of rearing them up in that way which will be pleasing in the sight of God. For weeks one of my little girls lay between life and death; but thanks be to God who provides for the poor and the needy, I was not left to bear my trouble alone, for I had the help of the dear Saints at Forster, who nobly ministered to me and my little ones with their help and substance. My heart is filled with love and overflowing with gratitude to them, and I thank my God for sparing me my child. It seems hard sometimes when we see our little ones suffering, to say, "Father not my will but thine be done," but I am glad to say that I was able to trust her in His hands. May God bless our beloved elder and family for their labor of love and kindness.

In the one faith,

SISTER EMILY.

KINGSLEY, Iowa, May 10th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column.—I have often wished that I could do something to encourage some one, for I know how often I have needed encouragement; and when I read and re-read Sister Campbell's letter with tears and prayers in her behalf, I felt to say, "Dear sisters, be faithful, for I know by experience the Lord will bless you." I have always from my youth, wanted to be a Christian; but, as Paul said, when I would do good evil was present. How often have I gone to my closet and poured out my soul in prayer to God, and yet for some cause I have felt forsaken. I have been month after month between life and death, and it did not seem as though I had anything to live for; but thanks be to God I am made to rejoice that I have something to live for.

My family have grown up, and most of them belong to this latter day work, for which I am so thankful. The hardest cross I have had to bear was to lead my little flock to the family altar; but what joy I have experienced since in doing this, and what a load it lifted, words fail to express.

I will never forget the day my daughters were lead into the waters of baptism by our worthy brother, J. W. Wight, who is now on his way to the far off Continent of Australia to bear the tidings of salvation. Our prayers go with him, and we know he will be an instrument in the hands of the Lord in doing much good. It was with sad, sad hearts we all bade him adieu: but we must not be selfish; others need his labors as much as we do.

We have no minister here at present; but have our little prayer meetings and Sunday School, although we have no branch organized as yet. O what a comfort the Herald and Autumn Leaves are to me; I can hardly wait until the weekly mail comes. If I could not have them any other way, I would do without part of my daily food to get them.

Dear Sister Campbell, we will remember you at the throne of grace.

Your sister in Christ,

NANCY JORDAN.

CABOOL, Mo., May 6th.

Dear Sister Frances.—We are in a constant warfare with evil, but we have chosen the way of truth, and if we adhere to the testimonies of the Lord he will give us an understanding to keep his laws. Those who are blessed with the companionship of the Saints and their meetings should be happy. All the meetings I have are the church publications; I can not tell what a great pleasure they are to me; they are looked for each week as eagerly as if they were gold. Dear sisters and mothers, let us all do right, keeping our tongues under subjection, that it can not be said, "What shall be done unto thee, thou false tongue, sharp arrows of the mighty with coals of Juniper." Praying for unity and faith, in gospel bonds,

M. A. ATWELL.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sister Amanda M. Oehring, Newark, Dakota, writes:—"I am thankful that God has called me to know and accept his great work of the latter day. I have many times been blessed in answer to prayer, and I know that though we do not escape trials, God will give us grace to bear them. Let us above all things strive to train our children in the fear of the Lord, that they may respect us in our old age as God intended they should. My children are small, but in our family prayers those who are old enough join with us in asking God for the things which they need."

Sister Arminda Bixby, Luther, Iowa, writes:—"I have had many testimonies of the truth of this work. In times of trial and trouble I have never been turned away empty. It rejoices my heart to hear of the work rolling on, and I pray God that it may continue to spread until all his righteous purposes are accomplished in the earth."

JONESPORT, Maine, May 11th.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—As the good news of the rapid progress of the "marvelous work," is presented to us through the Herald, my heart is often stirred within me to write of our efforts to disseminate truth in the "rock bound state." After the pleasure of associating with the veteran missionary for Christ, Bro. E. C. Briggs, receiving his wise instruction and many testimonies of the truth, duties demanded his presence in Massachusetts, so I returned to the Western Maine district. May the Lord permit Bro. Briggs to return here again.

February 1st I commenced a series of meetings at Green's Landing which lasted four weeks; audiences were large, and manifested growing interest in the gospel of the kingdom; the seed sown there will bear fruit in time, if we faint not. During these meetings I was invited by residents to speak at Burnt Cove, where for twenty years prejudice had been so strong no opening has been made; found a large audience who gave attention while I spoke from Rom 1:16. This opening fulfills a prophecy of Bro. John Landers more than twenty years ago; "That they would open their houses for the elders to preach the things of the kingdom of God."

March 3d I went to Blue Hill, meeting brother Whiting of New Bedford, Massachusetts, who had come to labor for a season in Maine. At Morgan's Bay we occupied the Union church, and left several who were anxious to hear more of that "perfect law," obedience to which entitles them to knowledge of its truth. At East Blue Hill, another battle field of Bro. F. M. Sheehy and myself last year, we encountered an effort to freeze us out; notwithstanding which, we were kindly entertained by Mr. Emery Carter and wife, who esteem it a privilege to care for the elders. We left friends who desired to know what those obnoxious doctrines were; good will result. From there we went to West Surrey, found a home with Bro. Cunningham who endeavors to present Christ to all, as circumstances permit. Bro. Whiting spoke several times with liberty. We left a few believing; may the Lord help them to obey. Our next stopping place was Orland, where we were welcomed by Mr. John Soper and amiable wife. We occupied the Universalist church; weather was inclement, yet we closed our meetings with best of results. A number of questions were presented us to answer, Several were in tears, and many a hearty "God bless you, come again," was received at parting. Feeling impressed to visit Winterport, the home of Bro. Otis Eaton, we were strenuously opposed by the M. E. pastor who said, "People there were priest-ridden" and could not well support only himself. He was determined to pay us if we preached, if it was done from his own pocket. When informed that we did not divine for money, he answered, "we should if we preached there," but was careful that every public place in town was closed against us. He desired if the gospel was restored, that we go with him and heal a consumptive, then he would believe but must have the sign first. We retorted; the first sign seeker was Zacharias, the angel of God smote him dumb for his audacity, Luke 1:18; 20.

The second was the Devil, who demanded a sign of Christ.—Luke 3:1-3. He considered himself insulted here, but continuing we quoted the third instance. The Scribes and Pharisees, (whom Christ called hypocrites), sought a sign. The Master answered: "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign and there shall no sign be given unto it."—Matt. 12:38, 39; he then changed the subject. Later on, I remarked, "If Jesus Christ should come to-day preaching as he did anciently, you would not let him into your churches." He answered "We would not." Again; he denied that the church had ever departed from the faith as taught by Christ. We asserted it could be proved from Scripture and history, reading from Wesley's own writings: "The gifts of the gospel were lost because the world had turned heathen again and had only a dead form left." Apostles and prophets were not found because no longer needed, etc. (Marsh's Eccl. His., p. 170. Vol. 2, Wesley's Sermons, No. 94). He replied, "That is Wesley's opinion, consequently amounts to nothing." O, consistency, thy name is not Baldwin. The next morning Bro. Eaton obtained consent to use the Congregationalist Vestry. That night he received the following letter from the one who let it:

Wednesday, March 28th.—Capt. Eaton:—I shall have to withdraw from the consent to use the Vestry, for your meetings you wished to hold, as there is a strong feeling against letting the Vestry.

M. N. ABBOTT.

It is not surprising that infidelity is so prevalent in the land; thinking men revolt from such narrow creeds, and no wonder! We left there to attend conference at Greene's Landing, which proved one of the best for many years. One was baptized by Bro. Whiting, who left the next morning for home, his boy being sick; his labor was much appreciated by the Saints, who trust he will return at some future time.

April 16th I visited the Bray's Mountain Saints and by a judicious change of branch officers, meetings are revived again. Bro. S. S. Eaton is now in charge. The next morning, Bro. William Pert, our district president, brought me a telegram summoning me to Jonesport by next boat; obeying, I learned that Sr. Sarah Smith, a mother in Israel, had been called home; she was zealous in Church and Sabbath School, but our loss is her gain. Some people were trying with Lamb's "Golden Bible" to convert the Saints. Having examined it carefully in the past few months in two discourses I showed that in his "benevolent work of love," "backed up by the unanimous vote of his own church," "his excellency, Gov. Murray," many prominent gentlemen, divines and antiquarians "accompanied with earnest prayers" he hopes to redeem "thousands of honest but mistaken souls from their sad delusion," (so called) by falsehood and perversion. Another pastor is found not "sufficiently acquainted with Mormon views and methods to meet successfully" its truths. The wisdom of their wise men perisheth, because the Lord is "doing his work, his strange work."

April 26th was called by telegram to attend the funeral of Sr. Kate Greene at Greene's Landing, another noble Saint, called through great suffering to receive "the glory which shall be revealed in us." Others signified their intention of uniting with us there. The work at Jonesport demanding attention I returned the following week.

Sunday, May 6th, I led four into the waters in baptism.

Thursday, the 10th, at Jonesboro, two more put on Christ; one, a young man of promise. Others are near. In my experience, I have never seen so many openings with such a demand for labor; many are at the door waiting for opportunity to enter, while everywhere people are investigating. I am more confirmed than ever in the ultimate triumph of the work; and pray the Lord may give greater knowledge and wisdom, to present the truth so plain, that we may reap the harvest of souls, and at last be gathered with the church triumphant.

In bonds yours,

ULYSSES W. GREENE.

PLANO, Ill., May 23d.

Bro. Blair.—We are having some very good meetings, and some not so good. But on the whole the Lord is blessing us, and that causes us to rejoice. When passing through this way, can you not give Plano a call? Four have been baptized here since March 29th. I feel happy in God and this latter day work. I remember now you once told me I should have an inheritance with the Saints. I am praying that I may overcome and so receive of the Lord. I want to serve him in this life and do all the good I can. I have felt for the last few weeks as though the Lord had something in store for me which he will shortly make known. Pray for me, and remember me to Bro. Joseph and all in the office.

Yours in bonds,

W. VICKERY.

HASTINGS, Victoria, Aus., Mar. 29th.

Dear Herald.—My earnest desire is to do the will of God at all times, not leaving anything undone that ought to be done, but be up and doing, always ready to do something to spread the gospel of the Kingdom in every clime; so may God bless each one of the Saints, that they may have His Spirit at all times, that it may lead them to do that which is pleasing to Christ while here below, that when He cometh to make up His Jewels, that we all may be there, not one wanting, for Christ says: "My sheep hear my voice and they follow me." May it be our desire and prayer at all times to follow Christ's footsteps and be the true sheep of the fold, for we know we are his sheep, because He has confirmed it to us by the Holy Spirit, when we obeyed Him, and received the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit, for we know God will hear us when we cry unto Him in our secret places. Christ says, "Ask and ye shall receive," and when we asked God in Christ's name for His Spirit to guide us and lead us into the truth, He heard our prayer in that He led us to obey the command set forth in the gospel plan of salvation. That we may be saved in the kingdom of God with all the Saints, and always remain faithful followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, is my prayer.

There is not one of us knows the length of our time in this world, but what we have let us devote it to Christ and to the spread of the gospel. May this be our only aim in this life, to keep the commandments and show an example to others, that they seeing our good works may glorify our Father in heaven.

We must not forget that we are apt to do those things that are not pleasing unto Him, but if we are earnestly desirous of doing good to others, we will not fail to ask Him for His Spirit to guide us into truth and show us things to come.

May we ever be ready to give a reason of the hope that is in us, to all who may question us. It is my desire to give God the honor and praise for thus ever leading me to a knowledge of the truth revealed in these last days, for there is no doubt in my mind that if we remain steadfast in the doctrine of Christ we will all be saved in his kingdom. May the peace of God rest with us now and forever. Amen.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

EVAN G. JONES.

[The following letters explain themselves, and the reader will readily understand why we publish them. Comment is needless, further than to say that Bro. Wm. Anderson united with the Church February 28th, 1861, at Montrose, Iowa, just opposite Nauvoo, and was intimately acquainted with Pres. Joseph Smith from that time forward till his demise.—W. W. Blair].

830 Webster Street,

OAKLAND, Cal., April 3d, 1888.

Brother Joseph:—I write to make a request of you, and I earnestly hope you will grant the favor. It is that you will publish in the Herald the enclosed letter which dear William received from you just three weeks before he passed away. The spirit of it is so good, and it consoled William so much that I think it will do his friends good to read it. Your sister in Christ,

MINNIE E. ANDERON.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 16th, 1887.

Bro. Wm. Anderson:—Your letter gave me such a shock. I can not tell why, but it did. I was started to tears, and I saw you, as on one winter's day, years ago, I saw you standing on the ice ready to start to your home, after a brief but pleasant visit to me at Nauvoo. I seemed to see all the years between then and now—and you as you must be now, worn with sickness, and I was pressed with grief. We saw the work when few cared to stand for it or dared to speak for it; and now I felt and feared that you might be drifting out to the other shore, while I was left to battle on. May God be good to you, William, and minister as you may need. I shall start next week, if all goes well, and will reach you as soon as I can. . . . I wish I could feel that your years were to be many, but I fear. However, you have wrought well, and for the world to come need have no fear or doubt. The blessed assurance of having obeyed the Lord's call unto the baptism of the Holy Spirit, will be as an anchor whose hold is beyond the veil. He who has so nobly labored and stood for the work when but few had courage to abide, will be received unto the crowning day.

Kind love to Sr. Anderson and all.

Yours in bonds,

JOSEPH SMITH.

FLAGLER, Iowa, May 21st.

Bro. J. Smith:—I preached here five times up to date, house full last evening, those here blest with the Holy Spirit; for which I thank my heavenly Father. How a man can forsake this work, after he has testified that he knows that it is the work of God; there is but one way that I can see; (Matt. 13:20-22). This gives the exposition in full. "No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."—Luke 9:62. This little branch here is alive in the work; they have a nice hall. They have Sunday School, seventy in attendance. They have testimony meeting on Sunday afternoon and preaching in the evening. Last Sunday I spoke by request of the president. One lady, of the Adventist Church, asked me to administer to her, she being a cripple. I was greatly blest with the Spirit in so doing. She wishes to see me before I go away. I have to go from here to Des Moines, as the Des Moines river is out of its banks. Here I am within ten miles of Pella, but have to go to Des Moines, for there is no other way. I then shall preach my way down on the other side of the river. The people would like to see Bro. Lambert here again; the seed that he has sown here is not in vain. I believe there will be a great work done here in time, if the Saints continue faithful. The Saints are very kind to me, and God will bless all such. I feel well in the work and hope that the time is not far off that the Lord will finally bless me with my hearing. I ask an interest in your prayers.

NICHOLAS STAMM.

MEDINA CITY, Texas, May 12th.

Bro. Blair:—We have been constant readers of the Saints' Herald ever since we joined the church. It has brought to us comfort and enjoyment; by it we have been spiritually strengthened. Of the many subjects I have read and thought over, I desire to pen a few lines on the use of tobacco. Not on the evil, for that is too plain; but, who will and how shall we quit its use. But as this is not all the evil I would write of, I must say as one of sad experience a word on the use of the intoxicating cup. Plain truth states, "No drunkard shall ever enter the kingdom of God."

If a man never takes the first dram, he will never get drunk. If you have drank heretofore, drink no more. A man can not preach, Thou shalt not swear, and swear himself; then how can you preach: thou shalt not get drunk, with your breath perfumed with whiskey. A word of explanation: After a thorough conviction of sin and a change of purpose, I lived over six years aloof from any church fellowship. During this time I was married, still in a state of confusion; (tradition); my wife under Baptist influence; myself Methodist. After a time we thought something must be done. She made this proposition: "Take the Bible as the man of our counsel, compare and examine each claim as set up by the different churches. We covenanted to God to join any church that was nearest the Bible. Shortly after this covenant we joined the Baptist Church, in which we lived about twelve years; during which time I quit drink; but never was able to see the evil there is in the use of tobacco till shortly after we embraced the gospel as taught by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. After hearing the claims of the church set forth by Elder D. H. Bays, we compared them with the Bible, according to the covenant afore said, and we were both baptized on the same occasion. Strange to say we did not quit its use sooner.

Some of the brethren of Bell county will remember the promise we made to quit this evil. My wife at this time had a severe cough with heart disease. She was administered to with good success. I am called on not only by my own wife but by others, and the use of snuff aggravating the disease, and perhaps being the cause of disease; and I in the use of the same. Now, brethren, as before stated, in praying for the sick this evil comes up plain before us; and there is a want of faith, and prayer is not answered.

On the fifth day of May, 1885, while holding the head of my dying wife, some of her many friends with her, only two living children, loving boys; and while standing by, seeing a pleasant smile pass over her face, there taking a last farewell of a loving companion, and mother for a short season;—it was there and then, by the help of God I was enabled to make a full surrender, to quit this evil habit. I went to God in prayer for grace to overcome the evil; God answered my prayer.

Brethren and sisters, you who have the Spirit to lead into all truth; first let us decide the matter; is it evil; then make a full surrender and say; "Live, or die; survive, or perish; God being my helper, I will quit it." Then go to Him in prayer, and ask Him for grace that you may have help. He has promised to give it, in every time of need. Ever remember, God wants a full decision of mind and purpose of heart. This same disease of the heart was growing on me fast. In one year after I quit the use of tobacco, I gained twenty pounds in weight; I also confined myself to a limited use of coffee and grease, but don't forget I used tobacco no longer. I now enjoy better health than I have in several years; but can't tell how much better I am spiritually.

In conclusion, I pray that God will bless all the faithful and honest in heart, to a knowledge of the truth and obedience to the same, ever giving them strength to forsake all evil and cleave to that which is good; thus keeping the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

Your brother in the one faith,

J. A. CURRIE, SEN.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 11th.

Bro. Blair:—Somewhere in the early part of the 60's—the exact date I can not call to mind—while conversing with Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, now deceased, on the subject of the responsibility of those called to officiate in the various offices in the church, he related a vision that God had been pleased to give him while seriously meditating upon one occasion on the same subject. As is well known by the members of the church, his calling was that of an apostle, or special witness for Christ, to the world. He said: "I realized, to a great extent, the responsibility imposed upon me in my calling, and had an intense desire to fulfill the same; and I also realized that if I should wilfully depart from the truth as I know it, or fall from my position, that perdition would be my doom; or if I should not magnify my calling by faithfully discharging the duties of the same, that I should suffer loss. While my mind was engrossed in deep reflection on the subject, the following was presented before me: There was a large building situated upon the edge of a precipice, or deep chasm, at the bottom of which I beheld a very dark and turbulent stream, while the sides of the chasm were lined with jagged, sharp-pointed rocks. Near the top of the side of the building next to this chasm, there was a ledge which stood out about a foot, but wide enough for a person to stand on, with not any room to spare, and long enough for a dozen men to occupy. I saw myself, and my brethren of the Quorum of the Twelve, standing on this ledge, and having to lean our back against the building in order to keep our position on the ledge. I ventured to look down into the abyss, but, O, what a sight met my gaze! I felt myself growing dizzy, and had to straighten up immediately to keep from falling. In straightening up against the wall, I chanced to look up, and there I saw the First Presidency standing on the extreme top of the wall, with nothing about them to support them, and I involuntarily exclaimed: "God have mercy on those men; we have something to support our backs, while they have not anything; and if either should fall, destruction was our portion." I have since that ever prayed for the First Presidency, that God would support, strengthen and preserve them; for only on His arm could they lean. And we also had to trust to Him for support, yet we had them as a kind of support to our back; while they had nothing but the Grand Quorum in the heavens to lean upon—the Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

May God help all who have received an ordination, in whatever quorum, to have a realizing sense of the responsibility they are under to faithfully labor in their own calling and preach the word of life to their fellow men so as to receive the welcome plaudit of the Master: "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

E. STAFFORD.

WILBER, Neb., May 16th.

Dear Herald—I hope a line or two from this part of God's vineyard may be no intrusion to your valuable columns. The opening up of the present conference year seems to be more favorable in this district than heretofore. We have just received a visit from our much esteemed brother R. M. Elvin and wife, who expected to remain with us three days; but thanks to the Missouri Pacific Railroad for carrying their trunks to Omaha instead of Lincoln, they were required to remain five days longer. In the meantime Bro. Elvin improved the time in preaching to the Saints and people, with interest and large congregations. We would be glad to have him call often.

In gospel bonds,

L. ANTHONY.

QUEENSFERRY, Victoria, Aus.,
August 11th, 1887.

Brother Joseph Smith, Dear Sir:—Elder Burton has often hinted to me that it would be a good thing for all concerned if I would write to you occasionally, so as to bear testimony to the progress of the work in this land. Bro. Burton has done and is doing a good work here and we shall all be sorry when he leaves us. Till then you may rest assured the faith is nobly upheld. Bro. Burton and family are about leaving us for their journey home. We are all very sorry to lose them as they have endeared themselves to us all, but I think he needs a rest as his throat has been very bad for some time.

Bro. T. W. Smith has arrived here with his wife. He is made of sterner stuff than Bro. Burton, but I do not doubt that we shall all like him, for I have noticed one characteristic of the elders is that they improve on acquaintance. We have held two conferences already since Bro. T. W.

Smith's arrival at which we have been edified and instructed.

I think the work will increase surely, if not rapidly, providing the mission is represented by competent men, such as we have had. The Saints would very much like you to pay them a visit and when we get financially strong we will send you an invitation card.

I wish to add my testimony to the good your calm, courteous treatment of debatable matters does both to Saints and others. I read with avidity all your writings and would be pleased to see a sermon more often from you in the Herald. I know well enough that if it were deemed wise it would be done, and so content myself with whatever crumbs may fall.

Autumn Leaves gives great promise of good. Its manner, style and matter are superior, and I am sure its publication will increase as it becomes more known.

With kind regards, your brother in the faith,
J. A. READ.

WOODBINE, Iowa, May 17th.

Bro. Dancer:—I have been working for some time to get some to take the Herald. There are others I expect to secure as subscribers soon. I think each Latter Day Saint should consider himself a committee of one to work for the church publications and the cause of our Master, so dear to every true Saint. The interest of our Sabbath School is increasing, as do all our meetings.

Bro. Derry preached at my house Sunday morning and evening, also at Bro. Hall's Tuesday evening to all that could get into the house. New interest is awakened and inquiry seems to be widening; But, O, how we need a church! And my daily prayer to God is that he may open the way that we may erect a suitable place to worship him in. I know our beloved Bro. Derry has sown the seed here that can never be crushed out. All that come to hear him once come again. My daily prayer is that we may have, ere winter closes in, a church to worship in and a good, live, working branch. Pray for us.

S. B. KIBLER.

CHATHAM, Ont., May 19th.

Bro. Joseph:—I went home to Pittsburg to rest for a few days; but duty called and I responded. I preached in the branch whenever I was called on to do so. I baptized four, Mr. Noble and his wife and two young ladies. By invitation I talked with some who are inquiring after the truth. I felt well in presenting the gospel of Christ to the hungry ones, and I trust ere long they will obey and enjoy the full light thereof. I left home on the 15th inst., arrived here the next morning and reported myself to the officers of the branch. They thought it would be well to have some meetings, so bills were circulated for meetings on the 17th and 18th, at 7:30, p. m.; also on Sunday at 3 and 7:30, p. m. Two of the appointments have been met, and I enjoyed good liberty in presenting the word of life to the Saints and friends who were out to hear.

I received a letter from Bro. R. C. Evans, who is preaching in a new place—Waterford. He states that he has crowded houses, that the town is wild and the preachers angry. There is talk of their sending for Mr. Wilkinson of Toronto. He is the one Brn. Willard J. Smith and James A. McIntosh have had to meet in debate. I presume it will be well for the truth if they send for him. It will give the honest a chance to see the difference between truth and fiction. May God help his servants in defending his truth.

I expect to leave here for St. Thomas on the 22d, and remain there until the 29th; then on to Corinth to meet with the Saints of London district in conference, on the 2d and 3d of June. From there I shall go as duty and wisdom may direct. Respects to Bro. Blair and all friends in the office.

Your brother and fellow laborer in the one faith,
J. H. LAKE.

BUFFALO, Iowa, May 18th.

Dear Herald:—Although there is seldom any communication in your columns from this part of the rapidly ripening field we do not wish your readers to infer that Saints in this vicinity have lost interest in the great latter day work. The local forces of the district—Eastern Iowa—keep up their branch meetings as a rule, and by their efforts the love for the truth is kept alive and there is an occasional gain in the way of additions to the church. Just now we of Buffalo and Davenport are rejoicing over a recent visit from Elder Roth. Coming as he did fresh from the conference at Independence, he gladdened our hearts by the cheering report he brought us of the work done by our brethren, and the harmony that characterizes every sitting.

Elder Roth preached a stirring discourse on the signs of the times, at Buffalo, Friday evening, May 11th and on Sunday, the 13th, he preached in the Saints Hall at Davenport. In both instances the Saints who heard him were edified, instructed and encouraged, while others expressed interest that promises future good.

During Elder Roth's stay among us, the Saints of Davenport, Rock Island and Moline arranged what might be termed reunion meetings. A good time was had and enjoyed by all.

On Tuesday evening Elder Roth was joined by Elder Short, (who was en route for the Wisconsin field of labor), and on Wednesday afternoon the two soldiers of the cross bade their brethren, sisters and friends good bye and boarded the steamer "Verne Swain" for Clinton, Iowa. God bless them in their labors, and may their sheaves be many.

With best wishes for all, and ever praying for the triumph of all, I am yours in faith,

JEROME RUBY.

FALLS OF SCHUYLKILL,

Philadelphia, Pa., May 19th.

Bro. Joseph:—I write you a few lines to acquaint you with the condition of the work in this part of the Lord's vineyard. The many cares of life, business, &c., have caused some to take a rest, as it were, for a little season. I myself have not written an article for the Herald, for a long time, but the work is in the charge of a little corps of workers, who are zealously laboring and waiting for a more prosperous season; and they are truly faithful who labor and wait.

What the basis of the Philadelphia branch was I do not know; but I do know that it has had a good shaking up of those who could be shaken. However, I hope and trust that the prayers of the Saints that ascended in the branch's behalf may be watered by the dews of heaven, that all the faithful Saints may reap an hundred fold

Our number is small, but I trust the Lord will shortly add such as shall be saved.

I have been strengthened and encouraged by the peaceful conference at Independence; by the progress of the work, and the care God takes of his servants and children. It is the grandest work under the heavens; it is God's work and not man's, and it will make progress against all opposition and foes.

Bro. H. Robinson was with us last Sabbath and delivered two discourses. Beautiful and wonderful words of life flowed from his lips, and brought tears to the eyes of some. He declared the grandeur and majesty of the Creator and his glorious works and portrayed the gospel in such graphic manner that good will be the result. In the evening he showed us the difference between "the Spirit and the letter of the law." I could not help but think and recall those words of the prophet:—"How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, . . . that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!"

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Ask in faith believing that God is ever ready to impart to His Creatures whatever they need; there must be no wavering through unbelief or a sense of disadvantages on our part. To feel our wants is the first thing necessary in prayer, and he who knows not his deficiency in wisdom or grace can have little reason to expect supplies from the great store-house in which there are provisions made to supply all.

Love to all the household of faith,
W. STREET.

A DREAM.

ON the 7th of January, 1888, I listened to a discourse preached by William H. Kelley on a funeral occasion, he choosing for his text a portion of scripture found in 2 Corinthians 12: 2-4.

During the service my mind was very much exercised over the subject matter of the discourse and also after I returned home it was talked over very earnestly at supper. Believing myself to be one of the beings that are very susceptible to spirit or temporal influences, I then and there earnestly desired that such a thing or vision might happen to me sometime in the course of my life, believing that with me it would bridge over in part the great mystery of the future life.

In the evening Mr. Kelley called on us. We talked on different subjects, but all the time I could not keep from my mind the man that Paul knew "about fourteen years ago" in Christ.

I did not retire until about ten o'clock. Sometime in the night I had a dream or vision,—call it what you choose. It appeared to me that I was standing near the Town Hall south of the Mormon temple, and that I was blind, by a bandage that had been suddenly placed or bound over my eyes, and while I was standing there thinking of my sad condition, I heard the tread of some one approaching me. The person came up to me laying his hand on my shoulder, saying: "My friend, what can I do for you? I see that you appear to be in a bad fix, and it strikes me just at this time that you are in need of help." "Yes," said I, "and will you please remove this bandage from my eyes. It came upon me all at once; neither can I tell by what means or how it came there." He then said, "My friend, I think perhaps it has always been there and that you were born blind and made more so by education. You have suddenly become aware of the fact that you are blind." "But," said I, "I do insist that you do something to relieve me." "That I am willing to do," said he, "but I wish you to take a walk with me and I will show you something that will both please and entertain you." He then took me by the hand and said, "Now, my friend, please come with me." I asked "how far?" He replied, "Only a short distance." It appeared to me that we were in a large, long, spacious hall, walking upon a hard, firm floor, for I could distinctly hear the heavy tread of my feet, while that of my friend was so light, so soft and cat-like that I could not hear the least noise from his feet. I seemed to get the impression that his feet were very finely slippered with some very soft material, and on the top were the initials of his name. I turned my eyes downward, thinking perhaps I might see his feet so that I could get his name. I could not; all was darkness. I then said to my friend, "How far do we go?" He answered, "Not far. Presently we came to a stop. "Now," said he, "we are about to pass through a great door;" then I heard him call some one. The person called came forward and a few words passed between them in language I could not understand. "Now," said my friend, "I shall be obliged to leave your body here with my friend; It will be perfectly safe here with him." To this I objected, "Why," said he, "remember you are mortal; you belong to the earth; are of the earth, earthy." "Very well," I replied, "as you wish." He then stepped up to me, placing one hand upon my head, the other on the back part of my head, and removed the bandage; yet I could not see. There appeared to be a great amount of light, but I could not discern any object. "Now," said my friend, "I will unlock the door." I think he took the key from his side pocket; he then put the key into the lock, I heard the click of the two metals as they came in contact with each other, then came the heavy bang of the bolt as it went back to its socket. He then took me by the hand and said, "Come with me." We then passed through the great doorway, the door swung around itself and shut, I think, with a spring lock. "Now," said he, "look." I raised my eyes and behold—I could see. The first thing that I saw was the great ponderous door and the great wall that separated me from the outer world. I could not see the top of the wall. "Now," said my friend, "perhaps you would like to see the key that unlocks that great door." I signified my wish that I did. He then took the key from the door. It was in the shape of a key, some twelve or fifteen inches in length. Said he, "Take it if you wish." I replied, "No, thank you." "Very well then," said he, "I will show it to you. You see it is a book, do you not?" He then opened it in several places. It was printed in the English language; then closing the book, or key, he turned the back of the key to me saying, "Read for yourself." The first I saw was, RECORD, BOOK OF MORMON. "Have you ever read this book?" he enquired. I answered that I had. He then asked, "What was your opinion of the book?" I answered that I did not wholly disbelieve it, although there were many things in it that I did not understand. He smiled and said, "There might be some things in the Record that would appear so to you, until it was explained." "Now," said he, "please walk with me." We then turned around and commenced our walk together.

My vision seemed to extend to a great distance; I could not judge how far. The face of the country was rather broken; the surface was very smooth, as the stones, brush and rubbish had been taken away. There were no fences in sight; they were all gone. I saw horses, cattle and sheep quietly grazing. I also saw fowls and birds of the air. I asked my friend who those animals belonged to; and he said, "To different individuals." I then asked, "How do they control them?" He answered, "God has so ordered in his wise economy that the atmospheric influences that pervade the vegetable and animal kingdom, begets a spirit of quiet contentment whereby every being that is permitted to enter here—both man and beast—knows the bounds of their habitation." I then enquired, "And are we yet on the earth?" He answered, "Yes;" then raising his hand, said, "Here you see Lake Erie," and sure enough, there was the great lake as calm and as smooth as a mirror; not a ripple upon its beautiful surface. I could see small towns and large cities—some near and others afar off. I then and there saw many people moving about back and forth, many that I knew. Not one of them recognized me in the least, while every one of them as they passed bowed, smiled, and spoke something in a language that I did not understand. I saw that many of them wore a very peculiar shaped cap. I made some remark in regard to the cap. Said he, "You call it cap; we call it Doss. It is a cap supposed by some to be a cap once worn by the ancient Egyptians." I then said to my friend, "here on this road going south, there was a barbed-wire fence on the right hand side, and on the left there was osage orange or green fence; what has become of them?" he answered, "There is no use for them now; since man and beast have been delivered from the curse of the land, not a barb, briar, thorn or thistle is left upon the face of the earth." I then asked, "Why can I not abide here with you always?" He smiled gravely and replied, "Not yet, you owe allegiance to your body and world in which you live yet awhile."

Standing by the side of my friend I noticed a group of people, men, women and children, occupying a beautiful court or lawn, very nicely laid off with walks running in different directions. The grounds appeared to be surrounded by a beautiful evergreen fence which appeared to have been very nicely cared for, rather low, the pruning seemed to have been very nicely done. I said to my escort, "What can be the center of attraction out there?" pointing to the south-west. He answered, "Let us go and see." We walked along until we came to the passage where they passed in and out; he stopped, and stepping aside said to me, "Enter." I obeyed, my friend following. Raising his hand he said, "Now behold, here is where justice is meted out to every one, man, woman and child." I looked and saw a very fine looking gentleman standing by a pair of scales upon which people were stepping on and off. The first that came to my notice was a gentleman plainly clad; I should judge of about forty years of age. He stepped upon the platform, and as he did so my friend said to me, "That man will balance well," and at that moment the bar went up very quickly. My friend looked at the weigher and both smiled. A few words passed between them that I could not understand. I asked my friend, "What said the man at the scales?" He replied: "He said, 'enter in.'" The next that came on was a gentleman and lady very nicely attired, with a proud, haughty aristocratic bearing and both stepped on together. The bar poised for a moment, then slowly fell back to its resting place. I saw the weighman look up to my friend and shake his head, also spoke a few words in a language that I did not understand. Again I enquired of my escort, "What said the man at the scales?" He replied, "Found wanting." There were several passage ways out of this beautiful court which I am not able to describe. We walked out and took a look at the face of the country. It was beautiful beyond description. I saw ladies working in their flower gardens, all appearing to be happy and contented. I also saw many people that appeared to be going and returning from church. All seemed to be busy, each and every one attending to his or her duties, whatever they might have been. I said to my friend, "What manner of people are those yonder wearing that peculiar looking cap?" Said he, "They are Saints that have been delivered from the curse and bondage of the earth, and also from their persecutors." The caps worn by the Saints were three square; and on each square were characters which of course I could not decipher. I then said to my friend, "Will you be so kind as to explain the meaning of those characters?" He replied, "Not all. The one on the front signifies the time of the gathering in of the Saints, the time which is not far distant; the others are not to be explained yet." I saw large fields of waving grain ready for the sickle; also fruit, many kinds that I had never seen before. I asked my friend to explain to me some things concerning the grain and fruit, which he did, but I am unable to give you his answer. "Now," said my friend, "I think we had better return;" saying, "I think I have shown you enough for this time. I make one request only, that you write what I have shown you, and give or send it to some one of my brethren in the Lord." Then looking up, said to me, "Come." We walked back to the place where we entered; he then took the key from his side pocket and unlocked the door, took me by the hand and led me out, saying, "I shall be obliged to replace the bandage." Then stepping up to me he put the bandage over my eyes, then taking me by the hand, said, "Receive my blessing; peace be with you; adieu!" He then turned and left me. I awoke finding myself at home and in bed.

MILLENNIUM.—No. 4.

ISAIAH says in Isa. 60:2: "For behold, the darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people: but the Lord shall rise upon thee and his glory shall be seen upon thee." Any man who will read this chapter of Isaiah will see that he was speaking of the last days, even the days of the coming of the Son of man, the time of the gathering, or the dispensation of the fulness of times in which all things are to be gathered that are in Christ Jesus, whether they are things on earth or things in heaven: and before Christ's coming darkness was to cover the earth and gross darkness the people.

In 1 Tim. 4:1-3 we read that "The Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared as with a hot iron; forbidding to marry and commanding to abstain from meats which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth."

Paul set forth this apostasy in words so plain as not to be easily misunderstood, as follows:

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God: having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof: from such turn away."—2 Tim. 3:1-5.

We can see by the last verse in this quotation that he was speaking of the religious world, for others have not a form of godliness. The apostle earnestly exhorted Timothy as follows:

"I charge thee, therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine."—2 Tim. 4:1, 2.

After he had given this charge, he gave the reason why he was so strict, and said:

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears."—3 v.

Who can read these declarations of the apostle and not see that the world, in the last days when it begins to draw near to the coming of the Son of man, will be in a deplorable condition, led by teachers whom God never sent, and themselves full of all corruption and vileness? The apostle does not say that their teachers will not be very learned men, and that it will not be an age when science will be greatly studied, as men call it, nor yet an age of politeness and of great worldly refinement; but on the contrary we may fairly infer from what he says about their being found boasters, that they will be all this, and a great deal more; but he says that they will not be a people of God. Jesus says that they will be just such people as lived in the days of Noah. Isaiah says that gross darkness will cover them.

There are some thoughts that force themselves on the mind when reflecting on what the Savior said about the people in the last days being as the people were in the days of Noah. Paul showed that the people in the last days would be false religionists, and that their great corruption would arise from their condition. Now as we are told that they are just such a people as were in the days of Noah, would it be hazzarding much to draw the conclusion that the people in the days of Noah were false religionists, also that their forefathers understood the true religion of heaven as perfectly as the forefathers of this generation? Do not like causes produce like effects.

Another thing of great importance to those who believe in the second coming of the Savior is, that if the testimony of the Savior himself is to be credited, all attempts to convert this generation will be vain; for he says as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be at the coming of the Son of man. Now if we can find how it was in the days of Noah we need not be at loss to tell how it will be in this generation. Let us ask, What advantage would it have been in the days of Noah to have gone through the land and built up churches which should reject the teachings of Noah? If the people thus built up had believed that they had embraced the religion of heaven, it would have effectually secured them in blindness until the day of their destruction!

There was but one way for them to escape, and that was to hear the preaching of Noah and be gathered as God might have directed him. "And so shall it be at the coming of the Son of man."

The Scriptures abound in warnings and admonitions to the people of the last days, lest they should be taken in an hour that they expect not, and the Son of man should come and find them sleeping; but notwithstanding all the warnings and admonition which the sacred writers have left on record for their use, they well knew that they would be overtaken at last as by a thief in the night. Even when they would be crying peace and safety, lo, sudden destruction should come upon them; for so great was to be their darkness that they were not to be able to discern the signs of the times. All the signs of the coming of the Son of Man were to pass before their eyes, and still they were not to be able to discern them, nor yet know them to be such, because they were the children of darkness and not the children of light.

No man who believes can read the prophetic history of the last days without marveling greatly. We are told that before this marvelous advent of the Savior, and as testimony to the world that his coming draws nigh, the sun was to be darkened, the moon turn to blood, and the stars fall from heaven: that there are to be wars, with earthquakes in divers places, famines and pestilences: and all this declared by our Savior as well as the apostles to be to the world for signs that His coming was at hand; and still, with all this testimony, the sacred writers testify that they would be in such great darkness that all these might pass by and the world be overtaken by the coming of the Son of man as a thief in the night; and what could produce this effect? One thing, and only one, that God has given them over to strong delusions that they might believe lies in order that they might be damned; because they did not receive the truth in the love of it.

Compare 1 Thess. 5:1-12 with Matt. 24:29, 30; Isa. 24:23; Acts 2:20; Rev. 6:12.

Paul prophesied in 2 Tim. 4:3, 4 as follows: "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lust shall heap to themselves teachers having itching ears; and they shall turn their ears away from the truth and shall be turned to fables." This may assist us in understanding the peculiar darkness of the generation who shall inhabit the earth at the coming of the Savior. Peter says that there shall be false teachers, who shall make merchandise of them, and so bewilder them that they will at last be like the beasts that perish. Paul says that they will have itching ears, and heap to themselves teachers who shall turn their ears away from the truth, and they shall be turned to fables. From what Paul said in 1 Thess. 5:1, 2, 3, we can see that they were to be in such darkness that the Son of man will come upon them as a thief in the night, when they will be in the very act of crying peace and safety, notwithstanding the sun, previous to this time, would be darkened, the moon turned into blood, and the stars from heaven fall. And why will they not discern the signs of the times? Why? Because they had heaped to themselves teachers, and through their influence they are turned away from the truth unto fables! False teachers have got them so far from their God that they are like the beasts that perish, they can get no revelations. Though they have seen the sun darkened, and the moon turned to blood, and they beheld something like stars falling from, or flying in the midst of heaven, they could not tell whether this was what was intended by the Savior and the apostles when they said these signs should appear in the heavens as a prelude to the Savior's coming; and as none of them have power with God sufficient to get a revelation and know of a truth whether this was the case or not, like the beasts that perish they must perish without power to know the things of God for themselves.

Speaking of the people of the last days, Peter says: "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts and saying, where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things remain as they were from the beginning of the creation. For this they are willingly ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water: whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished: but the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and the perdition of ungodly men."—2 Pet. 3:3-7.

This testimony of the apostle is very decisive: he says that the people of the last days are to be mockers and scoffers; they are to scoff at the idea of the Savior's coming, saying, "Where is the promise of his coming," &c.

The apostle, by this expression, seemed to suppose that the subject of his coming to burn the world with fire, or to be revealed in fire, as Paul says, would be so plainly written that it would be wilful ignorance not to be acquainted with it. This is a hard saying for those who have been for years trying to find out something about the second coming of Christ, or Millennium, which is the same thing, and yet say they dare not approach it. Peter says they are willingly ignorant of it, the same as to say that they are unwilling to believe what the scriptures say about it, and want to spiritualize them, or interpret them so as to make them mean something different from what they say, and are, in consequence of this, in great ignorance, which ignorance is wilful. Isaiah gives us a similar account of the last days, the time when God should begin to give revelations to a people of stammering lips and of another tongue. For the benefit of Israel he says:

"Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts. For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little: for with stammering lips and another tongue will he speak to this people, to whom he said, This is the rest wherewith ye may cause the weary to rest; and this is the refreshing: yet they would not hear. But the word of the Lord was unto them, precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; that they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken. Wherefore hear the word of Lord, ye scornful men that rule this people which is in Jerusalem. Because ye have said, We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us: for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves: therefore thus saith the Lord God, behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste. Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet: and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place. And your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it. From the time that it goeth forth it shall take you: for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night: and it shall be a vexation only to understand the report. For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it: and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it. For the Lord shall rise up as in mount Perazim he shall be wroth as in the valley of Gibeon, that he may do his work, his strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act. Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong; for I have heard from the Lord God of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth." Isa. 28:9-22.

That the prophet refers to the same people that Peter referred to, I think will not admit of a doubt. Peter said of the people of the last days, that they were mockers, and scoffers, and were to mock and scoff at the coming of the Son of man. Isaiah says that the people of whom he spake were scornful and mockers, and they were to mock at the overflowing scourge, saying "it shall not come unto us." Another fact which puts the matter to rest is that Isaiah wrote of a people who were to live in the last days, when God had decreed a consumption on the whole earth. This was to be done in the last days, at the coming of the Son of man. So that Isaiah, as well as Peter, has given the same character to the generation which is to live in the days of the coming of the Son of Man.

I shall have occasion for this quotation in another part of this dissertation.

I shall now sum up the substance of what is said in the foregoing quotations concerning the situation of the world at the coming of the Son of man.

1. They were to be false religionists, broken into parties and sects.
2. Their teachers were to be numerous, and of their own making; for they are to "heap to themselves teachers having itching ears."
3. Those teachers that they heap to themselves, are to be false teachers, and are to make merchandise of the people.
4. They are to be in gross darkness, not able to discern the signs of the coming of the Son of man, however visible they may be.

5. They are to be mockers and scoffers; mocking at the idea of the coming of the Son of man; mocking and scoffing at the revelations, even the "line upon line;" the "precept upon precept," which the Lord is to give to Israel to "cause them to rest," by "a people of stammering lips and another tongue."

6. They were to have a form of Godliness, denying the power thereof.

7. To crown all, they are to be a people just such as God destroyed in the days of Noah, marrying and giving in marriage, being proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, with an innumerable train of other evils.

Thus the sacred writers describe the people of the last days; and no doubt but that people themselves will say they are enlightened, very learned, exceedingly polite, remarkably genteel, peculiarly scientific, the greatest of statesmen, the profoundest of politicians, and the best of generations. Truly God seeth not as man seeth! So differ inspired men and uninspired men in their judgment of mankind.

Having seen from the clearest possible evidence that the world at the time of the Savior's second advent will be in a state of apostasy, if we can credit the testimony of the Savior and of the prophets and apostles, let us compare the people of the apostasy with the saints of God, and the churches of the last days with the churches which were established by the immediate direction of the inspired men whom God sent into the world for the purpose of building up His kingdom. And in order to get the subject fairly before us, let us take a view of the kingdom of God, as established among men. In Matt. 21:43, the Savior says to the Jews, "Therefore say I unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." From this declaration of the Savior we learn two things; first, that the Jews had the kingdom of heaven among them; and second, that they did not at that time bring forth the fruits of that kingdom. God, by the mouth of Moses, had promised to the Jews that if they would obey His voice, and keep His covenant, they should be unto Him "a kingdom of priests," a peculiar treasure above all people; (see Ex. 19:5, 6;) but notwithstanding this promise, the Jews broke the covenant, and did not obey the voice of the Lord, but corrupted and defiled the kingdom of heaven so exceedingly that, in the days of the Savior, he said it should be taken from them and given to another people, that the fruits thereof might be brought forth. We are told by the Psalmist David, that so completely did the Jews corrupt the kingdom of God which was among them, that there were none among them doing good, no not so much as one: They had all gone out of the way, and became unprofitable together. See Psalms. 14. and Rom. 3:10-18. Thus the Jews had corrupted themselves so exceedingly that all of them had gone out of the way, and were considered transgressors before God, and at last became ripe for destruction, and the wrath of God came on them to the very uttermost. The kingdom of God was taken from them and given to another people, and for the best of all reasons, because they did not bring forth the fruits thereof, and were unworthy to enjoy it.

In order therefore to see from whence the Jews had fallen, let us enquire a little, What are the fruits of the kingdom of heaven, and what was the former condition of the Jews before they rendered themselves unworthy of the divine favor?

Paul says that "the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Rom. 14:17. As the kingdom of heaven is a distinct empire of its own, the subjects of it have privileges which belong to none other. This was the case with the Jews before their great apostasy; they were distinguished from all other people. When the Jews were first organized, they were all under the same order of things; their worship the same; the same priest or teacher taught them all; the same prophet prophesied to them all; they worshipped at the same temple; offered sacrifices at the same altar; the same Lawgiver directed them all; they all prayed for the same things, with every man's face toward the same temple. At the time of their great feasts, they all met at the same place, and enjoyed their festivities together. Among them there was one prophet, one priest, one temple, one altar, one Lawgiver, one hope of their calling, one God and one Father of them all, who was through them all, and over them all, and in them all, and round about them all; whose glory shone in the temple; whose grace enlightened their minds; whose power guarded their persons and defended their lands, and whose wisdom guided them by night and by day. The order of things which God established among that people, when attended to, would silence every cavil, allay every contention, put an end to all strife, and bring them to be of one heart and of one mind, seeing eye to eye, having but one desire; in a word, it would make them one. Such was the real tendency of the kingdom of heaven as established among the Jews; and as long as they continued in this order, the fruits of the kingdom were manifest. It brought forth prophets and prophetesses, and a host of inspired men and women. They received revelation upon revelation, instruction after instruction. The angels of heaven ministered unto them, and the power of God was exerted in their behalf. Their prophets could tell what their enemies were doing in their bed chambers. All things were revealed unto them that they were willing to receive. And there was nothing withheld from them that they were willing to receive. Such were the fruits of the kingdom as established among the Jews; and may we not ask where is the kingdom of heaven when these fruits are taken away? Or were not these the fruits of the kingdom of heaven?

Surely every person in the least degree acquainted with the kingdom of heaven as revealed in the scriptures, knows that these fruits are found nowhere else but in the kingdom of heaven. And who does not know, that if these fruits had continued with the Jews, that they would have continued until this day as the people of God? For who could have overthrown them? For if God was for them, who could be against them? God could not fight against himself. His power was pledged to them while they obeyed His voice and kept his covenant. It was only therefore their ceasing to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom that could overthrow them; for where the power, the wisdom, and the presence of God is, there is safety, there is salvation, and there is deliverance. The kings of the earth may set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together. The heathen may rage, and the people imagine a vain thing, but it is all unavailing, for where the fruits of the kingdom of heaven are, there no power, no combination of powers can prevail, for God is there. Had the Jews therefore continued to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom of heaven, it never would have been said to them, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." But when they ceased to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom, God said it should be taken from them.

WE quote the following from the Cincinnati, Ohio, Telegram, of May 18th, sent us by Bro. E. L. Kelly.

ORIGINAL MORMON WANTS SPACE IN CINCINNATI'S EXPOSITION.

TO EXEMPLIFY THE HISTORY OF THE TRUE
MORMON CHURCH.

Elder E. L. Kelly, counsellor of the Bishop of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is in the city seeking to obtain space at the Centennial Exposition for a historical exhibit of the Mormon Church.

Elder Kelly, seen at the St. James Hotel by a Telegram reporter, talked freely. He said: "I represent the Latter Day Saints. The headquarters are at Lamoni, Iowa. I live at Kirtland, Ohio. We differ from the Mormons of Utah on church organization and with reference to the parties that grew out of the church. We claim that is but a faction of the original church, and that they have incorporated things that didn't belong to the original church, one of which things is polygamy. We don't accept the doctrine of polygamy.

"This is the organization of the original church. We brought suit for the possession of the Lake county property before Judge Sherman, of the Common Pleas Court. The other parties didn't come into court to defend, though we gave them notice and desired to get them in. Judge Sherman finally gave a decree, declaring we were the successors of the original body, and so we took charge of the Temple and land, and have repaired the Temple. It is about twenty-two miles east of Cleveland.

"There had been notices in the papers prior to our conference at Independence, Missouri, that space would be given for an exhibition of the Latter Day Saints of the Western Reserve. A committee of five was appointed to wait on the Commissioners and arrange to place the means of historical knowledge within their reach. The committee consists of Joseph Smith, chairman, Lamoni, Iowa, eldest son of the original prophet; W. W. Blair, Lamoni; George A. Blakeslee, Bishop of the church, Galien, Michigan; E. C. Briggs, missionary having charge of Ohio, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; and E. L. Kelley, Kirtland, Ohio.

"The Temple at Kirtland was built in 1834 and cost about $60,000. There are about two and a half acres of ground with it. The building has been put in good condition. We have a small community at Kirtland—about twenty-five members enrolled. We have had an organization there only two years. We have twelve churches in the Kirtland and Pittsburg district. Then we have some churches in Jackson county; we have a society in Licking county; one near Middleton and another at New Ironton. We have been working only a few years in Ohio on the reorganization, which began in 1852. It consists of the elements that refused to follow Brigham Young, Rigdon, Strang and others at Nauvoo. After the death of the two Smiths the church numbered about 150,000. Brigham Young took 10,000 to Utah, Strang took about 1,000 to Beaver Island, Lake Michigan, and Sidney Rigdon about the same number to Pennsylvania, and he had one hundred and forty-five elders in his church the following year, with headquarters at Pittsburg. Lyman Wight took another body to Texas; Alpheus Cutler another to Western Iowa; C. B. Thompson another to Western Iowa also; and W. B. Smith, brother of the prophet, raised up a body in Northern Illinois. A large number belonging to the original church refused to follow any of those leaders; and it was that element that brought about the reorganization in 1852, and is now incorporated under the laws of Illinois. Many of the factions except Young's have since become merged with the Reorganization.

"We have the Nauvoo property. The presiding elder of the reorganized society is Joseph Smith, eldest son of the prophet, and his two brothers are also in the organization. None of the family went to Utah. The prophet's widow resided at Nauvoo till 1879, and died there. The prophet's sons own the original property, which was the prophet's individually. The temple at Nauvoo was destroyed by fire, nobody knows how. Young's faction says it was done by their enemies; others that it was by his own people to get more to go to Utah.

"Our largest membership is in Iowa; next in Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas. We have about one thousand in Michigan and about that number in Ohio. We have quite a membership in the North-eastern States, and churches in all the States except Carolina and Georgia. The Mormon agitation in these States is to keep up the Young party in Utah.

"Our headquarters were formerly at Plano, Illinois, fifty-three miles from Chicago. There we had our publishing department. There are good church buildings there. We repaired the Temple at Kirtland to preserve it as a relic. The headquarters were located there in 1831, and the building begun then. The Nauvoo Temple was begun in 1841. Most of the Kirtland people went to Nauvoo. Kirtland had about 3,000 in the church; now it has only about 250 people.

"Our church originated the Edmunds law against polygamy in the Territories of the United States. I made the oral argument before the Sub Judiciary Committee in answer to the argument of George Q. Cannon. Written arguments were presented to every member of the Forty-Seventh Congress. We are on record as a church in regard to our opposition, as proudly as any other church in the country. We moved in this matter as early as 1866. Joseph Smith in that year gave evidence showing that polygamy was no part of our faith and never had been. In 1882 he was invited to and did make a speech on the subject in Farewell Hall, Chicago. That was during the great effort to work up public sentiment in favor of a law against polygamy."

PASTORAL LETTER.

To the Saints of the Rocky Mountain Mission, Greeting:—Another year has passed; its record is made up, and must so remain. In looking back over its pages, possibly we may see where we have come short of duty, or where we have been forgetful of the responsibility resting upon us. If so, let us fully resolve that in the coming year we will make the weak places strong, and strengthen the defences.

I feel to congratulate you and your self-sacrificing devotion to the Master's cause in the past. Few understand the responsibilities of this mission. The influences and adverse circumstances under which you live and labor can only be known and understood by those who live and labor under them.

For the last three years especially the struggle has been a hard one; discouragements and opposition of divers kinds have been constantly and steadily met, and amidst it all we "hold the fort," have advanced slowly and surely. Let us now, with greater zeal and a wise determination continue the conflict, and at the close of this year let us present to the Lord and his church an offering of our combined efforts that will be acceptable and worthy. Under heaven's blessing we may turn the erring to the Just One.

And as we see the church everywhere moving on in the unity of the Spirit, putting on her beautiful garments, preparing for a grand and glorious triumph, let us place ourselves wholly under the divine law having the spirit of peace and love. And as we kneel around the hearthstone may our offerings be as a "living coal upon the altar." With unity of purpose and concert of action we may hope for good results.

The General Conference has graciously heard your appeal for help and have added Elders R. M. Elvin, Gomer Reese, J. H. Condit, and, we hope, Bro. John R. Evans of Lucas, Iowa, to labor in different parts of the field.

As in the past, we are constrained to call on the Saints to aid us financially. In the past you have been liberal, faithful, and true to the interests of the work. Now, as the Lord prospers you, let each one, as he purposeth, so give; and let none withhold because your offerings are small; consider now is the time, and so give.

Send all moneys to me, box 1123, Salt Lake City, and state whether it be tithes or offerings, and I will so receipt. And may God prosper you all.

R. J. ANTHONY.

MARRIED.

NAPIER—SPURGEON.—In Sacramento, California, May 5th, 1888, Mr. Newton Napier to Sr. Pauline Spurgeon, both of this city. Elder James H. Parr officiating.

NICHOLS—FOSTER.—At the residence of Bro. Dr. A. S. Davison, Lucas, Iowa, on Sunday, May 20th, 1888, Bro. William Nichols, of East Cleveland, Lucas county, Iowa, to Miss Hattie A. Foster, of Lucas, Iowa; Elder A. S. Davison officiating.

DIED.

RILEY.—At Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 13th, 1888, Anna Mabel, daughter of Bro. Clarence and Sr. Amanda Riley, aged 4 years, 4 months and 29 days. Funeral at Saints' Chapel, conducted by Elder Warren Peak.

TO BROTHER AND SISTER RILEY.

Beloved sister and dear brother,
Death hast torn from your embrace,
Little Mabel, your beloved one,
But again you'll see her face.
She was innocent and lovely,
Pure in the sight of God,
And she now is sweetly sleeping—
O, so sweet, beneath the sod.
But her pure, bright spirit is not
In the grave; O, no; it's gone!
Gone to mingle with the righteous,
In a brighter sphere beyond,
Where there is no death nor sickness,
Sorrow, sighing, pain nor care.
All is peace, and all are happy,
In that Paradise so fair.
Yes, your darling child is happy,
Singing sweetly over there.
Then, dear sister and dear brother,
Let this thought your spirits cheer.
In the resurrection morning,
If you faithful do remain,
You will meet your little darling,
And will never part again.

ELIZA CAFFALL.

HOWLAND.—At his residence in Green Meadows, near Los Angeles, California, April 19th, 1888, of Bright's disease, Captain William R. Howland, aged 63 years. Bro. Howland was born March 10th, 1825, on the Island of Fayal, Kingdom of Portugal. In early life he became a mariner, and for some twenty years sailed in every clime. An account of his experiences would fill a large and interesting volume, as he had a rare faculty of relating events in a highly interesting, pleasing and vivid way. He visited California in the eventful day of '49; and finally chose it as his home; where, after burying his first wife, he was married in 1860, to Miss Sarah Simmons, in whom for twenty-seven years he found an active and untiring helpmeet, a most devoted wife and fond mother, blest with seven children, six now living and present to soothe his last hours. During his long illness, day and night, his every wish in word or look was answered, and such care and attention paid as only the active, skillful, strong, and tenderly sympathetic wife could bestow. He refused most emphatically all medicine, but when in pain called for the elders and the pains were rebuked. He had no fears of the future, to him it looked bright. He had made ample provision for the voyage and was sure of his haven of rest. Always a moral man, he never found in any form of religion that which his soul desired, until hearing the restored gospel, he felt the power attending it was of God, and obeyed the heavenly call, with his wife and four sons being baptized by Elder D. S. Mills in 1882; since which time they rejoice in the new and everlasting covenant. In his death we mourn the time separation and loss of a kind and beloved husband, an affectionate and revered father, an excellent citizen and neighbor of noble, generous impulses; a benevolent friend in need to suffering humanity, a dearly beloved brother. He feelingly exhorted his family to live in love and continue faithful in the service of God that they might all inherit the glorious kingdom of heaven together. He passed away with a serene expression of countenance, like one in a pleasant dream. The funeral was from the house, and the procession by far the largest the writer has seen in California. Services were conducted by Elder J. R. Badham; discourse by D. S. Mills, from Rev. 14: 13. The body we laid away in Evergreen Cemetery, in Howland lot. One of God's noblemen gone to rest.

MILLS.—At the residence of his son, near Santa Ana, California, November 25th, 1887, of old age, Daniel T. Mills; aged 84 years; father of Bro. D. S. Mills. Deceased was born in Norfolk, Litchfield county, Connecticut, in 1803, where he resided many years. In 1829 he married Miss Polly Smith, of Canaan, Connecticut, and sister of Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Whitney, first wife of Bishop N. K. Whitney, of Kirtland, Ohio. He buried his companion in 1854, and in 1857 came to California and lived with his son. In early life he became connected with the Congregational Church; but in after years became convinced it was only a human uninspired institution; and finally more recently he overcame prejudice and investigated the doctrine of Christ, restored, as taught by the Reorganized Church; and having become acquainted with Bro. Joseph Smith on his first visit to California, accepted his calling, and esteemed him very highly. Although intending to be baptized he deferred it too long—thinking Bro. Joseph on his late visit here would be in time to administer that rite to him. He is one to be remembered by all acquaintances in Connecticut as taking an active part in the abolition campaign, voting for and advocating vehemently the claims of James G. Birney for president. He lived to rejoice in the wonderful harvest of the seed then sown,—and may he not again live to rejoice in the harvest of the earth, being in the hands of a just God of compensation. He passed away quietly as one taking a satisfied rest. His grand children and great grand children were present. Funeral services were conducted by Elder P. M. Betts; discourse with appropriate remarks by Elder A. A. Goff.

SIMPSON.—At her residence, Montrose, Iowa, May 19th, 1888, Sr. Margaret Simpson, in the 76th year of her age. Sr. Margaret Simpson—nee Trainer—was born in Warren county, Kentucky, November 8th, 1811, where she lived during the days of her childhood until ten years ago, when she moved to Gibson county, Tennessee, where she was united in marriage to Harmon Simpson, January 11th, 1832. They moved to Iowa in 1843, and she has lived here or at Nauvoo ever since. She was the mother of nine children, four remain to mourn her death, five have preceded her, and we trust welcomed her to the spirit world. She was baptized in 1840, lived a consistent member of the Old Organization until it was broken up. When the Reorganization was brought about she at once united with it and lived an exemplary Christian life and in her last sickness, months in duration, seemed the embodiment of patient submission. She passed quietly away looking and pointing upward saying "Open the door, open the door." The latch was raised by an unseen hand, and her spirit passed to the better land. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder James McKiernan, assisted by Bro. J. E. Holt on the 21st instant, to a large assemblage of friends and neighbors at Montrose, Iowa.

LEAR.—At Plano, Illinois, on Saturday, May 10th, 1888, Sr. Sarah Jane Lear, aged 40 years, 5 months and 19 days. Her death was caused by cancer of the stomach, from which she suffered severely, being confined to her house about seventeen weeks, three of which she was bedfast. In her affliction she was patient, trusting in the Lord, asking the prayers of the Saints and frequently calling for the elders to administer, until it pleased the Lord to reveal that he had called her home, to which she was resigned and passed peacefully away. In her twenty-five years of membership in the church she bore a faithful testimony and set a good example to all. At one time when Pres. Joseph Smith was baptizing in Fox river she saw an open space above her, and in the opening two personages sitting side by side, and before them a number of crowns. She heard a voice telling her that one of them was for her if faithful. Funeral services conducted by Elder W. Vickery at the Saints' Chapel. Interment at Plano Cemetery, where she rests awaiting the resurrection of the just.

PRUYN.—At Winneconne, Winnebago county, Wisconsin, May 6th, 1888, of pneumonia, Sr. Gunilday Angeline Pruyne, aged 73 years, 3 months and 25 days. She was the mother of seven children, four sons and three daughters, and she lived to see the third generation. She was baptized by Elder William Savage about nineteen years ago. Her husband remains and mourns her loss, with whom she had walked life's journey with its joys and sorrows for fifty-four years. A devoted wife and mother, a consistent Saint. She always welcomed the Saints when they visited her. All of her neighbors respected her, which was apparent in her last sickness, by their daily care. Thus has passed away one of our number to that rest which God has prepared for his dear adopted children. The funeral was held at the Norwegian Baptist Church. Elder W. S. Montgomery officiated in the services; text Rev. 14: 13.

STAGEMAN.—At Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 8th, 1888, Nannie M., daughter of Mr. John and Sr. Eliza Stageman, aged 1 year, 5 months and 13 days. The funeral discourse was preached by Elder D. K. Dodson. Interment at Fair View Cemetery, where the lovely body of their precious infant was laid to rest "until the morning of the first resurrection."

ROSS.—At Montrose, Iowa, May 14th, 1888, Mamie, daughter of F. M. and E. Ross, aged 2 years and 6 months. Funeral sermon by Elder B. F. Durfee.

"Sleep on dear one and take thy rest,
God called thee home, for he thought best."

BRANNAN.—In Denver, Colorado, May 19th, 1888, of scarlet fever and diphtheria, Melvin Russell, youngest son of John and Sr. Ella Brannan, aged 1 year and 8 months. Blessed by Elder James Caffall.

"God in his wisdom had recalled
The boon his love had given,
And took our darling Melvin home
To rest with Him in heaven."

NOTICES.

Wanted, the address of Wm. E. Chute. In the interest of the Saints' Harmony I should be much pleased to hear from Professor Wm. E. Chute. In 1878, I received from him a number of contributions for the proposed Saints' Harmony, and finding that there was real excellence in some of the numbers contributed, I laid them away with the accepted contributions. Now, examining them carefully with a view to final adoption, I discover inside some music an interesting letter for which I hereby tender thanks. Not knowing the writer's address I have not been able to write him and take this method now of soliciting correspondence with him. In his letter he states that he has cousins in Ontario, members of Saints' Church. Can brethren Oliver Chute or Jas. Robb furnish the professor's address should this not come under his observation.

M. H. FORSCUTT.

A two-day meeting will be held at Lucas, Iowa, on June 2d and 3d. The branch would like to see as many of the Saints present as can attend. Elders who can arrange to go and assist in the services are earnestly invited to do so.

H. A. STEBBISN, Dist. Pres.

There will be Saints' Reunion under the supervision of Bro. I. N. Roberts, held on the Medina river, two and a half miles west of Medina City, beginning at eleven o'clock, June 16th, 1888. Arrangements will be made to meet those coming by rail, at Cent'r Point, on the San Antonio and Arkansas Pass Railroad. Dear Saints, especially in Teaxas, can you not make the sacrifice to come and meet with us in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Prospects are splendid for temporal and spiritual blessings here, and we will do our best to accommodate all, saint or friend, who may come. Any who anticipate coming may correspond with John A. Currie, Medina City, Bandera county, Texas. All the elders in Texas are wanted who will come and meet with us.

SCORING THE SPIRITUALISTS.

OF all impositions, of all frauds, of all gross deceits and villainous humbugs practiced in the world, those by Spiritualistic mediums are the foulest and worst.

The bunco steerer, the confidence man, the green-goods merchant and the monte sharp only rob their customers of money by false pretense; while these swindlers, playing upon the hopes and fears of weak flesh, trifling with the grief of the widow and the stricken mother, and employing as their agent the agony of every anguished heart whose treasure is in the grave, not only extort money by vile trickery, but often drive their deluded victims from health and wealth into poverty and illness, and finally rob them of their reason and drive them to the mad-house.

This is not exaggeration, but simple fact.

Our wise legislators have provided means for the punishment of other swindlers, but these miscreants are allowed to practice under the protection of the law. Again and again they have been exposed, again and again the whole fabric of spiritualistic manifestation has been shown to be deception and trickery; homes have been ruined, fortunes lost, evils innumerable wrought in families upon which the curse of credulity has fallen, and still not one step taken towards the protection of the community from the gang of charlatans invading it."—New York World.

ONE HOUR EACH DAY.

EVERY woman, no matter how situated, if able to leave her bed, ought to get one hour if not more, in the open air each day, walking if possible. And in the winter season every living room should have a strong draught of fresh air through it for five or ten minutes two or three times a day, even if the weather is below zero. Nervousness, headache and blues would disappear as if by magic if these rules were followed, and instead of an army of helpless invalids, swelling the plethoric purses of specialists, we would have active, vigorous women, a comfort to themselves and a blessing to their families, and all by the exercise of a little common sense, which, after all, is a twin sister to wisdom.—Arkansas Traveller.

WHAT SMOKING DOES FOR BOYS.

A medical man, struck with the large number of boys under fifteen years of age whom he observed smoking, was led to enquire into the effect the habit had upon the general health. He took for his purpose thirty eight, aged from nine to fifteen, and carefully examined them. In twenty-seven he discovered injurious traces of the habit. In twenty-two there were various disorders of the circulation and digestion, palpitation of the heart, and a more or less taste for strong drinks. In twelve there were frequent bleedings of the nose, ten had disturbed sleep, and twelve had slight ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth, which disappeared on ceasing the use of tobacco for some days.

The doctor treated them all for weakness, but with little effect until the smoking was discontinued when health and strength were soon restored.—British Medical Monthly.

INDEPENDENCE AND THE CORNER STONE.

On the 6th of April last, it was the fortune of the Saints visiting Independence for the purpose of being present during conference, to assist in the service of laying the corner stone of the new church, now being erected by the branch there.

There was a good many present and much good feeling prevailed. There is no formula laid down in the church works to be observed on such occasions other than the precedents of the laying the corner stones of the temples at Kirtland and Nauvoo, and these not being applicable to the occasion, we were under the necessity of proceeding upon the present dictation of propriety and circumstance.

The choir of the branch, under the charge of Bro. F. W. Barbee, leader of the choir, and Bro. John T. Kinneman, of Stewartville, Missouri, sung an anthem after which a number of speeches were made by brethren E. C. Brand, E. L. Kelley, A. H. Smith, I. N. White, Rev. Palmore, of the M. E. Church, of Independence, C. Derry, Pres. Joseph Smith, and the prayer was offered by Bro. W. W. Blair. The choir sang several excellent songs during the intervals between the speeches.

The mechanical work of laying the stone was superintended by brethren A. Jessiman, J. A. Kennedy and John Earnshaw. The stone when lowered to its bed contained a cavity in which a metal box was placed containing in deposit the following articles:

CONTENTS OF BOX DEPOSITED IN CORNER STONE:

Holy Scriptures, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Saints' Harp, Joseph the Prophet (by Tullidge), Joseph the Seer (by Blair), Manuscript Found, Report of First Building Committee, Herald, Hope, Autumn Leaves, Independence Gazette, Independence Daily Sentinel, Independence Weekly Sentinel, Kansas City Times, Kansas City Journal, Lamoni Gazette; Photographs of Joseph the Seer, President J. Smith, W. W. Blair, G. A. Blakeslee, Israel L. Rogers, A. H. Smith, W. H. Kelley, John H. Lake, Herman C. Smith, G. T. Griffiths, R. J. Anthony, and of the building committee; a copper cent bearing date 1817, taken from the corner stone of Kirtland Temple, deposited by G. A. Blakeslee.

The scene was impressive and suggestive. Many years ago a little handful of men hailing from the east and far east gathered around a stone designed to mark the resting place of an altar to be erected to the worship of God, and there in the midst of dangers, similar to those once pending where the Huguenots sung and prayed, dedicated the labor of their hands to God. How changed—a half century later, sons of some of those men, with others whose fathers were made exiles on America's free soil for religion's sake and many who believed on Christ through their words, gathered in hundreds to place in its bed a stone marking a spot where Israel's wandering and waiting children propose to raise an altar whereon the sons of Jacob might "offer an offering in righteousness." The Lord had promised the man who had laid the first stone with their comrades, on Fishing river, fifty years ago, that if they would hearken to him, and do as he counseled them they should "find grace and favor with the people." The men to whom the promise was made failed in even trying to keep those last words of counsel given them on Zion's borders. Their children, taking these words as if addressed to them, have essayed to keep the counsel then given, and the Lord mindful of the words that had "gone out of his mouth" has blessed them as he had covenanted to bless their fathers, and the assembly gathered on that April day neath the skies that rise over the city "beautiful for situation," bear witness to the keeping of God's word. In peace, by the common consent of the entire community where the Saints are dwelling, with the active co-operation of many, and the outspoken sympathy of many more, the people of the church once driven from the state, in open day, with the watchful guardians of the public safety careful that they were not disturbed and the spirit of American liberty again outraged, set up the stone designed to show where the "sanctuary and the true tabernacle" had been "pitched."

Devoted to the idea, almost as grand as that of the creation itself, that God had designed from the fall, to grant to the race a means of redemption, which was to result in the gathering "into one" all that was good and noble and grand in the universe, those whose labor on that day was to be crowned with success if prayer and toil and sacrifice could avail them, could see in the present event and the completion of their wishes an evidence that God had neither forgotten nor was neglectful of his design; and that in the gospel, the preaching, influence and spirit of which had brought them together was testified of as the means under Christ to accomplish the work.

Elder Palmore, of the M. E. Church in charge at Independence, was present and was invited to speak, which he did. In his remarks he paid a tribute to the good character of the Saints, in regard to the position taken by them as a body on the liquor question, it being understood by him that the church was standing firmly against the use and sale of intoxicating drink as a beverage. What other ground can a people claiming (and aspiring to be worthy of the claim) to be the people of God take in regard to that question? It is plainly written that "no drunkard can inherit the kingdom of God." No matter what the righteousness of the church as a body may be, that man who carelessly, or wilfully cultivates and indulges the habit of drinking, deliberately puts his title to eternal life into jeopardy. He is fostering an appetite of the flesh that will sooner or later deliver his soul into the grasp of the Devil beyond hope of redemption. The Saints at Independence do well then, when they by voice, and by vote when opportunity is given put the seal of their condemnation upon that which so endangers the fabric of human salvation. No more pitiable sight is to be seen upon the streets of Independence than a man, young in years, whose face shows to the passer by that he is a visitor in the places where he can and does buy and use the beverage that despoils and depraves. No Saint whose eyes are open to see, because he has received of the Spirit by which he is able to cry "Abba Father," can meet, converse and associate with one of like profession of faith as himself who is addicted to the intoxicating cup, without feeling troubled and shame faced that his brother should be so weak, so foolish. We are commanded to "condescend to men of low degree," but we are also commanded "not to company with them who walk disorderly." We may bear with such erring ones; we may even consent to share the public condemnation resting upon the church for harboring such characters; but we can not, try as we may, change the everlasting verdict, "No drunkard can inherit the Kingdom of God." Why men who have been baptized unto newness of life will persist in putting the blush of shame upon the faces of their fellow worshipers, and tamper with their own hope and certainty of eternal life is hard to account for. Those who do this may seek to excuse themselves by urging human weakness, social customs, the indifference of others, or any other excuse; but there is not one of any, or all of the excuses they may use that they will think to have the courage to urge when standing before the final judgment seat of Christ—it is written, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

The Saints can not afford to compromise the good name of the church and throw discredit upon the power of the gospel to save, by fostering drunkenness and the sale of intoxicants which engenders the habit of and liability to drunkenness.

We saw much after the conference at Independence closed to make us love the Saints of that city. We learned that the force of their precept and example had been felt; and that society was willing to concede so far, that the people were good citizens, and could be trusted in judgment and action where the interest and well being of the community were concerned. If we saw anything that distressed, or annoyed, we shall not notice it here; we were visiting and courtesy demands that we do not spread abroad the shortcomings of those whose guest we were.

The new church is progressing finely. It will be an imposing and beautiful structure worthy for Saints to occupy and bless to the community by the precept and example of a righteous people.

THE FARMERS' BANK OF LAMONI.

WE learn from reliable sources that Mr. Robert Winning of St. Joseph Missouri, and Mr. D. F. Nicholson, of Lamoni, Iowa, have perfected arrangements and will establish a bank in Lamoni, named as above, and that it will be opened for business at an early day.

It is intended to make it equal to the present and future needs of Lamoni and the regions connected with it and contiguous to it, and to keep its capital fully up to the demands of the times. These gentlemen have abundant means with which to operate their business successfully, and with that they have first-class business qualifications and commercial standing, and are known to be energetic, public spirited, reliable, honorable men, who will seek to promote the interests of the town and country where they locate and of the people with whom and for whom they do business.

From what we know of these gentlemen, personally, we endorse them and their enterprise most heartily and bespeak for them the confidence and patronage of the public, assured that they will reciprocate business patronage and favor in substantial and effective ways. Lamoni and the country about it need business men of this sort, who, while receiving the patronage of the people, will give substantial aid in return.

The people of every community should give generous support to their enterprising business men, who are working in their interests; and the business men should in return seek the welfare of their patrons, and if they fail to do this they should be counted unworthy of patronage.

CARD from Bro. W. W. Blair, dated Nebraska City, Nebraska, May 28th, reports the weather clear there at that time. Letter from same place dated the 29th, stated that he would remain at Nebraska City holding services nightly, until Friday, June 1st, and would then go to Henderson, Mills county, Iowa, holding services where wisdom and opportunity would direct.

Bro. Wm. H. Bower writes from 192½ James Street, Kansas City, Kansas, and states that though he has been, and is even yet, sorely afflicted, he rejoices in the reflection that God is mindful of him, and has given him many evidences of his power and loving kindness. He has lost wife and a child; and himself has been sick at times unto death almost, and has received help from the Lord. Of his spiritual hope he writes: "God has brought me up out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and established my goings. His blessings and mercies to me have been more than I deserve."

Bro. Arthur B. Pierce wrote a card from Attleboro, Massachusetts, May 21st, stating that one, a lady, was baptized there on the 20th by Bro. Bro. A. N. Hoxie.

In Bro. J. D. Bennett's letter, page 327 of HERALD for May 26th, he wishes the following errors in printing corrected. In 6th line from top of second column, for "many have seen," read, "many have been the opportunities," etc. Further on it should read, "Sr. Mary Jane and Mr. William Williams' youngest daughter, who was born soon after their coming into the church;" instead of "Mary Jane, youngest daughter of Mr. William Williams." In the last sentence, same paragraph read "I had ridden," instead of "In had" etc.

The address of Bro. J. C. Foss, will be Detroit, Becker county, Minnesota, until further ordered. He arrived in his field on the morning of May 19th well and hearty. The Saints were expecting Bro. Alexander H. Smith to be with them at their conference June 15th.

Bro. M. R. Scott wrote from Bvnnville, Harrison county, Indiana, May 26th that Brn. James M. and James G. Scott had been with him there, one was baptized on the 21st and two on the 25th, one of them a leader of the brethren. Two were to be baptized on the day of writing, thus making five. Bro. and Sr. Wheeler, had by precept and example done a good work there.

A sister residing at the Seventeen Mile House, California, desires the prayers of the Saints; she suffers from sciatica; is isolated from the church and is desirous of spiritual sympathy and comfort—pray for her.

We publish letter from Bro J. T. Davis, written from St. John, Utah, which with the accompanying note from J. D. McIntosh, whom we presume to be the presiding elder of the branch of the Utah Church at St. John. The discussion has most likely passed, unless the president of the stake or the bishop of the ward interfered, which it is possible was done, some of the leading officers of the different wards and stakes being careful of the effect that discussions with "Josephite" elders may have upon the people. Bro. Davis knows that he is a trusted man with the Reorganized church and will have the unstinted sympathy and prayers of the Saints: "Truth is mighty and will prevail," has long been a standing motto of Latter Day Saints, and Bro. Davis has perhaps before this is read by the Saints proved the truth of the saying.

Elder Mark H. Forscutt preached at Lamoni, on the evening of May 27th, on the subject of the priesthood, and is to continue the same subject Sunday June 3d. He was preceded in the morning by Bro. R. M. Elvin who preached a very acceptable sermon from the text: "Go preach the gospel to every creature." Both efforts were appreciated by the Saints who heard them.

THERE still seems to be "tricks in all trades;" even in that of the Congressmen of the United States, if the art of statesmanship may be called a trade. A Georgia correspondent writing home from Washington puts in the following comment on the saving qualities of the representatives from his state:

"The average Congressman claims that he is scantily paid for his work, but they all seem to fare well and many save money. While some members live at the best hotels and spend their entire salaries, there are many who save two-thirds and even more of their compensation. Even in our own Georgia delegation there are men who save much of their salary, while others spend it all, and one, who has a family here, spends even more than he draws from the Government. I venture the assertion that there is more than one member of the Georgia delegation who saves two-thirds of his salary, which is $5000 for his services to the Government, $125 for stationery, and twenty cents per mile each way for his railroad fare. Some members of the delegation board for $35 per month, while others range from $75 to $100. Of course those who board at the former figures are at side-street boarding-houses, and get only boarding-house fare, which, to say the least of it, is—well, everybody knows what Washington boarding-house fare is. But it can not be expected that good meals can be served at fifty cents per day—$20 for a room and $15 for meals is what the $35 members pay. If a member can put up with this kind of fare there is no reason why he should claim he is scantily paid. These are the 'kickers.'"

While it may be true that everybody knows what "Washington boarding-house fare is," either from experience, or common analogy, everybody does not know that the life of a public man at Washington is beset by a net work of small and large financial demands made upon him by social conventionalism of the Capitol City that are as relentless as fate. It requires more nerve and downright independence of character to live in the City of Washington within the salary of a congressman, liberally as the American citizen may think the law makers of the nation are paid, than the great mass of aspirants after congressional honors possesses. The man who is chosen by the people to represent them at Washington, from the time it is known that he is elected, to a forced, or voluntary retirement to private life, is a prey to political beggary. If he is an honest man he accepts of no political bribes, is not a party to jobbery, or political thievery by which the public treasury, or private corporations are bled of funds; but he is assailed on every hand by an army of political, and would be political leeches, who take his time, his sleep, his brains and his money. He is importuned wherever he goes for sympathy, which calls for pecuniary aid; and his purse must be ever open as well as his heart. It is known that he gets good pay, and it is presumed upon. Besides this, it is usually expected that he has ambition to continue in Congress, or to reach higher position in the political world, and his present and possible constituency surround him for favors; place, position, help—anything with "money in it," are expected of him; if indeed he is a "place hunter" himself, he dare not refuse, nor be apathetic, he must "do something" and this something may cost him much, or little as the case may be, and he will frequently secure future political support by the expenditure of money where he can not give place or position.

If he expects to take a front rank in the society of the capitol city he must pay—literally pay—for it. He can not walk into the town from the railway station, carpet sack in hand, and put up at some good but obscure hotel, or boarding house. If he does social ostracism marks him as either poor in purse, or poor in spirit and his ambition to shine is dead, dying of the taboo of Washington society. If he can give no dinners to diplomats, fellow congressmen, public and private nabobs and dignitaries, keep no stylish turnouts, sport no sailing yachts and frequent fashionable hotels and clubs; in short, if he can not live in princely style, he will serve his congressional term and go home unnoticed and without social distinction, and social distinction is too frequently the open door to political renown in the field of American politics.

It was for many years a proverb that no matter how good and honest a man might be who came to Washington as a congressman, if he came unaccompanied by his wife and family, if he had one, he could not serve one term of six years without being corrupted. This proverb is perhaps not true now of Washington society; but the social and political requirements of life, fashionable life, at the capital of the United States are of such a nature that it is to honest men in humbler spheres a wonder that honest men can be found who will consent to enter the whirlpool of politics.

It should be apparent to the citizen who cares to have the public sentiment of the nation crystalized into national law by men of good brain and good morals, that this can not be always done, while such a false estimate upon social distinction and standing obtains in the remote centres whence congressmen gravitate to the central cities of state and nation, as now rules in American politics. The very fact, well known to the men of brain really competent to serve the interest of the people, that it requires a fortune to make a successful political canvass and sustain the character of a successful political candidate in the charmed circle of Washington society; itself deters many a good man from suffering himself to the fate of an election, and almost forces the people to accept men, who, whatever other qualifications of head or heart they may lack, are endowed with political ambition and are possessed of—money—the political "bar'l." From this it ought to suggest itself to the American thinker that the expenditures of the American congressmen are not gauged by the nominal outlay for bed and board, in a plain, unostentatious and democratic way; but are to be estimated from a consideration of the conditions surrounding him in the position unto which he is chosen by the vote of his constituency. The demands of the society into which he is thrown by his accession to the political life of the capital may be improper, and based upon false estimates of human honor, and the dignity and distinction of American citizenship, by which false standards of social measurement have become the rule; but these demands exist, and he who is ignorant of them, or is disposed to disregard them may just as well stay away from Washington; unless indeed he goes as a looker on, has no "axe to grind," and is inclined to laugh and grow fat no matter what he hears or sees.

We are inclined to believe that the congressmen who serve the people in the halls of the National capital in honesty of intent and fact, and who come up to the requirements of the social and political circles in which American statesmen of distinction move, will not do so upon the salary paid them from the National Treasury and acquire great fortunes to carry home with them when their term of office expires. It is even known that some congressmen have expended upon one diplomatic dinner given to the social world in which they moved, as much, or more than the sum paid them as a salary for an entire year. Many of those now serving are men who have acquired fortunes in law and business, and who could if they wished live at leisure; but who love the excitement of the campaign and the forum, and are in their way philanthropists, with a tinge of personal ambition thrown in to give zest to their political pursuits. The salary which these men receive is not the real need for which they strive. Some of them are patriots and serve because the people have asked them to. There are, however, too many who are place hunters, spoils seekers, whose sole ambition is to shine in the borrowed luster which place momentarily lends them and to gather in the shekels; which from the false construction of society enables them to maintain themselves in notoriety where worth and real merit would neither place nor keep them. This has been the unfortunate condition of American politics for many years. Both dominant political parties are to be blamed for it; and so are American citizens as a mass. They have permitted the standard of moral and political merit to fall lower and lower; until Diogenes with his fabled lantern might despair of finding an honest (moral, social, financial) politician. And such state of things will continue, until there is a return to the standard of political measurement which sent such men as Jay, Rutledge, Morris, Franklin, Jefferson, Adams, Madison, Henry and Washington to congress, and filled the halls of legislation with men, not tricksters; patriots, not spoils seekers; citizens of the Republic, not partizans; men whom the people sought to serve them and the cause of a common country, not place seekers; honorable men, and not party jobbers. Whether such a time will again return to this country loved of good men, destined to such greatness as no other nation has ever known, remain for the future; but the present duty of the citizen, no matter what party may claim his political allegiance is to seek to put "good me in office."

THE following, cut from the providence, Rhode Island, Telegram, for Monday, May 14th, though its statements are roughly made, contains nuggets of wisdom, for which the roughness of the statement will be excused by HERALD readers:

THE MORMON IDEA.

One who had attended the excellent lecture of the Rev. Mr. Bond at the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ last night said the Christian Scientists ought not to take umbrage at what the Swedenborgians say, nor the latter to care for what the Orthodox Church says of it.

"It is a free country and any man can take his choice," said he. "The Mormon people on High street don't believe in polygamy and they do believe in doing right. What if they do get their religion from a man who said an angel from heaven had given him stereotyped plates of the real gospel, so long as they believe in being just between man and man, what matters? Joe Smith was a tough in his day, and was a most unlikely man to be on speaking terms with an angel, but what of it? There is nothing injurious to the community preached by the Mormons of Providence."

"I never could believe that story of the plates and the angel. The plates should have been preserved for proof," said a pert young man.

"No: pray what church do you attend?"

"The Episcopal."

"Ah, with the ten commandments engraved on the wall?"

"Certainly. All Episcopal Churches—"

"I know. Where did they come from?"

"Moses, of course."

"Anybody ever see the tablets of the law?"

"No. He broke them to pieces."

"Then there is no more evidence in favor of Moses than of Joe Smith. It is an even thing."

"But Moses was—"

"I know, Moses you are going to say was a more respectable man than Smith. They were both respectable after reformation. In their tough days they were bad eggs. Moses was a murderer, and Smith used to hang around saloons. In this free country we can respect both parties without prejudicing the other. The visions of Smith and Swedenborg were not new. They were not novelties in religion. Others have had visions also. A few years ago there were several Turkish gentlemen in this city representing the Ottoman empire at the gun factory on Wickenden street. They were fine fellows, and yet they religiously believed in the visions of their prophet, Mahomet, a man who also made connections with heaven, or said he did. That man was a sort of oriental loafer in his day, but he took to a better form of life, and to-day there are more people in the world who believe in his visions than who believe in the visions of John at Patmos, five hundred years before him. It is foolish to bicker over Bibles, split straws over dogmas, or cry over creeds. For my part, I have room for them all. I respect them all, and will quarrel with none. Christian science is to me as good as any other faith, no worse nor no better."

The following is from the Chicago Tribune for May 29th. Pretty strong, please.

DES MOINES, Ia., May 28.—Late last night South Des Moines, Sebastopol, and Bloomfield Township were visited by one of the most disastrous hail-storms ever known in this part of the country. The damage done is estimated at $5,000. The fall of hail was terrific, and the rain descended in torrents. The hailstones varied from the size of a hazel nut to that of a hen's egg, and were piled and drifted in many places from two to four feet deep. This morning Robert McNutt of South Des Moines found the hail so deep in his yard that when he ran a common-sized shovel straight down into it less than six inches of the handle was left in sight. In Mr. G. Van Ginkel's yard in Sebastopol it was drifted so deep that one could walk over an ordinary board fence upon the drifts. South of the city the damage to gardens, fruit trees, and vegetation generally was incalculable. Windows were broken, vegetables beaten into the ground, and fruit and forest trees stripped of their foliage. Watrouss nursery was in the range of the storm, and sustained a large loss. Mr. Van Ginkel's loss on brick-yard and fifteen acres of market garden is reported at $3,000. Only two houses in Sebastopol were left with their windows unbroken. In some cases the hailstones fell so violently that clear holes exactly the size of the hail were cut through the glass.

HERE is a nut for the wiseacres to crack. What is stated is as true of the negro as is the statements made concerning the Americanizing of foreigners by residence in America.

"The negro is changing in appearance and losing some of the birthmarks peculiar to the African race. The new generation is showing the effects of a higher culture. Especially is this noticeable in the towns where contact with the whites shows its effect. The flat-nosed, kinky-headed negro is passing away and becoming an unknown race. All the colored children, no matter how dusky in hue, show the change. Among the females long hair of that peculiar woolly appearance hangs in long curls or braids down their backs. Aquiline noses and smaller mouths with thinner lips are the rule. For years, and in fact ever since their freedom, the negroes have endeavored to do away with the short and kinky hair bestowed upon them by their ancestors. Much of their spare change is invested in various hair tonics and invigorators, and the long attention and care bestowed upon it is shown in their descendants. The South Georgia Negro is an evidence of evolution, the survival of the fittest."

DEATH OF ERASTUS SNOW.

Erastus Snow, one of the Twelve Apostles of the Mormon Church, died May 27th, at his residence in this city of kidney disease. The deceased was seventy years of age, and had been a member of the Mormon Church almost since the day of its organization, over fifty years ago. Next to Brigham Young he was the greatest colonizer of the Mormons. The development of Southern Utah is due mainly to his efforts. The Mormon settlements in Arizona and Mexico have also been largely due to his work. He will be buried from the Tabernacle on Wednesday.

The foregoing will not surprise the HERALD readers from their knowledge of the age of Elder Snow. He was one of the earliest elders in the church; and was very active, both in the old church and under Pres. Brigham Young; being just as zealous in error as he was in the truth.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. W. Wight wrote from 436 Brannan street, San Francisco, California, May 18th:

"We arrived here at 10:45, a. m., yesterday, and learn that we can not leave for Australia till June 2d. Have appointments for Oakland on Sunday. Shall try to visit Stocton before leaving. Health good and feeling well spiritually."

Bro. I. N. White baptized two, a lady and her daughter, in his field on Sunday, May 27th. He wrote May 31st:

"We have here now about forty or fifty members. Bro Joseph Luff is with me; have been here one week; leave to-day for Lowry City, St. Clair county.

Bro. H. A. Richardson, formerly of Kansas, wrote from Buchanan, Michigan, June 1st:

"By the blessing of God, I have done much fireside preaching, which has not been all in vain. I baptized one, a dear sister, before I left Kansas. In this place there is one ready and waiting to be buried with Christ in baptism. Many are investigating."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Can an appeal be taken from the findings of an Elders' Court, when the defendant fails to appear in trial, makes no defense, files no motions, nor raises any question of fact or law before such court?

Ans.—Yes. Default is sometimes made in courts below to secure the benefit of trial in the higher court.

Q.—Can any question of law or fact in such appeal (or any appeal) be raised in the appeal court which was not raised in the trial court?

A.—Yes. It sometimes occurs that default is made for the purpose of pleading in the court above what might not be pleaded in the lower.

Q.—In the event of a president of any quorum being removed either by death, transgression, resignation, or ordination to a higher office, should his counsellors retain their positions in the presidency of the quorum, or are they removed by and because of the removal of their chief without further action being necessary?

A.—As a general rule those offices filled by the choice of some one holding another and different office, to which those chosen are assistants, cease at the legal expiration of the office of the principal. Counsellors to the president of a quorum chosen by himself and sustained by the voice of the quorum are of this class, and their term of office is dependent upon the tenure of the office of their principal; when his ceases, so does theirs, only they are entitled to act until the successor of the principal is chosen or appointed. Offices like that of the president of the Twelve, or the Seventy, in which there are no counsellors direct, are not of that class, and in these there is no lapse. Counsellors are usually chosen at the will of the one with whom they act; when his term expires, from any legal cause, his will ceases to govern in the case, and the office of those dependent upon his will ceases as a matter of consequence. The will of the successor holds when he is chosen and is not to be controlled by the will of him whose term is expired and whom he succeeds. The office of counsellor attaches to the incumbent of the office requiring them and can not necessarily follow beyond the life-time of the incumbent in the office by virtue of which he was entitled to such counselors. The successor in office is as much entitled to the privileges and prerogatives of the office, as was his predecessor, and can not properly be shorn of them.

Q.—Have the sisters, as members of the church, the same rights to voice and vote in business meetings of the branch as the brothers?

A.—Yes. In branch business meetings all members have the same right to take part, one the same as another.

Q.—Can there be any advanced, perfected women?

A.—Yes; if there can be any men of the same character.

Q.—Why are not the spirits of righteous women angels?

A.—We see no reason why the same rule which makes righteous men to become ministering spirits does not apply to women. The words man and men are used in a generic sense; for in the Lord "there is neither male nor female." We are not able to give the processes by which either men or women are transformed into angels; but we understand the word angel to signify messenger in one of its meanings; and believe that in another it applies to classes of spirits who occupy in the heavenly realms such positions and fulfill such offices as God appoints to them, and for which they are fitted and made capable by worth and qualifications. If men as men attain to the condition of angels by virtue of obedience and good works in Christ, we see no reason why women as women may not also attain to such condition; but what the position that they may be assigned to seems not to be revealed, only as we take the word men to mean the race, and not sex only.

THE church that has the most of the life of Christ will accomplish the most for men. It brings to this truth-seeking and law-investigating age the personality it needs. And it will at last possess the truest theology; for now and evermore it is the life that is the light of men.—C. C. Everett.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Not with hatred's undertow
Doth Love Eternal flow;
Every chain that spirit's wear
Crumbles in the breath of prayer;
And the penitent's desire
Opens every gate of fire."

"MILLIONS OF BEATING HEARTS; STRANGE THAT WE HEAR THEM NOT"

IS IT strange we ask again, that we do not hear them? To us it seems that the ear which passes through life and is never smitten by the wailing sound which comes from the great throbbing heart of human suffering must be dull indeed—heavy with the deafness of utter indifference. That there are none such we honestly and well believe. Some indeed may have learned the mere trick of turning a deaf ear to these mute appeals—appeals to all which is divine within them, but far the greater number hear, and when to answer does not interfere too seriously with long formed habits of self-indulgence they answer; but here as at every other point of our Christian warfare, that most formidable enemy, self, meets us and we yield to his powers, with but feeble effort at resistance. From one, aged, alone and afflicted, comes this wailing cry: "You know not how many nor how great have been the sorrows, disappointments, perplexities and vexations (the latter by far the hardest for me to bear) of my life. sometimes I have desired to depart from this life. I am so dull that it seems as though I shall never again see the light of the Sun of righteousness. It is partly the diseased state of the body and partly unbelief, or want of active faith. I have been wrapped in darkness since my husband's death and other misfortunes overtook me. Tell me do you think it is wrong to pray for death?"

No purer soul nor heart with loftier purpose than the one who penned these lines has ever written words of cheer and wisdom to the Mothers' Home Column; but hours of darkness come to every one. The Gethsemane in whose night of agony and gloom they need even as the Master needed, that friends pray with them while they wrestle alone with their great agony. Would there not be cheer and strength for such an one in knowing that a faithful band, even if that band were a small one, was pleading for her at a throne of grace, thus helping her to bear her burden and so fulfil the perfect law? These undertones of sorrow could never fall upon unhearing ears while the sisters of the Prayer League should be true to their promise; for it would be theirs to listen and to put into action the loving thought of the heart, to cheer and encourage each other, be the night ever so long or the way ever so dreary.

Writes another tried and weary one—one whose toils and sufferings endured for the love of this latter day work it would touch any heart to hear: "Nature never did betray the heart that loved her; I have gone into the grove to write this letter, where she will whisper to my weary heart in her softest accents, and lift therefrom my gloomy forebodings, and assist me in looking upon outward circumstances with none other than a cheerful, trusting, grateful heart. I love the spring time when nature lays aside her pearls and puts on her emeralds and comes forth in all her grandeur and loveliness; when everything smiles and is in harmony with her, but man. The birds and even the beasts of the field, acquiesce in her gladness. If we weary mortals would give ourselves more thoroughly into the keeping of nature's propelling power, and let the law of love and kindness rule; how spontaneous, more earnest and true as individuals, would be our lives, and what a heaven on earth we might enjoy. Sitting here in this grove of fir trees the sea of memory is stirred, and my mind goes back to the days of my youth, to the little town nestling between a graceful sweep of hills, with its lovely parks and shaded alcoves; its blooming nooks and sunny spots of greenery to a grand old castle standing out in bold relief against the clear blue sky, with lights that were never allowed to go out streaming through its windows over the dark blue sea, warning all vessels of their danger should they come too near the rocks, shoals and breakers to be found there; and to the cottage by this dark blue sea—the dear old home where the happy hours of my girlhood were passed.

"Childhood's days now pass before me,
Forms and scenes of long ago;
Like a dream they hover o'er me,
Calm and bright as evening's glow;
Days that knew no shade of sorrow
There my young heart pure and free,
Joyful hailed each coming morrow,
In my cottage by the sea."

How often in my childhood have I wandered among the hills of this lovely Eden, throwing myself entirely upon the bosom of nature, drinking great draughts of her sweetness and listening to the ripple of the waves keeping time to the beating of my own heart and the music of my inward being. I look back with my mental vision to those halcyon days with regret that they were all too fleeting.

Pardon me that I have wandered from the dusty highway of life to gather a few flowers from the green fields of memory. My heart is sick and my spirits are burdened because of many things. The stern realities of life have striven long and hard to crush out the spirit of love for the beautiful which God has implanted within me; but there are times when the music of waterfalls will be heard, and forms of beauty shape themselves in the mists which cluster around the past, and the spray from its far distant ocean waves cool my fevered brow."

Loving kindness and hearty heartfelt sympathy, are they not the crying needs of the world to-day?

"Why should the children of a King Go mourning all the day?"

They do but bear their share of that which is appointed unto all in this world of sin and sorrow. "In the world you shall have tribulation;" but is there no means, no way by which we may lay hold upon the promise, "In me peace?" "Peace I leave with you, my peace give I unto you."

The example of Christ teaches us that from every court of earthly trial there is always an appeal to God. "There is no temptation so severe, no burden so heavy, no loneliness so oppressive, that we may not find relief in prayer." This sentiment, uttered by another, we believe entirely. Prayer is the confession of implicit trust, the acknowledgment of our need, and the expression of our faith in the ability and willingness of God to grant that which we ask of him.

"Cold mountains and the midnight air Witnessed the fervor of his prayer."

alone, at many times; but there came a time when his soul cried out for the sustaining help of human companionship, and when coming to his disciples and finding them sleeping, the keen disappointment of his heart found utterance in the question: "What; could ye not watch with me one hour?"

Let the beating hearts—the toil worn and weary ones, the tried and tempted ones—learn by lessons daily studied, and take every burden and lay it at the foot of the cross. Learn to give expression to their love for God by trusting him. Let the toil worn and weary ones find rest under the shelter of his wing; let the tried and tempted ones lay hold upon his strength; let us all strive to comprehend the fact that he is a God who is near and not afar off, and to enter deep within the silent counsels of our own soul and in the solitude which no human eye penetrates, where no human voice is ever heard, ask ourself this question: "Do I or do I not believe in God?" Let not this startle any one, for if we indeed believe in God, does it not follow as a necessity that we believe his promises? What one of us having an earthly father in whom we believed and whom we fully trusted, would think of going without food to sustain the body for days and months, when his storehouse was open to us and the invitation was printed upon every door of his dwelling: "Come and buy food without money or price. Here is abundance, let none go away empty."

CHILDREN have, at the start, no fixed and well defined tastes in the matter of the books they read. Their taste in this thing, as in other things, is a matter of cultivation. While it is unquestionably easier to train a child's taste in a wrong direction than in a right one, inasmuch as a downgrade is always easier traveled than an up-grade, yet a child's taste in reading can be as easily cultivated in the right direction as can his taste in eating, or in dressing, or in conversation. And both parents and teachers have a duty to train aright the reading tastes of the children of their charge. Referring to this subject as recently treated in these pages, a Massachusetts teacher gives some helpful hints out of her experience in this line, as follows:

My experience as a Sunday-school teacher who has worked with boys and girls outside as well as inside the Sunday-school, is, that I can educate and cultivate in my pupils the taste for reading by reading the books in the library myself, and then, in an off-hand, apparently careless, manner, recommend certain books, dwelling on the special points that I know will appeal to those I am addressing, and adding that I have read and enjoyed those books myself. I have worked for six months trying to get the boys in my class to read one book recently added to the library, and have at last succeeded. It is now in great demand, and I have told my boys to recommend it to those in other classes; so I hope it will soon become popular throughout the school. This book is the Life of Bishop Hannington,—interesting, instructive, and profitable reading. I believe it is in the power of Sunday School teachers to do much toward helping the library to become a power for good, a practical help in the school. I am often surprised at the ignorance of teachers as to the books on the shelves of the library. Many regard them as too trifling to occupy the time which is wanted for what is considered more valuable reading. From a selfish point of view is such a judgment made; for in a Sunday School teacher's work, it should be one important part to help make the library a practical, up-to-the-times, profitable library; and to make the pupils wise choosers and intelligent readers of helpful books. This will do much in the way of helping to keep the Fourth Commandment,—for, from ignorance of better reading, many waste their Sunday hours on profitless books and papers. And these very people would gladly take a good book from the Sunday School library if recommended to them by a teacher who shows by his manner that he is personally interested in the pupil, and that, as for the books, he knows what he is talking about. And this influence may be extended even to various members of this pupil's family. I know of one teacher who selects books for a pupil, and also for his father and aunt. A little personal intelligent interest shown in this direction will help wonderfully. And the fact that teacher and pupil have both read the same book makes another bond of union between them, and thus the teacher is rewarded by getting an extra hold upon the mind and heart of the pupil.—Editorial in Sunday School Times.

WE can not too earnestly solicit the attention of mothers and teachers to the above article; not alone with reference to the books contained in the Sunday School library, but with reference to every book placed in the hands of children or suffered to come within their reach. "Thou shalt not kill," uttered amid the thunders of Sinai, brands forever as an alien from the mercy of both God and man, him whose hands are stained with a brother's blood, and we regard with even greater horror him who feigning friendship holds out with seemingly hospitable hand the cup in which lies hid a deadly poison. But if we so regard the life of the body (and that too justly) what shall we say of the soul? Jesus said, "Fear not them who are able to kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul." It is not the openly wicked, from whom we shrink, and teach our children to regard with aversion, that we alone need to guard them. Not the evil which comes branded with the red letter of its crime, but the love which for this very purpose God has implanted in the mother heart, should be ever on the watch tower, seeking to guard from the baleful, silent influences, which are everywhere at work to corrupt and destroy, among which none are more active, none in closer league with the powers of darkness, than the silent but deadly poison distilled through books and papers. Sin is what we are to fear; sin which will when its work is completed, destroy both soul and body in hell. And does it not become us as mothers in Zion to guard well our children from the companionship of not only the reading of that which carries upon the very face of it the impress of evil, but from that also which like the bitter pill has a coating of sugar over the surface? If there come into our dwelling, to visit our child, one whom the rules of kindness and courtesy forbid us to exclude, and yet whose influence we have good reason to know is not beautiful or good, would we not deem it our duty to give attention to the acts and conversation of such an one in order that we might shield our loved ones from any possible evil influence which might be brought to bear upon them? Can we then without examination suffer our children from day to day to take into silent companionship books which we have not examined, and of the nature of the contents of which we are entirely ignorant?—Ed.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Louisa Perkins, Galena, Indiana, writes: "I thought I would like to bear my testimony to the truth of this work, as it might be an encouragement to some one striving for the mastery of that which is evil and the reward which shall be given to him who overcometh. I belong to the Mt. Eden branch, and was baptized by Bro. James G. Scott. The next year after I was baptized Bro. Harbert Scott left the church. He claimed that we were laboring under a grand delusion, and when asked what the delusion was he said, The Book of Mormon. I had heard much evil, both written and spoken, against the book, but had never read it for myself; reasoning that even if it was a delusion, the church with which I had united was right or my Bible was not true. One Sabbath after meeting was over I went to Bro. Harbert's house and borrowed the Book of Mormon, determined to read it for myself. This I did and could see nothing in it to cause him or any one else to leave the church, but on the contrary was convinced that could I live according to the instructions contained in it there would be no danger of my not being a fit subject for the kingdom of heaven. The cover was torn loose from the book, and after reading it I tied it together and laid it in a drawer, intending to return it soon. Having had some dreams which troubled me, I one night, after my family had all retired, made it a subject of earnest prayer to God that he would give me to know the meaning of these dreams and whether they were from him. After retiring I dreamed again and in my dream I saw the Book of Mormon, which I had laid away in the drawer, placed on a table by my bed-side. It was taken out of the cover and laid on the table, and I saw a hand laid upon it, and heard a voice say, "This is my gospel;" and from the other side of the table, just across the room I heard another voice say,—"And I, John, saw another angel fly through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to all them that dwell upon the earth." I thought to myself, I will find this in the book of Revelations. In the morning when I awoke I got the Bible and was looking for the passage, when I heard the words, "This is not the book." I closed the Bible and laid it away, and I here testify that I know this work in which we are engaged is the work of the Lord and no delusion. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints, and promise to pray for you all."

Sr. H. E. Birchell, Cleveland, Iowa, writes: "To night finds me, as ever, desiring to contribute my mite to this great, grand and majestic work. We have been discussing the question concerning the "Prayer League," and do not all see alike. Some think it means for the sisters to come together at a certain hour on a certain day of each week and devote this hour to reading of the church works and prayer; while others think the intent is to do this, all remaining at their own homes, or for two, three or more living near to each other, to meet and attend to these devotional exercises. I am heartily in favor of the League, and think that much good would result to us through it, if faithfully carried out; and my object in writing to you is to ascertain just how it is to be conducted?"

In reply we will say that as nearly as we ourselves apprehend Sr. Eleanor's idea, it is, that each individual, letting not the left hand know what the right hand doeth, shall, at a certain time each day or each week, this time to be selected by each one as best suited to her individual convenience, enter into her closet and pray to our Father who seeth in secret. The first and primary object being to cultivate a spirit of devotion, and by unity of faith obtain greater spiritual blessings. All which is obligatory upon the part of the individual sending in her name being that she will during some hour of the day or week devote a certain portion of time to prayer for specified objects, and to reading some portion from one of the three standard books of the church.

Should the League meet with the general approval of the sisterhood, the time might come in which it would seem desirable for annual reunions of those living in the same branch of the church or even quarterly ones, but nothing of the kind is contemplated at the present time. If names sufficient to justify the forming of the League are sent in, Sr. Eleanor will write again.—Editor.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, May 25th.

Editors Herald:—At Macedonia, Iowa, there are those who are friendly to the faith, and improve favorable opportunities to learn of it. On my way home from the General Conference I preached twice in the Presbyterian Church of that place, with intelligent listeners present. Some commented favorably on the positions taken. Macedonians are a little in advance in their love of fairness, toleration and belief in the right of individuals to think and conclude for themselves upon religious matters. Bro. James M. Kelley sustains the faith there in the way that a business man can, and will welcome and encourage the efforts of any who may be laboring to support the cause in that place.

On the 5th instant I visited New Philadelphia, Ohio. There is need of much labor being done there. Two were baptized, one couple married while I was there, and others are expectant, ready and waiting. The missionaries should hurry along.

The 19th I met Bro. E. C. Cady of Pittsburg

at Warren, Ohio, and we held four services in the "Temple," near there, with large audiences and good attention. Bro. E. L. Kelley follows up the work there this week. That is an inviting field for some one to occupy in the next twelve months, and among intelligent communities. Their American spirit of toleration will have to be proved. It is only a little way from Hiram where Joseph and Sydney were tarred and feathered, once upon a time. A different spirit prevails now, seemingly.

One was baptized here, day before yesterday. We leave Ohio a little reluctantly, as that stiff opposition and resentment manifest some time since in some localities is melting away, and we see where a year's labor might effectively be bestowed. All things equal we prefer a pacific sea. The east just now presents a somewhat bellicose appearance, where we hope to go soon, providing we can summon up courage to make the adventure. It is sometimes comforting to know that "all things work together for good to them that love the Lord;" and that undesirable "chastisements" yield their crop of good thereafter; we will hope on.

Our neighbor across the way, Mr. Geo. Frank, whom the Conference folks will remember pleasantly, has been very sick for a few days, is better.

Very truly,

WM. H. KELLEY.

Dear Herald:—We are trying to live near our maker. Bro. A. H. Parsons has been here. He baptized one more into the fold. May we grow in wisdom and learn to do our duty. We have sacrament meeting the first Sunday in every month. We would like to have some of the elders come this way. We shall miss brother Parsons now he has gone. The day is soon coming when the Lord will come to claim His own.

Your sister in the truth,

CARBON, Wy. Ter., April 9th.

Bro. Joseph:—I received a letter from a brother, and it was signed "A Hunter." This signature brought very peculiar thoughts to my mind; some of which I will try and put on paper. A Hunter? Yes. I wonder if he fills the bill! It is one thing to say, and another to be. Take the true hunter and you find a tough, wiry bodied man with a determined spirit, a body that can undergo great fatigue, a spirit that laughs at disappointment yet never swerves from its purpose; a body that can go for days without food and then will make a good meal on roots, berries, or roasted rawhide; a spirit that never grumbles or complains at the lot the Master of providence gives it. Give him the privilege of selecting from the mineral kingdom a flint and a handful of pebbles, and from the vegetable the bark of the nettle, and he will manage to live fat where the common civilized man would starve. Such is the true hunter. He will divide his provisions, his ammunition, his clothing, his bed, or his camp with any of suffering humanity, black, white, or red; it makes no difference to him what color the skin is if it be a human being and in a suffering condition. If he finds any in trouble, he will lend a helping hand, at the risk of his own life if necessary, (and many of the most noble hunters have lost their lives in so doing) and never stops to ask about the reward he is to receive. You always find him pleasant and happy, satisfied with himself and surrounding nature; a true friend and a terrible foe, yet when his foes sue for quarters all enmity ceases and he will do anything in his power to assist those who once were his enemies. He does not prevaricate, or use any subterfuge with his friends, or those who trust in him; his communications are open and free, yet made in a pleasant manner. He is not a wasteful butcher; (as are some, falsely called hunters), but takes from surrounding nature only that which is necessary to sustain the lives of himself and those depending on him. He is not vain nor envious, but simply a man in every sense of the word, and takes all of the same shape to be like himself; until by their bad actions they prove themselves of an inferior grade of beings, and then he shows no contempt; for he finds the shape as God has made it and the spirit as the devil has remodeled it, and feels sorrow that such a noble shape should be used for such vile purposes. If he sees a fellow being running into trouble he will give him a friendly warning; and if he persists in his course, and the trouble comes on him, and he is about to be overcome, he will step in and help him out of difficulty; and when an apology is made he will answer, "Such is human nature; we learn wisdom of the things we suffer." Two-thirds of my life have been spent among such men as these; and while I have been witness of actions such as named above, I have thought, "Well, Saints may profess, but it takes the sturdy hunter to do;" and often the following prophecy comes into my mind like a flame of fire.

"Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt. But the Lord liveth that brought up the Children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their Fathers."

"Behold I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks."

Some may think this prophecy has no reference to our wild, (not dissipated), rugged hunter of the present day; but that it has a spiritual sense, and has direct reference to the priesthood we find in civilization. So thought the Jews in the days of our Savior. Those ignorant fishermen chosen by the Master were unworthy of their notice. This same passage of Scripture was spiritualized by them, but that did not change the purposes of God, nor will the same act change his purposes in this day; for in the condition of Israel on this land it will take the body of iron, forced by a spirit that never even imagines a failure; that thinks not of the leeks and onions of Egypt, nor the "yellow legged" chickens of modern christendom. Yes, those whose faces are set as a flint to fulfill the commands of God, to "gather them from the mountains, and from every hill, and from the holes in the rocks."

The fishers' need was a staff; for they were sent to those in a manner civilized from whom they could get the other necessities of life. The hunter's need will be a good rifle, that he may take from the wilderness his meat; not only for himself, but for those also to whom he is sent.

They will be men, that of necessity, will be thankful for the privilege of dining on jack rabbit or prairie dog when the deer and other large game are scarce; and for a luxury they can drink wild sage tea, with dessert of grasshoppers and crickets. Men that will "seek first the kingdom of God and to establish his righteousness," after which they may have time to look for something better to eat. For God never has said that Israel shall assist those sent to them; but in every instance those that are counted worthy to be sent to or numbered with Israel are to be their assistants. You of civilization may think the above picture overdrawn, but those of the wilderness know of its truthfulness.

J. S. LEE.

BENNETT, Neb., May 27th.

Dear Herald:—I have something to tell of encouragement concerning the work in our locality. Elder Charles Porter, of Wilber, has been preaching for us for several weeks. When he first came there were over seventy persons turned out to hear him, and as this is a small place, I considered the audience large. Great interest was manifest from the first. I am told there has never been any preaching of our Elders here but once, and that over twelve years ago. I don't see how this place could have been so overlooked. Bro. Porter has worked with great energy, and during his series of meetings eleven persons have united with the church, five of which were heads of families, myself being one of them. We appreciate Bro. Porter's efforts in our behalf. We await the voice of the conference to organize a branch here in Bennett. Your brother,

SARDIAN CARTER.

LYNNVILLE, Ind., May 29th.

W. W. Blair:—I came to this place February 29th, and began to talk to the people, and they became interested. I secured the United Brethren church for Mr. Scott and James M. Scott. They had a good hearing and the result was five baptized and another gave in his name but did not appear. Many others are near the kingdom and we think a branch will be organized. The adversary is also working against us. My desire is to do all I can for the work, but I feel that I am one of the least among God's children, but my heart yearns for the progress of this work, and I rejoice that the Lord led me to the light. I ask the prayers of all that I may abide faithful and do good. In the one faith,

THOMAS WHEELER.

JEFFERSON, Maine, May.

Dear Herald:—I desire to bear my testimony to this work, for I know that it is true. I rejoice in this gospel; it makes my heart glad to read in the Herald the letters from different parts of the spread of the gospel. My prayer is that this work will roll on till it fills the whole earth. Thank the good Lord for its precious truths. Ever praying for the building up of the kingdom of God, ELIZA D. GEYER.

BUCKLIN, Mo., May 28th.

Bro. Joseph:—It is my duty to make confession that for over three years I did not live a Christian life, for which I beg pardon of my brethren. I take this way to fulfill the law as there might be some offended that I may not see again on this side of the resurrection. I forgive all. I have set my house in order and ask the brethren to pray for me that I may hold out faithful, and be worthy a glorious resurrection. I have received many testimonies and am ashamed that I have treated the things of God lightly.

Yours in gospel bonds,

E. F. WRIGHT.

ST. JOHN CITY, Utah, May 22d.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—We have been here two weeks, and have devoted the time between St. John, Stockton and Grantsville. It has been a time of constant work, of preaching and explaining, by both myself and Sr. Davis—nothing like it to be with them in their families. We attended meeting here on the 14th; and of course our presence called forth remarks concerning “young Joseph” and his claims, from an Elder Wilson. He had expressed to some a desire to debate the differences, &c. I informed him at the close of the meeting that I was on hand for the defense. At the same time I asked the Bishop for the use of the meeting-house for that night; but he could not consent until he would consult his counselors; and when he did, they could not consent without consulting the president of the stake, who lives at Tooele, about sixteen miles off. Two liberal minded young men offered me the use of the dancing hall over their store; and so I occupied that night, and spoke to a good houseful of earnest people; from Jude 3d verse, “Of the faith once delivered to the Saints &c.” At the close I gave liberty for all to question me, and took my seat. The questions came fast and thick for an hour or two; among the questioners was Elder Wilson. I supposed he sized me up and thought he better not engage in discussion. I preached again in the same place on the 17th to a fair house. On the 19th inst., I visited Grantsville, and through the kindness of C. Anderson occupied their pulpit for an hour on Sunday night, 20th inst. I spoke with good liberty the allotted time upon the present situation of affairs, connected with the mission work of Joseph the Martyr. After me Elder Jeffreys addressed the people on the claims of the Utah church against that of young Joseph. The people were very anxious to hear me reply, but I could not get the use of the house. Elder Jeffreys claimed he could preach “Josephism” as well as I could, and I claimed I could explain Brighamism as well as he could. I was anxious to go ahead; but no; policy interfered. In justice to Elder Anderson, I must say, that I believe him a man for the right, as far as he can.

Grantsville seems to have been a good cradle for the plural system of things, and I heard a great deal of those mountain sweets there. I met some elders of forty-eight years standing, and they told me of Bro. David's preaching here; and how they talked to him about his father and his wife, etc.—they still hold to it. I reminded them that that, together with their state constitution put their sincerity in rather a peculiar condition. In contradistinction I find the young and middle aged (the majority) hold a different view of these matters and are anxious to hear our claims, confessing the mistakes of the past.

May 24th—Since I wrote the foregoing I received the enclosed note for a public discussion on the successor to Joseph the Martyr, with Mr. Thomas Lee, a brother to our Joseph Lee.

They have been at a loss to whom to trust their cause, and have finally settled on this brother; because he is the smartest, I suppose. The more their man knows the better I like it. I am willing to take any man they have in the territory, for I know I have God and his truth on our side—nothing to lose, but all to gain. I was on hand promptly yesterday, to commence last night, but he was not ready. So I preached to a rousing house last night, in the “Dancing Hall.”

They talk of opening their meeting-house for to-night, and that several prominent men from a distance will be present—more the better. The topics of my discourse last night were from the Revelation of 1841, sec. 107, D. C.—“Rejection,” “moving out of their place,” “Land of Zion,” etc. My argument had a telling effect on old-time Saints, who were once, like myself, in the bosom of the true church. Our labor will not be in vain. To-night the discussion comes off; then my worthy opponent has to leave for ten days; but he promises to come again and discuss all the points of difference, one by one in rotation,—hope he will.

I have managed to arouse them here from center to circumference. I have not one of our faith here for a moderator, unless I put Sr. Davis up; she does good private preaching; but I have good friends here that I can trust.

Pray for us.

J. T. DAVIS.

ST. JOHN, Utah, May 22d.

Mr. Geo. T. Davis:—I have been requested to ask you to set a time now between now and Thursday evening, for a public discussion with Mr. Thomas Lee. You will please send us word by Howell, and we will convey it to Mr. Lee. Mr. Lee will leave us on Friday, and as we are anxious to hear an investigation of “Authority,” we take this privilege of request.

Yours in search for truth,

J. D. MCINTOSH.

SPRY, Ont., May 25th.

Dear Herald:—I write a few lines to inform all whom it may concern that I am at work in a new field in this (Canada), Mission. And if a forlorn looking country is any index to a forlorn people, then I consider that the gospel is the greatest boon that could be sent to this people. But aside from the looks of the country, it is of great value.

I left home May 14th, went to Grey county, where I met a Mr. S. Prosser, of Campbellite fame, a preacher of what is called the “Christian Church of Ontario!” in a two nights' debate, and after he had blowed off all the superfluous gas, he got down to the true genius of his work, and it can be summed up in few sentences as follows:

“The Book of Mormon leads a man into error and darkness,” etc. “Did you ever read it, Mr. Prosser?” “No.”

“Briggy was a better man every way than Joey.” Referring to Brigham Young and Joseph Smith.) “Joey run a bank, broke down and swindled all the shareholders, pocketed all the money. Joey never missed a chance to make plenty of money; he was a smart rascal,” etc., etc. This was about the style of hash from beginning to end, with a few scraps garbled from Doctrine and Covenants, filled in with winks, nods, and sarcastic spleen. The best he had.

But as I did not believe Briggy to be a better man than Joey; having the standard writings of both men, I quoted from the Doctrine and Covenants, and Book of Mormon and Bible to support what is the doctrine of the church. And then I quoted from Volume one of Journal of Discourses authorized by Briggy, to show that said Briggy denied the Lord who bought him and put Adam instead, as “the only God with whom we have to do.” And further, to show that Briggy denied that Jesus Christ was begotten of the Holy Ghost, and that on the 29th of August, 1852, Orson Pratt preached the first sermon on polygamy, in Salt Lake City, and confessed that on that date it was “new ground for him,” new to the inhabitants of the United States, and that it was unexpected for him to be called upon to present the doctrine. On the other hand I showed from Doctrine and Covenants that Joseph's doctrine was, “Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and cleave to her and none else.” And again Briggy boasted of the valleys of the mountains being the “chambers of the Lord.” And Jesus warned us (Matt. 24) “When they shall say he is in the secret chambers believe it not,” etc.

In fact we had nothing but the old, old story. This man, although professing to be a Christian, or disciple, or Campbellite preacher and professing very loud-mouthed and low heavenly breathing, for the Bible and baptism especially, yet he refused to answer whether a man could be saved without baptism until pressed hard, when he declared they could be saved without it. But when pressed to answer the question as to whether he was ever called of God to preach or administer in any of his ordinances, utterly refused to answer and got badly laughed at. Several other questions on organization gifts of the Holy Spirit; church name; resulted similarly. So comparatively we found ourselves working in a blacksmith shop, and all I had to do was pump the bellows, and the bellows puffed the wind, yet withal as he felt bad over it, and I had proposed to have Bro. R. C. Evans meet him instead of me, (for the reason of saving time in the field and other causes) he concluded by stumping me to have that other fellow (R. C. Evans) meet him some time in the summer, between the latter part of June and September, so if R. C. thinks it worth while it will make a new opening. His address is Elder Solomon Prosser, Drayton, Ontario. His chief witness is a book written by one Kennedy, and published by Scribners, of New York. He also bought a new Doctrine and Covenants “to meet us on our own ground.” That is good.

I am feeling well in the work and after the debate, came here to make an opening in new ground; but here the pious clergy have been forewarned of my coming, and have gone from house to house like the Pharisees of old, and stirred up the honorable and devout women, and men too, trying to make their minds evil affected against us. But I think it will turn out to the furtherance of the gospel. There are some ready for baptism, and they are of the best of his congregation. The Methodist Reverend is called Mr. Andy Parker formerly of Proton, who once investigated the faith at or about the time Bro. John McKenzie came into the church, and said Parker was for being baptized himself previous to Bro. McKenzie, but backed out, and McKenzie came in and he has vilely slandered Bro. McKenzie. So he is fighting against light, and it is this that makes me say his efforts here will help the gospel as we preach it. Right in the midst of the debate a gentleman named Alexander Hamilton came and handed me a marriage certificate leading sister Maggie Morrison to the hymenal altar, whom we joined in holy bonds on the evening of May 17th at the house of Bro. and Sr. Calvert, all of Egremont, Grey county, Ontario. They are both worthy young people; he is not yet a member. The lady is a daughter of Elder Walter Morrison. Long may they live to enjoy each other in love and walk in virtue—the road to honor.

With prayers for the prosperity of the good cause, and all engaged in the office, I remain your brother and co-worker,

J. A. McINTOSH.

COOKE'S POINT, Texas, May 25th.

Dear Herald:—My wife and I arrived home from the east on the 19th inst; found our children well. I never enjoyed myself better in preaching the word than I did on my visit to the Virginias. I preached in West Virginia, at the United Brethren church, three and a half miles west of Weston, Lewis county; then at the M. E. church in the same neighborhood; thence three and a half miles west of the above named places, at Camden; then at Laurel Point school-house, two miles north of Weston, on the Clarksburg Pike; thence in the southern part of the county, at Ben's Run School-house and Piney Run; thence at the Methodist church, on Rocky Fork; thence to Harrison county, at Craigmere, in the M. E. church; thence to Clarksburg; where we visited the Saints, and preached to good, attentive congregations. All the above named places are open for us and a good interest manifested; except on Rocky Fork.

I am greatly encouraged over my trip to the Virginia states. Whoever follows up the work there will gather many sheaves. The opposers of truth will come to naught and God's work will prosper to his honor and glory.

My soul rejoiced when I read the business of the conference and found that I had three others to help me in this large field. May God bless us all this year with a good harvest of souls, is my prayer.

I will leave here by the first of June; and will unfurl the flag near Milano Junction, Milam county. The local brethren are coming to the front with the spirit of truth to guide them. Go on, brethren, the victory is ours, if faithful to our charge.

Yours in bonds,

I. N. ROBERTS.

PERE CHENEY, Mich., May 23d.

Editor Herald:—Elder Edward DeLong of Vassar, Mich., has been among us for the past week and we have listened to some excellent teachings. All unprejudiced and honest hearts who listened are convinced of the truth of the gospel plan of salvation he teaches. There is but a small body of Saints here, but it is expected more will be added, as a result of his teachings when Mr. DeLong returns in June. Thus does the true gospel of Christ prosper.

An interested listener, but not a Saint at present. Yours hopefully,

F. D. HASTINGS.

CATHOLICISM.—No. I.

BY ELDER M. T. SHORT.

It is a well authenticated fact that the Roman Catholic Church arose in ancient times. She has beheld the birth and death of numerous dynasties. Empires have risen, flourished and faded under her gaze. Through her energetic vigilance and restless prowess a new world was brought within the radius of civilization. That happy find became the timely outlet of populous Europe. The mountains and plains were thronged with savage tribes, ravenous beasts, voracious birds and poisonous reptiles. These antagonistic elements have largely given way before the sagacity of the Caucasian race. The jurisdiction of the Vatican is conceded within the broad equatorial belt; and the two temperate zones of fair Columbia have millions of votaries to the see of Rome.

Perhaps ten billions of souls have passed into eternity within the pales of the mother church. If, however, age and numbers are a guarantee against error and blind devotion, Gautama, the Hindoo sage and original teacher of Buddhism, will stand at the head of a flaming constellation. That system is twenty-five hundred years old, and includes about half of the world's worshipers. Lest any should be carried away with the antiquity of an institution, or the veneration of long standing shrines, let me remind such that Noah was on a solid basis. Jesus was forsaken, and it is still the Fathers good pleasure to give the small flock the kingdom. Papal historians claim that Christ is the sole originator of their church, that the great Apostle Peter filled the first pontifical chair, that two hundred and fifty-four duly elected successors have filled by turns, that heaven appointed station, up to the beginning of this century, and that the eternal God will perpetuate the holy apostolic Catholic Church throughout all time. The figure head, or visible head, is variously styled pope, father, his holiness, most holiness, chief pastor, universal bishop, vicegerent, corrector of heretics, &c., &c.

On the decease of the incumbent the "sacred college," composed of seventy cardinals, repairs to Rome, and elects one of their number as reigning pontiff. This work is performed ten days after the vacancy, and the news of the new choice is borne by swift couriers all over Christendom. The pope sets a day for his coronation, which is accomplished attended with great solemnity. He then may be called "the most holy father," although childless is his supposed lot. The celibacy of the priesthood is enjoined from the triple crowned "father" to the sub-deacon, the cloistered monk and the bare footed friar. Nuns and "sisters of charity" are required to remain in a single state, while permitted to live. The faith and worship have been variously retrenched, reconstructed and enlarged by Papal bulls, ecumenical councils and plenary convocations. The famous council of Trent convened in 1545, held twenty-five sessions, and thus continued eighteen years. The leading objects of that council were, evidently, to retard the progress of the protestant reformation, to reclaim wayward schismatics, to correct, fix, illustrate and vindicate the doctrines of the holy see, to tighten the bands of discipline, and reform the lives of the ministry. Pius IV supplemented the sittings with a summary of laws. His highness ipsi dixit forms a creed, regarded authentic, and binding all through the realms of popery. They have seven sacraments, as follows: 1st Baptism, 2d Confirmation, 3d Lord's supper, 4th Penance, 5th Extreme Unction, 6th Ordination, 7th Matrimony. I have on my secretary "A catechism of Christian doctrine," prepared by Bishop J. L. Spaulding, of Peoria, Illinois.

"The catechism ordered by the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore having been diligently compiled and examined, is hereby approved."

"James Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, Apostolic delegate. Baltimore, April 6th, 1885.

The above named work teaches that baptism is to cleanse from original sin, and actual transgression when guilty, i. e., adult, alien conversions.

The learned prelate and his concurring brethren hold it necessary to salvation, and should be ordinarily administered by a priest; but in cases of necessity any rational person, of either sex, can attend to the rite by pouring water on the head, saying: "I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

The name of some patron Saint is given for a model and protector, while god-parents stand sponsors. Then there is "the baptism of desire," and "of blood," which will avail when the first named is impossible to receive. The former is a desire to unite with the church, and the latter is a willingness to shed one's blood in her maintainance. The bishop confirms those who are "in the state of grace" and "know the chief mysteries of faith" by "extending his hands over," and praying for the reception of the Holy Ghost. At the same time he "anoints the forehead of each with holy chrism in the form of a cross," saying, "I sign thee with the sign of the cross, and confirm thee with the chrism of salvation, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." "Holy chrism is a mixture of olive oil and balm, consecrated by the bishop." The confirmed are expected to openly profess, ever practice, never deny, and, if need be, die for their faith. As a token of trial, patience and suffering, the confirmator strikes the subject a "slight blow on the cheek." The priest hears penitential confessions of baptized persons, forgives and absolves from sins and restores the soul to the friendship of God, "all in His name." His authority for so doing is, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them, whose sins you retain, they are retained."

Contrition is defined, substantially, as sorrow, hatred and grief for wrong doing, brought around by the grace and love of God, and to escape the eternal pains of hell. The meritorious sorrow is to be "interior, supernatural, universal and sovereign," which are all defined in detail.

"Imperfect contrition is sufficient for a worthy confession, but we should endeavor to have 'perfect contrition.'"

I suppose that philosophy is equivalent to "A half a loaf is better than no bread at all;" but the deficiency of heart must be made adequate with a humble, sincere, entire confession.

"The sacrament of penance remits the eternal punishment due sin;" but the priest gives a penance for time, and to satisfy God, by the enjoining of "Prayer, Fasting, Almsgiving, all spiritual and corporal works of mercy, and the patient suffering of the ills of life." "On entering the confessional we should kneel, make the sign of the cross, and say to the priest 'Bless me, father,' then add, 'I confess unto Almighty God and to you father, that I have sinned.'" Then the poor fellow is to tell of his last visit, whether he has said or done penance, how often and when last to communion; and own up to all his mortal or deadly sins, accuse himself afresh of all past demeanors, or heinous crimes, listen attentively, and take the advice of the confessor. "Partial indulgence" imposes some bodily inconvenience, but "Plenary indulgence" sets one upright, through the "merits of Jesus Christ, and the superabundant satisfactions of the Blessed Virgin Mary and of the Saints," which merits and satisfaction are denominated the "Spiritual treasury of the church."

"The holy eucharist is the sacrament which contains the body and blood, soul and divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, under the appearance of bread and wine." This mystical invention, of the actual presence of the veritable body and blood of Christ, at each and every communion, in every age, and in all parts of the world, and while numerous and remote congregations are partaking simultaneously, is the climax of absurdity a gigantic fraud, a monkish disclosure, a blinded devotion and a travesty on common sense. The defenders of "Transubstantiation" own up that the bread and wine, although changed and metamorphosed by the father, remains the same in figure, shape, color, taste and appearances to the senses, hence the farce is a senseless imposition, and a lie in the name and in the interest of religion, themselves being witnesses. At all events reason, logic and the attestation of Jesus Christ and his word, unite and agree that it is solely and only a commemorative service till he comes, not in the bread and wine, but without sin unto salvation to drink anew and judge the world. "The mother" says her legitimate children must fast from midnight ere they surround the table of our Lord.

I attended high mass in Keokuk, Iowa, before daylight Christmas, 1875, and saw the priest drink the wine, and confer the wee wafer upon the fasting throng that had risen too early for a Protestant to relish breakfast. None of the concourse fainted ere the cheering sun kissed the spires of the moderately quiet city.

"The mass is the same sacrifice as that of the cross," and the "consecration" is the "unbloody body and blood of Christ." This whole arrangement was gotten up "1st, To honor and glorify God; 2d, To thank him for all graces bestowed on the whole world; 3d, To satisfy God's justice for the sins of men; 4th, To obtain all graces and blessings." Now after all this haze of priestly circumlocution it is plainly admitted "in the mass there's no real shedding of blood;" but simply a representation of death.

"O. what a tangled web they weave,
Who practice only to deceive."

Extreme unction is to strengthen the soul, and sometimes the body; to comfort in pain, and fortify against temptation; to remit sins and cleanse the soul. It is recommended in times of great danger from accident or disease, and is accompanied with prayer, and anointing of the priest. This performance is "to restore us to health, when God sees fit," otherwise to reconcile us to his will.

"Holy orders" are ordinations to the ministry, and the attendant power and grace to perform their sacred duties. Bishops can confer this sacrament; and all "Christians should look upon the priests of the church as the messengers of God and the dispensers of His mysteries." "Lawful marriage" can only be solemnized by a priest, to worthy members, when in a state of grace, and upholding the laws of the church, after penance and communion.

Sacraments are to "give grace," whereas sacramentals are to "obtain grace." A redoubtable "distinction without a difference." The former, papists avow, were instituted by Christ while the latter are the decrees of the church. The chief one is "the sign of the cross," and must be made according to the formula, to show we are Christians, manifest "our belief in the mysteries of our holy religion," and attend to it "in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Amen."

Again, "Holy water" is water blest by the priest, with solemn prayer to beg God's blessings on those who use it, and protection from the powers of darkness, and lo! it is a sacramental. Then comes along, in regular order, like the plagues of accursed Egypt, blessed candles, ashes, palms, crucifixes, images of the Blessed Virgin and of all Saints, rosaries and scapularies. I suppose those sanctified candles were moulded before the discovery of coal oil, or the manufacture of gas, or Franklin, or Morse snatched the lightning from the clouds, or even Edison illuminated the world with electricity. May be some venerable father has the original mould, and it is venerated as a "sacred relic." Prayer gives grace, or is a means of obtaining divine compassion. Times to pray: "Sundays and holidays, every morning and night, in all dangers, temptations and afflictions."

The prayers most recommended to us are the "Lord's Prayer, Hail Mary, the Apostles' Creed, the Confition, and the Acts of Faith, Hope, Love and contrition." The first named is abridged. The next is the angelic salutation with a petition for her to "pray for us sinners now, and at the hour of our death."

Then comes the Apostles' creed, as found in the old editions of the Episcopal prayer books; but recent additions changed the old and inspired view of Christ descending into hell, to suit the prudish tastes of proud votaries. Surely when their superannuated mamma staggers on a fragmentary truth the rebellious children ought not to abandon her highness, to their own detriment and shame.

The confition consists in a confession of "my most grievous fault" to God. Mary the blessed, Michael the Archangel, to John the Baptist, the holy apostles and all saints, their mediation and intercession are all earnestly solicited, howbeit the word of the Lord prohibits the adoration of inferior beings, provides for but one mediator, guards with a zealous solicitude the divine homage due solely to the Supreme ruler of the universe, and declares, "Though Noah, Daniel and Job were in the land they would deliver but their own souls by their righteousness. They shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, saith the Lord God." —Ezek. 14: 12-20.

In the ten commandments the first is divided so as to form two and the ninth and tenth are joined into one. The interpretation of the decalogue is from a condensed statement of the subject matter, and in harmony with the jaundiced eyes through which they were beheld. The comments are in a line with the "Holy see," but often diametrically opposed to the enunciations of the great Hebrew law giver. Praying to Saints, honoring of relics, making of images, respect to pictures, &c., are all slid graciously into the account right in the very face of the divine prohibition, as thundered forth from quaking, trembling, burning Sinai.

"The commandments of the church are six: 1. To hear mass on Sundays and holidays of obligation. 2. To fast and abstain on the days appointed. 3. To confess at least once a year. 4. To receive the holy eucharist during the easter time. 5. To contribute to the support of the pastor. 6. Not to marry persons who are not Catholics, or are related to us within the fourth degree of kindred, not privately, without witnesses (?) nor to solemnize marriage at forbidden times."

It is declared to be a deadly sin to refrain from the above precepts without serious and sufficient reasons.

This is all nullified, however, when an individual is allowed to date back to, recount over, and bring up from his or her "last worthy confession," and presto, receive "absolution" from the hand of the vicar, father or priest. "To recall to our minds the great mysteries of religion" is an anomaly, an absurdity and a positive contradiction in terms. To mind or remember, presupposes well defined knowledge; but a mystery, according to Noah Webster, is "A profound secret, wholly unknown; hence, specifically, that which is beyond human comprehension until explained."

"Holyday," not a few, instituted by ecclesiastical law, to be observed as Sunday, are to commemorate the aforesaid mysteries.

Fast days; only one full meal, and abstinence days no flesh meat, but three regular meals; with eggs, and fish, howbeit St. Paul observed: "There is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds." Remember it is not fish eggs they eat, on Good and bad Fridays, and during lent; and even the product of the poultry would soon be birds were any permitted to incubate. Sure and certain signs of the great apostasy, as enunciated by the Spirit, were the "Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth. For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving: For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer. If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and good doctrine, wherunto thou hast attained."

"Marriage is honorable in all and the bed is undefiled." The celibacy of the priesthood is further negated in the families of Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Jethro, Moses, Aaron and his sons, the yet future sons of Levi, Peter, the apostolic injunctions to bishops, and deacons, Philip, the great evangelist, the combined, and uniform testimony of the word of God, the impartiality of the author of our existence, and his co-ordinate command to multiply, and the natural and equal division of the two sexes.

As an irrefutable testimony and witness against "abstinence." "But meat commendeth us not to God; for neither, if we eat, are we the better; neither, if we eat not, are we the worse."

The papal hell is eternal banishment from God, in dreadful torment, at the death of the damned. They are raised, eventually, but, "condemned to eternal punishment," again, from which there is no appeal. That arrangement is taking a kind of double hitch upon the incorrigible wretch; but the denizens of purgatory are more fortunate. That intermediate abode is described as "The state in which those suffer for a time who die guilty of venial sins, or without having satisfied for the punishment due to their sins."

"The faithful on earth can help their souls, by prayers, fasts, alms-deeds, indulgences, and masses."

"The Particular Judgment" assigns to heaven, purgatory, or hell, at the close of earth life; but the "General Judgment" is at the last day; and fixes the fate unalterably. It is the resurrection time when body and soul, or spirit, are reunited. Tetzels sold indulgences, as seen above, for the living, and dead, in limbo, the hell that Christ went to, or purgatory if it had, up to that time, been discovered. His unhallowed commerce was carried on throughout the Germanic states, which induced Martin Luther, an Augustinian monk, of reputed piety, erudition, boldness, and courage, to oppose the nefarious traffic. Urban II, who ascended the pontifical throne 1088, first invented indulgences for the warriors of the Holy Land crusade. Those who would recruit a soldier were absolved, and, finally, any one giving money for any pious purpose was forgiven.

Pope Leo X., outstripped all his illustrious predecessors in that line of business, in order to erect the magnificent St. Peter's Cathedral at Rome, the "Christian capital of the world." To those who would aid with their means he would grant plenary, that is, full, complete, and entire remission of each and all sins. The various sins, such as abortion, simony, sacrilege, perjury, robbing, arson, fornication, incest, murder, concubinage, and even violence to a clergyman, &c., were appraised. For fear the Catholic world, or those in sympathy with her claims, may feel aggrieved at the aforementioned catalogue of crimes, and their relative assessments, we state that the disclosure is found in a book titled "The Tax of the Sacred Roman Chancery."

It would be uncharitable, dishonest, and heinous to scandalize any sect, but public teaching is not private property. We ask the Universal (?) church to down her own medicine; or acknowledge the fallacy, domination, usurpation, corruption, and apostasy of the entire concern. We further entreat you to turn your back to her altars, and shrines, abhor her arrogance, condemn her authority and flee from her communion. The dogma of Infallibility will crush any system that will squarely shoulder it, in mortality. If the scripture set out that plea, reason would revolt; and should either, or even both, so hold, experience, and observation would irrefragably reverse the unwarrantable conclusion. The oracle, our knowledge of self, and surroundings, and the honest views of an enlightened race center, repose, and leave infallibility in heaven alone, and in the very bosom of the Deity. The most gifted of the illustrious dead have shared in "like passion" with all mankind. While they have spoken with the "tongues of men, and of angels," they can but "known in part, and prophesy in part."

This unsavory stretch of priestly power forms the chain cable of the "Apostolic see," but every link is a puerile fabrication, as unstable and unreliable as if moulded by the changing sands of a restless sea. It may serve as an opiate to the stupid adherents of a depraved superstition, but it will cut no figure with an "intellectual faith."

To take infallibility away from the mother church would produce as sure and speedy death as to remove the heart of a man. It is her foundation, cement and capstone. It is her fence, fortress and shield. By and through this tenet she decides upon canonical books, from which she claims to obtain her authority, and which she only, can interpret properly. This overshadowing paralyzing incubus stands out like a huge moloch of a fallen world. This is the interlacing, interlocking, penetrating, farreaching telephone through which Papal bulls bellow, decrees are fulminated and decisions touching controversies are echoed forth to the universal brotherhood. Catholics do not agree where to lodge this assumed power. It will hardly do, they verily believe, to vest it in the sovereign pontiff; for the annunciation of one is made null and void by another adverse pontiff.

Some of the successors to St. Peter have led immoral lives, and thrown themselves open to damaging criticisms, from even a friendly standpoint. Some others have abandoned the chair in disgrace, or been rejected and excommunicated for heresy. It does not help the case to locate this forbidden fruit and illgotten gain, in a general council, or the world-wide membership. Admit that "his holiness" is fallible, and that a holy conclave is fallible, and then join them in one,—what then? When two ciphers will equal an integer, or a world can be created "from nothing," or a four year old animal can be produced in an instant, then this amalgamation will evolve bona fide infallibility. Ignatius Loyola, a Spanish fanatic, originated the order of Jesuits, and after a time the canonical sanction from the visible head was officially proclaimed. This infallible sanction and seal of the most holy father was counteracted and reversed by Ganganelli, whose popish name was Clement XIV, July 21st, 1773, according to Rev. Joseph Reeves' General History of the Christian Religion. That institution took the vows of poverty, chastity, obedience and missionary obligation. That order became popular, numerous and powerful, and received the support of the laity, the praise of the clergy and the apostolical benediction of him who sat "in the seat of God." The hand that nourished the thing stabbed it to the core. It must not be allowed that the representation of Peter, and the primitive apostles, who declared, "We must obey God rather than men" were cajoled by flattery, swerved with malcontents, or moved from princely pressure. Where does the "indefectibility of the church" come in with such examples of child's play recorded in their own standard works. The whole affair is trembling in every limb and joint under its own ponderous rottenness, and will eventually fall and consume away as completely as the famous historical cats. Again we say flee from the doomed, nor stop to take the apparel and substance that has "the mark of the beast" upon them, lest peradventure they would be like Saul's spoils, or Achan's gold wedge.

MILLENNIUM.—No. 5.

THE Apostle Peter in his 2d epistle, 2d chapter and 1st verse, traces this apostasy of the Jews to its proper ultimum, that is, "to deny the Lord that bought them." Let us inquire a little what a people must do in order to deny the Lord that bought them.—No people could deny the Lord that bought them, who continued to receive the messengers that he sent unto them; for if they received them they received him who sent them, this was the Savior's maxim. See Matt. 10th chapter and 40th verse. Whenever they rejected the messengers God sent unto them they rejected him; when they denied them they denied him. Hence came the Savior's complaint against the Jews, "Oh Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold your house is left unto you desolate."—Matt. 23:37, 38. Let the reader notice particularly that the Savior says, if they had not killed the prophets and stoned them that he had sent unto them, he would have gathered them as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings; but because they rejected them they could not be gathered, consequently "their house was left to them desolate." In the 34th and 35th verses the Savior says, "Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, wise men, and scribes; and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city: that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel to the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar." Who can read and not see that in rejecting the messengers whom God sends unto a people, they reject him, and bring upon themselves the wrath of heaven? for in so doing they refuse the teachings of heaven and reject his counsel and thereby deny the Lord that bought them, and bring upon their own heads swift destruction. See 2 Pet. 2:2.

This was the situation of the Jews when the Savior said unto them: "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Instead of being of one heart and of one mind, receiving and rejoicing in the messengers whom God sent unto them for their edification and benefit, they killed some, and stoned others, and refused—utterly refused, to have an inspired man among them. And instead of being united in one church they were broken up into parties and sects, or heresies, which is the same thing. There were Pharisees, Sadducees and Herodians, with a multitude of other parties and sects, or heresies.

Instead of prophets and prophetesses, they had lawyers, doctors and rabbis: and instead of the pure word of God, they had the traditions of the elders, and of the fathers, homilies, &c., &c. In consequence of these things the power of God had withdrawn from them, and they were left in darkness to grope their way to destruction; fulfilling the declarations of the Psalmist, that there was none doing good, no not one: for though they had much religion, and many, yea, very many societies, still there was not one of them organized according to the order of things established among their fathers by the inspiration of heaven: they had many teachers, but they were all of their own making: for a messenger that God sent, they would not have: them they would stone and kill.

If any rational being will only take the pains to compare the state of the Jews in the days of the Savior with their state and condition as organized by Moses through the inspiration of heaven, he can not but see the force of the Savior's declaration, that the kingdom of God should be taken from them and be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. Behold them with their prophets, their prophetesses, their judges, their counsellors, their seers, their revelators, with their one temple and their one altar: the harmony of their worship, the regular order of their priests, their lips keeping knowledge, and the people receiving the law at their mouth, and to crown the whole glory, the ministering of angels, and the power of God with them and round about them, with miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit. I say, let any man contemplate these natural fruits of the kingdom of heaven, and behold what the kingdom of heaven is when it is not corrupted and defiled, and then compare it with the state of the Jews in the days of the Savior with the Pharisees, their Sadducees, their Herodians, their lawyers, their doctors, their rabbis, their strifes, their contentions, their traditions and their heresies; the power of God having fled from them, his glory ceased to overshadow them and his angels to minister unto them. I say, let any rational being but for a moment view it, and he would exclaim with the Psalmist, "There are none of them doing good, no, not one."

Having taken a brief view of the kingdom of heaven among the Jews, both in its pure as well as in its corrupt state. let us look at it in the hands of the Gentiles, to whom it was given after it was taken from the Jews.

We have previously seen that it was to be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof, after it was taken from the Jews. The query is this, did the Gentiles, after they had received the kingdom, bring forth the fruits of that kingdom? and if so, what were the fruits which they brought forth? We have seen that the Jews, before they corrupted the kingdom, brought forth a fruit that was among no other people, even that of inspiration, revelation, miracles, &c., and when that kind of fruit was not found among them the kingdom was taken from them and they were condemned to destruction and this reason assigned, that they did not bring forth the fruit of that kingdom.

Let us follow the apostles and see the fruit that the Gentiles brought forth when the kingdom was transferred from among the Jews to them, and we shall see that they brought forth the same kind of fruit that the Jews did before the kingdom was corrupted in their hands, even a host of inspired men and women, prophets and prophetesses, healings, miracles and the gift of the Holy Ghost, not only in one church, but in all the churches. The Apostle Paul thanked God that the church of Corinth came behind in no gift. He said, "I thank my God always on your behalf for the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ; that in everything ye are enriched by him, in all utterance and in all knowledge; even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you: so that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."—1 Cor. 1:4-8. Now if the church at Corinth came behind in no gift they must have had all the spiritual gifts ever given to any people, or else they would have come behind in some gift. The same apostle says to the Ephesians, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ."—Eph. 1:3. Notice here that the apostle says that they were blessed with ALL spiritual blessings, if so, they also came behind in no gift. Peter says, "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus Christ our Lord according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness through the knowledge of him who hath called us to glory and virtue."—2 Pet. 1:2, 3. Mark that the apostle says here that ALL things were given unto them that pertain to life and godliness, and if ALL things that pertain to life and godliness were given unto them, they were behind in no gift; for spiritual gifts are among the "ALL things which pertain to life and godliness." But in 1 Cor. 10:11 these spiritual gifts are enumerated and described. The chapter is too lengthy for insertion here, but let the reader peruse it and he will there see what the apostle meant by the "ALL things which pertain to life and godliness;" the "ALL spiritual blessings" with which the Ephesians were blessed; and the gifts in which the Corinthians had come "behind in none."

If we can credit these testimonies of the apostles the case is a very clear one that the Gentiles, when they received the kingdom of heaven, brought forth the fruits thereof; and that the Jews, previous to the time that the kingdom was taken from them, had ceased to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom. We have seen that the Jews, when the kingdom was given unto them at the first, brought forth a fruit which in latter times they did not bring forth, and that the Gentiles, when they received the kingdom, brought forth the same fruit that the Jews did at the first, before they transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances and broke the everlasting covenant: that is, a host of inspired men—apostles, prophets and prophetesses, evangelists, pastors, teachers, healings, gifts, miracles, &c., &c. So it was with the Jews at the first. There were prophets, prophetesses, revelators, seers, healings, gifts, miracles, &c. Whosoever will look at this subject with candor must see and understand what the fruit of the kingdom of heaven is, for this is fruit which is peculiar to the kingdom of heaven, and to be found nowhere else but there. Who then will say that we hazard much in saying that where these fruits are not found, whether among Jews or Gentiles, that people are not found in favor with God? Let them have what else they may, if they lack these it is positive proof that they are in a state of apostasy; for if God (as the Savior says) took the kingdom of heaven from the Jews because they did not bring forth these fruits, and devoted them to destruction, can he save, redeem and acknowledge another people who are as destitute of these fruits as the Jews were when the kingdom was taken from them? I answer no; unless he is both partial and a respecter of persons.

We have seen from the most incontrovertible evidence what the fruits of the kingdom of heaven were, both among the Jews and the Gentiles, and what a people must bring forth in order to bring forth the fruits of that kingdom; and as well might a people try to be saved by another gospel as to palm anything else upon God as the fruits of his kingdom. In Rom. 11:19, 20 Paul gives the reason why the Jews did not bring forth these fruits. He was speaking to the Gentiles, to whom the kingdom had been given after it was taken from the Jews, and he said: "Thou wilt say then, the branches were broken off that I might be grafted in: Well because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded but fear." Notice that the apostle says that the Jews were cut off because of unbelief. The Savior said that the kingdom would be taken from them because they did not bring forth the fruits of it. Now put them both together and the matter stands thus: If the Jews had not fallen into unbelief but had continued in faith they would have continued to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom; and if they had continued to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom they would not have been cut off; but when they fell into unbelief and lost their faith they ceased to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom and were therefore cut off. This must put the subject forever at rest in every candid mind, and we plainly see that without faith the Jews could not bring forth the fruits of the kingdom of heaven, that if there were prophesying, healing and miracles among them, it was done by their faith and that whenever they lost their faith these things ceased among them and they were cut off and the kingdom of heaven taken from them.

There can no difficulty exist in any candid mind in relation to the true state of the Gentile world at present, having the Jews for their pattern. The Apostle Paul in Romans 11:19-21, after he had told the Gentiles upon what principles it was that the Jews both stood and fell, warned them to take care; for they, (the Gentiles), like the Jews, must stand by faith; and if they lost their faith as the Jews did their's, they like the Jews should be cut off also: "Thou wilt say then, the branches were broken off, that I might be grafted in. Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded but fear; for if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he spare not thee." So that the Gentiles must either stand by faith, or else they must fall; for so the Jews had to stand by faith, or else they must fall for want of faith. And the Gentiles, when they became fellow-heirs and fellow-citizens with the Jews, must stand as they stood, or fall as they fell, after the same example of faith, or of unbelief. "Thou standest by faith, be not high-minded but fear." The apostle knew that the Gentiles were in great danger of falling after the same example of unbelief, therefore he warns them to fear.

Let us enquire whether the Gentiles have continued in faith, or whether, like the Jews, they have fallen into unbelief? for if the Gentiles have continued in faith, then will the fruits of faith be found among them. We have previously seen what these fruits are; that they consist in prophesying, healings, miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, in all their various forms; in tongues and the interpretation of tongues; that when men were living under the influence of faith there were apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists, etc., etc., that all these were nothing more than the fruits of faith and were always enjoyed in every age of the world and among every people who lived by the faith of the Son of God, and were always enjoyed by every people whom God acknowledged to be His. And when any people, it mattered not how righteous they might have been, ceased to bring forth these fruits, they stood disapproved in the sight of heaven. On this subject there is no dispute in relation to the present Gentile world; all agree that the fruits of the kingdom of heaven are not found among them; that the fruits brought forth by their fathers, when the kingdom was given to them, have ceased to exist and are at this time not to be found among any people. I say on this subject there is no dispute; there is a universal agreement—all the difference is this, that this generation of Gentiles believe that both the Jews and Gentiles of this age can be saved without these fruits, as well as the others among whom they were found could be with. But as to the fact of the fruits having ceased, it is no where disputed; or at least among the sects.

That the Gentiles have fallen from their high standing before God and incurred His displeasure, can not be doubted by any man acquainted with the Scriptures. All the grand distinguished characteristics of the kingdom of heaven have disappeared among them; that faith which Paul said should abide with hope and charity is not known among them; all the powers of the spiritual kingdom have ceased to exist, and all their glory has faded; God is no more known among them, and they are wandering in darkness and in blindness; lashing against one another like a troubled sea; crying lo here is Christ; and lo He is there! But in truth there are none of them who know anything about Him. There are no apostles among them to administer in the name of the Lord Jesus, and no prophets to reveal unto them the things which await them. In short, everything which rendered the kingdom of heaven desirable has fled away. And they are in the same situation as the Jews were when it was said to them, "The kingdom shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Let an inspired man make his appearance among them, and with one consent the will cry, imposture! false prophet! knave! villain! and every other evil epithet that malice can invent. So did the Jews; and for this the Gentiles upbraided them in the bitterest terms, and yet they themselves now are doing the same things. If God cut off the Jews because they did not bring forth the fruits of the kingdom, surely the Gentiles must share the same fate if God is no respecter of persons.

This subject is so clearly set forth in the eleventh chapter of Romans that none need mistake it. The apostle says that the severity of God towards the Jews in cutting them off was goodness towards the Gentiles, if they (the Gentiles) continued in His goodness; if not, they, like the Jews, should be cut off. See the 22d verse:—"Behold, therefore, the goodness and severity of God; on them which fell, severity; but towards thee, goodness, if thou continue in His goodness; otherwise thou also shalt be cut off." Now let the reader particularly mark the apostle's expression, "otherwise thou shalt be cut off." That is, unless they "continued" in His goodness they should be cut off. There is no allowance made for them that they might apostatize and corrupt the kingdom of heaven, and then be reclaimed, and reformed, and and still retain that goodness of God previously bestowed on them in giving to them the kingdom of heaven, but if they continued not in his goodness they should be cut off. So the matter stands thus: That if the Gentiles continued in the situation in which God placed them, when they received the kingdom, they should partake of his goodness; but if they did not continue in that situation, they should be cut off. So says Paul, and who will say to the contrary? If we ask how were the Gentiles to continue in His goodness? the answer is at hand. By faith; for says the apostle in the twentieth verse of this same eleventh chapter to the Romans, (speaking to the Gentiles), "and thou standest by faith." Mark, reader, that the apostle had said in the preceding part of this twentieth verse, that the Jews had fallen because of unbelief; and then told the Gentiles that they were to stand by faith. For the sake of having the subject clearly understood even by the most careless, I will here quote both the nineteenth and twentieth verses at full length. The apostle is speaking to the Gentiles and says:—"Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, that I might be grafted in. Well, because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded but fear." Who can not see that the apostle shows plainly to the Gentiles that their standing before God depended on their faith; and that if their faith failed, they would lose their standing before Him, and like the Jews, be cut off? Another thing to be particularly noticed is, that they (the Gentiles) must continue in his goodness, and if so, must continue in faith; for unless they continued in faith, they could not continue in the goodness of God; for the goodness of God could alone be enjoyed by faith. So that the apostle has made the subject exceedingly plain, that all may understand, who have the least discernment.*

Let us follow the apostle a little further and see how he disposes of the whole matter. After he had warned the Gentiles to beware lest they should fall after the same example of unbelief by which the Jews had fallen, he continues his discourse, speaking to the Gentiles concerning the Jews. In the twenty-third verse he says: "And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in; for God is able to graft them in again. For if thou wert cut out of the olive-tree which is wild by nature, and wert grafted contrary to nature into a good olive-tree; how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive-tree! For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, (lest ye should be wise in your own conceits), that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written, "There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins."

In the above quotation the apostle carries the subject to its proper issue, and shows how God will eventually dispose of the whole concern. He says that blindness in part has happened unto Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; then all Israel shall be saved. When? why; when the fulness of the Gentiles shall be come in. Observe that the apostle had said in the twenty-third verse, that they, if they continued not in unbelief, should be grafted in again; for God was able to graft them in. When will the Jews be grafted in again? The answer is, at the time when they are all to be saved. And when is that time? When the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. But when will the fulness of the Gentiles be come in? The answer is again at hand. That is; when they all shall have ceased to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom of heaven, of all parties, sects and denominations, and not one of them standing in the situation in which God had placed them; so that like the Jews, there is none of them doing good, no not one; for though there be hundreds of sects and parties, yet all of them have gone out of the way, so that the fruits of the kingdom of heaven, or of God, have ceased to exist among them; then is the time that the world may prepare themselves to see the God of heaven "set His hand the second time to recover the remnant of His people that shall be left from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the Islands of the sea. And He shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the out-casts of Israel; and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth."—Isa. 11: 11, 12. But why, we ask, shall Israel be gathered from all the lands whither the Lord God had scattered them? Because all Israel shall be saved, says the apostle; and this can not be done unless they are gathered together; and not a small part of them, but all; for all Israel is to be saved. Let it here be observed that it was the judgments of God which scattered them, and while they continue in their present scattered condition the judgment of God rests on them; and whenever the mercy of God returns to them they will also return from their dispersion and be gathered from all countries whithersoever they have been scattered, or else all Israel will never be saved. But they will not only return, but the kingdom which their fathers lost by reason of transgression will be given to them; for before this time the Gentiles shall have rendered themselves unworthy of it, and it shall be taken from them, and they be devoted to destruction, while all Israel shall be gathered and saved in the kingdom of God, or of heaven, which is the same thing.

The question is this, Have the Gentiles continued in the goodness of God? for if they have, they have nothing to fear; for while their services are in righteousness before the Lord, the powers of darkness can not overthrow them, neither can the gates of hell prevail against them; but if, on the contrary, they have departed from the doctrine of Christ, and are following after fables, as certain as the testimony of the prophets is true, so certain they will suffer an overthrow and be cut off in the displeasure of the Lord; for so says the Spirit of inspiration; and who that believes in the Lord Jesus dare deny it? Peter says in his second epistle 2: 1, that if the false teachers among the Gentiles should introduce heresies or sects among them, as the false prophets did among the Jews, that it would bring on their heads swift destruction. Paul says that if the Gentiles did not continue in the goodness of God, they should also be cut off. And in another place he says that when Christ should be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, he should take vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Now, if the Gentiles have departed from the foundation of the apostles and prophets, they do not obey the gospel, and must be destroyed when the Lord shall be revealed in fire.

But to bring this subject to an immediate decision, where is the sect or party but confesses that the Gentiles have not continued in the goodness of God? I answer, there is none; no, not so much as one. All the Catholics declare that the Protestants have departed from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; while all the Protestants say that the Catholics have corrupted the kingdom of heaven at the very root, so that there are no fruits of righteousness among them. And each sect and party among the Protestants, charges the other sects with error, and a want of strict conformity to the truth. So that we have the testimony of both Catholics and Protestants, in all their various sects and parties, all testifying to the same thing, and that is, that the Gentiles have not continued in the goodness of God. And what settles the question forever is, that Jesus, and the apostles have concluded the whole in unrighteousness. And every man who has eyes to see, or ears to hear, must set to his seal and say amen; for who that has read his Bible through once, but must see that the religion of the whole Gentile world is very different from the religion of the New Testament, and the churches very different from the churches mentioned in the New Testament, so that all parties agree that there are no such churches now as mentioned in the Scriptures, and the conclusion is inevitable, that if the churches are not the same, they can not both be equally approved in the sight of heaven; and if the churches mentioned in the New Testament were in the goodness of God, those in modern times have not continued in that goodness; for if they had they would have continued to have been as those were.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.

The conference of the above district convened with the Palmyra Branch, April 22d, J. B. Gouldsmith, secretary. At 11 a. m., preaching by Bro. Armstrong. Officials present: Elders, Anthony, Waldsmith, Porter, Fields, Malcomb and Armstrong; priests, Robt. Self, Tucker, Buchanan and Goldsmith; teacher, John Young; and Deacons, Young, Carpenter, and Swank. Brethren Porter and Armstrong blessed one child. At 3 p. m. preaching by Bro. Anthony, from John 14; after which Bro. Malcom baptized Bro. Carter. Preaching at night by Bro. Porter. Monday morning at nine, met at the house of Bro. Tucker, for business, president Anthony in the chair. District officers reported. Report of Bishop's Agent: Freewill offerings due the church January 1st, $19.46; collected during quarter $7.60; paid out, $14.40; balance due $13.60. Tithing on hand January 1st, $41.68; collected during quarter 77.50; paid out during same time $117.45. Balance due the church $1.63. J. W. Waldsmith agent. The committee appointed to visit Moroni branch reported that they had been successful in accomplishing the work assigned them. Elders Anthony, Waldsmith, R. C. Elvin (by letter) Porter, Fields, Malcom, Thompson, and Armstrong reported; also priests Tucker, Buchanan, Gouldsmith and Self; and teacher John Young. Committee appointed at Wilber reported and were discharged. A motion was made to take the question of delegate representation up. The yeas and nays being called, the motion was lost. Resolved that a district fund be established and that it be under the supervision of the secretary. A bill of $3 was presented by the president and one of $2 by the secretary for railway fare to and from conference. Bro. Thomson was released from his mission. It was ordered that the president and the missionary shall see that the Moroni, Plattsmouth, and Platte River branches are visited and strengthened, during the quarter. The time and place of holding the next conference was left with the president, he to appoint it at the Platte River branch if agreeable to them. Two days' meetings were appointed in each branch; the president to appoint the time to be held and who to have charge. The delegates to General Conference reported expenses incurred $37.75. Brn. Anthony and Porter collected $6.50, which they were allowed to keep by the other two delegates. The Palmyra branch requested the conference to ordain Bro. Holly to the office of priest. The question was freely discussed and laid on the table for three months. The present officers were sustained for three months. The committee appointed to audit the Bishop's Agent's report, reported the same correct and were released.

Preaching at 11 a. m., by E. W. Nunley. At 3 p. m., by S. R. Hay. At 7:30 p. m., by E. W. Nunley. Adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

Miscellaneous.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Massachusetts district conference will be held in Fall River, Massachusetts, on the 16th, 17th, and possibly the 18th of June, next, at the Saints' regular place of meeting—not far from No. 387 Pleasant Street. It will convene on the 16th, at ten o'clock. The ministry is requested to attend, as many as can, and the Saints are cordially invited to be present. By order of the conference and advice of the district officials.

WM. H. KELLEY.

Presiding Elder of Eastern Mission.

The Central Kansas district conference will convene at Centralia branch, Nemaha county, June 23d and 24th. All the Saints and friends are invited to attend, especially the officers of the district. It is hoped that they will bring or send in a good report, as is expected from each one. If all is well Bro. Brand will be with us. Come all that can, and bring the spirit of love and peace with you, so that we may have a good time, and the blessings of God rest upon us, that good may be done in this part of God's vineyard.

DANIEL MUNN, Dist. Pres.

The quarterly conference of the Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin district will convene in Chicago, June 23d and 24th. All that wish to attend who have no special place or friends to stop with, will please send word to undersigned, at least ten days before date of conference, so that arrangements can be made to accommodate them. All elders will be provided for free of charge; all others at a cost of two dollars and fifty cents per week.

ERIC JOHNSON, 214 Sedgwick Street,
S. C. GOOD, 463 W. Indiana Street,
Chicago, Ills.

The members, especially officials, of the Northern Nebraska district, will please remember that by action of a previous session, the next conference will be held with the Union branch, Fremont, Nebraska, June 29th, 1888, at 7:30 p. m. A full attendance, and a peaceful and profitable time are hoped for. The necessity of selecting a suitable one to have charge of the district to be considered, with ordinary business.

In gospel bonds,

JAS. CAFFALL.

According to adjournment the next conference of the Decatur district will be held at Davis City, Iowa, convening at ten o'clock, June 23d, 1888. The branches should send reports, and the ministry and saints in general are expected to attend.

Also a two-day meeting will be held at Allendale, Worth county, Missouri, on June 16th and 17th, as requested by the branch there. The ministry and members of the Lamoni, Lone Rock and other branches are requested to attend the meeting. First service at 2:30 o'clock on Saturday.

H. A. STEBBINS, Dist. Pres.

Malad district conference will be held at Madal City, Idaho, June 16th and 17th, commencing at ten a. m. Branches in the district are requested to report. We expect the following Elders to attend: R. J. Anthony, R. M. Elvin, John T. Davies, P. Anderson and John Condit.

JOHN LEWIS, Pres. of Dist.

BORN.

FENDER.—At Chase, Kansas, May 3d, to Bro. S. W. and Sr. Katie E. Fender, a daughter.

JONES.—At Webster, Dodge county, Nebraska, October 4th, 1887, to Bro. and Sr. Daniel Jones, a son; named Franklin Daniel. Blessed May 27th, by Elder W. M. Rumel.

MARRIED.

PEARSON—LANE.—At the residence of the bride's parents, St. Louis, Missouri, May 16th, 1888, Mr. William T. Pearson and Sr. Mary E. Lane, Elder J. W. Gillen officiating. There was a large concourse of friends present to witness the ceremony, who testified of their good will for the happy pair by rich gifts, both for use and ornament. After partaking of a bountiful repast, the evening was enlivened with music and song.

WARD—WHITEHEAD.—At the Saints' Chapel, Egremont, Grey county, Ontario, May 23d, 1888, by Elder Walter Morrison, Bro. William W. Ward, of Montreal, and Sr. Lily Whitehead, of Guelph, Ontario. Immediately after the ceremony and partaking of refreshments, the happy couple took their departure for Montreal.

DIED.

ERNST.—At the home of Bro. Eli Clothier, near Crow, Phillips county, Kansas, January 2d, 1888, sister Catherine Ernst. Deceased was born June 22d, 1814, in Adams county, Pennsylvania; was baptized at Galland's Grove, Iowa, October 10th, 1869, by Elder Charles Derry.

EVANS.—At Lucas, Iowa, May 13th, 1888, after prolonged sickness, Sr. Sarah, beloved wife of Mr. John Evans and mother-in-law to Evan B. Morgan, in the sixtieth year of her age. She united with the first organization about thirty-six years ago at Rhymony, Wales. Baptized into the Reorganization by Bro. J. D. Jones in the year 1866, at New Tredegar, Wales. She taught her children the principles of the gospel, and amid persecutions and bitter trials and discouragements she was true to her testimony. For some time before her death she desired to be released from the body. Every time she was administered to she had temporary relief. After she was struck with death the writer said: "Mother, do you feel yourself sinking?" "Yes," she said, "I said, 'You are dying.'" She replied, "Yes." "Isn't it nice to die without pain, in peace?" "Yes," was her reply. We then bid her good-bye, and she said good-bye to each of us in reply. In a few minutes she called her son John to her, and placing her arm around his neck, drawing him close to her, for her voice had become very weak, she made her dying request: "That he would take his place in the church." He promised that he would. Thus passed away one of the daughters of earth that had borne her full share of the toils and cares of life. She made choice of a Welsh hymn to be sung at her funeral. "Ar fyr daw dydd yr Arglwydd." Services conducted by Bro. John Watkins; sermon by Bro. John R. Evans, at Saints' chapel.

THOMAS.—At Cheltenham, Missouri, John Thomas, son of William O. Thomas. Born at Llanelly, Wales, May 24th, 1842; departed this life April 25th, 1888.

ASHLEY.—At his residence, near Lower Lake, California, Bro. Joel Goss Ashley, in his 67th year. He united with the church May 19th, 1878, at Middleton, California, and died as he had lived, a firm believer in the latter day work. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss, but they mourn not as those who have no hope.

"Rest, dearest husband, for thy sufferings here are o'er, Rest, dearest father, till we meet on the other shore."

RASMUSSEN.—At Omaha, Nebraska, May 12th, 1888, Martin Rasmussen, aged 70 years and 2 days. Funeral services at the Saint's Chapel. Sermon by C. Bertelsen from Revelations 14: 13. Bro. Rasmussen was born at Fredricksborg, Sjaland, Denmark, May 10th, 1888. He embraced the gospel in his native land, and emigrated to Utah, where he was baptized into the Reorganized Church, December 6th, 1868. In his native land he was smitten with a disease that at times shook his whole system, and rendered him unable to maintain his family, consequently poverty, as well as sickness was his lot. He was a good, honest soul, and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. He leaves an aged sickly wife, together with two daughters and one son.

JONES.—At Webster, Dodge county, Nebraska, May 26th, 1888, Richard R., aged 4 years, 9 months and 22 days. At the same place, May 27th, 1888, Sabra R., both were children of Bro. and Sr. Daniel Jones. They were both bright, intelligent children; little Richard having learned two songs, namely "Beulah Land" and "Jewels," which he was often heard to sing quite perfectly. Therefore these pieces were sung at the funeral, which was held at the school-house, in the presence of a large number of friends, by Elder W. M. Rumel.

BRANTWAIT.—At Lamoni, Iowa, May 31st, 1888, of spinal fever, Alberta, child of Bro. and Sr. Edward Brantwait, aged 9 months and 18 days. Funeral sermon by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

NOTICES.

The scattered Saints of the Petrolia branch. You are requested to report to this branch, either in person, or by letter, on or before the first day of September, 1888. Failing to do so, your names will be dropped from the branch record, and you will be returned as scattered members. Praying our Father in heaven to guide you in the path of righteousness, I am your brother in Christ Jesus.

GEO HAMPSHIRE,

Clerk Petrolia Branch.

There will be Saints' Reunion under the supervision of Bro. I. N. Roberts, held on the Medina river, two and a half miles west of Medina City, beginning at eleven o'clock June 16th, 1888. Arrangements will be made to meet those coming by rail, at Center Point, on the San Antonio and Arkansas Pass Railroad. Dear Saints, especially in Texas, can you not make the sacrifice to come and meet with us in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Prospects are splendid for temporal and spiritual blessings here, and we will do our best to accommodate all, saint or friend, who may come. Any who anticipate coming may correspond with John A. Currie, Medina City, Bandera county, Texas. All the elders in Texas are wanted who will come and meet with us.

THE discussion between Brother John T. Davis and Elder Thomas Lee, of the Utah Church, took place at St. John, Tooele county, Utah, as stated by Bro. Davis in his letter in HERALD. Bro. Davis stated in a letter dated May 29th, that the house was full, that Elder Lee was quite fair, the audience attentive; and that the result was satisfactory to himself, and he thought to others also. Elder Lee called on Bro. Davis after the debate and stated that he would meet him on other topics, such as "The Land of Zion," "Church Rejected," "Polygamy," &c. If this occurs it will give Bro. Davis quite a good opportunity to place our position before the people there, which is what we want, leaving the result with the Master.

Bro. Davis further reports May 30th, that he had held another debate with Elder Thomas Lee, on May 29th. This time the discussion was in the Ward Meeting-house; the Bishop was present, good attention was paid and good order observed. The subjects examined were, "Utah is not the Land of Zion," "The Law is higher than Priesthood." Bro. Davis has been put on the affirmative so far. Arrangements are made for two other sessions of debate.

Later advices from Bro. J. T. Davis, St. John, Utah, June 2d, states that he had another bout with Elder Thomas Lee, on the evening of May 31st. Subject, "Rejection of the Church." Bro. Davis seems to be satisfied with the result. He states that Elder Lee charged that the Reorganization denied the "revelations of Joseph Smith." That is news indeed, and we can echo Bro. Davis' response "What revelation of God to Joseph Smith does the Reorganization deny?" Elder Lee declines further debate "just now;" but is inclined to meet Bro. Davis on polygamy and the succession at some future time. We are strongly inclined to the opinion that neither Elder Lee, nor any other in his place will meet Bro. Davis on the questions named.

Bro. Davis writes in good spirits; and expects to attend the conference to be held at Malad Idaho.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. R. J. ANTHONY wrote from Reese Creek, Montana, May 29th, that they were having good meetings, and all seemed to be enjoying them. Bro. Joseph Clapp and Andrew Christopherson were expected over from Deer Lodge to attend conference June 2nd and 3rd. Bro. Anthony would go from Reese Creek to Deer Lodge, thence to Malad, for conference there June 16th. We expect good to be accomplished at the Malad meeting.

Bro. John Shippy attended the Lucas, Iowa, two days' meeting, held June 2nd and 3rd, Bro. H. A. Stebbins being detained at home by the serious illness of his daughter Helen. Bro. Shippy reports an excellent, and he trusts a profitable session; three were baptized during its continuance.

In card, found elsewhere, Bro. I. N. White, president of the Independence, Missouri, district, calls attention that their conference convenes on the 30th of June (this month) and not on the 23d. Please take notice.

Any one sending twenty cents in money to L. R. Devore, Limerick, Jackson county, Ohio, will receive by return mail a beautiful photograph of the two Martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum, showing the full form of each. Also a fac simile of the handwriting of Bro. Josiah Ells.

Appropos of the foregoing: an excellent photograph, front view, of the Martyr Joseph, taken from an original daguerreotype can be obtained of C. W. Carter, Salt Lake City, Utah.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. W. Blair wrote from Henderson, Mills county, Iowa, June 6th, 1888:

"I am having fair congregations at my meetings, nightly, in Christian Church in town, and excellent attention is paid to the word being preached. The Saints are in fine spirits. I go to Tabor next Friday, and will call on father Jno. Leeka if he is still alive, but I fear his days are not many in the future in this world. Bro. William Leeka and family and Sr. John Leeka are now in the cares and labors incident to father Leeka's sickness. Bro. E. C. Briggs called here yesterday and stayed and talked to me for near seven hours. He may call on you soon going east.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Did Jesus go and preach to the spirits in prison while his body lay in the tomb?

Ans.—We so understand the matter. And it seems to be warranted by what is written in Matt. 27: 48; and 1 Peter 3: 18, 19. (See also Luke 23: 43, 44.)

DECORATION Day was observed by the people of Columbus, Nebraska, and by a copy of the Columbus Democrat, for June 1st, sent us by Bro. H. J. Hudson we learn that "At the cemetery the graves of the dead were decked with flowers and the then assembled mourners and friends of the departed, listened to an eloquent address by Judge H. J. Hudson, who claimed the closest attention of his hearers for half an hour. The day was bright and beautiful, the services excellent, and the occasion was made memorable by the earnestness of the participants in the exercises, and their general excellence.

"MEDIUMS AND THEIR DUPES."

FROM a copy of a pamphlet entitled "Mediums and Their Dupes," published in San Francisco, California, 1887, and sent us by Bro. E. L. Kelley, we select the following from the closing chapter; the conclusions drawn from the observation of the writer after witnessing many so called materializations:

An extract from the Seybert Commission, will, I think, prove beyond all doubt the fallacy, trickery, fraud and deceit of these materializing mediums. In the Report, speaking of materialization, Dr. Howard Furness says:

"I think it would be difficult to find a psychological study more interesting than that which is afforded by a materializing seance. I have never attended one that did not yield abundant food for reflection, and present one problem, at least, too deep for any solution I can devise. Although, perhaps, our first experience in such seances makes the deepest impression, yet the novelty never wears off, nor can custom stale its variety. The audiences are never wholly the same, and every medium has her own peculiar method.

"In the cities where the mediums reside, and where they hold their seances on regular days throughout the winter, the audiences are by no means composed only of those who go out of idle curiosity; these form but a small segment of the 'circle;' the majority are regular attendants mostly those whose lives have been clouded by sorrow, and who go thither as to a church or sanctuary, and so serious and earnest is their deportment that I can not imagine any temptation to open levity. This unaffectedly religious character of these seances can not fail, I think, to strike even the most indifferent. The careful arrangement of the visitors who are to compose what is termed the 'circle,' the nice balancing of positive natures with negative natures, wherein the medium is guided by her delicate spiritual insight; the quiet hush; the whispered conversation; the darkened room; the darker drapery of the mysterious cabinet, with its untold possibilities; the subdued chords of the dim melodeon; the soothing tones of familiar hymns, in which all voices join; the words full of assurance of a deathless life, of immortal love, of reunion with earthly idols, not lost, but gone before only a very little distance, and now present and impatient for the medium's trance to enable them to return radiant with love and joy—all these conspire to kindle emotions deeply religious in hearts that are breaking under blows of bereavement, and of such, as I have said, the majority of the audiences are composed. Every effort is made by the mediums to heighten the effect. Before entering the cabinet to undergo her mysterious trance, the medium generally makes a short address, reminding the circle that this is a solemn hour, that here is the forecourt of the world beyond, thronged with living spirits, eager to return, bearing visible, tangible assurance of immortality and of enduring love, and that the mysterious agency, whereby they return, is greatly aided by a sympathetic harmony in the circle, and so forth. The medium then enters the cabinet; the curtains close; the light is lowered; the organ sounds some solemn chords, gliding into the hymn, "Nearer, my God to Thee," which all join in singing. At its close there is a hush of anticipation; and that nature must be unimpressionable indeed, that is not stirred when the dark, heavy folds of the curtains of the cabinet are discerned to be tremulously moving; and, as they gently part, disclose a figure viled from head to foot in robes of white.

"If the return of the heavenly visitant would but end here, I think the impression would be deeper and more abiding. The filmy, vague outline of the white figure thoroughly harmonizes with all established, orthodox notions of ghosts, and if this were all of the apparition vouchsafed to us, we might, perhaps, have a harder problem to deal with than when the spirit actually emerges from the cabinet with outstretched arms of greeting. A substantial, warm, breathing, flesh and blood ghost, whose foot falls jar the floor, is slightly heterodox and taxes our credulity; if hereunto be added an unmistakable likeness to the medium in form and feature, many traces, I am afraid, of the supernatural and spiritual vanish.

"Mindful of our endeavor as a commission, to have as many observers as possible in cases demanding close observation, I never attended a materializing seance as a member of the commission. Whenever I happened to be personally known (and my ear-trumpet soon makes me a marked man), that official capacity was unavoidably imputed to me, but I never announced it nor claimed it. I was present merely as an observer on my own account, with the intention of making arrangements, if practicable, for seances with the rest of the commission, if what I saw seemed to me sufficiently remarkable to justify the expense, which experience, with other mediums in other lines, had taught me would be very considerable. I therefore took no notes, and could, at this late day, only after much difficulty furnish dates. Wherefore all I propose in this memorandum is to give my own private conclusion, which is worth no more than the conclusion of any other private individual, and to mention the test to which I subjected all the spirits whom I had the pleasure of specially "interviewing;" as this test can be applied by any one, at any time, at any seance; it partakes of the nature of a general truth, which does not need the support of dates, or names, or places, to uphold it. I suppose I have attended between twenty and thirty materializing seances.

"I do not hesitate to acknowledge that I have been throughout sincerely and extremely anxious to become converted to spiritualism. In whatever direction my judgment is warped, it is warped in favor of that belief. I can not conceive of the texture of that mind which would not welcome such indisputable proof of immortality as spiritualism professes to hold out.

"In general, then, let me say at once and emphatically, that I have never seen anything which, in the smallest degree, has led me to suppose that a spirit can be, as it is termed, materialized. It is superfluous to add that I never recognized a materialized spirit; in only two instances have any spirits professed to be members of my family, and in one of those two instances, as it happened, that member was alive and in robust health, and in the other a spirit claimed a fictitious relationship, that of niece.

"Of course this assertion applies only to those spirits who materialized especially for me. I do not pretend to answer for spirits who came to other people. All that I am quite sure of is that all the spirits that singled me out from the circle, and emerged from the cabinet for my benefit, were not only abundantly 'padded round with flesh and fat,' but also failed utterly in any attempt to establish their individuality; and moreover, in the instances where I had seen the medium before she entered the cabinet, so closely resembled the medium as, in my eyes, to be indistinguishable from her.

"It is, I confess, a very puzzling problem (it is, in fact, the problem to which I alluded above) to account for the faith, undoubtedly genuine, which spiritualists have in the personal reappearance of their departed friends. Again and again have I asked those who have returned from an interview with a spirit at the cabinet, to their seats beside me, whether or not they had recognized their friends beyond a peradventure, and have always received an affirmative reply, sometimes strongly affirmative. I was once taken to the cabinet by a woman and introduced to the shade of her dead husband. When we resumed our seats, I could not help asking her: 'Are you sure you recognized him?' Whereupon she instantly retorted, with much indignation, do you mean to imply that I don't know my husband?' Again, at another seance, a woman, a visitor, led from the cabinet to me a materialized spirit, whom she introduced to me as 'her daughter, her dear, darling daughter,' while nothing could be clearer to me than the features of the medium in every line and lineament. Again and again, men have led round the circles materialized spirits of their wives, and introduced them to each visitor in turn; fathers have taken round their daughters, and I have seen widows sob in the arms of their dead husbands. Testimony, such as this, staggers me. Have I been smitten with color-blindness? Before me, as far as I can detect, stands the very medium herself, in shape, size, form, and feature true to a line, and yet, one after another, honest men and women at my side, within ten minutes of each other, assert that she is the absolute counterpart of their nearest and dearest friends, nay, that she is that friend. It is as incomprehensible to me as the assertion that the heavens are green, and the leaves of the trees deep blue. Can it be that the faculty of observation and comparison is rare, and that our features are really vague and misty to our best friends? Is it that the medium exercises some mesmeric influence on our visitors, who are thus made to accept the faces which she wills them to see? Or is it, after all, only the dim light and a fresh illustration of la nuit tous les chats sont gris? The light, be it remembered, is always dim at these seances, and it is often made especially dim when a spirit leaves the cabinet. I think I have never been able at such times to read the Arabic numerals on my watch, which happen to be unusually large and pronounced. Unquestionably, spiritualists will be at no loss to explain this puzzle; possibly they would say that I have here unconsciously given one of the very best of proofs of the reality and genuineness of materialization, and that my unbelief acts on the sensitive, evanescent features of the spirit like a chemical reagent, and that—but it is not worth while to weaken by anticipation their solacing arguments.

"In any statement of this problem we should bear in mind all the attending circumstances; the darkened room; the music; the singing; the pervading hush of expectation; the intensely concentrated attention; the strained gaze at the dark cabinet and at its white robed apparitions; and finally, the presence of a number of sympathizing believers.

"There is another fact about these seances which I think can not fail to impress even the most casual observer, and this is the attractive charms which the cabinet seems to possess for the aboriginal Indian. This child of nature appears to materialize with remarkable facility, and, having apparently doffed his characteristic phlegm in the happy hunting grounds, enters with extreme zest on the lighter gambols which sometimes enliven the sombre monotony of a seance. Almost every medium keeps an Indian 'brave' in her cohort of spirits; in fact, there is no cabinet, howe'er so ill attended, but has some Indian there. It is strange, too, that, as far as I know, departed black men, who might be supposed to be quite as unsophisticated as departed red men, have hitherto developed no such materializing proclivities. It is, perhaps, even more strange that while, in my experience, Italian spirits neither understand nor speak Italian, and French spirits can neither comprehend nor talk French, and German spirits remain invincibly dumb in German, it is reserved to Indian 'braves' to be glibly and fluently voluble in the explosive gutturals of their own well-known tongue.

"Before a seance begins, a thorough examination of the cabinet is always tendered, a privilege of which I very seldom avail myself, and hold always to be superfluous, on the following grounds: First, if the spirits which come out of the cabinet be genuine, it is of very small moment how they got in, and no possible scrutiny of the material structure of the cabinet will disclose the process. Secondly, if the spirits be fraudulent, the mediums are too quick-witted and ingenious in their methods of introducing confederates into the cabinet not to conceal all traces of mechanical connivance far too effectually to be detected in any cursory examination. It is also to be borne in mind that much can be done under cover of the darkness, which is sometimes total for a few minutes before the seance begins, and also that the notes of the melodeon are sufficiently deep and loud to drown not a little rustling. If the mediums are deceitful I have always felt that in any endeavor to unmask them the odds are heavily in their favor. The methods are manifold whereby confederates may be introduced into the cabinet; from above, from below, and, enveloped in black stuff, from back parlors, rooms and closets. It is not what goes into the cabinet which, in my opinion, demands our scrutiny, but what comes out of it; it is to the spirit to which all our tests should be applied; the cabinet and the medium are quite secondary. Furthermore, it should be remembered that those who sit nearest the cabinet are always staunch friends of the medium, or known by her to be perfectly safe and harmless.

"Not infrequently a materialized spirit is seen to subside into the floor between the folds of the curtains at the opening of the cabinet. This is termed 'de-materialization,' and not a little mystery is ascribed to it. The mystery vanishes when we reflect how easy it is for a lithe and active young woman so to bow down quickly, even to the very ground, as to convey the impression, when her white garments are alone visible against the black background, that she has sunk into the floor. I have at times distinctly felt the faint jar caused by the medium's falling backward within the dark curtains a little too hastily. At times, when the spirit is wholly within the cabinet, and visible only through the parted folds of the curtain, the semblance of a gradual sinking is obtained by simply uniting slowly the two folds of the black curtain, beginning at the head and gradually closing them down to the feet; the room is generally so dark that the dark curtain is indistinguishable at a little distance, and the effect of slowly falling is admirably conveyed. In one instance, where the spiritual garments were not white but parti-colored (the spirit was a Scotch girl, and wore the tartan), the effect of de-materializing was capitally given by the spirit standing just inside the slightly parted curtains, and then allowing the whole outer costume, even to the head-dress, to fall swiftly to the floor. Perhaps the best effect in this line, that I have seen, was on one occasion when a spirit had retired within the folds of the curtain, but apparently immediately reappeared again at the opening; she had been habited somewhat like a nun with white bands and fillets around the head and face; thus, too, was she clad at her reappearance, but, as I sat quite close to the cabinet, I perceived that the figure was composed merely of the garments of the former spirit, and that there was no face at all within the head-gear. I am sure the omission could not have been detected at the distance at which the rest of the circle sat. This snow-white figure was allowed to sink very, very slowly, the dark curtains uniting above it as it gradually sank, until only the oval white head-dress around what should have been a face rested for a few seconds on the very floor, and then suddenly collapsed. It was in the highest degree ingeniously devised and artistically executed.

"There are also various ways of appearing as well as of disappearing. I think the best and most effective of them all is where a spirit gradually materializes before our very eyes, outside of the cabinet, far enough, indeed, outside to give the appearance to a visitor directly in front of rising up from the very center of the room. A minute spot of white, no larger than a dollar, is first noticed on the floor; this gradually increases in size, until there is a filmy, gauzy mass which rises fold on fold like a fountain, and then, when it is about a foot and a half high, out of it rises a spirit to her full height, and either swiftly glides to greet a loved one in the circle, or as swiftly retires to the cabinet. It is really beautiful, and its charm is not diminished by a knowledge of the simplicity of the process, which as I have sat more than once when the cabinet was almost in profile, I soon detected. The room is very dark, the outline of the black muslin cabinet can only with difficulty be distinguished by one sitting within six feet of it; a fold of black cloth, perhaps five feet long and four feet wide, is thrown from the cabinet forward into the room, one end is held within the cabinet at about two or three feet above the floor, and from under the extreme opposite edge, where it rests on the floor, some white tulle is slowly protruded, a very little at first, but gradually more and more is thrust out, until there is enough to permit the spirit, who has crept out from the cabinet under the black cloth and has been busy pushing out the white tulle, to get her head and shoulders well within the mass, when she rises swiftly and gracefully, and the dark cloth is drawn back into the cabinet. I always want to applaud it; it is charming.

"On one occasion, a spirit tried this pretty mode of materialization, not directly in front of the cabinet, but at the side quite close to where I sat. The cabinet was merely a frame to which were attached black muslin or cloth curtains, and a spirit can emerge at the side quite as conveniently as in front. Unfortunately this time, through some heedlessness, the spirit did not creep out of the frame-work with sufficient care, and some portion of her garments must have caught when she was only on her knees. I never shall forget the half-comic, half-appealing feminine glance as her eyes looked up into mine, when she was only partly materialized and some plaguey nail had caught her angel robe. It was very hard not to spring to her assistance; but such gallantry would have been excessively ill-timed, so I was forced to sit still while this poor animula, vagula, blandula, worked herself free and arose unfettered by my side.

"Perhaps this is as fitting a place as any to mention the test whereby I have tried the spirits who have come to me.

"As this same lovely spirit arose and looked graciously down on me and held out her hands in welcome, I arose also to my feet, and peering anxiously into her face, asked, 'Is this Olivia?' 'Yes,' she softly whispered in reply. Then ensued the following conversation, which I reproduce as faithfully as I can. It was broken off once by the spirit's retiring into the cabinet, but resumed when she again appeared to me.

"'Ah, Olive dear, how lovely of you to materialize! Did you really want to come back?' 'Very much, of course,' she answered. 'And do you remember the sweet years of old?' 'All of them,' she whispered. 'Do you remember,' I continued 'the old oak near Summer-place?' [A happy hit, in the longitude of Boston!] 'Yes, indeed, I do,' was the low reply, as her head fell gently on my shoulder. 'And do you remember, Olive dear, whose names were carved on it?' 'Yes, ah, yes!' 'Oh, Olive, there's one thing I want so much to ask you about. Tell me, dear, if I speak of anything you don't remember. What was the matter with you that afternoon, one summer, when your father rode his hunter to the town, and Albert followed after upon his; and then your mother trundled to the gate behind the dappled grays. Do you remember it, dear?' 'Perfectly.' 'Well, don't you remember, nothing seemed to please you that afternoon, you left the novel all uncut upon the rose-wood shelf; you left your new piano shut, something seemed to worry you. Do you remember it, dear one.' 'All of it, yes, yes.' 'Then you came singing down to that old oak, and kissed the place where I had carved our names with many vows. Tell me, you little witch, who you were thinking of all that time?' 'All the while of you,' she sighed. 'And do you, do you remember that you fell asleep under the oak, and that a little acorn fell into your bosom, and you tossed it out in a pet? Ah, Olive dear, I found that acorn, and kissed it twice, and kissed it thrice for thee? And do you know that it has grown into a fine young oak?' 'I know it,' she answered softly and sadly, 'I often go to it!' This was almost too much for me, and as my memory (on the spur of the moment) of Tennyson's 'Talking Oak' was growing misty, I was afraid the interview might become embarrassing for lack of reminiscences, so I said, 'Dearest Olivia, that is so lovely of you. There, be a good girl, good-bye now. You'll surely come and see me again, the next time I come here, won't you?' 'Yes, indeed, I will.' I released my arm from encircling a very human waist, and Olive lifted her head from my shoulder, where she had been speaking close to my ear, and de-materialized.

"Marie St. Clair, who, on spiritual authority, as I have shown above, shares the ownership with Sister Belle of 'Yorick's' skull in my possession, has never failed to assent whenever I ask a spirit if it be she. To be sure, she varies with every different medium, but that is only one of her piquant little ways, which I early learned to overlook and at last grew to like. She is both short and tall, lean and plump, with straight hair and with curls, young and middle-aged, so that now it affords me real pleasure to meet a new variety of her; but in all her varieties she never fails to express her delight over my guarding with care that which was 'the last thing on her neck before she passed over.' I was extremely anxious to obtain a written acknowledgment of this pleasure from Marie, and accordingly I took with me to one of the seances a little trinket, and told the spirit that I would give it to her if she would just write down for me a few words expressive of this pleasure, and as she was disappearing into the cabinet, I thrust a writing-tablet and a pencil into her hand. Before the seance closed, she reappeared to me, and handing me a paper claimed my promise. In full faith I gave her the little breast-pin, and after the seance, to my chagrin, I found the writing on the paper was not from her, but a message from my 'father,' announcing that he had 'found the next life a great truth,' which was, certainly, cheering, in view of the fact that he was enjoying the present in so remarkably hearty and healthy a manner.

"For the next seance I provided an amber necklace, on whose clasp I had 'Marie' engraved, and when the spirit of the fair French girl appeared, I taxed her with her naughty, deceitful ways, and told her that I would not give her the necklace, which I had brought for her, until she gave me what I asked for in her own writing. In a very few minutes she reappeared and handed me a paper, whereon she had written: "I am so glad you have kept them so nicely. Your Marie." (As her skull was shared by Sister Belle, I suppose Marie was strikingly logical if ungrammatical, in referring to it as them.) It was enough; in a few minutes after, Marie reappeared wearing the amber beads glistening round her neck.

"No sooner had I given the necklace than occurred another illustration of the remarkable and amiable pliancy with which materialized spirits will answer to any name with which they are addressed. The medium who conducted the seance came to me and said, 'There's a spirit in the cabinet who says she's your niece.' Very thoughtlessly I replied, 'But I haven't any niece in the spirit world.' The instant after I had spoken, I felt my mistake. You must never repel any spirit that comes to you. It throws a coolness over your whole intercourse with that particular spirit-band; no spirit from it will be likely to come to you again. No surface of madrepores is more sensitive to a touch than a cabinet full of spirits to a chilling syllable of failure. To regain my lost position, therefore, I said hastily, 'But can it be Effie?' (It was a hap-hazard name; I know no 'Effie.') The medium went to the cabinet and returned with the answer, 'She says she's Effie, and she wants to see you.' Of course, I went with alacrity to where the curtains of the cabinet stood open, and there, just within it, saw a spirit whom I recognized as having appeared once before during the evening with Marie, when the latter had materialized as a sailor-boy, and the two had danced a spiritualistic hornpipe to the tune of 'A Life on the Ocean Wave.' 'Oh, Effie dear,' I said, 'is that you?' 'Yes, dear uncle, I wanted so much to see you.' 'Forgive me, dear,' I pleaded, 'for having forgotten you.' 'Certainly I will, dear uncle, and won't you bring me a necklace, too?' 'Certainly, dear,' I replied, 'when I come here again.' I have never been there since.

"Thus is illustrated what will be, I think, the experience of every one who cares to apply this test to materialized spirits. When the investigator is unknown to the medium a spirit materialized through that medium will confess to any name in the heavens above or the earth beneath, in the world of fiction or the world of reality. Of course, it would not do to ask a spirit whether or no it were some well known public, or equally well known fictitious character. You would be repelled if you should ask a spirit if it were 'Yankee Doodle,' but I am by no means sure that it would not confess to being 'Cap'en Goodin,' who accompanied Yankee Doodle and his father on their trip to town, and whose name is less familiar in mens' mouths. All the good, earnest, simple-hearted folk who attend these seances ask the spirits, when they appear to them for the first time, if they are father, mother, brother, husband, wife or sister, and the spirit will in every case confess the kinship asked for. But, as I have just said, the investigator need not restrict himself to his family, his friends, or his acquaintances. Let him enter the world of fiction, or of poetry, or of history, he has but to call for whomsoever he will, and the materialized spirit will answer: 'Lo! here am I!'

"Let me strengthen this with the following additional illustration:

"Not long ago at a materializing seance where I was, I think, unknown to everyone, certainly to the medium, a spirit emerged from the cabinet, clad in flowing white robes, and advanced towards me with a wavering gait, which could readily be converted into a tottering walk, if I should perchance ask if it were my great grandmother, or could be interpreted as the feeble incertitude of a first materialization, if I should perchance descend the family tree, and ask for a more youthful scion. I arose as it approached, and asked: 'Is this Rosamond?', 'Yes!' replied the spirit, still wobbling a little, and in doubt whether to assume the role of youth or old age. 'What, fair Rosamond!' I exclaimed, throwing into my voice all the joy and buoyancy I could master. The hint to the spirit was enough. All trace of senility vanished, and with equal joyousness she responded, 'Yes, its indeed Rosamond!' Then I went on, 'Dearest Rosamond, there's something I want so much to ask you. Do you remember who gave you that bowl just before you died?' Here Fair Rosamond nodded her head gaily, and pointed her finger at me. 'Oh, no, no, no,' I said, 'you forget, Fair Rosamond, I wasn't there then. It was at Woodstock.' 'Oh, yes, yes,' she hastily rejoined, 'so it was; it was at Woodstock.' 'And it was Eleanor who offered you that bowl.' 'To be sure, I remember it now perfectly. It was Eleanor.' 'But Rosamond, Fair Rosamond, what made you drink that bowl? Had you no suspicions?' 'No, I had no suspicions.' And here she shook her head very sadly. 'Didn't you see what Eleanor had in her other hand?' 'No.' 'Ah, Fair Rosamond, I'm afraid she was a bad lot.' 'Indeed she was! (with great emphasis.) 'What cruel eyes she had!' 'Hadh't she though!' 'How did she find you out?' 'I haven't an idea.' 'Ah, Fair Rosamond, do you remember how beautiful you were [here the spirit simpered a little] after you were dead, and how the people came from far and near to look at you?' 'Yes,' said Fair Rosamond, 'I looked down on them all the while.' And here she glided back into the cabinet.

"It is not impossible that a spiritualist might urge that the test which I apply is not a fair one—that guile will beget guile, that the spirits meet me as I meet them.

"But what other possible way have I of finding out who the spirits are, when they do not tell me in advance, but by asking them? Whenever they have been announced to me as this or that spirit, I invariably treat them as the spirits of those whom they assert themselves to be, and, in my conclusion, am guided only by the pertinancy of their answers to my questions. Whenever William Shakespeare appears to me (and, by the way, let me here parenthetically note, as throwing light on a vexed question, that Shakespeare in the spirit world 'favors' the Chandos Portrait, even to the little white collar strings hanging down in front; his spirit has visited me several times, and such was his garb when I saw him most distinctly); when, I repeat, Shakespeare materializes in the cabinet for me, do I not always most reverently salute him, and does he not graciously nod to me—until I venture most humbly to ask him what the misprint 'Vllorxa' in Timon of Athens stands for, when he always slams the curtains in my face? (I meekly own that perhaps he is justified.) Have I ever failed in respectful homage to General Washington? Did I ever evince the slightest mistrust of Indian 'braves'?

"When a spirit comes out of the cabinet especially to me, how am I to know, or find out, who it is but by asking? If it be not the spirit that I name, will it not, if it has a shred of honesty, set me right? What hinders it from telling me just who it is? If it be the spirit of my great-grandmother, it can be surely no satisfaction to her, after all the bother of materializing, to hold converse with me as the spirit of Sally in our Alley; and if she be, in every sense of the word, a 'spirity' old lady, she will instantly undeceive me, and let me know who I am talking to.' But why should I anticipate deceit at spiritual hands? If William Shakespeare can appear to me, why not 'Fair Rosamond.' Hereupon a spiritualist may maintain that if the spirit said she was 'Fair Rosamond,' and displayed a familiarity with the incidents of that frail woman's life and death, she probably was 'Fair Rosamond.' So be it. I yield, and go further, and hereafter find no more difficulty than in her case, in Tennyson's 'Olivia,' 'Marie St. Clare,' and in the heroes and heroines of Scheherazade's 'Thousand and One Nights.'

"Although I have been thus thwarted at every turn in my investigations of spiritualism, and found fraud where I had looked for honesty, and emptiness where I had looked for fulness, I can not think it right to pass a verdict, universal in its application, where, far less than the universe of spiritualism has been observed. My field of examination has been limited. There is an outlying region claimed by spiritualists which I have not touched, and into which I would gladly enter, were there any prospect that I should meet with more success. I am too deeply imbued with the belief that we are such stuff as dreams are made of, to be unwilling to accept a few more shadows in my sleep. Unfortunately, in my experience, Dante's motto must be inscribed over an investigation of spiritualism, and all hope must be abandoned by those who enter on it.

"If the performances which I have witnessed are, after all, in their essence spiritual, their mode of manifestation certainly places them only on the margin, the very outskirts of that realm of mystery which spiritualism claims as its own. Spiritualism, pure and undefiled, if it mean anything at all, must be something far better than slate writing and raps. These grosser physical manifestations can be but the mere ooze and scum cast up by the waves on the idle pebbles, the waters of a heaven-lit sea, if it exist, must lie far out beyond.

"The time is not far distant, I can not but think, when the more elevated class of spiritualists will cast loose from all these physical manifestations, which, even if they be proved genuine, are but little removed from materialism, and eventually materializing seances, held on recurrent days, and at fixed hours, will become unknown."

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"I mourn no more my vanished years:
Beneath a tender rain,
An April rain of smiles and tears,
My heart is young again.
The west winds blow and singing low,
I hear the glad streams run;
The windows of my soul I throw Wide open to the sun."

"MILLIONS OF BEATING HEARTS; STRANGE THAT WE HEAR THEM NOT"

Do we believe in God? "Come unto me all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest,"—rest from the cares, the perplexities, the trials of the world? "In the world you shall have tribulation."

The traveller, as he climbs the lofty mountain peaks of our western world, throws himself down beneath the sheltering branches of some leafy bough; and while the rays of the sun warm and cheer all around him, not a cloud intervening to shut out its warmth and light, gazing below him he sees the storm descending in the valley, hears the thunder roll peal upon peal and sent back by the voice of echo reverberating from hill to hill. Sitting there he feels not the storm; the war of elements disturbs him not, though perchance they carry death and destruction in their train. If indeed we believe in God, if our lives are hid with him in Christ Jesus, what shall be able to separate us from his love? Before the Master went away he told his disciples (and in telling them he told us also); "The world has hated me and it will hate you also. Be of good cheer for I have overcome the world." "The Captain of our salvation," wrote the great apostle to the Gentiles, "was made perfect through suffering." Christ has overcome and is set down at the right hand of the Father. "To him that overcometh" is the promise made, and contest is implied in the very term. For the purpose of knowing just what this contest means, of understanding it in its height, breadth, length and depth, our Elder Brother took upon him our nature, was tempted in all points even as we are, drank to the very dregs the bitter cup of poverty, humiliation, scorn and contempt, that he might become a merciful High Priest, able to succor the tried and the tempted. If we believe in God we must believe all this, and believing it, what should have power to separate us from that love? What should have power to keep us from going to him with every desire, every burden of our soul? We are engaged in the same conflict through which he has passed and in which he was victorious; and if ever we are saved in the kingdom of God it will be by overcoming; not by avoiding, not by having the cup removed, unless it be the will of God that it should be removed, but by drinking it to the very dregs in loving, willing submission to the Father's will. Where shall we gain strength for this conflict, knowledge of the ways and means by which the enemy is to be met; and where shall we find the path leading us to the mountain side, far above the storms of life, to the table lands where he leadeth forth his sheep into the green pastures and beside the still waters, to the hiding place in the cleft of the rock, to the shadow of that great rock in a weary land, to that peace promised by the words "In me?" Where?

Is not he the Captain of our salvation? Who else has the words of eternal life? Unto whom, if not unto him, shall we go? "I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

"Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation." But Peter slept on; and after asserting his ability to stand by his Master, even though all men forsook him, Alas, when temptation came, denied all knowledge of that suffering Master; denied him who through fasting and prayer had obtained power to stand, to honor God in the darkest hour, to overcome the world, the flesh and the devil, to descend into hell and wrest from him who had them, and who had held men in bondage because thereof, the keys of death and hell. Oh, think of it, my soul, and question no longer, "Where shall I go that I may find the peace promised, the strength to overcome! Do we believe in God; then let us manifest our faith by works—works of righteousness well pleasing in his sight; but let us be careful that our faith in him goes farther, reaches down deeper than this. The apostle speaks of a rest which remains for the people of God, but he also warns those unto whom the promise was made of entering into this rest, that it was possible for them to fall short of it through unbelief. The promise was from God, but in order to the fulfillment of the promise to the individual, belief, or faith in God, was necessary. If so in regard to the rest promised will it not be so in regard to all promises made? How then shall we find the peace promised us by him who spake as never man spake, and which Paul says, passes all understanding? How shall we obtain strength that we may fight a good fight?

Shall we say of these millions of throbbing hearts—these hearts worn and weary with strife, toil and suffering—they have not taken a deep root, they are not valiant soldiers? Shall we? If so let us first pause and consider. Let us bend our ear and listen to the heart throb coming down through the ages. "Could you not watch with me one hour?" This longing for human sympathy is stilled, dies away with the sweet benediction, "Sleep on now, and take thy rest;" but listen, bend your ear, for it is the low wailing tone of despair which throbs now over the sea of time, and moves the heart as no other words have ever moved it, "My God, my God why hast thou forsaken me?" "My Son, my Son, not thee have I forsaken. Hast thou forgotten that upon thee is laid the sin of the world? How couldst thou know that of which humanity is partaker, if my face was not veiled from them, in thee?" Concentrated in that one bitter cry was the very essence of all human suffering. Then came from the pale lips, "It is finished." Father the debt is paid even to the last farthing! I have bought them, they are mine. No longer their own, they are bound to glorify thee in their bodies and their spirits which are thine. I have glorified thee and came into the world for that purpose; henceforth these also must glorify thy name.

One other thought and we conclude. When shall we obtain the strength necessary, that we may in every hour of trial glorify him? "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation. The Spirit truly is willing, but the flesh is weak." Sisters, if we can by watching with and praying for each other, strengthen this weak flesh, is it not well that we do it? One passage related closely to one of the miracles of Christ has frequently drawn our attention. When appealed to by the father of the youth possessed of an unclean spirit—which the disciples had failed to cast out—Jesus had immediately rebuked it and cast it out. "Why could not we cast it out?" was the question which when left alone they asked him.

"This kind goeth out but by fasting and prayer." The disciples had not fasted, for he said the children of the bride's chamber would not fast while the bridegroom was with them; but when he was taken away then would they fast; but Jesus had fasted before entering upon his ministry. To us it seems that while we pray, "Give us this day our daily bread," there is prayer to be made also, with fasting, if need be, that we be fitted for those times of trial which will suddenly meet us face to face without warning, and for which if we have made no previous preparation we shall, like the disciples, find ourselves unprepared.

Shall we hear the heart throbs of this great multitude? Shall we pray one for another adding watching thereto, that we enter not into temptation? Shall we, being strengthened by his grace and by unity of purpose, strive with willing hearts to bear the burdens of the weak—weak because standing alone, many of them without the companionship of those of like precious faith, and opposed by every friend and relation on earth. We do but ask, Shall we?

VILAS, Wis., May 17th.

Dear Sister Frances:—Although I have not the privilege of meeting with any of the Saints, yet I wish to bear my testimony to the truth of the work. I once lived where there was a branch of live, working Saints who enjoyed the Spirit of God to a marked degree; but of late I have been as a wanderer, away from both kindred, and brethren and sisters in the church. The people here have never heard a "Mormon" (as they call us) preach. Some will not listen if I try to tell them about the doctrine, saying, "No good could ever come out of Mormonism;" and some are very indifferent as to its being good or bad. Have gotten a neighbor to read the Voice of Warning, but some will not read any of the Church papers or books when offered to them. They do not seem to want to be enlightened on the subject, I see the truth of this saying "There are none so deaf as those who will not hear." I feel it a great blessing to have the Herald to read. It is all the preacher we have had for three long, sad, weary years; years fraught with many deep afflictions. It seemed of late that my trials were more than I could bear; but I have derived oh! so much comfort from the Home Column. But I am very lonely and greatly feel the need of the prayers of the faithful, that I may live nearer to God and have grace to bring up my children in the right way.

May God ever prosper his glorious work, is the humble prayer of a lonely sister,

THE COMING MESSIAH.

Rejoice, all ye Saints, for the hour draweth near,
 When Messiah in glory again shall appear;
 His beloved will rejoice when he cometh to reign,
 And set up his kingdom with them to remain.

His beloved disciples will bless the glad day,
 And sorrow and darkness will vanish away;
 The sunbeams of glory will brighten the skies,
 When the star that shone o'er him again will arise.

I am your Redeemer, whom you crucified;
 See the thorns in my forehead, put your hands on my side;

The wrong I'll forgive you, if you will believe,
 And return unto me and my gospel receive.

All nations shall bow to the Crucified One,
 When the Gentiles come in and the Jews do return;
 Their blindness in part then will vanish away,
 All Israel will own him, and bless the glad day.

Remember my words spoke in days that are past—
 "The last shall be first, and the first shall be last;
 My beloved I'll gather, they will come at my call,
 One fold and one shepherd, and one church for all."

"Come home, all ye ransomed, glad tidings have come;
 The war is now ended, the vict'ry is won;
 The Saints clad in glory, with me I will bring,
 O, grave! where's thy vict'ry? O, death! where's thy sting?"

Correspondence.

WHEELOCK, Texas, June 1st.

Dear Herald:—I again write you a few words. I am still getting along very well, all things considered, in the work of the ministry. Have been preaching of late at the town of Rogers, in Milam county; had fair liberty and good turnout of the people, and they give good attention and seem very much interested in the gospel message. I left a good lot of tracts and epitomes of faith with them. I was insisted upon very much to come again and preach for them; so I expect to go again before a great while. The people at Rogers seem to be an honest, conscientious people, and I hope for good results at that place. I am going to preach at a new place to-night, in Brazos county. I have seven calls to preach now in five different counties. It will take me some time to fill the calls I have already, if I was not to receive any more for some time. I thank the Lord that the people are willing to hear and investigate in spite of all opposition of the devil and his emissaries. I expect a grand and glorious ingathering in this section in the near future from present prospects. The missionaries appointed by General Conference have arrived and are at work, so I hear. Haven't seen them yet, but hope to soon. I expect a prosperous year's work this year in Texas, for I expect more faithful missionary work done and I believe the Lord will bless it to the good of his cause; not that we haven't had faithful missionaries in this section, but we have more of them this year than heretofore, and still need more laborers in this section.

Yours, in gospel bonds,
 E. W. NUNLEY.

GOOD INTENT, Kan., June 4th.

Editor Herald:—The name of "Bro. Joseph Flanders, of Horton, Kansas," appears in Herald May 26th, page 324. There is no such a brother in the Central District of Kansas. Also in Herald of May 5th, page 276, a letter speaking of Elder Wake. No such an elder in the church. We have no objection to members of the Brighamite and Strangite churches and others calling themselves Latter Day Saints, or whatever they choose; but we insist on a line of distinction which they do not make, but allow our members and the people generally to suppose they belong to us; and have gone so far as to baptize part of families of the Saints who supposed they were elders of our church. We request that this may be made known that no more may be deceived.

Respectfully in bonds,
 E. C. BRAND.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 2d.

Dear Herald:—Since our last at Panama, we went to Persia where we held eleven meetings and baptized one. Preached once in the Salem branch, thence to Union Grove where we held six meetings with interest remarkable; baptized two. From here we went to the conference at Independence, where we spent our time pleasantly, save, perchance the moments when first notified of our appointment to the far away continent under British rule.

The thunderbolt from heaven's blue dome at high noon, without warning, could not have been more startling. The harness worn as an active minister but a nine month old, and yet we were called upon to adjust it to a new field! To go where faces will all be strange; where customs and manners will be different; where thousands of miles will separate us from the ones of yore, and even the birds, beasts and vegetation will all be new! What wonder that our heart almost stood still as the full realization was forced upon us, and we knew, as memory flashed back over the years ago, of one whose life had been given for the cause he loved, in that far away clime, and another—then his companion—had been forced to do battle alone, while the weary months had gone by till the years had been multiplied, and who since has gone to his account, hastened perchance, by the exposures of the life given in the service of his Master. Of another who did battle alone for weary years, to come back to his native land to find himself approved of God, to do special duties in the great scheme of redemption. And of a family, whose accounts of the weary mode of traveling, as compared with this land, have often been perused with no thought in mind of the reality being so near.

And thus as our mind traveled over all this with the rapidity of the lightnings flash, our soul almost sickened at what seemed so stupendous an undertaking. To the only one to whom we could in safety turn—the Father—we went in secret, and as our soul was poured out in humble supplication for a knowledge of his will in the undertaking, there came a calm and peaceful assurance that all was well. From that hour on, till within the last few days, we have never faltered. But on last Thursday, as we visited the ship, there came a feeling of despondency that almost seemed a premonition of dangers to be encountered ere we should again set foot on terra firma. As we went down into the steerage, (it was the first time we had ever been aboard a ship), and were made to realize that there would at least be times when we would be under the water, it made us once more feel as though we preferred to have been left on this side. But there comes the thought of the necessity of some one having to be sent, and why not me?—both young, vigorous and strong.

From Independence we went to northern Missouri, to visit with friends and relatives. While here and at Lamoni we enjoyed ourself, the only regret being the parting shake of the hand, as we realized that for three years at least we must remain separate.

On to our home where we staid only one week, during most of which time it rained. With this short stop we are obliged to be content, as an appointment sent to Salt Lake City, by request of the branch president, R. M. Elvin, must be filled. Leaving Omaha May 10th we arrived in Salt Lake at seven p. m. the 12th. As we design at some future time to give the history of our journey, from notes taken, we will forbear this time. Staying there till four p. m. of the 15th we again started westward, arriving 10:45 a. m. the 17th. The Saints both in Utah and California, without exception, have treated us nobly, and at times the tears have come into our eyes when thinking of such treatment.

We sail to-morrow at two p. m., and those that may have thought to hear from us personally, and have not, will please bear with us. Since coming to California there has been some twenty-five or thirty letters that were actually necessary for me to write, besides other matters to attend to. Please bear in mind that to write to Australia it will cost twelve cents postage.

My address for the present will be Sydney, N. S. W. Australia, care of Richard Ellis.

In bonds, J. W. WIGHT.

LUCAS, Iowa, May 24th.

Bro. Asa S. Cochran:—There is a general good feeling in the the branch and all is very peaceful. I don't know of any particular trouble between parties, and that is saying a great deal for a branch of two hundred members. There seems to be comparatively, no jealousy among officers. The Sisters' Mite Society is doing a good work, and is carried on with the peace and unity that is found among those who work purely for that reward held forth by Christ only. Our Sabbath School is a grand success; all seem to be pulling the same way, Zionward. Sometimes we enjoy the Spirit in our labors as teachers and scholars until it is felt, and its effects are visible, and the school is being sustained from within itself.

Nearly every one of our young men abstain from tobacco, and intoxicating drinks, and lives pure lives; furthermore, nearly all active members give liberally towards the church. In the face of the above record what would you expect but the blessings of a kind Father, and his watchcare? I was much pleased with the spirit of the last General Conference, and have reason to expect good results will follow. I am patiently waiting for the day when there will not be place in our conference for a contentious spirit, but that all debating will be done void of that egotism and selfish big me. I believe Bro. Joseph's discourse on Church Government the grandest and best effort I ever heard, and the manner in which he presented his ideas were such that all ought to be able to comprehend. If put into practice it will surely bear fruit one hundred fold. I felt after his discourse that I had made a mistake all my life, for the principle of humility was so beautifully set forth that no man of sense and reason would fail to see that the servant is not greater than his lord. If we can maintain that humility and unity as set forth in the teachings of Christ we'll be all solid. And what a blessed thing it will be if we will succeed in being the Bride, adorned for the bridegroom; and if our Redeemer will come in our day and generation, what a blessing if our work will be such that we can say "Amen," "Yes come," "Lord Jesus come quickly." But I often fear that my sins of omission will disqualify me so that I will not be among the chosen. With kindest regards to you and your good family,

I remain your affectionate brother,

E. B. MORGAN.

ECHO, Cherokee Nation, May 29th.

Dear Herald:—At the age of fifteen I joined the Baptist Church; lived in that for several years, then moved where I could not join that church, when I gave my letter in to the M. E. Church. I soon became dissatisfied, and the more I studied the more dissatisfied I became. I began to search the Scriptures, and the more I read the more unsettled was my mind. I then went to God to direct me aright, and in humble prayer besought him to send me the truth, if there was any, for I believed the Scriptures, and could not see why the gifts and blessings should not follow the believers; for as yet I did not know there was such a church as the Latter Day Saints on earth. About three months after this, Bro. J. O. Stewart came. The first sermon I heard there is no tongue can express the peace and joy I received; my whole soul was lighted up, and I knew it was an answer to my prayers. I had heard of the Mormons at Salt Lake, and my husband had often told me he had never heard the truth but once, and that was by a man called a Mormon; but I little knew how much reality there was in his statement. The sermon he heard had been about thirty-five years since; but he never forgot it. After I heard the first sermon I could then hear plenty about the Mormons, as we are called. They told me all manner of evil; but the evidence I received from God was too strong—I could not doubt the truth. I heard five sermons and was baptized in three weeks from the time I heard the first. I had several dreams: one I will relate. I looked towards the north-east, and saw a large bright star, much larger than the largest stars. There was a cluster of bright stars surrounding the large star, and they all seemed to be in motion. I can not describe the grandeur. This was before I had heard a sermon, but the time I was seeking the truth. After I came into the church I began to think it might be I had not investigated enough, and before retiring, I asked God to give me a testimony. I dreamed or heard a voice say unto me three times, the passage of Scripture where it says: "Though we or an angel from heaven should preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1:9. This cleared all my fears, and I desire the prayers of the Saints, that I may prove faithful and see my husband and daughter come in the fold, with others of the Lamanites, for I desire to see all of my people come to a knowledge of the truth of the gospel, as it has been restored through an angel to Joseph the Seer. I wish there could be more laborers sent here to preach to us, as this is a large field; and I believe Bro. Stephen Maloney is all the missionary here at present; he needs help. May God help us all to be worthy the blessings we have received, is the prayer of your sister,

SUSAN A. DUNCAN.

STANBERRY, Mo., June 4th.

Bro. Joseph:—I have been separated from the church for over six years, but on February 6th, 1888, our district president, James Thomas, organized a branch at this place known as the Stanberry branch, which now numbers twelve members. We have been having good meetings, the spirit being manifested. We are not yet in full working order, and are waiting for Bro Lambert, who is in charge of this mission, to come and set us in order, two brethren having been recommended by the branch for ordination. We have organized a Sunday School at this place known as the Hope of Zion Sunday School. To traveling brethren, if any are passing this way we would be glad to welcome you. We are about seven miles from Darlington, on the C. B. & Q. R. R., and sixteen miles from Sweet Home; twenty-five miles from Grant City, and about thirty miles from Allendale and forty miles from St. Joe, Missouri. Stanberry is situated on the O. & St. L. R. R., which connects with the Wabash at Pattonsburg, in Daviess county, Missouri. The two railroads make a direct route from St. Louis to Council Bluffs. I have more I would like to say but will defer till some future time. Yours, in bonds,

ROBERT F. HILL.

MAQUOKETA, Iowa, May 31st.

Dear Herald:—After a few days work at home, I started for my field of labor. I arrived at the Mississippi river in time to see the Father of Rivers in its glory of destruction. I labored some at Buffalo, then to Davenport. While there Bro. M. T. Short came along on his way to Wisconsin, and as the waters were too high for safe rail road travel, we got aboard a steamer for Clinton. Bro. Short soon formed the acquaintance of the captain, and found him to be a fine man. He asked him for the privilege of holding meeting on the boat, which was readily granted, and the room was put in shape for us after supper. We opened our meeting and Bro. Short spoke forty-five minutes; then I followed, until we arrived at Clinton. We both had good liberty, and raised quite an inquiry among the passengers. The captain asked me to bring him one of our translations of the Bible, the next time I came on board. We were permitted to ride at half fare.

We labored at Clinton about a week, and left the Saints rejoicing in the work, and several outsiders almost ready to obey. From there we came here on the 22d and commenced meetings at once, but the wet weather has worked against us very much. Last Sunday we left here and went a few miles north to New Castle and Fulton, and on the 29th I led three more into the waters of baptism; all adults, one about sixty-five years old, and all of good standing in society, one young man who will, (if he proves faithful), make his mark in the world, for he is a natural poet. There are still more in Fulton who will obey. The good Spirit was with us at the baptism and confirmation.

On the 31st we came here again. To-morrow Bro. Short goes on to his field. May God's blessing go with him, that he may gather in many sheaves. I will hold the fort here till Saturday, then return to New Castle over Sunday, where I will baptize several more at three o'clock. The little stone is rolling on. The Presbyterians in Fulton found, when it was too late, that their craft was in danger, so they closed their church against us; but we use the school house, and have the doctrine of many turned upside down. I expect to organize a branch there in a few days. Calls are coming in from all sides for preaching. They have sent word from Iron Hill for me to come there. Last winter the Adventists closed their church against us there, after we used it a week, but I can get the school house. May God send more laborers into the vineyard. Bro. Short was a great help to me, and I wish he could have stayed longer—but his help was like his name, so I suppose I shall have to battle for the right alone, with God's help. May God give me wisdom and strength. I will organize a branch at Fulton in a few days. I have thirteen members there now, and I will baptize some more next Sunday. The Baptists and Presbyterians are raging. I will baptize a good Methodist woman next Sunday. The sheep hear His voice and will follow.

J. S. ROTH.

CREOLA, Ohio, June 5th.

Bro. Blair:—I have been busily engaged in my field since the 12th of last month. The prospect is flattering and liberty is given. I go into Gallia county on next Thursday to break new ground. A door has been opened there through the efforts of Bro. Tyler, of Wilkesville, Ohio. The appointees by General Conference in this field are all out at work. I have baptized three since General Conference.

Yours, in bonds,

L. R. DEVORE.

CAMERON, Mo., May 31st.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—The quarterly conference of the Far West district, was held at Pleasant Grove, DeKalb county, Missouri, last Saturday and Sunday, May 26th and 27th. An excellent spirit prevailed throughout the entire conference, and excepting the terrible fall of rain on Saturday afternoon, there was nothing occurred to disturb our peace. Bro. J. F. McDowell and the writer did the preaching; and notwithstanding many bridges had been washed out, and the roads left in a terrible condition, the attendance was good. The interest in the word spoken was first class.

The Pleasant Grove Saints feel proud of their neat little chapel, (which is now about completed), and of the advanced steps which they have taken within the past few months. May they ever remain so good and wise that the enemy may never again be able to retard their onward march to victory and eternal glory. I am billed for to-night, at the Delana church, near Cameron. Will probably remain here over Sunday. May go to Bucklin, Linn county, Missouri, sometime next week, and if practicable, open up the work there.

There is much, very much, to be done; but my old enemy is upon me, and if possible, seems more formidable than before. I feel the good Spirit in my heart, filling me with love and good desires. In this, I do and will rejoice.

Your brother,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

ARE WE ABIDING IN THE DOCTRINE OF CHRIST?

WHOEVER transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. 2 John 9. I have heard it said a great many times, and that too by ministers of the gospel, that it was a terrible thing to live in this world without God and Christ; and I have no doubt but that this is a fact, or in other words it is a truth. Now in order to ascertain if we are living in this world without God and Christ, we must first find out what the doctrine of Christ is, and then, in the second place, see if we are abiding in that doctrine. If we are, then we can say, that we have both the Father and the Son. It will be admitted by every Latter Day Saint at least, that whatever Christ taught was his doctrine, therefore we will go in search of some of his teachings in order to learn if we are living in this world without God and Christ. First we will call your attention to Matt. 5:13 and there we find him saying, in speaking to his followers: "Ye are the salt of the earth, but if the salt hath lost its savor wherewith shall it be salted?" It is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men. We all understand the nature of salt; that it is intended to preserve, to keep from decaying or perishing. So we must have that saving grace within us that will help to save our neighbors from sin and death. In the 14th verse of the same chapter he says: "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill can not be hid." I do hope and pray that this is the case with every Latter Day Saint. That we are in reality a light to all around us. If this is the case then we can rejoice that we are found in the doctrine of Christ.

Again in the 16th verse: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." O, dear Saints, how do we let our light shine before the world? Is it by setting a good example before them, and by attending to all duties imposed upon us by the teachers of the Lord Jesus? Or is it by conforming to the ways of the world and by following their example? Now if this is the case with us, that we are following the ways of the world, then we are not abiding in the doctrine of Christ, and consequently are living in this world without God and Christ.

Let us read that beautiful sermon delivered by Christ on the Mount, and then ask if we are living according to his teachings; and if not, let us try and commence doing so at once, that we may be in possession of the Father and the Son. Jesus said: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you, that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven." O, how much do we really love our enemies? How oft do we pray for them, according to this commandment of the Savior?

How much of the pure love of God dwells in our hearts? Is there enough to forgive those that may trespass against us? We must have that forgiving spirit within us to forgive men their trespasses as we desire the Father to forgive us our trespasses, and if we do this then we are abiding in the doctrine of Christ. But how many times must I forgive a brother or sister that trespass against me? Jesus said to Peter (Matthew 18:2), "until seventy times seven." Also in Luke 17:3-4 we read, "Take heed to yourselves; if thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent forgive him; and if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee saying, 'I repent,' thou shalt forgive him." Are we abiding in this doctrine or no? If we are not, how can we have the Father and the Son abiding within us? Again we learn in the teachings of Christ in Matt. 18:15: "If thy brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between him and thee alone. If he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother." Is this the course we pursue, or, do we run and first tell brother A, and then sister B, and then tell it as a secret to brother C, telling him never to say a word about it to any one? If this is the way we are doing, how can it be said we are abiding in the doctrine of Christ.

We find in the Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 42, page 147, "If thy brother or sister offend thee, thou shalt take him or her between him or her and thee alone; and if he or she confess, thou shalt be reconciled. And if he or she confess not, thou shalt deliver him or her up unto the church, not to the members, but to the elders." This is in harmony with the teachings of Christ in the New Testament. If we abide in this doctrine we have both the Father and the Son. I sometimes think while meditating upon this subject of forgiving seventy times seven, or seven times in one day, that I need to pray like the disciples, "O, Lord increase my faith."

Dear readers of the Herald, if we are lacking this faith to forgive our brother or sister seven times in one day, let us pray to God the Father for this kind of faith, for faith is the gift of God. It is impossible for us to obtain the gift of God without prayer, for Jesus said, "Ask and you shall receive" "Knock and it shall be opened unto you." "Seek and you shall find." The only way we have of seeking God is by prayer.

Dear Saints, are we laying up treasures on the earth where moth and rust doth corrupt? or, are we doing as Jesus commanded, laying up treasures in heaven, and helping to roll on this great latter day work by our faith and means as the law of God requires? If we are, then are we abiding in the doctrine of Christ, and have both the Father and the Son? I hope and trust that this is our happy condition as the Saints of the Most High.

JAMES KEMP.

HUTCHINSON, Colorado.

WHAT IS MY DUTY?

THE Sweet Singer of Israel has said that "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."—Psalms 19: 7.

The Seer of the nineteenth century is not less explicit in utterance:—"What doth it profit a man if a gift be bestowed upon him, and he receiveth not the gift? Behold he rejoices not in that which is given unto him, neither rejoices in Him who is the giver of the gift. . . . That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. . . . All beings who abide not in those conditions are not justified."—D. and C., p. 235. Israel's royal prince declares that the godly man will "mediate in the law of the Lord day and night."—Ps. 1: 2. Meditation is a means by which one obtains a thorough acquaintance, knowledge. If permitted to judge of the fealty of Israel's favored potentate by his acts, as per order to number the people, and the course which resulted in the death of Uriah; we may be justified in the conclusion that his "meditations" did not profit him much, for according to the Apostolic injunction of a later date, he had done but one fourth of his duty for that edict demands continuance, remembrance and performance, (James 1: 25), and is but a reiteration of the stern mandate through Moses. (Deut. 17: 18-20).

An intelligent knowledge of God's law was a duty, obligatory upon every citizen or resident of comprehensive mind within Israel's jurisdiction. (Num. 15: 15, 16; Deut. 6: 5-9). The law was written and carefully guarded with jealous caution by the priests and the Israelitish services unlike the orato-lecture innovations of modern times consisted in the reading of that law to the people on the Sabbath days, and at their festivals. As David declared, even so Israel made the law of the Lord their theme. Notwithstanding the law was written and its teaching incumbent upon priests and people, men were selected to teach their law as a specialty and to execute judgment and justice in accordance therewith; and as salvation, the promised blessing to the nations of the earth through Abraham and his seed, must be of the Jews, the prophetic injunction of Malichi to "remember the law commanded in Horeb for all Israel with the statutes and judgments," could not be lightly regarded by any coming messenger. Hence when the prophet, Christ, was raised up to be a teacher unto the people (Deut. 18: 15-19) he pointed them to the law of Moses. (Jno. 5: 39-47). This to the Jews.

The Gentiles were not referred beyond the gospel law, but were bound thereby, but none the less under the dispensation of apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers under whose instructions each individual should learn his duty. In the apostolic discipline, the meridian of time, a period of the past; that period in which the gospel was offered to the sons of Judah, who in rejecting it were themselves rejected and left to their own resources and sorrowful wanderings and afflictions. But now the morning and noontide of time is past and we dwell beneath the sunset shadows of the approaching end, and God is again traversing the earth as in the Edenic morn, and utters his voice to all created intelligence, (D. and C., 1 par. 1), inviting them to rest beneath the shadow of his mercy. The renewed offer of heirship with the King of Peace and the re-establishment of statutes and judgments as a bulwark for weakness; wisdom for a guide; a fountain for uncleanness; and a tower of strength for the humble (D. and C., p. 65), by which also we are bidden to search and live. He has set up his pillars of remembrance all along life's highway to point out, and guide the patient and the weary pilgrim, that they need not stray therefrom; the apostle to establish the work; the prophet to confirm, admonish and comfort; evangelists to bear the message; elders, as pastors to watch over and protect the flock; priests to instruct in duty and point out the way; teachers to admonish, reprove and correct missteps; deacons to administer in the external temporalities of the fold and flock; High Priests—men of approved virtue, wisdom and experience—the old men for counsel; and bishops to provide and see to the financial interests of the household of faith, and judge the people in accordance with the divine economy of the Master. All these receive their instruction in the school of the prophets, each in his own field of labor—how beautiful and harmonious the workings will be, and if each performs his duty promptly and faithfully in the fear of God, how efficient and perfect the church will become by each one learning their duty. God hasten the time when this will be according as He has designed.

The Twelve are to regulate the affairs of the church (organizations) in all the world. From this it appears; and in the absence of any other authorized department of church officials, the Twelve as the chief missionaries have the right, and they only can correct and establish the principles of doctrine, church government and polity in the organized portions of the church correctly, effectually and acceptably unto the Master.

Our districts as at present existing, are but the creations of an emergency, and are unknown in the original law of the Lord, and sooner or later had to be either approved by the lawgiver or superceded by the legitimate provisions of the divine statutes. These divisions of whatever name, shade or color, are not, never have, nor ever can be independent, but dependent on the provision, council and decision of the Twelve, confirmed by the church in council assembled, and those who fear to trust to the action of that tribunal would seem to lack confidence in him who gave the law. But I may not dwell on quorum duties; suffice it that all must be guided into their line of duty by the law, and this should be their meditation, reading, re-reading and thinking, day and night. Then the Spirit will be with them to aid, comfort and bless the work of their hands just so far as they are doer's of the work assigned them. But what is my duty? The Scriptures are supposed to make the matter very plain. Aye, if I were an Israelite it would seem that the Bible was plain enough; but prophets, priests and teachers were constantly in demand, and yet Israel were incessantly transgressing.

Access to, and knowledge of the written word did not save them nor ripen their minds for the reception of Christ and the gospel. I, in my generation, am more highly favored than they were. With them the written word was scarce and very precious; in my day the printed word is scattered broad-cast through the land, and neither man, woman nor child, rich or poor, need be without one or more copies. Nay, I am yet more favored than they. The Nephite record with its golden lore, is within easy reach, and better still, God hath spoken to us by his own voice in this latter day, three testimonies, accompanied with apostolic power, and the New Testament sealed by the blood of martyrs, with no decrease of living, breathing instructors. Evangelists to second the apostolic preaching of the word; pastors to watch over and guard the church; high priests, men of honor, wisdom, experience, sagacity and prudence to stand as pillars, stakes, counsellors, out-posts and watchmen on the environments of Zion's towers. Priests of the added order with minds steeped in the law of God to visit and instruct in duty toward God, my fellow man, my household, my brother, my sister, my own salvation and the details of every day life. Constant reminders, walking encyclopedias of God's will. Patient, persevering and examples of forbearance and trust.

God hath also established by decree, that I should have a teacher to check me in my transgressions; to admonish indifference toward law; to lead me from perversity and to place my feet in the path of my duty. And last, but not least, He has set also deacons in His church, as helps in government, to aid the poor, and to have the oversight for the temporal comfort and necessities of the congregation attending at the house of God.

Ah! here is my duty: If called to be an ambassador of Christ, to seek and search diligently into His law, and be faithful to my trust toward my fellow-man, brother, sister, and my household; to give diligent heed to the instruction and admonition of those whom God hath appointed to watch over my doings. God's law is perfect, converting the souls of all who are willing to give ear and diligently obey the instructions of the word and the letter; and they shall have His Spirit to aid, comfort, strengthen and perfect them for this life and in the realms of the blessed, for saith God: "I give you directions how you may act before me, that it may turn to you for salvation. I the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise."—D. and C., p. 221.

CATHOLICISM.—No. II.

BY ELDER M. T. SHORT.

I WILL make some condensed extracts from, and brief comments upon "Catholic belief; or a short and simple exposition of Catholic doctrine by the very Rev. Joseph Faa Di Bruno, D. D."

The above work received the imprimatur of John Cardinal McClosky, Archbishop of New York, June 5th, 1884, and edited by Rev. Louis A. Lambert, author of Notes on Ingersoll, and copyrighted by Benziger Brothers, printers to the Holy Apostolic see.

The gifted author's piety and zeal are worthy of a better cause. His treatise contains four hundred and sixteen pages. Love to God and devotion to the church, and pity for the "separated brethren," form the warp and woof, or the leading characteristics of the whole production. The Oriental schismatics and the dissenters of the Occident are alike addressed as wayward children, and admonished, exhorted, besought and implored to return to the true, sole and only fold from which their refractory ancestors have inadvertently strayed.

Like many a pious monk, the Rev. gentleman can importune, claim peace of mind and purity of purpose; make arbitrary allegations; boast of great age and numerous adherents, and jump at unwarrantable conclusions, better than he can define, much less defend "The mystery of iniquity." He judiciously observes that "True religion is that bond which unites the finite with the infinite, time to eternity, and man to God." This one creator is declared to be "incorporeal," and "everywhere present." The doctrine of the trinity is called "a profound mystery," but each person, while distinct from the other, is of the same essence, equal in power, eternity and immensity.

I venture my humble opinion that God, the Father, is ever supreme, that the Son cooperated in creation, was subordinate in his incarnation, holds delegated authority in the church, is at the right hand of power now, will come to judge the world, eventually will subdue the nations; and finally subdue death itself; but "He is excepted which did put all things under him." The Holy Ghost is more immense than our Father in heaven; for it permeates the universal creation, sustains, controls and upholds all things, and is none other than the Omnipresent power of the eternal. We personify the Holy Spirit like he, the sun, or she, the moon, or ships, &c., but it is no person. As a representative of the church, and from the established dogmas he would not dare to dissent or exercise a private opinion, he advocates natural pollution, or original sin, and infantile regeneration, howbeit Christ says, "of such are the kingdom of heaven."

The Catholic Church are not content with the immaculate conception of Jesus Christ, and the virginity of Mary up to his wonderful birth, but aver that the mother of God was in like manner conceived, or specially exempt from original pollution, and continued a virgin till the day of her death. In Matthew first, Joseph is called the husband of Mary, and she, in turn, is termed his wife. "He knew her not ill she had brought forth her first born son." To further refute the wild raving, this needless falsehood of "Holy Church," see Matt. 13:55, 56.

"Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren James and Joses and Simon and Judas? And his sisters are they not all with us?" Or, as Mark records the facts, "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James," &c. Popish bunglers think that the brothers and sisters of our dear Lord, were the issue of St. Joseph, and Mary Cleopas, but he, Joseph, could not put away his wife only for adultery. (See Matt. 5:32; 19:9; Mark 10:11; Luke 16:18.) They had better let "all generations" call her "blessed" with "her children," "for marriage is honorable and the bed is undefiled." Hear the Lord by or through Paul: "Let not the wife depart from her husband; but if she depart, let her remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband, and let not the husband put away his wife." These sons and daughters were born during the earthly pilgrimage of Mary the mother of Jesus, and if, forsooth, Joseph had not lawfully wedded his wife, or he was authoritatively (?) released, or she became barren, or was actually dead, what business had Joseph with "Mary the wife of Cleopas?" John 19:25.

Brother Bruno's memory is wonderfully treacherous, and woefully at fault; for lo! and behold he said,—“As the union of Christ with the church can not be broken, so the bond between husband and wife is indissoluble,” and that, too, under all circumstances.

In addition to the thirty-nine books of the Old Testament, accepted as canonical and sacred by the Jewish world; and all Christendom; they have adopted the legendary traditions and apochryphal writings of the ancient Israelites, under the title of Deuterocanonical. Our author observes "these books, though not registered in the Jewish canon, were nevertheless held by many of the fathers of the earlier centuries as canonical and forming a part of the deposit of revealed truths entrusted to the church."

Their inspiration, and canonical authority rests solely and alone on decisions of Romish councils, and decrees of "mother Church." Neither the Greeks nor Latins had original jurisdiction over the Hebrew Scriptures.

A few quotations will rebuke this undue stretch of priestly arrogance. To the elect nation and the custodians of God's word, "were committed the oracles of God." "Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises." "He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation."

Many of the early fathers, and even Jerome did not accept the books that Christ and the apostles did not believe, or even honor with a solitary quotation therefrom. When the Carthaginian councils decreed and declared these fabulous romances divine all cringing questioning ceased. They then "freely quoted from them to uphold Catholic doctrine." "The great doctor, St Augustine, Bishop of Hippo, said, 'I would not believe the gospel were I not moved thereto by the authority of the Catholic Church.'" They claim a monopoly on the Paraclete, or Holy Spirit, by which they guard and translate the written, and explain and give authority to the traditional or unwritten word. "A wrong explanation turns the word of God into the word of man; and, what is worse, the word of the devil." Then much is said about it being truthfully translated; and authoritatively and infallibly interpreted by legitimate and lawful successors in order to constitute it the safe and infallible word of God to us, the faithful, pious, and true. The primacy of St. Peter, the lawful successorship of all reigning pontiffs; the infallibility of the supreme pastor, at least since July 18th, 1870, and the indefectibility of the church, are all argued sparringly, and fulminated with a heroic persistence. The first shepherd was to feed the lambs, strengthen the brethren, feed the sheep, hold the keys; and in fact, he was the veritable rock upon which, and from which the church was both reared, and received its solidity. Theologians, annotators, paraphrasists, and divines have failed to see in "this rock," "Jesus," and the means of knowing that he is "very Christ." Sever this media of divine communication and all would be uncertainty and doubt, and the entire Godhead would be unknowable and unknown; but God's indwelling Spirit gives of its eternal strength and adamantine solidity to the weary, fainting, hungering soul.

They own up that the successor of St. Peter may err in private judgment, and may fall into sin, and even become a heretic; but when defining solemnly a doctrine, or when speaking ex cathedra, God would not suffer his vicar to err. I guess the first pope was not speaking officially when he denied his Master three several times; neither was he talking "ex cathedra" when Paul "withstood him to the face because he was to blame," and "walked not uprightly according to the truth."

If I wanted a church built upon a poor fallible man, give me Paul. Hear him:—"I labored more than they all," but I only "know in part." We acknowledge that Peter, James and John, and all the apostles held great authority, but Paul, it appears, magnified his office and calling before God.

While "His Holiness," Pope Leo XII, is "Our Holy Father;" metropolitan and suffragan bishops are titled "Most Reverends and Right Reverends;" and virginal priests are called fathers; but Paul, Peter, James, John and Jude, etc., were recognized simply as apostles, servants of the Lord, or elders of the church. These "great swelling words of vanity" and high sounding adjectives "allure through the lusts of the flesh." All such work is prohibited by the meek and lowly, the humble and holy child, Jesus the Christ. Such pseudonyms as Rabbi, Master, Father, etc., were distasteful and obnoxious to him. "Hear ye Him." "And call no man your father upon the earth; for one is your Father which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters, for one is your master, even Christ."—Matt 23: 9, 10. "Mother" says, disposition, faith, and good works do not effect, or merit justification or remission; but they come gratuitously through the merits of Jesus Christ; though the recipient has to have faith and fear, hope and charity, repentance and baptism, which, according to my way of thinking, commends him to God and merits his favor all in accord with the merits of Jesus Christ; every good work; our present development and future growth; our sure remission and certain justification; our triumphant warfare and future crown are all merited through our lawful striving, the holy council of Trent to the contrary. We can have venial, or trifling, and mortal, or deadly sins remitted through the absolution and penance of a duly authorized priest; and by "satisfaction," get to heaven any way, merit or no merit, as the case may be. The "imperceptible substance" of the eucharist is changed; but the great apostle to the Gentiles said, eat and drink, "discerning the Lord's body," which is the visible church with its organization and doctrine, gifts, graces, blessings and experience.

When the bread and wine are blest it at once becomes an object of divine adoration for "God," say they, "is with us, in either, or both specie, and in the veriest fragments thereof." If they would have called the partaking of the emblems a memorial feast, instead of a "commemorative sacrifice," they would have been right for once. Then they would not need to talk about the unbloody body; the elevation of the host; the mystical death; the victim and perpetual sacrifice of the Lamb of God. "Christ was once offered," but since received up to and passed "into heaven itself." On sacrifices in the new law read the following:—Ps. 51: 17. Heb. 13: 16. 1 Pet. 2: 5. Rom. 12: 1.

As the sacrifices of, or under the old Sinaiatic covenant were death, typical and real; so are those under the gospel regime the very antipodes, or symbolical of, and appertaineth to life, both present and eternal. The former was instituted in wrath upon a stiff-necked people in Arabia by the hand of Moses, until Christ crucified became the end of the law, nailing it to the cross; whereas, the everlasting covenant with the component sacrifices are both fixed and eternal. An humble, contrite, living, meek, spiritual oblation will be in order and forthcoming throughout the multifarious changes of duration. The altar service, the bleeding victim and the funeral pyre, would never have been imposed, had faith and trust, humility and obedience characterized the Hebrew race. To find out God's estimate upon these superadded barnacles upon healthy development and true progress, please read Psalms 40: 6, 50, 8; Isa. 1: 11; Jer. 6: 20; Amos 5: 21, 22; Heb. 10: 1-10; 1 Sam. 15: 22.

To revive anything that has subserved its purpose, even by synods, councils, conclaves or furious fulminating decrees is fruitless arrogance, and stupidity with a vengeance. The work now under examination states that Catholics believe that in the Holy Eucharist Transubstantiation, or a change of substance, takes place for the simple reason that our Savior at the last supper, did not say: "In this," or "with this is my body," but He said: "This is my body." "This is my blood," etc., and Luther's con-substantiation, or co-existence of the two substances is denied as a crude heresy.

Romanists write about inward substance, holy, continual, commemorative sacrifice; veil, or accident of bread and wine; real presence; mystical death and notable change; but their reasons and deductions are about as far fetched as the person who supposed Balaam saddled his animal to carry his children to church to have them sprinkled. I pity any poor soul that has or may plod through tomes of scholastic divinity of the papal type, so as to represent fair and honest, the catholic system. Impious assumption, twisted tradition, incongruous testimony of the fathers, garbled and perverted Scriptures, with vain boasts of age, succession, legitimate occupation and a numerous following form the warp and woof of their theological lore.

If an individual is not favorably impressed with the "solemn ceremonies" "added by the church," "under the guidance of the Holy Spirit," which may "be changed or omitted," as in "cases of necessity," he is not a faithful papist. When the blind devotee beholds the "adornment of the house of God, the altar, the tabernacle, and the throne gleaming with rich ornaments; when they see that the priests and their assistants are robed with distinctive emblematic vestments, and especially when they see them bend their knees in humble adoration before the consecrated Host and consecrated Chalice, their faith and devotion are strengthened, and the practical lesson they receive is likely to do them more good than any sermon on the subject."

To forever silence and condemn such popish priestcraft the servants of the living and true God want to preach the word, with all long suffering and doctrine. It is written the Unchangeable, Supreme, All Wise saves the believer through preaching; hence do not be lured or enticed by Vatican brilliancy, oriental splendor, sectarian nonsense or the pageantry of a dying world. "The uplifting of the Host and the repeated genuflections of the priest" are thought to promote and intensify worship, but Holy Water is not commanded, but "piously recommended" to "signify purity of soul."

They claim that St. Justin, of the second century, advocated the sprinkling of holy water on the faithful on Sundays while assemblies were statu quo.

The burning candles, on the altar are "emblematic ornaments" to symbolize or represent our faith, charity and devotion; but, methinks, you will have to shut your eyes to discover the analogy or see the point.

Distinctive robes, ornaments and rich vestments are brought graciously into the account, for Rev. 17:4 tells us "the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls;" but "John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins."

As to the sign of the cross in use all over the Catholic world, suffice to say that Jesus taught nothing of the kind; neither did the inspired apostles. Our Savior enjoined the cross of obedience before he was nailed to the transverse wood. That term implied a cancellation of evil desires; the subjugation and mortification of body and will, the following of Christ and the learning of his virtues and the application of his precepts, doctrine and law. It can not be signalized with the vegetable, or mineral productions of earth, but appertaineth to the "hidden man of the heart." When you can get nations, great empires, numerous generations, and the so called Christian world, to believe that a particle of bread, and a drop or so of grape juice, blessed by the priest, is Christ present, or God with us, to dispense grace, hear prayers, receive adoration and give "food for the journey" of death, I would not think it strange if the Virgin Mary would tell some credulous monk that the moon is made of limberger cheese. "Forty hours' exposition of the blessed sacrament" and "the benediction of the most holy sacrament," are performed in painful detail, with pomp, enthusiasm and solemnity. Songs, prayers, kneelings and genuflections, are the order, and woe betide the dissenter, as the movable feast parades the principal streets in Catholic ridden states. "An act of spiritual communion" is thus described in abbreviated form: "O my Jesus, present in the most holy sacrament of the altar, let the sweet and consuming force of thy love absorb my whole soul, that I may die for thee, who was pleased to die upon the cross for me."

Inasmuch as we are "saved by his life," it appears more noble, to me, to live for Jesus, and his cause, than to die, to shirk responsibility, and defeat labor. But this willing martyrdom is a poetical flight, suitable for the wee small hours of elysian fancy.

"Confirmation is a sacrament instituted by the Lord, by which the faithful, who have already been made children of God by baptism, receive the Holy Ghost by prayer, unction, and the laying on of the hands of the Bishop, the successor of the apostles."

We observe that water baptism alone does not adopt into the kingdom of God's dear son, but the birth of the spirit, through the laying on of the hands, of authorized administrators, completes the new birth, or creates anew in Christ Jesus.

Anointing is not to confirm, as above taught, neither to endow "with the gifts, graces and virtue of fortitude," but for the administering to the sick; and, as for bishops being legitimate successors to the Holy Inspired Apostles, judge ye. "The seven-fold graces of the Holy Ghost," succeed and supplant "these signs," promised by our Savior, and "the manifestation of the Spirit" advocated by Paul; and "the spirit of prophecy" vouchsafed by St. John.

The dominant church, as also the oriental Schismatics have sacrament on the brain, and my author in treating upon matrimony, says, "St. Paul calls it not only a sacrament but a great sacrament;"

but it is safe to say that the word itself is not in all the word of God, but the vernacular of Latium.

"God made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions," and "thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions;" therefore, let us call scriptural things by Bible names, and not in "the speech of Ashdod," or the jargon of "Mystery Babylon."

"As the union of Christ with the church can not be broken, so the bond between husband and wife is indissoluble."

Here is a duplex false premise, consequently all reasonings and deductions will be damaging and disastrous.

The combined testimonies of inspiration, ecclesiastical historians and the present aspect of entire Christendom enunciate, confirm and establish authentically the great and universal apostasy from the original faith and worship.

As touching the connubial relation our Lord and Savior taught that adultery was the sole and only ground, or cause for separation, putting away, or divorce, hence, when his spouse, "the woman," committed spiritual fornication with the potentates of the world, and became drunk on the blood of martyrs, and Saints, Jesus by his own rule, put away "The great whore that sitteth upon many waters." To neutralize their own law the church can inquire into the family circle, trump up "invalidating causes," and declare the whole affair "null and void from the beginning." This procedure, Catholic logicians claim, is not dissolving but declaring that no real marriage existed.

The identity of "mother church" is predicated on the supremacy of the pope, the vicar of God, and the center of unity. No higher degree of priesthood is claimed for "His Holiness" than other bishops, but a difference in authority and jurisdiction. A visible head is maintained, to assemble general councils, to found bishoprics, to fill vacant sees, to settle disputes, to send missionaries abroad, to evangelize the world and to unify and save the race. It is further avowed that St. Peter's chair was recognized and concurred in, universally for the first seven hundred years of Christianity.

"Bossuet rightly observes that the successors of St. Peter must come straight down from heaven, or we must confess that there are no other successors to St. Peter but the Roman Pontiff."

The first half of the above quotation was intended to express an absurd impossibility, but, forsooth, the eternal truth found vent through an ultramontane channel.

After darkness was to cover the earth and gross darkness was to enshroud the people, the angel of the Apocalypse, Rev. 14:6, was to reveal, restore and recommit to man the primitive, pure, everlasting gospel, or law of the heavenly kingdom. The legitimate, lawful and direct successor of the first key holder and chief apostle, was the first elder, apostle, prophet, and seer of this the "dispensation of the fulness of times;" which was an absolute necessity to usher in the day dawn and to harbinger the millennium.

Our Moses man was ordained by John the Baptist to preach and administer the gospel of repentance, and finally by Peter, James and John to perform all the ordinances of divine service, to adopt aliens into the household of faith; to build up the kingdom in all the world; to feed the lambs, sheep, flock and shepherds; to receive the mind and will of God from time to time, and to be clothed with the plenitude, power, and authority of the Melchisedec priesthood. The supreme pastorate was foreshadowed through the great Hebrew law-giver, and Joshua his lawful successor, established fully and authoritatively in the person of Jesus Christ himself, and Peter his successor, and restored to the illustrious martyr and perpetuated through the head of his posterity.

To array ourself against the prophetic office is to squarely oppose Omnipotence, for saith God: "By a prophet was Israel brought out of Egypt, and by a prophet was he preserved." We have to hold that God has changed and has no Israel, or that he is the same and doth lead, guide, and preserve His people by the counsel of a living prophet.

Papists think and so advocate, that the church was built upon Peter, the masculine of rock, according to the original, but it is evident that this "rock," in keeping with the genius of the language was of the neuter gender. The gates of hell were not to prevail against "it."

The laws of language and the concordant testimonies of all grammarians witness that all pronouns must agree with their antecedent in person, gender, number and case. A pronoun looking to Peter for its antecedent would be "him," the masculine form, or, did it mean the church, it would be "her," the feminine gender to agree with "the bride" "the Lamb's wife." "This rock" of revelation, or the grand fact that Jesus was Christ, and the means of knowing the same, were never to be overcome, nor taken away by the powers of darkness, although Peter might deny his Lord and try to revamp the dogma of circumcision, and even the beautiful church would go into the wilderness of sin.

General, or ecumenical councils, must be convoked by the pope or his legate; but one held in Constantinople, A. D. 553, was not by his order or even his consent; which, however, afterward received his sanction, hence ecumenical. Constantine, the first Christian emperor, assisted in the one held at Nice, in the first quarter of the fourth century, and Theodocius, the Great; and the Younger, and Justinian, and other crowned heads, have commanded and convened councils, the papal claim to the contrary. These assemblies have been the means of intrigue dishonesty, usurpation, litigation, fanaticism, domineering, quarreling, cabals, cruelty and blood-thirsty intolerance.

How much, and how far, poor Arius denied the divinity of the Son, it would be difficult to know at this late date. Calumniators, traducers and ecclesiastical judges of an adverse and radical type, would spare no pains to give us the full benefit of his supposed or real heresies.

The learned presbyter of Africa denied the consubstantiality of the Son of Man with the Father, which means not only a participation of, and union in the same nature; but the coexistence of essence, and an identity in the same substance. We suggest that he took our nature and place, had a mortal body, that had to be regenerated, performed the office of a mediator, grew in body and mind, was obedient to an ignominious death, wrought out a perfect atonement and is now exalted at the right hand of God, all of which could not be true if the Nicene fathers, the Athenasian creed, Catholicism, the eastern Schismatics and the western dissenters are in the right.

Nestorius was deposed of his charge at Constantinople, A. D. 431, and "condemned for maintaining that in Jesus Christ there were two distinct persons,—a human person, born of the Virgin Mary, and the divine person, that is, the eternal Word."

The author of the pentateuch proclaimed, "The God of the spirits of all flesh;" and Israel's wise king, "The spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Zechariah allowed that "The Lord formeth the spirit of man within him." And the Gentile apostle revoiced the sentiment, enlarged the view, embellished the thought and drew a beautiful contrast between our heavenly and earthly parents, as follows:—"Furthermore, we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence; shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits and live?"

How Mary could be the mother of a body older than herself, or co-existent with the eternal is not clear to my mind; but admit that all matter, either organized or elemental, is from everlasting, then we can discern in what sense she is "The mother of my Lord." "The inner man" is "the offspring of God," whereas "outward man" is generated and formed according to the established law of procreation.

Selections.

MILLENNIUM.—No. 6.

THE apostasy of the Gentiles is a subject that I believe is no where disputed in all the professing world. It is acknowledged by all that the present generation of religious Gentiles is in a state of confusion and distraction. The cry of heresy, delusion, false prophet, and false Christ, which is everywhere sounded in our land, is testimony to the point; and is not only to the point, but is conclusive also that this generation have departed from the principles of the true faith, and are led by false spirits, and teach one another doctrines which are not according to godliness. There is no fact plainer in the world than the fact that the Church of Christ has disappeared; for if one society had remained as organized by the apostles, there would have been a living pattern to have formed others by, and the difficulties which now exist in the religious world could not have existed at all. But in consequence of every society which the apostles formed, being broken up, the world is left without a pattern. And this is one of the great reasons of their present confusion and darkness; or their strife and partyism, because they can not agree as to the order of a church as originally established by the apostles. Some think it was one way and some think it was another; and one attempt is made after another to restore the true order of the church to the world. But instead of getting it done, the sects only multiply, party upon party, and opinion upon opinion; leaving the world, in relation to the order of the church of Christ, where they found it. They have as yet never been able either to restore to the world the church, or the gospel on which it was founded. Let them restore to one another what they will, or what they can, the gospel and the church they have not, nay, they can not restore! and that for this reason, because they are in a state of apostasy, and God has devoted them to destruction unless they will learn the things which he has caused to be written for the salvation of his people which are of the house Israel. See Jeremiah, 12: 14, 15, 16, 17.

In vain will the Gentiles of this generation attempt to reform themselves or others, or to obtain what they have lost, so long as this sentence stands written by the authority of the Holy Spirit. "If ye continue in his goodness, otherwise thou shalt be cut off."—Rom. 11: 22. So sure as ever this sentence was penned by the inspiration of God, so sure the Gentiles will seek to reform themselves and others in vain, so as to retain the kingdom of God among them. For as sure as ever the Lord caused the above sentence to be written, so certain the present Gentile world with all its parties, sects, denominations, reformations, revivals or religion, societies and associations, are devoted to destruction; for, "continue" in the goodness of God, they did not; and cut off they must be as sure as ever Paul was inspired of the Holy Spirit to write and make known the will of God to man and reveal his purposes to the generations which were to succeed him on the earth. For he has declared, and that never to be controverted, (though it may be caviled at), that the Gentiles should be cut off, if they ever apostatized from the truth as the Jews had done before them; and that when this time came (I mean the time to prepare for the cutting off of the Gentiles) that the Lord would set his hand again to recover his people which he had scattered; and that he would gather them and bring them again to the land of their fathers, and build them up a holy people unto himself. This is the testimony of all the holy prophets since the world began; they all saw it and understood it, and wrote of it. It was one of the principal topics on which the Savior dwelt while in the flesh; the apostles considered it of the first consequence to all, they spoke of it; they wrote of it; they warned the world about it; they comforted the hearts of the disciples with it; they rejoiced in the anticipation of it, and they glorified God that he had ever purposed in the divine mind to bring in such a day of glory and rejoicing as the glorious day of redemption, when they should receive their bodies glorified like the glorious body of the Savior and obtain the end of their faith, even the salvation of their souls.

The millenium is that order of things which will follow the second advent of the Savior into the world, when he shall come to be glorified in his Saints and admired of all them that believe. But previous to the Millenium, there must great changes take place in the world, both political and religious—great revolutions will take place among men to prepare the way of the Son of man and such revolutions and changes as never took place since the world began—changes which will effect the inhabitants of the whole world to the remotest bounds of the universe; no corner so sequestered as not to feel their influence; no cave too deep to hear the sound thereof and to feel the influence of the unparalleled events which will precede the millenium. The way of this day of wonders will be prepared by a general commotion of all nature. Even eternity itself shall feel it. The lightnings shall flash, the thunders shall roar, and earthquakes bellow until the lower creation trembles. Angels shall fly to and fro through the midst of heaven, crying to the inhabitants of the earth, and proclaiming the judgments of God against them. Gentile sectarianism shall fall like a tottering fabric, the foundation of which has given way. Such will be the terrors which will precede the Millenium that all faces will gather blackness, and nation will lash against nation, kingdom against kingdom, empire against empire, country against country, and people against people. The Saints of God which are scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth shall be gathered together; both men and heavenly messengers will be employed in gathering them until not one shall be left of all the Saints of the Most High; but they shall all be gathered together and shall be taught and instructed until they are prepared for the reception of their King, and then he will unvail the heavens and all nations, tongues, kindreds, and languages, shall see him, and at his presence the wicked, which remain, shall perish, and the righteous only be left. And then comes the millenium, which will last for one thousand years.

Having ascertained to a certainty the situation of the Gentile world at present, and their condition in relation to the things of God; and that as concerning the faith of the Saints they are reprobates, having departed from the true faith, to follow after fables to so great an extent, that there is not one society left which is standing as the apostles left the church, and as they directed that the church should continue; and that all the sects, among all the people of the Gentiles, have departed from the faith and have turned away, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, and have made void the faith of God by their traditions. For we have seen that all sects and parties have ceased to bring forth the fruits of the kingdom of heaven according to the order established by those who were immediately inspired of God to establish his kingdom among men and that the Gentiles have ceased to bring forth the fruit which they brought forth when the kingdom of heaven was first given unto them, and that the gospel which the apostles preached is now considered heresy among them, and that a man who would attempt to contend for the very things for which the ancient apostles contended, would be called a heretic, an imposter, a false prophet and every other evil epithet that could be heaped upon him.

The apostasy of the Gentiles is so great that they know not the doctrine of Christ when they hear it; neither are they capable of distinguishing the Saints of God from those who follow after the evil one, nor the gospel of the blessed God from fables. In so saying, I wish to be understood, as embracing all the Gentiles, without regard to sect, party or name; for there is no difference among them: there is not one sect or party in all the sectarian world but has departed from the faith and is not walking according to the gospel of Christ: neither is there one sect which preaches the gospel; but a part of it only, and the remainder they despise; and not only the gospel, but those also who believe and proclaim it. We deem it therefore unnecessary to pursue this part of our subject any further, as we have seen beyond the possibility of a doubt that the Gentiles are in the very situation that the prophets and the apostles said they would be, when the Lord should set his hand to prepare a people for his coming, and to gather his Saints together, that he might come in and sup with them, according to his promise, manifest himself to them, and unvail the heavens and come down and reign with them, and over them a thousand years—that is, with those raised from the dead and glorified, or translated, and over those who were in the flesh. For the former are to reign with him, but the latter to serve him during his thousand years' reign on the earth.

Having got our way prepared, we will now attend to the first item we proposed investigating, in the order which we have laid down, to be pursued in the investigation of this subject: that is, Christ's second coming, or in other words, his reign on the earth.

The subject of Christ's reign on the earth is one of vast importance in the estimation of the sacred writers, and one on which they have dwelt with great delight, and in which they seemed to feel the greatest interest.

The Psalmist David speaks of it in the most enthusiastic terms: "The Lord reigneth; let the earth rejoice; let the multitude of isles be glad thereof. Ps. 97:1. In Ps. 93:1 he says: "The Lord reigneth, he is clothed with majesty; the Lord is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself: the world also is established, that it can not be moved."

Again in Ps. 96:10, he says, "Say among the heathen that the Lord reigneth the world also shall be established that it shall not be moved: he shall judge the people righteously. Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord; for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth."

From what we have previously shown respecting the Savior's second advent into the world, there can be no difficulty in understanding to what the Psalmist had an allusion in the foregoing quotations. As there is no reign of the Lord mentioned which is to be on the earth, but the thousand years' reign, or Millennium, the reader has only to notice that it is the world which is to rejoice, and the earth is to be glad when the Lord reigneth. The matter therefore is settled, that it is his reign on the earth on which the Psalmist had his eye fixed, when he wrote the foregoing Psalms. Two things are to be noticed in the above quotations. The first is, that the Lord is to reign on the earth, and secondly that when he reigns on the earth, it is to be glad and to rejoice. The fact of the world being established, and the earth rejoicing, will enable us to understand many passages of Scripture that we otherwise could not understand; but with the aid of these facts they will become very plain, and vastly interesting to the believers—a few of which we shall quote. We will begin with Isaiah, 35:2-8. The prophet thus expresses himself: "The wilderness and the solitary places shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice, even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water: in the habitation of dragons, where each lay, shall be grass with reeds and rushes." A small degree of attention will enable the reader to see that Isaiah and David had their eyes fixed on the same period. David says, The Lord reigneth let the earth rejoice, let the multitude of isles be glad thereof. Isaiah says, The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. We see that they both have said the same thing; that is, the earth is to rejoice and be glad when the Lord reigns. Isaiah says, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense, he will come and save you. For what will he come? To reign upon the earth, to make the wilderness be glad and the desert to blossom as the rose. Let any person read the above quotations with care and he can not but see that all refer to the same period.

Conference Minutes.

LITTLE SIOUX.

This district conference met at Magnolia, Iowa, Saturday, June 2d; president of district, J. C. Crabb, in the chair; P. Cadwell associate president; W. C. Cadwell and D. Maule clerks. Branch reports.—Spring Creek 90, Willow Valley 50, Magnolia 170, Unionburg 35, Logan 60; no reports from Little Sioux, Union Center, or Sioux City. Sunday School reports.—Persia, average attendance, 20. Woodbine, enrollment 45; average attendance 29 2-5. Logan, average attendance, 38. Magnolia Ladies' Aid Society reported having collected for two years $161 34; paid for chairs, painting, carpet and lamps, for church, $125.87; tithing $20; donations $11.80. Bishop's agent reported: On hand at last report $97.79, received $57.10, paid out $92.62, on hand $62.27; referred to a committee consisting of S. B. Kibler, D. Chambers and R. Farmer, who subsequently reported that they had examined and found it correct. Official reports.—High Priests C. Derry, J. C. Crabb and P. Cadwell; J. F. Mintun of the Seventy; Elders D. Chambers, H. O. Smith (by letter), C. Downs, J. M. Putney, W. Chambers (baptized 1), J. H. Hunt, E. R. Lanpher, Henry Garner, R. Farmer, D. Maule, W. C. Cadwell, Joseph Seddon (of Galland's Grove district), Isaac Shupe, Andrew Joneson, A. W. Lockling, John T. Coffman, Frederick Hansen, L. Merchant, and P. C. Kemish (by letter); Priests Wm. T. Fallon, John Harper, J. C. Johnson, J. L. Gunsolly, M. Daugherty and James Emmerson; Teachers R. Chaburn and W. R. Davison; and Deacons John Benson and Wm. Trospen reported. Bro. S. B. Kibler made a statement with reference to his labors distributing tracts and opening up places and other means of getting the truth before the people of Woodbine and vicinity. The president invited all to report in future, whether brethren or sisters, who were engaged in distribution of tracts or similar labor. Little Sioux branch requested that Bro. John T. Coffman be ordained an elder; on motion he was so ordained under the hands of C. Derry, J. C. Crabb and P. Cadwell. Spring Creek branch was reported by W. Chambers, Magnolia by D. Maule, Willow Valley by John Harper, Logan by P. Cadwell, and Union Center by J. M. Putney. Matter as laid over from last conference with reference to rescinding all standing resolutions on the district record, was on motion further postponed until next conference. On motion the general church and district authorities were sustained in righteousness by our faith and prayers. W. C. Cadwell presented the matter of the organization of a branch at Woodbine, and said that if given permission to organize there, that he had assurance that a church building could be erected. On motion the Saints at Woodbine were granted the privilege of organizing, and Bro. Derry appointed to look after the matter. Request for assistance to build the Independence church was presented; also in reference to Saints' College, as shown by letter from Bro. Weld of Lamoni. Two days' meetings were appointed as follows: Persia, June 23d and 24th; Willow Valley, July 14th and 15th; Little Sioux, July 21st and 22d; Moorhead, August 4th and 5th; Twelve Mile Grove, August 25th and 26th. An interesting discussion was had Saturday evening on the general subject of missions, and the duties of elders, resulting in the adoption of a motion that, "The priesthood of each branch meet in council at least once a month, and that such councils report the results to conference from time to time. Preaching Sunday morning by Elder Joseph Seddon; Sunday evening by Elder J. C. Crabb. The sacrament was administered Sunday afternoon by D. Maule and J. M. Putney, after which an excellent season of prayer and testimony was enjoyed by the assembled Saints. One (a head of a family, and a sister of influence) was baptized after the morning session, and confirmed at the opening of the afternoon session, at which time a number of children were blessed. Adjourned to meet at Persia (Spring Creek branch), at half-past ten, Saturday, September 1st.

BOOK NOTICE.

The Board of Publication at their last meeting accepted for publication in book form "A COMPENDIUM OF THE FAITH AND DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH" prepared for the use of Sabbath Schools and elders by Elder H. A. Stebbins and Sr. Marietta Walker, appointing Pres. Joseph Smith and Elder W. W. Blair as a committee to examine the same. We presume the committee will (through the Herald) make known their decision. We wish to call the attention of Sabbath School superintendents to the fact that just as soon as the work is on sale, the Bible Lessons in the Hope will be discontinued, as this work is intended to be a permanent guide to Sabbath School instruction. Simultaneous with this will be issued a book for the use of Intermediate Classes, and this will be followed by one for our Primary Classes, thus supplying the long felt need of the Sabbath School work and completing a set of text books which we trust will be found helpful in laying the foundation of a more thorough understanding of the word of God, especially for our young people in our schools and homes.

The compendium will be found especially useful as a book of ready reference for all church members. It will contain quotations and citations to the most pertinent texts found in the Bible, bearing upon our various doctrines as a church, together with quotations from, or citations to the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants in connection with the same. To these will be appended an Epitome of Ecclesiastical History, taken from Winchester's Concordance, with some additions from recent works. As soon as we can ascertain the size, cost and probable time of issue we will notify our readers, and trust that all who have the Sabbath School work at heart will be prepared to stand by the Board of Publication in the efforts they are making to meet the increasing demands of the church in behalf of the young. It should be the work of parents to supply their children with these books in the same manner they supply them with text books for school, and in cases where parents are not able to do this, we feel sure that Sabbath School officers will see to it that such are supplied. The manuscript costs the church nothing, but the labor and expense of publishing the Board of Publication have to meet and we should see to it that they are sustained. M. WALKER.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

As there is a misunderstanding, I announce that the Independence district conference will convene at Independence, Missouri, on Saturday, June 30th, at ten a.m., and not on the 23d. Let us have a good attendance and a full report from all the ministry laboring in the field.

I. N. WHITE, Dist. Pres.

The quarterly conference of the Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin district will convene in Chicago, June 23d and 24th. Ministerial aid from any of the traveling ministry is solicited, besides which it is hoped that a good representation will be present of district officials. Come up, brethren and sisters, and help in the work.

F. M. COOPER, Dist. Pres.

Kewanee district conference will convene at the Saints' Chapel, Millersburg, Illinois, on the 23d of June. All are cordially invited to come, especially the elders of the district. Those who contemplate coming by rail will come to Aledo on Friday evening. There will be provision made for them to get to Millersburg. Those who expect to come will please inform the district president by card or otherwise, at Millersburg. Bro. E. L. Kelley has promised to meet with us. Come all who can and let us make arrangements for the summer and fall campaign (not political).

J. W. TERRY, Dist. Pres.

The Texas Central district conference will convene at the Texas Central branch, on the 22d of July, at eight in the evening. Each branch will hereby take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

E. W. NUNLEY, Pres.

Mobile district conference will convene at eleven o'clock on the first Sunday [1st] in July, at Saints' Chapel, Three Rivers, Mississippi.

F. P. SCARCLIFF, Dist. Pres.

APPOINTMENTS.

In harmony with the advice of the First Presidency to the Twelve, given last April, I make the following appointments: Charles Derry to take charge of the field comprising the Little Sioux and Galland's Grove districts; Henry Kemp to take charge of the Fremont and Pottawattamie districts; W. T. Bozarth to take charge of the Des Moines and Eastern Iowa districts; and James McKiernan to take charge of the North-East Missouri district. We may make other appointments at some future time. Let it be understood that these are sub-divisions of the mission, and are not designed to interfere or conflict with the proper exercise of district authority. All matters which need to be reported to the missionary in charge, and which may originate in any of the above named fields, should be sent to the brethren named above instead of to me.

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

A DREAM.

I found myself standing by an extended field of corn, green and growing finely. I was there but a few moments when there appeared to me two angels; one, a beautiful white angel, having on his head a beautiful crown and dressed in a spotless, gleaming, white robe; the other, a black angel with good features; he also had on a gleaming, white robe, and had a stick or staff in his hand. The white angel commanded the black angel to smite the earth. This the black angel did, smiting the earth with his staff, and there came up out of the ground, immediately, an immense swarm of locusts, in size as large as the common robin; these had two cutting teeth which came together like two half inch chisels. These locusts lighted upon the field of corn, and in an incredibly short time cut and ate and destroyed the entire crop; after this they fell upon a large field of well grown wheat, which was also totally destroyed. Again the white angel commanded the black angel to smite the earth; and he did smite with his staff, and there came out of the ground a great number of monstrous great toads, each having two horns on his head. Again the white angel commanded and charged the black angel that he should not permit the locusts to destroy anything that belonged to the Saints of our God who had the seal of the living God in their foreheads; nor suffer the green toads to poison the water, or the milk upon which the Saints did feed and drink.

GEORGE M. FREY.

BEECH, Mich., May 1st, 1888.

NOTICES.

In my letter published in Herald, May 26th, I should have said Bro. W. M. Rumel is Bishop's agent for Northern Nebraska district, and Bro. Levi Gamet for Central Nebraska district.

JAMES CAFFALL.

NAME CHANGED.

On the 20th day of May, 1888, the members of the Mound Valley branch, of the Spring River district, at their regular business meeting, changed the name of the above branch to Angola branch. The reasons are, that there are no Saints in Mound Valley; Angola is our place of worship and is the nearest post office and rail road station to most all the members of said branch. This change will save trouble to brethren writing to officers of branch and coming to conference; as some write us to Mound Valley, and get off the train there, thinking the branch is there. By order of branch.

DIED.

VANDERFLIGHT.—At her home, near Lamoni, Iowa, Sunday, May 27th, 1888, of pneumonia, sister Anne, wife of Bro. Itsee Vanderflight, aged thirty-four years. She was a most excellent woman, filling her station in life as a citizen, wife mother, and Christian well. She leaves a husband and eight children. She was buried from the Saints' Chapel in the afternoon of Tuesday, the 29th, the sermon being delivered by Elder Mark H. Forscutt, using 1 Cor. 15, as his text. The community valued Sr. Vanderflight highly, as the large concourse attending the service certified.

KELLEY.—At Dennisport, Massachusetts, May 26th, 1888, of consumption, sister Polly E., wife of Oliver E. Kelley, and daughter of Bro. Lorin E. Howes, aged 33 years. Funeral Tuesday, May 29th, sermon by Elder John Smith. The house was filled with neighbors and friends, who had gathered to sympathize with the sorrowing family.

BARNES.—At Excelsior, Iowa, April 20th, 1888, Minnie, infant daughter of Bro. John and Mrs. Barnes, aged 1 year, 4 months and 22 days.

Now she's gone, we'd not recall her
From a paradise of bliss,
Where no evil can befall her,
To a changing world like this.

BASS.—Near Beloit, Wisconsin, May 13th, 1888, Bro. Chester A. Bass; he was born October 31st, 1855, in Rock county Wisconsin. He possessed the virtues which make the faithful Saint, the loving husband, the kind Father, and exemplary citizen. He leaves an affectionate wife, and two dear children to mourn his departure. Bro. Bass was a man among men, and will be held in sweet remembrance by those who knew him. Funeral services conducted by Elder F. M. Cooper.

HAMILTON.—At Independence, Missouri, May 28th, 1888 Ella J., daughter of Bro. James and Sr. Jane Hamilton; aged 2 years, 11 months, and 26 days. Funeral services by Elder F. C. Warnky.

"Dear Ella, thou hast left us,
And thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

LEWIS.—At Aberaman, Wales, April 18th, 1888, Evan David Lewis, the lovely child of Bro. Evan and Sr. Mary Lewis, aged 4 years and 5 months. Funeral service by Elder Daniel Davies.

DOBSON.—In Benton county, Oregon, May 18th, 1888, Bro. Elihu C. Dobson, aged 44 years, 5 months and 2 days. He was a good man, and liked by all who knew him. He leaves a wife, two sons, one daughter, and many friends to mourn his loss. He suffered for four weeks with erysipelas in his throat and jaw, but endured it with patience. He died in the faith of Jesus Christ our Lord. Bro. Dobson resided here in Lamoni for several years, and was a consistent member of the church and a faithful Teacher in the branch. His name was yet upon its record at the time of his death.

WILLIAMS.—At Aberaman, Wales, May 15th, 1888, Bro. David R. Williams, aged 67 years. Funeral service by Elder T. E. Jenkins.

COMING EVENTS.

If you desire to attend any of the following important meetings, avail yourselves of the splendid train service and low rates of fare offered by the "Burlington Route," C. B. & Q. R. R. R., Chicago, Illinois.

CARDINAL MANNING INTERVIEWED.

Cardinal Manning has been interviewed in London by a New York Herald reporter. His Eminence declined to express any opinion on the Papal circular respecting the plan of campaign, remarking that he had had no official communication on the subject from the Holy See. Speaking of the troubled state of affairs in France Cardinal Manning said: "What a contrast, to be sure, between two Republics in America and France. Ah! there was rare wisdom shown by those statesmen who in 1789 framed the Constitution for the United States.

Not only were these men wise enough to frame a Constitution almost perfectly adapted to the needs of their country, but they knew how to surround it with such safeguards as to insure it from quick or unconsidered changes. In that respect it would seem superior to our English Constitution, under which Parliament was able, a few years since, in a single session to confer the right of suffrage on 2,000,000 men. And yet when we regard the wonderful prosperity which has blessed the American Republic and compare it with the unfortunate Republic of France, we must consider not alone the superiority of the American Constitution, but also the remarkable condition under which it existed.

The United States, hewn from the strength and sinew of the English commonwealth, stepped into the world in the pride of full manhood. Her men and women came from England's sturdy middle classes, sound in mind and body, and taking with them all that was best in the past of their old home; they have grown into greatness because they had in themselves the elements of greatness. France, on the other hand, commenced by tearing down and uprooting all that had gone before, and then she founded a Republic on paper in the air. But great institutions can not be created by a stroke of the pen, as France has learned to her cost. Since 1870 she has experienced more changes of administration than the years which have passed. With her system of centralization she is ruled by prefects, subprefects, and so on through a list of Paris officials, who are all less men than machines. All France falls in the wreck of Paris, but England stands firm with its dozens of provincial cities, whatever may happen to London. Try to imagine the United States ruined because Washington had gone wrong."

A CONTINENT OF COAL.

THIRTY years ago there were less than 3,000,000 tons of coal a year taken out of the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania; last year the output was 34,000,000 tons, an average increase of over 1,000,000 tons a year.

In spite of this enormous output the coal beds of that region are hardly opened yet, and Pennsylvania alone is estimated to have coal enough inside its limits to last the whole world for 50,000 years to come.

This is not all. The whole continent of North America is nothing but a big coal sandwich. Under the ledges of the Rocky Mountains, below the prairies of the great West and supporting also the farmlands of Ontario and the virgin forests of British Columbia, are billions of tons of coal, waiting for the miner to come and dig it. Prof. Hitchcock, in his "Geology," says that reckoning on the present rate of increase in the earth's population, there is coal enough in the United States alone to supply all the inhabitants of the globe for 333,333 years to come.

ALGERIA is undergoing great devastation from a species of cricket. This visitation closely resembles the plague of locusts so well known in the east, to which, indeed, Algeria is sometimes liable. But in this case it is neither a locust nor a grasshopper, but a cricket. Like the locust, these grasshoppers darken the sunlight by their enormous masses, but their power of flight is more sustained. When they settle on the ground the mischief begins. They make a clearance before them, eating up every trace of vegetation. Sometimes they fall exhausted in great masses, and their decomposition fills the air with noxious effluvia. In some cases railway trains have been unable to proceed because of the encumbering heaps upon the ground. Some attempt is made to arrest this devastating flood of life by digging long trenches at a right angle to the course of its progress and placing a screen of cloth on the far side of the trench. The insects strike against the cloth, fall into the trench, and are covered with lime or earth. This involves a vast expenditure of money, and the work is taken up by the public authorities.—Manchester (Eng.) Examiner.

IN RIGHTEOUSNESS.

At a district conference held any where the reader may choose to insert—the following was moved and seconded: "Resolved, that we sustain the authorities of the church, in righteousness."

The inquiry is made, "Will the brother who offers this resolution please rise and explain?"

"Certainly, is the cheerful reply. The brother rises and states, in substance, that during the early days of the church the utmost confidence was reposed in the leaders, or the authorities, by the membership, and in course of time this confidence was much abused, the authorities lost sight of the intent and purpose of the conferring the gospel to men in these last days, became heady and betrayed the mass of the people into sanctioning doctrines and teachings that were erroneous and led to acts of unrighteousness. We of the Reorganization do not propose to be betrayed, sold unto unrighteousness like sheep driven in shambles, and therefore we will "sustain the authorities of the church" while, and so long as they act righteously, and no further; we will not sustain them in their unrighteousness.

This sentiment so frankly expressed, is met by the hearty support of the Saints assembled who by vote declare: "So say we all." And the vote is so recorded.

While listening to the business affairs of a district conference "once upon a time," we heard two of the brethren offer the resolution above quoted and referred to; heard, in thought, the statement herein given; and being a sort of looker on at the time, like a crippled soldier in a siege, was left to fill up the time occupied in routine business by thoughts as they occurred, or were suggested by the business done. Among these thoughts were the following, which at the time were beneficial to us, and we hope will be to others, there being no intent to cast suspicion, or reflection of ill upon any; especially not upon those who desire and by earnest endeavor strive to keep unrighteousness out of the church, for they are always deserving of credit, not reproach.

Thought First. Are there any of the authorities of the church who are desirous and are striving to lead the church into unrighteousness and evil? Do I know of any? Who is he? Who are they?

Thought Second. Do I know what the unrighteousness and evil consist of? How is it being introduced, taught, or practiced? How is it affecting the church? Am I, as one of the body of Saints who vote to sustain the men included in the term "authorities of the church," a party to this wrong? How?

Thought Third. If I do not know that one, or more of these authorities has design and purpose to foster evil and lead the church into error, and by teaching to prepare the way for the practice of unrighteousness and make room for himself by inculpating others in the same errors and wrongs; what do I mean by the resolution, and the argument by which it is commended to me for my vote? Do I mean that because evil has come upon the church and pain and trouble have been visited upon many in the way sought to be guarded against, there is liability and therefore danger that the men now occupying similar positions to those occupied by the men who did wrong and thus betrayed the church, will in like manner fasten unrighteousness on the people; and to prevent this, the church (I with the rest) must keep before them perpetual notice that they will not be permitted to do it; hence the resolution and vote? If I do not know of any man holding such evil design, are not all the authorities of the church good and true men, so far as my knowledge extends; am I not therefore justified in sustaining without burdening my vote to thus sustain them with a reservation suggestive of suspicion? If I fail to include in the resolution which I offer to sustain them the saving clause "in righteousness," are the authorities so sustained warranted by such omission, and by my church relationship, in supposing that I am under obligation to sustain them in wrong, evil and unrighteousness in the church? If so, how can I expect the world's people to give me credit for honesty of purpose and hope in making profession of being a follower of the Lord Jesus Christ, whose representatives in the church, these authorities are acknowledged by me to be?

Thought Fourth. Have I any design, purpose, or intent of introducing, teaching, or practicing within the church, dogma, or tenet contrary to the gospel of Jesus Christ? Have I any heart intention to lead any over whom I may possibly have an influence into the ways of transgression, by which, if they be followed the church may become unrighteous? Am I of such character, reputation and position as to be above suspicion of such evil intent and purpose? Have I at any time said, or done that which would justify any one in warning the church, my fellow worshippers and fellow followers of Christ, to be watchful against me directly or indirectly? Is there occasion, or necessity that in declaring their faith, confidence and trust in me, as a fellow laborer and sufferer in Christ Jesus, my brethren should provide by public resolution against being included in my possible unrighteousness? Am I, in intention, devotion, speech and action, of such approved life in Christ and in his church as to be justified in saying to my co-laborers, of any degree of servitude to the Master and his work, "I am holier than ye; walk ye therefore circumspectly, for I can not permit my righteousness to be tarnished by your unworthiness; nor will I be even in thought, or supposition responsible for your possible unrighteousness, of which you are liable and have opportunity to be guilty by reason of your authority in the church?" Am I less liable to be tempted by the adversary of souls than are my fellow disciples? Am I stronger in natural goodness and therefore safer from the attacks of ambition, lust of place and power than are they? Am I of better spiritual light and knowledge than are they and therefore not so easy to be overcome by an evil thought, a wrong idea, a false doctrine, a personal fault, or a personal sin? Am I more free from desire to "lead men away" after my own conceptions, ideas and cherished theories? Wherein am I better than they? Have not the world, the church, its members and its officers, as much cause to be suspicious of me as being liable to fall into pernicious ways and the cause of Christ be evil spoken of for that reason, as I have to be suspicious of my fellows in Authority?

Thought Fifth. If any portion of my own body is sick, or hurt, is not the whole body partaker of the hurt? Is there a part so remote, or so feeble, but what when injured the injury is done to the whole? Can any one member of my body, or any number of its members so combine as to be able to say to any other members, we will abide with you in the discharge of your duties to the body, but we will not sustain you if you fail, as you are liable to do, we warn you? Is it not the just conclusion of all the members and every separate member of this body of mine, that every other member has the same intent, purpose and design to serve the whole body according to the object and law of its creation as has that separate member? Is there not abundant reason for each member of this body to know that every other member is moved upon by the motive to do its several and peculiar duties honestly and faithfully and without evil design to injure and subvert the body to its ruin? From an analogy of reasoning, has not every member of the body of Christ, the church, reason to believe that every other member of that body is as intent upon serving the interest and well being of the whole as he is himself? Are not the source and supply of the spiritual life and triumph of the church "the righteousness which is by faith?" Is there more reason for requiring a greater degree of righteousness in one member than in another? Are not all the members of the church alike liable to temptation, to fall, to become careless, to lose the Spirit, to be led by self, to be made the prey of evil designing spirits, to imbibe false and pernicious theories and vain philosophies, to become ambitious to lead and shine as bright particular stars, and to be mighty in word? Is any one member, or any one class of persons more liable to these things than are any others? Is any one person, or any class of persons less liable to these things than are any others? Who are they? When I vote to sustain the authorities "in righteousness," am I justified in doing this with the understanding that it is the righteousness of those authorities only, that I mean? Should there not be in me when I so vote, a palpable and direct consciousness that the world, the church, Christ and God require that I shall also be righteous; and that so far as I am concerned personally, my peace here, my honor here and hereafter, my life in Christ here and my life in the world to come in honor, power and glory depend more upon sustaining myself in righteousness than in the righteousness of those authorities whom I am voting to sustain? Does not my all depend upon my own worth and character, and can not be made to depend upon the righteousness, or the unrighteousness of those authorities? If they be led and lead others into evil and wrong and I follow not after them, is it not true that I will not be included in their folly, nor be punished for their wickedness. As it is not by reason of their goodness and worth that I shall be crowned, is it not also true, neither is it because of their wrong doing that I shall be deprived of my reward.

Thought Sixth. Have not the authorities of the church, whom I declare by resolution and vote I will sustain "in righteousness," as much reason and right to expect me to be righteous in thought, in word, in action, in character and in life as I have to expect all this of them? What better claim upon the forbearance and clemency of God and the Holy Spirit of Promise have I than they? Are they by virtue of their calling and the choice of the people of the church, myself being one of those thus choosing them, less devoid of honor and integrity than I who may not be one of the authorities? Am I, because I am not in authority any more the receiver of the spirit of direction and right doing than they? Are they, because they have been thus singled out to be authorities, any more susceptible to the cunning devices of the devil than am I? Am I, because these my brethren in Christ have been called, chosen and burdened with the offices and responsibilities by which they are constituted "authorities," justified in spreading upon the records of myself and co-members a continual reminder of my distrust and suspicion that they may introduce "damnable heresies and doctrines of devils," by reason of that authority? Is it necessary, is it wise? Is it not more in harmony and in keeping with the law of mutual interdependence and unity by which the body of Christ, the church, is likened in similitude to the body of a man, that I sustain the church in its parts, and as a whole; in confidence and faith, reserving to myself the right, of which I can not be deprived to refuse sanction to evil and wrong when they rise? It is understood by me, by my fellow church members, officers and all, that in yielding obedience to Christ in my baptismal covenant I have covenanted to do and sanction only what is good, true and right; what right have my fellows to constantly affirm their fear that I will not keep that vow? What right have I to as constantly throw distrust upon them that they will forget the covenant they have made? What think you of these thoughts? Is there not as much necessity for a righteous membership as for righteous authorities, and when I vote to sustain "authorities in righteousness," must I not in justice and right mean my own as well as theirs?

IN THE JUDGMENT.

It is contended for by all the elders, and conceded by all the Saints capable of thinking, and forming conclusions concerning what they think about, that in the Judgment Day, whenever that shall be, when the decision will be made and awards of glory and eternal life be given to those who shall be found worthy, and punishments be meted to those who deserve them, good character and real worth only will be the qualifications upon which good awards will be given, want of worth and bad character the basis upon which punishments will be administered. There is no dispute on these points.

While the Saints are earnestly "contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints;" and hoping thereby to "reprove the world," of its sin and iniquity; as it was intended righteous precept should do; are they realizing as they should the force of the statements made above about the results awaiting the examination of character in that Judgment Day.

We do not desire to picture an awful hell awaiting sinners; this would be improper for us, and is not necessary in writing for the Saints; but we desire to call the attention of the readers of the HERALD to the consequences necessarily attaching to the avowal of a belief in the statements made. In the Judgment Day what is ascertained is, what condition is the individual entitled to, that of reward, or punishment. It is acknowledged now that this will depend on what the individual is at the time the judgment takes place. If he is in character and works worthy, reward and eternal life; if in character and works unworthy, punishment and misery.

The time of probation is now, the place here, the determination of the issue yonder. For these reasons it is important that we consider how character may be acquired. If character is the gift of God direct, and is given without reference to the choice of man, or effort upon his part the injunction to "strive" is vain. But as character can not be the Gift of God direct in the nature of the recognized conditions of man's life, but is the result of the application of means devised of God in view of these conditions and adequate to the object designed; it is a matter of choice first and effort after, the result being made dependent upon strife within the law; hence every man may "strive" but must "strive lawfully."

Man did not create heaven, or make hell. If either exists it is because it was permitted by God, or ordained by his decree. If they exist as conditions by permission, or the command of God, the same mighty one made man with attributes to be trained for either condition fitted and prepared; for the best by choice and right effort, or being unfit for heaven become only fit for hell. The Saints have openly chosen heaven as the condition of their desire. They have accepted the conditions of probation. They have done so understandingly, and are not taken unawares by trial, or temptation. These are parts of the whole plan and can not be separated from it except to the detriment of man. If life were void of temptation and trial, its ambition, its joy in achievement, its strength in development, its emulation and zest would all be taken away as well and no joy and glory could follow. There would be no triumph for there would be no conflict. These are all acknowledged by the Saints and there is no excuse for murmuring because they exist. The character which the successful candidate for reward and consequent glory in eternal life is to bear in the judgment day, is to be sought after and acquired under these conditions. What then. There is within man so much of divinity that it may be said to be the germ of divine, therefore eternal life in him. If man recognizes this and is desirous that this germ shall grow unto the full fruition of which it is susceptible, and which God has made possible; he will then choose the way and accept the means also devised of God to accomplish it. Have the Saints made this selection. They have confessed the conditions, have they adopted the means by which, under the existing conditions, they may acquire the character, achieve the triumph and be worthy the glory and eternal life to follow. If so, what are the evidences to them, that they are making progress.

"The works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revilings and such like."

"The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."

Of the former it is said that they who "do such things shall not inherit the Kingdom of God." Of the latter is written, "Against such there is no law;" meaning of course that that they who love are meek, temperate, gentle, good and faithful, are not condemned by any law earthly or heavenly. On this account, dear Saints, be very diligent adding "to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity." If these things be found in you, developed and developing in your lives here, they will so water and cherish the germ of divine life within you by the dews of heavenly grace that it shall grow up within you characters of such worth that when the Judgment Day is called, you shall enter into the heavenly life fully fitted and prepared for its eternal continuance in glory.

VOTE RIGHT.

THE readers of the HERALD, need not be startled at the title of this, for we do not mean to advise any to vote in a political sense; for the HERALD is not a political paper; but in many places where the Saints are living and making settlements, the question whether saloons and other places where intoxicating liquors may be sold and drank, shall be licenced or not is being agitated and submitted to the vote of the people. This is notably the case in Missouri this year, where one after another the different localities are voting under a statute of the state granting the people the right to determine by "local option" whether they will, or will not have liquor sold in their midst. We learn that sometime soon the city of Independence is to hold an election for the purpose of deciding this question; and if the HERALD has any influence whatever in determining the matter at issue by advice, or persuasion, it is against the saloon first, last, and all the time.

What a comment it would be, after the election is over and the vote should be in favor of the selling of liquor, if an inquiry should discover that the decision had been made by ballots cast by Latter Day Saints, members of a church whose faith recognizes the city as being a place for the abode of "Zion, the pure in heart." Can the "pure in heart" vote for licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors by the use of which his own children, or the children of his neighbor, his neighbor or brother becomes a drunkard and so unfit for the "Kingdom of God," and "answer a good conscience to God," after he has so voted? Do any of the Latter Day Saints dwelling at Independence fail to realize how deeply their fellow disciples in Christ are interested in the record for integrity, morality and virtue the church is making there? If so, let the HERALD say to them; your brethren regard you as men in whose hands the honor of the cause is placed. By moving to that city you have virtually volunteered to represent the church, the body of Christ there. You have indirectly said to the people among whom you have settled, We are the advance guard of an army of good and true men, who are lovers of God and of humanity; who hate evil and love righteousness; who are sober, industrious, trustworthy citizens of the nation and the state; "give us room to dwell" among you and we will ever be found the foremost in good works for the benefit of all. Are you prepared to go back upon this promise and vote to institute, or perpetuate, that which taxes the state in muscle, brain, morality, sobriety and money; and gives in return poverty, distress, misery, drunkenness, death and ruin, the poor house, jail, penitentiary and the asylum.

If you are true to these promises made by you in moving to the city "beautiful for situation," and desire to make her a habitation of peace and safety, we advise you to go to the polls early on the 27th day of June, which we are informed is the day on which the vote for local option is to be taken in Independence, and vote as men professing to be disciples of Jesus Christ should vote. Vote one, vote all against the unholy traffic; let not a single man entitled to cast a ballot fail to go to the polling place that day and put the weight of his vote into the scale in favor of sobriety, "peace on earth and good will to men." No matter on that day whether you be Democrat, Republican, Greenback, or Labor Union in politics, vote against the traffic in intoxicating drinks. Let your motto be "No Licence for Drink, Desolation and Death."

The advice given above to the Saints at Independence, we give to the Saints everywhere, and in every time when they are permitted to record themselves by vote on the question at issue.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE learn by letter from Sr. Clara Nirk, dated at Baxter, Iowa, June 9th, that Bro. Nicholas Stamm was down of a fever. He is a faithful Saint, and asks that the Saints remember him in prayer.

The Expositor, for June, is laid on our table in due season. It is readable and contains the continuation of the articles on the "Soul-sleeping doctrine." Bro. Brown gives notice that he does not expect to continue the Expositor after December unless it should be more liberally supported; which from the experience of the past year he fears it will not be.

Bro. W. H. Kelley wrote from Kirtland, Ohio, June 9th, that Bro. E. L. Kelley and himself would go to Warren, Ohio, on the 10th to be there over the Sunday, the 11th, and from there he should go east.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith has been filling appointments at Andover, Harrison county, Missouri, since the April session. He was called to Kansas City, Missouri, and to Colchester, Illinois, by telegram, announcing the death of Sr. Julia Harper, a cousin, the daughter of Sr. Lucy Millikin, the martyr's youngest sister. He will attend the funeral services at Colchester, and go thence to Minnesota, his field. Bro. Morris T. Short has, he believe preceded Bro. A. H. Smith into his Wisconsin field, and is intending to push the work in his charge.

Bro. W. M. Self, writing from Palmyra, Otoe county, Nebraska, June 1st, reports that brethren J. Armstrong and Charles Porter and Malcom, had been laboring there the result of which had been the addition of eleven by baptism, eight of whom resided in the town of Bennett.

Bro. W. H. Garrett of Greenville, Pennsylvania, writes that ten were baptized near Church Hill, Ohio, by Elder D. M. Strachan; also a number at Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, by Elder James Brown. Bro. Garrett is filling appointments every Sunday in the vicinity of Conneautville, Pennsylvania, and feels much blessed in his efforts. He writes encouragingly of the work of other local laborers and rejoices in the progress of the work.

Bro. Frank Criley, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, writes that some had been baptized there of late and about twenty in the Pittsburg and Kirtland district since General Conference, and that the work was rolling on in that section.

Bro. William Williams, writing from Argentine, Kansas, rejoices in the Lord's goodness manifested in the restoration to health of his daughter, to whom he had gone to administer, and of which blessing he was assured after earnest prayer.

Bro. Oliver Elefson writing from Eagle Grove, Wight county, Iowa, states that any elder traveling in that section will be welcomed by the Saints there. They appreciate the HERALD which is their only preacher.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. H. Lawn wrote from Mulberry, California, June 1st:

"I have been busy in the ministry since our district conference, but am at present at home assisting the boys a little about getting in the hay. My health is not good, but if I get no worse I expect to be out again in a short time. It is my greatest desire to tell the gospel story while I am permitted to tarry."

Bro. G. A. Blakeslee wrote from his home, Galien, Michigan, June 5th:

"I attended a conference at Hershey, in northern Michigan, last Saturday and Sunday; a large number in attendance; there seemed to be an excellent Spirit. Brethren Cornish, Carpenter, Delong, Phelps and Barr seem to be doing a good work in that section."

Bro. John Cornish writes:

"Our conference is over. We had a good one; two more were baptized. Brethren C. Scott, Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, and Hiram Rathbun were with us, over and above our own members and officers; the prospects before us are bright."

Sr. Sarah Phelps, of Basco, Hancock county, Illinois, writes:

"I can not do without the Herald. As long as I can see to read it I want to do so. It brings glad and good tidings, and is all the preacher I have. I read and re-read it. I have no neighbors that will read it. I ask an interest in the prayers of all."

Bro. R. J. Anthony wrote from Deer Lodge, Montana, June 9th:

"The Lord blessed me greatly at Reese Creek. I feel perfectly satisfied with the work done there. The Saints all received Bro. Clapp with open arms. We reorganized the Montana district, with Gomer Reese, president, and Wm. Nelson secretary. Bro. Clapp aided us greatly; and we left the Saints rejoicing. Arrived here yesterday; will leave here on the 11th for Oxford and Malad. J. T. Davis writes me he has stirred the people in St. John and vicinity. I expect to meet him and R. M. Elvin at Malad on the 16th inst. Bro. Andrew Christofferson is sick; have not seen him yet."

FROM THE Chronicle, North Attleboro, Massachusetts, May 26th, we clip the following:

"The neighborhood meetings of the Latter Day Saints have been crowded of late. They report increasing interest in their services."

From the June 5th number of the same paper the appointment given below appears in the Attleboro items:

"Elder H. Robinson of Independence, Missouri, will speak to-night at John Robbins' on East Street, and to-morrow evening at the residence of Thomas Shallcross on Carpenter Street."

THE law of common carriers which in justice should prevail over all the world is being realized in Kansas and Nebraska, in the matter of the Union Pacific railway, as is stated in the following from the news despatches of the Chicago Tribune for June 12th. Railway companies who avail themselves of the "right of eminent domain," by which private property is subjected to the uses of their corporate enterprise, will possibly learn by and by that the state can not by charter create a creature greater than itself. The law of "this for that" must obtain in the giving of the benefits of franchises to corporate bodies in that it also imposes the disabilities to which individual persons in similar positions are subjected.

"The injunction cases brought by the Union Pacific Railroad and granted by United States Judge Dundy, restraining the State Board of Transportation from interfering with or attempting to regulate rates on the plea that the road was beyond State control and only subject to Federal jurisdiction, have been dismissed by the road. This somewhat remarkable change has been brought about by the Attorney-General of the State, who, when the restraining order was granted, investigated and found that the road had been exercising the right of eminent domain in the State and had acquired over $3,000,000 worth of shop, track, and yard room at Omaha through condemnation proceedings. As the Constitution expressly forbids foreign corporations doing this, and as the Union Pacific claimed to be beyond the pale of the State, the Attorney-General was preparing, through quo-warranto proceedings, to take from them the property unlawfully acquired. This had led the road to its change of front, and caused it in advance of the Nelson bill and Dorsey amendments in Congress to place itself in line preparatory to recognizing State control. In a similar case in Kansas in 1885 the Union Pacific entered into stipulation with that State to subject itself to State control, and like stipulations, it is expected, will pass between the road and the State of Nebraska.

Mother's Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Behind the cloud the starlight lurks,
Through showers the sunbeams fall:
For God, who loveth all his works,
Has left his Hope with all!"

"I AM THE TRUE VINE AND MY FATHER IS THE HUSBANDMAN."

"ANY copy for Bro. Scott?" said a voice just by our side, and not having heard the step we started, nervously glancing to see who it was that had spoken to us. "Tell Bro. Scott," we answered, "that he will have to call upon those who have not been away visiting, but we will have some copy ready by Monday;" and turning to our work, the busy brain took up the shuttle of thought, and while our hands were engaged in tying up the vines, which had been trailing on the ground, our thoughts took up that most beautiful and impressive lesson found in the fifteenth chapter of John's gospel, and beginning, "I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman." "My Father is the husbandman." Oh, what a wealth of assuring comfort in that one brief sentence. No careless hand will plant or prune, but the dews of heaven and the gentle showers shall distil moisture; the sun by day shall give light and heat; the cloud of darkness or the mellow light of the moon shall bring rest and refreshment at night,—for so hath the Father ordered it.

"God so loved the world." Sweetly cheering thought, thought not incomprehensible to the heart of man, but appealing to all that is pure, all that is high and holy within him. "Son, give me thy heart," receives forever a silencing answer to the question, why? In this glorious assurance of the boundless love of the Father which caused him to purchase the redemption of man, with the most costly gift ever laid upon love's altars—his only begotten Son.

"I am the vine," continued Jesus, "ye are the branches." We were striving to separate the branches which from the lack of proper support and timely attention had become intertwined and fastened by clinging tendrils to each other; but, alas, in doing this with nervous, clinging fingers, a slender branch was broken off and fell to the ground. Upon this branch were clusters of bloom and tender fruit just forming, but how soon the leaves withered as the juice from the vine poured out at the wounded joint and could not reach the helpless branch dying there in the light and sunshine for the want of the nourishing sap which was its life. Try earnestly as we might, we never could heal that wound, never could reunite the branch to the vine from which unwittingly we had broken it. No need for the solemn assurance, "The branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine," for already there before our eyes it was withering, the promise of its fruitage blasted and itself a thing as worthless as the weed lying by its side.

"My Father is the husbandman!" Can comforting assurance be more comforting and soul sustaining than this! No support, no timely care will ever be wanting, and no unskilled, awkward hand will ever have power to break the fruitful branch from the life-giving vine; but that branch shall abide in the vine and bring forth fruit, for, "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." How sublimely grand this thought, and how infinitely it places us above the human construction placed upon the words of Christ to Peter, "Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven!" I am the vine, but my Father is the husbandman; and no power, either human or divine, can separate the fruitful branch from the living vine, for if that branch were not in me—abiding in me—it could not bear fruit. The fruitless branch no man shall take away; how much less then the branch which is bearing fruit to the honor and glory of my Father. This branch he will purge, that it may bear more fruit. I will send my disciples forth giving them the same gospel to preach which the Father has given me; but as the Father instructed me to do all things according to his commandment, so will I instruct them; and as in the everlasting, unchangeable gospel which I came to declare, life and immortality are brought to light, and it is the power of God unto salvation to all who obey it, as ministers of this gospel I give unto you the power to bind and loose. I speak not of myself, but the Father instructed me and gave me commandment what I should say and do. I have kept his commandment, and abide in his love, and I am now giving you the same instruction; and through obedience to this instruction, and only through obedience will you have power; for let this truth sink deep into your hearts, "My Father is the husbandman, and every branch in me which beareth not fruit, He taketh away, and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it that it may bear more fruit." . . . "If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love," for "I know that his commandment is life everlasting."

Eternal, fixed, immutable as the rock of ages, emanating from God and because it is his will, a part of God himself, is this gospel of the kingdom which I give you the power to preach; but let it not enter your heart, Peter, that acting outside of this you have any power. The power is not in you; you are but a fallible worm of the dust, and in the time of temptation you will deny me with cursing and swearing, after having failed to watch with me one hour. You will forget all my promises to you which reach beyond the resurrection, and while I am doing the Father's will, you will go back to your fisher's net; but I will not upbraid you, for my Father will purge you, and no earthly hand shall have power to sever your connection with me, for God hath reserved this power unto himself, and it is not His will that any, except those branches which bear no fruit, should be severed from me.

To the world at large, but especially to us as Saints of God, there is great comfort in this thought; and if it be not the true import of the lesson, we fail to discover what that import can be. The true vine being Christ, there is no imperfection there. Being in that vine, the life giving Spirit of the gospel—the Comforter which was to guide into all truth—will nourish and sustain the branch. The Husbandman will not for one moment forget its needs; but will prune and care for it, and the only hand which can reach it is his hand. He who so loved that branch as to purchase it with the blood of his Son, will he place its eternal destiny in the hands of any man? Verily never! But with the comfort which this thought contains for us as Saints of God, as branches of the true vine, comes there not a solemn warning, a warning unto which we do well to take heed. Is it not as a light shining in a dark place, a light to guide our feet that we stray not, that we wander not into by and forbidden ways, neither become weary in well doing?

The branch which abides in Christ must bear fruit; for the branch which bears not fruit, the Father taketh away.

HANCOCK, June.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—I have often thought I would like to cast in my mite and testimony with yours for the advancement of the best of all causes that ever was introduced into the world. The work is so inviting that I would not exchange my prospect of a glorious hereafter for unnumbered worlds, because our Father in heaven is so condescending to hear our little petitions. Not at all times for we do not offer them up with that fervency of spirit, at all times, that we should, consequently our prayers are not answered. Still, we know he is more merciful than we possibly know how to be or can be to our children, hence we should place our undivided affections on his goodness already manifested to us and for the precious promises he has left on record for our instruction. Our Father will in this dispensation, as at other times, fulfill all of his promises; and if he does abound in mercy, he chastens all those he loves. I frequently think of what I heard a Methodist sister say once at a Protestant meeting. She said: "The Lord has taken my husband from me and all of my children, and I will praise the Lord if he slay me." This looks like everlasting integrity. Sisters, I have been acquainted with the latter day work forty-six years, and was baptized just about three months before the death of the prophet Joseph. Since that time have been confirmed by the power of the Lord, and reconfirmed time and again, so there is not a doubt in my mind in regard to this work. I am getting well along in years, and I hope you will all pray for me, that I may be faithful to the Lord the rest of my days, few or many.

I have wanted, long since, to send to the missionary fund, but I did not know how to get it; yet I find that our God is a wonder-working God. As I was sweeping my floor yesterday I picked up two quarters, then I swept once or twice more and picked up another quarter; then I asked the Lord for another quarter and picked up another quarter directly. So I send this dollar the Lord gave me, for the missionary fund. I remain your sister in the glorious work of the Lord,

H. GALLUP.

Dear Sister:—It made my heart swell with gratitude as I read Sr. Eleanor's letter; and I think it will be a great help, as well as a blessing, to each and every one of us. It will help us in the cause and training of our little ones, and in each and every duty. What a comfort to those situated like myself, who have not the privilege of meeting with the Saints. Sisters, let us enter into it with pure hearts determined to do the will of the Master, and work for his cause.

I would like to present the following, for your consideration in connection with what Sr. Eleanor has already said, That we make the traveling elders and their families a special subject of prayer, that they may at all times have the Spirit of God to lead, guide, comfort and encourage them in their trials and temptations; that they may be kept faithful, and gather many souls for Christ. Their lot at times is hard. Let us, dear sisters, be united and I feel the Lord will bless us with success.

With hearts and hands
For e'er entwined,
Be ours one hope,
One faith, one mind.

Hoping to hear from others on the subject, I remain,
Your sister in the one faith.

CLARA EBERT.

THE PRAYER LEAGUE.

O, sisters, cast aside all doubts and fears,
And join our little band of volunteers;
Send in your names, without delay,
And God will help you all each day.

Yes, sisters, put your faith in God and pray;
Remember we must work while yet 'tis day.
Let not your years in idleness go by,
But join the League and pray unitedly.

The standard books would be our truthful guide,
Teach us to give up enmity and pride.
Our cause is one that faith and love imparts
And calls for help from honest faithful hearts.

HARLAN, Iowa.

Dear Saints:—I have not heard from our branch for a long time. I write a few lines to help fill your columns. It has been a great comfort to me to have the Heralds to read. We live six miles from any church, and we can not go every Sunday. I would like to go every Sunday and hear the gospel preached. It always fills me with love and joy to meet with Saints. I feel determined by the grace of God to work out my salvation, with fear and trembling. I love this latter day gospel, that is preached in these last days. For my part I want to try and help a little. It is my heart's desire to live so that when I am called to lay down this tabernacle, that I may do it with joy and not with grief. It is a glorious thing to be willing to go.

We know that all we have comes from God's bounteous hand. We can do nothing without his help. He has blessed us with health and strength and a willing mind to serve him who created all things.

Ever, I remain your sister,

L. McCORD.

FORT NIobrARA, Neb., June 3d.

Dear Sisters:—As this is the Lord's day, and I have no church to attend, I will endeavor to write a few lines to the Home Column. I was baptized at Blair, Neb., October 24th, 1883, by Elder J. F. Mintun. I have had the privilege of hearing very few sermons since I came into the church. I trust it will not be long before I shall hear some one of our elders preach the gospel in this part of the Lord's vineyard. I am the only one here of the Latter Day faith. My husband believes it as far as he understands the doctrine, and I believe if an elder would come out here and preach, that a few would obey the gospel. I feel the need of spiritual food myself, for I am young in the church, and have many trials to bear; but I trust that with the Lord's help I may so live as to be worthy of the name of Latter Day Saint. Any minister that should come here to preach will find a welcome home here. We live twelve miles from Fort Niobrara, and Valentine. I love to read the Herald. My mother sends it to me. I ask you all to pray for me.

Ever yours in the one faith,

MRS. ELLA JOHNSON.

Correspondence.

CLEARWATER, Neb., May 27th.

Dear Herald:—Thinking that perhaps some of the Saints might be interested in my movements I will endeavor to give them some information on the subject. After hearing of my appointment to the Quorum of Seventy and subsequent mission to Nebraska I bent all my energies towards getting ready to take the field. I did not expect when I offered myself for the ministry that I would be ready before fall, but the Lord has opened the way in (to me) a wonderful manner, so that I am now on my way to my mission assigned me by Bro. Caffall, the Southern Nebraska district.

It being necessary for me to visit this part of the country I left Logan, Iowa, May 26th, arriving here the same day and expected to preach here to-day at eleven o'clock a. m., but rain and high water has hindered me. The Elkhorn river is so high that crossing is impossible except in a boat, and it has rained constantly ever since I arrived. I expect to reach my field about the 15th of June. If all goes well I will leave here the morning of the 15th, stopping over night in Fremont, thence on to Wilber to be there June 17th. Those who are interested may take notice. If anything goes wrong I can notify them, but I know of nothing now that will hinder me.

Since resolving to take the field every obstacle has been removed from my path, but not without considerable exertion on my part, as I believe in the old adage, that "God helps those best who help themselves." Although the way looked dark I made a vow to God to do all in my power to open the way, and if He would only give me a chance to squeeze out honorably I would go. After making that vow a peace of mind was experienced that I had were felt before, and I was made to understand that the way would be opened for me and that speedily, and although the way looked dark, still I had great faith that that promise would be fulfilled, and thanks be to God I am now on my way to my field of labor.

and I hope I may never lay my armor down until Christ shall say, "It is enough," "Well done thou good and faithful servant." I can not express sufficiently in words my gratitude to the Saints in Logan, Iowa, for their kindness to me and mine, and the assistance they rendered me while getting ready, and they can rest assured that I shall never forget them and shall ever supplicate the giver of all good in their behalf.

If any one wishes to write to me they can do so at Wilber, Saline county, Nebraska, care of Levi Anthony.

Yours for Zion's cause,

H. O. SMITH.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 7th.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Accepting the grave responsibility of representing the means God hath prepared whereby man can obtain freedom from the bondage of sin and a citizenship in the kingdom of glory, I took my leave of home on the 29th ult., for this field. During the ride from Lamoni to Chariton, I saw more water in the fields than I can call to mind at any previous period, it was a strange sight to see ploughs, planters and cultivators standing in the fields, almost covered with water, which in places was running over the fence posts. As I viewed this scene of muddy water overspreading field, pasture, meadow and orchard, I was constrained to think on the overflowing wave of sin, that carries untold thousands away from God, and the promised abode of never ending peace. To rescue some poor perishing soul from destruction, was the prompting that gave me courage to quit the dearest spot on earth, and withdraw from the companionship of wife and children. The parting gave me pain, but their sobs and tears are to me the true manifestations of a pure love that is ever prompting to a faithfulness upon my part.

On the train I had a short but pleasant conversation with E. Robinson. A tedious wait of about nine hours at Chariton gave me ample time to reflect upon the past events of my life and connection with the church, and to calmly meditate upon the work before me; and judging from a human standard, the future is not a cheerful picture. O how lonely and sad did I feel while others laughed and joked around me. As the hours grew apace and midnight stillness settled down, there came in answer to my petition, stealing into my very soul a calm and peace which I am inadequate to transcribe to paper; and while no promise of any great accomplishment was given, I felt the assurance that remaining faithful I would not be forsaken or overcome by evil. I arrived at Omaha the next morning, found Bro. Ed. Rannie Jr., at the depot awaiting me. With him I found rest and shelter, and that evening I met a goodly company of Saints and friends, in their pleasant house of worship and was permitted a good degree of freedom while I spoke the word, Bro. E. C. Brand, assisting, thanks for the aid furnished. On the 31st met Bro. Heman C. Smith, and at nine p. m., we started west, arriving in this city at 7: 40 p. m. the 2d inst. We were met at the depot by Bro. C. H. Barrows. Bro. Smith, has spoken three times, and given good satisfaction. The Saints speak in high praise of the efforts of Brn. John W. Wight and C. A. Butterworth. Bro. J. C. Clapp called and occupied the pulpit, while passing to his field in Montana. When we came the dust was fearful, and last Sabbath a severe wind did much damage. I am told it was the most severe ever experienced here. That night there was a good rain, since which it has been cool and real pleasant. Everything is much more attractive now, than when I came last December. Cherries and strawberries are ripe, while most every dooryard is a flower garden, and beautiful to look upon indeed. Notwithstanding, all is not peace in "Zion." We have put in good time visiting, sight seeing and holding meetings. Bro. Heman Smith goes to Elko, Nevada, this afternoon. May peace and success attend him and all the faithful servants of Christ.

HOLLIS, Kansas, June 3d.

Mr. David Dancer, Dear Sir:—I would like to say brother. I am proud of the Herald as it now is. It is something new to me and much esteemed, and is the first thing looked for in my mail. Although I am taking four more papers, it is first choice. I have been in this place over fourteen years and have not seen or heard an elder of the church in all that time, nor do I know how long it will be before I do if I stay in this place. So we have concluded to sell out and move to Lamoni, Iowa, where I think we can be fully instructed in the plan of salvation, for we are both beginning to feel the need of it.

We have not seen, nor heard an elder's voice since the year 1870. I held that office in England myself. Was baptized and ordained by Elder Thomas Taylor, of Birmingham, England, who I see still holds the fort. I was well acquainted with Brn. Briggs, Ellis and Derry; also George Hatt and Boswell, who were all missionaries in England, and have been comforted by your humble servant. I therefore shall be glad to hear of their whereabouts, but more so to have any of them come and visit us in our lonely state. Tell Brother Derry to come and see us and he will be made welcome again. We will feed him well on temporal things if he, in return will feed us on spiritual things, just as long as he will stay with us.

Yours respectfully,

WM. H. MORGAN.

SCRANTON, Miss., June 4th.

Bro. Joseph:—I inclose notice of our next district conference, which please have published in the Herald. I have not done as much for the cause as I might have done, but I have tried to do something, and hope to do better the coming year. I am becoming well acquainted with the people in this vicinity; my preaching notices are published in our county paper, and I believe that I am preparing the way for a good work. We had hoped that the General Conference would send one or more laborers down to this the southern part of this large unoccupied field. We expect to see a great work accomplished in the south; the grain is ripening fast; who will work? Who will come and help us? Conference did not deem it wisdom to send us help. [The conference did not send laborers to the field referred to for the very good reason that it had none to send. The same complaint is made by districts, north, east and west, but how can men be sent unless there are those to send?—Ed.] And brethren in the south has the same thought come to many of you as it has to me; namely that one reason why help was not sent us was because we have not helped ourselves, the cause of Christ as we might have done? When I was a boy I used to help make snow forts, and one of us boys would start a small snow-ball to rolling, and eventually it would become so large that it would take two or three of us to roll it to the fort.

I believe if we Saints in this mission will properly exert ourselves to roll on the glorious cause of Christ, help will be sent us in due time. Let us arouse ourselves, call on the God of Saints for help, get the inspiration of the great latter day work; and then because we know we have something good, and because we have the same spirit that has led men in every age to work righteousness, we will desire to help others to enter the path of life, and we will warn sinners of their perils in this the hour of God's judgment. Brethren pray for the little band of Saints in the south.

Your brother in Christ,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

SANTA ANA, Cal., June 4th.

Bro. Joseph:—I read in the revelation given March 3d, 1873, these words: "Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me."

There has never before been so much talk among the Saints since I have belonged to the church, as now, about going to Missouri, or the gathering. For that reason I would like to express my opinion thereon. First: If we are going to move from our homes, we must be careful not to make a mistake. We have got to make a living for ourselves and families, no matter where we go; that being the case, we should learn what the prospects are for making a living elsewhere, and what part would be best for us to go to. It would then be well to remember that all is not sunshine at other places, any more than where we are, and that we have no more promise of God's blessing in Missouri than in California. We will be blessed if we live worthily at any place.

Now I find no commandment to go to Independence, and would not advise the poor Saints who have to work for a living by the day, to go there, for there are other places where laboring men can do better. There are places in Missouri and the surrounding country where any one can do well with a small amount of money; for with one thousand dollars in Vernon county, one can purchase a good home on which they could make a living for a large family. I want to give some reasons why I think the Saints would do well to settle in Vernon county. At Nevada there is plenty of work. Four railroads center there, and connect with the best markets in the east. Then there are some of the best coal mines in the state there, which give work to hundreds of men.

Again: Vernen county is one of the best farming counties in the state, and the best fruit county in the state. It is healthy; well timbered and watered. There are many outsiders that need converting, and if the Saints all get in one place, how can they let their light shine? The county is pretty well south; the winters are not bad, and the Saints coming from the northern states, such as Minnesota and northern Iowa, would find a great change, and would like the country. I speak from knowledge, for I have lived in those northern countries; twenty-five years, and know that they are not good places for any one to live.

At the present time land can be bought very cheap in Vernon county, but it won't be so long. There will be a settlement of Saints from here go there. We hope to stay, and we want to start a good settlement of Saints there that will be an honor to the cause; Saints that will live their religion and help roll on the work.

I would be glad to correspond with any who may be looking for a home in that country. Bro. Goff and I are acquainted with the best real estate men in Nevada, Missouri, and we will do all we can for any of the Saints who desire information. There are some of the finest farms I ever saw there; but men in that section want to better their situation by going to California, and are willing to sell out.

The Saints here are all looking for the time to come when they may have that land, and when Christ will come to reign; but there is something for us to do besides going there,—we must prepare ourselves by keeping the commandments of our Lord, and by making the proper preparations to reign with him.

Your brother in Christ,

A. W. THOMPSON.

PARSONS, Kansas, June 7th.

Bro. Blair:—I arrived at this place, a city of about eight thousand inhabitants, the evening of the 5th, just in time to obtain permission of the city fathers to speak upon the streets, as the Salvation Army began their services in the most frequented part of the city about eight o'clock. They have been here for some time, but were just recruited that evening by the Major and his wife (a sweet singer in English and Welsh), from Indiana. Their services with drums, musical instruments, and songs, are quite impressive. They only remained about thirty minutes, (it being upon the eve of a great political convention, the city was filled with strangers; perhaps nearly one thousand were assembled.) They then withdrew to their hall, earnestly inviting the multitude to follow them. Just as they started, with all the strength of my being, I endeavored to fulfill one command to ancient Israel, "Cry aloud and spare not; lift up your voice like a trumpet." Above the din of drums and other instruments the cry rang out, "Ladies and gentlemen, being a stranger among you, by permission of your gentlemanly Mayor, I will now address you upon a theme of infinite importance. I am informed that the friends of the Salvation Army have long been in your midst, and will still remain. I should be pleased to have you listen to me a short time in regard to something new." The crowd around them soon diminished and gathered around me apparently astonished. I gave them no time for a reconsideration, telling them that what I had reference to as new was the same old gospel story which neither men, nor angels were authorized to change, or to preach any other, that had for a long time been hid from the world by the traditions of men. I refer to this matter to show how easy it is to begin the battle, as some old elders of late have experienced a desire to go with me and learn how to preach on the crowded street. This city is thirty-five miles west of Weir; no Saints near here that I know of. I spoke again last night. Much interest is manifested. One old man asked me before preaching how long I would remain. I told him it was owing to the interest manifested. That a gentleman had given me shelter the first night and if they continued to do so would remain awhile. He said, "I have no home here, but be sure and stay over to-morrow night," and put two dollars into my hand. I shall remain over Sunday, then will have to go to other appointments. I have been for a few weeks back where some Adventist friends live, Bro. Wm. Pender assisting me. Their minister opposed one night. One lady who went to them last year from the Methodists, now offers to unite with us upon her Adventist baptism. I hunted out Bro. E. Miller near Scammonsville last week. They were much rejoiced. Gathered in his neighbors and preached to them in his home. Distributed tracts, books, etc. Attended the conference May 25th in Sherwin, near Columbus. Many strangers were out and the Saints are still hoping that some may soon unite with us, although so many of the elders have been sent from here to other fields of labor.

June 8th. Preached again last night to a large crowd; subject, the Apostasy. Aroused much interest and some opposition. I speak again, by special request of the opposition from the text, "What shall I do to be saved."

Yours, as ever,

D. S. CRAWLEY.

DEER LODGE, Mont., June 9th.

Bro. Blair:—After leaving you at Independence, I went, by the Santa Fe route, to Southern California, where I met my family and many old and true friends; and had it not been for an attack of malarial fever I would have had a most glorious time; but I was quite under the weather all the time I was there. I arrived at Deer Lodge on May 25th, and found a welcome with the little band of devoted Saints here; and though but partially recovered from my late illness, I found myself in the midst of plenty of work again. Yesterday, I returned in company with Bro. R. J. Anthony from the Gallatin Valley, where we had a most profitable time with the Saints. Elder Anthony had been at Reese Creek nearly three weeks before I went there; and as the conference was approaching he wrote me to "come over;" and I am thankful that I went, for I found a good spirit there, and ample evidence of the good work of Bro. Anthony.

I never saw the Reese Creek folks feel better; and I pray that they may continue to enjoy the peace that the Holy Ghost brings to the obedient. Our meetings were good and the Saints were comforted. The pleasure of our visit was a little marred by father Reese getting hurt. He was walking home on a very dark night and a thoughtless boy rode over him with his horse, trampled him to the ground, and very seriously hurt him, fracturing (as we believe) two of his ribs.

Bro. Harvey Wells of Knobnoster, Missouri, with his family, is visiting at Father Reese's and is full of the spirit of the work.

We were desirous of visiting Willow Creek and Weeks, but Bro. Anthony's time was so limited he could not visit them this time. I shall go just as soon as I can. I find myself so crowded with work I hardly know what to do first, but by the grace of God I will do all I can. I will soon take a trip to Oregon to answer a call from that land and where I feel assured good will be done.

Bro. R. J. Anthony will occupy our little pulpit to-morrow, and on Monday he will leave us for Idaho and Utah, carrying with him the blessings and good will of the Saints, and leaving with us the full assurance that his heart and soul are in the work. May the Lord's protecting hand be over him. Yours in Christ,

J. C. CLAPP.

FREE SOIL, Mich., June 11th.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just closed a three evening's discussion with the Rev. Mr. Snider, of the M. E. Church, upon the following propositions: 1st. Resolved, that water baptism is for the remission of sins; and is essential to salvation. I affirm and Mr. Snider denies. 2d. Resolved, that infants, as well as believers, are proper subjects for baptism. Mr. Snider affirms and I deny. 3d. Resolved, that a burial of the body in water is the scriptural mode of baptism. I affirm and Mr. Snider denies.

We occupied three evenings, in the largest hall in Free Soil; each speaker occupied two half hours each night; and the last night each had ten minutes extra at the close. Good order prevailed throughout, and many came to hear who would not otherwise come to hear us. The arguments produced by Mr. Snider (if he had any) were chiefly from Mr. Wakefield. A large majority of the people express themselves as being surprised at the Reverend not bringing forth better arguments. All he had to say in support of his way of baptism, were the same arguments we have heard years ago. Baptism took the place of circumcision, &c., (Mark 10); "Suffer little children to come unto me;" but he was careful to leave out "And laid his hands on them and blessed them." In Ezek. 36: "I will sprinkle clean water upon you," etc. But he was very careful not to tell the people that God would do it, and not man; and that he would do it to the Jews after they would be gathered back to the land of their fathers. "Sprinkle blood on the book and all the people sprinkle ashes," &c.

There are over twenty members here now in Free Soil; and others are investigating. I am to perform the ordinance of baptism to-day; I don't know how many. The work moves on nicely. The opposing world is losing ground. Their arguments are getting weaker, whilst our cause is gaining, and our arguments are powerful. In this district we feel sure of a great and grand triumph for the right. I am very truly yours.

J. J. CORNISH.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7th.

Bro. Joseph:—We have had the pleasure of seeing and hearing four of our missionaries of late. They came as welcome friends, and went away happy and cheerful, after having spent some two weeks in our vicinity. The first to reach us was Elder H. L. Holt and D. E. Landers, on their way to Oregon, their future field of labor. They both spoke for us at our hall, Sunday, May 20th, to an attentive audience. The following Sunday evening we had the pleasure of listening to J. W. Wight, who was assisted by C. A. Butterworth, his companion in the mission to Australia. His discourse was interesting and well received. During the week we had two discourses delivered by Bro. Landers, in our city; besides quite a number delivered in Oakland, by all four missionaries. They also spent much time in visiting the Saints and conversing with those not yet fully persuaded. So this far on their missions they are doing well. They all made friends here, and are much liked.

Oakland furnished us with quite a treat during their stay. Clark Braden was there lecturing, and among other subjects handled, was one for which he is noted—"Mormonism." I had the pleasure (?) of being present. It was a re-hash of the old Spaulding story, and other worn out yarns and lies, so twisted and arranged as to try to destroy the point gained by the publishing of "Manuscript Found." He claimed that Spaulding had written three manuscripts, and that we have not published the right one, but a rejected Roman manuscript, which bears no resemblance to the Book of Mormon, or Spaulding's second manuscript from which the said book was stolen. Well! thus it is; new stories must be manufactured to meet the discoveries and developments of the day; but still the work goes on and increases, and Braden seeks new fields in which to tell his old stories, and unload his filth, while he vainly kicks against the mountain.

All goes nicely in our branch, and all is peace with us. We still "hold the fort," and endeavor to teach the way to earnest life. Our meetings are quite well attended, and we have plenty of work to accomplish in this part of the vineyard; realizing this, we are toiling on, ever praying and working for the cause of Christ.

Yours in bonds,

GEO. S. LINCOLN.

CATHOLICISM.—No. III.

BY ELDER M. T. SHORT.

SHOULD any one think that we ought not to devote so much time and space to these clashing doctrines, our apology is that they have divided and distracted mankind, laid waste fair fields, desolated populous marts, drenched the earth with human gore, and crimsoned the high seas with sanguinary conflicts, and the end is not yet.

Ye acolytes and subdeacons; ye monks and nuns; yea, ye wily Jesuits and mitred Abbots, behold the mother church and spiritual mistress of the world in councils assembled condemn and anathematize the iconoclasts, or image breakers; the errors of the Albigenses, and the doctrine of Peter De Bruys, and the schism of Peter Leo, and the faith of the Waldenses, and miribile dictu! "those heretics who rejected infant baptism."

Weep "thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets," for the church marches up to the Zenith, gains the whole world, but loses her soul. This infallible church excommunicates and deposes princes, absolves subjects from further allegiance; abolishes the "Pragmatic sanction" composed of "thirty-eight decrees of the council of Basle," and "abuses in morals and discipline were reformed" in the sixteenth century, in Trent, a city situated in the Austrian Tyrol. The only church is marked with, 1st. One faith and worship, the same sacraments and a supreme rule or head. 2d. Holiness, i. e., pure doctrine, and many persons eminent in piety. 3d. Catholic, or for the universal world. 4th. Apostolic, founded by Jesus and the apostles, committed to them and unfolded and kept in unbroken succession till now, etc., etc.

The next thing chronicled in "Catholic belief," is a "list of the sovereign Pontiffs who, in a direct line, have succeeded St. Peter in the see of Rome." It is stoutly claimed that the first supreme pastor was elevated to the pontifical throne in the "eternal city," A. D. 42, and that he swayed the scepter a full quarter of a century when martyrdom ended his earthly pilgrimage.

Popular and marginal chronology indicates (See Acts 12) that the Apostle Peter was a prisoner in Jerusalem, A. D. 44, and eight years later (chap. 15) was residing in the same city.

In Galatians 2d, we still find the apostle of circumcision at headquarters in 58, and in 60 he addresses the strangers in Asia Minor from Babylon. (See 1 Peter 1: 1, and 5: 13). He pen's his last pastoral letter in A. D. 66, but Rome is not in it.

Tradition of interested parties is unreliable, and more so when figures and facts are against them. The great prelate doubtless never beheld the Italian shore, or even a Sicilian landscape. He never mentioned them directly or indirectly even the name of Rome, and papal logicians have convinced me more fully that the continent of Asia was his sole theater of action.

The sacred canon was filled by the apostles, therefore no new revelation is admissible; but authoritative definitions, and solemn interpretations are forthcoming for every emergency. Some of the reigning pontiffs have "confirmed the Lenten Fast, introduced the Gloria Excelsis in the mass, and allowed three masses to be celebrated by each priest on Christmas Day;" "instituted subdeaconship and the minor orders;" "Reprehended St. Cyprian, bishop of Carthage, for rebaptizing heretics;" "Prescribed the rite for the dedication of churches;" "Commanded the altars to be made of stone;" "Received the Emperor Constantine into the church as Catechumen;" "reigned "during the exile of Pope Liberius;" "Commanded the Gloria Patri to be added at the end of every psalm;" "Prescribed that at the reading of the gospel in the mass all should stand;" "Staved Attila and Genseric from further invading Italy;" "Decreed the canon of Scriptures with which the Tridentine canon agrees;" "Condemned the heretical 'Three Chapters,'" "Reformed the plain chant;" "Unconsecrated, died in four months after his doubtless election;" "Established rules for the solemn canonization of Saints;" "Introduced the use of bells;" "Instituted all Saints day;" "Obtained the Pantheon from the Emperor Phocas, which he dedicated to God in honor of the Blessed Virgin and all the holy martyrs."

Honorius "was greatly censured for having been remiss in condemning heretics;"

"Introduced the use of organs in church as;" "Improved the church chant;" "died before his consecration;" "Consecrated Charles the Great, Emperor of the West and thus restored the Roman Empire after three hundred years cessation;" "Fortified the Vatican and Leonine city against the saracens;" "Reigned only fifteen days, considered not legitimately elected;" "Interrupted for a short time by an intruder;" "Gave to Stephen, Ruler of Hungary, the title of King;" "Changed his name on ascending the Papal throne. His baptismal name was Peter;" "abdicated in 1046;" "Ordered that in future popes be elected by the Cardinals in conclave;" "Absolved Henry IV at Canossa who afterward ungratefully invaded Rome;" "Was thrice compelled to leave Rome on account of seditions;" "Approved the order of the Dominicans;" "Convoked the XIII General Council at Lyons, in which the Emperor Frederick II was deposed;" "Instituted the feast of Corpus Christi;" "Was elected after a conclave of three years;" "converted Pomerania and Norway;" "St. Francis foretold him the Papacy;" "removed to Avignon;" "ordered the bells to be tolled every evening for the Angelus;" "endowed with wonderful memory;" "transferred his residence from Avignon to Rome;" "abjured the Greek schism;" "published Crusade against Bajazeh;" "resigned in 1409;" "Ceased to be pope;" "elected in the council of Constance;" "Decree of reunion of the Greek and Latin church in 1439, but after five years the Greeks separated again;" "introduced the carrying of the Holy Sacrament in procession on the Festival of Corpus Christi;" "introduced typography in Rome;" "freed Spain from Mohammedanism;" "prohibited dueling by excommunication;" "excommunicated Luther A. D. 1520;" "excommunicated Henry VIII, King of England, 1530;" "convoked council of Trent to put down heresies and correct abuses;" "confirmed the council of Trent;" "corrected the calendar;" "published a revised edition of the Bible called the Vulgate;" "published an edition of the Vulgate newly revised as in present use;" "praised the Thomistic school;" "His Holiness Leo XIII created Pope February 20th, 1878; whom may God long preserve."

"NOTE.—The Roman Pontiffs.—The number of popes from St. Peter to Leo XIII inclusive, without counting the Antipopes, is commonly said to be 258. Of this number 82 are venerated as Saints, 33 were martyred, 104 have been Romans, and 103 have been natives of other parts of Italy; 15 Frenchmen, 9 Greeks, 7 Germans, 5 Asiatics, 3 Africans, 3 Spaniards, 2 Dalmatians, 1 Hebrew, 1 Thracian, 1 Dutchman, 1 Portuguese, 1 Candiot, and 1 Englishman. Nine pontiffs have reigned less than one month, 30 less than one year, and 11 more than twenty years. Only 6 have occupied the Pontifical chair over twenty-three years. These are St. Peter, who was the Supreme Pastor in Rome (besides the seven years of his Pontificate in Antioch) twenty-five years, two months and seven days. Sylvester I., Adrian I., Pius VI, VII and IX."

When the papal bull bellows forth a decree, command, or change, behold it is law and order.

Such terms as confirmed, ordered, instituted, introduced, abound in defining the prerogatives of the chair, but revelation, prophecy, and inspiration are disclaimed; howbeit Amos says, 3: 7, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets."

"The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth." "And the woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth." "The beast," of the apocalypse, was imperial Rome; and the capitol was the seven hilled city upon the Yellow Tiber.

"The ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings," or the "ten powers" of Europe that grew out of disruption and death of the "Iron monarchy" and "Christian capitol of the world." The efficacy of prayer does not depend on the merit of the person who prays, but on the mercy of God, and on his faithfulness to His promise."

If the above hypothesis be true I fail to see any use in prayer; but "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," while, on the other hand, "now we know that God heareth not sinners; but if a man be a worshiper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth." Again "The Lord is far from the the wicked; but he heareth the prayer of the righteous." Jeremiah was commanded in the 7th, 11th and 14th chapters to not pray for apostate Israel; and Jesus Christ observed, "I pray not for the world, but for them thou hast given me." John, the beloved, was told, "There is a sin unto death, I do not say that he shall pray for it."

"In the case of those who have fallen into mortal sin after baptism, when the guilt of sin and the everlasting punishment due to it are forgiven, there still very often remains a debt of temporal punishment to be paid by the sinner."

He who commits a mortal or deadly sin is forgiven and absolved from an unpardonable offense, and is made free by fasting alms, and the penitential works of a poor sinner!

Works of piety "do not satisfy the justice of God," but derive their value through the atonement and merit of Christ. "By an indulgence is meant not the forgiveness of sin, or a permission to commit a sin, but remission, through the merits of Jesus Christ, of the whole or a part of the debt of temporal punishment due to a sin, the guilt and everlasting punishment of which have through the merits of Jesus Christ, been already forgiven through the sacrament of penance."

"Purgatory is a state of suffering after this life, in which those souls are for a time detained, who depart this life after their deadly sins have been remitted as to the stain and guilt, and as to the everlasting pains due to them; but who have on account of those sins still some debt of temporal punishment to pay, as also those souls who leave this world guilty only of venial or minor sins."

"As to the place, manner, or nature of these sufferings nothing has been defined by the church;" "for at death either heaven or hell is the final place to which all men are allotted, purgatory being only a passage to heaven."

St. Chrysostom calls the communion of Saints, whether in heaven, earth, or purgatory, a "tremendous mystery;" but support the hierarchy, and you may go from the gallows direct or via purgatory right up to glory.

Pope Pius, as late as December 8th, 1854, speaks ex cathedra, not only in regard to how the Son entered into the world, but solemnly and authoritatively declares that the ever Blessed Virgin was immaculately conceived, or came forth free from original sin. "Holy Church" further holds that God, by special privilege, so preserved her from all sin, and perpetuated the virginity of the mother of God, after childbirth, but my Bible tells about four others of her sons, and several of her daughters. This is but natural, and right, and in perfect order, and honoring to motherhood; inasmuch as St. Joseph had no scriptural grounds for divorcing her. Romish reasoners make a false and unwarranted claim for her nature, and then invoke her, and other deified beings as meditators, contrary to the divine prohibition.

When once the flood gates of superstition are thrown wide open then images, crucifixes, relicts and inferior objects are venerated, or idolized. Joshua's prostration before the ark is triumphantly referred to, see Joshua 7th chapter and 6th verse; but the 10th verse of this same chapter of the book of Joshua is withheld with Jesuitical skill. "And the Lord said unto Joshua, Get thee up, wherefore liest thou thus upon thy face?"

The many celebrated miracles wrought at the tombs of the martyrs prove that the honor we pay to them is agreeable to God, saith St. Augustine, the good Catholic doctor, in his "City of God," book 22, chapter 8. In Matthew, Mark and Luke we read of not only a party that frequented tombs, but he dwelleth amid the same, and amid the adjacent mountains, and lo! he is fierce, wild and mad. When Jesus met the unfortunate fellow he did not have to adore a tomb, or hunt up, and pay honor to some dead man's bones, before he cast the demons out of the demented. Furthermore, when the man was blest he was instructed to leave the ungainly abode and "Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee and hath had compassion on thee."

The reason why the Romish church makes use of the Latin language, is because it is a dead language, suitable only to an unchangeable church. It is avowed that all nations, through that tongue, can take an intelligent part in the ministrations, which reminds a Papist how, on the Day of Pentecost, nations heard in their own tongue, wherein they were born, the wonderful works of God.

This senseless, soulless, musty form of a defunct dialect, muttered by an automatic priest, to swarms of base ignoramasses, both day and night, through dozens of generations, is impiously, and shamefully compared to the preaching of the glorious gospel, with the authority, and power, and utterance given direct by the Holy Ghost sent down from God. These groveling, obnoxious, "vain repetitions," with the accompanying bobbings and crossings, are as remote from "the law of liberty" as the last found plant is distanced from the coral caves of the tropical seas. The Unchangeability, Apostolicity, Catholicity, and oneness of the church are maintained by the old Latin language, but it is safe to say that not one to the hundred thousand has even a faint smattering of that form of speech.

The written, and unwritten, or traditional word of God, along with the definitions of faith and worship, and the decrees touching doctrine and law, form the "deposit of faith." The truths can not be added upon, but their import can be more clearly stated, and what was believed in and inferentially taught is often officially and authoritatively declared. Our author thinks that ignorant Protestants that have been baptized and believe in three divine persons in the one God, may gain heaven; and some theologians of that school favor the opinion that he who without fault does not believe and know in regard to the trinity but reposes in one God, may still be in a state of salvation. That strikes me favorably, for I have yet to learn that the Holy Spirit is a person, although it is divine and quite often personified in holy writ.

"Fairness, no less than common sense, teaches that a man should study and examine the teachings of the Catholic Church from Catholic sources before condemning her. Surely no man should reject Catholic doctrines if he has not made himself well acquainted with them."

Amen, and so say I about all orders, and especially the Latter Day Saints' faith.

"To be born and bred in a certain religion is not a sound reason for remaining in it when you come to see clearly that it is not true." Amen, again, Bro. Bruno, and that is the key to the reformation of the sixteenth century; and the index and guide to the great, grand and glorious restoration of our day. In embracing the faith, from which your ancestors have dissented, you will increase in the good and the true; and your happiness, fidelity, love, sympathy and devotion will be augmented.

If, in the judgment of your spiritual director, you are liable to suffer the loss of home or property, or employment, "you may attend to your Catholic duties privately."

The above appears to be squarely at variance with the spirit and genius, the faith and practice of God's people in all ages of this sin-cursed earth. The ancient worthies took joyfully the spoiling of their goods. They were the light of the world, like a beautiful city on a lofty eminence, but the world loves darkness rather than light because evil are their doings.

"Conditional baptism" is done when other religionists have performed the rite before, and, that too, by pouring a little water thrice on the head or forehead. There might be some defect in the element used, (i. e., not holy water), or words uttered, or improper intention, or serious fault of the administrator thereby nullifying the whole act. A venial, or trivial sin may become a mortal, or deadly sin under certain circumstances, when so declared; as also vice versa. The priest has the authority, called "faculty," from the bishop, to hear confessions all in inviolable secrecy. The penitential confessional is spoken of as a life-giving sacrament of reconciliation, worthy of all Christians through God's grace and the assistance of your confessor, to secure peace and pardon. "His God is reconciled to him," saith the mother, while the "separated brethren," or dissenting children, under the inspiration of the Wesley's, sing "My God is reconciled."

It is freely admitted baptism to be "conferred on infants" is "not even mentioned in the word of God;" but observances, discipline, church government, and ordinances are easily dug up from ecclesiastical traditions, by laws, constitution, and history of the church.

The new convert is expected to honor and venerate, not only images, but pictures, to confess that under the consecrated bread or wine alone, Christ is received whole and entire, to believe wholly in the mother and mistress of all churches, to subscribe to the dogma of successorship and to avow that he has found the palladium of safety, and the treasure-house of salvation.

"I likewise undoubtedly receive and profess all other things which the Sacred Canons and General Councils, and particularly the Holy Council of Trent and the Œcumenical Vatican Council, have delivered, defined and declared, and in particular about the supremacy and infallible teachings of the Roman pontiffs. And I condemn, reject and anathematize all things contrary thereto, and all heresies which the church has condemned, rejected and anathematized."—"Catholic Belief," page 254.

"In baptism under condition the ceremonies prescribed for baptism are not required, nor are sponsors needed, in England, but they are in the United States." Furthermore, if a priest, by a rigid examination, finds a person that has been "validly baptized" "the baptism 'under condition' is omitted according to direction from Rome," thereby sanctioning Protestant, or alien authority, and neutralizing his own, as also the whole see of Rome. A layman, woman, or child, a stranger, heretic, non professor, or a skeptic, can baptize, under grave necessity; therefore emergency is the fountain head of authority, the priesthood is a sham, church government is a farce, ordinances are toys, rites are at the mercy of chance, and ceremonies may be brought into requisition at pleasure, or dispensed at fancy, or will.

Our author makes honorable mention of the conversion of lady Champlain, a Huguenot, and of her founding an Ursuline convent in France, but the St. Bartholomew massacre escapes his attention, when seventy thousand French Huguenots were sacrificed in one fatal night, to glut the diabolical vengeance of proud, intolerant, inquisitorial Rome. The extirpation of heresy means to subdue and convert, or anathematize and kill, whenever and wherever "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" holds the reins and undisputed sway. The pitiful wail, about their recent loss of abbey lands, convents, monasteries, church property, and the last vestige of the temporal power of the pope is the faint moan of the old usurping, expiring monster. "These shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate, and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire, for God hath put into their hearts to fulfill his will."—Rev. 17:16, 17.

"Rev. John Thayer, a Congregationalist minister of Boston, was in Rome when the Blessed Benedict Joseph Labre died. The miracles wrought at the bier were the talk of all circles," and thus he was converted and returned a Catholic priest, which led many to the truth.

I somehow have it in my head and heart that "The law of God is perfect converting the soul," and "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation."

Dr. Levi Silliman Ives, who had been an Episcopal Bishop of North Carolina, exclaimed on meeting the Rev. James Roosevelt Bayley, "Oh! the mercy of God! The last time I was here was when I, as a Protestant Bishop, ordained you an Episcopal minister, and now bishop, minister and church are all Catholics, thanks be to God."

We might refer to the accession of James A. McMaster, editor of Freeman's Journal, and others, but the above examples will have to suffice.

Although Romanism has claimed, from the remote ages, that the canon of Scripture is full; and that no new revelation can be given, and that they are the sole possessors of the whole deposit of faith, still they aver, Oh! tell it not in Gath! that the ever Blessed Virgin did actually reveal or make known to St. Dominic in the thirteenth century, the Rosary of devotion in fifteen parts. This string of inspired beads consists of one "our Father," ten "Hail Marys," a mystery, and one "Glory be to the Father." The "joyful mysteries" appertain to the birth and childhood of Jesus, the sorrowful to his agony and crucifixion, and the Glorious to his resurrection and ascension, as also the assumption and crowning of the Blessed Virgin in heaven.

These mysteries of five each, or fifteen in all, are to be counted off on certain days and at stated times.

"The Queen of Heaven," is excelling the Son, or outdoing the Father, for lo! she has spoken, at least once in the last thousand years, about the use of beads. I can believe, as easily and piously that she will soon give us a dissertation about feathers and ribbons, as to think that she did speak about the manufacture and sale of the material for the Rosary. To mention manual of devotions, prayers, maxims, ejaculations &c., is a tax on our patience; but what about those who have to repeat them, mechanically over and over, without number.

The church granted many and great indulgences to pious pilgrims and to holy shrines, but finally fourteen scenes of the Passion were pictured on church walls, which were called "stations to the cross" and all who paid devotion to these works of art had "the same indulgence;" but, bear in mind "Holy church" changeth not. Recite, "behold, oh, King," before any representation of Christ crucified, saith Pius VII, April 10th, 1821, confess, commune, and secure, thus, plenary indulgence, which, also, applies to souls in purgatory.

I presume that proxy genuflections, of the living for the dead answers as well as if the images were in purgatory with the devil and his allies that first originated the supercilious, nonsensical, abominable deception.

We are gravely told that angels adore, and devils tremble, before the furniture of cathedrals and churches, and, at the same time, idolatry is disavowed; but, as actions speak louder and are more uniform than words, we are bound to look upon the asseveration with mental reservation. To doubt and reject error is meritorious, while to hear, believe, obey, and live according to truth is full salvation. What estimate do you put in the statement of "holy souls in purgatory?" That place and condition are to expurgate, purge, cleanse and purify. How about St. Joseph, the spouse of Mary,—"whom we venerate as our protector on earth may be our intercessor in heaven, who livest and reignest forever and ever?" Catholics love their neighbors, for God's sake, and detest their own sins, and own they deserve dreadful punishments, but expect salvation through the merits of Christ, angels, martyrs, and the superabundant excellencies of all the heavenly denizens and the matchless, boundless, goodness of God. The faithful are expected to believe reverently, ardently and forevermore, all that the church proposes, the sacred canon is arranged by herself, the true sense which she puts upon the record; the Nicene creed, all definitions of faith and morals, &c., &c.

The handmaiden of low estate, as per order of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII., is to be invoked in such uncalled for and lavishing titles of "Hail! Holy, Queen, Mother of mercy, our life, our sweetness, our hope, gracious advocate, Immaculate Mary, Ever Virgin, O, sweet Virgin Mary! Mother of God," &c.

Accursed Israel afore time vowed to, made cakes for, burned incense unto, and poured out drink offerings to the "queen of heaven." Jer. 44th chapter. Catholicism has revamped the old lying heresy, and Brighamism has touched the lyre with—"our Father in heaven and our mother the queen," while one sickly, would-be defender of the faith inadvertently chimed in from the Far West.

We are satisfied to simply call her blessed, (Luke 1: 48) repose implicitly in one God, and trust to the sole mediatorship of Jesus Christ.

NORTH-WEST KANSAS.

This district conference met with the Goshen branch, Clay county, Kansas, June 2d. 1888; H. R. Harder, presiding, John D. Bennett secretary, pro tem. Branch reports:—Blue Rapids 63. Twin Creek 46. (This branch invited the conference to hold its next session with it). Goshen, last report 57, one died, 2 removed by letter, one dropped from record by request, present number 53. Elmira 35. Elders reported:—G. W. Shute, (baptized 3), Henry Hart, A. Kent, Mahlon Smith, H. R. Harder, E. Keeler and J. D. Bennet in person. G. W. Beebe, (baptized 2), A. H. Parsons, (baptized 8), by letter. Priests Z. Decker, V. F. Rogers, W. F. Clark reported. In answer to a request from Bro. George Beebe, it was ordered that a protracted meeting be held near Burr Oak, Kansas, commencing July 12th. The chair appointed G. W. Shute and A. Kent to take charge. It was ordered that the next session of this conference convene near North Branch, Jewel county, Kansas, September 15th, 1888, at ten o'clock, a. m. A committee of three was appointed, consisting of Mahlon Smith, G. W. Beebe and G. W. Shute to enquire concerning certain rumors that are in circulation touching the actions and standing of Bro. R. Hoyer of Blue Rapids, [I would recommend Bro. Hayer to correspond with Bro. Mahlon Smith immediately. J. D. B]. Brethren Shute and Kent were assigned to visit and labor in the Prairie Home branch, as opportunity and judgment may direct. It was resolved that this district, hereby recognize the tenth meridian, west of sixth principal meridian, (west line of Jewel and Mitchel counties), as the west line of said district. Brn. Bennett, Smith and Keeler were appointed auditors on bishop's Agent's accounts. Account is as follows:—Receipts $121.80; expenditures $124.26, by the present agent. Agent Shute reported $13.69 on hand at last report, and had since collected $41.60; balance on hand $30.29. Preaching Saturday evening by Bro. Kent; Sunday morning by M. Smith. Sacrament service in the afternoon in charge of Brn. Harder and Bennett. Evening service, preaching by Bro. Shute. Thus ended a pleasant and profitable session, which added one member to the church by baptism. Mahlon Smith was elected president and John D. Bennett secretary of the district.

SPRING RIVER.

This district conference convened at Sherwin School-house, May 25th; called to order by J. Alfred Davis, president. The following elders reported:—D. S. Crawley, R. H. Davis, W. S. Taylor, Wm. Westervelt, Orville Barmore, E. A. Davis, Orson Sutherland, Stephen Maloney, Moses Turpen, Wm. S. Pender, J. A. Davis and J. M. Richards in person; John Hawley and E. Keeler, by letter. Most of the elders reported a favorable hearing among the people; especially Brn. Crawley, Sutherland, E. A. Davis, and Maloney. All the sessions were harmonious and a general desire was expressed to continue to present the truth to the people. The following branches reported:—Pleasant View, Webb City, Columbus, Keighly and Mound Valley. All the spiritual and temporal authorities of the church were sustained. J. Alfred Davis was sustained as president and J. W. Richards as clerk of district. Preaching Friday night by M. Turpen; Saturday night, by E. A. Davis; Sunday morning by D. S. Crawley and Sunday night by J. M. Richards. Bishop's Agent's report:—From December 31st, 1887, to May 25th, 1888. On hand and received since last report, $71.78; paid out, $53; balance on hand $18.78. R. H. Davis, agent. Adjourned to meet October 19th, at Pleasant View branch.

FLORIDA.

The above conference was held at Santa Rosa Branch, June 2d and 3d, G. R. Scogin president, L. F. West clerk pro tem. Elders E. Powell, John Hawkins, and G. R. Scogin (baptized 1), reported. Elder Scogin requested to be released from presiding over the district, which was done, and Elder E. Powell was chosen to preside for the coming three months. Bro. Scogin was invited to labor in the district as his circumstances may allow. The following two days' meetings were appointed: At Coldwater branch, Saturday and Sunday, June 16th and 17th; at Eureka branch, July 7th and 8th; at Pleasant View branch, July 14th and 15th; at Hinote branch, August 4th and 5th; at Santa Rosa branch August 18th and 19th; all said meetings to commence at 10 a. m. Saturdays. Preaching Saturday night by Bro. Powell. Prayer meeting Sunday at 9 a. m., Bro. Hawkins in charge. Preaching at 10:30 a. m. by Bro. Scogin; at 2 p. m. by L. F. West. Adjourned to meet at Coldwater branch, Saturday, September 1st, 1888.

Miscellaneous.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

A conference of the Pottawattamie district will be held at Wheeler's Grove, commencing Saturday, June 30th, at 10:30 o'clock. It is hoped that branches will not fail to send reports. Elders also are reminded that it is their duty to report in person or by letter. Reports should be addressed in care of S. C. Smith, Wheeler, Pottawattamie county, Iowa.

H. N. HANSEN, Pres. of Dist.

The quarterly conference of the Northern Illinois district, of June 23d and 24th, will be held in hall A, 213 West Madison street, Chicago. Madison street cars will let you off at the door. A cordial invitation to all.

S. C. GOOD, Com.

Texas Central District.—Correction.—Said conference will convene Friday, July 20th, at eight p. m., instead of the 22d, as announced in last Herald. All interested please take notice.

NOTICES.

First annual report of the Buffalo Prairie Sisters' Aid Society: This society was organized May 17th, 1887. Officers elected were Sisters Sarah Bryant president; Nellie Epperly secretary; Emma Gormer treasurer; Mina Epperly, assistant secretary and treasurer. Number of sessions held, 18; Members 17; average attendance 8; amount collected during the past year $14.50 expenses $6.43. Balance $8.07.

There will be a two days' meeting held at the Yellow Banks, on Saturday and Sunday, June 23d and 24th, 1888. The meeting will be held in J. H. Jackson's Grove.

J. H. JACKSON, Dist. Clerk.

BATTLE CREEK, Neb.

As there is not much prospect of permanent labor in the ministry within the North-West Kansas district, eastward of Smith and Russel counties, it will be well for those in localities in that region desiring labor to report to district president, Mahlon Smith, Blue Rapids, Kansas, or John D. Bennett, secretary of district, Cuba, Republic county, Kansas; either of whom will do all he can to fill the demand.

J. D. BENNETT, Sec'y of District.

DIED.

HALL.—At the residence of A. Kent, near Clay Center, Kansas, January 5th, 1888, Bro. Caleb Hall, of old age and consumption. After an illness of nine weeks he passed away in full hope of a glorious resurrection with the just. Bro. Hall was 97 years of age. He united with the church in an early day, and passed through the early trials with the Saints. Was associated with the Reorganized Church and ordained an elder. Funeral sermon by A. Kent, from Philipians 1: 23, the text selected by Bro. Hall two weeks before his death. He often stated that he desired to depart and be with Christ.

WILSON.—Near Talmage, Nebraska, June 6th, Mary Pauline, infant daughter of Bro. George W. and Sr. Luvenia Wilson, aged not quite two months. She was a sweet bud of promise.

"The Lord gave and he has taken.
Evermore his will be done."

HARTNELL.—At Juniata, Tuscola county, Michigan, May 14th, 1888, Sr. Eleanor, wife of Bro. Richard Hartnell, aged 24 years, 5 months and 21 days. She was baptized by Elder A. Leverton at Usborne, Ontario, June 10th, 1877. Funeral sermon by Elder Levi Phelps.

"Thou art gone, but we remain;
Yet we hope to meet again;
When the trials of life are o'er,
We hope to meet to part no more."

HORTON.—At White Rock, Huron county, Michigan, May 18th, 1888, Mary A., daughter of Bro. S. and C. M. Horton, aged 10 years and 19 days. Funeral sermon by Levi Phelps.

JOHNSON.—At his home near Clay Center, Kansas, May 9th, 1888, Bro. Nelson Johnson. Deceased was born at Selvesburgh, parish of Gamelstarp, Sweden, September 5th, 1849. He, with his companion, united with the church August 11th, 1881, at Clay Centre, Kansas, being baptized by A. Kent. Bro. Johnson leaves a wife and six children. Also a father, mother, two brothers, one sister and a host of friends to mourn; but not as those who have no hope. Funeral discourse by A. Kent in presence of a large and attentive audience.

THE "Q'S" RAPID RECOVERY.

Recently published statistics of the Chicago Union Stock Yards Co., and of the Chicago Board of Trade, show that the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad is again leading all other lines in the number of cars of live stock and grain brought to that market. This fact speaks for itself, and shows the rapidity with which the Burlington has recovered from its labor troubles.

WHEN a rich man dies, his wealth is soon disposed of, and, if he has left nothing else, his name is soon forgotten. But if he has used his wealth in the service of justice and mercy, righteousness and truth, if he has aided the weak, lifted the fallen, encouraged struggling merit, and has thus been a blessing to humanity, then his deeds live after him, and his children cherish them as a richer legacy than gold or lands.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. W. Blair wrote from Deloit, Iowa, June 18th:

"Had excellent three days' conference here from 15th to 17th inst. Harmony and love prevailed. Prospects for the district are very promising. Preaching services were largely attended, and best of attention was paid. The Spirit gave liberty and power in all the meetings, and the Saints were edified and confirmed. Bro. Charles Derry and I will remain here till the 20th inst., then go to Dow City for a few days, after which he will go on to the two days' meeting at Persia, and I will go to Galland's Grove for next Sunday. From all I hear this district promises well for the future. Bro. Derry and I may aid the friends in celebrating the fourth of July at Galland's Grove, if all goes well. We have been invited to speak at their Basket Picnic on that occasion, when it is expected there will be a large concourse of people. The Lord's work is spreading abroad like the light in all these parts and the Saints are hopeful and rejoicing."

Bro. Joseph Luff wrote from Rich Hill, Missouri, June 11th:

"I am billed to deliver an "oration" (no less) on temperance on July 4th at Lowry City. The request came through I. N. White from the committee on celebration. Have been preaching at Knob Noster, near Lowry, Shobe and here. The vote on Local Option occurs on the 16th here, and I have given up all meetings but one for that reason, and if I can get a chance to put in a squib on the temperance platform this week, I will do it. The vote on Local Option is to be cast in Independence on the 27th. I must be there a few days before that to help all I can. We want to "go dry" there if at all possible—here also. Baptized one man yesterday. More near."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Saints at Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, are building a house of worship; expecting to get it ready for holding conference last of June. So writes Bro. George W. Needham. Success, brethren, may you have blessed success.

Bro. E. C. Briggs called on the branch at Lamoni, on his way east stopping over Sunday the 17th and preaching to the Saints Sunday evening. He was in good spirits and was on the way to the field of labor. He gave us a call at the sanctum. Bro. Briggs thought it hardly fair to say that he "talked to Bro. Blair for seven hours;" as if he did all the talking. We did not intend to convey such an idea, for we know Bro. Blair to be equal to his full share of conversation. We only intended to convey the idea that Bro. Briggs called on Bro. Blair, and they had a seven hours friendly chat. Bro. Briggs left Lamoni Tuesday the 19th for the east. The good wishes and prayers of the Saints go with him, and all the laborers in the field with him.

The St. Louis Saints are building them a house of worship; and will hold a grand reunion and picnic, Wednesday, July 4th, in the interest of that work. The picnic will be at Forest Park, four blocks north of Howard Station on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, Wabash Railway to Union Avenue south of Clayton Road. Trains every hour. All are invited to join them who will. The picnic will be under the management of the St. Louis Mite Society. See what the sisters can do when they set about it.

Two were baptized at Byrnaville, Indiana, June 10th.

BELOW we give another section of Mrs. Stenhouse's reminiscences of Utah Mormonism, which we take from the Christian world for April 25th. When she confines her narrative to what she knows, it is very interesting; but when she quotes what some others, enemies of the church, have written or said, it sometimes is both condemnable and contemptible:

In that year, 1854, there was great excitement among the Saints in Utah.

Brigham Young and his apostles were denouncing the Gentiles in the most unmeasured language, and predicted desolating judgment to be about to fall upon Europe, and in fact every part of the earth except the territory of Utah at the Salt Lake, which would be the only haven of refuge. Mormon 'Saints' in Europe were alarmed, and became anxious to emigrate to Utah, where they were told they would be safe. A seven years' famine was said to be at their door, when a sack of flour should be sold for a sack of gold, and Gentile kings and princes were to come and crouch to the Saints in Utah for a morsel of bread. The women in Utah were counselled to sell the ribbons from their bonnets, to buy flour with the proceeds, and to store it up after the example of Joseph in Egypt, against the seven years of famine.

The brethren and sisters in Switzerland who could dispose of their property hastened to "flee to Zion." Some did so at a ruinous sacrifice. One gentleman, a Monsieur Robella, I knew, who was part proprietor of a newspaper and printing establishment. In a very short time it would have been entirely in his own hands; but he sold out at a great loss, dreading that the storm might overtake him before he reached the "chambers of the Lord in the mountains," as the elders called Salt Lake City.

The journey from Europe to Utah at that time occupied six or eight months; it was a very tedious pilgrimage. My Swiss friends had first to travel to Liverpool; thence by sailing vessel to New Orleans; by steamer up the Mississippi as far as St. Louis; up the Missouri to the frontier; and then across the plains by ox teams. Much of this distance had to be traveled during the worst part of the year. They left their homes while the Jura mountains were still draped in snow; and those who escaped the ravages of cholera and the perils of the way, reached their destination just as the frosts of winter were beginning to whiten the hoary heads of the hills which stand about Zion. All the Swiss pilgrims traveled together until they arrived at St. Louis; there they separated, one party going up the river, and the other making the journey overland. The cholera attacked the latter party, and cut off the most of them, and their bones now whiten the prairie.

The news of their death soon arrived in Switzerland, and the people at Lausanne were exasperated against the Mormon missionaries; and when my husband visited that place he found it prudent not to remain long. At the same time those of the Saints whose relations had perished in the emigration were pained to hear that it was because they "had not obeyed counsel," and gone up the river with the other party, that they fell by the way. And, as if in mockery of this statement, the next news that we received was that a Missouri steamer, on board of which were many Mormon missionaries—all most obedient to counsel—had been blown to atoms. Many of the Saints began to consider these things, and their love waxed cold. Through all this our position was anything but pleasant, and my husband applied for permission to be released from the presidency of the Swiss and Italian missions, in order that he might "gather to Zion." His request was granted; and in the autumn of 1854 we bade a final adieu to Switzerland.

We might now be said to have begun our journey to Zion, although we tarried long by the way, and several years elapsed before we reached our destination. When we arrived in London we obtained apartments in the house of the President of the London Conference, and there I had opportunities of observing the effects of the system upon the English Saints. Elder Marsden, the president, was a thorough Mormon, and a man who was very highly thought of. He had been acquainted with all the apostles and high priests who had resided in Liverpool—the great rendezvous of the Saints in England; had been President of the Conference there, and now occupied the highest position of the European mission. He was a pleasant, intelligent man, who in his day had done much to build up the church; but, like his two predecessors, John Banks and Thomas Margetts, he also apostatized from the Mormonism of later years. At the time, however, of which I speak, he was considered to be of good standing among the Saints. Up to this time I had never seriously doubted my religion, and I probably never should have done so had it not been for the introduction of the heretical doctrine. But what I saw in London at that time sadly shook my faith, and the stories which I heard from Utah quite frightened me. Nothing, of course, was openly said, and at first I disbelieved every evil report, until at last it was impossible for me altogether to reject what was told me. The testimony of an apostate or of a Gentile would have been dismissed with contempt, but when we saw letters from mothers to their children, and husbands to their wives—all people of unquestioned faith, setting forth the troubled state of men's minds in Utah, expressing fears for their own safety, and hinting at "cutting off" the transgressor, and the doings of "Avenging Angels," we could not cast them aside with contempt. My views of the glories of Zion were certainly changing; henceforth I was never firm in the faith; I felt that there was something wrong. * * * And in this I did not stand alone, for I soon found that the President of the Conference, Elder Marsden, had been in the same position for years, and his wife was "quite through" with Mormonism. In fact, so great had been the distrust occasioned, that in the report ending June 30th, 1853, it was stated that from the whole British church, which then numbered very nearly 31,000 souls—11,776 had been excommunicated for apostasy!

Of those who remained faithful I can not give a much more cheering account. The elders who visited President Marsden made as damaging reports of the condition of the Saints as their worst enemies could desire. All that my young friend, Mary Burton, had told me did not equal the truth of what I saw for myself. No one had any confidence now in what the elders said; how could they be trusted after so many years of deception?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—Is it proper to use wine made from raisins for the sacrament, if grapes can not be obtained?

A.—Yes.

Qus.—Can Latter Day Saints consistently have their houses of worship insured?

Ans.—Yes. If the brethren who have the business charge deem it best to insure they can do so quite consistently. Just as much so as Saints can carry insurance on houses, stock and other private property.

Q.—Do not they disrespect all of God's promises when they put their trust in man?

A.—It is not putting trust in man to insure a building, or property. A building might be covered all over with policies, and would be no safer from fire, lightning, or cyclone. Insurance is but a business precaution, by use of which business men provide for partial restoration of what may be destroyed by fire or storm.

THE following items of information will be useful to the readers of the HERALD. They are from the Chicago Tribune for June 12th:

INTERESTING FACTS CONCERNING RAILWAYS AND THEIR COSTS.

Thomas Curtis Clark has the first article of the "Railway Series" in Scribner's Magazine. It is entitled "The Building of a Railway," and it contains much valuable information new to the public in general and of interest to everybody. In this article the following questions are answered:

How many miles of railway in the United States? One hundred and fifty thousand six hundred miles, about half the mileage of the world.

How much have they cost? Nine billion dollars.

How many people are employed by them? More than one million people.

What is the fastest time made by a train? Ninety-two miles in ninety-three minutes, one mile being made in forty-six seconds, on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad.

What is the cost of a high-class, eight-wheel passenger locomotive? About $8,500.

What is the longest mileage operated by a single system? Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe system—about 8,000 miles.

What is the cost of a palace sleeping car? About $15,000, or $17,000 if "vestibuled."

What is the longest railway bridge span in the United States? Cantilever span in Poughkeepsie bridge, 548 feet.

What is the highest railroad bridge in the United States? Kinzua viaduct, on the Erie Road, 305 feet high.

Who built the first locomotive in the United States? Peter Cooper.

What road carries the largest number of passengers? Manhattan Elevated Railroad, New York—525,000 a day, or 101,625,000 yearly.

What is the average daily earnings of an American locomotive? About $100.

What is the longest American railway tunnel? Hoosac Tunnel, on the Fitchburg Railway (four and three-quarter miles).

What is the average cost of constructing a mile of railroad? At the present time about $30,000.

What is the highest railroad in the United States? Denver & Rio Grande; Marshall Pass, 10,852 feet.

What are the chances of fatal accident in railway travel? One killed in 10,000,000. Statistics show more are killed by falling out of windows than in railway accidents.

What line of railroad extends farthest East and West? Canadian Pacific Railway, running from Quebec to the Pacific Ocean.

How long does a steel rail last, with average wear? About eighteen years.

What road carries the largest number of commuters? Illinois Central, 4,828,128, in 1887.

What is the fastest time made between Jersey City and San Francisco? Three days, seven hours, thirty-nine minutes and sixteen seconds. Special theatrical train, June, 1886.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Suffice it now. In time to be Shall holier altars rise to Thee,—
Thy Church our broad humanity!
White flowers of love its walls shall climb,
Soft bells of peace shall ring its chime,
Its days shall all be holy time."

"IF YE ABIDE IN ME, AND MY WORDS ABIDE IN YOU."

THE relationship between these two conditions is so very close, so vital in its import, that once this relationship be changed, this connection be perverted, then that which depends upon them as a unit is destroyed and we have in reality no promise left us. We may fully understand what it means to be in Christ, to be a branch of the true vine, and yet while we abide there we may forget that his words must abide in us. When Peter drew his sword and smote the servant of the high priest, he had forgotten the lesson taught him by the Master upon that other occasion when the disciples asked, "Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven and consume them as Elias did?" And yet he should have remembered the words, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of; for the Son of man is not come to destroy mens' lives, but to save them." James and John were in this true vine, and yet how far short of the thought of the Master was their thought. They would destroy swiftly and with violence those over whom the great heart of Jesus yearned, those whom he came to seek and to save. With this power in their possession without a limiting and restraining principle, they were but as a mighty ship without compass or rudder. Lift up your hearts then ye Saints of God, yes all humanity wherever upon the face of this broad earth your lot may be cast, and write it in letters of living fire; brand it ye would-be-priests of God upon every scroll of the law and let the bending heavens themselves yea, even the arch angels hear, "The Son of man is not come to destroy mens' lives, but to save them."

"Thy church our broad humanity."

The words of Christ—words which the Father gave him to speak—must abide in us in order that we bear fruit. The apostle speaks of that which is nigh unto cursing because it bears thorns, etc. None can be so ignorant of what this fruit is, "Love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." This is gospel fruit, if we be allowed the expression, and the fruit of that Spirit which ever accompanies the gospel and which never has been borne upon any other tree. But to return to the promise. "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Let us again refer to the binding power conferred upon Peter and test the validity of its interpretation by the restriction here placed upon all claims. In and through the gospel is provision made for the salvation of the whole human race; but, mark you, the gospel is not a creed; but is the enunciation of fixed, immutable laws of right and wrong, it is the power of God unto salvation, because the principles therein contained are the embodiment of all which is just, pure, holy and altogether lovely and which can no more change nor be changed in their nature than God, who is their author, can change. It is the truth which was and is to make men free; the eternal principle of love and justice which is to lift the race out of its fallen condition, bring men and women back into the relationship man once sustained towards his maker; but never, never, worlds without end, limit or control that agency given to him in the morning of creation, which is his birthright and his glory and without which there is for man no exaltation, neither in this world nor in the world to come. But to the test.

In the commission given to his disciples just before his ascension, Jesus said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Belief and baptism then are necessary to salvation whether Peter or Christ himself held the keys. Belief is a condition of the mind resulting only from individual conviction, and what power is there in man to compel belief? If you or I firmly believe in the existence of God, not all the fires of Gehenna can touch, much less quench that belief; and the opposite is equally true. We read in the word of God that the Father of all is no respecter of persons; but if he (through his Son) conferred upon Peter this power to compel belief, then he is a respecter of persons; for in so doing he conferred upon him not only greater power than upon any other man, but greater power than he gave to Christ himself, as witness the fact that in his own country, Christ, because of the unbelief of the people, could do no mighty works. And if Peter possessed no power outside of the gospel message which he was sent to proclaim, to compel belief, does it not follow as a necessary consequence that this power of binding and loosing both on earth and in heaven was inherent in the gospel—a part of the gospel if you please—and was that to which Jesus referred when he said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned?" Are not the words of the apostle conclusive upon this point: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." . . . Here again we find this qualifying principle of belief; and were God himself to force men and women to believe, the moment he does this, that moment he robs man of his agency: and when this is done man is no longer responsible for anything which he does, neither for good nor for evil, and the human race are as the well known hymn expresses it,

"Mere animals, and just as well
The beasts may talk of heaven or hell."

"If ye abide in me and my words abide in you." These two conditions we find are absolutely necessary in order that the Father bestow that which we ask in the name of the Son.

"Not with hatred's undertow
Doth the love eternal glow."

God so loved the world, so pitied them in their lost and fallen condition, that he accepted the ransom his Son offered, and gave his Only Begotten to redeem them and open up a way of life and salvation. But, mark you, he did not give him, neither send him, until that Son who being one with the Father therefore sharing with him this love and pity, said, "Father send me, I will redeem them, and the glory shall be thine." Herein is the honor and glory which forever and ever shall be ascribed to God and the Lamb, that Christ was not sent until he of his own free will, moved thereto by love and pity, offered himself. No wonder the apostle, who well understood this matter, declares, "We love him because he first loved us?"

No faggots here, no bloody ax, nor turning of thumbscrews; no bringing of iron bedsteads upon which to stretch our limbs; no conferring upon Peter or any other man authority to tear the helpless branch from the vine, but, sweet consoling thought, thought bathed in the pure light of heavens eternal truth.

"I am the true vine and my Father is the husbandman." But this stands not alone; for united with it comes the solemn thought that deeper than any human eye can search, clearer than any human eye can see, is the eye which never slumbers nor sleeps; and that eye is bent upon us. Steady, true and altogether just is the hand which shall remove the branch which abides not in the vine, and cast it forth that it may be burned; and solemn the thought that the branch which is given to the burning was once a part of the vine, and with the other branches bore fruit.

WORK WHILE IT IS CALLED TO-DAY.

EVERY one understands the meaning of this small but necessary word. Though shunned and hated by the idler, it is nevertheless, when carried into execution, of great worth to the human family. Among all classes of individuals the indolent may be found, but if each one does his duty he must work—work for the accomplishment of good and the well being of the race, if not by endeavoring to lift up the fallen; to raise mortals to a higher standard of virtue, loftier aspirations and nobler deeds; to use every legitimate means to crush the vices that are bringing thousands to degradation and shame; strive to hold up the hands of those who seek to sweep all intoxicating liquor from our midst, bringing freedom to its slaves. May the banner of total abstinence soon wave triumphant on every breeze, and with the peace it brings fill every home even to the end.

Hark! are not some of the sisters saying, "What is that to us; what can we do?" The answer comes as a swift messenger of love, "Work while it is called to-day." The allwise Creator when he made man, saw it was not good for him to be alone, therefore made a help-meet—an assistant, a co-operator, and co-laborer with him.

If that which was lost in Adam is to be regained, will it be done without the help of woman? Is it not rather her duty to use her influence, living a life of purity and noble deeds to the end that she may inherit an everlasting habitation? "Work while it is called to-day," seems to echo and re-echo in our ears. The sound of the starving children of earth vibrates through the air and is heard crying for the bread of life, for purer and higher principles, that will stem the tide of wickedness and abominations. The inhabitants of the earth are growing restless, and pacing to and fro, not knowing whither to turn to the right or the left. The hirelings are saying lo here and lo there! Alas! many stumble and fall. Midst these scenes of confusion will we permit the bread which has nourished and fed us, is lying moulding, and a few crumbs not cast upon the water to cheer some traveller with hope? Shall we sit idle in the marketplace, all the day long, while others bear the burden and heat of the day? Awake! arouse from your slumber! Remember, as help-meets we have a work to perform. As mothers, responsibilities of a high and lofty character are resting upon our shoulders. Shall we fill them honorably, or lie dormant beneath the burden? With willing hearts and ready hands let us arise, using the one talent in whatsoever is expedient.

June 9th.

Dear Saints.—Quite a siege of illness has prevented my giving you the article on Recuperative Resources that I promised in my last; and just now a consideration of the Prayer League seems of so much more importance that I feel like offering a few thoughts concerning it, and deferring the other article a little longer. Many people believe they ought to pray, though all do not realize the efficiency of prayer. Many ask in a blind and general way for the guidance and protection of the Father, who would think it lunacy to expect special revelation concerning themselves or family, or to believe that God would interpose his power to stay the hand of an assassin. And yet he has both guided and instructed his Saints, and protected them from the perils of assassins and elements, and is ever ready to specially care for his people when their faith and works make it possible. "That which is governed by law is also preserved by law;" yet physical laws are not the only ones that God has instituted for the use of man. Christ has said: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you;" also, "Whatsoever you shall ask the Father in my name, it shall be given unto you, that is expedient for you." Now these are no less laws with God than it is a law that oxygen and hydrogen combined in right proportions will produce water; for he is the author of both; and when Saints will learn the laws that govern the receiving of blessings through the medium of faith, they can truly work in knowledge and in power.

I for one am much pleased with the suggestion of a prayer league, and yet I tremble at the responsibility that will come with it. In the first place, to pray without faith would be mockery; and on the other hand, to covenant to pray in faith brings the necessity of closest living to the commandments. Now this we ought to do of course without a special covenant; yet if we do add a second covenant, the condemnation doubles if we break it and turn back. Therefore, let the wise "count the cost;" and I will say that as for myself I do not feel that I would dare covenant to set apart more than once a month, at first, to come in full spirit of faith before the Lord, for general purposes. And this is a suggestion that I make to the sisters; that we appoint our periods of prayer once a month instead of once a week,

Then the reports can come into the Home Column between times, giving instruction and encouragement, so that the time of prayer will be approached with much greater caution, interest and faith.

And now as to some of the laws that govern the receiving of our petitions. We must remember first that our supplications should be expedient; or, the Scripture adds, "they will turn unto our condemnation." Again, we must be agreed as touching all things whatsoever we ask of the Father. We must remember that there is a certain order appointed of God for the receiving of certain blessings, and we must not disregard this order in asking; and, above all, we must ask in faith, believing that we receive, and then we shall receive. And, if we do all these things, and continue in doing them, God is bound to answer our prayers, and the League will become "one of the organizations for good in the land," and a very powerful one. The work must move under its faithful labors, and the kingdom of God be blessed thereby.

Yours for all good,

VIRGINIA.

Australia, April 8th.

Dear Sister Frances:—We have bid good-bye to Victoria, and are now on board the steamer "Burrumbete," speeding our way to New South Wales. The day is very pleasant; the sea just rough enough to give the ship a pleasant motion; pleasant however, only to those who are not seasick; and I believe all the lady passengers on board are sick except myself. I feel somewhat lame and tired after the extra exertion and confusion of packing and moving, and am strongly tempted to stay on deck, get myself snugly tucked away among pillows and rugs, like the rest of the passengers, and pass the day in a state of lazy, delicious enjoyment, in reading, thinking, dozing and watching the sea. But if I do, when will I get another opportunity to write? No; "there can be no furlough granted in the army of the Lord." We have enlisted for life, and I find are always on duty; and if we shirk duty at any time will not receive "the honors in the grand review;" so one must work if they would win. Yes, we have bid good-bye to Victoria, and have left many warm friends there; not only of the Saints, but many who were enemies when we came among them; enemies, because of the false impression that the world has received of Latter Day Saints, believing that they stir up strife and ill-will in a neighborhood. But they learned during the year that we lived in the village of Hastings, that such was not our mission. No; we endeavored to show by "example as well as precept," that our own lives were governed by the pure and lofty principles contained in the gospel which we brought to them, and may they know of a surety that we sought only to do them good. And I sincerely hope we have not sought in vain; but that the seed sown may lodge in the heart, and swell and burst forth into fruit after many days.

Bro. and Sr. Grayden wished to be with us as long as possible, so they and sister Grayden's sister, Miss Brown, kindly accompanied us to Melbourne, where we all spent a very pleasant day, though we did not get around to see as many of our friends as we wished. There were two sisters whom we would like to have visited, but had not time. The next morning Bro. Gray-den took us to the art gallery, and got a photograph of the group with their little Joseph Burton sitting on my lap. Then all hurried off to the steamer. They, Bro. Smith, and some Melbourne friends stood by us till all the visitors had gone ashore and the men began to take in the gangway. Bro. Grayden was the last to leave the ship, just as he was always the first one to meet us on the jetty, whenever we came home from Queensferry, to help us with our luggage. May God bless them, and all the rest of the Saints for all the kindness they have bestowed upon us. My husband has just reminded me that general conference is now in session; being Sunday, we are aware that the Saints are enjoying a spiritual feast. I wonder if you are there to "pick up the crumbs," and scatter them again to those who have not the privilege of being present at the "banquet." Precious "crumbs;" how we appreciate them out here! But now rises before my mind's eye the faces of many who will be in that great congregation; and my thoughts are drawn out towards the assembled worshippers there as though we might even here partake of the blessed influence of the Holy Spirit while it was being shed forth upon them, a sacred influence, a feeling of hallowed peace steals over me while I mingle my thoughts and desires with the worshippers in Zion. I instinctively bow my head, while my heart is lifted in praise and adoration to the great Father above, for all we enjoy from his bounteous hand; and especially because he leads his people as he did of old, that Israel is established again with a Prophet at their head, through whom he reveals his will to the children of men. And thus we can enter into the feelings of the scattered "Israel of long ago," before Zion and Jerusalem was "trodden down of the Gentiles;" when at the sacred hour of morning worship in the Temple, all who worshipped in heart, turned their faces Zionward and bowed their heads in reverential awe to the great God from whom the priests were invoking blessings for all Israel. And while my awakened thoughts viewed for one moment the honored, the exalted position of the Saints of God, I felt to exclaim, O, blessed! O, happy people! Let every heart exult in the praises of our God, who leadeth his people. But Israel now, like Israel of old, often refuse to be led. Yes, the thick darkness of this world often obscures the gentle hand that is extended to guide them, and so they falter by the way, or grope in darkness. Oh, for a faith that can ever behold the hand that leads! Though darkness may be round us at times, and the way seem hedged up, we can go calmly on, trusting in the Father's hand.

Correspondence.

RICHMOND, Mo., June 11th.

Editors of Herald:—I left Kingston, Missouri, May 20th for the Central district. I went to Bro. Cato's, in the Waukenda branch, preached once at that place; then went into south part of Ray, on the river. I remained one week preaching, and left Bro. Cato there, who baptized three after I left. I am at Bro. S. W. Carter's, at present; will preach at his house a few days then return to the river to continue the work there. The Central district is rather a difficult place to work in, so many have departed from the faith and other causes. If the Saints of my field of labor should see this letter I will ask them to live humbly, and pray and work for the interest of the cause. Brethren, I trust that those of you who know the Master's will, will go to and do it. Do not deceive yourselves for "he that doeth righteous is righteous even as he, Christ is righteous."

Your brother,

R. L. WARE.

GALIEN, Mich., June 13th.

Bro. Joseph:—Resuming labor in this district as provisioned in appointment we have been cautious to include a territory within a radius of fifteen miles. A good field is now open in Stark, and Marshall counties, Indiana, and the present seems to be an opportune moment for earnest, steady action. Our labor in Knox, North Bend, Burr Oak and Hibbard, all on the Nickel Plate railroad is doing good. The sub-grade of society wield the antiquated club of "fanaticism" readily, and the gracefulness which characterizes these religious acrobats, implies a school of long training and efficient teachers, but the editorials are very favorable. The people seem to have fallen into the same ditch in which the ancient apostate church wallowed, by teaching that the great principles of Christianity and true religion are to be found in all the societies of a religious character, hence the legitimate idea: "Attach yourself to any one of the popular churches; 'tis immaterial which one; you're all right, just so you are conscientious, honest," &c. The idea that "one faith," one standard truth of the Kingdom only, obtains in "thy will O God," does not cater to their extended exegesis of the "Narrow Way." They seem to be thoroughly indoctrinated in the very peculiar theories of modern invention, and the web that is woven over the eyes of the people in reference to orthodoxy, is the first to be swept off in those counties. With some, this is very difficult,—"first impressions are strongest." Photographs taken on the memory are not easily effaced, especially of this character, because papa and mama manipulated the camera. They forget that, "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." And that, papa and mama lived in harmony with the light they received, and will be judged by that light or law, but if the greater light comes to me, and I reject it, Jesus says condemnation is the inevitable.

At Knox, we held a meeting and baptized three. Another came forward, but that husband, yes that one-eighth of hers objected. He was once convinced of this work, bought a Book of Mormon, but political ambition struck him, and another current is wafting him on to the infidel goal of eternal annihilation. Christianity has done a great deal for woman, and despite paganism which made them no better than slaves, a few names have come down to us through Grecian and Roman story, asserting freedom of conscience. This is only one specimen of cracking the whip of authority, and ought to be chronicled on the page of heathen history instead of the "free press," of America. Conscience, is a creature of education. This conscience was being taught, nurtured tenderly, in the "admonition of the Lord." The man, as Mayor of the city, rises with atheistical zeal and stabs the conscience; erects the iron bedstead of Procrustes, "too short to stretch, covering, too narrow to wrap in." Responsibility will be individual here I guess.

The work is onward and upward through Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan, in proportion to the ministerial force. Saints at Knox are encouraged and feel like pressing on, doing what they can for the cause.

Yours for the conflict,

LEONARD SCOTT.

OMAHA, Nebraska, June 18th.

Bro. Joseph:—I came here last week, and will remain a few days. I have been requested by the Saints of Wilber to conduct a joint discussion at that place with a Methodist minister near there, who seems anxious to pulverize the Latter Day Saints. I have agreed to enter the contest by the help of Him who governs all things. The Reverend gentleman is anxious to commence on the 25th of this month. I will be there if nothing prevents. The following are the propositions as he presented and I accepted them:

1st, Is Infant Baptism an apostolic doctrine? He affirms; I deny.

2d, Is Immersion in water the scriptural mode of baptism? I affirm; he denies.

3d, Is water baptism essential to the remission of sins? I affirm; he denies.

I shall remain here until the last of this week and then go to the field of battle. Remember me.

Yours in bonds,

H. C. BRONSON.

KINGSTON, Mo., June 17th.

Editor of the Herald:—The work in Kingston is onward. Elder J. F. McDowell has just closed a ten days' effort, and we feel assured that his work will do good. We have heard many excellent sermons by the elders of this church, but never before have we heard words fall from man's lips with such power as they did last Saturday and Sunday evenings. We now have enrolled on our branch record seventy-seven names. About thirty of these live near by, so that they can attend church regularly, and they seem to enjoy the light and liberty of the latter day work. About twenty others live in the regions round about, and the remainder are scattered abroad, many of them we know not where. The Lord has told us by his Spirit that if we are faithful he will add others unto the flock; we therefore desire to set the house in order, and we ask that all persons whose names are yet standing on our branch records, will either report to the branch from time to time, or, if you be in the vicinity of any other branch, to comply with the law regulating such things, and take a letter of removal.

Can some of the elders who labor in Nevada, visit sister Madge S. Bender, of White Rock, Elko county. She has been a long time away from the church (or any branch), and has become dissatisfied and asks that her name be removed from the church records. We should bear in mind that when we are called upon to do work of this kind that we are dealing with souls, and should advance cautiously. If an elder converts (or convinces) one person, and induces him to accept the gospel, he does well; but if there be one that has fallen into the ruts of despondency, and he induces him or her to return, he does better. Will the missionary in charge of that field of labor see that sister Bender is visited, and the result reported to the Kingston branch?

Praying for the ultimate triumph of Zion's cause, we are yours for gospel truth,

CHARLES R. DUNCAN.

WISNER, Neb., June 15th.

Editors Herald:—The conference year of 1888, so far as finding a ready co-operation among those visited, thus far opens auspiciously. The 29th of April found me at Union branch, Fremont, Nebraska. The work needing attention was not desirable but essential, therefore imperative. Adjustment of trouble necessitates conferring and counseling, especially when misconceptions or a partial misunderstanding erects towering walls as preventives to gospel unity. The last of eight meetings closed on the evening of May 17th, when the practicability of saying three hard words, viz, I am, (or have been), wrong, was demonstrated by more than one, and the ready acquiescence by all concerned seemed to afford evidence that the labor thus done was not in vain.

There is reason to think, if the members of the above branch will act as they voluntarily agreed, that they will experience the dawn of a new era of peace and spiritual prosperity. So may it be. In the interim I visited Columbus, the first time in two years. Death and removal have decreased their numbers, but they enjoy a solid and God-given peace. They have made an improvement in their house of worship, which effort would have been commendable for a branch twice their number.

On the 5th and 6th of May I attended a two days' meeting at Platte Valley, Nebraska, Rain, yes; in torrents. Mud ankle deep, sticking closer than a brother; but we held two meetings on the 5th and three on the 6th, and one on the 9th, on which day one of the hard fisted sons of toil was added. One of the same class, already in the fold, handed over $73 as a part of his tithing; in exposition of our financial system, given without disturbing the religious equilibrium of any. I have been severely criticised for such an exposition in the past, but we are moving, and fast developing our traits of character as we move, essaying to keep pace with the development of God's purposes.

On the 18th of May I renewed labors in Platte Valley delivering fourteen consecutive discourses. Considering the state of the roads, the threatening aspect of the weather, etc., the attendance was quite fair. A Sabbath School was organized, brethren E. Bolson, superintendent, G. V. Brown, assistant, W. Bolson, secretary, and Sr. A. Brown, treasurer. By care and diligence a good and prosperous Sabbath School may be established. The superintendent ordered the Hope, that excellent Sabbath School paper. This was sensible.

On the evening of May 29th I met with the members of the Omaha branch, at which time Bro. E. Rannie, present presiding officer of said branch, was ordained to the office of an elder, and the ordination of Bro. I. Sylvester to the office of priest provided for. The former has labored for more than a decade in the office of a priest, the latter for several years an active member and teacher of the branch, besides acting as secretary for the branch and district. Both these brethren are comparatively young with both natural and acquired abilities, and 'tis cheering, indeed, in these days of attraction and pomp, to see young men willing to set their faces against the allurements of modern Babylon in order to ascend the towering gospel plane of morality and virtue, and invite their fellows to travel with them.

It was not the scarcity of officials that suggested this movement, but there are several elders that have been active, but who are now inactive, and afar on the western side of life. To the credit of the veterans be it said, that they were among the first to receive their younger brethren into the ministerial ranks, and doubtless, should they pass away before them, it will add to their joy to know that some will be left to defend the cause they love, and for which they have labored, lo, these many years. There was also a good supply of priests, but Omaha's population is increasing so, that it and adjacent points will afford ample labor for the whole ministerial force, and we hope ere long for the necessity of a further increase.

South Omaha is fast becoming a city of large dimensions. Old Florence is looming up, while the south part of Omaha proper will demand attention. Then the branch must receive proper official labor; the large and flourishing Sunday School must be properly cared for. Surely, there is a wide and important field opening to the Omaha Saints, and all can be kept so busy in attending to duty, that if performed, none will have a moment's time to find fault, or look after each other's failings. Faults or wrong will be sure to develop if existing at all; then it will be time enough to begin to adjust, and the adjustment will be arduous enough when legitimately proceeded against.

The vast ocean retains a purity by its continuous activity, while motionless water becomes stagnant and offensive. The physical body is healthy and united when all its members retain the needed vitality, performing their proper functions. So with the mystical body of Christ. The success of that body is secured by the constant and legitimate activity of the integral parts. The present and the future will be to a very great extent as we make it, so far as our individual development in Christ is concerned, and the success of the cause we represent. But the fact of being but invited guests in the Father's house should not be overlooked. The grand elements of nature move and operate according to the same uniform laws the world over, whether we traverse the plains, climb the mountains, sail upon the sea, dive into the caverns, or ascend the clouds. We find these laws in undeviating operation. Not an element moves capriciously; not an atom floats at random. Gravitation exerts its power according to the same rules; gases combine in the same proportions; metals fuse, and liquids boil at the same points of temperature; light is reflected, and refracted at the same angles; heat is radiated, and air is condensed after the same laws, and dew, and rain, and snow are produced under the same circumstances, according to the same laws, whether we stand on this or that side of the globe. So say the scientists and the cultured, and if the above demonstrates the immutability of God's law, and that immutability is indispensable in order to control the elements, what shall we all say about the immutability of God's method to save man? If the fixedness of these natural laws is insurmountable to man's entrance within their precincts, who shall dare presume to ruthlessly enter the sacred precincts of God's divine economy to modify or change that upon which infinite Wisdom has stamped with perfection in dazzling letters? John came, at the appointed time, maintaining his dignity in preaching the gospel of repentance and baptism for the remission of sins; denouncing those failing to give evidence of repentance as a generation of vipers. Who will charge him with harshness? Christ made the startling announcement that of himself he could do nothing; yet claimed that his judgment was just, which appears at first a little complex, but possessing patience, with effort to delve a little deeper, it shines forth in grandeur, affording food suitable for the soul thirsting for righteousness. He was sent to do his Father's will by proclaiming his Father's doctrine. While thus engaged he could do nothing in formulating a doctrine to save men, for this had been done, and his acceptance of his Father's appointment was tantamount to a covenant to proclaim the doctrine. His judgment was just because he sought not his own will, but the will of his Father who sent him. From this we learn that God authorized no man to formulate a religion, and that the judgment of none could be just, only as he should believe; and becoming permeated with God's light, obtainable by being grafted into the vine; retainable by abiding in the vine, which appears a difficult lesson for proud humanity to learn.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 5th.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Permit me through the Herald to give a sketch of my experiences. I am, you might say, a raw recruit in this latter day work, as I was baptized about one year ago,—the 19th of this month, at Oakland, California, by Bro. H. P. Brown, and confirmed by Bro. J. B. Price. I now feel, and realize, that I am walking in the narrow way, inside of the boundary line. Christ has given us a boundary line, and if we get outside of it we are liable to be overtaken, and devoured both soul and body.

How many there are who will not look upwards to Christ for aid and strength in the hours of peril and distress.

At times the waters were very riley and muddy at Oakland, especially for a new beginner. Dark clouds and fogs arose there very frequently, which made it very gloomy; but, I am thankful that the Lord gave me ample proof before entering the church, to convince me of the truth of this work. This alone has kept me from being overthrown.

I have been much blessed during sicknesses through which I have lately passed.

At Oakland, while suffering severely from malarial fever, my faith had been considerably shaken by reason of our branch troubles. In my hours of pain I called in a physician, instead of sending for the elders, as we are commanded to do. Bro. H. P. Brown visited me one evening and said: "The good Lord can rebuke that fever in little or no time." I said all right, but Bro. Brown did not know that I was taking four kinds of medicine. But he administered to me and the fever was rebuked. My pains did not cease however, and I again resorted to medicine, when the fever returned after so doing. "O, ye of little faith," is my thought as I now look back to that time.

Bro. Brown called again, and I resolved to cease taking the medicine, and I was healed then and there, through the administration. Two or three times since have I been blessed in sickness through the prayer of faith and administrations of Bro. Thomas Daley and Bro. Steel, for which I praise the Lord.

Our branch there is in a prosperous condition. Bro. James Parr is feeding the flock with the bread of life; others are investigating. I pray that many may accept the truth.

May we all as Saints be faithful in Christ.

JOSEPH EDWARDS.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 12th.

Bro. David Dancer:—Enclosed please find post office order for subscription to the Herald. I have been reading it through the courtesy of a brother for more than a year, although I have been in the work but a short time. My wife and I were baptized by Elder J. H. Lake last April. I now feel as if I must have the Herald for myself. I first heard this latter day work through Elder Briggs, at the house of Bro. George L. Matthews, who has since removed to Los Angeles, California. I investigated it carefully and became convinced of its truth early, but waited that I might bring my partner in life along, and now we both rejoice in it, revealing as it does the fulness of the gospel.

Your brother in Christ,

W. C. H. NOBLE.

WHEELOCK, Texas, June 13th.

Dear Saints:—I feel like telling you a night vision, or dream, that I had about twenty years ago; long before I believed in such things as direct revelations from God in these latter days, and about eighteen years before I ever knew about the Reorganized church, or anything about the Utah Mormons, more than that I had heard something about Joseph Smith finding some brass plates. I make these remarks to inform those who chance to read this that what I dreamed, or saw in vision, was not caused by any impression made by the claims of the Latter Day Saints, or by anything I had read or heard about them.

At the time I received the revelation I was very much interested in religious matters, and had been reading the Bible, and meditating, and praying for what I felt I then needed; and one night I saw a body ascending towards heaven like a body of fire; at least it looked red like fire.

It occurred to me at that time that that body was myself.

Immediately following this scene I traveled from where I then was in a southerly direction for some distance, in a zigzag line. For a time all seemed dark, then again it seemed that I returned to the point from where I started and then traveled in a westerly direction a much longer distance than I had when going south. It appeared at the end of my westward trip that all the obscurity or darkness was removed and everything was as light as noon-day. This closed my dream or vision, and here is the interpretation of it. About the time I received the above revelation the good Lord blessed me abundantly with light, and the love of God was shed abroad in my heart. I loved God supremely, and I loved righteousness and hated sin. I wanted to be made free from it and labored to that end; but have never attained thereto as yet. Afterwards I joined the Baptist church—one reason why I did so was that my mother was a member of that church. I then went from Tennessee where I then lived, to the state of Alabama which was south of there. And O, what obscurity I underwent. That light which I had received seemed all gone, and I could not get it back; so I labored and labored to get myself in the like condition again, but I could not. I came back to where I started from in Tennessee and after about twelve or thirteen years I moved to Texas, where I now live, which is in a westward direction about one thousand miles from where I was raised and lived in Tennessee. Since I moved here, about two and a half years ago, I heard the gospel in its fulness by Brn. I. N. Roberts and Heman C. Smith, and after I heard it, I believed and obeyed it, and have received direct revelation from God by his spirit that it is his work, and today I possess sufficient knowledge from the Lord to enable me to say that the claims of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are truth.

I am not dependent upon man for the knowledge that I have, and I also know that the Book of Mormon is true, for God has revealed it to me. So it is as clear as noon-day to me that this great latter day work is of God. And now my brethren and friends, you see my dream or vision was true, and the interpretation is also correct. You see from my testimony that I received greater light of God's spirit before, and after I joined the Baptist church it was when I was in that church that I underwent that dark scene.

I preached about fifteen or sixteen years in the Baptist church and the good Lord blessed me more or less in said service, but nothing to compare with the blessings received since I came into the Church of Jesus Christ. I was just as honest then as now. I was as Paul was before his conversion, to a great extent, and am now like he was after his conversion to Christianity. Then I thought and believed and was in error in a great measure, but now I am in the sunshine of the fulness of the gospel of Christ, and am determined by the grace of God to fight the good fight of faith; yes, that faith that was once delivered to the Saints. Oh, that I could sound the glad tidings to the earth's remotest bounds! I feel like doing it and let the people know that God is the same to-day, yesterday, and forever, unchangeable; and the gospel of Christ the same as when preached in its fulness by those he has called and sends to preach it, and that when the people hear and obey it, as in days of old, the good Lord gives unto them that hear, believe and obey the same blessings now as he did eighteen hundred years ago, and that it is the will of God to gather all the honest in heart together in one upon that old foundation of the apostles and prophets Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner Stone. That foundation upon which he said he would build his church and the gates of hell should not prevail against it.

Yours, in the one faith,
E. W. NUNLEY.

ELMIRA, Kans., June 11th.

Bro. Joseph:—We are still alive in this part and continue holding our prayer and testimony meetings every Sabbath. Have not had any preaching for three months. We are sorry that Bro. Parsons had to leave us, but hope that others may make up for his absence. We look for Bro. Shute soon to preach for us. I pray that the Lord will send forth more laborers into this part of his vineyard, for there are a great many places that could be had for preaching, and I think a good work could be done. I hope to still live to set a good example before the world, for I think that there is a great deal in that kind of preaching. Hope Bro. Luff and all his helpers will come around as often as possible.

Your brother, in bonds,
S. C. ANDES.

PLUM HOLLOW, Iowa, June 16th.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Blair left us last Tuesday for Council Bluffs. We were grateful for his services during our conference held at Farm Creek. The Saints were glad to see his face once more. They thought of times gone by when he with Bro. E. C. Briggs first visited them and preached the gospel in its purity. Our conference passed off pleasantly; the business was done without a jar, not a particle of the spirit of altercation was manifested from any source. Bro. Blair did the preaching to large and attentive audiences, Saturday night and Sunday. The outsiders gave him an excellent hearing, and were well pleased. His wise counsel and timely advice to the Saints comforted their hearts and gave them courage to battle on to the victory.

We were offered the use of the Christian church at Henderson, which we accepted. Bro. Blair occupied three consecutive nights preaching to a very fair audience. Miss McFillen, the organist, with her band of singers gave us timely aid. Thanks to them for the church and their singing.

The Saints in Farm Creek are few but worthy of the name they bear. On account of the sickness of Father Leeka and his aged wife, we were called to Plum Hollow to administer; and thanks be to God, Bro. John sat in his place at the head of the table to-day; and we are hopeful for sister Leeka. We solicit the prayers of the Saints in her behalf. Bro. William had a severe attack but is much better. The time for our camp meeting is drawing near and we depend largely on their help; God bless and heal them and make them whole, is our prayer.

We have concluded to commence our camp meeting the 17th of August, 1888. We wish to announce this in time, and hope all the Saints and friends will take notice; especially those of the Fremont and Pottawattamie districts. We invite all who can do so to attend. Our camp meeting is the common talk of the country. Numbers of the most influential citizens of the county have told me that our meeting last summer was the most orderly and in every particular of the kind the best they ever saw.

Bro. Blair preached twice in the Ross school house, and once at Dutch Hollow to packed houses.

Our meetings since the General Conference have been well attended. I leave this week for Keystone and Wheeler's Grove. My heart is in the work
Yours in bonds,
H. KEMP.

OMRO, Wis., June 18th.

Bro. Dancer:—I am here trying to preach some. Have held three meetings. I held four at Winneconne. People are very much prejudiced against the faith and but few come out to hear. I meet all kinds of doctrine—Spiritualists, Seventh Day Adventists and all the sects about here. O, what poor weapons they have to fight with! Weather very warm.

Your brother in Christ,
W. S. MONTGOMERY.

RENUNCIATION

BY THE

BISHOP OF LONDON.

IN the following is given the remarkable farewell sermon of the Bishop of London, delivered in Westminster Cathedral, on the occasion of his laying down his Robe, his seat in the House of Lords, his Palace, his Bishopric, and his princely income.

And as the question of Apostolic and Episcopal succession is causing much enquiry among the Saints and others at the present time, there is also given the form of license granted by King and Queen, conferring their "Divine and Regal Right" to Bishops of the Protestant "Church of England, as by law established" by act of Parliament. Also the chain of succession of priestly authority transmitted through John Wesley, a Presbyter of that church to the church in America; also his censure of their assumption of Episcopacy. It is a notable sign of the age. Just think that within so few years of the secession of Pere Hyacinth from the Catholics; Thomas, from the Methodists; H. W. Beecher, from the Congregationalists; saying nothing of the Andover Heresy; Swing, from the Presbyterians; Herbert Burrows, Bishop of London, from the Church of England; and last, not least,

Spurgeon, from the Baptist association—and the end is not yet.

The following is copied from the American Non Conformist, published at Winfield, Kansas:

A TELLING TEXT.

And the Taking Deductions Therefrom—An English Bishop's Life of Ease and Emoluments Forsaken for a Home with the Poor—Wealth's Rottenness Opened to Public View—His Last as Bishop of London.

The following is taken from the London Justice as a Christmas sermon:

TEXT.—"Go to now, ye rich men weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them which have reaped down are entered into the ears of the Lord of the Sabbath. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just, and he doth not resist you."—James 5: 1, 4, 5, 6.

Fellow Citizens:—The text which I have just read you, and from which I shall preach the last sermon as Bishop that I shall ever deliver from this pulpit, is one which is probably as unfamiliar to you comfortable, well-to-do people as it is familiar to all those who since it was originally penned, have toiled and suffered for humanity. Although it is read sometime in the ordinary course of our church service, yet judging by your conduct, your ears have been deaf to its terrible denunciations. From the days when I was an humble curate until now, I have had a large and varied experience of cathedrals, churches, preachers and sermons, but I have never yet heard a discourse based on these words, and I can not learn from any of my brother bishops or priests that they have ever used them, or heard them so used.

I can see by your uneasy demeanor, that you are asking yourselves why, on this Christmas day, when, in accordance with custom, I should be preaching smooth things to you, I should be mad enough to offend your delicate susceptibilities by quoting the sayings of one of the common people—words written eighteen centuries ago—which might have done very well then, but which can not possibly be applied to you and your class to-day; you who come here, clad in purple and fine linen, who, some of you, live in king's houses, who fare delicately every day, and who consider that you have fulfilled every moral obligation when you have dropped a coin in the collection box, before you step into your carriages, to be driven to your luxurious home. It is because I believe that not only James, but Jesus Christ himself, if he could stand in my place to-day, would hurl these words at you with a force and a passion of which we, in this nineteenth century, have but little conception. Not as a bishop, but as a man, I repeat them to you, hardly hoping that they may touch your hearts, but more as a justification for any new and strange position.

For years I have been one of you. My home has been not where Christ's home was, with the masses, but with the classes. I have an abundance of this world's goods. I have lived with the fashionable and the wealthy, and I have been a dignitary of a church which is the church of the rich, and not the church of the poor. Without a protest I have mixed in society with men and women whom Christ would have denounced as bitterly as he denounced the Scribes and Pharisees. In the house of lords, I have silently sat side by side with whoremongers and adulterers, and as silently have I welcomed as my personal friends, high-born women—some of whom I see before me to-day—with whom no decent workingman would allow his wife or daughters to associate.

I have seen among you, spreading like a canker, the lust of the flesh and the pride of life, and instead of reproving you, as Christ would have done, I have taken refuge in generalities, and have not dared to denounce your individual sins. And all this time there has been going on around me, in this huge city and throughout the land, the surging, toiling life of humanity—the sorrow, the suffering, the poverty, the disease, the sin and the shame which I realized but dimly, as something altogether a part from my own existence, but for which, I at last see clearly, you and I have been, up to the present time, mostly to blame. We and our class have kept back by fraud the hire of the laborers who have reaped our fields, we have lived in pleasure on the earth and been wanton, we have nourished our own hearts while we have starved the bodies of these to whom we owe the very bread we eat and clothes we wear, and now we are condemning and killing at our very gates the people whose inarticulate cry is entering into the ears of the Lord of Sabbath, whose faithful servants we pretend to be.

My Fellow Citizens, I know not how it may be with you, for me this careless, selfish life is ended. Little by little I have awakened to the fact that all my days I have entirely neglected my real duty to my fellow men, and at last I have come to know that my proper place is not there, as the well paid bishop of a church which, in its present condition, is utterly opposed to everything which Christ taught, but among the poor, to whom he declared that the gospel should be preached; among the laborers, whose hire we have kept back by fraud.

Too long have I neglected the miserable social fact of our so-called Christian civilization. Too long have I spoken to you smooth things and cried peace when there was no peace. I have known by repute that there was misery among our people, starvation in our midst, and prostitution upon our streets. But hitherto I have taken these as something for which you and I are not responsible, but which were really due to the inherent wickedness of nature.

But now I have learned that our pleasures and our wantonness have been built upon this hideous foundation, and having learned this—as you may also learn if you will—I have resolved that from this Christmas day my new life shall begin. To-day I lay down my robes, I give up my bishopric, my palace and my income; I give up my seat in the House of Lords; I give up my pleasures of society and of the world, and at last I take my place as a man among them.

It is, I know, a bold step that I have taken, but I have fully counted the cost. Resolved no longer to live on the labor of others, I shall probably have to join the great army of the unemployed. To-morrow I shall attempt to preach my first sermon to them in Trafalgar square, from the same text that I have used here to-day, and it is likely that I shall pass to-morrow night in a police cell. But there I shall be no worse off than Jesus Christ would be if he attempted to enter this abbey (Westminster) now, for he would be arrested and locked up as a vagabond without any visible means of subsistence. To you and to your class he would simply be a laborer whose subsistence you have kept back by fraud. To the abolition of the fraud, and of the misery and degradation which result from it, I shall henceforth devote my life. It will be no easy task, not near so easy as being Bishop of London, but the reward of a good conscience and of a noble work well done, is better far than a palace and ten thousand ($48,400), a year.

In this place I shall probably never speak again. But when Freedom shall have opened out her arms and gathered all men into her wide embrace, when Justice and Truth shall have taken the place of oppression and fraud, some man of the people shall stand in this temple of the dead, and, inspired by the best traditions of the past, the noble aspirations of the present and the ideal hopes of the future, shall send ringing through these lofty aisles that living Christmas message which, till then can never have its full significance.

"Peace on Earth, and Good will to men."
HERBERT BURROWS.

We now show the commission of Protestant Bishops; and the reader can see what authority Herbert Burrows possessed and what he relinquished.

The following is from "Thos. Powell on Succession;" Carlton S. Porter, New York, 1861. "Acts of Parliament in the 26th year of Henry 8th, declares the King shall have full power and authority from time to time to visit, repress, reform, redress, order, correct, restrain and amend such errors, heresies, abuses, offences, contempts and enormities, whatsoever they may be which by any manner of spiritual authority or jurisdiction ought or lawfully may be reformed."

This was in 1535. According to the full power here given, commissions were issued to those who had Bishoprics, giving them a license for their jurisdiction as Bishops; and they only held their jurisdiction on good behavior and at the King's pleasure. They are as follows:

COMMISSION.

"Henry the VIII, King of England and France, Defender of the Faith, Lord of Ireland, and under Christ Supreme head of the church on earth.

"To the Reverend father in Christ. Edmund, Bishop of London, peace; seeing all the authority of jurisdiction as well that which is called secular as that which is called ecclesiastical emanates primarily from the kingly power as from a supreme head, etc.

"We, desiring to accede to your humble supplication, for this purpose commit our office and authority to you in the manner and form hereinafter described, and declare you to be licensed and appointed, therefore, to ordain to holy orders, etc., also to make visitations, etc., as the Bishops of London your predecessors in times past might exercise, by the laws of this realm; and not otherwise, etc., and to do everything that in any way concerns Episcopal authority and jurisdiction over and above those things which are known to be committed unto you by authority of the Scripture, in our stead, name and authority. Having great confidence in your sound doctrine, purity of conscience, integrity of life, and faithful industry in the performance of your duties, etc. We license you, by these presents, during our pleasure, etc., to answer before us as to your duty at your bodily peril, admonishing you in the meantime to exercise your office piously, holily, according to the rule of the gospel; and that you never at any time promote any one to holy orders, etc., (that is, otherwise than is here directed); in witness whereof we have commanded these presents to be made and confirmed by our seal for ecclesiastical causes. Given November 12th, 1539, and thirty-first of our reign."

After the Anglo-American war the members of the Church of England were left without ministers to either baptize or administer the sacrament. In their distress they applied to John Wesley, a Presbyterian of the church to which they belonged, to aid them in their difficulty, when he gave the following commission to John Coke, and also authority to Mr. Ashbury.

COMMISSION.

"To all whom these presents shall come; John Wesley, late Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Presbyterian of the Church of England, sendeth greeting:

"Whereas, many people in the Southern Provinces of North America who desire to continue under my care and still adhere to the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England, are greatly distressed for the want of ministers to administer the sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's supper, according to the usages of the same church; and whereas there does not appear any other way of supplying them with ministers.

"Know all men; that I, John Wesley, think myself to be providentially called at this time to set apart some persons for the work of the ministry in America; and therefore under the protection of Almighty ty God, with an eye single to His glory, I have this day set apart as a superintendent, by the imposition of my hands and prayer, being assisted by other ordained ministers, Thomas Coke, Doctor of Civil law, a Presbyter of the Church of England, and a man whom I judge to be well qualified for that great work.

"And I do hereby recommend him to all whom it may concern as a fit person to preside over the flock of Christ.

"In testimony I have hereunto set my hand and seal this second day of September, 1784.

[Seal].

JOHN WESLEY.

Mr. Ashbury received similar administration. They took upon themselves the title of Bishop and organized these members of the Church of England into the Methodist Episcopal Church. When John Wesley heard this he was so hurt and disgusted that he wrote a long letter to Mr. Ashbury. We quote from Lee Moore's Life of Wesley; extract Richard Tidings on Apostolic Succession, page 50.

* * * "In one point, my dear brother, I am a little afraid both the doctor [alluding to Dr. Coke] and you differ from me. I study to be little, you study to be great; I creep, you strut along; I found a school, you a college and call it after your own name. Oh! beware. Do not seek to be something, let me be nothing and Christ be all in all. One instance of this your greatness has given me great concern. How can you, how dare you suffer yourself to be called a bishop. I shudder. I start at the very thought. Men may call me a knave, or a fool; a rascal, a scoundrel, and I am content but they never shall by my consent call me a bishop. For my sake, for God's sake put a full end to this. Let the Presbyterians do what they please, but let the Methodists know their calling better.

JOHN WESLEY."

Such is the Episcopal Authority as originating in King Henry and handed down to this day.

E. C. BRAND.

CATHOLICISM.—No. IV.

BY ELDER M. T. SHORT.

THE method of confession, in order to receive the sacrament of penance, is to 1st, Carefully examine one's own conscience. 2d, Be heartily sorry for having offended God. 3d, Resolve never to sin again. 4th, Humbly confess. 5th, Obey the priest and make proper restitution.

The above is to be prefaced by a standard, or authoritative prayer to prepare the soul and to obtain needed grace to remind one of the number and magnitude of past sins. Sins against our Maker are such as disbelieving an article of faith; making a bad confession; neglecting religious instruction; rashly exposing to infidelity; reading dangerous books or keeping bad company, murmuring, negligence, idleness, etc. Sins against our neighbor, judge rash and injurious, and harbor rancor and revenge, avoided or treated maliciously, envied or abused, etc. Sins against ourselves, pride, covetousness, impure desires, immodest talk, scandal, fraud, deceit, theft, envy, sloth, gluttony, anger, impatience, etc.

Any church that will disdain a liberal education, or retard free thought, or manacle the hand of discovery, or in any wise fetter the empire of the mind, is a foe to the best interests of mankind, and the glory and salvation of Israel's God.

Cusa, a priest, could call in question the old Ptolemaic system of astronomy, and conjecture that the earth moved around the sun, and thereby gain the cardinal's hat. Copernicus formulated a theory in regard to the solar system for which he received an ecclesiastical benefice, or pension for life.

It remained for Galileo, by the aid of his powerful telescope to reduce the vagaries of his predecessors to demonstrated facts, nor did he wait till the aberration and velocity of light were ascertained, or the law of gravitation brought forward. What had been inferentially taught as "probability," was declared by this gifted Italian to be known truth. Cardinal Bellarmine owned up that the discovery was undeniable; but the church dignitaries regarded the bold disclosure to be at variance with the Scriptures, and the universal testimony of the venerable fathers. To know, and so affirm, would be to pave the way for true progress, hence the inquisition and a papal decree, "obliging him to promise that he would no longer teach as a demonstrated fact that the earth moved around the sun, as such opinion appeared to be contrary to Scripture." The Inquisitorial court sought a pretext against the world's benefactor, condemned and sentenced him. He had to abstain from teaching facts, and "recite the seven penitential psalms, one a week for three years" ere his precious life paid the ransom for priestly hate. It is a miserable Jesuitical prevarication to say "Galileo forced the Pope to send his affair before the inquisition." It is reprehensible to bring up the attitude of Protestant Germany to one John Kepler, in order to mitigate the folly and crime of the Holy Apostolic Catholic Church. The teutonic philosopher discovered the elliptical forms of planetary orbits established those laws, and settled those truths in advance of Galileo's day, and eventually was appointed court astronomer of Rudolph II, at Prague.

Our approved author praises his faithful churchman for having "departed from a system rendered venerable by age," yet brands the intellectual rival "his wilful and obstinate departure from the prudent course which had been pursued by both Cusa and Copernicus."

All authoritative Romish writers are bound to re-echo, and re-voice the views and sentiments of the concurrent faithful predecessors, which formulated the constitutional law of the organism. Our would-be spiritual adviser and scribe gives us his revamped exegesis on the taint and transmission of the Adamic, or original sin.

"The transmission of original sin is a mystery which Catholics believe on the authority of God who reveals it. It is not out of harmony with reason and to some extent admits of explanation."

He declares that the happy pair were endued with "holiness and original justice," which might have been handed down to posterity instead of the first, or original sin. But God said that "Adam fell that man might be." By the wisdom, and power, and predeterminate counsel and foreknowledge of God, a ransom was prepared in the person of the Lamb of Calvary from, and before the foundation of the world. It is an eternal truth that "the soul that sinneth it shall die."

This inexorable law should be placed in juxtaposition to, and in abrogation of the old, false and fraudulent proverb,—“The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge.” On the other hand our individual righteousness, and personal obedience save us, and not parental piety, ancestral holiness, or the supposed superabundant grace of Saints and martyrs. To multiply and replenish lawfully is no sin, and the first fruits of the heavenly ordained, God appointed union of the sexes, are “holiness unto the Lord;” and, even, while in childhood, or early youth,—“of such is the kingdom of heaven.”

We unhesitatingly admit “The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God;” neither does he receive from Satan unless he yields to temptation. Man does not come upon the arena of action either a saint, or a sinner, a cherub, or demon. He occupies an intermediate sphere until growth and development shall crown his daily life. Then he can choose the good and refuse the evil, or the reverse. As the light of reason burns steadily and bright, and when comparative philosophy maintains the equilibrium, as the governor balls upon an engine do its motion, then responsibility attaches; but God, knowing that we are far short of his glory, wisely and graciously concluded all under sin, so that his great mercy and infinite atonement would reach and embrace a fallen, ruined world. If we inherit our earthly sojourn in, by and through the fall, amen. For the second Adam has more than recompensed for the voluntary act, the legitimate outgrowth and the temporary inconvenience of the first. A paradise denied to our first parents, for a brief time, or till repentance ensues, will not be worth comparing to “Mount Zion and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels,” and to the abode of the Almighty, the headquarters of Christ, the empire of the triumphant church, and the habitation of glorified humanity, in ecstatic exaltation. Prophetic croakers may grumble, and lash themselves into bedlam, or pandemonium over things in which they had no voice and vote while the wise and virtuous realize, that all things will eventuate to their best good and God's glory. We inherit our natures and mortality from the primitive parent, but our spirits and agency emanate from our heavenly parent. Sin is not transmissible, for it is a violation of law, but constitutional weaknesses, and physical disabilities, may be handed down, because like reproduces like, and everything after its kind and in its order. A great deal is said about the "sin of nature;" but, forsooth, "he that knoweth to do good and doeth it not to him it is sin." The first sin was Adam's alone, but "the effect of his sin, that is, the rejection and deprivation of original justice he incurred, as head; and we, as his offspring, individually, as united to him." This view prompts the dominant church to baptize infants, still-born babes, and even unborn in instances of the prospective mother's death, and that too all for the remission of sins; howbeit, Jesus Christ taught about little children without their baptism, or before he touched and blessed them, "of such is the kingdom."

The above popish idea is honoring to Providence, as compared to the old Calvinistic doctrine that "Hell is crammed with infants damned without a day of grace." The followers of the Geneva divine have sung and preached the above tenet, for the benefit of "the elect," for the glory of their God, and to the praise of his "vindictive justice!" Our inherited guilt is thought to originate in the primeval will; but, "God is not bound to do what is in itself absolutely best, but only what is good, or relatively best!"

According their own theory the divine clemency would not be at all exhausted, but the Deity do about half right in the affair. The proffered mercy and grace of God were forfeited in the first instance through disobedience; but, mother church says, our first parents' subsequent faith, through the merits of Jesus Christ, was not transmissible.

This logic would make the transgression of the original as the federal head damn the race, while his obedience would only benefit himself individually. A poor rule indeed that does not work either, or both ways, and an infinitely worse one to work ruin on the one hand, and effect comparatively nothing on the side of mercy and love.

Let us now ascertain, as much as we well can, the grounds on which the Latin rite of the holy eucharist is administered, at times in both kinds; and at other times, in one kind to the laity.

"If at any time it became an obligation for the laity to receive under both kinds or to receive only under one, it was when the church, for good reasons, thought proper to issue an express command on the matter, or when some general custom prevailed that had the force of law."

"The manichean heretics considered it an evil to use wine, and held that Christ had no real blood." Buck's Theological Dictionary does not so describe the tenets of Manachus or his disciples. At all events some of the popes of the fifth century decreed that all should use bread and wine. These edicts were fulminated from the vatican to "deter these heretics from profaning this holy Sacrament."

"When the Manichean heresy died away, the law which was made on their account was relaxed."

Turbulent men of the modern times branded the church with error for permitting communion "under the species of bread only," which moved the councils of Constance and Trent to sanction, "with a positive law the prevailing custom," "lest she might appear to connive at those innovators, and to admit contrary to the truth, that for fifteen centuries she had not known the nature of this sacrament; that she had allowed it to be mutilated and profaned."

The exceptions to the above "positive law" are many and even form the rule in a number of countries to accommodate national bias. To solemnly define and authoritatively declare a commandment or law, and officially permit, and even sanction their violation, is the sheerest farce, and the most palpable nonsense in all the wide creation.

Our Transalpine logician thinks some do not like the taste of wine, others can not afford it, as in cold climates or almost inaccessible regions; besides, in passing the sacred chalice, there is danger of spilling the blood, besides other difficulties, and irreverences liable to happen.

Christ is thought to be whole, and entire in each or either specie, and "communion under one kind" is said to be "a complete sacrament of the body and blood of Christ." Then to add gravity, force, and the semblance of authority to this outrage on common sense, she exclaims, "Alas! what dogma or law is there that can not be attacked under the destructive principle of private interpretation." "Holy church" will hardly claim that blessing the loaves and fishes was a sacrament; but when Jesus simply blessed and broke bread, or the apostles and all broke bread from house to house, they construe this into a precedent for communion of one kind. See Luke 24: 31; Acts 2: 42-46; 20: 7.

The bread of God, the living bread, the bread of heaven, the bread of life, treated upon in the sixth chapter of John, has no reference to the Lord's supper; for Jesus instituted the same the evening of his betrayal.

"His glorified human nature does not admit of mutilation, or separation of its parts so that the body and blood and soul and divinity of Christ must always remain united."

Even devout Catholics would be loth to admit that Jesus Christ was not in heaven perfect and entire. But Paul, the apostle says, "flesh and BLOOD can not inherit the kingdom of God."

"It is true that receiving Communion under both kinds separately might help the receiver to call to mind more vividly the death of Christ, but between the remembrance and a more lively remembrance there is no difference in essence but only in degree, and this seeming disadvantage can not render the sacrament invalid. Baptism by immersion, or dipping under water, as practiced in some parts of christendom, signifies more vividly the burial and resurrection of Christ, yet baptism by effusion, that is, by pouring water on the head, is equally valid, and is generally used by the church in the west."

The phrase in Matthew, "Drink ye all of this," does not necessarily include the laity any more than the advice, Go ye into all the world, Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them, Whose sins ye shall forgive they are forgiven them and whose sins ye retain they are retained, etc, but we fail to behold the parallelism, lest peradventure the common membership would be denied the board of our common Lord.

"Christ instituted the Holy eucharist under both species, and the consecrating priest is bound to partake of it under both species because it is a sacrament and also a sacrifice. It is requisite for a sacrifice that the victim should be really present and immolated, or destroyed, at least mystically, in order that it may present the death of the victim. This was done at the last supper, and is still done in the mass by the symbolic severance of the body and blood of Christ through consecration."

It is passing strange that any people should strive to perpetuate, in symbol, or fact, the type, when the antitype had culminated, and consummated, as in the scene and sacrifice of Mount Calvary. The immolations were never pleasing to the Supreme Being, and were only enjoined as the only and desperate remedy to reconcile poor sinners. Those rites and ceremonies found their object and end when the expiring Savior exclaimed from the "cruel cross," "It is finished." To at all understand the mass, and enter into the spirit of it, would be to "crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh and put him to an open shame." He is alive forevermore, and there is no blood in his resurrected glorified body vs. symbols of the mass. First Corinthians 11: 27, in all Protestant versions, as well as the Inspired Translation, the words bread and wine are united together with the copulative conjunction "and," whereas, in the Vulgate and Douay, the disjunctive "or" is used to give double and separate meanings to the thus rendered antithetical parts of the sentence, and thereby provide for "Communion in one kind." Our author jumps at conclusions, assumes the thing in controversy, begs the question and ends as follows: "To the Apostles was promised the Holy Ghost, to abide personally with them and their successors forever. (St. John 14: 16.) Therefore I can not do better than accept what is held by the Catholic Church on the subject."

The mother scores some of her estranged children for advocating unconditional predestination, and then renders her ravings weak and ineffectual, by allowing that the good are predestined to life, but anathematizes the doctrine, and the adherents thereof, which maintain that the wicked are decreed to death.

"If any should ask why God, who can predestinate some to eternal life, can not predestinate others to eternal condemnation, the answer is plain. Salvation is an act of mercy, and can be granted to one who has no merit: condemnation is an act of justice and punishment, and can only be inflicted on a guilty person, and therefore God can only predestinate in the former case and not in the latter, because God can not be unjust."

This "tweedle-de-dee-tweedle-de-dum" logic rounds up as though the recipients of mercy, even on the gallows, all destitute of merit, were all foreordained to glory and bliss; but the objects of justice are condemned without mercy. To exonerate the Almighty from turpitude we remark,—that he endows intelligent existence with agency, which when abused brings darkness of mind, hardness of heart, alienation of affection, loss of reason, and in fine all the ills that fallen spirits are heirs to. The Lord of love does not provoke, tempt, or harden anyone. He has predestined, decreed, and foreordained, from all eternity to all eternity, that he will reward or punish, in just ratio; hence we are the arbiters of our own fate. If we are damned, the fault is with us; if we are beaten with a few stripes, we surely deserve them; if we only attain to thirty fold, we do not merit sixty; if we receive an hundred fold, be assured it is solely because we are worthy to so receive, the Lord being merciful and just all the while and forevermore.

Again "the mother of harlots" cracks the knuckles of some of her lewd daughters for claiming "justification by faith alone." Our transalpine informant arrays, very judiciously and properly, a number of texts to prove the futility of the position. He thinks that a dogmatic interpretation of an isolated and obscure text as though it was clear, not in harmony with, and in instances, contrary to clear texts, is a violation of all rule. We heartily say amen, for we like to agree with the learned prelate when we well can.

Eternal redemption is vouchsafed, not on one condition alone, but the rather, a grand combination of the whole and entire scheme of salvation. The great German reformer, and doctor of divinity, was vain enough to speak of himself as one "to whom the mystery of genuine faith, hidden from former ages in God, had been revealed." In Romans 3: 28, he added the word "only," after "faith," to suit and bolster up his new discovery. He also rejected the book of the Apostle James, supposing it to be adverse to the teachings of Paul. Such reckless liberty and lawless suppression moved his colaborer, and fellow-reformer, Zuinglius, to exclaim: "Luther, thou corruptest the word of God. Thou pervertest the Holy Scriptures," but to no avail. Calvinists caught the contagion, the eleventh of the thirty-nine Articles of Religion,—"Wherefore that we are justified by faith only is a most wholesome doctrine, and full of comfort," is a factor in the Episcopal service, and Methodists and free-booting evangelists have caught up, and piped forth the strain. The old historic church left the simplicity and purity of the true gospel; introduced heathen rites, transformed the spirit and letter of the law, perverted some, and changed wholly other ordinances; mutilated and broke down the primitive organization; instituted a new way of adoption; originated a new mode of church government; established unheard of orders, and societies; perpetuated monasteries and nunneries; invented the tribunal of penance; debased the people and pauperized the world; all as she avers under the guidance of the Holy Ghost, and by virtue of her supposed successorship to the chair and throne of St. Peter, and her power and authority to manipulate the spiritual and temporal treasury of "Holy Church."

We will now dismiss and bid a long and last farewell to "Catholic Belief," with the foreign author thereof, the "Very Rev. Joseph Faa Di Bruno, D. D."

Oriental and Greek schismatics; the Arian, and Manachian heresies; the Albigenses, and Waldenses; the admirus of Huss, and Jerome, of Prague; and other defections here and there, from time to time, were the accumulating monitors of a great revolution throughout the Catholic world. The woman in royal attire and regal splendor who "sat upon the scarlet colored beast," began to feel her insecurity. That nondescript animal symbolized earthly governments and the temporalities of the papacy; while the imperial, blasphemous impersonation of woman represents the "woman drunken with the blood of Saints and the blood of the martyrs of Jesus," i. e. the church of Rome. Rev. 17. These elements of unrest and disintegration tore away, and chrysalized to the great Reformation of the sixteenth century. In this family quarrel between the woman that "sat as a queen," and her in-subordinate, separated children, the unlawful wedlock of church and state was called in question; the divorce was wrought out; and the temporal power of the universal bishop, the tripled crowned father, the successor of the Apostle Peter, the earthly vicegerent of Jesus Christ, is gone once and forever. As the light of civilization streamed through the glad earth; as the fires of reason burned in high places; as liberty to think and act, (Thou child of Heaven), belted the solid globe, nations arose without a creed, but toleration to lawabiding faiths. Under the glorious dawn of political and ecclesiastic freedom, elegant steamers plow the raging main; the fiery chariots of Nahum spans and interweaves the continents with glittering steel; the old grease lipped lamp gives way to the electric light; hovels are supplanted by homes; and unfettered genius, science, discovery, mechanism, art, industry, peace, plenty, purity, spirituality, devotion, immortality and eternal life are amid the rank and file of the sum total that go to fill up the cup of joy, both here and hereafter. The long, dark, dreary night of apostasy was lighted up by the morning stars of the Reformation, which are in turn eclipsed by the noonday sun of the great, grand and glorious Restoration of the one true and everlasting gospel.

The next treatise from which we wish to glean a few extracts, or condensed topics, is the production of native talent; even that of James Cardinal Gibbons, late archbishop of Baltimore, and the second to wear "the Red Hat" in America. He imbibed the doctrine in his mother's milk; has made it a life study, consecrated his energies in its interests, disdains the calumniator's pen, and disavows a sinister motive for ease, profit, or temporal reward. He thinks a prodigal absconding child would not speak well of a good mother whom he had unwittingly abandoned; while he proposes to speak the truth about the much maligned venerable mother. The reverend gentleman tries to tell us that by a belief in and acceptance of the gigantic dogma of Romanism we lose nothing and gain everything. He postulates that in so doing we gain a correct knowledge of God; the entire revelations of his will; the whole truth as it is in Jesus Christ; an indispensable firmness; a thorough fixedness of purpose, and a profound and conscientious peace of mind. He avows that in returning to the field you come back to the shrine, altars, sacraments, and authority that your prodigal parents abandoned three hundred years ago; hence it is the mother's cradle and the "Father's home," that his work,— "The Faith of our Fathers,"—treats upon. The garments of joy, the banquet of love, the kiss of peace, and a maternal embrace, are freely proffered to a modern convert who will exclaim with the penitent Augustine: "Too late have I known thee, O, Beauty, ever ancient and ever new; too late have I loved thee."

A SHORT PRAYER AND COMMENT.

"Open Thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law."

The question of long standing, "Who shall decide when doctors disagree," I propose to answer. Nothing is more positive than the fact, that where two men disagree that one of them must be wrong, especially among the Doctors of the Divine law, or law of God. Consequently there must be blindness on the part of one of them, and possibly both. Hence the propriety of this prayer, by making an appeal to the great fountain of wisdom, knowledge and understanding, that God would open the eyes of us poor erring mortals that we may behold wondrous things out of his law.

And is it not a wonder indeed that so many differ in regard to the fundamental principles of the divine science when God himself has given us a plain rule of duty? When God opens our eyes, we shall see alike; but now men look to the schools of human science for divine knowledge, instead of looking to God. In proof of this we need only to notice the great mistake of the five foolish virgins, who are yet to confess just before the bridegroom makes his second appearance that their lamps are gone out. Who are more blind readers than those who teach that Christ will make his second advent before the five foolish virgins confess that their lamps are gone out?

That thing has not been done. Lamps, or their Bibles, they all took. "Vessels," means societies or churches; oil means the Holy Ghost, or the Spirit of inspiration of the Almighty.

All who reject the Book of Mormon and the doctrine of the literal gathering of Israel before the second advent, do not understand the Scriptures, for this is what they teach, hence their confession, "Our lamps afford us no light." Neither will the door be shut until the foolish virgins see their mistake and confess too late. Therefore Mrs. White's "shut door," is all out of season. Her followers credit her as a prophetess and are among blind guides. They would do well to pray this prayer, "Open Thou mine eyes."

The Bostonian Adventists who keep Sunday for Sabbath, said years ago that all the signs that Christ spoke of had already been witnessed, and that He, the Lord, might come any moment. They are others of the foolish virgins, but they will yet confess to the wise, "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out." This confession will be made when they see the Twelve Tribes of Jacob come as a cloud, and as doves to their windows, and a nation born in a day, no more to be divided into two nations thereafter, forever. For thus saith the holy word:

"The church, or kingdom of heaven is not compared to a virgin, much less to ten virgins, only when it is not perfectly organized, as at the present time. The Bride, or Lamb's Wife is not one, or ten virgins, but one wife. Neither of these ten virgins now hold the Urim and Thummim; consequently they have no translator nor any one to tell whether my claim to membership in the body of Christ is valid or not, therefore the brethren may disown me until one shall stand up with Urim and Thummim, as in the time of Nehemiah and Ezra, when Barzillai was put from the priesthood as polluted because he could not show his lineal right thereunto."

Brother Joseph Smith:—I am sorry I can not do more than render thanks for your kindness, for sending me the Herald. I am eighty-seven years and four months old, the 20th of this June. Can not write much, so that anybody can read it; my hand trembles. I got a neighbor to copy my article, hoping you would publish my ideas therein contained. I am very feeble indeed, this spring, and am near my end. The Post Master here will notify you of it, when I am gone. Until then I hope the Herald will come, and I will pray: May God bless you. Pray for me that I may be "also ready."

Selections.

MILLENNIUM.—No. 7.

In the one hundred and forty-fourth Psalm we have a most glorious description given of the reign of Christ on the earth, from the 4th verse to the close of the chapter.

"Bow the heavens, O Lord, and come down: touch the mountains, and they shall smoke. Cast forth lightning, and scatter them: shoot out thine arrows, and destroy them. Send thy hand from above, rid me, and deliver me out of great waters, from the hand of strange children; whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood. I will sing a new song unto thee, O God: upon a psaltry and an instrument of ten strings will I sing praises unto thee. It is he that giveth salvation unto kings: who delivereth David his servant from the hurtful sword.—Rid me, and deliver me from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood: That our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace: that our garners may be full, affording all manner of store; that our sheep may bring forth thousands and tens thousands in our streets: that our oxen may be strong to labor; that there be no breaking in, nor going out; that there be no complaining in our streets. Happy is that people, that is in such a case: yea, happy is that people, whose God is the Lord." (or whose God the Lord Jehovah is.)

A more blessed state of earthly society, than is here described by the Psalmist, is not easily conceived of; an order of things when complaining shall have ceased, and be heard on the streets no more. We can readily conceive that when all complaining shall cease, there will be a very different order of society, from what there is at present, or ever was since the world began; for there never has been a time up to the present state, but there has been complaining in the streets.

This account, however, agrees with what John says, in the Revelations, 21: 3, 4: "And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

David and John, both seem to have had their eyes fixed on a state of society very different from any which had existed up till their day, or from theirs to the present; but one that will come when the Lord shall bow the heavens and come down, and touch the mountains, and they shall smoke, and the tabernacle of God be with men, and when the Lord shall have rid David (or Israel) from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood. In the above quotation the Psalmist gives us the whole order of things which tend to the establishing of this glory on earth, when complaining will be heard no more.

And first it is to begin with the Lord's bowing the heavens and coming down. See 5th verse. Secondly, after he comes he is to deliver his people out of great waters, and from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood, verses 7, 8 and 11. The consequences following from the Lord's coming down, and delivering his people from the hand of strange children are, first, that their sons will grow up as plants in their youth, and secondly, their daughters will be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace, verse 12. Thirdly, their garners will be full affording all manner of store, verse 13. Fourthly, their sheep shall bring forth their thousands and tens of thousands in their street. 13. Fifthly, their oxen will be strong to labor. 14. And lastly, there will neither be breaking in nor going out.

A society of the above description will doubtless suit John's description in every respect, as before quoted, nor could the mind conceive of a people in circumstances more agreeable, nor yet more desirable, than to enjoy the high privileges above mentioned: a people where their sons should be as plants grown in their youth, whose conduct should never wound the feelings of their parents, nor bring a stain on their characters, nor yet cause the tears of sorrow to roll down their cheeks; their daughters also, as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace: without spot, without blemish, the comfort of their parents. This is securing to a person one of the greatest sources of human happiness, to have his family without reproach, without shame, without contempt, and his house a house of peace, and his family a family of righteousness, and his habitation a habitation of holiness: add to this the abundance of the good things of the world, his garners full of all manner of store: that is, everything which his nature could enjoy, while his flocks are bringing forth their thousands and their tens of thousands, in his streets, and we have before us a society or generation of persons whose earthly lot, above all others, is desirable, and an order of things to be longed for by every lover of mankind: but this never will take place, until the Lord bows the heavens and comes down, and his tabernacle is with men; then all tears will be wiped from the eyes of his Saints; then all sorrowing and sighing will cease; then will Israel sing a new song upon a psaltry and an instrument of ten strings; then shall their sons be as plants grown in their youth, and their daughters as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace; then will the earth bring forth in its strength, so that their garners shall be full, affording all manner of store; then shall their sheep bring forth their thousands and their tens of thousands in their streets; then shall the wilderness and the solitary place be glad for them, and the desert blossom as the rose; then shall the blind see, and the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing. Well might the Psalmist say, "The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice, let the multitude of the islands be glad thereof: the world also is established that it can not be moved. Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad: let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof; let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord for he cometh," &c.

Let the reader notice particularly, that all this is to take place when the Lord comes.

The 11th and 12th chapters of Isaiah give an additional account of the glory of the Lord's reign on the earth: they are too lengthy for insertion here, but let the reader turn to them, and read them; for they will throw a great light upon the subject, and he will there see the glory which is to follow the second advent of the Savior, and the effect which his reign is to have on the brute creation, as well as the natural.

The sacred writers abound in descriptions of Christ's reign on the earth for a thousand years,—scarcely one of the ancient prophets but either directly or indirectly notices it; and out of the many allusions to it, in the Scriptures, I shall quote a few in addition to those already quoted. In the prophecy of Isaiah 4: 2-6, the prophet thus describes that day, (the day of Christ's reign: for one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day); "In that day shall the branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel. And it shall come to pass, that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, even every one that is written among the living in Jerusalem; when the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and shall have purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof, by the spirit of judgment, and by the spirit of burning. And the Lord will create upon every dwelling place of Mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night: for upon all the glory shall be a defence. And there shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the day time from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from storm and rain." All this is necessary to observe here, as this quotation shows that what the prophet here describes is to take place when the tabernacle of God is with men; and we have already seen that the tabernacle of God is to be with men when Christ reigns on earth a thousand years, or one day with the Lord.

Ezekiel 24: 22-31, gives the following account of this day, or thousand years: "Therefore I will save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey, and I will judge between cattle and cattle. And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David, he shall feed them; and he shall be their shepherd. And I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I the Lord have spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beast to cease out of the land: and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods. And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessings. And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the Lord, when I have broken the bonds of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hands of those that served themselves of them. And they shall no more be a prey to the heathen, neither shall the beast of the land devour them; but they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid. And I will raise up for them a plant of renown, and they shall be no more consumed with hunger in the land, neither bear the shame of the heathen any more. Thus shall they know that I, the Lord their God am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are my people, saith the Lord God. And ye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord God." And in the 37th chapter of this same prophecy, 21st and 28th verses, the prophet thus describes the glory of Christ's reign on the earth: "And say unto them, thus saith the Lord God; behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and I will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land: and I will make one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all: neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with other detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions: but I will save them out of all their dwelling places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them. So shall they be my people, and I will be their God. And David my servant shall be king over them; and they shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers dwelt, and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children forever. Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them forever more. My tabernacle also shall be with them: yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the heathen shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for ever more." These quotations need no comment. They speak for themselves. Every reader with the least degree of intelligence, knows that what is here said has yet to take place, and he also knows that it will take place when the Lord restores the kingdom to Israel, and not till then, and that will take place when he comes to reign on the earth.

The prophet Hosea gives us a similar account in his prophecy, 14th chapter, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th verses. "I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon. They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine: the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him and observed him; I am like a green fir tree. From me is thy fruit found. Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? for the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them: but the transgressors shall fall therein."

The prophet Joel 3: 16-21 says of the coming of the Lord, and of his reign on the "The Lord shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake: but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel. So shall ye know that I am the Lord your God dwelling in Zion my holy mountain:—then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall be no strangers pass through her any more. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall drop down new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and shall water the valley of Shittim. Egypt shall be a desolation; and Edom shall be a desolate wilderness, for the violence against the children of Judah, because they have shed innocent blood in their land. But Judah shall dwell forever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: for the Lord dwelleth in Zion."

The prophet Amos says in the 9th chapter of his prophecy, 11-15th verses: "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breeches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old: That they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen which are called by my name, saith the Lord that doeth this. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that the ploughman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and the hills shall melt. And I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God."

The above quotations, with a great many others which might be brought, set forth that order of society which will exist when the Savior reigns, that day, or the thousand years. We have a most splendid description of it given in the Psalms, beginning with the one hundred and forty-fourth, to the end of the book; but we deem it unnecessary to quote any more, as the candid reader will be enabled, when the subject is laid before him so plain as is done in the above quotations, to see and understand for himself so as to deliver his mind from darkness on this point when reading the prophecies. Who can not easily discover, that the order of things set forth in the above quotations from the prophets has never yet been on the earth, neither indeed can be until the Lord comes? For it is at that time that Jerusalem is to be built and never to be thrown down; and it is at that time that the earth is to bring forth in her strength, and when the mountains are to drop down new wine, and all nature to rejoice before the Lord; for he comes to judge the earth in righteousness. It is also at that time that the ploughman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed. And it is at that time, that the tabernacle of David shall be built, and Israel become the praise and glory of the whole earth.

In a former part of this treatise I noticed the change which was to be wrought upon the beast at that "day," or thousand years. And not only the beast, but the vegetable kingdom is also to be greatly changed—the trees and the vines—the one is to bring forth their fruit in abundance, the other to load itself to such a degree that the mountains will literally drop down new wine. So that a great change is to be wrought on all the lower creation—the very earth is to become more fruitful than ever it has been since it was cursed; and the Spirit of God is to be "poured out on all flesh," and his power to be exalted in changing all things so as to make them conduce to the happiness of men in the highest degree their nature is capable of. This is the Millennium, and this only. If the power of God is not exerted on both man and beast, as well as on all other parts of the lower creation, the idea of Millennium is worse than folly. All the above quotations, taken from the prophets, must be fulfilled, with a multitude of others all to the same effect which might be quoted. The fulfillment of these prophecies will make a Millennium, and nothing else will; for these are the things which God has promised to do for the world, and which he has said will take place. Whatever power, therefore, is necessary to change the nature of the lion, the leopard, the bear, the ass, the cockatrice, together with all other animals which hurt and destroy, is necessary to be exerted to bring about the Millennium, and nothing else will do it. And not only the power necessary to effect this, but also to change the earth so as to make it more fruitful, and the seasons so that the ploughman can overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; for our present seasons will not admit such a thing—so that a great change must be wrought on all things, miracle or no miracle. If all this can be done without miracle, so be it, and if not, the days of miracles are not past, or else the idea of the Millennium is worse than folly.

FOUR RULES FOR MAKING AND SPENDING MONEY.

1. THERE is only one legitimate way of making money—by honest industry. He who makes money by taking it out of his neighbor's pocket, without giving his neighbor an equivalent, does not make money at all; he simply steals it. He may do his pocket picking by reputable methods or by methods that are disreputable; but pocket-picking, whatever the method, is always dishonest. Any transaction the object of which is to make A richer by making B poorer, is in the nature of theft. Naked we came into this world, naked we shall go out of it. No skeptic is so skeptical as to deny this proposition. If, then, after living twenty years, we possess anything, we must have gotten it either by receiving it as a gift, by producing it by our industry, or by stealing from our neighbor. There is, perhaps, a fourth way: we may share in a general increase of wealth which we have done nothing to produce. This can hardly be called theft, but it can hardly be called honorable industry.

I meet young men continually whose ambition seems to me to be upside down; they are ambitious to get all that they can, instead of being ambitious to do all that they can. Mr. Fletcher Harper once said to me, "There is more pleasure in earning money than in either having it or spending it." This pleasure in earning money is the solid satisfaction which comes to a man who is conscious that he is doing the world good service; the money that is paid him therefore is incidental and secondary. Money is only a convenient medium for exchange of services. For my own part, I would a great deal rather give more service and get less, than give less service and get more. The discomfort of receiving more than I deserve would be immeasurably greater than the discomfort of deserving more than I get. Indeed, in the latter feeling there is no discomfort at all, but rather a pardonable and honorable pleasure.

Loafing does not earn money, and it is the loafers who are generally the grumblers. It is astonishing how many men will gather in a great city to see one man dig in a cellar. Chance does not earn money, whether the chance be by the throw of the dice or by the rise and fall of stocks. The loafer lives on other people's money, and the gamblers take money out of other people's pockets and put nothing back in return. The first ambition of every man should be to give a value equivalent for every dollar received, and according to the New Testament measure of economy—"Good measure, pressed down, and shaken together and running over." He who gives in life's market in that way, will in the long run find it given to him on the same basis.

2. Spend less than you earn. Self-denial is at the foundation of all secular success. My father told me, when I was a boy, "I am resolved always to have plenty of money." "Easier said than done," I replied. "Not at all," he answered; "perfectly easily done: spend less than you earn." I once said to a very successful business man, "I do not pretend myself to be a business man." He replied in almost my father's words, "There is only one rule for success in business: spend less than you earn." The poor man imagines if he were richer he would have plenty of money, but he is mistaken; no one has plenty of money; our wants increase faster than the supply. It is as much disappointment to a railroad magnate not to buy a new railroad, as it is to a boy not to buy a new goat cart. Grade your income to your expenses; that is, spend what you want and set yourself to earn the money, and you will always be pushed, harried, perplexed, worried, and will live on the edge of bankruptcy. Grade your expenses to your income; that is, determine what you will spend, not by your wants, but by your possessions, and you will always be easy and comfortable with a quiet mind.

3. Spend your money after you have earned it, not before. Buy with your wages in your pocket, not with the prospective wages which you expect to have in your pocket when the end of the week comes. So keep out of debt. Hope inspires the man who is earning for future expenditure; debt drives the man who is earning for past expenditure; and it makes an immeasurable difference in life whether one is inspired by hope or driven by debt. Money earned is money valued. You recognize the worth of the dollar by what you put into it; but a dollar unearned is a dollar unmeasured. We always underestimate the cost of work which is to be done in the future. I am almost inclined to favor the abolition of all laws for the collection of debts, except those involving liens, like mortgages or those founded on fraud and false pretense. It would break up the credit system, and help compel men to pay as they go. Debt is second cousin to dishonesty. When one incurs a debt without reasonable assurance of his ability to pay it, the relationship of the transaction to dishonesty is much closer. I would rather wear a threadbare overcoat which belongs to me than a new one which belongs to my tailor; and if I have not paid for my coat, it belongs to my tailor. "Owe no man anything, but to love one another," is the eleventh commandment.

4. Maintain a moral perspective in expenditure; adjust expenditure to real needs, not to temporary inclinations. The young man who spends ten cents for a cigar but can not afford to subscribe for a newspaper, the working man who drinks two or three glasses of beer a day but can not afford to send his boy to school, disregards moral perspective. It is well for us to remember that whatever we do not spend for one thing, we have in hand to spend for another. Every expenditure debars from some other expenditure. In buying an article, it is not enough to say the article is cheap for the money. Is it the very best thing that this money can get for me and mine? A wise moral perspective will put home first in all expenditures; and in the home, the intellectual and moral well-being of the children before temporary and sensuous gratification.

These four rules are very simple. I do not say that obedience to them will make the reader wealthy, but it will certainly make him comfortable. Earn your money by honest industry; earn more than you spend; earn it before you spend it; and spend it for the best things.—Laicus, in Christian Union.

Conference Minutes.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA.

Conference convened with the Long Valley branch, April 6th, vice president, in the chair. The morning session adjourned to the water's edge, where Bro. D. E. Landers led three precious souls into the waters of baptism, and at the afternoon session they were confirmed under the hands of Elders D. Brown, J. H. Lawn and J. C. Holmes. Pres. J. B. Carmichael reported by letter; vice president D. Brown, and secretary I. F. Kingsbury in person. The following presidents of branches reported: D. Brown of Watsonville, J. H. Lawn of San Benito, and J. C. Holmes of Long Valley. Elders reported: D. Brown, J. H. Lawn, (been in the field most of the time since last conference), J. C. Holmes, I. F. Kingsbury. Priests: Wm. N. Dawson, (by letter), and Jacob Smith. Teachers: P. Davis and G. Davis. Deacon A. Page also reported. Branches: Long Valley 29, Jefferson 19, Deer Creek 8. Bro. J. B. Carmichael was sustained as president, D. Brown as vice president, I. F. Kingsbury as secretary, J. M. Range as bishop's agent, J. H. Lawn as missionary laborer of Central California district and all the general church authorities. Preaching by D. E. Landers and J. H. Lawn. Altogether we had a very pleasant and profitable session. Adjourned to meet with the Jefferson branch, October 12th, 13th and 14th, 1888.

LONDON, ONTARIO.

Conference convened at Corinth, Ontario, June 2d, 1888, at 10 a. m., Elder J. H. Lake presiding, W. J. Smith secretary, pro tem. After the organization of the conference the balance of the forenoon was spent in prayer and testimony, and an enjoyable time was had. At 1 30 p. m., Branch reports:—Corinth, 34, present number 36. Masonville 56, present number 64. St. Thomas, 30, no change. Riverview, 15, no change. Windham, (new), 32. Bishop's Agent's report:—Total receipts since October 1st, $297.66; expenditures, $267.43; balance on hand $30.23. Report was received. The following elders reported:—T. A. Philips, G. Mottashed, W. J. Smith, (baptized 31), Christopher Pearson, (baptized 2), William Jenkins, R. N. Howlett, (baptized 4), R. C. Evans, (baptized 30), S. Brown, (baptized 2), J. H. Lake, (baptized 14). Priests:—John Shields, (baptized 22), Edgerton Evans and George Tomlinson. Teacher S. D. Wilson reported. Visiting brethren were accorded the privileges of the conference. Samuel Brown was sustained as Bishop's Agent. R. C. Evans was sustained as president of the district. W. J. Smith was sustained as vice-president. Resolved that when this conference adjourns, it does so to meet at London, subject to the call of the president of the mission. John Shields was appointed secretary of the district. The Walsingham branch was declared disorganized, and the few Saints there granted letters of removal from the clerk of the district. It was resolved that we as a conference affirm our disapprobation of the use of any kind of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and that we also affirm our disapproval of the use of tobacco; and that we will not sustain with a license, either elder, priest, teacher or deacon, who indulges in either of these evils after next conference. Sister E. Mortimer was requested to act as organist, and to select a choir for the conference. Resolved that Bro. John Shields be ordained an elder to-morrow morning at the prayer-meeting. Resolved that we sustain the president of the mission and the spiritual authorities of the church. Sunday morning prayer-meeting in charge of J. H. Lake, during which time brother Shields was ordained, and the sacrament administered, and a goodly degree of the Spirit enjoyed. Preaching Saturday evening by R. B. Howlett; Sunday forenoon by W. J. Smith; afternoon by R. C. Evans; evening by W. J. Smith. Monday, met in prayer-meeting at 9 a. m., after which the following resolutions were adopted: Resolved that the president of the district have a right to advertise meetings for next conference, expenses not to exceed five dollars, said expenses to be paid by the district. A vote of thanks was tendered to the president and secretary of conference, to sister E. Mortimer as organist, to brother and sister Jenkins for the use of organ, and to the Saints for their kindness and hospitality. Adjourned subject to call of president of mission. Thus passed an enjoyable session of conference, during which the Saints were made glad by the gifts of prophecy and other demonstrations of the divine approbation of the Master.

NAUVOO AND STRING PRAIRIE.

Conference convened at Montrose, Iowa, June 2d, Elder James McKiernan presiding. Branch reports:—Keokuk and Rock Creek no changes. Burlington, 3 removed, 3 baptized, present number 73. Montrose, 1 received by letter, 1 removed, 1 died, present number 85. Farmington, 4 removed, present number 48, number of absent members 35. Reported:—Elders James McKiernan, H. T. Pitt, J. H. Lambert and H. T. Lambert. Priests:—J. E. Holt, and A. A. Hall. A letter of instruction and encouragement was read from Bro. M. T. Short. The president reported that he had visited Montrose, as requested by last conference, and adjusted all differences. He also reported as delegate to General Conference and his bill of expense was allowed. He presented a financial report which was accepted, and spread upon the minutes. Report of J. H. Lambert, bishop's agent, was read. The auditors found a mistake of six cents. Corrected report read as follows:—On hand last report $9 38; received since $86.28; total $95.66; expenditures $99.71; balance due agent $4.05. James McKiernan was elected district president and Geo. P. Lambert clerk for six months. Next conference was appointed at Rock Creek, Illinois, to begin Saturday, September 1st, at 10 30 a. m. A new minute book was ordered at the expense of the district. Preaching in the evening. Sunday at 9 30 a. m., social and sacrament meeting. At 11 a. m. preaching by James McKiernan. The services at 2 p. m. were in charge of W. T. Lambert; it was the funeral of Sr. Standards child. Preaching in the evening by James McKiernan.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Conference met at Hersey, Michigan, Friday, June 1st; preaching service in the evening by C. Scott. Morning prayer meeting at nine o'clock. Preaching by Bishop Blakeslee in the forenoon. Columbus Scott president of the conference, J. J. Cornish associate, J. A. Grant secretary, and E. DeLong assistant. Minutes of the previous session were read, and so corrected as to read "that Bro. J. J. Bailey's release as Bishop's Agent was recommended on account of other duties preventing him from attending to that office." Elders reported: J. J. Cornish (baptized 55), J. A. Carpenter (baptized 24), E. DeLong (baptized 20), Levi Phelps by letter, (baptized 15), A. Barr, W. J. Smith (baptized 33), Robert Davis (baptized 14), E. A. Shelley, S. Wheaton, H. Rathbun, G. A. Blakeslee, C. Scott, and Joseph Shippy. Priests: E. Martindale (baptized 3), James Burch (baptized 3), Jacob Kaplinger, J. A. Grant, Wm. Carns, Sam'l Reynolds, Wm. Dowker by letter, (baptized 7), Thomas Rawson, and Thomas Whitford. Teacher A. P. DeWolfe also reported. A committee of three was appointed to examine the books of the present Bishop's Agent, who reported them correct. They also stated that they had audited the books from the beginning and found a deficiency in J. J. Bailey's account. They advised that a committee be appointed to effect a settlement with Bro. Bailey the former agent. They also further advised "that a new book be furnished the agent, as the present one is so unintelligent that it is impossible to audit it without the presence of the agent." Report was accepted, and Bro. J. A. Carpenter was appointed with the present agent and the ex-agent to consummate said settlement. The Richland branch was declared disorganized, and letters of removal were granted to its members. J. J. Cornish was continued as president of the district, and J. A.

Grant secretary. It was resolved that the matter of dividing the Northern Michigan district be acted upon at next conference. It was resolved that Robert Davis be requested to labor in the district if arrangements can be made with the Bishop. The matter between J. J. Cornish and James Burch was referred to a committee consisting of Brn. Rathbun, Shelley and Shippy. Their report is as follows: "After investigating the petition of Bro. Burch, we find that the action of the branch was legal, and the decision of the president legal, wise, and just." Report adopted and committee discharged. The president of the mission, and the appointees of General Conference were sustained. A vote of thanks was tendered the Saints for their hospitality. Preaching Saturday in the evening by Elder C. Scott. Sunday morning, prayer meeting, followed by preaching, in the forenoon by H. Rathbun. Preaching at three p. m. by J. A. Carpenter, and in the evening by C. Scott. One was baptized during the session by J. J. Cornish, and confirmed by Bishop Blakeslee. Adjourned to meet at Five Lakes, Michigan, in October, at the call of the president.

SOUTH-EAST ILLINOIS.

This district conference convened June 9th, 1888, in Brush Creek branch, Wayne county, Illinois. G. H. Hilliard in the chair, I. M. Smith clerk. Branch reports:—Dry Fork 31, including 1 high priest, 1 seventy, 4 elders, 1 priest and 2 teachers, 2 received by vote. Tunnel Hill 78, including 5 elders, 1 priest and 2 teachers; 1 received on certificate of baptism. Springerton 57, including 1 elder, 2 priests, 2 teachers, 1 deacon; 1 died since last report. Brush Creek 130, including 2 elders, 2 priests, 2 teachers and 1 deacon; 1 died since last report. Alma 10, including 2 elders and 1 deacon. Elders I. A. Morris, E. Webb, J. F. Thomas, Isaac M. Smith and G. H. Hilliard reported in person. T. P. Green and John F. Henson arrived at night but made no report. The elders were appointed missions for the coming year. E. Webb, T. C. Kelley, C. J. Hawkins and Robert Ouldcott to labor in Williamson, Johnson, Massac and Pulaski counties. T. P. Green to labor throughout the district as his circumstances will permit. J. F. Thomas and M. R. Brown, in the vicinity of Middleton. Henry Walker in Brush Creek. I. A. Morris in Springerton and vicinity. John F. Henson, in Marion and Richland counties. J. W. Gillen was sustained as missionary in charge, and I. M. Smith as traveling missionary in this district. All the authorities of the church were sustained. G. H. Hilliard was elected president for the next six months and I. M. Smith secretary. Bro. J. W. Gillen preached on Saturday evening, Sunday forenoon and afternoon, and G. H. Hilliard in the evening. Adjourned to meet at Pleasant Ridge school house, in Dry Fork branch, September 15th, at ten o'clock.

Special notice to members of Boonesboro, Iowa, Branch. Dear Brethren and Sisters:—At a business meeting held for the purpose of endeavoring to learn what could be done with, or for the members that are out of the reach of the officers of the Boonesboro branch, it was resolved by a unanimous vote that the secretary be instructed to publish said members' names in the Herald. They are requested to write to the clerk of the branch stating what they intend to do, on or before September 1st, 1888. If not they will be reported as scattered members. Their names are as follows:—Janet Briles, Eliza

D. Lane, Mary E. Lane, Margaret McLare, Christina Sneddon, Agnes Veitch, Fulton A. Brown, James Knox, Isaac M. Lane, James Penman, Archibald Veitch. Please write promptly to Thomas Rodger, branch clerk, care Samuel McBirnie, Boonesboro, Boone county, Iowa.

Reports of changes occurring in any branches of the Pittsburg district should be sent hereafter, to Elder Wm. H. Garrett, Greenville, Mercer County, Pennsylvania, who is now district secretary. Branches will please take notice.

In connection with the quarterly conference of the Southern Nebraska district there will be a grove meeting held at McKaig's Grove, near Elmwood, Nebraska, commencing Friday evening, July 20th, 1888.

LEVI ANTHONY, Pres. Dist.

BORN.

DONALDSON.—To Bro. N. B. and Sr. Emma Donaldson, on the 5th day of April, 1888, near Riverton, Iowa, a son.

HARDY.—At Massillon, Cedar county, Iowa, October 11th, 1887, to Bro. and Sr. William Hardy, a son, named Albert Lewy; blessed June 10th, 1888, by Elder Warren Turner.

MARRIED.

SCHMIDT—McKEE.—At the residence of the bride's parents, near Stewartsville, DeKalb county, Missouri, June 10th, 1888, Bro. Theodore Schmidt to Sr. Sadie McKee; Elder James Wood officiating.

O. Lord, do thou in heaven seal
The solemn pledge these two have made,
And may they still be blest to feel
The obligations on them laid.

HAWKES—McDONOUGH.—At his residence and by Elder Joseph Woodward, on Monday, June 18th, 1888, Mr. Alonzo Hawkes and Miss Martha McDonough, both of New Brunswick.

DIED.

COOK.—At Salt Lake City, Utah, May 10th, 1888, Adda Myrtle, only child of Mr. Dana Y. and Abba Cook; death resulted from drinking some eye-lotion, in about ten hours after the child took it. This beautiful little child was but seventeen months and six days old, and Mr. Cook was lately from Kansas. They were in a most distressed state of mind over this sad accident. Funeral services by Elder R. M. Elvin.

PATTEN.—At Atwood, Kansas, May 27th, 1888, Blanche, daughter of Bro. W. B. and Sr. Clara Patten, aged 2 years and 6 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Bone, of the Christian church. We mourn, but not as those without hope.

LARSON.—At Salt Lake City, Utah, June 13th, 1888, Sr. Britta Larson, of dropsy. She was 77 years, 8 months and 24 days old. Was baptized in Sweden in 1879 by the missionaries of the Utah Church, and came here the same year. Funeral from the residence of her son, Bro. John Larson. Text Job 14:14. Sermon by Elder R. M. Elvin.

SHARP.—At his residence in Cleveland, Iowa, May 5th, 1888, of consumption of the lungs, Bro. Luke Sharp, aged 54 years, 8 months and 20 days. He was born in Clackmannan, Sane county, Scotland. Bro. Sharp was an old-time Saint. He emigrated with his family from his native home about twenty-three years ago, locating at Akron, Ohio. They lived in Summit county, Ohio, about seventeen years, after which they went to Utah; Bro. Sharp only staying a few months, then returning to the states and locating in Ohio; after residing there some time they removed to Lucas, where they have since resided. In the last two years, Bro. Sharp has had one continual round of trouble. First, his son, William took sick, and after a long and protracted illness died of lung trouble, then his wife took down sick with the fever and after a short illness passed away, Bro. Sharp at the time being confined to his bed, after which he never recovered, but gradually became weaker, until at his death he was a mere shadow. He was a good Saint, an efficient worker; his whole heart seemed enwrapped in the work, and in his last illness he thanked God for his goodness and his great love manifested towards him. He leaves a family of several children, who will miss paternal care and fatherly advice. He never wavered, but died resigned to his fate and in the hope of a glorious resurrection with the just. Funeral services by Elder John R. Evans.

BOOK NOTICE.

The Board of Publication at their last meeting accepted for publication in book form "A COMPENDIUM OF THE FAITH AND DOCTRINES OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH" prepared for the use of Sabbath Schools and elders by Elder H. A. Stebbins and Sr. Marietta Walker, appointing Pres. Joseph Smith and Elder W. W. Blair as a committee to examine the same. We presume the committee will (through the Herald) make known their decision. We wish to call the attention of Sabbath School superintendents to the fact that just as soon as the work is on sale, the Bible Lessons in the Hope will be discontinued, as this work is intended to be a permanent guide to Sabbath School instruction. Simultaneous with this will be issued a book for the use of Intermediate Classes, and this will be followed by one for our Primary Classes, thus supplying the long felt need of the Sabbath School work and completing a set of text books which we trust will be found helpful in laying the foundation of a more thorough understanding of the word of God, especially for our young people in our schools and homes.

The compendium will be found especially useful as a book of ready reference for all church members. It will contain quotations and citations to the most pertinent texts found in the Bible, bearing upon our various doctrines as a church, together with quotations from, or citations to the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants in connection with the same. To these will be appended an Epitome of Ecclesiastical History, taken from Winchester's Concordance, with some additions from recent works. As soon as we can ascertain the size, cost and probable time of issue we will notify our readers, and trust that all who have the Sabbath School work at heart will be prepared to stand by the Board of Publication in the efforts they are making to meet the increasing demands of the church in behalf of the young. It should be the work of parents to supply their children with these books in the same manner they supply them with text books for school, and in cases where parents are not able to do this, we feel sure that Sabbath School officers will see to it that such are supplied. The manuscript costs the church nothing, but the labor and expense of publishing the Board of Publication have to meet and we should see to it that they are sustained. M. WALKER.

"THE REPUTATION OF THE SAINTS AT LAMONI IS GOOD."

It is pertinent to inquire how this reputation has been acquired. For, if men of other faiths and of no profession of faith alike make the statement we have quoted above, they must have some reasons for making it. It must be understood that it is made by men of business, buyers and sellers, traders, traveling men and men of avocation and profession in the world; and is made of men with whom they in their travels and the prosecution of their business callings and professions have had occasion, or necessity to come in contact and to deal with.

The following conversation occurring on the train near Lamoni between two of these men, both travelers, one a professor of religion the other not, will illustrate the reputation referred to and how gained:

"Been to Lamoni?"

"Yes. Go every two weeks."

"Sell many goods there?"

"Yes. Pretty good trade with the town."

"They are mostly Mormons, or Latter Day Saints there, are they not?"

"Yes. But I don't think much of the people."

"No! why not; are they not good people?"

"Well, yes; in a way."

"Do they buy goods freely?"

"They are the most of them very careful buyers. They have been especially so for the past two or three years."

"How's that?"

"The drouth was pretty severe on the country and the merchants and tradesmen had their share of the burden to bear, and so bought sparingly, feeling that they might not be able to pay."

"That is certainly commendable. But did the customers of these tradesmen do the same?"

"I believe they did, as a rule."

"Do they pay their bills with any degree of punctuality?"

"Yes. They are quite prompt. They seldom buy more than they are sure they will need, and seldom let bills run over. Some of them avail themselves of the discount offered on short time and pay on cash terms."

"How do they stand as men of truth in their deal?"

"O, you can take their word without fear. They are shrewd observers, and usually are sure of what they state."

"I hear that there are no liquors sold in Lamoni; that the people are prohibition in sentiment. How is that?"

"There is no liquor sold as a beverage in the town. It is a 'no licence' town."

"Are any of your customers men who drink?"

"I think that none in Lamoni are. I am reasonably sure that none among my customers who are Mormons are drinkers. The church is very strong on that point. Nearly every preacher is a temperance lecturer."

"I suppose they swear much the same as men do usually?"

"No. One seldom hears any profane language at Lamoni. I never heard one of my Mormon customers swear. Never even saw one out of humor."

"Is the community peaceful and law-abiding?"

"Yes. So far as my observation goes they are. I have not heard any wrangling among them. There is no lawyer in the town, and none right near there. They are good citizens."

"Are the men whom you deal with gentlemanly in deportment?"

"Yes, sir. They are friendly, affable, gentlemanly men."

"Are they accommodating in trade?"

"Yes; quite so. Once in a while if the house happens to send goods not up to the sample we have to take them back, or make it good to them. They want what they buy, and are not disposed to take what they don't want."

"Is the community a moral one?"

"It is. So far as morality and virtue are concerned they are 'way up,' as the saying is."

"Is a man as safe from personal injury and wrong among them as in other places?"

"Yes. In some respects more so. There are no drinking, brawling, noisy disturbers of the peace there, and so far as I know a man is just as safe from theft and other injury there as in any place in the United States. The place is quiet and orderly. The leading men among the Mormons take pains to urge sobriety, quiet and good order upon the people."

"I notice that you use the word 'Mormon' in referring to the Lamoni folks. Why do you do that? They are not polygamists are they?"

"O, no. But they believe in Joe Smith; and he was a Mormon. I call them Mormons because that is their religion. They are Mormons in religion. They call themselves Latter Day Saints."

"That is what I have understood. You said that you did not like the people. What is it about them you do not like?"

"Their religion. I don't like their religion."

"What do you go there to Lamoni for, if you do not like the people?"

"To sell goods, to be sure. They are a good business people."

"O, I see. Well, I am not a religionist.

But if I were, it strikes me that I should not dislike the religion of a people who in their business life exhibited the characteristics you have given that settlement at Lamoni. It seems to me it would be good sound policy for such men as you are, who profess to believe in God and in prayer and such like, to pray that every community, and especially the business men near it should become Latter Day Saints in religion.

I don't like the cant and hypocrisy of religionists who say Joe Smith, Jack Wesley, Mormon, and names of that sort. I see no reason why men should not be called Saints, if they act like Saints. A religion that makes, or helps to make a community safe, virtuous, moral, sober, and hence industrious, quiet and orderly; its business men kind, gentlemanly, honest and prompt in business affairs, ought to have the respect of all men—especially of other religionists. I believe religion to be a good thing for the state. Any religion that tends to make men better is a good religion; and of course that religion that will make men best, is the best of all religions.

I am not religious, but I am not a scoffer at religion of any sort. Heaven may be a long way from earth, or it may be but a step; I don't know. My convictions and beliefs are dear to me. The opinions of my fellow men demand from me the same respect, and they who hold them the same courteous treatment that I ask of them for mine. You have given the character of these men of Lamoni to me as if that character was the result of their religious belief; in some way as if such character was incident to their faith. You may have done this unintentionally, but the idea is conveyed in the way you have made your replies to my questions. It has been a thought of mine that a man's faith should dominate in his character, that it should form, direct and mould him into what it was desirable he should be. I suppose that is one reason why I have not professed religion in some of the forms that it is now held in society. And from what I saw of the men professing religion I concluded that their religion, whatever else it might be doing for them, it was not dominating them, it was more in the nature of a convenience than a necessity; had but little to do with this world and less with the next as that is portrayed in the Bible, from which they all essay to get their faith. If this community is different from others, and that difference is the result of their religious convictions, it is an anomaly and may be worth more than appears on the surface—I think I shall also visit Lamoni."

The train stopped at the Junction, one man went one way, the other a different way; neither one aware of the impression made on a quiet observer who heard and made notes. If what is stated is true of Lamoni, it should be of all other communities of Saints. Nor should the Lamonites grow slack in the ways and means by which they are making reputation on earth and characters for heaven.

BRADEN EXPOSES BRADEN.

By letter from Bro. George S. Lincoln in a late HERALD we see that Rev. Clark Braden is seeking still to bolster up the baseless claim that Rev. Solomon Spaulding wrote a manuscript from which and upon which the Book of Mormon was written. This blind desperation of Mr. Braden and his kind is both painful and amusing as showing the nonsensical nonsense to which men claiming wit and wisdom will descend when defending a self evident falsehood, an impudent unsupported assertion.

He asserts that Mr. Spaulding wrote other manuscripts than the "Manuscript Story" brought to light in the Sandwich Islands by Mr. L. L. Rice and Mr. Fairchild.

He can not deny however that the one these gentlemen have given to the public is a genuine production of Rev. Solomon Spaulding, for it bears the endorsement of Howe's witnesses in his Expose of Mormonism, and is further endorsed by the signature of the notorious Dr. Philastus Hurlbut, the ready and pliant procurer of Howe.

How does Mr. Braden know that Rev. Spaulding ever wrote any other manuscript than the one now discovered and bearing the signatures of Howe's chief witnesses?

And if it could be proved that he wrote others, where is the proof that any of them had anything in common with the Book of Mormon? And if it could be proved that Mr. Spaulding wrote other manuscripts, and on the topics treated in the Book of Mormon, where is the proof that any of them reached the hand of Joseph Smith and became either the foundation, or any part of the Book of Mormon? He can prove nothing of the kind. All he and his fellows can do is to assert their unsupported theories and impudently beg the people to take them as truth.

Mr. Braden and his kind are now forced to admit that the "Manuscript Story," sold unwittingly by Howe to Mr. L. L. Rice, is a genuine production of Rev. Spaulding, for as before said that document has the written endorsement of Howe's witnesses, and also the written endorsement of Doctor P. Hurlbut, the man who obtained it from the widow Spaulding and gave it to Howe for the purpose of fighting down the Book of Mormon.

Does he not know that this "Manuscript Story" gives his theory entirely away by furnishing us the measure and quality of Rev. Spaulding as a writer? Does he and his kind not perceive that in the "Manuscript Story" we have a genuine specimen of Rev. Spaulding's tastes, morals, religion, (if he had any), mental power and scholarly attainments? Do they not know that the "Manuscript Story" is a certain index, a certain evidence of what was in the brain and heart of Rev. Spaulding? Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

When we draw a pint of vinegar from a vessel we readily judge that all the pints drawn from that same vessel are vinegar and not wine, nor milk, nor honey. And now that we have the "Manuscript Story" from Rev. Solomon Spaulding, we know just the quality of all other manuscripts, if any, coming from that same source; for the fountain must be judged by the waters flowing from it, and the tree by the fruit it is known to bear.

Ah! Mr. Braden, the folly and falsity of your theories (which you have stolen from Howe and others) are exposed by the tell-tale "Manuscript Story," for that is "a chip out of the old block" and proves that Rev. Spaulding had neither the brains, the information, the religious knowledge and culture, nor the moral purity of thought and life requisite to write such a wonderful work as the Book of Mormon.

Go on, Mr. Braden, you and your kind, for all the opposition you and they can offer to that book will only rebound to its furtherance by extending the notoriety and knowledge of it abroad, inducing those to inquire after and read it who otherwise might have remained ignorant of it, and who on reading it will discover that your arguments are but the thinnest bubbles, blown by lying, polluted lips, from the foul waters gathered in the loathsome pools of sectarian jealousy and hate or mercenary greed and Godless gain.

Go on, Mr. Braden; Paul rejoiced that some preached Christ "even of envy and strife, . . . supposing to add afflictions" to his "bonds;" and we rejoice, not in that you are debasing yourself in the sight of heaven and all decent people, but in the fact that your senseless opposition to the Book of Mormon will result in bringing it into public notice and under just and fair criticism as to its inherent merits, its genuine origin, and its divine authenticity. If you choose to "kick against the pricks," the Saints can afford to patiently see you do so, conscious that the Infinite One will make the wrath of man to praise him, and that the remainder he will restrain.

The Book of Mormon is of divine origin, and every effort made to disprove that fact serves ultimately to spread abroad the knowledge of it and firmly establish its heavenly authenticity. Its moral teachings are pure as the sunlight, and its religious precepts are rational, consistent and Christian. Its prophecies are numerous, plain, and well sustained by the facts of history and tradition; while its marvelous historical statements are amply sustained by the facts of science and the discoveries of American antiquities.

Whatever may be said of the "weakness" and "simplicity" of its language, the same may be said of the original manuscripts written by many of the Bible writers, as may be seen on reading Horne's Introduction and similar works on the original writers and writings of the Bible.

As Christ and his servants, clothed in plain and humble apparel, taught the wonderful truths of life and glory in the words of simplicity and "unlearned" men, so the Scriptures of truth, including the Book of Mormon, were written in plainness and simplicity, yet they contain principles and facts as holy as heaven, and mighty unto the salvation of all who believe.

LOCAL OPTION CARRIES AT INDEPENDENCE.

ONE of the best if not the very best items of news that we have had the pleasure of hearing for some time was that contained in a telegram bearing date of June 27th, last, from brethren Luff and McCallum, of Independence, Missouri. Its contents were as follows: "Local Option carried by over two hundred majority." We rejoice in these "glad tidings" and congratulate all the friends of the movement, together with the brethren at Independence upon the result of the vote. The world moves and in its progress Independence seems to be keeping time, evidently determined to be in the front rank of progress in a moral as well as in every sense that truly conserves the welfare of herself and her citizens. We are glad to note this important step in the right direction that city has taken in the late election. We are pleased for many reasons. One of them is the significant and evident fact that, with the increased and increasing number of our people at that place there is an elevation in the moral tone of the community. This speaks for itself and is a sufficient comment upon the influence of law-abiding Saints in any locality. Without sobriety material prosperity, good citizenship and the elevating influence of good homes impossible. It is inseparably connected are with all these necessary adjuncts to the general welfare of any section, and with the declared intention of the citizens of Independence, that the demon of strong drink shall be "cast out," we may look for a growth of these good influences at that place. Following them will always come an increase of much that is good in all phases of life.

During our visit there, in April, last, the influence of the saloon was strikingly displayed, especially upon some of the rising generation who were growing up, to some extent, under it. However, we noticed that a great advancement had been made over the condition of a few years previous, when a lawless element with many sympathizers was trying to dominate and intimidate those who were endeavoring to maintain the forces of law and order. When we review the past history of our people there, and see how that during their early efforts to settle at Independence and in the surrounding counties they were driven out and subjected to almost every insult and inhuman cruelty to which it was possible for mobs to resort, we feel thankful that a better spirit has prevailed in the new generation that now occupies.

The Saints everywhere will read of the result of that vote with pleasure and will see therein an omen of good. The brethren there deserve credit for their untiring efforts in the good work.

June 27th is a historic day in our annals. While it will always be a reminder of sad scenes, it seems in this instance to bring tidings of good to Zion. The votes of the Saints have caused the suppression of the liquor traffic, or at least aided largely in so doing, in the cities of Plano, Lamoni, and Independence. Let the good work go on.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE poem "The Coming Messiah," in HERALD for June 16th was by Bro. L. N. B. Carpenter, Sandyville, Iowa. By a printer's mistake, credit was not given as it should have been, and was intended. Let those who have read the poem, now read it again and give Bro. Carpenter credit for it.

Bro John S. Roth writes under date of June 22nd, that he had baptized eight more at Fulton, and organized a branch of twenty members.

Bro. Stephen Maloney, wrote from Chouteau, Indian Territory, June 21st, that he had more opportunities to preach than he could fill. The excessive fall of rain causing high water in the streams and washing away bridges had prevented the keeping of some appointments already made. He had visited the chief, presenting him with a Book of Mormon and a Voice of Warning; which the chief promised him to read, treating our brother very kindly. Bro. Maloney is impressed that a good work will be done in that country.

Bro. William Gurwell, of Fanning, Kansas, president of the branch there sends us word that a member of the branch, one E. D. McCoy, has been charged in the court with a wilful and felonious "attempt to steal take and carry away one horse, the property of Mrs. A. J. Bliss, contrary to the statutes, and against the peace and dignity of the state of Kansas." This man was arrested and pending trial escaped from the custody of the officers of the law. Any of the readers of the HERALD, who may know where this E. D. McCoy may be found will comply with the law by informing Bro. Gurwell, at Fanning, or the State's Attorney, of Doniphan county, Kansas. "If any man steal, you shall deliver him up unto the law of the land," is the command to the church. A copy of the charge is furnished Bro. Gurwell by the attorney.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith has "arrived out" as the reports have it, and is in his Minnesota field, as see his letter of June 19th herein. He writes that he shall open the campaign in earnest as soon as a tent which the brethren have purchased arrives at headquarters. He may at present be addressed at Box 27, Audubon, Minnesota. He has appointed Bro. Morris T. Short in charge of Wisconsin, and will make arrangements for other parts of his field as soon as practicable.

The address of brethren A. H. Parsons and H. H. Robinson will be until otherwise ordered, at Lockartville, Kings county, Nova Scotia, care of Holmes J. Davison. These brethren sailed from Boston to their field June 27th. Let the Saints bear these young men in mind when they pray for the missionaries in the field.

A NOTICE for the convening of a conference at Horton, Kansas, July 8th, will be seen among the miscellany of this issue. Who are they?

It will be seen that the names signed to the notice are those of whom Bro. Brand lately wrote, "there is no such elder in the district."

Our editorial on the right to membership in a late issue gave offense to some who were members of the church in the days of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and who now claim to be of the church still, &c. It will be remembered that we referred to some who desired to be recognized by the Reorganization, but who refused to recognize the Reorganization as the church. The men from whom the notice for conference at Horton comes, apparently belong to a class who hold that they belong to the church; and who, if we are to believe one who claims to represent them, recognize the Reorganized Church in this way, the president of it as entitled to leadership by virtue of an ordination under the hands of James Jesse Strang while he was asleep; by which ordination he was made a viceroy; (second king, his primary being the king J. J. Strang); that he was thus created a patriarch as was Hyrum Smith; and that at the death of Mr. Strang without further appointment having been made by which the right to succeed, &c., was otherwise limited, or changed, he would be authorized to lead in administration. It is further held in this regard that the organization of the Reorganization was faulty, from the beginning, and that the president of the church was not properly chosen, and received nothing from the choice of the elders assembled at Amboy, nor authority from any ordination received then in 1860. This is a recognition of the president of the Reorganization as the right man in the wrong place, without a recognition of the official character of the body over which such president may preside as the church in proper succession of the one organized in 1830, and into which the elders attempting to build on this theory were baptized.

We have no possible objection to men believing what seems best to them; but so far as we are personally concerned we are not compromised in the theories set forth as above in any sense whatever. No formal application for recognition of the membership and priesthood any one of these men may once have held by reason of valid baptism in the days of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, has ever been made to the Reorganization by them, that we know anything about. If they have recognized the Reorganization as the church, we have not been made aware of it. They have not asked admission, nor so far as we are informed even desired a formal and official act of recognition at our hands. We publish their notice as we would that of any other number of fellow worshipers, at their request. Those of the readers of the HERALD who are within reach of the place advertised for meeting may avail themselves of an opportunity to visit and become acquainted with these people.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., in a late letter from Manchester, England, says:

"The work here moves along satisfactorily. We have no burning questions to solve; we simply preach the new dispensation, call sinners to repentance, and endeavor to feed the flock of Christ with the pure milk of the word. And the Master blesses us confirming the word with signs following.

BRO. D. S. MILLS, of Santa Ana, California, wrote June 18th, giving quite an epitome of things in his Southern California district. He reports favorably of the effort begun at San Bernardino, to build a meeting-house, and seems quite sanguine of success. We felt an assurance when we were there that the Saints would erect the contemplated house. The only thing that we could see that would defeat them being the possibility that dissension might occur among themselves; if this did not occur they were sure of success. A good brother has the contract, and it now looks like an assured fact.

From the days when president Brigham Young ordered Amasa, Lyman and Charles C. Rich, and the Saints under their charge to abandon the settlement at San Bernardino and return to Utah, until now, all sorts of ites and isms, including some phases of diabolism, have had a seat in the beautiful and fruitful valley. There has been "salt" enough to greatly save that city left, if the salt will become active as salt, and not dead and without savor. We are pleased to learn of their revival into activity at San Bernardino. The location for the new building is an excellent one, the brethren on the committee good men; all that is needed is to stand together like a spartan band and the work will go like magic, the magic of will and work.

Bro. Richard Allen, Bishop's agent had been hurt by having his buggy run into on the street by a runaway team; but was likely to recover.

Prospects are good at Los Angeles. Bro. Ammon Goff, a young and growing worker was expecting to take the field ere long.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Still shines the light of holy lives,
Like star-beams over doubt;
Each sainted memory, Christlike drives
Some dark possession out."

STRAIGHT PATHS.

SR. ELEANOR's letters are always acceptable to us, and in this feeling we are sure that the readers of the Column fully concur. There is in them an undertone of the deepest feeling, and they breathe the odor of sweetness which rises only from flowers when crushed or when in the silence of night the dews of heaven distil their freshness upon them and the waiting breezes bear their perfume to our open door. But with peculiar force the subject treated of in the one we present to our readers this week, comes home to our heart, and closing the door leading to the inner sanctuary we commune with our thoughts, seeking to know "what manner of person we are." The quintessence of the gospel of Christ is, glory to God, to man good will. Man, universal man, is the brother of every one seeking to do the Father's will; and in no way can we outwardly manifest our love to God save by doing good to all men as we have opportunity, manifesting towards them in acts as well as words that pure love of God which leads us not only to regard their interests equally with our own, but as the apostle declares, "preferring one another in love."

"Stumbling blocks!" Have I, have we, been putting such in the way of our brother's feet? We have sometimes longed with intense desire that for a brief moment, if no longer, we might be enabled to see our acts and the consequences resulting from them just as they appear to him who "Can not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance;" and we have thought that by this light we might be enabled to overcome. Vain, delusive thought! Have we not Moses and the prophets? Have we not that Prophet "like unto Moses?" And if his holy example is not sufficient to keep us from straying into by and forbidden paths, what aid is there which would be sufficient? Unhesitatingly we answer, None. "I am the way, the truth and the light!"

There is yet another light in which this matter is to be regarded. While I have been stumbling over the crooked steps made by my brother, what kind of steps have I been making? I look back and as I am enabled to see their impress in the sands of time, to my dismay I discover that they are not only crooked, but very uncertain; and many, yes many, are groping along in partial darkness, seeking to find through the crooked imprints of my feet, the way of everlasting life. "What folly!" I exclaim. "I am no pattern for you! Retrace your steps and get back into the straight path!" But I look before me and discover that I have been doing the same thing for which I now upbraid these who have been looking at me, and the terrible conviction forces itself upon me, that while I have been stumbling over others, instead of keeping my eyes fixed upon Christ and following him, these others have been stumbling over the stones which this very act of mine has put in their way. Oh, how I wish I could straighten out these crooked steps! How I wish I might be purged and cleansed of this disloyalty to my great Captain. "Hear ye Him," was the annunciation from the opening heavens; and his declaration "I am the way," I have utterly disregarded. Penitence and tears together with a careful retracing of my steps may obtain pardon for me, but these footprints no tears can wash out. God may forgive me, but to intercept the consequences of my sin is not within the economy of God, and I can only humble myself and pray that God will overrule and forgive.

If this thought be a solemn one, we commend it to your hearts as it has been presented to ours. We are well assured that faith, repentance and baptism are but the first stepping stones to be placed in the way of those seeking life and salvation; and better our hands never place these than after having done this we begin to cast a stumbling block even if that stumbling block be but the failure of placing stepping stones in our brother's way. "Make straight paths for your feet lest that which is lame be turned out the way."

STEPPING-STONES AND STUMBLING-BLOCKS.

"Who gives the world a noble thought,
And writes it out in prose or rhyme,
May furnish for some lowly soul
A stepping-stone on which to climb."

Dear Sister Frances:—I can not say that I have anything original to furnish you just now, but a few thoughts on the above may not be amiss.

Undoubtedly there is truth in the sentiment, and reasoning from analogy, an ignoble thought cast abroad would be as a stumbling-stone to cause a fall; especially so when it comes from one to whom watchful eyes are turning for an example of the Holy Spirit within. As parents how may our daily walk and conversation assist our children to climb towards the noble and upright! and how often is there failure to do this attributable to their detection of untruth and inconsistency in us! If this fact could come home to our hearts with the force it ought to bring, what a shaking of dry bones there would be, what careful watch of tongue and manner. It seems to me that no judgment could be more dreadful than that our children should ever have to say of us, "You were the stumbling-stone which turned our feet out of the way." If we are to be judged according to the deeds done in the body, will not our children be swift witnesses for or against us? Nor they only. As Latter Day Saints, towards whom enquiring eyes are directed to see wherein we differ from other professing Christians, how carefully solicitous ought we to be that our faith manifested in our lives should be stepping-stones of eternal truth.

There seems to be no truth so hard to realize as that of man's responsibility towards his fellow man. "Am I my brother's keeper?" is a question answered by the majority in the negative, notwithstanding that the Scriptures are interlined on nearly every page with the declaration that we are his keeper. Listen to the commands of the apostle, "That no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way." . . . "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth or is made weak." How many of us are guilty of these things? How many may have been made weak in faith and weak physically because of our failure to keep the word of wisdom? Perhaps a young man has been addicted to drink, or has a weakness in that direction, against which he has feebly struggled. He meets a brother whose breath reeks with tobacco, and hears him speak slightly of temperance work and workers while he proffers the treat of glass or cigar.

Vile words or sentiments uttered in the hearing of little children and innocent maidens or youth—oh, the stumbling-stones daily thrown in the way of our brother! They are enough to pave a city. They would have built Zion had they been stepping-stones of noble endeavor and self-sacrifice, of earnest thought and exertion to save. As I write, memory brings to mind one who made it his daily practice to place these stepping-stones of noble thought before every foot he met of stranger or friend, and for many of them my own heart has blessed him. Here is one on which I rested many days in peace, for it was placed for me at a time of weary suffering.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

"And as feeble babes that suffer
Toss and cry and will not rest,
Are the ones the tender mother
Holds the closest, loves the best;
So when we are weak and wretched,
Weighed by trials and distressed;
Then it is that God's great patience
Holds us closest, loves us best."

Another time it was this:

"Let me share a pleasant thought with you." I was thinking, another day's work lies before me; hard work, not naturally agreeable to me, work consuming time and strength, so absorbing as to leave no time or strength, or mental force, for what seems best worth the while for an immortal. And then, in an instant, I thought and said, "It is all right, Lord, I see it all. This is thy way of answering my most earnest prayer for holiness, in order to usefulness. I perfectly understand, that in crossing all my natural preferences, God is giving me my heart's desire and prayer. * * * For many years I have been praying for this, and I have watched and listened, and seen no sight, heard no sound, met with no startling intervention; but the unseen, unheard answer has been coming every day, every hour, every moment."

What a stepping-stone that was, and what a long rest I enjoyed in the Beulah land to which I climbed by it. My friend has lately gone on to glory—methinks he had not far to go. I will see no more of his holy life, hear no more noble utterances; but I have learned my lesson. Henceforth let me like him,

"Give to humanity and God
My best; nor deem the gift too small."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Anna M. Halstead, Harrows, Ontario, writes:—"I have taken the Herald since 1873, and I have found it a source of comfort and information. My greatest joy is in the prosperity and progress of God's work, and were it in my power I would join every work for the weal of Zion. I was greatly comforted by the prayers offered for me last winter. I do wish the Column could be open to the brothers, for the bane of my life has been their backwardness in reaching forth to do the good homey things; and as many as will take hold as dear, faithful G. S. Hyde did. Let us extend to them the warmest welcome."

Sr. Janet Strong, Oregon City, California, writes:—"I am alone; but trusting that God is near me. My health is not good; but I have been blessed and comforted lately by a visit from Bro. A. Haws. I am constrained to believe that he came in direct answer to prayer; for I was very sick and did not think I could live. I have had many precious testimonies of the truth of this work, and desire to hold out faithful to the end."

HARTFORD, Mich., June 10th.

Sr. Frances:—I am striving to do the will of the Lord in all things. At times I think I make no progress at all in so glorious a cause, but I am determined by the help of God who strengthens me, to keep his commandments and fight the good fight of faith and gain eternal life in the kingdom of God. Though our trials may be many and temptations strong, yet we can, by Christ's assistance, overcome the wrong. The 20th day of last March my mother was taken very sick, and in four days was called away. My grief was so great it seemed as if I could not ask the Lord for help until Bro. C. Scott came to preach the funeral sermon, and while he was speaking he said the Lord would comfort those that weep; and then in my grief I said, "Lord comfort me;" and what joy and comfort filled my heart. Then I felt to say, "God's will be done." Now my dear father is sorely afflicted with the palsy, so I have to take care of him like a child. I ask the prayers of all God's children that I may be faithful, and that my father may be healed. Your sister in Christ,

JENNIE TURNOUR.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 2d.

Sr. Frances:—I feel it is right for each one to try to do what she can for the cause, therefore I desire to bear my testimony to the truth of this latter day work; for I know that it is of God, and besides it there is none other accepted of him. Therefore it becomes us, dear sisters, to strive to live each day alike, and live in such a way and set such examples before all, and especially the young, as shall be worthy of imitation. It seems to me that the time is at hand when we should strive to do our whole duty and forsaking all pride begin to serve our God in earnest, that we may be prepared to meet him at his coming. This is my determination. Although I may do many things that I should not, it is my determination to try to live as becomes a saint of God, that I may grow in grace day by day. I desire an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that I may be faithful. I am the mother of a large family. I have buried six of them, all dying when they were small, and I feel like striving to live so as to meet them at the last day. I have just that number living, five girls and one bright little boy; and I pray God that we may keep them with us, and that they may grow up to be true Saints of God, striving to keep his commandments in all things.

Correspondence.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 22d.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I left Salt Lake City April 23d for Montana. Stopped at Layton and preached in St. Judes School-house, lately built there by donations by the people, under the direction of the Episcopal Church. From there I went direct to Ogden, and then to Deer Lodge. In the latter place I held a few meetings, but the weather was cold and stormy so that the meetings were only fairly well attended. I found the little band of Saints there all in the faith, and alive in the work. Under the presidency of brother Andrew Christofferson they have held their meetings regularly and also the Sabbath School. May heaven bless and direct them in all that leads to life and peace in the Lord Jesus Christ.

On May the 7th I left the Saints at Deer Lodge for Blackfoot, expecting to hold a few meetings there, but owing to sickness in the family of brother Isaac Price, and cold storms, we held no meetings. We visited with brother price and administered to the sick ones. I visited brother William Jones and spent the time pleasantly with his family. I rode from Deer Lodge to Blackfoot with brother Rosser Jenkins and was made welcome and partook of his hospitality two nights. On the tenth of May I left brother William Jones' and walked to the station four miles. The last two miles was seasoned with a regular snow storm. There I took train for Helena City, and in that city called on an old time friend and had a pleasant visit at his house. We passed through the great unpleasantness side by side, and in 1866 went from Leavenworth, Kansas, to Montana together. On our trip there for twenty-one days we were harrassed and tormented day and night by Indians and at one time one man and myself were entirely surrounded by the red men and cut off from the camp. At that time I thought prospects to continue this existence rather gloomy. I then only thought of defense and was determined never to surrender until powerless. I thought when we got out of that without a scratch we were a little brave, but now I can see that we were no more than grasshoppers under their horses feet. If it had not been for the protecting arm of an all wise and loving Savior we too might have fallen as others unprepared for that better life with the rest prepared for the faithful in Christ.

My friend now has a two million dollar contract tunnelling a mountain, surrounded with all the luxuries of life and extensive business associations. He thought I was foolish to spend my manhoods strength and the best days of my life in the service I am now in. When he asked me what I was doing, I told him preaching the gospel. He only smiled. I knew its meaning. He is building for time; I am seeking to lay up treasures in heaven, and in doing that I have peace and joy. Earthly riches and honors are fleeting, and perish with the touch.
